

1 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

10 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Author(s)

Author(s)

REAL ESTATE
BROKERAGE LAW
AND PRACTICE Real Estate Transaction Series VOLUME 10

Originally by

*Patrick J. Rohan, B.A., LL.B., LL.M., J.S.D. Dean Emeritus and Professor of Law,
St. John's University School of Law*

Bernard H. Goldstein Member of the New York Bar

*Charles S. Bobis, B.A., J.D., LL.M Professor of Law,
St. John's University School of Law*

*Revisions by other contributors
2010*

2 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

10 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Questions?

Questions?

Technical Questions?

Phone: (800) 223-5297
Fax: (800) 533-1645 or (518) 487-3191
E-Mail: technical.support@lexisnexis.com
Visit Our Web Site: <http://www.lexis.com>

Editorial Questions?

For questions about the Editorial Content appearing in these volumes or reprint permission, please call: Tax
Kelly A. Prichett, J.D. kelly.prichett@lexisnexis.com at 1-800-424-0651(ext. 3361)
Patrick Cannon, J.D. pat.cannon@lexisnexis.com at 1-800-424-0651 (ext. 3238)
Outside the United States and Canada, please call (973) 820-2000
For assistance with replacement pages, shipments, billing or other customer service matters, please call:
Customer Services Department at(800) 833-9844
Outside the United States and Canada, please call (518) 487-3000
Fax Number(518) 487-3584
Customer Service Website<http://www.lexisnexis.com/custserv/>
For information on other Matthew Bender publications, please call
Your account manager or (800) 223-1940
Outside the United States and Canada, please call(518) 487-3000

3 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

10 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Cite As

Cite As

Cite this publication as:

[Vol. no.] Patrick J. Rohan et al., Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice, § [sec. no.] (Matthew Bender)

Example:

Vol. 10 Patrick J. Rohan et al., Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice, § 1.01 (Matthew Bender)

Because the section you are citing may be revised in a later release, you may wish to photocopy or print out the section for convenient future reference.

4 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

10 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Copyright

Copyright

This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold with the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering legal, accounting, or other professional services. If legal advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional should be sought.

LexisNexis and the Knowledge Burst logo are registered trademarks and Michie is a trademark of Reed Elsevier Properties Inc., used under license. Matthew Bender and the Matthew Bender Flame Design are registered trademarks of Matthew Bender Properties Inc.

Copyright © 2010 Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.
All Rights Reserved.

No copyright is claimed in the text of statutes, regulations, and excerpts from court opinions quoted within this work. Permission to copy material exceeding fair use, 17 U.S.C. § 107, may be licensed for a fee of 25cent(s) per page per copy from the Copyright Clearance Center, 222 Rosewood Drive, Danvers, Mass. 01923, telephone (978) 750-8400.

5 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

10 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Statement on Fair Use

Statement on Fair Use

RELEASE NO. 25, SEPTEMBER 2010

LexisNexis Matthew Bender recognizes the balance that must be achieved between the operation of the fair use doctrine, whose basis is to avoid the rigid application of the copyright statute, and the protection of the creative rights and economic interests of authors, publishers and other copyright holders.

We are also aware of the countervailing forces that exist between the ever greater technological advances for making both print and electronic copies and the reduction in the value of copyrighted works that must result from a consistent and pervasive reliance on these new copying technologies. It is Matthew Bender's position that if the "progress of science and useful arts" is promoted by granting copyright protection to authors, such progress may well be impeded if copyright protection is diminished in the name of fair use. (See Nimmer on Copyright § 13.05[E][1].) This holds true whether the parameters of the fair use doctrine are considered in either the print or the electronic environment as it is the integrity of the copyright that is at issue, not the media under which the protected work may become available. Therefore, the fair use guidelines we propose apply equally to our print and electronic information, and apply, within §§ 107 and 108 of the Copyright Act, regardless of the professional status of the user.

Our draft guidelines would allow for the copying of limited materials, which would include synopses and tables of contents, primary source and government materials that may have a minimal amount of editorial enhancements, individual forms to aid in the drafting of applications and pleadings, and miscellaneous pages from any of our newsletters, treatises and practice guides. This copying would be permitted provided it is performed for internal use and solely for the purpose of facilitating individual research or for creating documents produced in the course of the user's professional practice, and the original from which the copy is made has been purchased or licensed as part of the user's existing in-house collection.

LexisNexis Matthew Bender fully supports educational awareness programs designed to increase the public's recognition of its fair use rights. We also support the operation of collective licensing organizations with regard to our print and electronic information.

No copyright is claimed in the text of statutes, regulation, and excerpts from court opinions quoted within this work.

Original Copyright::2005

(c) 2010 Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group. All rights reserved.

ISBN 978-0-8205-1486-4

Library of Congress Card Number: 85-072943

MATTHEW BENDER & Co., INC.

Editorial Offices

121 Chanlon Rd., New Providence, NJ 07974 (908) 464-6800

201 Mission Street, San Francisco, CA 94105-1831 (415)908-3200

6 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

10 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Contributing Authors

Contributing Authors

GEORGE P. BERNHARDT, ESQ. Fulbright & Jaworski, L.L.P.
Houston, TX

SANDRA BULLINGTON, ESQ. Louisa, VA

ROBERT D. BUTTERS, ESQ. Arnstein & Lehr
Chicago, IL

MARY FALLON, ESQ. Ridgewood, NJ

RALPH W. HOLMEN, Associate General Counsel
National Association of Realtors(R),
Chicago, IL

J. CULLEN HOWE, ESQ. Arnold & Porter
New York, NY

CHARLES J. JACOBUS, ESQ. Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed
Houston, TX

ROBERT M. JAWORSKI, ESQ. Reed Smith LLP
Princeton, NJ

BRIAN J. JORDAN, ESQ. Ryley, Carlock & Applewhite, P.C.
Phoenix, AZ

SANDRA D. KATZ, ESQ. Sunnyside, NY

GEORGIA LEWIS LEONHART, ESQ. Ocean View, DE

CHRISTINE B. LUDWISZEWSKI, ESQ. Wheaton, IL

RICHARD MELAMED, ESQ. *Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed
Houston, TX*

GREGORY P. MELNYK, ESQ. Chicago, IL

SUSAN M. MUKAI, ESQ. *Ryley, Carlock & Applewhite, P.C.
Phoenix, AZ*

ROSLYN K. MYERS, ESQ. New York, NY

LINDA BREEN PIERCE, ESQ. Pacific Grove, CA

WILLIAM H. RYAN, J.D.

LESLIE ANN SHANER, ESQ. Lynchburg, VA

PAUL TEICH, ESQ. *New England School of Law
Boston, MA*

Ongoing page updates written by Sandra Bullington, Esq., Louisa, VA.

7 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

10 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Publisher's Editorial Staff

Publisher's Editorial Staff

PATRICK E. CANNON, J.D.
Director, Practice Area Content

KELLY PRICHETT, J.D.
Practice Area Editor

KAREN NEWTON
Index Manager

LORI MURPHY
Index Editor

JENNIFER DESSIN
Coordinator of Content Operations

8 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

10 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Preface

Preface

While the legal principles governing the rights and duties of real estate brokers, their principals and third parties with whom they interact, are generally considered to be well established, the law reports perennially include suits by and against real estate brokers. The law of real estate brokerage, it seems, has always been something of an enigma, even to the real property specialist, and judging by a growing volume of real estate brokerage litigation in recent years, it remains so today. The ever-increasing flow of brokerage litigation, whatever its causes, has provided the courts the opportunity to rethink some of the well settled common-law rules that govern the broker's rights and obligations.

In the field of residential real estate brokerage, for example, the consumer protection movement, as reflected in both statutory and case law developments, has contributed to a strong judicial movement towards a "no closing-no commission" viewpoint. Federal, state and local governments have also entered the brokerage picture, in the form of statutory and regulatory developments in civil rights, antitrust and consumer protection. Other factors of significance that have contributed to changes in the law in this field are the growth of multiple listing services, the development of national real estate brokerage franchises, rapid changes in mortgage lending and the advent of new forms of ownership, such as the condominium, cooperative and time-sharing arrangement.

This work is designed to make available in one place the relevant business practices governing those engaged in real estate and allied forms of brokerage. The authors have attempted to present the subject in its modern guise. Statutory provisions and judicial precedents from throughout the United States, illustrative forms, and trial materials have been included to present a national view of the subject. A comprehensive bibliography, arranged topically, has also been included. The authors hope that this work will be of service to both attorneys and brokers, whether expert or neophyte, by serving as a comprehensive guide to this significant area of commerce.

Patrick J. Rohan
Dean and Professor of Law
St. John's University School of Law

Charles S. Bobis
Professor of Law
St. John's University School of Law

Bernard H. Goldstein
Tenzer, Greenblatt, Fallon & Kaplan
New York, New York
October 1, 1985

9 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Publication Information

10 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Acknowledgments

Acknowledgments

Acknowledgments

This work is the product of the combined effort of many practitioners and law professors. It contains text passages, pleadings, model forms and related material on the subject of real estate and allied types of brokerage, furnished by outstanding members of the legal and brokerage professions.

Professors Patrick J. Rohan and Charles S. Bobis took primary responsibility for day-to-day manuscript preparation. Bernard H. Goldstein, Esquire, a senior partner in Tenzer, Greenblatt, Fallon & Kaplan, New York, New York, provided resource material and suggestions, gleaned from his many years of experience as a practitioner and lecturer on the subject of real estate brokerage. He also generously consented to incorporation into the book of materials on the subject previously prepared by him. Other scholars who contributed directly to the book are, Professors Joseph J. Beard, Edward D. Cavanaugh, Bernard E. Gegan and Alan D. Scheinkman, of St. John's University School of Law, and Nancy Alexander, of the New York Bar, who enriched the text by preparing individual chapters. The generous cooperation of the National Association of Realtors(R) must also be recognized, as well as that of attorneys and real estate professionals too numerous to mention, who contributed time and expertise toward the effort to make this work truly national in outlook and in content. Thomas P. Rohan III and Caroline Donovan, members of the New York Bar, also made extensive contributions. Their generosity and encouragement is deeply appreciated by the authors.

Research assistance, source checking and countless other technical tasks were professionally attended to by Anthony J. Cornicello and Tonianne Florentino of the St. John's Law Review, Marisa Guardo, Christopher Nenninger and Michelle Sheehen of the St. John's University School of Law Faculty Research Assistants Program, and Ted J. Abbruzzo, Michael R. Herman, Cheryl N. Khaner, Norman D. Lipton, Robert H. Liquerman, Glenn M. Mitchell, Brian T. Moriarity, Albert A. Ngwana, Jacqueline M. Poole, Lisa A. Schneider and Robin Kelly Sheares, research assistants at the Law School. Dolores Alonso and Odette Belasco cheerfully and accurately prepared the manuscript for the printer. Julius J. Marke and Ralph A. Monaco, Law Librarians of St. John's University School of Law, as well as their professional staff, rendered invaluable assistance in gathering data from all over the United States.

Last, but not least, a large debt of gratitude is owed to the editorial and professional staff of Matthew Bender & Company, who worked behind the scenes from the original conception of the treatise to its final appearance in print. Among those who contributed greatly to the style and content of the finished work are: Marilyn K. Minzer, Director of Publishing, Lawrence Kaplan, Editorial Director, Roy Fischer, Assistant Editorial Director, Gary I. Cohen, Executive Editor, Mark Heend, Senior Publication Manager and Robert Weingarten, Legal Writer. Their editorial judgment greatly enhanced the quality of this publication. A special thanks to those who carried out the technical and copyediting responsibilities: Pamela Ward, Senior Manager, Arthur Wilner, Supervisor of Editorial Services, and the other members of the Editorial Services staff. Without the collective efforts of all of these colleagues and professional associates, this publication would not have been possible.

10 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

What's New

1 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Scope

Scope

HIGHLIGHTS

Release 25 September 2010

Updates and New sections throughout the treatise on such topics as Economic Loss Rule (ch. 3)

Realtor Code of Ethics and the Model Definition of the Practice of Law (ch. 7)

RESPA Reform Effort (ch. 11)

Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act (ch. 14)

Chinese Drywall (ch. 15)

Green Marketing Claims (ch. 15)

Additional Updates added throughout the treatise are the latest statutory, regulatory and case law developments

Economic Loss Rule. With the vast economic downturn since 2008 claims against brokers, lenders and developers have found many footholds. The economic loss rule is sometimes raised as a defense when a broker or agent is sued by a client. Not all courts apply the economic loss rule in the context of a real estate licensee's abrogation of his or her duties. This new section has been added to discuss the traditional role this doctrine and present its applicability under recent case law. (See § 3.39).

Realtor Code of Ethics and the Model Definition of the Practice of Law. This section has completely revised former '§ 7.05 Lawyer-Broker Accords' to cover the recent revisions by the National Association of Realtors(R) of Article 13 of its Code of Ethics and Standard of Practice. (See § 7.05) .

Updates to Chapter 10, The Impact of Electronic Commerce on the Real Estate Brokerage Business and Chapter 8, Real Estate Brokers and Antitrust Laws contributed by Robert D. Butters, Esq. of Arnstein & Lehr, include updates throughout these chapters and provides broad discussion of recent cases including in Tamburo d/b/a Man's Best Friend Software v. Dworkin, et al Case No. 08-2406 (7th Cir., April 8, 2010) which discusses the reach of personal jurisdiction for persons using internet communications media; Dawes-Ordonez v. Realtors Association of Greater Fort Lauderdale, Case No. 09-60335-Civ-Cohn/Seltzer (S.D. Fla., May 5, 2010) which discusses the right of a multiple listing service property to re-display property photos in the event the property is subsequently relisted with another broker; and also In re Valdez, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 30160 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 26, 2010), a case which covers the use of photos in the context of federal and state copyright domains.

Updates throughout Chapter 11, Mortgage Brokers, contributed by Robert M. Jaworski, Esq., of Reed Smith, LLP include the most up to date and recent additions to the sections throughout the chapter and including:

- RESPA Reform--the New Rule. --updated information and FAQs since the New Rule went into effect January 1, 2010 despite the many efforts to postpone or invalidate the New Rule's implementation. (§ 11.09).

Revisions to Chapter 15, Real Estate Brokers and Environmental Laws, contributed by Ralph Holmen of The National Association of Realtors, provide updated discussion on the issue of Chinese drywall. The CPSC initiated an investigation and has now established a "Drywall Information Center" including various reports and information about the problem. A new section has been added that discusses this new environmental hazard and various responses from local and federal agencies. See § 15.03[2A]. J. Cullen Howe of Arnold & Porter, LLP, provided an annual update to this chapter in Green Building Issues Affecting Real Estate Brokers.. Valuable additions have been added to provide discussion and analysis relating to green building issues affecting real estate brokers including:

- Green Buildings Defined--presented here is a new discussion which provides information and background analysis of an expanding awareness of the energy buildings consume and the public policy concerns that are shaping the definition of 'green buildings'. (new § 15.06[1]).

- Green Building Rating Systems--this section reviews the increasing use of the EPA's Energy Star program (new § 15.06[4]]).

- Green Marketing Claims--this new section discusses the 'Green Guides' that provide the guidelines regarding claims made about a building's environmentally friendly status. Many real estate developers are marketing their buildings as such and in general, developers are prohibited by law from making any false or misleading statements about their buildings. (See new § 15.06[9]]).

Speed your research by visiting LexisNexis' Real Estate Area of Law page on lexis.com. Here, you'll find real estate specific materials, including cases, statutes, regulations, forms, analysis, law reviews, journals, news, and much more--including insightful expert commentary on a variety of issues.

11 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 1 Introduction

10-1 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 1.syn

§ 1.syn Synopsis to Chapter 1: Introduction

§ 1.01 The Subject Matter

§ 1.02 Scope and Organization of the Treatise

12 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 1 Introduction

10-1 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 1.01

§ 1.01 The Subject Matter

The law of real estate brokerage has always been something of an enigma, even to the real property specialist. Almost any first-year law student can state the agency, contract, fiduciary, and property law principles that govern the rights of brokers, principals and the third parties with whom they interact. Nevertheless, the advance sheets reflect a growing quantity of litigation involving the very same parties. It may well be that this tendency to wind up in litigation stems from the human desire to acquire as much wealth as possible (or to hold on to the same), lack of communication, poor drafting of brokerage agreements, the infinite variety of circumstances in which the parties find themselves, or a combination of all these factors. This ample supply of grist for the judicial mill has, in turn, led to slow but perceptible changes in the common law. Perhaps of greater significance, statutory and regulatory developments in such diverse areas as consumer protection, antitrust, environmental protection, and product liability have brought federal, state and local governments into the brokerage picture as an omni-present factor. The growth of multiple listing services and the advent of nationwide real estate brokerage franchises have also left their mark. Moreover, rapid changes in mortgage lending, as well as the onslaught of new forms of ownership (such as condominium, cooperative and time-sharing arrangements), have had a major impact upon the field. In the pages that follow, the authors have attempted to trace these developments and to present the subject of real estate brokerage in its modern guise.

13 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 1 Introduction

10-1 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 1.02

§ 1.02 Scope and Organization of the Treatise

In formulating these materials, the authors have attempted to pinpoint trends in the law and to bring together in one place the myriad areas of specialized law practice that bear upon the general subject. The text treatment has been subdivided into five Parts, in what the authors hope will prove to be a logical and serviceable treatment. Part I of this work includes an omnibus chapter designed to acquaint the reader with the structure of the brokerage industry on the national, state, and local levels. Included are definitions of various types of brokerage transactions, as well as the different contractual arrangements under which the broker may be employed. Chapter 2 concludes with an in-depth analysis of multiple listing services, which form the backbone of the residential brokerage industry. Part II analyzes the contractual rights and duties of the broker and the fiduciary obligations that arise from the nature of the broker-client relationship. It examines a broker's duty to disclose (Ch. 3A) and includes a directory listing disclosure laws and regulatory agencies (Appendix 3A-1). This segment concludes with an analysis of the elements that the broker must prove in order to be successful in any litigation to recover a brokerage commission. Part III is devoted to legal restraints imposed upon the industry by licensing authorities and governmental agencies charged with enforcing public policy in the areas of antitrust, civil rights, and the unauthorized practice of law. It includes a chapter discussing the impact of electronic commerce on the real estate brokerage business (Ch. 10). Part IV is devoted to specialized types of brokerage activity, namely, mortgage brokerage, business brokerage and finders. It includes a chapter that focuses on a broker's involvement in lease transactions (Ch. 13A). Also considered are brokerage transactions involving condominiums, cooperatives, and time-sharing interests. The text concludes with Part V, which is devoted to an examination of a variety of legal developments (both national and local) that bear directly upon brokers' obligations to their clients, prospective customers, and the public at large. Chapters 15 and 15A focus on environmental issues affecting brokers. Immediately following Chapter 17, on alternative dispute resolution, are helpful checklists, which include the client interview and a drafting guide for a listing agreement. Following those checklists, Appendix A to the treatise consists of a bibliography of secondary sources.

14 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 2 Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry *

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 2.syn

§ 2.syn Synopsis to Chapter 2: Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry

*

§ 2.01 Overview of the Brokerage Industry

[1] Trade Associations

[a] National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR)

[b] State Associations of Realtors(R)

[c] Local Boards of Realtors(R)

[d] Non-Realtor(R) Trade Associations

[2] History of the Realtor(R) Organizations and System of Brokerage

[3] Residential Real Estate Brokerage Firms

[a] Traditional Predominance of Small Firms

[b] Entry

[c] Growth and Entry of Large Corporations and Franchises

[4] Commercial Real Estate Brokerage Firms

[a] Traditional Role

[b] Entry

§ 2.02 Brokers, Salespersons and Finders--Definitions, Descriptions and Distinctions

- [1] Brokers
- [2] Salespersons
- [3] Finders
- [4] Cases Addressing the Broker and Middleman/Finder Dichotomy
- [5] Broker Activities Versus Marketing Activities

§ 2.03 The Brokerage Contract

- [1] In General
- [2] Types
 - [a] Open Listing
 - [b] Net Listing
 - [c] Exclusive Agency
 - [d] Exclusive Right to Sell
 - [e] Multiple Listing
- [3] Statute of Frauds
- [4] Broker's Authority to Sign Contract

§ 2.04 Study of Multiple Listing Service (MLS) Programs

- [1] In General
- [2] History of the MLS
- [3] The Original Reasons for and Effects of Multiple Listing
 - [a] Open Listing Competition
 - [i] In General.
 - [ii] Listing Broker Competition.
 - [iii] Seller Competition.
 - [iv] Duplication of Effort.
 - [b] Making a Market

[c] Information on Housing Prices

[d] Commission Rates

[e] Advantages to the Board

[f] Cooperation and Ethics

[4] Analysis of MLS History

[5] Membership Requirements of MLSs

[a] In General

[b] Board of Realtors(R) Membership

[i] Description of Condition.

[ii] Analysis of Condition.

[c] Real Estate License

[i] Description of Condition.

[ii] Analysis of Condition.

[d] Submission of Disputes to Arbitration

[i] Description of Condition.

[ii] Analysis of Condition.

[e] Initiation Fees

[i] Description of Condition.

[ii] Analysis of Condition.

[f] Other Membership Requirements

[g] Conclusion

[6] Listing Requirements

[a] In General

[b] Mandatory Submission of Listings

[i] Description of Requirement.

[ii] Analysis of Requirement.

[c] Required Use of Exclusive Listing Agreements

[i] Description of Requirement.

[ii] Analysis of Requirement.

[7] Commission Rate and Split Schedules

[8] Commission Split Uniformity

[9] Data Dissemination

[a] In General

[b] Property Information

[c] Seller Information

[d] Listing Broker Information

[e] Analysis of Data Dissemination

[f] MLS Disclaimers

[10] Selling Requirements

[a] In General

[b] Anti-Solicitation Rules

[i] Description of Requirement.

[ii] Analysis of Requirement.

[c] Subagency of Cooperating Brokers

[11] NAR Multiple Listing Policy--"The Fourteen Points"

§ 2.05 Code of Ethics and Standards of Practice of the National Association of Realtors(R)

§ 2.06 Professional Designations

§ 2.07 Errors and Omissions Insurance

15 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 2 Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry *

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Scope

Scope

SCOPE

Chapter 2 discusses the real estate brokerage industry and the business practices common to this industry. While the public (including some courts) freely uses the term Realtor(R), this term is a registered collective membership mark that identifies a real estate professional who is a member of the National Association of Realtors(R). This organization is the largest trade and professional organization in the United States. Chapter 2 discusses the history of broker organizations and multiple listing services (§ 2.01[2]) and the traditional role of brokerage firms in the residential and commercial markets (§ 2.01[3], [4]). The functions of brokers, salespersons, and finders within the industry are discussed (§ 2.02) as are the various types of commonly used brokerage contracts (§ 2.03). Chapter 2 contains a detailed discussion of the multiple listing service (MLS) programs and includes coverage of:

- the history of the MLS (§ 2.04[2]),
- the original reasons for and effects of multiple listing (§ 2.04[3]),
- membership requirements (§ 2.04[5]),
- listing requirements (§ 2.04[6]),
- commission rates and split schedules (§ 2.04[7]),
- commission split uniformity (§ 2.04[8]),
- data dissemination by the MLS (§ 2.04[9]),
- selling requirements (§ 2.04[10]),
- the National Association of Realtors(R) multiple listing policy (§ 2.04[11]).

Chapter 2 concludes with discussion of the Code of Ethics and Standards of Practice of the National Association of Realtors(R) (§ 2.05).

16 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 2 Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry *

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.01

§ 2.01 Overview of the Brokerage Industry

[1] Trade Associations

The National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR) and its affiliated state associations and local boards of realtors together comprise the principal trade organizations in the real estate brokerage industry. This section presents an introductory description of the NAR and its affiliates, followed by a brief introduction to the other smaller groups. The section also traces the history of the Realtor(R) organizations and recurring themes in that history. The "Realtor(R)" system is a tripartite trade organization consisting of the National Association, fifty state associations, and local boards of realtors(R) and the associations of the various states and U.S. territories.

[a] National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR)

The National Association of Realtors(R) is the parent organization and national component of the Realtors(R) system. Founded in 1908 in its headquarters location, Chicago, Illinois, the organization was known until 1972 as the National Association of Real Estate Boards (NAREB). The NAR's 2008 statistic of nearly 1.3 million members n1 makes it the largest trade organization in the nation. The majority of NAR's members are primarily engaged in residential brokerage as opposed to commercial brokerage or other forms of practice. The authors have located no precise statistics on the Realtor's(R) share of the real estate brokerage services market. However, data from the FTC Consumer and MLS (Multiple Listing Service) Surveys suggest that an overwhelming percentage of all broker-assisted residential housing transactions in the U.S. involve a Realtor(R).

The NAR charts the state and local units, maintains its code of ethics, licenses the collective service mark "Realtor(R)," helps establish Realtor(R) policies, and performs a wide range of services for its members.

Brokers or salespersons who wish to participate in any Realtor(R) organization must join all three branches: a local board of realtors(R), the state association, and the NAR. Only after payment of annual dues to all three branches and a pledge to abide by the Code of Ethics n1.1 and other regulations can a broker call him/herself a "Realtor(R)." Salesperson members are known as "Realtor(R)-Associates." If a broker belongs to the NAR, all the salespersons affiliated with the broker must join, or the member broker must pay dues for the salespersons in lieu of their joining.

Over the years the NAR has played an increasingly complex and important role in the brokerage industry. During its over one hundred-year history, the NAR has significantly influenced such major developments as the "safe harbor" income tax rules of independent contractors, the development and regulation of the MLS, the evolution of standards of brokerage practice, agency disclosure rules, and seller disclosure statements.

The NAR considers itself the nation's "spokesman for real estate." It performs the central public relations functions for the Realtors, including producing a large range of publications and media efforts.

The NAR plays a role in ensuring compliance with the Realtor(R) Code of Ethics and other standards. Failure to comply can result in the revocation of a Board or Association charter, revocation of use of the "Realtor(R)" mark, and termination of important services such as insurance. n1.2

The National Association also provides member services of all kinds. Educational and information services, including an unequaled real estate library, training courses and materials, and advanced designations for specialists are among the most widely used NAR offerings.

The National Association of Realtors(R) offers various professional designations and certifications including the following:

- Accredited Buyer Representative (ABR(R)).
- Accredited Buyer Representative Manager (ABRM(R)).
- Accredited Land Consultant (ALC(R)).
- Certified Commercial Investment Member (CCIM(R)).
- Certified International Property Specialist (CIPS(R)).
- Certified Property Manager (CPM(R)).
- Certified Real Estate Brokerage Manager (CRB(R)).
- Certified Residential Specialist (CRS(R)).
- Counselor of Real Estate (CRE(R)).
- General Accredited Appraiser (GAA(R)).
- Residential Accredited Appraiser (RAA(R)).
- Green Designation.
- Graduate REALTOR(R) Institute.
- Performance Management Network (PMN(R)).
- Realtor(R) Association Certified Executive (RCE(R)).
- Seniors Real Estate Specialist (SRES(R)).

- Society of Industrial and Office REALTORS(R) (SIOR(R)).
- At Home with Diversity Certification.
- e-Pro(R).
- Real Estate Professional Assistants Certification (REPA(sm)).
- Resort & Second-Home Property Certification (RSPS(R)).
- Transnational Referral Certification.

These designations and certifications are discussed in greater detail in § 2.06, below.

The term "Realtor(R)" is a trademark of the National Association of Realtors(R) and should only be used by licensees who belong to this group. n2 Some states subject licensees who use this trademark without the authority to do so to disciplinary proceedings. n3 It should be noted, however, that many courts use the term Realtor(R) as though it referred to any real estate licensee. This is incorrect. Only licensees who are a Realtor(R) member in a Realtor(R) association are automatically licensed by the National Association of Realtors(R) to use this mark to identify themselves.

[b] State Associations of Realtors(R)

The state associations are the middle link in the tripartite structure. In most ways the development of the state associations has followed and paralleled that of the NAR. Each state association is incorporated separately in its state and is composed of all the boards, Realtors(R), and Realtor(R) -associates located in the state. Members elect a state board of directors and other officials to preside over each state association. Each state association maintains a professional staff. The California Association of Realtors(R), by far the largest state association, has nearly 158,000 members, 117 member boards and a budget of $27 million. Most state associations are much smaller. Each state association generally has a governing framework and a system of committees that parallels that of the NAR.

The state association functions are also in many ways parallel to those of the NAR. Most state associations are active in political affairs and generally coordinate with the NAR for fund-raising and legislative activities in national matters. The larger associations perform public relations functions. Most maintain active political action committees and coordinate legal efforts with the NAR when appropriate. The state groups are particularly active in the education and training of members and in the development and publication of state-specific standardized forms, including listing and offer forms. State associations also provide support service for the boards, such as aid with bylaws and procedures and inter-board arbitration, and member services, such as insurance and pension programs.

[c] Local Boards of Realtors(R)

A local board of Realtors(R) is associated with the state association of Realtors(R), which in turn is associated with the National Association of Realtors(R). Historically, a real estate licensee had to be a member of his or her local board of Realtors(R) in order to obtain access to that board's multiple listing service. If membership in the local board was not required for this access, the non-member was typically charged a higher fee for such access. The trend is for multiple listing services to exist at a regional level. In some regions, the multiple listing service is owned by a separate entity rather than by a local board of Realtors(R). Many multiple listing services allow prospective purchasers to have some access to the service.

The local boards of Realtors(R) provide the organizational structure for enforcement of the Code of Ethics promulgated by the National Association of Realtors(R) and enforcement of arbitration as a means of settling disputes between Realtors(R). n4 Local boards of Realtors(R) also engage in public relations, advertising and political lobbying on behalf of their members.

[d] Non-Realtor(R) Trade Associations

The National Association of Real Estate Brokers (NAREB(R)) is comprised of African American professionals in the real estate industry. NAREB is the oldest minority trade association in America and was founded in 1947. This association refers to its members as Realtists(R). NAREB(R) has stated that although it is composed principally of African Americans, NAREB(R) embraces all qualified real estate practitioners who are committed to achieving the ideals of "Democracy in Housing." NAREB(R) may be contacted at: 9831 Greenbelt Road, Suite #309, Lanham, MD 20706; Telephone: 301-552-9340; Website: <http://www.nareb.com>.

The National Association of Hispanic Real Estate Professionals (NAHREP) is a trade association with 15,000 members in over 60 affiliate chapters in 48 states. NAHREP's mission is to increase Hispanic homeownership rates by empowering the advisors that serve them. NAHREP may be contacted at: 5414 Oberlin Drive #230, San Diego, Ca 92121; Telephone: 858-622-9046; Website: <http://www.nahrep.org>.

The Asian Real Estate Association of America (AREAA), founded in 2003, is a trade organization dedicated to promoting sustainable homeownership opportunities in Asian American communities by creating a national voice for housing and real estate professionals that serve this market. AREAA may be contacted at: 5963 La Place Court, Suite 312, Carlsbad, CA 92008; Telephone: 760-918-9162; Website: <http://www.areaa.org>.

The National Association of Real Estate Consultants(R) (NAREC) was founded in 1999. NAREC promotes fee-for-service compensation plans rather than the traditional commission compensation plan. NAREC has offices in Idaho and Florida. NAREC may be contacted at: 2758 West River Drive, Lenore, ID 83541; Telephone: 208-746-7963; Website: <http://www.narec.com>.

[2] History of the Realtor(R) Organizations and System of Brokerage

Today's brokerage structures and practices are often viewed as the only possible system of brokerage. However, they have evolved over many years in response to the specific problems and needs of the industry. These structures and practices were not implemented arbitrarily, nor were they imposed by an outside force. They were, for the most part, developed and instituted by the industry members themselves.

The primary factor in the evolution of the brokerage industry and the Realtor(R) organizations has been the continual increase in the size and complexity of local housing markets. Generally, search costs increase as these markets increase in size. Search costs decrease as the concentration of the market-making systems, such as MLSs, increases. The history of the Realtor(R) organizations is, in large part, the story of the development of structures to solve the problem of increased search costs.

While the practice of real estate is generally local, the structures and practices of brokerage developed in parallel fashion throughout the country. The most complete record of the Realtors(R) is contained in the journals of the California Association of Realtors(R) (California Real Estate). The California Association of Realtors(R) (CAR) is the one state association which pre-dates the national organization. Not only has the California Association literature traced the national developments in brokerage throughout the country, but the California Association has also been a leader in most of those developments. California structures and practices have often been models for others throughout the United States. In addition, California brokers have long been a major portion of the industry. Today California contains approximately one-fifth of the nation's licensees and Realtors. As early as 1925, the CAR accounted for approximately one-sixth of the total national membership.

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.01

Until the mid-Nineteenth Century, the principal intermediaries in the real estate sales transaction were lawyers and other business persons not specialized in real estate. The creation of the real estate associations and the advent of brokerage as a separate occupation coincided. As the size and complexity of the market, and therefore the complexity of the function of brokerage increased, specialization in brokerage became increasingly common.

Brokers have probably always held informal meetings. The first formal association of brokers is generally believed to be one formed in New York in 1847. That group's primary function was to serve as a forum for the exchange of information on properties for sale. It also established standards of practice for those participating in the exchange. The first group to call itself a "realty board" was established in San Diego in 1887.

As population moved westward, local boards or exchanges were established and patterned after the New York exchange. The common objectives of these local associations were to exchange listing information more efficiently and to establish standards of practice. The first state association in continuous operation was the California Association, formed in 1905.

In 1908 the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges was formed in Chicago. Present at the initial meeting were 19 local boards and the California Association. These brokers and officials were just beginning to see the "possibility of self-government" for the real estate industry. The challenge was to organize the industry.

The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges later changed its name to the National Association of Real Estate Boards, or NAREB. This name was used until 1972. In 1972, the National Association adopted the name National Association of Realtors. This was done, in part, to stress the term "Realtor," which some Realtor(R) officials felt was in danger of becoming a generic substitute for the word "broker."

In 1913 the first Code of Ethics was drafted by the National Association. The code, although amended many times, has retained much of its original content.

In the early years of the associations, the most pressing task was to hold the organizations together. Association officials at the time looked forward to the day when licensing laws would help this effort. In 1917, the California Association succeeded in its campaign to persuade the California legislature to pass the first state licensing law. This original law was overturned by the California courts on constitutional grounds. In 1919 the modified statute became the first real estate license law to take effect in the United States. This early license law incorporated into a regulatory statute the essence of the Realtor's ethics. Many practicing brokers at that time who were not Realtors(R) were apparently not in favor of this legislation.

In 1923 the first Association of State Real Estate Commissioners was formed. This Association, working closely with the National Association of Real Estate Boards, helped coordinate the various state activities. By 1949, thirty-six states, two United States territories, and three Canadian provinces had adopted license laws. Most of these laws were based upon the California law.

During the 1920's, the structures and principles which now dominate the industry evolved rapidly. The state licensing laws and the Realtor(R) associations facilitated the development of a single, organized industry. The advantages of cooperation in marketing also bound together the otherwise fragmented industry. This is reflected most strikingly in the development of the multiple listing services. In 1921 there were only ten boards in the country with multiple listing services. By 1923 there were more than 120. By 1926, a National Association survey indicated that a majority of boards throughout the country operated multiple listing services. The average length of time of operating such service was three years. The maximum time was eight years. For those Boards that operated MLSs, an average of seventy percent of board members belonged.

By the end of the 1920's, most of today's brokerage structures had been developed and were in fairly wide use. The most dramatic change since that time has been the increasing dominance of the Realtor's system of brokerage. This has been reflected most clearly in the increased use of the multiple listing services.

[3] Residential Real Estate Brokerage Firms

[a] Traditional Predominance of Small Firms

The residential real estate brokerage industry traditionally has been dominated, in terms of numbers of firms and volume of sales, by small brokerage firms. Surveys conducted by the NAR have found that more than fifty percent of all firms employ ten or fewer brokers and salespersons. Single-office firms predominate, with almost two-thirds of all firms having only one office. The predominance of relatively small firms is generally explained by a combination of the few economies of scale available to firms, the cyclical nature of business, and the relatively easy entry into the industry.

Traditionally, there have been few economies of scale in the real estate brokerage business. The one function that does involve enormous economies is the MLS. However, this function generally is undertaken by the associations for the benefit of all of the member firms. Therefore, it is not an economy that one firm can use to gain an advantage over other firms.

There are some economies of scale in advertising and otherwise attracting buyers and sellers, particularly for the large regional and national firms who market their services under a common name. Even here, however, surveys indicate that referrals in one form or another are the principal means by which buyers and sellers become aware of brokers. Advertising by firms in the media, which may involve economies of scale, appears to account for less than fifteen percent of listings and sales.

The cyclical nature of the real estate brokerage market may also contribute to its fragmented structure. The smaller firms appear to have an advantage in adjusting to market fluctuations. They are also characterized by lower overhead. This includes few fixed assets and relatively fewer salaried employees.

Regardless of the size of the firm, the relatively small office appears to have an advantage. The geographic market in which salespersons conduct most of their business are local in nature. The salespersons' primary expertise consists of their knowledge of these local markets. The small office advantage is illustrated by the trend in franchise operations to grant exclusive territories with a radius of only about one mile. These territories are based on populations per franchise of approximately 30,000 to 50,000, and the preferred radii may be getting smaller with time.

[b] Entry

New residential real estate brokerage firms are formed continuously. In fact, the increase in the number of real estate firms appears to have kept pace with the substantial increase in average home prices.

Entry at the firm level generally involves an experienced broker leaving an established firm and starting his or her own firm. Perhaps because of the role that referrals play in obtaining business and the availability of MLS listings to the smallest brokerage firms, the owner of even a small firm may make a personal income very close to what he or she might earn in a larger operation.

[c] Growth and Entry of Large Corporations and Franchises

In recent years it has been fashionable to predict that eight to ten large national corporations and franchises will soon dominate the residential brokerage market. These predictions have been caused by two relatively recent phenomena. First, the spectacular rise in home prices combined with a stable or rising commission rate has meant a corresponding rise in total industry revenues. These revenues have attracted the attention of large national corporations, several of which have investigated the field. A few undertook the process of entry through purchases of local, traditional brokerage firms. Second, there has been very rapid growth in real estate franchising in recent years.

At present, the largest corporate chain of residential brokerage offices is Coldwell Banker. Coldwell Banker, Prudential and other large corporations attempting to enter or expand rapidly in the residential brokerage industry have generally done so by purchasing existing businesses. Acquisitions are preferred because entry at the local market level requires knowledge of the local market conditions. However, entry through such purchases has been quite difficult for at least two reasons. Because the primary assets of the firm are local management and a sales force with a knowledge of local conditions, it is very difficult to assign a dollar value to such corporations. If the talented people leave, the prospective corporate owner may have nothing left but an empty shell. Second, the taxation consequences of an acquisition to the broker-owners of traditional firms appear to be such that they often prefer to remain independent.

While the picture of rapidly escalating corporate growth through acquisition of existing firms may be somewhat exaggerated, the growth of the franchise systems has indeed been spectacular. Century 21 has been, at least in terms of number of franchisees, the most successful franchise system. This system was founded in 1972.

A new theory in real estate franchising emerged in 1973 with the emergence of a new company called RE/MAX. RE/MAX, which started as a "high-commission, full support" company, developed a system whereby licensees keep 100% of their individual commissions after sharing overhead costs. In 1977, RE/MAX began to franchise its offices. RE/MAX has since become a leader in several major markets including Denver, Chicago, Kansas City, San Antonio, Toronto and Ottawa. It has also become a major competing company in Anchorage, Dallas, Atlanta, Detroit, Washington, D.C., Edmonton, Calgary and Montreal.

By the beginning of the 1990s, a small number of national real estate franchise organizations dominated the U.S. home sale market. These franchise organizations control 35.7% of all U.S. home sales closed by brokerage companies in 1990. RE/MAX was the only major franchise operation to gain in the number of transactions over the previous year, boasting an 8.1% increase in the number of transactions from 1989. All other franchises suffered a decrease, ranging from a 1.9% loss for Prudential to an 11.4% loss for Better Homes and Gardens. RE/MAX capitalizes on hiring experienced real estate brokers who are willing to pay a nominal overhead (e.g., $1,000 per month) in return for 100% of the commissions they generate.

Advertising, and the image identification it creates, appears to be the most important economy of scale available to large brokerage firms or franchises. Sellers, in selecting a firm or broker with which to list their houses for sale, rate honesty and integrity as the most important attributes of such firm or broker. In seeking these attributes, sellers traditionally have selected brokers and firms on the basis of personal contacts or referrals, or by community reputation. Image identification established by mass advertising, however, is making inroads into this consumer search process. Consumers may place trust in a familiar name with a presumed reputation to protect regardless of the source of that familiarity--a pattern familiar in consumer goods marketing.

With a perceived increase in the importance of mass advertising, smaller local firms have felt some pressure to go beyond such symbols of presumed quality as the Realtors' service mark and associate themselves with organizations that can economically utilize modern marketing tools in establishing an image. Thus, the franchise systems create and also respond to the demands of small local brokers increasingly concerned about the potential advantages and economies available to the brokerage chains.

In addition to the economies of scale available in establishing image identification, there are economies available to both franchise organizations and corporations relating to recruiting and training of personnel. Large firms very often are affiliated with or operate pre-licensing schools for prospective real estate agents. These schools can return a net profit to the parent company, and sometimes even use salespersons of marginal quality recruited from their own schools, because sellers often list with a brokerage firm for which a friend or relative works. (A common method of competing for listings is having a steady turnover of the largest number of salespersons manageable.) Because salespersons are generally paid only when they produce, i.e., on a commission basis, such a form of competition for listings can sometimes be successful.

[4] Commercial Real Estate Brokerage Firms

[a] Traditional Role

The commercial real estate brokerage industry has traditionally been dominated by regional brokerage firms. The regional brokerage firms tend to employ between twenty and fifty brokers with a regional impact that is somewhat larger than the residential brokerage firms. There are a number of brokerage networks wherein commercial brokerage firms network with other firms from other regions. While statistics are not available as to the percentage and market share, number of transactions and overall effectiveness of the regional firms, practice has tended to show that the effectiveness of the regional firms has been their ability to penetrate buyer's markets. Residential markets tend to concentrate on the amount of listings and sales available, because the number of buyers largely depends on the demographics of a given residential area. Commercial markets, however, tend to depend on the number of buyers available in a given market for the amount of commercial real estate available for sale. That is, there are a smaller number of buyers in the commercial market and the concentration in this market produces better overall results.

[b] Entry

Entry into commercial real estate markets tends to be highly specialized. Commercial markets are dominated by organizations such as Society of Industrial and Office Realtors, Realtors(R) National Marketing Institute and the Institute of Real Estate Management. As stated above, commercial markets tend to depend on the number of buyers available in a given market for the amount of commercial real estate available for sale. Specialization, the result of years of experience, education and expertise, does have its rewards. However, success in commercial markets seems to be a longer, harder pursuit because the demand is smaller and requirements for expertise much higher than in the competitive residential real estate brokerage industry.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. National Association of REALTORS(R) 2008 Annual Report.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See § 2.05 infra.

(n3)Footnote 1.2. See generally Sing v. John L. Scott, Inc., 134 Wash.2d 24, 40-41, 948 P.2d 816, 824 (1997) (discussing the Code of Ethics), citing this Treatise.

(n4)Footnote 2. See Pope v. Mississippi Real Estate Com., 872 F.2d 127, 132 (5th Cir. 1989) .

(n5)Footnote 3. See Mont. Code 37-51-321(1)(d).

(n6)Footnote 4. Cf. Morf v. N. Central Mississippi Board of Realtors, Inc., 27 So. 3d 1188, 1195 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009) (The MLS and Board can discipline members for violating professional conduct standards found in their governing documents. Before a fine can be imposed, they must have a schedule of maximum fines that may be imposed to which schedule each member has agreed to be bound by joining the association.), writ denied, 27 So. 3d 404 (Miss. 2010) .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the law firm of Jacobus, Boltz, Melamed & Witherspoon, Houston, Texas. Sections 2.06 and 2.07 were written by Sandra Bullington, who has contributed additional updates throughout the chapter.

17 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 2 Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry *

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.02

§ 2.02 Brokers, Salespersons and Finders--Definitions, Descriptions and Distinctions

[1] Brokers

All states have provided a statutory definition of the term "real estate broker." The National Association of Real Estate License Law Officials (NARELLO) Model of Real Estate License Law defines "broker" as:

an individual or professional association while acting for another for commissions or other compensation with a promise thereof, or a licensee under this chapter while acting in his or her own behalf who:

- (1) Sells, exchanges, purchases, rents, or leases real estate.
- (2) Offers to sell, exchange, purchase, rent or lease real estate.
- (3) Negotiates, offers, attempts or agrees to negotiate the sale, exchange, purchase, rental or leasing of real estate.
- (4) Lists, offers, attempts or agrees to list real estate for sale, lease or exchange.
- (5) Auctions, offers, attempts or agrees to auction real estate.
- (6) Buys, sells, offers to buy or sell or otherwise deals in options on real estate or improvements thereon.
- (7) Collects, offers, attempts or agrees to collect rent for the use of real estate.
- (8) Advertises or holds himself out as being engaged in the business of buying, selling, exchanging, renting or leasing real estate.
- (9) Assists or directs in the procuring of prospects, calculated to result in the sale, exchange, lease or rental of real estate.

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.02

(10) Assists or directs in the negotiation of any transaction calculated or intended to result in the sale, exchange, leasing or rental of real estate.

(11) Engages in the business of charging an advance fee in connection with any contract whereby he undertakes to promote the sale or lease of real estate either through its listing in a publication issued for such purpose or for referral of information concerning such real estate to brokers or both.

(12) Performs any of the foregoing acts as an employee of, or on behalf of, the owner of, or any person who has a real or equitable interest in, real estate for compensation.

Though not all statutory definitions of the term "broker" are this verbose, these definitions tend to be broadly worded.

As generally defined, a real estate broker is an agent who, for a commission or fee, is employed by a principal to negotiate the sale, purchase, lease or exchange of real property to a third party. n1 A determination of whether a particular individual is acting within a capacity which is to be considered a "real estate broker" is a factual issue. n1.1 One key element of most definitions of a broker is that the party is engaging in the conduct for compensation or the expectation of compensation. n1.2

Brokers do not individually do all the selling, listing and other duties associated with the functioning of a real estate brokerage firm. Instead, brokers operate through licensed agents, who are formally affiliated with the broker. n1.3 Usually, the applicable state law requires that a licensed real estate agent be associated with a licensed real estate broker. n1.4 Typically, real estate agents are not employees of the broker, but instead work as independent contractors. n1.5

A broker has been said to be an intermediary or middleman whose function and duty is to bring together the buyer and seller or owner and lessee. n2 There is, however, a distinction between a middleman and a broker, and it has been held that any person's participation in negotiating a sale makes such a party a real estate broker and not a mere middleman, regardless of how slight the participation, where such person was employed in connection with the sale. n3

Individuals employed by real estate developers are often found not to be brokers or agents even though their services may incidentally result in a real estate brokerage transaction. For example, an individual who oversaw the marketing expenses of a developer in order to save the developer money was not found to be a broker. n4 This individual also was responsible for marketing the properties by preparing budgets for advertising, creating advertisements, and soliciting bids for the furnishing of model homes. n5

In the typical brokerage situation there are two contracts involved: (1) the contract between the principal and the third party and (2) the contract between the broker and the principal. While the broker generally represents the owner or seller in the sale or leasing of real property, a broker may be employed by a buyer or lessee and, in fact, may conceivably be employed at the same time by both the buyer and seller or owner and lessee. n6

The agency of a real estate broker is special in that the broker's powers are limited and are narrowly restricted within the terms of that agency. n7 The real estate broker is only authorized to do what is specifically assigned in his or her contract of employment. n8 If the broker acts outside the scope of the broker's authority, the principal will not be bound n9 and the broker may be open to personal liability. n10 The authority of the broker ends as soon as the purpose for which the broker was employed has been accomplished.

In order to recover a brokerage commission, the broker must, initially, prove a contract of employment. Many states now require the brokerage contract to be in writing. n11 As a general rule, moreover, the states require a real estate broker to be licensed, n12 and the broker cannot recover a commission unless the broker was licensed at the time of rendering the services for which the commission is claimed. n13 This rule is strictly applied. A further prerequisite for recovery of a commission is that the broker be the procuring and efficient cause of a sale. n14

The brokerage business is very labor-intensive. Almost sixty percent of a brokerage firm's gross revenues typically are paid to brokers and salespersons in the form of fees and commissions. Generally, a firm's principal assets are considered to be its sales personnel and their knowledge of the local market. With each firm providing a customary range of brokerage services, job mobility of successful brokers and salespeople is fostered, and real estate firms become, in effect, flexible collections of independent, skilled, semi-autonomous contractors. n15

Because of the relative unimportance of "the firm" when compared to either the MLS or the individual broker or salesperson, a perennial problem faced by all firms is finding and keeping successful brokers and salespersons. Firms compete in terms of the percentage of the total commission that the broker or salesperson will receive for acquiring a listing or completing a sale. n16 These "internal splits" vary among firms, communities, and according to market conditions. Typically they range from ten percent to thirty percent to the listing broker, forty percent to sixty percent to the selling broker or cooperating firm, and the remainder to the firm. They are also frequently progressive--that is, as a broker produces more listings or more sales per year, the percentage he or she receives increases. A successful broker who sells his or her own listing can sometimes receive seventy percent of the total commission.

The use of brokers and salespersons and their relative importance to the firms can be seen in the internal split structure. First, the ability of inexperienced salespersons to obtain the listings of friends and relatives usually is reflected in the relatively low split given for listing the first several properties. The relative importance and difficulty of converting a prospective buyer to an actual buyer is reflected in the larger split given for that function. Furthermore, the progressively higher splits for increasing numbers of transactions per year reflect the rewards reaped by those individual brokers and salespersons with the ability to quickly obtain listings from or make sales to people outside their circle of friends and relatives.

The fees and commission paid to brokers and salespersons by clients are almost always contingent in nature. The contingent form of payment is a major inducement for the broker or salesperson to persuade the buyer and seller to complete the transaction. It also facilitates the use of marginally productive salespersons and part-timers because their time is viewed by many as being "cheap" or even "free" to the firm.

Profiles of representative real estate brokers have been compiled from surveys conducted by the Realtors' associations. The typical Realtor-broker is a man approximately forty-eight years old who has been associated with the real estate business for at least ten years, having worked for at least two different brokerage firms, who specializes in selling single-family homes, who works more than forty hours per week. While this picture has remained somewhat constant over the years, there is a trend toward Realtor(R) brokers who are more highly educated. By 1987, 66.1% of the Realtor-brokers had some level of college education. While organized real estate and full-time real estate brokers generally believe part-time brokers are less able to give quality service to consumers, almost forty-five percent of the firms use them.

The various state licensing requirements are not considered serious barriers to entry. The numbers of licensees have been found to vary according to various indirect measures of demand when comparing different market areas, and the numbers of licensees both in absolute numbers and as a percentage of population have generally increased.

There are no accurate statistics on the number of brokers and salespersons actively involved in brokerage, as opposed to the total number of licensees registered with the states. Most observers believe the number of licensees greatly exceeds the number of people actually engaged in brokerage. Local surveys attempting to measure the actual percentage of licensees who are full-time practitioners, however, have produced results ranging from approximately thirty percent to eighty percent of licensees.

Brokers are generally considered to be in a fiduciary relationship with their principals, requiring a high degree of loyalty and good faith. Brokers, moreover, have a duty not to act negligently with respect to their principals' interests. n17 As a consequence, if the principal should sustain a loss due to the broker's negligence, the broker may be held personally liable. n18

[2] Salespersons

A salesperson, as distinguished from a broker, is defined by most statutes as an agent of the broker, n19 receives his or her commission from the broker n20 and is precluded from receiving compensation from any third party for services rendered in a transaction. The salesperson may not collect a commission directly from the broker's clients. A salesperson's right to a commission, if any, must be enforced against the broker and this right is not affected by the broker's litigation against the buyer or seller. n21 While a state's statute of frauds usually requires that principal's agreements authorizing or employing an agent or broker to purchase or sell real estate for compensation be in writing, there is usually no prohibition of oral agreements between brokers or between a broker and a salesperson or agent to share a commission. n22

Salespersons must be associated with a broker. Most licensing statutes provide that the salesperson's license is held by his or her broker. n23 Typically, salespersons work as independent contractors of their broker; however, it is possible for them to be employees. n24

For a discussion of statutes of frauds in relation to real estate broker employment contracts, see § 2.03[3] infra.

[3] Finders

A broker may be employed as a "finder," i.e., his or her job may be to find a prospective purchaser, introduce the parties and leave the negotiations, etc., to the buyer and seller. n25 "Finders" may be exempt from real estate licensing requirements if none of the functions of a broker are performed. n26 In California, for example, it has been held that one acting merely as an intermediary or middleman in finding and introducing two parties to a real estate transaction does not act as a "broker" for purposes of the state's real estate licensing laws. n27 However, if the "finder" takes any part in the negotiations, no matter how slight, he or she will be considered a "broker" and must be licensed to collect a commission. n28 Of course, whether a broker was employed as a "broker" or as a "finder" will at times be a question of fact depending upon the agreement between the parties. n29

It has been stated that the distinction between a broker and a middleman is significant in the determination of whether a fiduciary relationship existed between the middleman and the principal. n30

At least one court has refused to recognize a "middleman" exception to the real estate broker's duty of full disclosure, stating that there is no exception for finders or middlemen who merely bring parties together to negotiate a contract, and who have no power to, and do not, negotiate the terms on which the principals deal. n31

The descriptive term--"finder" or "middleman"--does not mean the exclusion of the party from the operation of licensing requirements applicable to brokers. n32 It is the activity that counts, not the name. n32.1 The activity of the party may bring that party within the licensing law even if that party uses the self-description of "finder" or "middleman," as the discussion below points out.

A "middleman" has been defined as a person who "is employed for the mere purpose of bringing the possible buyer and seller together so that they may negotiate their own contract." n33 The middleman has only limited authority and has no power to, and does not, negotiate the terms of the transaction for the principals. n34

Likewise, a "finder" is an intermediary who contracts to find and bring the parties together but leaves the negotiation of the transaction to the principals. n35 Since a middleman or finder is merely involved in introducing the parties to each other, it follows that there is no fiduciary relationship to the principals. n36

The limited role and liability of a middleman is perceived by the courts as constituting a narrow exception to the general principle that one who participates, for compensation, in assisting the negotiation or consummation of a real estate transaction is a broker and is liable as a broker. If the person has engaged in any negotiation to consummate the transaction, the person is viewed as a broker, not a mere middleman or finder. n37 The reason for this limitation is apparent: all brokers are involved in bringing the parties together and, if a more liberal interpretation of the terms "middleman" or "finder" were sanctioned, the exception would swallow the rule. A broader construction would be inconsistent with the principle that the imposition of duties and responsibilities upon brokers, including licensing requirements, is to protect the public from unqualified and unscrupulous people. n38 As one court explained:

The essential feature of a broker's employment is to bring the parties together in an amicable frame of mind, with an attitude toward each other and toward the transaction in hand which permits their working out the terms of their agreement. They may reach that agreement without his aid or interference. Indeed, in a transaction of any magnitude, the terms would never be settled beforehand or negotiated finally by the broker

This does not mean that the broker has not negotiated the transaction If the statute does not apply to such a situation, then it is a toothless enactment. Every unlicensed broker will make the same argument that the plaintiff here has made, that he did not have to bring the parties to actual agreement upon all the details, that that phase was something for the parties themselves to determine. In short, every unlicensed broker will be enabled to carry on his business just as he did before the statute came into existence, simply by calling himself a finder, an originator, an introducer, instead of a broker. This would be an absurd limitation of the statute and one unfounded in reason or policy. n39

[4] Cases Addressing the Broker and Middleman/Finder Dichotomy

In one Utah case, a corporation entered into a written "finders agreement" under which another corporation was afforded the right to act as finder for the purchase of property from the corporation and was to receive a percentage of the sales price. The would-be "finder" thereafter brought an action to recover the agreed-upon compensation, with the court granting summary judgment to the defendant on the ground that the plaintiff's activity was real estate brokerage and the plaintiff could not recover as the plaintiff was not licensed. n40

In an Illinois case, a plaintiff, not licensed as a broker, attempted to recover a fee for services in the negotiation of a commercial lease by claiming that he acted merely as a finder. n41 The facts were that the defendant-seller contacted the plaintiff and asked him to look for a tenant for her store building, without discussion at any time of the fee to be paid for such service. The court denied recovery, reasoning that the negotiation of a store lease is a form of real estate brokerage, and the plaintiff was precluded from receiving compensation for having done so without benefit of license. n42

Of major importance is the decision of the Supreme Court of California in Batson v. Strehlow. n43 In Batson, a real estate agent, accused of improper conduct, sought to avoid the return of a commission by labeling himself a middleman. There, the guardian of an incompetent's estate mailed a real estate listing to a large number of brokers. The listing described the property, offered to sell it on specified terms and solicited bids. The listing offered to pay a commission to the real estate broker who submitted the accepted bid, provided that the sale was completed after court approval had been obtained. The defendant-broker submitted a bid on behalf of a development company in which he and his wife owned all of the shares. The bid was the highest one received and was accepted after court approval. The defendant was paid a commission. Thereafter, an action was commenced to recover the commission. The proof showed that the development company, in whose name the bid was submitted, did not provide the consideration for the purchase of the property. The money was provided by the defendant-broker and business associates. In fact, after the sale, the property was conveyed by the development company to a partnership consisting of the broker and his two associates. The plaintiff's theory of recovery was that the defendant was not a broker in the transaction but a principal. The defendant countered with the contention that he was entitled to a commission, not as a broker, but as a middleman who had brought the parties together.

The Supreme Court of California unanimously concluded that the defendant was a broker, not a mere middleman. The court declared that the distinction between a finder or middleman and a broker often turns on whether the intermediary was invested with authority or duties beyond merely bringing the parties together. n44 In Batson, at all times the defendant was referred to or described as a broker and, under applicable provisions of the California Probate Code, only a bona fide agent or broker could receive compensation for securing a purchaser for property owned by an estate. n45 Thus, the compensation paid the defendant was lawful only if he were a bona fide agent or broker. Moreover, disregarding what the defendant was called, the court declared that "the role he played" was that of a broker. n46 The court did not explicitly describe what particular conduct engaged in by the defendant was broker conduct. Although there were no face-to-face negotiations with the seller, who relied upon written bid submissions, the defendant apparently engaged in the preparation of the bid that was accepted. Bid preparation necessarily would entail the use of judgment and discretion and the investment in the bid preparer of at least limited authority to speak for the bidder. Hence, there was sufficient activity on the part of the broker that evinced that his role was not merely that of "bringing the parties together." n47

The Batson case was followed in the subsequent California case of Whitehead v. Gordon n48 which involved a proceeding by a broker to review the revocation of his brokerage license. The proof revealed that the broker, on two occasions, submitted offers to purchase realty from estates. The offers were submitted in the name of the broker's brother-in-law, with the relationship of the offeror to the broker undisclosed. The broker received commissions from the estates and, afterwards, title to the subject properties was transferred to corporations in which the broker had substantial interests. The trial court annulled the revocation of the license. Though the court acknowledged that there had been an attempt to deceive, it reasoned that the deception was "unnecessary." The broker owed no duty to the sellers, as the broker had been acting solely as a middleman. The California Court of Appeals reversed, n49 citing Batson. As in Batson, the court concluded that the activities involved in Whitehead constituted real estate brokerage and, consequently, the obligations imposed by law upon brokers attached.

Another California case, Montoya v. McLeod, n50 involved a constructive fraud action which was brought by a couple against a licensed real estate salesperson who had solicited a loan on behalf of her employer, an investment broker. The court determined that the salesperson, acting in her capacity as "investment counselor," was not a mere "middleperson." The court noted that the salesperson had negotiated the loan and executed a promissory note in the couple's favor, which established an agency (fiduciary) relationship despite the absence of a written agency agreement.

In sum, courts have severely limited the concept of a non-broker middleman or finder. While broker liability may fairly be disclaimed where the intermediary does no more than introduce the parties to each other, any greater activity on the part of the intermediary will likely result in the conclusion that the intermediary was a broker and liable as such. Given the stated principle of protecting the public from the consequences of improper acts by unscrupulous intermediaries, the courts will resolve even doubtful cases by holding the intermediary to be a broker.

[5] Broker Activities Versus Marketing Activities

Another scenario where a seller tries to avoid paying compensation arises when a developer engages an unlicensed party to handle the marketing of the developer's project. If the developer subsequently reneges on the parties' compensation agreement, the developer may allege that payment of the compensation would violate a statutory prohibition against paying real estate commissions to an unlicensed person. n51

This argument was asserted in Schickedanz Bros.-Riviera, Ltd. v. Harris. n52 The compensation agreement contained an incentive bonus based on maintaining marketing expenses below a certain percentage of gross real estate sales. The duties of the unlicensed parties involved the preparation of budgets for advertising, the creation of advertisements, and the solicitation of bids for the furnishing of model homes. n53 In holding that providing oversight of the marketing budget and paying for these services with a fee incentive did not transform the services into brokerage services, the court contrasted its decision with an earlier decision where an unlicensed individual was deemed to be a real estate broker or salesman. In the prior case, however, a telephone solicitor was paid not only an hourly rate, but also a $3 bonus for each person whom she successfully solicited to visit the developer's property. The fact that this individual had direct contact with the purchasers was a factor in the decision, as was the fact that she played an active part in the procurement of identified prospective customers. n54 In contrast, the unlicensed parties in the case before the court merely provided oversight of the marketing budget. The fact that a fee incentive was tied to keeping marketing expenses below a certain percentage of real estate sales did not transform those services into brokerage services. The court stated that it was the nature of the services rendered, rather than a characterization of whether purchasers of real property are directly or indirectly procured by the services, which distinguished the cases. n55

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Section 2(4) of the NARELLO Model License Law, ch. 6 infra .

California: Horning v. Shilberg, 130 Cal. App. 4th 197, 203, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 717, 723 (2005) .

New York: In 1992, New York R.P.L. § 440(1) [Definitions] was amended to provide that in connection with the sale of a business, the term "real estate broker" shall not include a person, firm or corporation registered pursuant to the provisions of New York's General Business Law, Article 23-A or federal securities laws.

Michigan: G.C. Timmis & Co. v. Guardian Alarm Co., 468 Mich. 416, 427-428, 662 N.W.2d 710, 716-717 (2003) .

Wyoming: In Walter v. Moore, 700 P.2d 1219 (Wyo. 1985) , the Wyoming Supreme Court held that the vendor's daughter-in-law, who was not acting as a real estate broker in the transaction, was not liable for fraud even though the purchasers discovered after the sale that they could not install a septic tank or build a new home on the land as they has planned because of zoning regulations. Seller placed an advertisement in the classified section of the newspaper to sell her house trailer and river-front property. The purchasers purchased the property after seeing the advertisement and seller stated to them that her daughter-in-law was a real estate agent who would assist in the details of the transaction. The real estate agent mentioned that she would assist the purchasers as a favor to her mother-in-law and that she was not accepting a commission on the sale. Approximately six months after the purchasers had moved onto the property, the septic system stopped working. Subsequently they were informed by a sanitation engineer that the property was in a floodplain zone which precluded the installation of a septic system. Building a new home on the land was also precluded. Accordingly, they brought suit against the real estate agent for fraud. The court stated that the agent could not be held liable in fraud, because she had not acted as a broker in the sale.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Kidd v. Mull, 595 S.E.2d 308, 317-318 (W. Va. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 1.2. See, e.g., Idaho Code § 54-2004(33)(a).

(n4)Footnote 1.3. See Proa v. NRT Mid Atlantic, Inc., 618 F. Supp. 2d 447, 460 (D. Md. 2009) , reconsideration granted in part, 633 F. Supp. 2d 209 (D. Md. 2009) ; Montgomery County Ass'n of Realtors, Inc. v. Realty Photo Master Corp., 783 F. Supp. 952, 954 and n.3 (D. Md. 1992) , aff'd, 993 F.2d 1538 (4th Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 964, 114 S. Ct. 440, 126 L. Ed. 2d 374 (1993) .

(n5)Footnote 1.4. See, e.g., N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 442-a.

(n6)Footnote 1.5. See Proa v. NRT Mid Atlantic, Inc., 618 F. Supp. 2d 447, 460 (D. Md. 2009) , reconsideration granted in part, 633 F. Supp. 2d 209 (D. Md. 2009) ; Verdecchia v. Douglas A. Prozan, Inc., 274 F. Supp. 2d 712, 721-23 (W.D. Pa. 2003) ; Montgomery County Ass'n of Realtors, Inc. v. Realty Photo Master Corp., 783 F. Supp. 952, 954 and n.3 (D. Md. 1992) , aff'd, 993 F.2d 1538 (4th Cir. 1993) , cert. denied, 510 U.S. 964, 114 S. Ct. 440, 126 L. Ed. 2d 374 (1993) ; Locations, Inc. v. Hawaii Dep't of Labor & Indus. Relations, 79 Haw. 208, 218, 900 P.2d 784, 794 (Haw. 1995) ; Anderson v. Wiegand, 223 Mich. App. 549, 556, 567 N.W.2d 452, 455 (1997) .

(n7)Footnote 2.

Alabama: Ex Parte Ledford, 761 So. 2d 990, 995 (Ala. 2000) (a real estate broker brings together those selling real estate and those buying it and assists in the negotiation of the sale-purchase transaction).

See:

California: Ryan v. Walker, 35 Cal. App. 116, 169 P. 417 (1917) .

Minnesota: In Relocation Realty Servs. v. Carlson Cos., 264 N.W.2d 643 (Minn. 1978) , it was held that a company was a "real estate broker" within the purview of the state licensing statute, where the company provided services to employers in transferring and relocating executive personnel and held itself out to be engaged in the purchase and sale of real estate for a fee.

Cf. Horning v. Shilberg, 130 Cal. App. 4th 197, 204, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 717, 723 (2005) (person acting on his or her own behalf in a real estate transaction is not a broker within the meaning of Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.).

(n8)Footnote 3. See West v. Touchstone, 620 S.W.2d 687 (Tex. Civ. App. 1981) writ of error refused no reversible error (Sept. 28, 1981), rehearing of writ of error overruled (Oct. 28, 1981).

See also Preach v. Rainbow, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320 (Cal. Ct. App. 1993) (where a person alleged to be a finder engages in not only bringing the parties together, but also in negotiations, his actions constituted those of a broker, not a finder).

(n9)Footnote 4. See Schickedanz Bros.-Riviera v. Harris, 800 So. 2d 608, 611 (Fla. 2001) .

(n10)Footnote 5. See Schickedanz Bros.-Riviera v. Harris, 800 So. 2d 608 (Fla. 2001) .

(n11)Footnote 6. See Section 20(14) of the NARELLO Model License Law, ch. 6 infra .

(n12)Footnote 7. See:

California: Van Nguyen v. Hung Tran, 157 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906, 910 (2007) (broker is a special agent with limited powers).

Kentucky: Garnes v. Murphy, 239 S.W.2d 453 (Ky. 1951) .

New Jersey: Sammarone v. Bovino, 395 N.J. Super. 132, 139, 928 A.2d 140, 144 (App. Div. 2007) , cert. denied, 193 N.J. 275, 937 A.2d 977 (2007) .

Washington: Peoples Nat'l Bank v. Brown, 37 Wash. 2d 49, 221 P.2d 530 (1950) .

(n13)Footnote 8. See Martin v. Vincent, 181 Mont. 247, 593 P.2d 45 (Mont. 1979) .

See also Peebles v. Sneed, 207 Ark. 1, 179 S.W.2d 156 (1944) (a broker's authority is such as is specifically conferred on him either expressly or by necessary implication).

(n14)Footnote 9. See, e.g.:

Illinois: In Schermerhorn v. Department of Registration & Ed., 185 Ill. App. 3d 883, 542 N.E.2d 42 (1989) , review denied, 128 Ill. 2d 672, 139 Ill. Dec. 522, 548 N.E.2d 1078 (1990) , cert. denied, 495 U.S. 948, 110 S. Ct. 2208, 109 L. Ed. 2d 534 (1990) the court upheld a decision of the Department of Registration and Education placing real estate licensees on probation for two years for improperly commingling funds when they took money from a property management account, placed it in commercial paper investment, and deposited interest on the investment into a separate operating account used for the benefit of the licensees' corporation. The court stated that the interest earned on the investment should have been deposited into the company's tax account for property management customers and not in the company's operating account. Accordingly, the licensees violated the Real Estate License Act for commingling the money or property of others with their own.

North Dakota: Hudson v. Wells and Dickey Co., 31 N.D. 395, 154 N.W. 193 (1915) .

(n15)Footnote 10. See Cryder Well Co. v. Brown, 257 Iowa 296, 136 N.W.2d 519 (1965) , holding a real estate agent personally liable for the cost of a new well where the agent contracted for the well without authority from the owners to do so. See ch. 3 infra for a detailed discussion of the broker's duties and liabilities.

(n16)Footnote 11. For further treatment of the various states which now require written brokerage agreements, see § 2.03[3] infra.

(n17)Footnote 12. A discussion of licensing statutes is found in ch. 6 infra .

(n18)Footnote 13. See, e.g.:

Georgia: Northside Realty Assocs, Inc. v. MPI Corp., 245 Ga. 321, 265 S.E.2d 11 (1980) (defendant agent was not entitled to a commission upon the sale of realty where it was not a licensed broker either at the time the subject property was listed for sale or at the time it negotiated and signed the sales contract).

Texas: David Gavin Co. v. Gibson, 780 S.W.2d 833 (Tex. Ct. App. 1989) , where the court held that an unlicensed broker was not entitled to a commission. There, an individual hired an unlicensed broker to assist in locating and acquiring an automobile dealership. The unlicensed broker located a dealership and brought the parties together in fulfillment of his contract. The sale never closed and the broker sued for his commission. To determine whether a commission is earned on the sale of property, consisting in part of real estate, the court examined the laws governing a real estate commission. In Texas, the broker selling real estate must possess a real estate broker's license. The contract was not deemed divisible for the purpose of enabling the unlicensed broker to collect a fee for the sale of the business but not the real estate. The court applied the rule that if one part of a contract is illegal, the entire contract is void and the unlicensed broker does not collect any commission.

Ackerman & Co. v. Cox, 768 S.W.2d 475 (Tex. Ct. App. 1989) (the failure of the broker to allege in his pleadings that he was a duly licensed real estate broker at the time the services were commenced necessitated the denial of any commissions).

Utah: Diversified General Corp. v. White Barn Golf Course, Inc., 584 P.2d 848 (Utah 1978) .

(n19)Footnote 14. See, e.g.:

Georgia: Nestle Co., Inc. v. J. H. Ewing & Sons, 153 Ga. App. 328, 265 S.E.2d 61 (1980) (broker may be deemed the "procuring cause" of a sale when he shows that negotiations were initiated through his efforts and that he performed every service required by his employment).

Louisiana: Farnsworth, Samuel Ltd. v. Grant, 470 So. 2d 253 (La. Ct. App. 1985) .

See also:

South Dakota: Kahler, Inc. v. Weiss, 539 N.W.2d 86 (S.D. 1995) (the term "sale" may be given a narrow or broad meaning depending upon the circumstances and the parties' reasonable intentions).

See ch. 4 infra for a discussion of when the broker's commission is earned.

(n20)Footnote 15. Salespersons and agents are not always considered independent contractors. See Re/Max v. Wausau Ins. Cos., 162 N.J. 282, 744 A.2d 154, 158 (2000) (sales agents were employees for purpose of calculating workers' compensation premiums).

(n21)Footnote 16. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Lerner v. Ceslik, 17 Conn. App. 369, 553 A.2d 1142 (1989) , in which the court held that a real estate agent satisfied the requirements for entitlement to the 25% listing and sales commissions set forth in her contract with her employer by bringing the property to the owner's attention, and was therefore entitled to recover the 25% sales and listing commissions.

Wisconsin: Stauffacher v. Portside Properties, Inc., 150 Wis. 2d 242, 441 N.W.2d 328 (1989) , where the court held that where the term "accrual of a listing agent's right to a commission" was used in an independent contractor agreement, it was sufficiently ambiguous in determining when the agent was entitled to a commission to defeat a motion for summary judgment.

(n22)Footnote 17. See, e.g.:

Louisiana: Tres' Chic in A Week, L.L.C. v. Home Realty Store, 993 So. 2d 228, 231-32 (La. Ct. App. 2008) .

Missouri: Gallaher-Smith-Feutiz Realty, Inc. v. Circle Z Farm, Inc., 545 S.W.2d 395 (Mo. App. 1976) .

Wyoming: Kelly v. Roussalis, 776 P.2d 1016 (Wyo. 1989) , where the court held that a real estate agent acting on behalf of a friend was not relieved of the high standard of care required of real estate agents, and was thus subject to liability to the friend for malpractice. In Kelly, the agent attended a foreclosure auction with a friend and bid for him on a piece of property. Both parties mistakenly believed that the agent had previously shown the property. After the property was paid for, it was learned that the friend had purchased a different piece of property. It was established that the agent had available to him the information necessary to discover the mistake. Instead of confirming the identity of the property being sold at the auction, the agent assumed it was the property he had previously shown. The trial court found the agent liable in tort. On appeal, the agent relied on the fact that he was acting as a friend when he attended the foreclosure auction, and that the standard of care he owed was not the high standard ordinarily expected of real estate agents. The appellate court rejected this argument, holding that even if agent's services were volunteered or gratuitously undertaken, his conduct must be measured against a standard more demanding than mere reasonableness. On the facts in the present case, the court added, there was no doubt that the agent had been negligent in the handling of his friend's purchase. He was therefore liable for malpractice. In addition, the court held that the broker's right to control the agent created a master-servant relationship. The broker was therefore liable for the agent's malpractice committed while the agent acted within the scope of his employment.

(n23)Footnote 18. See, e.g., Veach v. Meyeres Real Estate, Inc., 599 P.2d 746 (Alaska 1979) .

See ch. 3 infra for a discussion of the duties and liability of the broker.

(n24)Footnote 19. Bedow v. Watkins, 539 N.W.2d 414 (Minn. App. 1995) (a real estate sales agent is a person who is not a broker and therefore has to be connected to a broker in order to deal legitimately in real estate).

(n25)Footnote 20. In DiLorenzo v. Sbarra, 124 A.D.2d 446, 507 N.Y.S.2d 548, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 61432 (3d Dept. 1986) , the court found that where a real estate salesperson did not expressly consent to a commission loan agreement between the broker and the purchaser, the salesperson's commission was owed to him. The commission was made at the closing and substituted the purchaser's debt for the broker's commission due from the seller. The broker maintained that the salesperson agreed to the postponement of his own commission because he was silent during the contract closing. The court, however, found that the salesperson was unaware of the transaction because he arrived at the closing long after the exchange of checks had occurred. Moreover, he could not have impliedly consented to the arrangement.

In New York, where a real estate salesperson leaves the service of a real estate broker, the broker must file a termination of association notice, the fee for which is $10. The salesperson's license may be endorsed to a new sponsoring broker upon establishment of a new record of association with the Department of State, the filing fee for which is also $10.

(n26)Footnote 21. See Corris v. White, 29 A.D.2d 470, 289 N.Y.S.2d 371, 1968 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4300 (4th Dept 1968) .

(n27)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Lane v. Floyd, 213 Ore. App. 215, 159 P.3d 1240 (2007) , review denied, 344 Ore. 43, 178 P.3d 247 (2008) Fowler v. Taylor, 554 P.2d 205 (Utah 1976) .

(n28)Footnote 23. See, e.g., City of Washington v. Barnhart, 93 S.W.3d 743, 745 (Mo. Ct. App. 2002) , citing Mo. Code Regs., Ann. tit. 4, § 250-4.050(2). Axtmann v. Chillemi, 2007 ND 179, 740 N.W.2d 838, 845 (N.D. 2007) .

(n29)Footnote 24. See Mo. Rev. Stat. § 339.010.2. Walker v. Johnson, 278 Ga. App. 806, 812, 630 S.E.2d 70, 76 (2006) , reconsideration dismissed, overruled in part, Kleber v. City of Atlanta, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 396, at *15 (Mar. 28, 2008) (on other grounds) Cf. Kakides v. King Davis Agency, Inc., 283 F. Supp. 2d 411, 416 (D. Mass. 2003) applying federal and Massachusetts law (agent was an independent contractor); Carson v. Seacoast Realty, Inc., 2003 Del. Super. LEXIS 386, at *14-*15 (Del. Super. Ct. Oct. 3, 2003) aff'd, 2004 Del. LEXIS 371 (Del. Aug. 23, 2004) (real estate salespersons are excluded from the definition of employee under Delaware workers' compensation laws); Fayne v. Vincent, 2004 Tenn. App. LEXIS 508, at *8-*10 (Tenn. Ct. App. Aug. 5, 2004) (real estate agent was an independent contractor).

(n30)Footnote 25. See, e.g., Fuller v. Alberts, 382 So. 2d 113 (Fla. DCA 1980) ; PKG Associates, Inc. v. Dubb, 306 A.D.2d 333, 760 N.Y.S.2d 681, 682 (2d Dept. 2003) . Brochu v. Santis, 939 A.2d 449, 453 (R.I. 2008) .

A broker was entitled to the reasonable value of his services under a quantum meruit theory, where a commercial purchaser, although not expressly agreeing to a brokerage contract, (1) evinced a willingness to pay the broker a finder's fee for information leading to the purchase of a 3-million-dollar commercial building, (2) the purchaser accepted the broker's services with a reasonable opportunity to reject them and with the knowledge that the broker expected a commission, (3) the broker was the procuring cause of the sale and (4) the broker supplied the purchaser with information about the subject property with the expectation that the purchaser would pay a brokerage fee, and the purchaser himself admitted at trial that he always intended to compensate the broker for his services. Given these circumstances, denying the broker a commission would unjustly enrich the purchasers. Weichert Co. Realtors v. Ryan, 128 N.J. 427, 608 A.2d 280 (N.J. 1992) . See ch. 12 infra for a discussion of "finders."

(n31)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Berchenko v. Fulton Fed. S & L Ass'n, 244 Ga. 733 , S.E.2d 643 (1979). But see Amedeus Corp. v. McAllister, 2009 Colo. App. LEXIS 221, at *7 (Colo. Ct. App. Feb. 19, 2009) (Colorado's statutory definition of real estate broker does not recognize any distinction between a broker and a finder.).

(n32)Footnote 27. See Tyrone v. Kelley, 9 Cal. 3d 1, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 (1973) .

(n33)Footnote 28. See:

Federal: Shinberg v. Bruk, 875 F.2d 973 (1st Cir. 1989) , in which the court held that: (1) under New Hampshire Law, a finder of real estate is treated as a broker rather than a finder and is required to comply with the real estate licensing law in order to obtain a commission; and (2) under Massachusetts law, one who assists or directs in the procuring of prospects intended to result in the sale, exchange, purchase, leasing or renting of any real estate, is required to comply with the state licensing statute in order to obtain a commission. In Shinberg, plaintiff was an attorney but was not licensed as a real estate broker. A Massachusetts buyer agreed to pay the attorney a finders fee of 10% of the purchase price of any real estate that attorney found in New Hampshire that was suitable for a shopping mall development. Attorney found a potential site, notified buyer, met with the seller and introduced the two parties. Buyer and seller conducted the negotiations and attorney did nothing further. Buyer purchased the land and refused to pay the attorney a finders fee. The district court found that the attorney could not recover under either New Hampshire or Massachusetts law. In affirming, the appellate court applied New Hampshire law but noted that attorney would not be entitled to a commission under either state's law. The court rejected attorney's argument that under New Hampshire law he was a finder as opposed to a broker and was therefore not required to be licensed in order to receive a finders fee. The court stated that a finder is a special type of broker that deals in personal property (e.g., securities, mergers, mortgage financing, business acquisitions). Therefore, under New Hampshire law, a finder of real estate is treated as a real estate broker, and an unlicensed broker is barred from recovering a commission under the state's licensing statute. Under Massachusetts law, a broker is defined, inter alia, as one who "assists or directs in the procuring of prospects ... intended to result in the sale, exchange, purchase, leasing or renting of any real estate." The court found that the attorney's services fell within this definition. Therefore, in order to receive a finders fee, he was required to comply with the licensing requirements imposed.

California: Rees v. Department of Real Estate, 76 Cal. App. 3d 286, 142 Cal. Rptr. 789 (1977) .

New York: Berg v. Wilpon, 180 Misc. 2d 956, 692 N.Y.S.2d 600, 602-603 (1999) .

Texas: David Gavin Co. v. Gibson, 780 S.W. 2d 833 (Tex. Ct. App. 1989) writ denied (Apr. 11, 1990); West v. Touchstone, 620 S.W.2d 687 (Tex. Civ. App. 1981) . writ of error refused no reversible error (Sep. 28, 1981), reh'g of writ of error overruled (Oct. 28, 1981).

For a discussion of licensing statutes, see ch. 6 infra.

(n34)Footnote 29. See Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc., 39 Cal.3d 18, 31, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130,137, 702 P.2d 212, 219 (1985) . See also Fisch's Parking, Inc. v. Independence Hall Parking, Inc., 432 Pa. Super. 263, 638 A.2d 217 (1994), reh'g denied (Mar. 22, 1994), appeal denied, 542 Pa. 669, 668 A.2d 1132 (1995), in which the court held that a consultant hired to find a buyer for a parking lot was not a real estate broker. The consultant did not engage in negotiations regarding the sale, confined himself to communicating information between the parties, and was retained because of his expertise in managing parking lot operations.

(n35)Footnote 30.

California: Batson v. Strehlow, 68 Cal. 2d 662, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 (1968) .

New Mexico: Watts v. Andrews, 98 N.M. 404, 649 P.2d 472, 474 (1982) .

(n36)Footnote 31. See Property House, Inc. v. Kelley, 68 Haw. 371, 715 P.2d 805 (1986) reconsideration denied, 68 Haw. 688 (Haw. 1986) .

(n37)Footnote 32. See Berg v. Wilpon, 180 Misc. 2d 956, 692 N.Y.S.2d 600, 602-603, 1999 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 249 (1999) . See also Swor v. Tapp Furniture Co., 146 S.W.3d 778, 782 (Tex. App. 2004) (The fee for handling a sale that includes real estate is considered a real estate commission. The definition of real estate broker covers compensation labeled as a finder's fee.).

(n38)Footnote 32.1. See Nein v. HostPro, Inc., 174 Cal. App. 4th 833, 848-49, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 34, 47-48 (2009) .

(n39)Footnote 33.

California: McConnell v. Cowan, 44 Cal. 2d 805, 285 P.2d 261 (1955) .

New Mexico: Barber's Super Markets, Inc. v. Stryker, 84 N.M. 181, 188, 500 P.2d 1304, 1311 (N.M. Ct. App.) cert. denied, 84 N.M. 180, 500 P.2d 1303 (1972) .

New York: Futersak v. Perl, 897 N.Y.S.2d 886, 2010 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 612, at *11-*12 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2010)

(n40)Footnote 34. Barber's Super Markets, Inc. v. Stryker, 84 N.M. 181, 500 P.2d 1304, 1311 (N.M. Ct. App. 1972) cert. denied, 84 N.M. 180, 500 P.2d 1303 (N.M. 1972) .

(n41)Footnote 35.

Federal: Bittner v. American-Marietta Co., 162 F. Supp. 486, 488 (E.D. Ill. 1958) .

California: Tyrone v. Kelley, 9 Cal. 3d 1, 8-9, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 765-766, 507 P.2d 65, 69-70 (1973) .

Illinois: Kilbane v. Dyas, 33 Ill. App. 3d 439, 441-442, 337 N.E.2d 217, 220 (1975) .

Utah: Sachs v. Lesser, 163 P.3d 662, 670, 2007 UT App 169 (2007) , rev'd, 2008 UT 87, 2008 Utah LEXIS 197 (Utah 2008) (on other grounds) reh'g denied, 2009 Utah LEXIS 116 (Apr. 17, 2009) .

(n42)Footnote 36. See Langford v. Issenhuth, 28 S.D. 451, 463, 134 N.W. 889, 893-894 (1912) .

(n43)Footnote 37. See Kilbane v. Dyas, 33 Ill. App. 3d 439, 442, 337 N.E.2d 217, 220 (1975) .

(n44)Footnote 38. See Diversified Gen. Corp. v. White Barn Golf Course, 584 P.2d 848, 851-852 (Utah 1978) . See also Kavian v. Vernah Homes Co., 19 A.D.3d 649, 650, 799 N.Y.S.2d 75, 76, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7326 (2005) (licensing requirement protects public from inept, inexperienced, or dishonest persons who might perpetrate or aid in perpetration of fraud); Arnold v. Bowman, 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 363, at *33 (June 23, 2005) , appeal denied, 2005 Tenn. LEXIS 1054 (Dec. 5, 2005) (Real Estate Broker License Act of 1973 was created to protect public from irresponsible or unscrupulous persons dealing in real estate).

(n45)Footnote 39. Baird v. Krancer, 138 Misc. 360, 362-363, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1650, 246 N.Y.S. 85, 88 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1930) , cited with approval in:

Illinois: Kilbane v. Dyas, 33 Ill. App. 3d 439, 441-442, 337 N.E.2d 217, 220 (1975) .

New Jersey: Corson v. Keane, 4 N.J. 221, 225-226, 72 A.2d 314, 316 (1950) .

Utah: Diversified General Corp. v. White Barn Golf Course, Inc., 584 P.2d 848, 850-851 (Utah 1978) .

(n46)Footnote 40. Diversified General Corp. v. White Barn Golf Course, Inc., 584 P.2d 848, 850-851 (Utah 1978) . For another Utah case discussing the difference between finders and brokers see Sachs v. Lesser, 163 P.3d 662, 670-71, 2007 UT App. 169 (2007) , rev'd, 2008 UT 87, 2008 Utah LEXIS 197 (Utah 2008) (on other grounds) reh'g denied, 2009 Utah LEXIS 116 (Apr. 17, 2009) .

(n47)Footnote 41. Kilbane v. Dyas, 33 Ill. App. 3d 439, 337 N.E.2d 217 (1975) .

(n48)Footnote 42. 33 Ill. App. 3d at 442-443, 337 N.E.2d at 220-221 .

(n49)Footnote 43. 68 Cal. 2d 662, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 441 P.2d 101 (1968) .

(n50)Footnote 44. 68 Cal. 2d at 668, 68 Cal. Rptr. at 594, 441 P.2d at 106 .

(n51)Footnote 45. 68 Cal. 2d at 671, 68 Cal. Rptr. at 595-596, 441 P.2d at 107-108 , citing Cal. Prob. Code § 760.

(n52)Footnote 46. 68 Cal. 2d at 670, 68 Cal. Rptr. at 595, 441 P.2d at 107 .

(n53)Footnote 47. 68 Cal. 2d at 669, 68 Cal. Rptr. at 594, 441 P.2d at 106 .

(n54)Footnote 48. 2 Cal. App. 3d 659, 82 Cal. Rptr. 778 (1969) . See also Wilson v. Donze, 692 S.W.2d 734 (Tex. App. 1986) .

(n55)Footnote 49. 82 Cal. Rptr. at 780 .

(n56)Footnote 50. 176 Cal. App. 3d 57, 221 Cal. Rptr. 353 (1985) .

(n57)Footnote 51. See Fla. Stat. § 475.42(1)(d).

(n58)Footnote 52. See 800 So. 2d 608 (Fla. 2001) .

(n59)Footnote 53. 800 So. 2d 608, 608-609 (Fla. 2001) .

(n60)Footnote 54. See Schickedanz Bros.-Riviera, Ltd. v. Harris, 800 So. 2d 608, 610-11 (Fla. 2001) , discussing Alligood v. Florida Real Estate Commission, 156 So.2d 705 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1963) .

(n61)Footnote 55. See Schickedanz Bros.-Riviera, Ltd. v. Harris, 800 So. 2d 608, 611 (Fla. 2001) .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the law firm of Jacobus, Boltz, Melamed & Witherspoon, Houston, Texas. Sections 2.06 and 2.07 were written by Sandra Bullington, who has contributed additional updates throughout the chapter.

18 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 2 Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry *

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.03

§ 2.03 The Brokerage Contract

[1] In General

A real estate brokerage contract or listing agreement is a contract between a real estate broker and a seller which covers the broker's efforts to find a buyer for the seller's real estate. n1 Typically, a brokerage or listing agreement contains provisions which address

- the identification of the property subject to the agreement,
- the price at which the property will be offered for sale. But cf. Vision Realty, Inc. v. Kohler, 214 Ore. App. 220, 225, 164 P.3d 330, 332 (2007) (The listing agreement provided that the broker was due a 6% commission on the lease of the property, but failed to state the rent amount sought for the property. The property owner refused to pay the broker's commission when a tenant was procured through the broker's efforts. The agreement at issue was the listing agreement, not the lease. The failure to include the lease terms in the listing agreement did not affect the validity or the enforceability of the listing agreement.).
- the terms of sale acceptable to the seller,
- how long the agreement will remain in effect (i.e., the term),
- the compensation to be paid to the broker for finding a buyer (usually referred to as a commission),
- the broker's use of a Multiple Listing Service in marketing the real estate, and
- the use of a lockbox to allow brokers and agents to show the property when neither the listing broker nor the owner are present to show the property to potential purchasers.

Many states statutorily list the contents of a valid listing agreement. A court applying such a statute may hold that the substantial compliance doctrine applies to listing agreements governed by such a statute. n1.1

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.03

In discussing listing agreements, the issue of what it means "to list" a property may arise. Listing a property has been defined to mean using a compiled and published list of properties and their descriptions in an effort to meet the individual needs of some specifically identified seller, buyer, landlord, or tenant. n1.2 It has been stated that a listing agreement is an agency agreement wherein the agent agrees to expose a property to the market in consideration of payment of a commission if a sale is made. n1.3 Real estate is not listed when a broker is not permitted to disclose the sale of the property to the general public, but is only permitted to privately disclose the sale to those persons the broker considers to be potential buyers. n1.4

A real estate brokerage contract is generally characterized as a contract for personal services rather than a contract conveying an interest in land. n1.5 These contracts are generally interpreted according to principles of contract law. n1.6 It is the brokerage contract or listing agreement, along with statutory and regulatory law, that establishes the brokerage relationship between the licensed broker and the property owner/seller.

The real estate broker owes certain duties to his or her principal which are essentially the same as any agent would owe to a principal. n1.7 The broker usually acts as a negotiator. n2 The broker is not obligated to advise on the sales contract's terms and has no duty to collect the purchase price unless he or she has expressly agreed to do so. n3 In all cases, it is the broker's duty to follow instructions and to act according to and within the scope of his or her authority. n4

One of the requisites to recovery of a commission by a real estate broker is the existence of a brokerage contract, n5 which many states require to be in writing. n6 Generally, the burden of proving that an employment relationship exists between the broker and the property owner is on the broker. n7 In the absence of an employment contract, the landowner is not obligated to pay a commission, even if the broker is the cause of a sale that is later consummated. n8 When the parties have entered into a written listing agreement, each party will be presumed to have consented to the contents of the document and cannot avoid the obligations imposed by the listing agreement by claiming that he or she failed to read or understand the agreement. n8.1

The contract of employment between the broker and the party from whom the broker is claiming a commission may be implied from the conduct of the parties. n9 An implied contract was held to exist, for example, where the property owner knew that the broker was attempting to effect a sale and expected to receive compensation for his services, and where the owner encouraged the broker to aid in the sale and led the broker to believe he would receive compensation. n9.1 In the alternative, an implied contract can hold a broker liable for a breach of fiduciary duty when the seller can prove that an implied contract existed and an unintentional agency or "accidental" agency was created. n10 In some circumstances, the parties' agreement will be a unilateral contract where the broker makes no promise and is under no obligation to do anything. Such an agreement provides that the seller will pay a commission only if the broker produces the purchaser. n10.1

Generally, where a broker enters into a special contract with a property owner conditioned on the sale or lease of property at a certain price or upon certain terms, a broker will not be entitled to a commission unless the particular price or terms are met by a buyer. n11 The seller, however, may elect to waive the particular price or terms, thereby entitling the broker to a commission. n12 In sum, the broker's right to a commission is controlled by the provisions of his or her employment contract with the principal. n13

As a general rule, the validity and enforceability of a brokerage contract is governed by the law of the state where the contract was made, that is, the state where the last act necessary to make it a binding agreement took place. n14 However, where a brokerage contract is made in one state but its performance is clearly contemplated in another state, the law of the place of performance governs the validity of the contract. In such case, if the contract is invalid under the laws of the state of performance, e.g., for failure of the broker to obtain the required license, it will be unenforceable in the state where the contract was made even though no law of that state was violated. n15

The duration of a brokerage contract will depend on the type of contract involved. Some states, for example, require a definitive termination date in exclusive listing contracts. n16 Even if the listing is statutorily required to have a definite expiration date, the substantial compliance doctrine may save a listing agreement that does not comply with this or other requirements. In such a case, the listing agreement may be found to be an agreement terminable at will. n16.1 Another possibility, when the agreement lacks a specific termination date, is for the contract to continue for a reasonable time, which will vary according to the circumstances in the particular case. Prior to such time, either party acting in good faith may terminate the contract. n17 An owner, however, may not terminate an agency for the purpose of depriving a broker of his or her commission. n18

A listing agreement's term can also be extended by implication even though the stated termination date in the written listing agreement has passed. n18.1

Some statutes provide that a brokerage relationship which is not performed expires at the earlier of:

- (1) the date of expiration agreed upon by the parties;
- (2) any termination or relinquishment of the relationship by the parties; or
- (3) one year after the date of the engagement. n18.2

It has been held that such a statute defines the relationship and that only in the absence of completion of performance (i.e., a sale of the property) within the terms of the agreement do the statutory alternatives apply. Thus, the one-year limit on the brokerage term does not apply to all agreements. A brokerage agreement can contain automatic renewal provisions that extend the agreement beyond one year. n18.3

It is possible for the time limit in a listing agreement to be expressly waived by the seller, or impliedly waived by the seller's conduct. n18.4 Listing agreements may also be worded such that the execution of a sales contract for the subject property automatically extends all rights and obligations of the listing agreement through the date of the closing of the sales contract. n18.5

Generally, ambiguities in a contract are more strictly construed against the drafter. n18.6 This rule is especially true where the drafter stands in a position of trust, or has greater professional or business knowledge, as does a real estate broker. n19 If there is ambiguity in a brokerage contract, parol evidence may be admissible to clarify the intention of the parties. n20 If the listing agreement is jointly drafted by both the seller and broker, questions arising due to ambiguous language in the agreement will become issues for the jury to decide. n20.1

Some brokerage agreements contain indemnification provisions whereby the client agrees to indemnify the broker for liability arising from the parties' relationship and property which is the subject of the parties' agreement. Such an indemnification provision has been upheld in a case involving a commercial property where misrepresentations were made to a tenant regarding the adequacy of the parking. n20.2 It should be expected that such an indemnity provision would face stricter scrutiny in a brokerage agreement involving a residential property.

[2] Types

Against this framework, the different types of brokerage contracts will now be discussed. Often, the employment contract will be reduced to a writing. This is sometimes called a listing agreement. Even in jurisdictions where there is no statute of frauds requirement, n21 it is preferable to have an agreement reduced to writing, where possible, to avoid misunderstandings as to compensation and agreed terms. n22

It should be noted that the term brokerage agreement encompasses more than listings for the sale of real estate. For example, a broker can agree to procure a buyer without listing the property. n22.1 Consequently, a listing agreement should be viewed as one type of brokerage agreement rather than being viewed as being synonymous with the term listing agreement.

The written agreement should contain, at the minimum, the following information: (1) the names of the parties; (2) a description of the property; n23 (3) the amount of compensation; (4) any conditions to be satisfied before a commission is earned; (5) any additional specific provision that may be applicable, e.g., whether there is an exclusive agency or right to sell. n24 It is prudent for both parties (the property owner and the broker) to sign the listing agreement. n24.1

[a] Open Listing

Most informal verbal listing agreements fall within the category of "open listings," through which the owner retains the right to sell the property himself and to hire other brokers in the absence of an express provision to the contrary. Obviously, this type of agreement can generate quarrels where several brokers are involved. Under such circumstances, it is the broker who is the efficient cause of the sale who is entitled to the commission. This right is not affected by the circumstance that such broker sells to one whose attention to the property had been originally directed by another broker. In sum, with an open listing, a commission is payable not to the broker who first speaks of the property to a prospect, but to the broker who is the procuring cause of the sale, whether he is the first or second to engage the attention of a purchaser. n25

An open listing is also referred to as a non-exclusive listing. n25.1 An open or non-exclusive listing has been described as an invitation to the broker to attempt to find a buyer. This type of listing does not create a contractual relationship but instead approximates an offer by the owner which may be withdrawn by the owner at any time. Such a listing leaves the owner free to list the property with other brokers, or for the owner to make a sale. n25.2

A broker's authority under an open listing is terminated by express revocation or by the sale of the property. n25.3 However, once a broker has produced a buyer who is ready, willing, and able to purchase the property upon the terms stated in the listing, the seller may no longer revoke the broker's authority under the open listing and be relieved of the obligation to pay the commission. n25.4 A broker's right to compensation for producing a ready, willing able purchaser is discussed in Chapter 5, below.

[b] Net Listing

The term "net listing" has been defined as an agency or other agreement whereby a prospective seller of real property lists the property for sale at a specified net amount to be paid to the seller and authorizes the broker to retain as commission, compensation or otherwise, the difference between the price at which the property or interest is sold and the specified net amount to be received by the seller. n26 In some jurisdictions such agreements have been prohibited, n27 apparently to prevent overreaching and unfair dealing on the part of the broker. n28

Even if they are not considered illegal, difficulties may arise with respect to net listing agreements as to what was actually intended by the owner. In an early Texas decision, for example, brokers brought suit for compensation of $500 where the brokers sold property for $8,000 and the owners were to receive "$7,500 net." The court held that the term "net" as used in the contract meant that the property had to bring to the owner at least $7,500 free of all expenses and deductions and that the broker was only entitled to the going rate of commission (2-1/2 percent of $8,000), together with interest. n29

It has been held that in order to establish entitlement to a commission under the terms of a non-exclusive agency contract to sell real estate for a stated price "net to seller," there must be some showing that, absent interference by the seller, the agent could have realized something in excess of the stated net price. n30

[c] Exclusive Agency

An exclusive agency is an agreement under which a particular broker is employed and no other. n31 This type of agreement is favored by brokers over open listings because it offers them a certain degree of protection. While under an open listing contract more than one broker may be hired and only the first broker who produces a ready, willing and able buyer is entitled to a commission, n32 under an exclusive agency the particular broker is protected for the duration of the employment contract. It has been held in this regard that a state real estate commission may, by rule, expressly prohibit (under threat of license suspension or revocation) a broker or salesperson from negotiating or even attempting to negotiate a sale of property directly with the owner, where the licensed broker or salesperson knows of the existence of an outstanding exclusive listing contract on the property. n33

It should be noted, however, that the exclusive agency does not afford absolute protection to a broker in that the owner still has the right to sell the property. n34 The right of an owner to sell his own real estate is inherent and this right is retained even when a broker is employed, unless the contract provides in unequivocal terms or by necessary implication that the owner's right to sell has been relinquished. n35 In the event the owner does sell on his own, the agency is terminated and the owner has no liability to the broker for a commission.

Many states require that exclusive listing contracts provide a specific termination date. n36 Extension clauses, however, may provide that the broker is entitled to a commission notwithstanding the expiration of the term n37 if the property is sold to one with whom the broker, prior to such expiration, negotiated or had some other form of dealing described in the agreement. n38 The purpose of such extension clauses, the validity and enforcement of which have been universally upheld, is to protect the broker by preventing the owner from postponing acceptance until the listing agreement has expired and thereby circumventing the broker's right to compensation. n39

These extension clauses have also been referred to as override clauses n39.1 or extender clauses. n39.2 Typically, an extension or override clause requires that the broker provide the seller with a list of individuals to whom the broker showed the property. This list has been referred to as a protective list. n39.3 It has been held that a subsequent sales contract will not preserve the broker's commission if the listing agreement required a protective list and the broker failed to comply with this provision. n39.4 An extension or override clause will not entitle a broker to a commission when a sale to a listed individual occurs beyond the extension period. n39.5 However, it has also been held that a statutorily provided override remedy was intended to provide an alternative to, but not to abrogate, the court's equitable authority to use the procuring cause remedy where necessary to do complete equity. n39.6

When a listing agreement includes an extension clause, but does not require that the broker supply the seller with a list of individuals to whom the broker has shown the property, courts differ on whether the seller owes a commission to the broker if a sale occurs to a protected party during the time period covered by the extension clause. Under one view, the broker has a duty to advise the seller of the names of potential buyers who carry commission exposure, even though the agreement does not state this duty. n39.7 Other courts, however, have held that the seller should know that the buyer may have resulted from the broker's efforts and that the seller should communicate with the broker regarding any commission liability which may arise from a sale to a particular buyer. n39.8

State licensing statutes may require that a broker supply a client with a copy of an exclusive sales or rental listing at the time of the execution of the listing contract. n40 A New Jersey case has held in this regard that failure to abide by such a statutory directive may bar a broker's right to recovery of a commission. n41

[d] Exclusive Right to Sell

Under an exclusive right to sell contract, only the named broker can sell the property during the period specified in the contract. The broker is made the sole agent for the sale of the property and receives a commission if the property is sold by himself, the owner, or anyone else. n42 The broker should exercise care in drafting such a contract in that some courts may require clear and unequivocal language to create such a right. n43

A designated party listing is an exclusive right to sell that specifies that the broker earns a commission if the property is sold to certain named parties. Designated party listing agreements add the complexity of limiting the field of prospective buyers to those parties identified in the agreement. n43.1

[e] Multiple Listing

The "multiple listing" is an arrangement whereby individual real estate brokers in a particular area pool their exclusive listing. n44 A multiple listing service (MLS) has been defined "as a means of making the orderly dissemination and correlation of listing information available to its members so that Realtors(R) may better serve the buying and selling public." n45 The MLS is a mechanism whereby information concerning individual listings can be distributed to all MLS participants. Basic procedures for operating an MLS are as follows: An MLS member compiles certain listing information from a seller on a particular piece of property and the listing is submitted--generally within forty-eight hours--to the MLS office, where it is coordinated with listings from other members. n46 The listings are then published to all MLS members, any of whom may sell any listed property. If a sale of property is made by someone other than the broker who took the listing initially, the commission is divided between the listing and selling broker. n47 A service fee is then paid to the MLS. n48 In a suit for a commission against a property owner, it has been held that only the original broker may sue, regardless of who sells the listing, since the original broker is the only broker in contractual privity with the owner. n49

Multiple listing services have been very successful and greatly increase the proportion of listings sold. n50 The majority of MLSs that exist today are sponsored by local real estate boards, which are trade associations ostensibly organized for the purpose of improving the real estate business through education, cooperation and exchange of information by its members, and through the establishment and enforcement of ethical standards of practice for the benefit of the public. n51 Generally, use of a multiple listing service in selling listed properties is limited to members of the MLS, who must also be members of the sponsoring local board. Thus, many licensed brokers and sales people who are not real estate board members are denied use of the MLS. This leaves them at a considerable competitive disadvantage in light of the increasing power and importance of multiple listing services. n52 One result has been suits challenging restrictions on MLS membership as illegal restraints of trade.

One of the earliest cases to involve MLS membership as exclusionary and subject to boycotting was Grempler v. Multiple Listing Bureau of Harford County, n53 wherein the Maryland Court of Appeals upheld the exclusion of MLS membership to individuals who were members of the territory that the MLS agency serviced. In that case, a bylaw requirement provided that in order to be a member of the Harford County MLS, the member had to have a principal place of business in Harford County. In upholding the exclusion, the court noted that local and regional societies are frequently limited to persons whose principal place of business is within the territory which is served by that society. Other restrictions, however, were doomed to failure.

In Collins v. Main Line Board of Realtors, n54 the plaintiff's application was rejected because she had falsely, improperly and unethically brought charges on behalf of one of her clients against the Board. In upholding the plaintiff's complaint as a restraint of trade, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court held that when the Real Estate Department of Pennsylvania licensed the applicant, it determined that she was trustworthy and competent pursuant to the governing Pennsylvania statute. For the Board or MLS to hold otherwise would be a preemption of the approval of the Department of Real Estate, thereby creating an unreasonable restriction on membership.

In Marin County Board of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson, n55 the California Supreme Court reviewed a limitation on membership for the Marin County Board of Realtors. The Board membership criteria included a provision which limited membership to those persons who were primarily engaged in the real estate business, effectively eliminating membership for part-time brokers. The court upheld the "rule of reasonableness" for the boycotting criteria of the Board, but noted the competitive disadvantages to non-member brokers and the severe hardship placed on part-time sales people. The Board could find no empirical support for the Board's position to support the exclusion of part-time brokers, and therefore it failed the "rule of reasonableness" test.

Similarly, the Justice Department challenged MLS criteria in United States v. Realty Multi-List, Inc. n56 The Fifth Circuit acknowledged the pro-competitive and efficiency-creating impact of MLS on the real estate market. However, the court discussed criteria for MLS membership which it deemed to be "facially unreasonable," which is illegal unless it can be shown to be justified by competitive needs of the MLS. The court concluded that the requirements for favorable credit reports and business reputation in this case were too subjective to permit exclusion. Requiring new applicants to have their offices open during customary hours and to purchase thousands of dollars worth of MLS stock was also held to be facially unreasonable.

Boards may have also attempted to eliminate competition by amending the fee splitting provisions of their bylaws to "discount" brokers. In Penne v. Greater Minneapolis Board of Realtors, n57 the Board initiated a fee splitting policy for "discount" brokers (brokers who took listings based on a simple fee arrangement rather than the traditional percentage of gross sales price) which limited the brokers to half of their normal fees rather than half of the more lucrative six to eight percent fees charged by other member brokers. The Eighth Circuit held that this was "punitive fee splitting."

The basic criteria for establishing the "rule of reasonableness" or "facial reasonableness" is a balancing test, based on whether or not the rules for exclusion can be supported by reasonable pro-competitive conduct. If the exclusion can be based upon reasonable criteria for membership, the exclusion may be supportable. One case has even upheld the exclusion based on copyright protection. n58 It should be noted that the burden of proof is still upon the plaintiff in these cases to prove the conspiracy of the Board and that the conduct complained of is not merely a result of the independent judgment of the brokers who happen to be members of the Board. n59

[3] Statute of Frauds

The general statutes of fraud typically address contracts for the sale of real estate. n60 While some of these general statutes include within their purview agreements authorizing an agent or broker to buy or sell real estate, n60.1 some of these statutes do not specifically address the various brokerage contracts that can exist between real estate licensees and their clients and customers. n60.2 A failure to list such contracts within a general statute of frauds does not obviate the need for written agreements between licensees and their customers and clients, however. Some jurisdictions have a specific statute which requires that certain brokerage agreements be written. n60.3 In addition, the rules of many of the real estate commissions require that listing agreements be written. n60.4

A requirement that brokerage agreements be in writing has more to do with a party's right to enforce the agreement or the fact that disciplinary action taken may be taken against a licensee for failing to obtain a written agreement when this is a statutory or regulatory requirement. Just as is the case with other oral contracts which fall within a statute of frauds, a requirement that the contract be written does not mean that oral contracts cannot be made and performed. A failure to comply with a statute of frauds typically means that enforcement will be difficult, or impossible, because such an oral contract is void or voidable if it is within the statute of frauds. n60.4.1

If the writing requirement is in a licensing act or a disciplinary provision, licensees may face disciplinary proceedings with their licensing agency, as well as have difficulty establishing that they adhered to a standard of practice in a litigated case.

The issue of whether brokerage agreements should be written should not be an issue for licensees who are Realtors(R) due to the National Association of Realtors'(R) Code of Ethics. Specifically, Article 9 provides:

Realtors for the protection of all parties, shall assure whenever possible that agreements shall be in writing, and shall be in clear and understandable language expressing the specific terms, conditions, obligations, and commitments of the parties. A copy of each agreement shall be furnished to each party upon their signing or initialing.

Regardless of whether a statute, a regulation or a code of ethics requires that brokerage agreements be written, the best advice for licensees to follow is to use written contracts. Any alterations, or modifications, to the original agreement should likewise be written. n60.4.2 Oral agreements and oral modifications of written agreements are a fertile ground for litigation. Reducing an agreement to a writing signed by the parties can avoid disputes.

Some courts have found that the sales contract or lease may contain the essential terms of the brokerage agreement such that the seller's or lessor's attempt to avoid paying the broker a commission based on a statute of frauds argument will be defeated. n60.4.3

In Mitchell v. Rawls, n60.5 a dispute arose as to whether a listing agreement had been orally extended. The Mississippi judge commented on the licensee's business practices:

You cannot be in the real estate business and operate out of your back pocket. It is just as simple as that. There was a time in my lifetime it could have been done. It can no longer be done. n60.6

Prudent conduct of a brokerage firm mandates that all brokerage contracts be written and signed by the parties even when there is no statutory or regulatory requirement that such contracts be written.

PRACTICE NOTE:

A prospective seller or buyer who refuses to enter into a written brokerage agreement should raise a red flag for licensees. Even if the applicable law permits oral brokerage agreements, licensees should seriously consider not representing that party no matter how much the commission is needed or how expedient an oral agreement may appear at the time.

It has been stated that statutes which require that contracts for the employment of brokers be written are in derogation of the common law and should be strictly construed. n60.7 New York's statute of frauds, n61 for example, specifically provides that it "shall not apply to a contract to pay compensation to an auctioneer, an attorney at law, or a duly licensed real estate broker or real estate salesman." n62

While New York's statute is clearly limited in its application to the transactions specifically described in it, it would, however, prevent an unlicensed real estate broker from collecting a commission under an oral employment contract for the sale of shares in a cooperative, for example, because in reality there is a sale of an interest in the cooperative leasehold. n63 The writing requirement of New York's General Obligations Law would also apply to others not exempted by the enactment, e.g., business brokers, finders, etc. The New York statute makes oral agreements for services that fall within the statute completely unenforceable n64--there is no exception if the agreements are fully executed; n65 nor may recovery be had on a theory of quantum meruit. n66 This is the general view held by the various jurisdictions, under their several statutes of frauds, i.e., if the statute of frauds bars recovery under an oral agreement, the broker may not recover for the value of his or her services. n67

It is important to note that even in those states such as New York which do not require licensed real estate brokers or salespersons to have written contracts with their principals, the statute of frauds may still prove fatal to recovery under an oral agreement. An agreement, for example, whereby the broker would receive an interest in the land involved as compensation for his or her services may be held to fall within the statute. n68 If the transaction, moreover, cannot be completed within one year, it would have to be in writing under New York's statute of frauds. n69 This is important where the broker procures a lessee who is given an option to buy on which the broker claims an agreement to pay a commission and the option cannot be exercised within one year. In such a case, the broker could not recover upon an oral agreement where the lessee thereafter exercised the option. n70 This is also important in lease arrangements involving commissions for renewals or commissions to be paid as a percentage of rentals over the term of the lease. n71

A number of states have a provision within their statute of frauds that specifically embraces a broker's contract of employment. n72 For example, California's statute of frauds, which makes certain contracts invalid unless there exists some note or memorandum in writing signed by the party to be charged, expressly covers "an agreement authorizing or employing an agent, broker, or any other person to purchase or sell real estate, or to lease real estate for a longer period than one year, or to procure, introduce, or find a purchaser or seller of real estate or a lessee of real estate where such lease is for a longer period than one year, for compensation or a commission." n73

California, like New York, n74 does not require an agreement between brokers or finders to share in a commission to be in writing. n75 The writing in California need not contain all the terms of the employment agreement but should be evidence that an employment contract exists. n76 The writing, moreover, need not state the amount of compensation. n77 The writing should, however, identify the broker, n78 indicate the broker's employment n79 and authority n80 and contain a description of the property. n81 It has been held that the essential part of a contract to employ a real estate broker is the matter of employment and that broker's contracts in California "are not to be declared void merely because of a defect, ambiguity or uncertainty in the description of the property to be sold when such defect can be cured by allegations and proof of extrinsic facts and circumstances." n82

A few states have relatively detailed statute of frauds requirements as to brokers. n83 The Alaska and Oregon statutes of frauds are similar and essentially provide that if the note or memorandum of the agreement contains a description of the property sufficient for identification, authorizes or employs the agent or broker named in it to sell the property, and expresses with reasonable certainty the amount of the commission or compensation to be paid the agent or broker, the agreement of authorization or employment is not unenforceable for failure to state a consideration. n84

New Jersey statutorily permits a broker to collect a commission if, within five days after making an oral agreement, the broker provides a writing to the principal who enlisted his or her services, stating the terms of the oral agreement and the rate or amount of commission to be paid. n84.1 This statute represents a strong statement of public policy by the legislature that cannot be ignored. n84.2 Thus, New Jersey, even though allowing an oral agreement initially, still requires a writing of some type before a commission is due to a broker.

While Nebraska statutorily requires that brokerage agreements be written, n84.3 the Supreme Court of Nebraska has found that this statutory provision does not operate as a statute of frauds. n84.4 In coming to this conclusion, this court stated that Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2422 and its related statutes contain no language that would render a brokerage agreement void. Instead, § 76-2422 discusses the need for a written agreement in certain circumstances. This provision is part of a larger scheme to regulate real estate licensees, and a violation of a statute in this section may result in administrative action under the Nebraska Real Estate License Act. n84.5

[4] Broker's Authority to Sign Contract

A real estate broker does not enjoy general authority, but is only authorized to do what is specifically assigned in his or her contract of employment. n85 The broker's obligation is merely to provide a purchaser or lessee and the broker has no authority, unless specifically agreed, to enter into binding contracts on behalf of his or her principal. n86 Accordingly, a real estate listing agreement which gave an agent an exclusive "right to sell" property and which set a sales price, fixed a commission and provided an expiration date for the listing, did not confer authority on the real estate agent to enter into a contract binding on the owner to convey the property. n87 The general rule is that a real estate agent has no implied authority to contract on behalf of his or her principal. Any apparent authority must be founded on the principal's actions since the agent, by his or her acts, cannot create evidence of authority. n88

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Tom Heal Commercial Real Estate, Inc. v. York, 167 P.3d 523, 526, 2007 UT App 265 (2007)

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.03

Fairbourn Commercial, Inc. v. American Housing Partners, Inc., 68 P.3d 1038, 1041 (Utah Ct. App. 2003) aff'd, 2004 UT 54, 94 P.3d 292 (Utah 2004) . See also Hubbell Commercial Brokers, L.C. v. Fountain Three, 652 N.W.2d 151, 156 (Iowa 2002) (listing agreements are between brokers or licensees and property owners who seek to sell or lease their property).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Rosenberg v. Heritage Renovations, LLC, 685 N.W.2d 320, 325 (Minn. 2004) , rehearing denied, 2004 Minn. LEXIS 535 (Minn. Aug. 19, 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 1.2. See State by Spannaus v. Beslanowitch, 311 Minn. 56, 248 N.W.2d 286, 288 (Minn. 1976) .

(n4)Footnote 1.3. See Leo Eisenberg & Co. v. Payson, 152 Ariz. 390, 732 P.2d 1128, 1130 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1987) ; Leiter v. Fleetwood Realty Corp., 95 Ill. App.3d 212, 214, 50 Ill. Dec. 411, 419 N.E.2d 519, 521 (1981) ; Stewart v. Sisson, 711 N.W.2d 713, 718 (Iowa 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 1.4. See Stewart v. Sisson, 711 N.W.2d 713, 718-19 (Iowa 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 1.5. See Coldwell Banker & Co. v. Karlock, 686 F.2d 596, 599 (7th Cir. 1982) , applying Illinois and Indiana law; Richland Development Co. v. Staples, 295 F.2d 122, 125 (5th Cir. 1961) , applying Alabama law; Aritex Land Co. v. Arnold, 16 Ariz. App. 547, 494 P.2d 747, 748 (1972) .

(n7)Footnote 1.6. See Coldwell Banker & Co. v. Karlock, 686 F.2d 596, 599 (7th Cir. 1982) , applying Illinois and Indiana law.

(n8)Footnote 1.7. See Bennett v. Thompson, 126 Ark. 61, 66, 189 S.W. 363, 364 (Ark. 1916) ; Polo v. Lordi, 261 N.Y. 221, 224, 185 N.E. 80, 81 (1933) . See also Perkins v. Thorpe, 106 Idaho 138, 140, 676 P.2d 52, 54 (Idaho Ct. App. 1984) (real estate broker, as an agent, owes a fiduciary duty to the principal, his client.).

(n9)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Kitchen v. Lloyd, 14 S.W.2d 335 (Tex. Civ. App. 1928) .

(n10)Footnote 3. See Tarbell v. Bomes, 48 R.I. 86, 135 A. 604 (1927) .

(n11)Footnote 4. See, e.g.:

Minnesota: Olson v. Penkert, 252 Minn. 334, 90 N.W.2d 193 (1958) .

Vermont: E.A. Strout Realty Agency, Inc. v. Wooster, 118 Vt. 66, 99 A.2d 689 (1953) .

The "scope of authority" frequently creates a conflict as most listing agreements are not detailed as to the type of work to be performed. Among the factors to be considered in determining the scope of employment are the following: (1) whether the act was committed within the time and space limits of the employment; (2) whether the act was committed at least in part by serving the principal; and (3) whether the act is incidental to or part of the authorized conduct of the agent. Phillips v. JCM Dev. Corp., 666 P.2d 876 (Utah 1983) and Barker v. Francis, 741 P.2d 548 (Utah Ct. App. 1987) .

(n12)Footnote 5. See:

New York: Julien J. Studley, Inc. v. New York News Inc., 122 A.D.2d 633, 505 N.Y.S.2d 419 (N.Y. App. Div. 1986) aff'd, 70 N.Y.2d 628, 518 N.Y.S.2d 779, 512 N.E.2d 300 (N.Y. 1987) , reconsideration denied, 70 N.Y.2d 748, 519 N.Y.S.2d 1035, 514 N.E.2d 393 (N.Y. 1987) , where the court held that a broker was not entitled to his commission where the broker failed to establish an implied-in-fact brokerage contract. In Studley, an action was brought by the plaintiff-broker to recover his commission. The defendants sought a dismissal of the action on the ground that they never employed the plaintiff broker. However, plaintiff claimed that "it had performed a service which benefitted defendants, and that defendants knew or had reason to believe that such service was rendered with an expectation of payment" In holding that "any expectation on plaintiff's part that it was to be paid by defendants was wholly unwarranted," the court reasoned that (1) a mere volunteer without authority is not entitled to a commission "merely because he has inquired the price which an owner asks for his property, and has then sent a person to him who consents to take it"; and (2) a contract "cannot be implied in fact where the facts are inconsistent with its existence."

Rhode Island: Judd Realty, Inc. v. Tedesco, 400 A.2d 952 (R.I. 1979) (an offer to pay a commission to a real estate broker upon production of a purchaser is an offer to enter into a unilateral contract).

(n13)Footnote 6. See § 2.03[3] infra.

Absent corroboration, partial performance of a brokerage agreement does not excuse compliance with the requirement that there be a written brokerage agreement naming the broker. Moreover, the sale of real property does not corroborate the name of a broker when the name is not supplied by a memorandum of the agreement between the broker and the person who is to pay the commission. Boyer v. Tauber, 834 S.W.2d 60 (Tex. 1992) .

(n14)Footnote 7. See Deer Run Props., L.L.C. v. Keys to the Lake Lodgings, Co., L.L.C., 2010 Mo. App. LEXIS 519 (Apr. 26, 2010) ; Kohn v. Cohn, 567 S.W.2d 441 (Mo. App. 1978) .

(n15)Footnote 8. See:

Connecticut: In Real Estate Auctions, Inc. v. Senie, 28 Conn. App. 563, 611 A.2d 452 (Conn. App. Ct. 1992) , a plaintiff-auctioneer entered into an exclusive real estate auction agreement with the defendants, providing that it would find a buyer, with a "cooperating realtor," for the defendant's property. The property was sold at auction for $625,000, resulting in an alleged commission of $43,750, which the defendants refused to pay, alleging that they had been cheated out of a reasonable price for the property. The defendants argued that the plaintiff-auctioneer had pressured them to auction the property "without reserve" and that summary judgment should be had, because the listing agreement was invalid, failing to state the names and addresses of all the parties, and because it had not been signed by one of the owners. Affirming the trial court's grant of summary judgment for defendants, on the basis of an invalid brokerage agreement, the court held that, by statute, the names and addresses of every party to the agreement must be affixed thereto, and the agreement must be signed by all the owners or their agents.

Florida: Cushman & Wakefield of Florida, Inc. v. Williams, 551 So. 2d 1251 (Fla. DCA 1989) , wherein the court denied commissions to real estate representatives under their employment contract. The court stated that the "First Amendment to the Lease Agreement" which was the new lease did not entitle the sales representatives to a commission under their contract. The court further stated that because the tenants did not exercise the option to renew the original lease, the new lease entered into by them contained significantly different terms extinguishing the representatives' right to commission. The fact that the representatives resigned prior to the execution of the new lease had no bearing on the outcome.

Missouri: Ham v. Morris, 711 S.W.2d 187 (Mo. 1986) ; Deer Run Props., L.L.C. v. Keys to the Lake Lodgings, Co., L.L.C., 2010 Mo. App. LEXIS 519 (Apr. 26, 2010) ; Kohn v. Cohn, 567 S.W.2d 441 (Mo. App. 1978) .

(n16)Footnote 8.1. See Barnett v. Saizon, 994 So. 2d 668, 673 (La. Ct. App. 2008) .

(n17)Footnote 9.

Illinois: In Louis v. Lexington Dev. Corp., 253 Ill. App. 3d 73, 192 Ill. Dec. 329 625 N.E.2d 289 (Ill. App. 1993) , a brokerage contract existed between the parties when the evidence showed that (1) the buyer placed an advertisement in a trade paper soliciting certain types of properties and providing for brokerage protection; (2) the broker approached the buyer and was informed that "brokerage protection" meant that once a piece of property was presented by the broker for the first time, the buyer would not exclude that broker from negotiations regarding the presented property in order to protect the broker's commission; and (3) the broker subsequently presented several properties to the buyer, including one that the buyer ultimately purchased. Under the circumstances, an agreement clearly existed between the parties providing that the buyer would protect the broker's commission for the sale of the property by virtue of not excluding the broker from negotiations concerning the purchase of the property.

But see Idaho Code § 54-2084 (no type of agency representation may be created orally or by implication).

(n18)Footnote 9.1. An implied contract exists when the owner knows that the broker is endeavoring to effect a sale and expects to receive compensation for his services, and the owner encourages the broker to aid in the sale and leads the broker to believe that he will, in fact, receive compensation. Thus, when an estate's agent notified brokers that they would receive a 3% commission upon procuring a successful bidder at auction, the broker procured a buyer at a price acceptable to the estate, albeit not at the first auction but at a later auction, and the estate did not make any effort to disclaim the broker's right to a commission at the second auction, there was an implied contract to pay the broker's commission upon the sale. In re Estate of Vallerius, 624 N.E.2d 459 (Ill. App. 1993) .

A broker and commercial purchaser have not mutually manifested assent to the essential terms of a brokerage contract where (1) the purchaser never expressly assented to the terms of the broker's offer, (2) the purchaser's mere indication of interest in the subject property and willingness to meet with the broker to learn more about the transaction, did not establish the "unqualified acceptance" necessary to manifest express assent to the agreement and (3) the purchaser refused to agree to the broker's 10% fee when it was first mentioned and repeatedly thereafter rejected that term of the agreement. Weichert Co. Realtors v. Ryan, 128 N.J. 427, 608 A.2d 280 (N.J. 1992) .

(n19)Footnote 10. See:

Colorado: Lester v. Marshall, 352 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1960) .

Illinois: Arthur Rubloff & Co. v. Drovers Nat'l Bank, 80 Ill. App. 3d 867, 36 Ill. Dec. 194, 400 N.E.2d 614 (1980) .

Nevada: In Morrow v. Barger, 737 P.2d 1153 (Nev. 1987) , it was held that a promise to pay the reasonable value of a broker's services may be implied and a real estate agent may recover under the theory of quantum meruit an amount equal to the value of services rendered, unless the parties have executed an exclusive listing agreement that is violative of Nev. Rev. Stat. § 645.320. That statutory provision requires that every exclusive listing set forth in its terms a "definite, specific and complete termination."

Texas: Wilson v. Donze, 692 S.W.2d 734 (Tex. Civ. App. 1986) .

But see D.B. Corkey Co., Inc. v. Koplin, 176 Ill. App. 3d 1096, 126 Ill. Dec. 417, 531 N.E.2d 1044 (1988) , in which the court held that neither an express nor an implied-in-fact brokerage contract existed between a commercial real estate brokerage firm and a property owner, where the seller never expressly promised to pay a commission and the evidence revealed the intent throughout negotiations that the buyer, not the seller, would pay the commission.

(n20)Footnote 10.1. See Southampton Development Corp. v. Palmer Realty Group, Inc., 769 So. 2d 1113, 1115 (Fla. App. 2000) .

(n21)Footnote 11. Cline v. Yamaga, 97 Cal. App. 3d 239, 158 Cal. Rptr. 598 (1979) .

See also Williams Real Estate Co. v. Douglas A. Edwards, Inc., 73 A.D.2d 860, 423 N.Y.S.2d 492, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9748 (1st Dept 1980) , aff'd, 52 N.Y.2d 779, 436 N.Y.S.2d 618, 417 N.E.2d 1006 (1980) .

(n22)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Mary Adams & Assocs. v. Rosenblat, 539 So. 2d 860 (La. App. 1989) , wherein the court held that the president of a company had the authority to amend a sales agreement to extend the time for passing the act of sale, and therefore the broker was due her commission as provided in original contract. In this case, the broker found a purchaser for seller's property and a sales agreement was executed. The contract was conditioned on the purchaser's ability to borrow a sum of money within a prescribed period. The purchaser agreed to make a good faith effort to obtain the loan, and a commitment by any lender to make the loan would satisfy the condition. The purchaser had difficulty in obtaining the loan within the time prescribed and, consequently, the president of the purchasing corporation executed an amendment of the sales agreement which extended the time for obtaining the loan and the time for passing the act of sale. The sellers agreed to the extension. The purchaser, however, was unable to find a lending institution to make the loan within the extended time limit. Thereafter, the sellers agreed to make the loan themselves, therefore satisfying the contract condition. The purchaser then refused to take title to the property. The real estate broker sought a commission against the purchaser since the purchaser defaulted on its agreement to purchase. The purchaser claimed that the original sales contract expired and the broker was therefore not entitled to any commission. The court held that a principal will be bound for the actions of its agents if the principal has given an innocent third party a reasonable belief that the agent had authority to act for the principal. Here, the broker had reason to believe that the president had authority to extend the sales agreement. Not only was he president of the purchasing corporation, but he represented the corporation in almost all the sale negotiations, and the broker was told at the first sale meeting that the president had authority to sign for the corporation. The broker thus earned her commission when the seller agreed to make the purchaser the required loan within the extended time.

(n23)Footnote 13. See:

Federal: J.C. Nichols Co. v. Osborn, 12 F. Supp. 2d 1196, 1199 (D. Kan. 1998) (applying Kansas law).

Connecticut: Nugent v. Del Vecchio, 415 A.2d 1339 (1980) .

Nevada: Craig v. Margrave, 84 Nev. 638, 446 P.2d 653 (1968) .

New York: Lerner Organization, Inc. v. Clairidge's Co., 118 A.D.2d 402, 499 N.Y.S.2d 412 (1st Dept. 1986) appeal dismissed without opinion 68 N.Y.2d 910, 508 N.Y.S.2d 1029, 501 N.E.2d 602 (N.Y. 1986) , in which the broker and a lessor agreed that installment of a brokerage commission was due the broker from the lessor upon the event of a tenant's curing of a default in payment of rent and continued payment of the rent by the tenant thereafter, when due. The court held that the tenant, following cure of a default, was not required to pay in a timely fashion the following month's rent before the second installment was owed the broker.

(n24)Footnote 14. See Robert v. Construction General, Inc., 40 Md. App. 78, 388 A.2d 168 (Md. Ct. Spec. App.

1978) , cert. denied, 283 Md. 737 (Md. 1978) .

But see Weston Funding Corp. v. Lafayette Towers, Inc., 550 F.2d 710 (2d Cir. 1977) , where a New York corporation obtained a loan commitment from a New Jersey bank for financing of New Jersey property by a New Jersey corporation owned solely by a New Jersey resident and the transaction's only link to New York was that the original brokerage agreement between the parties was signed in New York. Under New York's "center of gravity" conflict of laws test, New Jersey law would govern a dispute arising from the brokerage agreement.

(n25)Footnote 15. See Weston Funding Corp. v. Lafayette Towers, Inc., 550 F.2d 710 (2d Cir. 1977) ; Robert v. Construction General, Inc., 40 Md. App. 78, 388 A.2d 168 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1978) , cert. denied, 283 Md. 737 (Md. 1978) .

(n26)Footnote 16. See § 2.03[2][c] infra.

(n27)Footnote 16.1. See Rosenberg v. Heritage Renovations, LLC, 685 N.W.2d 320, 325-326 (Minn. 2004) , rehearing denied, 2004 Minn. LEXIS 535 (Minn. Aug. 19, 2004) .

(n28)Footnote 17. For a case dealing with the issue of waiver of a time limitation in a brokerage contract, see James Myers v. National Dev. Co., 722 S.W.2d 491 (Tex. Ct. App. 1986) , in which the court held that a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the parties waived a time limitation in a brokerage contract precluded summary judgment. In determining whether a time limitation has indeed been waived, the court noted the following factors, among others, to be considered:

(a) Whether the principal accepts the services of the broker and recognizes the contract as still in force

(b) Whether the principal tacitly or expressly encouraged the broker to continue his efforts to effect a sale

(c) Whether the prior acts and conduct between the parties would lead the broker to believe that adherence to the time frame would not be insisted upon.

But see Barnett v. Saizon, 994 So. 2d 668 (La. Ct. App. 2008) (owner's efforts to terminate an exclusive listing agreement failed, the owner owed the agent a commission despite the owner's belief that the agreement had been terminated).

(n29)Footnote 18. See, e.g., Snyder v. Schram, 274 Or. 539, 547 P.2d 102 (1976) (a vendor must act in good faith in terminating a brokerage contract and cannot terminate the contract solely to avoid liability for the broker's commission while continuing to negotiate with a prospective purchaser secured by the broker). Grommet v. Newman, 2009 WY 150, 220 P.3d 795, 802 (Wyo. 2009) (listing can be extended orally or by conduct).

(n30)Footnote 18.1. See Wieneke Properties, Inc. v. Thiessen, 94 Ore. App. 306, 310-311, 765 P.2d 815, 817 (1988) (seller encouraged broker to continue its efforts to consummate a deal with the buyer; seller and the broker impliedly extended the agreement to the date of closing), review denied, 307 Ore. 514, 770 P.2d 595 (1989) .

(n31)Footnote 18.2. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-809(1); Ga. Code Ann. § 10-6A-9(a).

(n32)Footnote 18.3. See Property Asset Brokerage, LLC v. Magna Assocs. Liquidating Trust, 992 P.2d 654, 657 (Colo. App. 1999) , cert. denied 2000 Colo. LEXIS 21 (Jan. 24, 2000) .

(n33)Footnote 18.4. See Carolantic Realty, Inc. v. Matco Group, Inc., 151 N.C. App. 464, 469-470, 566 S.E.2d

134, 138 (N.C. Ct. App. 2002) . See generally Annot., Broker's Right to Commission on Sales Consummated After Termination of Employment, 27 A.L.R.2d 1348 (1953) .

(n34)Footnote 18.5. See Wood/Fay Realty Group, Inc. v. New Aquarius Corp., 842 So. 2d 914, 917 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) , reh'g denied, 2003 Fla. App. LEXIS 7082 (Apr. 16, 2003) .

(n35)Footnote 18.6. See Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 153, 209 P.3d 741, 746 (2009) ; DiSalle Real Estate Co. v. Howell, 117 Ohio App. 3d 113, 690 N.E.2d 25, 28 (1996) .

(n36)Footnote 19. See:

Connecticut: A broker must exercise due diligence to ascertain if the language in a listing agreement is accurate. Thus, even where the listing agreement was replete with provisions requiring the seller to give accurate information, and the seller provided inaccurate information, the doctrine of equitable estoppel was unavailable as a defense to the broker's noncompliance with statutory mandates governing the content of brokerage agreements. Real Estate Auctions, Inc. v. Senie, 28 Conn. App. 563, 611 A.2d 452 (Conn. App. Ct. 1992) (inaccurate names and addresses).

Florida: Planck v. Traders Diversified, Inc., 387 So. 2d 440, 442 (Fla. DCA 1980) petition dismissed, 394 So. 2d 1153 (Fla. 1981) .

Indiana: In a suit for a brokerage commission, the court will not apply the rule that an ambiguous contract will be construed against its drafter unless all other rules of construction have failed. Bishop v. Sanders, 624 N.E.2d 64, 68 (Ind. Ct. App. 1993) , reh'g denied (Jan. 28, 1994), transfer denied (June 2, 1994).

Maine: Gendron Realty v. New Jersey Gendron Lumber Co., 519 A.2d 723 (Me. 1987) , in which a real estate broker sought, unsuccessfully, to recover a commission on the sale of a property by a second broker who was hired by the seller subsequent to the expiration of the broker's one-year "exclusive right to sell" agreement. The agreement provided that the plaintiff-broker would be entitled to his sales commission if within six months of the expiration of the brokerage agreement a sale was consummated by the seller that resulted from the broker's negotiations with a prospective buyer. Prior to the expiration of the exclusive sales agreement, the plaintiff-broker showed the seller's property to a prospective purchaser. No further actions or discussions were undertaken relative to this prospect by the broker. After the expiration of the exclusive sales agreement, but prior to the expiration of the six-month extension period, the property was sold by seller's new broker to the same purchaser to whom the plaintiff-broker had shown the property. The plaintiff-broker commenced the instant action against the seller claiming that the sale by the subsequent broker during the plaintiff's six-month extension was attributable to the negotiations of the plaintiff-broker, and that the plaintiff was entitled to his commission under the terms of the agreement. The court, in holding against the plaintiff-broker, stated the following:

[I]n the absence of extrinsic evidence suggesting that the parties to such a contract intended a contrary meaning, the term "negotiating" in the context of the extension clause of a real estate broker's contract means a dialogue aimed at the adjustment or resolution of differences in order to strike a bargain. It involves more than the mere showing of property that is offered for sale or the unilateral provision of information concerning the property.

Cf. Judd Realty, Inc. v. Tedesco, 400 A.2d 952 (R.I. 1979) (only where contract terms are ambiguous are they construed against the drafter).

(n37)Footnote 20. See:

Alabama: Davis v. Sherrill, 540 So. 2d 708 (Ala. 1989) , in which the court held that where material issues of fact exist as to whether a commission-splitting agreement was limited to a particular offer or not, summary judgment cannot be granted. In the case at bar, a dispute over real estate brokerage fees arose. The court found that the contract signed by both parties was ambiguous, inasmuch as it did not make clear whether the parties to the contract intended a commission to be paid regardless of the sale price. Accordingly, genuine issues of material fact existed which required resolution by a fact finder. As a result, the lower court's grant of summary judgment was in error and the case was remanded for a new trial.

In ERA Commander Realty, Inc. v. Harrigan, 514 So. 2d 1329 (Ala. 1987) , the Supreme Court of Alabama held that where there is an inconsistency in a brokerage agreement, the specific, unambiguous, type-written provisions of the addendum prevailed over the general printed language of the preamble.

South Dakota: Dail v. Vodicka, 89 S.D. 600, 237 N.W.2d 7 (1975) .

Generally, where typed portions of a brokerage contract are at variance or in conflict with printed provisions, the typed portions take precedence and are controlling. See Planck v. Traders Diversified, Inc., 387 So. 2d 440, 442 (Fla. DCA 1980) petition dismissed, 394 So. 2d 1153 (Fla. 1981) .

In Texas, however, parol evidence may not be supplied to identify a broker, where the reference in the subject real estate brokerage agreement is merely to "outside brokers." Thus, a document in which a purchaser of commercial property acknowledged a debt to "outside brokers," but did not provide a listing of their names, fails to narrow down the universe of potential brokers, so that the name of a particular broker is not being supplied entirely by parol evidence. Thus, in such a case, parol evidence may not be used to identify a broker. Boyert v. Tauber, 834 S.W.2d 60, 35 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 1092 (Tex. 1992) .

(n38)Footnote 20.1. See Glenlakes Realty Co. v. Norwood, 721 So. 2d 174, 179 (Ala. 1998) .

(n39)Footnote 20.2. See Grubb & Ellis Management Services, Inc. v. 407417 B.C., L.L.C., 138 P.3d 1210, 1216 (Ariz. Ct. App. 2006) (The parties' management agreement with respect to commercial property "clearly and unequivocally" stated the landlord's obligation to indemnify the broker for its negligent management of the premises.), review denied, 2007 Ariz. LEXIS 5 (Jan. 9, 2007) .

(n40)Footnote 21. See § 2.03[3] infra.

(n41)Footnote 22. The written contract would resolve any possible differences as to the nature and extent of the broker's authority. It would also be important in a suit for a commission where there was a disagreement as to the broker's function, i.e., as a finder or as a broker.

(n42)Footnote 22.1. See Stewart v. Sisson, 711 N.W.2d 713, 717 (Iowa 2006) .

(n43)Footnote 23. It has been observed that a majority of jurisdictions adhere to the rule that a land description in a broker's contract need only show that the property attempted to be described in the contract is the same property to be listed by the broker.

See Morris v. Savannah Valley Realty, Inc., 233 Ga. App. 762, 505 S.E.2d 259, 262 (Ga. App. 1998) (property description in broker's listing agreement does not need to be as definite and complete as that which should be made in deeds of conveyance); Orr v. Smith, 102 Ga. App. 40, 115 S.E.2d 601 (1960) . A listing agreement which describes the property by reference to its ownership, location and approximate size has been held to sufficiently describe the property. See Callies v. O'Neal, 147 Idaho 841, 216 P.3d 130 (Idaho 2009), reh'g denied, 2009 Ida. LEXIS 155 (Aug. 20, 2009); Central Idaho Agency, Inc. v. Turner, 92 Idaho 306, 442 P.2d 442 (1968), cited in Brazo v. Real Estate Comm'n, 177 Conn. 515, 418 A.2d 883, 889 (1979).

See generally Note, Sufficiency of a Property Description in a Real Estate Broker's Listing Agreement, 11 Willamette L.J. 308 (1975).

(n44)Footnote 24. Even in states that do not have a provision in their statute of frauds requiring brokerage contracts to be in writing, the state licensing statute or rules and regulations covering brokers may require written listing agreement.

(n45)Footnote 24.1. Cf. Commercial Ventures, Inc. v. The Rex M. & Lynn Lea Family Trust, 177 P.3d 955, 963 (Idaho 2008) (brokerage agreement requires the signature of both the owner and broker as it is not a unilateral contract the broker can accept by full performance.), reh'g denied, 2008 Ida. LEXIS 36 (Idaho Feb. 15, 2008).

(n46)Footnote 25. See:

Connecticut: Real Estate Listing Service, Inc. v. Connecticut Real Estate Commission, 179 Conn. 128, 133, 425 A.2d 581, 584-85, 17 A.L.R.4th 753 (1979); New England Retail Properties, Inc. v. Maturo, 102 Conn. App. 476, 479 n. 2, 925 A.2d 1151, 1155 n. 2 (2007), appeal denied, 284 Conn. 912, 931 A.2d 932 (2007).

Florida: Osheroff v. Rauch Weaver Millsaps & Co., 882 So. 2d 503, 505 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2004), rehearing denied, 2004 Fla. App. LEXIS 15617 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 4th Dist., Sept. 22, 2004), review denied, 2005 Fla. LEXIS 511 (Fla., Mar. 3, 2005).

Georgia: Quantum Trading Corp. v. Forum Realty Corp., 278 Ga. App. 485, 629 S.E.2d 420 (2006) (procuring cause issues arise in cases involving open rather than exclusive listing arrangements.) cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 740 (Sept. 18, 2006).

Illinois: Lord v. Melton, 80 Ill. App. 3d 1057, 36 Ill. Dec. 127, 400 N.E.2d 547 (1980).

New York: In Re Fox's Will, 126 N.Y.S.2d 158 (Surr. Ct. Jeff. Co. 1953).

(n47)Footnote 25.1. See Daigle Commer. Group, Inc. v. St. Laurent, 1999 ME 107, 734 A.2d 667, 673 (Me. 1999). See also Heaton v. Boulders Properties, 132 N.H. 330, 332, 566 A.2d 1127, 1128 (N.H. 1999) (using both terms).

(n48)Footnote 25.2. See Antrim, Piper, Wenger, Inc. v. Lowe, 37 Kan. App. 2d 932, 935, 159 P.3d 215, 219 (2007) Daigle Commer. Group, Inc. v. St. Laurent, 1999 ME 107, 734 A.2d 667, 673 (Me. 1999).

(n49)Footnote 25.3. See Mapes v. City Council of the City of Walsenburg, 151 P.3d 574, 579 (Colo. Ct. App. 2006), cert. denied, 2007 Colo. LEXIS 44 (Jan. 16, 2007); W.W. Chambers, Inc. v. Audette, 385 A.2d 10, 14 (D.C. 1978).

(n50)Footnote 25.4. See Mapes v. City Council of the City of Walsenburg, 151 P.3d 574, 579 (Colo. Ct. App. 2006), cert. denied, 2007 Colo. LEXIS 44 (Jan. 16, 2007); W.W. Chambers, Inc. v. Audette, 385 A.2d 10, 14 (D.C. 1978).

(n51)Footnote 26. See 19 N.Y.C.R.R. § 175.19(a).

Utah: Wardley Corp. v. Welsh, 962 P.2d 86, 88 n. 2 (Utah Ct. App. 1998).

See also:

Connecticut: New England Land Co. v. DeMarkey, 213 Conn. 612, 569 A.2d 1098 (1990) , the court held that a listing contract which did not identify the particular price at which the property was to be offered for sale, or a formula by which the price could be determined, failed to comply with statutory requirements. The court further found that the listing contract was devoid of any facts indicating any reservation to the seller in determining the sale price of the property. Upon these facts, the lower court erred by denying the seller's motion to dissolve or to vacate an ex parte prejudgment real estate attachment obtained by the brokerage company in conjunction with a claim for real estate commission.

New York: Bishop Estates v. Murphy, 41 Misc. 2d 719, 246 N.Y.S.2d 73, 1964 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2206 (1964) (there was held to be no "net listing" contract within the meaning of Section 175.19 where there was an agreement for brokers to sell real property for $21,000 with sellers to receive $20,000).

(n52)Footnote 27. See, e.g.:

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. § 112:87AAA(1).

New York: 19 N.Y.C.R.R. § 175.19(6).

Utah: Wardley Corp. v. Welsh, 962 P.2d 86, 88 n. 2 (Utah Ct. App. 1998) .

(n53)Footnote 28. See Express Realty Co. v. Zinn, 39 Misc. 2d 733, 241 N.Y.S.2d 954, 1963 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1882 (1963) , barring an action for commission by a brokerage firm which made a "net listing" to sell defendant's home. See also Poritzky v. Graff, 98 Misc. 2d 1112, 415 N.Y.S.2d 375, 1979 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2202 (1979) , aff'd, 103 Misc. 2d 903, 431 N.Y.S.2d 232, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2218 (1980) .

(n54)Footnote 29. See Turnley v. Michael, 15 S.W. 912 (Tex. Civ. App. 1891) .

See also Boysen v. Robertson, 70 Ark. 56, 68 S.W. 243 (1902) .

(n55)Footnote 30. See Valley, Inc. v. Ward Parkway Bldg. Co., Inc., 3 Kan. App. 2d 131, 590 P.2d 1100 (1979) .

(n56)Footnote 31. In Joseph M. Silverman, Inc. v. Harrison, 498 A.2d 193 (D.C. App. 1985) , a subsequent sale of an apartment house through another broker gave rise to liability where the listing provided that the broker "will be considered the exclusive real estate broker in connection with the renting, leasing, or sale of the managed property and entitled to receive the customary real estate commission in connection with such service." In such case, the court held, the damages were to be measured by the facts which established what a "customary" commission was.

(n57)Footnote 32. See § 2.03[2][a] supra for a discussion of open listings.

(n58)Footnote 33. See Brazo v. Real Estate Comm'n, 177 Conn. 515, 418 A.2d 883 (1979) . Cf. Colli v. Real Estate Comm'n, 169 Conn. 445, 364 A.2d 167 (1975) (state real estate commission lacked jurisdiction to revoke or suspend licenses of real estate brokers who negotiated for sale of property with an owner known to have an exclusive agency listing agreement with another real estate agency, where the brokers negotiated not in their capacity as brokers but as principals).

(n59)Footnote 34. See, e.g.:

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.03

Florida: Fearick v. Smugglers Cove, Inc., 379 So. 2d 400, 403 (Fla. 1979) (if the sale, however, is to a ready, willing and able buyer procured by the broker, the owner is liable for the broker's commission) Fischer-Gaeta-Cromwell, Inc. v. Oakwood St. Enters., LLC, 997 So. 2d 1271, 1272 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2009) .

Georgia: Dover Realty Co. v. Pecce, 295 Ga. App. 221, 222-23, 671 S.E.2d 257, 259 (2008) ; Dolvin Realty Co. v. Jones, 63 Ga. App. 351, 352, 11 S.E.2d 105, 106 (1940) .

Illinois: Flynn v. La Salle Nat'l Bank, 9 Ill. 2d 129, 137 N.E.2d 71, 76 (1956) .

Kansas: Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 157, 209 P.3d 741, 748 (2009) (no express agreement to pay a commission if the property was gifted during the listing period).

Louisiana: Hebert v. Lebouef, 487 So. 2d 1272 (La. Ct. App.) , cert. denied, 491 So. 2d 384 (La. 1986) , in which the court addressed the impact of a lease-purchase agreement, made by the owner of the subject property with a third party, on the broker's right to commission under an exclusive listing contract. In this case, Herbert secured an exclusive listing to sell Lebouef's home. Prior to the expiration of the listing contract, Lebouef was approached by Broussard to negotiate an acquisition of the house. The negotiations which occurred during the period of the exclusive listing agreement resulted in "an agreement for [a] lease-purchase contract." During the negotiations, a deposit was paid by Broussard to Lebouef. A written agreement was later executed by Lebouef and Broussard after the expiration of the exclusive listing. When Broussard exercised his option to buy two years later, Herbert sued for his commission. Lebouef put forth two arguments to defeat Herbert's claim for commission. First, Lebouef argued that any agreement with Broussard was made with "no effort on the part of Herbert" and, furthermore, Herbert knew about the arrangement with Broussard and such knowledge placed some duty on Herbert to contact Broussard. Second, Lebouef argued that the arrangement between Lebouef and Broussard was not a sale and consequently no commission was due. In rejecting both of these arguments, the court explained that the listing contract clearly stated in unequivocal language that the agent was due a commission even if the property was sold by the owner. The court further stated that when the sale was ultimately consummated through the exercise of the option, the agent's commission became due. In this regard the court expressly adopted the reasoning of the trial judge, stating that a different construction of the facts of the case "would invite parties to conspire intentionally to deprive real estate agents of commissions due them pursuant to contract by permitting them to enter into lease purchase agreements for a period of time until the Realtor's contract has in fact expired."

New Mexico: Clodfelter v. Plaza Ltd., 102 N.M. 544, 698 P.2d 1 (1985) , wherein the court held that an exclusive agency granted by a property owner to a broker restricts the right of a property owner to engage the services of another broker. Here, a real estate broker brought an action against property owners to recover the commission due on the sale of certain property in Taos which was sold through a second broker. The court stated that although the brokerage agreement provided that the broker would not receive a commission if the property was sold solely through the efforts of the owners, this merely meant that the owners themselves must arrange the sale and not another broker. Accordingly, the owners' action of selling the property through a second broker constituted a breach of contract.

New Jersey: Kislak Co., Inc. v. Geldzahler, 210 N.J. Super. 255, 509 A.2d 320 (1986) , where the Superior Court of New Jersey held that a vendor violated an exclusive sales agreement with a real estate broker by failing to report what the vendor termed a "non-serious" inquiry. The agreement between the vendor and the real estate broker provided that only the broker would have the right to sell the vendor's house, and that any inquiries made to the vendor by an interested buyer would also be conveyed to the broker. A buyer contacted the vendor, but the vendor maintained that this buyer was not serious and hence he did not tell the broker. The court held that the agreement between the vendor and broker did not distinguish between a serious and "non-serious" buyer, hence the vendor was in violation of the agreement, entitling the broker to the commission as stipulated in the agreement.

New York: Solid Waste Institute, Inc. v. Sanitary Disposal, Inc., 120 A.D.2d 915, 502 N.Y.S.2d 835, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 57000 (3d Dept. 1986), wherein an appellate court found that where a seller sold his own property, and the broker had no unequivocal exclusive right to sell, the broker was not entitled to a commission on the sale of the seller's business. The agreement between the broker and the seller included a heading and preamble entitled "exclusive right to sell." However, the term "exclusive right to sell" was not defined and there was a provision in the agreement which stated that the commission would be earned "if consultant delivers a ready, willing and able buyer." 120 A.D.2d at 916-17. The court found that this statement was inconsistent with an entitlement to a commission upon an independent sale by the owner.

(n60)Footnote 35. Dorman Realty & Insurance Co., Inc. v. Stalvey, 264 S.C. 94, 212 S.E.2d 591 (S.C. 1975).

(n61)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Nev. Rev. Stat. § 645.320(2).

(n62)Footnote 37. Cf. Hearrold v. Gries, 115 Ariz. 560, 566 P.2d 1036 (Ariz. 1977) (broker not entitled to a commission on a sale that took place after the broker's exclusive listing had expired, even though the sale was to one whom the broker had procured).

(n63)Footnote 38. Mellos v. Silverman, 367 So. 2d 1369 (Ala. 1979). See Exit A Plus Realty v. Zuniga, 395 N.J. Super. 655, 663-64, 930 A.2d 491, 496 (App. Div. 2007). See also Roberts v. Coldwell Banker Kinard Realty, 286 Ga. App. 7, 9-10, 648 S.E.2d 442, 444-45 (2007) (Broker failed to meet the listing agreement's requirement that the buyer was "introduced to the property by the Broker" while the agreement was in effect.). Cf. Business Consulting Services, Inc., v. Wicks, 703 N.W.2d 427, 431 (Iowa 2005) (broker entitled to commission under an extension clause if the broker can establish a causal connection between the broker's actions and the purchaser) Burkett & Associates, Inc. v. Teymer, 318 Wis. 2d 525, 531-33, 767 N.W.2d 623, 627, 2009 WI App 67 (2009) (discussing what constitutes negotiation in the context of a protected buyer). See generally J.R. Kemper, Annot., Construction of Provision in Real-Estate Broker's Listing Contract that Broker Shall Receive Commission on Sale After Expiration of Listing Period to One with Whom Broker Has "Negotiated" During Listing Period, 51 A.L.R.3d 1149 (1973).

(n64)Footnote 39. 367 So. 2d at 1371. See also Eitel v. Owen, 284 S.W.3d 147, 148 (Ky. Ct. App. 2008) (where the listing agreement covers a definite time, the broker may recover a commission when a sale outside this time occurs and there is evidence that the owner deferred the sale until that time period for the purpose of circumventing the broker's right to the commission).

(n65)Footnote 39.1. Such an extension clause have also been referred to as a "tail." See Rosenberg v. Heritage Renovations, LLC, 685 N.W.2d 320, 323-324 (Minn. 2004), rehearing denied, 2004 Minn. LEXIS 535 (Minn. Aug. 19, 2004); Prudential Kahler Realtors v. Schmitendorf, 673 N.W.2d 663, 664, 2003 SD 148 (S.D. 2003); Roger Crane & Associates, Inc. v. Brooks, 74 Wn. App. 769, 774-775, 875 P.2d 705, 708 (1994).

(n66)Footnote 39.2. See Easton Business Opportunities, Inc. v. Town Executive Suites, 2010 Nev. LEXIS 14, at *2 (2010).

(n67)Footnote 39.3. See Douglas v. Schuette, 607 N.W.2d 142, 145-146 (Minn. App. 2000), review denied 2000 Minn. LEXIS 301 (2000).

(n68)Footnote 39.4. See Douglas v. Shuette, 607 N.W.2d 142, 146 (Minn. App. 2000), review denied 2000 Minn.

LEXIS 301 (2000) ; Realty House, Inc. v. Grimm, 460 N.W.2d 917, 919-920 (Minn. App. 1990) . See also Gattermeir-Elliott Real Estate Co., L.L.C. v. K.H., Inc., 184 S.W.3d 188, 193 (Mo. Ct. App. 2006) (broker failed to notify seller of potential lessee via certified or registered mail as required in the listing agreement, broker was not entitled to commission when the property was leased after the listing expired). Cf. Sonday v. Dave Kohel Agency, Inc., 2006 WI 92, 293 Wis. 2d 458, 477, 718 N.W.2d 631, 640 (2006) (A provision entitling a broker to commission after the listing has expired is read strictly against the broker). But cf. Reece & Nichols Realtors v. Zoll, 201 S.W.3d 516, 519-20 (Mo. Ct. App. 2006) (A buyer's broker was allowed to recover a commission against a buyer because the broker had substantially complied with the brokerage agreement with respect to the buyer's purchase of a home after the agreement had expired).

(n69)Footnote 39.5. See The Huffines Co., LLC v. Lockhart, 365 S.C. 178, 194-195, 617 S.E.2d 125, 133 (S.C. Ct. App. 2005) , rehearing denied, 2005 S.C. App. LEXIS 190 (S.C. Ct. App., Aug. 26, 2005) cert. denied, 2007 S.C. LEXIS 35 (S.C. Jan. 18, 2007) ; Trimble v. Wescom, 267 Neb. 224, 230, 673 N.W.2d 864, 868 (2004) .

(n70)Footnote 39.6. See Rosenberg v. Heritage Renovations, LLC, 685 N.W.2d 320, 323-324 (Minn. 2004) , rehearing denied, 2004 Minn. LEXIS 535 (Minn. Aug. 19, 2004) , citing Minn. Stat. § 82.195; Norwood and Hyde, Extension Clauses in Louisiana Listing Agreements, 42 La. L. Rev. 1011, 1012-13 (1982) (footnote omitted). See also Telluride Real Estate Co. v. Penthouse Affiliates, LLC, 996 P.2d 151, 154 (Colo. App. 1999) , cert. denied, 2000 Colo. LEXIS 499 (Colo. 2000) . (court rejected the argument that a statute regulating the relationships between real estate brokers and sellers was intended to supplant existing common law; the statute did not eliminate the common law procuring cause remedy).

(n71)Footnote 39.7. See Mayo v. Century 21 Action Realtors, Inc., 823 S.W.2d 466, 469 (Ky. Ct. App. 1992) ; King v. Dean, 19 Ohio St. 2d 17, 48 Ohio Op. 2d 10, 249 N.E.2d 45, 47 (1969) . See also Easton Business Opportunities, Inc. v. Town Executive Suites, 2010 Nev. LEXIS 14, at *19-*20 (2010) (calling this the minority view).

(n72)Footnote 39.8. See Shands v. Wm R. Winton, Ltd., 91 P.3d 416, 419 (Colo. Ct. App. 2003) , reh'g denied, 2003 Colo. App. LEXIS 1964 (Colo. Ct. App. Dec. 18, 2003) , cert denied, 2004 Colo. LEXIS 431 (Colo. May 24, 2004) ; Monadnock Ins. Agency v. Manning, 117 N.H. 508, 510-511, 374 A.2d 961, 963 (1977) ; Easton Business Opportunities, Inc. v. Town Executive Suites, 2010 Nev. LEXIS 14, at *20-*22 (2010) (adopting this view and calling it the majority view).

(n73)Footnote 40. See, e.g., N.J. Stat. Ann. § 45:15-17(f).

(n74)Footnote 41. See Carnell v. Watson, 176 Mont. 344, 578 P.2d 308 (1978) (real estate broker's failure to furnish seller copy of listing agreement required by a statute barred broker's recovery of commission).

(n75)Footnote 42. See, e.g.:

Federal: Van Schaack Land Co. v. Hub & Spoke Ranch Co., 244 F. Supp. 2d 1231, 1249 (D. Kan. 2003) , applying Kansas law.

Alaska: Dahl v. Griffin, 652 P.2d 84 (Alaska 1982) .

Arkansas: Atkins v. L.L. Cole & Sons, Inc., 79 Ark. App. 124, 84 S.W.3d 899 (Ark. Ct. App. Sept. 18, 2002) .

Georgia: OTI Shelf, Inc. v. Schair & Assocs., Inc., 238 Ga. App. 12, 517 S.E.2d 542, 544 (1999) .

Illinois: In Hammel v. Degenhardt, 139 Ill. App. 3d 241, 93 Ill. Dec. 742, 487 N.E.2d 409 (1985) , the court held that property transferred by warranty deed in consideration for cancellation of a debt was "sold" so as to entitle the broker to the commission. Moreover, a written real estate listing contract was deemed by the court to be an instrument of writing entitling the broker to pre-judgment interest. The property was sold during the time allotted in the exclusive right to sell agreement, although the deed was executed one day after the expiration of the exclusive agreement.

In Bolger v. Danley Lumber Co., Inc., 77 Ill. App. 3d 207, 32 Ill. Dec. 685, 395 N.E.2d 1066 (1979), it was found that a broker had a right to a commission under an agreement that specifically provided for the broker to earn a commission if the subject property was sold by the broker, the vendor or "by or through any other person" during the exclusive listing period. The broker in the instant case was not the procuring cause of the sale and the vendor and vendee did not transform their agreement into writing until after expiration of the exclusive listing period.

Flynn v. La Salle Nat'l Bank, 9 Ill. 2d 129, 137 N.E.2d 71 (1956) .

Nebraska: Kerry-Rand & Associates v. Peddicord, 215 Neb. 798, 340 N.W.2d 880 (1983) .

South Carolina: Wilbur Smith, etc. v. National Bank of S.C., 263 S.E.2d 643 (S.C. 1980) .

South Dakota: Berven Co. v. Newman, 281 N.W.2d 268 (S.D. 1979) .

(n76)Footnote 43. See, e.g.:

Iowa: Hedges Co. v. Shanahan, 195 Iowa 1302, 190 N.W.957 (1922) .

Wyoming: E & E Mining, Inc. v. Flying "D" Group, Inc., 718 P.2d 58 (Wyo. 1986) .

But see Torrey and Dean, Inc. v. Coyle, 138 Or. 509, 7 P.2d 561 (1932) .

(n77)Footnote 43.1. See Shands v. Winton, 91 P.3d 416, 2003 Colo. App. LEXIS 1783, at *7 (Colo. Ct. App. Nov. 20, 2003), rehearing denied, 2003 Colo. App. LEXIS 1964 (Colo. Ct. App., Dec. 18, 2003) .

(n78)Footnote 44. Exclusive agency listings are agreements under which a particular broker is employed and no other. See § 2.03[2][c] supra. See also § 2.03[2][d] supra (discussing the "exclusive right to sell").

(n79)Footnote 45. See National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR), Membership Policy and Procedures Manual 7 (1973). See also extensive coverage of the MLS at § 2.04 infra .

(n80)Footnote 46. See Comment, Exclusion of Real Estate Multiple Listing Services as Antitrust Violations, 14 Calif. W.L. Rev. 300, 302 (1978).

(n81)Footnote 47. Id. See also Frisell v. Newman, 71 Wash. 2d 520, 527, 429 P.2d 864, 868 (1967) .

(n82)Footnote 48. See Comment, Exclusion of Real Estate Multiple Listing Services as Antitrust Violations, 14 Calif. W.L. Rev. 300, 302 (1978). Participating brokers generally pay an initial participation fee to the MLS and a basic participation charge payable periodically. Id. at 302, n. 31.

(n83)Footnote 49. See Goodwin v. Glick, 139 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 936, 294 P.2d 192 (1956) .

(n84)Footnote 50. See Evanston-North Shore Bd. of Realtors v. United States, 320 F.2d 375 (U.S. Ct. Cl. 1973), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 931 (1964) .

See also Austin, Real Estate Boards and Multiple Listing Systems as Restraints of Trade, 70 Colum. L. Rev. 1325, 1330 (1970), where the author observes that:

The use of the multiples has ... had a significant positive impact on the individual sales transaction. The transactional benefits are fairly evenly distributed among the broker, the buyer, and the seller. In the absence of the multiple, a seller has three alternatives: first, he can sell the property himself, a course of action requiring facilities and expertise which most home owners do not possess; second, he can use an open listing; third, he can give a broker the exclusive right to sell. The multiple allows him to combine the advantages of the last two alternatives and to avoid the dangers of the first. The buyer benefits from the wider selection of purchase opportunities than would be available from the office of a single broker. In addition, there is a time-saving factor: 'The buyer often has to spend only a short time in the office selecting properties to inspect, merely by carefully screening the MLS sheets.' The broker is particularly benefited by having immediate access to a large number of listings and at the same time by being furnished with a method for quickly and expansively exposing his own listings to a broader market. The likelihood of the interlinking of all multiple listing systems dramatizes the present and future value of this technique. The success of multiple listing has been described in the following terms:

'Never before in the history of selling has a selling service of this magnitude been offered to the property owner A great proportion of listings filed with the organization are sold. It is estimated that the average individual real estate broker cannot expect to sell more than 1% of the listings he receives; whereas this cooperative service has consistently been instrumental in selling 30-45% of the listings filed.' (Footnotes omitted).

(n85)Footnote 51. See National Association of Realtors, Handbook on Multiple Listing Policy 77 (1975). Local boards commonly are associated with a state and national organization, the national organization being the National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR). The NAR promulgates a constitution, by-laws, and code of ethics for member boards to follow. See Comment, Exclusion of Real Estate Multiple Listing Services as Antitrust Violations, 14 Calif. W.L. Rev. 300 (1978).

(n86)Footnote 52. See Comment, Exclusion of Real Estate Multiple Listing Service as Antitrust Violations, 14 Calif. W. L. Rev. 300, 302 (1978).

(n87)Footnote 53. 266 A.2d 1 (Md. App. 1970) .

(n88)Footnote 54. 304 A.2d 493 , cert denied, 414 U.S. 979 (1973) .

(n89)Footnote 55. 16 Cal. 3d 920, 130 Cal. Rptr. 1, 549 P.2d 833 (Cal. 1976) .

(n90)Footnote 56. 629 F.2d 1351 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n91)Footnote 57. 604 F.2d 1143 (8th Cir. 1979) .

(n92)Footnote 58. See Supermarket of Homes, Inc. v. San Fernando Valley Bd. of Realtors, 786 F.2d 1400 (9th Cir. 1986) .

(n93)Footnote 59. See Park v. El Paso Bd. of Realtors, 764 F.2d 1053, 1061 (5th Cir. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1102, 106 S. Ct. 884, 88 L. Ed. 2d 919 (1986) .

(n94)Footnote 60. See, e.g., Miss. Code Ann. § 15-3-1(c).

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.03

(n95)Footnote 60.1. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 44-101(7); Cal. Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3) and (4).

(n96)Footnote 60.2. See Strategic Alliance Partners, LLC v. Dress Barn, Inc., 386 F. Supp. 2d 312, 316 (S.D. N.Y. 2005) , applying New York law ("An oral brokerage agreement is enforceable under New York law and does not violate the Statute of Frauds."); Cloverleaf Plaza, Inc. v. Cooper & Co., 565 So. 2d 1147, 1149 (Ala. 1990) . ("[I]n Alabama, a contract between a seller and real estate broker, whereby the broker is to procure a purchaser for realty, need not be in writing.").

(n97)Footnote 60.3. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 08.88.341 (real estate listings and management contracts); D.C. Code Ann. § 42-1705 (listing contract); Neb. Rev. Stat. § 36-107 (contracts for the sale of lands between the owner and any broker or agent employed to sell the same must be written) Brochu v. Santis, 939 A.2d 449, 453 (R.I. 2008) , citing R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-1-4 (6). But see Rocky Top Realty, Inc. v. Young, 2010 Tenn. App. LEXIS 37, at *10 (Jan. 13, 2010) (In Tennessee a brokerage agreement may be oral.).

(n98)Footnote 60.4. See, e.g., 24 Del. Code Regs. § 7.1.1 which states, "Listing Agreements for the rental, sale, lease or exchange of real property, whether exclusive, co-exclusive or open shall be in writing and shall be signed by the seller or owner."

(n99)Footnote 60.4.1. But see Scheerer v. Fisher, __ N.C. App. __, 688 S.E.2d 472, 475 (2010) (Oral brokerage agreement was not void. The fact that regulations required that the agreement be in writing had no effect on the agreement's validity. Instead, the oral agreement may subject the licensee to discipline by the Real Estate Commission).

(n100)Footnote 60.4.2. See Matthews v. Olympus Construction, Inc. (In re Olympus Constr., LC), 173 P.3d 192, 196, 2007 UT App 361 (2007) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 2009 UT 29, 215 P.3d 129 (2009) .

(n101)Footnote 60.4.3. See Uhar & Co. v. Jacob, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43025, at *18-*19 (D.D.C. May 3, 2010) ; C. Porter Vaughan, Inc. v. DiLorenzo, 689 S.E.2d 656, 660-61, 2010 Va. LEXIS 33 (Va. 2010) ; Murphy v. Nolte & Co., Inc., 226 Va. 76, 81, 307 S.E.2d 242, 245 (1983) .

(n102)Footnote 60.5. 493 So. 2d 361 (Miss. 1986) .

(n103)Footnote 60.6. 493 So. 2d 361, 365 (Miss. 1986) .

(n104)Footnote 60.7. See In re Estate of Grimm, 705 N.E.2d 483, 492 (Ind. App. 1999) , rehearing denied by, Grimm v. Kruse, 1999 Ind. App. LEXIS 2373 (Ind. Ct. App. Mar. 26, 1999) , transfer denied by, Grimm v. Kruse, 726 N.E.2d 302, 1999 Ind. LEXIS 770 (Ind. 1999) .

(n105)Footnote 61. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. L. § 5-701.

(n106)Footnote 62. N.Y. Gen. Oblig. L. § 5-701(a)(10). The statute does include contracts to pay compensation for "services rendered in negotiating a loan, or in negotiating the purchase, sale, exchange, renting or leasing of any real estate or interest therein, or of a business opportunity, business, its good will, inventory, fixtures or an interest therein."

The foregoing would appear to be neutralized by the requirement for licensing (N.Y. Real Prop. L. § 440 et seq.) and its only sensible reading would suggest that it emphasizes the exclusion of licensed real estate brokers from the ambit of the statute--the only ones permitted to engage in brokerage negotiating activity (N.Y. Real Prop. L. § 440 et seq.).

In L.B. Kaye Assocs. v. Jews for Jesus, 677 F. Supp. 160 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) , the court held that plaintiff broker, due to an oral brokerage agreement, was entitled to a $30,000 commission, even though the deal did not close, since the defendants willfully defaulted. In the case at bar, the plaintiff produced a ready, willing and able purchaser in the defendant. The parties reached an oral agreement that the defendants would purchase the building and pay a brokerage commission to the plaintiff. The plaintiff delivered a standard form letter confirming the oral commission agreement, stating that the commission would become due in the event of closing or willful default. The defendant never appeared at the scheduled closing, and did not offer any reason for refusal to close. The court found that the letter was a "mere memorialization of terms" that the parties agreed to in the oral agreement. The court held that the defendant willfully defaulted and refused to close title; therefore, plaintiff was entitled to receive its commission.

See also Strategic Alliance Partners, LLC v. Dress Barn, Inc., 386 F. Supp. 2d 312, 316 (S.D.N.Y. 2005), applying New York law ("An oral brokerage agreement is enforceable under New York law and does not violate the Statute of Frauds."); Hampton Realty of Bridgehampton, Inc. v. Conklin, 631 N.Y.S.2d 887 (2d Dept. 1995) appeal denied, 87 N.Y.2d 805, 640 N.Y.S.2d 878, 663 N.E.2d 920 (N.Y. 1996) (buyer's alleged oral promise to "protect" the broker's commission was not in itself sufficient to create or preserve the broker's right to a commission).

(n107)Footnote 63. In Wolf v. Wohl, 103 Misc. 2d 1044, 431 N.Y.S.2d 743, 1980 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2249 (1980), it was held that a contract to pay compensation for services rendered in negotiating the sale of shares in a cooperative apartment came within the purview of Gen. Oblig. L. § 5-701. The court reasoned that a lease is both a contract and a conveyance of an estate or interest in land and a lease and occupancy of a cooperative apartment are inextricably related to the sale of shares in a cooperative corporation. Accordingly, where the plaintiff seeking compensation was not a licensed real estate broker or a salesperson and the agreement to pay a commission was not in writing, the plaintiff could not recover a commission.

It should be noted, of course, that an unlicensed broker would also be barred under the New York licensing statute from collecting his or her commission.

(n108)Footnote 64. See Bottner v. Petchers, 9 Misc. 2d 702, 170 N.Y.S.2d 570, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3011, aff'd, 16 Misc. 2d 671, 170 N.Y.S.2d 573, 1957 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1937 (1957). See also Kassis Management, Inc. v. Milstein, 198 A.D.2d 51, 603 N.Y.S.2d 458, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10453 (1st Dept. 1993) (an oral brokerage agreement was unenforceable when the lease and executed contract of sale provided that the prospective purchaser could not exercise its option to purchase for at least six years after execution of the oral agreement).

But see Cron v. Hargro Fabrics, Inc., 91 N.Y.2d 362, 670 N.Y.S.2d 973, 694 N.E.2d 56 (1998) (employment contract) ("New York law provides that an agreement will not be recognized or enforceable if it is not in writing and (subscribed by the party to be charged therewith(when the agreement ([b]y its terms is not to be performed within one year from the making thereof((General Obligations Law § 5-701 [a] [1])). We have long interpreted this provision of the Statute of Frauds to encompass only those contracts which, by their terms, (have absolutely no possibility in fact and law of full performance within one year((citation omitted). As long as the agreement may be (fairly and reasonably interpreted(such that it may be performed within a year, the Statute of Frauds will not act as a bar however unexpected, unlikely, or even improbable that such performance will occur during that time frame ... (citations omitted)."), discussed in J. Wicks & E. Penzer, Now Brokers May Be Able to Enforce Unwritten Long-Term Agreements, N.Y.L.J., July 1, 1998, at 1.

(n109)Footnote 65. See, e.g., Schwartz v. Mayer, 198 Misc. 210, 97 N.Y.S.2d 773, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1703 (1950) (business broker).

(n110)Footnote 66. See Klein v. Smigel, 44 A.D.2d 248, 354 N.Y.S.2d 117, 1974 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5316 (1st Dept 1974), aff'd, 36 N.Y.2d 809, 370 N.Y.S.2d 897, 331 N.E.2d 679 (1975) (finder's fee in acquisition of corporation); Minichiello v. Royal Business Funds Corp., 18 N.Y.2d 521, 277 N.Y.S.2d 268, 223 N.E.2d 793 (1966), cert denied, 389 U.S. 820 88 S. Ct. 41, 19 L. Ed. 2d 72 (1967) (action in quantum meruit to recover reasonable value of services rendered in procuring an investment opportunity).

(n111)Footnote 67. See, e.g.:

Federal: In Amato & Stella Assocs., Inc. v. Florida North Investments, Ltd., 678 F. Supp. 445 (D. Del. 1988), the court dismissed a breach of contract claim where the underlying oral listing agreement was unenforceable. In the case at bar, the defendant contracted with the plaintiff, a licensed Delaware real estate broker, with regard to selling his apartment complex. According to the plaintiff, the parties reached an oral listing agreement. Plaintiff found a buyer and reduced his commission in order to consummate the deal. According to the plaintiff, the parties reached an agreement by signing three documents: a contract for deed, a management agreement and a supplementary agreement. After executing the documents, the defendant agreed to sell the apartment complex to another buyer who could give an immediate down payment. The defendant did not inform the plaintiff or the initial prospective buyer. The plaintiff brought suit to recover the commission from defendant. The court looked at the relevant Delaware statute and held that the contract for deed, a management agreement and a supplementary agreement did not amount to a contract nor a binding option since no consideration was exchanged. The court, using Delaware precedent, found that one of the purposes of the statute is to protect the public, and thus while oral listing agreements were not void, they were voidable if a proper objection is made. The court also properly refused a claim for recovery premised on quantum meruit grounds.

California: The Supreme Court of California has abandoned the rule that unlicensed finders in the sale of a business which includes the transfer of real estate cannot avail themselves of traditional equitable remedies such as estoppel to plead the statute of frauds, where the underlying commission agreement is oral and thus unenforceable under the California statute of frauds. See Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc., 39 Cal. 3d 18, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212 (1985) (en banc). In Superscope, the court noted that the rules withholding traditional equitable remedies from licensed real estate brokers who fail to secure a written commission agreement, and are thus barred by the California statute of frauds from receiving a commission, have been vigorously criticized as unjust in today's real estate market. However, the court stated as follows: "[W]hether or not there is merit in these arguments, we reserved for another day the question whether licensed brokers may invoke equitable remedies to avoid the sometimes harsh results of the statute of frauds." 216 Cal. Rptr. at 135, n.6 .

See also Beazell v. Schrader, 59 Cal. 2d 577, 30 Cal. Rptr. 534, 381 P.2d 390 (1963) .

Idaho: Johnson v. McPhee, 147 Idaho 455, 462, 210 P.3d 563, 570 (Idaho Ct. App. 2009) (part performance does not apply to statutes regulating real estate licensees), review denied, 2009 Ida. LEXIS 130 (July 8, 2009) .

Indiana: Young v. Adams, 830 N.E.2d 138, 143-145 (Ind. Ct. App. 2005) , transfer denied, 841 N.E.2d 189 (Ind. 2005) (part performance doctrine inapplicable to oral brokerage agreements which violate the statute of frauds); Gerardot v. Emenhiser, 173 Ind. App. 353, 363 N.E.2d 1072 (1977) .

Rhode Island: Heyman v. Adeack Realty Co., 102 R.I. 105, 228 A.2d 578 (1967) .

A minority view permitted a broker to recover his expenses and the value of his services on the theory that the property owner would otherwise be unjustly enriched. See Clinkinbeard v. Poole, 266 S.W.2d 796 (1954) , overruled in Louisville Trust Co. v. Monsky, 444 S.W.2d 120, 122 (Ky. 1969) .

See Annot., Real Estate Broker's Right to Recover in Quantum Meruit for Services Although Contract Is Not in Writing as Required by Statute, 4 A.L.R.2d 905 .

(n112)Footnote 68. See Russell v. Briggs, 165 N.Y. 500, 59 N.E. 303 (1901) .

(n113)Footnote 69. See N.Y. Gen. Oblig. L. § 5-701(a)(1).

See also Gurney, Becker & Bourne, Inc. v. Simon, 89 A.D.2d 795, 453 N.Y.S.2d 513, 1982 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17912 (4th Dept. 1982), dismissing a broker's claim for a commission where the broker agreed to receive the commission over a ten-year period.

(n114)Footnote 70. If the lessee, however, could have exercised the option at any time and thus made the completion of the transaction possible within one year, the statute would not bar recovery. See, e.g., Greiner-Maltz Co. v. Stevens, 66 Misc. 2d 79, 319 N.Y.S.2d 512, 1971 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1741 (1971).

Note that to sustain a commission for an option or a renewal there would be need for an agreement to pay such a commission. It does not flow automatically from the initial transaction. See Allwin Realty Co. v. Barth, 161 App. Div. 568, 1914 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5437, 146 N.Y.S. 960 (1st Dept. 1914); Mullen & Woods, Inc. v. 615 W. 57th St., Inc., 146 Misc. 599, 1933 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1497, 262 N.Y.S. 467 (1933). Cf. Zaniewski v. Mancinone 37 Conn. Supp. 698, 701, 435 A.2d 50, 51-52 (1981), where broker's agreement called for the payment of a commission on renewals. See generally Broker's Commission, Renewal of Lease, 79 A.L.R.2d 1063 (1961).

Texas:

See McDade & Co. v. Friendswood Dev. Co., 911 S.W.2d 541 (Tex. App. Beaumont 1995) affirmed in part and reversed in part, 926 S.W.2d 280 (Tex. 1996), rehearing of cause overruled, (Aug. 16, 1996) (requirement set forth in the Texas Real Estate License Act, that an action for the recovery of a commission may not be brought unless the promise or agreement upon which the action is based is in writing, barred the broker's suit, notwithstanding that the broker pled the suit as an action for breach of an agency agreement and not as an action for recovery of a commission).

(n115)Footnote 71. See, e.g., Mosberg v. Judson Enterprises, Inc., 139 N.Y.S.2d 780, 1955 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3045 (1955). Cf. Raymond Babtkis Assocs., Inc. v. Tarazi Realty Corp., 34 A.D.2d 754, 310 N.Y.S.2d 343, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4940 (1st Dept 1970).

(n116)Footnote 72. The following jurisdictions have provisions in their statutes of frauds requiring a broker's employment contract to be in writing and signed by the party to be charged:

Alaska: Ala. Stat. § 09.25.010[8].

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 44-101[7].

California: Cal. Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4).

Hawaii: Hawaii Rev. Stat. § 656-1[6].

Idaho: Idaho Code § 9-508.

Indiana: Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-1-10.

See also Otto v. Pelis, 640 N.E.2d 712 (Ind. App. 1994) (real estate salesperson was not barred by statute of frauds from bringing action against principal broker for nonpayment of commission on basis of oral contract; pertinent section of the statute of frauds applied only to contracts with owners of the real property).

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. § 371.010[8].

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 566.132[e].

Montana: Mont. Rev. Code Ann. § 28-2-903[e].

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. § 36-107.

See also Weiner v. Hazer, 230 Neb. 53, 430 N.W.2d 269 (Neb. 1988), in which the Supreme Court of Nebraska held that an oral contract for a commission was unenforceable as a result of the failure to satisfy the Nebraska statute of frauds. In Weiner, the seller offered certain real estate for sale. The broker presented to the seller a purchaser for the property, at which time the seller assured the broker that the usual six percent broker's commission would be paid when the transaction closed. The sale, however, never occurred. Thereafter, the broker produced another buyer for the real estate. This purchaser was ready, willing and able to purchase the property. The seller again assured the broker that he would receive his six percent commission at the time of closing. However, this commission agreement was not put in writing, and when the seller failed to pay the broker his commission, the broker brought an action to recover it. Relying on Neb. Rev. Stat. § 36-107, the Nebraska statute of frauds, the court dismissed the broker's suit for failure to state a cause of action. According to the Nebraska statute of frauds, every contract for a brokerage commission for the sale of land must be in writing, must be signed by both land owner and broker, must describe the land to be sold, and must set forth the compensation to be paid to the broker in the event of a sale by the broker. In this case, the amount of compensation the broker was to receive (i.e., six percent) was never put in writing as required by the statute. A mere statement by the seller that he will pay a commission, without specifying the amount of the commission or means to determine the commission, does not satisfy the statute of frauds. In the absence of a provision for compensation, the purposes of the statute would be ignored if oral testimony were allowed to establish any missing material term. In addition, the doctrine of equitable estoppel is not applicable. The broker was a licensed real estate broker and therefore charged with knowledge of Section 36-107 and its writing requirement for a specified real estate commission. Having this knowledge, broker could not have, in good faith, relied on an oral contract for his brokerage commission. Finally, although equitable enforcement of a contract may be available when a contract has been fully performed by one party and nonfulfillment of the contract would amount to a "fraud" on the performing party, here the broker only alleged full performance, which by itself is insufficient for such equitable relief.

In Marathon Realty Corp. v. Gavin, 224 Neb. 458, 398 N.W.2d 689 (1987), the Supreme Court of Nebraska held that every contract between an owner of real property and any broker or agent employed to sell land in Nebraska is void unless the contract is in writing and subscribed by both the owner and the broker or agent. The court added that the contract must also describe the land to be sold and set forth the compensation to be allowed by the owner in case of sale by the broker or agent, citing Neb. Rev. Stat. § 36-107.

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. § 25:1-16.

See also A.S. Goldstein Co. v. Bloomfield Plaza Assocs., 272 N.J. Super. 59, 639 A.2d 347 (App. Div. 1994) cert. denied, 137 N.J. 309, 645 A.2d 138 (N.J. 1994) (commission on a lease is not a commission on a sale or exchange of real estate, and therefore is not governed by the statute of frauds).

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 70-1-43.

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 41.580(1)(g).

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.03

Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-1-4[6].

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 25-5-4(1)(e).

See also Machan Hampshire Properties, Inc. v. Western Real Estate & Dev. Co., 779 P.2d 230 (Utah Ct. App. 1989). The court held that a broker was not entitled to a commission where written correspondence between the broker and the sellers regarding the commission did not specify the elements of the contract, and thus did not satisfy the statute of frauds. In this case, the sellers and the broker exchanged correspondence regarding a parcel of land on which Omega Light Industrial Park was located. The broker was advised by the sellers that the property was for sale and that an offer had been accepted, but if the broker wished to show the property to prospective purchasers, then their offers would be back-up offers. The broker orally advised the sellers that it would keep a record of those people to whom it showed the property, and would forward to the sellers, by letter, the names of these people. The sellers orally agreed to this system. In the correspondence that followed, the broker periodically advised the sellers of the names of persons to whom the property was shown. One of these was a company by the name of Birtcher Investments. When the first offer to purchase the property fell through, the sellers notified the broker that Birtcher had been contacted prior to receipt of the broker's letter. Thereafter, the sellers entered into an agreement with Birtcher for the sale of the property. The broker then brought suit for breach of contract against the sellers, alleging that the written correspondence between the parties set forth an agreement. The trial court granted the sellers' motion for summary judgment, holding that the broker's claim was barred by the statute of frauds. In affirming, the court of appeals held that since the writings did not mention that a contract had been entered into by the parties whereby a commission would be paid by the sellers to the broker if the property were sold to Birtcher, the writing did not specify the elements of the contract and thus did not satisfy the statute of frauds. Although the letters could be read together as one memorandum, the court held that evidence of an agreement with respect to Birtcher was lacking, and that in fact, sellers expressly rejected the possibility of the existence of an agreement with respect to Birtcher when it advised the broker that Birtcher had been previously contacted.

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. § 11-2(7).

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 19.36.010[5].

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 240.10.

Writing requirements in some states may be found, not in the jurisdiction's statute of frauds, but in the licensing statutes or in administrative rules and regulations governing real estate brokers and salespersons. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 20-325a (licensing statute, requiring a written contract in order to recover a commission).

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. § 82.18 (licensing statute, requiring a written listing before action for a commission may be commenced).

See also Poser v. Abel, 510 N.W.2d 224 (Minn. App. 1994) review denied, 1994 Minn. LEXIS 139 (Minn. Feb. 24, 1994) (a brokerage agreement that has not been signed by the party seeking enforcement may be enforceable if the party has agreed to, and has acted in conformity with, the contract).

Nevada: Nev. Rev. Stat. § 645.320 (1), requiring exclusive listing agreements to be in writing.

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. § 40-57-137(C) and (H), requiring all listing agreements to be in writing.

But see Marcotte Realty and Auction, Inc. v. Schumacher, 225 Kan. 193, 589 P.2d 570 (1979), holding that a regulation of the Kansas Real Estate Commission that required all listing agreements to be in writing was an attempt by the Commission to legislate that which was clearly beyond its authority to regulate and the regulation was void. The court observed that the Kansas statute of frauds (Kan. Stat. Ann. § 33-106) does not bar collection of a Realtor's commission under an oral agreement and thus, if a broker obtained a purchaser pursuant to an oral listing agreement, the broker would be entitled to the commission agreed upon.

(n117)Footnote 73. Cal. Civ. Code § 1624(a)(4).

In Phillippe v. Shapell Indus., Inc., 43 Cal. 3d 1247, 241 Cal. Rptr. 22, 743 P.2d 1279 (Cal. 1987) cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1011, 108 S. Ct. 1742, 100 L. Ed. 2d 205 (1988), rehearing denied, 487 U.S. 1243, 108 S. Ct. 2919, 101 L. Ed. 2d 950 (1988), the Supreme Court of California held that a licensed real estate broker could not, absent a showing of actual fraud, assert equitable estoppel against a statute of frauds defense in an action to recover a brokerage commission. In the instant case, there was no writing between the real estate broker and purchaser concerning a commission agreement sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds (Cal. Civ. Code § 1624(d)). The only writing signed by the purchaser referred to different property. Otherwise, found the court, there was a total lack of meaningful terms and conditions of a commission agreement. The court found that the fact that the real estate broker's principal did not pay for the broker's services under an oral contract did not constitute unjust enrichment sufficient to support equitably estopping the principal from asserting the statute of frauds defense.

(n118)Footnote 74. See Dura v. Walker, Hart & Co., 27 N.Y.2d 346, 318 N.Y.S.2d 289, 267 N.E.2d 83 (1971).

(n119)Footnote 75. See, e.g.:

California: Wilson v. Anderson, 208 Cal. App. 2d 62, 25 Cal. Rptr. 105 (1962).

Florida: In Futch v. Head, 511 So. 2d 314 (Fla. DCA 1987) review denied, 518 So. 2d 1275 (Fla. 1987), the court held that an oral commission agreement between two brokers was enforceable and not governed by the statute of frauds because it did not involve the transfer of land from a party thereto and could be performed within one year. Plaintiff-cobroker entered into an oral agreement to assist the defendant-broker in the sale of property for what was determined to be a ten percent share of the broker's twenty percent interest in the property in issue. (The broker had received a twenty percent interest in the sold property as compensation for her efforts in consummating the sale). The court found the cobrokers to have been joint venturers and that the cobroker's performance of his promise under the agreement to introduce the broker to the purchasers entitled him to his ten percent share.

For decisions from other jurisdictions holding the state's statute of frauds inapplicable to agreements to share commissions see:

Rhode Island: Weiss v. G. L. & H. J. Gross Inc., 119 R.I. 600, 382 A.2d 170 (R.I. 1978) (broker and salesperson employee).

Utah: Fowler v. Taylor, 554 P.2d 205 (Utah 1976).

See also Eggleston v. Johnson, 524 S.E.2d 761, 762-763 (Ga. App. 1999) (court enforced an oral contract providing for an equal split of a commission between agents); Jones v. Lee, 126 N.M. 467, 971 P.2d 858, 867, 1999 NMCA 8 (N.M. App. 1998) (there is no requirement that agreements between brokers to share commissions be in writing).

(n120)Footnote 76. See, e.g., Franklin v. Hansen, 59 Cal. 2d 570, 30 Cal. Rptr. 530, 381 P.2d 386 (1963) . See also In re Baldwin's Estate, 34 Cal. App. 3d 596, 110 Cal. Rptr. 189 (1973) .

Compare the strict rule of construction adopted by the Supreme Court of Rhode Island in Kates Corp. v. Kirshenbaum, 122 R.I. 486, 409 A.2d 540 (1979) , which held that a real estate vendor's memorandum to a real estate broker, which failed either to state or to adapt from another writing the commission rate to be paid the broker, was inadequate to satisfy the statute of frauds.

(n121)Footnote 77. See Beazell v. Schrader, 59 Cal. 2d 577, 30 Cal. Rptr. 534, 381 P.2d 390 (1963) .

(n122)Footnote 78. See, e.g., Barcelon v. Cortese, 263 Cal. App. 2d 517, 69 Cal. Rptr. 657 (1968) .

The actual brokerage agreement need not always identify the broker if extrinsic evidence clarifies the broker's identity. See Poser v. Abel, 510 N.W.2d 224 (Minn. App. 1994) review denied, 1994 Minn. LEXIS 139 (Minn. Feb. 24, 1994) .

(n123)Footnote 79. See Babcock v. Houston, 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454 (1973) .

(n124)Footnote 80. See, e.g., Barcelon v. Cortese, 263 Cal. App. 2d 517, 69 Cal. Rptr. 657 (1968) .

(n125)Footnote 81. See Woodbridge Realty v. Plymouth Dev. Corp., 130 Cal. App. 2d 270, 278 P.2d 713 (1955) .

(n126)Footnote 82. Babcock v. Houston, 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 864, 109 Cal. Rptr. 454, 457-58 (1973) .

See:

Alaska: In Ranier Fund, Inc. v. Blomfield Real Estate, 717 P.2d 850 (Alaska 1986) , the court held that the Alaska statute of frauds was satisfied by a real estate brokerage commission agreement consisting of a letter from the lessor regarding the lessor's policy on brokerage commissions and a brokerage agreement to which the letter referred. The documents, found the court, satisfied the statute of frauds requirement in its description of the space to be leased and in its statement of the brokerage commission to be paid, which was delineated in terms of an amount payable per square foot to net rentable area. The letter and agreement, noted the court, both indicated that space would be leased in a new fourteen-story building even though they did not contain an exact description of what or how much space in the building would be leased.

California: Babcock v. Houston, 33 Cal. App. 3d 858, 109 Cal. Rptr. at 457-458 (1973) , holding that the description of property in a written exclusive real estate broker's contract as "Pacific Island Village No. III" was sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds where it appeared that all the parties to the written contract knew the exact location and boundaries of the tract. See also Kilroy v. Douglas Furniture of Calif., Inc., 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 752 (Cal. App. 1993) (extrinsic evidence established a broker's entitlement to a commission for any modifications or extensions of the lease for up to 30 years).

Connecticut: In Sticklor v. Woodland House Condominium, Inc., 9 Conn. App. 293, 518 A.2d 949 (1986) cert. denied, 202 Conn. 807, 520 A.2d 1288 (1987) , it was held that a broker could maintain an action for a commission despite the broker's failure to identify specific units of his principal's condominium complex to be sold and the failure to set forth the sales price for those units. The defendant-owner of the condominium complex had argued that under Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325a(b), the above information had to be included in the brokerage agreement for the broker to be entitled to compensation. Under the statute a brokerage agreement must "contain the conditions of such contract or authorization." The appellate court found for the broker, stating that the provision in Section 20-325a(b) requiring that the written listing agreement contain "the conditions of such contract or authorization" referred to "the conditions of the listing contract and not to those of the sales contract. For the listing contract it suffices to identify the property being offered for sale and the price at which it is to be listed." 518 A.2d at 951. Therefore, it was not necessary that the contract specify the particular location and price of the units in order to comply with Section 20-325a(b)(4).

Minnesota: Poser v. Abel, 510 N.W.2d 224 (Minn. App. 1994) review denied, 1994 Minn. LEXIS 139 (Feb. 24, 1994) (where the brokerage agreement did not mention the party who was to receive the commission, a counter-offer that identified the specific broker entitled to the commission was read together with the brokerage agreement to provide all the essential terms of the agreement).

In New York, business finders' contracts are explicitly required to be in writing where the negotiation concerns a business opportunity or the purchase of real estate. See also Link-Hellmuth, Inc. v. Carey, 101 Ohio App. 3d 604, 656 N.E.2d 358 (Ohio App. 2d Dist. 1995) (in which the court, noting that Ohio has no such requirement, commented favorably upon the New York approach).

See generally: Sufficiency of a Property Description in a Real Estate Broker's Listing Agreement, 11 Williamette L.J. 308 (1975).

(n127)Footnote 83. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Alaska Rev. Stat. § 09.25.010[8].

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 41.580(1)(g).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann. § 240.10.

(n128)Footnote 84.

Alaska: Alaska Rev. Stat. § 09.25.010[8].

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 41.580(1)(g).

While it can be seen that there are many jurisdictions that will allow a broker recovery under an oral agreement, the better practice for the broker would be to reduce the agreement to writing in all cases. Reference is here made to the suggestions for minimum requirements of a written agreement set out above in the introductory paragraph of § 2.03[2].

(n129)Footnote 84.1. N.J. Stat. Ann. § 25:1-16(d).

(n130)Footnote 84.2. See Schettino v. Roizman Dev., Inc., 310 N.J. Super. 159, 708 A.2d 446, 449 (N.J. Super. 1998) aff'd, 158 N.J. 476, 730 A.2d 797 (1999).

(n131)Footnote 84.3. See Neb. Stat. § 76-2422.

(n132)Footnote 84.4. See McCully, Inc. v. Baccaro Ranch, 279 Neb. 443, 448, 778 N.W.2d 115, 119 (2010) .

(n133)Footnote 84.5. See McCully, Inc. v. Baccaro Ranch, 279 Neb. 443, 448, 778 N.W.2d 115, 119-20 (2010) .

(n134)Footnote 85. Martin v. Vincent, 181 Mont. 247, 593 P.2d 45 (Mont. 1979) .

(n135)Footnote 86. See Carroll v. Action Enters., Inc., 206 Neb. 204, 292 N.W.2d 34 (1980) .

See generally Annot., Power of Real Estate Broker to Execute Contract of Sale in Behalf of Principal, 43 A.L.R.2d 1014 .

(n136)Footnote 87. Forbis v. Honeycutt, 301 N.C. 699, 273 S.E.2d 240 (N.C. 1980) .

Authority in Writing: In New York, by statute, an agreement executed by an agent which affects real property is void unless the agent's authority is in writing. See N.Y. Gen. Oblig. L. § 5-701(a)(1); Lane-- The Real Estate Dept. Store, Inc. v. Lawlett Corp., 28 N.Y.2d 36, 319 N.Y.S.2d 836, 268 N.E.2d 635 (1971) remitter denied, 29 N.Y.2d 552 (1971) (section applies only where the agreement sought to be enforced is the main agreement that is within the statute of frauds and the party sought to be charged is the agent's principal; it does not apply to the right of a broker to his commission).

(n137)Footnote 88. See Gresser v. Hotzler, 604 N.W.2d 379, 385 (Minn. App. 2000) .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the law firm of Jacobus, Boltz, Melamed & Witherspoon, Houston, Texas. Sections 2.06 and 2.07 were written by Sandra Bullington, who has contributed additional updates throughout the chapter.

19 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 2 Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry *

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.04

§ 2.04 Study of Multiple Listing Service (MLS) Programsn*

[1] In General

Multiple Listing Services are organizations created by, and composed of, real estate brokers who do business in local geographic areas. n1 These organizations function to make information concerning the contracts to sell property ("listings") of each participating MLS broker known to all other MLS brokers. Multiples are structured as formal organizations with requirements for membership and participation.

The basic function of the real estate brokerage industry is to match buyers and sellers. n1.1 In relatively small residential real estate markets, the matching process can be accomplished by an individual broker. In such markets, the number of brokers and the number of houses for sale are sufficiently limited that brokers are able to obtain fairly complete information without the aid of a formal, centralized, market information-sharing mechanism. In larger markets, however, it becomes more difficult for individual brokers to gather complete information about the housing market. MLSs accomplish this necessary market information exchange. With ninety-two percent of surveyed sellers who used brokers indicating that their properties were listed on the MLS, the importance of these facilities as the primary marketing mechanism in residential real estate is apparent.

As facilities which link brokers in a common undertaking, the MLSs significantly affect the performance of the residential brokerage industry. In order to analyze the purposes and effects of these facilities and their various rules and regulations, this section examines the history of the MLS. Next, the section examines the structure and operation of MLSs; their membership and listing requirements; requirements relating to commission rates, split schedules, and the dissemination of competitive information; and requirements governing the selling of MLS listings.

[2] History of the MLS

In 1924, the Chairman of the MLS Committee for the California Real Estate Association characterized the MLS as follows:

The multiple listing service, the new system of conducting the real estate business, is a radical departure from the old system, or no system, as has been and still is practiced by those who have not adopted it. In order to understand this system, we must examine some of the things that called it forth.

Some of the things that were making a joke out of the business, instead of raising it to the high plane where it rightfully belongs. Competition was increasing to the extent that it was very difficult to get a real listing on any property. An exclusive listing was almost a thing of the past, and a signed listing was getting to be a scarcity.

While brokers had been cooperating on an informal basis for some time, the MLS had a number of advantages, including efficiency and the elimination of much competition. Where successfully organized, it proved to be very profitable to both the member and the local Board of Realtors.

The exchange by brokers of housing information has taken place for many years. Early real estate "exchanges," later to become known as "Boards," accomplished this function by providing a place where the local brokers could meet, usually once a week, and announce to other brokers what listings they were offering for sale.

Shortly after the turn of the century this exchange function was reduced to a system of distributing the written listing information from a central office. The term "Multiple Listing" was first used to describe this new, more formal system in 1907.

MLSs developed very rapidly in the 1920's. However, while many multiples were formed during this time, they were not all successful. The most successful multiples were associated with the well-organized Boards.

After a lull of activity during the 1930's, MLSs again began to increase in importance during the post-World War II period. As late as 1950, however, MLSs represented significant sales sources only in some large urban areas. In 1950, a National Association survey indicated that roughly fifty percent of brokerage offices still accepted both exclusive and open listings. Open listings, generally not accepted by MLSs, were therefore still quite common.

In comparing the real estate office of 1953 with that of 1977, Professor Fred Case of UCLA concludes that perhaps the most important change relates to MLS membership. By 1977 an average of ninety-three percent of firms were members.

A 1973 study of Dr. R. Erler found that virtually all Boards of Realtors(R) and all board members in urban areas had access to MLSs. Furthermore, the firms that did not participate in the MLSs were usually not the large firms, but were smaller, single-office firms. While the study did not focus on why these firms did not belong, some appeared to be concentrating on other than residential sales. Non-member firms were unable to demonstrate that they were more successful or profitable because of their non-member status. Those large non-MLS brokers examined had noticeably fewer sales per salesperson than did the large MLS-member brokers.

By the late 1960s and early 1970s, MLSs had been named in a number of private antitrust actions and Justice Department investigations. Justice Department investigations culminated in fifteen consent orders banning price fixing and other alleged anti-competitive activities. In response to these legal problems, the National Association of Realtors(R) developed and enforced a list of policy points. The NAR's November 15, 1971 statement, setting out and mandating these policies on the Realtor(R) MLSs, is referred to in the industry as the "Fourteen Points." In explaining to the association members why the Fourteen Points had become necessary, the chairman of the national association's MLS Policy Committee summarized the importance and growth of MLSs as follows: "Marketing experts tell us that the greatest problem in our economic system is the complication in the buyer search. MLS has served this problem well" While sharing of listings had been around since the 1880's or 1890's in some form, "the impact has been dramatically felt in the residential field for the last twenty-five years. MLS has in most areas of the country become a way of life both for the home owner and the broker."

[3] The Original Reasons for and Effects of Multiple Listing

[a] Open Listing Competition

[i] In General. The concept of multiple listing was based upon the need to devise an efficient method for marketing exclusive listings. With an exclusive listing only one broker had direct rights and incentives to sell the house. By the 1920's, however, sellers had become aware of the advantages of obtaining exposure through many brokers. For this reason exclusive listings had become nearly impossible for the brokers to obtain. The open listing was the general rule. From the broker's point of view, open listings were associated with a number of problems. These problems related to competition among listing brokers, competition with sellers, and duplication of effort by brokers.

[ii] Listing Broker Competition. Competition among brokers due to the open listings was associated with two somewhat distinct phenomena.

First, commission cutting by brokers had become a common method of inducing sellers to list with and sell through such brokers. Multiple listing and the exclusive listing contract "solved" this problem wherever they were applied as a remedy and faithfully practiced.

Second, competition among brokers was associated with the inability to cooperate in marketing listings. Brokers with open listings were reportedly afraid to tell other brokers about properties for fear that these other brokers would go straight to the sellers. Furthermore, even if brokers did want to cooperate, there were frequent disagreements over how a broker originally received information relating to a house for sale and over how any resulting commission should be divided--broker A might allege that broker B got the information from him or her, while broker B might insist that the information came straight from the seller. Finally, with open listings as opposed to exclusives, no particular broker was absolutely assured of a commission upon sale. Any one of several competing brokers might spend time, effort, or funds to advertise and promote the sale of a property, claim to be the sole procuring cause of a sale, and try to claim the entire commission. But the seller might claim that he or she had found the buyer on their own. The general use of open listings was, therefore, believed to make both cooperation and predictable success in obtaining a commission very difficult.

The MLSs and exclusive listing agreements, when used together, reduced the problems presented by unfettered competition. With an exclusive listing, only one broker could claim the commission. Other brokers could not work directly with the seller. Cooperation of other brokers with the exclusive listing broker (someone with whom they could anticipate dealing cooperatively on many different future sales and therefore with whom they could establish an ongoing professional relationship) was the basis of the new marketing system.

[iii] Seller Competition. Open listings were also associated with competition with the seller. Substantial numbers of sellers at that time were making direct sales to buyers even after listing their homes with a broker who spent time and effort to sell it. The MLSs and the exclusive-right listing agreement helped to stop this. The MLSs would accept only exclusive-right listings, and the exclusive-right listings most brokers came to insist upon in most transactions guaranteed the broker a commission even if the seller procured the buyer.

[iv] Duplication of Effort. Open listings sometimes might be given to as many as twenty brokers. Many of these brokers might spend time trying to sell the property only to find that they could not deliver the property to a prospective buyer. Either the property had been sold, withdrawn from the market, or the price had gone up. Listings were considered the broker's inventory, the stock on his shelves. Open listings, however, were analogized to perishable goods. A broker had no certainty that they would remain viable, saleable listings.

This waste of time and the inability to deliver properties even if purchasers were found are problems which brokers still associate with open listings. The exclusive contracts required by most MLSs eliminated these perceived problems by binding the seller to a specific listing period and a specific price. Further, with an exclusive, the listing broker receives some protection from other brokers and from the seller. Even if another, cooperating broker or the owner sells the listing, the initial listing broker will receive a substantial portion of the commission.

[b] Making a Market

While the individual brokers may have been primarily concerned with the competitive problems associated with open listings, sellers appear to have preferred open listings. Sellers at the time appeared to be well aware of the advantages of maximum exposure of their properties. With no MLS, open listings allowed sellers to substantially increase exposure on their properties. However, the market was so fragmented that, even with open listings, both sellers and buyers faced the inconvenience of trying to deal with many brokers and the uncertainty of not knowing whether they were reaching the entire market. One of the primary selling points of the MLS system for buyers and sellers was the convenience of being able to reach the "entire" market by dealing with only one broker.

The market-making function was especially important for the smaller broker. In fact, some commentators at the time felt that it was a saving factor for such a broker. Some felt the small broker could not continue to survive without the MLS. In a fragmented market, large brokerage offices are presumed to have an advantage because of their size. With each firm being, in effect, an independent market, those with the largest inventory have the best chance of having an appropriate property for a particular buyer.

If the smaller, or less efficient broker was at a disadvantage relative to the large broker under the open listing system, the lack of a system for sharing listings also made it difficult to persuade the public to grant exclusive contracts. Sellers would never give exclusives to a firm without some assurance of adequate exposure. The small broker, with a small sales force, would have little hope of persuading sellers that properties would get adequate exposure without the MLS, and very few individual firms in very few markets were likely to be large enough to overcome the perceived advantage of giving an open listing to each of many firms. With the MLS, however, not only could the small broker assure the seller of adequate exposure, but the small broker could claim that he was able to give the same exposure as the larger offices. The small broker could assure the seller that, in theory at least, the entire system was working for the seller, and the scale efficiencies of larger firms could, at the same time, largely be "merged" out of existence. Where the MLSs were successful, not only did they make possible the obtaining of exclusive listings by small firms, but obtaining them became relatively easy.

The market-making effect of the MLSs probably exceeded even the founders' expectations. Real estate listed on MLSs became much easier to sell. Brokers using the MLS found that fewer property owners tried to sell on their own and brokers, therefore, were listing many more properties. When the public learned of the advantages of the MLS, they often insisted upon it. One investigation of the MLS system of selling concluded that use of the MLS doubled the probability of a property selling, and the perceived value of the MLSs often was reflected in a practice of charging a one percent higher commission rate when the MLS was used.

[c] Information on Housing Prices

The MLS, by accumulating in one place information relating to all of the houses for sale in an area, created an excellent centralized source of information regarding housing values. Many brokers have expressed the opinion that MLSs might be worthwhile for this information alone.

The superiority of the housing information provided by the MLSs gave brokers another tool by which they could persuade sellers not to try selling on their own but instead to list their properties with brokers. As one broker wrote in 1925, "if we are to meet direct dealing successfully, it is desirable to pool all of our knowledge so that every Realtor(R) may know infinitely more about value and trends than the readers of the daily papers."

[d] Commission Rates

An explicit purpose of the MLSs in the 1920's was to ease the price competition among brokers that was associated with open listings. As we have noted, the MLS is a means of lessening the competitive advantages of larger firms. The MLS also appeared to be a most successful tool for stabilizing commission rates. The Chairman of the California Association's Multiple Listing Committee, in reviewing the progress of multiples in California in 1924, for example, discovered that the San Francisco board, which felt that multiple listing was a panacea, nonetheless was not taking full advantage of its MLS:

I was ... surprised to find that they were working on an inadequate commission for services rendered. The commission for sales on all multiple listing contracts should be five percent, no more and no less The service rendered through the multiple listing is well worth that fee. It should be one of the main objects of the multiple listing service to establish this rate of commission every place where it is in operation, and it is the only agency that we have at present that will be able to do it.

While the multiples may have had many advantages, no doubt the most important inducement for brokers to join the multiple was that they were exceptionally profitable.

[e] Advantages to the Board

Establishing MLSs provided a number of advantages to the boards of realtors. First, the MLS fees, especially in the large cities, generated revenues in excess of cost. This provided a new source of financing for the boards. More importantly, the MLSs, as services provided by the boards, made the boards much more valuable to brokers. As one broker stated in 1926, the MLS "changes the board from a social organization to a business organization as well, operating for the financial betterment of its members." Before the MLSs, many boards had problems recruiting members. Some multiple listing officials and industry commentators have expressed the opinion that without the MLSs, the brokers' associations would not exist. With control of the MLSs, the boards gained more control over practices in the real estate business.

[f] Cooperation and Ethics

Increased cooperation among board members was widely considered to be one of the primary benefits of multiple listing. The multiple listing system was felt to shift the basis of the business from competition to cooperation. The system created a "bond of mutual interest," which in turn facilitated cooperation.

Many brokers at the time felt that the MLS, with its binding together of the membership, did more than anything to improve ethics. In the case of Realtors, ethics are, in part, rules aimed at facilitating cooperation.

[4] Analysis of MLS History

The development and growth of the MLSs appear to have had a substantial effect on the residential real estate brokerage industry. While making the market for houses more efficient in terms of the availability of housing information, the MLSs also appear to be associated with substantially reduced competition in several respects. The reduction of the competition associated with open listings, including price competition, was one of the primary purposes and effects of the MLSs, according to their Realtor-founders.

The founders clearly understood that the MLS changed the basic character of the industry. The MLSs made each local brokerage industry a single, cooperative marketing system. Furthermore, control of the MLS system substantially increased the ability of the associations to regulate brokerage practices.

While the practices and restrictions imposed by the MLSs today may be different from those in the 1920's, the history of the MLSs, as stated by the Realtors(R) who early founded them, gives valuable insight into the power and importance of the MLS in today's residential brokerage industry. The realtors' journals indicate that the early MLSs had the power to raise and maintain commission rates. Furthermore, the MLSs were considered by at least some of their founders to be the only tool available to brokers which could accomplish this.

[5] Membership Requirements of MLSs

[a] In General

All MLSs have membership requirements--usually contained in by-laws, rules, or regulations--which can have the purpose or effect of eliminating dishonest brokers, setting minimum professional standards, or standardizing contract terms and other broker behavior.

MLSs are private associations which have the right to discipline members for violations of standards of professional conduct as set out by the constitution, bylaws, rules and regulations of the MLS. n1.2 However, an MLS cannot behave in an arbitrary manner in disciplining its members. n1.3

This section discusses those requirements that are not apparently necessary to the operation of the MLS and that have either an apparent anti-competitive effect, or have been alleged by alternative brokers or others to have been used from time to time in an anti-competitive manner.

[b] Board of Realtors(R) Membership

[i] Description of Condition. For board-affiliated MLSs, board membership is generally a requirement for participation in the MLS. For most MLSs the membership requirements for the MLS are the same as the membership requirements for the Board of Realtors. n2

The NAR Membership Policy and Procedures Manual states that the National Association of Realtors(R) is unequivocally committed to the principle that board membership is a reasonable condition of participation in the Board's Multiple Listing Service. Providing membership in the Board is readily available to all eligible and qualified individuals on reasonable and nondiscriminatory terms and conditions.

The NAR has an eight-point set of membership criteria that establishes the most rigorous qualifications a board of realtors may require of an applicant for active Realtor(R) membership. These membership criteria, adopted in 1974, were developed in an effort to establish reasonable and non-discriminatory written requirements for membership. The basic requirements are as follows:

- (1) A valid real estate license (and actively engaged in the real estate business and its recognized branches) ...
- (2) A place of business within board jurisdiction ...
- (3) A place of business in compliance with local zoning regulations ...
- (4) A favorable business reputation in the community ...
- (5) A sound credit rating ...
- (6) Completed the board indoctrination course ...
- (7) Signified his intention to abide by the National Association of Realtors' Code of Ethics ...
- (8) Signified his intention to abide by the constitution, bylaws, policy, and rules and regulations of the local board, the state association, and the National Association of Realtors.

While United States v. Realty Multi-List, Inc. n3 discussed supra, implicitly sanctioned NAR's eight-point membership criteria, the eight-point criteria was specifically upheld by the Iowa Supreme Court in Miller v. Cedar Rapids Board of

Realtors. n4

The NAR Membership Policy and Procedures Manual provides definitions of the terms "actively engaged," "favorable business reputation," and "sound credit rating." It also recommends that each board seek a court declaratory judgment affirming its decision whenever the board declines to accept an applicant on the basis of these qualifications.

Often the Board membership requirements which may restrict use of the MLSs are imposed also by non-Realtor(R) MLSs. They are discussed as separate MLS requirements below. Certain of the code of ethics provisions and rules and regulations of the realtors that affect MLSs are also discussed separately below as listing and selling requirements of the MLSs.

While Realtor(R) MLSs generally require board membership, there are exceptions. In California, the courts have opened Realtor(R) MLSs to non-Realtor(R) licensees. n4.1 California, however is the only jurisdiction in which participation by non-Realtors(R) in Realtor(R) multiples is widespread.

[iii] Analysis of Condition. Whether Realtor(R) membership is a reasonable condition to MLS access has received considerable attention in the courts and in the legal literature. It is clear that whether or not Realtor(R) membership per se is a reasonable requirement does not answer the question of what specific requirements aid--as opposed to suppress--competition. As pointed out earlier, Realtor(R) membership itself consists of many requirements, some of which are also common to non-Realtor(R) MLSs. These are analyzed separately below.

In addition to MLS-related membership conditions, there are elements of board membership which have no apparent relation to the MLS. For example, there are board dues which are allocated to functions other than the operation of the MLS. Other requirements, such as a sound credit rating and reputation, and a required indoctrination course, appear not to relate directly to the efficient operation of an MLS, but to set quality and ethical standards in addition to those already established by the state real estate licensing laws.

If interdependence among competitors accounts for any performance problems that may be observed, then membership requirements which increase that interdependence may deserve scrutiny. The requirements imposed by the Realtors(R) which are in need of close scrutiny are those which may lessen head-to-head competition and create a mechanism for possible coercion against deviations in competitive behavior by specific brokers. A requirement of arbitration before a panel of competitors arguably might fit this description.

[c] Real Estate License

[i] Description of Condition. Both the Realtors(R) and all non-Realtor(R) MLSs require a valid real estate license in order to be a participating broker in the MLS. This excludes direct access to the multiple by buyers and sellers.

[ii] Analysis of Condition. Some industry critics believe that consumer access to an MLS is a key to a price-competitive brokerage industry. That is, if a real estate license were not required for access to the MLS, consumers could directly list their properties and directly search for homes. Industry spokespersons, however, claim this would "destroy" an MLS. With no MLSs, which do allow consumer access, it is difficult to assess the validity of either side of this issue. Restrictions on direct consumer access do, however, appear to have at least some justification.

Being licensed as a real estate agent may help in the proper use of the MLS. In the training needed to obtain a license, brokers no doubt learn the industry terminology and other information which perhaps relates to MLS use. However, the difficulty and expense of requiring the proper filling out of an MLS property data form to list a home on the MLS would appear to be nominal.

From the MLSs' and cooperating brokers' points of view, there are more serious problems, such as whether and under what circumstances a cooperating broker could be sure that he or she had an enforceable contract to sell a house at a specific price; who would have authority to enforce any contract offer made by a seller--the MLS or a broker; whether a private seller could be required to agree to some form of binding arbitration in the event of disputes prior to using the MLS; how fines and penalties for misuse of the MLS would be set and enforced; how fees for MLS service would be determined; and so forth.

Such issues as these are, in a sense, mechanical ones. A willing broker could, in theory, offer to sell assistance to an inexperienced seller in meeting formal requirements, and the contractual and financial arrangements needed to protect the interests of other users of an MLS do not seem beyond the ordinary range of human ingenuity to devise. Addressing such issues, however, means being prepared to live with both complexity and the risk of new and more varied forms of competition.

If the real estate brokerage industry were commonly competitive, we would expect to discover that some listing brokers had already carved out a market niche for themselves by offering sellers a service limited to assistance in meeting formal MLS requirements for posting and servicing a listing. The absence of such specially tailored offerings from every local market simply lends additional credence to suspicions that normal competition of the sort observable in other markets (whether for goods or services) is not present in real estate brokerage.

[d] Submission of Disputes to Arbitration

[i] Description of Condition. MLSs usually require, directly or through affiliated board rules, that members submit disputes with each other to arbitration. These arbitration proceedings commonly are conducted by the MLS itself or by the affiliated board. The hearings are generally before a panel composed of MLS and/or board members.

Some alternative brokers have mentioned abuses of the arbitration requirement as a barrier to their effective use of an MLS. These brokers did not express concern with arbitration in the abstract. Rather, they claimed, as they did in the case of proceedings for enforcement of code of ethics requirements by the boards, that arbitration that takes place before a panel composed of other and more traditional brokers in their community may result in biased proceedings.

Most of the MLSs follow the arbitration procedures established by the NAR. Article 14 of the NAR's code of ethics provides that the Realtor(R) shall submit disputes with other Realtors(R) to arbitration. The NAR has standardized the arbitration process for Realtor(R) MLSs and boards by providing local boards with an arbitration manual. The manual instructs the boards with respect to both arbitration and ethics grievance proceedings.

While arbitration decisions usually are made by a panel of MLS members, some boards and MLSs have used other methods. For example, board-affiliated MLSs in California must permit non-Realtor(R) brokers access to the MLS. Non-Realtors(R) may not have agreed to abide by the NAR's code of ethics and may object to an arbitration proceeding where the decision is made by Realtors. One local board, in coping with this problem, reports the following solution: "If a dispute is between an MLS participant who is not a member of the board and a board member it is referred to the American Arbitration Association."

[ii] Analysis of Condition. Required submission of disputes to arbitration before a panel of competitors may be one method which the local group can use to address (and sometimes to suppress) behavior considered injurious to the industry. Arbitration of disputes may save members substantial time and money. However, in an industry where competitor interdependence appears to be a primary characteristic, placing disputes in the hands of a firm's competitors may add significantly to the general pressures for uniformity.

[e] Initiation Fees

[i] Description of Condition. Most MLSs charge some initial fee for joining the MLS. These initial membership fees varied considerably. The membership fees of Realtor(R) MLSs are supposed to be cost-related. However, the local board determines how the revenues needed to operate the MLS will be generated. Local boards, therefore, are largely free to set the initial membership fees according to their discretion. The NAR recommends a $250 maximum fee unless the board takes a cost-justified position. These costs can include training and other expenses of establishing service for a new member. In addition to initiation fees, MLSs generally charge a fee for each listing submitted and/or a periodic membership fee. Periodic fees for most MLSs are modest, although some charge substantial annual fees.

[ii] Analysis of Condition. Initiation fees vary widely, with no apparent relationship to variations in the actual operating costs of MLSs. There appear to be few major expenses associated with adding a new member. Substantial charges in excess of a nominal initiation fee are probably not based upon the cost of adding such new member, and if the fee is not based on cost, then it would seem to be a condition of membership more restrictive than needed to operate the facility.

While even a $250 fee may not be substantial compared with other initial costs of establishing a business, the burden may be multiplied if a broker seeks to do business in a metropolitan area served by many MLSs. There may also be times when a Realtor(R) wants to do occasional business in another board's territory. Excessive initial fees may discourage that. When an MLS applicant already is trained in the use of the MLS, for example, as would be a member of another local MLS, high initiation fees are very hard to justify. Either in purpose or effect, they may result in the protection of the local members from outside competition.

[f] Other Membership Requirements

In the past, multiples in various parts of the country have employed a number of membership requirements to exclude certain classes of people. Such requirements commonly have included restrictions on part-timers and residency requirements.

In recent years, however, the Realtors(R) have made an effort to eliminate unreasonable or discriminatory membership conditions. Requirements such as having a "favorable business reputation" have been interpreted by NAR in a manner designed to avoid subjective, arbitrary application. However, many MLSs still condition membership upon the approval of current members or the approval of the board of directors. These requirements appear on their face to be primarily subjective.

[g] Conclusion

It is difficult to assess the actual impact of MLS membership requirements on the competitiveness of the industry. The MLS clearly is essential to most brokers in order to market their properties efficiently. The vast majority of houses for sale are now listed on an MLS. Exposure of a property for sale and cooperation are so important in reducing selling time and finding buyers, that some industry commentators believe that a listing broker's refusal to offer cooperation to other brokers through the MLS in attempting to sell a listing may constitute a violation of his or her duty to the seller to sell the house for the highest price possible. The actual number of denials of MLS membership appears to be relatively small, and the membership requirements do not appear to be a substantial bar to entry into the industry.

While MLS membership requirements may not involve barriers to entry, conditions such as required arbitration before a panel of competitors may add substantially to the pressures for uniformity. Because the state of competition in the industry in general appears to relate more to conditions and structures which have the effect of restricting the form and variety of competition, and less to restrictions that impede the flow of resources into the industry, membership requirements which add to interdependence or otherwise restrict vigorous competition are the most questionable.

Various other MLS rules and regulations that may restrict competition are discussed below. While many of these could also be considered "membership requirements," they have been categorized by how they functionally relate to the brokerage transaction.

[6] Listing Requirements

[a] In General

Every multiple has a number of requirements which must be met by participating brokers in order to enter listings on the MLS. Some of these requirements, such as payment of a fee for each listing submitted, clearly are necessary to the operation of the multiple. Others, a matter of custom or convenience and not clearly related to the successful functioning of the MLS, may not be necessary. This section is concerned primarily with two such requirements widely imposed by MLSs throughout the country: mandatory submission of listings and restriction of MLS service to exclusive listing contracts.

[b] Mandatory Submission of Listings

[i] Description of Requirement. The NAR describes multiple listing services as being of two basic types: "mandatory" and "voluntary." Mandatory MLSs are available to board members on a voluntary basis, but once the member has decided to participate, he or she must submit to the MLS all listing contracts specified by the MLS. In a voluntary MLS, members have the option not to submit certain of their listings, regardless of the type of listing contract.

Prior to 1971, the NAR allowed its affiliated MLSs to require that all designated types of listings (for example, exclusive-right-to-sell listings) be submitted to the MLS without exception. However, Policy Point 11 in the NAR's "Fourteen Points" requires that an MLS not prohibit or discourage a member from accepting a listing from a seller preferring to give an "office exclusive."

"Office exclusives" are those exclusive-right listings where the seller has specified that the listing not be submitted to the MLS. The NAR's concern that this decision be made by the seller and not the participating broker is indicated by the NAR's Suggested Rules, Section 1.3. This rule requires that office exclusives be filed with the MLS and that they be accompanied by certification signed by the seller that he or she does not desire the listing to be placed on the MLS.

An essential part of a mandatory multiple is that brokers submit listings soon after obtaining them from the sellers. If a time limit were not set, the mandatory multiples would be, in effect, no different from the voluntary multiples. The most common time requirement is submission to the MLS within forty-eight hours after obtaining the listing from the seller.

The purpose of a mandatory listing requirement is, of course, to require brokers to submit all of their exclusive-right listings. From the seller's point of view, this ensures that the seller's listing receives the exposure that it should have to obtain the best price possible. From the MLS's point of view, this requirement ensures that the MLS will not simply be a repository for difficult-to-sell listings. If these purposes are served by the mandatory listing requirement, one would expect the mandatory MLSs to contain, on average, easier-to-sell listings than the voluntary MLSs. These relatively easier-to-sell listings should sell more quickly than others, on average. The MLS survey results are consistent with this hypothesis. Mandatory MLSs show a shorter average time-on-the-market for their listings than do voluntary MLSs. Mandatory MLSs with a submission time of seventy-two hours or longer show a longer average time-on-the-market for their listings than do the mandatory MLSs with shorter required submission times.

[ii] Analysis of Requirement. On its face, requiring that MLS members submit all of their listings of a designated type restricts the competitive freedom of the broker-members. Alternative methods of selling houses are effectively foreclosed. However, Realtor(R) MLSs following the NAR's Policy Point 11 may have ameliorated any competitive injury which would otherwise have resulted from "mandatory" submissions of listings. Where "office exclusives" are allowed, that is, where the seller can specify that his or her listing not be placed on the MLS, the broker and seller appear to be free to contract as they see fit. In effect, therefore, the distinction between "voluntary" and "mandatory" MLSs simply becomes a distinction between whether the broker, without the seller's authorization, can decide to withhold a seller's listing from the MLS, or whether the broker must obtain the specific authorization of the seller in order to withhold such listing.

While there may be cases where a seller does not want his or her listing submitted to the MLS, the MLS remains the most efficient method of maximizing exposure of a property in large markets. Historically, however, a common problem for sellers and for the MLSs has been "vest pocket" listings. An ability to easily withhold under-priced listings may increase the incentives of some brokers to undervalue listings initially.

[c] Required Use of Exclusive Listing Agreements

[i] Description of Requirement. MLSs generally will not accept and distribute all types of listings. Typically, for example, Realtor(R) MLSs will accept and distribute only exclusive right-to-sell or exclusive agency listings for residential properties.

NAR representatives feel that open listings are inconsistent with their view of the MLS as a system of unilateral offers of subagency, because open listings generally do not authorize the listing broker to appoint subagents.

Exclusive agency listing agreements also are not usually accepted by Realtor(R) MLSs. With an exclusive agency listing, unlike an exclusive right-to-sell, the seller has the right to find and deal with a buyer directly and avoid paying a commission. NAR representatives feel that exclusive agency listings might lead to controversies, in that buyers may view the property with a broker and then attempt to deal with the seller directly. A controversy might thus arise over whether a broker was the "procuring cause" of the sale. Because the seller has not agreed to arbitration, as have participating MLS brokers, such a controversy ultimately could involve judicial proceedings.

While most MLSs accept and disseminate only exclusive-right listings, there are exceptions. Some MLSs, rather than require a certain type of contract, require that a specific MLS listing contract form be used.

[ii] Analysis of Requirement. Effectively restricting the type of listing that a broker can negotiate with a seller is, on its face, a restraint of trade. Exclusive agency listings, which allow the seller to find a buyer, sell the property on his or her own, and avoid the commission, may cause some advertising and other expenses of the broker to be wasted. Overall, therefore, they may be less profitable to the broker than exclusive-right listings, all else being equal. However, brokers operating in their own self-interest theoretically should be free to negotiate such contracts. To the extent there may be possible controversies between brokers and sellers, brokers ought to be able to account for this in setting their fees.

Individual brokers might find that offering exclusive agency listings provide a significant competitive advantage. There appears to be some consumer demand for such contracts. Where allowed, a significant portion of MLS listings are exclusive agencies. This is probably because the use of exclusive agency listings could save some consumers substantial commission expenses. While use of a broker is the most common method by which buyers find homes, a significant percentage of buyers initially become aware of their homes through some other means. Thus, for those sellers who feel competent to handle the sale of their own home, but also want MLS exposure, there appears to be the potential for substantial savings. From the MLS's point of view, there appears to be only minimal risk in allowing exclusive agencies. A minority of MLSs already do, and they appear to operate successfully.

Open listings on the MLS may present a more difficult problem for MLSs than do exclusive agency listings. While authorization for the listing broker to appoint subagents may be a technical requirement, it is easily solved simply by requiring that open contracts contain such authorization before they are accepted for listing. A more serious problem might arise if two brokers who have open listings on the same home both filed those listings on the MLS. If a cooperating broker were to procure a buyer for the home, determining which listing broker would qualify for the commission could lead to disputes. If open listings are allowed on an MLS, it would seem reasonable for the MLS to have appropriate rules that dealt with this sort of problem in order to reduce the cost and burden of arbitration proceedings.

In spite of much mystification to the contrary, it should be noted that from cooperating brokers' point of view, all MLS listings are already effectively "open." The MLS allows all MLS brokers to compete against one another in an attempt to sell the listing. Even with exclusive-right listings, cooperating brokers regularly compete in an effort to be the first to procure a buyer. Often there is wasted time and effort, and two or more competing cooperating brokers may both claim to have been the procuring cause of a particular buyer. When such a dispute arises, the issue of "procuring cause," therefore, would seem to generally be the same no matter what kind of listing is involved. The difference among different types of listings in that context is only whether the disputed issue ultimately has to be resolved by arbitration or by a court proceeding, and that is a matter which can be covered by contract.

Decisions relating to the forms of listing contracts discussed above, like decisions as to commission rates and commission splits, are in fact competitive decisions that probably could be made by individual brokers without hampering the operation of the MLS facility.

[7] Commission Rate and Split Schedules

In the past, many state associations of Realtors(R) as well as the National Association of Realtors(R) recommended fee schedules. Many of the local boards and MLSs enforced these or other commission rate schedules in addition to schedules concerning the split of the commission between the listing broker and the cooperating brokers.

Today, such schedules are rarely found. The NAR banned mandatory commission rate schedules in 1961. In 1971 the NAR issued its "Fourteen Points" Multiple Listing Policy Statement. This banned both recommended commission rate schedules and commission split schedules. Few MLSs today appear to have commission rate or split schedules. But the past use of these schedules by the Associations and MLSs may still be relevant to understanding today's industry.

The schedules, especially those dealing with the full commission rates, explain, in part, how the rates reached their current levels. Historically, the rates were administered by the associations. There appear to be very strong cooperative pressures that keep rates uniform within local markets once they are set. Commission rates today commonly are found to be essentially at the levels they were when they last were fixed.

[8] Commission Split Uniformity

Within any MLS market area splits tend to be highly uniform. That is, in a very high percentage of residential sales, listing brokers will offer the same split to cooperating brokers, often fifty/fifty or sixty/forty.

Industry spokespersons explain this uniformity in terms of the unilateral incentives of brokers. Cooperating brokers may not show those properties which pay them less than the going rate as aggressively as those that pay the prevailing split. Further, while a larger than normal split to the cooperating broker might induce even more selling action, listing brokers are reluctant to give cooperating brokers more than the going rate because they generally do not need to do so in order to sell the property, and they may need the remainder of the commission to pay expenses, effectively compete for additional listings, and realize a reasonable profit. While brokers do not generally compete in price, non-price competition to obtain listings may, of course, be intense.

The very low percentage of cooperative sales reported by alternative, discount brokers particularly when they offer a lower than customary split generally may be explained in part by an apparent steering by other brokers away from such listings. In fact, this may be a primary cause of the alternatives' general lack of success. Even dominant firms appear unable to consistently, unilaterally alter splits in their own favor.

[9] Data Dissemination

[a] In General

The purpose of the MLS is the orderly collection, correlation, and dissemination of listing information to MLS members. The primary purpose of information dissemination is to facilitate cooperative sales among brokers. To do this, MLSs disseminate information relating not only to the property involved but also to the seller and the listing broker. A question sometimes raised is whether the dissemination of some information not relating directly to the property could be both unnecessary and injurious to the parties or to competition.

[b] Property Information

MLSs typically disseminate information which describes the property for sale. This includes the seller's asking price, the address of the property, and various details relating to, for example, the size and type of house. Most MLSs also include a photograph of the property.

[c] Seller Information

MLSs often disseminate information not only identifying the seller involved, but also providing certain information about the seller, such as his or her name and telephone number. The status of the seller's loan or mortgage also often is disseminated by MLSs.

MLSs also often provide for the dissemination of information relating to seller's reason for selling. Whether this information is disseminated is usually at the listing broker's discretion.

[d] Listing Broker Information

Listing brokers are agents of the seller. n5.1 The listing broker's name and telephone number generally are disseminated by MLSs. Some MLSs, however, choose to disseminate the listing broker's name in a coded form.

Most MLSs formerly required or provided for the dissemination of information relating the listing broker's full commission rate. However, the NAR suggested new rules and regulations to the MLSs calling for the dissemination only of the dollar amount or percentage of selling price to be offered to cooperating brokers. These new rules state the policy of the NAR as follows: "Board Multiple Listing Services shall not disclose in any way the total commission negotiated between the seller and the listing broker."

The NAR's policy still appears to anticipate that MLS participants will inform potential cooperating brokers of the split to be offered on the particular listing. The NAR's suggested rules and regulations state that the listing broker shall specify, on each listing submitted to the MLS, a split of commission which is applicable to such listing. While the MLSs do not control the amount of the split, the NAR Handbook recognizes that the amount of the split will affect the incentive of cooperating brokers to sell a particular listing.

[e] Analysis of Data Dissemination

MLSs disseminate information which could be abused to cause injury both to seller and to competition. Information relating to the house is clearly needed by cooperating brokers. However, information relating to the seller's financial position and reasons for selling could, in a buyer's hands, substantially compromise the seller's position in negotiations. Seller information relating to his or her loan status also could compromise the seller's negotiating position. Under the traditional industry view that all brokers are agents of the seller, this is, in theory, not a problem. All brokers are supposed to be negotiating for the seller. However, this may not be entirely realistic since brokers do have an incentive to make a sale, and a cooperating broker may always be tempted to act as less than a fiduciary.

While dissemination of full commission rate information may have facilitated policing by other MLS members against discounters, it is doubtful that under the NAR rule there will be a major change in any plight perceived by discount brokers. Brokers in a community generally are well aware of the identity of the local discounters. Brokers who choose to compete by lowering their rates must advertise that fact to consumers. Other MLS brokers will also see these ads and, if they choose, steer away from the listings of those brokers. Disseminating the name of the broker, therefore, may be as effective a policing device as disseminating the commission rate.

The dissemination of the listing broker's identity and the amount of the split raise difficult questions. Disclosure of this competitive information may allow the MLS to be used as an anti-competitive, collusion-facilitating device. Yet, an MLS probably could not work well without such information.

When cooperating brokers are paid on the basis of a split from the seller as opposed to a contract with the buyer, and as long as cooperating brokers also act as listing brokers in other transactions, brokers will probably continue to be subject to incentives which militate against price competition and may individually use MLS information to reduce such competition.

[f] MLS Disclaimers

MLS listings typically have a disclaimer such as this statement: "The information contained in these listings is deemed reliable but is not guaranteed." Broker websites are often constructed so that a user must click on an "I agree to these terms" type of agreement before proceeding to listings. This agreement page typically contains this disclaimer. Printouts of MLS listings typically contain this disclaimer. These standard disclaimers can protect the real estate licensees should the MLS information prove to be inaccurate.

Disputes which raise the issue of the effect of the typical MLS disclaimer often involve alleged misrepresentations regarding lot size or square footage. As a general rule, it appears that when the buyer had the right to inspect and measure the subject property, this disclaimer tends to support a finding of no liability on the part of the real estate licensees particularly when the licensees were unaware of an error in the MLS description, the error was not obvious or intentional, and the buyer failed to exercise his or her right to inspect or measure the property. ⁿ⁶ Courts usually consider provisions found in other documents involved in the sale in coming to this conclusion. For example, the sales documents often contain a provision advising the buyer of the right and importance of having an independent inspection of the property performed.

California statutorily addresses MLS listings. California Civil Code § 1088 states:

A listing may not be placed in a multiple listing service unless authorized or directed by the owner in the listing.

If an agent or appraiser places a listing or other information in the multiple listing service, that agent or appraiser shall be responsible for the truth of all representations and statements made by the agent or appraiser of which that agent or appraiser had knowledge or reasonably should have had knowledge to anyone injured by their falseness or inaccuracy.

Furla v. Jon Douglas Co. ⁿ⁷ involved the sale of a California home represented in the MLS listing as containing 5,500 square feet. This listing contained the words "Information Deemed Reliable But Not Guaranteed." When the buyer learned that the home contained roughly 4,300 feet, he sued the seller and the seller's broker and agent alleging negligent misrepresentation. The trial court had granted summary judgment to the defendants because the court found that the defendants had reasonable grounds to believe the house was 5,500 square feet, defendants breached no duty toward plaintiff in failing to discover the house was not 5,500 square feet, and plaintiff did not justifiably rely on defendants' representations. ⁿ⁸ The appellate court reversed finding that there were factual issues which could not be resolved by a motion for summary judgment. The court recognized the juxtaposition of arguments regarding a buyer's reliance on statements made by the seller and the seller's representatives.

Ordinarily a buyer is entitled to rely upon a seller's representations concerning the area of the property being sold, and is not required to hire an expert to discover the falsity of the seller's representations. However, a buyer is not relieved of the duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself, including those facts which are known to or within the diligent attention and observation of the buyer and a buyer is held to be aware of obvious and patent conditions. n9 Whether the buyer unreasonably failed to protect himself and unjustifiably failed to discover true conditions depended upon all the circumstances thereby presenting an issue of fact for the trier of fact. A jury might reasonably conclude that plaintiff was justified in relying on defendant's representation of the square footage, that the truth was not obvious and patent to plaintiff and could be determined only by an expert measurement which plaintiff was not required to hire in order to discover defendants' misrepresentations. n10

[10] Selling Requirements

[a] In General

All MLSs have rules and regulations concerning appropriate selling procedures. These requirements often reiterate sections of the Realtor's code of ethics or deal with administrative functions. Many of these rules appear to be relatively non-controversial and will not be covered here. The most commonly used rules and regulations, those suggested by the NAR, are contained in the NAR's Handbook on Multiple Listing Policy.

Two MLS selling requirements relating to cooperating brokers are relevant to this investigation. First, MLSs prohibit the solicitation of the seller by other MLS members. Second, cooperating brokers are usually considered subagents of the seller and listing brokers.

[b] Anti-Solicitation Rules

[i] Description of Requirement. Section 4.3 of the NAR's suggested rules and regulations states as follows: "Participants shall not solicit a listing on property filed with Service unless such solicitation is consistent with Article 21 of the Realtors(R) Code of Ethics, its Standards of Practice and its Case I interpretation."

In explaining this rule the NAR Handbook notes as follows:

This section is intended to encourage sellers to permit their properties to be filed with the Service by protecting them from being solicited, prior to the expiration of the listing, by brokers and salespersons seeking the listing upon its expiration.

This is, in effect, an elaboration upon the Realtor's code of ethics, Article 21. Article 21 specifies that a Realtor(R) "shall not engage in any practice or take any action inconsistent with the agency of another Realtor." Standard of Practice 21-3 interprets this article as including a ban on soliciting future business from sellers who have exclusive listings with other brokers during the term of that listing, if the nature and the term of the listing are fully disclosed.

[ii] Analysis of Requirement. Any ban on solicitation for business is, on its face, a restriction on competition. In the context of the MLS, an argument has been made that a very narrowly drawn and interpreted restriction may be reasonable, if reasonably enforced.

This argument is to the effect that a brokerage firm's list of properties for sale is, in effect, also its customer list. Customer lists are generally considered valuable assets by any business. If competing brokers are allowed to use these customer lists directly as lists of potential clients to be individually and personally solicited, this, in theory, might create a general incentive not to put listings on the MLS, even though the MLS is essential to the operation of an efficient real estate brokerage market.

The experience reported by alternative brokers may be relevant here. Among the major problems they have alleged have been lost or cancelled listings resulting from personal disparagement of their businesses and direct solicitation of their clients, urging those clients to break their contracts. These problems are claimed to be substantially more severe for those alternative brokers who list their properties on the MLS.

Nonetheless, the breadth of the present prohibition is such that it may discourage many firms from legitimate direct advertising and targeted mass media campaigns that do not rely for their success upon any arguable abuse of "confidentially disclosed" information.

[c] Subagency of Cooperating Brokers

The MLS is fundamentally a clearing house of listing information. n10.1 There appears to be nothing in the structure of the MLS or in the state laws which requires cooperating brokers to be subagents of the sellers and the listing brokers. n11 Furthermore, it is the policy of the NAR not to interfere in the relationships between brokers and their clients, including potential purchasers.

Courts have often referred to the relationship between brokers who represent sellers and those who represent buyers on the MLS as a subagency. n11.1 Courts have also described the publication of a listing in the MLS as a unilateral offer of a subagency to other brokers. n11.2 This ability to create subagencies has been called "an essential part of the real estate brokerage business." n11.3 Subagency is discussed in § 3.10, below.

On the other hand, the NAR does view the MLS as a system of unilateral offers of subagency from listing brokers to potential cooperating brokers. The Handbook on Multiple Listing Policy states as follows:

In the Multiple Listing Service of the Board of Realtors, the cooperating broker in a cooperative real estate transaction is the subagent of the listing broker and not the agent of the buyer, unless there is an agreement to the contrary between the cooperating broker and the buyer which is fully disclosed to all parties to the contract and to all brokers involved.

Standard of Practice 22-1 also specifies as follows: "It is the obligation of the selling broker as subagent of the listing broker to disclose immediately all pertinent facts to the listing broker prior to as well as after the contract is executed." n12

[11] NAR Multiple Listing Policy--"The Fourteen Points"

The "Fourteen Points," the multiple listing policy of the National Association of Realtors(R) approved by the board of directors November 15, 1971, states, in relevant part, as follows:

A multiple listing service shall not enact or enforce any rule which restricts, limits or interferes with the actions of its members in their relations with each other or in their realtor/client relationship or in the conduct of their business, including, but not limited to the following:

- (1) MLS shall not: Fix, control, recommend, suggest or maintain commission rates or fees for services to be rendered by members (Interpretation number fourteen).
- (2) MLS shall not: Fix, control, recommend, suggest or maintain any percentage division of commissions or fees between cooperating members and between members and non-members.
- (3) MLS shall not: Require financial support of multiple listing service operations by any formula based on commission or sales price.

(4) MLS shall not: Require or use any form which establishes or implies the existence of any contractual relationship between the multiple listing service and the client (buyer or seller).

(5) MLS shall not: Make any rule relating to the posting or use of signs (Interpretation number twenty-six).

(6) MLS shall not: Make any rule prohibiting nor discouraging cooperation with non-members.

(7) MLS shall not: Limit or interfere with the terms of the relationship between a member and his salesmen (Interpretations numbers sixteen and seventeen).

(8) MLS shall not: Prohibit or discourage any members from political participation or activity (Interpretation number fifteen).

(9) MLS shall not: Make any rule granting blanket consent to selling member to negotiate directly with the seller (owner) (Interpretation number ten).

(10) MLS shall not: Make any rule regulating the advertising or promotion of any listing (Interpretations numbers six and twenty-six).

(11) MLS shall not: Prohibit or discourage a member from accepting a listing from a seller (owner) preferring to give "office exclusive."

(12) MLS shall not: Adopt any rule denying a listing member from controlling the posting of "sold signs."

(13) MLS shall not: Reject any exclusive listing submitted by a member on the basis of the quality or price of the listing.

(14) MLS shall not: Adopt rules authorizing the modification or change of any listing without the express written permission of the listing member.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. The material set forth in this section has been abstracted from 1 F.T.C. Los Angeles Regional Office Staff Report. The Residential Real Estate Brokerage Industry, 108 et seq. (1983) (footnotes omitted).

(n2)Footnote 1. See Bird, Coordination of Brokers in Sales of Real Estate, N.Y.L.J., March 16, 1988, which discusses a lawyer's role in coordinating various sales-brokers due to the lack of a multiple-listing service in Manhattan.

But cf. Freeman v. San Diego Ass'n of Realtors(R), Nos. 01-56199, 01-56231, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 7731, at *32 (9th Cir. Mar. 10, 2003) , cert. denied, motion granted, 124 S. Ct. 355, 157 L. Ed. 2d 253, 2003 U.S. LEXIS 7339 (U.S. 2003) ("Before 1994, rules of the National Association of Realtors(R) required an agent to join the association in the geographical area where the agent's office was located. But that year NAR adopted the 'board of choice' system, which allows agents to choose their association.").

(n3)Footnote 1.1. Cf. Freeman v. San Diego Ass'n of Realtors(R), Nos. 01-56199, 01-56231, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 7731, at *2 (9th Cir. Mar. 10, 2003) , cert. denied, motion granted, 124 S. Ct. 355, 157 L. Ed. 2d 253, 2003 U.S.

LEXIS 7339 (U.S. 2003) ("Real estate agents make a living matching buyers and sellers.").

(n4)Footnote 1.2. See Multiple Listing Service, Inc. v. Century 21 Cantrell Real Estate, Inc., 390 So. 2d 982, 986 (Miss. 1980) ; Morf v. North Central Mississippi Board of Realtors, Inc., 27 So. 3d 1188, 1191 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009) , writ denied, 27 So. 3d 404 (Miss. 2010) . See also ND-Sell, Inc. v. Greater Springfield Bd. of Realtors, Inc., 224 S.W.3d 623 (Mo. Ct. App. 2007) (MLS member disciplined for allowing a client to have her Multilist lock box key to tour homes when the MLS member was not present.).

(n5)Footnote 1.3. ND-Sell, Inc. v. Greater Springfield Bd. of Realtors, Inc., 224 S.W.3d 623 (Mo. Ct. App. 2007) .

(n6)Footnote 2. In Pope v. Mississippi Real Estate Comm'n, 872 F.2d 127 (5th Cir. 1989) , the court held that the exclusion of nonmembers from the multiple listing service or from use of the term "realtor" by the county board of realtors was not a violation of antitrust statutes where membership was denied to real estate brokers for failure to pay required dues. The court determined that the fee schedule requiring larger agencies to pay a greater fee because they employ more real estate agents was reasonable. The court further held that, even assuming that the state governmental agency regulations calling for cautionary letters to a real estate broker and a suspended sanction against him constituted a deprivation of a liberty or property interest, the agency's notice and post-deprivation remedy of judicial review afforded adequate due process. In the instant case, the court found: (1) a real estate broker's brochure contrasting his services with other brokers, which were in part misleading, and his advertisement of an educational real estate course as one approved by state agency when the course was not approved, were not protected commercial speech under the First Amendment; (2) a broker's drawing of legal descriptions, which under state law is tantamount to practicing law without a license, were not protected commercial speech under the First Amendment; (3) preventing a broker from using the term "realtor" to describe their operations did not violate First Amendment rights because "realtor" is a registered trademark; and (4) a state statute which prevents rebates or commissions paid by third parties to a real estate agent, and gifts paid by an agent to another, only when the payment creates conflict of interest to the client's detriment, does not violate the First Amendment.

(n7)Footnote 3. 629 F. 2d 1351 (5th Cir. 1980) .

(n8)Footnote 4. 300 N.W.2d 127 (Iowa 1981) .

(n9)Footnote 4.1. See Marin County Bd. of Realtors v. Palsson, 16 Cal. 3d 920, 937-938, 130 Cal. Rptr. 1, 11-12, 549 P.2d 833, 843-844 (Cal. 1976) .

(n10)Footnote 5. 1985 Hawaii Sess. Laws ch. 467, Act 176 allows Hawaii brokers to share commissions with brokers engaged in the brokerage business in foreign countries. See Haw. Rev. Stat. § 467-14(14)(B).

(n11)Footnote 5.1. See Van Nguyen v. Hung Tran, 157 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906, 910 (2007) .

(n12)Footnote 6. See Karlsson v. FDIC, 942 F. Supp. 1022 (E.D. Pa. 1996) , aff'd without opinion, 107 F.3d 862 (3d Cir. 1997) ; Tres' Chic In A Week, L.L.C. v. Home Realty Store, 993 So. 2d 228 (La. Ct. App. 2008) (square footage); Lopata v. Miller, 122 Md. App. 76, 712 A.2d 24, 1998 Md. App. LEXIS 119 (1998) , cert. denied, 351 Md. 286, 718 A.2d 234 (1998) (lot size); Abbott v. Loss Realty Group, 2005 Ohio 5876, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 5296 (Nov. 4, 2005) ; Schnellmann v. Roettger, 373 S.C. 379, 645 S.E.2d 239 (S.C. 2007) ; The Cadco, LLC v. Barry, 2006 Tenn. App. LEXIS 37 (Jan. 18, 2006) , appeal denied, 2006 Tenn. LEXIS 813 (Sept. 5, 2006) .

(n13)Footnote 7. 65 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 911 (1998) .

(n14)Footnote 8. 65 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 1077, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 911, 915 (1998) .

(n15)Footnote 9. 65 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 1079, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 911, 916 (1998) , citing Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.5.

(n16)Footnote 10. 65 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 1079, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 911, 917 (1998) .

(n17)Footnote 10.1. See Market Force, Inc. v. Wauwatosa Realty Co., 706 F. Supp. 1387, 1388 (E.D. Wis. 1989) , aff'd, 906 F.2d 1167 (7th Cir. 1990) ; Derish v. San Mateo-Burlingame Bd. of Realtors, 136 Cal. App. 3d 534, 539, 186 Cal. Rptr. 390, 393 (1982) .

(n18)Footnote 11. Cf. Van Nguyen v. Hung Tran, 157 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1037, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906, 910 (2007) (The purchase agreement lists cooperating brokers as the agents of the buyers.).

(n19)Footnote 11.1. See People v. National Association of Realtors, 155 Cal. App. 3d 578, 588, 202 Cal. Rptr. 243, 250 (1984)

(n20)Footnote 11.2. See Market Force, Inc. v. Wauwatosa Realty Co., 706 F. Supp. 1387, 1388 (E.D. Wis. 1989) , aff'd, 906 F.2d 1167 (7th Cir. 1990) ; Supermarket of Homes, Inc. v. San Fernando Valley Bd. of Realtors, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14113, at *3-*4 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 1, 1983) .

(n21)Footnote 11.3. Supermarket of Homes, Inc. v. San Fernando Valley Bd. of Realtors, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14113, at *3-*4 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 1, 1983) . This court also stated, "[S]ince it is virtually impossible for one broker to have sufficient contracts to find enough matching sellers and buyers to earn adequate commissions, some brokers contend that they could not make a living without the MLS."

(n22)Footnote 12. In Bozzelli v. Hollenbaugh, 594 N.E.2d 782 (Ind. 1992) , a broker had an exclusive listing entered in the local MLS. Although not an MLS member, another broker approached the MLS broker in possession of the exclusive listing, and stated that she had a buyer. The MLS broker thought the other broker was also an MLS member and that she was entitled to the standard MLS commission, governed by MLS rules, which was 1.6% of the total sales price. After the execution of the sale, however, the MLS broker, who learned that her colleague was not in the MLS, refused to pay the non-MLS broker her share of the commission. Reversing the court of appeals, the supreme court held that since the non-MLS broker held herself out as an MLS broker, equity required the commission paid under MLS trade practices. The court affirmed the trial court's approach, granting the non-MLS member an equitable fee in quantum meruit, albeit less than the commission that would have been paid had she been an MLS member.

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the law firm of Jacobus, Boltz, Melamed & Witherspoon, Houston, Texas. Sections 2.06 and 2.07 were written by Sandra Bullington, who has contributed additional updates throughout the chapter.

20 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 2 Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry *

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.05

§ 2.05 Code of Ethics and Standards of Practice of the National Association of Realtors(R)

As discussed in § 2.01 above, the pledge to abide by the National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR's) code of ethics and standards of practice is a requirement of membership in the NAR. Failure to comply with the code can result in the revocation of a Board or Association charter, revocation of use of the "Realtor(R)" mark, and termination of important services such as insurance.

The Code of Ethics and Standards of Practice of the National Association of Realtors(R) can be obtained from the website maintained by the National Association of Realtors(R) (see <<<http://www.nar.realtor.com>>> (click on Code of Ethics) (site visited May 8, 2001)). The Preamble reads (effective January 1, 2001):

Preamble

Under all is the land. Upon its wise utilization and widely allocated ownership depend the survival and growth of free institutions and of our civilization. REALTORS(R) should recognize that the interests of the nation and its citizens require the highest and best use of the land and the widest distribution of land ownership. They require the creation of adequate housing, the building of functioning cities, the development of productive industries and farms, and the preservation of a healthful environment.

Such interests impose obligations beyond those of ordinary commerce. They impose grave social responsibility and a patriotic duty to which REALTORS(R) should dedicate themselves, and for which they should be diligent in preparing themselves. REALTORS(R), therefore, are zealous to maintain and improve the standards of their calling and share with their fellow REALTORS(R) a common responsibility for its integrity and honor.

In recognition and appreciation of their obligations to clients, customers, the public, and each other, REALTORS(R) continuously strive to become and remain informed on issues affecting real estate and, as knowledgeable professionals, they willingly share the fruit of their experience and study with others. They identify and take steps, through enforcement of this Code of Ethics and by assisting appropriate regulatory bodies, to eliminate practices which may damage the public or which might discredit or bring dishonor to the real estate profession. REALTORS(R) having direct personal knowledge of conduct that may violate the Code of Ethics involving misappropriation of client or customer funds or property, willful discrimination, or fraud resulting in substantial economic harm, bring such matters to the attention of the appropriate Board or Association of REALTORS(R).

Realizing that cooperation with other real estate professionals promotes the best interests of those who utilize their services, REALTORS(R) urge exclusive representation of clients; do not attempt to gain any unfair advantage over their competitors; and they refrain from making unsolicited comments about other practitioners. In instances where their opinion is sought, or where REALTORS(R) believe that comment is necessary, their opinion is offered in an objective, professional manner, uninfluenced by any personal motivation or potential advantage or gain.

The term REALTORS(R) has come to connote competency, fairness, and high integrity resulting from adherence to a lofty ideal of moral conduct in business relations. No inducement of profit and no instruction from clients ever can justify departure from this ideal.

In the interpretation of this obligation, REALTORS(R) can take no safer guide than that which has been handed down through the centuries, embodied in the Golden Rule, "Whatsoever ye would that others should do to you, do ye even so to them."

Accepting this standard as their own, REALTORS(R) pledge to observe its spirit in all of their activities and to conduct their business in accordance with the tenets set forth below.

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the law firm of Jacobus, Boltz, Melamed & Witherspoon, Houston, Texas. Sections 2.06 and 2.07 were written by Sandra Bullington, who has contributed additional updates throughout the chapter.

21 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 2 Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry *

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.06

§ 2.06 Professional Designations

Many real estates agents and brokers place letters after their names or use the trademark REALTOR(R) following their names. These letters indicate a professional certification which the agent or broker has earned through a trade organization. Typically, a professional designation indicates that the individual has furthered his or her education in specific areas of the real estate industry in order to provide specialized services to customers and clients. The more common of these designations are shown below:

- ABR: Accredited Buyer Representative. This designation is offered by the Real Estate Buyer's Agent Council of the National Association of Realtors(R). Earning this designation requires completion of a two-day course in buyer representation and obtaining a passing grade on the written examination. In addition, the agent must demonstrate practical experience by completing and closing five real estate transactions in which the agent functioned as a buyer's representative. These transactions must be completed and closed anytime prior to and up to 36 months after completing the ABR(R) course. Agents with this designation must also maintain membership in and be in good standing with the National Association of REALTORS(R) and with the Real Estate Buyer's Agent Council. More information on this program can be obtained at <<<http://www.rebac.net>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

- ABRM: Accredited Buyer Representative Manager. This designation is offered by the Real Estate Buyer's Agent Council for brokers, owners, and managers. Requirements for this designation are similar to that for the ABR. However, the prospective designee must certify that he or she has overseen a minimum of 25 real estate transactions that involved a buyer's agent or has more than 2 years of experience in the oversight of buyer's representatives. This designation requires membership in and good standing with the National Association of REALTORS(R) and with the Real Estate Buyer's Agent Council. More information on this program can be obtained at <<<http://www.rebac.net>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

- ALC: Accredited Land Consultant. This designation is awarded to Realtors(R) with land sales experience who complete educational courses through the Realtors(R) Land Institute which is an affiliate of the National Association of REALTORS(R). Licensees earning this designation have focused on land brokerage transactions of five specialized types: (1) farms and ranches; (2) undeveloped tracts of land;

(3) transitional and development land; (4) subdivision and wholesaling of lots; (5) site selection and assemblage of land parcels. More information on this designation may be obtained at <<<http://www.riland.com>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ CCIM: Certified Commercial Investment Member. This designation is offered by the Commercial Investment Real Estate Institute for real estate professionals involved in commercial real estate brokerage, leasing, asset management valuation, and investment analysis. The Commercial Investment Real Estate Institute has been conferring the CCIM designation since 1969. This designation requires 240 hours of graduate-level curriculum. This Institute is an affiliate of the National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR). The CCIM designation was established by the California Association of Realtors(R) in 1954 under the name Certified Property Exchanger (CPE). In 1967, the designation became subject to administration by a division of the National Association of Realtors(R). In 1969, the designation was renamed Certified Commercial Investment Member (CCIM). A council was established to administer the designation and in 1991 it was granted institute status as an affiliate of NAR. More information about this designation may be obtained at <<<http://www.ccim.com>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ C-CREC: Consumer-Certified Real Estate Consultants. The National Association of Real Estate Consultants (NARC) is the sponsor organization of the C-CREC designation. NARC states that this designation "is the first international designation focused on results-oriented skills required by consumers--not what the real estate industry chooses to deliver to them." More information can be obtained about this designation at <<<http://www.ccrec.com>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ CIPS: Certified International Property Specialist. This designation is offered the Certified International Property Specialist Network of the National Association of Realtors(R) for Realtors(R) who work with buyers and sellers from different countries and cultures. More information about this designation can be obtained at <<<http://www.cipsnetwork.com>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ CPM: Certified Property Manager. This designation is offered by the Institute for Real Estate Management. This professional designation is for individuals involved in property management. More information about this designation can be obtained at <<<http://www.irem.org/cpm.htm>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ CRB: Certified Real Estate Brokerage. This designation is offered by the Real Estate Brokerage Managers Council. This designation is intended to be a symbol of excellence in brokerage management. More information about this designation can be obtained at <<<http://www.crb.com>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ CRP: Certified Relocation Professional. This designation is awarded by the Employee Relocation Council to individuals who have extensive knowledge on the principles and practices of relocation. This organization also offers a Senior Certified Relocation Professional designation which is based on receiving the Council's Distinguished Service Award. More information about these designations can be obtained at <<<http://www.erc.org>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ CRS: Certified Residential Specialist. This designation is offered by the Residential Sales Council of the National Association of REALTORS(R) (NAR). This Council is the largest not-for-profit affiliate of the NAR. Designees must complete advanced study in residential listing and selling. More information can be obtained about this designation at <<<http://www.crs.com>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ e-Pro: Internet Professionals. This designation is offered by the National Association of REALTORS(R) (NAR). The NAR Website states that the vision of the e-PRO Certification is to create a well-trained, core group of real estate professionals who are thriving in the online-based real estate industry. More information about this designation can be obtained at <<<http://nar.realtor.com/epro/home.htm>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ GRI: Graduate REALTOR(R) Institute. Only members of the National Association of REALTORS(R) (NAR) can obtain the GRI designation. Earning this professional designation requires completion of three five-day programs, GRI I-Residential Real Estate, GRI II-Advanced Residential Real Estate, and GRI III-Specialty Real Estate.

■ LTG: (Leadership Training Graduate). This professional designation is offered by the Women's Council of REALTORS(R). More information about this designation can be obtained at <<<http://www.wcr.org>>> (site visited May 4, 2001).

■ SIOR: Society of Industrial and Office REALTORS(R). This designation is offered by the Society of Industrial and Office REALTORS(R) which is an affiliate of the National Association of Realtors(R). This designation is intended for top producers in the areas of industrial and office real estate brokerage. More information about this designation can be obtained at <<<http://www.sior.com>>>.

■ CRE: Counselor of Real Estate. The Counselors of Real Estate was founded in 1953 and serves roughly 1,100 members who hold the "CRE" designation. The CRE Designation is awarded only to individuals who are invited by their peers into the membership of The Counselors of Real Estate. More information can be obtained about this designation at <<<http://www.cre.org>>>.

■ Green Designation. The Green Resource Council of the National Association of Realtors(R) was established by the Real Estate Buyer's Agent Council (REBAC) in order to make the knowledge of green real estate practices available to real estate agents and property managers, consumers, tenants, developers, and building owners. More information can be obtained about this designation at <<<http://www.greenresourcecouncil.org>>>.

■ SRES: Seniors Real Estate Specialist. This designation is offered by the Senior Advantage Real Estate Council(R). This designation focuses on the senior citizen population. More information about this designation can be obtained at <<<http://www.seniorsrealestate.com>>>.

■ EcoBroker(R): EcoBroker International offers the professional designation of EcoBroker(R). This entity is a Built Green Educational Partner. A licensee seeking this designation must complete this entity's energy, environmental, and marketing training program. EcoBroker International may be reached at 29029 Upper Bear Creek Rd., Suite 202 Evergreen, CO 80439; Telephone: 303-674-7770; Website: <http://www.ecobroker.com>.

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the law firm of Jacobus, Boltz, Melamed & Witherspoon, Houston, Texas. Sections 2.06 and 2.07 were written by Sandra Bullington, who has contributed additional updates throughout the chapter.

22 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART I General Principles

CHAPTER 2 Overview of Brokerage Practice and the Organization of the Brokerage Industry *

10-2 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 2.07

§ 2.07 Errors and Omissions Insurance

A minority of states require that agents and brokers carry errors and omissions insurance. However, it appears that mandating such insurance coverage is a growing trend. Colorado, n1 Idaho, n2 Iowa, n3 Kentucky, n4 Louisiana, n5 Nebraska, n6 New Mexico, n7 North Dakota, n8 Rhode Island, n9 South Dakota n10 and Tennessee n11 had mandatory insurance requirements for real estate brokers and agents. Some states with mandatory insurance requirements offer licensees coverage under a state group plan. For example, Alabama offers a state group plan. Licensees, however, are free to obtain the required insurance elsewhere.

Most laypersons think of errors and omissions insurance as malpractice insurance. n12 Errors and omissions insurance for brokers and agents is similar to insurance carried by attorneys, physicians, accountants, architects, and other professionals. Typically, a broker's or agent's insurance will be a "claims made" insurance policy which means that if the claim is made during the policy period the insured agent or broker is covered. If the claim is made outside of the policy period the agent or broker is not insured, unless the agent or broker purchased an extended reporting endorsement commonly referred to as "tail coverage." Tail insurance coverage protects the insured for a period of time after the insurance policy expires. Prior acts coverage, which is also known as retroactive date coverage, is also available. Under a prior acts provision the policy contains a prior acts date, which is the earliest date that a wrongful act may be committed and be covered under the policy.

Errors and omissions insurance protects the agent or broker against certain covered losses and should cover legal expenses incurred in defending a lawsuit. Such policies typically cover claims that arise from an error, omission, or negligence. These policies typically exclude coverage for:

- Dishonest or criminal conduct. n13
- Environmental pollution.
- Known wrongful acts.
- Prior wrongful acts.

- Breach of employment contracts.
- Listing, selling, or managing real estate that is owned, built or developed by an insured who has over a 25% ownership interest in said real estate.
- Securities transactions.
- Failure to obtain or maintain insurance for managed property.
- Discrimination.
- Activities that fall outside of real estate brokerage such as acting as a mortgage banker or correspondent; escrow agent; construction manager; property developer; or appraiser (some policies allow appraiser coverage to be added by endorsement).
- Contract liability (assumed under any contract or agreement).
- Real estate promotion (investment contract, syndication as a partner, joint venture, etc.).
- Nuclear energy.

In addition, errors and omissions policies typically do not cover intentional business torts. n14

The amount of coverage varies depending on the policy purchased. These policies often have two deductibles: one for defense costs and one for damages. It appears that the most common claim is a failure to disclose an item that a buyer felt was material.

Some brokers offer their agents and salespersons insurance coverage or a legal defense plan should they be sued. However, such coverage can present a conflict of interest as the interests of the broker and its agent or salesperson may differ. If an insurer undertakes a defense for an agent or salesperson, it may protect its position by reserving its rights under the policy. A reservation of rights consists of the insurer notifying the insured that the insurer will defend the suit, but the insurer reserves all rights it has based on noncoverage under the policy. However, if the insurer fails to take prompt action to reserve its rights, it may be forced to provide coverage to the agent or broker. n15

An errors and omissions policy may cover a broker's unintentional violation of the Real Estate Settlement and Procedures Act of 1974 (12 U.S.C. §§ 2601 et seq.). n16

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-103.6.

(n2)Footnote 2. Idaho Code § 54-2013.

(n3)Footnote 3. Iowa Admin. Code Chapter 193E, § 19.2.

(n4)Footnote 4. Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 324.395.

(n5)Footnote 5. La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 37:1466.

(n6)Footnote 6. Neb. Rev. Stat. § 81-885.55.

(n7)Footnote 7. N.M. Admin. Code § 16.61.5.8.

(n8)Footnote 8. N.D. Cent. Code § 43-23-19.

(n9)Footnote 9. R.I. Gen. Laws § 5-20.5-25.

(n10)Footnote 10. S.D. Codified Laws §§ 36-21A-119 to 36-21A-123.

(n11)Footnote 11. Tenn. Comp. R. & Regs. Rule 1260-1-15.

(n12)Footnote 12. See generally Tucker, Annot., Real-Estate Agents' and Brokers' Professional Liability Insurance, 35 A.L.R.5th 83 (1996) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Murray v. Greenwich Ins. Co., 533 F.3d 644, 647 (8th Cir. 2008) ; United Fire & Casualty, 105 Ill. App. 3d 1048, 1050, 61 Ill. Dec. 799, 435 N.E.2d 496, 498 (1982) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Crum and Forster Managers Corp. v. Resolution Trust Corp., 156 Ill. 2d 384, 189 Ill. Dec. 756, 620 N.E.2d 1073, 1081 (1993) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Britton v. Smythe, Cramer Company, 139 Ohio App. 3d 337, 743 N.E.2d 960, 968-969 (2000) , appeal denied, 91 Ohio St.3d. 1419, 741 N.E.2d 145 (2001) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Cf. Beyer v. Heritage Realty, Inc., 251 F.3d 1155, 1158 (7th Cir. 2001) (policy must be read to cover unintentional violations of RESPA, court refused to read the exclusion of violations of deceptive trade practices law as covering a broker's failure to disclose its affiliation with a title service company).

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the law firm of Jacobus, Boltz, Melamed & Witherspoon, Houston, Texas. Sections 2.06 and 2.07 were written by Sandra Bullington, who has contributed additional updates throughout the chapter.

23 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 3.syn

§ 3.syn Synopsis to Chapter 3: The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

§ 3.01 Public Trust Has Shaped Brokerage Law

§ 3.02 Regulation of Real Estate Licensees

§ 3.03 Sources of Brokerage Law

§ 3.04 Application of the Caveat Emptor Doctrine in Real Estate Brokerage

§ 3.05 National Association of Realtors(R) Code of Ethics

§ 3.06 Megan's Laws and Real Estate Brokers

[1] History of Megan's Laws

[2] "Megan's Laws"--History and Purposes

[3] The Effect of Megan's Laws Upon Licensee Disclosure Obligations

[4] State Megan's Laws

§ 3.07 Common Law of Agency

[1] Creation of an Agency Relationship

[2] Commencement of Fiduciary Duties

[3] An Agent's Duties

[4] Duty to Perform

[5] Duty to Exercise Reasonable Care and Skill

[6] Duty of Disclosure to the Principal

[7] Duty to Effect a Sale to the Principal's Best Advantage

[8] Duty to Follow the Principal's Instructions

[9] Duty to Account

[10] Duty to Present All Offers

[11] Duty of Loyalty

[12] Duty to Advise

[13] Broker Cannot Have an Interest in the Agency's Subject Matter Without the Principal's Consent

§ 3.08 Duties Owed to the Seller by a Buyer's Broker

§ 3.09 Negligence

§ 3.10 Subagency

[1] Duties of a Subagent

[2] Selling Broker's Relationship with Seller and Purchaser

[3] Agency Law Applied to Selling Broker and Purchaser

[4] Gratuitous Agency

§ 3.11 Insider Trading

§ 3.12 When Do a Broker's Duties Terminate?

§ 3.13 Breach of a Broker's Duty Under Agency Law

[1] Damages for Breach of a Broker's Duty

[2] Effect of a Breach of a Broker's Duty Upon the Broker's Right to Compensation

[3] Damages Arising from a Broker's Self-Dealing

§ 3.14 Common Law Defense of Manager's Privilege

§ 3.15 A Broker's Use of an Independent Inspector's Report as a Defense in a Buyer's Action

§ 3.16 Duties Owed to a Buyer by a Seller's Broker

[1] A Seller's Broker Must Deal Honestly and Fairly with a Buyer

[2] Duty to Investigate

[3] Negligent Misrepresentation

[4] Innocent Misrepresentation

[5] Intentional or Fraudulent Misrepresentation

[6] Fraudulent Concealment

[7] Defenses Against a Buyer's Misrepresentation Claims

[8] Recovery of Damages for Misrepresentations

[9] Duty to Present the Buyer's Offer

[10] Duty to Inspect

[a] Residential Property in California

[b] Duty to Inspect in Other States

§ 3.17 Duties of a Buyer's Broker to Provide the Buyer with a Seller Disclosure Statement

§ 3.18 "As Is" Clauses in Sales Contracts

§ 3.19 Duties Unique to Common Interest Properties

§ 3.20 Single-Party and Single Agent Brokers

§ 3.21 Dual Agency

[1] Dual Agency Is Problematic

[2] Common Law and Dual Agency

[3] Statutory Authorization of Dual Agency

[4] Duties of a Dual Agent

[5] Remedies for Failure to Disclose Dual Agency

[6] Representation of Competing Buyers by Agents Associated with the Same Broker

§ 3.22 Transactional Brokers and Facilitators

[1] Transaction Brokers Are Not Agents of Either Party

[2] Duties of a Transaction Broker

[3] Transaction Brokers Are Liable Only for Damages Their Conduct Causes

[4] Statutory Duty to Provide a Disclosure Statement Regarding the Parties' Relationship

§ 3.23 Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

§ 3.24 Duty to Provide a Residential Property Disclosure Statement

§ 3.25 Duties with Respect to Earnest Money Deposits

§ 3.26 Powers of Attorney

§ 3.27 Are Brokers Professionals for Malpractice Statutes of Limitations?

[1] What Is a Professional?

[2] Courts Holding that Brokers Are Not Professionals

[3] Courts Holding that Brokers Are Professionals or Can Commit Malpractice

[4] Statutory Requirements When Suing a Broker

§ 3.28 Duties Owed to Third Party Holders of Security Interests

§ 3.29 Duties and Obligations Arising from Lock Boxes

§ 3.30 Broker's Duty with Respect to Open Houses and Property Showings

§ 3.31 Broker Duties Under Consumer Protection Laws

§ 3.32 Duties and Liabilities Arising from Broker Referrals of Third Parties

§ 3.33 Brokers Acting in Several Capacities

§ 3.34 Negligent Hiring of Agents and Salespersons

§ 3.35 Valuation Opinions

§ 3.36 Unauthorized Practice of Law May Constitute Negligence

§ 3.37 Exculpatory Clauses

§ 3.38 Integration, Merger and Disclaimer Clauses

§ 3.39 Economic Loss Rule

24 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Scope

Scope

SCOPE

A real estate broker's duties depend upon the broker's role in the underlying real estate transaction. In turn, who the broker represents, the client's goals, and the type of relationship entered into by the broker and client determine the broker's role. A broker representing a seller is going to owe different duties to his or her client and other parties involved in the transaction than a broker representing a buyer. A broker who has entered into a fiduciary relationship will have greater duties than a broker who has entered into a non-fiduciary relationship.

Traditionally, brokers and agents usually represented sellers. With lesser frequency, brokers and agents represented buyers. When all parties were apprised of the facts and consented, a broker or agent could represent the buyer and the seller. At common law, a broker was a fiduciary subject to the same duties as any other fiduciary. When a broker functions as a fiduciary, the broker has a position of great trust and confidence commanding the utmost good faith and loyalty toward the principal.

The advent of brokerage relationship acts has altered a broker or agent's duties as these acts typically specify a licensee's duties and obligations and address the application of the common law to brokerage relationships that arise after passage of the act. While these acts have sought to remove the confusion and misunderstandings of consumers with respect to brokerage relationships, they have often complicated determining a broker's duties and obligations. If a situation arises that is not covered by the act, courts often turn to the common law of agency in determining the consequences. In some instances an act will specify a broker's duties, but will fail to state the remedies available for a violation of these duties. In this situation, courts often look to common law.

Statutes and regulations regarding a broker's duties and obligations vary from state to state. This makes it difficult to make generalizations that apply uniformly. Readers are advised to review the specific statutes and regulations that apply to their case. Furthermore, case law regarding a broker's duties and obligations is also far from uniform.

The extent of a broker's duties will also be affected by whether a residential or commercial transaction is involved and the level of sophistication of the client. These are factors that make the facts and circumstances of each case relevant to a court's decision when a broker is alleged to have committed a tort or a breach of contract.

This Chapter covers duties that arise from the broker's relationship with his or her client as well as duties owed to third parties involved in the transaction or affected by the brokerage relationship. Though real estate licensees go by various terms (broker, agent, salesperson), this Chapter will often use the broader term of licensee.

25 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART I. Evolution of Real Estate Brokerage Law

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.01

§ 3.01 Public Trust Has Shaped Brokerage Law

Though courts disagree on whether real estate licensees are professionals (see § 3.27, below), the public reposes trust in these licensees. One court summed up the unique position that licensees occupy:

Real estate brokers are often in a very commanding position with respect to both sellers and buyers of residential property. The real estate broker's relationship to the buyer is such that the buyer usually expects the broker to protect his interest. This trust and confidence derives from the potential value of the broker's service; houses are infrequently purchased and require a trained eye to determine value and fitness. In addition, financing is often complex. Unlike other commodities, houses are rarely purchased new and there are virtually no remedies for deficiencies in fitness. In some respects the broker-buyer relationship is akin to the attorney-client relationship; the buyer, like the client, relies heavily on another's acquired skill and knowledge, first because of the complexity of the transaction and second because of his own dearth of experience. n1

This "commanding position" has shaped the contours of regulatory, statutory and judicial law with respect to real estate licensees. Abuses of the trust inherent in this commanding position were frequent enough to require regulation of this industry.

Brokers essentially operate in a state-created monopoly. n2 For example, unlicensed individuals are typically denied the right to sue for a commission on the sale of real estate (see § 4.05, below). The advent of multiple listing services (MLS) added to the monopoly feel of the real estate brokerage industry. Consumers can only access the MLS through an individual real estate broker. Thanks to the MLS, brokers possess a virtually unparalleled knowledge concerning available homes and their listing and actual sales prices. n3 One court has stated:

Parties to real estate transactions frequently do not deal on equal terms. Real estate brokers are licensed professionals, possessing superior knowledge of the realty they sell and the real estate market generally. Prospective purchasers recognize this expertise and tend to rely on a broker's representations. Just as purchasers are entitled to rely on an owner's representations, [citation omitted] purchasers should be entitled to rely on the broker's representations. n4

Given the high degree of reliance, if not dependence, upon brokers, a broker's failings, real or imagined, in a deal gone sour may serve as a lightning rod for dispute. Lawsuits against brokers have increased and this growth has been attributed to a combination of factors. The broker may be the only professional in the transaction, with the principals being consumers. n5 The broker's high visibility in the transaction, coupled with the maintenance of an ongoing business which can pay judgments, make the broker "an easy target for an unhappy buyer or seller." n6

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lane v. Oustalet, 850 So. 2d 1143, 1151 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002) rehearing denied, 840 So. 2d 716 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 873 So. 2d 92 (Miss. 2004) , quoting Comment, A Reexamination of the Real Estate Broker-Buyer-Seller Relationship, 18 Wayne L. Rev. 1343 (1972).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Menzel v. Morse, 362 N.W.2d 465, 474 (Iowa 1985) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cf. Asleson v. Westbranch Land Co., 311 N.W.2d 533, 538 (N.D. 1981) ("The Multiple Listing Service is a corporation whose members, by way of a daily listing sheet, exchange information on real estate they have for sale.").

(n4)Footnote 4. Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757, 763 (Alaska 1982) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757 (Alaska 1982) ; Henszey, Broker's Liability Cause for Concern, 8 Real Est. Rev. 57, 58 (1978-79).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757 (Alaska 1982) ; Henszey, Broker's Liability Cause for Concern, 8 Real Est. Rev. 57, 58 (1978-79).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

26 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART I. Evolution of Real Estate Brokerage Law

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.02

§ 3.02 Regulation of Real Estate Licensees

Historically, the common law of agency applied to real estate brokers and the doctrine of caveat emptor was the primary rule between the seller and the buyer. Since the broker was an agent of his or her principal, the protective cloak of the caveat emptor doctrine often protected the broker as well as the broker's principal.

When states began licensing those who brokered real estate transactions for compensation, additional laws affected brokers and agents. These laws typically address the licensee's qualification and conduct. The licensing of real estate professionals has been required in many states for more than a century. n1 Through licensing, legislatures sought to keep unscrupulous individuals out of the real estate brokerage industry. Courts have recognized the potential for brokers to act in their own interest rather than that of their client. One court in addressing the potential for mischief stated:

The intrinsic nature of the [real estate] business combines with practice and tradition to attest the need of regulation. The real estate broker is brought by his calling into a relation of trust and confidence. Constant are the opportunities by concealment and collusion to extract illicit gains. We know from our judicial records that the opportunities have not been lost. n2

Licensing seeks to protect the public from dishonest brokers. n3 Typically, under a state's licensing laws, real estate licensees must meet high standards of honesty, integrity, trustworthiness and competency and the licensing act must be construed in the light of an obvious purpose of protecting the public in the handling of real estate transactions. n4

While the licensing laws affected who could work in the real estate industry, the application of agency law to brokers and agents remained largely unchanged. n5 However, the licensing of real estate professionals helped to remove the protective cloak of the caveat emptor doctrine from these licensees. Generally, the rule of caveat emptor does not apply to those dealing with a real estate licensee. Even though not usually occupying a fiduciary relationship with prospective purchasers, a real estate licensee hired by the seller is expected to be honest, ethical, and competent and is answerable at law for breaches of his or her statutory duty to the public. n6

The regulation of real estate professionals expanded when states added educational requirements and testing for initial licensure and continuing educational requirements for renewal of licenses. The goal of such statutes and regulations is to protect the public by assuring the initial competency and continued competency of licensees.

More recent statutes affecting the real estate brokerage industry have included brokerage relationship acts aimed at clarifying the duties and responsibilities real estate licensees owe to those with whom they deal. n7 Such acts, however, have made it more difficult to state broad generalizations that apply in all jurisdictions. Some of these acts supplant the common law of agency. Some of these acts provide that the common law of agency continues to apply so long as it does not contradict the act. Some of these acts leave the common law of agency intact.

Typically these brokerage relationship acts specify a licensee's duties. These duties will vary depending upon the type of relationship entered into between the parties. Since many statutorily authorize non-agency relationships, they clearly affect a licensee's duties since a non-agency relationship, by definition, would not be subject to agency law. These acts are discussed in greater detail in Chapter 2A, above. However, these acts are discussed in this Chapter in the context of a broker's duties and liabilities.

Residential seller disclosure acts also affect a licensee's duties and liabilities. Many of the disclosure acts statutorily mandate the disclosure form sellers must provide to prospective purchasers. Many of these acts also specifically state that the representations made in the disclosure statement are that of the sellers and not the seller's broker or agent. One effect of these acts has been to provide a defensive shield to the broker and agent when a buyer is disgruntled after the sale and files a lawsuit based upon an alleged misrepresentation in the disclosure document. n8

The regulation of the real estate brokerage industry has attempted to place duties and obligations upon real estate licensees that are commiserate with the trust the public places in these licensees. Licensing laws, brokerage relationship statutes, and residential real estate disclosure laws have affected the duties and liabilities of real estate licensees. This is particularly true with respect to residential real estate. No longer can brokers operate subject only to the constraints of the common law. Furthermore, the contours of real estate brokerage law will continue to change as courts apply brokerage relationship acts.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Cf. Roman v. Lobe, 243 N.Y. 51, 55, 152 N.E. 461, 463 (N.Y. 1926) ("For the better part of a century, real estate brokers in many States, even though not subjected to a test of character and competence, have been prohibited from doing business without a preliminary license."); Dallon, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability and the Effect of the "As Is" Clause, 54 Fla. L. Rev. 395, 396 (2002) ("The occupation of real estate broker or real estate agent ... began in the early nineteenth century.").

(n2)Footnote 2. Roman v. Lobe, 243 N.Y. 51, 54, 152 N.E. 461, 462 (N.Y. 1926).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Smith v. Sullivan, 419 So. 2d 184, 187 (Miss. 1982); Roman v. Lobe, 243 N.Y. 51, 56, 152 N.E. 461, 463 (N.Y. 1926).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Tres' Chic In A Week, L.L.C. v. Home Realty Store, 993 So. 2d 228, 231-32 (La. Ct. App. 2008); Hagar v. Mobley, 638 P.2d 127, 136 (Wyo. 1981).

(n5)Footnote 5. Cf. Carleton v. Tortosa, 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 755, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734, 740 (Cal. Ct. App. 1993), review denied, 1993 Cal. LEXIS 3609 (Cal. July 1, 1993) (brokers are subject to two sets of duties: those imposed by regulatory statutes, and those arising from the general law of agency).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Dugan v. Jones, 615 P.2d 1239, 1248 (Utah 1980).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Killearn Partners, Inc. v. Southeast Properties, Inc., 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 425, at *5 (Ga. Ct. App. March 24, 2004) (apparent purpose of Georgia Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions Act was to codify duties owed by a real estate broker to a landlord, buyer, seller, or tenant and to codify a broker's responsibilities to clients and customers, the act is a statute in derogation of the common law, it is axiomatic that statutes adopted in derogation of the common law must be strictly construed and not extended beyond their plain and explicit terms).

See generally Olazabal, Redefining Realtor Relationships and Responsibilities: The Failure of State Regulatory Responses, 40 Harv. J. on Legis. 65 (2003).

(n8)Footnote 8. Cf. Sherman v. Elkowitz, 130 S.W.3d 316, 2004 Tex. App. LEXIS 1609, at *18-*19 (Tex. Ct. App. Feb. 19, 2004) (sellers' agent knew about a prior lawsuit where the sellers had sued the prior owner for property defects, court held that this earlier lawsuit was not required to be disclosed on the Seller's Disclosure Notice, and that the agent and broker could not be liable for nondisclosure of this lawsuit); Dallon, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability and the Effect of the "As Is" Clause, 54 Fla. L. Rev. 395, 428 (2002) ("The real estate industry viewed [Residential Property Disclosure Acts] as means to limit the liability of real estate brokers by imposing affirmative disclosure requirements upon sellers and limiting brokers' duties to investigate or disclose."); Pancak et al., Residential Disclosure Laws: The Further Demise of Caveat Emptor, 24 Real Est. L.J. 291, 310 (1996) ("Statutory seller disclosure legislation is largely the result of the real estate brokerage community's attempt to limit the expansion of a broker's duty to the buyer to inspect and disclose.").

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

27 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART I. Evolution of Real Estate Brokerage Law

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.03

§ 3.03 Sources of Brokerage Law

For most of the twentieth century, real estate licensees were subject to two sets of duties: those imposed by regulatory statutes (such as licensing laws), and those arising from the general law of agency. n1 Application of general agency law entailed a consideration of the agreement between the parties which established the parties' relationship. Historically, a broker had a fiduciary relation with his or her principal and as long as that relation continued, the broker was under a legal obligation as well as a moral duty to give the principal loyal service. n2

During the 1990s, however, most states adopted brokerage relationship acts which specifically address relationships with real estate licensees and the duties and liabilities arising from these relationships. n3 These statutes define the types of relationships a broker can enter into, how these relationships are created, and specify the duties that arise with each type of relationship. Many brokerage relationship acts contain a provision declaring that a broker's duties are as specified in the statute or in rules of the state real estate commission and that such statutes and rules supersede any duties the broker owed to a party to a real estate transaction which are based upon common law principles of agency to the extent that those common law duties are inconsistent with the duties of licensees as specified in this broker statute. n4 Some brokerage relationship acts essentially abrogate the common law claim for breach of fiduciary duty. n5 Consequently, the determination of a broker's duties in most jurisdictions requires an examination of the contract between the parties, the applicable brokerage relationship act, and in some cases, the law of agency. However, the brokerage act will usually take precedence over any conflicts with the law of agency.

Some brokerage relationship acts were enacted to create a statutory agency in order to take the typical real estate agency relationship out of the realm of common law agency. n6 For example, Missouri Revised Statutes § 339.840 specifically provides that the statutory provisions addressing brokerage relationships supersede "the common law of agency with respect to whom the fiduciary duties of an agent are owed in a real estate transaction, but do not limit civil actions for negligence, fraud, misrepresentation or breach of contract." n7

In determining a broker's duties and liabilities the crucial initial question will be what type of relationship exists between the parties. Though agency law principles will continue to apply to some brokerage relationships, many states allow non-agency brokerage relationships. This non-agency relationship is usually referred to as a transaction broker (see § 3.22, below for a discussion of this type of relationship). The non-agency brokerage relationship allows a broker to reap the benefits (i.e., collect his or her commission) without the heavy burden of complying with the high scruples and ethics imposed upon traditional agents (i.e., acting as a fiduciary).

Though provisions stating legislative intent in passing these brokerage relationship statutes advises that a primary goal is disclosure and a better understanding of brokerage relationships, the reality is often that the combination of existing regulatory law and the common law of agency which governed brokerage relationships prior to the passage of the brokerage relationship statute was more rigorous. One court has stated:

We believe the common law existing at the time of the present transaction imposed a greater burden on statutory agents than that imposed by [Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions Act] BRRETA. The pre-BRRETA license law required real estate brokers to disclose what they knew as well as everything they should have known about the condition of the property. On the other hand, BRRETA requires brokers to disclose only what they actually know and to suggest to real estate consumers that they use independent third-party inspections on matters that are outside the real estate broker's expertise. (citations omitted) n8

Despite the enactment of brokerage acts which allow brokers to enter into non-agency relationships with their clients, brokers may continue to serve in relationships which are generally subject to the law of agency by specifically serving as a seller's agent or a buyer's agent. Some states continue to hold that brokers are fiduciaries. n9 Prudent buyers and sellers will opt for a relationship involving fiduciary responsibilities on the part of their broker, rather than entering into a non-agency relationship.

Whether a broker's duties arise from the common law of agency, a brokerage relationship act, or a combination of these laws, the precise duties of a real estate broker must be determined by an examination of the nature of the task the real estate agent undertakes to perform and the agreements the broker makes with the involved parties. n10

Readers are directed to Chapter 2A, above , for a discussion of the brokerage laws of each state and to Chapter 3A, below , for a discussion of a seller and broker disclosure obligations in each state.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Carleton v. Tortosa, 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 755, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734, 740 (Cal. Ct. App. 1993) , review denied, 1993 Cal. LEXIS 3609 (Cal. July 1, 1993) . See also Hercules v. Robedaux, Inc., 110 Wis. 2d 369, 329 N.W.2d 240, 242 (Wis. 1982) (essential feature underlying relation of broker to his employer is that of agency, principles of the law of agency apply throughout).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Owen v. Shelton, 221 Va. 1051, 1054, 277 S.E.2d 189, 191 (Va. 1981) (quoting Olson v. Brickles, 203 Va. 447, 450, 124 S.E.2d 895, 898 (Va. 1962)) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See generally Olazabal, Redefining Realtor Relationships and Responsibilities: The Failure of State Regulatory Responses, 40 Harv. J. on Legis. 65 (2003).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 34-27-87.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Bhayani v. Sood (In re Bhayani), 293 B.R. 911, 915 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2003) , applying Illinois law.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lowdermilk v. Vescova, Building and Realty Co., Inc., 91 S.W.3d 617, 629 (Mo. Ct. App. 2002) , quoting from Sherry A. Mariea and Timothy T. Sigmund, Real Estate Agents Bid Farewell to Common Law, JMOB 96 (March-April 1998).

(n7)Footnote 7. Mo. Rev. Stat. § 339.840.

(n8)Footnote 8. White v. The J.D. Reece Co., 29 Kan. App. 2d 226, 230-231, 26 P.3d 701, 705 (Kan. Ct. App. 2001) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Brown v. Roth, 133 N.C. App. 52, 54, 514 S.E.2d 294, 296 (N.C. Ct. App. 1999) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Cousins v. Realty Ventures, Inc., La. App. 2001-1223, 844 So. 2d 860, 868 (La. Ct. App. 2003), on reh'g amended and aff'd, La. App. 2001-1223, 844 So. 2d 860 (La. Ct. App. 2003), cert. denied, La. 2003-1583, 855 So. 2d 316 (La. 2003), cert. denied, La. 2003-1584, 855 So. 2d 317 (La. 2003). See also Mitchell Realty Group, LLC v. Holt, 266 Ga. App. 217, 218, 596 S.E.2d 625, 626 (2004) (Georgia's Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions Act imposes on brokers a duty to perform the terms of the brokerage engagement made with a seller or buyer).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

28 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART I. Evolution of Real Estate Brokerage Law

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.04

§ 3.04 Application of the Caveat Emptor Doctrine in Real Estate Brokerage

The doctrine of caveat emptor protects certain parties (in particular, sellers and sellers' agents) from claims based upon nondisclosure of readily discoverable defects and declares reliance on certain misrepresentation by other persons to be unreasonable as a matter of law. n1 Under this doctrine, a seller or seller's agent has an obligation to disclose only those defects known by the seller that could not be readily discovered by a reasonable inspection. n2 It has been stated that without the doctrine, nearly every sale would invite litigation instituted by a disappointed buyer. n3

Pursuant to the doctrine of caveat emptor, a duty falls upon the purchaser to make inquiry and examination. n4 This doctrine also states that a buyer has no right to rely on certain representations regarding the property when the true facts are equally open to both parties. n5 The doctrine of caveat emptor therefore precludes the buyer's recovery against a seller when:

- (1) the defect or condition was open to observation or discoverable on reasonable inspection;
- (2) the purchaser had unimpeded opportunity to examine the property; and
- (3) the seller did not engage in affirmative misrepresentation or concealment so reprehensible in nature as to constitute fraud. n6

One of the underlying rationales governing the caveat emptor doctrine is that parties to a real estate transaction generally do not have a special relationship with each other that would occasion a special duty to make disclosures or permit reliance on such representation. n7 However, a real estate licensee does not occupy the position of a lay vendor of property since a broker must meet standards of honesty, integrity, truthfulness, reputation, and competency. n8 Thus, the rule of caveat emptor usually does not apply to those dealing with a real estate licensee. Even though the licensee may not occupy a fiduciary relationship with prospective purchasers, a broker is expected to be honest, ethical, and competent and is answerable at law for breaches of his or her statutory duty to the public. n9

Even if a broker has no disclosure obligations with respect to a property, a broker is generally expected to respond honestly to any direct inquiry. Generally, if the seller's broker is questioned directly about specific defects, or if the broker has knowledge of specific defects that affect health or safety and the defect is not known to or readily observable by the buyer, the broker has a duty to disclose and is liable for damages for nondisclosure. n10

Despite the rejection of the caveat emptor doctrine in the context of brokers and agents and the widespread requirement of residential real estate seller disclosure statements (see Chapter 3A, below), the doctrine of caveat emptor continues to be viable in some jurisdictions even when a broker or agent is involved. For example, even though sellers of Ohio residential real estate are statutorily required to provide various residential property disclosures, the disclosure statute has not eliminated the common-law doctrine of caveat emptor. n11

Readers are advised to consult applicable law to determine the status of the doctrine of caveat emptor as the validity of this doctrine varies from jurisdiction to jurisdiction and may be affected by whether the subject property is residential or non-residential. Application of this doctrine may also be affected by the status of the property as either new or used real estate. n12

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Allison v. Cook, 139 Ohio App. 3d 473, 487, 744 N.E.2d 254, 263 (Ohio Ct. App. 2000) . Bowman v. Presley, 2009 OK 48, 212 P.3d 1210, 1221 (Okla. 2009) See generally Dallon, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability and the Effect of the "As Is" Clause, 54 Fla. L. Rev. 395, 412-413 (2002).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Blake v. John Doe 1, 89 Ohio App. 3d 130, 133, 623 N.E.2d 1229, 1231 (Ohio Ct. App. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Layman v. Binns, 35 Ohio St. 3d 176, 177, 519 N.E.2d 642, 644 (Ohio 1988) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Layman v. Binns, 35 Ohio St. 3d 176, 177, 519 N.E.2d 642, 644 (Ohio 1988) Niermeyer v. Cook's Termite & Pest Control, Inc., 2006 Ohio 640, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 579, at *14 (Feb. 16, 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Layman v. Binns, 35 Ohio St. 3d 176, 177, 519 N.E.2d 642, 643-644 (Ohio 1988) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Layman v. Binns, 35 Ohio St. 3d 176, 177, 519 N.E.2d 642, 644 (Ohio 1988) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Allison v. Cook, 139 Ohio App. 3d 473, 487, 744 N.E.2d 254, 263 (Ohio Ct. App. 2000) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Dugan v. Jones, 615 P.2d 1239, 1248 (Utah 1980) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Dugan v. Jones, 615 P.2d 1239, 1248 (Utah 1980) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Gaulden v. Mitchell, 849 So. 2d 192, 196 (Ala. Ct. App. 2002) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Pettit v. Hughes, 177 Ohio App. 3d 344, 348-49, 894 N.E.2d 738, 741-42 (2008) , discretionary appeal not allowed, 120 Ohio St. 3d 1488, 2009 Ohio 278, 900 N.E.2d 198 (2009) ; Rogers v. Hill, 124 Ohio App.3d 468, 471, 706 N.E.2d 438, 440 (Ohio App. 1998) ; Nunez v. J.L. Sims Co., Inc., 2003 Ohio 3386, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3075, at *16-*18 (Ohio Ct. App. June 27, 2003) , discretionary appeal denied, 100 Ohio St. 3d 1471, 2003 Ohio 5772, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 2865 (2003) , reconsideration denied, 100 Ohio St. 3d 1550, 2003 Ohio 6879, 800 N.E.2d 754, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 3564 (2003) . See also Ohio Rev. Code § 5302.30(J) ("The disclosure requirements of this section do not bar, and shall not be construed as barring, the application of any legal or equitable defense that a transferor of residential real property may assert in a civil action commenced against the transferor by a prospective or actual transferee of that property."). See also Blaylock v. Cary, 709 So. 2d 1128, 1130 (Ala. 1997) (Because Alabama adheres to the caveat emptor rule in the sale of used residential property, a seller ordinarily has no duty to disclose to the purchaser any defects in the property.). Daly v. Kochanowicz, 67 A.D.3d 78, 91, 884 N.Y.S.2d 144, 153 (2009) (New York adheres to the doctrine of caveat emptor and imposes no duty on the seller or the seller's agent to disclose information concerning the premises when the parties deal at arm's length, unless there is some conduct on the part of the seller or the seller's agent which constitutes active concealment.).

(n12)Footnote 12. Cf. Moore v. Prudential Residential Services Limited Partnership, 849 So. 2d 914, 923 (Ala. 2002) , rehearing denied, 2002 Ala. LEXIS 379 (Ala. Nov. 15, 2002) (Although Alabama has abrogated the rule of caveat emptor in the sale of new real estate, that rule still applies in the sale of used real estate. In the sale of used real estate, a seller or the seller's agent generally has no duty to disclose to the purchaser any defects in the property.).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

29 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART I. Evolution of Real Estate Brokerage Law

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.05

§ 3.05 National Association of Realtors(R) Code of Ethics

Courts have turned to published ethical standards and practices of real estate brokers to determine the requisite skill and knowledge, and acceptable practices, of members in good standing in that occupation. n1 The Code of Ethics of The National Association of Realtors(R) has been found in some state real estate commission manuals. n2

The National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR) Code of Ethics requires that Realtors(R) disclose material facts to buyers and sellers. n3 This Code of Ethics has also been applied in other contexts with respect to a licensee's duties. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Menzel v. Morse, 362 N.W.2d 465, 472 (Iowa 1985) ; Durbin v. Ross, 276 Mont. 463, 476, 916 P.2d 758, 766 (Mont. 1996) .

See also:

Arizona: Baker v. Leight, 91 Ariz. 112, 117-18, 370 P.2d 268, 271 (1962) ("It is immaterial as to whether the broker is a member of the National Association if it is definitely established that this Association's Code of Ethics has been adopted and is applicable to those in the real estate profession in this state.").

California: Pepper v. Underwood, 48 Cal. App. 3d 698, 714, 122 Cal. Rptr. 343, 355 (1975) , overruled on other grounds by, Stout v. Turney, 22 Cal. 3d 718, 730, 150 Cal. Rptr. 637, 644, 586 P.2d 1228, 1235 (1978) ("Upon proper proof that the Canons of Ethics adopted by the National Association of Real Estate Agents, established standards of conduct to be adhered to and which were adhered to by real estate brokers and agents in the Santa Barbara area, such canons would be admissible as rebuttable evidence of such standard of care.").

Montana: Hoefer v. Wilckens, 210 Mont. 218, 226-227, 684 P.2d 468, 472 (1984) (Trial court's findings of specific acts or omissions constituting broker malpractice "based largely on the standard of care required of realtors in Lake County under the Code of Ethics and Standards of Practice of the National Association of Realtors.' ").

New York: Costanzo v. Long Island Board of Realtors, 143 A.D.2d 625, 532 N.Y.S.2d 904, 905, 1988 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9514 (1988) (A hearing was held before the Professional Standards Committee which subsequently dismissed charges that the petitioners had interfered with another licensee's listings, but sustained a charge that the petitioners violated article 3 of the National Association of Realtors(R) Code of Ethics by failing to inform the public that they were brokers in their solicitation notice. A fine of $ 500 was imposed. Court affirmed the order dismissing the petitioners' action seeking a review of the Board's determination that they violated the National Association of Realtors(R) Code of Ethics.)

Washington: Burien Motors, Inc. v. Balch, 9 Wash. App. 573, 578, 513 P.2d 582, 586 (1973) , review denied, 83 Wash. 2d 1005, 1974 Wash. LEXIS 971 (1974) ("The evidence also showed that under the 'Standards of Practice and the Code of Ethics of the Seattle-King County Real Estate Board,' to which [the broker] subscribed, he was required to check city or county zoning regulations applicable to real property to be sold or leased and to endeavor to keep informed concerning information substantially affecting those interests.' ").

(n2)Footnote 2. Cf. Menzel v. Morse, 362 N.W.2d 465, 472 (Iowa 1985) (1978 Real Estate Manual issued by the Iowa Real Estate Commission contains the National Association of Realtor Code of Ethics).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bazal v. Rhines, 600 N.W.2d 327, 329 (Iowa Ct. App. 1999) . See also Crutchley v. First Trust & Sav. Bank, 450 N.W.2d 877, 880 (Iowa 1990) (proof of breach of standards specified in Code of Ethics establishes a violation of realtor's duties under Listing Agreement with seller).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Menzel v. Morse, 362 N.W.2d 465, 473 (Iowa 1985) (violation of NAR Code of Ethics Article 17 banning the unauthorized practice of law is evidence upon which a trier of fact may find negligence).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

30 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART I. Evolution of Real Estate Brokerage Law

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.06

§ 3.06 Megan's Laws and Real Estate Brokers

[1] History of Megan's Laws

Passage of legislation commonly called "Megan's Laws" began in 1994 when Congress enacted the Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children and Sexually Violent Offender Registration Program. n1 Under this legislation, the Attorney General of the United States was required to establish guidelines for state programs requiring persons convicted of crimes against minors or crimes of sexual violence to register a current address with state law enforcement officials. n2 The federal law gave the states three years from September 1, 1994, to comply. n3 Failure to implement a registration program would result in the loss of some federal funding. n4 The various state Megan's Law seek to protect the community from the dangers of recidivism by sexual offenders. n5

The resulting state laws provide for sex offender registration and community notification by law enforcement authorities of the residence addresses of certain sex offenders. In the federal Megan's Law, Congress requires that states notify the public when sexually violent offenders are released from prison or paroled, and their expected addresses. Federal law leaves the procedure and mechanics of implementation up to the states, including the definition of degree of danger imposed and type of notification required.

This section discusses Megan's laws in the context of real estate brokerage. This discussion identifies the state Megan's laws and addresses related disclosure issues affecting real estate brokers. Nearly half the states have addressed the disclosure of a real estate licensee with respect to the presence of registered sex offenders in the vicinity of residential property they are selling. For those jurisdictions yet to address this issue, the discussion concludes with suggestions of ways for real estate brokers to approach the question of whether there is a duty to disclose information about the presence of sex offenders in the community.

[2] "Megan's Laws"--History and Purposes

The issue of community notification of the addresses of sex offenders catapulted into the national news with the October 1994 passage of "Megan's Law" by the New Jersey legislature. The lawmakers named the Sex Offender Registration and Community Notification Act in memory of Megan Kanka, a seven-year-old girl who was raped and murdered by a convicted sex offender. Unknown to Megan's parents, neighbors and the local police, the offender was a roommate of one of the Kankas' neighbors in suburban Trenton, New Jersey. After Megan's death, her parents took their cause to the New Jersey legislature, contending that they could have prevented their daughter's death if there had been a way to warn them that this man was living in their community. The Kanka family urged the state to adopt a sex offender registration and community notification law.

Registries containing the home addresses of released criminals for use by law enforcement personnel were authorized by law before the passage of the Megan's laws, but community notification was a new concept. The broad purpose of these statutes is law enforcement, crime control, and crime prevention. Preventing convicted sex offenders from repeating their crimes is a critical goal. Studies have shown that sex offenders whose victims are children or young people under age 18 have a higher rate of recidivism than other types of offenders. n6 Heightened community awareness of convicted and paroled sex offenders living in the vicinity is an important role in crime prevention. Since many convicted sex offenders and sexual predators are on parole, it is crucial to have an effective system of community notification of the residence addresses of convicted and released sex offenders. Community notification offers potential victims, and those responsible for potential victims, information that might alert them to the nearby presence of a released known sex offender and thus enable them to take precautions for their safety.

Megan's Laws have generated much litigation since their passage. Most litigation has concerned the constitutionality of these laws as written or as applied to the offender. n7 Megan's laws highlight the competing interests between the right of people to be safe in their homes and neighborhoods and the privacy rights of the individual convicted, but released, sex offender. The courts have upheld sex offender and community notification laws as constitutional in the great majority of jurisdictions where convicted sex offenders have challenged them. n8 In the few cases in which the courts have stricken the community notification portions of these laws as unconstitutional, it has been, primarily, on the ground that the laws cannot be retroactively applied. n9 These rulings have not eliminated sex offender registries, but instead have limited the earliest information available to the public to the effective date of the community notification laws.

[3] The Effect of Megan's Laws Upon Licensee Disclosure Obligations

The effect of these laws on the residential real estate industry is an unintended result of legislative action and the demand for increased disclosures in the sale of residential property. Essentially, the issue raised by the sex offender registries is whether a known sex offender living in the vicinity of a residence is an off-site hazard that must be disclosed to the prospective purchaser. Megan's Laws, in and of themselves, do not impose any statutory duty on real estate licensees to disclose the contents of the sex offender registry to buyers or tenants of residential property as such statutes do not address real estate transactions. Since information about registered sex offenders is publicly available, the disclosure issues that arise are whether, when, and what information a licensee must or should disclose when a registered sex offender lives in the area of a real estate sale or rental.

Nearly half the state have addressed a licensee's disclosure obligations with respect to Megan's law disclosures. (Such obligations are summarized in Chapter 3A, Federal and State-by-State Summary of Broker's Duty to Disclose, under alphabetical state headings, below.) The basic approaches to the disclosure of a registered sex offender in the vicinity of residential property for sale can be summarized as follows:

- The licensee or the seller must inform a prospective purchaser to contact law enforcement officials for information about the presence of a registered sex offender in the vicinity of the property if this is a matter of concern to them. This approach places the burden of discovering this information upon the prospective purchaser. Essentially, the licensee gives the prospective purchaser guidance on how to find this information should it be of interest to them. This type of disclosure at least points out that this may be an issue the prospective purchaser should consider. States adopting this approach include Alaska, California, Colorado, Louisiana, Minnesota, Montana, New Jersey, and Virginia (see Ch. 3A below for statutory citations under alphabetical state headings).

■ A state may provide that no cause of action can be filed against a licensee for failing to disclose that the property is located in the vicinity of a registered sex offender. This approach is similar to the approach adopted by many states with respect to psychologically stigmatized property. Indeed, some states include this provision in their psychologically impacted property law. Often, statutes adopting this approach also state that if a prospective purchaser makes a direct inquiry about this issue, the seller and licensee must be truthful in their response. States adopting this approach include Arizona, Georgia, Idaho, Michigan, Nevada, North Dakota, and South Carolina (see Ch. 3A below for statutory citations under alphabetical state headings).

■ A state may statutorily provide that data from a sex offender registry is not an adverse material fact or material fact. Since many states require that licensees disclose adverse material facts or material facts known by the licensee, this type of provision directly affects a licensee's disclosure obligation. Some states adopting this approach bar a licensee from knowingly making a false statement regarding the presence of a registered sex offender. States adopting this approach include New Mexico and North Carolina (see Ch. 3A below for statutory citations under alphabetical state headings).

■ A state may statutorily provide that a licensee has no duty to disclose information regarding registered sex offenders. States adopting this approach include Kentucky, n10 Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Texas, and Wisconsin n11 (see Ch. 3A below for statutory citations under alphabetical state headings).

■ A state may require that a licensee disclose any actual knowledge that he or she has of sexual or violent offender registration that pertains to the property in question. Montana has taken this approach. n12

In states that have not addressed a licensee's obligations with respect to sex offenders in the vicinity of a subject property, readers should communicate with the state Realtors(R) associations as some of these organizations have provided guidance to their members on how to deal with this disclosure obligation. Readers are also directed to Chapter 3A, below, for additional disclosure information for each state.

[4] State Megan's Laws

All states and the District of Columbia have passed sex offender registration laws. Most, but not all, states have also provided for community notification. Readers desiring a brief synopsis of the Megan's laws can communicate with KlaasKids Foundation, P.O. Box 925, Sausalito, CA 94966, telephone: (415) 331-6867, fax: (415) 331-5633, E-Mail: klaaskids@pacbell.net, Internet: <http://www.klaaskids.org/>.

To review the states' sex offender registration and community notification statutes, readers are directed to the following statutes:

Alabama: Ala. Code § 15-20-21;

Alaska: Alaska Stat. § 12.63.010;

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 13-3821;

Arkansas: Ark. Code Ann. § 12-12-901;

California: Cal. Penal Code § 290;

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 16-22-101, et seq.

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 54-102r;

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. tit. 11, § 4120;

District of Columbia: D.C. Code Ann. § 22-4001 et seq. ;

Florida: Fla. Stat. § 775.21;

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. § 42-9-44.1;

Hawaii: Haw. Rev. Stat. § 846E-1, et seq. ;

Idaho: Idaho Code § 18-8301, et seq. ;

Illinois: Ill. Comp. Stat. § 730-150/1, et seq.;

Indiana: Ind. Code § 5-2-12-1, et seq. ;

Iowa: Iowa Code § 692A.1 et seq. ;

Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 22-4901, et seq. ;

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 17-510;

Louisiana: La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 15-540, et seq.

Maine: Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 34-A § 11201, et seq.

Maryland: Md. Code Ann., Crim. Proc. § 11-701, et seq. ;

Massachusetts: Mass Gen. Laws ch. 6, § 178C, et seq. ;

Michigan: Mich. Comp. Laws § 28.721, et seq. ;

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. § 243.166;

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 45-33-21, et seq. ;

Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. § 589.400, et seq. ;

Montana: Mont. Code Ann. § 46-23-501, et seq. ;

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. §§ 29-4001-29-4013;

Nevada: Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 179B.010 to 179B.300;

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 651-B:1 to 651-B:10;

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 2C:7-1, et seq. ;

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. §§ 29-11A-1 to 29-11A-8;

New York: N.Y. Correct. Law § 168, et seq. ;

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. § 14-208.5, et seq. ;

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 12.1-32-15;

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. §§ 2950.01 to 2950.99;

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 57, § 581, et seq. ;

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 181.585, et seq. ;

Pennsylvania: Pa. Cons. Stat. tit. 42, ch. 97H, § 9791, et seq.;

Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 11-37.1-1 to 11-37.1-20;

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. § 23-3-400, et seq. ;

South Dakota: S. D. Codified Laws § 22-22-30, et seq. ;

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. §§ 40-39-101 to 40-39-111;

Texas: Tex. Crim. Proc. Code, art. 62.01, et seq.

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 77-27-21.5;

Vermont: Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 13, § 5401, et seq. ;

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. §§ 9.1-900 to 9.1-920;

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 9A.44.130;

West Virginia: W. Va. Code §§ 15-12-1 to 15-12-10;

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. § 301.45;

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. Ann. §§ 7-19-301 to 7-19-307.

While the sex offender registration laws of each state vary, the statute typically contains definitions of sexual predators, sex offenders, and the particular sexual crimes that cause a convicted offender to be required to register upon parole or release. Generally, a sex offender registration board or commission is established to supervise the sex offender registry.

Community notification is the most pertinent part of the Megan's Laws for real estate licensees engaged in residential real estate transactions. How the community notification system works, the amount and quality of the information that can be obtained, and who has access varies from state to state, and may influence brokers' decisions about how to deal with sex offender disclosure issues in those states that have not addressed a licensee's disclosure obligation regarding registered sex offenders.

The sex offender board is also charged with developing guidelines for law enforcement personnel regarding dissemination of sex offender registry information. The community notification component of the states' Megan's Laws typically defines what agency in state government is in charge of maintaining the sex offender registry, and also provides for a county agency or official to maintain a county's sex offender list. The information to be given to the public must be adequate to warn members of the public of potential danger. In some states, tiers (or levels) of notification based on the level of violence of the prior offense(s) and the likelihood of the offender to repeat a sexual offense are established. Some states limit the information from the sex offender registry to name, address, and photograph or description of the offender. The offense for which the offender was convicted may be given. In general, the victim's name is not disclosed (identities of incest victims are occasionally protected by having the crime listed as "sexual offense").

While the procedure for obtaining registry information also varies from state to state, as does the amount of information available for public access, a majority of states provide access to their registry via an Internet Website. If a state has not specifically addressed a licensee's disclosure obligation with respect to registered sex offenders in the vicinity of residential real estate for sale, it is prudent to provide prospective purchasers with information on where and how they can obtain information from that state's registry.

A registered sex offender residing in the vicinity of a subject property is an off-site condition. If a state has not specifically addressed a licensee's disclosure obligations with respect to registered sex offenders, and if form contracts and property disclosures are commonly used, these forms should be reviewed and revised to specify that it is within the buyer's (or tenant's) duty to exercise due diligence to discover facts about off-site conditions if such facts are material to the buyer. Such forms should include a disclaimer of any and all duty of a licensee to investigate off-site conditions, including, but not limited to sex offenders, attractive nuisances, and all other conditions that might cause harm to the buyer or tenant, his or her family, and guests, unless the broker has expressly consented in a writing to do so. These forms should also contain a disclaimer of any and all duty to disclose facts about such off-site conditions, unless the broker has actual knowledge and the buyer cannot discover such facts in the exercise of due diligence. Forms should also include, where relevant, the buyer's acknowledgment and waiver of such efforts on the part of the licensee as are disclaimed in the form. Unless required by statute or regulation, property disclosure statements should not include any disclosure of off-site conditions, and the same disclaimer as described above should be included.

Real estate licensees should acquire a basic, working knowledge of what the Megan's Law in their own states requires in order to give intelligent answers to questions from their clients and customers about the Megan's Law. Licensees should also know where to go for sex offender registry information, be aware of the amount and nature of the information that is available, and be familiar with the procedure for getting the information.

Litigation regarding Megan's laws has primarily centered on the constitutionality of these laws. There are few cases that directly address issues of concern to brokers. One such case is Mulligan v. Panther Valley Property Owners Association,ⁿ¹² which involved a private common-interest residential community (hereafter "community") that had amended its Declarations and bylaws. One amendment declared, in substance and effect, that no individual registered as a Tier 3 offender under New Jersey's Megan's Lawⁿ¹³ could reside in the community. Tier 3 is the highest classification within New Jersey's Megan's Law.ⁿ¹⁴ The appellate court reversed the trial court's decision upholding the validity of this amendment as the record before it was insufficient to determine whether this amendment was contrary to public policy. The court stated that the record did not disclose the number of common interest developments in New Jersey and whether they had adopted comparable restrictions, or whether the association performed quasi-municipal functions.ⁿ¹⁵ Though this case raised an issue that would be of direct interest to brokers, the case provided no clear cut substantive answers.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. 103-322, title XVII, Sec. 170101, 108 Stat. 2038 (Sept. 13, 1994) (codified at 42 U.S.C. §§ 14071, et seq.). See 3.06[4] below for discussion of state Megan's Laws. The effect of Megan's Laws on disclosure requirements for real estate brokers is summarized in Chapter 3A, Federal and State-by-State Summary of Broker's Duty to Disclose, under alphabetical state headings, below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 42 U.S.C. § 14071(a)(1)(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 14071(f)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 42 U.S.C. § 14071(f)(2)(A) (1994).

(n5)Footnote 5. See In re Registrant C.A., 146 N.J. 71, 80, 679 A.2d 1153, 1157 (N.J. 1996), citing N.J. Stat. Ann. 2C:7-1a.

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Turvey, M.S., Brent E., Dangerousness: Predicting Recidivism in Violent Sex Offenders (Knowledge Solutions, LLC, 1997) (Internet: <http://www.corpus-delicti.com/danger.html>)).

Cf. Connecticut Dept. of Public Safety v. Doe, 538 U.S. 1, 3, 123 S. Ct. 1160, 1162, 155 L. Ed. 2d 98, 103 (2003) (sex offenders are a serious threat in this nation, victims of sex assault are most often juveniles, when convicted sex offenders reenter society they are much more likely than any other type of offender to be re-arrested for a new rape or sex assault).

(n7)Footnote 7. See generally Heaphy, Comment, Megan's Law: Protecting the Vulnerable or Unconstitutionally Punishing Sex Offenders?, 7 Seton Hall Const. L.J. 913 (1997).

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Smith v. Doe, 538 U.S. 84, 105-106, 123 S. Ct. 1140, 1154, 155 L. Ed. 2d 164, 185 (2003) (Alaska Sex Offender Registration Act); Connecticut Dept. of Public Safety v. Doe, 538 U.S. 1, 7-8, 123 S. Ct. 1160, 1164-1165, 155 L. Ed. 2d 98, 105 (2003) (Connecticut's sex offender registry); A.A. v. State of New Jersey, 341 F.3d 206, 214 (3rd Cir. 2003) (registrants challenged the creation of a public internet registry posting personal information about convicted sex offenders, court held that state's compelling interest in preventing sex offenses substantially outweighs any interest the registrants may have in not having public yet scattered information compiled); Cutshall v. Sundquist, 193 F.3d 466, 483 (6th Cir. 1999) (Tennessee Sex Offender Registration and Monitoring Act is not unconstitutional either in its registration provision or its notification provision); Roe v. Office of Adult Probation, 125 F.3d 47 (2d Cir. 1997) (Connecticut Megan's Law does not violate Ex Post Facto Clause); E.B. v. Verniero, 119 F.3d 1077 (3d Cir. 1997) (New Jersey Megan's Law does not violate Ex Post Facto or Double Jeopardy Clauses. Due Process Clause requires state to afford registrant an opportunity to challenge classification and notification plan; state has burden of persuasion at a hearing.); Russell v. Gregoire, 124 F.3d 1079 (Washington Megan's Law does not violate Ex Post Facto, Due Process Clauses, or right to privacy).

(n9)Footnote 9. Article I, § 10 of the U.S. Constitution (the "ex post facto" clause) prohibits the states from enacting any law "which imposes a punishment for an act which was not punishable at the time it was committed or imposes additional punishment to that then prescribed." Cummings v. Missouri, 430 U.S. 277 (4 Wall.), 325-26 (1867). See, e.g., Rowe v. Burton, 884 F. Supp. 1372 (D. Alaska 1994) (holding registration scheme is punitive where dissemination of information will result).

(n10)Footnote 10. Ky. Rev. Stat. § 324.162 provides that licensees have no affirmative disclosure duties outside of federal and Kentucky Revised Statutes Chapter 324.

(n11)Footnote 11. In Wisconsin, if a licensee is asked about sex offenders or the registry, the licensee must disclose any knowledge that the licensee actually has. The licensee is granted immunity from liability if the licensee provides the person with certain information about the registry. See Wis. Stat. § 452.24.

(n12)Footnote 12. Mont. Code Ann. § 37-51-105, discussed in Montana summary of Chapter 3A below .

(n13)Footnote 12. 337 N.J. Super. 293, 766 A.2d 1186 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2001) .

(n14)Footnote 13. See N.J. Stat. Ann. § 2C:7-8(c)(3).

(n15)Footnote 14. 337 N.J. Super. 293, 298, 766 A.2d 1186, 1189 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2001) . According to the court, in order for an individual to be classified as a Tier 3 registrant, that individual must be a sex-offender who has been deemed to pose a high risk of re-offending. Factors that inform the decision whether an individual poses a high risk of re-offending include whether the conduct involved repetitive and compulsive behavior, whether the individual served the maximum term of confinement, and whether the sexual offense was committed against a child. Because such an individual poses a substantial risk to the community, the statute directs that notification of the presence of a Tier 3 offender within the community be more widespread than that provided in the instance of Tier 1 or Tier 2 offenders, who have been deemed to pose low and moderate risks of re-offending.

(n16)Footnote 15. 337 N.J. Super. 293, 305-307, 766 A.2d 1186, 1192-1194 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2001) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

31 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART II. Brokers as Fiduciaries

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.07

§ 3.07 Common Law of Agency

[1] Creation of an Agency Relationship

The broker will be considered an agent if the brokerage contract and applicable law creates an agency relationship. Inherently, the creation of a principal and agency relationship creates a fiduciary relationship. When a broker is considered an agent, the duties owed by a broker to his or her principal are the same as those owed by any agent to a principal. n1

Generally, an agency relationship exists when there is

- (1) a manifestation of consent by one person that another shall act on the former's behalf and subject to the former's control and
- (2) the consent of the latter to so act. n2

The key to determining whether an agency relationship exists is the principal's right of control. n3 There is no presumption that an agency exists; a person is presumed to be acting for himself or herself and not as the agent for another. n4

Historically, a broker with whom property was listed for sale became the agent of the seller for the purpose of finding a purchaser. n5 Under agency law, when a broker lists property for sale, the broker owes a duty not to act as the buyer's agent without the seller's consent, and a concomitant duty, if it is considering acting as the buyer's agent, to inform the seller and obtain consent. n6

Brokered transactions often have involved a listing agent and a selling agent. In this situation, the selling agent works with the buyer, but is typically an agent or subagent of the seller. n7 Particular circumstances, however, can warrant different conclusions. If either the listing agent or selling agent expressly or impliedly forms an agency relationship with the buyer, he or she will be an agent of the buyer, in addition to or in lieu of being an agent or subagent of the seller. n8

Prior to the enactment of brokerage relationship acts, it was well settled law that a broker representing a purchaser or seller in a real estate transaction owed a fiduciary duty to the client based upon the agency relationship itself. n9 Even with the passage of broker relationship acts, some states continue to consider brokers who specifically act as a seller's agent to be fiduciaries. n10 However, some states expressly abrogated all common-law fiduciary duties owed to a party employing the broker when the broker is functioning in particular statutorily defined roles. n10.1

As an agent, the broker will be governed by the laws of agency which create a fiduciary obligation upon the part of the broker. As a fiduciary, the broker has a position of great trust and confidence commanding the utmost good faith. n11 A broker cannot put himself or herself in a position that is antagonistic to the principal's interests. n12 The duties imposed on a broker are as exacting as those imposed upon a trustee in favor of beneficiary. n13

The formation of an agency relationship is typically created by a written listing agreement between the seller and the broker, or an equivalent agreement if the principal is a buyer. If the principal is a seller, the object of the agency is to produce a buyer who is ready, willing, and able to purchase the property on the seller's terms. If the principal is a buyer, the object of the agency is to procure a property that meets the buyer's needs on terms set by the buyer.

Prior to the enactment of the broker relationship acts, a broker could find himself or herself in a fiduciary relationship even though the broker and principal did not have a written agreement specifying that an agency relationship had been created between the parties. n14 A agency relationship could arise out of an informal relationship if both parties understood that a special trust had been reposed. By virtue of their license, real estate brokers have been held to a higher standard of competency and fairness than a member of the general public.

Most brokerage relationship acts require a written agreement before there can be an agency relationship between the parties. However, even with the advent of brokerage relationship acts, in some jurisdictions a broker can still find himself or herself in a fiduciary relationship even though there is no written listing or representation agreement. n15

[2] Commencement of Fiduciary Duties

The fiduciary relationship between broker and client ordinarily does not exist prior to the time the parties enter into an agency agreement. n16 The broker is not generally subject to a fiduciary duty in deciding upon terms with a prospective client as to the broker's compensation. n17 In Action Real Estate Corp. v. Bulechek, n18 the Iowa Supreme Court rejected the seller's effort to impose fiduciary obligations upon a broker in the negotiation and preparation of a listing agreement. In that case, the sellers had listed their farm for sale with a broker. After listing the farm, one of the sellers met an individual who expressed interest in purchasing the farm. When this prospective purchaser examined the farm, the broker was on hand to help show him around. After the transaction closed, the sellers refused to pay a commission. They charged that the broker failed to explain or reveal to them that the listing agreement gave the sellers the right to reserve four prospective buyers from the listing. Likewise, they contended that the broker did not explain the meaning of the term "best efforts" nor the amount of commission to be paid or the method of withdrawing the listing. The broker sued for the commission and, at trial, the sellers requested that the court charge the jury that the broker was subject to special duties by reason of his fiduciary capacity. The trial court's refusal to give that charge was affirmed. The Iowa Supreme Court concluded that the "fiduciary relationship did not exist at the time of the claimed omissions." n19

It is important to note that an agency relationship may arise before the listing agreement is signed where confidential information is given to a real estate licensee because of a consumer's reliance on the former's licensure by the state and reputation for being honest and trustworthy. n20

[3] An Agent's Duties

A broker's duty under agency law principles includes the following:

- The broker will owe a duty of good faith and loyalty to his or her principal. n21
- The broker has a legal responsibility to secure for the principal the best bargain that the broker's skill, judgment and diligence can obtain. n22
- A broker has a duty not to conceal from the principal any material information and to make full, open disclosure of all such information. n23
- A broker cannot, without violating his or her general duty of good faith, act for persons having interests adverse to those of the principal, unless the broker acts with the consent the principal who has been given full knowledge of the facts. n24

The precise duties of a real estate broker must be determined by an examination of the nature of the task the broker undertakes to perform and the agreements the broker makes with the involved parties. n25 In fulfilling these duties, the broker must act with reasonable diligence and with such skill as is ordinarily possessed by persons who are regularly engaged in the real estate brokerage business. n26 Courts have turned to published ethical standards and practices of real estate brokers to determine the requisite skill and knowledge, and acceptable practices, of members in good standing in that occupation. n27 The degree of care and skill required of a broker ordinarily is a question of fact and may require expert testimony. n28 A broker's duty of reasonable skill and care is discussed further in § 3.07[5] below .

When the relationship of principal and agent exists, the ultimate good faith is required in all transactions of the agent towards his or her principal and the agent cannot put himself or herself in a position adverse to that of his principal. Where the agent, employed to purchase for the principal, purchases for himself or herself, all the profits and advantages gained in the transaction belong to the principal and the agent will be held to have taken the property as trustee for his or her principal. n29 Consequently, the broker must refrain from obtaining any advantage over the principal derived from the relationship. n30

The general rule is that brokers have no implied authority to contract on behalf of their principals. A broker's apparent authority must be founded on the principal's actions since a broker cannot by his or her act create evidence of authority. n31

[4] Duty to Perform

The duty to perform concerns the broker's efforts to accomplish the principal's goal. If the broker represents the seller, the goal is to sell the property for the best price possible and on the best terms for the seller. n32 If the broker represents the buyer, the goal is to find a property for the buyer to purchase and pursue the purchase at the best price possible and on the best terms for the buyer. The broker is expected to act to accomplish the principal's goal.

A typical scenario where the issue of a broker's duty to perform arises is where a seller's broker obtains the listing to sell a property and then does nothing. Normally, a seller's broker would enter the property into the Multiple Listing Service, advertise the property in appropriate publications, respond to inquiries about the property, and show the property to prospective purchasers. A seller's broker who does nothing other than obtain the listing has violated the duty to perform.

A broker's duty to perform is often at issue in suits by brokers to collect commissions (see Chapter 4, below for more information on commissions). Courts generally hold that a broker is entitled to the commission stated in the parties' contract if the broker substantially performed the contract through the expenditure of time, effort, or money in marketing the property. n33

The duty to perform has been held to include the duty to use the broker's best efforts to resolve any problems which arise prior to closing so that the transaction can close. n34 A New Jersey court has found that an agent who represented sellers was negligent in failing to monitor the progress of the buyers' mortgage loan application. n35

However, it has also been held that there was no authority for a seller's assertion that a broker's alleged failure to prepare documents in time for closing constituted a breach of fiduciary duty. The contracts stated that the seller would provide evidence of good title, would convey the property by warranty deed, and would pay all taxes which would be prorated on the day of closing. Neither the contracts nor the listing agreement expressly required the broker to prepare documents for closing. The court stated that while brokers frequently performed these services for their clients, the court would not imply such a duty where none was expressed. n36

Statler v. Banker Multiple Line Insurance Company n37 dealt with the issue of whether the words, "I'll look into it" obligated a broker to perform certain services. The broker stated that he would look into a piece of property for the plaintiffs. When the plaintiffs would communicate with the broker about this parcel, he would respond that he was busy, but he would look into it. The land was sold to a third party. The plaintiffs sued alleging that the broker had deprived them of the opportunity to bid on and purchase the property. The court found that the casual phrase, "I'll look into it" was not the basis of a contract nor did it obligate the broker to do more than research the property and attempt to contact the plaintiffs. The court affirmed the trial court's decision which found that the broker had not breached any standard of care that may have been applicable. n38

[5] Duty to Exercise Reasonable Care and Skill

A real estate broker is a professional n39 who holds himself or herself out as trained and experienced to render a specialized service in real estate transactions. n40 A broker who is employed by a principal to act as an agent in a transaction must exercise reasonable care and skill, or the care and skill ordinarily possessed and used by other persons employed in a similar undertaking. n41 However, it has also been stated that an agent has a duty to use the degree of diligence and care which a reasonable prudent person would ordinarily exercise in the transaction of his or her own business. n42

In assessing the broker's performance of his or her fiduciary duty, it is appropriate to consider the education and understanding of the principal. n43 Brokers representing unsophisticated clients are expected to fully explain terms and conditions to such clients. This duty may not exist to the same extent when the client is an experienced and sophisticated real estate investor. n44

In assessing whether a broker has exercised reasonable skill and care, courts often consider the usual and customary practices of brokers in the subject area. In one case, the seller's broker ordered the survey required for closing shortly before this event was to occur. Because of this timing, an encroachment was discovered only two days prior to closing. This encroachment eventually caused this sale to collapse. The sellers contended that the timing of ordering the survey was a breach of the broker's fiduciary duty. The court rejected this argument because a witness had testified that it was customary for brokers to delay ordering a survey until shortly before the closing in order to avoid an unnecessary expense if the sale did not close. n45

[6] Duty of Disclosure to the Principal

A person employing a broker bargains for the skill, diligence and zeal of the broker for his or her exclusive benefit. n46 As a fiduciary, the real estate agent or broker must reveal all facts within his or her knowledge to the principal that might affect the principal's decisions, rights, and interests. n47 Such disclosures should be made in a timely fashion. Because of the affirmative obligations arising from the fiduciary relationship, the defense of caveat emptor does not apply when a broker fails to disclose to his or her clients facts known by the broker that are material to the transaction. n48

A broker's fiduciary duty to his or her client can be substantially more extensive than a nonfiduciary duty codified in a statute. n49 A fiduciary who fails to share material information with his or her principal has committed constructive fraud, which is a term of art obviating the need to show fraudulent intent. n50 Constructive fraud is a unique species of fraud applicable to a fiduciary or confidential relationship. n51 This tort consists of any act, omission or concealment involving a breach of legal or equitable duty, trust or confidence which results in damage to another even though the conduct is not otherwise fraudulent. Most acts by an agent in breach of his or her fiduciary duties constitute constructive fraud. The failure of the fiduciary to disclose a material fact to his principal which might affect the fiduciary's motives or the principal's decision, which is known or should be known to the fiduciary, may constitute constructive fraud. Consequently, in contrast to actual fraud, it is easier to prove constructive fraud since there is no need to prove intent to defraud. n52

Brokers acting for sellers have a duty to give to the principal such information as the broker may have of the prospective purchaser's financial situation. If the broker has no knowledge thereof, it is the broker's duty to disclose this fact to the principal, so that the latter may investigate the prospective purchaser's financial situation. n53

A broker's failure to communicate information which might influence the conduct of his principal is a breach of the fiduciary relationship owed to the principal. n54 With respect to a broker's disclosure duties, however, one court has stated that to require that the broker give the principal notice of any conceivable information which might possibly influence the principal would create an oppressive burden on the broker. n55

Despite numerous courts stating that a broker had a duty to communicate all material information affecting the transaction to his or her principal, a Washington court has held that a broker was not required to communicate with its principals, the sellers, that the brokers had guaranteed the loan that the buyers needed to buy the property. The brokers had also failed to disclose to the sellers the lender's reluctance to make the loan or the loan guaranty. The court reasoned that the sellers did not have a right to approve or disapprove the manner in which the buyers acquired a loan. n56

Despite a broker having a duty to disclose information known by him or her to the principal, this does not create a duty for the broker to learn everything about the property. Buyers are responsible for discerning material facts that are unknown to the broker or outside the broker's expertise or expected area of inquiry. n57

For a detailed discussion of a broker's disclosure obligations, see Chapter 3A below as well as Appendix 3A-1, Disclosure Law and Regulatory Agency Directory and Appendix 3A-2, Significant Disclosure Cases (both appendices are organized alphabetically by state).

[7] Duty to Effect a Sale to the Principal's Best Advantage

Brokers owe a duty of good faith and loyalty to their principal which results in an obligation to exercise reasonable due care and diligence to effect a sale to the principal's best advantage. n58 If the broker represents the seller, getting a deal to the principal's best advantage means procuring a sale at the highest price and on the terms most favorable to the seller. n59 Conversely, if the broker represents the buyer, getting a deal to the principal's best advantage means procuring a sale at the lowest price and on terms most favorable to the buyer. This is the essence of the broker's duty to perform the agreement between the broker and his or her principal. n60

In an effort to obtain the best deal for his or her principal, the broker need not disclose that a principal who is a seller will accept a lower price for the property. Conversely, a broker representing a buyer need not disclose that the buyer is willing to pay more than initially offered for the property. Thus, a representation by a seller's broker that the seller will not sell for less than a stated sum, knowing that the principal would take less rather than miss the sale, is not a misrepresentation of a material fact that will justify the rescission and cancellation of a contract. n61

A seller's broker must act entirely in good faith and in the interest of the principal; and if the broker induces the prospective buyer to believe that the property can be bought for less, the broker has failed to discharge that duty and forfeits the right to a commission. n62 Such conduct is a breach of faith and contrary to the interests of the principal, and, therefore, is a violation of the fiduciary relationship existing between agent and principal which will preclude the agent from recovering a commission therefrom. n63

A broker is obligated to act solely for the benefit of the principal in all matters connected with the agency; the broker cannot act for the benefit of a third party to the detriment of the principal. n64 To do so will violate the broker's duty to obtain the best deal for the principal.

The Supreme Court of Montana has held that a buyer agent breaches the agent's statutory obligations to a buyer when a buyer agent simultaneously represents more than one buyer competing for the same property. n65 Montana Code § 37-51-313(4)(a) obligates a buyer agent to "act solely in the best interests" of the buyer. The court stated that a conflict of interest was created when a buyer agent simultaneously represents multiple-buyers for the same property in at least two ways. First, if the buyer agent was prevented from revealing confidential information, the buyer agent was prevented from revealing the most important piece of information the agent had to her buyers, i.e., the other buyer's competing bid. n66 Second, assuming the buyer agent was allowed to inform one buyer of another buyer's bid, the buyer agent would be able to drive up the price by pitting the buyers against each other thereby allowing the agent to receive a higher commission. n67 Therefore, a buyer agent, due to inherent conflicts of interest, cannot act solely in the best interests of competing buyers. n68

Though a seller's broker must act in the principal's best interest, this does not necessarily mean that the broker must obtain the highest possible price. An Arizona court declined to hold as a matter of law that a broker or agent must obtain the highest price possible for the property being sold. n69 In doing so, this court stated that though such language had been used in prior opinions, such was not the law in Arizona. The court, quoting from an earlier case stated:

The law requires that a real estate agent, employed to sell land, must act in entire good faith and in the interest of his employer. [citation omitted] To this end he must exact from the purchaser the price, the terms, and conditions of sale which his employer has fixed. [citation omitted] n70

Other than dictum in some cases, the court stated that it could not find any other authority for the proposition that the broker is obligated as a matter of law to obtain the highest price possible for the property. n71 The court noted that there are a variety of reasons why a seller would be willing to sell property for a price under the optimum price available. A seller may be willing to accept less due to tax considerations, quicker liquidity, concession from the purchaser, or a desire to expedite a sale.

However, this court also discussed the broker's duty to inform the seller of any changes in the property's value which might influence the seller's decision to sell. The court stated this was a question of fact as to whether a broker's actions breached duties of good faith, integrity, honesty, and loyalty. The court concluded that such a duty may exist as a sub-duty of the broker's other fiduciary duties, but a breach depended upon the facts of the case, and the jury was entitled to look at the agent's knowledge and any special arrangements or instructions between the principal and agent. n72

[8] Duty to Follow the Principal's Instructions

A broker is bound to act in compliance with the instructions of his or her principal. n73 The broker must be obedient and follow reasonable instructions. n74

The broker is not, however, liable for alleged duties not performed which are not within the contemplation of the agency contract, and the broker has no obligation to the principal by reason of the nonperformance of the contract by the other party. n75 Nor is the broker liable for a mere mistake in judgment which does not result from a failure to know or do that which a person of ordinary prudence under similar circumstances would know or do. n76 Generally, the burden of proof is on the principal to prove an allegation that the broker is guilty of misconduct of failing to follow instructions.

n77

A broker is entitled to no compensation for conduct which is disobedient or is a breach of the broker's duty of loyalty.
n78 When such conduct constitutes a willful and deliberate breach of the parties' contract of service, the conduct disentitles the broker to compensation for even properly performed services. n79 One court stated that this rule received recognition where a broker, unknown to his principal, was paid a commission by both parties to a sale. In such a situation, the danger is that the broker may secure a lower price for his principal's property in order to make it worthwhile for the other party also to pay a commission. This court stated that in some jurisdictions, the principal had been allowed to recover the amount of both commissions. n80

[9] Duty to Account

Most state brokerage licensing statutes and regulations provide for strong controls over accounting procedures to be maintained by licensees. Such statutes and regulations help prevent the possibility of fraud as well as actual fraud. n81 These statutes and regulations also reflect a legislative intent that licensees engaging in advance fee transactions have a duty to account to their principals. n82

"To account for" had been held to mean to pay to the one entitled thereto monies coming into his or her possession which belong to others. n83 Any funds coming into a licensee's hands must be separately accounted for and cannot be commingled with the broker's funds. Real estate brokers are generally required to maintain trust accounts in a banking institution in the licensing state for the sole purpose of depositing earnest money deposits, rental monies, and other monies in which the client or other persons with whom the broker is dealing has an interest. n84

A broker does not need to act with bad faith or malfeasance in order to be in violation of a statute or regulation regarding the broker's handling of client funds. n85

[10] Duty to Present All Offers

A selling broker's failure to present all sales offers to the seller will constitute a breach of the broker's fiduciary duties.
n86

This particular duty may pose problems if a client has instructed the broker not to present offers below a certain dollar amount or with certain contingencies or other terms. The Oklahoma Attorney General has addressed such a situation. In Oklahoma Attorney General Opinion 02-8, n87 the question posed involved a broker who has entered into a listing agreement with a seller whereby the seller has requested that no offers less than the listing price be presented to the seller. This issue was whether such a broker could comply with this instruction. The answer given was, "No." Oklahoma law requires that transaction brokers and single-party brokers timely present all written offers and counteroffers. n88 With respect to single-party brokers, a broker is also required to obey the specific instructions of the party for whom the single-party broker is performing services if such instructions are not contrary to applicable statutes and rules or contrary to the terms of a contract between the parties. n89 Oklahoma's Attorney General stated that Oklahoma statutory law does not contain any exceptions to its mandate that a broker must present all written offers to a seller with whom he or she has a listing agreement. Since a single-party broker is not required to obey directions from a seller that are contrary to applicable statutes and rules and a broker is required to present all bona fide offers, a broker cannot comply with a seller's request not to present below-listing-price offers.

A broker representing a seller may also be liable to the seller for damages caused by the broker's failure to transmit a seller's offer of financing to the purchaser. n90

Virginia's high court has held that a prospective purchaser does not have a cause of action against a seller's broker for failing to convey the prospective purchaser's offer to the seller. n91 However, a Massachusetts court has found that the failure of a seller's broker to submit a purchase offer made by a buyer's broker would support a cause of action filed by the buyer's broker against the seller's broker for violation of Massachusetts General Laws chapter 93A, § 11 (this is part of Massachusetts Consumer Protection law). n92

[11] Duty of Loyalty

A broker owes a fiduciary duty of loyalty to the principal he or she represents. n93 Loyalty is the chief virtue required of a broker. n94 The duty of loyalty requires that the broker act solely for the benefit of the principal in all matters connected with the agency. n95 Generally, a broker will forfeit all rights to a commission if the broker breaches his or her fiduciary duty of loyalty. Embodied in the duty of loyalty is the requirement that the broker keep the principal fully informed of all pertinent facts and that the broker act in good faith and promote the principal's best interests. n96

The following conduct by a broker has been held to violate the broker's duty of loyalty to the principal:

- In a plan to aid a buyer with poor credit, the broker had a condominium purchased by her client titled in the name of the broker's daughter and subsequently the broker evicted the buyer. n97
- Informing a prospective purchaser of the fact that the seller is anxious to sell and that the seller will accept less than the listed price. n98
- Informing a prospective purchaser that the seller wished to sell quickly for health reasons. n99
- Failing to deliver all offers to the sellers. n100
- Playing one group of sellers against the other when the broker was dealing with sellers who had separate interests in the property. n101
- Returning an earnest money deposit to a defaulting purchaser without the seller's authorization when the sales contract gave the seller the right to declare a forfeiture of the purchaser's deposit upon the purchaser's default. n102
- Where the broker knew the principal's financial position and that the principal was relying on the broker to explain the terms of a transaction, failing to fully disclose the material facts of the transaction, especially the fact that after the selling costs, taxes, and commission were paid the principal would have minimal cash from the down payment. n103
- Changing a material term of the listing agreement to the broker's benefit without telling the sellers. n104
- Ordering extensive survey work to benefit the buyer, but then having the cost of the survey work charged to the sellers. n105
- Failing to disclose a substantially higher offer made prior to closing, but after a contract for sale was made with a buyer. n106
- Returning a buyer's earnest money deposit without the seller's knowledge and in violation of the listing agreement. n107

A broker's alleged failure to procure and prepare documents in time for closing was held not to constitute a failure to fulfill the broker's duty of loyalty to the principal. The court refused to imply a duty to procure and prepare these documents when the contracts did not expressly require that the broker undertake this responsibility. n108

A broker's return of earnest money deposit is not a breach of the duty of loyalty if the sale is not consummated because of the seller's default. n109

Perhaps most significantly, a real estate broker can represent more than one principal at a time and can show multiple properties to the same prospective buyer, without breaching the broker's duty of loyalty. n110 The fiduciary rules which bar undisclosed dual agency, do not extend to bar simultaneous representation of several sellers who are rivals for the same customer. n111 To hold otherwise would mean that a broker could only have on the broker's list of lands for sale one property at a time. n112 To restrict a broker's ability to show a prospective purchaser numerous properties would render it impossible for brokers to do business. n113

It is not to be expected that, if a prospective purchaser is dissatisfied with one piece of property the broker has for sale, the broker will decline to show the prospective purchaser other properties. n114 In the absence of a special restrictive contract in the agreement between the broker and the principal, the broker is free to offer the properties of all his or her principals to a prospective customer. n115 However, a broker is not allowed to ignore a potential buyer's interest in one seller's property and steer that buyer to another seller's property. n115.1

A corollary to this proposition for buyers represented by a buyer's agent is that unless a brokerage firm and principal specifically agree otherwise, the firm is not obligated to insure that its affiliated licensees forego making offers on behalf of other buyers for property on which the principal has already bid. n116 While disclosure and consent are not prerequisites to a competing offer in this circumstance, an individual agent may not represent multiple buyers bidding on the same property without making disclosure and obtaining consent.

[12] Duty to Advise

Brokers have a duty to advise their clients regarding proposed transactions. n117 For example, Wyoming statutorily provides that "failing to advise the buyer and seller of all terms of the proposed sale at the time an offer is presented including estimated discounts and closing costs" is a breach of the broker's duty to his client. n118 This duty to advise extends not only to those terms contained in the initial offer, but also those added by the broker in the contract for sale, even if they are part of the boiler plate language of a form contract. n119 Brokers do not fulfill their duty to advise their principal by simply handing the principal a document to sign and making cursory remarks about the document. n120

In order to protect the principal's interest, the broker must make a full, fair and understandable explanation to the principal before having the principal sign any contracts, particularly when those contracts are with the broker. The broker's explanation should be commensurate with the principal's education and understanding. If the broker is unable to give competent advice the broker should allow the principals to obtain the advice elsewhere. n121 Whether a sufficient explanation has been made is a question of fact to be determined from the totality of the surrounding circumstances. n122

California recognizes that brokers are not the appropriate individuals to be rendering legal or tax advice to sellers and buyers with respect to real estate transactions. The disclosure form (Disclosure Regarding Real Estate Agency Relationship) in California Civil Code § 2079.16 advises the recipient: "You should carefully read all agreements to assure that they adequately express your understanding of the transaction. A real estate agent is a person qualified to advise about real estate. If legal or tax advice is desired, consult a competent professional." A California broker should not be liable to his or her client should a real estate transaction have adverse tax consequences since brokers are not expected to render such advice. n123

An issue that can arise with respect to a broker's duty to advise is whether the rendering of the advice in question will constitute the unauthorized practice of law. n124 This issue is discussed in greater detail in Chapter 7, below .

[13] Broker Cannot Have an Interest in the Agency's Subject Matter Without the Principal's Consent

A broker or agent cannot, either directly or indirectly, have an interest in the subject matter of the agency without the principal's consent, freely given, after full knowledge of every matter known to the agent which might affect the principal. n125 A broker or agent who deals with the agency's subject-matter so as to make a profit for himself or herself will be held to account in equity as a trustee for all profits and advantages acquired by the broker or agent in such dealings. n126 Furthermore, a broker or agent who fails to disclose to the principal every material fact in the transaction which is the subject-matter of the agency is guilty of bad faith, and may not retain anything acquired by him or her either in the performance or violation of the agency relationship. n127

Whenever a broker or an agent breaches his or her duty to the principal by becoming personally interested in the subject of the agency agreement without the principal's full knowledge, the contract is voidable at the principal's election. n128

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See:

Federal: Barnsdall Oil Co. v. Willis, 152 F.2d 824, 828 (5th Cir. 1946) , rehearing denied 153 F.2d 784 (5th Cir. 1946) .

California: Warren v. Merrill, 143 Cal. App. 4th 96, 109, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 122, 131 (2006) (real estate agent has same obligation of undivided service and loyalty that is imposed on a trustee in favor of a beneficiary).

Minnesota: Olson v. Penkert, 252 Minn. 334, 341, 90 N.W.2d 193, 199 (Minn. 1958) .

Nebraska: Schepers v. Lautenschlager, 173 Neb. 107, 117, 112 N.W.2d 767, 773 (Neb. 1962) .

Wyoming: Zwick v. United Farm Agency, Inc., 556 P.2d 508, 511-512 (Wyo. 1976) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Nava v. Truly Nolen Exterminating, 140 Ariz. 497, 500, 683 P.2d 296, 299 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1984) ; St. Paul Ins. Co. v. Industrial Underwriters Ins. Co., 214 Cal. App. 3d 117, 122, 262 Cal. Rptr. 490, 493 (Cal. Ct. App. 1989) ; Benson v. Webster, 593 N.W.2d 126, 130 (Iowa 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See:

Iowa: Gardin v. Long Beach Mortgage Co., 661 N.W.2d 193, 199 (Iowa 2003) .

Virginia: Allen v. Lindstrom, 237 Va. 489, 496, 379 S.E.2d 450, 454 (Va. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 849, 110 S. Ct. 145, 107 L. Ed. 2d 104 (1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See:

Virginia: Allen v. Lindstrom, 237 Va. 489, 496, 379 S.E.2d 450, 454 (Va. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 849, 110 S. Ct. 145, 107 L. Ed. 2d 104 (1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Holst v. Fireside Realty, Inc., 89 Wash. App. 245, 254, 948 P.2d 858, 862 (Wash. Ct.

App. 1997) ; Ward v. Coldwell Banker/San Juan Properties, Inc., 74 Wash. App. 157, 161, 872 P.2d 69, 71 (Wash. Ct. App. 1994) , corrected 1994 Wash. App. LEXIS 257 (Wash. Ct. App. June 7, 1994) , review denied, 125 Wash. 2d 1006, 886 P.2d 1133, 1994 Wash. LEXIS 670 (1994) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Holst v. Fireside Realty, Inc., 89 Wash. App. 245, 254-255, 948 P.2d 858, 863 (Wash. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Stortroen v. Beneficial Finance Co., 736 P.2d 391, 396 (Colo. 1987) ; Winston Financial Group, Inc. v. Fults Management, Inc., 872 P.2d 1356, 1994 Colo. App. LEXIS 4, at *2 (Colo. Ct. App. 1994) , rehearing denied; Holst v. Fireside Realty, Inc., 89 Wash. App. 245, 256, 948 P.2d 858, 863 (Wash Ct. App. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Holst v. Fireside Realty, Inc., 89 Wash. App. 245, 256, 948 P.2d 858, 863-864 (Wash. Ct. App. 1997) . Cf. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128, 133 (Colo. Ct. App. 1993) , rehearing denied (even though the agent did not formally contract to act as the buyer's agent for the townhome purchase, the agent may be held responsible for violation of an assumed duty of care in representing buyer's interests in the townhome closing).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., John v. Robbins, 764 F. Supp. 379, 389 (M.D. N.C. 1991) , applying North Carolina law. Proctor v. Holden, 75 Md. App. 1, 19, 540 A.2d 133, 141-42 (1988) , cert. denied sub nom. Holden v. Freeman & Kagan, 313 Md. 506, 545 A.2d 1343 (1988) , citing this Treatise. Cf. Rockefeller v. Grabow, 136 Idaho 637, 642, 39 P.3d 577, 582 (Idaho 2001) ("A real estate broker is an agent standing in a fiduciary relation to his principal.").

(n10)Footnote 10. See Heaven v. Timber Hill, LLC, 96 Conn. App. 294, 303, 900 A.2d 560, 567 (2006) . Cf. Petenbrink v. Superior Home Builders, Inc., 1999 Del. Super. LEXIS 461, at *9 (Del. Sup. Ct. 1999) (Real estate brokers and salesman are fiduciaries, who are charged with full disclosure of all material facts to those who repose confidence in them.) Wheat v. Lindsley, 906 So. 2d 782, 786 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004) , rehearing denied, en banc, 2005 Miss. App. LEXIS 196 (Miss. Ct. App., Mar. 15, 2005) cert. denied, 904 So. 2d 184 (Miss. 2005) (agency relationship between broker and owner is personal and fiduciary, real estate brokers have a duty to act solely for the benefit of their principals in all matters connected with the agency). Land Man Realty, Inc. v. Faraone, 70 A.D.3d 1246, 1247, 895 N.Y.S.2d 247, 248 (2010) (In New York, a real estate broker is a fiduciary.); Mathews Partners, LLC v. Lemme, 2009 Tenn. App. LEXIS 667, at *27 (Tenn. Ct. App. Oct. 2, 2009) ; Si Kyu Kim v. Harstan, Ltd., 286 S.W.3d 629, 634 (Tex. App. 2009) , review denied, 2010 Tex. LEXIS 66 (Jan. 15, 2010) ; Shister v. Patel, 776 N.W.2d 632, 637, 2009 WI App 163 (2009) (Statutory duties supersede brokers' duties under common law only to the extent that they are inconsistent.).

(n11)Footnote 10.1. See Huffman v. Cohen, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38329, at *38-*39 (N.D. Okla. Apr. 29, 2009) (Oklahoma specifying the statutory duties owed by transaction brokers and single-party brokers), reconsideration denied, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51912 (N.D. Okla. June 19, 2009) .

(n12)Footnote 11. See

Iowa: Action Real Estate Corp. v. Bulechek, 309 N.W.2d 502, 504 (Iowa 1981) ; Miller v. Iowa Real Estate Comm'n, 274 N.W.2d 288, 292 (Iowa 1979) .

New Jersey: Mango v. Pierce-Coombs, 370 N.J. Super. 239, 256, 851 A.2d 62, 72 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2004) .

New Mexico: Swallows v. Laney, 102 N.M. 81, 83, 691 P.2d 874, 876 (1984) .

(n13)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Bedwell v. Schmitt, 2002 Ohio 6909, at P43, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 6731, at *14 (Ohio Ct. App. 2002) , appeal denied 98 Ohio St. 3d 1540, 2003 Ohio 1946, 786 N.E.2d 902 (Ohio 2003) .

(n14)Footnote 13. See:

California: Batson v. Strehlow, 68 Cal. 2d 662, 674, 68 Cal. Rptr. 589, 597, 441 P.2d 101, 109 (Cal. 1968) ; Roberts v. Lomanto, 112 Cal. App. 4th 1553, 1562-1563, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866, 873 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) , review denied, 2004 Cal. LEXIS 1784 (Cal. Feb. 24, 2004) ; Montoya v. McLeod, 176 Cal. App. 3d 57, 64, 221 Cal. Rptr. 353, 358 (Cal. Ct. App. 1985) ; Ziswasser v. Cole & Cowan, Inc., 164 Cal. App. 3d 417, 421, 210 Cal. Rptr. 428, 429 (Cal. Ct. App. 1985) .

Missouri: Martin v. Hieken, 340 S.W.2d 161, 165 (Mo. Ct. App. 1960) .

(n15)Footnote 14. See Depugh v. Ohio Dept. of Commerce, Division of Real Estate, 128 Ohio App. 3d 528, 715 N.E. 2d 622, 625-626 (Ohio App. 1998) , appeal dismissed, 83 Ohio St. 3d 1448, 700 N.E. 2d 332 (Ohio 1998) .

(n16)Footnote 15. Cf. Kirkruff v. Wisegarver, 297 Ill. App. 3d 826, 830-831, 231 Ill. Dec. 852, 697 N.E.2d 406, 410 (1998) (facts could be established which would support imposition of a fiduciary duty upon a prospective agent).

(n17)Footnote 16. See Century Land Dev., L.P. v. Weits, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7031 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 30, 2009) (applying Florida law); Harrouk v. Fierman, 291 Ga. App. 818, 820, 662 S.E.2d 892, 894 (2008) .

(n18)Footnote 17. See Restatement (Second) of Agency § 390E.

(n19)Footnote 18. 309 N.W.2d 502 (Iowa 1981) .

(n20)Footnote 19. 309 N.W.2d 502, 504 (Iowa 1981) .

But see Lyle v. Moore, 183 Mont. 274, 278, 599 P.2d 336, 338 (Mont. 1979) (broker's duty of full disclosure includes the duty to reveal the nature and extent of the broker's fees to the client, because of the fiduciary relationship the broker must make a full and understandable explanation to the client before having the client sign any contracts particularly when the contracts are with the broker himself); Rushing v. Stephanus, 64 Wash. 2d 607, 611, 393 P.2d 281, 284 (Wash. 1964) (broker must fully reveal the nature and extent of his fees to the client for whom he acts, and the failure to do so will render him liable).

(n21)Footnote 20.

Montana: Lyle v. Moore, 183 Mont. 274, 278, 599 P.2d 336, 338 (Mont. 1979) .

Washington: Rushing v. Stephanus, 64 Wash. 2d 607, 611, 393 P.2d 281, 284 (Wash. 1964) .

Cf. Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128, 133 (Colo. App. 1993) reh'g denied (Dec. 16, 1993) (An assumed duty of care arose, notwithstanding the lack of a formal contract to act as a broker/agent, where the defendant promised or undertook affirmative acts to render a service to the plaintiff that was reasonably calculated to prevent the harm that befell the plaintiff at the closings, and the plaintiff relied on the defendant to perform the service or the defendant's undertaking increased the risk to the plaintiff.)

(n22)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Rupp v. Ayres (In re Fabbro), 411 B.R. 407, 424 (Bankr. D. Utah 2009) , applying Utah law; Haldiman v. Gosnell Development Corp., 155 Ariz. 585, 588, 748 P.2d 1209, 1212 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1987) Axtmann v. Chillemi, 2007 ND 179, 740 N.W.2d 838, 845 (N.D. 2007) .

(n23)Footnote 22. See, e.g.:

Arizona: Haldiman v. Gosnell Development Corp., 155 Ariz. 585, 588, 748 P.2d 1209, 1212 (Ariz. Ct.

App. 1987).

North Carolina: Spence v. Spaulding & Perkins, Ltd., 82 N.C. App. 665, 667, 347 S.E.2d 864, 865-66 (1986).

Texas: Riley v. Powell, 665 S.W. 2d 578, 580 (Tex. App. 1984), writ of error refused no reversible error, (Jun. 13, 1984), rehearing of writ of error overruled, (Jul. 18, 1984).

(n24)Footnote 23. See, e.g.,

Arizona: Haldiman v. Gosnell Development Corp., 155 Ariz. 585, 588, 748 P.2d 1209, 1212 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1987).

North Carolina: Spence v. Spaulding & Perkins, Ltd., 82 N.C. App. 665, 667, 347 S.E.2d 864, 865-66 (1986).

(n25)Footnote 24. See, e.g., Chumley v. Today's Realty, Inc., 995 So. 2d 676, 682 (La. Ct. App. 2008); Schepers v. Lautenschlager, 173 Neb. 107, 118, 112 N.W.2d 767, 773 (Neb. 1962).

(n26)Footnote 25. See Crandall v. Grbic, 36 Kan. App. 2d 179, 189-90, 138 P.3d 365, 374 (2006); Latter & Blum v. Richmond, 388 So. 2d 368, 372 (La. 1980); Chumley v. Today's Realty, Inc., 995 So. 2d 676, 682 (La. Ct. App. 2008); Baker v. Delhomme, 929 So. 2d 877, 880 (La. Ct. App. 2006).

(n27)Footnote 26. See, e.g.:

California: Smith v. Rickard, 205 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1359, 254 Cal. Rptr. 633, 635 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988), review denied.

Kentucky: Smith v. Fidelity & Columbia Trust Co., 227 Ky. 120, 122, 12 S.W.2d 276, 277 (Ky. 1928).

Louisiana: Mallet v. Maggio, 503 So. 2d 37, 38 (La. 1987), writ denied, 504 So. 2d 880 (1987).

Nebraska: Tetherow v. Wolfe, 223 Neb. 631, 635-636, 392 N.W. 2d 374, 378 (1986); Firmature v. Brannon, 223 Neb. 123, 127, 388 N.W. 2d 119, 121 (1986).

New Jersey: Farrell v. Janik, 225 N.J. Super. 282, 289, 542 A.2d 59, 63 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1988).

Wyoming: Zwick v. United Farm Agency, Inc., 556 P.2d 508, 511-512 n. 4 (Wyo. 1976).

(n28)Footnote 27. See Menzel v. Morse, 362 N.W.2d 465, 472 (Iowa 1985); Durbin v. Ross, 276 Mont. 463, 476, 916 P.2d 758, 766 (Mont. 1996).

(n29)Footnote 28. See Carleton v. Tortosa, 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 754-755, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734, 740 (Cal. Ct. App. 1993), review denied, 1993 Cal. LEXIS 3609 (Cal. July 1, 1993); Farrell v. Janik, 225 N.J. Super. 282, 290-291, 542 A.2d 59, 63 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1988).

(n30)Footnote 29. See Doyle v. Maruszczak, 834 So. 2d 307, 309 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003).

(n31)Footnote 30. See, e.g.:

California: Jorgensen v. Beach "N" Bay Realty, 125 Cal. App. 3d 155, 161, 177 Cal. Rptr. 882, 886 (Cal. 1981) .

Texas: Southern Cross Industries, Inc. v. Martin, 604 S.W. 2d 290, 293 (Tex. App. 1980) , writ of error refused no reversible error, (Dec. 31, 1980), rehearing of writ of error overruled, (Jan. 21, 1981).

Washington: Mersky v. Multiple Listing Bureau of Olympia, Inc., 73 Wash. 2d 225, 232, 437 P. 2d 897, 901 (Wash. 1968) .

Wyoming: Myer v. Miller, 631 P. 2d 441, 443-444 (Wyo. 1981) .

(n32)Footnote 31. See

Louisiana: Tresch v. Kilgore, 2003 La. App. LEXIS 3060, at *9-*10 (La. Ct. App. Nov. 7, 2003) .

Minnesota: Gresser v. Hotzler, 604 N.W.2d 379, 385 (Minn. Ct. App. 2000) .

New Jersey: Busciglio v. Dellafave, 366 N.J. Super. 135, 140, 840 A.2d 897, 900 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2004) .

North Dakota: Argabright v. Rodgers, 2003 ND 59, 659 N.W.2d 369, 371 (N.D. 2003) .

(n33)Footnote 32. See Southern Cross Industries, Inc. v. Martin, 604 S.W.2d 290, 292 (Tex. Civ. App. 1980) , writ of error refused no reversible error (Dec. 31, 1980), rehearing of writ of error overruled (Jan. 21, 1981).

(n34)Footnote 33. See, e.g., Schlossman & Gunkelman, Inc. v. Tallman, 1999 ND 89, 593 N.W.2d 374, 382-383 (N.D. 1999) .

(n35)Footnote 34. See Bazal v. Rhines, 600 N.W.2d 327, 329 (Iowa Ct. App. 1999) ; Farrell v. Janik, 225 N.J. Super. 282, 288, 542 A.2d 59, 61 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1988) .

(n36)Footnote 35. See Farrell v. Janik, 225 N.J. Super. 282, 290-292, 542 A.2d 59, 63-64 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1988) .

(n37)Footnote 36. See Gordon v. Bauer, 177 Ill. App. 3d 1073, 1099, 127 Ill. Dec. 26, 532 N.E.2d 855, 871-872 (Ill. App. Ct. 1988) , cert. denied, 125 Ill. 2d 564, 130 Ill. Dec. 480, 537 N.E.2d 809 (Ill. 1989) .

(n38)Footnote 37. 727 So. 2d 594 (La. App. 1998) , appeal denied, 743 So. 2d 667 (1999) .

(n39)Footnote 38. 727 So. 2d 594, 596-597 (La. App. 1998) , appeal denied, 743 So. 2d 667 (1999) .

(n40)Footnote 39. The term "professional" is used in a general sense to refer to someone who is engaged in a specific activity as a source of livelihood. This term is also used in a narrower sense to refer to individuals engaged in certain activities requiring a college degree, special training, and licensing by the state. Not all courts consider real estate licensees to be professionals in the latter sense. This issue is discussed in § 3.27 below.

(n41)Footnote 40. See Hughes v. Goodreau, 836 So. 2d 649, 660 (La. Ct. App. 2002) , writ denied, 841 So. 2d 793 (La. 2003) ; Farrell v. Janik, 225 N.J. Super. 282, 288-289, 542 A.2d 59, 62 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1988) .

(n42)Footnote 41. See Rupp v. Ayres (In re Fabbro), 411 B.R. 407, 424 (Bankr. D. Utah 2009) , applying Utah law; Cashion v. Ahmadi, 345 So. 2d 268, 269-270 (Ala. 1977) ; Carver v. Lykes, 262 N.C. 345, 354-355, 137 S.E.2d 139, 147 (N.C. 1964) . See also Jenkins v. Strauss, 931 A.2d 1026, 1035 (D.C. 2007) (agent who fails to exercise standard care and commits an act not authorized by his principal is liable for damages arising from that act.). Farrell v. Janik, 225 N.J. Super. 282, 289, 542 A.2d 59, 63 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1988) ("Since the realtor held itself out as a specialist in the sale of real estate it was required to employ not merely the skill of a salesperson, but that special degree of skill normally possessed by the average realtor licensed in New Jersey who has devoted special study and experience in the field of real estate sales.").

(n43)Footnote 42. See Lane v. Oustalet, 850 So. 2d 1143, 1150 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002) , rehearing denied, 840 So. 2d 716 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002) ; aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 873 So. 2d 92 (Miss. 2004) .

(n44)Footnote 43. See Rose v. Showalter, 108 Idaho 631, 633, 701 P.2d 251, 253 (Idaho Ct. App. 1985) , review denied, 116 Idaho 466, 776 P.2d 828 (Idaho 1985) .

(n45)Footnote 44. Cf. Prall v. Gooden, 226 Ore. 554, 561, 360 P.2d 759, 762 (Or. 1961) (A real estate broker must make a full, fair and understandable explanation to the client before having him sign any contracts, particularly when those contracts are with the broker himself. The broker should make his explanation commensurate with the education and understanding of the people he is dealing with, and if he is unable to give competent advice he should allow them to obtain it elsewhere).

(n46)Footnote 45. See Cavagnaro v. Coldwell Banker Alfonso Realty, Inc., 995 So. 2d 754, 758 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008) cert. denied, 997 So. 2d 924, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 534 (2008) .

(n47)Footnote 46. See Yerkie v. Salisbury, 264 Md. 598, 603, 287 A.2d 498, 501 (Md. 1972) .

(n48)Footnote 47. See, e.g.,

Federal: Rupp v. Ayres (In re Fabbro), 411 B.R. 407, 424 (Bankr. D. Utah 2009) , applying Utah law.

California: Gravillis v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co., 143 Cal. App. 4th 761, 777, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 531, 542 (2006) , rehearing denied, 2006 Cal. App. LEXIS 1775 (Oct. 20, 2006) .

Indiana: Nichols v. Minnick, 885 N.E.2d 1, 3-4 (Ind. 2008) , reh'g denied, 2008 Ind. LEXIS 544 (June 30, 2008) .

Louisiana: Chumley v. Magee, No. 44,860-CA, 2010 La. App. LEXIS 220, at *8 (Feb. 17, 2010) (buyer's agent).

New Mexico: Swallows v. Laney, 102 N.M. 81, 83, 691 P.2d 874, 876 (1984) .

North Carolina: Spence v. Spaulding & Perkins Ltd., 82 N.C. App. 665, 667, 347 S.E.2d 864, 865-66 (1986) .

Vermont: Foster and Gridley v. Winner, 169 Vt. 621, 623, 740 A.2d 1283, 1286 (Vt. 1999) ; Quechee Lakes Rental Corp. v. Boggess, 158 Vt. 258, 262, 608 A.2d 39, 41 (Vt. 1992) .

(n49)Footnote 48. See Finomore v. Epstein, 18 Ohio App. 3d 88, 90, 481 N.E.2d 1193, 1196, 18 Ohio B. 403 (1984) .

(n50)Footnote 49. See Michel v. Moore & Associates, Inc., 156 Cal. App. 4th 756, 762, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 802 (2007) (broker can be professionally competent under Cal. Civ. Code § 2079 without satisfying the greater duty of a fiduciary.); Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty, 63 Cal. App.4th 18, 25, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784, 789 (1998) (fiduciary duty owed by brokers to their clients is substantially more extensive than the non-fiduciary duties codified in Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.), review denied, 1998 Cal. LEXIS 4685 (Cal. July 15, 1998) .

(n51)Footnote 50. See Michel v. Moore & Associates, Inc., 156 Cal. App. 4th 756, 762, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 802 (2007) .

(n52)Footnote 51. See Harmon v. Kobrin (In re Harmon), 250 F.3d 1240, 1249 n. 10 (9th Cir. 2001) ; Michel v. Moore & Associates, Inc., 156 Cal. App. 4th 756, 763, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 802 (2007) ; Halkey-Roberts Corp. v. Mackal, 641 So. 2d 445, 447 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1994) ; Brookshire v. Digby, 224 Ga. App. 512, 516, 481 S.E.2d 250, 254-55 (1997) , reh'g denied, 224 Ga. App. 903 (1997) .

(n53)Footnote 52. See Michel v. Moore & Associates, Inc., 156 Cal. App. 4th 756, 763, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 802 (2007) .

(n54)Footnote 53. See:

Virginia: R.A. Poff & Co. v. Ottaway, 191 Va. 779, 785, 62 S.E. 2d 865, 868 (Va. 1951) .

Washington: Farrell v. Score, 67 Wash. 2d 957, 961, 411 P.2d 146, 149 (Wash. 1966) .

(n55)Footnote 54. See

Alaska: Veach v. Meyeres Real Estate Real Estate, Inc., 599 P.2d 746, 748-749 (Alaska 1979) .

Indiana: Nichols v. Minnick, 885 N.E.2d 1, 3-4 (Ind. 2008) , reh'g denied, 2008 Ind. LEXIS 544 (June 30, 2008) .

Virginia: R.A. Poff & Co. v. Ottaway, 191 Va. 779, 785, 62 S.E. 2d 865, 868 (Va. 1951) .

(n56)Footnote 55. See Musselman v. Southwinds Realty Co., 146 Ariz. 173, 177, 704 P.2d 814, 818 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n57)Footnote 56. See Ward v. Coldwell Banker/San Juan Properties, Inc., 74 Wash. App. 157, 167-168, 872 P.2d 69, 74 (Wash. Ct. App. 1994) , corrected 1994 Wash. App. LEXIS 257 (Wash. Ct. App. June 7, 1994) , review denied, 125 Wash. 2d 1006, 886 P.2d 1133, 1994 Wash. LEXIS 670 (1994) . It should be noted that Justice Baker dissented and stated that the broker was in a divided loyalty situation which required obtaining its principals' consent before guaranteeing the buyers' loan. The broker's guaranty was clearly in the buyers' interest, enabling them to obtain financing and purchase the house. The broker's guaranty also furthered its own interest in ensuring that its commission would be paid at closing without having to expend the effort to find another, possibly more qualified, buyer. The broker was only entitled to act in its own and the buyers' interest without prior consent from its principals as long as doing so was not potentially adverse to the principals' interests.

(n58)Footnote 57. Cf., e.g., Quinlan v. Clasby, 71 Mass. App. Ct. 97, 104, 879 N.E.2d 703, 709 (2008) (broker did not violate Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A by advertising a house as a three-family dwelling when, and without the broker's knowledge, the home as configured violated zoning laws; broker had no obligation in the circumstances presented to verify compliance with zoning law and without such knowledge could not be liable under Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 93A).

(n59)Footnote 58. See, e.g.:

Federal: Coleman v. Watts, 87 F. Supp. 2d 944, 954 (D. Ariz. 1998) , applying Arizona law.

Texas: Riley v. Powell, 665 S.W.2d 578, 580 (Tex. App. 1984) , writ of error refused no reversible error, (Jun. 13, 1984), rehearing of writ of error overruled, (Jul. 18, 1984).

(n60)Footnote 59. See Mannix v. Hildreth, 2 App. D.C. 259, 274 (Ct. App. D.C. 1894) .

(n61)Footnote 60. See Riley v. Powell, 665 S.W. 2d 578, 580 (Tex. Civ. App. 1984) , writ of error refused no reversible error, (Jun. 13, 1984), rehearing of writ of error overruled, (Jul. 18, 1984).

(n62)Footnote 61. See Duvall v. Walton, 107 Fla. 60, 63, 144 So. 318, 319 (1932) ; Pryor v. Oak Ridge Development Corp., 97 Fla. 1085, 119 So. 326, 328 (Fla. 1928) ; Evans v. Gray, 215 So. 2d 40, 41-42 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1968) , cert. denied, 222 So. 2d 748 (Fla. 1969) .

(n63)Footnote 62. See Haymes v. Rogers, 70 Ariz. 257, 259, 219 P.2d 339, 340 (Ariz. 1950) , modified, 70 Ariz. 408, 222 P.2d 789 (Ariz. 1950) .

(n64)Footnote 63. See Haymes v. Rogers, 70 Ariz. 257, 259, 219 P.2d 339, 340 (Ariz. 1950) , modified, 70 Ariz. 408, 222 P.2d 789 (Ariz. 1950) .

(n65)Footnote 64. See, e.g., Lee Hawkins Realty, Inc. v. Moss, 724 So.2d 1116, 1119 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998) .

(n66)Footnote 65. See Zuazua v. Tibbles, 335 Mont. 181, 188, 2006 MT 342, 150 P.3d 361, 365-66 (2006) .

(n67)Footnote 66. See Zuazua v. Tibbles, 335 Mont. 181, 184-85, 2006 MT 342, 150 P.3d 361, 363 (2006) .

(n68)Footnote 67. See Zuazua v. Tibbles, 335 Mont. 181, 185, 2006 MT 342, 150 P.3d 361, 363 (2006) .

(n69)Footnote 68. See Zuazua v. Tibbles, 335 Mont. 181, 186, 2006 MT 342, 150 P.3d 361, 364 (2006) .

(n70)Footnote 69. See Musselman v. Southwinds Realty Co., 146 Ariz. 173, 175, 704 P.2d 814, 816 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n71)Footnote 70. Musselman v. Southwinds Realty Co., 146 Ariz. 173, 175, 704 P.2d 814, 816 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n72)Footnote 71. See Musselman v. Southwinds Realty Co., 146 Ariz. 173, 175, 704 P.2d 814, 816 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n73)Footnote 72. See Musselman v. Southwinds Realty Co., 146 Ariz. 173, 175, 704 P.2d 814, 816 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n74)Footnote 73. See, e.g., Rupp v. Ayres (In re Fabbro), 411 B.R. 407, 424 (Bankr. D. Utah 2009) , applying Utah law; Lowrance v. Swaffield, 123 S.C. 331, 333, 116 S.E. 278 (S.C. 1923) . See also Jenkins v. Strauss, 931 A.2d 1026, 1035 (D.C. 2007) (An agent who commits an act not authorized by his principal is liable for damages arising from that act.).

(n75)Footnote 74. See Restatement (Second) of Agency § 385.

(n76)Footnote 75. See Zwick v. United Farm Agency, Inc., 556 P.2d 508, 512 (Wyo. 1976) .

(n77)Footnote 76. See Zwick v. United Farm Agency, Inc., 556 P.2d 508, 512 (Wyo. 1976) .

(n78)Footnote 77. See:

Federal: Bangs v. Hornick, 30 F. 97, 99 (C.C.D. Minn. 1887) (failure of agent to follow instructions).

Arizona: Secan v. Dunbar, 139 Ariz. 503, 505, 679 P.2d 526, 528 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1983) (failure to deliver an offer).

Minnesota: Young v. Yeates, 153 Minn. 366, 368-369, 190 N.W. 791 (Minn. 1922) .

Texas: Lemons v. Davis, 306 S.W.2d 224, 227 (Tex. Civ. App.1957) , writ of error refused no reversible error, (1958).

See also Restatement (Second) of Agency comment b to § 379 (burden of proof is on principal to show agent's negligence).

(n79)Footnote 78. See Jenkins v. Strauss, 931 A.2d 1026, 1038 (D.C. 2007) Jackson v. Williams, 510 S.W.2d 645, 647 (Tex. Civ. App. 1974) , writ of error refused no reversible error, rehearing of writ of error overruled; Restatement (Second) of Agency § 469.

(n80)Footnote 79. See

California: Tackett v. Croonquist, 244 Cal. App. 2d 572, 577, 53 Cal. Rptr. 388, 391 (Cal. Ct. App. 1966) .

Washington: Merkley v. MacPherson's, Inc., 69 Wash. 2d 776, 778, 420 P.2d 205, 207 (Wash. 1966) .

(n81)Footnote 80. See Tackett v. Croonquist, 244 Cal. App. 2d 572, 577, 53 Cal. Rptr. 388, 391 (Cal. Ct. App. 1966) .

(n82)Footnote 81. See Burch v. Argus Properties, Inc., 92 Cal. App. 3d 128, 132, 154 Cal. Rptr. 485, 487 (Cal. Ct. App. 1979) .

(n83)Footnote 82. See Burch v. Argus Properties, Inc., 92 Cal. App. 3d 128, 132, 154 Cal. Rptr. 485, 487 (Cal. Ct. App. 1979) .

(n84)Footnote 83. See Texas Real Estate Commission v. Bentley, 253 S.W.2d 325, 328 (Tex. Civ. App. 1952, no writ) .

(n85)Footnote 84. See, e.g., Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10146.

(N86)Footnote 85. See Burch v. Argus Properties, Inc., 92 Cal. App. 3d 128, 132, 154 Cal. Rptr. 485, 487 (Cal. Ct. App. 1979) ; De St. Germain v. Watson, 95 Cal. App.2d 862, 867, 214 P.2d 99, 103 (Ct. Ct. App. 1950) .

(n87)Footnote 86. See Mabry v. Tom Stanger & Co., 33 P. 3d 1206, 1209-1210 (Colo. Ct. App. 2001) , rehearing denied 2001 Colo. App. LEXIS 605 (Colo. Ct. App. Apr. 5, 2001) , cert. denied 2001 Colo. LEXIS 927 (Colo. Nov. 13, 2001) .

(n88)Footnote 87. 02-8, 2002 Okla. AG LEXIS 10 (Feb. 19, 2002).

(n89)Footnote 88. See Okla. Stat. tit. 59, §§ 858-353 and 858-354.

(n90)Footnote 89. See Okla. Stat. tit. 59, § 858-354.

(n91)Footnote 90. See Burdon v. Harvey, 385 So. 2d 514, 517-518 (La. Ct. App. 1980) , rehearings denied, cert. denied, 393 So. 2d 742 (La. 1980) .

(n92)Footnote 91. See Allen v. Lindstrom, 237 Va. 489, 498, 379 S.E.2d 450, 456 (Va. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 849, 110 S. Ct. 145, 107 L. Ed. 2d 104 (1989) . Cf. Harrouk v. Fierman, 291 Ga. App. 818, 821-22, 662 S.E.2d 892, 894-95 (2008) (A prospective purchaser complained that the broker failed to notify him that property he desired had become available for sale. Since the purchaser had failed to engage the broker as defined in the Brokerage Relationship in Real Estate Transaction Act, the broker did not owe the purchaser the same duties that would be owed to a buyer who was a client.).

(n93)Footnote 92. See Saab v. Keenan, 2003 Mass. App. Div. 100, 102, 2003 Mass. App. Div. LEXIS 38, at *7-*10 (Mass. Ct. App. June 10, 2003).

(n94)Footnote 93. See Rupp v. Ayres (In re Fabbro), 411 B.R. 407, 424 (Bankr. D. Utah 2009) , applying Utah law; United Investors, Inc. v. Tsotsos, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 179, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 477 N.E.2d 40, 43 (Ill. Ct. App. 1985) Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 163, 209 P.3d 741, 752 (2009) ; Browne v. Faulkner, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3918, at *4 (Dec. 20, 2006) ; Axtmann v. Chillemi, 2007 ND 179, 740 N.W.2d 838, 845 (N.D. 2007) Weaver v. McCarter, 2006 Tenn. App. LEXIS 369, at *28 (June 6, 2006) .

(n95)Footnote 94. See

Idaho: Rose v. Showalter, 108 Idaho 631, 633, 701 P.2d 251, 253 (Idaho Ct. App. 1985) review denied, 116 Idaho 466, 776 P.2d 828 (Idaho 1985) .

Washington: Moon v. Phipps, 67 Wash. 2d 948, 954, 411 P.2d 157 (Wash. 1966) .

(n96)Footnote 95. See Restatement (Second) of Agency § 387. See also Chumley v. Today's Realty, Inc., 995 So. 2d 676, 682 (La. Ct. App. 2008) (A real estate licensee should not use his or her position to gain an advantage over his or her client.).

Cf. Queens Structure Corp. v Jay Lawrence Associates, Inc., 304 A.D.2d 736, 737, 758 N.Y.S.2d 664, 666, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4295 (N.Y. App. Div. 2003) (brokers working for sellers had an affirmative duty not to act for the purchaser or the purchaser's assignee unless the sellers had full knowledge of the facts).

(n97)Footnote 96. See United Investors, Inc. v. Tsotsos, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 179-180, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 477 N.E.2d 40, 43 (Ill. Ct. App. 1985) .

(n98)Footnote 97. See Warren v. Merrill, 143 Cal. App. 4th 96, 111, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 122, 133 (2006) . This court stated that the "evidence ... was more than sufficient to show an egregious violation of the duties of loyalty and undivided interest by a fiduciary toward her principal, as well as a deliberate plan to defraud him out of his down payment and the property."

(n99)Footnote 98. See Haymes v. Rogers, 70 Ariz. 257, 219 P.2d 339, 340 (Ariz. 1950) , modified, 70 Ariz. 408, 222 P.2d 789 (Ariz. 1950) .

(n100)Footnote 99. See Beckwith v. Clevenger Realty Co., 89 Ariz. 239, 241-242, 360 P.2d 596, 598 (Ariz. 1961) .

(n101)Footnote 100. See Mabry v. Tom Stanger & Co., 33 P.3d 1206, 1210-1211 (Colo. Ct. App. 2001) , rehearing denied 2001 Colo. App. LEXIS 605 (Colo. Ct. App. Apr. 5, 2001) , cert. denied 2001 Colo. LEXIS 927 (Colo. Nov. 13, 2001) .

(n102)Footnote 101. See Mabry v. Tom Stanger & Co., 33 P.3d 1206, 1210-1211 (Colo. Ct. App. 2001) , rehearing denied 2001 Colo. App. LEXIS 605 (Colo. Ct. App. Apr. 5, 2001) , cert. denied 2001 Colo. LEXIS 927 (Colo. Nov. 13, 2001) .

(n103)Footnote 102. See United Investors, Inc. v. Tsotsos, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 180, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 477 N.E.2d 40, 43 (Ill. Ct. App. 1985) .

Illinois: United Investors, Inc. v. Tsotsos, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 180, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 477 N.E.2d 40, 43 (Ill. App. Ct. 1985) .

Kentucky: Crabtree v. Board of Trustees, 512 S.W.2d 311, 313 (Ky. 1974) .

Maryland: Prince Georges Properties, Inc. v. Rogers, 275 Md. 582, 591-592, 341 A.2d 804, 809-810 (Md. 1975) .

Minnesota: Lake Co. v. Molan, 269 Minn. 490, 499, 131 N.W.2d 734, 740 (Minn. 1964) .

Missouri: United Farm Agency, Inc. v. Murphy, 596 S.W.2d 730, 734 (Mo. App. 1980) ; Herb Tillman Co., Inc. v. Sissel, 348 S.W.2d 819, 825 (Mo. Ct. App. 1961) .

See generally Annot., Broker's Return of Deposit to Purchaser as Waiver of Right to Demand Commission from Seller, 69 A.L.R.2d 1244 (1960) .

(n104)Footnote 103. See Wesco Realty, Inc. v. Drewry, 9 Wash. App. 734, 738, 515 P.2d 513, 516-517 (Wash. Ct. App. 1973) .

(n105)Footnote 104. See Rose v. Showalter, 108 Idaho 631, 633, 701 P.2d 251, 253 (Idaho Ct. App. 1985) . Cf. Bienert v. Dickerson, 276 Ga. App. 621, 625, 624 S.E.2d 245, 249 (2005) (business broker). (The broker testified that she owed the seller a fiduciary duty of allegiance to put the seller's interests above her own. The seller was awarded compensatory and punitive damages and attorney's fees when the broker falsified the sales agreement to show that she was a party and a signatory thereto. As a result of a commission dispute, the broker used the falsified document to support a UCC financing statement to place a lien on the business's assets so as to stymie the deal.).

(n106)Footnote 105. See Rose v. Showalter, 108 Idaho 631, 633-634, 701 P.2d 251, 253-254 (Idaho Ct. App. 1985) .

(n107)Footnote 106. See Moore & Co. v. T-A-L-L, Inc., 792 P.2d 794, 800 (Colo. 1990) .

(n108)Footnote 107. See Re/Max Realty 100 v. Basso, 667 N.W.2d 857, 861, 2003 WI App 146 (Wis. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n109)Footnote 108. See Gordon v. Bauer, 177 Ill. App. 3d 1073, 1099, 127 Ill. Dec. 26, 532 N.E.2d 855, 871-872 (Ill. App. Ct. 1988) , cert. denied, 125 Ill. 2d 564, 130 Ill. Dec. 480, 537 N.E.2d 809 (Ill. 1989) .

(n110)Footnote 109. See United Investors, Inc. v. Tsotsos, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 180, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 477 N.E.2d 40, 43 (Ill. Ct. App. 1985) .

(n111)Footnote 110. See:

Arizona: Coldwell Banker Commercial Group v Camelback Off. Park, 156 Ariz 226, 230, 751 P.2d 542, 546 (Ariz. 1988) , reconsideration denied (1988).

Massachusetts: McEvoy v. Ginsberg, 345 Mass. 733, 737, 189 N.E.2d 546 (Mass. 1963) .

New York: Sonnenschein v. Douglas Elliman-Gibbons & Ives, 274 A.D.2d 244, 247, 713 N.Y.S.2d 9, 12, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8864 (N.Y. App. Div. 2000) , affirmed by, certified question answered by, Sonnenschein v. Douglas Elliman-Gibbons & Ives, 96 N.Y.2d 369, 729 N.Y.S. 2d 62, 753 N.E.2d 857 (2001) .

See generally Annot., Right of Real Estate Broker to List Competing Properties of Different Owners, 71 A.L.R. 699 .

(n112)Footnote 111. See:

Iowa: Foley v Mathias, 211 Iowa 160, 162, 233 NW 106, 107 (Iowa 1930) .

New York: Sonnenschein v. Douglas Elliman-Gibbons & Ives, 274 A.D.2d 244, 247-248, 713 N.Y.S.2d 9, 12, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8864 (N.Y. App. Div. 2000) , affirmed by, certified question answered by, Sonnenschein v. Douglas Elliman-Gibbons & Ives, 96 N.Y.2d 369, 729 N.Y.S. 2d 62, 753 N.E.2d 857 (2001) .

(n113)Footnote 112. See Gaty v Sack, 19 Mo. App. 470, 475 (Mo. Ct. App. 1885) .

(n114)Footnote 113. See Sonnenschein v. Douglas Elliman-Gibbons & Ives, 274 A.D.2d 244, 248, 713 N.Y.S.2d 9, 12, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8864 (N.Y. App. Div. 2000) , affirmed by, certified question answered by, Sonnenschein v. Douglas Elliman-Gibbons & Ives, 96 N.Y.2d 369, 729 N.Y.S. 2d 62, 753 N.E.2d 857 (2001) .

(n115)Footnote 114. See:

Massachusetts: McEvoy v Ginsberg, 345 Mass 733, 737, 189 N.E. 2d 546 (Mass. 1963) .

Michigan: Lemon v Macklem, 157 Mich 475, 478, 122 N.W. 77, 78 (Mich. 1909) .

New York: Sonnenschein v. Douglas Elliman-Gibbons & Ives, 274 A.D.2d 244, 247-248, 713 N.Y.S.2d 9, 12, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8864 (N.Y. App. Div. 2000) , affirmed by, certified question answered by, Sonnenschein v. Douglas Elliman-Gibbons & Ives, 96 N.Y.2d 369, 729 N.Y.S. 2d 62, 753 N.E.2d 857 (2001) .

(n116)Footnote 115. See McEvoy v Ginsberg, 345 Mass 733, 737, 189 N.E. 2d 546, 547 (Mass. 1963) .

(n117)Footnote 115.1. See NRT New Eng., Inc. v. Indiciani, 2009 Mass. App. Div. 186, 2009 Mass. App. Div. LEXIS 51 (2009) .

(n118)Footnote 116. See Rivkin v. Century 21 Teran Realty LLC, 10 N.Y.3d 344, 356, 858 N.Y.S.2d 55, 887 N.E.2d 1113, 1121 (2008) .

(n119)Footnote 117. Cf. Leigh v. Loyd, 74 Ariz. 84, 87, 244 P.2d 356, 358-359 (Ariz. 1952) (seller's broker was held liable for intentionally remaining silent while his principal signed legal instruments under a serious misapprehension of the instrument's true nature).

(n120)Footnote 118. See Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 33-28-111(a)(x).

(n121)Footnote 119. See Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079, 1090 (Wyo. 1999) .

(n122)Footnote 120. See Duncan v. Barbour, 188 Va. 53, 62-63, 49 S.E.2d 260, 265 (Va. 1948) (broker denied a commission when an amended purchase was offered to the principal without the broker disclosing that the offer failed to accord with the principal's wishes in three crucial respects). But see Si Kyu Kim v. Harstan, Ltd., 286 S.W.3d 629, 634 (Tex. App. 2009) (A broker does not have a duty to disclose the contents of a contract that the principal is obligated to read before he or she signs it.), review denied, 2010 Tex. LEXIS 66 (Jan. 15, 2010) .

(n123)Footnote 121. See Prall v. Gooden, 226 Ore. 554, 561, 360 P.2d 759, 762 (Or. 1961) .

(n124)Footnote 122. See Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079, 1090 (Wyo. 1999) .

(n125)Footnote 123. See Carleton v. Tortosa, 14 Cal. App. 4th 745, 758-759, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 734, 743 (Cal. Ct. App. 1993) review denied, 1993 Cal. LEXIS 3609 (Cal. July 1, 1993) ; Santos v. Wing, 197 Cal. App. 2d 678, 684, 17 Cal. Rptr. 457, 460 (Cal. Ct. App. 1961) . See also Minn. Stat. § 82.41 subd. 11 (Licensees shall not guarantee or affirmatively encourage another person to guarantee future profits or earnings that may result from the purchase or lease of the real property unless the guarantee and the assumptions upon which it is based are fully disclosed and contained in the contract.)

(n126)Footnote 124. Cf. Morley v. J. Pagel Realty & Insurance, 27 Ariz. App. 62, 550 P.2d 1104, 1107 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1976) (under circumstances that arose in this case, a broker would not engage in the unauthorized practice of law by telling his clients that the purchase price of their property should be secured by a mortgage). Gjonaj v. Sines, 69 A.D.3d 1188, 1189-90, 896 N.Y.S.2d 176, 178-79 (2010) (Brokers can provide limited assistance to their clients with contract forms. There was no evidence that the broker engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. Appropriate warning of the form contract's legal effect was provided by language in capital letters appearing immediately below the broker's address at the top of the first page.).

(n127)Footnote 125. See, e.g.:

Hawaii: Jenkins v. Wise, 58 Haw. 592, 603, 574 P.2d 1337, 1344 (Haw. 1978) .

Louisiana: Jenkins v. Wise, 58 Haw. 592, 603, 574 P.2d 1337, 1344 (Haw. 1978) .

Missouri: Rosenfeld v. Glick Real Estate Company, 291 S.W.2d 863, 872 (Mo. 1956) .

Nebraska: Schepers v. Lautenschlager, 173 Neb. 107, 118, 112 N.W.2d 767, 773 (Neb. 1962) .

New York: Howard v. State, 161 A.D.2d 1075, 1077, 557 N.Y.S.2d 631, 632, 1990 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6652 (1990) ; Browne v. Faulkner, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3918, at *5 (Dec. 20, 2006) .

North Carolina: Gosai v. Abeers Realty & Development and Marketing, Inc., 166 N.C. App. 625, 629, 605 S.E.2d 5, 9 (N.C. Ct. App. 2004) .

(n128)Footnote 126. See Doyle v. Maruszczak, 834 So. 2d 307, 309 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) ; Schepers v. Lautenschlager, 173 Neb. 107, 120, 112 N.W.2d 767, 775 (Neb. 1962) .

See also, Gosai v. Abeers Realty & Development and Marketing, Inc., 166 N.C. App. 625, 630, 605 S.E.2d 5, 9 (N.C. Ct. App. 2004) (plaintiff was allowed to rescind the contract and recover damages).

(n129)Footnote 127. See Schepers v. Lautenschlager, 173 Neb. 107, 120, 112 N.W.2d 767, 775 (Neb. 1962) .

(n130)Footnote 128. See

Hawaii: Jenkins v. Wise, 58 Haw. 592, 603, 574 P.2d 1337, 1344 (Haw. 1978) .

Texas: Riley v. Powell, 665 S.W. 2d 578, 581 (Tex. Civ. App. 1984) , writ of error refused no reversible error, (Jun. 13, 1984), rehearing of writ of error overruled, (Jul. 18, 1984).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

32 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART II. Brokers as Fiduciaries

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.08

§ 3.08 Duties Owed to the Seller by a Buyer's Broker

There are relatively few cases that address the duty a buyer's agent owes to a seller. This is probably because in a transaction involving a seller's broker and a buyer's broker, each broker would typically owe fiduciary duties to his or her respective client. Both seller and buyer would have a broker engaged to solely to represent his or her interest. If both brokers fulfill their fiduciary duties to their respective clients, neither the seller or the buyer should have an actionable complaint against the other party's broker.

One such case addressing the duty owed by a buyer's agent to a seller is Lombardo v. Albu.ⁿ¹ The buyer's agent in this case was sued by the seller for failing to inform the seller that the buyer might be unable to perform because of financial difficulties. The sellers, who were also in a difficult financial situation, ultimately lost the equity in their home at a trustee's sale. The sellers' complaint alleged that the buyer's agent failed to disclose material facts about the buyer's ability to perform that were relevant to the sellers' decision to agree to reschedule closing dates and to refrain from terminating the contract. The trial court granted summary judgment to the buyer's agent and concluded that as a matter of law, a buyer's agent owed the seller no legal duty. The intermediate appellate court affirmed.ⁿ²

The Supreme Court of Arizona reversed. This court began its analysis by considering the duties of the buyer and the seller to each other and then turning to the duties of their agents. The court observed that the buyer and seller had legal duties to each other arising out of their contractual relationship and that among these duties was the covenant of good faith and fair dealing which required that buyers and sellers deal fairly with each other. The buyer and the sellers had duties to each other to disclose facts that were material to the transaction. Where a seller knew of facts materially affecting the value of the property and knew that the facts were not known to the buyer, the seller had a legal duty to disclose such facts.ⁿ³

The court stated that the duties were not a one-way street and that the major consideration flowing from the buyer to the seller was the price. The buyer could not present himself or herself as a ready, willing, and able buyer if the buyer knew that there was a significant risk that the deal would never close because of the buyer's inability to perform. The court found that this would violate the buyer's duty to deal fairly under the contract and the legal duties imposed by Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 161 and Restatement (Second) of Torts § 551.ⁿ⁴

The sellers agreed that the only fiduciary duty an agent owed was to the agent's client. But the buyer's agent argued that because she owed no fiduciary duty to the sellers, she had no duty at all to the sellers. The buyer's agent also argued that a duty to disclose to the seller would conflict with her fiduciary duty not to disclose her client's confidential information. The court stated, "The fallacy in this argument, as we have already seen, is that the client herself has a duty to the seller to disclose facts critical to her ability to perform. Thus, the financial wherewithal of the buyer to perform the contract is not confidential information." n5

The court found that the buyer's ability to perform "goes to the heart of the transaction, and thus is not confidential information," and even if it were, "an agent is privileged to reveal information confidentially acquired by him in the course of his agency in the protection of a superior interest of himself or of a third person." n6 The court held that since the buyer had a duty to disclose, the buyer's agent also had a duty to disclose. The court stated that the performance of an agent's fiduciary duty to its principal was compatible with the agent's duty to deal fairly with all parties to the transaction. In coming to this conclusion the court had considered a regulation issued by the Arizona Department of Real Estate which specifically stated that a licensee owed a fiduciary duty to his or her client, the licensee was required to protect and promote the interests of the client and the licensee was required to deal fairly with all other parties to a transaction. n7 The court stated that this regulation was essentially a codification of the common law which acknowledged the agent's fiduciary duty to its principal, but also acknowledged the agent's non-fiduciary duty to other parties to the transaction. This regulation imposed a duty to disclose any information relating to the seller's or the buyer's inability to perform. The trial courts judgment was reversed and the case was remanded. n8

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 199 Ariz. 97, 14 P.3d 288 (Ariz. 2000) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 199 Ariz. 97, 98, 14 P.3d 288, 289 (Ariz. 2000) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 199 Ariz. 97, 99, 14 P.3d 288, 290 (Ariz. 2000) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 199 Ariz. 97, 99, 14 P.3d 288, 290 (Ariz. 2000) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 199 Ariz. 97, 99-100, 14 P.3d 288, 290-291 (Ariz. 2000) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 199 Ariz. 97, 100, 14 P.3d 288, 291 (Ariz. 2000) , quoting Restatement (Second) of Agency § 395 cmt. f

(n7)Footnote 7. The regulation was Ariz. Admin. Code R4-28-1101.

(n8)Footnote 8. 199 Ariz. 97, 100-101, 14 P.3d 288, 291-292 (Ariz. 2000) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

33 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART II. Brokers as Fiduciaries

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.09

§ 3.09 Negligence

A broker is under a duty to use ordinary care under the circumstances presented. A failure to use ordinary care constitutes negligence for which the broker may be held liable. n1 When a seller claims that a real estate agent's negligence caused a financial loss on the property sale, the seller must show that but for the agent's negligence, he or she would have sold the property on terms more advantageous than those of the eventual sale. n1.1

If a seller intends to assert a claim of professional negligence against a broker, the court may require that the seller submit expert testimony to prove the standard of care of a real estate broker. The failure to provide expert testimony on this issue may justify the dismissal of a seller's claim of professional negligence. n2

The Supreme Court of Virginia has considered whether expert testimony was necessary to prove claims of negligence and breach of contract against an agent when a sales contract required conveyance of a parcel larger than that which the owners retained the real estate agent to sell. n3 The agent had listed the property by its street address and when showing the property, orally told the buyers that only part of the lot was being sold. The agent also showed the buyers where the intended boundary line was located. n4 The buyers asserted that they had not been advised of the boundary line adjustment prior to submitting their contract offer, and that they were entitled to acquire the entire original lot as bounded prior to the adjustment. Alternatively, the buyers indicated their willingness to consider a reduction in the contract sale price. The sellers refused to consider a price reduction and tendered a deed for the reduced lot. The buyers sued for specific performance contending that the contract's reference to the street address as the property's legal description meant that the property shown as that address in the city's land records and, thus, that the contract required conveyance of the entire original lot. The buyers were successful in their suit. The sellers sued their agent alleging negligence and breach of contract. The trial court struck the evidence against the agent and dismissed the complaint on the basis of the sellers' failure to adduce evidence through expert testimony with respect to the standard of care owed by a licenced agent to his clients. n5

Virginia's high court reversed. The court noted the applicable statutory provision which required that agents "[p]erform in accordance with the terms of the brokerage relationship" and "[e]xercise ordinary care." n6 The court found that the existence of this statutory duty and standard of care did not dictate that a trier of fact always required expert assistance to understand the appropriate practices of agents. The court recognized that there may be instances in which the acts of an agent, as with other professionals, involve transactions or matters beyond the capacity of persons of ordinary intelligence to comprehend and, thus, to form an intelligent opinion about them without the assistance of expert testimony. But the court stated, "We need not formulate a bright line rule applicable to all cases involving the alleged negligence of realtors." n7 The court found that expert testimony was unnecessary when the alleged negligent acts or omissions of certain professionals lie within the range of the common knowledge and experience of the trier of fact. A case-by-case approach to the requirement for expert testimony was appropriate in cases involving the alleged negligence of brokers and agents.

With respect to the fact situation before it, the court stated:

In the present case, it is manifest that any person of ordinary intelligence would grasp that a realtor should take care not to offer for sale property which he has not been contractually authorized to sell, nor should a realtor present to his client a contract which clearly fails to sufficiently reflect the accurate legal description of the property to be conveyed. The failure of a realtor in either regard is negligence. Similarly, it is not beyond the realm of common knowledge and understanding that when a contract gives authority to an agent to sell a specific portion of property, and the agent then offers for sale and procures a buyer for more than that portion of the property within his authority to sell, he has breached his contract with his principals. n8

It should be noted, however, that three Justices dissented. They disagreed with how the majority had framed the issue. They reframed the issue as whether the agent's use of the street address as the sole description of the property to be sold, and the agent's reliance on his oral communications and the buyers' visual inspection, violated his professional duty to "[p]erform in accordance with the terms of the brokerage relationship" and to "[e]xercise ordinary care," found in Virginia Code §§ 54.1- 2131(A)(1) and -2131(A)(4), or breached the terms of the listing agreement. n9 These three justices concluded that this question could not be answered without expert testimony. In the dissenters' opinion, Justice Kinser stated that the sufficiency of the property description in the written agreements was not a matter within the common knowledge of lay persons. n10 Determining whether the agent had violated the standard of care for his profession or breached the listing agreement with the sellers meant that the trier of fact had to determine whether the agent should have used a different legal description of the property, and if so, what description; whether he should have attached a copy of the plat to the relevant agreements; or whether the agent was justified in merely relying on his oral communications and the property's visual appearance to identify what portion of the lot was being sold. Justice Kinter wrote, "All those matters require information beyond the common knowledge and experience of lay persons." n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

New York: Murph & Fritz's Place, Inc. v. Loretta, 112 Misc. 2d 554, 447 N.Y.S.2d 205 (1982) N.Y. City Ct. (brokers are under a duty to exercise that degree of diligence, judgment, care, and skill ordinarily used by persons of common capacity engaged in the same business, failing in that duty, the broker is answerable to his principal for consequential damages flowing from his handling of the matter).

Washington: Mattielligh v. Poe, 57 Wash. 2d 203, 205, 356 P.2d 328, 330 (Wash. 1960) .

Wyoming: Kelly v. Roussalis, 776 P.2d 1016, 1018-1019 (Wyo. 1989) .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Boguch v. Landover Corp., 153 Wn. App. 595, 599, 224 P.3d 795, 798 (2009) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 15 P.3d 1179, 1188 (Mont. 2000) .

But cf. Bedwell v. Schmitt, 2002 Ohio 6909, at P40, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 6731, at *12 (Ohio Ct. App. 2002) , appeal denied, 98 Ohio St. 3d 1540, 2003 Ohio 1946, 786 N.E.2d 902 (Ohio 2003) (Ohio Ct. App. 2002) (agents are held to a higher standard of care than laypersons, expert testimony may be required to demonstrate a breach of this standard, but no Ohio court has required expert testimony in cases involving agents); Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 122, 563 S.E.2d 775, 778 (Va. 2002) (Expert testimony is unnecessary when the alleged negligent acts or omissions of certain professionals clearly lie within the range of the common knowledge and experience of the trier of fact. A case-by-case approach to the requirement for expert testimony is appropriate in cases involving the alleged negligence of real estate licensees.)

(n4)Footnote 3. See Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 119-120, 563 S.E.2d 775, 776-777 (Va. 2002) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 119, 563 S.E.2d 775, 776 (Va. 2002) . The sellers had erected a fence and installed landscaping along the new boundary line, but they did not record the plat showing the revision because their attorney had advised them that doing so would accelerate their mortgage debt.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 120, 563 S.E.2d 775, 777 (Va. 2002) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Va. Code Ann. § 54.1-2144.

(n8)Footnote 7. Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 122, 563 S.E.2d 775, 778 (Va. 2002) . It should be noted that this court loosely used the term Realtor(R) as if it were a generic word. It is not.

(n9)Footnote 8. Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 122-123, 563 S.E.2d 775, 778 (Va. 2002) .

(n10)Footnote 9. Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 124, 563 S.E.2d 775, 779 (Va. 2002) . Dissent of Justice Kinser, with whom Justice Lacy and Justice Lemons joined.

(n11)Footnote 10. Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 124-125, 563 S.E.2d 775, 779-780 (Va. 2002) . Dissent of Justice Kinser, with whom Justice Lacy and Justice Lemons joined. It was noted that this was not a situation where a broker merely used an incorrect lot number or street address in the relevant contracts.

(n12)Footnote 11. Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 125, 563 S.E.2d 775, 780 (Va. 2002) . Dissent of Justice Kinser, with whom Justice Lacy and Justice Lemons joined.

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

34 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART II. Brokers as Fiduciaries

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.10

§ 3.10 Subagency

[1] Duties of a Subagent

Typically, the seller and broker enter into some type of listing agreement (listing agreements are discussed in Chapter 2, above). The broker who is a party to the listing agreement is commonly referred to as a listing broker. As part of his or her duties to perform under the listing agreement, the listing broker has a responsibility to inform others of the seller's desire to sell the property. The listing broker often accomplishes this by registering the property with a multiple listing service ("MLS"). Access to the MLS is one of the most important services a broker offers to a client.

Listing property in the Multiple Listing Service, absent a contrary written agreement, is an offer of subagency, and therefore, cooperating brokers are agents of the listing brokers and in a line of agency with the seller. n1 Generally, a subagent owes the principal--the seller--the same duties as those which an agent owes the principal. n2 A sub-agent, lawfully appointed, represents the principal in like manner with the original agent. n3 A subagent is liable to the principal for negligence in performing or failing to perform duties undertaken for the principal. A subagent must also account for anything received for the principal and is liable as a fiduciary for any breach of a fiduciary duty. n4

A principal can recover from the subagent money received by the latter for the principal. A subagent can be held liable to the principal for disobeying orders and for committing a breach of fiduciary duty. n5

As a result of the subagent relationship, the agent will usually be liable to the principal for the subagent's actions regarding agency matters. n6 However, there are courts which hold that a subagency under a MLS agreement is not a subagency for such liability. n7

[2] Selling Broker's Relationship with Seller and Purchaser

A clear distinction exists between the listing broker and the selling broker in terms of their relationship to the interested parties. It is the seller of real property who usually initiates the relationship with the listing broker, while the purchaser typically initiates the relationship with the selling broker. Absent a specific contractual relationship, the selling broker is usually considered the seller's subagent and not the purchaser's agent. n8 Therefore, the selling broker typically owes no fiduciary obligation to the purchaser. n9

The selling broker's primary obligation to the purchaser is to deal honestly and fairly with him or her. n10 This obligation, rather than emanating from an agency relationship, arises primarily from the position of public trust which brokers occupy, state licensing laws, and brokerage relationship acts. Instead, the selling broker owes a fiduciary duty to the seller.

Courts have based their decisions regarding subagency in real estate transactions on two different theories. Some courts have stated that a real estate broker performs discretionary functions on the seller's behalf and, therefore, the broker may delegate his or her duties to a subagent only if the seller has given specific authorization.

The Colorado Supreme Court expressed the majority position in Stortroen v. Beneficial Finance Co. n11 In Stortroen, the court, in determining the time sequence of acceptances and counteroffers, was presented with the issue of whether a cooperating broker under an MLS was the listing broker's subagent and, therefore, the seller's agent. n12 The court gave several traditional reasons for finding that the selling broker was the seller's agent. The court reasoned that if a listing agreement allows the listing broker to register the property with a multiple listing service, the listing broker, by placing the property with a MLS, offers a subagency to any selling or cooperating broker who can procure a purchaser. n13 The court relied on the fact that the entire business structure of a real estate transaction would emanate from the agreement between the listing broker and all of the other MLS members. n14

A second reason advanced by the court was that if one were to find indicia of an agency relationship between the selling broker and the purchaser, one inevitably would find a dual agency relationship involving the seller and purchaser as the principals and the selling broker as the dual agent. n15 The Stortroen court stated that a dual agency in such transactions is fraught with potential conflicts of interest. n16

Finally, the court reasoned that a finding of an agency relationship between the selling broker and the purchaser based solely on the parties' interactions may not benefit the purchaser. In support of this conclusion, the court proffered two examples. Traditionally, a purchaser may rescind an agreement with the seller because of the misrepresentation of the seller's agent, if the seller ratifies the agent's acts. If the selling broker is deemed the purchaser's agent, but is also the party responsible for such misrepresentation, the purchaser would have no such remedy against the seller since the reclassification of the parties would render the ratification doctrine inapplicable. n17

Agency law also provides that if an agent breaches a duty to the principal, the principal may, as one remedy, require the agent to return all compensation that the agent received for the particular transaction. However, the Stortroen court noted that as the purchaser does not pay the real estate commission, the purchaser's legal position would not be enhanced by the finding of an agency relationship. n18

Therefore, based on the above, the Stortroen court refused to find an agency relationship between the selling broker and the purchaser without an express written agreement. n19 To reach this conclusion, the court reasoned that "[t]he prevailing perception of the broker as an agent of the seller is too firmly embedded in the real estate business to permit such a finding [of agency between the selling broker and the purchaser] on the basis of conduct alone." n20

While some courts have accepted the proposition that a broker has a duty to exercise reasonable care so as to protect the interests of those whom the broker is attempting to persuade to enter into the contemplated transaction, n21 this duty falls short of that which is owed by an agent to his or her principal. Therefore, these holdings do not afford the purchaser the same protection that the seller typically receives from an agent.

Some of the more difficult cases involve the sharing of liability between the listing agent and the selling agent. One court has held that the negligence of the cooperating selling agent cannot be imputed to the listing agent. n22 Similarly, the negligence of the listing agent may not be imputed to the selling agent. n23 However, there are courts that have held that a listing agent and selling agent are jointly and severally liable for damages to a third-party purchaser. n24

A subagent is liable to the principal for negligence in performing or failing to perform duties undertaken for the principal. A subagent must also account for anything received for the principal and is liable as a fiduciary for any breach of a fiduciary duty. n25 A principal can recover from the subagent money received by the latter for the principal. A subagent can be held liable to the principal for disobeying orders and for committing a breach of fiduciary duty. n26

This sharing of liability between the listing agent and the selling agent may remain a gray area of the law since there is little scope of control of the listing agent over the selling agent and vice versa, although they are both, by traditional theories, representing the same party. The seller, in most circumstances, has no scope of control nor ability to direct the services of the selling agent. As a practical matter, the advent of brokerage relationship acts and the common use of transaction brokers may make issues of subagency moot in many transactions.

[3] Agency Law Applied to Selling Broker and Purchaser

In a real estate transaction, the purchaser commits numerous acts from which one may reasonably infer that the purchaser intends for the selling broker to act on the purchaser's behalf. Usually, it is the purchaser who contacts the broker, informs the broker of specific property which interests the purchaser, or engages in a discussion with the broker about the purchaser's desires and needs. The purchaser seeks the selling broker's assistance in acquiring the information about specific property or in locating property. The purchaser seeks the selling broker's assistance in determining the property's fair market value. The purchaser relies on the selling broker's expertise in determining what to include in the offer, such as financing terms, inspection and repair procedures, and other contingencies. In doing so, the purchaser reveals to the selling broker personal aspects of the purchaser's financial condition. Thereafter, the purchaser authorizes the selling broker to deliver an offer to the seller on the purchaser's behalf. Once the seller accepts the offer, the purchaser often seeks and relies on the selling broker's advice on financing, inspections, and the like. The purchaser relies on the selling broker's assistance as he or she "walks through" the property on or about the sale date to determine the property's condition for the last time before sale. Thus, the purchaser's actions, from the purchaser's viewpoint, reasonably support the inference that the selling broker is acting on the purchaser's behalf. n27

The first question in considering whether an agency relationship exists between the selling broker and the purchaser is whether the purchaser manifests an intent that the selling broker shall act for him or her. There is usually no formal agreement between the purchaser and the selling broker that the latter shall act for the purchaser. One must, therefore, look to the selling broker's and purchaser's activities to determine whether an agency relationship exists between them.

Several informal manifestations by principals that may constitute an expression of this intent have been identified. In Duffy v. Setchell, n28 the court noted that where a purchaser requests the broker's assistance in obtaining a particular piece of property, the broker is the purchaser's agent for that purpose and those activities involved in that transaction, even though it is the seller who will pay the broker's fee. n29 In determining that the broker was the purchaser's agent in this case, the court relied on the following factors:

- (1) the purchaser initiated the contact with the broker;
- (2) the purchaser asked the broker to approach the property owners to see if they would sell the parcel at the offered price;
- (3) the broker had no prior relationship with the sellers regarding the property;
- (4) the purchaser considered the broker to be her agent; n30
- (5) the broker approached the sellers as the purchaser requested; and (6) the broker negotiated the terms of the sale until the parties agreed. n31

The second question is whether the selling broker acts in such a way as to indicate reasonably to the purchaser that the selling broker is consenting to act for the purchaser. Courts have identified various circumstances under which one may reasonably determine that an agent has impliedly accepted the principal's offer for the agent to act on the principal's behalf. ⁿ³² Duffy v. Setchell ⁿ³³ addressed this issue where the broker's actions clearly manifested his consent to act on the purchaser's behalf.

Like the agent in Duffy, the selling broker's involvement often begins with the purchaser contacting the broker; the broker arranging and negotiating the sale; and generally conducting himself or herself in such a way as to lead the purchaser to believe that the broker is acting for the purchaser's benefit.

Additional acts of the selling broker indicate to the purchaser that the broker is acting as the purchaser's representative. As noted, the selling broker determines the purchaser's wants and needs and attempts to match them with available property. Nevertheless, the broker, unbeknownst to the purchaser, often attempts to direct the purchaser first to the broker's property listings. The broker creates the impression that he or she is attempting to help the buyer find what the buyer needs. When the broker finally searches the MLS listings, the broker again is indicating to the purchaser that the broker is attempting to locate a property that meets the purchaser's needs. If the purchaser and broker locate a property, the broker provides the purchaser with all available information posted with the MLS. If requested by the purchaser, the broker will inform him of pertinent data concerning recent properties sold. The selling broker generally advises the purchaser as to how to include terms in the offer, such as those relating to financing, conditions of title, inspections and repairs, and the like. At the purchaser's direction, the selling broker presents the offer to the listing broker and seller. In so doing, the broker negotiates with the seller in order to establish terms under which the seller and purchaser may reach an agreement. Once the parties enter into a purchase and sale agreement, the selling broker advises the purchaser of the available financing and any other relevant information. The selling broker advises the purchaser of available and reputable inspection companies and title agents.

In determining the existence of an agency relationship, the final question is whether an understanding exists between the purchaser and the selling broker concerning the purchaser's right to control the venture. Such control does not necessarily include supervision or direction over the specific steps in the process. Since the broker usually has more knowledge than the purchaser in this field, it would be ludicrous to presume that the principal will direct the broker's actions in detail. To find an agency relationship, the control need only relate to the general course or direction of the agency, and, unless agreed otherwise, the principal need only have the right to terminate the agency relationship. ⁿ³⁴ In a real estate transaction, the seller retains the right to control the relationship in that the seller has the right to revoke the offer to sell prior to an unconditional acceptance. ⁿ³⁵

Likewise, the purchaser has the right to control the relationship with the selling broker. From the outset, the purchaser's goals provide the selling broker with direction, whether it involves a specific property or a search of property in a MLS. The purchaser decides which property to investigate, whether to make an offer, and the offer's terms. Furthermore, the purchaser may withdraw the offer before the seller accepts it ⁿ³⁶ or may accept or reject any counteroffer. ⁿ³⁷ Therefore, by exercising or failing to exercise approval of the agreements, the purchaser exerts his or her right to control the relationship in the same manner as the seller would.

The question of the extent to which one needs to retain the right to control the venture for purposes of agency was addressed in Fort Myers Airways, Inc. v. American States Insurance Co., ⁿ³⁸ where the court recognized that the principal must only retain the right to control the relationship and not the agent's specific and actual actions. ⁿ³⁹ To determine whether an agency existed, the court noted that the principal determined when the purported agent's actions would occur on his behalf; received the benefits of the agent's actions; and retained the power to revoke the authority he extended to the agent. ⁿ⁴⁰ Thus, the court concluded that the flying instructor was the airplane owner's/flying student's agent while instructing the owner/student in his airplane. ⁿ⁴¹ The court emphasized that, in light of the agent's superior skill and knowledge, it would be a "folly" to have expected the principal to exert significant control over the agent's specific actions. n42

The purchaser is not usually present when the selling broker presents the offer. The purchaser does not make the appointment for the presentation nor does the purchaser take part in the discussion during the presentation which the selling broker traditionally does with or through the listing broker. Nevertheless, the purchaser, as principal, determines the time when the selling broker, as agent, may initiate the activities to make the presentation. Also, the purchaser receives the benefits of the selling broker, as agent, initiating the activities to make the presentation. Also, the purchaser receives the benefits of the selling broker's actions. Further, unless the purchaser is legally prohibited, the purchaser can terminate the relationship. n43 Throughout the real estate transaction, the purchaser retains sufficient power to control the direction of the relationship with the selling broker to find a non-gratuitous agency.

Even if one were to view the transaction provincially and assert that the selling broker is acting gratuitously towards the purchaser, the broker's actions encourage the purchaser to refrain from obtaining alternative counseling and expertise at least until the seller and buyer have signed the sales contract, and it is then too late to obtain expert assistance in negotiating and finalizing the contract. It must be readily apparent to the broker that this is the likely result, even if the selling broker is not intentionally encouraging the purchaser to refrain from such activity, since so many purchasers sign purchase and sale agreements without seeking alternative counseling and advice. Therefore, as long as the selling broker continues to act in such a fashion without advising the purchaser that the broker is not acting on the buyer's behalf, the broker appears to do so as the purchaser's agent.

[4] Gratuitous Agency

Gratuitous agency relationships pose difficult problems. A gratuitous relationship arises when an individual makes a promise or engages in other conduct which

- (1) the individual should realize will cause another reasonably to rely upon the performance of definite acts of service by the individual as the other's agent, and,
- (2) which causes the other to refrain from having such acts done by other available means. n44

Once the gratuitous agency relationship is created, some courts hold that fiduciary duties are also created. n45 The gratuitous real estate agent has fiduciary duties but, in many circumstances, is ineligible for compensation or a commission for his or her services because of the lack of an agreement in writing as is required by most states.

In order for an agent to be a non-gratuitous agent, one need be acting as another's agent for consideration. n46 There appears to be no prerequisite for the principal to pay the agent in order to find an agent to be acting for consideration, although this certainly would be one of several facts to consider in determining whether the agency exists. In the usual real estate transaction, the selling broker works for a commission. Therefore, there is evidence that the selling broker is acting as a non-gratuitous agent.

Even if one were to require that the principal compensate the agent for his or her acts on the principal's behalf, one must recognize that the purchaser indirectly pays some, if not all, of the broker's commission. By agreeing to pay for the property, the purchaser effectively agrees to compensate the broker. Furthermore, because the broker receives a commission based on the purchase price, there is motivation for the broker to facilitate the contract execution and the closing. The broker, therefore, aids the purchaser's ability to close in order to receive his full commission.

It should also be noted that regardless of whether one finds the agency relationship to be non-gratuitous or gratuitous, the finding of an agency relationship between the selling broker and the purchaser arises, at least partially, from the realization that the agent's power to alter the principal's relationship with third parties exists between a selling broker and purchaser as well as between a listing broker and a seller. When delivering the purchaser's offer to the seller and listing broker, the selling broker places the purchaser in the position of being bound to the seller who accepts the offer as tendered and in the required manner. However, even if the listing broker delivers to the seller an offer identical to the terms under which the seller listed the property, the seller may refuse to accept the offer. The seller would be liable for the broker's commission but would not be bound to the prospective purchaser.

Some jurisdictions require by statute that agreements employing real estate brokers to sell or purchase real estate for compensation must be in writing and executed by the party against whom it is enforced. However, it appears that the primary purpose of such a requirement is to regulate the brokers' activities rather than to bar an agency relationship from forming unless there is a writing signed by the party to be charged. n47 Therefore, this type of statutory requirement should not inhibit a court's finding that the selling broker would be the purchaser's agent under the appropriate circumstances.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See:

Federal: United States v. Realty Multi-List, Inc., 629 F.2d 1351, 1377, 1980-81 Trade Cas. (CCH) P63624 (5th Cir. 1980) .

Arkansas: Fennell v. Ross, 289 Ark. 374, 378, 711 S.W.2d 793, 795 (Ark. 1986) .

Colorado: Stortroen v. Beneficial Finance Co., 736 P.2d 391, 396 (Colo. 1987) ; People ex rel. Woodard v. Colorado Springs Bd. of Realtors, 692 P.2d 1055, 1059 (Colo. 1984) (en banc).

Iowa: Iowa v. Cedar Rapids Bd. of Realtors, 300 N.W.2d 127, 128-129 (Iowa 1981) .

North Dakota: Asleson v. Westbranch Land Co., 311 N.W.2d 533, 538-539 (N.D. 1981) .

Washington: Pilling v. Eastern & Pacific Enterprises, 41 Wash. App. 158, 162, 702 P.2d 1232, 1235-1236 (Wash. Ct. App. 1985) , review denied, 104 Wash. 2d 1014, 1985 Wash. LEXIS 1443 (Wash. 1985) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Rayden Engineering Corp. v. Church, 337 Mass. 652, 661, 151 N.E.2d 57, 62-63 (Mass. 1958)

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Proc. § 2351.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Marra v. Katz, 74 Misc. 2d 1010, 1013, 347 N.Y.S.2d 143, 146, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1671 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Marra v. Katz, 74 Misc. 2d 1010, 1013, 347 N.Y.S.2d 143, 147, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1671 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g.:

Federal: Demian Ltd. v. Frank Assoc., 671 F.2d 720, 723 (2d Cir. 1982) .

Massachusetts: Rayden Engineering Corp. v. Church, 337 Mass. 652, 661, 151 N.E.2d 57, 62 (1958) .

See also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 406 (absent agreement to the contrary, the agent is responsible to the principal for the subagent's conduct with reference to the principal's affairs).

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Wise v. Dawson, 353 A.2d 207, 209 (Del. Super. Ct. 1975) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See:

Arkansas: Fennell v. Ross, 289 Ark. 374, 379, 711 S.W.2d 793, 796 (1986)

Colorado: Rohauer v. Little, 736 P.2d 403, 407 (1987) (en banc).

See also Sinclair, The Duty of the Broker to Purchasers and Prospective Purchasers of Real Property in Illinois, 69 Ill. B.J. 260 (1981) (the broker traditionally owes a fiduciary duty only to the seller).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Olsen v. Vail Associates Real Estate, Inc., 935 P.2d 975, 980 (Colo. 1997) ; Comment, The Real Estate Broker-Purchaser Relationship: Louisiana and Common Law, 52 Tul. L. Rev. 157, 160-61 (1977) (in theory, if the vendor engaged the broker to find property, there would be no fiduciary duty to anyone but the vendor).

Cf., e.g., Proctor v. Holden, 75 Md. App. 1, 20-21, 540 A.2d 133, 142 (1988) , cert. denied 313 Md. 506, 545 A.2d 1343 (1988) (testimony from broker that he was working to find the buyers' realty was insufficient to constitute a fiduciary relationship between the broker and purchasers citing this Treatise).

See generally Wolf and Jennings, Seller/Broker Liability in Multiple Listing Real Estate Sales: A Case for Uniform Disclosure, 20 Real Est. L.J. 22 (Summer 1991).

But see:

Georgia: Siler v. Gunn, 117 Ga. App. 325, 326, 160 S.E.2d 427, 428-29 (1968) (a fiduciary relationship existed between the broker and the purchaser).

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Gerber v. Keyes Co., 443 So. 2d 199, 200 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1983) .

(n11)Footnote 11. 736 P.2d 391 (Colo. 1987) (en banc). For a case holding similarly where there was no MLS listing involved, see Kruse v. Miller, 143 Cal. App. 2d 656, 659, 300 P.2d 855, 857-58 (Cal. Ct. App. 1956) (cooperating broker acted at listing broker's request).

(n12)Footnote 12. 736 P.2d 391, 395 (Colo. 1987) .

(n13)Footnote 13. 736 P.2d 391, 397 (Colo. 1987) .

(n14)Footnote 14. 736 P.2d 391, 397 (Colo. 1987) . The court realized that the business relationship between the seller, listing broker, and MLS members was derived from the listing contract, whereas the purchaser was bound by no such relationship. 736 P.2d at 397-98 .

(n15)Footnote 15. 736 P.2d 391, 398 (Colo. 1987) .

(n16)Footnote 16. 736 P.2d 391, 398 (Colo. 1987) .

(n17)Footnote 17. 736 P.2d 391, 398-399 (Colo. 1987) . Note, however, that this does not mean that the purchaser would have no action against the broker for the misrepresentation. See also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 100 (effects of ratification).

(n18)Footnote 18. 736 P.2d 391, 399 (Colo. 1987) .

(n19)Footnote 19. 736 P.2d 391, 400 (Colo. 1987) .

(n20)Footnote 20. 736 P.2d 391, 400 (Colo. 1987) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See:

California: Easton v. Strassburger, 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 102, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383, 390 (Cal. Ct. App. 1984) ; Merrill v. Buck, 58 Cal. 2d 552, 562, 25 Cal. Rptr. 456, 463, 375 P.2d 304, 311 (Cal. Ct. App. 1962) .

New Mexico: Amato v. Rathbun Realty, Inc., 98 N.M. 231, 232, 647 P.2d 433, 434 (N.M. Ct. App. 1982)

(n22)Footnote 22. See Sullivan v. Jefferson, 167 N.J. Super. 282, 289-290, 400 A.2d 836, 839-840 (N.J. Super. Ct. 1979) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Asleson v. Westbranch Land Co., 311 N.W.2d 533, 546 (N.D. 1981) But the court in this case noted that it was not a typical listing agent - selling agent transaction.

(n24)Footnote 24. See First Church of The Open Bible v. Cline J. Dunton Realty, Inc., 19 Wash. App. 275, 574 P.2d 1211, 1214-1215 (1978) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Marra v. Katz, 74 Misc. 2d 1010, 1013, 347 N.Y.S.2d 143, 146, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1671 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973) .

(n26)Footnote 26. See Marra v. Katz, 74 Misc. 2d 1010, 1013, 347 N.Y.S.2d 143, 147, 1973 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1671 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1973) .

(n27)Footnote 27. See Romero, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability: Arizona's Emerging Malpractice Doctrine, 20 Ariz. L. Rev. 767, 772 (1978).

(n28)Footnote 28. 38 Ill. App. 3d 146, 347 N.E.2d 218 (1976) .

(n29)Footnote 29. 38 Ill. App. 3d at 149, 347 N.E.2d at 221 .

(n30)Footnote 30. 38 Ill. App. 3d at 148, 347 N.E.2d at 220 . Note, however, that the principal's opinion that the agent is her agent is insufficient to create the relationship, unless the factors necessary for an agency are present.

(n31)Footnote 31. 38 Ill. App. 3d at 148, 347 N.E.2d at 221 . Additionally, the court recognized that the broker may also become the seller's agent in the same transaction. For a discussion of the dual agency concept, see § 3.21 below.

(n32)Footnote 32. See, e.g.,

Colorado: Butler v. Colorado Int'l Pancakes, Inc., 510 P.2d 443, 445 (Colo. Ct. App. 1973)

Iowa: Popejoy v. Eastburn, 241 Iowa 747, 753, 41 N.W.2d 764, 768 (1950) .

(n33)Footnote 33. 38 Ill. App. 3d 146, 148, 347 N.E.2d 218, 221 (1976) .

(n34)Footnote 34. See:

Florida: Fort Myers Airways, Inc. v. American States Ins. Co., 411 So. 2d 883, 886 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1982) , review denied, 418 So. 2d 1278 (Fla. 1982) .

(n35)Footnote 35. See:

California: Smith v. Holmwood, 231 Cal. App. 2d 549, 552-553, 41 Cal. Rptr. 907, 909-910 (1965) .

Georgia: Donohue v. Monroe, 147 Ga. App. 835, 250 S.E.2d 571, 572 (Ga. Ct. App. 1978) .

Kansas: Wycoff Realty Co. v. Grover, 198 Kan. 139, 143, 422 P.2d 943, 946 (Kan. 1967) .

Rhode Island: Ardente v. Horan, 117 R.I. 254, 259, 366 A.2d 162, 165 (1976) .

(n36)Footnote 36. See Smith v. Holmwood, 231 Cal. App. 2d 549, 552, 41 Cal. Rptr. 907, 909 (1965) .

(n37)Footnote 37. See Smith v. Holmwood, 231 Cal. App. 2d 549, 553, 41 Cal. Rptr. 907, 910 (1965) .

(n38)Footnote 38. 411 So. 2d 883 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1982) .

(n39)Footnote 39. 411 So. 2d at 886 .

(n40)Footnote 40. 411 So. 2d at 886 .

(n41)Footnote 41. 411 So. 2d at 886 .

(n42)Footnote 42. 411 So. 2d at 886 (citation omitted).

(n43)Footnote 43. See Fort Myers Airways, Inc. v. American States Ins. Co., 411 So. 2d 883, 886 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1982) .

(n44)Footnote 44. See Lee Hawkins Realty, Inc. v. Moss, 724 So. 2d 1116, 1119 (Miss. Ct. App. 1998) ; Restatement of Agency, § 378.

(n45)Footnote 45. See Ramey v. Myers, 111 Cal. App. 2d 679, 685, 245 P.2d 360, 364 (Cal. Ct. App. 1952) ; Shevel v. Warter, 256 Wis. 503, 505, 41 N.W.2d 603, 605 (Wis. Ct. App. 1950) . But see Faulkner v. Hood, 246 Ga. App. 714, 718, 539 S.E.2d 886, 889 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) , reconsideration denied, 246 Ga. App. 714, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 1475 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) (While an agent for hire owes his principal a duty of "diligence, loyalty, and absolute good faith," a gratuitous agent is liable "only for gross neglect.").

(n46)Footnote 46. See Comment, A Reexamination of the Real Estate Broker-Buyer-Seller Relationship, 18 Wayne L. Rev. 1343 (1972).

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g.:

Minnesota: PMH Properties v. Nichols, 263 N.W.2d 799, 802, n.3 (Minn. 1978) and statutes cited therein.

Montana: Carnell v. Watson, 176 Mont. 344, 347, 578 P.2d 308, 310-11 (Mont. 1978) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

35 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART II. Brokers as Fiduciaries

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.11

§ 3.11 Insider Trading

Brokers and agents often know the particulars of offers made on property. Due to this inside knowledge, they are in an advantageous position if they desire to acquire the property. With such knowledge, they can successfully outbid others interested in the property. While such a situation would appear to be improper, the Supreme Court of Washington, in Sing v. John L. Scott, Inc.,ⁿ¹ found that such conduct did not create any tort liability nor did this conduct violate that state's Consumer Protection Act.

This case involved undeveloped property listed for sale with John L. Scott (Scott) through its agent, Judy Prongay. The listing price was $45,000. Another Scott agent, Bob Pennock, showed this property to Peter Sing, a real estate investor. Sing told Pennock that he would pay full price or more for the property, because if the trees were cut the property would have a view of Seattle. Pennock helped Sing create a purchase offer. Sing offered $41,000 with a $500 earnest money deposit and a 45-day contingency period to determine if the property was suitable for development. The offer was presented on Friday, August 18th. That day the sellers counteroffered for the full purchase price, a $2,000 earnest money deposit and a 21-day contingency period. Pennock brought the counteroffer to Sing. Sing said he would sign the counteroffer, but because he was going out of town for the weekend, he preferred to sign the counteroffer on Sunday evening or Monday morning. Pennock testified that Sing wanted to wait because it would give him more time on the investigation and feasibility study contingency since the time limit began when both parties signed the agreement. On Saturday, August 19th, Pennock left a written message for Prongay that Sing was out of town for the weekend but that he would probably accept the sellers' counteroffer Sunday night or Monday morning when he returned.

The next day, on Sunday, August 20th, another Scott agent, Maureen Buckley and her husband presented a written offer to purchase the property. They offered $42,000, $500 earnest money, and an 11-day feasibility study period and a shorter closing period than Sing's offer. Prongay testified that the sellers preferred Buckley's offer because of the shorter feasibility period and closing time. However, they still wanted full price and decided to make a counteroffer. Before doing so, however, they had to determine whether Sing had accepted their prior counteroffer. Prongay called Pennock who stated that Sing had not returned nor had he signed the counteroffer. Prongay then informed Pennock that the sellers were withdrawing their counteroffer and instructed him to so notify Sing as soon as possible. Pennock called Sing's home and left a message on his answering machine. The sellers then made a counteroffer of $45,000 to the Buckleys, which was accepted. Pennock subsequently informed Sing that someone else had purchased the property.

Prongay and Buckley knew and worked with each other for many years and Prongay's desk was adjacent to Buckley's office. There was no direct evidence that Buckley used Sing's offer to gain an advantage in the transaction. But Prongay testified that she kept her listing file on her desk and Buckley testified that a couple of weeks before she made the offer to purchase the property, she looked for a plat map of the property in Prongay's listing file, but could not find it. Buckley asked Prongay if she had any maps and Prongay gave her one. Aside from this request, Prongay and Buckley did not discuss this property, nor did they discuss Sing's offer. However, Buckley was aware of the value of potential view property as a result of her prior contact with Sing. In a footnote the court stated:

Just a few weeks prior to the eventual sale of the [subject] property, Buckley had sold property to Sing. On a tour of the property, Sing told Buckley that with the increasing prices of waterfront property, hilltop property would become increasingly valuable, especially where trees could be cleared to provide views. n2

The sale closed in September. In February of the following year, the Buckleys resold the property for $137,500. At the time of trial, the tax assessor's records estimated the property's value at $182,500.

Sing sued Scott and the Buckleys alleging intentional interference with a contract of business expectancy, misrepresentation, and violation of the Consumer Protection Act (CPA). At trial, Sing abandoned his misrepresentation claim. At trial, the jury found by special verdict that:

- (1) Sing did not have a valid contractual relationship of business expectancy with the probability of future economic benefit;
- (2) Scott violated the CPA; and
- (3) Buckley did not violate the CPA.

The jury found Scott caused damages to Sing and awarded him damages of $25,000. Sing was also awarded an additional $7,500 in treble damages, $50,863.59 in attorneys' fees and $122.60 in costs. The trial court's decision was affirmed by the Court of Special Appeals. However, in an en banc decision, the Supreme Court of Washington reversed.

Sing had asserted that it was unfair for Scott to allow its brokers access to files containing third-party purchase offers listed with the agency, and then allow that broker to compete for the purchase of that property with knowledge of another prospective buyer's offer. The court found that there was no duty to keep Sing's offer confidential since both Prongay and Pennock's primary fiduciary duty was at all times to the seller. The court stated that a listing agent could disclose information about an offer to a prospective purchaser to establish a higher price or better terms for the seller. In addition, there was no statute preventing real estate agents from purchasing property listed with their own agency where another buyer had already made an offer. n3

Justice Talmadge dissented as he believed that the majority opinion did not adequately convey the "insider trading" present in the case. n4 He observed that the majority ignored the duties owed by real estate brokers and agents to sellers and buyers, and that they condoned insider trading practices by Scott and its agents forbidden for nearly identical policy reasons in securities transactions. He believed that the majority's central and fatal error was assuming that Maureen Buckley was in the same legal position as a total stranger in purchasing this property. n5 After citing this Treatise, n6 Justice Talmadge stated:

[B]ased on traditional Washington analysis of the duty owed by a real estate broker to a seller or to a purchaser, Scott violated its duty to Sing by virtue of the self-dealing of its agent. Scott breached its fiduciary duty to the [sellers] in failing to disclose to them the possibility of two offers from purchasers who would pay at least the listing price, and perhaps more, for their property. As a fiduciary of the [sellers], Scott had a duty to initiate a "bidding war" between Buckley and Sing to secure the best possible price for the sale of the property. Additionally, Scott breached its fiduciary duty to the sellers in this case when Buckley acquired significant information about investment view property on Bainbridge Island that she did not disclose to the [sellers]. The [sellers] would have benefitted from Buckley's knowledge that their property, with the trees cleared to allow a Seattle view, was more valuable than they thought. As a subagent of Scott, any valuable knowledge Buckley possessed and used in developing the offer to the [sellers] should have been given to the [sellers]; this knowledge was imputable to Scott. Buckley used her knowledge of insider information, ironically acquired from Sing, to engage in a transaction that resulted in a profit after only a few months of $92,500. n7

In a footnote, Justice Talmadge noted that it was unclear from the record whether the sellers filed an action against Scott or the Buckleys to require them "to disgorge any of the profits obtained in this transaction."

Justice Talmadge also believed that the broker's actions constituted a fraud on the market. On this issue he stated:

When a broker and its agents use insider status to, in effect, pull the rug out from under a buyer so as to prevent the seller from getting the best possible price for the sale of property and to deprive the buyer of a fair opportunity to compete for the property, the marketplace is disrupted artificially and a fraud on the market has occurred. n8

While Justice Talmadge was the lone dissenter, his opinion better accords with notions of fair play and justice. In this writer's opinion, allowing Buckley to profit from the sellers' ignorance of the potential value of their property makes a mockery of the fiduciary concept of loyalty. Buckley misappropriated information and used it to her own distinct advantage without regard to the interests of the sellers or Sing. n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 134 Wash. 2d 24, 948 P.2d 816 (1997) (en banc) citing this Treatise.

(n2)Footnote 2. 948 P.2d 816, 818 (1997) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 948 P.2d 816, 820 (1997) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 948 P.2d 816, 821 (1997) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 948 P.2d 816, 822 (1997) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 948 P.2d 816, 824 (1997) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 948 P.2d 816, 825-826 (Wash. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 948 P.2d 816, 827 (Wash. 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 9. 948 P.2d 816, 827 (Wash. 1997) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

36 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART II. Brokers as Fiduciaries

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.12

§ 3.12 When Do a Broker's Duties Terminate?

A broker's duties to his or her clients terminate when the subject matter of the agency is sold or otherwise disposed of. n1 Generally, the agency relationship is terminated for a seller's broker when the property has been sold; the duty of loyalty does not survive termination of an agent's employment. n2 However, the broker's fiduciary duty to the seller does not end when the broker procures a ready, willing and able buyer on the seller's terms. n3 Broker misconduct occurring subsequent to the broker's production of a buyer has been held to violate the broker's fiduciary obligation. n4 It has been stated that a broker's fiduciary duties to a seller did not terminate on the expiration date of the listing agreement, but, instead, continued until performance or completion of the agreement by which the broker was engaged. n5

Even if the broker or an relative or associate of the broker purchases the property, the broker's fiduciary duties continue even though the broker may be a principal in the transaction. Therefore, once an agency relationship has been created, the broker is not absolved of fiduciary duties merely because the broker is the buyer. A broker who deals with the subject matter of the agency with the consent of the principal, cannot take advantage of the principal by withholding information secured by means of the agency relationship. n6

Once the listing agreement and fiduciary relationship have been terminated, brokers may act for themselves or for the other party to the transaction, provided they do not hinder, interfere with or delay a transaction that the original listing agreement was intended to bring about. n7 However, it is not always clear when the agency relationship was terminated. The conduct of the parties can extend the relationship beyond the stated termination date in a listing agreement or a buyer-broker agreement. Factual issues are presented if there is uncertainty as to when a relationship was terminated. n8

Even though a broker may have terminated an agency relationship with the client, fiduciary obligations may continue because of the broker's unique access to confidential information. It has been held that a fiduciary's duty to a former client does not cease when the broker becomes a principal in the transaction. n9

For instance, the agency may have expired by its own terms (e.g., in ninety days), but the broker already knows confidential information shared during that relationship. If the broker then purchases the principal's property, a court may determine that the broker was in a unique position to take advantage of the principal's confidential information.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See

California: Robinson v. Grossman, 57 Cal. App. 4th 634, 646, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380, 387 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) .

Pennsylvania: Shank v. Kaufman, 12 Pa. D. & C.3d 793, 795 , 1979 Pa. D. & C. LEXIS 328, at *3 (Pa. D & C Ct. Dec. 14, 1979).

See also Ga. Code Ann. § 10-6A-9 (broker relationship continues until completion of performance of the engagement, expiration of the parties' agreement, an authorized termination of the relationship).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Foster and Gridley v. Winner, 169 Vt. 621, 624, 740 A.2d 1283, 1287 (Vt. 1999) ; Restatement (Second) of Agency § 396.

(n3)Footnote 3. But see Pilling v. Eastern & Pacific Enterprises, 41 Wash. App. 158, 165, 702 P.2d 1232, 1237 (Wash. Ct. App. 1985) , review denied, 104 Wash. 2d 1014, 1985 Wash. LEXIS 1443 (Wash. 1985) (there is no legal basis for asserting that the seller-broker agency relationship extends beyond the time when the broker has earned his commission).

(n4)Footnote 4. See

Vermont: Quechee Lakes Rental Corporation v. Boggess, 158 Vt. 258, 264, 608 A.2d 39 (Vt. 1992) .

Washington: Wesco Realty, Inc. v. Drewry, 9 Wash. App. 734, 739, 515 P.2d 513, 517 (Wash. Ct. App. 1973) .

Cf. Moore & Co. v. T-A-L-L, Inc., 792 P.2d 794, 799 (Colo. 1990) (where agency agreement authorizes broker to sell property, broker's fiduciary obligation continues through closing); Wallace v. Odham, 579 So. 2d 171, 175 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1991) , review denied, 589 So. 2d 291 (Fla. 1991) (breach of fiduciary duty provided ground to bar commission even though acts of breach occurred after broker abandoned agency contract).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Mabry v. Tom Stanger & Co., 33 P.3d 1206, 1210 (Colo. Ct. App. 2001) , rehearing denied 2001 Colo. App. LEXIS 605 (Colo. Ct. App. Apr. 5, 2001) , cert. denied 2001 Colo. LEXIS 927 (Colo. Nov. 13, 2001) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Roberts v. Lomanto, 112 Cal. App. 4th 1553, 1563, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866, 873 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) , review denied, 2004 Cal. LEXIS 1784 (Cal. Feb. 24, 2004) .

(n7)Footnote 7.

Arizona: Coldwell Banker Commercial Group, Inc. v. Camelback Office Park, 156 Ariz. 226, 231, 751 P.2d 542, 547 (1988) .

Florida: Portell Int'l Realty, Inc. v. Jacobson, 802 So. 2d 431, 433 (Fla. Ct. App. 2001) .

Maryland: Hardy v. Davis, 223 Md. 229, 233-234, 164 A.2d 281, 283-284 (1960) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Walker v. Woodworth, 160 Or. App. 636, 642-643, 981 P.2d 1282, 1286 (1999) .

(n9)Footnote 9.

New Mexico: Swallows v. Laney, 102 N.M. 81, 84, 691 P.2d 874, 877 (N.M. 1984) .

Texas: Southern Cross Indus., Inc. v. Martin, 604 S.W.2d 290, 292-293 (Tex. Civ. App. 1980) , writ of error refused no reversible error (Dec. 31, 1980), rehearing of writ of error overruled (Jan. 21, 1981).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

37 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART II. Brokers as Fiduciaries

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.13

§ 3.13 Breach of a Broker's Duty Under Agency Law

[1] Damages for Breach of a Broker's Duty

A principal alleging a breach of fiduciary duty must plead and prove the breach, and must show that the breach caused an identifiable loss or resulted in injury to the principal. n1 Whether a fiduciary duty has been breached is a question for the fact finder. n2 A broker or agent is subject to any losses incurred from his or her breach of duty. n3

A broker's measure of liability for negligence in collecting claims due the principal is the amount of damages sustained by the principal, and this is prima facie the amount of the debt or claim. n4 When a prima facie case has been made, the burden is on the broker to show facts relieving the broker from liability. n5 Therefore, after a principal has made a prima facie showing, the burden then rests on the defendant agent to show that there was no damage or that the damage was less than claimed. n6

Some courts have held that a plaintiff injured by a fiduciary who commits fraud, is not limited to out-of-pocket losses. If the breach does not arise from contract, the measure of damages is the amount which will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether it could have been anticipated or not. n7

[2] Effect of a Breach of a Broker's Duty Upon the Broker's Right to Compensation

As a general rule, a broker or agent's right to compensation will be affected by a violation of his or her fiduciary duties. n8 Some courts hold that a broker who breaches his or her duty must forfeit the entire commission as a matter of law. n9 Typically cases finding a total forfeiture of commission involve a single, specific transaction. Courts adopting this view hold that when a broker breaches a fiduciary duty to a principal, the broker is not entitled to receive a commission if some potential harm to the principal may have been caused by the breach, even though no actual harm was shown. n10

Total forfeiture of the broker's commission is a severe remedy. Generally courts are willing to apply this remedy when the broker's conduct constitutes willful disobedience of lawful and reasonable instructions whereby such conduct shows a complete disregard of the fundamental obligations of the parties' relationship and a disloyalty to the principal's interests. n11

A broker's negligence, without a violation of the fiduciary relationship arising from being the principal's agent, usually limits the principal's remedy to damages rather than a total forfeiture of the broker's commission. n12 Breaches involving negligence without bad faith generally result in courts holding that the broker, while liable for whatever damages the negligent conduct has caused, does not also automatically lose his or her commission. n13 This more tolerant view results from the viewpoint that an automatic forfeiture rule is to deter intentional misconduct by brokers. n14 These courts find that where there is no intentional misconduct, any damages caused by the broker's failings can be rectified by a negligence action. Consequently, it is not always necessary or fair to require that the broker also forego the commission. n15 However, gross negligence on the broker's part is likely to result in a total forfeiture of the broker's commission. n16

Section 469 of the Restatement (Second) of Agency provides that:

An agent is entitled to no compensation for conduct which is disobedient or which is a breach of his duty of loyalty; if such conduct constitutes a willful and deliberate breach of his contract of service, he is not entitled to compensation even for properly performed services for which no compensation is apportioned.

One court, in explaining why this section does not result in automatic forfeiture, reasoned that the word "entitled" meant "to give a right to." By applying this definition, the court found that § 469 indicated that a disloyal agent does not have a right to compensation since the agent breached the agent's duty of loyalty, "but a breach does not exclude the exercise of the court's discretion granting him compensation." n17

If a court does not follow the rule of automatic forfeiture of the entire commission, the court should consider the following factors in determining the broker's right to any commission: the seriousness and timing of the violation; the willfulness of the breach; the potential for, or actual harm to the principal; and whether the agent completed a divisible portion of his contract duties before the breach occurred for which compensation can be determined. n18 The Texas Supreme Court has rejected the theory of automatic full forfeiture because such a result would deprive the remedy of its equitable nature. n19 Instead, the court held that Texas law requires a consideration of several factors in determining the amount of forfeiture, including: "the gravity and timing of the violation, its willfulness, its effect on the value of the [agent's] work for the [principal], and other threatened or actual harm to the [principal] and the adequacy of other remedies." n20

[3] Damages Arising from a Broker's Self-Dealing

It is considered axiomatic that a broker who deals with the principal's property cannot acquire a secret profit. If the broker violates the relationship in this manner, whatever secret profit the broker receives belongs to that principal and the broker must account to the principal for all that the broker received. n21 The equitable doctrine of constructive trusts is available where a broker takes improper advantage of a client. n22

If a broker is accused of violating his or her duty of loyalty to the principal by engaging in self-dealing, the principal in an action for breach of the broker's fiduciary duty need only bear the burden of proving that the broker acted on the broker's own behalf in a transaction connected with the agency. This alone establishes the breach of the duty. The burden of proof then falls on the agent to prove that the principal knew or did not care to know that the broker was acting on the broker's own behalf in the transaction. Full disclosure in this situation, effectively serves as an affirmative defense to the prima facie breach of the duty created by the conflict of interest. n23

Where a broker did not inform the sellers of the existence of an offer from a third party but, using a corporate entity, purchased the property from the sellers at a lower price and contemporaneously sold the property to the third party at the higher price, the broker was held liable for the difference between what the broker paid for the property and what the broker sold the property for to a third party. n24

Where the broker's breach of fiduciary duty is found to be wilful and malicious, recovery of exemplary n25 or punitive damages have been awarded. n26

Not all self-dealing results in the broker earning a profit at the client's expense. It has been held that if a broker purchases the client's property without a full disclosure of all the facts, the sale is voidable at the seller's option. n27 Computation of the seller's damages becomes an issue if the seller voids the contract as illustrated by Flatau v. Dover (In re Sanders). n28 The listing broker in this case failed to disclose the existence of a purchase offer to the sellers and instead presented only its offer of purchase which the sellers accepted. The sellers chose not to settle and instead sold the property through another broker. The sellers' Chapter 7 trustee sued seeking a turn over of estate property alleging that the broker's offer constituted a breach of fiduciary duty and tortious interference with contractual relations between the sellers and the persons who made the undisclosed offer. The trustee alleged that the estate was entitled to recover a judgment against the broker.

The broker showed that its offer netted the sellers $236.50 more than what the sellers would have received on the undisclosed offer. The broker moved for summary judgment claiming that the complaint failed to state a cause of action because the sellers suffered no damages as a result of the broker's conduct. The court denied the motion. It stated that the broker's contract was not relevant to the determination of the seller's damages. It stated, "The use of the [broker's] Contract as evidence which would serve to limit the [sellers'] damages would create an element of enforceability for the contract where none exists under Georgia law." n29 This case illustrates that a broker's self-dealing, even if it nets the client more money, may not protect the broker from a claim for damages based upon the breach of fiduciary duty and any other torts that occur.

To avoid liability for self-dealing, the broker need only make full disclosure to the principal. n30

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lindland v. United Business Investments, Inc., 298 Ore. 318, 327, 693 P.2d 20, 25 (Or. 1984) (en banc), rehearing denied (1985).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Musselman v. Southwinds Realty Co., 146 Ariz. 173, 175, 704 P.2d 814, 816 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1995) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Cogan v. Kidder, Mathews & Senger, Inc., 97 Wn.2d 658, 667, 648 P.2d 875, 880 (Wash. 1982) ; Meerdink v. Krieger, 15 Wash. App. 540, 545, 550 P.2d 42, 46 (Wash. Ct. App. 1976) , review denied, 87 Wash. 2d 1011, 1976 Wash. LEXIS 816 (1976) ; Restatement (Second) of Agency § 401.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Merkley v. MacPherson's, Inc., 69 Wash. 2d 776, 780, 420 P.2d 205, 208 (Wash. 1966) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Merkley v. MacPherson's, Inc., 69 Wash. 2d 776, 780, 420 P.2d 205, 208 (Wash. 1966) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Merkley v. MacPherson's, Inc., 69 Wash. 2d 776, 780, 420 P.2d 205, 208 (Wash. 1966) ; Restatement (Second), Agency § 401.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Fragale v. Faulkner, 110 Cal. App. 4th 229, 238, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 616, 623 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) . See also Cal. Civ. Code § 3333.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Rockefeller v. Grabow, 136 Idaho 637, 642, 39 P.3d 577, 582 (Idaho 2001) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Rockefeller v. Grabow, 136 Idaho 637, 642, 39 P.3d 577, 582 (Idaho 2001) ; Cooke v. Iverson, 94 Idaho 929, 934, 500 P.2d 830, 835 (1972) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Quechee Lakes Rental Corporation v. Boggess, 158 Vt. 258, 265, 608 A.2d 39 (Vt. 1992) .

See Nichols v. Minnick, 885 N.E.2d 1 (Ind. 2008), reh'g denied, 2008 Ind. LEXIS 544 (June 30, 2008) (broker who breaches his fiduciary duty to disclose material information to his client loses his right to receive a commission for his services).

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g.,

California: Harvey v. Berger, 91 Cal. App. 165, 167, 266 P. 829, 830 (Cal. Ct. App. 1928) .

Oregon: Atherton v. Collins, 240 Or. 265, 267, 401 P.2d 15, 16 (Or. 1965) ("An agent is not entitled to compensation when he breaches his duty to his principal during the performance of his services.").

Restatement (Second) of Agency § 469.

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g.,

California: Harvey v. Berger, 91 Cal. App. 165, 167, 266 P. 829, 830 (Cal. Ct. App. 1928) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Tackett v. Croonquist, 244 Cal. App. 2d 572, 53 Cal. Rptr. 388, 392 (Cal. Ct. App. 1966) ; Monty v. Peterson, 85 Wash. 2d 956, 540 P.2d 1377, 1378 (1975) . See also Menzel v. Morse, 362 N.W.2d 465, 474-475 (Iowa 1985) (broker is liable for all losses directly resulting from his failure to exercise the standard of skill and care imposed on him by law).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Veach v. Meyeres Real Estate Real Estate, Inc., 599 P.2d 746, 748-749 (Alaska 1979) ; Greenberg v. Meyer, 50 Ohio App. 2d 381, 4 Ohio Op. 3d 353, 363 N.E.2d 779, 781 (Ohio Ct. App. 1977) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Veach v. Meyeres Real Estate Real Estate, Inc., 599 P.2d 746, 749 (Alaska 1979) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Harvey v. Berger, 91 Cal. App. 165, 167, 266 P. 829, 830 (Cal. Ct. App. 1928) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Williams v. Queen Fisheries, Inc., 2 Wash. App. 691, 469 P.2d 583, 588 (Wash. Ct. App. 1970) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Rockefeller v. Grabow, 136 Idaho 637, 643, 39 P.3d 577, 583 (Idaho 2001) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Burrow v. Arce, 997 S.W.2d 229, 241 (Tex. 1999) .

(n20)Footnote 20. 997 S.W.2d 229, 243 (1999) .

See also Marnon v. Vaughan Motor Co., 184 Or. 103, 194 P.2d 992, 1020-21 (Or. 1948) (general rule is that a disloyal agent forfeits all right to recover for services rendered on his principal's behalf, but this rule is not an inflexible one, whether compensation is denied a fiduciary ultimately rests in the court's discretion) (quoting Shulkin v. Shulkin, 301 Mass. 184, 16 N.E.2d 644, 652 (Mass. 1938)) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See:

Minnesota: Jensen v. Peterson, 264 N.W. 2d 139, 142-143 (Minn. 1978) .

Oregon: Atherton v. Collins, 240 Ore. 265, 270, 401 P.2d 15, 18 (Or. 1965) ; Stone v. Leonard, 120 Or 427, 437-438, 251 P. 299, 302 (Or. 1927) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Nguyen v. Scott, 206 Cal. App. 3d 725, 740, 253 Cal. Rptr. 800, 809 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988) , review denied; Whitman v. Forbes, 55 N.C. App. 706, 712, 286 S.E.2d 889, 893 (N.C. Ct. App. 1982) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See Lindland v. United Business Investments, Inc., 298 Ore. 318, 324, 693 P.2d 20, 23-24 (Or. 1984) (en banc), rehearing denied (1985); Restatement (Second) of Agency § 389 comment e and § 390 comment g.

(n24)Footnote 24. See Jensen v. Peterson, 264 N.W.2d 139, 142 (Minn. 1978) . For a case involving similar facts, see Real Estate Licensing Bd. v. Gallman, 52 N.C. App. 118, 277 S.E.2d 853 (1981) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See, e.g., Wilson v. Donze, 692 S.W.2d 734, 740 (Tex. Ct. App. 1985) .

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Phillips v. Lynch, 101 Nev. 311, 313, 704 P.2d 1083, 1084 (1985) (broker not only breached the listing contract, but also committed a fraudulent act of misconduct that sounded in tort, a claim for punitive damages, as well as compensatory damages, was justified).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Dolvin Realty Co. v. Holley, 203 Ga. 618, 621, 48 S.E.2d 109, 112 (Ga. 1948) .

(n28)Footnote 28. 233 B.R. 168 (Bkrcty. M.D. Ga. 1999) , applying Georgia law.

(n29)Footnote 29. 233 B.R. 168, 170 (Bkrcty. M.D. Ga. 1999) , applying Georgia law.

(n30)Footnote 30. See Rodes v. Shannon, 222 Cal. App. 2d 721, 726, 35 Cal. Rptr. 339, 343 (Cal. Ct. App. 1963) ("One employed as agent violates no duty to the principal by acting for his own benefit if he makes a full disclosure of the facts to an acquiescent principal and takes no unfair advantage of him.").

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

38 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART II. Brokers as Fiduciaries

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.14

§ 3.14 Common Law Defense of Manager's Privilege

In some cases, a real estate licensee may be accused of tortiously interfering with a contract between a buyer and a seller. If so, the licensee may be protected by the manager's privilege if the licensee was an agent of one of the parties. This privilege has also been interchangeably referred to as the "agent's privilege" as well as the "manager's privilege." This section will use the term "manager's privilege."

The manager's privilege provides that a manager or agent may, with impersonal or disinterested motive, properly endeavor to protect the interests of his or her principal by counseling the breach of a contract with a third party which the manager or agent reasonably believes to be harmful to the principal's best interests. n1 Initially, this privilege was applied to managers of business entities, but has been expanded to include agents of natural persons. n2 This privilege can be absolute or qualified and if qualified, application of the privilege may be tested by applying a mixed motive test or a predominant motive test. Consequently, there are three formulations of the managers privilege:

- (1) absolute,
- (2) mixed motive, and
- (3) predominant motive. n3

If this privilege is absolute, it is based solely on the manager's status as the manager or agent of the breaching party, without regard to the manager or agent's motives or state of mind. Under the mixed motive formulation, the privilege applies as long as the manager or agent is motivated, at least in part, by a desire to benefit the principal. Under the predominant motive formulation a manager or agent has the privilege of interfering with a principal's contract only when the manager's predominant motive is to serve the interest of the principal. The predominant motive formulation is the most restrictive of the three. n4 Several high courts have adopted the predominant motive test. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See., e.g., Huynh v. Vu, 111 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1194, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595, 604 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) . See generally Comment, Boxing Basinger: Oral Contracts and the Manager's Privilege on the Ropes in Hollywood, 9

UCLA Ent. L.Rev. 285, 287-291 (2002); Note, Main Line v. Basinger and the Mixed Motive Manager: Reexamining the Agent's Privilege to Induce Breach of Contract, 46 Hastings L.J. 609, 626 (1995).

(n2)Footnote 2. See., e.g., Huynh v. Vu, 111 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1195, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595, 605 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc., 65 Cal. App.4th 1383, 1391, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998) , review denied, Supreme Court Minute 11-17-1998, 1998 Cal. LEXIS 7535 (Cal. Nov. 17, 1998) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See., e.g., Huynh v. Vu, 111 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1195, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595, 605 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See: Huynh v. Vu, 111 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1195, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 595, 605 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) , citing Geolar, Inc. v. Gilbert/Commonwealth, 874 P.2d 937, 940-941 (Alaska 1994) ; Jones v. Lake Park Care Center, Inc., 569 N.W.2d 369, 376-378 (Iowa 1997) ; Nordling v. Northern States Power Co., 478 N.W.2d 498, 507 (Minn. 1991) ; Trau-Med of America, Inc. v. Allstate Ins. Co., 71 S.W.3d 691, 701-702 & fn. 5 (Tenn. 2002) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

39 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART II. Brokers as Fiduciaries

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.15

§ 3.15 A Broker's Use of an Independent Inspector's Report as a Defense in a Buyer's Action

When the buyer discovers a material defect after the transaction has closed, the buyer may sue the brokers involved in the transaction. If the buyer obtained an independent inspection report from a competent third party, the broker may assert that this report bars any claim against the broker for failing to disclose a defect. In some jurisdictions, this fact pattern would entitle the broker to a favorable summary judgment. n1

If a statute or regulation allows a broker to interpose the existence of an independent inspector's report as a defense in a claim that the broker failed to disclose a defect, such a report should not serve as a defense to allegations of breach of other duties. n2

In the landmark case of Leko v. Cornerstone Home Inspection n3 a California intermediate appellate court held that a real estate agent who is sued for negligent nondisclosure of defects in real property may seek equitable indemnity from a home inspection company that allegedly breached its duty to the purchaser to discover and disclose the same defects. The real estate agents were aided by California statute which imposes a duty on home inspection companies to "conduct a home inspection with the degree of care that a reasonably prudent home inspector would exercise." n4 California law also imposes a substantially similar duty on real estate licensees involved in the sale of residential property as they statutorily owe a duty to conduct a "reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale and to disclose to [a] prospective purchaser all facts materially affecting the value and desirability of the property that an investigation would reveal ..." n5 The court stated that when a purchaser of residential real property was damaged by the nondisclosure of a defect that both the inspector and the real estate agent or broker were obligated to discover and disclose, it was fair to apportion the damages between the two.

Leko involved a home inspector who had inspected the home for the purchasers, but it also involved a home inspector who had prepared a report for a different prospective purchaser, in connection with a previous transaction involving the same property. The court found that a real estate agent or broker could also seek equitable indemnity from such an inspector so long as the home inspector intended or knew with substantial certainty that his or her report would be used in subsequent transactions involving the property. n6

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lim v. Lomeli, 2007 Tex. App. LEXIS 6932, at *11 (Aug. 29, 2007) (Since the buyers hired professional inspectors and obtained and reviewed their reports, the buyers, as a matter of law, cannot establish that they detrimentally relied on their agent's alleged misrepresentations.) Conell v. Coldwell Banker Premier Real Estate, Inc., 181 Wis. 2d 894, 901-902, 512 N.W.2d 239, 243 (Wis. Ct. App. 1994) (statute relieved the broker from the duty to disclose information related to the condition of the property where an inspection was conducted by a qualified third party, administrative code allowed broker to rely on a third-party inspection, thereby relieving the broker from the duty to inspect the property).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Johnson v. Neuville, 226 Wis. 2d 365, 373, 595 N.W.2d 100, 105 (Wis. Ct. App. 1999) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 86 Cal. App. 4th 1109, 103 Cal. Rptr.2d 858, 865-866 (Cal. Ct. App. 2001) , review denied Supreme Court Minute 05- 02-2001, 2001 Cal. LEXIS 3146 (Cal. May 2, 2001) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7196.

(n5)Footnote 5. Cal. Code §§ 2079, subd. (a); 2079.16. See also Cal. Civ. Code § 1106.

(n6)Footnote 6. 86 Cal. App. 4th 1109, 103 Cal. Rptr.2d 858, 867-868 (2001) , review denied Supreme Court Minute 05- 02-2001, 2001 Cal. LEXIS 3146 (Cal. May 2, 2001) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

40 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART III. Duties Owed to Buyers

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.16

§ 3.16 Duties Owed to a Buyer by a Seller's Broker

[1] A Seller's Broker Must Deal Honestly and Fairly with a Buyer

When a seller's broker has no agency relationship with the buyer, the broker does not owe any fiduciary duties to the buyer. This does not mean, however, that the broker is free to act however he or she chooses in an effort to benefit the broker's principal. Real estate brokers have been held accountable for failing to deal fairly and honestly with a purchaser while serving as the seller's agent. n1

Real estate licensing acts often require that licensees treat all customers honestly and that they not negligently or knowingly give customers false information. n2 This duty typically requires that a licensee engaged by a seller must timely disclose to customers who are prospective buyers all latent material adverse facts pertaining to the property's physical condition that are actually known by the licensee and that could not be discovered by a customer's reasonably diligent inspection of the property. n3 Some licensing acts provide that a licensee is not liable for providing false information to the buyer if the false information was provided to the licensee by the licensee's client and the licensee did not have actual knowledge that the information was false. n4 Some licensing acts address when a private right of action arises under the licensing act. n5

Buyers typically sue the seller's broker when they believe they have been misled or deceived by statements or omissions made by the broker. Depending on the circumstances, the buyer may allege negligent misrepresentation or fraudulent misrepresentation. Justifiable reliance is an essential element of both torts. n6 In some cases, buyers have even alleged innocent misrepresentation.

Even before the advent of brokerage relationship acts, a licensee who knew of a serious latent defect in a property listed by the licensee, had a duty to see that the purchaser was informed of the defect. n7

It is generally held that a seller's broker may be liable to a buyer if the broker makes material misrepresentations with regard to the fitness or habitability of residential property or fails to disclose defects or conditions in the property that substantially affect its value or habitability, of which the broker is aware or reasonably should be aware, but the buyer is unaware and would not discover by a reasonably diligent inspection. n8 It must be shown that the misrepresentation or concealment was a substantial factor in inducing the buyer to buy the property.

One court has held that a broker can protect himself or herself from misrepresentation allegations by disclaiming knowledge of the property's defects and having a buyer (or seller) acknowledge such disclaimer. This court specifically held that such protection was not against public policy and helped clarify the law and the role of those involved in real estate matters. n9

In order to bring a suit under a licensing law with respect to a misrepresentation, it is not necessary that the misrepresentation involve a physical characteristic of the property. n10

[2] Duty to Investigate

The applicable laws and regulations are the first place to look in determining whether a seller's broker has a duty to investigate on behalf of the buyer. Absent such a statutory or regulatory duty, it would appear that most courts have held that in the absence of any reason to perform an investigation, there was no duty imputable to a broker that would compel the broker to investigate the seller's home for concealed or latent impairments or defects. n11

Brokers should not make assumptions regarding matters of considerable importance to their clients. Particularly with respect to the representation of a buyer, making an assumption regarding a material fact can lead to liability on the broker's part. It can be argued that brokers have a duty to investigate and verify material facts instead of knowingly making an assumption and relaying this assumption to the client when the broker knows that the client will rely upon this information in making a purchase decision. n12

[3] Negligent Misrepresentation

A common tort alleged against seller's brokers by buyers is that of negligent misrepresentation. The typical scenario leading to a suit alleging this tort is that after the transaction has settled, the buyer discovers flaws and defects in the property which leads to a lawsuit against the seller and the seller's broker. A broker who commits the tort of negligent misrepresentation may be liable for pecuniary loss caused to the buyer by the buyer's justifiable reliance upon incorrect information, if the broker failed to exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information. n13 To prove negligent misrepresentation, the plaintiff must prove

- (1) a misrepresentation or omission of a fact;
- (2) that the representation is material or significant;
- (3) a failure to exercise reasonable care on the part of the defendant;
- (4) the plaintiff's reasonable reliance on the misrepresentation or omission; and
- (5) damages as a direct result of such reasonable reliance. n14

Negligent misrepresentation has been called a form of actual fraud, consisting of a "positive assertion, in a manner not warranted by the information of the person making it, of that which is not true, though he believes it to be true." n15 There can be no finding of negligent misrepresentation by a party's mere omission. n16

In California, a real estate agent has a statutory liability for negligence as California Civil Code § 1088 provides in part that: "[i]f an agent ... places a listing or other information in the multiple listing service, that agent ... shall be responsible for the truth of all representations... of which that agent... had knowledge or reasonably should have had knowledge to anyone injured by their falseness or inaccuracy." n17

Wyoming's high court has limited negligent misrepresentation claims when the sales contract contains a disclaimer clause. n18 This court has stated that the initial question posed by a claim for negligent misrepresentation was whether a plaintiff may bring an action which arises out of a contract and call it a tort action, thereby rendering the plaintiff's statement in the contract null and void. Courts have two predominant views on this issue. The first view is that the contractual relationship controls, and parties are not permitted to assert tort actions in an attempt to circumvent their agreed upon bargain. The second view assumes that a tort action is permissible, and that the parol evidence rule does not apply, and, therefore, the action may be maintained. n19

According to the Wyoming high court, courts which adopt the second view have structured the issue as whether the parol evidence rule bars admission of the prior representations in the face of merger and disclaimer clauses. n20 The Wyoming court adopted the first view. This court stated the contract clearly and unambiguously stated that the buyer was not relying on any representations made by the agent or the sellers. The court found that the clause validly allocated the risk of loss resulting from the buyer's reliance on the seller's representations. The court stated,

The parties were free to contract for whatever terms they wished, and they chose to allocate the risk of loss to [the buyer]. [The buyer's] claim that he did not read or understand the terms to which he was agreeing falls on deaf ears. Under the circumstances, we are aware of no duty that the law would impose upon the [sellers] either to ensure that [the buyer's] representation of non-reliance was genuine or to protect [the buyer] poorly allocating the risk of loss. n21

The court held that summary judgment was appropriate as the buyer was barred from asserting a claim for negligent misrepresentation.

In a case involving an alleged negligent misrepresentation of a boundary line by a real estate agent, the Supreme Court of Connecticut had held that the law of comparative negligence applies to this claim. n22 In this particular case, the buyer failed to obtain a survey. The jury below found that the buyer was 60% contributorily negligent and was therefore not entitled to damages. This decision was affirmed.

[4] Innocent Misrepresentation

A few courts have recognized a cause of action against a seller who innocently misrepresents the property's condition to the purchaser. n23 The recognition of a tort in this situation is based on the belief that owners are presumed to know the character and attributes of the land conveyed and buyers are consequently entitled to rely on the seller's reasonable representations. n24 Consequently, a seller cannot hide behind the doctrine of caveat emptor. The seller is expected to be both truthful and informed in making representations. n25

If the seller can be liable for an innocent misrepresentation, the question that arises is whether the seller's broker can likewise be liable for stating the same misrepresentation? Most courts addressing this issue have recognized a cause of action by the purchasers of property against the broker for the latter's innocent misrepresentation. n26 The policy favoring liability for innocent misrepresentation is found on a recognition that purchasers should be entitled to rely on a broker's representations. n27 One court in finding that a broker can be liable for an innocent misrepresentation stated:

Parties to real estate transactions frequently do not deal on equal terms. Real estate brokers are licensed professionals, possessing superior knowledge of the realty they sell and the real estate market generally. Prospective purchasers recognize this expertise and tend to rely on a broker's representations. Just as purchasers are entitled to rely on an owner's representations, (citation omitted) purchasers should be entitled to rely on the broker's representations. Any other rule would permit brokers to use misleading statements in selling the property, yet remain immune from liability by simply remaining ignorant of the property's true characteristics. Accordingly, we hold that a purchaser who relies on a material misrepresentation, even though innocently made, has a cause of action against the broker originating or communicating the misrepresentation. n28

This court also stated that brokers could protect themselves from liability by investigating the seller's statements, by disclaiming knowledge, or by requiring the seller to sign at the time of listing a statement setting forth representations which will be made, certifying that they are true and providing for indemnification if they are not. n29 However, a dissenting justice in this case stated that allowing an innocent misrepresentation action against the broker was close to imposing strict liability and there was no reason to make the broker the "insurer" of the seller's representation. n30

Alaska provides a good example of how the new generation of seller disclosure laws has affected the application of common law to real estate brokerage. While Alaska had previously recognized that both sellers and brokers could commit the tort of innocent misrepresentation, the requirement that sellers of residential property provide buyers with a disclosure form has altered the status of this tort in Alaska. Prior to the enactment of Alaska Stat. § 34.70, sellers were not required to make any representations about the property. However, sellers were strictly liable for those representations they made. n31 Under the disclosure statute a seller of residential property must make representations about a wide range of the property's features and characteristics. Alaska's high court has concluded that the legislature intended to offset the seller's increased disclosure responsibilities by the lower liability standard for misrepresentations. n32 The court found that this conclusion was supported by the fact that the legislature in Alaska Statutes § 34.70.090(b) had explicitly adopted a negligence standard of liability. Consequently, this standard had implicitly rejected liability based on lesser gradations of fault. The court observed that since the statute required that sellers make disclosures "in good faith," n33 the legislature intended no liability to attach for an inaccurate statement on the disclosure form if made in good faith. Therefore, the court found that Alaska Statutes § 34.70 precluded claims of innocent misrepresentation as to residential property concerning conditions included in the mandatory disclosure form. To be actionable, misrepresentations in the disclosure form had to at least be negligently made. n34 If a seller cannot be liable for an innocent misrepresentation, surely the seller's broker should be similarly protected.

[5] Intentional or Fraudulent Misrepresentation

It is generally held that a broker who makes fraudulent misrepresentations or who conceals a material fact when there is a duty to speak is personally liable to the purchaser notwithstanding that the broker was acting as the seller's broker. n35 However, the duty to speak applies only to material facts known to the broker and to representations made by the broker. n36 A broker who makes a fraudulent misrepresentation or who intentionally conceals a fact which should be disclosed, is typically subject to a disciplinary action by the state licensing agency (See § 6.05, below for a discussion of disciplinary actions).

The elements of common law fraud or fraudulent misrepresentation are:

- (1) a false statement of a material fact;
- (2) the defendant's knowledge that the statement was false;
- (3) the defendant's intent that the statement induce the plaintiff to act;
- (4) the plaintiff's reliance upon the truth of the statement; and
- (5) the plaintiff's damages resulting from reliance on the statement. n37

The difference between fraudulent misrepresentation and negligent misrepresentation is that in fraudulent misrepresentation, one becomes liable for breaching the general duty of good faith or honesty. In a claim of negligent misrepresentation, one may become liable even though acting honestly and in good faith if one fails to exercise the level of care required under the circumstances. n38

Generally, a broker will not be held liable for fraud for merely relaying information concerning the condition of a home, without proof that there was knowledge that the statement was false. Therefore, a failure to plead allegations that a broker knew that his or her statements were false will be fatal to the plaintiff's fraud claim. n39

The selling broker usually has no duty to volunteer any knowledge about the property unless it involves a specific defect affecting health or safety. However, a broker must respond honestly to direct inquiries. n40

A California court has held that exculpatory clauses in standardized forms used in sale of real estate do not bar a claim for intentional misrepresentation brought by buyers against the sellers' brokers. n41 The buyers alleged that the brokers intentionally misrepresented the property could be subdivided. n42 However, the contract contained a hand-written term stating that the buyers were to satisfy themselves regarding warranties or representations as to use. The brokers asserted that the buyers could not show justifiable reliance as a matter of law due to this term found in the sales contract. The court disagreed and held that such exculpatory clauses do not preclude, as a matter of law, the buyers' showing of justifiable reliance. The court stated that it is well established in California that in an action for fraud or deceit, negligence on the part of the plaintiff in failing to discover the falsity of the defendant's statement is no defense when the misrepresentation was intentional. n43

[6] Fraudulent Concealment

In order to maintain an action based on fraudulent concealment, the plaintiff must allege and prove the following elements:

- (1) that the defendant concealed or suppressed a material fact;
- (2) that the defendant had knowledge of this material fact;
- (3) that this material fact was not within the reasonably diligent attention, observation, and judgment of the plaintiff;
- (4) that the defendant suppressed or concealed this fact with the intention that the plaintiff be misled as to the true condition of the property;
- (5) that the plaintiff was reasonably so misled; and
- (6) that the plaintiff suffered damage as a result. n44

[7] Defenses Against a Buyer's Misrepresentation Claims

A number of legal defenses may be raised against allegations of misrepresentation. The most basic defense, if the facts support it, is that the representation was never made. n45 Another defense is that the agent may have made misrepresentations about the property, but they were not specific enough to be actionable; thus, the agent's use of such words as "good buy" or statements that the purchaser would "probably" have no problems may not be specific enough to support a cause of action. n46

Another possible defense arises when the misrepresentation involves an allegedly hidden defect. Such a claim should fail if the defect was discoverable by a simple inspection and the purchaser inspects the property prior to its purchase. n47

Brokers may also assert that the information regarding the property was a matter of public record. Whether or not this defense will protect a broker will depend on the specific statutory obligation to disclose and may also depend upon whether a reasonable person would be able to find and understand the publicly-available information. One court, in applying Oregon law, stated that the duty to disclose material facts is an affirmative duty imposed on a seller's agent. The court found that the policy underlying this duty is to ensure that real estate buyers have available to them all material information needed to make an informed decision to purchase. The court found that this policy was effectuated by requiring that a seller's agent disclose all known material information to the prospective buyer. A statutory exception to this duty arose when the information was readily apparent or readily ascertainable to the buyer. The court construed this exception to mean that the information had to be capable of being easily perceived through the physical senses of the buyer or easily discovered by the buyer. In this case, the court upheld the reprimand of a seller's agent for failing to disclose to the buyers that the property was located in a 100-year floodplain. The fact that public documents disclosed this information did not protect the agent since a reasonable person would not know where to find a publicly available flood map nor would the reasonable person understand these public documents or the terminology used in the documents. n48

The defendant or the agent may also plead successfully that information unknown to him or her could not be revealed, n49 although this defense probably would be considered in light of whether or not the licensee could reasonably have known about the falsity or the inaccuracy of the information. This has also proved to be a good defense when the plaintiff did not rely on the agent's representations because of the buyer's inspections of the property prior to acquisition of the property.

Brokers can also protect themselves from misrepresentation claims by investigating the seller's statements. Another means of protection would be for the broker to require that the seller sign a statement stating the representations that will be made, certifying that they are true and providing for indemnification if they are not. n50

Brokers have also used statements signed by purchasers, whereby a purchaser states that no important representations concerning the property's condition made to them by the seller's broker were relied upon. One court considered whether such an agreement was contrary to public policy. The agreement in question stated:

1. I HAVE CAREFULLY INSPECTED THE PROPERTY. SUBJECT TO ANY INSPECTIONS ALLOWED UNDER MY CONTRACT WITH SELLER, (And repairs to be made as therein required), I AGREE TO PURCHASE THIS PROPERTY IN ITS PRESENT CONDITION ONLY, WITHOUT WARRANTIES OR GUARANTEES OF ANY KIND BY THE SELLER OR ANY REALTOR CONCERNING THE CONDITION OR VALUE OF THE PROPERTY.

2. I AGREE TO VERIFY ANY OF THE ABOVE INFORMATION THAT IS IMPORTANT TO ME BY AN INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION OF MY OWN. I HAVE BEEN ADVISED TO HAVE THE PROPERTY EXAMINED BY PROFESSIONAL INSPECTORS.

3. I ACKNOWLEDGE THAT NEITHER SELLER NOR ANY REALTOR INVOLVED IN THIS TRANSACTION IS AN EXPERT AT DETECTING OR REPAIRING PHYSICAL DEFECTS IN THE PROPERTY. I STATE THAT NO IMPORTANT REPRESENTATIONS CONCERNING THE CONDITION OF THE PROPERTY ARE BEING RELIED UPON BY ME EXCEPT AS DISCLOSED ABOVE OR AS FULLY SET FORTH AS FOLLOWS: n51

This court found that no public policy outweighed the contractual disclaimer before it. The court reasoned that competent parties could make contracts on their own terms provided they are neither illegal nor contrary to public policy. In the absence of fraud, mistake or duress, a party who fairly and voluntarily enters into such a contract is bound. n52 Specifically with respect to a broker's liability for negligent misrepresentations, the court stated:

We further conclude that real estate brokers may protect themselves from negligent misrepresentation actions by disclaiming knowledge of the property's defects and having a buyer or seller acknowledge such disclaimer. Such protection is not against public policy and, in fact, helps clarify the law and the role of those involved in real estate matters. n53

In this particular case, the court found that the disclaimer was unambiguous and there was no reason to allow the buyers to present parol evidence.

Some brokers have asserted that merger and disclaimer clauses in the underlying sales contracts preclude the purchaser's assertion of a fraud claim. A disclaimer provision specifically tailored to the sales transaction may preclude a fraud action. n54 One court so holding stated that if the language at issue before it was not sufficient to estop a party from claiming that he entered the contract because of fraudulent representations, then no language can accomplish that purpose. n55 This court stated, "To hold otherwise would be to say that it is impossible for two businessmen dealing at arm's length to agree that the buyer is not buying in reliance on any representations of the seller as to a particular fact." n56

Other courts have refused to follow the reasoning of these courts and have held that a seller is not precluded from asserting a claim for fraudulent misrepresentation by either merger or disclaimer clauses. n57 The reasoning for this holding is that the "perpetrator of fraud cannot close the lips of his innocent victim by getting him blindly to agree in advance not to complain against it." n58 One court has stated that to refuse relief would open the door to a multitude of frauds and would thwart the general policy of law. n59

Some states statutorily prevent a broker from relying on a waiver. For example, Arizona Revised Statutes Annotated § 32-2185.06 states in part: "If the transaction involves a lot or parcel offered for present or future residential use, the contract, agreement or lease shall not waive or disclaim liability for prior material representations relied upon by the purchaser made by the seller and such seller's agents concerning the subdivision and lot or parcel involved, and any provision attempting to waive or disclaim liability is void."

A purchaser's reliance upon his or her inspector may also provide a defense for a broker accused of making a misrepresentation. n60 In one case partially involving a claim of fraudulent misrepresentation, the broker and seller argued that since the buyers hired an engineer to inspect the house, one had to conclude that the buyers did not believe the sellers' representations regarding a roof. The court agreed and found that the buyers could not recover on a fraudulent misrepresentation claim. n61 However, a purchaser's reliance upon a home inspector is not absolute protection for a broker accused of fraud and negligence.

Another possible defense arises when the purchase agreement states that the buyer purchases the property in its "as is" physical condition. In this case some courts have held that the seller and the broker have no duty to disclose latent defects. One court held that the "as is" disclaimer bars suit for passive nondisclosure, but does not protect a seller from action alleging positive misrepresentation or concealment. n62 "As is" clauses are discussed in § 3.18, below.

The statute of limitations may also provide a defense if the plaintiff is late in asserting a claim. n63 The applicable real estate broker licensing law may contain a statute of limitations provision which controls claims brought under the licensing law. n64

An issue may arise as to when the statute of limitations begins to run when the buyers allege fraud or misrepresentation concerning property defects. The issue often turns on when the buyers discovered or should have discovered the defects. In a case where the buyers asserted that the sellers and the parties' dual agent had failed to disclose defects in the property, the court found that the trial court had erred when it found as a matter of law that the statute of limitations period accrued prior to the closing date. The trial court had granted summary judgment to the seller and the agent. The court stated that whether the buyers knew or should have known of the defects prior to closing was a disputed fact. n65

[8] Recovery of Damages for Misrepresentations

In the typical misrepresentation, the broker repeated statements made by the seller. Sometimes the broker believes the representation to be true, while in other instances the broker either knows or should know that the representation is false. In these situations a jury frequently finds both the seller and the broker liable for the misrepresentation and may apportion the damages between the seller and the broker. n66 A state's comparative negligence act may enter into a purchaser's recovery of damages as shown by Keller v. Re/Max Centre Realty n67 where home purchasers who had received a verdict for deceit n68 in their favor, against the seller and the broker, attempted to collect the entire judgment from the broker.

At trial, the jury had apportioned 45% of the damages against the seller and 55% of the damages against the broker. The issue was whether Pennsylvania's Comparative Negligence Act permitted recovery of the entire verdict from the broker. The Act states that if recovery is allowed against more than one defendant, each defendant is liable for that proportion of the total dollar amount awarded as damages in the ratio of the amount of his causal negligence to the amount of causal negligence attributed to all defendants against whom recovery is allowed. However, the plaintiff is allowed to recover the full amount of the allowed recovery from any defendant against whom the defendant is not barred from recovery. But, the Act applies only to damages for negligence resulting in death or injury to person or property. n69

The court found that the purchaser was not entitled to collect the entire amount of the judgment from the broker. The Act by its very terms applies only to actions sounding in negligence and only to negligence resulting in death or injuries to persons or damage to property. The Act did not apply because the alleged negligence was the fraudulent failure to disclose defects in a septic system and the damage occurred prior to the failure to disclose. The purchasers were stayed from executing since the prerequisites for application of the recovery provisions of the Act were not met. n70

The comparative negligence theory can also enter into damage computations and reduce the damages due from a broker. When a party in the transaction or a party affected by the transaction fails to take reasonable steps to protect his or her interest, the damages should be apportioned between the broker and the party. The party should have damages apportioned to him or her to the extent by which the damages were proximately caused by the party's negligence. The amount of such apportionment is a factual issue for the trial court to decide. n71

In considering damages for misrepresentation, courts generally consider the diminution in the property's value as a limiting factor on the damage award. Therefore the buyer generally cannot recover the amount to remedy or restore the defect that was the subject of the misrepresentation if that amount exceeds the diminution in market value. But there may be some flexibility in applying this limitation if the property has intangible value in its original state for reasons of personal taste to the injured party. n72

[9] Duty to Present the Buyer's Offer

Virginia's high court has held that a prospective purchaser does not have a cause of action against a seller's broker for failing to convey the prospective purchaser's offer to the seller. n73

[10] Duty to Inspect

[a] Residential Property in California

Easton v. Strassburger n74 is a seminal case with respect to the duty of a seller's broker to inspect the property and disclose any defects. The court found that, "the duty of a real estate broker, representing the seller, to disclose facts ... includes the affirmative duty to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent inspection of the residential property listed for sale and to disclose to prospective purchasers all facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property that such an investigation would reveal." n75

In Easton, agents of the seller's broker observed conditions indicative of soils problems, but did not obtain a soils report or inform the buyer there were potential soils problems. n76 The purchaser sued after movement of fill soils caused damages. The jury found that the broker and others had been negligent. n77 In finding that the jury's verdict was supported by substantial evidence, the court stated:

Real estate agents hold themselves out to the public as professionals, and, as such, are required to make reasonable use of their superior knowledge, skills and experience within the area of their expertise. Because such agents are expected to make use of their superior knowledge and skills, which is the reason they are engaged, and because the agents in this case were or should have been alert to the signs of soils problems earlier described, the jury was well within the bounds of reason when it concluded that a reasonably diligent and competent inspection of the property would have included something more than a casual visual inspection and a general inquiry of the owners. n78

The California legislature reacted to Easton by statutorily defining the duty of care found to exist by the holding of Easton and the manner of its discharge. n79 The California legislature made it clear that it was codifying the holding of Easton in California Civil Code § 2079. n80 California Civil Code § 2079(a) states that is a broker's duty to a prospective purchaser of residential real property to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale and to disclose to the prospective purchaser all facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property that an investigation would reveal. n81 The duty imposed by § 2079 is a twofold duty of conducting a visual inspection, and of disclosing the facts that such an inspection would reveal. n82

The inspection required by California Civil Code § 2079 does not include or involve an inspection of areas that are reasonably and normally inaccessible to such an inspection. When the subject property is a condominium, a cooperative, or in a planned development, the inspection required by § 2079 does not include an inspection of more than the unit offered for sale. n83

The standard of care imposed upon licensees is that which "a reasonably prudent real estate licensee would exercise and is measured by the degree of knowledge through education, experience, and examination, required to obtain a license" n84

A buyer is not relieved of the duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself, including those facts which are known to or within the diligent attention and observation of the buyer. n85

A broker's to inspect pursuant to California law does not extend to non-residential property. n86 The presence of a residence on a property did not impose a duty to inspect the property's commercial groves upon the broker selling the property. n87

California Civil Code § 2079.4 contains a two-year statute of limitations. n88 It has been held that this brief statute of limitations does not apply to actions for intentional fraud. n89 However, this statute of limitations has been held to apply an action for negligent misrepresentation, despite the fact that the law views that tort as "a species of fraud or deceit." n90 Even though a cause of action is labeled as negligent misrepresentation, if it is derived from the statutory duty to inspect and disclose, it is subject to the two-year limitation. n91

The two-year statute of limitations found in California Civil Code § 2079.4 has been held to be inapplicable to a buyer's agent. An action by a buyer against a broker who exclusively represented the buyer in a real estate purchase transactions was found not to be limited by the two-year time-bar of § 2079.4 which, by its terms, is limited to claims for breaches of duty imposed by California Civil Code §§ 2079 through 2079.24. n92 The court found that the duties arising under § 2079 were imposed upon sellers' brokers and cooperating brokers, but these statutory duties were not imposed on buyers' brokers. n93 The court also found that the fiduciary duty of a broker, who contracts to exclusively represent a purchaser of real property to investigate for its client, is independent of the separate obligation imposed on a seller's broker to conduct a reasonable visual inspection of the marketed property for a buyer's protection, as announced in Easton v. Strassburger and incorporated into § 2079. n94

This statutory inspection duty imposed upon a broker interacts with another article to the California Civil Code entitled "Disclosures Upon Transfer of Residential Property." n95 Before executing a sales contract, the seller must deliver a statutory real estate transfer disclosure statement to the buyer, which contains a checklist to give notice of problems or potential problems with the property, and advises that the representations are made by the sellers, not the real estate agents, and that the potential buyers may wish to obtain professional advice or inspections of the property. n96 An agent representing the seller must also complete a portion of the disclosure form. These disclosures must be made in good faith which is defined as meaning "honesty in fact in the conduct of the transaction." n97

A California court has held that California Civil Code § 2079's disclosure duty imposed upon real estate licensees does not include a duty to independently verify or disclaim the accuracy of the seller's representations in the disclosure form. n98 This court stated that in enacting § 2079, the legislature sought to foster availability of professional negligence insurance by eliminating the implication in Easton that a seller's agent could have negligence liability for relying in good faith on the seller's representations or failing to discharge a vague obligation to obtain professional inspections or reports to confirm those representations. The court stated, "[U]nder the post-Easton statutory scheme, once the sellers and their agent make the required disclosures, it is incumbent upon the potential purchasers to investigate and make an informed decision based thereon. In making the required disclosures, the sellers' agent is required only to act in good faith and not convey the seller's representations without a reasonable basis for believing them to be true." n99

California Civil Code § 2079's inspection and disclosure duties of residential real estate brokers and their agents apply exclusively to prospective buyers. This duty does not extend to other persons who are not parties to the real estate transaction. Consequently, only a transferee, that is, the ultimate purchaser, can recover from a broker or agent for breach of these duties. n100

[b] Duty to Inspect in Other States

In the absence of a confidential relationship or statutory duty, n101 the law generally does not impose brokers and agents representing sellers the duty to conduct a reasonable investigation of the property and to disclose defects to the buyer. n102

With respect to the duty to verify the seller's representations, one court has stated:

Real estate brokers and agents are marketing agents, not structural engineers or contractors. They have no duty to verify independently representations made by a seller unless they are aware of facts that "tend to indicate that such [representations are] false." n103

This statement is equally applicable to a broker's duty to inspect since most brokers are not licensed home inspectors.

If an agent is questioned directly about the condition of a home, and the agent assumes the obligation to inspect the house and to disclose the findings to the buyer; the law imposes on the agent the duty to truthfully disclose all material facts revealed by the inspection. n104

Some courts have found that a showing agent has no duty to inspect, investigate or verify information. n105 However, one court has found that a broker has a fiduciary duty to his or her client to refrain from making representations of facts material to the client's decision to buy the property without advising the client that the broker is merely passing on information received from the seller without verifying its accuracy. n106

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Aranki v. RKP Investments, Inc., 194 Ariz. 206, 208, 979 P.2d 534, 536 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1999) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., 225 ILCS 454/15-25(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., 225 ILCS 454/15-25(a) Tanzillo v. Edwards, 2007 Ohio 497, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 441, at *10 (Feb. 6, 2007) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., 225 ILCS 454/15-25(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., 225 ILCS 454/15-25(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. See C.F.R. Foods, Inc. v. Randolph Development Co., 107 N.C. App. 584, 588, 421 S.E.2d 386, 389 (N.C. Ct. App. 1992) , disc. review denied, 333 N.C. 166, 424 S.E.2d 906 (N.C. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Cooper v. Jevne, 56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 866, 128 Cal. Rptr. 724, 727 (Cal. Ct. App. 1976) (structural deficiencies in a condominium); Saporta v. Barbagelata, 220 Cal. App. 2d 463, 474, 33 Cal. Rptr. 661, 667 (Cal. Ct. App. 1963) (termite and fungus infestation); Crum v. McCoy, 41 Ohio Misc. 34, 39-40, 70 Ohio Op. 2d 76, 322 N.E.2d 161, 165 (Ohio Mun. Ct. 1974) (water system problems).

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g.,

California: Easton v. Strassburger, 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 99, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383, 387 (Cal. Ct. App. 1984) .

Hawaii: Shaffer v. Earl Thacker Co., Ltd., 6 Haw. App. 188, 193, 716 P.2d 163, 166 (Haw. Ct. App. 1986) .

Minnesota: Berryman v. Riegert, 286 Minn. 270, 275-276, 175 N.W.2d 438, 442 (Minn. 1970) .

New Mexico: Gouveia v. Citicorp Person-to-Person Fin. Ctr., Inc., 101 N.M. 572, 576, 686 P.2d 262, 266 (N.M. Ct. App. 1984) .

North Carolina: Johnson v. Beverly-Hanks & Assoc., Inc., 328 N.C. 202, 210, 400 S.E.2d 38, 43 (N.C. 1991) .

Pennsylvania: Smith v. Renaut, 387 Pa. Super. 299, 305, 564 A.2d 188, 191 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1989) .

Washington: Hoffman v. Connall, 108 Wash. 2d 69, 77-78, 736 P.2d 242, 246 (Wash. 1987) .

Cf. Terway v. Real Estate Agency, 223 Ore. App. 501, 196 P.3d 1022 (2008) (Real estate salesperson who acted for a seller was reprimanded for failing to disclose to the buyers that the property was located in a 100-year flood plain.).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Hamil v. J.C. Nichols Real Estate, 22 Kan. App. 2d 809, 814, 923 P.2d 513, (Kan. Ct. App. 1996) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Capiccioni v. Brennan Naperville, Inc., 339 Ill. App. 3d 927, 941-942, 274 Ill. Dec. 461, 791 N.E.2d 553, 565 (Ill. Ct. App. 2003) , rehearing denied, 2003 Ill. App. LEXIS 941 (Ill. App. Ct. July 16, 2003) (misrepresentation regarding the school district in which the property was located).

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Harkala v. Wildwood, 200 Ill. App. 3d 447, 454, 146 Ill. Dec. 232, 558 N.E.2d 195,

200 (Ill. App. Ct. 1990) ; Hagans v. Woodruff, 830 S.W.2d 732, 736 (Tex. Ct. App. 1992) .

See also:

Federal: Herbert v. Saffell, 877 F.2d 267, 276 (4th Cir. 1989) (seller's agent owed no duty to buyers under Maryland law to exercise care in investigating the soil conditions and other terrain features that might impede use of a septic system).

Alabama: Naramore v. Duckworth-Morris Realty Co., 669 So. 2d 946, 949 (Ala. Civ. App. 1995) (In the absence of a confidential relationship, the law does not impose upon real estate agents representing sellers the duty to conduct a reasonable investigation of the property and to disclose defects to the buyer.).

Arizona: Aranki v. RKP Invs., Inc., 194 Ariz. 206, 208, 979 P.2d 534, 536 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1999) (duty of fair dealing does not include investigations to discover defects in the sellers' property).

Kansas: Crandall v. Grbic, 36 Kan. App. 2d 179, 190, 138 P.3d 365, 374-75 (2006) .

Maryland: Lewis v. Long & Foster Real Estate, Inc., 85 Md. App. 754, 763, 584 A.2d 1325, 1330 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1991) , cert. denied, 323 Md. 34, 591 A.2d 250 (Md. 1991) (A real estate broker has no duty to investigate and report on defects which might exist in property.)

(n12)Footnote 12. Cf. Vagias v. Woodmont Properties, L.L.C., 384 N.J. Super. 129, 136, 894 A.2d 68, 72 (2006) (The broker relied upon a builder's incorrect representation of which school district the home was located in. "Given the importance of location in the purchasing decision, buyers are entitled to expect that the realtors who are assisting them in their housing search will know where the houses are actually located. A realtor's misrepresentation on that critical issue is a serious matter and violates the [Consumer Fraud] Act.").

(n13)Footnote 13. See Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128, 132-133 (Colo. Ct. App. 1993) , rehearing denied; quoting the Restatement (Second) of Torts § 552. See also Jeffries-Baxter v. Incognito, 2005 Phila. Ct. Com. Pl. LEXIS 438, at *8 (Sept. 26, 2005) ("Real estate agents are responsible for misrepresentations, both willful and negligent.").

(n14)Footnote 14. See:

Illinois: Capiccioni v. Brennan Naperville, Inc., 339 Ill. App. 3d 927, 938, 274 Ill. Dec. 461, 791 N.E.2d 553, 562, (Ill. Ct. App. 2003) , rehearing denied, 2003 Ill. App. LEXIS 941 (Ill. App. Ct. July 16, 2003) .

Mississippi: Lane v. Oustalet, 850 So. 2d 1143, 1148 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002) , rehearing denied, 2002 Miss. App. LEXIS 657 (Miss. Ct. App., Nov. 5, 2002) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 873 So. 2d 92 (Miss. 2004) .

New Jersey: Vagias v. Woodmont Properties, L.L.C., 384 N.J. Super. 129, 134, 894 A.2d 68, 71 (2006) (If the agent provided buyers with affirmative misinformation on what the agent knew was a critical issue in their decision to purchase the house, the agent violated the Consumer Fraud Act. The agent's intent was not an issue for purposes of the act.).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Furla v. Jon Douglas Co., 65 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 1078, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 911, 915-916 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998) , citing Cal. Civ. Code § 1572, subd. 2.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Ingaharro v. Blanchette, 122 N.H. 54, 57, 440 A.2d 445, 447 (N.H. 1982) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Furla v. Jon Douglas Co., 65 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 1078, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 911, 915-916 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079, 1083 (Wyo. 1999) The sales contract stated: "Purchaser is not relying upon any representations of the Seller or Seller's agents or sub-agents as to any condition which Purchaser deems to be material to Purchaser's decision to purchase this property[.]" The contract also contained an "as is" clause, a merger clause, a liberal inspection clause, and a specific objection procedure.

(n19)Footnote 19. See Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079, 1087 (Wyo. 1999) . For other courts cited as adopting the first view, see Isler v. Texas Oil & Gas Corp., 749 F.2d 22, 23-24 (10th Cir. 1984) ; Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Suburban Ford, 237 Kan. 195, 203-204, 699 P.2d 992, 998-999 (Kan. 1985) , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 995, 106 S. Ct. 409, 88 L. Ed. 2d 360 (1985) ; Rio Grande Jewelers Supply, Inc. v. Data General Corp., 101 N.M. 798, 800, 689 P.2d 1269, 1271 (N.M. 1984) (Uniform Commercial Code case).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079, 1087 (Wyo. 1999) . Courts cited as following the second view include Formento v. Encanto Business Park, 154 Ariz. 495, 499-500, 744 P.2d 22, 26-27 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1987) ; Keller v. A.O. Smith Harvestore Products, Inc., 819 P.2d 69, 72-73 (Colo. 1991) ; Gilliland v. Elmwood Properties, 301 S.C. 295, 301-302, 391 S.E.2d 577, 580-81 (S.C. 1990) ; and Stamp v. Honest Abe Log Homes, Inc., 804 S.W.2d 455, 457 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1990) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079, 1089 (Wyo. 1999) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Kramer v. Petisi, 285 Conn. 674, 676, 940 A.2d 800, 802 (2008) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See Cousineau v. Walker, 613 P.2d 608, 616 (Alaska 1980) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See Sorenson v. Adams, 98 Idaho 708, 571 P.2d 769, 776 (Idaho 1977) , overruled by, Owen v. Boydston, 102 Idaho 31, 624 P.2d 413 (Idaho 1981) (on other grounds), quoted in Cousineau v. Walker, 613 P.2d 608, 615 n.14 (Alaska 1980) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757, 762 (Alaska 1982) .

(n26)Footnote 26. See: Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757, 762 (Alaska 1982) , citing: Sodal v. French, 35 Colo. App. 16, 531 P.2d 972, 973 (Colo. App. 1974) , aff'd, 190 Colo. 411, 547 P.2d 923 (Colo. 1976) ; Spargnapani v. Wright, 110 A.2d 82, 85 (D.C. Mun. Ct. App. 1954) ; Pumphrey v. Quillen, 165 Ohio St. 343, 59 Ohio Op. 460, 135 N.E.2d 328, 331 (Ohio 1956) , aff'd, 165 Ohio St. 343, 59 Ohio Op. 460, 135 N.E.2d 328 (1956) ; Berryman v. Riegert, 286 Minn. 270, 275-276, 175 N.W.2d 438, 442 (Minn. 1970) ; Lawlor v. Scheper, 232 S.C. 94, 101 S.E.2d 269, 271 (S.C. 1957) ; Polk Terrace, Inc. v. Harper, 386 S.W.2d 588, 593 (Tex. App. 1965) , writ of error refused no reversible error, (Apr. 21, 1965), rehearing of writ of error overruled, (May. 19, 1965).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757, 763 (Alaska 1982) .

(n28)Footnote 28. See Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757, 763 (Alaska 1982) .

(n29)Footnote 29. See Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757, 763 (Alaska 1982) .

(n30)Footnote 30. See Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757, 764 (Alaska 1982) (dissent of J. Connor).

(n31)Footnote 31. See Cousineau v. Walker, 613 P.2d 608, 616 (Alaska 1980) .

(n32)Footnote 32. See Amyot v. Luchini, 932 P.2d 244, 246 (Alaska 1997) .

(n33)Footnote 33. Alaska Statutes § 34.70.060.

(n34)Footnote 34. See Amyot v. Luchini, 932 P.2d 244, 247 (Alaska 1997) .

(n35)Footnote 35. See Lightle v. State of Alaska, Real Estate Commission, 146 P.3d 980 (Alaska 2006) ; Johnson v. Beverly-Hanks & Assoc., 328 N.C. 202, 210, 400 S.E.2d 38, 43 (N.C. 1991) .

In some jurisdictions, a principal involved in the sale of property is liable for a broker's representations whether they were made with or without the principal's knowledge or consent. See Weems v. Montgomery, 126 S.W.3d 479, 486 (Mo. Ct. App. 2004) .

(n36)Footnote 36. See Clouse v. Gordon, 115 N.C. App. 500, 508, 445 S.E.2d 428, 432-33 (N.C. Ct. App. 1994) .

(n37)Footnote 37. See, e.g.,

Illinois: Connick v. Suzuki Motor Co., 174 Ill. 2d 482, 221 Ill. Dec. 389, 675 N.E. 2d 584 (Ill. 1996) , rehearing denied, (Ill. 1997); Capiccioni v. Brennan Naperville, Inc., 339 Ill. App. 3d 927, 933, 274 Ill. Dec. 461, 791 N.E.2d 553, 558 (Ill. Ct. App. 2003) , rehearing denied, 2003 Ill. App. LEXIS 941 (Ill. App. Ct. July 16, 2003) .

Nebraska: Gibb v. Citicorp Mortgage, Inc., 246 Neb. 355, 360, 518 N.W.2d 910, 916 (Neb. 1994) .

(n38)Footnote 38. See Gibb v. Citicorp Mortgage, Inc., 246 Neb. 355, 371, 518 N.W.2d 910, 921 (Neb. 1994) .

(n39)Footnote 39. See Capiccioni v. Brennan Naperville, Inc., 339 Ill. App. 3d 927, 933, 274 Ill. Dec. 461, 791 N.E.2d 553, 558 (Ill. Ct. App. 2003) , rehearing denied, 2003 Ill. App. LEXIS 941 (Ill. App. Ct. July 16, 2003) .

(n40)Footnote 40. See Gaulden v. Mitchell, 849 So. 2d 192, 197 (Ala. Civ. App. 2002) .

(n41)Footnote 41. See Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc., 146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 1489, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59, 61 (2007) , review denied, 2007 Cal. LEXIS 3614 (Apr. 11, 2007) .

(n42)Footnote 42. The MLS listing on the subject property stated that the property could be subdivided.

(n43)Footnote 43. See Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc., 146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 1502, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59, 72 (2007) , review denied, 2007 Cal. LEXIS 3614 (Apr. 11, 2007) .

(n44)Footnote 44. See Gibb v. Citicorp Mortgage, Inc., 246 Neb. 355, 361, 518 N.W.2d 910, 916 (Neb. 1994) .

(n45)Footnote 45. See Loya v. Howard Hanna Smyth, Cramer Co., 2009 Ohio 448, 2009 Ohio App. LEXIS 497, at *6-*8 (Feb. 4, 2009) .

(n46)Footnote 46. Cf.

Indiana: Bischoff Realty, Inc. v. Ledford, 562 N.E.2d 1321, 1324 (Ind. Ct. App. 1990) (To have the force and effect of a fraudulent misrepresentation, a representation must be unqualified.)

(n47)Footnote 47. See Long v. Bruns, 727 So. 2d 664, 669 (La. App. 1999) , appeal denied, 742 So. 2d. 881 (1999) ; Richards v. ABN AMRO Mortgage Group, Inc., 261 S.W.3d 603, 611 (Mo. Ct. App. 2008) , transfer denied, 2008 Mo. LEXIS 186 (Sept. 30, 2008) . See also Sierra Assoc. Group, Inc. v. Hardeman, 2009 Tex. App. LEXIS 1181, at *19 (Tex. App. Feb. 20, 2009) (a party cannot succeed on a fraud claim when he acted in reliance on his judgment derived from an independent investigation or the advice of his agents).

Cf. Hanlon v. Thornton, 218 Ga. App. 500, 502, 462 S.E.2d 154, 156-157 (Ga. App. 1995), cert. denied, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 211 (Ga. Jan. 5, 1996) (broker was not liable for fraudulent representation and concealment, where the buyer could easily have discovered the defects and the problems complained of upon an exercise of due diligence).

(n48)Footnote 48. See Terway v. Real Estate Agency, 223 Ore. App. 501, 196 P.3d 1022 (2008).

(n49)Footnote 49.

Alabama: Commercial Credit Corp. v. Lisenby, 579 So. 2d 1291, 1294 (Ala. 1991), rehearing denied, 1991 Ala. LEXIS 570 (Ala. Apr. 11, 1991) (seller and agent did not owe buyers any duty to disclose a latent defect of which they were unaware, knowledge of previous problems and repair of earlier difficulties does not impute or constitute knowledge of present problems).

Texas: Sutton v. Ebby Halliday Real Estate, Inc., 279 S.W.3d 418 (Tex. App. 2009).

(n50)Footnote 50. See Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757, 763 (Alaska 1982).

(n51)Footnote 51. Hamtil v. J.C. Nichols Real Estate, 22 Kan. App. 2d 809, 923 P.2d 513, 515 (Kan. Ct. App. 1996).

(n52)Footnote 52. 22 Kan. App. 2d 809, 923 P.2d 513, 517 (1994).

(n53)Footnote 53. 22 Kan. App. 2d 809, 923 P.2d 513, 517 (1994).

(n54)Footnote 54. See Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597, 600 (N.Y. 1959). See also LaFazia v. Howe, 575 A.2d 182, 186 (R.I. 1990) (court applied reasoning of Danann Realty Corp. to a disclaimer specifically denying reliance upon the seller's representations as to the profitability of the business being sold).

(n55)Footnote 55. See Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597, 600 (N.Y. 1959). The provision at issue is shown at 157 N.E.2d 598.

(n56)Footnote 56. Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597, 600 (N.Y. 1959).

(n57)Footnote 57. See Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079, 1086 (Wyo. 1999).

See also

Schmiedebusch v. Rako Realty, Inc., 2005 Ohio 4884 (Sept. 16, 2005) (The doctrine of merger merges prior agreements and representations made by parties into the deed. Since the seller's agent was not a party to the agreement that led to the execution of the deed or a party to the deed itself, the doctrine of merger did not bar the buyer's claim of negligent misrepresentation against the seller's agent.).

(n58)Footnote 58. Baylies v. Vanden Boom, 40 Wyo. 411, 278 P. 551, 556 (1929) (quoting Arnold v. National Aniline & Chem. Co., 20 F.2d 364 (2d Cir. 1927)).

(n59)Footnote 59. See Bates v. Southgate, 308 Mass. 170, 31 N.E.2d 551, 558 (1941).

(n60)Footnote 60. See Crandall v. Grbic, 36 Kan. App. 2d 179, 192-93, 138 P.3d 365, 376-77 (2006) ; Eiland v. Coldwell Banker Hunter Realty, 122 Ohio App. 3d 446, 702 N.E.2d 116, 123-124 (Ohio App. 1997) .

(n61)Footnote 61. See Alfa Realty, Inc. v. Ball, 733 So. 2d 423, 425 (Ala. Civ. App. 1998) , rehearing denied, 1999 Ala. Civ. App. LEXIS 147 (Ala. Civ. App. Mar. 5, 1999) , dismissed, 776 So. 2d 218 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) .

(n62)Footnote 62. See Eiland v. Coldwell Banker Hunter Realty, 122 Ohio App. 3d 446, 702 N.E.2d 116, 123 (Ohio App. 1997) .

(n63)Footnote 63. See Loewe v. Commons at Willowbrook, Inc., 2008 Tex. App. LEXIS 9294, at *10-*16 (Tex. App. Dec. 11, 2008) (fraud claims and Texas Real Estate License Act were filed after expiration of the applicable statutes of limitations).

(n64)Footnote 64. Cf., e.g., Tex. Occ. Code Ann. § 1101.605 (A claim brought under the Texas Real Estate License Act is subject to a two-year statute of limitations.).

(n65)Footnote 65. See Fletcher v. Lyles, 999 So. 2d 1271, 1277 (Miss. 2009) .

(n66)Footnote 66. See Sanchez v. Braun & May Realty, Inc., 795 So. 2d 1006, 1007 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2001) (damages apportioned between the sellers, agent, broker, and purchaser).

(n67)Footnote 67. 719 A.2d 369 (Pa. Super. 1998) .

(n68)Footnote 68. The deceit involved fraudulent concealment of a malfunctioning septic system. 719 A.2d 369, 370 (Pa. Super. 1998) .

(n69)Footnote 69. 42 Pa. Cons. Stat. § 7102(b).

(n70)Footnote 70. 719 A.2d 369, 372 (Pa. Super. 1998) .

(n71)Footnote 71. See Norman I. Krug Real Estate Investments, Inc. v. Praszker, 220 Cal. App. 3d 35, 44-45, 269 Cal. Rptr. 228, 232 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) , rehearing denied, 220 Cal. App. 3d 1226A, 1990 Cal. App. LEXIS 605 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) .

(n72)Footnote 72. See Bartholet v. Carolyn Riley Realty, Inc., 131 Ohio App. 3d 23, 721 N.E.2d 474, 477 (Ohio App. 1998) .

(n73)Footnote 73. See Allen v. Lindstrom, 237 Va. 489, 498, 379 S.E.2d 450, 456 (Va. 1989) , cert. denied, 493 U.S. 849, 110 S. Ct. 145, 107 L. Ed. 2d 104 (1989) .

(n74)Footnote 74. 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383, 46 A.L.R.4th 521 (1984) .

(n75)Footnote 75. See Easton v. Strassburger, 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 102, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383, 390 (Cal. Ct. App. 1984) .

(n76)Footnote 76. See Easton v. Strassburger, 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 96, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383, 385-386 (Cal. Ct. App. 1984) .

(n77)Footnote 77. See Easton v. Strassburger, 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 97, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383, 385 (Cal. Ct. App. 1984) .

(n78)Footnote 78. Easton v. Strassburger, 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 104-105, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383, 392 (Cal. Ct. App. 1984) .

(n79)Footnote 79. See California Civil Code §§ 2079 to 2079.6.

(n80)Footnote 80. See Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors, 52 Cal. App. 4th 857, 862, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34, 37 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n81)Footnote 81. See Furla v. Jon Douglas Co., 65 Cal. App. 4th 1069, 1078, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 911, 915-916 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998) .

(n82)Footnote 82. See Loken v. Century 21-Award Properties, 36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 271, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683, 688 (Cal. Ct. App. 1995) , review denied, 1995 Cal. LEXIS 5944 (Cal. Sept. 21, 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1113, 116 S. Ct. 912, 133 L. Ed. 2d 843 (1996) .

(n83)Footnote 83. See Pagano v. Krohn, 60 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9-10, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 5 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) ; Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.3.

(n84)Footnote 84. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.2.

(n85)Footnote 85. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.5.

(n86)Footnote 86. See Smith v. Rickard, 205 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1360, 254 Cal. Rptr. 633, 636 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988) (avocado orchard).

(n87)Footnote 87. See Smith v. Rickard, 205 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1363, 254 Cal. Rptr. 633, 638 (Cal. Ct. App. 1988) review denied (avocado orchard).

(n88)Footnote 88. This provision states in part: "[i]n no event shall the time for commencement of legal action for breach of duty imposed by [section 2079 et seq.] exceed two years from the date of possession, which means the date of recordation, the date of close of escrow, or the date of occupancy, whichever occurs first."

(n89)Footnote 89. See Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors, 52 Cal. App. 4th 857, 861-862, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34, 36 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n90)Footnote 90. Loken v. Century 21- Award Properties, 36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 272, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683, 688-689 (Cal. Ct. App. 1995) , depublication denied, 1995 Cal. LEXIS 5944 (Cal. Sept. 21, 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1113, 116 S. Ct. 912, 133 L. Ed. 2d 843 (1996) .

(n91)Footnote 91. See Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors, 52 Cal. App. 4th 857, 865, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34, 38 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n92)Footnote 92. See Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty, 63 Cal. App. 4th 18, 20-21, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784, 786 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998) , cert. denied, 1998 Cal. LEXIS 4685 (Cal. July 15, 1998) .

(n93)Footnote 93. See Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty, 63 Cal. App. 4th 18, 27, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784, 790 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998) , cert. denied, 1998 Cal. LEXIS 4685 (Cal. July 15, 1998) .

(n94)Footnote 94. See Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty, 63 Cal. App. 4th 18, 27, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784, 790 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998) , cert. denied, 1998 Cal. LEXIS 4685 (Cal. July 15, 1998) .

(n95)Footnote 95. See Cal. Civ. Code § 1102, et seq.

(n96)Footnote 96. See Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1102.3, 1102.6.

(n97)Footnote 97. See Cal. Civ. Code § 1102.7.

(n98)Footnote 98. See Robinson v. Grossman, 57 Cal. App. 4th 634, 643-644, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380, 385 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n99)Footnote 99. See Robinson v. Grossman, 57 Cal. App. 4th 634, 644, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380, 385-386 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n100)Footnote 100. See Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. v. Superior Court, 117 Cal. App. 4th 158, 165, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 564, 569-570 (2004) , review denied, 2004 Cal. LEXIS 9462 (Cal. Sept. 29, 2004) .

(n101)Footnote 101. Cf. Wis. Adm. Code RL 24.07 (A listing agent, prior to execution of the listing contract, shall conduct a reasonably competent and diligent inspection of accessible areas of the structure and immediately surrounding areas of the property to detect observable, material adverse facts).

(n102)Footnote 102. See

Alabama: Blackmon v. First Real Estate Corp., 529 So. 2d 955, 956 (Ala. 1988) (no confidential relationship); Naramore v. Duckworth-Morris Realty Company, Inc., 669 So. 2d 946, 949 (Ala. Civ. App. 1995) (no confidential relationship).

South Carolina: Chastain v. Hiltabidle, 381 S.C. 508, 519-520, 673 S.E.2d 826, 832 (S.C. Ct. App. 2009) . reh'g denied, 2009 S.C. App. LEXIS 462 (Mar. 24, 2009) In a case involving a dual agent, the court stated that a real estate licensee does not have a duty to inspect or investigate the physical condition of a piece of property for the purpose of confirming or denying statements made by a seller in a disclosure statement. The legislature placed the duty of performing such an inspection or investigation on the buyer.

Texas: Steptoe v. True, 38 S.W.3d 213, 219 (Tex. App. 2001) (a licensee has no duty to inspect, even if such inspection would have uncovered facts that would materially affect the property's value); Hagans v. Woodruff, 830 S.W.2d 732, 736 (Tex. App. 1992) (broker has no legal duty to inspect listed property and disclose all facts which might materially affect its value or desirability).

West Virginia: Teter v. Old Colony Co., 190 W. Va. 711, 719, 441 S.E.2d 728, 736 (W. Va. 1994) .

See also Lopata v. Miller, 122 Md. App. 76, 91-92, 712 A.2d 24, 31 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1998) , cert. denied, 351 Md. 286, 718 A.2d 234 (1998) (agents did not owe the homeowners a duty to verify the lot size information and as there was no duty established, the agents could not have been negligent).

(n103)Footnote 103. Provost v. Miller, 144 Vt. 67, 69-70, 473 A.2d 1162, 1164 (Vt. 1984) , citing Lyons v. Christ Episcopal Church, 71 Ill. App. 3d 257, 27 Ill. Dec. 559, 389 N.E.2d 623 (Ill. App. Ct. 1979) .

(n104)Footnote 104. See Hope v. Brannan, 557 So. 2d 1208, 1211 (Ala. 1989) , rehearing denied, 1990 Ala. LEXIS 58 (Ala. Jan. 26, 1990) ; Fennell Realty Co. v. Martin, 529 So. 2d 1003, 1005 (Ala. 1988) ; Naramore v. Duckworth-Morris Realty Company, Inc., 669 So. 2d 946, 949 (Ala. Civ. App. 1995) .

(n105)Footnote 105. See Baker v. Surman, 361 N.W.2d 108, 111 (Minn. Ct. App. 1985) (directed verdict for showing agent who relied upon listing information, only visited property once and informed buyers of his source of information); Krout v. Woods, 2 Pa. D. & C.4th 349, 358 (Pa. Common Pleas Court 1989) ; Provost v. Miller, 144 Vt. 67, 473 A.2d 1162 (Vt. 1984) (no duty to verify absent awareness of falsity).

(n106)Footnote 106. See Salahutdin v. Valley of California, Inc., 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 562, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463, 466 (Cal. Ct. App. 1994) , review denied sub nomine, Salahutdin v. Alcantara, 1994 Cal. LEXIS 4560 (Cal. Aug. 18, 1994) (buyer's broker was liable for damages resulting from a failure to tell the buyer he had not verified the accuracy of the acreage and boundary information obtained from the seller, although the broker knew this information was material to the buyer's decision to purchase). See also Wilson v. Hisey, 147 Cal. App. 2d 433, 439, 305 P.2d 686, 690 (Cal. Ct. App. 1957) (substantial evidence supported trial court's finding that buyer's brokers were negligent in failing to ascertain truth of seller's statements pertaining to title and encumbrances).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

41 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART III. Duties Owed to Buyers

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.17

§ 3.17 Duties of a Buyer's Broker to Provide the Buyer with a Seller Disclosure Statement

The advent of statutorily mandated seller disclosure statements for residential real estate has raised the issue of what duty a buyer's broker has to insure that his or her client receives this statement. Typically, the disclosure statement acts impose the duty to provide the statement upon the seller or the seller's agent.

At least one court had held that a buyer's agent had a duty to inform the agent's clients of the seller's responsibility to provide them (i.e., the buyers) with a disclosure statement. The applicable disclosure law specifically placed the duty to provide the disclosure statement upon the seller. n1 In coming to this conclusion, this court stated:

Not unlike the requirement of other professionals to inform their clients, real estate agents are expected to advise their principals on the rules and procedures involved in a real estate transaction. Why have realty agents for buyers, if agents, supposedly knowledgeable in real estate transactions, have no obligation to tell clients that sellers are required by law to give a disclosure statement? Such disclosure is legally mandated for the protection of buyers. It can reveal matters that may materially influence a decision whether to purchase a home. n2

The buyer's agent therefore had a duty to inform the buyers that the seller was legally required to provide a disclosure statement.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The statute at issue was S.D. Codified Laws § 43-4-38 which states: "The seller of residential real property shall furnish to a buyer a completed copy of the disclosure statement before the buyer makes a written offer. If after delivering the disclosure statement to the buyer or the buyer's agent and prior to the date of closing for the property or the date of possession of the property, whichever comes first, the seller becomes aware of any change of material fact which would affect the disclosure statement, the seller shall furnish a written amendment disclosing the change of material fact."

(n2)Footnote 2. Saiz v. Horn, 668 N.W.2d 332, 336, 2003 SD 94 (S.D. 2003) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

42 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART III. Duties Owed to Buyers

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.18

§ 3.18 "As Is" Clauses in Sales Contracts

Astute buyers view "as is" clauses as a signal that there may be a material defect or defects in the property. Despite the implications of an "as is" clause, such a clause does not shield a seller or the seller's agent from liability for affirmative misrepresentations. n1 Some courts also find that an "as is" clause will not shield a broker from claims based on negligence and misrepresentation when a real estate sales agent has made affirmative representations about an aspect of the property. n2 However some courts hold that an "as is" clause protects a seller from claims of negligent nondisclosure. n3

One court in considering a claim for negligent nondisclosure in a case involving an "as is" sales contract, observed that even though the position that such a clause protects a seller from negligent nondisclosure claims has been referred to as a minority one, n4 an examination of the cases cited in support of this assertion did not directly address the issue in regard to negligent nondisclosure. This court asserted that these cases supported the assertion that an "as is" clause bars a claim for a seller's negligent nondisclosure. The court stated that cases that were supposedly contrary to the minority position disclosed that each involved fraud or misrepresentation, not negligent nondisclosure. n5 In adopting the "minority position" in a case involving a well containing sediment, Wisconsin's high court found that the burden of discovering defects in the property was placed upon the buyers as the contract stated that the "Purchaser accepts the property in its entirety in 'as is, where is' condition without any implied or express warranty by Seller or Agent." The contract also provided for inspections by experts hired by the buyers and the buyers failed to take advantage of this right. The buyers also failed to look at the water system, ask about the condition of the well, or even turn on a faucet. The buyers were provided an opportunity to obtain information on the house; and in their rush to purchase, they failed to do so. Since the burden of discovery was placed on the buyers under the contract, they were barred from seeking relief based on negligent nondisclosure. n6

A Florida court had found that an "as is" clause should not protect a seller if applicable law requires that a seller disclose to a buyer all known facts that materially and adversely affect the value of the property being sold and that are not readily observable. An "as is" clause in a contract for the sale of residential real property does not waive this duty. n7 Nor will an "as is" clause insulate a broker from liability to the buyer for negligence since the effect of the disclaimer in this context is a question of fact subject to the jury's determination of what was reasonable under the circumstances. n8

While an "as is" clause is not a complete bar to fraud and misrepresentation claims, such a clause effectively puts the burden upon a buyer to determine the condition of the property purchased. This shifting of the burden, by itself, protects a seller and the seller's broker from claims premised upon nondisclosure. n9

In Alabama, the rule of caveat emptor has been abrogated with respect to new real estate, but applies to the sale of used real estate. n10 Consequently, in Alabama, in a sale of used real estate, a seller or a seller's agent generally has no duty to disclose property defects to the purchaser. It has been held that a fraud claim is precluded in Alabama by sales contract language indicating that the purchase is "as is." The rationale is that an "as is" sales contract bars a purchaser's fraud claims because the "as is" clause negates the element of reliance essential to any claim of fraud or fraudulent suppression. In Alabama, this rule applies to a claim of intentional fraud as well as to claims of fraud committed by mistake. n11

An "as is" clause can operate as an absolute defense to the claim of mutual mistake should the seller and seller's broker be sued by the buyer. Pursuant to such a clause, the risk of loss is borne by the buyers. If the "as is" clause is to have meaning, it must be interpreted to refer to those defects that were unknown at the time that the contract was executed. An "as is" clause serves to allocate the risk of loss for such unknown defects to the buyer. n12

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g.,

California: Wilson v. Century 21 Great Western Realty, 15 Cal. App. 4th 298, 304, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779, 782 (Cal. Ct. App. 1993) , review denied, 1993 Cal. LEXIS 3894 (Cal. July 22, 1993) .

Kansas: Brennan v. Kunzle, 37 Kan. App. 2d 365, 391, 154 P.3d 1094, 1111 (2007) , review denied, 2007 Kan. LEXIS 629 (Oct. 1, 2007) .

Nebraska: Gibb v. Citicorp Mortgage, Inc., 246 Neb. 355, 365, 518 N.W.2d 910, 918 (Neb. 1994) .

Nevada: Mackintosh v. Jack Matthews & Co., 109 Nev. 628, 855 P.2d 549, 552-53 (Nev. 1993) .

West Virginia: Logue v. Flanagan, 213 W. Va. 552, 556-557, 584 S.E.2d 186, 190-191 (W.Va. 2003) .

Cf. Van Camp v. Bradford, 623 N.E.2d 731 (Ohio Ct. App. 1993) ("as is" disclaimer clauses bar suit for passive nondisclosure, but will not protect a defendant from positive misrepresentation or concealment).

See generally Dallon, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability and the Effect of the "As Is" Clause, 54 Fla. L. Rev. 395, 396 (2002); Wozniak, Annot., Construction and Effect of Provision in Contract for Sale of Realty by Which Purchaser Agrees to Take Property "As Is" or in its Existing Condition, 8 A.L.R.5th 312 (1992) .

But cf. Moore v. Prudential Residential Services Limited Partnership, 849 So. 2d 914, 924 (Ala. 2002) , rehearing denied, 2002 Ala. LEXIS 379 (Ala. Nov. 15, 2002) ("Where a purchaser's direct inquiry would otherwise impose a duty of truthful disclosure, this Court has held that a purchaser's fraud claim is precluded by language in a sales contract stating that the purchase is 'as is.' ").

(n2)Footnote 2. See Grube v. Daun, 173 Wis. 2d 30, 45, 496 N.W.2d 106, 111 (Wis. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied. See also Carter v. Bernard, 2006 Ohio 7058, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 6986, at *24 (Dec. 28, 2006) ("[A]lthough a realtor may only be liable to the buyer for fraud in an 'as is' contract, the realtor can be liable to his own principal for negligence if completion of a duty could have avoided the principal's liability for fraud."), discretionary appeal not allowed, 2007 Ohio 2208, 2007 Ohio LEXIS 1184 (May 16, 2007) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See

Ohio: Van Camp v. Bradford, 623 N.E.2d 731 (Ohio Ct. App. 1993) ("as is" disclaimer clauses bar suit for passive nondisclosure, but will not protect a defendant from positive misrepresentation or concealment); Kaye v. Buehrle, 8 Ohio App. 3d 381, 457 N.E.2d 373, 375-76 (Ohio Ct. App. 1983) (an "as is" contract, coupled with a right to inspect clause, placed the risk of a leaky basement on the buyer).

Wisconsin: Richey v. Patrick, 904 P.2d 798, 804 (Wyo. 1995) , rehearing denied 904 P.2d 798 (Wyo. 1995) (absent an allegation of fraud, an "as is" clause bars a claim for nondisclosure).

(n4)Footnote 4. Richey v. Patrick, 904 P.2d 798, 803 (Wyo. 1995) , rehearing denied 904 P.2d 798 (Wyo. 1995) , citing Wozniak, Annot., Construction and Effect of Provision in Contract for Sale of Realty by Which Purchaser Agrees to Take Property "as is" or in its Existing Condition, 8 A.L.R. 5th 312, § 4 (1992).

(n5)Footnote 5. See

Richey v. Patrick, 904 P.2d 798, 803 (Wyo. 1995) , rehearing denied 904 P.2d 798 (Wyo. 1995) , citing Gopher Oil Co., Inc. v. Union Oil Co., 955 F.2d 519 (8th Cir. 1992) (fraud); V.S.H. Realty, Inc. v. Texaco, Inc., 757 F.2d 411 (1st Cir. 1985) ; Wilson v. Century 21 Great Western Realty, 15 Cal. App. 4th 298, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779 (Cal. Ct. App. 1993) , review denied 1993 Cal. LEXIS 3894 (Cal. July 22, 1993) (fraud); Rayner v. Wise Realty Co., 504 So. 2d 1361 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1987) (misrepresentation and fraudulent nondisclosure); Ferguson v. Cussins, 713 S.W.2d 5 (Ky. Ct. App. 1986) (fraudulent inducement); Sheehy v. Lipton Industries, Inc., 24 Mass. App. Ct. 188, 507 N.E.2d 781 (Mass. App. Ct. 1987) , review denied, 400 Mass. 1103, 509 N.E.2d 1202 (Mass. 1987) (misrepresentations); Wagner v. Cutler, 232 Mont. 332, 757 P.2d 779 (Mont. 1988) (misrepresentations); Holmes v. Couturier, 452 N.W.2d 135 (S.D. 1990) (fraud in the inception); Stemple v. Dobson, 184 W. Va. 317, 400 S.E.2d 561 (W.Va. 1990) (fraud).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Richey v. Patrick, 904 P.2d 798, 804 (Wyo. 1995) , rehearing denied 904 P.2d 798 (Wyo. 1995) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Syvrud v. Today Real Estate, Inc., 858 So. 2d 1125, 1129 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Syvrud v. Today Real Estate, Inc., 858 So. 2d 1125, 1130 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Grube v. Daun, 173 Wis. 2d 30, 61, 496 N.W.2d 106, 117 (Wis. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Moore v. Prudential Residential Services Limited Partnership, 849 So. 2d 914, 923 (Ala. 2002) , reh'g denied, 2002 Ala. LEXIS 379 (Nov. 15, 2002) ; ERA Class.com, Inc. v. Stoddard, 2007 Ala. Civ. App. LEXIS 641, at *7-*8 (Oct. 5, 2007) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See ERA Class.com, Inc. v. Stoddard, 2007 Ala. Civ. App. LEXIS 641, at *18 (Oct. 5, 2007) (purchaser bought property believing it was zoned for commercial use when the property was zoned only for residential use).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Maloney v. Sargisson, 18 Mass. App. 341, 465 N.E.2d 296, 299-300 (Mass. App. Ct. 1984) ; Lenawee County Board of Health v. Messerly, 417 Mich. 17, 31-32, 331 N.W.2d 203, 210 (Mich. 1982) ; Atkins v. Kirkpatrick, 823 S.W.2d 547, 553-554 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1991) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

43 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART III. Duties Owed to Buyers

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.19

§ 3.19 Duties Unique to Common Interest Properties

One issue that can arise when the subject property is located in a common interest community is whether the licensee has a duty to disclose any pending litigation regarding construction defects in the units or common property.

A California court has found that a broker and agent were not liable for failing to disclose such litigation with respect to a planned unit development. The court held that the trial court properly granted summary judgment for the broker and agent since there was no extended inspection duty under California Civil Code § 2079.3. The court also rejected imposing liability on the broker and agent on nonstatutory grounds such as negligence and breach of fiduciary duty. n1 The court stated that the agent could not disclose what he did not know, nor was the agent on notice of facts putting him under a duty to inquire about the homeowners association's knowledge of pending litigation, in order to verify what the sellers disclosed or did not disclose. The court also stated that the agent should not be deemed to have such a duty as a matter of law simply because this property was located in a planned unit development. n2

California Civil Code § 2079 codifies the duties of a real estate broker or salesperson to inspect property offered for sale and disclose material facts about the property to a prospective buyer. Specifically, a real estate broker or salesperson involved in a purchase/sale transaction has a duty "to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale and to disclose to that prospective purchaser all facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property that an investigation would reveal... ." n3 However, this section states that if the property being sold is a condominium, a cooperative, or in a planned development, the inspection to be performed under section 2079 "does not include an inspection of more than the unit offered for sale, if the seller or broker complies with the provisions of Section 1368." n4 California Civil Code § 1368 requires that a prospective buyer be provided certain documents such as a copy of the governing laws of the development and various documents relating to assessments. When buyers have been apprised of the essential facts concerning a defect in the condominium project, the broker should have no liability to the buyer for not investigating such defects or any lawsuits against the developer pertaining to the lawsuit. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Padgett v. Phariss, 54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1282-1286, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373, 379-381 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) , review denied, 1997 Cal. LEXIS 4493 (Cal. July 16, 1997) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Padgett v. Phariss, 54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1286, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373, 381 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) , review denied, 1997 Cal. LEXIS 4493 (Cal. July 16, 1997) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.3.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Padgett v. Phariss, 54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1286, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373, 381 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) , review denied, 1997 Cal. LEXIS 4493 (Cal. July 16, 1997) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

44 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART IV. Duties Arising Under Brokerage Relationship Acts

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.20

§ 3.20 Single-Party and Single Agent Brokers

Oklahoma has statutorily eliminated the concept of agents and has replaced this designation with the single-party broker. n1 Pursuant to Oklahoma Statutes title 59, § 858-351(3), a single-party broker is defined as a broker who has entered into a written brokerage agreement with a party in a transaction to provide services for the benefit of that party. A broker must enter into a written brokerage agreement prior to providing services as a single-party broker. n2 The single-party broker has the same duties and responsibilities as the transaction broker (see § 3.22, below for a discussion of transaction brokers) plus the following duties and responsibilities:

- (1) performing all brokerage activities for the benefit of the party for whom the single-party broker is performing services unless prohibited by law.
- (2) obeying the specific directions of the party for whom the single-party broker is performing services that are not contrary to applicable statutes and rules or contrary to the terms of a contract between the parties to the transaction. n3

Though other jurisdictions do not use the term single-party broker, many embody a similar concept in their brokerage relationship act. For example, pursuant to Colorado Revised Statutes § 12-61-802(4), a single agent is defined as a broker who is engaged by and represents only one party in a real estate transaction. A single agent includes the following:

- A buyer's agent which is a broker who is engaged by and represents the buyer in a real estate transaction.
- A landlord's agent which is a broker who is engaged by and represents the landlord in a leasing transaction.
- A seller's agent which is a broker who is engaged by and represents the seller in a real estate transaction.

- A tenant's agent which means a broker who is engaged by and represents the tenant in a leasing transaction.

Florida law allows a single agent relationship where the licensee's duties owed to the buyer or seller engaging the licensee include the following:

- Dealing honestly and fairly.
- Loyalty.
- Confidentiality.
- Obedience.
- Full disclosure.
- Accounting for all funds.
- Skill, care, and diligence in the transaction.
- Presenting all offers and counteroffers in a timely manner, unless a party has previously directed the licensee otherwise in writing.
- Disclosing all known facts that materially affect the value of residential real property and are not readily observable. n4

Florida single agents must make a full written disclosure to the buyer or seller prior to entering into a listing agreement or an agreement for representation or before the showing of property, whichever occurs first. When incorporated into other documents, the required notice must be of the same size type, or larger, as other provisions of the document and must be conspicuous in its placement so as to advise customers of the duties of a single agent. n5

Pursuant to Florida Statutes § 475.278(3)(c)(1), Florida single agents must provide the following disclosure form to their clients:

SINGLE AGENT NOTICE

IMPORTANT NOTICE

FLORIDA LAW REQUIRES THAT REAL ESTATE LICENSEES PROVIDE THIS NOTICE TO POTENTIAL SELLERS AND BUYERS OF REAL ESTATE.

You should not assume that any real estate broker or sales associate represents you unless you agree to engage a real estate licensee in an authorized brokerage relationship, either as a single agent or as a transaction broker. You are advised not to disclose any information you want to be held in confidence until you make a decision on representation.

SINGLE AGENT RELATIONSHIP

FLORIDA LAW REQUIRES THAT REAL ESTATE LICENSEES OPERATING AS SINGLE AGENTS DISCLOSE TO BUYERS AND SELLERS THEIR DUTIES.

As a single agent, _____ [name of Real Estate Entity and its Associates] owe to you the following duties:

- (1) Dealing honestly and fairly;
- (2) Loyalty;
- (3) Confidentiality;
- (4) Obedience;
- (5) Full disclosure;
- (6) Accounting for all funds;
- (7) Skill, care, and diligence in the transaction;
- (8) Presenting all offers and counteroffers in a timely manner, unless a party has previously directed the licensee otherwise in writing; and
- (9) Disclosing all known facts that materially affect the value of residential real property and are not readily observable.

_____ [Date]

_____ [Signature]

Additional disclosure obligations are imposed upon single agents who are changing the relationship to that of a transaction broker relationship. The licensee must obtain the principal's written consent to the change in relationship. n6

Readers are advised to consult the applicable statutes and regulations to determine the duties and obligations of a licensee who represents only one party in the transaction.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pursuant to Okla. Stat. tit. 59, § 858-361, a broker is permitted to use the word "agent" in a trade name.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Okla. Stat. tit. 59, § 858-354(A).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Okla. Stat. tit. § 858-354(B). Huffman v. Cohen, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51912 (N.D. Okla. June 19, 2009) , applying Oklahoma law.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Fla. Stat. § 475.278(3)(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Fla. Stat. § 475.278(3)(b)(1). The first sentence of the required disclosure must be printed in uppercase and bold type.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fla. Stat. § 475.278(3)(b)(2) and Fla. Stat. § 475.278(3)(c)(2).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

45 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART IV. Duties Arising Under Brokerage Relationship Acts

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.21

§ 3.21 Dual Agency

[1] Dual Agency Is Problematic

As a general rule, dual agency is contrary to public policy and the contract is voidable upon the application of either party. n1 Under the common law of agency, a broker's acting as a dual agent without the consent of all parties warranted forfeiture of the commission. n2 While this result was harsh it was justified on the ground that if damages were measured solely by the loss to the principal, often there would be little disincentive to the agent for assuming undisclosed conflicting responsibilities. If the commission itself was subject to forfeiture, however, agents will be disinclined to "blithely" assume conflicting responsibilities without disclosure to and the consent of both principals. n3 The exception to this rule occurred when all parties knew of the dual agency. n4

Dual agency is problematic because a dual agent attempts to serve parties with conflicting interests. n5 Common sense and ancient wisdom join the law in teaching that an agent is not permitted to simultaneously serve two principals whose interests conflict about the matter served--at least, not without full disclosure and consent from both. n6 That is why the law requires that dual agents obtain the informed consent of all parties. n7

One problem inherent in dual agency is that brokers must exercise reasonable due care and diligence to effect a sale to the principal's best advantage. n8 This goal is problematic in many respects, but perhaps is most noticeable with respect to the selling price of the property. The seller seeks the highest sales price possible, while the buyer seeks the lowest sales price possible. Therefore, a sale to the seller's best advantage is not a sale to the buyer's best advantage and vice versa. n9

[2] Common Law and Dual Agency

It is a generally accepted rule that a broker may not represent adverse parties in the same transaction, absent the consent of all parties. n10 It has been held that the contract between the principals, brought about by a broker who was not authorized to represent both parties, is voidable. n11 The principle underlying these rules was stated with great force as follows:

The interests of the buyer and the seller are naturally antagonistic to each other. The broker, in undertaking to arrange terms between them, if he favors the buyer, is necessarily disregarding the interest of the seller, and, if he favors the seller, is necessarily disregarding the interest of the buyer. A circus rider may ride two horses at once around the ring, if they are going in the same direction, but he would meet with disaster if the horses were going in different directions. In Holy Writ it is said: "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." ... A broker representing both sides to a real estate transaction may properly introduce the buyer to the seller and arrange for each to examine the respective properties in case of exchange, but there is little else that he may do without becoming disloyal to one or the other of the contracting parties. It is only where full disclosure of the dual agency is made by the broker to the parties and a full understanding of his activities and their legitimate limits that he may be permitted to represent both sides and exact a commission from each of the contracting parties. n12

While dual agency is not proscribed, a broker who undertakes to represent both parties is held to a high standard of care. A Missouri court has stated as follows:

A broker so unwise as to place himself in the anomalous position of representing adverse parties must scrupulously observe and fulfill his duties to both. And, among other duties which a broker owes to his principal is that of keeping his customer fully informed of all facts pertinent to the transaction. n13

It has been held that the defense of caveat emptor does not apply when a real estate agent acting as a dual agent fails to disclose to his or her clients facts known to the agent that are material to the transaction. In this particular case the dual agent failed to disclose to the buyer nonconfidential information known to the seller. n14

Unless there are unusual circumstances, dual agency should be an unsatisfactory choice for the buyer or seller since a dual agent cannot fully represent either party. For example, a dual agent cannot by law give the buyer the same degree of loyalty as an agent who acts on behalf of the buyer. Dual agency inherently invites a conflict of interest. n15

[3] Statutory Authorization of Dual Agency

It appears that most brokerage relationship acts statutorily authorize dual agency. n16 These acts define the parameters of this relationship and the duties that arise from it. Typically under such acts, a dual agency arises when:

- (1) an individual licensee represents both the seller and the buyer in the same transaction; or
- (2) a licensee associated with a broker acts as an agent for the seller and another licensee associated with the same broker acts as an agent for the buyer. n17

This latter arrangement is referred to as a designated agency. n18

Though dual agency is legal when the relationship is established properly, the inherent common law problem of one party being able to service two principals continues. The Oklahoma Supreme Court has stated:

Sellers' agents and dual agents do not and cannot by law give a buyer the same degree of loyalty as an agent who acts on behalf of a buyer. Sellers' agents owe their allegiance to the seller. Dual agency invites a conflict of interest. A buyer who relies on the seller's agent or on dual agency does not receive the same degree of legal protection as that afforded by an agent acting solely on behalf of the buyer. n19

Even if a brokerage relationship act does not specifically authorize dual agency, a licensee can function as a dual agent under common law if this fact is fully disclosed to and consented to by all principals.

[4] Duties of a Dual Agent

A dual agent has a duty first and foremost to disclose his or her intent to act as a dual agent and to obtain the consent of all principals. Without this full disclosure and the consent of all principals, the licensee will be in breach of his or her duties to the principals or clients.

A principal's consent to use a dual agent should be a meaningful consent, which has been given before the agent started acting on behalf of another party with an adverse interest. The licensee should call attention to the fact that he or she is seeking to act as a dual agent and should not assume that the principal has read a disclosure statement advising the principal of this fact. n20

Assuming that all principals are fully informed of the dual agency situation and have consented to it, the broker owes all principals certain duties. While the applicable statute is the authority on the parameters of a dual agency and statutes vary in the duties imposed, the following duties are frequently imposed:

1. A dual agent must treat all clients (i.e., the seller and the buyer) honestly. n21
2. A dual agent must provide information about the property to the buyer or tenant. n22
3. The dual agent must disclose all latent material defects in the property that are known to the agent. n23
4. The dual agent must disclose the financial qualification of the buyer or tenant to the seller or landlord. n24
5. The dual agent must explain real estate terms. n25
6. The dual agent must help the buyer or tenant arrange for property inspections. n26
7. The dual agent must explain closing costs and procedures. n27
8. The dual agent must help the buyer compare financing alternatives. n28
9. The dual agent must provide information about comparable properties that have sold so both clients may make educated decisions on what price to accept or offer. n29

Dual agents are typically prohibited from doing any of the following:

- (1) The dual agent may not disclose confidential information that licensee may know about a client, without that client's permission. n30
- (2) The dual agent may not disclose the price the seller or landlord will take other than the listing price without permission of the seller or landlord. n31
- (3) The dual agent may not disclose the price the buyer or tenant is willing to pay without permission of the buyer or tenant. n32
- (4) The dual agent may not recommend or suggest a price the buyer or tenant should offer. n33
- (5) The dual agent may not recommend or suggest a price the seller or landlord should counter with or accept. n34
- (6) The dual agent may not reveal a confidential negotiating strategy not disclosed in an offer as terms of a sale. n35

(7) The dual agent may not disclose the seller's motivation for selling property or the buyer's motivation for buying property. n36

Generally, a dual agent has fiduciary duties to both the buyer and seller. n37 Whether a fiduciary duty has been breached depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. n38

Dual agents should avoid treating their principals differently. In one case involving a dual agent, the agent reported an unfavorable termite inspection to the seller, but not the buyers. This failure to disclose all facts to all parties constituted a breach of the agent's fiduciary duties. n39

Under Colorado statutory and regulatory law, in order for a real estate broker to represent both the seller and buyer in a transaction, there must be a written agency agreement signed by both the seller and buyer. n40 Without such a written agreement, the agent is considered only the agent of the seller and there is no fiduciary duty owed to the buyer. However, Colorado real estate brokers have been held accountable for failure to deal fairly and honestly with a purchaser while serving as the seller's agent. n41

[5] Remedies for Failure to Disclose Dual Agency

The remedy for failing to disclose a dual agency will depend upon whether common law applies or whether an applicable brokerage relationship act provides a statutory remedy. In Huijers v. DeMarrais, n42 the court considered the remedy or a licensee's failure to disclose to the seller that she was a dual agent. The statutorily mandated agency disclosure statement was required to be given to the sellers prior to signing the listing agreement. Instead, the sellers learned of their agent's status when they signed a purchase contract. Prior to settlement, the sellers rescinded the contract. In considering the remedy for the agent's untimely delivery of the agency disclosure statement, the court stated that California Civil Code § 2374 provided no remedy for a licensee's failure to comply. The court stated, "A statute without a remedy might as well be written in invisible ink." n43 The court concluded that the common law provided a remedy for a failure to comply with § 2374.

In considering the agency disclosure statement required by California Civil Code § 2374, the court stated that the purpose of the requirement of providing a disclosure prior to signing the listing agreement was to allow the seller to make a more intelligent decision about whether to sign the listing agreement. n44 The court stated that this protection that the Legislature intended to provide to the seller cannot be achieved if the listing agent fails to provide the disclosure form prior to entering into the listing agreement. Since the statute's reasonable objective is to give the seller information prior to signing the listing agreement, providing a disclosure form after the seller signs the agreement is not substantial compliance. n45

In addressing the remedy for the licensee's failure to timely provide the agency disclosure statement, the court relied upon California Civil Code § 2382 which states: "Nothing in this article shall be construed to either diminish the duty of disclosure owed buyers and sellers by agents and their associate licensees, subagents, and employees or to relieve agents and their associate licensees, subagents, and employees from liability for their conduct in connection with acts governed by this article or for any breach of a fiduciary duty or a duty of disclosure." The court found that while the legislative scheme added statutory duties to the common law duties of disclosure, it also left the common law remedies for failure to disclose intact.

At common law the remedy for a real estate agent's breach of a duty to disclose a dual agency was that the principal was not liable to pay the agent's commission, and the principal may avoid the transaction. n46 The court rejected an argument that the legislature intended the remedy for violation of the statute to be confined to discipline by the Commissioner of Real Estate. The court found that while the agent's failure to disclose the dual agency prior to entering into the listing agreement relieved the seller from having to pay the commission, it did not necessarily relieve them from their obligation under the sales contract since the disclosure statement was given to the sellers before they signed the purchase contract. The case was remanded for a determination of whether the particular facts of this case would allow the sellers to rescind the purchase contract. This court warned, however, that it was not holding that the failure to provide a disclosure form will always result in a voidable listing agreement. If a seller had sufficient knowledge concerning the information contained in the disclosure form, the seller could be held to the listing agreement even though he or she did not receive the agency disclosure form. n47

[6] Representation of Competing Buyers by Agents Associated with the Same Broker

The use of a buyer's agent is a relatively recent phenomena n48 and few courts have considered whether there is a conflict and a resulting breach of the licensees' duty when buyers' agents associated with the same broker, represent separate buyers seeking to purchase the same property. The New York high court has addressed this issue. In doing so, this court considered the agency disclosure form mandated by New York Real Property Law § 443, and found that this disclosure requirement was enacted to eliminate confusion as to whether a broker was acting in the interest of a seller, a buyer, or both. This disclosure requirement was not enacted to disclose whether a brokerage firm might represent multiple buyers or sellers with competing interests. The disclosure form states that the fiduciary duty is owed by an individual licensee and not the firm. The court stated that two buyer's agents affiliated with the same real estate brokerage firm and acting on behalf of different buyers bidding on the same property generally do not present risks comparable to that presented when one agent represents multiple clients bidding on the same property. There is no incentive for these agents to represent their clients less than zealously, consistent with their fiduciary duties under Real Property Law § 443(4)(a) and common law particularly since they only earn commissions for sales to their own clients. In this situation the agents, though associated with the same brokerage firm, have every reason to negotiate in their clients' best interest. n49

New York's high court noted that would-be buyers know that they are competing with other potential buyers, including those represented by other agents affiliated with the firm that they have retained. Unless a broker and principal specifically agree otherwise, a brokerage firm is not obligated to insure that its affiliated licensees forego making offers on behalf of other buyers for property on which the principal has already bid. Disclosure and consent are not prerequisites to a competing offer in this circumstance. An individual agent, however, may not represent multiple buyers bidding on the same property without making disclosures and obtaining consents. n50

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Snider v. Oklahoma ex rel. Oklahoma Real Estate Commission, 1999 OK 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1208 (Okla. 1999) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Anderson v. Anderson, 293 Minn. 209, 216, 197 N.W.2d 720, 724 (Minn. 1972) ; Allied Sec., Inc. v. Clocker, 185 Neb. 524, 527, 176 N.W.2d 914, 917 (Neb. 1970) ; Cogan v. Kidder, Mathews & Senger, Inc., 97 Wn.2d 658, 668, 648 P.2d 875, 880 (Wash. 1982) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cogan v. Kidder, Mathews & Segner, Inc., 97 Wash. 2d 658, 668, 648 P.2d 875, 880 (Wash. 1982)

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g.,

Alabama: Fisher v. Comer Plantation, Inc., 772 So. 2d 455, 465 (Ala. 2000) .

Oklahoma: Snider v. Oklahoma ex rel. Oklahoma Real Estate Commission, 1999 OK 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1208 (Okla. 1999) .

See generally J. Clark Pendergrass, The Real Estate Consumer's Agency and Disclosure Act: The Case Against Dual Agency, 48 Ala. L. Rev. 277, 287-90 (1996) (discussing dual agency under Alabama common law).

(n5)Footnote 5. See L. Byron Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial Corp., 1 Cal. App. 4th 300, 305, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680, 682-683 (Cal. Ct. App. 1991), review denied, 1992 Cal. LEXIS 1054 (Cal. Mar. 11, 1992); Snider v. Oklahoma ex rel. Oklahoma Real Estate Commission, 1999 OK 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1208 (Okla. 1999).

(n6)Footnote 6. Brown v. FSR Brokerage, Inc., 62 Cal. App. 4th 766, 768-769, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998), review denied, Supreme Court Minute 07-08-1998 (Cal. July 8, 1998).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Snider v. Oklahoma ex rel. Oklahoma Real Estate Commission, 1999 OK 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1208 (Okla. 1999).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Coleman v. Watts, 87 F. Supp. 2d 944, 954 (D. Ariz. 1998), applying Arizona law.

(n9)Footnote 9. Cf. Coleman v. Watts, 87 F. Supp. 2d 944, 954 (D. Ariz. 1998), applying Arizona law. The inference to be drawn from the broker's dual representation, the conflicting interests of the buyers and sellers, and the broker's failure to negotiate the price on behalf of the buyer, is that the broker negligently misrepresented the buyers by failing to effect the sale to the buyer's best advantage.

(n10)Footnote 10. For a discussion of the types of conduct constituting double-hiring on the part of the purchaser, see Simon v. Allied Chem. Corp., 35 A.D.2d 273, 315 N.Y.S.2d 919, 1970 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3405 (1970), aff'd, 29 N.Y.2d 861, 278 N.E.2d 340 (1971).

(n11)Footnote 11. Brockman v. Delta Mfg. Co., 184 Okla. 357, 87 P.2d 968, 969 (Okla. 1939).

(n12)Footnote 12. Nahn-Heberer Realty Co. v. Schrader, 89 S.W.2d 142, 144-145 (Mo. Ct. App. 1936).

(n13)Footnote 13. Martin v. Hieken, 340 S.W.2d 161, 165 (Mo. Ct. App. 1960).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Allison v. Cook, 139 Ohio App. 3d 473, 744 N.E.2d 254, 265 (2000).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Snider v. State of Oklahoma Real Estate Commission, 1999 Okla. 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1209 (1999).

(n16)Footnote 16. Colorado, Florida and Kansas have outlawed dual agency. Instead, a licensee can represent both parties only as a transaction broker. See:

Colorado: Olsen v. Vail Real Estate Associates, Inc., 935 P.2d 975, 980 (Colo. 1997). Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-806(1) ("A broker shall not establish dual agency with any seller, landlord, buyer, or tenant.").

Florida: Fla. Stat. § 475.278 (1)(A) ("A real estate licensee may not operate as a disclosed or nondisclosed dual agent.") and (2)(A) ("A transaction broker provides a limited form of representation to a buyer, a seller, or both in a real estate transaction but does not represent either in a fiduciary capacity or as a single agent.").

Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-30, 103(a) ("A licensee shall not act as a dual agent or in a dual capacity of agent and undisclosed principal in any transaction.").

(n17)Footnote 17. For one example of such a statutory definition see N. M. Stat. Ann. § 16.61.19.11.

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g., Va. Code Ann. § 54.1-2130.

(n19)Footnote 19. Snider v. Oklahoma ex rel. Oklahoma Real Estate Commission, 1999 OK 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1209-1210 (Okla. 1999) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Brown v. FSR Brokerage, Inc., 62 Cal. App. 4th 766, 777-778, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 828, 834 (Cal. Ct. App. 1998) , review denied, Supreme Court Minute 07-08-1998 (Cal. July 8, 1998).

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g.,

California: Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.16.

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n24)Footnote 24. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n25)Footnote 25. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n27)Footnote 27. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n30)Footnote 30. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n31)Footnote 31. See, e.g.,

California: Cal. Civ. Code §§ 2079.16 and 2079.21.

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

South Carolina: S.C. Code § 40-57-137(M)(2)(a).

(n32)Footnote 32. See, e.g.,

California: Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.16.

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

South Carolina:

S.C. Code § 40-57-137(M)(2)(b).

(n33)Footnote 33. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n34)Footnote 34. See, e.g.,

Illinois: 225 ILCS 454/15-45(a).

(n35)Footnote 35. See:

South Carolina: S.C. Code § 40-57-137(M)(1)(b)(iii).

(n36)Footnote 36. See:

South Carolina: S.C. Code § 40-57-137(M)(1)(b)(iv).

(n37)Footnote 37. See Assilzadeh v. California Federal Bank, FSB, 82 Cal. App. 4th 399, 414, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 176, 185 (Cal. Ct. App. 2000) , review withdrawn, Supreme Court Minute 10-25-2000, 2000 Cal. LEXIS 8285 (Cal. Oct. 25, 2000) . Cf. Varnado v. Alfonso Realty, Inc., 16 So. 3d 746, 750 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009) (dual agent must serve both masters' interests fully).

(n38)Footnote 38. See Assilzadeh v. California Federal Bank, FSB, 82 Cal. App. 4th 399, 414, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 176, 185 (Cal. Ct. App. 2000) , review withdrawn, Supreme Court Minute 10-25-2000, 2000 Cal. LEXIS 8285 (Cal. Oct. 25, 2000) ; Waddles v. Lacour, 950 So. 2d 937, 942 (La. Ct. App. 2007) , rehearing denied, 2007 La. App. LEXIS 538 (Mar. 21, 2007) and 2007 La. App. LEXIS 540 (Mar. 21, 2007) writ denied, 959 So. 2d 496 (La. 2007) and 959 So. 2d 498 (La. 2007) .

(n39)Footnote 39. See Lane v. Oustalet, 850 So. 2d 1143, 1153-1155 (Miss. Ct. App. June 4, 2002) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 873 So. 2d 92 (Miss. 2004) . See also Waddles v. Lacour, 950 So. 2d 937, 941-42 (La. Ct. App. 2007) , rehearing denied, 2007 La. App. LEXIS 538 (Mar. 21, 2007) and 2007 La. App. LEXIS 540 (Mar. 21, 2007) writ denied, 959 So. 2d 496 (La. 2007) and 959 So. 2d 498 (La. 2007) (dual agents gave preference to sellers by failing to disclose to buyers that the house was built around a mobile home).

(n40)Footnote 40. See Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128, 132 (Colo. Ct. App. 1993) , rehearing denied.

(n41)Footnote 41. See Messler v. Phillips, 867 P.2d 128, 132 (Colo. Ct. App. 1993) , rehearing denied.

(n42)Footnote 42. 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied (1993).

(n43)Footnote 43. Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 678-679, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 234 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied (1993).

(n44)Footnote 44. Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 684-685, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied (1993).

(n45)Footnote 45. Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied (1993).

(n46)Footnote 46. Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685-686, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied (1993).

(n47)Footnote 47. Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 686, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 239 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied (1993).

(n48)Footnote 48. See Rivkin v. Century 21 Teran Realty, LLC, 494 F.3d 99, 103 (2007) (This is a recent phenomena in New York. The defendant in this case advertised in 2001 that it was the first firm in Ulster County to work as a buyer's agent.); Rivkin v. Century 21 Teran Realty LLC, 10 N.Y.3d 344, 352-53, 858 N.Y.S.2d 55, 887 N.E.2d 1113, 1118 (2008) , quoting Ronald Benton Brown, Joseph M. Grohman and Manuel R. Valcarcel, Real Estate Brokerage: Recent Changes in Relationships and a Proposed Cure, 29 Creighton L Rev. 25, 42 (1995) ("The trend of representing buyers began primarily on the west coast in the mid-1980's when states enacted the first agency disclosure laws making the practice viable").

(n49)Footnote 49. See Rivkin v. Century 21 Teran Realty LLC, 10 N.Y.3d 344, 356, 858 N.Y.S.2d 55, 887 N.E.2d 1113, 1120 (2008) .

(n50)Footnote 50. See Rivkin v. Century 21 Teran Realty LLC, 10 N.Y.3d 344, 356-57, 858 N.Y.S.2d 55, 887 N.E.2d 1113, 1120-21 (2008) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

46 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART IV. Duties Arising Under Brokerage Relationship Acts

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.22

§ 3.22 Transactional Brokers and Facilitators

[1] Transaction Brokers Are Not Agents of Either Party

Many states recognize a brokerage nonagency relationship. Various terms are used to refer to this type of relationship including transaction broker, n1 facilitator, intermediary n1.1 and a nonagent brokerage. n1.2 Though statutory definitions vary, a transaction broker essentially helps the buyer and the seller with the paperwork and formalities of the real estate transaction. A transaction broker is not an agent of either party. n2 Consequently, transaction brokers have been referred to as "a non-agent real estate broker." n3 A transaction broker provides limited representation to a buyer, a seller or both, in a real estate transaction, but does not represent either in a fiduciary capacity or as a single agent. n4 The concept of a transaction broker is a significant departure from the traditional common law view of agency relationships in real estate transactions. n5

In some states, the parties' relationship is presumed to be that of a transaction broker unless stated otherwise. n6 In some jurisdictions, the absence of a written agreement with the licensee results in their relationship being that of a transaction brokerage. n7

Instead of acting as an agent, a transaction broker assists one or more parties throughout a contemplated real estate transaction with communication, interposition, advisement, negotiation, contract terms, and the closing of such real estate transaction without being an agent or advocate for the interests of any party to the transaction. n8 Florida statutorily provides that transaction brokers provide a limited form of nonfiduciary representation to a buyer, seller, or both in a real estate transaction. n9

While a transaction broker agreement is not a traditional form of brokerage contract, a transaction broker's obligations are not merely gratuitous. n10 Since a buyer or seller contracts with a transaction broker to perform certain services and obligations and the transaction broker is entitled to a commission pursuant to the parties' agreement for performing such services, the buyer or client is entitled to expect that a transaction broker will perform his or her obligations.

The effect of allowing the transaction broker relationship is that this form of brokerage has been replacing disclosed dual agency and has also reduced the number of subagencies. n11

[2] Duties of a Transaction Broker

The duties of a transaction-broker are usually dictated by statute. n12 For example, Colorado statutorily states that a transaction-broker must perform the terms of any written or oral agreement made with any party to the transaction and exercise reasonable skill and care in:

- (1) Presenting all offers and counteroffers in a timely manner regardless of whether the property is subject to a contract for sale or lease or letter of intent;
- (2) Advising the parties regarding the transaction and suggesting that such parties obtain expert advice as to material matters about which the transaction-broker knows but the specifics of which are beyond the expertise of such broker;
- (3) Accounting in a timely manner for all money and property received;
- (4) Keeping the parties fully informed regarding the transaction;
- (5) Assisting the parties in complying with the terms and conditions of any contract including closing the transaction;
- (6) Disclosing to all prospective buyers or tenants any adverse material facts actually known by the broker including but not limited to adverse material facts pertaining to the title, the physical condition of the property, any defects in the property, and any environmental hazards affecting the property required by law to be disclosed; n13
- (7) Disclosing to any prospective seller or landlord all adverse material facts actually known by the broker including but not limited to adverse material facts pertaining to the buyer's or tenant's financial ability to perform the terms of the transaction and the buyer's intent to occupy the property as a principal residence; and
- (8) Informing the parties that as seller and buyer or as landlord and tenant they shall not be vicariously liable for any acts of the transaction-broker. n14

Colorado also statutorily provides that a transaction broker may not disclose the following information without the informed consent of all parties:

- (1) That a buyer or tenant is willing to pay more than the purchase price or lease rate offered for the property;
- (2) That a seller or landlord is willing to accept less than the asking price or lease rate for the property;
- (3) What the motivating factors are for any party buying, selling, or leasing the property;
- (4) That a seller, buyer, landlord, or tenant will agree to financing terms other than those offered;
- (5) Any facts or suspicions regarding circumstances which may psychologically impact or stigmatize any real property pursuant to Colorado Revised Statutes § 38-35.5-101; or
- (6) Any material information about the other party unless disclosure is required by law or failure to disclose such information would constitute fraud or dishonest dealing. n15

A transaction-broker in Colorado has no duty to conduct an independent inspection of the property for the benefit of the buyer or tenant and has no duty to independently verify the accuracy or completeness of statements made by the seller, landlord, or independent inspectors. n16

A Colorado transaction-broker may do the following without breaching any obligation or responsibility:

- Show alternative properties not owned by the seller or landlord to a prospective buyer or tenant.
- List competing properties for sale or lease.
- Show properties in which the buyer or tenant is interested to other prospective buyers or tenants.
- Serve as a single agent or transaction-broker for the same or for different parties in other real estate transactions. n17

Pursuant to Colorado statutory law, there is no imputation of knowledge or information between any party and the transaction-broker or among persons within an entity engaged as a transaction-broker. n18 A Colorado transaction-broker may cooperate with other brokers, but shall not engage or create any subagents. n19

Significantly, although Colorado statutorily prescribes these duties, the statute fails to prescribe any remedy for nonperformance of these obligations. n20 Colorado is not the only jurisdiction to omit a statutory remedy for failure to comply with a brokerage relations act. One court in addressing this issue concluded that common law provided a remedy for the statutory noncompliance. n21

There is limited case law on the duties attendant to this type of brokerage relationship. One court has found that a transaction broker is not required to inform a buyer or seller of changing market conditions that would affect the value of the property. n22 n23Typically, a transaction broker must supply the seller or buyer with some type of form or publication that explains this type of relationship. Maine Real Estate Commission Advisory Ruling No. 1-95 (August 10, 1995) provides a good synopsis of the duties typically imposed upon a transaction broker (or agent). This Ruling provides that transaction brokers have a duty to:

- Provide a specific disclosure form to prospective buyers or sellers.
- Account for monies.
- Act honestly and competently.
- Furnish copies of offers and contracts to all parties at the time of their signatures.
- Obtain and provide information necessary to make property disclosures.
- Keep the terms of an offer, counter offer or contract confidential during the pendency of the transaction.
- Make no substantial misrepresentation by omission or commission.
- Avoid error, exaggeration or concealment of pertinent information.

- Keep the designated broker fully informed of all activities conducted on behalf of the agency.
- Comply with Federal, state or local laws, rules, regulations, ordinances related to real estate brokerage, including fair housing and civil rights laws or regulations.

This Ruling specifically states that transaction brokers may not:

- Promote the interests of one party to the transaction over the interests of the other party.
- Disclose the willingness or ability of the seller to accept less than the asking price, without the seller's express permission.
- Disclose the willingness or ability of the buyer to pay more than what has been offered, without the buyer's express permission.
- Disclose negotiating strategy not disclosed in the sales offer as terms of the sale, without the express permission of the party making the offer.
- Disclose the motivation of the seller for selling and the motivation of the buyer for buying, without the express permission of the seller or buyer.

[3] Transaction Brokers Are Liable Only for Damages Their Conduct Causes

Traditionally, a remedy frequently applied when a broker violated his or her duty of loyalty to the principal was forfeiture of his or her commission. Since a transaction broker is not an agent of either party, there is no duty of loyalty owed to any party. The traditional remedy of forfeiture of commission appears not to apply to a transaction broker even if the transaction broker fails to perform certain statutory duties. n24 Instead it would appear that a party harmed by the failure of a transaction broker to perform statutorily mandated duties would be entitled to damages caused by such nonperformance. n25

[4] Statutory Duty to Provide a Disclosure Statement Regarding the Parties' Relationship

Many brokerage relationship statutes require that in a residential transaction, the broker make certain disclosures about the broker's duties to the parties and about which party or parties the broker is representing in the transaction. n26 Typically, this disclosure must be made before the parties enter into a listing agreement. n27 Requiring a disclosure prior to signing the listing agreement allows the seller to make a more intelligent decision about whether to sign. One court has given this example to illustrate this concept: A property owner who is asked to sign a listing agreement because the broker has a buyer for the property may not fully comprehend that the broker intends to act as a dual agent. Because the seller pays the broker's commission, the seller may reasonably believe the broker has only the seller's best interest at heart and is working exclusively for the seller. The disclosure form tells the property owner that a broker can act as a dual agent. Thus advised, the seller may wish to sell the property through his or her own agent or to seek independent advice on the price and terms of the listing. n28

In a case where the broker failed to deliver the disclosure statement in a timely fashion and where the disclosure statement statute failed to provide a remedy, the court found that the common law provided the remedy. The listing agreement was found to be void at the seller's option. n29

A Florida court has held that Florida Statute § 475.278 replaces the common law fiduciary duty owed by a transaction broker to its clients with a more narrowly-defined set of statutory duties and that these statutory duties apply even when the transaction broker fails to meet the statute's notice requirement which would have advised the plaintiffs of the duties of limited representation owed by a transaction broker. Consequently, a Florida transaction broker's failure to provide the statutorily required disclosure document does not rebut or affect the statutory presumption that the parties' relationship is that of a transaction broker unless a single agent or no brokerage relationship is established in writing with the customer. n30

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Ala. Code § 34-27-82(a); Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-801, et seq.; Fla. Stat. § 475.278(2); Ga. Code Ann. § 10-6A-14; Kansas Stat. Ann. § 58-30,113; Okla. Stat. tit. 59, §§ 858-351(5) and 858-355.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Wyo. Stat. 33-28-305.

(n3)Footnote 1.2. See Idaho Code 54-2086; Johnson v. McPhee, 147 Idaho 455, 461, 210 P.3d 563, 569 (Idaho Ct. App. 2009) , review denied, 2009 Ida. LEXIS 130 (July 8, 2009) .

(n4)Footnote 2. See Barfield v. Hall Realty, Inc., 2010 Colo. App. LEXIS 448, at *10 (Colo. Ct. App. Apr. 1, 2010) . Cf., e.g., Fla. Stat. § 475.278(2)(a) (a transaction broker does not represent either party in a fiduciary capacity); Burchfield v. Realty Executives, 971 So. 2d 138, 139 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007) (no cause of action is available against a transaction broker for common law breach of an implied fiduciary duty) review denied, 982 So. 2d 684 (Fla. 2008) .

(n5)Footnote 3. Sussman v. Stoner, 143 F. Supp. 2d 1232, 1237 (D. Colo. 2001) . See generally Patricia A. Wilson, Nonagent Brokerage: Real Estate Agents Missing in Action, 52 Okla. L. Rev. 85, 90 (1999).

(n6)Footnote 4. See Barfield v. Hall Realty, Inc., 2010 Colo. App. LEXIS 448, at *10-*11 (Colo. Ct. App. Apr. 1, 2010) ; Hoff & Leigh, Inc. v. Byler, 62 P.3d 1077, 1078 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002) ; Read v. Taylor, 832 So. 2d 219, 223 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) ; Fla. Stat. Ann. § 475.01(1)(m).

Cf. The Realty Store v. Tarl Partnership, 153 S.W.3d 366, 370-371 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2004) , appeal denied, 2004 Tenn. LEXIS 1146 (Tenn. Dec. 20, 2004) (A general partner of the seller could not be a facilitator or transaction broker because a facilitator or transaction broker represents the interest of neither seller nor buyer. The general partner could not meet the statutory definition for this type of relationship because he was not acting as a neutral party, but as a party advancing his own interest.).

(n7)Footnote 5. See Sussman v. Stoner, 143 F. Supp. 2d 1232 (D. Colo. 2001) , applying Colorado law; Hoff & Leigh, Inc. v. Byler, 62 P.3d 1077, 1078 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002) . See generally G. Lane Earnest & J. Marcus Painter, The New Brokerage Legislation: The Demise of "Agency by Surprise", 22 Colo. Law. 1919 (Sept. 1993) .

(n8)Footnote 6. See Sussman v. Stoner, 143 F. Supp. 2d 1232, 1237 (D. Colo. 2001) ; Johnson Realty v. Bender, 39 P.3d 1215, 1217 (Colo. Ct. App. 2001) , cert. denied 2002 Colo. LEXIS 138 (Colo. Feb. 11, 2002) ; (a broker who assists parties in a real estate transaction without a written agreement is deemed to be a transaction-broker, not an agent of either party); Pancak, Miceli and Sirmans, Real Estate Agency Reform: Meeting the Needs of Buyers, Sellers, and Brokers, 25 Real Estate L. J. 345, 355 (1997).

(n9)Footnote 7. See Johnson Realty v. Bender, 39 P.3d 1215, 1217 (Colo. Ct. App. 2001) , cert. denied, 2002 Colo. LEXIS 138 (Colo. Feb. 11, 2002) .

(n10)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-802(6).

(n11)Footnote 9. See Fla. Stat. § 475.272(4).

(n12)Footnote 10. See Read v. Taylor, 832 So. 2d 219, 223 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) .

(n13)Footnote 11. See Walt Abro, Transaction Brokerage: Is Colorado's New Approach Working?, Today's Realtor, Feb. 1996, p. 52 (National Association of Realtors).

(n14)Footnote 12. Cf. Burchfield v. Realty Executives, 971 So. 2d 138, 139 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007) (Fla. Stat. § 475.278 unequivocally replaces the fiduciary duty owed by real estate brokers at common law with a more narrowly defined set of statutory duties).

(n15)Footnote 13. See Michel v. Moore & Associates, Inc., 156 Cal. App. 4th 756, 762-63, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 802 (2007) .

(n16)Footnote 14. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-807(2). See also Fla. Stat. § 475.278(2) (similar statutory duties).

(n17)Footnote 15. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-807(3).

(n18)Footnote 16. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-807(4). See Barfield v. Hall Realty, Inc., 2010 Colo. App. LEXIS 448, at *12 (Colo. Ct. App. Apr. 1, 2010) .

(n19)Footnote 17. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-807(6).

(n20)Footnote 18. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-807(7).

(n21)Footnote 19. Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-807(8).

(n22)Footnote 20. See Hoff & Leigh, Inc. v. Byler, 62 P.3d 1077, 1079 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002) . The statute in question is Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-811.

(n23)Footnote 21. See Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 678, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 234 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied.

(n24)Footnote 22. See Sussman v. Stoner, 143 F. Supp. 2d 1232, 1238-1239 (D. Colo. 2001) .

(n25)Footnote 23. [Reserved].

(n26)Footnote 24. See Hoff & Leigh, Inc. v. Byler, 62 P.3d 1077, 1079 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002) .

(n27)Footnote 25. See Hoff & Leigh, Inc. v. Byler, 62 P.3d 1077, 1079 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002) (dicta).

(n28)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. § 475.278.

(n29)Footnote 27. See, e.g., Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-808; Ga. Code § 10-6A-10.

(n30)Footnote 28. See Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685-686, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied (1993).

(n31)Footnote 29. See Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 679, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 234-235 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied, (1993).

(n32)Footnote 30. See Burchfield v. Realty Executives, 971 So. 2d 138, 140 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2007) . (Fla. Stat. § 475.278 creates a presumption that all Florida real estate licensees "are operating as transaction brokers unless a single agent or no brokerage relationship is established, in writing, with a customer").

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

47 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.23

§ 3.23 Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

Many jurisdictions statutorily provide for an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in contracts. n1 Furthermore, the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing is recognized in the Restatement (Second) of Contracts, the Uniform Commercial Code, and common law. The Restatement provides, in part, that "[e]very contract imposes upon each party a duty of good faith and fair dealing in its performance and its enforcement." n2 The Comments to the Restatement state that "[g]ood faith performance or enforcement of a contract emphasizes faithfulness to an agreed common purpose and consistency with the justified expectations of the other party." n3

Compliance with this implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing may require expert testimony if the allegation asserts a failure to observe reasonable commercial standards of fair dealing in the brokerage trade. However, if the allegation asserts dishonesty, expert testimony should not be required. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Mont. Code Ann. § 28-1-211. See also Prudential Stewart Realty v. Sonnenfeldt, 285 N.J. Super. 106, 109, 666 A.2d 589, 591 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1995), cert. denied ("Under settled principles of law, there exists in every contract an implied covenant of good faith performance and fair dealing.").

(n2)Footnote 2. Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 205.

(n3)Footnote 3. Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 205 comment a.

(n4)Footnote 4. See May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 15 P.3d 1179, 1188 (Mont. 2000).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

48 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.24

§ 3.24 Duty to Provide a Residential Property Disclosure Statement

The majority of jurisdictions require that the seller of residential real property provide prospective purchasers with a disclosure statement that provides information about the property's condition. These statements often address the condition of various components of the property such as the roof, foundation, electrical, plumbing, and heating and air conditioning systems. Applicable law determines when such a statement must be provided and the consequences that flow from such a statement. The requirements of the various states with respect to this type of residential real property disclosure statement are discussed in Chapter 3A, below.

Some jurisdictions impose a duty upon a licensee to provide a prospective buyer with such a statement. n1 Since the requirement that sellers of residential property provide prospective purchasers with property disclosure statements were primarily enacted during the 1990s, there are relatively few cases addressing the consequences of failing to supply such a statement or supplying a fraudulent statement. There are even fewer cases addressing a real estate licensee's duties and liabilities with respect to such statements.

In Ikola v. Schoene, n2 a buyer's agent not only failed to provide her client with the sellers' property disclosure statement, the agent intentionally withheld the statement from her client. The court stated that the agent had a duty under Georgia Code Annotated § 10-6A-7(a)(2)(C) to disclose material facts of which she had actual knowledge. The court observed that one method by which the buyer is informed of defects in the property is the sellers' disclosure statement. The court found that this code section necessarily implied a duty on the agent's part to provide the disclosure statement to the buyer. The lower court had granted the agent's motion for summary judgment on the buyer's breach of contract and fraud claim against the agent. The court found that there was evidence that not only did the agent fail to provide the statements to the buyer, the agent intentionally withheld them from the buyer. This evidence raised a factual issue as to whether the agent breached the duty to disclose material facts affecting the property. n3

The court in Ikola also stated that the overriding duty of a buyer's agent under Georgia's Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transaction Act was to promote the buyer's interests. There was evidence that the agent attempted to force the buyer to proceed with an "as-is" sale and actively discouraged her from obtaining a professional inspection. The court stated that a jury could find from this evidence that Schoene acted adversely to the buyer's interests and thereby breached the duty to promote them. A jury could find from this evidence that the agent acted adversely to the buyer's interests and thereby breached the duty to promote them. The summary judgement on this issue was reversed. n4

Since most brokerage relationship acts impose a duty upon a single party agent to promote the interests of the agent's client, the logic applied by this Georgia court should be equally applicable to other jurisdictions which require that sellers of residential real estate provide prospective buyers with property disclosure statements.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Cf. Okla. Stat. tit. 59, § 858-354(B)(4)(f) which states that a single-party broker has a duty to disclose information pertaining to the property as required by that state's Residential Property Condition Disclosure Act. Section 858-353 imposes a similar duty upon Oklahoma transaction brokers.

(n2)Footnote 2. 264 Ga. App. 338, 340, 341 590 S.E.2d 750, 752 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 264 Ga. App. 338, 340, 341-342, 590 S.E.2d 750, 753 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 264 Ga. App. 338, 340, 342 590 S.E.2d 750, 753 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

49 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.25

§ 3.25 Duties with Respect to Earnest Money Deposits

Brokers must handle earnest money deposits in accordance with the guidelines promulgated by their state real estate commission. Even minor infractions of such guidelines can result in disciplinary action. For example, in one case the broker clipped a purchaser's $100 check to the file until it was returned to the purchaser approximately nine days later. The broker was found to have committed professional misconduct for failing to deposit the $100 into a trust account. The broker's license was suspended for one month. n1 Disciplinary actions are discussed in more detail in §§ 6.02 and 6.05, below .

Statutes and regulations addressing a broker's handling of earnest money must be carefully read and strictly followed. Brokers and their counsel should adopt a conservative interpretation of any applicable laws or regulations. n2

Earnest money deposits can pose problems for the broker when a sale does not go through as planned. In this situation, both parties may claim the earnest money deposit. Brokers who are entrusted with earnest money have a fiduciary duty to remain the neutral agent of both parties even though the broker may be the agent of one of the parties in the underlying transaction. Consequently, the broker cannot act contrary to the rights or interests of either of the parties in the earnest money. In re Appeal of Sheaffer n3 illustrates the trouble a broker can encounter if he or she fails to remain impartial. This case involved $2,000 earnest money in the sale of residential property. The funds had been placed in the escrow account of the buyer's broker. Pursuant to an inspection clause, the buyers were entitled to a return of their deposit if the sellers did not repair defects found in the house. In addition, the sales agreement contained a clause specifically addressing earnest money default. This provision stated in part:

If the closing does not occur because of Seller's default or because any condition of this contract is not satisfied or waived, Purchaser shall be entitled to the earnest money. If Purchaser defaults, Seller shall be entitled to the earnest money. The parties acknowledge, however, that the Broker will not make a determination as to which party is entitled to earnest money. Instead, the Broker shall release the earnest money from the trust account only (a) in accordance with the joint written instructions of Seller and Purchaser, or (b) in accordance with the following procedure: if the closing does not occur for any reason (including the default of either party), the Broker holding the earnest money may notify Seller in writing that the earnest money will be returned to Purchaser unless Seller makes a written demand for the earnest money within 20 days after the date of the Broker's notice. If the Broker does not receive a written demand from the Seller within the 20 day period, the Broker shall return the earnest money to Purchaser. If a written demand from Seller is received by the Broker within the 20 day period, the Broker shall retain the earnest money deposit until i) Seller and purchaser have settled the dispute; ii) disposition has been ordered by a final court order; or iii) the Broker deposits the earnest money with the court pursuant to applicable court procedures. n4

A dispute arose between the sellers and buyers over an acceptable radon level in the house and the buyers asserted a right to the earnest money under the failure-to-repair cancellation provision. The broker returned the earnest money to the buyers.

The sellers filed a formal complaint against the broker with the Ohio Department of Commerce of Real Estate (DRE) alleging that the broker breached his fiduciary duty to the sellers when he returned the earnest money to the buyers in a manner inconsistent with the terms of the earnest money default clause contained in the primary sales agreement. In the administrative hearing, it was determined that the broker believed he had the authority to return the earnest money deposit pursuant to the inspection addendum. The DRE found that when there was a conflict over who was entitled to earnest money, the dispute must be either mutually resolved or decided by a court of competent jurisdiction. It stated that "To maintain the status quo of funds held on deposit reflects a neutral position of a fiduciary awaiting ambiguous instructions." n5 The DRE held that any interpretation of the terms of a contract by a licensee that resulted in the release of earnest money deposit was misconduct. It suspended the broker's license for thirty days. n6

The appellate court affirmed the DRE's suspension of the broker. It stated that a broker owed duties to both the buyer and the seller when the broker accepts earnest money. The court stated:

Brokers who have been entrusted with earnest money have a fiduciary duty to remain the neutral agent of both parties even though the broker may also be the agent of one of the parties in the underlying transaction. Because the broker is to remain impartial with regard to the earnest money, the broker may not act contrary to the rights or interests of one of the parties in the earnest money. n7

The court also stated that the broker's return of the earnest money was in this case an act adverse to the sellers' rights. The broker's actions resulted in an abandonment of his fiduciary duty not to act adversely to the interest or rights of one or both of the parties. This conduct was found to be sufficient for DRE to base its finding of broker misconduct.

Selling brokers also often encounter difficulties when they fail to handle earnest money deposits as required by the listing agreement. Such a failure will typically constitute a breach of the contract with the seller and a breach of the broker's duty of loyalty. n8

Some sales agreements give the seller the right to declare a forfeiture of the purchaser's earnest money upon the purchaser's default. Under this type of contract, a broker who returns the earnest money to a defaulting purchaser without the seller's authorization has breached the fiduciary duty of loyalty owed to the principal and is thereby precluded from recovering his or her commission. n9

Negligence claims can arise with respect to a broker's handling of deposits. Clients may object to the broker's failure to deposit funds or the broker's failure to fully communicate information regarding the deposit. Even if the client objects to the broker's handling of the deposit, the client must still prove the elements of negligence in order to prevail in an action. For example, in Claire-Ann Co. v. Christenson & Christenson n10 the client was unable to prove proximate cause. The broker in this case received a deposit from a purchaser, but allegedly failed to deposit it in its escrow account in a timely manner. When this check was deposited it was returned for insufficient funds. The seller sued, claiming in part that the broker had been negligent in failing to timely deposit the check, account for the earnest money, and in failing to immediately notify the seller that the buyer's check had bounced. The court rejected this claim as the seller had failed to prove that the broker's actions were the proximate cause of the seller's injury as the seller failed to prove that sufficient funds existed in the drawer's account to cover the instrument at the time the broker received the check or at any time before its deposit. n11

In a New York case, n12 a seller was presented by a broker with a written purchase offer that provided for a deposit with the offer and the making of a down payment after the seller's acceptance. The broker did not tell the seller that the deposit, which ostensibly accompanied the offer, had not been paid. The seller signed the contract. While the broker then made efforts to obtain the down payment, the broker did not reveal to the seller that, after repeated requests, the down payment had not been provided. Thereafter, the purchaser, tendering the deposit for the first time, presented demands for material alterations in the contract, which demands were refused. The seller was then told that the deposit on the original offer had not been timely provided and that the down payment had not been tendered at all. Upon advice of the broker's attorney, the seller then made arrangements to sell the property to a third party. Those efforts were stalled when the original purchaser commenced an action for specific performance and filed a notice of pendency. That suit was finally resolved in favor of the seller, but only after sixteen months elapsed. The seller thereafter sued the broker for the damages sustained by the delay in the sale, claiming that it was the broker's negligence that induced the seller to enter into a defective contract with the original purchaser.

The court ruled that a real estate broker is under a duty to "exercise that degree of diligence, judgment, care, and skill ordinarily used by persons of common capacity, engaged in the same business." n13 The court stated that the broker was negligent in not informing the seller that the deposit, which was supposed to accompany the offer, had not been made. Had the seller been made aware of that fact, the seller could have avoided all of the ensuing difficulty by rejecting the offer and not signing it. Moreover, the broker was negligent in not promptly informing the seller that the down payment had not been paid following the seller's acceptance of the offer. Indeed, the purchaser's withholding of the down payment, coupled with the seller's apparent inaction, gave the purchaser the "courage to thereafter attempt to renegotiate." Thus, the broker's negligence set in motion the chain of events that led to the collapse of the transaction and the ensuing litigation between the seller and purchaser. n14 However, the seller was at fault in relying upon the advice of the broker's counsel and in not retaining his own attorney. Moreover, the seller did not attempt to enforce the original agreement and entered into the second contract knowing that it was fraught with danger. Thus, the court found the seller and broker equally at fault and allowed the seller to recover only half of the damages. n15

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Depugh v. Ohio Dept. of Commerce, Division of Real Estate, 128 Ohio App. 3d 528, 715 N.E.2d 622, 626 (Ohio App. 1998) , appeal dismissed, 83 Ohio St. 3d 1448, 700 N.E.2d 332 (1998) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Cf. Michigan Attorney General Opinion No. 7064, Oct. 27, 2000. Michigan requires that brokers deposit earnest money deposits within two banking days after a broker has been notified that an offer to purchase has been accepted by all parties. The Attorney General opined that a broker cannot accept an earnest money in the form of a check made payable to a third party such as a title insurance company. Since the broker cannot negotiate this type of check, the broker cannot comply with the legal obligation to timely deposit the check. The seller and buyer can agree that the earnest money deposit will be held in an escrow account maintained with a title insurance company, but the broker cannot facilitate or handle such a deposit.

(n3)Footnote 3. 116 Ohio App. 3d 98, 686 N.E.2d 1382 (1996) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 116 Ohio App. 3d 98, 102, 686 N.E.2d 1382, 1385 (1996) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 116 Ohio App. 3d 98, 108, 686 N.E.2d 1382, 1389 (1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 116 Ohio App. 3d 98, 108, 686 N.E.2d 1382, 1389 (1996) . The DRE's determination that brokers are to resist making legal determinations is based on Richard T. Kiko Agency, Inc. v. Ohio Dep't of Commerce, Div. of Real Estate, 48 Ohio St. 3d 74, 549 N.E.2d 509 (Ohio Ct. App. 1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 116 Ohio App. 3d 98, 110, 686 N.E.2d 1382, 1390 (1996) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Re/Max Realty 100 v. Basso, 667 N.W.2d 857, 860-861, 2003 WI App 146 (Wis. Ct. App. 2003) . Cf. Vicki Bagley Realty, Inc. v. Laufer, 482 A.2d 359, 364-365 (D.C. App. 1984) (brokers liable to seller for liquidated damages when brokers held onto checks which subsequently bounced and for failing to disclose information about the buyer's financial situation).

(n9)Footnote 9. See:

Illinois: United Investors, Inc. v. Tsotsos, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 180, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 477 N.E.2d 40, 43 (Ill. App. Ct. 1985) .

Kentucky: Crabtree v. Board of Trustees, 512 S.W.2d 311 (Ky. 1974) .

Maryland: Prince Georges Properties, Inc. v. Rogers, 275 Md. 582, 591-592, 341 A.2d 804, 809-810 (Md. 1975) .

Minnesota: Lake Co. v. Molan, 269 Minn. 490, 131 N.W.2d 734 (Minn. 1964) .

See generally Annot., Broker's Return of Deposit to Purchaser as Waiver of Right to Demand Commission from Seller, 69 A.L.R.2d 1244 (1960).

(n10)Footnote 10. 223 Mich. App. 25, 566 N.W.2d 4 (1997) .

(n11)Footnote 11. 223 Mich. App. 25, 566 N.W.2d 4, 7 (1997) . See also Früge v. Onob, Inc., No. 09-1028, 2010 La. App. LEXIS 357, at *10-*11 (La.App. 3 Cir. Mar. 10, 2010) (Broker had no duty to place the $ 10,000.00 into escrow absent a properly executed agreement to purchase or sell.).

(n12)Footnote 12. Murph & Fritz's Place Inc. v. Loretta, 112 Misc. 2d 554, 447 N.Y.S.2d 205, 1982 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3165 (1982) .

(n13)Footnote 13. 447 N.Y.S.2d at 207 .

(n14)Footnote 14. 447 N.Y.S.2d at 208 .

(n15)Footnote 15. 447 N.Y.S.2d at 209 .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

50 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.26

§ 3.26 Powers of Attorney

Though not a common occurrence, a seller may execute a power of attorney (usually a limited power) to allow the broker to attend closing and execute documents necessary to consummate the sale. In such a case, the broker could potentially face liability for failing to comply with duties imposed upon the seller. n1

Without an appropriate power of attorney, the broker should not have authority to enter into sales contracts on the seller's behalf. Most listing and commission agreements do not expressly authorize the broker to sell the property. Consequently, a sales contract signed only by the seller's broker should not be enforceable against the seller. n2

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Cf. Gilman v. Maine Mutual Fire Insurance Co., 830 A.2d 71, 2003 VT 55 (Vt. 2003) (Agent had a limited power of attorney at closing, giving him authority to execute and deliver on the seller's behalf documents required to consummate the sale. The trial court improperly granted the agent's motion to dismiss this claim. Under the power of attorney, it could have been argued that the agent had the responsibility to deliver to the homeowners the smoke detector certificate required by Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 9, § 2883.)

(n2)Footnote 2. See Bowling v. Pedzik, 302 A.D.2d 343, 344, 754 N.Y.S.2d 653, 654, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 800 (N.Y. App. Div. 2003) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

51 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.27

§ 3.27 Are Brokers Professionals for Malpractice Statutes of Limitations?

[1] What Is a Professional?

Many states provide a shorter statutes of limitation period for professional malpractice as opposed to other torts. In some cases a broker may argue that he or she is a professional covered by such a statute. It appears that the courts that have considered this issue are split as to whether a broker qualifies as a professional.

In addressing the issue of whether a real estate broker is a professional, it should be noted that courts in dicta often refer to brokers as "professionals." But these statements often use the word "professional" to indicate that the individual's livelihood is made as a broker rather than using the term "professional" as a state of art. n1 Though brokers and agents must obtain some education and training in order to become licensed, it is clear that the educational requirements are far less than that required of others such as attorneys, physicians, and veterinarians, who are widely accepted as being "professional."

Traditionally the term profession has been interpreted as encompassing a vocation requiring specialized knowledge and intensive preparation in skills as well as the scholarly principles underlying such skills. n2 In the context of a real estate appraiser, the Supreme Court of Florida examined the criteria for what makes a livelihood a profession in Garden v. Frier. n3 The Florida court stated that the requirements for professional status included the following requirements:

1. A profession is any vocation requiring at a minimum a four-year college degree before licensing in Florida is possible. There is no equivalency exception. n4
2. The only relevant criteria for determining if a vocation is a profession are those applicable to first-time applicants who have never been licensed in another state or nation to practice the particular vocation in question. n5
3. A profession comes into being on the date the appropriate licensing body requires a four-year college degree or a graduate degree of all future admittees. A profession ceases to exist on the date that any future admittees no longer need hold either a four-year undergraduate degree or graduate degree. n6

Policy dictates that prior admittees be grandfathered in as professionals. n7

4. A vocation is not a profession if there is any alternative method of admission that omits a required four-year undergraduate degree or graduate degree. n8

5. A vocation is not a profession if a state license is not required at all. n9

6. Persons are not considered a professional merely because they hold a four-year degree if they are not absolutely required to hold the degree as a condition of licensing. n10

This court stated that persons involved in more than one vocation fall under the professional malpractice statute only for acts performed while engaged in those vocations that actually qualify as professions. The professional malpractice statute of limitations statute also applies only if the alleged tortious conduct arose from the practice of a vocation qualifying as a profession at the moment in time when the conduct caused a completed injury or loss recognized under tort-law principles. n11

The issue of whether a broker is considered a professional is further muddled by the fact those discussing errors and omissions insurance carried by brokers often use the term "malpractice." n12 That term is most frequently applied to the negligent conduct of professionals such as lawyers and doctors.

Some courts have found that a broker has committed professional malpractice without even raising the issue of whether or not a broker can be considered a professional. n13 Courts also appear to confuse expectations of customer confidence and licensing requirements with being a professional. There are many vocations where the customer places trust in the licensed individual. And there are many vocations which take years of training to achieve the highest licensing status. However, most individuals will not argue that a cosmetologist or a licensed electrician is a professional. While it can be asserted that the increasing regulation of the real estate brokerage industry is pushing brokers toward the status of becoming a professional endeavor, n14 the majority view is that brokers are not professionals.

[2] Courts Holding that Brokers Are Not Professionals

Several jurisdictions have held that real estate brokers are not professionals. Frequently, these holdings have come in cases involving interpretations of zoning law, while cases that hold that brokers are professionals often occur in the context of a sales transaction. The Supreme Court of Nebraska has stated that the clear majority of judicial holdings that a real estate broker is not a professional are in cases involving interpretations of zoning law. n15 A Connecticut court has stated, "A plethora of decisions from other jurisdictions clearly indicates that a real estate broker simply cannot be categorized as a professional person." n16 Despite these statements, however, as is discussed in the next subsection, some courts have found that a broker is a professional or that a broker can commit malpractice.

In one of the earliest decisions to consider this issue, the Michigan Supreme Court stated:

Real estate agencies are no more professions than any other business agencies. A commission merchant, or an agent for the sale of any particular kind of personal property acts in an analogous capacity. Any one can assume and lay down such business at pleasure, and any one can conduct it in his own way on such terms and conditions as he sees fit to adopt. There is nothing in our laws which would enable any court to draw a line between such business agencies. They are not classed as professions by popular usage or by law. n17

Perhaps one factor that has made this issue less clear cut in modern times is that laypersons often treat brokers as though they were professionals which may influence some courts to accord brokers this status under the law.

Courts that have held that brokers are not professionals include the following:

California: Jones v. Robertson, 79 Cal. App. 2d 813, 816, 180 P.2d 929, 931 (1947) .

Connecticut: Dlugos v. Zoning Bd. of Appeals of Trumbull, 36 Conn. Supp. 217, 219-20, 416 A.2d 180, 182 (1980) .

Florida: Century Land Dev., L.P. v. Weits, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7031 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 30, 2009) . See also Moransais v. Heathman, 744 So. 2d 973, 976 (Fla. 1999) (a profession is any vocation requiring at a minimum a four-year college degree before licensing is possible in Florida), reh'g denied, 1999 Fla. LEXIS 1925 (Fla. Nov. 4, 1999) .

Idaho: Sumpter v. Holland Realty, Inc., 140 Idaho 349, 352, 93 P.3d 680, 683 (Idaho 2004) , reh'g denied, 2004 Ida. LEXIS 151 (Idaho July 12, 2004) (including real estate agents as rendering professional services would be inconsistent with legislative intent in establishing a definition of professional services).

Illinois: Village of Riverside v. Kuhne, 335 Ill. App. 547, 560, 82 N.E. 2d 500, 506 (1948) (real estate brokers are not professionals as that term is defined for purposes of Illinois zoning laws).

Iowa: Cummings v. Penn. Fire Ins. Co., 153 Iowa 579, 588, 134 N.W. 79, 82 (1912) (dicta) ("One who operates a real estate agency is not engaged in a professional employment.").

Massachusetts: Seaman v. Zoning Board of Appeals of Holliston, 340 Mass. 488, 489, 165 N.E.2d 97, 98 (1960) (zoning case).

Michigan: Pennock v. Fuller, 41 Mich. 153, 155, 2 N.W. 176, 177 (1879) ; Coats v. Uhlmann, 87 Mich. App. 385, 393 n. 7, 274 N.W.2d 792, 796 n. 7 (1978) (Michigan's malpractice statute of limitations included only licensed professionals as opposed to any licensed occupation).

Nebraska: Tylle v. Zoucha, 226 Neb. 476, 480-481, 412 N.W.2d 438, 441 (1987) .

New Hampshire: Hackett v. Gale, 104 N.H. 90, 92, 179 A.2d 451, 453 (1962) (zoning case); Hancock v. Concord, 111 N.H. 413, 414, 285 A.2d 791, 792 (1971) .

New Jersey: Capman v. Long Beach Township, 95 N.J. Super. 523, 526, 231 A.2d 852, 853 (1967) (zoning case).

[3] Courts Holding that Brokers Are Professionals or Can Commit Malpractice

It appears that a minority of courts have held that a broker is either a professional or can commit malpractice. Such holdings may benefit brokers when the statute of limitations for malpractice is shorter than the general statutory period for other torts. In such a case, a broker may escape any potential liability due to the running of the shorter statute of limitations period. Courts that have held that a broker can commit malpractice do not always address the issue of whether a broker can be a professional. Instead, these courts seem to assume that a broker is a professional.

Courts that have held that a broker can either be considered a professional or can commit malpractice include the following:

Arizona: Morley v. J. Pagel Realty & Insurance, 27 Ariz. App. 62, 65-66, 550 P.2d 1104, 1107-1108 (1976) ("Our holding today is a narrow one ... Having achieved ... the right to prepare any and all instruments incident to the sale of real property, including promissory notes, real estate brokers and salesmen also bear the responsibility and duty of explaining to the persons involved the implications of these documents. Failure to do so may constitute real estate malpractice.").

Georgia: Pennington v. Braxley, 224 Ga. App. 344, 345 n. 2, 480 S.E.2d 357, 359 n. 2 (Ga. Ct. App. 1997), cert. denied 1997 Ga. LEXIS 487 (Ga. May 2, 1997) (real estate brokers and salespersons are licensed professionals subject to malpractice claims); Allen v. ReMax North Atlanta, 213 Ga. App. 644, 646-647 n. 2, 445 S.E.2d 774 (Ga. Ct. App. 1994), cert. denied 1994 Ga. LEXIS 1113 (Ga. Oct. 17, 1994) (same).

Indiana: Bartlett v. Pugh (In re Pugh), 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 2991, at *9-*15 (Bankr. S.D. Ind. Nov. 6, 2008) (applying Indiana law); Craig v. ERA Mark Five Realtors, 509 N.E.2d 1144, 1149 (Ind. Ct. App. 1987) (zoning case, Ind. Code § 34-1-2-2(1), the two-year statute of limitations for legal malpractice claims, applied to a claim of broker negligence).

Wyoming: Hulse v. BHJ, Inc., 2003 WY 75, 71 P.3d 262, 268-269 (Wyo. 2003) (Claims of professional negligence included claims asserted under Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 33-28-303(c) for negligent misrepresentation against real estate professionals by non-client buyers.); Rawlinson v. Greer, 2003 WY 28, 64 P.3d 120, 125 (Wyo. 2003) (A claim against a Realtor(R) has always been a claim for professional negligence. Realtors(R) are licensed or certified professionals within the scope of Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 1-3-107(a), and the two-year limitation period applies to claims against Realtors(R).).

[4] Statutory Requirements When Suing a Broker

When filing an action against a real estate licensee, plaintiffs must comply with any statutory requirements. As an example, Colorado Revised Statutes § 13-20-602 requires that a plaintiff suing a "licensed professional," must file a certificate of review within sixty days of the service of the complaint as to any claim against a licensed professional based upon allegations of professional negligence since such a claim will require expert testimony to establish a prima facie case. The certificate's purpose is to demonstrate that the plaintiff has consulted with a person who has expertise in the area and that the expert consulted has concluded that the claim does not lack substantial justification. n18 A failure to file a certificate of review, when one is required, will result in the dismissal of the underlying claims. n19 Such a certificate must be filed when the claim involves negligence based upon the alleged professional negligence of a licensed professional. n20 This statute requires proof of professional negligence as a predicate to recovery, whatever the claim's formal designation may be. n21

In a case involving a plaintiffs' claim alleging that seller's broker breached a statutory duty of disclosure owed to prospective buyers under the provisions of Colorado Revised Statutes § 12-61-804(3)(a), the court found that no certificate of review was required as that statute limited a seller's broker's duty to disclose to adverse facts as are "actually known" by the broker. Consequently, to establish this claim, the plaintiffs only needed to prove that broker had actual knowledge of adverse material facts pertaining to the physical condition of the residence and that the broker failed to disclose such facts to plaintiffs. No expert testimony was necessary to establish a statutory standard involving a particular broker's actual knowledge. n22

In some jurisdictions a dissatisfied buyer or seller who decides to sue a broker may be faced with multiple statutes of limitations that each apply to particular types of actions. Plaintiffs must heed these statutes and any case law interpreting their applications. If the jurisdiction has a statute of limitations covering suits seeking to recover the use, rents, and profits of real property, a suit against a broker for negligent performance of his or her duties may not fall under such a statute, but may instead be covered by a statute addressing torts and negligence. n23

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Hurney v. Locke, 308 N.W.2d 764, 768 (S.D. 1981). This court considered allegations of fraud and breach of fiduciary duty arising from a listing agreement and a subsequent sale. Clearly one can have fiduciary duties without being a professional. However, the court stated: "A real estate agent is a licensed professional holding himself out as trained and experienced to render a specialized service in real estate transactions. Clients rely on the agent's expertise and expect the agent to act in their best interests. For these reasons, the relationship between real estate agent or broker and the principal is confidential and fiduciary. (citations omitted)"

(n2)Footnote 2. See Kuntz v. Muehler, 1999 N.D. 215, 603 N.W. 2d 43, (N.D. 1999) , quoting from Jorgensen v. State National Bank & Trust Company, 255 Neb. 241, 583 N.W.2d 331, 334-35 (Neb. 1998) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 602 So. 2d 1273 (Fla. 1992) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 602 So. 2d 1273, 1275 (Fla. 1992) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 602 So. 2d 1273, 1275 (Fla. 1992) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 602 So. 2d 1273, 1276 (Fla. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 602 So. 2d 1273, 1276 n. 4 (Fla. 1992) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 602 So. 2d 1273, 1276 (Fla. 1992) .

(n9)Footnote 9. 602 So. 2d 1273, 1276 (Fla. 1992) .

(n10)Footnote 10. 602 So. 2d 1273, 1276 (Fla. 1992) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Garden v. Frier, 602 So. 2d 1273, 1276 (Fla. 1992) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Cf. Loken v. Century 21- Award Properties, 36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 272 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 683, 688 (Cal. Ct. App. 1995) , review denied, 1995 Cal. LEXIS 5944 (Cal. Sept. 21, 1995) , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1113, 116 S. Ct. 912, 133 L. Ed. 2d 843 (1996) (under Cal. Ins. Code § 11589.5, insurers that provide malpractice insurance for real estate licensees cannot exclude from coverage liability stemming from the breach of duty arising under Cal. Civil Code § 2079 et seq.)

(n13)Footnote 13. See Lakeside, Inc. v. Demetz, 621 N.E.2d 1149, 1150-51 (Ind. Ct. App. 1993) . Throckmartin v. Century 21 Top Realty, 2010 WY 23, 226 P.3d 793, 805 (Wyo. 2010) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Fisher v. Kahler, 2002 S.D. 30, 641 N.W.2d 122,126 (S.D. 2002) ("[T]hese statutes go far toward making the occupation of realtor a professional one."). Cf. Menzel v. Morse, 362 N.W.2d 465, 473 (Iowa 1985) ("A cursory examination of the Real Estate Manual issued by the Iowa Real Estate Commission discloses a determined effort to lift the real estate business to a professional status.").

(n15)Footnote 15. Tylle v. Zoucha, 226 Neb. 476, 412 N.W.2d 438, 439 (1987) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Dlugos v. Zoning Bd. of Appeals of Trumbull, 36 Conn. Supp. 217, 416 A.2d 180, 182 (1980) .

(n17)Footnote 17. Pennock v. Fuller, 41 Mich. 153, 155, 2 N.W. 176, 177 (1879) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See State v. Nieto, 993 P.2d 493, 502 (Colo. 2000) ; Baumgarten v. Coppage, 15 P.3d 304, 306 (Colo. Ct. App. 2000) . Colo. Rev. Stat. § 13-20-602.

(n19)Footnote 19. See Baumgarten v. Coppage, 15 P.3d 304, 306-307 (Colo. Ct. App. 2000) . Kelton v. Ramsey, 961 P.2d 569 (Colo. App. 1998) ; Colo. Rev. Stat. § 13-20-602(4).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Baumgarten v. Coppage, 15 P.3d 304, 306-307 (Colo. Ct. App. 2000) .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Martinez v. Badis, 842 P.2d 245, 251 (Colo. 1992) ; Baumgarten v. Coppage, 15 P.3d 304, 307 (Colo. Ct. App. 2000) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Baumgarten v. Coppage, 15 P.3d 304, 307 (Colo. Ct. App. 2000) .

(n23)Footnote 23. See Lakeside, Inc. v. Demetz, 621 N.E.2d 1149, 1150-1151 (Ind. Ct. App. 1993) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

52 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.28

§ 3.28 Duties Owed to Third Party Holders of Security Interests

Actions against brokers typically involve either a seller or buyer as the plaintiff. However, other parties can be affected by a real estate transaction. Generally, most jurisdictions require that licensees deal honestly and fairly with all parties in the sale transaction. This duty is not confined to the seller and buyer, but is also owed to third parties in the transaction such as holders of security interests. The extent of the duty owed to third parties is determined by weighing a number of factors, including the extent the transaction was intended to affect the third party, the foreseeability of harm, the degree of certainty that the third party would suffer injury, the moral blame attached to the broker's conduct, and the policy of preventing future harm. n1

A third party holding a security interest in the property being sold should be protected if the lien is properly recorded in a timely manner. Issues of duty towards a security interest holder can arise when the recording is imperfect or the security interest is not recorded. When a broker knows of an imperfectly recorded security interest or an unrecorded security interest, the broker has a duty to disclose the security interest. One court has stated, "The imposition of a duty on a realtor to disclose a known unrecorded lien interest is supported by standards already existing in the industry." n2

A California court considered a broker's duty toward the holder of an unrecorded security interest. The court stated that the most important step in determining if a broker owes a duty of care to a third party is to examine whether a reasonable person would have foreseen an unreasonable risk of harm to the third person and whether in view of such risk the broker exercised ordinary care under the circumstances. In the case before the court, the broker knew about the unrecorded security interest, knew that the seller has fallen on financial hard times, knew or should have known that the sale would not satisfy the subject outstanding indebtedness, and knew that there was a significant risk that the third party's security would be destroyed if the sale went through without disclosure of this security interest. The court found that the broker had a duty to disclose to the buyer the existence of the unrecorded third deed of trust or inform the lienholder of the impending escrow. n3

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Norman I. Krug Real Estate Investments, Inc. v. Praszker, 220 Cal. App. 3d 35, 42, 269 Cal. Rptr. 228, 230-231 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) , rehearing denied, 220 Cal. App. 3d 1226A, 1990 Cal. App. LEXIS 605 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Norman I. Krug Real Estate Investments, Inc. v. Praszkner, 220 Cal. App. 3d 35, 42, 269 Cal. Rptr. 228, 231 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) , rehearing denied, 220 Cal. App. 3d 1226A, 1990 Cal. App. LEXIS 605 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) citing the Code of Ethics of the National Association of Realtors(R).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Norman I. Krug Real Estate Investments, Inc. v. Praszkner, 220 Cal. App. 3d 35, 43, 269 Cal. Rptr. 228, 231 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) , rehearing denied, 220 Cal. App. 3d 1226A, 1990 Cal. App. LEXIS 605 (Cal. Ct. App. 1990) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

53 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.29

§ 3.29 Duties and Obligations Arising from Lock Boxes

A lock box allows a key to be left on the premises in a locked container so that brokers and agents can enter the property without the necessity of the seller or the seller's broker being present to open the door. Lock box authorization is routinely used in listing agreements with sellers. Liability issues regarding lock boxes can arise when a third party improperly accesses the lock box contents in order to burglarize or vandalize the home.

Lockboxes are typically obtained through and regulated by the local Realtors(R) association. Realtors(R) are expected to abide by the rules and regulations promulgated by the association pertaining to the use of the lockboxes. Realtors(R) who violate such rules and regulations may be subject to fines and suspension from the multiple listing service. n1

Agreements regarding lock boxes often contain an exculpatory provision stating that the lock box owner will be held harmless from any claims resulting from negligent acts of the lock box owner's employees. Listing agreements and lock box authorization typically provide similar exculpatory provisions to protect the broker regarding the lock box. n2

While exculpatory clauses are generally valid, it is a well established rule of construction that a contract provision exempting one from liability for his or her negligence will never be implied but must be clearly and explicitly stated. n3

Adloo v. H.T. Brown Real Estate, Inc. n4 considered the construction of exculpatory provisions found in the listing agreement and the lock box authorization. The listing broker received a telephone call from a man who identified himself as an agent with another broker. Without verifying the bona fides of the caller, his identity and affiliation with the named broker, the broker's staff member gave the caller the combination for the lock box. According to the records of the Maryland Real Estate Commission, no real estate license had been issued in the name given by the caller, and the number given by the caller was incorrect. Subsequently, property totaling nearly $ 40,000 was taken from the sellers' home. n5

The pertinent clauses stated in part:

Neither REALTOR nor his agents or sub-agents are responsible for vandalism, theft or damage of any nature whatsoever to the property, nor is REALTOR responsible for the custody of the property, its management, maintenance, upkeep or repair.

SELLER further acknowledges that neither Listing or Selling BROKER nor their agents are an insurer against the loss of personal property; SELLER agrees to waive and releases BROKER and his agents and/or cooperating agents and brokers from any responsibility therefore [sic].

The court found that these provisions were ambiguous and did not exculpate the broker from liability with respect to the burglary. With respect to the provision, the court stated, "Because it does not clearly, unequivocally, specifically, and unmistakably express the parties' intention to exculpate the respondent from liability resulting from its own negligence, the clause is insufficient for that purpose." n6 One sentence recited that the respondent was not an insurer against the loss of the petitioners' personal property. The other sentence relieved the broker of the responsibility for any such loss. The court found that the clause could logically be interpreted as applying only to those situations in which, without negligence on the broker's part, a person to whom the house was being shown stole the sellers' property. The court found that there was nothing in the clause that would suggest a different or broader intent. The court concluded that the exculpatory clause did not address thefts occurring as a result of the broker's negligence. n7

In another case, the multiple listing service (MLS) which owned the lock box knew of burglaries that had occurred during the previous year in its area where the lock box was used in committing the crime. The MLS board made a deliberate decision to withhold information from its member brokers concerning other lock box burglaries. A seller whose home was subsequently burglarized sued several defendants including the MLS. The court held that since the MLS corporation's alleged liability was predicated on its own official actions as a corporation rather than on the negligence of individual employees, the MLS was not shielded from liability by the indemnity clause. n8 With respect to the negligence issue, the court also found that a factual issue existed as to whether the MLS had breached a duty to the sellers by failing to exercise due care in maintaining the integrity of its box system and preventing unauthorized access to them. n9 In this same case, with respect to the broker, the court reversed a summary judgment in the broker's favor. It found that the trial court erred in concluding as a matter of law that the broker owed no duty of care to the seller. n10

Ohio's high court considered whether a seller's final judgment against an agent for stealing personal property by using the lock box could be paid out of the Ohio Real Estate Recovery Fund (the "Fund"). The court held that this judgment was not the type of judgment that could be paid from the Fund because the judgment was not obtained on the grounds of conduct associated with an act or transaction of a broker or salesman. Even though it was clear that the agent obtained entry to the seller's house by using the key in the lock box and that the agent garnered the information necessary to do so through his job as a real estate salesperson, there was nothing in the record to suggest that the burglary had anything to do with the agent's job as a real estate salesperson. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Cf. ND-Sell, Inc. v. Greater Springfield Board of Realtors, Inc., 224 S.W.3d 623, 628-29 (Mo. Ct. App. 2007) . A Realtors(R) association suspended and fined a Realtor(R) member for giving a client her lock box key to tour homes when the Realtor(R) was not present. The court affirmed the association's imposition of these sanctions under its rules.

(n2)Footnote 2. Cf. Adloo v. H.T. Brown Real Estate, Inc., 344 Md. 254, 257, 686 A.2d 298, 300 (Md. 1996) . The provision in the listing agreement involved in this case stated in part: "Neither REALTOR nor his agents or sub-agents are responsible for vandalism, theft or damage of any nature whatsoever to the property, nor is REALTOR responsible for the custody of the property, its management, maintenance, upkeep or repair."

(n3)Footnote 3. See:

Missouri: Poslosky v. Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., 349 S.W.2d 847, 850 (Mo. 1961) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 344 Md. 254, 257, 686 A.2d 298, 300 (Md. 1996) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 344 Md. 254, 258-259, 686 A.2d 298, 300 (Md. 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 344 Md. 254, 267, 686 A.2d 298, 305 (Md. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 344 Md. 254, 267-268, 686 A.2d 298, 305 (Md. 1996) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Moore v. Harry, Norman, Inc., 199 Ga. App. 233, 236, 404 S.E.2d 793, 795-796 (Ga. Ct. App. 1991) , cert. denied, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 696 (Ga. May 15, 1991) , cert denied 1991 Ga. LEXIS 764 (Ga. May 15, 1991) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Moore v. Harry, Norman, Inc., 199 Ga. App. 233, 235, 404 S.E.2d 793, 795 (Ga. Ct. App. 1991) , cert. denied, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 696 (Ga. May 15, 1991) , cert denied 1991 Ga. LEXIS 764 (Ga. May 15, 1991) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Moore v. Harry, Norman, Inc., 199 Ga. App. 233, 235, 404 S.E.2d 793, 795 (Ga. Ct. App. 1991) , cert. denied, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 696 (Ga. May 15, 1991) , cert denied 1991 Ga. LEXIS 764 (Ga. May 15, 1991) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Harbeitner v. Superintendent, Ohio Department of Commerce, Division of Real Estate, 77 Ohio St. 3d 281, 282, 1997 Ohio 270, 673 N.E.2d 1309, 1310 (Ohio 1997) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

54 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.30

§ 3.30 Broker's Duty with Respect to Open Houses and Property Showings

Early decisions did not establish real estate brokers as the possessor of property for purposes of imposing liability for injuries incurred by those touring property offered for sale. n1 However, the trend appears to be to impose liability upon real estate brokers and agents holding open houses as though they were the possessor of the property. For example, in Hopkins v. Fox & Lazo Realtors, n2 the Supreme Court of New Jersey held that a real estate broker has the duty, through reasonable inspection and warning, to ensure the safety of potential home buyers and visitors who tour an open house. Other courts have also held that brokers may be liable for injuries incurred by prospective purchasers touring properties for sale. n3

A licensee's liability with respect to open houses or showings of properties is governed by premises liability law. n4 The key factor in assessing whether the licensee will be liable for injury suffered by a third party is the licensee's control over the premises. In a case of first impression for an Indiana court, the court declined to impose, on real estate agents who do not control a premises, a duty to inspect properties for sale and to warn prospective buyers of dangerous conditions they discover. n5 However, this court held that a broker has a duty to warn a prospective buyer of a latent defect of which the broker is aware. n6

In Anderson v. Wiegand, n7 a visitor to an open house sued the homeowners, the agent and the broker for a fall she incurred when she slipped on ice. The homeowners had cleared the sidewalks the day before the fall and left town, allowing their agent to conduct the open house. The court affirmed summary judgment granted in their favor, finding that because the sidewalk had been cleared of snow the day before and there had been no new snow, the homeowners' conduct had been reasonable as a matter of law. This court stated that pursuant to the general rule that an employer of an independent contractor is not liable for the contractor's negligence, it found that homeowners were not liable for any negligence of the real estate agent. n8 However, the summary judgment granted in favor of the agent and the broker was reversed. It had been asserted that the ice the visitor slipped on was a result of the snow melting during the day and then refreezing. The court stated that there was a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the agent took reasonable steps within a reasonable time after the forces of nature reasserted themselves and melted snow began freezing as ice on the sidewalk where the visitor fell. n9

A Delaware court has found no precedent or support for imposing a similar duty upon a buyer's agent with respect to the condition of a property being shown to a prospective buyer. This court stated that the affirmative duty of a seller's real estate agent to take reasonable care to inspect the premises and either make them safe or warn invitees of any dangerous condition rests on the theory that the seller's agent is in possession of the property which that agent has undertaken to sell. This court concluded that as a matter of Delaware law, a buyer's real estate agent has no duty for the safety of the buyer while on a seller's property. n10

The reason for requiring that a broker holding an open house or showing a property warn of nonobvious or unreasonable dangers is to provide prospective purchasers with the opportunity to decide whether or not to accept the invitation to view the property or alternatively to protect themselves against the danger if they accept the invitation to view the property. Thus, a broker who warned the prospective purchaser of the presence of a vicious dog fulfilled her duty; the broker did not have a duty to secure or remove the dog before showing the property. n11

Other courts have found that real estate licensees showing a house under a listing agreement with the owner are either possessors of the property or are acting on behalf of the possessors of the property and, therefore, may be held liable for injuries sustained by customers inspecting the property. n12 However, while touring property individuals are expected to exercise the prudence the ordinarily careful person would use in a like situation. A failure to exercise this level of care may result in the injured person receiving no damages for injuries suffered at an open house. n13

Placing a for sale sign on property sometimes results in third parties being on the premises without the broker or agent being present for an official showing. A Maryland court has considered a case involving injury to the plaintiffs when they toured property which had a for sale sign posted. The court found that the plaintiffs were trespassers and held that the broker was not liable to the plaintiffs. The court stated that it would be unreasonable to suggest that every time an owner or real estate company placed a sale sign outside a house, the owner or company was "inviting" people to come in. The court affirmed the trial court which found that the plaintiffs were trespassers, or at best, bare licensees, and therefore, were owed only the duty to refrain from willful or wanton misconduct. A for sale sign did not constitute an implied invitation to enter and inspect the premises or that if one were posted in that case that the prospective purchasers would be deemed to be invitees. n14

A Massachusetts court came to a similar holding. In that case, the property owner had listed a house for sale with a broker. A sign was placed in the front window. The plaintiffs contacted the broker and obtained the house keys, inspected the property, and returned the keys. When the plaintiffs returned to the house and stood on the back door platform, the railing gave way and injuries occurred. The court stated:

The building was closed so far as the reception of prospective buyers was concerned. This condition of the property, even though it was on the market for sale, would not constitute an invitation to the general public, or even to those who might be desirous of becoming owners, to enter upon the premises for the purpose of inspecting them without any consent or any further action by the owner. The situation is entirely different from that of a storekeeper, the maintenance of whose shop creates a continuous invitation during the usual business hours to all members of the public who desire to trade with him. Here, the owner retained the right to select the persons who should go upon the land and examine the house. Even though the plaintiffs were still considering the purchase of the property when they made the second visit, they did not acquire the status of invitees in the absence of some conduct upon the part of the defendant which induced them to make this visit. n15

Likewise, a Georgia court considered a case where in response to a newspaper advertisement and without first contacting the broker, the plaintiff fell down the stairs in a dark hallway as she attempted to inspect the premises. In upholding the trial court's dismissal of the complaint, the court stated the advertisement contained no express invitation to the public to inspect any of the premises listed in the advertisement, and that candor required the view that the advertisement held out no implied invitation. The advertisement merely called the reader's attention to the fact that certain unfurnished apartments were available for leasing. Without an express invitation, the advertisement did not carry with it the implication that the reader was invited to inspect the premises without first communicating with the broker.

n16

Razink v. Krutzig, n17 presented an unusual case involving a real estate agent's sign. This plaintiff in this tort action was a speeding, drunken, trespassing snowmobiler who was injured when he ran into the sign. The court found that the agent and other defendants were not protected by a recreational-land-use statute n18 aimed at providing immunity to a landowner who had given written or oral permission for the use of his or her land. Since the plaintiff was a trespasser, there was no immunity since no permission had been given. However, the court found that the defendants were entitled to summary judgment on the ground that there was no evidence that they breached a duty to the snowmobiler with regard to the sign as there was no evidence that the defendants had any knowledge that the sign was placed in the path of an established snowmobile trail.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Christopher v. McGuire, 179 Or. 116, 121, 169 P.2d 879, 881 (Or. 1946) (refusing to attribute duty to broker showing sole customer residence in which neither party had ever been previously present); Turner v. Carneal, 156 Va. 889, 895, 159 S.E. 72, 74 (Va. 1931) (real estate agent is not in the same position as the owner or occupant of the premises).

(n2)Footnote 2. 132 N.J. 426, 445, 625 A.2d 1110, 1119 (1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Coughlin v. Harland L. Weaver, Inc., 103 Cal. App. 2d 602, 605-606, 230 P.2d 141, 144 (Cal. Ct. App. 1951) ; Jarr v. Seeco Constr. Co., 35 Wash. App. 324, 330, 666 P.2d 392, 396 (Wash. Ct. App. 1983) . See generally Norris, Torts--Hopkins v. Fox & Lazo Realtors : Imposing a Duty Upon Real Estate Brokers to Warn of Reasonably Discoverable Defects When Conducting Open Houses--Is the Broker Akin to a "Possessor"?, 25 U. Mem. L. Rev. 807 (1995).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Masick v. McColly Realtors, Inc., 858 N.E.2d 682, 685-86 (Ind. Ct. App. 2006) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Masick v. McColly Realtors, Inc., 858 N.E.2d 682, 687 (Ind. Ct. App. 2006) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Masick v. McColly Realtors, Inc., 858 N.E.2d 682, 687 (Ind. Ct. App. 2006) . See also Campbell v. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11290, at *14 (S.D. Ind. Feb. 13, 2009) (same).

(n7)Footnote 7. 223 Mich. App. 549, 567 N.W.2d 452 (Mich. App. 1997) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 223 Mich. App. 549, 567 N.W.2d 452, 454-455 (Mich. App. 1997) .

(n9)Footnote 9. 223 Mich. App. 549, 567 N.W.2d 452, 456 (Mich. App. 1997) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Johnson v. Chupp, 2003 Del. Super. LEXIS 39, at *7 (Del. Super. Ct. Feb. 11, 2003) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Miller v. Fickett, 48 Mass. App. Ct. 654, 724 N.E.2d 354. 356-357 (2000) , aff'd 432 Mass. 1028, 738 N.E.2d 352, 2000 Mass. LEXIS 704 (2000) .

See also Gibson v. Rezvanpour, 268 Ga. App. 377, 601 S.E.2d 848 (Ga. Ct. App. 2004) , cert. denied, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 904 (Ga., Oct. 12, 2004) (A prospective buyer was bitten by the sellers' dog. The court affirmed the dismissal of the claims against the brokers and agents as there was no evidence that any of the agents and brokers had any knowledge that the dogs were dangerous. Under Georgia law, there is a presumption that dogs are harmless. There was no authority suggesting that real estate professionals should not be allowed to rely on that presumption.).

(n12)Footnote 12. See:

California: Coughlin v. Harland L. Weaver, Inc., 103 Cal. App. 2d 602, 230 P.2d 141, 144 (Cal. Ct. App. 1951) .

Tennessee: Smith v. Inman Realty Investment Co., 846 S.W.2d 819, 823 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1992) , rehearing denied, 1992 Tenn. App. LEXIS 781 (Tenn. Ct. App. Sept. 30, 1992) (showing of a house under construction).

Washington: Jarr v. Seeco Constr. Co., 35 Wash. App. 324, 666 P.2d 392, 395 (Wash. Ct. App. 1983) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Parker v. Welborn, 236 Ga. App. 344, 511 S.E.2d 917, 918-919 (Ga. Ct. App. 1999) (plaintiff fell down stairs at an open house, she mistook a doorway leading to the basement for a bathroom door).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Wells v. Polland, 120 Md. App. 699, 714-718, 708 A.2d 34, 42-44 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1998) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Wilkie v. Randolph Trust Co., 316 Mass. 267, 55 N.E.2d 466, 467-468 (Mass. 1944) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Mortgage Commission Servicing Corp. v. Brock, 60 Ga. App. 695, 4 S.E.2d 669, 672 (Ga. Ct. App. 1939) .

(n17)Footnote 17. 746 N.W.2d 644 (Minn. 2008) .

(n18)Footnote 18. The statute at issue was Minn. Stat. § 604A.25.

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

55 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.31

§ 3.31 Broker Duties Under Consumer Protection Laws

Brokers may be liable under consumer protection laws for misrepresentations that they make. n1 In one Illinois case, n2 it was alleged that a broker misrepresented the interest rate on a mortgage that the purchasers were to assume and also misrepresented the length of time the property had been on the market. The court noted that, under applicable Illinois precedents, the purchasers could not recover under the common law without proving that the broker knew that the statements were false. The court declared, however, that the misrepresentation of the interest rate was actionable under consumer-fraud prevention legislation. The representation as to the length of time the property had been on the market was not actionable as there was no claim that the purchasers were misled into believing that they were getting a greater value than the value they ultimately received. n3

A violation of a consumer protection law has also been found to occur in connection with an earnest money agreement. In Edmonds v. John L. Scott Real Estate, Inc. n4 a dispute arose as to whether a purchaser was in default. Without conducting an investigation, the broker unilaterally determined that default had occurred. The broker then disbursed half the deposit to the seller and half to itself. This conduct was found to be a violation of Washington's Consumer Protection Act. The broker was also found to have been negligent in preparing the earnest money agreement. With respect to earnest money agreements, this court stated: "Licensed real estate brokers and salespersons, when completing earnest money agreements, are required to comply with the standard of care of a practicing attorney." n5 The broker in this case was also found to have breached its fiduciary duty to the purchaser.

Washington's Consumer Protection Act found at Washington Revised Code § 64.06.060 reflects the intent of the legislature to preclude agents and brokers from liability under the Consumer Protection Act for fraudulent concealment arising directly from the agents' and brokers' conduct in completing the seller disclosure statement. n6 However, it is possible for a broker or agent's fraudulent concealment which occurs independently from a seller disclosure violation, to constitute a violation of the Consumer Protection Act. n7

Maryland's Consumer Protection Act explicitly exempts real estate salespersons and brokers. n8 Consequently, a legally sufficient claim cannot be stated against a broker or salesperson under this Act. n9

Partly as a result of the consumer protection statutes, the courts have been more inclined to hold brokers liable for innocent misrepresentations, the general theory being that the purchaser is hurt and has suffered damages regardless of whether or not the broker knew the representation was false. n10

A Massachusetts court has found that the failure of a seller's broker to submit a purchase offer made by a buyer's broker would support a cause of action filed by the buyer's broker against the seller's broker for violation of Massachusetts General Laws chapter 93A, § 11. n11 Similarly, a Louisiana court has found a listing agent liable under the Louisiana Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Law n12 for failing to submit a prospective buyer's offer to the seller. n13

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g.:

Delaware: Young v. Joyce, 351 A.2d 857, 859 (Del. 1975) (court affirmed judgment against brokers in consumer fraud action for misrepresenting that the basement of the house did not have a water leakage problem).

Hawaii: Cieri v. Leticia Query Realty, Inc., 80 Haw. 54, 68, 905 P.2d 29, 43 (Haw.1995) (broker allegedly failed to disclose plumbing problems, court affirmed trial court's judgment in favor of buyers holding that buyers qualified as "consumers" who committed money in a personal investment and therefore had standing to bring an action under Haw. Rev. Stat. ch. 480).

Illinois: Perkins v. Collette, 179 Ill. App. 3d 852, 856-857, 128 Ill. Dec. 707, 534 N.E.2d 1312, 1315 (1989), where the court held that a broker who told purchasers that they could build upon a parcel of property, and who had himself previously applied for a building permit which was denied, committed fraud in violation of the Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act; therefore the purchaser had a cause of action for rescission of the sales contract.

New Jersey: Gennari v. Weichert Co. Realtors, 148 N.J. 582, 608-610, 691 A.2d 350, 355-357 (N.J. 1997) (the court upheld the imposition pursuant to the New Jersey Consumer Fraud Act of strict liability and treble damages upon a real estate broker for material misrepresentation of fact to real estate purchasers).

Tennessee: Stanfill v. Mountain, 301 S.W.3d 179, 194-95 (2009), reh'g denied, 2010 Tenn. LEXIS 19 (Tenn., Jan. 15, 2010); Fayne v. Vincent, 301 S.W.3d 162, 173 (Tenn. 2009).

Vermont: Vastano v. Killington Valley Real Estate & Contemporary Assocs., 2010 VT 12, 2010 Vt. LEXIS 14 (2010); Vastano v. Killington Valley Real Estate, 182 Vt. 550, 929 A.2d 720, 2007 VT 33 (2007).

See also Carter v. Gugliuzzi, 168 Vt. 48, 716 A.2d 17, 21-22 (Vt. 1998) (broker was a seller involved in commerce within meaning of the Vermont Consumer Fraud Act).

(n2)Footnote 2. Beard v. Gress, 90 Ill. App. 3d 622, 46 Ill. Dec. 8, 413 N.E.2d 448 (1980).

(n3)Footnote 3. 413 N.E.2d at 450-452.

(n4)Footnote 4. 87 Wash. App. 834, 942 P.2d 1072 (1997), review denied 134 Wash. 2d 1027, 958 P.2d 313 (1998). The dispute involved a wet basement.

(n5)Footnote 5. 87 Wash. App. 834, 853, 942 P.2d 1072, 1082 (1997), review denied, 134 Wash. 2d 1027, 958

P.2d 313, 1998 Wash. LEXIS 314 (1998) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Svendsen v. Stock, 143 Wash. 2d 546, 555, 23 P.3d 455, 460 (Wash. 2001) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Svendsen v. Stock, 143 Wash. 2d 546, 558-559, 23 P.3d 455, 461 (Wash. 2001) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Md. Code Ann., Com. Law § 13-104.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Dyer v. Criegler, 142 Md. App. 109, 120, 788 A.2d 227, 234 (2002) , aff'd sub nom., Dyer v. Otis Warren Real Estate Co., 371 Md. 576, 810 A.2d 938 (2002) .

(n10)Footnote 10.

Washington: Mersky v. Multiple Listing Bureau of Olympia, Inc., 73 Wash. 2d 225, 233, 437 P.2d 897, 901 (Wash. 1968) .

(n11)Footnote 11. *See Saab v. Keenan, 2003 Mass. App. Div. 100, 102, 2003 Mass. App. Div. LEXIS 38, at *7-10 (Mass. Ct. App. June 10, 2003). See also NRT New Eng., Inc. v. Indiciani, 2009 Mass. App. Div. 186, 2009 Mass. App. Div. LEXIS 51 (2009) (steering buyer interested in the plaintiff's property to another seller's property violated the Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act).

(n12)Footnote 12. This law is found at La. Rev. Stat. § 51:1401, et seq.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Harris v. Poche, 930 So. 2d 165 (La. Ct. App. 2006) , writ denied, 938 So. 2d 74 (La. 2006) . The prospective buyers were entitled to damages measured as the difference between the purchase price of the home in November 2001, and the appraised value of the home at the time of trial.

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

56 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.32

§ 3.32 Duties and Liabilities Arising from Broker Referrals of Third Parties

Brokers and agents are often called upon to recommend other professionals such as appraisers, home inspectors, and builders. n1 While normally passing on a referral should not generate liability on the broker's part, n2 this result may change if the broker receives compensation for the referral or if the broker becomes involved in the subsequent transaction.

In Sparks v. Re/Max Allstar Realty, Inc., n3 the buyers discovered termite infestation and damage in their home shortly after they purchased it, even though the home had been inspected prior to purchase. The buyers sued the broker (among other defendants) claiming that the broker had breached its duty to them by recommending a termite control company. When the buyers were informed of the need for a termite inspection prior to closing, one of the buyers sought advice from the agent. The agent mentioned three companies, including the one used by the buyers. The buyers argued that the agent breached her fiduciary duty to them as their real estate agent by suggesting that the company they used could adequately inspect and, if necessary, treat the house they intended to purchase. The court affirmed a grant of summary judgment in the broker's favor. The court stated that making a recommendation did not amount to a guarantee of performance. After observing that professionals make recommendations to their clients, the court found that by making the recommendation, the agent was not accepting any responsibility for the work that the selected company would perform nor providing a guarantee. n4

One court has considered the following specific issue: "Who, in the triangular relationship between a real estate agent, a builder, and a landowner, owes that landowner a duty to disclose that the realtor's recommendation of the contractor may have been influenced by the receipt of a finder's fee from the builder?" n5 In dictum, this court found that the agent had an affirmative duty to disclose to the client any fees the broker was paid for referring those clients to particular builders. The court stated that the agent's duty to disclose referral fees was settled "black-letter" law. n6

West Virginia's high court has held that while a broker bears no responsibility to conduct an independent investigation of a latent defect, when a broker volunteers to secure an inspection of the premises (or some part of the premises such as the heating system), by retaining on behalf of the buyer a third party to conduct the inspection, then that broker may be held liable to the buyer for damages if the broker in retaining said third party is negligent in the selection and retention of the third party and if such negligence proximately causes harm to the buyer. This court qualified its ruling by stating that it did not impose upon a real estate broker the affirmative duty to conduct a comprehensive inquiry into the credentials of an individual hired as an independent contractor. Where the independent contractor selected is a licensed, reputable individual or firm, for instance, the broker is not obligated to engage in a personal inquiry into the credentials or training of the contractor. However, where the exercise of reasonable diligence would disclose facts demonstrating that the contractor was clearly incompetent for the particular task contemplated, a reasonably prudent broker should not retain the contractor. n7

A Texas court addressed allegations that agents were negligent for selecting a non-bonded inspector to do a termite and dry rot inspection. The court affirmed a directed verdict for the broker on the ground that the home buyer had failed to show that the agents' failure to select a bonded inspector proximately caused the damage the buyers sustained. n8

There is at least some support for the proposition that if a broker represents the buyer, the broker has a duty to assist in procuring a good, qualified inspection. It would behoove a buyer's agent to recommend an inspection by a competent inspector or other professional (such as an engineer or architect) particularly if the sales contract will contain an "as is" clause. In this situation, the contract should be contingent upon the receipt of a satisfactory inspection report. One commentator has asserted that the inclusion of an "as is" clause in a sales agreement sets up a liability trap for a buyer's agent since the inclusion of such a clause conflicts with the agent's duty of loyalty to his or her client. n9

The general rule is that if one person contracts with a competent person to do work, not in itself unlawful or intrinsically dangerous in character, and exercises no control over the work contracted for, that person cannot be liable for the negligence of the independent contractor or that contractor's servants in the performance of the work. n10 There are exceptions to this rule, however. Some jurisdictions have allowed a cause of action to proceed for negligent hiring, reasoning that negligently securing the services of an independent contractor falls within one of the severally typically recognized exceptions to the rule that an employer is not liable for the actions of the employer's independent contractor. n11

The tort of negligent hiring can come into play since brokers often engage an inspector at the behest of the prospective purchaser to determine that the premises is structurally sound or to determine that a component of the premises (e.g., the furnace) is functioning properly. n12

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Some jurisdictions require that the licensee assist the buyer in obtaining a home inspection. See Waddles v. Lacour, 950 So. 2d 937, 943 (La. Ct. App. 2007) , rehearing denied, 2007 La. App. LEXIS 538 (Mar. 21, 2007) and 2007 La. App. LEXIS 540 (Mar. 21, 2007) writ denied, 959 So. 2d 496 (La. 2007) and 959 So. 2d 498 (La. 2007) (Although La. Rev. Stat. § 9:3897(A)(6) requires the agent to help the buyer arrange for a property inspection, this provision does not require the agent to arrange the property inspection when the client does not want one.). See also Crandall v. Grbic, 36 Kan. App. 2d 179, 190, 138 P.3d 365, 374-75 (2006) (Licensees have a duty to recommend professional inspections, but they do not have a duty to perform a home inspection for their clients.).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Carleton v. Winter, 901 A.2d 174, 178-79 (D.C. 2006) (Agent's recommendation of a home inspector was not a misrepresentation to the buyers nor was it a violation of the D.C. Consumer Protection Procedures Act.).

(n3)Footnote 3. 55 S.W.3d 343 (Ky. Ct. App. 2000) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 55 S.W.3d 343, 349 (Ky. Ct. App. 2000) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Petenbrink v. Superior Home Builders, Inc., 1999 Del. Super. LEXIS 461, at *4 (Del. Sup. Ct. 1999) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Petenbrink v. Superior Home Builders, Inc., 1999 Del. Super. LEXIS 461, at *4 (Del. Sup. Ct.

1999) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Thomson v. McGinnis, 195 W. Va. 465, 472, 465 S.E.2d 922, 929 (W. Va. 1995) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Voye v. Ragan, 616 S.W.2d 673, 675 (Tex. Civ. App. 1981) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Moore, The Buyer's Agent and the "As Is" Clause: A Liability Trap?, 27 Real Est. L.J. 374 (1999).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Thomson v. McGinnis, 195 W. Va. 465, 465 S.E.2d 922, 928 (W.Va. 1995) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Chapman v. Mutual Service Casualty Ins. Co., 35 F. Supp. 2d 699, 706-707 (E.D. Wis. 1999) , applying Wisconsin law; Payne v. Lee, 686 F. Supp. 677, 679 (E.D. Tenn. 1988) , aff'd without opinion, 872 F.2d 1027 (6th Cir. 1989) ; Sullivan v. St. Louis Station Assocs., 770 S.W.2d 352, 354-355 (Mo. Ct. App. 1989) ; Thomson v. McGinnis, 195 W. Va. 465, 465 S.E.2d 922, 929 (W. Va. 1995) . See generally Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 411. This section requires that physical harm result from the negligence.

(n12)Footnote 12. Cf. Heller v. D. W. Fish Realty Co., 93 Conn. App. 727, 731, 890 A.2d 113, 117 (2006) . (The agent hired an unqualified individual to perform a well inspection for buyers. The agent was found to have breached the parties(contract, committed negligence in the performance of her duties and the agent had violated the Connecticut Unfair Trade Practices Act.); Mango v. Pierce-Coombs, 370 N.J. Super. 239, 256, 851 A.2d 62, 72 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 2004) (buyer unsuccessfully sued agent for negligent hiring with respect to a party hired to inspect a home's septic system).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

57 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.33

§ 3.33 Brokers Acting in Several Capacities

Brokers sometimes attempt to act in several different capacities in one transaction. For example, a broker who is also a builder may sell buildings that he or she constructed. The best advice for a broker or agent who is attempting to act in several different capacities is to always comply with the high standards imposed upon agents and brokers. To do otherwise is to risk suspension or revocation of their broker or agent's license. If compliance is not possible, the broker or agent should reconsider wearing several hats in the same transaction.

In White v. Department of Business and Professional Regulation n1 the court affirmed the revocation of a broker's license for failing to deposit funds in an escrow account in accordance with a sales contract. The broker contended that he was not acting in his capacity as a real estate broker in this transaction, but rather as a builder and a seller of a lot when he accepted monies from purchasers to begin construction. The contract provided that the broker was acting as a broker and that the deposit would be held in escrow in his realty company. The court stated that while the broker wore several "hats" in the transaction, the evidence supported the conclusion that one of the hats worn was that of a licensed real estate broker. n2

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 715 So. 2d 1130 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1998) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 715 So. 2d 1130, 1131 (Fla. App. 1998) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

58 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.34

§ 3.34 Negligent Hiring of Agents and Salespersons

A majority of jurisdictions recognize the direct liability of an employer to third parties who are injured by unfit, incompetent, or unsuitable employees. n1 The origin of the doctrine making an employer liable for negligent hiring, as well as negligent retention, arose out of the common law fellow-servant law which imposed a duty on employers to select employees who would not endanger fellow employees by their presence on the job. n2 This concept was expanded to include the recognition of a duty to exercise reasonable care for the safety of members of the public. n3

The concept of direct employer liability for negligent hiring is recognized by Restatement (Second) of the Law of Agency § 213 which states in part:

A person conducting an activity through servants or other agents is subject to liability for harm resulting from his conduct if he is negligent or reckless ... (b) in the employment of improper persons or instrumentalities in work involving risk of harm to others.

Liability is predicated on the employer's negligence in placing a person with known propensities or propensities that should have been discovered by reasonable investigation, in an employment position in which, because of the circumstances of the employment, it should have been foreseeable that the hired individual posed a threat of injury to others. n4 Direct liability can be imposed on the employer for the employee's criminal acts, such as assaults, since the basis of the liability is the employer's negligence in selecting or supervising the employee. n5

The torts of negligent hiring, negligent supervision, and negligent retention usually involve employees. Typically, agents and salespersons are independent contractors of their brokers. This can raise an issue of whether the broker can be liable for these torts since those who hire independent contractors generally are not liable for the negligence of the independent contractor. However, liability can occur under the particular risk doctrine or on a theory that the defendant was negligent in hiring the contractor. n6

In Pruitt v. Pavelin, n7 a broker was found liable on a theory of negligent hiring. The salesperson the broker had hired had previously forged a signature, had been convicted of passing bad checks, and had lied to the company about obtaining a license, and was unlicensed.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Svacek v. Shelley, 359 P.2d 127, 130-131 (Alaska 1961) ; Evan v. Hughson United Methodist Church, 8 Cal. App. 4th 828, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 748, 753 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied; Connes v. Molalla Transport System, 831 P.2d 1316, 1320-1321 (Colo. 1992) (en banc); Petrik v. New Hampshire Insurance Company, 379 So.2d 1287, 1290-1291 (Fla. Dist Ct. App. 1979) , cert. denied, 400 So. 2d 8 (Fla. 1981) ; Joiner v. Mitchell County Hospital Authority, 125 Ga. App. 1, 186 S.E.2d 307, 309 (Ga. Ct. App. 1971) , aff'd, 229 Ga. 140, 189 S.E.2d 412 (Ga. 1972) ; Tindall v. Enderle, 162 Ind. App. 524, 528, 320 N.E.2d 764, 767 (Ind. Ct. App. 1974) ; Godar v. Edwards, 588 N.W.2d 701, 709 (Iowa 1999) ; Murray v. Modoc State Bank, 181 Kan. 642, 313 P.2d 304, 309-312 (Kan. 1957) ; Oakley v. Flor-Shin, Inc., 964 S.W.2d 438, 442 (Ky. Ct. App. 1998) ; Copithorne v. Framingham Union Hospital, 401 Mass. 860, 520 N.E.2d 139, 142-143 (Mass. 1988) ; Ponticas v. K.M.S. Investments, 331 N.W.2d 907, 911 (Minn. 1983) ; Di Cosala v. Kay, 91 N.J. 159, 450 A.2d 508, 516 (N.J. 1982) ; Pleasants v. Barnes, 221 N.C. 173, 19 S.E.2d 627, 629 (N.C. 1942) ; Coath v. Jones, 277 Pa. Super. 479, 419 A.2d 1249, 1250 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1980) ; Welsh Manufacturing v. Pinkerton's, 474 A.2d 436, 438-439 (R.I. 1984) ; Stone v. Hurst Lumber Co., 15 Utah 2d 49, 386 P.2d 910, 911-912 (Utah 1963) ; Haverly v. Kaytec, Inc., 169 Vt. 350, 738 A.2d 86, 91 (Vt. 1999) ; J. v. Victory Tabernacle Baptist Church, 236 Va. 206, 372 S.E.2d 391, 394 (Va. 1988) ; Carlsen v. Wackenhut Corp., 73 Wash. App. 247, 868 P.2d 882, 886 (Wash. App. Ct. 1994) , review denied, 124 Wash. 2d 1022, 881 P.2d 255 (1994) . See also Restatement (Second) Agency § 213. See generally Patrinelis, Annot., Liability of Employer, Other than Carrier, for a Personal Assault Upon Customer, Patron, or Other Invitee, 34 A.L.R.2d 372 (1954) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Loftus, Employer's Duty to Know Deficiencies of Employees, 16 Clev.-Mar. L. Rev. 143, 145 (1967).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Ponticas v. K.M.S. Investments, 331 N.W.2d 907, 911 (Minn. 1983) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Ponticas v. K.M.S. Investments, 331 N.W.2d 907, 911 (Minn. 1983) . See also Connes v. Molalla Transport System, Inc., 831 P.2d 1316, 1320 (Colo. 1992) (en banc) (tort of negligent hiring is based on the principle that a person conducting an activity through employees is subject to liability for harm resulting from negligent conduct in the employment of improper persons in work involving risk of harm to others).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Wegner v. Delly-Land Delicatessen, Inc., 270 N.C. 62, 153 S.E.2d 804, 807 (N.C. 1967) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See generally Zamore, Business Torts, § 5.34.

(n7)Footnote 7. 141 Ariz. 195, 201-203, 685 P.2d 1347, 1353-1355 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1984) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

59 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.35

§ 3.35 Valuation Opinions

Real estate brokers and agents routinely suggest listing prices for properties that they list. Such activities clearly involve an estimate of a property's fair market value. It is more common for a real estate seller to rely on the broker or agent in determining a listing price than for a seller to hire an appraiser to determine a listing price. Some laws or regulations recognize that offering this type of advice to their clients is routinely done by brokers and agents. For example, Mississippi Code § 73-34-5 (2), which is part of a chapter regarding appraisers, allows a real estate salesperson, in the ordinary course of business, to offer an opinion as to the "price of real estate for the purpose of a prospective listing or sale" but such opinion may not be referred to as an appraisal, no compensation may be charged for the service and the opinion may not be used to establish a property value. n1

Surprisingly, there appears to be little litigation involving brokers or agents offering their advice as to the fair market value of property. Duhl v. Nash Realty, Inc. n1.1 is one such case wherein an agent advised home sellers on what the lowest possible price was that their home would bring in a quick sale. As a result they listed the home for sale with the agent and her broker for $167,500, and they purchased another home. The net proceeds from the old home would be the only source of equity for the purchase of the new home. The old home did not sell and eventually they listed it for sale with another broker at a price of $144,000. This price was subsequently dropped to $137,000. They sued the broker and agent for fraud, negligence, breach of contract, and violation of Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Practices Act. As of the date of their amended complaint, they had received no offers on their old home.

The court found that there was no breach of contract. The court held that the plaintiff's remedy for the error in valuing the home lay in tort. With respect to the fraud claim the court found that even though the representations were an opinion as to value, the complaint had stated a cause of action for fraud because the brokers knew that the home buyers were relying on this opinion when they purchased the new home. n2 The home buyers had also stated a cause of action under the Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act since the complaints for common-law fraud were based on intentional misrepresentation of present facts. n3

Some jurisdictions are willing to permit a valuation opinion in an eminent domain proceeding from a real estate licensee (broker, agent, or salesperson) who is not licensed as a real estate appraiser. n4

The use of a real estate broker or agent's valuation opinion outside of the context of determining a listing or offer price is often limited. In a case involving a divorce, the trial court rejected the wife's "appraisal" which had been prepared by a licensed real estate agent who was not also a licensed real estate appraiser. In affirming the rejection of this testimony, the court stated, "Estimating the fair market value of property is the specialized function of licensed appraisers. ... While experienced real estate brokers undoubtedly know a great deal about property values, the specialized scope of the realtors' profession is not property appraising and may well be beyond the legal authorization afforded the profession."
n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. This language is also found in Rule IV (A) of the Mississippi Real Estate Commission.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. 102 Ill. App. 3d 483, 57 Ill. Dec. 904, 429 N.E.2d 1267 (Ill. App. 1982) . See also Century Land Dev., L.P. v. Weits, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7031, at *11 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 30, 2009) , applying Florida law (real estate agent had a duty to provide property valuation information using skill, care and diligence).

(n3)Footnote 2. 102 Ill. App. 3d 483, 57 Ill. Dec. 904, 429 N.E.2d 1267, 1274-1275 (Ill. App. 1982) .

(n4)Footnote 3. 102 Ill. App. 3d 483, 57 Ill. Dec. 904, 429 N.E.2d 1267, 1277 (Ill. App. 1982) .

(n5)Footnote 4. See McGaffic v. Redevelopment Authority of Newcastle, 732 A.2d 663, 673 (Pa. Cmwlth.) , appeal denied, 560 Pa. 733, 745 A.2d 1226 (1999) and 561 Pa. 663, 747 A.2d 903 (1999) ; King v. West Penn Power Co., 946 A.2d 184, 188 (Pa. Commw. 2008) , appeal denied, 598 Pa. 776, 958 A.2d 1049 (2008) .

(n6)Footnote 5. Katner v. Katner, 28 So. 3d 566, 572 (La. App. 2009) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

60 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.36

§ 3.36 Unauthorized Practice of Law May Constitute Negligence

It has been recognized that a violation of Article 17 of the National Association of Realtors(R) Code of Ethics, n1 which bans the unauthorized practice of law by Realtors(R), is evidence upon which a trier of fact may find negligence. n2 Because of the interrelationship between negligence and breach-of-contract issues, it has also been concluded that a breach of this standard of professional conduct would also establish a violation of an agent's duties under the listing agreement with the broker. n3

The Supreme Courts of Nebraska n4 and Washington n5 have ruled that a broker could be found negligent for defects in the preparation of a real estate contract. In the Nebraska case, the boundary line between the seller's land and that of a neighbor was unclear. When the sellers went to sell their land, they informed the broker that they wanted the neighbors to have the right to obtain an area containing a driveway and a certain grove of trees. The listing and contract, prepared by the broker, simply provided for the sale to a third party of "40 acres more or less." Much litigation thereafter ensued over boundary disputes, and the court held that the broker had breached his duties in the drafting and performance of the real estate contract. n6

In the Washington case, the broker prepared a sales contract that varied, in many respects, from the instructions given him. When the variations were discovered, the seller and purchaser agreed to rescind the contract and the seller brought an action against the broker to recover the commission. The court declared that "[i]f the negligence, ignorance, stupidity, incompetence or fraud of a broker causes the rescission of a sale negotiated by the broker, the principal is entitled, among other items of damage, to recover the commission paid." n7

A more limited rule was developed by the Supreme Court of Oklahoma in Ellis v. Hollis. n8 There, a real estate broker was retained to sell a farm property. Through the broker's services, the farmer/seller was able to satisfy existing mortgages on the property for a discount. A purchaser was found who, according to the seller, was supposed to pay $7,200 for the farm ($4,000 in cash from the sale of the purchaser's property and a purchase money mortgage for the balance). However, the broker drafted a sales contract that contained terms that allegedly were different from those agreed upon and that were ambiguous, indefinite and uncertain. The farmer confronted the purchaser, who agreed to rescission. Thereafter, the broker sued the farmer for the value of the services rendered in negotiating the settlement of the mortgages. The farmer counterclaimed, contending that the broker's negligence prevented the sale of the farm for

$7,200 and that the farm could not thereafter be sold for more than $5,200. The court sustained the dismissal of the counterclaim. It held that the farmer's inability to sell his property to the prospective purchaser was not "the natural and proximate result" of the allegedly negligent preparation of a real estate contract by the broker. The court noted that the inability to sell the farm at the stated price resulted from the agreement between the seller and the purchaser to cancel the contract. n9 A dissenting judge, citing the Washington decision discussed above, argued that if the broker had negligently prepared the contract and thus frustrated the sale, the broker should be held liable for the damage. n10

Another Washington court has stated with respect to earnest money agreements: "Licensed real estate brokers and salespersons, when completing earnest money agreements, are required to comply with the standard of care of a practicing attorney." n11

Brokers should approach the drafting of any document with care and when uncertain they should consult an attorney. Brokers should also take care that their conduct does not constitute the unauthorized practice of law. n12

Brokers should exercise particular care and consider consulting their own counsel when the property is described by referencing its street address even though less than the entire parcel is being sold. Should the buyer assert that they are purchasing the entire parcel, the broker may find himself or herself a defendant in a negligence action. n13

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Article 17 of the National Association of Realtors(R) Code of Ethics states: "The Realtor shall not engage in activities that constitute the unauthorized practice of law and shall recommend that legal counsel be obtained when the interest of any party to the transaction requires it."

(n2)Footnote 2. See Menzel v. Morse, 362 N.W.2d 465, 473 (Iowa 1985) .

Cf. Mattielligh v. Poe, 57 Wash. 2d 203, 204, 356 P.2d 328, 329 (Wash. 1960) ("When a broker undertakes to practice law, he is liable for negligence.").

(n3)Footnote 3. See Crutchley v. First Trust and Savings Bank, 450 N.W.2d 877, 880 (Iowa 1990) , rehearing denied.

(n4)Footnote 4. Wisnieski v. Harms, 188 Neb. 721, 199 N.W.2d 405 (Neb. 1972) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Mattielligh v. Poe, 57 Wash. 2d 203, 356 P.2d 328 (Wash. 1960) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Wisnieski v. Harms, 188 Neb. 721, 199 N.W.2d 405, 408 (Neb. 1972) .

See also Tetherow v. Wolfe, 223 Neb. 631, 392 N.W.2d 374 (Neb. 1986) , the Supreme Court of Nebraska held that a real estate broker was negligent in representing the interests of his seller/principal where the broker's agent had a buyer execute an improper form of contract in the sale of property. The seller had retained the broker for the purpose of selling his property on an "all cash" basis. The broker's agent had the buyer execute a sales contract which included a paragraph making the sale subject to the buyer's ability to obtain a mortgage from a designated bank. The broker's agent assured the seller that, although the contract contained a mortgage contingency clause, the deal was still all cash and there would be no problems with the contract form. The broker's agent further informed the seller that a "correct form" would be prepared at a later time. The seller, in reliance upon the statements of the broker's agent, executed the contract with the mortgage contingency clause intact. The buyer was unable to obtain a mortgage and subsequently demanded and received from the seller the return of the buyer's down payment. The seller instituted an action against the broker claiming that the broker's agent was negligent in using the wrong form of contract and in representing to the seller that the contract permitted the sellers to hold the purchasers to an unconditional cash sale. The court held in favor of the seller, awarding him damages equal to the "benefit of the sale which would otherwise have been realized but for the fact that the purchaser was not obliged to complete the purchase." The court, in awarding attorney fees to the seller, stated:

One who through the tort of another has been required to act in the protection of his interests by bringing or defending an action against a third person is entitled to recover reasonable compensation for loss of time, attorney fees and other expenditures thereby suffered or incurred in the earlier action.

(n7)Footnote 7. Mattieligh. v. Poe, 57 Wash. 2d 203, 356 P.2d 328, 330 (Wash. 1960) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 1965 OK 15, 398 P.2d 832 (Okla. 1965) .

(n9)Footnote 9. 398 P.2d at 834 .

(n10)Footnote 10. 398 P.2d at 837 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Edmonds v. John L. Scott Real Estate, Inc, 87 Wash. App. 834, 853, 942 P.2d 1072, 1082 (Wash. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Ch. 7 below for a discussion of the unauthorized practice of law by real estate brokers. See generally Goudey, Too Many Hands in the Cookie Jar: The Unauthorized Practice of Law by Real Estate Brokers, 75 Or. L. Rev. 889 (1996); Lee, The Limited Ability of Real Estate Brokers to Prepare Contracts, 69 N.Y. St. B. J. 32(Mar./Apr. 1997).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 123, 563 S.E.2d 775, 778-779 (Va. 2002) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

61 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.37

§ 3.37 Exculpatory Clauses

As a general rule, courts have long recognized that, subject to certain exceptions, parties may contract that one shall not be liable for his or her negligence to another. n1 Exculpatory clauses are invalid and will not be enforced in three situations:

- (1) when a party to the contract attempts to avoid liability for intentional conduct or harm caused by reckless, wanton, or gross behavior;
- (2) when the contract results from grossly unequal bargaining power; and
- (3) when the transaction is one adversely affecting the public interest. n2

In determining whether an exculpatory clause affects the public interest, courts often consider the following six criteria:

- (1) Whether the clause concerns a business of a type generally thought suitable for public regulation.
- (2) Whether the party seeking exculpation is engaged in performing a service of great importance to the public, which is often a matter of practical necessity for some members of the public.
- (3) Whether the party holds himself or herself out as willing to perform this service for any member of the public who seeks it, or at least for any member coming within certain established standards.
- (4) Whether as a result of the essential nature of the service, in the economic setting of the transaction, the party invoking exculpation possesses a decisive advantage of bargaining strength against any member of the public who seeks the services.
- (5) Whether in exercising a superior bargaining power the party confronts the public with a standardized adhesion contract of exculpation, and makes no provision whereby a purchaser may pay additional reasonable fees and obtain protection against negligence.

(6) Whether as a result of the transaction, the person or property of the purchaser is placed under the control of the seller, subject to the risk of carelessness by the seller or the seller's agents. n3

An exculpatory clause in a home inspector's contract with a customer has been found to be against public policy and hence unenforceable. n4

The broker may argue that an exculpatory clause within the purchase agreement protects the broker from any liability when the broker is sued by the buyer. n5 If the buyer can prove that the purchase agreement was fraudulently induced, an exculpatory clause in the purchase agreement should not protect the broker since such clauses are only enforceable when they are knowingly and willingly made and are free from fraud. n6

One court has held that an exculpatory clause in a form purchase contract would not protect the buyer's agents. The court concluded that these release provisions did not immunize the buyer's brokers from liability because the clause did not appear to be a negotiated term. n7 If a jurisdiction requires that exculpatory provisions be a negotiated term in order for the provision to be enforceable, the fact that the provision is boilerplate in a pre-printed form will weigh against a conclusion that the provision was negotiated. n8

In another case, the purchase contract provided in part that: "Buyer hereby expressly waives any and all claims for damages because of any representation made by any person whomsoever other than contained in this agreement" The court found that this did not protect the seller's brokers from a misrepresentation regarding the size of the land sold. The court stated that the fallacy of the broker's argument that this clause protected him from liability was that the specific representation relied upon by the buyers was that the property contained 7.8 acres and that such a representation was typed in the very same agreement containing the exculpatory clause. The court stated that the language of the purported exculpatory clause did not relieve the seller's brokers from written recitals contained in the agreement itself. n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Crawford v. Buckner, 839 S.W.2d 754, 756 (Tenn. 1992) , application denied, 1994 Tenn. LEXIS 213 (Tenn. June 27, 1994) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Adloo v. H.T. Brown Real Estate, Inc., 344 Md. 254, 260, 686 A.2d 298, 301 (Md. 1996) .

See also Crawford v. Buckner, 839 S.W.2d 754, 760 (Tenn. 1992) , application denied, 1994 Tenn. LEXIS 213 (Tenn. June 27, 1994) (finding an exculpatory clause in a residential lease contract to be contrary to public policy); Olson v. Molzen, 558 S.W.2d 429, 432 (Tenn. 1977) (holding an exculpatory clause in a contract for medical treatment is contrary to public policy).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Russell v. Bray, 116 S.W.3d 1, 5-6 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2003) , appeal denied, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 822 (Tenn. Sept. 2, 2003) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Russell v. Bray, 116 S.W.3d 1, 8 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2003) , appeal denied, 2003 Tenn. LEXIS 822 (Tenn., Sept. 2, 2003) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Laeroc Waikiki Parkside, LLC v. K.S.K. (Oahu) Ltd. Partnership, 115 Haw. 201, 221-27, 166 P.3d 961, 981-87 (Haw. 2007) (nonrecourse provision is a type of exculpatory clause). A nonrecourse provision in a hotel sales agreement limited the buyer's damages for contract default to the sale proceeds. Since the buyer did not raise contentions that implicated fraud, a criminal act, or willful misconduct, the buyer's fiduciary duty claims were precluded by the nonrecourse provision.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Dawson v. Hummer, 649 N.E.2d 653, 660 (Ind. Ct. App. 1995) . See also Allen v. Overturf, 234 Ark. 612, 616, 353 S.W.2d 343, 345 (Ark. 1962) (If a party is guilty of fraud in making a contract, he cannot exculpate himself from the consequences of his own wrong by a provision in writing that his fraudulent oral representations shall not be used as evidence against him in a case in which fraud and deceit is the gist of the cause.).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Aranki v. RKP Investments, Inc., 194 Ariz. 206, 209-210, 979 P.2d 534, 537-538 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Evans v. Singer, 518 F. Supp. 2d 1134, 1138 (D. Ariz. 2007) (applying Arizona law).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Carrel v. Lux, 101 Ariz. 430, 442, 420 P.2d 564, 576 (Ariz. 1966) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

62 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.38

§ 3.38 Integration, Merger and Disclaimer Clauses

An integration clause is a specific provision stating in substance that the document embodies the parties' entire agreement. n1 A sample integration clause is shown below:

The parties have incorporated in this Agreement their entire understanding. No oral statement or prior written matter extrinsic to this Agreement shall have any force or effect. The parties are not relying upon, and specifically herein repudiate, any representations other than those expressly set forth herein. All prior agreements between the parties, whether written or oral, are hereby revoked and held for not. n2

Many real estate sales contracts contain such a clause. n3 These clauses are also referred to as merger clauses. n4

Disclaimer clauses, though not the same as an integration or merger clause, have a similar effect. A disclaimer clause essentially provides that the buyer and seller have not relied on the broker's advice or representations and that they waive any claims against the broker arising out of such statements. n5

The effect of merger and disclaimer clauses on pre-contractual misrepresentations poses significant questions of public policy. There are two prevailing views on the effect of these clauses. One view is based on the sanctity of the right to contract, and holds that a party is bound by a specific disclaimer even if the contract was fraudulently obtained. The other view is based on the proposition that fraud vitiates all contracts. Under this view, a party to a contract is not bound by a disclaimer if it was fraudulently obtained. n6

The majority of courts hold that merger and disclaimer clauses do not preclude actions for fraudulent misrepresentations. n7 However, a handful of courts have allowed such clauses to bar even fraudulent misrepresentation claims when the disclaimer clause was specifically tailored. n8

Some jurisdictions hold that a seller's broker may enforce the integration clause and any other exculpatory provision in the written agreement between a seller and a buyer. n9 However, the general rule is that an integration clause which negates the existence of any representations not incorporated into the contract may not be used to escape liability for misrepresentations. n10

In one case a court found that an entire agreement clause in the sales contract barred a home buyer from asserting a malpractice claim against the seller's real estate agent based on the agent's failure to disclose that the home was infested with bats. However, the court noted that in certain circumstances the seller's real estate agent could be liable to the buyer if the agent was aware of defects in the property but failed to disclose them. n11 However, another court has held that a disclaimer and merger clause in a sales contract did not bar the buyer's action against her agent since the agent's duties were found in the Georgia Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transaction Act. n12

An entire agreement clause in a sales contract does not equate to an exculpatory clause. Exculpatory clauses limit liability, generally for negligent acts, while entire agreement clauses generally concern contractual liability, and provide that all oral representations have merged into the written contract. While an entire agreement provision may, in some instances, result in a waiver of claims, the parties ultimately control its effect by reducing all vital terms of their contract to writing. Furthermore, a party signing a contract containing an entire agreement clause is not absolutely bound by it. If that party later learns of a fraud that induced the contract but is not reflected in the contract's terms, the party has the choice of rescinding the contract and suing on the fraud or affirming the contract and being bound by its terms. The entire agreement clause will bar the fraud claim only in the latter instance. n13

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., E.G. L. Gem Lab Ltd. v. Gem Quality Inst., Inc., 90 F. Supp. 2d 277, 303 (S. D. N.Y. 2000) aff'd, 4 Fed. Appx. 81, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 2542 (2d Cir. 2001) . See also Tiburzi v. Department of Justice, 269 F.3d 1346, 1354 (Fed. Cir. 2001) , citing Black's Law Dictionary 812 (7th ed. 1999) (an integration clause is a contractual provision stating that the contract represents the parties' complete and final agreement and supersedes all informal understandings and oral agreements relating to the subject matter of the contract).

(n2)Footnote 2. This clause is taken from Roll ex rel. Ralph D. Kaiser Co. v. Rothenberg (In re Rothenberg), 203 B.R. 827, 829-830 (Bankr. D.C. 1996) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cf. Tiburzi v. Department of Justice, 269 F.3d 1346, 1354 (Fed. Cir. 2001) ("All well-drafted contracts contain integration clauses.").

(n4)Footnote 4. See Billingham v. Dornemann, 55 Mass. App. Ct. 166, 175, 771 N.E.2d 166, 173 (Mass. App. Ct. 2002) . See also Tusch Enterprises v. Coffin, 113 Idaho 37, 44 n. 3, 740 P.2d 1022, 1029 n. 3 (Idaho 1987) (a merger clause has been defined as a provision in a contract to the effect that the written terms may not be varied by prior or oral agreements because all such agreements have been merged into the written document).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Ikola v. Schoene, 264 Ga. App. 338, 340, 341 590 S.E.2d 750, 752 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079, 1084 (Wyo. 1999) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Bates v. Southgate, 308 Mass. 170, 31 N.E.2d 551, 558 (1941) ; Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079, 1084 (Wyo. 1999) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 184 N.Y.S.2d 599, 157 N.E.2d 597, 598 (N.Y. 1959) ; LaFazia v. Howe, 575 A.2d 182, 186 (R.I. 1990) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Blumenstock v. Gibson, 811 A.2d 1029, 1038-1039, 2002 PA Super 339 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2002) , appeal denied, 573 Pa. 714, 828 A.2d 349 (Pa. 2003) ; Bowman v. Meadow Ridge, Inc., 419 Pa. Super. 511, 615 A.2d 755, 758 (Pa. Super. 1992) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Grube v. Daun, 173 Wis. 2d 30, 45, 496 N.W.2d 106, 111 (Wis. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Pennington v. Braxley, 224 Ga. App. 344 (480 S.E.2d 357) (1997) , cert. denied 1997 Ga. LEXIS 487 (Ga. May 2, 1997) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Ikola v. v. Schoene, 264 Ga. App. 338, 340, 341 590 S.E.2d 750, 752 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Pennington v. Braxley, 224 Ga. App. 344, 347, 480 S.E.2d 357, 360 (Ga. Ct. App. 1997) , cert. denied 1997 Ga. LEXIS 487 (Ga. May 2, 1997) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

63 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3 The Broker's Duties and Liabilities *

PART V. Other Duties, Responsibilities and Liabilities

10-3 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3.39

§ 3.39 Economic Loss Rule

The economic loss rule is a judicially created doctrine that seeks to preserve the distinction between contract and tort. This rule is often applied in products liability cases. Pursuant to this rule, a party to a contract may not recover economic losses in a tort action unless there is physical injury or property damage. This rule was developed to prevent disproportionate liability and to allow parties to allocate risk via their contract.

Generally, in order to preclude application of the economic loss rule, the property damage must involve property other than that which is the subject of the contract. This rule prevents the recovery of tort damages for what is essentially a breach of contract action. This rule is based on the premise that contracting parties have allocated their respective rights and remedies via their contract and it is thus inappropriate to introduce tort remedies.

The economic loss rule is sometimes raised as a defense when a broker or agent is sued by a client. Not all courts apply the economic loss rule in the context of a real estate licensee's abrogation of his or her duties. ⁿ¹⁴ For example, this rule does not apply to tort actions for professional malpractice. ⁿ¹⁵ Real estate licensees usually have a statutory duty to conduct themselves in an honest and competent manner. Tort liability can arise from a violation of these duties.

In the context of a real estate transaction, this rule has been found to not bar a tort claim against a seller's agent by the buyer since there was no contractual relationship between these parties. ⁿ¹⁶

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 14. See Jackowski v. Borchelt, 151 Wash. App. 1, 209 P.3d 514, 519-520 (2009) , review granted, 168 Wash.2d 1001, 226 P.3d 780 (2010) .

(n2)Footnote 15. See Shister v. Patel, 776 N.W.2d 632, 637, 2009 WI App 163 (2009) .

(n3)Footnote 16. See Shister v. Patel, 776 N.W.2d 632, 637, 2009 WI App 163 (2009) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

64 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 3A.syn

§ 3A.syn Synopsis to Chapter 3A: Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

§ 3A.01 Disclosures Regarding Brokerage Relationships Seek to Avoid Misunderstandings

§ 3A.02 National Association of Realtors'(R) Recommendations

§ 3A.03 Brokerage Relationships

[1] Disclosures Seek to Inform the Consumer of Each Parties' Rights and Obligations

[2] Types of Brokerage Relationships

[a] Single Agency

[b] Dual Agency

[c] Designated Agency

[d] Facilitators and Transaction Brokers

[e] Minimum Service or Limited Service Brokers

§ 3A.04 Common Elements of Brokerage Relationship Disclosure Acts

[1] Application to Residential and Non-residential Real Property Transactions

[2] Common Terms: Customers and Clients

[3] Agency Relationship Disclosures Must Be Written

[4] When Must the Disclosure Be Made?

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 3A.syn

- [5] Brokers Must Adopt Office Policies Addressing Disclosure
- [6] Acknowledgment of Receiving the Disclosure
- [7] Disclosure that Commissions Are Negotiable
- [8] No Assumed Relationships
- [9] Default or Baseline Relationship
- [10] Dual Agency Disclosures
- [11] The Effect of Common Law on Brokerage Relationships
- [12] Vicarious Liability for Misrepresentations Is Usually Abolished
- [13] Termination of the Relationship

§ 3A.05 Violations of Brokerage Relationship Disclosure Acts

- [1] Brokerage Relationship Act Compliance
- [2] Disciplinary Proceedings
- [3] Failing to Provide an Agency Disclosure Statement May Result in a Voidable Brokerage Agreement

§ 3A.06 Introduction

§ 3A.07 Seller Disclosure Statements

- [1] Seller Disclosure Statements for Residential Properties Are Widely Used
- [2] Contents of a Seller Disclosure Form
- [3] Disappearance of the Caveat Emptor Doctrine for Residential Property Sales
- [4] Common Elements of Residential Realty Disclosure Laws
 - [a] The Sales Contract and Other Disclosure Obligations
 - [b] The Disclosure Statement Is Not a Warranty or a Home Inspection Substitute
 - [c] Common Exclusions from the Seller's Disclosure Obligation
 - [d] The Disclosures Are the Seller's Representations
 - [e] The Seller's Disclosure Statement Is to Be Completed in Good Faith
 - [f] "As Is" Transfers and Disclaimer Statements

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 3A.syn

- [g] Pre-Printed Disclosure Forms and Statutorily Mandated Forms
- [h] Delivery of the Disclosure Statement
- [i] The Disclosure Statement Must Be Kept Current Through Amendments and Supplements
- [j] Approximations and Estimates May Be Used
- [k] Information Obtained from Public Sources
- [l] Information Obtained from Professionals Hired to Inspect the Property
- [m] Other Parties Entitled to Receive a Copy of the Disclosure Form
- [n] A Buyer's Rescission Rights
- [o] Violations of the Residential Property Seller Disclosure Laws
- [p] Disclosure Acts May Contain a Statute of Limitations
- § 3A.08 Licensee Liability with Respect to a Disclosure Statement
- § 3A.09 Other Disclosure Obligations and Issues

- [1] Closing Costs
- [2] Methamphetamine Labs and Other Illegal Drug Activities
- [3] Square Foot Disclosures
- [4] Lot or Parcel Size Disclosures
- [5] Disclosure of Homeowners Association
- [6] Off-Site Conditions
- [7] Mold
- [8] Radon
- [9] Sewage Disposal and/or Water Supplies
- [10] Insulation
- [11] Other Disclosures Arise from Local Issues
- § 3A.10 A Broker's Statutory Duty to Inspect
- [1] California Licensees Have a Statutory Duty to Inspect

[2] Other Jurisdictions Reject the Imposition of an Explicit Statutory Duty to Inspect

§ 3A.11 The Effect of a Home Inspection Report on a Licensee's Disclosure Obligations

§ 3A.12 "As Is" Clauses in Sales Contracts

§ 3A.13 Psychologically Stigmatized Properties

§ 3A.14 Properties Located Near Sex Offenders

§ 3A.15 Prospectus and Public Offering Reports

§ 3A.16 Disclosures Mandated by Federal Law

[1] The Fair Housing Act

[2] The Residential Lead-Based Paint Hazard Reduction Act

[3] Labeling and Advertising of Home Insulation

[4] Notices Regarding Formaldehyde

[5] The Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act

65 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Scope

Scope

SCOPE NOTE

Disclosure laws affecting real estate licensees and real estate transactions vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. There is no uniform act. While this Chapter does not discuss the details of each jurisdiction's disclosure laws, commonly required disclosures and common elements of disclosure laws are discussed. (See Appendix 3A-1 below for citations to state disclosure laws, alphabetically by state. See Appendix 3A-2 below for citations to significant disclosure cases, also alphabetically by state. See § 3A.16 below for discussion of and citations to federal law mandating disclosures.)

The first type of disclosure obligation imposed upon licensees is to disclose the types of brokerage relationships that licensees may enter into and to advise a consumer of the type of relationship that the consumer has entered into with the licensee. Each jurisdiction statutorily regulates the relationships that may exist between licensees and members of the public. Required disclosures often include a statement of the licensee's duties and obligations toward the consumer. These disclosures are discussed in Part I.

The second type of disclosure involves a licensee's obligation to disclose material facts and defects of the property of which the licensee is aware. Disclosure obligations with respect to a property's condition are usually imposed upon licensees in transactions involving residential real estate. The principle of "caveat emptor" is still largely in place for buyers and sellers of non-residential real estate.

Part II addresses disclosures regarding a property's condition and defects. Required disclosure obligations are generally extensive enough that a licensee cannot keep knowledge of material facts about the property to himself or herself. This information must be adequately and timely conveyed to the purchaser. An overwhelming majority of states impose such an obligation upon a licensee regardless of which party in the transaction the licensee represents.

A licensee's disclosure obligation regarding a property's condition may be intertwined with the residential real estate seller's statutory obligation to provide buyers with a written statement that discloses material facts that might affect a buyer's decision to buy or the price a buyer might offer to pay. A substantial majority of jurisdictions require that sellers provide residential buyers with a written seller disclosure statement that details the residence's condition and that discloses any known defects. Most after-closing claims by buyers against sellers and licensees involve allegations of misrepresentations regarding the property's condition. Though this second type of disclosure is usually imposed upon sellers, licensees may have a statutory obligation to advise the seller and/or the buyer of the obligation to provide a buyer with a required property disclosure statement.

As mentioned above, this Chapter contains two Appendices. Appendix 3A-1 directs the reader to disclosure laws and the regulatory agency for each state and the District of Columbia. Appendix 3A-2 contains a brief summary of significant disclosure cases. Both appendices are organized by jurisdiction.

Many states impose specific disclosure requirements upon the sellers of condominium units, cooperatives, and timeshares. This Chapter does not address the disclosure requirements that are unique to these types of property ownership.

66 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
 CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *
 PART I. Brokerage Relationship Act Disclosures

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.01

§ 3A.01 Disclosures Regarding Brokerage Relationships Seek to Avoid Misunderstandings

Two primary factors have led to the enactment of disclosure laws regarding brokerage relationships. The first factor is that brokers have traditionally represented sellers. n1 Even the broker who was considered the procuring cause of the sales transaction was considered to be a subagent of the seller's agent. n2 This meant that both the listing and selling brokers were the seller's agents and both owed fiduciary duties to the seller. Typically, the listing and selling brokers were compensated by a commission paid by the seller which was split between the two brokers involved in the transaction. n3

The second factor is that buyers did not understand the first factor. Consumer confusion often led to a buyer placing trust and confidence in the seller's agent. n4 Too many buyers wrongly assumed that the broker who showed them properties was acting on the buyer's behalf. Specifically, buyers often assumed that the polite broker who showed them house after house was acting in the buyer's best interest. n5 Buyers often worked with a single broker who showed them numerous houses. It was not unusual for this broker to assist the buyer in locating financing and in completing the documents necessary for the transaction to proceed to settlement. Buyers trusted the selling broker when such trust was unmerited and buyers sometimes disclosed confidential information to the seller's brokers. n6

This misunderstanding sometimes led to litigation when buyers believed that misrepresentations had been made with respect to the property. It was not unusual for a buyer to argue that the seller's broker had entered into an agency relationship with the buyer thereby creating a dual agency. Courts usually found that such reliance by a buyer upon the licensee was misplaced as it was generally held that a licensee acted as the seller's agent. n7 Even so, a few courts had characterized the broker's duty to a buyer as being a fiduciary one. n8 Most courts, however, were unwilling to impose fiduciary obligations upon brokers with respect to buyers and typically found that the seller's broker had not entered into an agency relationship with the buyer.

Legislators have explicitly recognized the paradoxical relationship that often evolved between the seller's agent and the buyer. For example, a provision of the Revised Statutes of Nebraska states:

The Legislature finds, determines, and declares that (1) the application of the common law of agency to the relationships between real estate brokers or salespersons and persons who are sellers, landlords, buyers, or tenants of rights and interests in real property has resulted in misunderstandings and consequences that are contrary to the best interests of the public, (2) the real estate brokerage industry has a significant impact upon the economy of the State of Nebraska, and (3) it is in the best interests of the public to codify in statute the relationships between real estate brokers or salespersons and persons who are sellers, landlords, buyers, or tenants of rights and interests in real property. n9

The primary goal of a brokerage relationship law is to dispel these misunderstandings through timely and adequate disclosure as to who the broker represents in a transaction. An overwhelming majority of states have adopted such laws. Typically, these laws require that the broker make statutorily mandated disclosures to the individual(s) involved in buying, selling or leasing real estate. These disclosures usually inform the recipient of the disclosure of the broker's responsibilities to each of the participants in the transaction. These disclosures typically apply to all real estate transactions involving a licensee, both residential and non-residential.

Besides clearing up misconceptions of buyers when dealing with a seller's broker, another objective of brokerage disclosure statutes is to allow the seller to make a more intelligent decision about whether to enter into a brokerage relationship and what type of brokerage relationship they should enter into with a licensee. n10 These statutes define the types of representation relationships between brokers and consumers (i.e., buyers, sellers, landlords and tenants). n11 These statutes typically provide for disclosure to all parties in a real estate transaction and the obligations of licensees to their customers and clients.

Some brokerage relationship acts also address a licensee's obligation to provide information regarding the physical condition and defects of the subject property. n12 This aspect of these acts is discussed in Part II of this Chapter.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Snider v. Oklahoma, 1999 OK 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1209 (Okla. 1999) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Market Force, Inc. v. Wauwatosa Realty Co., 706 F. Supp. 1387, 1388 (E.D. Wis. 1989) , aff'd, 906 F.2d 1167 (7th Cir. 1990) ; Fennell v. Ross, 289 Ark. 374, 378, 711 S.W.2d 793, 711 S.W.2d 793, 795-796 (Ark. 1986) . See generally Matthew M. Collette, Note: Sub-Agency in Residential Real Estate Brokerage: A Proposal to End the Struggle with Reality, 61 S. Cal. L. Rev. 399 (1988).

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Market Force, Inc. v. Wauwatosa Realty Co., 706 F. Supp. 1387, 1389 (E.D. Wis. 1989) , aff'd, 906 F.2d 1167 (7th Cir. 1990) ; Lerner v. Ceslik, 17 Conn. App. 369, 372, 553 A.2d 1142, 1143 (1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See generally Michael K. Braswell & Stephen L. Poe, The Residential Real Estate Brokerage Industry: A Proposal for Reform, 30 Am. Bus. L.J. 271, 282 (1992) (discussing the confusion created by traditional real estate agency); J. Clark Pendergrass, The Real Estate Consumer's Agency and Disclosure Act: The Case Against Dual Agency, 48 Ala. L. Rev. 277 (1996) (same).

(n5)Footnote 5. Cf. Brown and Grohman, Real Estate Brokers: Shouldering New Burdens, Property & Probate 14 (May/June 1997), in which the authors state: "Buyers generally thought of the brokers who helped them locate property as 'their' brokers. But as a subagent of the seller, a selling broker had a fiduciary duty only to the seller. A selling broker had no duty to the buyer other than the duty not to act in a tortious manner that one member of the public owes to another. That notion was very difficult for buyers to understand or remember, especially when they actively worked with selling brokers to find the right property."

(n6)Footnote 6. See generally Gretchen D. Coles, Comment, The Pennsylvania Real Estate Licensing Act: The "Miranda Warning" of Real Estate, 107 Dick. L. Rev. 119, 129-130 (2002); Vernon L. Jarboe, Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transaction Act, J. Kan. B.A., May 1999, at 36, 37.

(n7)Footnote 7. At common law, the broker represented the seller. Thus, the broker's duty to disclose was no greater than that of the broker's principal, the seller. See generally Restatement (Second) of Agency § 343 (1958).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Funk v. Tiff, 515 F.2d 23, 25-26 (9th Cir. 1975) (broker has a fiduciary duty to deal honestly and fairly with buyer); Harper v. Adamez, 142 Conn. 218, 225, 113 A.2d 136, 139 (Conn. 1955) (broker breached fiduciary duty to buyer when broker failed to disclose buyer's offer to seller); Siler v. Gunn, 117 Ga. App. 325, 326-327, 160 S.E.2d 427, 428-429 (Ga. Ct. App. 1968) (fiduciary relationship existed between seller's broker and buyer).

(n9)Footnote 9. Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2401. See generally Ronald Benton Brown, Joseph M. Grohman & Manuel R. Valcarcel, Real Estate Brokerage: Recent Changes in Relationships and a Procedure, 29 Creighton L. Rev. 25 (1995).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 684, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied (Mar. 11, 1993).

(n11)Footnote 11. Cf. Mitchell Realty Group, LLC v. Holt, 266 Ga. App. 217, 218, 596 S.E.2d 625, 626 (Ga. Ct. App. 2004) (Georgia's Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions Act regulates the relationship between sellers, buyers, and real estate brokers to the extent not governed by specific written agreements between and among the parties.).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Fitzmorris v. Demas, 34 Kan. App. 2d 267, 272, 116 P.3d 764, 767 (Kan. Ct. App. 2005) .

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

67 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
 CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *
 PART I. Brokerage Relationship Act Disclosures

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.02

§ 3A.02 National Association of Realtors'(R) Recommendations

The National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR), together with individual state Realtors(R) Associations, was instrumental in the passage of agency disclosure statutes and regulations. n1 NAR has supported state laws to clarify the law of agency as applied to real estate brokerage relationships. NAR also supported the creation of the designated agency where a broker may appoint an individual licensee to represent the seller and another licensee to represent the buyer in the same transaction without creating a dual agency relationship. Between 1988 and 2000, forty-nine states and the District of Columbia have passed agency disclosure statutes/regulations. As of the end of 2005, it appears that Arizona is the only state that has not done so. The NAR recommendations for agency disclosure contained the following nine elements:

- Licensees' duties should be well defined.
- Real estate brokerage relationships should be clarified by creating a statutory agency relationship and a statutory agent presumption unless otherwise agreed to in writing.
- Disclosed dual agency should be specifically acknowledged. The procedure for establishing disclosed dual agency and licensees' responsibilities should be clear.
- Brokers should be able to designate individual licensees in an in-company transaction to represent the seller and buyer without creating a dual agency relationship.
- Consumer's vicarious liability for licensees' acts should be eliminated or modified.
- Agency disclosure forms and rules should be promulgated to ensure meaningful, timely, and mandatory written disclosure.
- An explanation of how agency relationships end and a description of licensees' duties following termination should be included.

- Licensees' duties and liability for property condition disclosure should be addressed.
- The common law of agency should be abrogated. n2

Though the NAR's recommendations influenced enactment of brokerage relationship disclosure laws, there is no uniform law. Each state (with the exception of Arizona n3) has adopted its own version of a brokerage relationship act. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Ronald Benton Brown, Joseph M. Grohman & Manuel R. Valcarcel, Real Estate Brokerage: Recent Changes in Relationships and a Procedure, 29 Creighton L. Rev. 25, 28-29 (1995).

(n2)Footnote 2. National Association of Realtors(R), State Agency Legislation--Status Report dated Sept. 1999.

(n3)Footnote 3. The Arizona Association of Realtors publishes a form titled, "Real Estate Agency Disclosure and Election." It appears that use of this form by Arizona licensees is voluntary.

(n4)Footnote 4. Cf. Ann Morales Olazabail, Redefining Realtor Relationships and Responsibilities: The Failure of State Regulatory Responses, 40 Harv. J. on Legis. 65, 112 (2003) ("While forty-nine states now formally require agents to disclose some information about agency relationships in a residential real estate transaction, there is an almost absolute lack of uniformity in the way that this disclosure is accomplished.").

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

68 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *
PART I. Brokerage Relationship Act Disclosures

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.03

§ 3A.03 Brokerage Relationships

[1] Disclosures Seek to Inform the Consumer of Each Parties' Rights and Obligations

The primary purpose of a brokerage relationship statement is the education of a buyer or seller about the relationship the consumer will have with the broker providing the disclosure. The disclosure informs the consumer of what he or she can expect from the licensee. The disclosure statement will typically list the consumer's rights and the broker's duties and responsibilities. By having a disclosure of rights, duties and responsibilities, consumers should realize in whom they can place trust or confidence.

If there were only seller's brokers, disclosures would be relatively simple. However brokerage relationships are not confined to seller's brokers. Licensees can also serve as buyer's brokers, dual agents, designated agents and transaction or facilitator brokers. In some states, licensees are offering a new category of service referred as flat fee brokers or limited service brokers. It should be anticipated that disclosures will be modified to accommodate these newer types of relationships.

Brokerage relationship acts have simplified proving the relationship that existed between a licensee and a client or customer should a dispute occur. If the licensee followed the applicable law, the disclosure form will have specified the type of relationship into which the parties intended to enter.

This section briefly considers the types of brokerage relationships. Listing agreements and the brokerage industry are discussed in greater detail in Chapter 2, above.

[2] Types of Brokerage Relationships

[a] Single Agency

A single agency involves a licensee who represents only one party in a transaction. In many jurisdictions, this is the remaining brokerage relationship that entails the traditional fiduciary duties owed by an agent to his or her principal. However, in some jurisdictions, the duties and obligations owed by a licensee to a client are not fiduciary in nature; fiduciary obligations arise only if greater duties are specifically agreed to in writing between the licensee and a client.

n1

The traditional single agency relationship was that of a seller's broker. A seller's broker represents only the seller and owes fiduciary duties to the seller. A seller's broker has a duty to sell the client's property for the highest price possible. n2 The relationship between a seller's broker and a seller was historically based upon the common law of agency. Though some brokerage relationship acts have attempted to statutorily alter application of the common law to single agencies (see § 3A.05[11], below), courts tend to look to common law when addressing a situation that is not addressed in the brokerage relationship act.

Under a single agency relationship, even when the licensee represents the seller, most jurisdictions require that the licensee must timely disclose to all parties with whom the licensee is working, all adverse material facts pertaining to the physical condition of the property that are known by the licensee and that could not be discovered by a reasonably diligent inspection of property by the buyer. n3

The newer single agency relationship is that of a buyer's broker or agent. Though this type of relationship existed prior to the enactment of brokerage relationship acts, brokerage relationship acts have formalized the concept of buyer representation and have delineated the rights and obligations of this type of representation. The relationship between a buyer's broker and the buyer typically mirrors the relationship between a seller's broker and the seller.

A buyer's broker is expected to be loyal to the buyer and act in the buyer's best interest. n4 A buyer's broker is expected to help the buyer find a suitable property and to buy the property at the lowest price possible. n5 A licensee representing a buyer does not breach his or her duties by showing the same properties to other buyers or by acting as an agent or subagent for other buyers, or as an agent or subagent for sellers. n6

[b] Dual Agency

A dual agent acts for both the seller and the buyer. There is an inherent conflict in a broker trying to represent both the buyer and seller. n7 A seller's broker has a duty to try to obtain the highest price for the seller, while a buyer's broker has a duty to help the buyer purchase at the lowest possible price. These goals are mutually exclusive. When both the buyer and seller are represented by the same broker, neither can receive full representation from the broker due to the inherent conflict. n8

Nearly every state statutorily addresses dual agency. n9 Commentators have stated that the numerous revisions to brokerage relationship laws resulted in part because of two lawsuits in the early 1990s involving dual agency, which resulted in settlements totaling $ 19.9 million. n10

Statutes addressing dual agency typically require the written consent of all parties in the transaction. Many states also have specific disclosure statements that must be given to buyers and sellers involved in transactions involving a dual agent. Many brokerage relationship acts specifically subject licensees to disciplinary proceedings for failing to provide required disclosures when the licensee is acting as a dual agent n11 or for failing to ensure that all parties have consented to the dual agency. n12

Timely provision of dual agency disclosures is crucial. A licensee's delay in providing the disclosure can result in disciplinary proceedings against the licensee. For example, in one case an agent's license was suspended and he was fined for violating a professional code of conduct. The agent had entered into an oral agreement with the seller of a property to represent the seller in the sale. The next day, the agent showed the buyer the house, but the agent did not have the buyer sign an agency disclosure form before showing the house, although the agent was statutorily required to do. After the buyer decided to buy the house, but before negotiating the contract, the agent completed a dual agency form, which both the buyer and seller signed. The buyer later filed a complaint with the licensing agency. In affirming the agency's decision, the court referred to the hearing officer's observations that from the time of the initial showing of the property through the development of the purchase offer, the buyer needed to know the agent's status relative to her interest in the subject property in order to know what approach the buyer should take in discussing personal confidential information with the agent, to understand the agent's restrictions in disclosing information about the property's condition and in what leeway the agent had in discussing the seller's situation in selling the property. In agreeing with the agency's decision, the court stated that the agent had violated the statute controlling agency disclosure and the agent's later compliance did not make up for his omission. n13

Brokerage relationship acts usually address the imputation of knowledge to the principals when a dual agent is involved. These acts recognize that the common law rule imputing such knowledge is problematic when a dual agent is involved. One court summed up this quandary as follows:

The problem with rigidly imputing knowledge of the agent to both principals in a dual agency context is clear. Simply put, if everyone is responsible, then no one is responsible. In such a situation, the imputation, based on the presumption that the agent will do what is expected of him becomes a fiction which interferes with rather than promotes commerce and the interest of full disclosure. A proper analysis requires that we recognize that in a dual agency two distinct agencies are vested in the agent with separate duties and responsibilities as to each principal. n14

This court observed that if dual agents failed to communicate required information to the buyers, then the seller breached his or her contract through the neglect of his or her agents. However, if the seller delivered the information to the dual agents, the buyers were deemed to have received it and had no complaint against the seller. The court stated further, "The arguments become circular and cannot lead to a resolution of the equities between the buyers and the sellers. No doubt, this can create special difficulties for the dual agent, but they are difficulties inherent in choosing to serve two masters." n15 This court found that it could not establish a bright line for all cases as to whether knowledge held by the dual agent was to be imputed to either or both principals. Instead, there were factual circumstances the court found best left to the trier of facts. Dual agencies are fraught with special problems and require a heightened standard of conduct on the part of the agents in assuring that both masters are well served and that the agents' responsibilities are fully performed as to all. n16

Many brokerage relationship acts resolve the issues inherent in a rule imputing knowledge between a dual agent and the principals by providing that each client and broker and their respective licensees possess only actual knowledge and information; there is no imputation of knowledge or information among or between the clients, brokers, or their affiliated licensees. n17

[c] Designated Agency

Designated agency occurs when a broker has an in-house dual agency where an individual agent in the brokerage firm is appointed (or "designated") to represent only the interests of the seller and another agent is appointed to represent only the interests of the buyer. In jurisdictions that recognize designated agency, this is an optional way to approach dual agency. In theory, designated agency allows both the buyer and seller to receive more complete representation than can be achieved with a single disclosed dual agent. Just as with a disclosed dual agent, both the seller and buyer must consent to a designated agency. It has been observed that a downfall to designated agency is that there is a greater chance for breach of confidentiality when the agents involved in a transaction are housed in the same office. n18

[d] Facilitators and Transaction Brokers

Colorado was the first state to create a non-agent real estate broker. n19 Pursuant to Colorado statutory law, although a licensee may still act as an agent for a buyer or seller, unless a different relationship is established by the parties in writing, it is presumed that a broker is acting as a nonagent transaction broker. n20 In Colorado, the transaction broker is essentially the default relationship. Many other states have followed suit by adopting statutory provisions allowing for this type of relationship. Other jurisdictions have likewise adopted this as the default relationship when the parties have not elected some other form of brokerage relationship (see § 3A.05[9], below).

A transaction-broker is not an agent for either party. n21 A transaction broker provides limited representation to a buyer, a seller or both, in a real estate transaction, but does not represent either in a fiduciary capacity or as a single agent. n22 Instead, a transaction broker assists one or more parties throughout a contemplated real estate transaction with communication, interposition, advisement, negotiation, contract terms, and the closing of such real estate transaction without being an agent or advocate for the interests of any party to such transaction. n23 A real estate broker who serves as a transaction-broker is not in a fiduciary relationship with either party to a real estate transaction. n24 However, a transaction broker still owes a statutory duty of care to the persons for whom the broker acts. n25

Duties owed by a transaction broker to a buyer or seller are usually statutorily determined and often include:

1. Dealing honestly and fairly;
2. Accounting for all funds;
3. Using skill, care, and diligence in the transaction;
4. Disclosing all known facts that materially affect the value of the property and are not readily observable to the buyer;
5. Presenting all offers and counteroffers in a timely manner, unless a party has previously directed the licensee otherwise in writing;
6. Limited confidentiality unless waived in writing by a party;
7. Any additional duties that are entered into by this or by separate written agreement. n26

Limited confidentiality typically will prevent disclosure that the seller will accept a price less than the asking or listed price, that the buyer will pay a price greater than the price submitted in a written offer, the motivation of any party for selling or buying property, that a seller or buyer will agree to financing terms other than those offered, or of any other information requested by a party to remain confidential. n27

[e] Minimum Service or Limited Service Brokers

A minimum service broker places a listing in the applicable multiple listing service (MLS) and does little or nothing more to assist in the sale. This service assists a homeowner who wants to sell his or her house with the advertising benefit provided by the MLS. The homeowner pays for any additional services that the homeowner needs from the broker. Some states are addressing this type of brokerage relationship. Generally, states that have addressed minimum service brokers through statute or regulation have imposed the following requirements on brokers accepting such listings:

- The licensee must accept and present all offers and counteroffers.
- The licensee must assist the client in developing, communicating and presenting all offers and counteroffers.
- The licensee must answer the client's questions relating to the offers and counteroffers. n28

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Idaho Code § 54-2094.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Roberts v. Lomanto, 112 Cal. App. 4th 1553, 1568, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 866, 877 (2003) , review denied, 2004 Cal. LEXIS 1784 (2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Walker v. Johnson, 278 Ga. App. 806, 811-12, 630 S.E.2d 70, 76 (2006) , overruled in part, Kleber v. City of Atlanta, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 396, at *15 (Mar. 28, 2008) (on other grounds) citing Ga. Code § 10-6A-5 (b) (1); Dasher v. Davis, 274 Ga. App. 788, 790, 618 S.E.2d 728, 730 (2005) , cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 59 (Jan. 17, 2006) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code § 4735.65(A).

(n5)Footnote 5. Cf. Ohio Rev. Code § 4735.65(A)(1) (licensee representing a purchaser is to seek a property at a price and with purchase or lease terms acceptable to the purchaser).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code § 4735.65(B).

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Winter v. Carey, 127 Mo. App. 601, 603, 106 S.W. 539 (1907) . See generally J. Clark Pendergrass, The Real Estate Consumer's Agency and Disclosure Act: The Case Against Dual Agency, 48 Ala. L. Rev. 277, 290-296 (1996) (discussion of the conflict inherent in dual agency).

(n8)Footnote 8. Cf. Snider v. Oklahoma, 1999 OK 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1209 (Okla. 1999) ("Sellers' agents and dual agents do not and cannot by law give a buyer the same degree of loyalty as an agent who acts on behalf of a buyer.").

(n9)Footnote 9. Not all states allow dual agency. Among those states which do not allow dual agency are Florida and Kansas. See K.S.A. § 58-30, 110 (a)(1); Ronald Benton Brown and Joseph M. Grohman, Goodbye Dual World Real Estate Brokerage Changes Again, But Not Enough, 71 Fla. Bar J. 54 (Nov. 1997).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Rocy de R. Barondes & Carlos Slawson, Jr., Examining Compliance with Fiduciary Duties: A Study of Real Estate Agents, 84 Or. L. Rev. 681, 682 (2005). The cases cited are Bokusky v. Edina Realty, Inc., No. 3-92 CIV. 223 (D. Minn. Aug. 6, 1993); Dismuke v. Edina Realty, Inc., No. 92-8716, (Dist. Ct. Minn. June 17, 1993). See also Ronald Benton Brown, Joseph M. Grohman & Manuel R. Valcarcel, Real Estate Brokerage: Recent Changes in Relationships and a Procedure, 29 Creighton L. Rev. 25, 28 (1995) (discussing these two cases); Vickie J. Brady, Comment, The "Brokerage Relations" Addition to the Illinois Real Estate License Act: The Case of the Legalized Conflict of Interest, 22 S. Ill. U. L. J. 725, 729-730 (1998) (discussing these two cases).

(n11)Footnote 11. See La. R.S. 37:1455(21).

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 32-2153(A)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Habeeb v. Ohio Dept. of Commerce, 2004 Ohio 138, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 130, at *1-*9 (Jan. 15, 2004) , appeal denied, 102 Ohio St. 3d 1472, 2004 Ohio 2830, 809 N.E.2d 1158 (2004) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Lane v. Oustalet, 873 So. 2d 92, 97 (Miss. 2004) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Lane v. Oustalet, 873 So. 2d 92, 97 (Miss. 2004) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Lane v. Oustalet, 873 So. 2d 92, 99 (Miss. 2004) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Ga. Code Ann. § 10-6A-12(d).

(n18)Footnote 18. Ann Morales Olazabail, Redefining Realtor Relationships and Responsibilities: The Failure of State Regulatory Responses, 40 Harv. J. on Legis. 65, 82 (2003).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Stearns v. McGuire, 354 F. Supp. 2d 1188, 1190 (D. Colo. 2004) , aff'd, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 24577 (10th Cir. Nov. 14, 2005) , citing, Patricia A. Wilson, Nonagent Brokerage: Real Estate Agents Missing in Action, 52 Okla. L. Rev. 85, 90 (1999).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Stearns v. McGuire, 354 F. Supp. 2d 1188, 1190 (D. Colo. 2004) , aff'd, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 24577 (10th Cir. Nov. 14, 2005) , citing Katherine A. Pancak, Thomas J. Miceli & C.F. Sirmans, Real Estate Agency Reform: Meeting the Needs of Buyers, Sellers, and Brokers, 25 Real Estate L.J. 345, 355 (1997).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Sussman v. Stoner, 143 F. Supp. 2d 1232, 1237 (D. Colo. 2001) , applying Colorado law. See generally Ronald Benton Brown, Joseph M. Grohman & Manuel R. Valcarcel, Real Estate Brokerage: Recent Changes in Relationships and a Procedure, 29 Creighton L. Rev. 25, 44-45 (1995); Earnest and Painter, The New Brokerage Legislation: The Demise of "Agency by Surprise," 22 Colo. Law. 1919 (Sept. 1993) ; Patricia A. Wilson, Nonagent Brokerage: Real Estate Agents Missing in Action, 52 Okla. L. Rev. 85, 90 (1999). But cf. Doyle v. Maruszczak, 834 So. 2d 307, 309 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) . Even though the licensee and his clients had signed a transaction broker agreement, the court found that the licensee was the clients' agent and that a fiduciary relationship existed between the parties.

(n22)Footnote 22. See Read v. Taylor, 832 So. 2d 219, 223 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) , citing Fla. Stat. § 475.01(1)(m).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Stearns v. McGuire, 354 F. Supp. 2d 1188, 1190 (D. Colo. 2004) , aff'd, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 24577 (10th Cir. Nov. 14, 2005) , quoting, Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-802(6).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Hoff & Leigh, Inc. v. Byler, 62 P.3d 1077, 1078 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Read v. Taylor, 832 So. 2d 219, 223 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) .

(n26)Footnote 26. See Read v. Taylor, 832 So. 2d 219, 223 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) , citing Fla. Stat. § 475.278 (1997).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Read v. Taylor, 832 So. 2d 219, 223 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) .

(N28)Footnote 28. See 225 ILCS 454/15-75; Ala. § 34-27-84 (c).

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

69 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
 CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *
 PART I. Brokerage Relationship Act Disclosures

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.04

§ 3A.04 Common Elements of Brokerage Relationship Disclosure Acts

[1] Application to Residential and Non-residential Real Property Transactions

The title of some brokerage relationship acts would appear to indicate that they apply to transactions involving residential real property. For example, the Alabama Act is titled the "Real Estate Consumer's Agency and Disclosure Act." n1 Despite this title, this act's definition of a real estate transaction is not limited to residential transactions and this act's breadth appears to be much broader as a real estate transaction is defined as "The purchase, sale, lease and rental, option, or exchange of an interest in real estate." n2

A few states have specifically limited the brokerage relationship act disclosures to residential transactions. n3 A few acts are also drafted with definitions that specifically address residential real estate. n4 By definition, these disclosure acts would appear to be restricted in their application. Other acts are broadly written such that a licensee's disclosure obligations are not restricted to those involving residential real estate transactions. n5

An act's provision that defines terms and any provisions addressing to whom disclosures must be made should be examined to determine whether the act applies only to residential real estate transactions or whether it applies to all real estate transactions involving a licensee. It appears that the majority of brokerage relationship acts apply to all transactions that involve a licensee.

[2] Common Terms: Customers and Clients

Though there is no uniform brokerage relationship disclosure act, most acts have adopted terms to distinguish between the party with whom the licensee has entered into a relationship and other parties. Two terms commonly used in brokerage disclosure acts to distinguish between these parties are "client" and "customer." n6 A client is usually defined in some manner to mean someone who has formed a brokerage relationship with a broker. n7 In a broker-client relationship, the broker represents the client and typically acts as the client's representative in buying, selling, or leasing.

A customer is usually defined to mean someone who does not have a brokerage relationship with the broker in question. n8 In a broker-customer relationship, the broker is not representing the customer. In most jurisdictions, the broker can assist a customer or non-client by performing ministerial acts. n9 Acts a broker may be able to perform with a customer usually include showing properties that are for sale or lease, providing pre-printed real estate documents, preparing real estate contracts at the customer's direction, and assisting the customer find a lender.

Many brokerage relationship acts provide that unless a licensee enters into a brokerage relationship, it is presumed that an individual is a customer of the licensee rather than a client. n10 Brokerage relationship acts often delineate the duties a licensee owes to clients and to customers. Another common element is that when dealing with a customer or other party who has no brokerage relationship with the broker, the licensee has a duty to treat the customer fairly and honestly. n11 Often licensees have a duty to disclose all facts known to the licensee which materially affect the value or desirability of the property that are not known to, or within the diligent attention and observation of the parties. n12

[3] Agency Relationship Disclosures Must Be Written

The most uniform element of the various brokerage relationship disclosure acts is the requirement that the statutorily required disclosure must be made through a written disclosure statement given to the customer or client. n13 Many jurisdictions either statutorily mandate a specific disclosure form or authorize that jurisdiction's real estate commission to prepare a form for use by licensees. n14

[4] When Must the Disclosure Be Made?

Under brokerage relationship acts, the responsibility to disclose and the execution of a brokerage agreement often occurs simultaneously or within a short time of each other. Licensees should understand and follow the required agency disclosure procedures to which they are subjected. Many acts require that the brokerage relationship disclosure be made at the earliest practicable opportunity during or following the first substantial contact with a seller, landlord, buyer, or tenant who has not entered into a written agreement for services. n15 Typically the disclosure must be given to a seller prior to entering into a listing agreement. If the licensee is dealing with a customer, the disclosure may be required to be made upon substantial contact or before any confidential information can be conveyed by the customer to the licensee. n16

Another commonly imposed time for making this disclosure is when the licensee enters into a brokerage agreement with the client. Some jurisdictions require that the disclosure be made with or incorporated in a prospective buyer's offer to purchase. n17 A brokerage relationship disclosure may not be required if the individual is represented by another licensee. n18

The disclosure obligation generally must occur prior to or simultaneously with the execution of a brokerage agreement. Receiving the disclosure after entering into a brokerage agreement may be a meaningless gesture. One court has explained the purpose of requiring agency disclosure prior to entering into a listing agreement as being:

... to allow the seller to make a more intelligent decision about whether to sign. For example, the property owner who is asked to sign a listing agreement because the broker has a buyer for the property may not fully comprehend that the broker intends to act as a dual agent. Because the seller pays the broker's commission, the seller may reasonably believe the broker has only the seller's best interest at heart and is working exclusively for the seller. The disclosure form tells the property owner that a broker can act as a dual agent. Thus advised, the seller may wish to sell the property through his or her own agent or to seek independent advice on the price and terms of the listing. n19

The common goal is that disclosure should be made when it is meaningful. Disclosure does little good to protect a consumer if it is made after contracts have been executed. Often, when a buyer is involved, the licensee must make the disclosure prior to presenting the buyer's offer to purchase to a seller. n20

[5] Brokers Must Adopt Office Policies Addressing Disclosure

Several states require that brokers must adopt a written office policy regarding the disclosures made under a brokerage relationship act. n21 Some states require that the broker give a copy of the policy to the prospective seller, landlord, buyer, or tenant. n22 Even if a broker is not required to adopt a written office policy, this practice may prevent mistakes.

Georgia requires that brokers develop and enforce an office brokerage relationship policy among affiliated licensees which either specifically permits or rejects the practice of disclosed dual agency. n23 Indiana also specifically allows a broker to permit or reject the practice of disclosed limited agency. n24

[6] Acknowledgment of Receiving the Disclosure

Another common element in brokerage relationship acts is that the licensee must obtain a signed acknowledgment of receipt from the customer or client which confirms that this individual has received the required disclosure form. n25 If the individual will not sign such a receipt, the licensee is usually instructed to document this refusal. n26 One way to document such a refusal is for the licensee to note that fact on a copy of the disclosure form and to retain this copy. n27

Some brokerage relationship acts impose record retention requirements by obligating licensees to retain these acknowledgments for a set time period. n28

[7] Disclosure that Commissions Are Negotiable

There is a misconception by some consumers that the amount of commission charged by licensees is statutorily determined. This is not true; the commission rate is negotiable between the licensee and the client. Some jurisdictions require that licensees disclose to consumers the fact that the rate of the licensee's commission is a negotiable term between the parties. n29 In Illinois, a disclosure must be made regarding the sharing of the commission with other brokers. n30 Some jurisdictions require that notices regarding a licensee's compensation be highlighted in some manner. n31

[8] No Assumed Relationships

Brokerage relationship disclosure acts often provide that an agency relationship cannot be assumed, implied, or created upon an initial contact with a consumer. n32

[9] Default or Baseline Relationship

Some brokerage relationship acts provide for what could be considered a default or baseline relationship if the parties fail to enter into a specific relationship. n33 For example, in Colorado, a broker is considered a transaction-broker unless a single agency relationship is established through a written agreement between the broker and the party or parties to be represented by such broker. n34 In Tennessee, until a licensee enters into a specific written agreement to establish an agency relationship, the licensee is considered to be a facilitator and not an agent or advocate of any party to the transaction. n35

[10] Dual Agency Disclosures

At common law, a real estate broker had to refrain from dual representation in a sale transaction unless the broker obtained the consent of both principals after full disclosure. n36 This rule has been justified on several grounds including the following: (1) An undisclosed dual agent puts himself or herself in a position where the agent's duty to one principal conflicts with the agent's duty to the other principal. (2) The agent's own interests may tempt him or her to be unfaithful to both principals. (3) Undisclosed dual agency is a position which is against sound public policy and good morals. n37 Even before the widespread enactment of brokerage relationship acts, the general rule had been that unless both principals knew of the dual agency at the time of the transaction, the agent could not recover a commission from either principal. n38

Under brokerage relationship acts, most jurisdictions specifically allow disclosed dual agency relationships. However, the disclosures for this type of relationship are stringent. All parties to the transaction must be aware of the licensee's dual agency status. The licensee usually must obtain written consent from all principals to the transaction. n39 The purpose of the dual agency disclosure requirements is to ensure that the parties are aware of the potential conflict of interest their agent may face in the negotiations, and consent to continued representation even though this potential for conflict exists. n40

[11] The Effect of Common Law on Brokerage Relationships

The recommendations of the National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR) included the abrogation of the common law of agency. Some jurisdictions have followed this recommendation. n41 However, despite the passage of agency disclosure statutes/regulations in fifty jurisdictions, not all have followed this NAR recommendation. n42

In the jurisdictions that do not specifically abrogate or supercede the common law of agency, it would appear that licensees may be subject to both the state's common law of agency and the agency disclosure statute and/or regulations. n43 A significant number of acts do not address the common law of agency and its application or non-application to brokerage relationships. This facet of agency disclosure is problematic if a dispute arises over whether licensees have performed their duties and obligations to a seller or buyer. Few courts have interpreted the statutory and regulatory requirements in light of the common law of agency.

The Restatement (Second) of Agency defines agency as the fiduciary relation that results from the manifestation of consent by one person to another that the other shall act on his behalf and subject to his control, and consent by the other so to act. Under the common law, licensees have the burden of proving that:

- (1) the sellers or buyers manifested the licensee to work on their behalf,
- (2) the licensee accepted the proposed undertaking, and
- (3) both the sellers or buyers and the licensee understood that the licensee was in charge to establish an agency relationship and recover damages. n44

Brokerage relationship statutes and regulations eliminate this step in proving an agency relationship. Strict adherence to the agency disclosure procedural steps will establish an agency relationship if that is the type of relationship into which the parties have entered. If an agency relationship is not established, a licensee owes no fiduciary or disclosure duties to a client. n45 In some jurisdictions, it would appear that a licensee who agrees to act as a finder rather than an agent may not be obligated to provide disclosures pursuant to the applicable brokerage relationship act. n46

Even in those jurisdictions that have attempted to limit or restrict applying the common law of agency to brokerage relationships, n47 such efforts are often qualified or tempered. For example, Alabama's Real Estate Consumer's Agency and Disclosure Act n48 states in part:

The duties of licensees as specified in this article or in rules promulgated by the Alabama Real Estate Commission shall supersede any duties of a licensee to a party to a real estate transaction which are based upon common law principles of agency to the extent that those common law duties are inconsistent with the duties of licensees as specified in this article (emphasis added). n49

This provision does not abrogate the application of the common law of agency with respect to Alabama brokerage relationships. Instead, it remains to the courts to determine the extent to which the common law is inconsistent with a licensee's duties under the Alabama Real Estate Consumer's Agency and Disclosure Act. Many jurisdictions have provisions similar to that of Alabama. n50 Other jurisdictions have likewise attempted to achieve a partial or limited abrogation of common law. n51

Ohio has adopted the opposite stance in its brokerage relationship law by stating that except to the extent the duties of a real estate agent are specifically stated or are otherwise modified by the parties' agreement, the duties of a real estate agent are determined by the common law. n52

In at least one jurisdiction, a brokerage relationship act has been found to impose a lesser burden upon licensees than the common law of agency which was applied prior to the enactment of the brokerage relationship act. n53 However, a brokerage relationship act may also allow a licensee and his or her client to enter into written agreements which creates an agency relationship in which the duties and obligations are greater than those provided in the brokerage relationship act. n54

Generally, statutes in derogation of common law are strictly construed in accordance with the statutory language. n55 Courts following this rule, usually adhere to the literal words of the statute and refuse to read any exceptions into the law. One court in interpreting a brokerage relationship act applied this statutory rule of construction and stated that the act in question did not regulate real estate commissions or remuneration payments, but was instead concerned primarily with the question of whether and under what circumstances a client or a customer relationship arises, and what duties are owed within the context of each. The court held that the legislature did not address the availability of remedies at common law, which were authorized when the brokerage relationship law was enacted. Therefore, the court found that it was bound to construe that act so as to maintain the viability of common law theories of recovery such as quantum meruit or procuring cause. n56

[12] Vicarious Liability for Misrepresentations Is Usually Abolished

Most brokerage relationship disclosure acts have abolished vicarious liability. n57 Typically, a client or broker will have liability for misrepresentations made by the other only if the client or broker had actual knowledge of the misrepresentation or should have known of the falsity of the representation. n58

Several states have statutes that address a broker's liability for failing to disclose information or for making a misrepresentation. n59 These statutes usually protect the broker when the client has supplied the broker with false information that the broker does not know is false. Usually, these statutes also protect the client from liability should the broker make a misrepresentation of which the client is unaware. n60 Some states narrow the protection offered to a broker by limiting liability only in situations in which the broker has engaged another broker. In these statutes, the broker is protected from misrepresentations made by the sub-broker. A few states have statutorily altered the common-law rule which imputes the knowledge of the agent to the principal. n61

[13] Termination of the Relationship

Many of the brokerage relationship acts also have a provision addressing the termination of the brokerage relationship. Typically, such a provision addresses when the relationship is considered to have ended and whether any duties are owed to the client after that termination. n62

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Ala. Code § 34-27-80.

(n2)Footnote 2. Ala. Code § 34-27-81(14).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fla. Stat. § 475.274, Minn. Stat. § 82.22 subd. 2; N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 443.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.13(j) which states that " 'Real property' means any estate specified by subdivision (1) or (2) of Section 761 in property which constitutes or is improved with one to four dwelling units, any leasehold in this type of property exceeding one year's duration, and mobilehomes, when offered for sale or sold through an agent pursuant to the authority contained in Section 10131.6 of the Business and Professions Code."

(n5)Footnote 5. See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325d.

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Ga. Code Ann. § 10-6A-3(6) and (8); Va. Code § 54.1-2130.

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Ga. Code Ann. § 10-6A-3(6); Va. Code Ann. § 54.1-2130.

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Ga. Code Ann. § 10-6A-3(8); Va. Code Ann. § 54.1-2130.

(n9)Footnote 9. Ministerial acts are routine acts that a licensee can perform for a person which do not involve discretion or the exercise of the licensee's own judgment. See, e.g., Ga. Code Ann. § 10-6A-3(12); Idaho Code § 54-2086; Ohio Rev. Code § 4735.69; S.C. Code Ann. § 40-57-137(L); Va. Code § 54.1-2130.

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Va. Code § 54.1-2130.

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. § 475.278. See also Or. Rev. Stat. §§ 696.805 and 696.810 (imposing affirmative obligation of honest dealing and disclosure).

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.16.

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 34-27-82(c); Cal Civ Code § 2079.14.

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.16 (stating the contents of the disclosure form); Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 32, § 13279 (disclosure form as defined and mandated by rules adopted by the commission).

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Mo. Rev. Stat. § 339.770(1).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Del. Code Ann. tit. 24, § 2931(b) (disclosure must be made at the first substantive contact between the licensee and the person the licensee does not represent); D.C. Code Ann. § 42-1703(h)(1) (disclosure must be made upon having a substantive discussion about a specific property or properties with an actual or prospective buyer or seller who is not the client of the licensee).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Ala. Code § 34-27-8(c); Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325d.

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g., Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325d.

(n19)Footnote 19. Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 684-685, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (1992), review denied (Mar. 11, 1993).

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.14.

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 34-27-83; Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 12-61-808(1); Ind. Code Ann. § 25-34.1-10-13(a); Idaho Code § 54-2090; Ind. Code Ann. § 25-34.1-10-13; Mo. Rev. Stat. § 339.760; Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 4735.54; S.C. Code Ann. § 40-57-137(B); S.D. Codified Laws § 36-21A-147.

(n22)Footnote 22. See Ind. Code Ann. § 25-34.1-10-13(b) (must be provided at the beginning of an agency relationship). See also Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 4735.54 (broker must provide a copy of its policy to each client or prospective client upon request).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Ga. Code Ann. § 10-6A-12 (f).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Ind. Code Ann. § 25-34.1-10-13(a).

(n25)Footnote 25. See, e.g., Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.14; Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 20-325d; Ky. Rev. Stat. § 324.360(4). But cf. Moody Realty Co., Inc. v. Huestis, 237 S.W.3d 666, 677-78 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2007), appeal denied, 2007 Tenn. LEXIS 702 (Tenn. Aug. 13, 2007) (Although the Tenn. Code provisions addressing representation by real estate agents require a written bilateral agreement that establishes the agreed-upon terms and conditions for an agency relationship to arise, these provisions do not expressly require both parties' signatures on the written agreement.).

(n26)Footnote 26. See R.I. Gen. Laws § 5-20.6-5.

(n27)Footnote 27. See Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 12-61-808.

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g., D.C. Code Ann. § 42-1703(h)(4) (copies of disclosures relative to fully executed purchase contracts must be kept for 3 years); N.H. Admin. Rules, Rea 701.01(e) (3 year retention period for disclosure forms on which the licensee has noted the third party's failure to sign); N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 443(e) and (f) (3 year retention period for both signed and unsigned acknowledgments).

(n29)Footnote 29. See Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10147.5; Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325b.

(n30)Footnote 30. See 225 ILCS 454/15-35(a)(3).

(n31)Footnote 31. See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325b (not less than 10-point boldface type or a manner that significantly stands out from the other text).

(n32)Footnote 32. See Ala. Code § 34-27-82(b); Idaho Code § 54-2084(1); N.M. Stat. Ann. § 61-29-10.1; Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-13-401.

(n33)Footnote 33. See Ann Morales Olazabail, Redefining Realtor Relationships and Responsibilities: The Failure of State Regulatory Responses, 40 Harv. J. on Legis. 65, 91-99 (2003) (discussing the various default models and which states follow them).

(n34)Footnote 34. See Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-803(2).

(n35)Footnote 35. See Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-13-401. See also Realty Store, Inc. v. Tarl Partnership, L.P., 153 S.W.3d 366, 371 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2004), appeal denied, 2004 Tenn. LEXIS 1146 (Dec. 20, 2004) (a broker cannot be a facilitator once a written agency agreement is involved.).

(n36)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Sierra Pacific Industries v. Carter, 104 Cal. App.3d 579, 581-582, 163 Cal. Rptr. 764, 766 (1980) .

(n37)Footnote 37. See L. Bryon Culver & Associates v. Jaoudi Industrial & Trading Corp., 1 Cal. App. 4th 300, 305, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680, 682-682 (1991), review denied, 1992 Cal. LEXIS 1054 (Mar. 11, 1992) .

(n38)Footnote 38. See, e.g., L. Byron Culver & Assocs. v. Jaoudi Indus. & Trading Corp., 1 Cal. App. 4th 300, 305 and 306 n.4, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680, 682 and 683 n.4 (1991), review denied, 1992 Cal. LEXIS 1054 (Mar. 11, 1992) .

(n39)Footnote 39. Alaska Stat. § 08.88.396(c).

(n40)Footnote 40. See Highlands Business Park, LLC v. Grubb & Ellis Co., 2005 Ohio 3139, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 2938, at *18 (June 23, 2005) (commission was earned on a commercial lease).

(n41)Footnote 41. See Mont. Code Ann. § 37-51-313(1) (the act is intended to replace the common law as applied to brokerage relationships); Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 59, § 858-360 (the act replaces and abrogates fiduciary or other duties of a broker to a party based on common law principles of agency).

(n42)Footnote 42. See, e.g., N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 443(6) which provides that nothing in that section shall be construed to limit or alter the application of the common law of agency with respect to residential real estate transactions. See generally Philip Lucrezia, New York's Property Condition Disclosure Act: Extensive Loopholes Leave Buyers and Sellers of Residential Real Property Governed by the Common Law, 77 St. John's L. Rev. 401 (2003).

(n43)Footnote 43. See S.C. Code Ann. § 40-57-137(Q) which states in part, "The provisions of this section which are inconsistent with applicable principles of common law supersede the common law, and the common law may be used to aid in interpreting or clarifying the duties described in this section."

(n44)Footnote 44. See Wardley Corporation v. Welsh, 962 P.2d 86, 89 (Utah Ct. App. 1998) .

(n45)Footnote 45. See Wardley Corp. v. Welsh, 962 P.2d 86, 90 (Utah Ct. App. 1998) .

(n46)Footnote 46. Cf. Wardley Corp. v. Welsh, 962 P.2d 86, 89-90 (Utah Ct. App. 1998) . The licensee owed no written disclosures to the seller about their agency relationship because there was no agency relationship. There was no listing agreement.

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g., Idaho Code § 54-2094; Polyzos v. Cotrupi, 264 Va. 116, 122, 563 S.E.2d 775, 778 (Va. 2002) .

(n48)Footnote 48. Ala. Code §§ 34-27-80 through 34-27-88. See generally J. Clark Pendergrass, Commentary: The Real Estate Consumer's Agency and Disclosure Act: The Case Against Dual Agency, 48 Ala. L. Rev. 277 (1996).

(n49)Footnote 49. Ala. Code § 34-27-87. See also Ind. Code Ann. § 25-34.1-10-15 which states, "The duties and obligations of a licensee set forth in this chapter supersede any fiduciary duties of a licensee to a party based on common law principles of agency to the extent that those common law fiduciary duties are inconsistent with the duties and obligations set forth in this chapter."

(n50)Footnote 50. See, e.g., D.C. Code Ann. § 42-1703(n); Va. Code Ann. § 54.1-2144.

(n51)Footnote 51. See, e.g., S.D. Codified Laws § 36-21A-149; Wis. Stat. § 452.139(1).

(n52)Footnote 52. See Ohio Rev. Code § 4735.52.

(n53)Footnote 53. See Ikola v. Schoene, 264 Ga. App. 338, 341, 590 S.E.2d 750, 752 (2003) . See also Ronald Benton Brown, Joseph M. Grohman & Manuel R. Valcarcel, Real Estate Brokerage: Recent Changes in Relationships and a Procedure, 29 Creighton L. Rev. 25, 28 (1995) ("Common law agency imposes a greater fiduciary duty on brokers than current statutory law."); Ann Morales Olazabail, Redefining Realtor Relationships and Responsibilities: The Failure of State Regulatory Responses, 40 Harv. J. on Legis. 65, 67 (2003) ("Beginning in the mid-1990s, many state legislatures and administrative agencies began to limit realtor liability by creating statutory safe harbors and by explicitly defining realtors' duties to both clients and non-clients."). See generally Sullivan, Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions: Provide Codification of the Relationships Between Real Estate Brokers and Consumers of Brokerage Services, 10 Ga. St. U. L. Rev. 23, 26 (1993).

(n54)Footnote 54. See Idaho Code § 54-2094.

(n55)Footnote 55. See Killearn Partners, Inc. v. Southeast Properties, Inc., 279 Ga. 144, 146, 611 S.E.2d 26, 28 (2005) . Killearn was overruled in part by Amend v. 485 Properties, Inc., 280 Ga. 327, 627 S.E.2d 565 (2006) , but only to the extent that Killearn suggested that a broker could recover based on quantum meruit without proving that the broker was the procuring case.

(n56)Footnote 56. See Killearn Partners, Inc. v. Southeast Properties, Inc., 279 Ga. 144, 147, 611 S.E.2d 26, 29 (2005) . See also Telluride Real Estate Co. v. Penthouse Affiliates, LLC, 996 P.2d 151, 154 (Colo. Ct. App. 1999) , cert. denied 2000 Colo. LEXIS 499, 2000 Colo. J. C.A.R. 1840 (2000) (The expressed purpose of the Colorado Act Concerning Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions is to protect consumers in their interactions with real estate professionals. This Act does not comprehensively address commissions. The court concluded that the Act did not eradicate the common law concept of procuring cause.).

(n57)Footnote 57. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 34-27-86; La. Rev. Stat. § 9:3899; Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 339.810 and 339.830; Mont. Code Ann., § 37-51-315; Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 59, § 858-362.

(n58)Footnote 58. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 34-27-86, Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-30, 111(a).

(n59)Footnote 59. See, e.g., Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-30, 111(b) and (c).

(n60)Footnote 60. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 34-27-86.

(n61)Footnote 61. See, e.g., Wash. Rev. Code § 18.86.100; Va. Code Ann. § 54.1-2142.

(n62)Footnote 62. See Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-30, 104; La. Rev. Stat. § 9:3895; Mo. Rev. Stat. § 339.790; Va. Code Ann. § 54.1-2137.

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

70 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
 CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *
 PART I. Brokerage Relationship Act Disclosures

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.05

§ 3A.05 Violations of Brokerage Relationship Disclosure Acts

[1] Brokerage Relationship Act Compliance

Brokerage relationship acts are generally straightforward. Typically, licensees must make certain written disclosure aimed at informing the public of the types of brokerage relationships that are available and the consequences of entering into a brokerage relationship. The applicable statute typically specifies when the disclosure must be made, to whom the disclosure must be made and the contents of the disclosure document. Many jurisdictions statutorily mandate the contents of the disclosure statement or require that the jurisdiction's real estate commission draft and distribute a disclosure form for use by licensees. n1 Though complying with a brokerage relationship act adds paperwork, it is a relatively simple matter.

There is a dearth of judicial guidance on complying or failing to comply with a brokerage relationship act. The lack of judicial guidance likely stems from the fact that compliance with these acts is so simple. Another reason for the lack of judicial guidance may arise from the fact that if the parties dealing with the licensee are satisfied with the licensee's services, they may not complain even if they later learn that required brokerage relationship disclosures were omitted.

Possible consequences for a failure to comply with such an act would include a disciplinary proceeding against the licensee by the licensing agency n2 and the client's right to void the brokerage agreement. The effect of noncompliance becomes more complicated if the licensee's client discovers the noncompliance after a sales contract has been executed with a third party. n3 A licensee can also violate a brokerage relationship act by failing to make required disclosures to a third party (typically a customer) which whom the licensee is dealing.

Another potential consequence that could be imposed for a licensee's failure to make disclosures under a brokerage relationship act would be to deny the licensee his or her commission should the underlying transaction proceed to the point where a commission would be due to the licensee.

[2] Disciplinary Proceedings

Imposing disclosure obligations upon licensees is of limited use if the licensing agency has no means to enforce a licensee's disclosure obligations. One effective means of achieving compliance is for there to be a punishment or disadvantage for licensees who fail to comply. Typically, if a licensee fails to make a required brokerage relationship disclosure or fails to make the required disclosure in a timely manner, the licensee will be subject to the disciplinary authority of the licensing agency. n4

Licensees are frequently subject to disciplinary proceedings for failing to provide their client with a copy of a listing agreement n5 or for acting as a dual agent without the knowledge of all parties to the transaction. n6 These failures also stem from a lack of adequate disclosure.

[3] Failing to Provide an Agency Disclosure Statement May Result in a Voidable Brokerage Agreement

A broker's failure to provide an agency disclosure form to a seller may result in a voidable listing agreement which is voidable at the seller's discretion. n7 One court in addressing a licensee's untimely delivery of an agency disclosure statement stated that the full measure of protection that the legislature intended to provide to the seller could not be achieved if the listing agent failed to provide the disclosure form prior to entering into the listing agreement. Providing the agency disclosure form after the listing contract was signed did not constitute substantial compliance with the disclosure statute. n8

Whether or not a failure to make a timely disclosure regarding brokerage relationships will allow a seller to void a listing agreement will likely depend upon the facts and circumstances of the case. For example, a seller with sufficient knowledge concerning the information contained in the disclosure form may be held to the listing agreement even though the seller did not receive the disclosure form. n9 Voiding a brokerage agreement after the client has entered into a sales contract with a third party makes this option problematic; this is another fact to consider if this issue arises.

One court has found that providing disclosure statements regarding brokerage relationships to a seller with respect to other properties constituted substantial compliance with the licensee's disclosure obligations with respect to another property listing for which no brokerage relationship disclosure statement had been provided. n10 The facts and circumstances of this case were likely crucial to this holding as the seller in this case was a sophisticated owner of real estate worth millions of dollars and the property involved was not the seller's personal residence. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Wash. Rev. Code § 18.86.120 for an example of statutorily mandated informational pamphlet on the law of real estate agency.

(n2)Footnote 2. *See Habeeb v. Ohio Dept. of Commerce, 2004 Ohio 138, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 130, at *1-9 (Jan. 15, 2004) , appeal denied, 102 Ohio St. 3d 1472, 2004 Ohio 2830, 809 N.E.2d 1158 (2004) (agent fined and suspended for failing to timely comply with disclosure regarding dual agency).

(n3)Footnote 3. Cf. Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 686, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (1992) , review denied (Mar. 11, 1993). A dual agent's failure to disclose prior to entering into the listing agreement, relieved the sellers from the obligation to pay their agent's commission. This failure to disclose, however, did not in itself relieve the sellers from their obligation under the purchase contract because the disclosure statement was given to them just before they signed the purchase contract. The case was remanded to consider whether the sellers could rescind based upon a misrepresentation.

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 34-27-88; Ark. REC Regulations § 8.4; Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 12-61-811; Mich. Comp. Laws Ann. § 339.2512(b); Miss. REC Reg. IV(E)(1); S.C. Code Ann. § 40-57-145(A)(13).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 20-320(7).

(n6)Footnote 6. *See, e.g., Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. § 20-320(3); Habeeb v. Ohio Dept. of Commerce, 2004 Ohio 138, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 130, at *1-9 (Jan. 15, 2004) , appeal denied, 102 Ohio St. 3d 1472, 2004 Ohio 2830, 809

N.E.2d 1158 (2004) (agent fined and suspended for failing to make timely disclosure regarding dual agency).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 679, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 234-235 (1992) , review denied (Mar. 11, 1993).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (1992) , review denied (Mar. 11, 1993).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 686, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 239 (1992) , review denied (Mar. 11, 1993).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Roney v. B.B.C. Corp., 2004 WY 113, 98 P.3d 196, 204 (Wyo. 2004) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Roney v. B.B.C. Corp., 2004 WY 113, 98 P.3d 196, 198 (Wyo. 2004) .

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

71 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.06

§ 3A.06 Introduction

From a buyer's perspective, it would be ideal to know the property's complete history including all prior and current defects and the property's repair history. For older properties this might be a voluminous amount of information. Few sellers are even able to provide such a detailed history. Some sellers are unwilling to disclose all that they know about their property even when such information is readily and conveniently available. Furthermore, there are sellers who will intentionally conceal defects. Because accurate detailed histories are typically unavailable for properties, buyers must rely upon other means to determine the structural soundness and condition of a property.

Property defects provide a fertile ground for litigation against both sellers and their brokers and agents. Buyers are particularly prone to litigation over a property's condition when they believe that misrepresentations have been egregious and/or intentional and the defect materially affects the property's value, safety or usability. For example, a buyer who moves into a home only to have the septic field experience a total system failure one week after settlement is apt to believe that the seller intentionally misrepresented the property and that the seller was fully aware of the imminent septic failure. In such a scenario, it is quite possible that the seller knew of the problem, but chose not to fix the problem prior to sale and chose not to disclose this problem to prospective purchasers.

Licensees typically have not lived in the properties they sell nor have they managed these properties. They do not have the knowledge about the property that the owner often has. Licensees typically pass on representations which their client has made to them regarding a property's condition and history.

Due to the varying facts and circumstances involved in buying and selling property, it is difficult, if not impossible, to determine bright line tests regarding misrepresentations regarding a property. Many factors affect these cases. Issues considered include the severity of the defect, the timing of when the buyer discovered the defect, the sophistication of the parties, whether any specific representations were made regarding the aspect of the property which later proves to be defective and whether a home inspection was performed. A seller's liability for misrepresentation may be affected by the contents of the disclosure statement and whether the house was sold "as is."

The potential liability of a licensee when a buyer is discontent with the residence is likewise not subject to any hard and fast rules due to the fact that the individual circumstances of these cases greatly affect the outcomes. In some cases, the licensee knew of the issue but failed to disclose the information to the buyer. When this occurs, the licensee's duty to make such a disclosure and any resulting liability to the buyer may be affected by the relationship between the parties and whether the buyer was represented by another licensee in the transaction. Though it is likely that the licensee will be liable for failing to disclose a material fact if the licensee had actual knowledge of the defect and failed to inform the buyer, n1 there are some defects where a court might find that the property condition was so open and obvious that the licensee will be found to have had no obligation to make a disclosure. In other cases, the licensee will have no knowledge of the defect, but the buyer may allege that the licensee should have known about the defect. There are also instances where the licensee had no knowledge of the defect and no reasonable way of discovering the defect if the seller actively concealed the defect. n2

All states provide for disciplinary actions against brokers who intentionally misrepresent the real property involved in the transaction. Some states recognize the tort of negligent misrepresentation. There are even cases in which brokers have been held liable for innocent misrepresentations. n3 More difficult issues arise when a broker fails to disclose facts regarding a property. This issue is further complicated by the fact that in some instances the broker is unaware of the condition that later becomes the subject of a dispute. If the broker is unaware of the physical defect, the buyer often asserts that the broker should have been aware of the defect. This in turn raises the issue of whether the broker had a duty to investigate the property's condition.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., 68 Pa. C.S. § 7310 which states, "An agent of a seller or a buyer shall not be liable for any violation of this chapter unless the agent had actual knowledge of a material defect that was not disclosed to the buyer or of a misrepresentation relating to a material defect." Cf. Gordon v. Skopos, 2005 Ohio 4900, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4414, at *9 (Sept. 16, 2005) (knowledge of a defect is a necessary element to an action for fraudulent nondisclosure).

(n2)Footnote 2. It is possible for a seller to hide certain defects in such a manner that even a professional home inspector would be unable to detect the problem without tearing out walls or other structural elements of the home in order to view the defect.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bevins v. Ballard, 655 P.2d 757, 763 (Alaska 1982) . See generally Hagglund and Weimer, Caveat Realtor: The Broker's Liability for Negligent and Innocent Misrepresentations, 20 Real Est. L.J. 149 (1991). See generally Diane M. Allen,, Annot., Real-Estate Broker's Liability to Purchaser for Misrepresentation or Nondisclosure of Physical Defects in Property Sold, 46 A.L.R.4th 546 (1986) .

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

72 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
 CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *
 PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.07

§ 3A.07 Seller Disclosure Statements

[1] Seller Disclosure Statements for Residential Properties Are Widely Used

More than forty states and the District of Columbia require that the seller provide the residential property buyer with a disclosure statement addressing the condition of the property. n1 Some of these states allow the seller to use a disclaimer form if the property is being sold "as is." n2 Even if a state has not statutorily mandated the use of a residential real property seller disclosure form, the state association of Realtors(R) may distribute a similar form for voluntary use by its members' clients. n3

The majority of seller disclosure statutes apply to residential sales even when no licensee is involved. A small minority of jurisdictions, however, restrict these acts to residential sales involving a licensee. n4

Though a statutory disclosure obligation with respect to residential property is imposed upon the seller, n5 a few states impose a duty on a seller's broker to inform the seller of this disclosure obligation. n6 However, licensees are not obligated to verify the accuracy of the seller's disclosure statement. n7

Even if the disclosure obligation is specifically imposed upon the seller, a disgruntled buyer may sue the seller's broker and agent in addition to the seller if the buyer's suit is based on a failure to disclose conditions and defects of the subject property. However, most jurisdictions statutorily provide that a licensee representing a seller is not liable for any error, inaccuracy, or omission in a property disclosure document, unless the licensee had actual knowledge of the error, inaccuracy, or omission by the seller. n8

A few jurisdictions impose an obligation upon a licensee representing a buyer to inform the buyer of his or her rights and obligations under a seller disclosure law. n9 If the buyer is not represented by a licensee, a licensee representing a seller may have an obligation to inform such a buyer of the buyer's rights and obligations under a seller disclosure law. n10

Under some acts, the seller is able to deliver the disclosure statement to a licensee representing the buyer. n11 The licensee representing the buyer may also have a statutory obligation to provide the buyer with a copy of the statement.

n12

[2] Contents of a Seller Disclosure Form

Though some seller disclosure statements are brief and not extremely detailed, most seller disclosure statements request information about the major components of the home. n13 Often the statement is presented in a format where the seller answers questions regarding the condition or status of these systems or components. Though required disclosures obligations imposed on the sale of residential real estate from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, n14 the trend had been to require more disclosure rather than less. Some of these forms address non-physical factors such as easements and off-site conditions.

Often these acts define what constitutes a defect or material fact which should be disclosed. Typically, the following items are subject to disclosure obligations: (1) a condition that would have a significant adverse effect on the value of the property, (2) a condition that would significantly impair the health or safety of future occupants of the property, or (3) a condition that if not repaired, removed, or replaced would significantly shorten or adversely affect the expected normal life of the premises. n15

[3] Disappearance of the Caveat Emptor Doctrine for Residential Property Sales

When a seller must provide residential real estate buyers with a disclosure statement regarding the condition of the property, the traditional principle of "caveat emptor" has been usurped. n16 The trend to eliminate the caveat emptor doctrine has stemmed from the movement to protect consumers. n17 In modern times, many courts have criticized the ancient principle of "caveat emptor." n18 It has been stated that this ancient doctrine has been virtually eliminated in the realm of residential real estate. n19 Even where the caveat emptor principle remains to some degree, n20 disgruntled buyers are often willing to challenge this doctrine by suing the real estate licensees and the seller.

Some jurisdictions allow a seller to provide a disclaimer form in lieu of a seller disclosure statement. n21 The disclaimer form, like the disclosure form, may be prepared by the jurisdiction's real estate commission. n22 If this is allowed, many sellers opt to sell the property "as is" and provide the disclaimer rather than the disclosure form. The widespread use of a disclaimer form essentially eviscerates any disclosure statute and effectively restores the principle of caveat emptor. n23

[4] Common Elements of Residential Realty Disclosure Laws[a] The Sales Contract and Other Disclosure Obligations

A few disclosure laws provide that the disclosure statement becomes part of the purchase agreement. n24 A few disclosure laws also provide that the buyer must acknowledge receipt of the disclosure statement in the real estate purchase contract or in any addendum attached to the contract, or in a separate document. n25

Louisiana's disclosure law specifically provides that the information contained within the property disclosure document is for disclosure purposes only and is not intended to be a part of any contract between the purchaser and seller. n26

Generally, the disclosures made under a seller disclosure law do not limit any other disclosure obligations which the seller may have under another statute or under the common law. n27

[b] The Disclosure Statement Is Not a Warranty or a Home Inspection Substitute

Most disclosure laws contain a provision providing that the disclosure statement is not a warranty made by the seller or the seller's broker n28 nor is the disclosure form intended to be a substitute for an inspection. n29 Some statutes require that the disclosure inform the purchaser that the disclosure statement is not a substitute for a home inspection. n30

Some disclosure laws also provide that the seller and any licensee representing the seller have no liability for defects which occur after the transfer has occurred. n31

[c] Common Exclusions from the Seller's Disclosure Obligation

Most residential disclosure laws apply to the typical sale of a residence. However, not all transfers of residences are subject to disclosure laws. Virginia Code § 55-518 is typical of statutory provisions that exempt certain transfers from the disclosure requirements. This provision exempts the following transfers of residential real property from the disclosure requirements:

1. Transfers pursuant to a court order.
2. Transfers to a beneficiary of a deed of trust by a trustor or successor in interest who is in default; transfers by a trustee under a deed of trust pursuant to a foreclosure sale, or transfers by a beneficiary under a deed of trust who has acquired the real property at a sale conducted pursuant to a foreclosure sale under a deed of trust or has acquired the real property by a deed in lieu of foreclosure.
3. Transfers by a fiduciary in the course of the administration of a decedent's estate, guardianship, conservatorship, or trust.
4. Transfers from one or more co-owners solely to one or more other co-owners.
5. Transfers made solely to any combination of a spouse or a person or persons in the lineal line of consanguinity of one or more of the transferors.
6. Transfers between spouses resulting from a decree of divorce or a property settlement stipulation.
7. Transfers made by virtue of the record owner's failure to pay any federal, state, or local taxes.
8. Transfers to or from any governmental entity or public or quasi-public housing authority or agency.
9. Transfers involving the first sale of a dwelling. n32

Though most residential property seller disclosure laws contain exemptions, the typical sale facilitated by a licensee will not be exempt.

[d] The Disclosures Are the Seller's Representations

These statutes often contain a provision that makes the disclosure statement a representation of the seller, but not the seller's broker or agent. n33 The seller's licensee is not responsible for preparing the disclosure statement. n34 Many disclosure laws specifically state that a licensee is not liable for any error, inaccuracy or omission in any information delivered to a buyer unless the licensee knowingly acted in concert with the seller to commit fraud. n35

Some jurisdictions also provide that the licensee has no liability for a seller's failure to deliver a disclosure statement or for the seller's violation of the disclosure law. n36 Other jurisdictions impose a higher standard of responsibility upon licensees. For example, Hawaii provides that when a seller's agent cannot obtain the disclosure statement and does not have written assurances from the buyer that the disclosure statement was received, the seller's agent must notify the buyer in writing of the buyer's rights to the disclosure statement and rights of rescission. n37

Though seller disclosure laws are not intended to serve as a shield to protect licensees, n38 it appears that some statutory provisions function as shields and effectively reduce a licensee's potential liability. n39 The National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR) and the various state Realtors(R) associations were major proponents of seller disclosure laws. n40 As the primary industry organizations representing licensees, it is logical to conclude that the support of these laws by the NAR's and its state counterparts resulted from self-interest. The NAR argued sellers should have the burden to disclose information concerning their property because sellers were in a superior position to provide this information. The NAR argued that the disclosure would result residential sale prices market value. The NAR also argued that requiring seller disclosure of defects would shelter licensees from liability. n41

Disclosure laws arguably will shelter licensees from liability or at least make it more difficult for a buyer to successfully sue a licensee as these laws include provisions that benefit licensees. Disclosure laws often state that the licensee owes no duty to conduct an independent inspection of the property. Furthermore, these acts often indicate that the licensee typically owes no duty to independently verify the accuracy or completeness of any statement made by the seller. While the licensee cannot ignore statements on a disclosure statement that they know or should know are false, by the same token, they are not expected to verify the truthfulness of the disclosures. n41.1

When alleging fraud or misrepresentation against a licensee, a disclosure statement may make it more difficult if not impossible for a buyer to prove justifiable reliance. A common scenario is for a seller to disclose a defect which is either alleged to be minor or one which the sellers allege has been corrected. Even if the disclosed defect later proves to be material and the seller's disclosure was incomplete and/or inaccurate, the disclosure will have alerted the buyer to the need for further investigation. In this situation, a court may find that the licensee has no liability to the buyer. n42

[e] The Seller's Disclosure Statement Is to Be Completed in Good Faith

Many residential seller disclosure acts expressly require that the disclosures be made in good faith. n43 Some jurisdictions define good faith in this context to mean honesty in fact in the making of the disclosure or the in the conduct of the transaction. n44 Jurisdictions vary in the wording of the provision requiring that the seller exercise good faith in completing the disclosure statement. For example, Hawaii requires that sellers "prepare the disclosure statement in good faith and with due care." n45 The gist of these provisions, no matter how worded, is that the seller should act honestly and carefully in preparing and presenting the disclosure statement.

One court in addressing disclosure forms stated that "disclosure forms are not, as implied by the [sellers] today, meaningless exercises--they surely give rise to enough litigation. You don't just slip into them." n46 Though some licensees and sellers may treat seller disclosure statements as "meaningless exercises," the statutory obligation to prepare these forms in good faith belies this belief. Another court has stated that "By requiring a 'good faith effort' to disclose material defects, the maxim of caveat emptor, 'let the buyer beware', is effectively eliminated." n47

[f] "As Is" Transfers and Disclaimer Statements

Some states allow a seller to opt out of providing a detailed disclosure statement if the seller provides the purchaser with a disclaimer statement. n48 Such disclaimer statements essentially are a declaration that the property is being sold "as is" with the seller making no specific representation about the property's condition. A jurisdiction may limit the use of a disclaimer statement to sellers who have not lived in the property being sold. n49

When a seller is permitted to provide a disclaimer statement rather than a disclosure statement, it may become for the norm for sellers to routinely issue the disclaimer statement. n50 When this becomes an accepted practice in a market, this practice essentially eviscerates the protection that a disclosure statement was meant to provide. The widespread use of a disclaimer statement essentially makes the sale an "as is" sale.

Rather than allowing "as is" sales, some jurisdictions allow the parties to agree in writing that the transfer will not be covered under the disclosure law. n51

Some jurisdictions do not permit a waiver of a buyer's right to receive a disclosure statement. n52 Some jurisdictions also do not allow a seller to avoid providing a disclosure statement by designating the sale "as is." n53

If a property is being sold "as is," it appears that it would be improper for the seller to provide a seller disclosure statement if the jurisdiction permits the seller to provide a disclaimer statement instead of a disclosure statement. One court faced with this situation has stated that while Virginia law permitted an owner to provide the buyer with a disclaimer which made clear that the purchaser was receiving the property "as is," the seller could not have it both ways by enticing a buyer with a disclosure while simultaneously using an "as is" clause. n54

[g] Pre-Printed Disclosure Forms and Statutorily Mandated Forms

Most states, either through statute or regulation, provide the disclosure statement through the state's real estate commission. n55 Such pre-printed forms tend to be comprehensive. If alternative forms are allowed, the alternative form usually must contain the same information as is on the statutory form. n56 The seller disclosure form usually addressed the condition of the home's structural components and appliances. n57 This statement often includes either a checklist of various property conditions and improvements, such as the foundation, electrical system, roof, plumbing, etc. or a series of questions regarding these elements of the residence. It is intended to inform the buyer of any and all problems with the property. Most forms include boilerplate language that states that the statement is not a warranty of any kind by the seller, and that it is not a substitute for any inspection or warranties the buyer may wish to obtain. In contrast to pre-printed forms supplied by a jurisdiction's real estate commission, some statutory provisions contain the form of the disclosure statement which the sellers must use. n58

Illinois has an unusual requirement; a copy of the Residential Real Property Disclosure Act (except for section 35 (765 ILCS 77/35) which contains the disclosure form to be used), must be printed on or as a part of the Residential Real Property Disclosure Report form. n59

Some jurisdictions require that licensees make copies of the form available to members of the public. n60

[h] Delivery of the Disclosure Statement

Jurisdictions vary in their determination of when a buyer is entitled to receive the seller disclosure statement. Sometimes this statement must be delivered before a buyer makes an offer. n61 Some disclosure laws require that the disclosure be made before the parties have entered into a sales contract. n62 Another possible delivery deadline is sometime before the transfer of title. n63 Other jurisdictions require that this statement be delivered after the buyer has made an offer. If the delivery of the statement occurs after an offer has been made, the buyer is typically given a time period in which the buyer can withdraw his or her offer as a result of information disclosed in the statement. n64

Indiana requires that the seller complete and sign a disclosure form and submit the form to a prospective buyer before an offer is accepted. n65 Prior to closing, an accepted offer is not enforceable against the buyer until the seller and the prospective buyer have signed the disclosure form. However, after closing, the seller's failure to deliver a disclosure statement form to the buyer does not by itself invalidate a real estate transaction. n66

In Kentucky, a seller using a licensee is required to complete and sign the disclosure form when the seller executes any listing agreement or similar agreement by which a licensee intends to market the property. In turn, the listing agent is required to provide a copy of the disclosure form to any prospective buyer or a buyer's authorized representative upon request. In addition, a copy of the form must be delivered by the listing agent to any prospective purchaser or the purchaser's representative within seventy-two (72) hours of the listing agent's receipt of a written and signed offer to purchase. n67

One commentator has asserted providing disclosures to buyers early in the buying process increases the efficiency of seller disclosure laws. n68 When buyers receive the disclosures after they have made an offer, buyers often will not withdraw from the transaction. With respect to when a buyer receives the seller disclosure statement, this commentator has concluded as follows:

Latecoming disclosure reduces the ability of buyers to negotiate rationally and to withdraw from unfavorable transactions. The efficacy of disclosure is particularly important because of the significant costs that mandatory disclosure entails. When market failure or noneconomic concerns prompt disclosure requirements, early disclosure creates a more effective provision of information to justify these costs. In the example of residential real estate defect disclosure, buyers who learn of defect information following their submission of an offer, or even shortly before the closing, are likely to negotiate inadequate price discounts and persist in unfavorable transactions. Requiring disclosure prior to the buyer's offer or during the initial search process can ameliorate these information processing biases and improve the efficacy of defect disclosure. n69

A majority of states with seller disclosure laws do not require disclosure prior to a buyer making an offer. Requiring disclosure at an earlier time would provide buyers with information they would be more likely to effectively use in formulating an offering price. n70 Once a buyer has psychologically committed to buying a particular property, the buyer may be reluctant to withdraw an offer even though the disclosure statement would make withdrawal of the offer prudent. n71

Some disclosure laws specify how the statement should be delivered to the buyer. Means specified often include mail and personal delivery. n72 Some jurisdictions allow delivery by facsimile. n73 Typically, delivery to the buyer's spouse is considered to be delivery to the buyer. n74 Illinois law specifically state that the disclosure statement can be delivered by a private delivery service. n75

In Iowa, if the seller is represented by a licensee, it is the licensee's responsibility to deliver the disclosure statement to the buyer, unless the seller or buyer has instructed the licensee otherwise in writing. n76

A licensee who fails to deliver a seller disclosure statement to a buyer or who intentionally withholds such a statement from a buyer will be found to have breached the licensee's duties to the buyer. n77

[i] The Disclosure Statement Must Be Kept Current Through Amendments and Supplements

Seller disclosure statements are prepared based upon the seller's knowledge at the time the statement is completed by the seller. n78 Most disclosure laws require that if information in a disclosure statement becomes inaccurate after the disclosure statement is delivered to the buyer, the resulting inaccuracy does not violate the law, but the seller must deliver an amendment for the disclosure statement to the buyer. n79 Such an amendment typically extends any rescission period that the buyer has. n80 This period also typically cover the time after the statement is delivered to the buyer, but prior to settlement. n81 The right to rescind may be limited however, to the information contained in the amendment. n82

Though most seller disclosure acts require that disclosure forms be amended to reflect new information or corrections, not all acts impose an obligation to update the disclosure statement. For example, the Ohio's disclosure act imposes no obligation to update the statement; that disclosure act only requires that the disclosure statement be an accurate statement of the seller's knowledge of the condition of the house as of the date the form was signed. n83

Most states require that amendments to the disclosure statement be in writing. n84

[j] Approximations and Estimates May Be Used

Most disclosure statement laws provide that if an item that is required in the disclosure statement is unknown or is unavailable to the seller, an approximation of the information may be used but the approximation must be reasonable, clearly identified as an approximation, based on the best information available to the seller, and not used to avoid the disclosure requirements. n85

[k] Information Obtained from Public Sources

Many disclosure laws provide that the seller is not liable for any error, inaccuracy, or omission of any information required to be delivered to the prospective buyer if the error, inaccuracy, or omission was not within the seller's actual knowledge or was based on information provided by a public agency. n86 These provisions typically provide that the seller and the seller's licensee are relieved from any further duty with respect to that item of information. n87

[l] Information Obtained from Professionals Hired to Inspect the Property

Many disclosure laws provide that the seller is not liable for any error, inaccuracy, or omission of any information required to be delivered to the prospective buyer if the error, inaccuracy, or omission was not within the actual knowledge of the owner or was based on information provided by another person with a professional license or special knowledge who provided a written or oral report or opinion that the seller reasonably believed to be correct. n88 Under these provisions, the delivery of a report or opinion prepared by a professional hired to inspect the property in connection with the proposed sale is considered to be sufficient compliance for application of this exemption from liability. n89

[m] Other Parties Entitled to Receive a Copy of the Disclosure Form

Indiana statutorily provides that an appraiser retained to appraise the residential real estate for which the disclosure form has been prepared must be given a copy of the form upon request. n90 This requirement applies only to appraisals made for the buyer or an entity from which the buyer is seeking financing. n91

It should be anticipated that appraisers and home inspectors in other jurisdictions may request a copy of the seller disclosure statement.

[n] A Buyer's Rescission Rights

Typically, disclosure laws allow a purchaser to rescind the sale if the purchaser receives the disclosure statement after a sales offer has been made or accepted but before the transaction has closed and title has been transferred. n92 The law usually specifies the time frame in which the rescission must be made. n93 The disclosure law usually provides that a buyer's rescission must be accomplished via a written document delivered to the seller or the seller's licensee. n94 The disclosure law may require that the buyer base his or her rescission on a specific objection to a disclosure in the disclosure statement. n95 The buyer may also be required in his or her notice of rescission to specifically identify the disclosure objected to by the buyer. n96 If the buyer exercises his or her right to rescind, the buyer incurs no legal liability to the seller because of the rescission and the buyer is entitled to a return of any deposits that the buyer has made. n97

In some jurisdictions, rescission is not an available remedy if the buyers made their offer and entered into a sales contract after they received the seller disclosure statement. n98 When this rule applies, a buyer's primary remedy will be an action for damages. n99

Even if a buyer, by written document in accordance with the statute, rescinds the sales contract or his or her offer, the buyer's overall conduct may be such that a court will conclude that the contract was not rescinded. n100 If a buyer rescinds the contract through a written document, the buyer should ensure that his or her conduct is consistent with the rescission.

[o] Violations of the Residential Property Seller Disclosure Laws

Seller disclosure laws usually address a purchaser's possible remedies for a violation of the disclosure law. Often such laws provide that a transfer is not invalidated because a seller failed to comply with the disclosure law. n101 Many of these disclosure laws provide that the purchaser can recover any actual damages caused by any misrepresentations made on the disclosure statement. n102 Often this is the only and sole remedy under a seller disclosure act. n103 Some jurisdictions allow an aggrieved buyer to recover in excess of actual damages if the seller's violation was wilful. n104 Some disclosure laws also allow the successful party to recover attorney's fees and costs. n105

The specific statutory provision must be read in order to determine what constitutes a violation of the disclosure law when the alleged violation involves some type of misstatement. For example, the Iowa Real Estate Disclosure Act n106 states that the transferor "shall not be liable for [any] error, inaccuracy, or omission in information required in a disclosure statement, unless that person has actual knowledge of the inaccuracy, or fails to exercise ordinary care in obtaining the information." n107 In interpreting this provision, the Supreme Court of Iowa stated that a plaintiff had to show actual knowledge of a problem that was required to be disclosed, but not did not have to prove fraud. n108 A seller could be found liable under the act for something less than a knowingly inaccurate disclosure, i.e., if the seller failed to exercise ordinary care in obtaining the information to be put on the disclosure form. n109

Under some acts, a buyer's sole remedy may be the right to cancel a sales contract based upon disclosures made in a disclosure statement. A court interpreting the North Carolina Residential Property Act n110 found that there was no separate action for damages under that act as the sole remedy provided for was cancellation of the contract. n111 Unlike similar acts in other jurisdictions, the North Carolina act lacked a provision allowing a buyer to recover actual damages caused by a violation of the act. n112

In New York, if a seller fails to timely deliver a disclosure statement, the buyer is entitled to receive upon the transfer of title a credit of five hundred dollars against the agreed upon purchase price of the residential real property. n113 If a New York seller makes willful misrepresentations on the disclosure statement, the seller may be held liable for the buyer's actual damages. n114

An issue that can arise is the purchaser's right to rely upon the disclosure statement. In one case, the sellers argued that the defects were patent and therefore could not be made the subject of a misrepresentation on their disclosure statement. The court rejected the notion that the defects were patent because it took a person with knowledge of construction to discern the defects. This court also rejected the sellers' argument that the purchasers could not rely on the representations made in the disclosure statement because they had conducted their own investigation of the house. The court stated that the reason this argument "does not stand is because there are three well-recognized exceptions that practically swallow up the general rule that a party who conducts an independent investigation will not be permitted to say he relied on another's misrepresentation." n115 The court found that each exception applied to this case. First, if the party making the independent investigation makes a partial rather than a full investigation, and relies on the misrepresentations as well as the investigation, the party may maintain an action for fraud. This exception applied because the purchasers did not conduct a structural inspection. Therefore, they only partially inspected the house, even though they viewed the house themselves, had the house appraised, and had it inspected for mechanical problems. Second, if facts are peculiarly within the knowledge of the party making the representations, the buyer may rely on such representations if the buyer does not stand on "equal footing" with the seller and the truth is difficult for the buyer to ascertain. In this case, the parties did not stand on equal footing because the sellers had lived in the house. The court stated, "In the vast majority of cases, a seller, who has lived in a property, as opposed to a mere investor, would have knowledge which is superior to a buyer's knowledge concerning the property's condition." n116 The third exception is that if the seller makes a distinct and specific representation, then the buyer has the right to rely on that representation, even if the parties stand on equal footing or have equal knowledge or means of information. In this case, the sellers made distinct and specific representations in the disclosure statement. Therefore, there was no merit to their argument that the purchasers could not have relied on the representations because they could have had a structural inspection, but chose not to undertake this type of inspection. n117

The effect of the disclosure statements has been to shift the focus of litigation between sellers and disgruntled purchasers who believe that the seller knowingly passed off a defective house. A frequent fact situation involves a disclosure statement that indicates that the home has no defects when the statement is prepared. Shortly after the purchaser closes on the sale and moves in, he or she experiences a major problem (e.g., a flooded basement). Through discovery, the purchaser learns that the seller had experienced the same problem and that the seller's "repairs" hid any visible signs of the prior problem. The seller alleges that he or she repaired the problem when it first occurred many years ago and that the seller had not experienced any problems since the repair. Some sellers appear to be reluctant to disclose any problems they experienced with the home, instead opting to claim a successful repair if the problem recurs after the sale.

The particular facts of the particular case and the specifics of the disclosure law will determine a court's decision when the purchaser pursues litigation alleging a misleading, inaccurate or incomplete disclosure statement. If the defects the seller has failed to disclose are egregious or the facts clearly indicate bad faith and lack of fair dealing, courts appear inclined to find on behalf of purchasers. For example, in one case the sellers represented that there had been few problems with the home they were selling. In fact, the sellers had previously sued the prior owners of the house alleging numerous structural problems. The prior litigation and damning testimony given by one of the sellers in a deposition connected with this prior litigation showed that the sellers knew that their home had serious defects which they intentionally failed to disclose. In fact, it was the purchasers' subsequent knowledge of this deposition from the prior litigation that caused them to rescind the sales contract. When the sellers sued, the court found that the purchasers were entitled to rescind the sales contract. n118

When the facts are not as egregious, courts are more willing to take more of a caveat emptor approach to the disclosure statement. One court stated that the Georgia disclosure law does not require that sellers disclose every past repair made to their homes; rather, they must inform potential buyers of current defects of which they are aware. n119 However, it should be noted that the alleged defects in this case involved a swimming pool, the disclosure statement did not address the swimming pool, and there was no active concealment of the pool's condition.

Litigation regarding property disclosure statements will raise issues of merger and whether the disclosure statement is part of the parties' contract. A merger or entire agreement clause may bar purchasers from asserting reliance on the alleged misrepresentation not contained within the contract. n120 However, a merger clause usually cannot be used as a defense by a seller against a buyer's tort actions of fraud and negligent misrepresentation. n121

In some jurisdictions disgruntled purchasers will have the option of pursuing a claim concerning misrepresentations made on a seller's disclosure statement in small claims court if the damages claimed do not exceed the jurisdictional limits of this court. n122

[p] Disclosure Acts May Contain a Statute of Limitations

Residential property disclosure acts often have a specific statute of limitations period that is relatively short. n123 Frequently, a buyer has a one-year period in which to file suit. n124 The applicable statute must be examined to determine when the statute begins to run. For example, in Illinois, the one-year period commences from the earlier of the date of possession, date of occupancy, or date of recording of an instrument of conveyance of the residential real property. n125 In Virginia, the one-year period begins on the date the buyer received the disclosure or disclaimer statement. n126

The shorter statute of limitations may provide both licensees and sellers with a defense should the buyer sue them over property defects and the seller disclosure statement. n127

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Katherine A. Pancak et al., Residential Disclosure Laws: The Further Demise of Caveat Emptor, 24 Real Est. L.J. 291, 298-99 (1996) (reporting that a little more than half the states have enacted mandatory seller disclosure legislation).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702(c)(1) (vendor of single family residential real property must complete and deliver to each purchaser either a written residential property condition disclosure statement or a written residential property disclaimer statement); N.C. Gen. Stat. 47E-4(a)(2) (disclosure statement may state that the owner makes no representations as to the characteristics and condition of the real property or any improvements to the real property except as otherwise provided in the real estate contract); Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-5-202 (the owner of the residential property shall furnish to a purchaser either a residential property disclosure statement or a disclaimer statement); Va. Code Ann. § 55-519(A) (the owner of the residential real property shall furnish to a purchaser either a residential property disclosure statement or a residential property disclaimer statement).

(n3)Footnote 3. Arizona is such a jurisdiction. The Arizona Association of Realtors(R) publishes a Residential Seller's Property Disclosure Statement with Seller Advisory. This form may be obtained on this association's website at: <http://www.aaronline.com/>.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 324.360 (applying to sales of single-family residential dwellings if any person licensee receives compensation); Miss. Code Ann. § 89-1-501 (applying only to transfers only when the transfer is by, or with the aid of, a duly licensed real estate broker or salesperson); Okla. Stat. tit. 60, § 832(2) (providing that disclosure or disclaimer statement is required only if seller is represented by real estate licensee or if requested by purchaser).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2, 120(3)(i).

(n6)Footnote 6. See La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 9:3199(A); Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702(m)(1); N.Y. Real Prop. § 466; N.C. Gen. Stat. § 47E-8; S.C. Code Ann. § 27-50-70; Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-5-206; Va. Code Ann. § 55-523. See also Okla. Stat. tit. 60, § 836(A) (A licensee representing or assisting a seller must obtain from the seller a disclaimer statement or a disclosure statement and any amendment required by the Residential Property Condition Disclosure Act and make the statement available to potential purchasers prior to acceptance of an offer to purchase.).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2, 120(10).

(n8)Footnote 8. See La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 9:3199(B).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702(m)(2); N.Y. Real Prop. § 466; N.C. Gen. Stat. § 47E-8; Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-5-206; Va. Code Ann. § 55-523. See also Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2, 120(10) (only obligation of a buyer's agent under the disclosure law is to assure that a copy of the statement is delivered to the buyer on or before the effective date of any purchase agreement which binds the buyer to purchase the property subject to the disclosure statement); Okla. Stat. tit. 60, § 836 (B) (licensee representing the purchaser must obtain and make available to the purchaser a disclaimer statement or a disclosure statement prior to the acceptance of an offer to purchase).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Va. Code Ann. § 55-523.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Minn. Stat. § 513.55.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Minn. Stat. § 513.55.

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., N.C. Gen. Stat. § 47E-4; 68 Pa. C.S. § 7304.

(n14)Footnote 14. Some states impose minimal disclosure obligations while others impose extensive disclosure obligations. California appears to have the largest number of required disclosures. California statutorily requires written disclosures regarding natural hazards, Mello-Roos bonds and taxes (special assessment districts), ordinance location, earthquake guides, smoke detectors, lead-based paint hazards, environmental hazards, advisability of title insurance, water heater's security against earthquake, locations of registered sex offenders (Megan's law), visual inspection by agents, agency relationship disclosure, negotiability of real estate commissions and common interest ownership.

(n15)Footnote 15. See Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-4; La. Rev. Stat. § 9:3196; Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 33, § 171.

(n16)Footnote 16. *See Snow v. Opal, 2002 Del. C.P. LEXIS 26, at *12 (May 20, 2002) ; Arthur v. Brick, 565 N.W.2d 623, 625 (Iowa Ct. App. 1997) ; Parmely v. Hildebrand, 603 N.W.2d 713, 716, 1999 SD 157 (S.D. 1999) ; Engelhart v. Kramer, 570 N.W.2d 550, 554, 1997 SD 124 (1997) . See also Rogers v. Meiser, 2003 OK 6, 13, 68 P.3d 967, 976 (Okla. 2003) (The Residential Property Condition Disclosure Act gives the buyer a remedy in situations where under the common law there would be no remedy because of application of the doctrine of caveat emptor.). See generally George Lefcoe, Property Condition Disclosure Forms: How the Real Estate Industry Eased the Transition from Caveat Emptor to "Seller Tell All," 39 Real Prop. Prob. & Tr. J. 193 (2004); Roberts, Disclosure Duties in Real Estate Sales and Attempts to Reallocate the Risk, 34 Conn. L. Rev. 1 (2001); Washburn, Residential Real Estate Condition Disclosure Legislation, 44 DePaul L. Rev. 381 (1995). But cf. Craig W. Dallan, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability and the Effect of the "As Is", 54 Fla. L. Rev. 395, 405 (2002) ("Caveat emptor in the sale of real property, depending upon the jurisdiction and the authority consulted, is alternatively (1) still the rule, (2) abandoned, or (3) still relevant, but partially abandoned. Most courts and commentators probably would agree that caveat emptor has been sharply limited but continues to play a role in real property sales in most jurisdictions.").*

(n17)Footnote 17. Cf. Idaho Code § 55-2502 which states, "In order to promote the public health, safety and welfare and to protect consumers; it is the purpose of the provisions of this chapter to require sellers of residential real property as defined in this chapter to disclose certain defects in the residential real property to a prospective buyer."

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g., Beavers v. Lamplighters Realty, Inc. 1976 OK CIV APP 48, 556 P.2d 1328, 1331 (Okla. Ct. App. 1976) where the court stated that caveat emptor was "one of the less admirable hand-me-downs of our Anglo-Saxon common law heritage...that exalts deceit, condemns fair dealing, and scorns the credulous."

(n19)Footnote 19. Murray, AIDS, Ghosts, Murder: Must Real Estate Brokers and Sellers Disclose?, 27 Wake Forest L. Rev. 689 (1992). See Parmely v. Hildebrand, 603 N.W.2d 713, 716, 1999 SD 157 (1999) ("In South Dakota, 'caveat emptor' is a doctrine of the past when it comes to transferring real property."). Cf. Moore v. Prudential Residential Services Limited Partnership, 849 So. 2d 914, 923 (Ala. 2002) , rehearing denied, 2002 Ala. LEXIS 379 (Ala. Nov. 15, 2002) ("Although Alabama has abrogated the rule of caveat emptor in the sale of new real estate, that rule still applies in the sale of used real estate."), Pines v. Persson, 14 Wis. 2d 590, 596, 111 N.W.2d 409, 412 (Wis. 1961) (residential landlord-tenant case) ("The need and social desirability of adequate housing for people in this era of rapid population increases is too important to be rebuffed by that obnoxious legal cliché, caveat emptor.").

(n20)Footnote 20. Ohio is one state where the caveat emptor principle remains.

(n21)Footnote 21. See Va. Code Ann. § 55-519. Oklahoma allows a seller to use a disclaimer form if the seller has never occupied the property. See Okla. Stat. tit. 60, § 833(A)(1).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702(c)(2).

(n23)Footnote 23. Virginia allows residential sellers to sell property "as is" and provide a disclaimer form. In many regions of Virginia, this is the norm and a seller who provides the disclosure statement is rare. See Va. Code Ann. § 55-519.

(n24)Footnote 24. See Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 2573. See also N.Y. Real Prop. § 462 ("A copy of the property condition disclosure statement containing the signatures of both seller and buyer shall be attached to the real estate purchase contract.").

(n25)Footnote 25. See Haw. Rev. Stat. §§ 508D-4 (2) and 508D-12; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.954 (2); R.I. Gen. Laws § 5-20.8-2(c). See also Idaho Code § 55-2509 (form recipient signs and dates a copy of the form).

(n26)Footnote 26. See La. R.S. § 9:3198(D)(1).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Idaho Code § 55-2514; 765 ILCS 77/45; La. Rev. Stat. § 9:3200; Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 33, § 178; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.961.

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g., Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 2574; Idaho Code § 55-2507; Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-9; La. Rev. Stat. § 9:3198(D)(2); Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702(e)(3)(iv); Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 113.140; Okla. Stat. tit. 60, § 833(B)(2).

(n29)Footnote 29. See Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 2574; La. Rev. Stat. § 9:3198(D)(2).

(n30)Footnote 30. See Idaho Code § 55-2507; Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702(e)(3)(ii); Ohio Rev. Code Ann. 5302.30(D)(1), Okla. Stat. tit. 60, § 833(B)(2).

(n31)Footnote 31. See Del. Code Ann., tit. 6, § 2575.

(n32)Footnote 32. These sample exemptions are taken from Virginia Code § 55-518.

(n33)Footnote 33. See D.C. Code § 42-1311; Ore. Rev. Stat. § 105.480.

(n34)Footnote 34. See Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-7(b).

(n35)Footnote 35. See D.C. Code § 42-1311; Iowa Code § 558A.6; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.964. See also Gardner v. Wandersee, 2007 Iowa App. LEXIS 375, at *4-*5 (Iowa Ct. App. Apr. 11, 2007) (With respect to the seller's disclosure statement, a licensee is subject to liability if the licensee had actual knowledge of the inaccuracy, or failed to exercise ordinary care in obtaining the information. A licensee's standard of reporting is one of good faith;), citing Iowa Code § 558A.3(1); Garza v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc., 2004 Tex. App. LEXIS 7590 (Tex. Ct. App. Aug. 25, 2004), review denied, 2005 Tex. LEXIS 80 (Tex. Jan. 21, 2005) (The disclosure notice required by Tex. Prop. Code Ann. § 5.008 is a disclosure by the seller only, and not by the seller and broker regardless of whether the broker has also signed the disclosure notice. The listing broker and realty company could not be held liable for any alleged misrepresentations or nondisclosures in the seller's disclosure notice.).

(n36)Footnote 36. See D.C. Code § 42-1311.

(n37)Footnote 37. See Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-7(b).

(n38)Footnote 38. Cf. Idaho Code § 55-2518 ("Nothing contained in this chapter shall in any way limit or reduce the duties that a real estate licensee owes to his or her client or to the general public.").

(n39)Footnote 39. Cf. Walker v. Johnson, 278 Ga. App. 806, 811, 630 S.E.2d 70, 75-76 (2006) overruled in part, Kleber v. City of Atlanta, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 396, at *15 (Mar. 28, 2008) (on other grounds) (The disclosure statement was limited to representations made by the seller. Summary judgment was properly granted to the real estate agent on the buyers' claims of fraud.), reconsideration dismissed; Dallon, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability and the Effect of the "As Is" Clause, 54 Fla. L. Rev. 395, 428 (2002) ("Many of these [seller disclosure] statutes were introduced and supported by real estate brokers concerned about their own potential liability to purchasers. (footnote omitted) The real estate industry viewed these statutes as means to limit the liability of real estate brokers by imposing affirmative disclosure requirements upon sellers and limiting brokers' duties to investigate or disclose."); Kenneth M. Nakasone, Recent Developments: Seller Beware: New Law Protects Hawaii Home Buyers, 18 Hawaii L. Rev. 981, 1007 (1996), quoting T.J. Howard, Seller Disclosure Lets Buyer Know the Score, Chicago Tribune, May 14, 1993, at C3 ("The fact that the National Association of Realtors is the champion of seller disclosure indicates the trade association expects the new law to benefit real estate agents.").

(n40)Footnote 40. See Leroy Gatlin II, Note: Reforming Residential Real Estate Transactions: An Analysis of Oklahoma's Disclosure Statute, 22 Okla. City U.L. Rev. 735, 743-744 (1997); Stephanie Stern, Temporal Dynamics of Disclosure: The Example of Residential Real Estate Conveyancing, 2005 Utah L. Rev. 57, 61-62 (2005).

(n41)Footnote 41. See Leroy Gatlin II, Note: Reforming Residential Real Estate Transactions: An Analysis of Oklahoma's Disclosure Statute, 22 Okla. City U.L. Rev. 735, 743-744 (1997).

(n42)Footnote 41.1. See White v. Bowman, 304 S.W.3d 141, 149-150 (2009) .

(n43)Footnote 42. For such a factual scenario where the licensee was found to have no liability to the buyers over a failed septic system, see Dasher v. Davis, 274 Ga. App. 788, 789-790, 618 S.E.2d 728, 730-731 (2005) , cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 59 (Jan. 17, 2006) . See also Kramer v. Eagle Eye Home Inspections, Inc., 14 Neb. App. 691, 716 N.W.2d 749 (2006) overruled in part by, Tracy Broad. Corp. v. Telemetrix, Inc., 17 Neb. Ct. App. 112, 756 N.W.2d 742 (2008) . (The sellers indicated on the property condition disclosure statement that there had not been damage due to wood-destroying insects, but that there had been treatment for wood-destroying insects. The buyer could not show that he reasonably relied on the disclosure statement and that he suffered damage as a result, because the buyer had a termite inspection and treatment done on the home prior to closing and received a credit on the sale price for such treatment.) overruled in part by Tracy Broad. Corp. v. Telemetrix, Inc., 17 Neb. Ct. App. 112, 121, 756 N.W.2d 742, 750 (2008) (on other grounds); Niermeyer v. Cook's Termite & Pest Control, Inc., 2006 Ohio 640, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 579 at *14-*23 (Feb. 14, 2006) (When buyers had notice of prior termite infestation, buyers had a duty to make further a investigation. The first purchase contract fell through because the issue of termites was not resolved. All parties had signed a mutual release. The parties subsequently signed a second purchase agreement, at a reduced price, providing in part that the buyers had completed a home inspection and accepted the house "as is." The buyers could not prove that the licensees had caused the damages claimed.).

(n44)Footnote 43. See Alaska Stat. § 34.70.060; D.C. Code § 42-1306; Iowa Code § 558A.3; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.960; Minn. Stat. § 513.55; Miss. Code Ann. § 89-1-511.

(n45)Footnote 44. See D.C. Code § 42-1306; Idaho Code § 55-2515; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.960; Miss. Code Ann. § 89-1-511; Ohio Rev. Code Ann. 5302.30(A)(1); Wis. Stat. § 709.06.

(n46)Footnote 45. Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-9.

(n47)Footnote 46. Behniwal v. Mix, 133 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1031, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 331 (2005) . This court also stated that cashing a check or initialing a small change in escrow instructions "does not require nearly the sort of mind-wracking deliberation that a disclosure form does (or should)."

(n48)Footnote 47. Snow v. Opal, 2002 Del. C.P. LEXIS 26, at *12 (May 20, 2002) , quoting Osciak v. Coppol, Del. CCP, C.A. No. 97-04-311, 1998 Del. C.P. LEXIS 65, at *4 , James, J. (Jan. 9, 1998).

(n49)Footnote 48. See Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702(c). See also Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-5-202 (seller may provide a disclaimer form if the buyer waives the required disclosure statement). Cf. S.C. Code Ann. § 27-50-110 (disclosure act is not intended to prevent parties from entering into agreements for the sale of real property "as is").

(n50)Footnote 49. See Okla. Stat. tit. 60, § 833 (A)(1).

(n51)Footnote 50. This has become the practice in parts of Virginia since the seller can opt to provide the disclaimer statement.

(n52)Footnote 51. See Alaska Stat. § 34.70.110; Minn. Stat. § 513.60; Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 113.150(6). See also Wash. Rev. Code § 64.06.020 (disclosure statement must be provided unless the buyer has expressly waived the right to receive the disclosure statement); Wis. Stat. § 709.08 (buyer may waive right to receive the disclosure statement, waiver must be written).

(n53)Footnote 52. See Cal Civ Code § 1102.1. See also Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702(k)(1) (purchaser's rights under the seller disclosure law may not be waived in the contract of sale and any attempted waiver is void).

(n54)Footnote 53. See Cal Civ Code § 1102.1.

(n55)Footnote 54. See Zirkle v. Cendant Mobility Servs. Corp., 61 Va. Cir. 3, 2003 Va. Cir. LEXIS 26, at *4 (Jan. 7, 2003), citing Va. Code Ann. § 55-519.

(n56)Footnote 55. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 34.70.050; Del. Code Ann. tit. 6, § 2578; Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-7; La. Rev. Stat. § 9:3198; Bergen v. Baker, 264 Mich. App. 376, 383, 691 N.W.2d 770, 775 (2004).

(n57)Footnote 56. See Idaho Code § 55-2506.

(n58)Footnote 57. See, e.g., Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-7; Okla. Stat. tit. 60, § 833.

(n59)Footnote 58. See 765 ILCS 77/35; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.957; N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 462; Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-5-210; Tex. Prop. Code § 5.008.

(n60)Footnote 59. See 765 ILCS 77/65.

(n61)Footnote 60. See Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.958.

(n62)Footnote 61. See Alaska Stat. § 34.70.010; S.D. Codified Laws § 43-4-38.

(n63)Footnote 62. See 765 ILCS 77/20; Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-10; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.954(1)(a); Minn. Stat. § 513.55. See also N.C. Gen. Stat. § 47E-5(no later than the time the purchaser makes an offer).

(n64)Footnote 63. See Miss. Code Ann. § 89-1-503; Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 113.130.

(n65)Footnote 64. See Alaska Stat. § 34.70.020, Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 33, § 174; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.954(3); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 47E-5.

(n66)Footnote 65. See Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-10(a).

(n67)Footnote 66. See Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-10(c).

(n68)Footnote 67. See Ky. Rev. Stat. § 324.360(4).

(n69)Footnote 68. See Stephanie Stern, Temporal Dynamics of Disclosure: The Example of Residential Real Estate Conveyancing, 2005 Utah L. Rev. 57, 60 (2005).

(n70)Footnote 69. Stephanie Stern, Temporal Dynamics of Disclosure: The Example of Residential Real Estate Conveyancing, 2005 Utah L. Rev. 57, 94-95 (2005).

(n71)Footnote 70. See Stephanie Stern, Temporal Dynamics of Disclosure: The Example of Residential Real Estate Conveyancing, 2005 Utah L. Rev. 57, 67 (2005).

(n72)Footnote 71. See Stephanie Stern, Temporal Dynamics of Disclosure: The Example of Residential Real Estate Conveyancing, 2005 Utah L. Rev. 57, 81 (2005), where this author states, "Receiving information in the middle or final stages of a transaction, rather than at the outset, has two primary effects. First, consumers are less likely to negotiate for appropriate discounts in pricing when they receive latecoming information about defects. This has a distorting effect on real estate markets and suggests that consumers will overpay in states that allow disclosure to occur midstream or even end-game in a transaction. Second, late disclosure encourages persistence in transactions so that a subset of consumers will complete real estate purchases that they would not have otherwise completed. The cognitive persistence effect is not an absolute or exclusive factor in decision making, but it is an important one. Consumers will consider costs and benefits, market conditions, and personal goals, but will underweight latecoming information in this calculus. These biases are likely heightened by the highly personal nature of home buying and the emotional context of these decisions. (footnotes omitted).

(n73)Footnote 72. See Cal. Civ. Code § 1102.10; Idaho Code § 55-2510; 765 ILCS 77/50; Iowa Code § 558A.2; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.963.

(n74)Footnote 73. See D.C. Code § 42-1309; Idaho Code § 55-2510; 765 ILCS 77/50; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.963.

(n75)Footnote 74. See Cal. Civ. Code § 1102.10; Iowa Code § 558A.2.

(n76)Footnote 75. See 765 ILCS 77/50.

(n77)Footnote 76. See Iowa Code § 558A.5 (2). See also Miss. Code Ann. § 89-1-521 (broker who obtains an offer must deliver the statement to the buyer).

(n78)Footnote 77. See Ikola v. Schoene, 264 Ga. App. 338, 341-343, 590 S.E.2d 750, 753-754 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) Palmer v. Miss. Real Estate Comm'n, 14 So. 3d 67, 72-73 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008) (en banc), reh'g, en banc, denied, 2009 Miss. App. LEXIS 157 (Mar. 24, 2009) .

(n79)Footnote 78. See Minn. Stat. § 513.55.

(n80)Footnote 79. See Alaska Stat. § 34.70.040; Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-13; Iowa Code § 558A.3; Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 33, § 175; Minn. Stat. § 513.58. See also 765 ILCS 77/30 (seller must provide a written supplement to correct a previously delivered disclosure statement); N.Y. Real Prop. § 464 (seller must provide a revised property condition disclosure statement).

(n81)Footnote 80. See Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-13; Idaho Code § 55-2513; Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-13.

(n82)Footnote 81. See Rock v. Voshell, 397 F. Supp. 2d 616, 626 (E.D. Pa. 2005) reconsideration denied, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36942 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 29, 2005) , applying Pennsylvania law.

(n83)Footnote 82. See Idaho Code § 55-2513.

(n84)Footnote 83. See Hearty v. First Merit Bank, N.A., 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 5544, at *11 (Nov. 24, 1999) , discretionary appeal denied, 88 Ohio St. 3d 1448, 725 N.E.2d 287 (2000) .

(n85)Footnote 84. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 34.70.080; Cal Civ Code § 1102.9; D.C. Code § 42-1308; Minn. Stat. § 513.58.

(n86)Footnote 85. See Alaska Stat. § 34.70.040; Idaho Code § 55-2512; Iowa Code § 558A.3.

(n87)Footnote 86. See Idaho Code § 55-2511(2); 765 ILCS 77/25; Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-11; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.955; Wis. Stat. § 709.07.

(n88)Footnote 87. See Idaho Code § 55-2511(2); 765 ILCS 77/25.

(n89)Footnote 88. See Idaho Code § 55-2511(1); Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-11; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.955; Wis. Stat. § 709.07.

(n90)Footnote 89. See Idaho Code § 55-2511(3).

(n91)Footnote 90. See Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-10(b).

(n92)Footnote 91. See Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-10(b).

(n93)Footnote 92. See Bharodia v. Pledger, 340 Ark. 547, 554-557, 11 S.W.3d 540, 545-546 (2000) .

(n94)Footnote 93. See, e.g., Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-5(b) (15 calendar days after receipt of the statement), See Idaho Code § 55-2515 (3-day rescission period); 765 ILCS 77/40 (3 business days).

(n95)Footnote 94. See Idaho Code § 55-2515; 765 ILCS 77/40.

(n96)Footnote 95. See Idaho Code § 55-2515.

(n97)Footnote 96. See Idaho Code § 55-2515.

(n98)Footnote 97. See Idaho Code § 55-2515; 765 ILCS 77/40.

(n99)Footnote 98. See Zappitelli v. Miller, 2006 Ohio 279, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 239, at *18 (2006) , citing Ohio Rev. Code. § 5302.30(K)(3)(d).

(n100)Footnote 99. Cf. Zappitelli v. Miller, 2006 Ohio 279, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 239, at *18 (2006) . The buyers in this case sought rescission after the sale had settled. The buyers alleged fraud, breach of contract, and negligence and were awarded damages. The buyers request for rescission was denied.

(n101)Footnote 100. See Patterson v. Amundson, 201 Ore. App. 486, 498, 119 P.3d 264, 271-272 (2005) . The court granted the buyers' request for specific performance even though the buyer had earlier attempted to rescind the contract.

(n102)Footnote 101. See, e.g., Alaska Stat. § 34.70.090(a); Cal Civ Code § 1102.13; D.C. Code § 42-1310; Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-2; Idaho Code § 55-2517; 765 ILCS 77/55; Iowa Code § 558A.8.; Mich. Comp. Laws § 565.964; Minn. Stat. § 513.59; Miss. Code Ann. § 89-1-523; Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2, 120(11).

(n103)Footnote 102. See Alaska Stat. § 34.70.090(b); Cal Civ Code § 1102.13; Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-16; Idaho Code § 55-2517; Iowa Code § 558A.6.

(n104)Footnote 103. Cf. Green v. Jacobson, 1998 OK CIV APP 121, 963 P.2d 26, 27 (1998) (The Residential Property Condition Disclosure Act provides the sole and exclusive remedy for its violation is an action for actual damages, including the cost of repairing the defect, suffered by the purchaser as a result of a defect existing in the property as of the date of acceptance by seller of an offer to purchase.).

(n105)Footnote 104. See Alaska Stat. § 34.70.090(c) (seller's liability to the transferee for up to three times the actual damages suffered as a result of the violation or failure).

(n106)Footnote 105. See Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-16; 765 ILCS 77/55; S.D. Codified Laws § 43-4-42.

(n107)Footnote 106. Iowa Code chapter 558A.

(n108)Footnote 107. Iowa Code § 558A.6.

(n109)Footnote 108. See Jensen v. Sattler, 696 N.W.2d 582, 587 (Iowa 2005) , rehearing overruled, 2005 Iowa Sup. LEXIS 79 (Iowa, June 1, 2005) .

(n110)Footnote 109. See Jensen v. Sattler, 696 N.W.2d 582, 586 (Iowa 2005) , rehearing overruled, 2005 Iowa Sup. LEXIS 79 (Iowa, June 1, 2005) .

(n111)Footnote 110. See N.C. Gen. Stat. § 47E-1 et seq .

(n112)Footnote 111. See Little v. Stogner, 162 N.C. App. 25, 32-33, 592 S.E.2d 5, 10-11 (N.C. Ct. App. 2004) .

(n113)Footnote 112. The remedy provision is found at N.C. Gen. Stat. § 47E-5(b).

(n114)Footnote 113. See N.Y. Real Prop. § 465. See generally Bishop v Graziano, 10 Misc. 3d 342, 804 N.Y.S. 2d 236, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2289 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2005) for a case discussing this provision.

(n115)Footnote 114. See Fleischer v. Morreale, 810 N.Y.S.2d 624, 629-630, 2006 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 383, at *13-*15 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Jan. 31, 2006) . Cf. Malach v. Chuang, 194 Misc. 2d 651, 657-658, 754 N.Y.S.2d 835, 840-841, 2002 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1723 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 2002) (The seller disclosure statute does not provide relief if the seller either intentionally or negligently misrepresents the property's condition. If an action is brought under a common-law theory, the buyer would be entitled to actual damages.).

(n116)Footnote 115. Groothand v. Schlueter, 949 S.W.2d 923, 929 (Mo. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n117)Footnote 116. Groothand v. Schlueter, 949 S.W.2d 923, 930 (Mo. Ct. App. 1997) , quoting Colgan v. Washington Realty Co., 879 S.W.2d 686, 691 (Mo. Ct. App. 1994) .

(n118)Footnote 117. Groothand v. Schlueter, 949 S.W.2d 923, 930 (Mo. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n119)Footnote 118. Groothand v. Schlueter, 949 S.W.2d 923, 925-926 and 930 (Mo. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n120)Footnote 119. Ainsworth v. Perreault, 254 Ga. App. 470, 563 S.E.2d 135, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 109, at *10 (2002) , cert. denied, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 783 (Sept. 6, 2002) .

(n121)Footnote 120. See, e.g., Kiser v. Peacock, 272 Ga. App. 83, 85, 611 S.E.2d 747, 749 (Ga. Ct. App. 2005) .

(n122)Footnote 121. See Yeager v. McLellan, 177 S.W.3d 807, 809-810 (Ky. 2005) ; Slack v. James, 364 S.C. 609, 619, 614 S.E.2d 636, 641 (S.C. 2005) ; Brown v. Johnson, 109 Wn. App. 56, 60, 34 P.3d 1233 (Wash. Ct. App. 2001) . See generally Morgan H. Rogers, Slack v. James: Can South Carolina's Real Estate Industry Rely on Non-Reliance Clauses?, 57 S.C. L. Rev. 583 (2006).

(n123)Footnote 122. See Flint v. Hopkins (In re Flint), 720 N.E.2d 1230, 1231-1232 (Ind. Ct. App. 1999) .

(n124)Footnote 123. Cf. Minn. Stat. § 513.57 (action must be commenced within two years after the date on which the prospective buyer closed the purchase or transfer); Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 113.150(4) (action must be commenced not later than 1 year after the purchaser discovers or reasonably should have discovered the defect or 2 years after the conveyance of the property to the purchaser, whichever occurs later).

(n125)Footnote 124. See 765 ILCS 77/55; Va. Code Ann. § 55-524(C).

(n126)Footnote 125. See 765 ILCS 77/55.

(n127)Footnote 126. See Va. Code Ann. § 55-524(C).

(n128)Footnote 127. See Kenneth M. Nakasone, Recent Developments: Seller Beware: New Law Protects Hawaii Home Buyers, 18 Hawaii L. Rev. 981, 1012 (1996). This author notes that the Hawaii statute of limitations is six years for fraudulent or negligent misrepresentation and breach of contract. The statute of limitations under Hawaii Revised Statutes section 508D limits claims for non-disclosure to two years.

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

73 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.08

§ 3A.08 Licensee Liability with Respect to a Disclosure Statement

Licensees normally incur no liability with respect to a seller disclosure statement since the representations are being made by the seller. Many seller disclosure acts specifically provide that a licensee has no liability with respect to the statement unless the licensee knew that representations on that statement were false and the licensee either was silent when the licensee had a duty to speak and disclose the misstatement or the licensee participated in the misrepresentation. It should be emphasized that silence or nondisclosure may constitute misrepresentation only when there is a duty to speak. n1 Whether a duty to speak exists in a tort context is a question of law. n2

If the problem is disclosed in the seller disclosure statement, a court may find that the seller has fulfilled his or her disclosure obligation even if the buyer believes that the defect is far worse than what was disclosed. n3 Presumably, this logic would also apply to a licensee.

A licensee may create liability for himself or herself through malfeasance in the delivery of the disclosure statement when the statement contains representations which would have caused the buyer to rescind the offer or cancel the sales contract. For example, delivery of a disclosure statement disclosing defects after the transaction has closed is ineffective and typically negates the buyer's options for dealing with unfavorable disclosures.

When a licensee has either not delivered the disclosure statement or has delivered the statement after closing, the licensee may still have no liability even though the statement contains negative disclosures if the buyers timely learned of the disclosed defect through another source. For example, in one case the licensees failed to provide the buyers with a copy of the seller's condition report indicating a leaking basement prior to their purchase of a house. The court found that an independent third-party inspection of the property which disclosed the problems with the basement relieved the licensees from their duties to inspect and disclose adverse conditions related to the basement. n4

Licensees are also typically not subject to liability when the defect is disclosed on the seller disclosure statement. Once the buyer is alerted to a possible defect, a purchaser may not ignore the disclosure and then raise the buyer's lack of expertise when a problem arises. When a buyer is aware of a possible problem, the buyer has a duty to either to (1) make further inquiry of the owner who is under a duty not to engage in fraud, or (2) seek the advice of someone with sufficient knowledge to appraise the defect. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Richard Brown Auction & Real Estate, Inc. v. Brown, 583 So. 2d 1313, 1316 (Ala. 1991) ; In re Estate of Lecic, 104 Wis.2d 592, 604, 312 N.W.2d 773, 779 (Wis. 1981) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Ex parte Walden, 785 So. 2d 335, 338 (Ala. 2000) ; Lesikar v. Rappeport, 33 S.W.3d 282, 299 (Tex. App. 2000) , petition for review denied (Aug. 23, 2001), motion for rehearing on petition for review denied (Nov. 29, 2001); Ollerman v. O'Rourke Co., 94 Wis.2d 17, 27, 288 N.W.2d 95, 100 (Wis. 1980) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Steinberg v. Rowe (In re Steinberg), 270 B.R. 831, 836 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2001) , applying federal and Michigan law.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Conell v. Coldwell Banker Premier Real Estate, Inc., 181 Wis. 2d 894, 895-896, 512 N.W.2d 239, 240 (Wis. Ct. App. 1994) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Durica v. Donaldson, 2000 Ohio App. LEXIS 789, at *10-*11 (Mar. 3, 2000) , quoting, Tipton v. Nuzum, 84 Ohio App. 3d 33, 38, 616 N.E.2d 265 (1992) .

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

74 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.09

§ 3A.09 Other Disclosure Obligations and Issues

[1] Closing Costs

A few jurisdictions impose upon licensees an obligation to provide the licensee's client with a complete estimated closing statement. n1 This is a redundant disclosure since the federal Real Estate and Settlement Procedures Act requires that lenders provide borrowers with a good faith estimate of settlement costs. n2

[2] Methamphetamine Labs and Other Illegal Drug Activities

Using a residence to manufacture methamphetamine raises two significant issues. First, a methamphetamine lab uses hazardous materials so there is the possibility that the property is contaminated. Second, there is the issue of the psychological impact on the property's value because a methamphetamine lab was located there. n3

A minority of states specifically require that residential sellers disclose if methamphetamine had been manufactured at the residence. n4 A few states include this disclosure on the residential seller disclosure form. n5 This disclosure obligation may extend to the manufacture of other illegal drugs. n6 Disclosure of the past presence of these activities may give the purchaser a period of time in which the offer to buy may be withdrawn or the sales contract may be canceled. n7 Even if there is no specific statute requiring disclosure of this information or a specific question on the seller disclosure form, it is clearly a material fact which would affect a buyer's decision. A licensee who knows that a property was used for methamphetamine production and who fails to disclose this information to a buyer is in violation of the duty to disclose all material facts about a property.

Nevada statutorily provides that a seller's agent or buyer's agent has no liability for failing to disclose that a felony occurred on the subject property. However, an exception to this nonliability provision exists for a crime that involved the manufacturing of methamphetamine. n8 However, the fact that the property had been used for the manufacturing of methamphetamine is not material to the transaction if all materials and substances involving methamphetamine have been removed from or remediated on the property by an entity certified or licensed to do so or the property has been deemed safe for habitation by a governmental entity. n9 Utah has similar provisions. n10

North Dakota's Attorney General Letter Opinion 2001-L-51, n11 addresses whether state or federal law requires real estate agents to reveal to a prospective buyer that the home has been used as a methamphetamine manufacturing lab. North Dakota's Attorney General concluded that real estate brokers should disclose to any potential purchasers that the lab was present so that the purchasers may take appropriate action to protect themselves. The Attorney General stated that the prior existence of a methamphetamine lab in a property may also cause a prospective purchaser emotional or psychological disturbance or concerns that could potentially influence whether the prospective purchaser will purchase the property. Thus, the prior existence of the lab probably would make a property psychologically impacted, and require a real estate agent to respond to an inquiry in the manner provided in N.D. Admin. Code § 70-02-01-20. If a licensee violated that rule, he or she may be subject to disciplinary action.

[3] Square Foot Disclosures

A property's square footage affects the property's value. In particular, buyers and appraisers are concerned with the amount of heated and cooled living space. Despite the crucial nature of this figure, there is no one well-defined and generally accepted measurement method for residential property which has been adopted nationwide. n12 One court in considering a dispute over a house's square footage observed that "[I]n determining the square footage of a house, exactness is not required and not always possible, and that some discrepancies can be expected depending upon which of the accepted methods is used to calculate square footage." n13 Square foot determinations become even more complex if the house's footprint is other than a simple geometric shape such as a square or rectangle. n14

PRACTICE NOTE:

One standard for measuring residential properties which has been adopted by some of the agencies regulating appraisers is the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) Z765-2003, which describes the procedures to be followed in measuring and calculating the square footage of detached and attached single-family dwellings, including townhouses, rowhouses, and other side-by-side houses. n15

Some state real estate commissions have recognized the importance of this figure in the context of residential properties. For example, the North Carolina Real Estate Commission has published a "Residential Square Footage Guidelines." This particular guideline states:

It is often said that the three most important factors in making a homebuying decision are "location," "location," and "location." Other than "location," the single most-important factor is probably the size or "square footage" of the home. Not only is it an indicator of whether a particular home will meet a homebuyer's space needs, but it also affords a convenient (though not always accurate) method for the buyer to estimate the value of the home and compare it with other properties. n16

The North Carolina Real Estate Commission advises brokers not to rely on square footage information determined by the property owner or included in property tax records. A licensee is also advised not to rely on square footage information included in a listing, appraisal report or survey prepared in connection with an earlier transaction. n17

Inaccurate square footage numbers can result from several factors including the following:

- Licensees often use a square foot figure obtained from a third source without verifying its accuracy. A common example is the use of a square foot number from the local governmental agency handling real property assessments. It is not uncommon for such records to contain inaccurate square footage figures. n17.1
- When a property is sold, the square footage number may be rounded up. For instance, a 1,900 square foot home might be represented as "approximately 2,000 square feet." The next owner might represent that the home has "more than 2,000 square feet," even though this owner has done no additions. Minor misrepresentations that are akin to puffery can add up if several consecutive owners engage in such conduct.

- An inaccurate square footage number can result from a simple math error.

Many after-closing claims against sellers and licensees allege misrepresentation of square footage. Buyers often relate square footage to value and a significant shortfall in square footage often results in a buyer feeling as though they have been cheated even when an appraisal prepared using an accurate square foot figure values the property as being worth the contract price. These feelings often lead to litigation by the buyer against both the seller and the licensee.

Proving the tort of misrepresentation in a case involving a square footage overstatement is not as easy as it might seem. Whether the claim is for negligent misrepresentation, or intentional misrepresentation, the buyer must prove as part of its prima facie case that the information is incorrect and that the buyer reasonably relied on the incorrect information. n18

Sales agreements often contain a provision stating that the buyer and seller acknowledge that they have not relied upon any advice, representations, or statements of the broker and that they waive and shall not assert any claims against the broker. Such a provision goes against any argument that the buyer relied upon a broker's square foot representation.

Square footage is often expressly given as an estimate. When the figure is specifically shown as being an estimate, courts have been often loathe to find that a misrepresentation occurred. n19

In some jurisdictions, a broker may rely upon a square foot figure found in an appraisal. A broker's reliance on a reliable appraiser for the computation of the square footage of a house, when the broker represents the buyer, has been found to be some evidence of the broker's compliance with his or her standard of care; however, such evidence is not conclusive as a matter of law. n20

Another factor that often hinders a buyer's case is the fact that the buyer often had ample opportunity to measure the building and perform his or her own square footage calculation. n20.1

When the buyer is financing the purchase with a traditional mortgage or deed of trust, the lender often requires an appraisal of the property before the loan is made. The appraisal often lists the property's square footage and provides notice to the buyer of any potential shortfall in the square foot number. In addition, lenders often will not make a loan unless the appraisal shows that the property has a fair market value at least equal to the parties' sales price. When this is the case, the buyer has received the benefit of the bargain even though the buyer may believe he or she has been shorted in square footage. Arguments that the buyer has still suffered damages and that the amount of damages should be the square foot shortfall multiplied by a per square foot value have almost always failed. n21

While some courts have found that the seller received the "benefit of the bargain" when the mis-measured house appraised at or above the sales price, this is not a proper application of the benefit of the bargain rule. Under the benefit of the bargain rule, the damages are measured by the difference between what the plaintiff would have received if the defendant's representations had been true and the value the plaintiff actually received, together with any proximately caused consequential or special damages. Under this rule, even if the property appraised out at the sales price, the buyer may still be due damages. n21.1

The Supreme Court of Oklahoma has adopted a minority viewpoint regarding both duty and damages in cases involving square footage misrepresentations in a residential transaction. In Bowman v. Presley, n21.2 this court held that a buyer of real property may rely upon the positive representations of real estate licensees and sellers about the size of the property to be conveyed. When a real estate licensee or seller of real property makes material representations to a purchaser about the property's size, a determination of whether those representations were fraudulently or substantially misrepresented and whether the purchaser may have thereby been harmed lie within the arena of disputed facts to be found by a trial of the issues. n21.3 The buyers in this cause thought they were buying a 2,890 square foot house for $145,000, which resulted in a $50 per square foot price. Instead, the house had 2,187 square feet. The buyers argued that they were damaged by the square footage shortage. At $50 per square foot, the buyers computed their injury at $35,150 which was the value of the missing 703 square feet which had been represented by the broker, the agent and the sellers. The defendants countered with several arguments including the assertion that despite the diminished size, the appraised value of the home ($146,697) exceeded the purchase price. The court stated that the question of damages cannot be resolved based upon the estimations of value contained in the mortgage appraisal alone since an appraisal can give only an approximate value that is perceived by the appraiser. The value must be determined by the trier of fact. The jury is the sole and final arbiter. n21.4

The Oklahoma high court also found that the defendants could not rely on the doctrine of caveat emptor to avoid liability for fraudulent misrepresentations made to purchasers about the size of the property to be conveyed. n21.5 This court stated:

The representation of a building's dimensional size, capable of precise expression in square feet, involves neither a readily discoverable defect or flaw nor "the mere expression of an opinion." It is a statement of material fact. A buyer of property may rely on its accuracy because the making of the clear and unequivocal assurance itself discourages buyers from conducting additional investigation. To declare otherwise would permit a seller to fabricate plausible material "facts" and then avoid liability for the misrepresentations by later recasting them as mere "opinions" that the buyer should never have believed. (footnotes omitted) Representations of the size of real property are statements of material fact, not expressions of opinion, and a buyer need not conduct a separate investigation to ascertain their truth. If the buyer later alleges fraudulent misrepresentation against the realtor or seller, questions of whether the buyer was in fact deceived and suffered detriment because of the misrepresentation must be decided by the trier of fact. A real estate licensee is in such instances also bound by a professional duty to treat all parties with honesty. n21.6

Thus, in Oklahoma a real property buyer may rely on the positive representations made by real estate licensees about the property's size.

The Oklahoma court's viewpoint is more reflective of the portrayal in advertising of Realtors(R) as "professionals" to the public. It should be expected that such professionals can get a basic fact about the property correct before using that fact to promote the sale of a home. If this fact cannot be determined, mere estimates (which are sometimes significantly wrong) should not be used as a selling feature since so many buyers rely on this representation. If the issue is the lack of a standard measurement system, the solution is the promulgation of a measurement system rather than to permit real estate licensees to make square footage representations in order to make sales, while allowing the same licensees to disclaim any liability for material errors in these affirmative representations. n21.7

[4] Lot or Parcel Size Disclosures

If a jurisdiction applies the caveat emptor theory, fraud and misrepresentation claims related to land size or lot boundaries may be dismissed when the true size or boundaries are readily discoverable or otherwise made known to the purchasers during the transaction. n22 Such dismissals have been granted even when the seller or seller's agent misrepresented the size of the subject property. n23

Courts have held that a buyer who makes no attempt to discover the boundaries of the property cannot be said to have justifiably relied on a misrepresentation by the seller regarding those boundaries. n24 Under this viewpoint, a buyer generally will not be justified in relying solely upon the description of the boundaries given by the sellers. Buyers may be required to ascertain for themselves the actual property lines.

Part of the difficulty typically found in a buyer's case alleging misrepresentation regarding lot size arises from the fact that buyers often have surveys prepared or have the opportunity to obtain a survey which would have shown the discrepancy. Most buyers also have ample opportunity to walk the boundary lines. Often there are other facts present which should alert the buyer to a potential discrepancy in the lot or parcel size. n25 When these factors are present, a court may find that the buyer did not justifiably rely upon representations regarding the lot or parcel size or boundaries.

[5] Disclosure of Homeowners Association

Some jurisdictions require disclosure of specific information regarding a homeowners association. n26 Many seller disclosure statements contain a question regarding homeowners associations. For example, the Tennessee Seller Disclosure Statement asks, "Are You (Seller) Aware of Any of the Following? ... A Homeowners Association (HOA) which has any authority over the subject property?" n27

[6] Off-Site Conditions

Some states require specific disclosures with respect to the use of nearby properties which may affect a buyer's decision to purchase. These disclosures may be found on a seller disclosure statement. In some states, the licensee is required to tell the buyer that it is the buyer's responsibility to determine the existence of certain potential nuisance.

Required off-site disclosures have included the following:

- Agricultural facilities. In Alaska, licensees must inform buyers that the buyers are responsible for determining whether the property they are interested in buying is near an agricultural facility which might produce odor, fumes, dust, blowing snow, smoke, burning, vibrations, noise, insects, rodents, the operation of machinery including aircraft, and other inconveniences or discomforts as a result of lawful agricultural operations. n28
- Hazardous waste facilities. In Connecticut, licensees and sellers must provide buyers with written notice, prior to entering into a contract, of the availability of a list of hazardous waste facilities. n29
- Airports. n30 Several states require disclosures regarding nearby airports.
- Lack of electric service. In New York, sellers of real property for which electric service is unavailable must disclose this fact to a prospective purchaser or the prospective purchaser's agent. n31

With respect to new residential construction, New Jersey licensees must provide the purchaser with a notice of the availability of the lists of the off-site conditions (i.e., conditions which may materially affect the property's value) that exist not only within the boundaries of the municipality in which the residential real estate is located but also within any other municipality located within one-half mile of the residential real estate. n32

[7] Mold

A minority of jurisdictions have enacted statutory provisions which specifically require that sellers make disclosures regarding the existence of mold in the property. n33 Some jurisdictions have statutorily or by regulation included on their residential seller disclosure form questions and disclosures regarding the existence of mold. n34

The Louisiana Real Estate Commission publishes a pamphlet on mold which licensees may voluntarily distribute to buyers. n35 If a Louisiana licensee delivers this pamphlet to the buyer, the licensee is not required to provide any additional information concerning mold; the information contained pamphlet is deemed to be adequate to inform the buyer regarding common mold-related hazards that can affect real property. n36

[8] Radon

A minority of jurisdictions have statutes which specifically require disclosure regarding the presence of radon or the potential hazard that this gas presents. n37 In addition, some residential seller disclosure forms are statutorily required to contain a question or require a statement regarding radon gas. n38

[9] Sewage Disposal and/or Water Supplies

Some jurisdictions impose specific disclosure or certification requirements with respect to a property's sewage disposal system or water system. n39 Typically these requirements are imposed upon properties with septic fields and wells. For example, Maine has a detailed disclosure on its residential property disclosure statement. With respect to the property's private waste disposal system the seller must disclose:

- A. The type of system;
- B. The size and type of the tank;
- C. The location of the tank;
- D. Any malfunctions of the tank;
- E. The date of installation of the tank;
- F. The location of the leach field;
- G. Any malfunctions of the leach field;
- H. The date of installation of the leach field;
- I. The date of the most recent servicing of the system; and
- J. The name of the contractor who services the system. n40

Wells supplying drinking water to a residence are also often the subject of specific seller disclosures. For example, Minnesota requires that before signing an agreement to sell or transfer real property, the seller must disclose in writing to the buyer information about the status and location of all known wells on the property. n41

[10] Insulation

A seller disclosure statement may ask if there are any defects with respect to the insulation n42 or it may ask other questions regarding the insulation such as the type and location of the insulation. n43

There have been health concerns regarding the use of formaldehyde foam insulation. Very few jurisdictions have specifically addressed this type of insulation, perhaps because it is no longer used for insulating residences. However, Massachusetts has statutorily provided that no cause of action shall arise or be maintained against a seller, lessor, real estate broker or salesperson, lender or mortgagee of real property for failure to disclose to a buyer or tenant that the real property has been insulated with urea formaldehyde foam insulation. n44

New Hampshire sellers are required to make disclosures regarding the type and location of insulation in a residence. n45 New Hampshire, by regulation, requires that licensees, when listing residential property, must ask the seller for at least the following information: (1) the type of insulation; and (2) the location of the insulation. n46

Though there appear to be relatively few statutes and regulations that specifically address insulation, it should be anticipated that the type, quality and amount of insulation may become of more interest to legislators and regulators if the cost of heating and cooling homes increases significantly.

[11] Other Disclosures Arise from Local Issues

Unique disclosure obligations may arise due to conditions specific to a geographic area or deceptive practices that are found to occur in a specific region. n47 The seller disclosure form promulgated by a regulatory agency may also be aimed at disclosing facts which have led to problems in that jurisdiction. An example would be construction materials that were believed to be sound when used in constructing a home, but which have proven over time to be problematic. A specific example of a construction product that sometimes proved to be defective in actual use would be the various artificial stuccos used on the exterior of homes which has led to litigation over the water intrusion problems associated with this product. Colorado on its Seller's Property Disclosure form (SPD 19-10-05) asks if the property has exterior artificial stucco.

Some jurisdictions have other types of unique or uncommon disclosures obligations. For example, in Maryland, licensees providing competitive market analysis must include the following statement, conspicuously printed, on the first page of the analysis:

COMPETITIVE MARKET ANALYSIS DISCLOSURE

This analysis is not an appraisal. It is intended only for the purpose of assisting buyers or sellers or prospective buyers or sellers in deciding the listing, offering, or sale price of the real property. n48

In an unreported Wisconsin case, the court rejected an unhappy buyer's claim that the seller's broker should have disclosed that the house was owner-built. In rejecting this argument, the court stated a broker has no duty to report that a home was owner-built absent knowledge or reason to know that faulty construction was the cause of a defect in the premises. n49

A few states also impose disclosure obligations with respect to lead-based paint. n50 Statutorily mandated seller disclosure statements may contain questions regarding lead-based paint. n51 Disclosure obligations regarding lead-based paint are discussed in greater detail in § 3A.17[2], below and Chapter 15A, below.

Another disclosure issue that may arise concerns underground storage tanks. n52

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Ala. Admin. Code r. 790-X-3-.04.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 12 U.S.C. § 2604.

(n3)Footnote 3. See North Dakota Attorney General Letter Opinion 2001-L-51, 2001 N.D. AG LEXIS 66 (Nov. 28, 2001).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 12-1000; Mo. Rev. Stat. § 441.236; Or. Admin. R. 333-040-0100.

(n5)Footnote 5. See S.D. Codified Laws § 43-4-44.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 12-1000 (ecstasy or LSD).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 12-1000(F)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Nev. Rev. Stat. § 40.770(1)(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Nev. Rev. Stat. § 40.770(5).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Utah Code Ann. §§ 57-1-1(4) and 57-1-37.

(n11)Footnote 11. 2001 N.D. AG LEXIS 66 (Nov. 28, 2001) .

(n12)Footnote 12. It appears that seller disclosure statements do not ask the seller to state the square footage of the residence. Perhaps real estate commissions recognize the inherent difficulties with this determination.

(n13)Footnote 13. Glanton v. Bob Parks Realty, Inc., 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 263, at *23-*24 (Tenn. Ct. App. Apr. 27, 2005) , appeal denied, 2005 Tenn. LEXIS 916 (Tenn. Oct. 24, 2005) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See John v. Robbins, 764 F. Supp. 379, 385-386 (M.D. N.C. 1991) , applying North Carolina law (discussing difficulty posed in measuring a a contemporary house with triangular offsets).

(n15)Footnote 15. For example, Kentucky has adopted this measurement standard. See 201 Ky. Adm. Reg. 30:040.

(n16)Footnote 16. This guideline can be found on the Website of the North Carolina Real Estate Commission at <http://www.ncrec.state.nc.us/publications-bulletins/sqft.html>. The Colorado Real Estate Commission has also issued Rule E-43 which addresses square footage measurement of residential property.

(n17)Footnote 17. See Brown v. Roth, 133 N.C. App. 52, 56, 514 S.E.2d 294, 297 (1999) .

(n18)Footnote 17.1. Cf. Pleasant v. Bradford, 260 S.W.3d 546, 550 (Tex. App. Austin 2008) , review denied, 2008 Tex. LEXIS 1173 (Dec. 19, 2008) (seller's agent took an incorrect square footage figure from the county's real estate tax records).

(n19)Footnote 18. See, e.g. Hardcastle v. Harris, 170 S.W.3d 67, 82 n.25 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2004) , appeal denied, 2005 Tenn. LEXIS 500 (Tenn. May 23, 2005) .

(n20)Footnote 19. See The Cadco, LLC v. Barry, 2006 Tenn. App. LEXIS 37, at *10 (Jan. 18, 2006) appeal denied, 2006 Tenn. LEXIS 813 (Sept. 5, 2006) .

(n21)Footnote 20. See Brown v. Roth, 133 N.C. App. 52, 56, 514 S.E.2d 294, 297 (1999) .

(n22)Footnote 20.1. See Schnellmann v. Roettger, 373 S.C. 379, 645 S.E.2d 239 (S.C. 2007) .

(n23)Footnote 21. Cf. Royer v. Remodeling Service, Inc., 648 So. 2d 995, 1000 (La. Ct. App. 1994) (In a dispute arising from a square footage error, the court found that the buyers had not proven any actual property damages based on the fact that they paid $ 143,000.00 for the property and the property was appraised for $ 144,000.00.).

(n24)Footnote 21.1. See Schnellmann v. Roettger, 373 S.C. 379, 383, 645 S.E.2d 239, 241 (S.C. 2007) (dicta) Pleasant v. Bradford, 260 S.W.3d 546, 558-561 (Tex. App. Austin 2008) , review denied, 2008 Tex. LEXIS 1173 (Dec. 19, 2008) .

(n25)Footnote 21.2. 2009 OK 48, 212 P.3d 1210 (Okla. 2009) .

(n26)Footnote 21.3. 2009 OK 48, 212 P.3d 1210, 1214 (Okla. 2009) .

(n27)Footnote 21.4. 2009 OK 48, 212 P.3d 1210, 1218-19 (Okla. 2009) .

(n28)Footnote 21.5. 2009 OK 48, 212 P.3d 1210, 1220 (Okla. 2009) .

(n29)Footnote 21.6. 2009 OK 48, 212 P.3d 1210, 1222 (Okla. 2009) .

(n30)Footnote 21.7. A standard measurement system could be promulgated by the National Association of Realtors(R) for use by its members.

(n31)Footnote 22. *See Schmiedebusch v. Rako Realty, Inc., 2005 Ohio 4884, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4441, at 11 (Sept. 15, 2005) . *But cf. McRae v. Hagaman, 2006 Tenn. App. LEXIS 550, at *9-13 (Aug. 22, 2006) (The seller's agent and buyer failed to discover that a portion of the property that they thought was part of the sale was not included. The court held that both the buyer and the seller's broker could be liable for a portion of fault in a negligent misrepresentation case; one of the buyers was found to have been 25 percent at fault and the seller's broker was found to be 75 percent at fault.). But cf. Bowman v. Presley, 2009 OK 48, 212 P.3d 1210, 1221 (Okla. 2009) (doctrine of caveat emptor does not apply to a positive misrepresentation of material fact such as a firm square footage figure).

(n32)Footnote 23. See Ralston v. Grinder, 8 Ohio App.2d 208, 37 Ohio Op. 2d 213, 221 N.E.2d 602 (1966) . The purchasers' fraud action was based upon false oral representations by the defendant seller and seller's agent that the property purchased contained three acres when, in fact, it contained less than 1.5 acres.

(n33)Footnote 24. See Peacock v. Kiser, 272 Ga. App. 83, 85, 611 S.E.2d 747, 750 (Ga. Ct. App. 2005) .

(n34)Footnote 25. Cf., e.g., Hoel v. Rose, 125 Wash. App. 14, 20, 105 P.3d 395, 398-399 (Wash. Ct. App. 2004) (Preclosing appraisal was at variance with the seller's representations regarding the property's dimensions. A map showed a lot size that differed from the seller's representations. The buyer did nothing to reconcile these differences. The court found there was no substantial evidence to support a conclusion that the buyer had justifiably relied on the seller's representations regarding acreage and dimensions.).

(n35)Footnote 26. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 33-1806; Fla. Stat. § 720.401; La. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 9:3198(A)(2); Tex. Prop. Code § 5.012; Va. Code Ann. § 55-511.

(n36)Footnote 27. Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-5-210.

(n37)Footnote 28. See Alaska Stat. § 34.70.050(3). See also Cal. Civ. Code § 1710.2 (no disclosure duty when a prior occupant's death from certain causes occurred more than 3 years prior to the date of transfer). See also N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 333-c(1) (similar disclosure law).

(n38)Footnote 29. See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-327f.

(n39)Footnote 30. See, e.g., Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-5-7 (4) (sellers must disclose that an airport is located within a geographical distance from the property as determined by the Indiana real estate commission).

(n40)Footnote 31. See N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 242.

(n41)Footnote 32. See N.J. Stat. § 46:3C-1, et seq .

(n42)Footnote 33. See

California: Cal. Health and Safety Code §§ 26140, 26141, 26146, 26147 and 26148. Montana: Mont. Code Anno. §§ 70-16-701 to 70-16-703. See generally Elizabeth L. Perry, Comment, Why Fear the Fungus? Why Toxic Mold Is and Is Not the Next Big Toxic Tort, 52 Buffalo L. Rev. 257 (2004); Walter G. Wright, Jr. and Stephanie M. Irby, The Transactional Challenges Posed by Mold: Risk Management and Allocation Issues, 56 Ark. L. Rev. 295 (2003).

(n43)Footnote 34. See Cal. Civ. Code § 1102.6; Ohio Adm. Code Ann. 1301:1-4-10.

(n44)Footnote 35. See La. R.S. § 37:1470 (A).

(n45)Footnote 36. See La. R.S. § 37:1470 (B).

(n46)Footnote 37. See Fla. Stat. § 404.056(5); Mont. Code Ann. § 75-3-601, et seq.; N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:4-a; N.J. Stat. § 26:2D-73. See generally Karen Hoyden Curtin, Indoor Radon: Regulating a Blameless Cause, 3 Buff. Env't'l. L.J. 181 (1995); Paul A. Locke and Patricia I. Elliott, Caveat Broker: What Can Real Estate Licensees Do About Their Potentially Expanding Liability for Failure to Disclose Radon Risks in Home Purchase and Sale Transactions?, 25 Colum. J. Env't'l. L. 71 (2000).

(n47)Footnote 38. See Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 173(4); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 47E-4; Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.30(D)(1); S.C. Code Ann. § 27-50-40(A)(6); Va. Code Ann. § 55-519.

(n48)Footnote 39. See Ariz. Admin. Code §§ R18-9-A304 and R18-9-A316; Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, § 173(3) (part of the property disclosure statement); Minn. Stat. § 115.55, Subd. 6(a) (disclosure regarding individual sewage treatment systems), N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:4-c.

(n49)Footnote 40. See Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 33, § 173(3). If the systems is located within shoreland zones, the seller must make additional disclosures on septic systems as required by Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 30-A, § 4216. Furthermore, pursuant to Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 33, § 173-A, unless a transaction is exempt, the seller must provide to the purchaser certain information regarding arsenic in private water supplies and arsenic in treated wood.

(n50)Footnote 41. See Minn. Stat. § 103I.235.

(n51)Footnote 42. See D.C. Code § 42-1305 (1)(B).

(n52)Footnote 43. See Me. Rev. Stat. tit. 33, § 173 (2).

(n53)Footnote 44. See Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 255, § 12J. Ohio also requires disclosures regarding urea-formaldehyde foam insulation. See Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.30(D)(1).

(n54)Footnote 45. See N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:4-d.

(n55)Footnote 46. See N.H. Code Admin. Rules Rea. § 701.04.

(n56)Footnote 47. For example, the voluntary seller disclosure form promulgated by the Arizona Association of Realtors(R) asks: "Are you aware of or have you observed any of the following on the Property? (Check all that apply):
 _____Scorpions _____Rabid animals _____Bee swarms _____Rodents _____Owls _____Reptiles _____Other:
 _____."

(n57)Footnote 48. Code of Maryland Regulations § 09.11.02.02(F).

(n58)Footnote 49. See Willard v. Weinberg, 192 Wis. 2d 766, 532 N.W.2d 470, 1995 Wisc. App. LEXIS 383, at *8 (Mar. 21, 1995).

(n59)Footnote 50. See Md. Code Ann., Envir. § 6-801.

(n60)Footnote 51. See, e.g., Or. Rev. Stat. § 105.464, the provision prescribing the form of seller's property disclosure statement, which includes the following inquiry: "Has any portion of the property been tested or treated for asbestos, formaldehyde, radon gas, lead-based paint, mold, fuel or chemical storage tanks or contaminated soil or water?" Cf. The voluntary seller disclosure form promulgated by the Arizona Association of Realtors(R) asks whether the seller is aware of any lead-based paint on the property.

(n61)Footnote 52. For example, the voluntary seller disclosure form promulgated by the Arizona Association of Realtors(R) asks whether the seller is aware of any underground storage tanks on the property.

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

75 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.10

§ 3A.10 A Broker's Statutory Duty to Inspect

[1] California Licensees Have a Statutory Duty to Inspect

A leading case addressing a broker's duty to inspect is Easton v. Strassburger, where a California Court of Appeal that held that a broker's duty to disclose material facts included the affirmative duty to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent inspection of residential property listed for sale with the broker and to disclose to prospective buyers all facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property that such an inspection would reveal. n1 The California Legislature subsequently codified this duty. n2

The statutory rule in California provides that it is the duty of a licensed real estate broker to a prospective purchaser of residential real property to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale. The broker must then disclose to that purchaser all facts revealed by the inspection that materially affect the property's value or desirability. This duty arises if the broker has a written contract with the seller to find or obtain a buyer. n2.1 This duty likewise applies to another broker acting in cooperation with a contracting broker. n3

The standard of care owed by a broker in exercising the duty to inspect is the degree of care that a reasonably prudent real estate licensee would exercise. It is measured by the degree of knowledge obtained through education, experience, and examination that is required to obtain a real estate license. n4 A California licensee's disclosure duty does not include a duty to independently verify or disclaim the accuracy of the seller's representations. Once the sellers and their agent make the required disclosures, it is the purchasers responsibility to investigate and make an informed decision based thereon. In making the required disclosures, the sellers' agent is required to act in good faith and not convey the seller's representations without a reasonable basis for believing them to be true. n5

The duty to inspect the property is limited to a visual inspection. n6 The inspection is not required to include or involve areas that are reasonably and normally inaccessible to inspection. It also need not include inspection of off-site areas or public records or permits concerning the title or use of the property. n7 Neither is there a duty to find additional matters, such as pending litigation, that have not been revealed in the course of the required visual inspection; n8 nor is there a duty to independently verify or disclaim the accuracy of representations made by the seller. n9

The statutory duty of inspection is considered a nonfiduciary dutyⁿ¹⁰ which is subject to a two-year statute of limitations. The two-year period commences on the date of possession which means the date of recordation, the date of close of escrow, or the date of occupancy, whichever occurs first.ⁿ¹¹

The statutory duty of a licensed real estate broker to conduct a visual inspection of the subject property and disclose to the buyer all material facts discovered does not relieve a buyer or a prospective buyer of his or her duty to exercise reasonable care to protect himself or herself, including those facts that are known to, or within the diligent attention and observation of the buyer or prospective buyer.ⁿ¹²

[2] Other Jurisdictions Reject the Imposition of an Explicit Statutory Duty to Inspect

Many jurisdictions have specifically refused to statutorily impose an inspection duty upon licensees.ⁿ¹³ Even if a jurisdiction has specifically stated that a licensee has no statutory duty to inspect property, the practical reality is that licensees have an inherent duty to inspect the properties. An overwhelming majority of jurisdictions require that licensees disclose material facts known to them about a property.ⁿ¹⁴ Courts often state that a licensee can be liable for negligent misrepresentation for failing to disclose a latent defect to the buyer, if the licensee knew of or should have known of the latent defect.ⁿ¹⁵ Whether a licensee should have discovered a defect is determined according to the facts and circumstances of the case. This is an area where bright line rules do not exist. Presumably, a licensee should be held to a higher standard in observing defects than would expected of the average home buyer.

If a defect is visible, there is a strong argument that such a defect is a material fact for which the licensee has a disclosure obligation particularly if it is a type of defect that the buyer may not notice or if noticed, the buyer may fail to understand the significance of the defect. This is an area where the facts and circumstances of the case will often determine whether the licensee had a duty and whether that duty was breached. For example, a licensee should advise his or her client when a water mark from repeated flooding is distinctly visible in a basement. In contrast, a licensee would not be expected to inspect for such water marks when the seller has intentionally hidden such water marks by the erection of a wall.

Even if a licensee is considered to have a duty to inspect, this does not relieve the buyer of his or her own obligation to inspect the property. A buyer cannot ignore open and obvious defects and then seek to hold a licensee responsible for the buyer's decision to purchase despite the defects.

A few states have explicitly recognized a buyer's obligation to protect his or her interest by inspecting the property. For example, a provision in South Carolina's statute regarding brokerage relationships states, "Nothing in this chapter limits the obligation of the buyer to inspect the physical condition of the property which the buyer may purchase."ⁿ¹⁶

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Easton v. Strassburger, 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 99-100, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383 (Cal. Ct. App. 1984) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Cal. Civ. Code §§ 2079-2079.5.

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Michel v. Moore & Associates, Inc., 156 Cal. App. 4th 756, 761 n. 5, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 801 n. 5 (2007) (Cal. Civ. Code § 2079, by its own terms, imposes a duty only from the listing broker who is selling the property to the buyer; it does not impose a duty on the buyer's own broker.).

(n4)Footnote 3. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.

(n5)Footnote 4. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.2.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Robinson v. Grossman, 57 Cal. App. 4th 634, 644, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380, 385 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 6. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079(a). See Smith v. Richard, 205 Cal. App. 3d 1354, 1359 n.2, 254 Cal. Rptr. 633, 636 n. 2 (1988) , review denied.

(n8)Footnote 7. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.3.

(n9)Footnote 8. See Padgett v. Phariss, 54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1282, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373, 379 (1997) , review denied, 1997 Cal. LEXIS 4493 (Cal. July 16, 1997) .

(n10)Footnote 9. See Robinson v. Grossman, 57 Cal. App. 4th 634, 641-642, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 380 (1997) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See Field v. Century 21 Klowden-Forness Realty, 63 Cal. App. 4th 18, 25, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 784, 789 (1998) , review denied, 1998 Cal. LEXIS 4685 (July 15, 1998) .

(n12)Footnote 11. See Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.4.

(n13)Footnote 12. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.5.

(n14)Footnote 13. See Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-30, 106(d)(2); Okla. Stat. tit. 60, § 836 (E); S.C. Code Ann. § 27-50-80.

(n15)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Williams v. Wells & Bennett Realtors, 52 Cal. App. 4th 857, 863, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34, 37 (1997) (broker has a duty to disclose known material facts); Baumgarten v. Coppage, 15 P.3d 304, 307 (Colo. Ct. App. 2000) (citing statute and discussing broker's duty to disclose adverse material facts actually known by broker); Zimmerman v. Northfield Real Estate, Inc., 156 Ill. App. 3d 154, 162, 109 Ill. Dec. 541, 510 N.E.2d 409, 413-414 (1987) , appeal denied, 116 Ill. 2d 578, 113 Ill. Dec. 320, 515 N.E.2d 129 (1987) (brokers had duty to speak regarding known material information); Bazal v. Rhines, 600 N.W.2d 327, 329 (Iowa Ct. App. 1999) (finding duty to disclose material facts); Binette v. Dyer Library Ass'n, 688 A.2d 898, 905 (Me. 1996) (citing regulations and stating that broker has duty to disclose known material defects); Weintraub v. Krobatsch, 64 N.J. 445, 453-454, 317 A.2d 68, 74 (1974) (noting rule that broker is liable for nondisclosure of defects known to him but unknown to buyer); Gordon v. Skopos, 2005 Ohio 4900, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS 4414, at *7 (Sept. 16, 2005) (a real estate agent has a statutory duty to disclose any material defects of which the agent has knowledge); Stebbins v. Wells, 766 A.2d 369, 373 (R.I. 2001) (holding broker had duty to disclose known deficient conditions); Teter v. Old Colony Co., 190 W. Va. 711, 441 S.E.2d 728, 734-35 (1994) (agreeing that broker may be liable for failure to disclose known material defects); Eddy v. B.S.T.V., Inc., 696 N.W.2d 265, 2005 WI App 78 (2005) , review denied, 2005 WI 134, 282 Wis. 2d 722, 700 N.W.2d 274 (2005) (every real-estate broker has a duty to disclose to each party all material adverse facts that the broker knows and that the party does not know or cannot discover through reasonably vigilant observation, unless the disclosure of a material adverse fact is prohibited by law).

(n16)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Flowers v. ERA Unique Real Estate, Inc., 227 F. Supp. 2d 998, 1000-1001 (N.D. Ill. 2002) .

(n17)Footnote 16. See S.C. Code Ann. § 40-57-137 (G).

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

76 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.11

§ 3A.11 The Effect of a Home Inspection Report on a Licensee's Disclosure Obligations

Typically, a home inspection report prepared by a third party protects not only the home buyer, but also the licensees involved in the transaction. n1 Licensees are not expected to have the expertise of a professional home inspector. n2 This does not mean that a licensee can be oblivious to a home's condition, however. Even when a home inspection will be performed, a licensee should not assume that the buyer notices defects, particularly if the defect affects a major component of the home or will entail costly repairs to remedy. Facts and circumstances play a major role if not deciding role in property defect cases. A licensee who fails to inform a buyer that a bathroom faucet handle is broken is not comparable to a licensee who to inform a buyer that the basement floods every time there is rain.

Licensees can find themselves liable to home buyers in two primary situations with respect to a home inspection report. First, licensees can incur liability when they assume the responsibility for obtaining or delivering the home inspection report and they fail to do so or perform this task negligently or fraudulently. n3 Second, licensees can incur liability when a licensee knows that an unfavorable home inspection report had previously been prepared for a prior prospective purchaser and the licensee fails to inform the buyer of this significant fact. A licensee is likely to face litigation if they fail to inform the current prospective buyer that a prior sales contract did not settle because the home "failed" a prior home inspection. Even if the licensee believes that the defects have been repaired, this is a material fact which a buyer should be aware of so that the buyer can investigate to verify that proper repairs were made.

Courts have been reluctant to hold sellers liable, much less the licensees that represent them, when the buyer plaintiff failed to perform any reasonable or meaningful inspection of the home prior to purchasing and closing on the home. A buyer's failure to conduct or obtain a meaningful inspection will be considered a failure to exercise due diligence. n4 Many courts have held that a buyer cannot be permitted to claim that he or she was deceived by false representations about which the buyer could have learned the truth of the matter and could have avoided damage through an inspection. n5

A licensee's advising a buyer to obtain a professional home inspection may protect the licensee from liability under a brokerage relationship disclosure act. One court has found that a suit against a licensee was barred under that state's brokerage relationship disclosure law. n6

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Johnson v. Neuville, 226 Wis. 2d 365, 376, 595 N.W.2d 100, 106 (Wis. Ct. App. 1999) (Wis. Stat. Ann. § 452.23(2)(b) relieves a broker from the duty to disclose information related to the property's physical condition where an inspection is conducted by a qualified third-party who prepares a report). Cf. Leko v. Cornerstone Building Inspection Service, 86 Cal. App. 4th 1109, 1112, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858, 861 (Cal. Ct. App. 2001) , review denied, 2001 Cal. LEXIS 3146 (Cal. May 2, 2001) (A licensee who is sued for negligent nondisclosure of defects in real property may obtain equitable indemnity from a home inspection company that allegedly breached its duty to the purchaser to discover and disclose the same defects. A licensee may also seek equitable indemnity when the home inspection company prepared its report for a different prospective purchaser, in connection with a previous transaction involving the same property so long as the home inspection company intended or knew with substantial certainty that its report would be used in subsequent transactions involving the property.).

(n2)Footnote 2. Professional is used in the sense that there are individuals who inspect homes as a vocation. It is not used in the technical sense to refer to a profession such as law or medicine. Some jurisdictions license and regulate home inspectors. See, e.g., Ark. Code Ann. §§ 17-52-301 to 17-52-322; Ind. Code Ann. §§ 25-20.2-1-1 to 25-20.2-9-3.

(n3)Footnote 3. See McLellan v. Raines, 36 Kan. App. 2d 1, 14, 140 P.3d 1034, 1042 (2006) ; White v. The J.D. Reece Co., 29 Kan. App. 2d 226, 233-234, 26 P.3d 701 , 706 Kan. Ct. App. 2001). Cf. Johnson v. Beverly-Hanks & Associates, Inc., 328 N.C. 202, 210-212, 400 S.E.2d 38, 43-44 (N.C. 1991) (broker and agent not entitled to summary judgment as buyers presented triable facts issues as to whether or not broker had engaged in deceptive acts by concealing the fact that a home inspector had previously found problems with the house).

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Clark v. Bryant (In re Bryant), 241 B.R. 756, 767 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1999) , applying federal and Georgia law.

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Hanlon v. Thornton, 218 Ga. App. 500, 502, 462 S.E.2d 154, 156-57 (1995) , cert. denied, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 211 (Ga. Jan. 5, 1996) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See McLellan v. Raines, 36 Kan. App. 2d 1, 17, 140 P.3d 1034, 1044 (2006) .

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

77 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.12

§ 3A.12 "As Is" Clauses in Sales Contracts

Some residential sellers have sought to minimize their liability with respect to the disclosure of property defects and conditions by relying on "as is" clauses. n1 An "as is" clause essentially functions as an exculpatory clause to protect the seller from defects and hazards the property may contain. n2 Despite the fact that an "as is" clause is primarily for the seller's benefit, these clauses may also offer licensees protection under some circumstances. n2.1 However, brokerage relationship acts typically obligate licensees to disclose to the buyer all material facts regarding the subject property. A licensee's silence may lead to liability for the licensee even though the sales contract contains an "as is" clause if the licensee knew of defects and failed to disclose the defects to a buyer. n3 A licensee can commit fraud by silence. n4 However, a condition to invocation of the fraud by silence doctrine is that there must be a duty to make a disclosure. n5 If a seller and/or the licensee have no knowledge of a defect, there will be no duty to disclose the problem. Since there is no duty in this situation, silence cannot be construed as a misrepresentation.

Litigation often ensues when a seller and/or the broker have verbally assured the buyer that the property is sound even though the sales contract contains an "as is" clause. Another scenario that often leads to litigation involves a residential seller or broker who discloses a defect or condition while at the same time verbally minimizing the severity of the disclosed defect or condition or understating the cost of repairing the defect or condition. The use of an "as is" clause in this situation is not guaranteed to prevent litigation from a disgruntled buyer. If a seller intends to use an "as is" clause, he or she should review the applicable disclosure law to determine what effect this clause will have on the seller's disclosure obligations.

Part of the difficulty of an "as is" clause is that many buyers do not understand the import of such a clause. Furthermore, the individual who decides to insert this clause in the sales contract in some cases may be the seller's broker. Buyers often rely on verbal representations of the seller or the seller's broker to support their decision to buy the property, not realizing that an "as is" clause should be seen as a red flag. At the very least, buyers should obtain a home inspection by a competent inspector so that they know with what problems the home may be afflicted.

A buyer often has a hard time arguing that the seller or a licensee made misrepresentations when the contract contained an "as is" clause and the buyer had many opportunities to inspect the property. n6 In one case involving this scenario, the court stated that when a buyer claiming fraud in the sale of property has repeated opportunities to inspect the property, the buyer will be charged with the knowledge of conditions that a reasonable inspection would have disclosed.

n7

An "as is" clause is not a total shield for the seller and any licensees involved in the transaction. Courts generally agree that "as is" clauses do not preclude claims for fraud or intentional misrepresentations. n8

Cases involving "as is" clauses--like many other issues that arise with disclosure duties--are heavily dependent upon the facts and circumstances of the individual case. n9 An "as is" clause is apt to be found to be valid and the sellers and licensees free from liability when parties are sophisticated, when the parties deal at arm's length, when the parties voluntarily enter into the sales contract containing an "as is" clause and when there was no knowing misrepresentation or concealment of a known fact. n10 An "as is" clause is also more likely to be enforced if the clause was an important part of the basis of the bargain as opposed to just boilerplate and when the parties are in relatively equal bargaining positions. n11

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Dallan, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability and the Effect of the "As Is" Clause, 54 Fla. L. Rev. 395 (2002).

(n2)Footnote 2. See generally Craig W. Dallan, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability and the Effect of the "As Is", 54 Fla. L. Rev. 395, 440 (2002).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Cf. ERA Class.com, Inc. v. Stoddard, 2007 Ala. Civ. App. LEXIS 641, at *18 (Oct. 5, 2007) ("as is" clause in the sales contract protected the broker from the buyer's claims of negligence, wantonness, fraud, and suppression where buyers bought property believing it was zoned for commercial use when in fact property was zoned only for residential use).

(n4)Footnote 3. Cf. Larsen v. Carlene Langford & Associates, Inc., 41 S.W.3d 245 (Tex. App. 2001) , petition for review denied (Jul. 26, 2001) (The statement made by the seller's licensee referencing the seller's disclosure form that the house needed some leveling was not a misrepresentation of material fact because even if the buyers attached significance to this statement, there is no evidence whatsoever in the record that the licensee knew or had any reason to suspect that the seller's disclosure form was not correct. A statement is not fraudulent unless the maker knew it was false when made or made it recklessly without knowledge of the truth. Because the buyers presented no evidence that the licensee's statement to the buyers was fraudulent, it cannot be grounds for avoiding the "as is" agreement on the basis they were fraudulently induced to sign the contracts.).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Mahler v. Keenan Real Estate, Inc., 255 Kan. 593, 596, 876 P.2d 609, 611 (Kan. 1994) (referring to claims against seller and licensee as fraud by silence). See also Ensminger v. Terminix Int'l Co., 102 F.3d 1571, 1573-1574 (10th Cir. 1996) , applying Kansas law (listing elements of the tort of fraud by silence); Bergen v. Baker, 264 Mich. App. 376, 382, 691 N.W.2d 770, 774-775 (2004) (under the silent fraud doctrine a cause of action is established when there is a suppression of material facts and there is a legal or equitable duty of disclosure); Weintraub v. Krobatsch, 64 N.J. 445, 454, 317 A.2d 68, 73 (N.J. 1974) ("[O]ne may be guilty of fraud by his silence, as where it is expressly incumbent upon him to speak concerning material matters that are entirely within his own knowledge."). See generally Craig W. Dallan, Theories of Real Estate Broker Liability and the Effect of the "As Is", 54 Fla. L. Rev. 395, 419-420 (2002).

(n6)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Rowe v. Steinberg (In re Steinberg), 270 B.R. 831, 835 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2001) , applying federal and Michigan law.

(n7)Footnote 6. See Larsen v. Carlene Langford & Associates, Inc., 41 S.W.3d 245, 254-255 (Tex. App. 2001) , petition for review denied (Jul. 26, 2001).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Eiland v. Coldwell Banker Hunter Realty, 122 Ohio App. 3d 446, 459, 702 N.E.2d 116, 124 (1997) .

(n9)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Wilson v. Century 21 Great W. Realty, 15 Cal. App. 4th 298, 304, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779, 782 (Cal. Ct. App. 1993) , review denied, 1993 Cal. LEXIS 3894 (Cal. July 22, 1993) ; Gibb v. Citicorp Mortgage, Inc., 246 Neb. 355, 364, 518 N.W.2d 910, 918 (Neb. 1994) ; Mackintosh v. Jack Matthew & Co., 109 Nev. 628, 632, 855 P.2d 549, 551-52 (Nev. 1993) ; Silva v. Stevens, 156 Vt. 94, 112, 589 A.2d 852, 862 (Vt. 1991) ; Alexander v. Meduna, 2002 WY 83, 47 P.3d 206, 216 (2002) . See generally J. Wozniak, Annot., Construction and Effect of Provision in Contract for Sale of Realty by Which Purchaser Agrees to Take Property "As Is" or in Its Existing Condition, 8 A.L.R.5th 312 (1992) .

(n10)Footnote 9. See Cole v. Johnson, 157 S.W.3d 856, 862 (Tex. App. 2005) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See Larsen v. Carlene Langford & Associates, Inc., 41 S.W.3d 245, 252 (Tex. App. 2001) , petition for review denied (Jul. 26, 2001).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Cole v. Johnson, 157 S.W.3d 856, 862 (Tex. App. 2005) .

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

78 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.13

§ 3A.13 Psychologically Stigmatized Properties

Duties of disclosure raise the question of what must be disclosed. While brokers must generally disclose material facts, n1 this becomes a difficult determination when the fact does not concern the property's physical attributes, but facts regarding the property's prior occupants that may negatively impact or stigmatize the property. n2 For example, is the fact that the prior resident was infected with acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) a material fact which must be disclosed to a prospective purchaser, or, even if a material fact, one that cannot be disclosed? As a result, many states have enacted statutes that specifically address psychologically stigmatized property. In general, such statutes grant immunity from civil suits to owners or their licensees in residential real property transactions in which the owners or agents fail to disclose certain facts. More than thirty states and the District of Columbia have enacted provisions that address psychologically stigmatized or impacted properties.

A psychologically stigmatized property is one where an event occurred which would make some buyers uncomfortable even though the occurrence had no physical effect on the property. n3 Examples of events that can leave a property psychologically stigmatized include:

- That an occupant of real property is now or has been suspected to be infected or is infected or has been infected with Human Immunodeficiency Virus or diagnosed with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, or any other disease which has been determined by medical evidence to be highly unlikely to be transmitted through the occupying of a dwelling place.
- That the real property was the site of a homicide, other felony, or suicide.
- That the real property is reputed to be "haunted" by ghosts or spirits or other alleged parapsychological or supernatural phenomenon.

The common element of these events is that they typically do not physically affect the property.

Most statutory and regulatory provisions addressing psychologically stigmatized properties provide that the fact that one of the listed events occurred at the property is not a material fact which must be disclosed to a prospective purchaser. n4

These statutes and regulations often provide that the seller and licensees cannot be sued for failing to disclose the occurrence of a listed event at the subject property. Some states include the fact that a property is located in the vicinity of a sex offender as another stigmatizing event which is not subject to disclosure. n5

Another approach with respect to stigmatized property is to impose a limited disclosure duty upon a licensee for certain events. For example, in Alaska, a licensee must disclose that a murder or suicide occurred on the subject real estate if the event occurred within one year of the licensee's first showing of the subject property to the buyers and if the licensee knew of the murder or suicide. n6

Some jurisdictions have statutory provisions which allow a buyer or the buyer's licensee to inquire about events which could stigmatize a property. Even without specific reference to a buyer's right to inquire, typically, if the buyer or the buyer's licensee ask, the seller and the seller's licensee are obligated to either provide a truthful answer or decline to answer. n7 Sometimes the inquiry must be submitted in writing. The manner in which this scenario is addressed varies from state to state. n8 A buyer who believes this is an important issue should take a refusal to answer the question as cause for further investigation before making an offer to purchase.

Many statutes provide that a licensee is not required to answer any question if answering such question or providing such information is prohibited by or constitutes a violation of any federal or state law or rule or regulation, expressly including without limitation the federal Fair Housing Act. n9

The majority of stigmatized property cases occurred prior to the enactment of statutes and regulations which specifically address stigmatized properties. Typically, discontent buyers were unsuccessful in their efforts, except when the seller had previously publicly promoted the property's status as being "haunted," yet failed to inform the buyer of this "fact." n10

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Iowa Code Ann. § 543B.56(1)(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. According to one author, the term "stigmatized property" originated with the National Association of Realtors,(R) which defined the term as "property psychologically impacted by an event which occurred or was suspected to have occurred on the property, such event being one that has no physical impact of any kind." See Morgan, The Expansion of the Common Law Duty of Disclosure in Real Estate Transactions: It's Not Just for Sellers Anymore, 68 Fla. B.J. 28, 31 (Feb. 1994).

One commentator has asserted that properties can suffer stigma damages with respect to physical problems such as termites or mold or chemical contamination, even when the problem has been repaired or remediated. See Stephen T. Etheredge, Making the Plaintiff-Property Owner Whole: The Recovery of Stigma Damages, 67 Ala. Law. 260 (July 2006).

(n3)Footnote 3. See generally Ronald Benton Brown & Thomas H. Thurlow III, Buyers Beware: Statutes Shield Real Estate Brokers and Sellers Who Do Not Disclose that Properties Are Psychologically Tainted, 49 Okla. L. Rev. 625 (1996); Ross R. Hartog, Note: The Psychological Impact of AIDS on Real Property and a Real Estate Broker's Duty to Disclose, 36 Ariz. L. Rev. 757 (1994); Marianne M. Jennings, Buying Property from the Addams Family, 22 Real Est. L.J. 43 (1993); Paula C. Murray, AIDS, Ghosts, Murder: Must Real Estate Brokers and Sellers Disclose?, 27 Wake Forest L. Rev. 689 (1992); Daniel M. Warner, Caveat Spiritus: A Jurisprudential Reflection Upon the Law of Haunted Houses and Ghosts, 28 Val. U.L. Rev. 207 (1993).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-329cc.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 32-2156.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Alaska Stat. § 08.88.615(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Del. Code Ann. tit. 24, § 2930; Ga. Code Ann. § 44-1-16.

(n8)Footnote 8. Jurisdictions which statutorily address a buyer's right to ask about stigmatizing events include Connecticut (Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-329ee) and Idaho (Idaho Code § 55-2803).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Ga. Code Ann. § 44-1-16(a)(2).

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Stambovsky v. Ackley, 169 A.D.2d 254, 258-259, 572 N.Y.S.2d 672, 675-676, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9873 (1991) . The purchaser of a haunted house could seek rescission since "the most meticulous inspection and search would not reveal the presence of poltergeists." With respect to the house's status as being "haunted," the court stated, "Whether the source of the spectral apparitions seen by defendant seller are parapsychic or psychogenic, having reported their presence in both a national publication (Readers' Digest) and the local press (in 1977 and 1982, respectively), defendant is estopped to deny their existence and, as a matter of law, the house is haunted."

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

79 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.14

§ 3A.14 Properties Located Near Sex Offenders

With the advent of Megan's Laws, n1 the definition of "psychological impact" has been expanded by some states to include public safety issues, such as notification that convicted sex offenders reside in a neighborhood (an off-site condition, rather than the traditional onsite definition found in older statutes). n2 Many states, however, have addressed notification requirements with respect to the presence of a sex offender in a statutory provision distinct and apart from the psychologically impacted provision. n3 Generally, most statutory provisions impose no notification requirements upon a real estate licensee with respect to the presence of sex offenders. Instead, mandatory disclosure typically consist of a licensee's obligation to inform a buyer of the existence of the sex offender registry in that jurisdiction and where to obtain information about sex offenders. The buyer must then research the sex offender registry if he or she is concerned about this issue. n4 A majority of jurisdictions have statutory provisions, regulations or other guidance that specifically address a licensee's disclosure obligations (or lack thereof) in this context.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See A.A. v. The State of New Jersey, 341 F.3d 206, 208 (3d Cir. 2003) . "In 1994, seven year old Megan Kanka was abducted, raped, and murdered near her New Jersey home by a neighbor who had previously been convicted of sex offenses against young girls. Thereafter, Congress passed the Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children and Sexually Violent Offender Registration Act, title 17, § 170101, 108 Stat. 2038, as amended, 42 U.S.C. § 14071, which conditions certain federal funds for law enforcement on the States' adoption of a Megan's Law, so named after Megan Kanka. By 1996, every State, the District of Columbia, and the Federal Government had passed a Megan's Law. While these laws vary from State to State, they generally require convicted sex offenders to register with law enforcement officials, who then notify community members of the registrants' whereabouts."

(n2)Footnote 2. Comment, For Sale: Two-Bedroom Home with Spacious Kitchen, Walk-In Closet, and Pervert Next Door, 27 Seton Hall L. Rev. 668 (1997).

(n3)Footnote 3. See generally Flavio L. Komuves, Comment, For Sale: Two-Bedroom Home with Spacious Kitchen, Walk-in Closet, and Pervert Next Door, 27 Seton Hall L. Rev. 668 (1997); Thomas D. Larson, Comment, To Disclose or Not to Disclose: The Dilemma of Homeowners and Real Estate Brokers Under Wisconsin's "Megan's Law," 81 Marq. L. Rev. 1161 (1998); Philip Lucrezia, New York's Property Condition Disclosure Act: Extensive Loopholes Leave Buyers and Sellers of Residential Real Property Governed by the Common Law, 77 St. John's L. Rev. 401 (2003);

Lori A. Polonchak, Comment: Surprise! You Just Moved Next to a Sexual Predator: The Duty of Residential Sellers and Real Estate Brokers to Disclose the Presence of Sexual Predators to Prospective Purchaser s, 102 Dick. L. Rev. 169 (1997); Shelley Ross Saxer, "Am I My Brother's Keeper?": Requiring Landowner Disclosure of the Presence of Sex Offenders and Other Criminal Activity, 80 Neb. L. Rev. 522 (2001); Tracey A. Van Wickler, H.B. 2564: The Real Estate Disclosure Act Threatens Arizona's Children with Becoming "Megan" Victims, 32 Ariz. St. L.J. 367 (2000).

(n4)Footnote 4. Many sex offender registries can be researched online.

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

80 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.15

§ 3A.15 Prospectus and Public Offering Reports

In some jurisdictions, when the licensee is showing certain lots, parcels, or units for which a public offering report or prospectus is available, the licensee is the individual obligated to provide a prospective purchaser with a copy of the document. n1 The licensee may also be obligated to obtain a signed receipt from the individual in order to prove compliance with this disclosure obligation. n2

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-329h(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-329h(b).

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

81 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *

PART II. Licensee Disclosure Obligations Regarding the Property's Condition

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 3A.16

§ 3A.16 Disclosures Mandated by Federal Law

[1] The Fair Housing Act

Fair Housing Act regulations require that a fair housing poster be displayed at any place of business where a single-family dwelling is offered for sale or rental through a real estate broker, agent, salesperson, or person in the business of selling or renting dwellings [see 24 C.F.R. § 110.10(a)]. If multiple single-family dwellings are offered for sale or rent in a group, the poster can be displayed at the model dwelling instead of at each of the individual dwellings [see 24 C.F.R. § 110.10(a)(2)(ii)]. In this situation, the fair housing poster must be posted at the beginning of construction and maintained throughout the period of construction and sale or rental [see 24 C.F.R. § 110.10(a)(3)]. However, a poster need not be displayed on vacant land [see 24 C.F.R. § 110.10(b)(1)]. In addition, all persons subject to sections 805 and 806 of the Fair Housing Act must post and maintain a fair housing poster at all their places of business [see 24 C.F.R. § 110.10(c), (d)]. These posters may be obtained at any HUD regional or area office [see 24 C.F.R. § 110.20]. A facsimile may be used if the poster and the lettering are equivalent in size to the poster available from the Department [see 24 C.F.R. § 110.20]. A failure to display the fair housing poster as required is deemed prima facie evidence of a discriminatory housing practice [see 24 C.F.R. § 110.30].

The general consensus among fair housing experts is that it is discriminatory under the federal Fair Housing Act, as well as under state fair housing and privacy laws, to disclose the race, color, age, gender, national origin, handicap or disability, familial status, or religion of a seller or owner of residential real estate as well as of a potential purchaser or tenant of residential real estate. The fact that a person has acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) or has tested positive for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV-positive) has been held to be within the fair housing definition of handicap, and thus, disclosure that a seller or owner of residential property has AIDS or is HIV-positive is unlawful. n1

[2] The Residential Lead-Based Paint Hazard Reduction Act

Real estate brokers, sellers, and landlords have a duty to ensure compliance with federal disclosure requirements related to the residential use of lead-based paint [see discussion of such requirements in Chapter 15A below]. Failure to comply will result in severe civil and criminal penalties, as discussed in Chapter 15A. A few states also have enacted lead-based paint disclosure statements that may affect real estate licensees. n2

The federal disclosure requirements relating to lead-based paint are found in The Residential Lead-Based Paint Hazard Reduction Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 4851 through 4856 and the joint rule issued by EPA and HUD, codified in duplicate at 24 C.F.R. pt. 35 and 40 C.F.R. pt. 745.

[3] Labeling and Advertising of Home Insulation

Pursuant to the Federal Trade Commission's regulations found at 16 C.F.R. Part 460, disclosures must be made by members of the home insulation industry. This includes individuals, firms, partnerships, and corporations. The regulations cover manufacturers, distributors, franchisors, installers, retailers, utility companies, trade associations, advertisers, advertising agencies, labs doing tests for industry members, and sellers of new homes to consumers [see 16 C.F.R. § 460.3].

This regulation defines insulation as any material mainly used to slow down heat flow. Insulation may be mineral or organic, fibrous, cellular, or reflective (aluminum foil). Insulation may be in rigid, semirigid, flexible, or loose-fill form. Home insulation is for use in old or new homes, condominiums, cooperatives, apartments, modular homes, or mobile homes. However, insulation does not include pipe insulation or any kind of duct insulation except for duct wrap [see 16 C.F.R. § 460.2].

New home sellers must put the following information in every sales contract: The type, thickness, and R-value of the insulation that will be installed in each part of the house. An exception to this disclosure requirement exists for a buyer who signs a sales contract before the new home seller knows what type of insulation will be put in the house, or if there is a change in the contract [see 16 C.F.R. § 460.16].

Violation of the rules regarding insulation disclosure is considered an unfair and deceptive act or practice or an unfair method of competition under section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. Violators can be fined up to $10,000 plus an adjustment for inflation for each violation [see 16 C.F.R. § 460.1].

[4] Notices Regarding Formaldehyde

Federal regulation found in 24 C.F.R. § 3280.309(a) requires that a Health Notice on Formaldehyde Emissions be prominently displayed in a temporary manner in the kitchen (i.e., countertop or exposed cabinet face) of each manufactured housing unit. The Notice must read as follows:

Important Health Notice

Some of the building materials used in this home emit formaldehyde. Eye, nose, and throat irritation, headache, nausea, and a variety of asthma-like symptoms, including shortness of breath, have been reported as a result of formaldehyde exposure. Elderly persons and young children, as well as anyone with a history of asthma, allergies, or lung problems, may be at greater risk. Research is continuing on the possible long-term effects of exposure to formaldehyde.

Reduced ventilation resulting from energy efficiency standards may allow formaldehyde and other contaminants to accumulate in the indoor air. Additional ventilation to dilute the indoor air may be obtained from a passive or mechanical ventilation system offered by the manufacturer. Consult your dealer for information about the ventilation options offered with this home.

High indoor temperatures and humidity raise formaldehyde levels. When a home is to be located in areas subject to extreme summer temperatures, an air-conditioning system can be used to control indoor temperature levels. Check the comfort cooling certificate to determine if this home has been equipped or designed for the installation of an air-conditioning system.

If you have any questions regarding the health effects of formaldehyde, consult your doctor or local health department.

The notice must be legible and typed using letters at least 1/4 inch in size. The title shall be typed using letters at least 3/4 inch in size [see 24 C.F.R. § 3280.309(b)]. This notice cannot be removed by any party until the entire sales transaction has been completed [see 24 C.F.R. § 3280.309(c)]. A copy of the notice must also be included in the Consumer Manual [see 24 C.F.R. § 3280.309(d)].

Some states require a similar notice. For example, Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 10, § 9006-B requires that a copy of the federal notice shown above be provided to a purchaser of a new mobile home at the time of execution of the purchase and sales agreement, and that each purchaser sign a certification, provided at the bottom of that notice, that the purchaser has read and understood the contents of the notice before signing the purchase and sales agreement. Some states require that a seller disclose in a property disclosure statement the presence of formaldehyde in all types of residential property. n3

[5] The Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act

The Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1701-1720, which applies to the sale or lease of any lot not exempt from the act, makes it unlawful for any developer or agent, n4 directly or indirectly, to use any means or instruments of interstate commerce or the mails:

- (1) to sell or lease any lot unless a statement of record is in effect;
- (2) to sell or lease any lot unless a printed property report has been furnished to the purchaser or lessee in advance of signing any contract or agreement by such purchaser or lessee;
- (3) to sell or lease any lot where any part of the statement of record or property report contains an untrue statement of material fact or omits to state a material fact;
- (4) to display or deliver to prospective purchasers or lessees advertising and promotional material which is inconsistent with information required to be disclosed in the property report. n5

There are numerous exemptions to this Act. The exemptions are set forth in 15 U.S.C. § 1702. One of the major exemptions is for the sale or lease of any improved land on which there is a residential, commercial, condominium, or industrial building, or the sale or lease of land under a contract obligating the seller or lessor to erect such a building thereon within a two-year period [see 15 U.S.C. § 1702(a)(2)]. 15 U.S.C. § 1705 lists the information that must be contained in or accompany a statement of record. The property report is addressed in 15 U.S.C. § 1707. For further discussion of the Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act, see § 14.15 below.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 24 C.F.R. § 100.201 for a definition of handicap and physical or mental impairment which includes persons with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus infection. See also Texas A.G. Opinion No. JM-1093 (9-5-89), 1989 Tex. AG LEXIS 95, to the effect that it is a violation of Fair Housing Act provisions on disability to disclose in a real estate transaction the fact that an owner or occupant has AIDS or is HIV-positive.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Maryland Lead Poisoning Prevention Act found at Maryland Code Ann., Envir. § 6-801, et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Wash. Rev. Code § 64.06.020 which shows that state's statutory seller disclosure form. Question 7E on this form requires disclosure of information regarding the presence of formaldehyde in the subject property. But see Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 255, § 12J (no liability for failing to disclose formaldehyde foam insulation).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 1701(6) defines an agent as any person who represents, or acts for or on behalf of, a developer in selling or leasing, or offering for sale or lease, any lot or lots in a subdivision. This term does not include an attorney at law whose representation of another person consists solely of rendering legal services.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 15 U.S.C. § 1703(a)(1).

* Written by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues.

82 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees * APPENDIX 3A-1 Disclosure Law and Regulatory Agency Directory

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice APPENDIX 3A-1

Scope

This Appendix contains statutory references where readers can find the main disclosure laws affecting real estate licensees and their clients. This Appendix also contains contact information for the various regulatory agencies. This Appendix is organized alphabetically by jurisdiction.

Alabama

The Real Estate Consumer's Agency and Disclosure Act is found at Alabama Code §§ 34-27-80 to 34-27-88. Regulations implementing this act can be found at Ala. Admin. Code r. 790-X-3-.13 and Ala. Admin. Code r. 790-X-3-.14.

The regulatory agency is the Alabama Real Estate Commission, 1201 Carmichael Way, Montgomery, Alabama 36106; Telephone: 334-242-5544; Fax: 334-270-9118; Website: <http://www.arec.alabama.gov>.

Alaska

The statutory provisions addressing brokerage relationships and required disclosures are found at Alaska Statutes §§ 08.88.600 to 08.88.695.

Statutory provisions addressing disclosure obligations imposed upon the seller of residential real estate are found at Alaska Statutes §§ 34.70.010 to Alaska Stat. 34.70.200.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Alaska Statutes § 08.88.615(c).

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Alaska Statutes § 34.70.050.

Alaska Statutes § 34.70.050(3) requires that sellers must make disclosures regarding agricultural facilities in the vicinity of the subject property.

The regulatory agency is the Department of Community and Economic Development, Division of Occupational Licensing, Real Estate Commission, Robert B. Atwood Building, 550 West 7th Avenue, Suite 1950, Anchorage, Alaska 99501; Telephone: 907-269-8162, Fax: 907-269-1066; Website: <http://www.dced.state.ak.us/occ/prec.htm>.

Arizona

It does not appear that Arizona has enacted any statutory provisions specifically addressing brokerage relationships and required disclosures.

It also does not appear that Arizona statutorily requires any seller disclosure statement for residential properties. Instead, the Arizona Association of Realtors(R) publishes a Seller's Property Disclosure Statement (SPDS) which states that, "Sellers are obligated by law to disclose all known material (important) facts about the property to the buyer." The obligation to provide the SPDS does not arise from statute or regulation, but instead appears to arise from case law. Specifically, Hill v. Jones n1 requires that if a seller knows of facts materially affecting the value of the property that are not readily observable and that are not known to the buyer, the seller has a duty to disclose those facts to the buyer. The SPDS appears to be a voluntary trade association effort to comply with this requirement.

Disclosures regarding psychologically impacted properties and sex offenders located in the vicinity of the subject property are addressed in Arizona Revised Statutes § 32-2156.

Arizona Revised Statutes § 33-1806 addresses disclosures a seller must make with respect to the homeowners association if the residence is located in a planned community.

Arizona Revised Statutes § 33-434.01 provides that an owner of property that has been subject to soil remediation (conducted pursuant to Arizona Revised Statutes § 49-104(B)(16)) must make certain disclosure prior to transferring the property.

Arizona Revised Statutes § 12-1000 (F) requires that certain disclosures be made if the property being sold had been used as a site to manufacture methamphetamine, ecstasy or LSD.

Arizona Revised Statutes § 28-8486 requires that the Department of Real Estate maintain and make available to the public on request a map showing the exterior boundaries of each territory in the vicinity of a public airport.

The regulatory agency is the Arizona Department of Real Estate, 2910 N. 44th Street, Suite 100, Phoenix, Arizona 85018; Telephone: 602-771-7799, Website: <http://www.re.state.az.us/>.

Arkansas

Arkansas Code Annotated § 17-42-108 requires that in every real estate transaction involving a licensee, the licensee must clearly disclose to all parties or to their agents which party the licensee is representing. Regulations implementing this disclosure obligation are found at Arkansas Real Estate Commission Regulations §§ 8.1 to 8.5.

The regulatory agency is the Arkansas Real Estate Commission, 612 South Summit Street, Little Rock, AR 72201; Telephone: 501-683-8010, Fax: 501-683-8020; Website: <http://www.state.ar.us/arec/arecweb.html>.

California:

Statutory provisions regarding licensees disclosure obligations with respect to brokerage relationships are found at California Civil Code §§ 2079.14 to 2079.17

California Civil Code § 2079(a) n2 imposes on a licensed broker or salesperson a duty to a prospective purchaser of residential real estate to conduct a reasonably competent and diligent visual inspection of the property offered for sale.

California Business & Professions Code § 10147.5 requires that licensees disclose that commissions are not statutorily fixed, but instead are negotiable.

California Business & Professions Code § 10141 provides that within one month after the close of escrow for the transfer of title to real property or the sale of a business opportunity through a real estate broker, the broker must inform the buyer and seller in writing of the selling price.

Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10232.4 and 10232.5 provides that licensees involved in negotiating a loan to be secured by a lien on real property or on a business opportunity must make certain disclosures.

Statutory provisions addressing disclosure obligations imposed upon the seller of residential real estate are found at Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1102 to 1102.17.

California sellers are subject to numerous disclosure obligations including the following:

- Disclosure of natural hazards. See Cal. Civ. Code § 1103 to § 1103.14
- Smoke detector statement of compliance. See Cal. Health & Safety Code § 13113.8.
- Earthquake hazards disclosure for certain residences built prior to January 1, 1960. See Cal. Gov Code § 8897.1.
- Water Heater Certification. Sellers must certify in writing to a prospective buyer that the water heater has been braced, anchored or strapped to resist falling or horizontal movement due to earthquake motion. See Cal. Health & Safety Code § 19211.
- Toxic mold. The Toxic Mold Protection Act of 2001, which contains disclosure requirements, applies to residential, commercial and industrial property. See Cal. Health & Safety Code § 26100 to § 26157.

The Department of Real Estate publishes an extensive booklet, titled "Disclosures in Real Property Transactions," which addresses disclosures which must be made in connection with the sale of real estate. This document is available online at http://www.dre.ca.gov/pub_disclosures.html

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Cal. Civ. Code § 2079.10a.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Cal. Civ. Code § 1710.2.

The regulatory agency is the California Department of Real Estate, 2201 Broadway Sacramento, CA 95818; (Mailing address: P.O. Box 187000, Sacramento, CA 95818-7000) Telephone: 916-227-0931; Fax number: 916-227-0925; Website: <http://www.dre.ca.gov>. The Department of Real Estate has offices in Sacramento, Fresno, Los Angeles, Oakland, and San Diego.

Colorado

Statutory provisions regarding licensees disclosure obligations with respect to brokerage relationships are found at Colo. Rev. Stat. §§ 12-61-801 to 12-61-811.

Pursuant to the Colorado Division of Real Estate Rule F-7, real estate brokers must use Commission-approved forms as appropriate to a transaction or circumstance to which a relevant form is applicable. Among those forms is a Seller's Property Disclosure form which indicates that it is for all properties. Rule E-43 addresses square footage measurement of residential property. The regulatory agency also publishes forms lead-based paint disclosure forms for both sales and rentals.

Colo. Rev. Stat. § 38-35.7-101 states that every contract for the purchase and sale of residential real property must contain a disclosure statement regarding special taxing districts.

With respect to the disclosure of sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property, It is the position of the regulatory agency that licensees should inform a potential buyer to contact local law enforcement officials for further information if the presence of a registered sex offender concerns the buyer.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Colo. Rev. Stat. § 38-35.5-101.

The regulatory agency is the Colorado Department of Regulatory Agencies, Division of Real Estate, 1560 Broadway, Suite 925, Denver, Colorado 80202; Telephone: 303-894-2166 or 303-894-2185; Fax: 303-894-2683; Website: <http://www.dora.state.co.us/real-estate>.

Connecticut

Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325d requires disclosures regarding brokerage relationships.

Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-327b requires that sellers provide a written residential condition report to the prospective purchaser.

Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-327f requires disclosures regarding the existence of hazardous waste facilities.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Conn. Gen. Stat. §§ 20-329ccc to 20-329eee.

The regulatory agency is the Department of Consumer Protection, Occupational and Professional Licensing Division, 165 Capitol Avenue, Hartford, Connecticut 06106; Telephone: 860-713-6150; Fax: 860-713-7243; Website: <http://www.state.ct.us/dcp>

Delaware

Del Code Ann. tit. 24, § 2931 requires agency disclosure.

The Buyer Protection Act, which requires that residential buyers be provided with a Seller's Disclosure of Real Property Condition Report is found at Del Code Ann. tit. 6, §§ 2570 to 2578.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Del. Code Ann. tit. 24, § 2930.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, Cannon Building, 861 Silver Lake Blvd., Suite 203, Dover, Delaware 19904; Telephone: 302-744-4500; Fax: 302-739-2711; Website: <http://dpr.delaware.gov/boards/realestate/index.shtml>

District of Columbia

D.C. Code § 42-1703 and D.C. Code § 47-2853.196 require disclosures regarding brokerage relationships.

D.C. Code §§ 42-1301 to 42-1311 require residential real property seller disclosures.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at D.C. Code § 47-2853.198.

The regulatory agency is the Board of Real Estate, 941 North Capitol Street, N.E., Washington, DC 20002; Telephone: 202-442-4340; Fax: 202-442-4528; Website: <http://www.dcre.dc.gov/> (This is the Website for the Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs. The Real Estate Board can be reached via a link on this home page by first clicking on Business Resources and then clicking on Real Estate Board.).

Florida

Fla. Stat. § 475.278 requires disclosures regarding brokerage relationships.

Fla. Stat. § 161.57 requires disclosures regarding properties located in coastal areas.

Fla. Stat. § 404.056(5) requires disclosures regarding radon. This disclosure appears to apply to all properties.

Fla. Stat. § 720.401 requires disclosures in connection with properties subject to homeowners association membership.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Fla. Stat. § 689.25.

The regulatory agency is the Division of Real Estate, 400 W. Robinson Street, Suite N308, Orlando, Florida 32801; Telephone: 850-487-1395; Fax: 407-317-7245; Website: <http://www.myflorida.com/dbpr/re/index.html>.

Georgia

The Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions Act is found at Ga. Code Ann. §§ 10-6A-1 to 10-6A-16.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties and sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Ga. Code Ann. § 44-1-16.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, Suite 1000 -International Tower, 229 Peachtree Street N.E., Atlanta, Georgia 30303; Telephone: 404-656-3916; Fax: 404-656-6650; Website: <http://www.grec.state.ga.us>.

Hawaii

Haw. Rev. Stat. §§ 508D-1 to 508D-19 requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Haw. Rev. Stat. § 467-14(18) and Haw. Rev. Stat. § 508D-8.

The regulatory agency is the Department of Commerce & Consumer Affairs, Real Estate Branch, King Kalakaua Building, 335 Merchant Street, 3rd Floor, Room 333, Honolulu, HI 96813; Telephone: 808-586-2643; Fax: 808-586-2650; Website: <http://hawaii.gov/hirec/>.

Idaho

Idaho Code § 54-2085 requires disclosures regarding brokerage relationships.

Idaho Code §§ 55-2501 to 55-2518 contains the Property Condition Disclosure Act.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties and sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Idaho Code § 55-2801.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 633 North Fourth Street (Post Office Box 83720, Zip Code: 83720-0077), Boise, Idaho 83720; Phone: 208-334-3285; Fax: 208-334-2050; Website: <http://www.irec.idaho.gov/>.

Illinois

Brokerage relationships disclosure requirements are found at 225 ILCS 454/15-5, et seq.

The Residential Real Property Disclosure Act is found at 765 ILCS 77/1, et seq.

Radon testing and disclosure requirements with respect to residential property transactions are found at 420 ILCS 46/10.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at 225 ILCS 454/15-20.

The regulatory agency is the Office of Banks and Real Estate, Division of Professional Regulation, 500 East Monroe Street, Suite 200, Springfield, Illinois 62701; Telephone: 217-785-9300; Website: <http://www.obre.state.il.us>.

Indiana

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Ind. Code Ann. § 25-34.1-1-1, et seq.

Ind. Code Ann. §§ 32-21-5-1 to 32-21-5-13 requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Ind. Code Ann. § 32-21-6-3.

The regulatory agency is the Professional Licensing Agency, Attn: Indiana Real Estate Commission, 402 West Washington Street, Room W072, Indianapolis, Indiana 46204; Telephone: 317-234-3009; Fax: 317-232-2312; Website: <http://www.in.gov/pla>.

Iowa

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Iowa Code § 543B.55 to § 543B.64.

Iowa Code §§ 558A.1 to 558A.8 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 1920 SE Hulsizer Avenue, Ankeny, Iowa 50021; Telephone: 515-281-7393 or 515-281-5910; Fax: 515-281-7411; Website: <http://www.state.ia.us/government/com/prof/index.html>.

Kansas

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Kan. Stat. Ann. § 58-30,101 to § 58-30,113. Kan. Adm. Reg. No. 86-3-26 addresses the real estate brokerage relationships brochure.

Kansas Attorney General Opinion No. 2004-10, 2004 Kan. AG LEXIS 12 (Apr. 24, 2004) addresses a licensee's disclosure obligations with respect to sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property. This opinion states in part, "... [the Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions Act] does not impose a duty on a broker to disclose the fact that a registered sex offender resides in the neighborhood.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, Three Townsite Plaza, Suite 200, 120 SE 6th Avenue, Topeka, Kansas 66603; Telephone: 785-296-3411; Fax: 785-296-1771; Website: <http://www.accesskansas.org/krec>.

Kentucky

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at 201 Ky. Admin. Regs. 11:400.

Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 324.360 requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions involving a licensee who receives compensation. The form used for making seller's disclosures is found at 201 Ky. Admin. Regs. 11:350.

Disclosures requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Ky. Rev. Stat. § 207.250.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 10200 Linn Station Road, Suite 201, Louisville, Kentucky 40223, Telephone: 502-429-7250; Fax: 502-429-7246; Website: <http://krec.ky.gov/>.

Louisiana

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at La. Rev. Stat. § 37:1467.

La. Rev. Stat. §§ 9:3196 to 9:3200 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosures regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at La. Rev. Stat. § 37:1468.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at La. Rev. Stat. § 37:1469.

Optional mold disclosures are addressed in La. Rev. Stat. § 37:1470.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, Post Office Box 14785, Baton Rouge, Louisiana 70898; Street Address: 9071 Interline Avenue, Baton Rouge, LA 70809; Telephone: 225-925-1923, Fax: 225-925-4501; Website: <http://www.lrec.state.la.us>.

Maine

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 32, § 13279.

Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 33, §§ 171 to 179 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 35 State House Station, Augusta, Maine 04333; Telephone: 207-624-8518; Fax: 207-624-8637; Website: <http://www.maine.gov/pfr/olr/categories/cat38.htm>.

Maryland

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Md. Code Ann., Bus. Occ. & Prof. § 17-530.

Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702 requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-705 imposes disclosure requirements regarding property encumbered by a conservation easement.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Md. Code Ann., Bus. Occ. & Prof. § 17-322.1.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 500 N. Calvert Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21202; Telephone: 410-230-6230; Fax: 410-333-0023. This agency's webpage may be reached from this webpage: <http://www.dllr.state.md.us/> by clicking on Occupational & Professional Licensing and then clicking on Real Estate Commission.

Massachusetts

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found in regulations at 254 CMR 3.00(13).

Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 112, § 87AAA3/4 addresses agency disclosures when the property is intended for use as 1 to 4 residential dwellings or the intended purchase or sale of land on which a building is intended to be constructed for use as 1 or 2 residential dwellings.

The Massachusetts Consumer Protection Act applies to real property. This Act is found at Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 93A, § 1 et seq. A broker may have disclosure obligations pursuant to this Act. n3

Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 111, § 197A, requires that prospective purchasers of premises be notified about the hazards of lead in paint, plaster or other accessible structural material in premises and the requirements for their abatement or containment.

Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 255, § 12J provides that no cause of action shall arise or be maintained against a seller, lessor, real estate broker or salesperson, lender or mortgagee of real property by statute or at common law, for failure to disclose to a buyer or tenant that the real property has been insulated with urea formaldehyde foam insulation.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Mass Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 93, § 114.

The regulatory agency is the Division of Professional Licensure, Real Estate Board, 239 Causeway Street, Suite 500, Boston, Massachusetts 02114; Telephone: 617-727-2373; Website: <http://www.mass.gov/dpl/>.

Michigan

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Mich. Comp. Laws § 339.2517.

The Michigan Seller Disclosure Act, which requires seller disclosures on the transfer of residential real estate, is found at Mich. Comp. Laws §§ 565.951 to 565.966.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties and sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Mich. Comp. Laws § 339.2518.

The regulatory agency is the Department of Energy, Labor & Economic Growth, Michigan State Board of Real Estate

Brokers & Salespersons, 2501 Woodlake Circle, Okemos, Michigan 48865; Telephone: 517-373-7353; Fax: 517-373-1044; Website: www.michigan.gov/realestate.

Minnesota

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Minn. Stat. § 82.22.

Disclosures regarding a licensee's compensation are found at Minn. Stat. § 82.21.

Minn. Stat. §§ 513.52 to 513.60 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties and sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Minn. Stat. § 513.56.

Minn. Stat. § 103I.235, Subd. (1)(a) requires that before the parties sign an agreement to sell or transfer real property, the seller must disclose in writing to the buyer information about the status and location of all known wells on the property.

Minn. Stat. § 115.55, Subd. 6(a) requires that before the parties sign an agreement to sell or transfer real property, the seller or transferor must disclose in writing to the buyer or transferee information on how sewage generated at the property is managed.

The regulatory agency is the Minnesota Department of Commerce, 85--7th Place East, St. Paul MN 55101, Telephone: 651-296-6319; Website: <http://www.state.mn.us/> (click on "more" under licensing and forms and then click on "Department of Commerce License Lookup").

Mississippi

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Code of Mississippi Rules § 50-025-001(IV)(E).

Miss. Code Ann. §§ 89-1-501 to 89-1-527 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties and sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Miss. Code Ann. § 89-1-527.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, Post Office Box 12685, Jackson, Mississippi 39236 (Street address: 2506 Lakeland Drive, Suite 300, Flowood, MS 39232); Telephone: 601-932-6770; Fax: 601-932-2990; Website: <http://www.mrec.state.ms.us/>.

Missouri

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 339.770.

Mo. Rev. Stat. § 260.213 provides that no person may knowingly sell, convey or transfer title to any property that contains a permitted or unpermitted solid waste disposal site or demolition landfill, without disclosing to the buyer early in the negotiation process the existence and location of the site.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Mo. Rev. Stat. § 442.600.

Disclosure requirements regarding the sale or transfer of property used as a site for methamphetamine production are found in Mo. Rev. Stat. § 442.606.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, Post Office Box 1339, 3605 Missouri Blvd., Jefferson City, MO 65102; Telephone: 573-751-2628; Fax: 573-751-2777; Website: <http://pr.mo.gov/realestate.asp>.

Montana

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Mont. Code Ann. § 37-51-314.

The Montana Mold Disclosure Act is found at Mont. Code Ann. § 70-16-701, et seq. This act provides that a seller, landlord, seller's agent, buyer's agent, or property manager may provide a voluntary disclosure statement found in the act to a buyer or tenant. This act uses the term inhabitable real property which is defined to mean any real property that includes a building affixed to land. The building must be designed to be primarily occupied by humans, either as a dwelling or as a place of business.

The Montana Radon Control Act is found at Mont. Code Ann. § 75-3-601, et seq. This act provides for the notification of the presence of radon to persons acquiring or selling real estate. A radon disclosure statement must be provided on at least one document, form, or application executed prior to or contemporaneously with an offer for the purchase and sale of inhabitable real property.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are addressed indirectly at Mont. Code Anno., § 37-51-102(2)(b) which concerns what constitutes an adverse material fact.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Mont. Code Ann. § 37-51-105.

The regulatory agency is the Board of Realty Regulation, Post Office Box 200513, 301 South Park Avenue, Helena, Montana 59620; Telephone: 406-444-2961; Fax: 406-841-2323; Website: <http://mt.gov/>.

Nebraska

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Neb. Rev. Stat. §§ 76-2420 and 76-2422.

Neb. Rev. Stat. Neb. § 76-2,120 requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Nebraska's Attorney General has issued No. 98051, 1998 Neb. AG LEXIS 53 (Dec. 7, 1998), states that the presence of a registered sex offender in the vicinity of the property listed for sale does not appear to be included within the list of adverse material facts found in Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2417(3)(a). In a subsequent opinion, No. 99006, 1999 Neb. AG LEXIS 23 (Feb. 24, 1999), the Nebraska Attorney General opined that a dual agent does not have a duty to disclose to clients the nearby presence of a registered sex offender.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 1200 N Street, Suite 402, Post Office Box 94667, Lincoln, Nebraska 68509; Telephone: 402-471-2004; Fax: 402-471-4492; Website: <http://www.nrec.state.ne.us>.

Nevada

Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 113.100 to 113.150 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 113.060 requires that certain sellers to give notice of rates for water and sewerage services.

Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 113.065 requires disclosure upon the sale of a home or improved lot adjacent to open range.

Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 113.070 requires disclosures by certain sellers relating to zoning classifications and designations in master plan regarding land use.

Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 113.080 requires disclosures by certain sellers in county whose population is 400,000 or more relating to gaming enterprise districts.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 40.770.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 40.770.

The regulatory agency is the Department of Business & Industry, Real Estate Division, 2501 E. Sahara Ave., Suite 102, Las Vegas, Nevada 89104; Telephone: 702-486-4033; Fax: 702-486-4275; Website: <http://www.red.state.nv.us>.

New Hampshire

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at N.H. Code Admin. R. Ann. Part Rea 701.

N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:4-a requires that prior to executing a contract for the purchase and sale of real estate that includes a building, the seller, or the seller's agent, must provide disclosures regarding radon gas and lead paint.

N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:4-c requires disclosure of certain information regarding a property's water supply and sewage disposal system.

N.H. Code Admin. Rules § 701.04 requires certain disclosures regarding insulation.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:4-e.

Disclosure requirements regarding the sale or lease of property which had had been used for methamphetamine production are found at N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:4-g.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, State House Annex, 25 Capitol Street, Room 434, Concord, New Hampshire 03301, Telephone: 603-271-2701; Website: <http://www.nh.gov/nhrec/>.

New Jersey

N.J. Admin. Code § 11:5-6.9 requires that brokers deliver to individuals involved in residential transactions a Consumer Information Statement which addresses agency relationships. The New Jersey Real Estate Commission recommends the use of seller disclosure statements, but there is no requirement that such forms be used.

The New Residential Construction Off-Site Conditions Disclosure Act, found at N.J. Stat. Ann. §§ 46:3C-1 to 46:3C-12 requires that lists of certain "off-site conditions" in the municipality, which may affect the value of newly constructed residential real estate, be available at each Municipal Clerk's office within each municipality.

The Real Estate Full Disclosure Act is found at N.J. Stat. Ann. § 45:15-16.27 et seq. Regulations implementing this Act are found at N.J. Admin. Code §§ 11:5-9.1 through 11:5-9.19. This Act applies to subdivisions and subdivided lands offered for sale as part of a common promotional plan of advertising and sale [see N.J. Stat. Ann. §§ 45:15-16.30 and 45:15-16.36; N.J. Admin. Code. § 11:5-9.2].

N.J. Stat. Ann. § 26:2D-73 provides in part that in the case of a prospective sale of a building which has been tested for radon gas and radon progeny, the seller must provide the buyer, at the time the contract of sale is entered into, with a copy of the results of that test and evidence of any subsequent mitigation or treatment, and any prospective buyer who contracts for the testing shall have the right to receive the results of that testing.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at N.J. Admin. Code § 11:5-6.4(d).

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at N.J. Admin. Code § 11:5-6.4(d) and (e).

The regulatory agency is the New Jersey Department of Banking and Insurance, Real Estate Commission, 20 West State Street, Post Office Box 328, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0328; Telephone: 609-292-7272; Fax: 609-292-0944; Website: <http://www.state.nj.us/dobi/remnu.shtml>.

New Mexico

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at N.M. Stat. Ann. § 61-29-10.1.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at N.M. Stat. Ann. § 47-13-2.

Though New Mexico licensees have a duty to disclose adverse material facts actually known by the licensee about the property or the transaction, the term "adverse material facts" does not include data from sex offender registry or the existence of group homes [N.M. Admin. Code tit. 16, § 16.61.19.8(H)].

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 5200 Oakland Ave. NE Albuquerque, NM 87113; Telephone: 505-222-9820; Fax: 505-222-9886; Website: <http://www.rld.state.nm.us/RealEstateCommission/>.

New York

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 443.

The Property Condition Disclosure Act, which is found at N.Y. Real Prop. Law §§ 460 to 467, requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 242 requires that sellers of real property to which no utility electric service is provided must provide written notice of this fact to the prospective purchaser or to the prospective purchaser's agent. Other related notices are required under this provision.

N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 333-c provides that certain disclosures must be made when any purchase and sales contract is presented for the sale, purchase, or exchange of real property located partially or wholly within an agricultural district established pursuant to the provisions of article 25-AA of the Agriculture and Markets Law.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 443-a.

The regulatory agency is the Division of Licensing Services, Street Address: Alfred E. Smith Office Building, 80 S. Swan Street, 10th Floor, Albany, NY 12210; Mailing Address: P.O. Box 22001, Albany, NY 12201-2001; Telephone: 518-474-4429; Fax: 518-473-6648; Website: <http://www.dos.state.ny.us/lcns/licensing.html>.

North Carolina

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at N.C. Admin. Code tit. 21, § 58A.0104.

General Statutes of North Carolina chapter 47E contains the Residential Property Disclosure Act.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties and sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at N.C. Gen. Stat. § 39-50.

The regulatory agency is the North Carolina Real Estate Commission, Post Office Box 17100, 1313 Navaho Drive, Raleigh, North Carolina 27619-7100; Telephone: 919-875-3700; Fax: 919-877-4221; Website: <http://www.ncrec.state.nc.us>.

North Dakota

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at N.D. Cent. Code § 43-23-12.1.

North Dakota Attorney General Letter Opinion 2001-L-51, 2001 N.D. AG LEXIS 66 (Nov. 28, 2001) discusses disclosure obligations with respect to properties formerly used as methamphetamine labs.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at N.D. Admin. Code § 70-02-01-19.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at N.D. Cent. Code § 43-23-08.3.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 200 East Main Avenue, Suite 204, Bismarck, North Dakota 58502-0727; Mailing address: P.O. Box 727, Bismarck ND 58502-0727; Telephone: 701-328-9749; Fax: 701-328-9750; Website: <http://www.realestatend.org/>.

Ohio

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 4735.57.

Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.30 requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5301.253 provides that the owner of any property who has received written notice that the property is in violation of any building or housing code must give the purchaser or grantee of the property written notice of the code violations prior to entering into an agreement for the transfer of title to the property.

The Residential Property Disclosure Form distributed by the Ohio Department of Commerce contains the following notice with respect to sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property:

Owner makes no representations with respect to any offsite conditions. Purchaser should exercise whatever due diligence purchaser deems necessary with respect to offsite issues that may affect purchaser's decision to purchase the property. Purchaser should exercise whatever due diligence purchaser deems necessary with respect to Ohio's Sex Offender Registration and Notification Law (commonly referred to as "Megan's Law"). This law requires the local Sheriff to provide written notice to neighbors if a sex offender resides or intends to reside in the area. The notice provided by the Sheriff is a public record and is open to inspection under Ohio's Public Records Law. If concerned about this issue, purchaser assumes responsibility to obtain information from the Sheriff's office regarding the notices they have provided pursuant to Megan's Law.

The regulatory agency is the Ohio Department of Commerce, Division of Real Estate and Professional Licensing, 77 South High Street, 20th Floor, Columbus, Ohio 43215-6133; Telephone: 614-466-4100; Website: <http://www.com.ohio.gov/real/>.

Oklahoma

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Okla. Stat. tit. 59, § 858-356.

The Residential Property Condition Disclosure Act, which is found at Okla. Stat. tit. 60, §§ 831 to 839, requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Okla. Stat. tit. 59, § 858-513.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Okla. Stat. tit. 59, § 858-514.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, Shepherd Mall, 2401 N.W. 23rd, Suite 18, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73107, Telephone: 405-521-3387; Fax: 405-521-2189; Website: www.orec.state.ok.us.

Oregon

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Or. Rev. Stat. § 696.820.

Or. Rev. Stat. §§ 105.462 to 105.490 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Or. Admin. R. 333-040-0100 requires disclosures with respect to property used as an illegal drug manufacturing site.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Or. Rev. Stat. § 93.275.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Or. Rev. Stat. §§ 93.275 and 696.880.

The regulatory agency is the Oregon Real Estate Agency, 1177 Center Street NE, Salem, Oregon 97301-2505; Telephone: 503-378-4170; Fax: 503-378-3256; Website: <http://www.rea.state.or.us>.

Pennsylvania

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at 63 Pa. Stat. § 455.606a.

The Real Estate Seller Disclosure Law, found at 68 Pa. C.S. §§ 7301 to 7315, requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at 42 Pa. C.S. § 9799.7.

The regulatory agency is the State Real Estate Commission, P.O. Box 2649, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17105; Telephone: 717-783-3658; Fax: 717-787-0250; Website: www.dos.state.pa.us/estate.

Rhode Island

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 5-20.6-3 and 5-20.6-8.

R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 5-20.8-1 to 5-20.8-12 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at R.I. Gen. Laws § 5-20.8-6.

The regulatory agency is the Department of Business Regulation, Division of Commercial Licensing and Regulation, Real Estate, 1511 Pontiac Avenue, Cranston, RI 02920, Telephone: 401-462-9500; Fax: 401-462-9532; Website: <http://www.dbr.state.ri.us/>.

South Carolina

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at S.C. Code Ann. § 40-57-139.

The Residential Property Condition Disclosure Act, found at S.C. Code Ann. §§ 27-50-10 to 27-50-110, requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties and sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at S.C. Code Ann. § 27-50-90.

The regulatory agency is the Department of Labor Licensing & Regulation, Real Estate Commission, Post Office Box 11847, Columbia, South Carolina 29211; Street Address: Synergy Business Park, Kingstree Building, 110 Centerview Dr., Suite 201, Columbia, SC 29210; Telephone: 803-896-4400; Fax: 803-896-4404; Website: <http://www.llronline.com/POL/REC/>.

South Dakota

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at S.D. Codified Laws § 36-21A-130.

S.D. Codified Laws §§ 43-4-37 to 43-4-44 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

With respect to psychological impacts, the Seller's Property Condition Disclosure Statement shown in S.D. Codified Laws § 43-4-44 contains the following questions:

Within the previous twelve months prior to signing this document, are you aware of any of the following occurring on the subject property?

a. A human death by homicide or suicide? Yes _____ No _____

If yes,
explain: _____

b. Other felony committed against the property or a person on the property? Yes _____ No _____

If yes, explain:

This disclosure statement also whether the property has been used for the production of methamphetamine.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at S.D. Codified Laws § 36-21A-134.1.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 221 W. Capitol Suite 101, Pierre, South Dakota 57501; Telephone: 605-773-3600; Fax: 605-773-4356; Website: <http://www.state.sd.us/sdrec/>.

Tennessee

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Tenn. Code Ann. §§ 62-13-401 to 62-13-405.

Tenn. Code Ann. §§ 66-5-201 to 66-5-212 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-5-207.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 500 James Robertson Parkway, Nashville, Tennessee 37243; Telephone: 615-741-2273; Fax: 615-741-0313; E-mail: trec@state.tn.us; Website: <http://www.state.tn.us/commerce/boards/trec/>.

Texas

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Tex. Occ. Code § 1101.558.

Tex. Prop. Code § 5.008 requires seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Texas has some unique disclosure requirements including the following:

- Seller's disclosure of location of conditions under the surface of unimproved real property are found at Tex. Prop. Code § 5.013.
- Seller's disclosure regarding potential annexation are found at Tex. Prop. Code § 5.011.
- Seller's duty to provide notice of obligations related to membership in property owners' association is found at Tex. Prop. Code § 5.012.
- A possible duty to provide documents in a foreign language with respect to an executory contract is found at Tex. Prop. Code § 5.068.

Additional disclosure duties regarding executory contracts are found at Tex. Prop. Code §§ 5.069 to 5.071 (disclosure duties regarding the property's condition, tax payments, insurance coverage and financing terms).

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Tex. Occ. Code § 1101.556.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Tex. Code Crim. Proc. art. 62.056(e).

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, Post Office Box 12188, Austin, Texas 78711-2188 (Street address: 1101 Camino La Costa, Austin, TX 78752); Telephone: 512-459-6544; Fax: 512-465-3910; Website: <http://www.trec.state.tx.us>.

Utah

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice APPENDIX 3A-1

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Utah Admin. Code Rule 162-6-2.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Utah Code Ann. § 57-1-37.

The regulatory agency is the Division of Real Estate, Post Office Box 146711, Salt Lake City, Utah 84114 (Street address: Heber M. Wells Building, 160 East 300 South, 2nd Floor, Salt Lake City, UT 84111); Telephone: 801-530-6747; Fax: 801-526-4387; Website: <http://www.commerce.utah.gov/> (then click on "Real Estate").

Vermont

Code of Vt. Reg. 04-030-290, R. 4.6(a) states that Vermont licensees must provide a written consumer disclosure form that includes the content established by the Commission to any unrepresented person with whom an agent of the brokerage firm has substantial contact.

The regulatory agency is the Vermont Real Estate Commission, Office of Professional Regulation, National Life Building, North FL2, Montpelier, VT 05620-3402; Telephone: 802-828-3228; Fax: 802-828-2368; Website: http://www.vtprofessionals.org/opr1/real_estate/.

Virginia

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Va. Code Ann. § 54.1-2138.

The Virginia Residential Property Disclosure Act is found at Va. Code Ann. §§ 55-517 to 55-525.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Va. Code Ann. § 55-524 (A).

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Va. Code Ann. § 55-519 (C).

The regulatory agency is the Department of Professional and Occupational Regulation, 9960 Mayland Drive, Suite 400, Richmond, Virginia 23233; Telephone: 804-367-8500; Fax: 804-527-4298; Website: <http://www.state.va.us/dpor/>.

Washington

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Wash. Rev. Code § 18.86.030.

Wash. Rev. Code §§ 64.06.005 to 64.06.900 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are indirectly found at § 18.86.010(9), which defines "material fact" in a manner so as to exclude events which would psychologically impact a property.

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Wash. Rev. Code §§ 64.06.020 and 64.06.021.

The regulatory agency is the Department of Licensing, Business and Professions Division, Real Estate Program, Post Office Box 9015, Olympia, Washington 98507 (Street address: 2000 4th Avenue West, Olympia, WA 98502); Telephone: 360-664-6500; Fax: 360-586-0998; Website: <http://www.dol.wa.gov/business/realestate/index.html>.

West Virginia

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at W. Va. Code § 30-40-26(d).

W. Va. Code § 60A-11-3 requires that the Department of Health and Human Resources establish requirements for property owners, sellers and landlords to disclose the existence of any former clandestine laboratory site or activity to any potential occupant of the residential property.

W. Va. Code § 22-18-21 provides that the grantor in a deed or other instrument of conveyance or any lessor in any lease or other instrument whereby any real property is let for a period of time shall disclose the fact that such property or the subsurface of the property was used for the storage, treatment or disposal of hazardous waste.

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 300 Capitol Street, Suite 400, Charleston, West Virginia 25301; Telephone: 304-558-3555; Fax: 304-558-6442; Website: <http://www.wvrec.org/>.

Wisconsin

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Wis. Stat. § 452.135.

Wis. Stat. §§ 709.01 to 709.08 require seller disclosures in residential real estate transactions.

Disclosure requirements regarding psychologically stigmatized properties are found at Wis. Stat. § 452.23(2)(a).

Disclosure requirements regarding sex offenders in the vicinity of the subject property are found at Wis. Stat. § 452.24.

The regulatory agency is the Wisconsin Department of Licensing and Regulation, P.O. Box 8935, Madison, WI 53708-8935 (Street address: 1400 E. Washington Avenue, Madison Wisconsin 57503); Telephone: 608-266-2112; Fax: 608-261-7083; E-mail: web@drl.state.wi.us; Website: <http://drl.wi.gov/index.htm>.

Wyoming

Brokerage relationship disclosure requirements are found at Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 33-28-306.

With respect to disclosures regarding psychologically impacted properties, pursuant to regulations, psychological factors such as health problems and crimes are not material facts that must be disclosed [see Wyoming Real Estate Commission, Rules and Regulations, Chapter II, § 3(h) (Weil's Code of Wyoming Rules 024-018-202 § 3(h))].

The regulatory agency is the Real Estate Commission, 2020 Carey Avenue, Suite 702, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82002-0180; Telephone: 307-777-7141; Website: <http://realestate.state.wy.us>.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 151 Ariz. 81, 725 P.2d 1115 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1986) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Cal. Civ. Code § 2079(a) codifies the California Court of Appeal's decision in Easton v. Strassburger, 152 Cal. App. 3d 90, 199 Cal. Rptr. 383 (1984) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See generally Isaaco, A Massachusetts Real Estate Broker's Duty to Disclose: The Quandary Presented by AIDS Stigmatized Property, 27 New. Eng. L. Rev. 1211 (1993). This author states, "[T]he real estate broker now has a much higher duty [of disclosure] than existed before the passage of Chapter 93A, and has a much higher duty than the privately selling homeowner."

83 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
 CHAPTER 3A Disclosure Obligations Imposed on Real Estate Licensees *
 APPENDIX 3A-2 Significant Disclosure Cases

10-3A Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice APPENDIX 3A-2

Scope

This Appendix contains cases relevant to broker and seller disclosures regarding the condition of the property. This Appendix is organized alphabetically by jurisdiction.

Alabama

Moore v. Prudential Residential Services Limited Partnership, 849 So. 2d 914 (Ala. 2002), rehearing denied, 2002 Ala. LEXIS 379 (Ala. Nov. 15, 2002) (a real estate agent cannot be held liable for either fraud or negligence where the agent serves as a "conduit of information" between the seller and the buyer).

Potter v. First Real Estate Company, Inc., 844 So. 2d 540 (Ala. 2002) (dual agent looked at an almost illegible document and incorrectly represented to buyers that the property was not in the flood plain, under evidence before the court, the dual agent was not acting merely as a conduit but was rather a direct source of information).

Ex parte Farmers Exchange Bank (In re: Sara Cole v. Farmers Exchange Bank), 783 So. 2d 24 (Ala. 2000) ("Because a lender that is merely lending money to finance the purchase of a house has no duty to inform the buyer of any defects in the house that the lender may have knowledge of, in the absence of a specific request to the lender for information regarding those defects, the trial court properly entered the summary judgment for the Bank.").

Gaulden v. Mitchell, 849 So. 2d 192 (Ala. Civ. App. 2002) (citing Nolan v. Melton, 740 So. 2d 1096 (Ala. Civ. App. 1999) for the statement: "Generally, an agent will not be held liable for fraud for merely relaying information concerning the condition of a home, without proof that there was knowledge that the statement was false.").

Alaska

Beaux v. Jacob, 30 P.3d 90 (Alaska 2001) (discusses reasonable care in completing the Real Property Transfer Disclosure Form and the damages arising from a violation of this duty).

Cole v. Bartels, 4 P.3d 956 (Alaska 2000) (court allowed enhanced attorney's fees because the transferor was statutorily obligated to make a good faith effort to disclose any defects; transferor was aware of defective walls in sunroom of the home she sold).

Arizona

Lombardo v. Albu, 199 Ariz. 97, 14 P.3d 288 (Ariz. 2000) (en banc) (buyer's agent had a duty to disclose to sellers the financial inability of the buyers to perform).

The S Development Company v. Pima Capital Management Co., 201 Ariz. 10, 31 P.3d 123 (Ariz. Ct. App. 2001) (in a case involving the sale of an apartment complex the court held that latent defects in a property sold "as is" that were known to the vendor had to be disclosed to the purchaser; a vendor may be held liable for negligent nondisclosure of facts basic to the transaction when the purchaser was precluded by the vendor from discovering those facts).

Alaface v. National Inv. Co., 181 Ariz. 586, 892 P.2d 1375 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1994) (seller of subdivision lot was subject to the notification requirements of the subdivision reporting statutes at Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 32-2181, et seq., as a successor in interest to lots within a subdivision, seller breached the statutes by failing to provide an accurate water report, since the subdivision reporting statutes were enacted for the protection and safety of the public, the seller, by violating the statutes, was guilty of negligence per se).

Arkansas

Bharodia v. Pledger, 340 Ark. 547, 11 S.W.3d 540 (2000) . Although the buyers did not list the sellers' failure to deliver the sellers' disclosure statement as a reason for terminating the sales contract, the buyers were not estopped from raising the sellers' breach of contract at a later time. The court found no estoppel should have been imposed to prevent the buyers from exercising the right to terminate the agreement due to the sellers' breach of the conditions of the contract requiring the delivery of a sellers' disclosure statement.

Stouffer v. Kralicek Realty Co., 2005 Ark. App. LEXIS 239 (Ark. Ct. App. Mar. 16, 2005) (unpublished opinion). The home buyer sued the seller's real estate agent alleging breach of an implied warranty of habitability, civil-conspiracy, and negligent misrepresentation, in regard to a home defect. The court, in affirming summary judgment for the agent, held that the implied-warranty claim was waived when the buyer purchased the house "as is," and that the agent had no knowledge of any defects in the property.

Riley v. Hoisington, 80 Ark. App. 346, 96 S.W.3d 743 (Ark. Ct. App. 2003) . The seller acknowledged that information regarding prior flooding incidents was not revealed in the disclosure statement. The seller conceded it was reasonable for the buyers to rely upon the disclosure statement. The court found that there was sufficient evidence presented to support the trial court's finding that the seller intentionally misrepresented the condition of the house to the purchase.

Jeter v. Pianalto, 50 Ark. App. 249, 905 S.W.2d 71 (Ark. Ct. App. 1995) . The court reversed summary judgment in favor of an agent in a suit brought by home buyers. The court found the agent's statement that his brother had built the house and that there were no problems with the house could be considered more than a general statement of opinion. The buyers also relied upon a seller disclosure form.

California

Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co., Inc. v. Superior Court, 117 Cal. App. 4th 158, 165, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 564, 569-570 (Cal. Ct. App. 2004) , review denied, 2004 Cal. LEXIS 9462 (Cal. Sept. 29, 2004) . Pursuant to Cal. Civil Code § 2079, the inspection and disclosure duties of residential real estate brokers and their agents apply exclusively to prospective buyers, and not to other persons who are not parties to the real estate transaction. Only the purchaser can recover from a broker or agent for breach of these duties. Because the buyer's minor child was not a prospective buyer or a transferee, the broker did not owe the minor child a duty of care.

Realmuto v. Gagnard, 110 Cal. App. 4th 193, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 569 (Cal. Ct. App. 2003) . Providing the buyers with a real estate transfer disclosure statement as required by Cal. Civ. Code § 1102, et seq., was a condition precedent to the buyers' duty to perform. The buyers could not waive their right to a disclosure statement. The seller's failure to deliver a disclosure statement precluded seller's action against buyers for specific performance and breach of contract.

Leko v. Cornerstone Home Inspection, 86 Cal. App. 4th 1109, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858 (Cal. Ct. App. 2001) , review denied, 2001 Cal. LEXIS 3146 (Cal. May 2, 2001) . A real estate agent who is sued for negligent nondisclosure of defects in real property can obtain equitable indemnity from a home inspection company that allegedly breached its duty to the purchaser to discover and disclose the same defects even when the home inspection company prepared its report for a different prospective purchaser, in connection with a previous transaction involving the same property so long as the home inspection company intended or knew with substantial certainty that its report would be used in subsequent transactions involving the property.

Johnson v. Siegel, 84 Cal. App. 4th 1087, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412 (Cal. Ct. App. 2000) , review denied, 2001 Cal. LEXIS 1121 (Cal. Feb. 14, 2001) . The seller's transfer disclosure statement failed to disclose a flooding problem. Even though the contract required arbitration, the buyer pursued a judicial remedy which resulted in summary judgment for the seller. The appellate court held that the dispute must be arbitrated, notwithstanding the fraud allegations. However, the buyer was not prevented from arbitrating even though he had unsuccessfully sought a judicial remedy.

Assilzadeh v. California Federal Bank, 82 Cal. App. 4th 399, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 176 (Cal. Ct. App. 2000) , review withdrawn, 2000 Cal. LEXIS 8285 (Cal. Oct. 25, 2000) . A seller of condominium unit was exempt from providing a transfer disclosure statement. The disclosure by the seller and dual agent of the existence of lawsuit regarding defective construction litigation satisfied the seller's common law and statutory disclosure obligations.

Colorado

Olsen v. Vail Associates Real Estate, Inc., 935 P.2d 975 (Colo. 1997) . A seller's broker did not breach a fiduciary duty by failing disclose the terms of sale of land adjacent to the seller's when the broker did not know the terms of sale between the seller's buyer and a third party.

Burman v. Richmond Homes Ltd., 821 P.2d 913 (Colo. Ct. App. 1991) . The brokers did not owe a duty to the purchaser to disclose that properties were located in general improvement districts which could result in increased taxes where the brokers and purchasers had no contract and the brokers were subagents of seller.

Connecticut

Giametti v. Inspections, Inc., 76 Conn. App. 352, 824 A.2d 1 (Conn. App. Ct. 2003) . The seller's residential property condition disclosure report indicated that, to the best of her knowledge, the house was not subject to any insect infestation. At the vendor's urging, the buyer had the home professionally inspected. No insect infestation was discovered. Later the buyer discovered carpenter ants throughout the house. The court held that the vendor had no liability under Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-327b, which applied only to a knowing misrepresentation in the report. While § 20-327b did not preclude existing common-law actions for misrepresentations, the trial court erred in finding the vendor guilty of negligent misrepresentation. Its implicit finding that the buyer reasonably relied on representations in the report was not supported by the record, in light of evidence that the buyer, at the behest of the vendor, had the house professionally inspected.

Parker v. Shaker Real Estate, 47 Conn. App. 489, 498, 705 A.2d 210 (Conn. App. Ct. 1998) . The plaintiffs failed to present any expert testimony to establish the standard of care required of defendant real estate agencies with respect to disclosure in the circumstances of this case.

Delaware

Gutridge v. Iffland, 2005 Del. LEXIS 518 (2005) . The buyer offers no evidence that the sellers knew of a plumbing problem before settlement. The only evidence presented was that the main sewer line backed up into the basement approximately two and a half months after the parties closed on the property. The buyer also pointed to the sellers' untruthful disclosures about the roof and electrical system, suggesting that it can be inferred from those disclosures that the sellers lied throughout their entire disclosure statement. That inference is not reasonable. Even giving the buyer the benefit of favorable inferences as to the nature and timing of the sewage back-up, without some evidence that the sellers actually knew of the plumbing problem, the buyer's claim must fail.

Heller v. Kiernan, 2002 Del. Ch. LEXIS 17 (Del. Ch. 2002) , aff'd, 806 A.2d 164, 2002 Del. LEXIS 481 (Del. 2002) (without opinion). Any broker who has any personal interest in a transaction must disclose his or her status to all persons with whom he or she is transacting such business prior to the execution of any agreements. A broker's duty to a buyer includes a written disclosure acknowledging the broker's fiduciary responsibilities to be made in any contract prepared for the purchase of real estate.

Liberto v. Bensinger, 1999 Del. Ch. LEXIS 241 (Del. Ch. 1999) . A nondisclosure may qualify as a misrepresentation only when the nondisclosure is with respect to a fact known to the person accused of making the non-disclosure. A buyer is expected to use his or her senses and not rely blindly on the maker's assertion.

Petenbrink v. Superior Home Builders, 1999 Del. Super. LEXIS 461 (Del. Super. Ct. 1999) . Since a builder did not have duty to disclose to homebuyers that it paid referral fee to homebuyers' agent, homebuyers were not entitled to refund of fee from builder in their action to recover money paid to builder.

Murphy v. Berlin Constr. Co., 1999 Del. Super. LEXIS 5 (Del. Super. Ct. 1998) . A general contractor had no duty to disclose to homebuyers that their contract included a commission for the homebuyers' agent where the contractor owed homebuyers no fiduciary duty and contractor made no statements that might have been misleading).

Rosenberg v. White, 2003 Del. C.P. LEXIS 25 (Del. Ct. Common Pleas Aug. 12, 2003) . A seller's disclosure report wrongly indicated that the sewage disposal system was a cesspool and that all windows were in working order and had storm windows and screens. The court held that the buyers failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that either sellers knew or believed that the statements were false, or that the sellers were recklessly indifferent to the statements' truthfulness, court also held that sellers were not negligent in making the false statements regarding the sewage system, in that they believed the statements they made were true. But the court found that the sellers were negligent in their reporting of the window conditions, as they should have known, and thus disclosed, that they were inoperable and that the screens and storm windows were missing from many windows.

Lemon v. Lake, 1998 Del. C.P. LEXIS 14 (Del. Ct. Common Pleas 1998) . It was uncontroverted that the seller provided the buyer with a "Seller's Report" and that this report implied on its face that there was a water problem only in the basement front wall after heavy rain. The buyer was given an opportunity to inspect the property before she signed the sales agreement and before settlement. The buyer denied knowledge of this water seepage although she did not deny that she was given the opportunity to inspect the property prior to settlement. The evidence showed that the seller was probably not personally aware of any water problem at the rear wall of the basement prior to being given notice of this by the buyer after settlement. Experts of both parties agreed that there was a water problem at both the front and rear basement wall, but their testimony was inconclusive as to why the problem existed and how long it had existed. A fair reading of the Seller's Disclosure of Real Property Condition Report did not put one on notice that this condition was disclosed. The court concluded, however, that there had not been a showing that the seller misrepresented the facts as to the condition of the water problem in the rear wall of the basement.

District of Columbia

Borzillo v. Thompson, 57 A.2d 195 (Mun. Ct. App. D.C. 1948) The broker had duty to disclose material facts to purchaser which were not disclosed by vendor.

Florida

M/I Schottenstein Homes, Inc. v. Azam, 813 So. 2d 91 (Fla. 2002) . Knowledge of clearly revealed information from recorded documents contained in the records constituting a parcel's chain of title is properly imputed to a purchasing party, based upon the fact that an examination of these documents prior to a transfer of the real property is entirely expected. For this reason, it may often be the case that where fraud regarding information contained in and clearly revealed through a parcel's chain of title is alleged, reliance is not justified and a cause of action will not exist.

Johnson v. Davis, 480 So. 2d 625 (Fla. 1985) . If a seller knows of defects materially affecting property's value which are not readily observable and are not known to buyer, the seller is under duty to disclose them to buyer.

Meyer v. Thompson, 861 So. 2d 1256 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) . When the seller of a home knows of facts materially affecting the property's value which are not readily observable and are not known to the buyer, the seller is under a duty to disclose them to the buyer.

Syvrud v. Today Real Estate, Inc., 858 So. 2d 1125 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) . An "as is" clause in a contract for the sale of Florida residential real property does not waive the duty to disclose hidden defects in the property.

Atria v. Hodor, 790 So. 2d 1229 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2001) . If brokers or salespersons made fraudulent misrepresentations in their capacity as real estate professionals, they would be liable for such misrepresentations apart from any conduct of sellers. The brokers' or salespersons' liability would not be foreclosed by a dismissal of the case against the sellers.

Newbern v. Mansbach, 777 So. 2d 1044 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2001) . The fact that sale property was located in designated flood plane, which was matter of public record and therefore could have been ascertained by purchaser, did not operate as matter of law to bar negligent and fraudulent misrepresentation claim against seller's broker who allegedly had misrepresented property's flood plane status.

Georgia

Akins v. Couch, 271 Ga. 276, 518 S.E.2d 674 (Ga. 1999) , reconsideration denied. The seller and seller's agent knew of septic problems due to inspection and communication from the health department. Despite this knowledge, the seller's property disclosure statement indicated no knowledge of septic problems. The question of whether the buyers exercised reasonable diligence in inspecting problem was a jury question. A jury could find that a buyer exercised due diligence even though they did not hire an inspector. Additionally, the location of information in public records did not necessarily defeat a claim of passive concealment. Summary judgment for the agent was improper.

Resnick v. Meybohm Realty, Inc., 269 Ga. App. 486, 604 S.E.2d 536 (Ga. Ct. App. 2004) , cert. denied, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 76 (Ga. Jan. 10, 2005) . The merger clause barred the buyer's "breach of professional duty" claim stemming from alleged misrepresentations made by the buyer's agent and the seller's agent. To succeed on this claim, the buyer had to prove that the purported misstatements proximately caused her injury. The buyer cannot do so without showing that she relied on the misrepresentations. The merger clause in the sales contract prevented such a showing. A buyer's broker has a duty to disclose to the buyer adverse material facts of which the broker has actual knowledge concerning the transaction. But a broker owes no fiduciary duty to a client. Instead, the broker is responsible for exercising reasonable care in the discharge of the broker's specified duties.

Gibson v. Rezvanpour, 268 Ga. App. 377, 601 S.E.2d 848, (Ga. Ct. App. 2004) , cert denied, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 904 (Ga. Oct. 12, 2004) . Potential buyer was bitten by the seller's dog when viewing the home. The potential buyer sued the sellers and the agents. With respect to the agents, the court stated that there is no evidence that the agents and brokers knew or should have known that the dogs were vicious or dangerous.

Browning v. Stocks, 265 Ga. App. 803, 595 S.E.2d 642 (Ga. Ct. App. 2004) . A damage award to the buyers was affirmed. The buyers claimed that seller fraudulently induced them to buy a house by making false representations about the house's condition and by actively and passively concealing termite damage. The trial court did not err in denying a motion in limine to exclude the seller's property disclosure statement as it was relevant to the claim that seller fraudulently induced the sale by actively concealing the damage. The trial court did not err by excluding evidence of settlements the buyers obtained against the home inspector and the pest control company, as the buyers' suit was not based on a claim that they relied on the seller's representations.

Ikola v. Schoene, 264 Ga. App. 338, 590 S.E.2d 750 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) . An agent intentionally withheld the seller disclosure statement from a homebuyer and tried to force the homebuyer to proceed with an "as is" sale. A jury could find from this evidence that agent acted adversely to the homebuyer's interests and thereby breached the duty to promote the homebuyer's interests. Summary judgment for the agent on the breach of contract claim was reversed. Summary judgment for the agent on fraudulent concealment claim was affirmed as the evidence showed that agent disclosed what she knew about a leakage problem.

Savage v. KGE Assocs., L.P., 260 Ga. App. 770, 580 S.E.2d 591 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) , reconsideration denied, cert. applied for. The buyer characterized the seller's affidavit as representing that the property contained no garbage. After the sale, the buyer discovered a dump and sued. The trial court erred in applying the doctrine of passive concealment as the doctrine did not apply to commercial transactions. The summary judgment evidence did not show any actionable misrepresentations. The affidavit was not part of sales agreement. The affidavit was not intended to directly benefit the buyer. The affidavit did not survive closing under the sales agreement's survival clause. The seller was not a third party beneficiary of the affidavit, and the buyer's reliance was unreasonable since the buyer knew, before the sale, that the property contained garbage.

Smiley v. S & J Investments, Inc., 260 Ga. App. 493, 580 S.E.2d 283 (Ga. Ct. App. 2003) , cert. denied, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 644 (Ga., July 14, 2003) . When negligent misrepresentations are made by a third party which induced buyers to purchase home, buyers can sue the seller for the resulting damages under the contract where such misrepresentations become part of the contract. Jury issue arises where there is evidence that the contract incorporated the disclosure statement containing false statements as to the property's condition and gives rise to contract remedies either for breach or rescission, since representations were made within the four corners of the contract. The merger clause did not prevent buyers from claiming reliance to their detriment.

Ainsworth v. Perreault, 254 Ga. App. 470, 563 S.E.2d 135 (Ga. Ct. App. 2002) , cert. denied, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 783 (Ga. Sept. 6, 2002) . The contract did not provide that the disclosure statement or other statements outside of the contract had been made part of agreement. Reliance upon the sellers' oral statements and the disclosure statement was barred by merger clause. The law also did not require that sellers disclose every past repair made to their homes. The sellers were obligated to inform potential buyers of current defects of which they were aware.

Salinas v. Skelton, 249 Ga. App. 217, 547 S.E.2d 289 (Ga. Ct. App. 2001) , cert. denied, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 697 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2001) and 2001 Ga. LEXIS 698 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2001) . The buyer's failure to read disclosure statement until after she learned of asbestos around an enclosed boiler was without consequence even though the statement provided the buyer with constructive notice that the boiler was behind a basement wall on her property. The court could not say as a matter of law that further inquiry by the buyer would have informed her that the boiler was insulated with asbestos. The court also found the summary judgment in favor of the seller's agent was proper since the representations on the disclosure statement were made by the seller.

Keller v. Henderson, 248 Ga. App. 526, 545 S.E.2d 705 (Ga. Ct. App. 2001) . A representation on the seller disclosure statement regarding the source of a basement leak was contradicted by testimony of neighbors. Summary judgment for the seller was improper.

ReMax North Atlanta v. Clark, 244 Ga. App. 890, 537 S.E.2d 138 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) . An agent and broker were not liable for written misrepresentations in the disclosure statement. This form stated that the representations it contained were those of the seller. The agent's verbal statements were not actionable because they were general statements of opinion. Furthermore the contract's merger clause and disclaimer stated that the buyer had not relied upon the agent's representations. The buyer was estopped from asserting reliance on the agent's alleged misrepresentations not contained in the contract.

Hoffman v. Fletcher, 244 Ga. App. 506, 535 S.E.2d 849 (Ga. Ct. App. 2000) . The buyer received notice of a prior drainage problem and prior repairs. It was not necessary for the sellers to detail in their disclosure statement all the prior problems where it appeared that the problems had been repaired. Summary judgment in favor of sellers on the fraud claim was proper.

Paden v. Murray, 240 Ga. App. 487, 523 S.E.2d 75 (Ga. Ct. App. 1999) , cert. denied, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 186 (Ga. Feb. 25, 2000) , overruled in part by Browning v. Stocking, 265 Ga. App. 803, 595 S.E.2d 642 (Paden v. Murray overruled to the extent that it held that a fraud claim was precluded where the buyers affirmed the sales contract). The sellers' disclosure with regard to the past and present condition of the home's roof was inaccurate. A jury must determine whether the leaks about which the buyer now complains were the same ones of which the sellers were aware when they lived in the home. The buyers' breach of contract claim in this regard was not subject to summary judgment.

Hawaii

Create 21 Chuo, Inc. v. Southwest Slopes, Inc., 81 Haw. 512, 918 P.2d 1168 (Haw. Ct. App. 1996) . Recorded easements and archaeological sites on the land were material breaches of the seller's promise to convey marketable title pursuant to the contract. The seller did not disclose the archaeological sites on its seller's real property disclosure statement.

Idaho

White v. Mock, 140 Idaho 882, 104 P.3d 356 (Idaho 2004) . Stigma damages are not available under Idaho Code §§ 55-2801 and 55-2802 for non-toxic mold found in a property.

Lindberg v. Roseth, 137 Idaho 222, 46 P.3d 518 (Idaho 2002) . The buyers alleged that the statements in the property disclosure forms misrepresented the house's condition. Assuming the buyers were correct, i.e. had truthful representations been made in the disclosure forms, the buyers would have had the statutory right to rescind the real estate contract. Therefore, the district judge erred in holding there could be no reliance because the alleged misrepresentations were made in the property disclosure forms delivered after the execution of the real estate contract.

Enright v. Jonassen, 129 Idaho 694, 931 P.2d 1212 (Idaho 1997) . A broker and agent acting as the listing and selling agent, breached their fiduciary duty to the buyers to discover and disclose the existence of a floodplain district on the property.

Illinois

Skarin Custom Homes, Inc. v. Ross, 388 Ill. App. 3d 739, 329 Ill. Dec. 156, 906 N.E.2d 1 (2009) . The Illinois Residential Real Property Disclosure Act lists nine exceptions to its applicability. A buyer's intent to tear down a residential structure and rebuild on the property is not listed as an exemption.

Grady v. Sikorski, 349 Ill. App. 3d 774, 285 Ill. Dec. 637, 812 N.E.2d 457 (Ill. App. Ct. 2004) . The Residential Real Property Disclosure Act (765 ILCS 77/1 et seq.) does not require that a residential real estate disclosure form be completed for the sale of property that includes an uninhabitable structure.

CNA Ins. Co. v. DiPaulo, 342 Ill. App. 3d 440, 276 Ill. Dec. 715, 794 N.E.2d 965 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) . Sellers have a duty to disclose defects which could not be discovered on a reasonable and diligent inspection. While seller's silence in not disclosing defects, by itself, is insufficient for a fraud action, there is enough when silence is combined with active concealment. A fraud claim may be based solely on a seller's false representation made in a disclosure report pursuant to the Residential Real Property Disclosure Act (765 ILCS 77/20). Homeowners' insurer, as subrogee, was the plaintiff.

Griffin v. Bruner, 341 Ill. App. 3d 321, 276 Ill. Dec. 215, 793 N.E.2d 974 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) . The duty under the Residential Lead-Based Paint Hazard Reduction Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. § 4852d(a)(4)) to disclose lead paint hazards applied to seller's agent and did not apply to buyer's agent.

Capiccioni v. Brennan Naperville, Inc., 339 Ill. App. 3d 927, 274 Ill. Dec. 461, 791 N.E.2d 553 (Ill. App. Ct. 2003) (Ill. App. Ct. April 15, 2003), rehearing denied 2003 Ill. App. LEXIS 941 (Ill. App. Ct. July 16, 2003) . The broker stated that the home was in a certain school district. The court held that the buyers did not plead common-law fraud by showing the broker and agent knew this was false. The real estate licensee exception to the Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act at 815 ILCS 505/10b(4) only related to information from a seller. The buyers adequately pled consumer fraud. The buyers also adequately pled negligent misrepresentation. Buyers also pled a violation of 225 ILCS 454/15-25(a) of the Real Estate License Act of 2000, as a licensee's duty to refrain from false information was not limited to information about the property's physical condition.

Penn v. Gerig, 334 Ill. App. 3d 345, 268 Ill. Dec. 339, 778 N.E.2d 325 (Ill. App. Ct. 2002) . The sellers' real property disclosure report disclosed foundation problems. Over a year after taking possession, the buyers sued the sellers alleging foundation defects. The buyers argued that the discovery rule tolled the running of the one-year limitations period until they knew or reasonably should have known of their injury. In an issue of first impression, the court held that the discovery rule did not apply to the Act. As to the award of attorney fees, the trial court never lost jurisdiction over the sellers' motion for sanctions, even though it was filed after the buyers filed their notice of appeal. The trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing sanctions under Ill. Sup. Ct. R. 137.

Hogan v. Adams, 333 Ill. App. 3d 141, 266 Ill. Dec. 655, 775 N.E.2d 217 (Ill. App. Ct. 2002) , appeal denied, 202 Ill. 2d 602, 272 Ill. Dec. 341, 787 N.E.2d 156 (2002) . The sellers' disclosure report revealed that part of the house had flooded once. In fact, the lower level had been flooded twice, and the extent of the flooding was not fully disclosed. The sellers claimed that, based in part on advice from a real estate agent, they had met their disclosure obligations. The court held that under the Act, a plaintiff did not need to prove that the defendant actively concealed the material defect. The Act required the sellers to disclose known defects and imposed liability for failure to do so. The Act did not require that a purchaser further investigate a disclosure. The court also found that the trial court erred in considering the buyers' failure to further investigate the disclosure in determining liability under the Act.

Coughlin v. Gustafson, 332 Ill. App. 3d 406, 265 Ill. Dec. 493, 772 N.E.2d 864 (Ill. App. Ct. 2002) . The merger doctrine is not a bar to actions under the Disclosure Act.

Rolando v. Pence, 331 Ill. App. 3d 40, 264 Ill. Dec. 271, 769 N.E.2d 1108 (Ill. App. Ct. 2002) . The Residential Real Property Disclosure Act Section 45 allows buyers to seek recovery for fraudulent misrepresentation based solely on a disclosure made pursuant to the Act.

Curtis Inv. Firm, Ltd. v. Schuch, 321 Ill. App. 3d 197, 254 Ill. Dec. 185, 746 N.E.2d 1233 (Ill. App. Ct. 2001) . A buyer cannot waive the seller's responsibility to disclose certain defects by signing a contract without receipt of a written disclosure statement.

Denault v. Cote, 319 Ill. App. 3d 886, 254 Ill. Dec. 8, 746 N.E.2d 765 (Ill. App. Ct. 2001) , appeal denied, 196 Ill. 2d 539, 261 Ill. Dec. 347, 763 N.E.2d 317 (2001) . Buyers sued sellers claiming they violated the Illinois Residential Real Property Disclosure Act. The trial court dismissed the action as untimely and when the buyers filed a second action based on fraud in the same real estate transaction as the first case, the court dismissed the second action on the basis of res judicata. The appellate court affirmed.

Provenzale v. Forister, 318 Ill. App. 3d 869, 252 Ill. Dec. 808, 743 N.E.2d 676 (Ill. App. Ct. 2001) . An allegation of an actual transfer of real property is not required to state a cause of action for violation of the Residential Real Property Disclosure Act. This Act provides both prospective and actual buyers with remedies for violation of its provisions.

King v. Ashbrook, 313 Ill. App. 3d 1040, 247 Ill. Dec. 566, 732 N.E.2d 621 (Ill. App. Ct. 2000) , rehearing denied. The seller's residential real property disclosure report disclosed defects, but a sales contract addendum indicated that some defects had been repaired by the seller. The buyers subsequently sued the seller based on the seller's failure to repair. The buyers did not allege that the seller failed to disclose material defects as required by the Residential Real Property Disclosure Act. The fact the disclosure report became part of the contract did not eliminate the buyers' right to sue for a breach of contract or change the statute of limitations for breach of contract since the Act did not limit or change a purchaser's common-law remedies. The Act contains a one-year statute of limitations versus a ten-year period for breach of contract actions. The buyers' action was brought within the appropriate statute of limitations.

Miller v. Bizzell, 311 Ill. App. 3d 971, 244 Ill. Dec. 579, 726 N.E.2d 175 (Ill. App. Ct. 2000) . Section 55 of the Disclosure Act states, "the court may award reasonable attorney fees." The award of such fees is not mandatory, it lies within the discretion of the trial court, and that court's decision will not be overturned absent an abuse of discretion. A trial court, exercising its discretion on whether to award attorney fees under the Disclosure Act, should consider factors consistent with Rule 137.

Carrera v. Smith, 305 Ill. App. 3d 1079, 239 Ill. Dec. 432, 713 N.E.2d 1282 (Ill. App. Ct. 1999) . An individual selling his or her home is not liable to a purchaser under Consumer Fraud Act.

Hirsch v. Feuer, 299 Ill. App. 3d 1076, 234 Ill. Dec. 99, 702 N.E.2d 265 (Ill. App. Ct. 1998) . In the context of § 2-615 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the court discussed the pleading requirements of an allegation that sellers had violated the Residential Real Property Disclosure Act (765 ILCS 77/1 et seq.).

Indiana

Reum v. Mercer, 817 N.E.2d 1267 (Ind. Ct. App. 2004) . A seller is only required to disclose existing defects of which the seller has actual knowledge at the time of the disclosure.

Coffman v. Rohrman, 811 N.E.2d 868 (Ind. Ct. App. 2004) . With respect to land offered for sale, the agent knew about a mutual easement agreement with neighbors to share the cost of building a road to their properties, but the agent did not tell the buyer, who bought the land. The court found that the agent had a duty, under Ind. Code § 25-34.1-10-11(3)(C), to tell the buyer actually known adverse material facts, and, as the buyer said he would have reduced his purchase price by his share of the road costs, those costs were material.

Kashman v. Haas, 766 N.E.2d 417 (Ind. Ct. App. 2002) . In the statutory disclosure form, the sellers stated the home had no existing termite damage. Before the sale, the buyers had the home professionally inspected, and the inspector found no termite damage. After closing the buyers discovered termite damage and sued the sellers. Summary judgment was properly entered for the sellers, as there was no evidence that the sellers had actual knowledge of any existing termite damage to the home when they completed the disclosure form and sold the home.

In re Flint, 720 N.E.2d 1230 (Ind. Ct. App. 1999) . The buyer sued the seller for fraudulent misrepresentation based on the Seller's Residential Real Estate Disclosure Statement. The court upheld a small claims court judgment obtained by the buyer against the seller.

Iowa

Jensen v. Sattler, 696 N.W.2d 582 (Iowa 2005) , rehearing overruled, 2005 Iowa Sup. LEXIS 79 (Iowa, June 1, 2005) . Under the Iowa Real Estate Disclosure Act the buyer had to show only that the seller had actual knowledge of an undisclosed defect or failed to use ordinary care in obtaining the information. It overruled Sedgwick v. Bowers, 681 N.W.2d 607 (Iowa 2004) , to the extent it held to the contrary. The seller who did not sign the disclosure form was liable under the Act if she had actual knowledge of the undisclosed defects or failed to exercise ordinary care in obtaining the information.

Sedgwick v. Bowers, 681 N.W.2d 607 (Iowa 2004) , overruled in part by, Jensen v. Sattler, 2005 Iowa Sup. LEXIS 55, at *14 (Iowa Apr. 29, 2005) (on other grounds). Under the Real Estate Disclosure Act, the transferor, or a broker or salesperson, shall not be liable for the error, inaccuracy, or omission in information required in a disclosure statement, unless that person has actual knowledge of the inaccuracy, or fails to exercise ordinary care in obtaining the information. No evidence was introduced to establish that the broker (a relocation facilitator) had any actual knowledge of the inaccuracies in the disclosure statements and there was no evidence that the broker failed to exercise ordinary care in obtaining the information. The court rejected the buyers' argument that the broker, in effect, adopted the false statements as part of their agreement with sellers.

Bramwell v. Tisue, 2002 Iowa App. LEXIS 352 (Iowa Ct. App. March 27, 2002) . The disclosure statement indicated no problems with the home's three fireplaces. When the buyers had problems with the fireplaces, the professional who cleaned them noted that the house was "too tight" for the fireplaces to work properly and that outside air might be needed. When the buyers communicated with the sellers, the sellers suggested cracking a window for air intake. The buyers were discontent, installed gas inserts, and sued the sellers for failing to disclose a "material defect" in the house prior to the sale, namely that the fireplaces did not work properly. The court affirmed the trial court's award of compensatory damages of $8,250 and attorneys fees of $3,018 finding that there was a material defect which the sellers failed to disclose on the form required by Chapter 558A.

Ashenberg v. O'Rourke, 2000 Iowa App. LEXIS 43 (Iowa Ct. App. Nov. 8, 2000) . This dispute involved the location of a property line. The buyers alleged they were misled by the seller's placement of sod on an adjoining lot. The sellers' disclosure statement did not indicate any features shared in common with adjoining landowners. The court found that the sellers had no duty to disclose since there was no inequality of knowledge. The buyers received a plat map containing an accurate depiction of the line in dispute. The buyers were not inexperienced people. There was no evidence to support a conclusion that the sellers had superior knowledge.

Kansas

Alires v. McGehee, 277 Kan. 398, 85 P.3d 1191 (Kan. 2004) . The buyers sued the sellers claiming fraudulent misrepresentation after the home's basement leaked. The sellers' property disclosure statement had disclosed only a leak due to a broken pipe which had been repaired. Though the record revealed substantial competent evidence to support the trial court's findings that one seller knowingly made untrue factual statements, pursuant to the sales contract, the buyers not only contractually assumed a duty to inspect the property and failed to have the property inspected, the buyers also agreed that if they failed to have inspections performed, they waived "any claim, right or cause of action relating to or arising from any condition of the property that would have been apparent had inspections been performed." To prove their case, it was incumbent upon buyers to provide evidence that, even if an inspection had been performed, the basement water leaks would not have been apparent. Buyers provided no such evidence. Under cross-examination, one buyer admitted that if an inspection had been done, a determination about the basement's condition could have been made before closing. The court also found that the buyers' reliance upon the sellers' representations was not reasonable when the truth or falsity of the representation would have been revealed by a property inspection. The misrepresentations were made prior to or as part of the contract in which the buyers contracted for the inspection right, agreed that the sellers' statements were not warranties and should not replace the inspection right, declined inspection, and waived any claims arising from defects that would have been revealed by an inspection. There was no showing in the record that a subsequent contract addendum which contained the waiver of the inspection right was induced by any additional seller misrepresentations.

Stechschulte v. Jennings, 222 P.3d 507, 2010 Kan. App. LEXIS 6 (2010) The seller's disclosure statement contained a representation by the seller that he was disclosing "all material defects, conditions and facts of which seller is aware which may materially affect the value of the Property." If the seller knew of information regarding material defects, conditions, or facts which might materially affect the value of the home and he failed to disclose any or all of that information, the disclosure statement contained affirmative misrepresentations.

Osterhaus v. Toth, 39 Kan. App. 2d 999, 187 P.3d 126 (2008) , review granted, 2008 Kan. LEXIS 603 (Nov. 4, 2008) . Releasing the seller from any liability because the buyer signed the buyer's acknowledgment and agreement is too simplistic. The trial court must consider the disclosure statement, whether there was an inspection, and all of the facts surrounding the sale before concluding there was a waiver of the seller's untruths. A seller has an affirmative duty to be honest on the disclosure statement. When a seller is untruthful about material facts in the disclosure statement, the material fact is not discoverable in a reasonable inspection, and the seller does not correct the untruth before closing, the buyer's signature on the disclosure statement does not constitute a waiver of the seller's untruths.

McLellan v. Raines, 36 Kan. App. 2d 1, 140 P.3d 1034 (2006) . The buyer could not reasonably rely upon the seller's representations when the truth or falsity of the representation would have been revealed by an inspection of the subject property and the misrepresentations were made prior to or as part of the contract in which the buyer contracted for the right to inspect, agreed that the statements of the seller were not warranties and should not replace the right of inspection, declined inspection, and waived any claims arising from defects which would have been revealed by an inspection.

Katzenmeier v. Oppenlander, 39 Kan. App. 2d 259, 178 P.3d 66 (2008) , review denied, 2008 Kan. LEXIS 377 (Kan. July 3, 2008) Kansas courts have adopted a "buyer beware" standard regarding sellers' disclosures. A buyer cannot reasonably rely on seller's representations when the truth or falsity of the representations would have been discovered by a property inspection and the misrepresentations were made before or as part of the contract in which the buyer contracted for the right to inspect, agreed that the statements of the seller were not warranties, and acknowledged that the seller's disclosure statement was not a substitute for any inspection that the buyer may have wished to obtain.

Phillips v. Tyler, 35 Kan. App. 2d 256, 129 P.3d 656 (2006) , review denied, 281 Kan. 1378 (2006) . The buyers sued the sellers alleging negligent misrepresentation because of the defects caused by water infiltration that the buyers discovered in the house. The court found that the trial court should have granted summary judgment to the sellers because three provisions from the parties' agreement, when read together, shielded the sellers from a negligent misrepresentation claim. First, the buyers agreed that they were relying only on their own judgment and on their own inspections of the house. Second, the buyers accepted the property without any express or implied warranties by the sellers. Third, the buyers stated they were relying on no representations made by the sellers in order to make the purchase. The contractual provisions were not against public policy and were enforceable.

White v. J.D. Reece Co., 29 Kan. App. 2d 226, 26 P.3d 701 (Kan. Ct. App. 2001) . When an agent purposely injects himself or herself into the independent investigation of the property to the buyer's detriment, the broker and its agent cannot rely on the seller's disclosure statement to shield themselves from liability.

Hamtil v. J.C. Nichols Real Estate, 22 Kan. App. 2d 809, 923 P.2d 513 (Kan. Ct. App. 1996) . The court concluded that brokers may protect themselves from negligent misrepresentation actions by disclaiming knowledge of property's defects and having the buyer or seller acknowledge such disclaimer.

Lynn v. Taylor, 7 Kan. App. 2d 369, 642 P.2d 131 (Kan. Ct. App. 1982) . The court upheld award of punitive damages against a broker who concealed an unfavorable termite inspection report from the buyer.

Kentucky

McLellan v. Yeager, 2003 Ky. App. LEXIS 38 (Ky. Ct. App. Feb. 14, 2003) , aff'd, 177 S.W.3d 807 (Ky. 2005) . The Seller's Disclosure of Property Condition form disclosed that their basement had leaked, and that it had not been repaired, but the sellers' answer suggested that it had only leaked twice in 20 years. After taking possession, the buyer discovered that it leaked constantly. Even though 201 Ky. Admin. Reg. 11:350 , § 2 specified that the mandatory disclosures were not warranties, there was nothing illegal in the parties' incorporating the disclosures into the contract of sale, at which point the disclosures became warranties. Summary judgment in favor of the sellers was therefore improper, but this did not mean that summary judgment should have been granted in favor of the buyer, since there remained a triable issue as to whether the sellers had lied in their disclosures.

Louisiana

Chumley v. Magee, 33 So. 3d, 345, 349 (La. App. 2 Cir. 2010) The buyers signed a Realtors(R) disclosure which provided that agents "are not the guarantors of performance, condition of property, or representations made by others" and that agents have "no responsibility or expertise to determine or advise whether the property is within the flood plain or as to physical condition of the property." The agent accurately disclosed the information she had received from the sellers, that sometime after 1998 their lender advised them the property no longer required flood insurance. By contract, the agent was not required to research the flood zones and, in general, was not required to speculate on potential zoning changes.

Laborde v. Dastugue, 868 So. 2d 228 (La. Ct. App. 2004) , rehearing denied, La. App. 2003-1491, 2004 La. App. LEXIS 617 (La. App. 4 Cir. Mar. 16, 2004) , writ denied, 876 So. 2d 84 (La. 2004) . The buyers of an option to purchase property received inspection results indicating that the lot and the house were smaller than the dimensions stated in a sales brochure and that the roof was in poor condition. The sales brochure contained express disclaimers as to representations. The buyers could have ascertained the size and condition of the property before paying the option price, buyers could not prove fraud or unjust enrichment.

Hughes v. Goodreau, 836 So. 2d 649 (La. Ct. App. 2002) , writ denied, 841 So. 2d 793 (La. 2003) . The sellers' agent was liable to sellers for failing to attach documents to the disclosure addendum form, this was a breach of the agent's and the broker's fiduciary duty to their client.

Billups v. Lyons, 821 So. 2d 499 (La. Ct. App. 2002) , writ denied, 827 So. 2d 424 (La. 2002) . The property disclosure form stated that the townhouse did not have any wood destroying insects. Shortly after closing the buyer discovered termites. The court stated that the sellers were in bad faith in reporting that there were no termites on the disclosure prepared by their broker; however, at the act of sale, the buyer relied on the inspection company's report.

Frey v. Walker, 807 So. 2d 887 (La. Ct. App. 2001) , writ of error denied, 813 So. 2d 1082 (2002) . The disclosure was inadequate to describe defects with foundation. The sellers concealment of defects was sufficient to vitiate the waiver of redhibition made by the buyers.

Agee v. Speers, 803 So. 2d 406 (La. Ct. App. 2001) . The sellers did not disclose flooding problems, water damage and termite damage on the property disclosure form and they attempted to hide the problems with paneling. The sellers personally built the roof with substandard lumber and knew of the flooding problems and signed a statement that deliberately downplayed the condition. The court's finding of bad faith was not manifest error.

Merlin v. Fuselier Construction, Inc., 789 So. 2d 710 (La. Ct. App. 2001) . The buyer can recover attorney fees by proving that the seller knew of the defect prior to the sale. The buyer need not prove willful misrepresentation; it is sufficient if the buyer shows actual or constructive knowledge by the seller.

McMorris v. Marcotte Builders, L.L.C., 756 So. 2d 424 (La. Ct. App. 1999) , writ of error denied, 760 So. 2d 1158 (La. 2000) . A seller's failure to disclose the existence of a drainage servitude entitled buyers to rescind the sale of a residential lot.

Watkins v. Evans, 716 So. 2d 399 (La. Ct. App. 1998) , review denied, 723 So. 2d 423 (La. 1998) . The date of discovery triggered the prescriptive period regarding an agent's liability in connection with a redhibitory action.

Moses v. Walker, 715 So. 2d 596 (La. Ct. App. 1998) . A disclosure which stated, "Property has a man made ditch across the backyard. Property was purchased from H.U.D. in that condition. Seller does not know or warrant of flood condition. Buyer so acknowledges this drainage ditch.", did not notify buyer that she was waiving her rights to allege that she was not informed that the house was flood-prone.

Ditcharo v. Stepanek, 538 So. 2d 309 (La. Ct. App. 1989) , cert. denied, 541 So. 2d 858 (1989) . The brokers were liable to buyers for failing to disclose termite infestation where brokers knew of the infestation and had a legal duty to disclose such to the buyers.

Reeves v. Weber, 509 So. 2d 158 (La. Ct. App. 1987) . A broker owes duty to disclose to buyer any material defects of which he is aware.

Josephs v. Austin, 420 So. 2d 1181 (La. Ct. App. 1982) , cert. denied, 427 So. 2d 870 (La. 1983) . A broker's failure to disclose house's cracked foundation constituted breach of broker's duty to disclose accurate information to purchasers. The broker could be held liable for negligent misrepresentation.

De Soto v. Ellis, 393 So. 2d 847 (La. Ct. App. 1981) . A broker has duty to disclose to prospective purchaser existence of material defect, salesperson not negligent in failing to disclose unstable house foundation where salesperson reasonably believed the defect had been repaired.

Maine

Kezer v. Mark Stimson Assocs., 1999 Me. 184, 742 A.2d 898, 902 (Me. 1999) . A disclosure statute does not require disclosure of environmental hazards in the neighborhood. The court declined to find a common law duty to disclose environmental hazards in the neighborhood.

Binette v. Dyer Library Association, 688 A.2d 898 (Me. 1996) . Pursuant to Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 38, § 563(6), the owner of real estate on which an underground oil tank is located must file written notice of the existence of the tank prior to the sale or transfer of that real estate. This provision does not limit disclosure to sellers who know of an underground storage tank on their property. The statute's disclosure requirement, rather, is absolute. This section mandates that when an underground oil tank exists on property for sale the seller of that property may not remain silent. The seller's failure to disclose the tank was evidence of a breach by the seller of a duty, of reasonable care owed to the buyers, and can be considered by a factfinder along with other evidence relevant to the "reasonable care" element of the tort of misrepresentation. With respect to the broker involved in the sale, the court held that the real estate regulations created a duty to disclose defects of which the broker knew or should have known. A jury should decide whether the broker exercised reasonable care in light of the regulatory requirement.

Maryland

Auction & Estate Representatives Inc. v. Ashton, 354 Md. 333, 731 A.2d 441 (Md. 1999) . An auctioneer was required by the auction contract to provide the standardized disclosure or disclaimer form to the purchaser at an auction of residential real estate. This obligation arose not because an auctioneer of real property was required by statute to do so, but because the auctioneer contracted specifically with the seller and assumed her obligation as seller to provide all forms necessary to effectuate a sale of the property.

Romm v. Flax, 340 Md. 690, 668 A.2d 1 (Md. 1995) . Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 10-702(g)(1) states: "If the disclosure statement is delivered by the Seller later than three (3) days after the Seller enters into a contract of sale with the Purchaser, the contract is void." The word "void" in this provision means voidable at the purchaser's option.

Merritt v. Craig, 130 Md. App. 350, 746 A.2d 923 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2002) , cert. denied, 359 Md. 29, 753 A.2d 2 (Md. 2000) . A seller's conduct in willfully misrepresenting the condition of the water system in the Disclosure Statement, coupled with her actions and those of her husband in interfering and diverting the water flow subsequent to the inspection and sale of the property, constituted egregious conduct sufficient to support the jury award of $150,000 in punitive damages.

Lopata v. Miller, 122 Md. App. 76, 712 A.2d. 24, 32-33 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1998) cert. denied, 351 Md. 286, 718 A.2d 234 (Md. 1998) . A lot was represented as being 3 acres when it was only 1.87 acres. The broker and agent owed no duty to purchasers to verify the seller's representation as to lot size.

Massachusetts

Urman v. South Boston Savings Bank, 424 Mass. 165, 674 N.E.2d 1078 (Mass. 1997) . As a matter of law, a seller--a bank that had acquired the property at foreclosure--was not liable under Mass. G. L. c. 93A for the failure to disclose to the buyers the contamination-related closing of a nearby school. The seller owed the buyers no common law duty to disclose the minimum amount of information it knew about toxic waste contamination that existed on a nearby property. As a matter of law, the seller was not liable for fraud or misrepresentation.

Mongeau v. Boutelle, 10 Mass. App. Ct. 246, 407 N.E.2d 352 (1980) . The broker failed to inform the buyers that the property was encumbered by a right of way. The court found that under the Consumer Protection Act, the failure to disclose any material fact which may influence the buyer is actionable.

Michigan

Bergen v. Baker, 264 Mich. App. 376, 691 N.W.2d 770 (2004) . A party's reliance on a misrepresentation in fraud actions must be reasonable. There was a genuine issue of material fact with respect to whether the seller disclosure statement contained a misrepresentation, error, inaccuracy, or omission, and whether the sellers had or should have had personal knowledge of that. The statement on the form that the roof leaked was not in and of itself a misrepresentation. It was for the jury to resolve the issue of how to interpret the disclosure statement. A reasonable fact finder could have inferred that the sellers knew about the leak yet proceeded in bad faith by failing to fully disclose the condition.

M&D, Inc. v. McConkey, 231 Mich. App. 22, 585 N.W.2d 33 (Mich. Ct. App. 1998) , appeal denied, 459 Mich. 962, 590 N.W.2d 576 (Mich. 1999) . In a sale of commercial property the buyers did not establish elements of silent fraud. There was no evidence of a legal or equitable duty on the seller's behalf to disclose the property's flooding history. The sales documents contained an "as is" clause and other statements specifically disclaimed the seller representations and warranties about the condition of the property. Furthermore, the seller refused to prepare a seller's disclosure statement and made this refusal a part of the purchase agreement.

McMullen v. Joldersma, 174 Mich. App. 207, 435 N.W.2d 428 (Mich. Ct. App. 1988) . The seller's agents had no duty to disclose to purchasers pending plan of State to construct highway bypass which would divert traffic away from the store where agents were not party to the underlying business transaction.

Minnesota

Rose Revocable Trust v. Eppich, 640 N.W.2d 601 (Minn. 2002) . The parties' agreement subject disputes to arbitration and provided that an arbitration request had to be filed within 18 months of the closing date. Two years after closing, the buyers sued alleging that the seller was aware of the home's defects at the time of the sale and failed to properly disclose them. The court held that the 18-month limitations period contained in the arbitration agreement, measured from the date of closing, was unreasonable as applied to a claim of fraud where undisclosed water problems resulted in structural damage that was not readily apparent to the buyers.

JEM Acres, LLC v. Bruno, 764 N.W.2d 77 (Minn. Ct. App. 2009) . A seller, who represents to a buyer that a septic system complies with applicable laws and rules governing sewage-treatment systems, but who has reason to know that these representations are false, is not shielded from liability under Minn. Stat. § 115.55, subd. 6 based on the existence of a septic-system certificate of compliance.

Berryman v. Riegert, 286 Minn. 270, 175 N.W.2d 438 (1970) . The broker had duty to investigate whether there was a problem with water seepage.

Hommerding v. Peterson, 376 N.W.2d 456 (Minn. Ct. App. 1985) . The agent not liable to purchaser for failure to inform purchaser that the water pressure was insufficient for normal family use where such information was open to discovery upon reasonable inquiry by purchaser particularly where agent had no knowledge of low water pressure.

Mississippi

Lane v. Oustalet, 850 So. 2d 1143 (Miss. Ct. App. 2002) , aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 873 So. 2d 92 (Miss. 2004) . A dual agent who called the seller with the results of a termite inspection, but failed to call the buyers breached her fiduciary duties to the buyers. Disclosure to one party, but not the other was improper. The agent owed the same treatment to both principals.

Mississippi Real Estate Comm'n v. Hennessee, 672 So. 2d 1209, 1218 (Miss. 1996) . The broker not exempt from discipline when selling broker's own property.

Powell v. Cohen Realty, Inc., 803 So. 2d 1186 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999) . There was no evidence that the buyer had any contact with the listing agent until the day of closing. The listing agent provided the buyer with the statutorily required disclosure statement. This statement had been completed by the sellers who disclosed several defects. Buyer had in her possession a copy of the disclosure statement, and she had inspected the house with her own agent. The buyer failed to sustain her burden of proof of the element of fraud and fraudulent misrepresentation. Summary judgment for listing agent, selling broker, and seller was proper.

Crane v. Hahn, 754 So. 2d 471 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999) . The buyer signed a contract with an "as is" provision, as well as, an "acceptance" provision and was bound by the mutually agreed upon contract terms and thus waived the right to maintain an action on the contract. The seller's disclosure form did not warrant the house's actual age, but rather approximated the age and the form mentioned that the house had been moved. While this statement was not included on the disclosure form when the buyer signed it, this fact was brought to her attention at closing, and she was given an opportunity to back out of the deal which she declined. The buyer was bound by the terms of those instruments.

Missouri

McClain v. Papka, 108 S.W.3d 48 (Mo. Ct. App. 2003) . The facts did not support the buyers' reliance on sellers' representations as the buyers knew of the termite presence in a different area of the house, sellers did not engage in active concealment of a non-observable condition, sellers performed their obligation to disclose and offered to let the buyers open the wall to conduct their own investigation; trial court did not err when it found that buyers failed to establish a breach of contract action with regard to seller's failure to disclose the termite damage, nor did trial court err in finding that the sellers disclosed the water leaks where buyers knew of basement dampness and observed foundation crack.

Lowdermilk v. Vescovo Building and Realty Co., Inc., 91 S.W.3d 617 (Mo. Ct. App. 2002) . Mo. Rev. Stat. § 339.730 does not allow a private cause of action against a broker or agent for negligence per se.

Artilla Cove Resort v. Hartley, 72 S.W.3d 291 (Mo. Ct. App. 2002) . The sellers told the buyers that the resort was in excellent condition. Buyers could not examine basement, as it was full of stuff. Sellers knew the basement wall was cracked and bowed, as they constructed a cosmetic plywood wall that concealed the defects. The sales contract provided that all representations that were not set forth therein had not been made. The court found that sellers had a duty to disclose the condition, as they had superior information not reasonably available to the buyers. The sales contract did not relieve the sellers of the duty to disclose. The buyers right to rely on the representations made was not an erroneous declaration of law, nor was it an erroneous application of law.

Keefhaver v. Kimbrell, 58 S.W.3d 54 (Mo. Ct. App. 2001) . The buyer did not stand on equal footing with sellers. The buyer had a right to rely on sellers' representations. The truth regarding the condition of the roof, basement, and deck was peculiarly within the seller's knowledge.

Wasson v. Schubert, 964 S.W.2d 520 (Mo. Ct. App. 1998) . The sellers' disclosure was part of the sales contract as it was an addendum to the contract. Paragraph eight of the contract stated that the contract would not be effective "until seller completes and buyer signs the attached Statement of Condition Addendum for the property." The fact that the buyers signed the sellers' disclosure one day after the parties signed the contract meant that the contract was not effective until the date the buyers signed the sellers' disclosure. Nowhere on the sellers' disclosure did the sellers mention the crack in the basement foundation wall behind the stairs, which they admit caused leaks in the past. The sellers claimed that they did not disclose the existence of that crack because they did not believe it was material. The sellers' disclosure required the sellers to disclose all cracks that, to their knowledge, had ever existed in the foundation walls, regardless of whether the sellers believed such cracks were material. The buyers made a submissible case that answers on the disclosure statement were misleading.

Groothand v. Schlueter, 949 S.W.2d 923 (Mo. Ct. App. 1997) . The court applied the following exceptions to the general rule that a party who conducts an independent investigation cannot say he or she relied on another's representations: (1) If the party making the independent investigation makes a partial rather than a full investigation, and relies on the misrepresentations as well as the investigation, the party may maintain an action for fraud. (2) If the facts are peculiarly within the knowledge of the party making the representations, the buyer may rely on such representations if he or she does not stand on "equal footing" with the seller and the truth is difficult for the buyer to ascertain. (3) If the seller makes a distinct and specific representation, then the buyer has the right to rely on that representation, even if the parties do stand on equal footing or have equal knowledge or means of information.

Seidel v. Gordon A. Gundaker Real Estate Co. Inc., 904 S.W.2d 357 (Mo. Ct. App. 1995) . The broker and listing agent were held responsible for prospective purchaser's costs incurred in purchase attempt and costs incurred to settle lawsuit with the sellers when the prospective purchaser refused to complete the sale. The broker and agent failed to inform the prospective purchaser of the fact that the subdivision's sewer system had not been accepted by the public sewer district. The plaintiff in this case was also a broker.

Andrews v. Missouri Real Estate Comm'n, 849 S.W.2d 241 (Mo. Ct. App. 1993) . The salesperson prepared two sales contracts--one that showed that the seller was financing the down payment and another that omitted this fact. The second contract was submitted to the lender. This conduct occurred in two different transactions. It was held that such conduct constituted substantial misrepresentations and concealment or omission of material facts.

Pilgram v. Missouri Real Estate Comm'n, 835 S.W.2d 545 (Mo. Ct. App. 1992) . The omission of material facts may be a ground for disciplining a real estate licensee, but a broker's failure to inform sellers that she signed their name on form used to build up credit in her sales record regarding membership in a sales club did not constitute a "material fact" omission which could be a ground for discipline.

Montana

Bond v. City of Philipsburg, 315 Mont. 7, 2003 MT 74, 67 P.3d 255 (Mont. 2003) . The buyers were licensed real estate agents. After the purchase, the buyers learned that water had leaked into the building's basement in the early 1980s. The buyers filed an unsuccessful complaint alleging in part that the sellers intentionally and negligently misrepresented and failed to disclose the leaks. The fact that the buyers did their own inspection and found the basement to be dry and dusty tended to show that water was not an important consideration when they purchased the property. The court held that as the buyers thought an earlier water flow was a minor event that they did not need to disclose to their bank in 1998 when refinancing the property, the buyers could not later assert that the sellers were required to disclose the leakage that occurred in the 1980s, some 10 years before they sold the property.

Strom v. Logan, 304 Mont. 176, 2001 MT 30, 18 P.3d 1024 (Mont. 2001) . When the facts constituting a claim are by their nature concealed, or where the defendant has taken action which prevents the injured party from discovering the injury or its cause, the three-year statute of limitations does not begin to run until the facts constituting the claim either were discovered or should have been discovered with due diligence. Due diligence did not require buyers to cut holes in the walls and ceilings to find fire damage concealed behind new sheetrock, and the independent investigation clause did not preclude justifiable reliance by the buyers upon the sellers' misrepresentations.

Evans v. Teakettle Realty, 226 Mont. 363, 736 P.2d 472 (Mont. 1987) . A realty company's failure to disclose to buyers the dangers and illegal location of septic tank door under trap door on floor of utility room was negligence on part of realty company as well as violation of Consumer Protection Act.

Nebraska

R.J. Miller, Inc. v. Harrington, 260 Neb. 471, 618 N.W.2d 460 (Neb. 2000) . Nebraska disclosure law which applies to residential real property applied to a mixed-use building containing a tavern on the first floor and a residential apartment on the second floor. There is no strict liability for failure to provide a disclosure statement.

Cao v. Huan Nguyen, 258 Neb. 1027, 607 N.W.2d 528 (Neb. 2000) . A buyers' reliance on the seller's statement was reasonable because the buyers were not put on notice that the home did not meet the zoning requirements as it had been rented to two families in the past, it was divided into two units, and the advertisement described the property as a duplex, as did the contract. The buyers also claimed that the sellers failed to provide them with a property disclosure statement as required by Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2, 120. This is a separate cause of action. This provision presupposes that the contract is to be enforced, such relief is inconsistent with seeking to rescind the contract. A party may not plead inconsistent theories of recovery, and a party pleading inconsistent theories of recovery may be required to elect between them.

Gillespie v. State Real Estate Comm'n, 172 Neb. 308, 109 N.W.2d 305 (Neb. 1961) . A broker who failed to disclose every material fact to principal is guilty of fraud and bad faith.

Kramer v. Eagle Eye Home Inspections, Inc., 14 Neb. App. 691, 2006 Neb. App. LEXIS 68 (Apr. 26, 2006) , overruled in part by, Tracy Broad. Corp. v. Telemetrix, Inc., 17 Neb. Ct. App. 112, 756 N.W.2d 742 (2008) . The sellers indicated on the property condition disclosure statement that there had not been damage due to wood-destroying insects, but that there had been treatment for wood-destroying insects. The buyer could not show that he reasonably relied on the disclosure statement and that he suffered damage as a result, because the buyer had a termite inspection and treatment done on the home prior to closing and received a credit on the sale price for such treatment. The buyer could not show reasonable reliance on the sellers' representation because the buyer's actions negated any claim of reasonable reliance on the seller's representations.

Burgess v. Miller, 9 Neb. Ct. App. 854, 621 N.W.2d 828 (2001) . The buyer failed to show that an addendum to the disclosure by the sellers was a knowingly false statement or that the sellers had actual knowledge of any other water damage not addressed in the addendum. Since the addendum disclosed the condition of the basement to the best of the sellers' belief and knowledge, the motion for directed verdict was properly granted.

Bohm v. DMA P'ship., 8 Neb. App. 1069, 607 N.W.2d 212 (2000) . Violations of Neb. Rev. Stat. § 76-2, 120 must be done knowingly. The residential property disclosure law substantively changed the law since it places a duty on sellers to provide a written disclosure statement to a buyer whereas no specific duty to provide the written disclosure statement existed at common law. In order to hold an agent liable a buyer would need to prove that the broker had knowledge, not of the defect, but of the seller's knowledge of the defect at the time the seller made the disclosure. If there is no disclosure statement there can be no agent liability.

New Hampshire

Snierston v. Scruton, 145 N.H. 73, 761 A.2d 1046 (2000) . The court rejected the buyers' argument that N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 477:4-c and 4-d created private causes of action. The disclosure statutes require a seller to disclose information that would not necessarily have to be disclosed under the common law.

New Jersey

Nobrega v. Edison Glen Assocs., 167 N.J. 520, 772 A.2d 368 (2001) . The New Jersey Residential Real Estate Off-Site Conditions Disclosure Act (enacted 1995) may apply retroactively if homeowners have no remedy under The Planned Real Estate Development Full Disclosure Act.

Strawn v. Canuso, 140 N.J. 43, 657 A.2d 420 (1995) , superseded by statute as stated in Aden v. Fortsh, 169 N.J. 64, 776 A.2d 792 (2001) . The legislature intended the New Residential Real Estate Off-Site Conditions Disclosure Act to reverse Strawn v. Canuso. The builder-developer and broker were liable for nondisclosure of off-site physical conditions known to them and unknown and not readily observable by purchaser if those conditions were of sufficient materiality to affect the habitability, use, or enjoyment of the property and, therefore rendered the property substantially less desirable or valuable to objectively reasonable purchaser.

Cohen v. W.B. Associates, Inc., 380 N.J. Super. 436, 882 A.2d 456 (Law Div. 2005) . Buyers of a new residential home claimed that they were misled by the developer's representations. When they learned that the home was near a minimum security prison, they attempted to cancel the contract. The developer refused to return the buyers' deposit and asserted that its compliance with the New Residential Construction Off-Site Conditions Disclosure Act (Act), N.J. Stat. Ann. § 46:3C-1 et seq. , insulated it from liability. The court held that any elaboration beyond the Act's strict language rendered the Act inapplicable and the immunity unavailable to the seller. In the contract at issue, the developer added supplemental language relating to what was later determined by the buyers to have been the prison. Therefore, the Act was inapplicable.

N.J. Ass'n of Realtors(R) v. N.J. Dep't of Env'tl. Prot., 367 N.J. Super. 154, 842 A.2d 262 (App. Div. 2004) . The Realtors(R) association challenged the adoption by the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection, of N.J. Admin. Code tit. 7, § 26E-8.2(g)(5). This regulation made the association a required recipient of what were called deed notices, reports of conditions, or restrictions on real property due to site contamination, and appeared to make the association and its members responsible for actually contributing to municipal lists under the Act. The association argued that the regulation was void because it conflicted with the New Jersey New Residential Construction Off-Site Conditions Disclosure Act, N.J. Stat. Ann. §§ 46:3C-1 to-12 (Disclosure Act). The court found the challenged regulation to be void ab initio and declared that the association and its members had no obligations thereunder.

Levine v. Kramer Group, 354 N.J. Super. 397, 807 A.2d 264 (App. Div. 2002) . While the home buyers' house was being built, the developers received abusive communications from an adjoining landowner, claiming that the new house was ruining his property. As a result the developers altered the plans somewhat. After the home buyers moved in, the adjoining landowner's conduct was so abusive that he was convicted of harassment. The court held that under common law tort principles, under the New Jersey Consumer Fraud Act, and under part of the New Jersey Planned Real Estate Development Full Disclosure Act, the developers had violated no duty of disclosure owed to the home buyers.

New Mexico

Moser v. Bertram, 115 N.M. 766, 858 P.2d 854 (N.M. 1993) . An agent must reveal to principal all facts known to agent that might affect principal's decisions, rights, and interests.

Gouveia v. Citicorp Person-to-Person Fin. Ctr., Inc., 101 N.M. 572, 686 P.2d 262 (N.M. Ct. App. 1984) . A broker may be liable for negligent failure to discover and disclose defects based on its status as a fiduciary if a broker exercising reasonable care could have gained knowledge of defects. Even if the brokers had no knowledge of defects in townhouse, they were required to make a prima facie showing that they did not breach standard of care of brokers in the community.

New York

Jablonski v. Rapalje, 14 A.D.3d 484, 788 N.Y.S.2d 158, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 166 (2005) . New York adheres to the doctrine of caveat emptor and imposes no duty on the seller or the seller's agent to disclose any information concerning the premises when the parties deal at arms length, unless there is some conduct on the part of the seller or the seller's agent which constitutes active concealment. If however, some conduct (i.e., more than mere silence) on the part of the seller rises to the level of 'active concealment,' a seller may have a duty to disclose information concerning the property. To maintain a cause of action to recover damages for active concealment, the plaintiff must show, in effect, that the seller or the seller's agents thwarted the plaintiff's efforts to fulfill his responsibilities fixed by the doctrine of caveat emptor.

Glazer v. Lopreste, 278 A.D.2d 198, 717 N.Y.S.2d 256, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12529 (2000) . A broker was not required to voluntarily disclose that neighbor across the street was a convicted sex offender. The court noted that the neighbor's status was "well chronicled" in local newspapers.

Bando v. Achenbaum, 234 A.D.2d 242, 651 N.Y.S.2d 74 (1996) , appeal dismissed in part and denied in part, 90 N.Y.2d 920, 664 N.Y.S.2d 256, 686 N.E.2d 1350 (1997) (broker had no duty to volunteer fact that the termite infestation of the house might have been greater than the purchasers anticipated, particularly where purchasers were on notice of condition prior to closing and failed to discover the severity of the problem).

North Carolina

Johnson v. Beverly-Hanks & Assoc., 328 N.C. 202, 400 S.E.2d 38 (1991) . A broker who makes fraudulent misrepresentations or who conceals a material fact when there is a duty to speak is personally liable to the purchaser even though the broker was the seller's agent.

Little v. Stogner, 162 N.C. App. 25, 592 S.E.2d 5 (2004) . The seller represented that the soil was suitable to support a septic tank system and that the existing septic tanks had been grandfathered into compliance. Buyers did not independently investigate those claims. The parties completed a standard purchase form, but provisions related to property disclosure and inspections were crossed out, and the form stated that the buyers were waiving their right to receive a disclosure statement. The buyers soon located records that called into question the seller's representations and indicated to the buyers that they could not use the property to build a home in compliance with the property's restrictive covenants. The buyers sued. The seller's motion for directed verdict on fraud was granted, while the buyers' breach of implied warranty and claims under the Residential Property Disclosure Act, N.C. Gen. Stat. § 47E-1 et seq. (Act), were dismissed. On appeal, the appellate court found that neither the fraud nor breach of warranty claims should have been dismissed, but that the trial court properly dismissed the claim for damages under the Act.

Swain v. Preston Falls East, L.L.C., 156 N.C. App. 357, 576 S.E.2d 699 (2003) , review denied, 357 N.C. 255, 583 S.E.2d 290 (2003) . The buyers purchased a townhouse finished with a synthetic stucco product. Later the buyers learned about litigation regarding homes finished with synthetic stucco due to moisture intrusion through the product and resulting structural damage. Buyers claimed they were unaware of these problems, and had they known, they would not have purchased the townhouse. But the buyers had signed a synthetic stucco disclosure and prior to closing, the buyers had received an inspection report disclosing moisture intrusion problems with the townhouse. The court found that the buyers' conduct constituted contributory negligence as a matter of law and that the trial court had properly granted summary judgment to defendants.

Everts v. Parkinson, 147 N.C. App. 315, 555 S.E.2d 667 (2001) . The buyers purchased a home finished with a synthetic stucco. Sellers failed to disclose water intrusion problems. The court stated that North Carolina has long recognized that where a material defect is known to the seller, and the seller knows that the buyer is unaware of the defect and that it is not discoverable in the exercise of the buyer's diligent attention or observation, the seller has a duty to disclose the existence of the defect to the buyer. In such cases, suppressio veri (a failure to disclose the truth) is as much fraud as suggestio falsi (an affirmative false representation). The sellers were under an affirmative duty to disclose to the buyers the existence of any known material defects in the home which were not known to plaintiffs and which were not discoverable by them in the exercise of their diligent attention or observation.

Brown v. Roth, 133 N.C. App. 52, 514 S.E.2d 294 (1999) . A dual agent relied upon an appraiser's square footage figure which overstated the square footage. The court agreed that agent's reliance on a reliable appraiser for the square footnote when that agent represents the buyer, is some evidence of that agent's compliance with the applicable standard of care, but it was not conclusive as a matter of law. North Carolina Real Estate Commission suggested that agents were expected to personally measure all properties they list and accurately calculate square footage and not rely on the representations of others. Genuine issues of material fact exist as to whether the agent exercised reasonable care in obtaining and communicating to buyer the square footage, summary judgment was not proper on the breach of fiduciary duty and negligent misrepresentation claims.

Helms v. Holland, 124 N.C. App. 629, 478 S.E.2d 513 (1996) . The purchasers did not state a claim of negligent misrepresentation against broker for failing to disclose that health department disapproved house for use as family care facility in absence of evidence of broker's knowledge of the disapproval.

Clouse v. Gordon, 115 N.C. App. 500, 445 S.E.2d 428 (1994) . A broker's duty to disclose applies to material facts known to broker.

North Dakota

Asleson v. West Branch Land Co., 311 N.W.2d 533 (N.D. 1981) . A listing agent had duty to disclose to anyone interested in the property an error in its zoning status and to correct the listing.

Ohio

Miles v. McSwegin, 58 Ohio St. 2d 97, 12 Ohio Op. 3d 108, 388 N.E.2d 1367 (1979) . A broker had a duty to disclose to buyers that property was infested with termites.

Decaestecker v. Belluardo, 2008 Ohio 2077, 2008 Ohio App. LEXIS 1776 (May 2, 2008) . Fraudulent nondisclosure involves an omission to act when the seller has a duty to act. When the buyer accepts the property in an "as is" condition, the seller is relieved of any duty to disclose. In order to relieve the seller of the common law duty to disclose the existence of latent defects of which the seller knows, the "as is" provision must be unconditional. The parties' "as is" provision was conditional and limited to patent defects. The trial court erred when it granted summary judgment on a finding that the "as is" clause relieved the sellers of a duty to disclose the existence of any latent defects known to the sellers. The duty of disclosure imposed by Ohio Rev. Code § 5302.30 is limited to matters within the seller's actual knowledge, and a purchaser's proof of that actual knowledge, by a preponderance of the evidence, is necessary for the purchaser to prevail on a claim of fraud arising from the seller's alleged breach of this duty.

Lewis v. Basinger, 2004 Ohio 6377, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 5864 (2004) . The doctrine of caveat emptor and the "as is" nature of a contract preclude recovery against both a seller and the seller's agent absent fraud. When a buyer contractually agrees to accept property "as is," the seller is relieved of any duty to disclose the property's latent conditions and only has the duty not to commit an affirmative fraud. Ohio courts hold that a seller's agent is as protected by the doctrine of caveat emptor and the "as is" language in a sales contract as the seller.

Moreland v. Ksiazek, 2004 Ohio 2974, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2618 (2004) . A cause of action cannot be maintained against the seller or its agent for fraudulent nondisclosure when the property is being sold "as is." However, even if real property is being sold "as is," a cause of action can still be maintained for fraudulent misrepresentation.

Chamar v. Schivitz, 2004 Ohio 1957, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 1704 (2004) . When a buyer receives a residential property disclosure form prior to executing a title transfer agreement, rescission is not an available remedy.

Findlay Ford Lincoln-Mercury v. Huffman, 2004 Ohio 541, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 486 (2004) . In a sale of commercial property, buyers claimed that seller intentionally misrepresented his knowledge of oil wells on the property and that the wells were a latent defect. The court disagreed. Although not visually discoverable, the well was discoverable if one searched the public records maintained by the Ohio Department of Natural Resources. The court found that the seller did not commit any fraud, as the elements of justifiable reliance and an actual or implied representation or concealment of a matter of fact were lacking.

McClintock v. Fluellen, 2004 Ohio 58, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 42 (2004) . Buyer alleged that seller intentionally failed to disclose in the Residential Property Disclosure Form, mechanical problems with the heating, ventilation and air conditioning unit. The court found that the caveat emptor doctrine could not be used to protect a vendor if the buyer proved fraud.

Witfoth v. Kiefer, 2003 Ohio 6766, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 6092 (2003) . Buyers alleged that well had a low yield that affected their water use and asserted that the sellers should have disclosed this fact to them. The well was disclosed on the residential property disclosure form in keeping with Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.30, but sellers made no other indication orally or on the form about the well. Buyers had to dig new wells. The court found that since no reasonable person could consider the well a material defect or could consider the low yield to be a material water supply problem, the sellers were not required to disclose the low yield on the disclosure form. It was also undisputed that the buyers had a full opportunity to inspect the property, that a test existed to measure the yield, that they did not order such a test, and that the yield was public record. Therefore, no reasonable person could find that the yield of the well was not open and obvious. Thus, nondisclosure did not amount to fraudulent concealment.

Clemente v. Gardner, 2003 Ohio 6017, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 5352 (2003) , corrected by, 2004 Ohio 2254, 2004 Ohio App. LEXIS 2009 (2004) . Generally, an "as is" clause places the risk upon the purchaser as to the existence of defects and relieves the seller of any duty to disclose. But an "as is" clause does not bar a claim for positive fraud, a fraud of commission rather than omission. An "as is" clause bars claims for passive non-disclosure.

Funk v. Durant, 155 Ohio App. 3d 99, 2003 Ohio 5591, 799 N.E.2d 221 (2003) . The sales contract contained an "as is" clause. The real estate disclosure form did not accurately list all occasions of water leakage, but the buyers knew this disclosure was inaccurate. The buyers' claims was predicated upon fraudulent misrepresentations or failure to disclose. The court found there was open and obvious evidence of basement water problems, putting the buyers on notice. The buyers had an opportunity to have an inspection made, which was encouraged by Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 5302.30 and the buyers did this by using the services of their home inspector friend, who also observed such evidence. The buyers were aware of prior problems and knew the non-disclosure statements were inaccurate, and therefore, could not meet the requirements of affirmative false statements in a contract containing an "as is" clause, nor the burden of reliance.

Nunez v. J.L. Sims Co., 2003 Ohio 3386, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3075, (2003) , appeal denied 100 Ohio St. 3d 1471, 2003 Ohio 5772, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 2865 (2003) , reconsideration denied, 100 Ohio St. 3d 1550, 2003 Ohio 6879, 800 N.E.2d 754, 2003 Ohio LEXIS 3564 (2003) . The buyers who ignored advice that they have the house, which they were purchasing "as is," inspected for lead-based paint hazards could not sue sellers and real estate agents in tort, contract, or for violating federal regulations.

Broida v. McGlumphy, 2002 Ohio 4738, 2002 Ohio App. LEXIS 4819 (2002) , appeal denied, 98 Ohio St. 3d 1423, 2003 Ohio 259, 782 N.E.2d 78 (2003) . When a buyer claiming fraud in the sale of property had the opportunity to inspect the property, the buyer will be charged with the knowledge of conditions that a reasonable inspection would have disclosed. Although the buyers asked an inspector to inspect the residential property, the court could not state that a twenty-minute inspection was reasonable in light of the fact that the inspector discovered mold on the hurricane door and failed to follow up this discovery with more questions or a more extensive inspection. The buyers cannot prove that their reliance on the sellers' residential property disclosure form was justified. The buyers' claim for fraudulent misrepresentation failed.

Hannah v. Sibcy Cline Realtors, 147 Ohio App. 3d 198, 2001 Ohio 3912, 769 N.E.2d 876 (2001) , appeal denied, 95 Ohio St. 3d 1436, 766 N.E.2d 1002 (2002) , reconsideration denied, 95 Ohio St. 3d 1488, 2002 Ohio 2625, 769 N.E.2d 403 (2002) . While an agent or broker may choose to provide information regarding the ethnic diversity of a neighborhood to a client or to direct a client to resources about the ethnic diversity of a particular neighborhood or community, the agent or broker does so at his or her risk. As a matter of law there is no fiduciary duty to do so.

Peach v. Love, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 3113 (2001) . The contract contained as is clause and the Residential Property Disclosure Form attached to the contract disclosed water seepage into basement. The doctrine of caveat emptor governed this case.

Shear v. Fleck, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 4063 (2001) . Judgment for the buyers on a fraud claim was affirmed where sellers of the residence actively concealed latent defect of water problems in basement.

Masten v. Brenick, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 3159 (2001) , appeal denied, 92 Ohio St. 3d 1433, 749 N.E.2d 759 (2001) . Recovery was precluded by the doctrine of caveat emptor as any non-disclosure failed to rise to the level of fraud. The residential property defect could not be considered latent as it could have been detected by proper inspection by the buyer.

Allison v. Cook, 139 Ohio App. 3d 473, 744 N.E.2d 254 (2000) . Unless confidential information is at issue, the agent has an affirmative obligation to inform his or her client of all information material to the transaction, and the agent must also advise his or her client in furtherance of the client's interest. If a real estate agent fails to adhere to these fiduciary duties owed to his or her client, the agent may not thereafter assert caveat emptor as a defense to a claim that the real estate agent defrauded the client.

Hearty v. First Merit Bank, N.A., 1999 Ohio App. LEXIS 5544 (Nov. 24, 1999) , discretionary appeal denied, 88 Ohio St. 3d 1448, 725 N.E.2d 287 (2000) . Notwithstanding the enactment of the Residential Disclosure Statute, the principle of caveat emptor still governs real estate transactions in Ohio. The seller was under no duty to update the form. The form itself advises potential buyers that there is no duty of the seller to update the form. Ohio Rev. Code § 5302.30 only requires that the disclosure statement be an accurate statement of the seller's knowledge of the condition of the house, as of the date the form was signed. The buyers should have been alerted to the possibility that the disclosure statement might not still be accurate six months after it was signed. Given evidence of past or current problems, the buyers were on notice that they should make further inquiry of the seller, who was under an obligation not to make fraudulent statements, or undertake a professional inspection. Even assuming that the seller's licensee fraudulently represented that the basement problems had been fixed, the buyers were not justified in relying on an oral representation by the licensee, when the problem was open and obvious to both.

Wilson v. Safarek, 131 Ohio App. 3d 622, 723 N.E.2d 181 (1999) . The buyers received and reviewed a residential property disclosure form. One buyer acknowledged receipt of the disclosure by signing and dating it and then returned the form to the seller. Neither buyer retained a copy of the disclosure form at that time because, since they had declined to go to the real estate office. There was no copy machine at the meeting place. The buyers were considered to have received this form at this time, thus the buyers' attempted rescission was untimely.

Rosa v. Zaring Homes, Inc., 122 Ohio App. 3d 739, 702 N.E.2d 952 (1997) , appeal denied, 81 Ohio St. 3d 1421, 688 N.E.2d 1046 (1998) . A purchaser's failure to inspect can defeat claim of misrepresentation when facts were available to all.

Eiland v. Coldwell Banker Hunter Realty, 122 Ohio App. 3d 446, 459-460, 702 N.E.2d 116, 124-125 (1997) , question certified, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 3695 (1997) . When a buyer claiming fraud in the sale of property has repeated opportunities to inspect the property, the buyer will be charged with the knowledge of conditions that a reasonable inspection would have disclosed. This purchaser bought the property "as is." There was no evidence that the broker or its agent fraudulently induced the purchase or misrepresented the property's condition.

Montgomery v. Proper, 1997 Ohio App. LEXIS 470 (1997) . The disclosure form provides the buyer with notice of any conditions or information concerning the property which are actually known by the transferor. Although the disclosure statement is not a warranty or a substitute for careful inspection by the potential buyer, Ohio Rev. Code § 5302.30(F) relieves the seller of liability for damages to the person or property arising from errors, inaccuracies, or omissions in the property disclosure form, but only "if the error, inaccuracy, or omission was not within the transferor's actual knowledge."

Black v. Cosentino, 117 Ohio App. 3d 40, 689 N.E.2d 1001 (1996) . The sales contract contained a clause warranting that the sellers had no knowledge of any hidden or latent defects and recommending that the purchasers retain a professional contractor to inspect the home. The buyers did not obtain a professional inspection, and they later experienced water leakage in the basement. The buyers sued alleging misrepresentation and concealment. The court affirmed the summary judgment in favor of the sellers holding that (1) the sellers' disclosure provided the buyers with notice of the possibility of a basement water problem, after which the purchasers had the opportunity to arrange for an inspection; (2) the defects were not latent because many of the conditions evidencing dampness were open, observable, and readily apparent upon inspection; and (3) the purchasers failed to establish the elements of fraud because the sellers did not have knowledge of an existing water problem that was not open and observable, or of misrepresentation because the sellers did not represent that the home complied with the requirements of the Federal Housing Authority.

Foust v. Valleybrook Realty Co., 4 Ohio App. 3d 164, 446 N.E.2d 1122, 4 Ohio B. 264 (1981) . An agent and seller have duty to disclose material facts which are not visible. Nondisclosure is willful misrepresentation.

Crum v. McCoy, 41 Ohio Misc. 34, 70 Ohio Op. 2d 76, 322 N.E.2d 161 (Ohio Mun. Ct. 1974) . A seller's broker who knows of serious latent defect in property listed with him has a duty to inform a buyer of that defect even though the buyer is a customer of another broker.

Oklahoma

Rogers v. Meiser, 2003 OK 6, 68 P.3d 967 (2003) . The sellers experienced repeated and heavy flooding of the house. The seller's repairs did not stop the flooding and the sellers knew their repairs were inadequate. The sellers deliberately concealed the nature and scope of the flooding problems by stating on a disclosure statement that the flooding problem had been repaired. The trial judge dismissed any theory of liability, including a fraud claim, and any remedy raised by the buyers' petition not arising under or permitted by the Residential Property Condition Disclosure Act (RPCDA) on the basis that the RPCDA abrogated or supplanted any such theory or remedy. In that the RPCDA neither expressly nor by necessary implication could be found to have legislatively intended to supplant or abrogate a common law actual fraud claim anchored on alleged misrepresentations concerning material defects in the house made in connection with its sale, or the remedies associated with such a claim, the trial judge erred in dismissing the buyers' fraud claim.

Keeler v. GMAC Global Relocation Services, 2009 OK CIV APP 88, 223 P.3d 1024, 2009 Okla. Civ. App. LEXIS 62 (Okla. Ct. App. 2009) The buyers purchased a home from a relocation services firm. The home had termite and other damage. The seller was not responsible for the defects under the Residential Property Condition Disclosure Act (RPCDA). While the relocation services firm was the statutorily-defined seller, it was not an owner-occupant and was not privy to any actual knowledge about the home's condition. The seller complied with the RPCDA by giving the buyers the disclosure form provided by the prior owner/occupants rather than delivering its form which would have answered each query with "unknown." RPCDA § 835 limits a seller's liability for erroneous, inaccurate or omitted information supplied to the purchaser as a required disclosure if the error, inaccuracy or omission was not within the seller's actual knowledge. There was no evidence that the seller had any actual knowledge of these defects.

Moore v. Williams, 2008 OK CIV APP 76, 192 P.3d 1275 (2008) . The real estate licensees had a duty to provide the sellers with the statutorily required disclosure form. Buyers may pursue a remedy when a real estate licensee has actual knowledge of a defect prior to the acceptance of an offer, and the defect was not included in the seller's disclosure statement and the real estate licensee does not reveal the defect to the buyer. Buyers cannot recover damages from a licensee on a mere showing that the licensee used an outdated version of the disclosure form.

Green v. Jacobson, 1998 OK CIV APP 121, 963 P.2d 26 (1998) . The court summarily rejected prospective buyers' contention the trial court erred in denying their claim under the Residential Property Condition Disclosure Act. The Act's sole and exclusive remedy for its violation is "an action for actual damages, including the cost of repairing the defect, suffered by the purchaser as a result of a defect existing in the property as of the date of acceptance by seller of an offer to purchase." Since the buyers did not purchase the subject property, they may obtain no relief under the Act.

Oregon

Archambault v. Ogier, 194 Ore. App. 361, 95 P.3d 257 (2004) . An earnest money agreement specified that the property to be sold is in a certain condition. The buyers sued the sellers alleging breach of contract. Under the doctrine of merger, the deed supersedes the contract as to all provisions made pursuant to the agreement's terms. Contractual provisions that are not included in the deed and do not affect the title, possession, quantity, or emblements of the land are deemed collateral to the promise to convey. The alleged breaches involved collateral terms because they did not affect the title, possession, quantity, or emblements of the property. The collateral terms are merged into the deed only if the parties intended the deed to be the final memorial of their agreement. Since the deed did not mention merger, and there was no other evidence that the parties intended to extinguish their contractual rights or obligations not expressly embodied in the deed, the record on summary judgment does not support affirming the trial court on the alternative ground that the parties' contractual rights have merged into the deed.

Rathgeber v. James Hemenway, Inc., 176 Or. App. 135, 30 P.3d 1200 (2001), aff'd and remanded, 335 Or. 404, 69 P.3d 710 (2003). Because Or. Rev. Stat. § 696.820 required the agent to provide the Disclosure Regarding Agency Relationships form to buyers, the contents of this form do not constitute an actionable representation under Or. Rev. Stat. § 646.608(1)(e).

Cameron v. Harshbarger, 165 Ore. App. 353, 998 P.2d 221 (1999). The court did not agree with the statement that the voluntary disclosure statement made pursuant to Or. Rev. Stat. § 105.465(2) can create a special relationship between the parties that otherwise would not exist.

Seth v. Wilson, 62 Or. App. 814, 662 P.2d 745 (1983). A broker was not negligent for failing to inform purchaser that property was a solitary legal unit when broker knew or had reason to know that property appeared to purchaser to consist of four separate parcels.

Pennsylvania

Bortz v. Noon, 556 Pa. 489, 729 A.2d 555 (Pa. 1999). A broker cannot be liable for the misrepresentation of its agent, innocently made, under circumstances where the agent had no reason to know that her statement was false, and the agent had no duty to verify the accuracy of the third party report.

Youndt v. First National Bank of Port Allegany, 868 A.2d 539, 2005 PA Super 42 (2005). Whether a duty exists to disclose is a question of law. The first requirement of this duty is that the undisclosed fact be one that is basic to the transaction.

Blumenstock v. Gibson, 811 A.2d 1029, 2002 PA Super 339 (2002), appeal denied, 573 Pa. 714, 828 A.2d 349 (2003). The sellers' disclosure statement provided that the averments in the statement were "not a warranty of any kind" by the sellers or by their agent. A disclosure statement is limited in scope to disclosing material defects which are defined as a problem with the property or any portion of it that would have a significant adverse impact on the value of the residential real property or that involves an unreasonable risk to people on the land. A seller's agent may enforce the integration clause and any other exculpatory provision in the written agreement between a seller and a buyer.

Skurnowicz v. Lucci, 798 A.2d 788, 2002 PA Super 140 (2002). The court agreed with the trial court's conclusion that the sellers made a material misrepresentation. When asked on the sellers' property disclosure statement whether they knew of "any past or present drainage problems affecting the property," the sellers answered no. The extensive testimony citing past and present flooding on the premises demonstrates that this response was an affirmative misrepresentation. This misrepresentation violated the Unfair Trade Practices Act.

Anderson v. Harper, 424 Pa. Super. 161, 622 A.2d 319 (1993), alloc. den., 535 Pa. 659, 634 A.2d 222 (1993). The sellers' attempts to correct the septic system problems without obtaining the required permits and inspections placed on sellers a duty to disclose the existence of the problems, the nature of their repairs, and the fact that they were done without permits or inspections. The buyers should have been advised that there was an absorption problem and that the seller had attempted to correct this themselves. Armed with this knowledge, the buyers would then have been responsible to detect the nature of the problem and the need for any further repairs. The buyers were entitled to recover damages from sellers.

Sevin v. Kelshaw, 417 Pa. Super. 1, 611 A.2d 1232 (1992) . Absent a request for information, the seller and broker had no duty to disclose the existence or location of a waterline easement.

Smith v. Renaut, 387 Pa. Super. 299, 564 A.2d 188 (1989) . The broker may be found liable to a purchaser where the broker misrepresents or conceals a material fact.

In re Humphrey's Pest Control Co., Inc., 80 B.R. 687 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 1987) . The failure of the seller and the broker to disclose to the purchasers the existence of an exterminating service report detailing termite damage constituted fraudulent conduct.

Rhode Island

Stebbins v. Wells, 818 A.2d 711 (R.I. 2003) . The buyer had alleged numerous causes of action against the seller and the agents, including negligent omission, negligence, breach of fiduciary duty, and a private cause of action for damages under the Real-Estate Sales Disclosure Act (R.I. Gen. Laws tit. 5, ch. 20.8) for failing to disclose the presence of severe erosion. No right existed to file a private suit for civil damages under this Act so summary judgment on that count was proper. If disclosable defects were within the agents' personal knowledge, and the agents knew or should have known that the buyer was acting under a misapprehension concerning facts which would be important to the buyer and could probably affect the buyers's decision, an alleged breach of that duty could be the basis for a negligence claim or a negligent omission claim, and, in the case of a buyer's own agent, a breach-of-fiduciary-duty claim.

Stebbins v. Wells, 766 A.2d 369 (R.I. 2001) . Because erosion occurs naturally on waterfront properties, its mere existence cannot be considered a defect for purposes of the disclosure statute. However, if the specific erosion was far more severe than ordinary erosion it would rise to the level of being a defect for purposes of the disclosure statute, a genuine issue of material fact regarding whether the severity of the erosion amounts to a disclosable defect. Summary judgment for the seller and buyer's broker was reversed.

Hotel Assocs., LLC v. HMS Assocs. Ltd. Partnership, 2004 R.I. Super. LEXIS 44 (2004) . The exception to the rule of caveat emptor for passive concealment of a material defect which applies to residential real estate transactions in Rhode Island, does not apply to Rhode Island commercial real estate transactions.

South Carolina

Darby v. Furman Co., 334 S.C. 343, 513 S.E.2d 848 (S.C. 1999) . The broker failed to disclose that he was the purchaser. The broker admitted that he did not make any disclosure or obtain a written waiver. The seller was entitled to recover the commission she had paid the broker.

Chastain v. Hiltabidle, 381 S.C. 508, 673 S.E.2d 826 (S.C. Ct. App. 2009) reh'g denied, 2009 S.C. App. LEXIS 462 (Mar. 24, 2009) . A real estate licensee does not have a duty to inspect or investigate the physical condition of property for the purpose of confirming or denying statements made by a seller in a disclosure statement. The Legislature placed the duty of performing such an inspection or investigation squarely on the shoulders of the buyer.

McLaughlin v. Williams, 379 S.C. 451, 665 S.E.2d 667 (S.C. Ct. App. 2008) . While the property owner has a duty to make disclosures, a real estate licensee may still be liable to the buyer when the licensee knows that the Residential Property Disclosure Statement is incomplete or misleading. However, this possible liability to the buyer was not adverse to judgment in the licensee's favor because the buyer could not rely upon the incomplete disclosure statement because he was in possession of a home inspection report and a termite and moisture inspection report which disclosed the moisture and termite problems.

Harrington v. Mikell, 321 S.C. 518, 469 S.E.2d 627 (S.C. Ct. App. 1996) . The son of the owner listed his mother's property believing that he held a power of attorney from his mother. The son did not have a power of attorney and was later appointed conservator. In this position the son repudiated a sales contract which had been entered into. The prospective buyers sued the agent and broker alleging negligent misrepresentation. The court held that the defendants had a duty not to defraud the buyer, however, it refused to hold that the defendants had a general duty to verify the information concerning the power of attorney.

South Dakota

Fuller v. Croston, 725 N.W.2d 600, 2006 SD 110 (2006) . Reliance on the seller's disclosure statement is not necessary for a real estate licensee to be held liable for the seller's false statement. A licensee can be held liable for a client's misrepresentations if the licensee knew of the misrepresentation.

Saiz v. Horn, 668 N.W.2d 332, 2003 SD 94 (2003) . After the home purchase, the buyers found substantial defects and learned that the seller had previously given other potential buyers a disclosure statement revealing these defects. The court ruled that the agent had a duty to inform buyers that seller was legally required to provide a disclosure statement.

Fisher v. Kahler, 641 N.W.2d 122, 2002 S.D. 30 (2002) . "It has been well accepted, not only in South Dakota but throughout the United States, that a seller's agent has no duty to ensure that a buyer's interests are well served."

Parmely v. Hildebrand, 630 N.W.2d 509, 2001 S.D. 83 (2001) . While the sellers are required to disclose the property's condition, there is no statutory authority to further require them to disclose possible remedies to those defects.

Parmely v. Hildebrand, 603 N.W.2d 713, 1999 S.D. 157 (1999) . Merely putting a buyer on notice of defects is not sufficient. Known defects must be revealed truthfully and in good faith.

Lucero v. Van Wie, 598 N.W.2d 893, 1999 S.D. 109 (1999) . The buyer initiated the sale and was familiar with the property she desired to purchase. The buyer entered into an enforceable contract and purchased the property "as is," the result of which was to waive disclosure requirements of S.D. Codified Laws § 43-4-38 through § 43-4-44.

Engelhart v. Kramer, 570 N.W.2d 550, 1997 S.D. 124 (1997) . A disclosure statement does not create a warranty by the seller to the buyer as to the property's condition, sellers are not strictly liable under the disclosure statute, a negligent or intentional failure to disclose known defects is required before liability attaches, the doctrine of caveat emptor has been abandoned in favor of full and complete disclosure of defects of which the seller is aware.

Tennessee

Odom v. Oliver, 2009 Tenn. App. LEXIS 103 (Tenn. Ct. App. Mar. 17, 2009) appeal denied, 2009 Tenn. LEXIS 814 (Nov. 23, 2009) . The seller's failed to disclose that the home's exterior was constructed of logs. The logs had been covered with vinyl siding on the outside and sheetrock on the inside. The buyers argued that the house's nature as a log home was a material fact that the sellers had a duty to disclose. This is an issue of material fact that is best determined by the trier of fact.

Orndorff v. Calahan, 2008 Tenn. App. LEXIS 603 (Oct. 9, 2008) . The sellers were liable to the buyers for the cost of repairing a faulty renovation that the sellers had improperly performed. The sellers failed to disclose the lack of permits and improper work which failed to comply with the applicable building code on the statutorily required disclosure form required under Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-5-201 et seq. The buyers were also awarded attorney's fees and costs.

McRae v. Hagaman, 2006 Tenn. App. LEXIS 550 (Aug. 22, 2006) . Both a buyer and a seller's broker can be liable for a portion of fault in a negligent misrepresentation case. One of the buyers was found to have been 25 percent at fault and the seller's broker was found to be 75 percent at fault for not discovering that a portion of the property they thought was part of the sale was not included.

Weaver v. v. McCarter, 2006 Tenn. App. LEXIS 369 (June 6, 2006) . Real estate agents owe a duty of loyalty to their clients. This duty of loyalty includes an obligation by the agent to make full and complete disclosure of facts that will benefit the agent's client.

McRae v. Hagaman, 2004 Tenn. App. LEXIS 693 (2004) . A seller's real estate agent has a duty to use reasonable care in determining that all representations made are true.

Chadwick v. Spence, 2004 Tenn. App. LEXIS 92 (2004) . A violation of Tenn. Code Ann. § 66-5-208(b) of the Tennessee Residential Property Disclosure Act creates no independent cause of action on behalf of the purchaser. An owner who fails to provide a disclosure statement is subject to any other cause of action available in law or equity against an owner for misrepresentation or failure to disclose material facts regarding the subject property.

Gurley v. Hickory Withe Partners, L.P., 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 674 (2003) . The buyers and seller entered into a sales contract for a lot. The buyers knew that lot lines were subject to change. The buyers were presented with a deed that incorporated the metes and bounds description which they accepted. The seller did not have a duty to disclose any change to the buyers.

Anderson v. Warren, 2001 Tenn. App. LEXIS 958 (2001) . Although the seller testified that he had no part in the preparation of the "Home Features" brochure, the seller was responsible for its contents. This brochure misrepresented many features of the home. The court affirmed finding that the sellers had fraudulently misrepresented the property's condition.

Strange v. Peterson, 2001 Tenn. App. LEXIS 23 (2001) . The one-time occurrence of a water-filled hole in the crawlspace was not enough to amount to "water leakage" or "accumulation." This occurrence did not amount to "previous flooding" or "improper drainage" which would require disclosure.

Harjes v. Russell, 1999 Tenn. App. LEXIS 316 (1999) , appeal denied, 1999 Tenn. LEXIS 646 (1999) . The buyer's action was not barred by one-year statute of limitations of the Residential Property Disclosures Act. Although the disclosure statement was relied upon as evidence of the seller's misrepresentations, the applicable portion of their complaint was based upon common law fraud and misrepresentation. If the gravamen of the complaint is a claim for damages to real property the three-year limitations period set forth in Tenn. Code Ann. § 28-3-105(1) controls.

Buford v. Cunningham, 1999 Tenn. App. LEXIS 335 (1999) . The buyers knew of a crawl space water problem. Given the sequence of events and the parties' contract, as a matter of law, the buyers cannot now establish reliance on the assertion by the seller in the Tennessee Residential Property Condition Disclosure document that she was not aware of any "... flooding, drainage, or grading problems." The buyers knew of the problems and attempted to provide for their remedy.

Fuller v. Feingold, 1999 Tenn. App. LEXIS 275 (1999) . The sellers executed a Tennessee Residential Property Condition Disclosure statement prepared by either the sellers' agent or buyers' agent which contained a checked box indicating the property had a current termite contract. No termite contract existed on the residence at closing. The buyers took no action to have any termite contract assigned to them, or to pay for the renewal of a termite contract. Evidence established that a termite contract is not a guarantee that no termites exist in the residence, therefore the notation on the disclosure statement indicating the existence of a current termite contract has no bearing on the issue of fraud or misrepresentation as to the existence of termites.

Gage v. Seaman, 1999 Tenn. App. LEXIS 114 (1999) . The buyers presented no proof that the agent had actual knowledge of the septic system problems. The buyers signed the Disclosure Statement, asserting that there were no defects in the property which would materially affect the value or desirability of the property. The proof was undisputed that the agent had no actual knowledge of the problem. The court refused to find that the agent had constructive knowledge of the problems due to the site's physical characteristics.

Gray v. Boyle Inv. Co., 803 S.W.2d 678 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1990) , rehearing denied, 1990 Tenn. App. LEXIS 687 (1990) . The broker and agent breached duty to purchaser by failing to disclose foreclosure proceedings in progress against the subject property.

Texas

Sims v. Century 21 Capital Team, Inc., 2006 Tex. App. LEXIS 7990 (Sept. 7, 2006) . A real estate licensee is bound to use Texas Real Estate Commission form contracts in most transactions pursuant to 22 Tex. Admin. Code § 537.11(b). The licensee is prohibited from giving advice or opinions as to the legal effect of any of the form contract's provisions.

Garza v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc., 2004 Tex. App. LEXIS 7590 (2004) , review denied, 2005 Tex. LEXIS 80 (2005) . The disclosure notice required by Tex. Prop. Code Ann. § 5.008 is a disclosure by the seller only, and not by the seller and broker regardless of whether the broker has also signed the disclosure notice. The listing broker and realty company could not be held liable for any alleged misrepresentations or nondisclosures in the seller's disclosure notice.

Bynum v. Prudential Residential Services., L.P., 129 S.W.3d 781 (Tex. Ct. App. 2004) , review denied, 2004 Tex. LEXIS 856 (2004) . The buyers, individually and as next friends of their minor children, sued inspection service, engineering company, remodeler, and sellers claiming breach of contract, breach of express and implied warranties, violation of deed restrictions, violations of the Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act, Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 17.41, et seq., fraud, violations of Tex. Bus. & Com. Code Ann. § 27.01, negligence, negligence per se, negligent misrepresentation, failure to provide disclosures required by Tex. Prop. Code Ann. § 5.008, and strict products liability. The court held that an "as is" clause was valid. There was no evidence that sellers knew that they had remodeled without necessary permits, causing the mold. There was no authority for the suggestion that buyers' children would not be bound by the contract terms such that the "as is" clause would not apply to them. There was no action for a breach of an implied warranty of habitability because the sellers and entities were not the builders.

Sherman v. Elkowitz, 130 S.W.3d 316 (Tex. Ct. App. 2004) . The buyers sued, contending sellers, the listing agent and sellers' realty company failed to disclose that the sellers once sued the previous owner for failing to disclose defects in the home. These defects were the same defects the buyers say they discovered after the sale. No evidence showed that defendants misrepresented the property or concealed defects. The three-page notice the agent provided was printed by the Texas Association of Realtors(R) and appeared to be substantially similar to the form of the notice in Tex. Prop. Code Ann. § 5.008. The notice made clear that it was the sellers' disclosure. The statement that the agent had no reason to believe that the sellers' disclosures were false or inaccurate was not an affirmative representation by the agent of the property's condition. There was no evidence that the agent had any reason to believe the information provided by the sellers was false or inaccurate regarding defects in the property. The court held that, as a matter of law, defendants were not required to disclose the earlier lawsuit, as it was dismissed several years before the sellers put the property on the market. If the legislature had intended for prior lawsuits to be listed, it could have included a phrase indicating that. The notice required disclosure only of pending lawsuits, because the notice was seeking current information.

Robbins v. Capozzi, 100 S.W.3d 18 (Tex. Ct. App. 2002) . A real estate seller has no duty to disclose material facts which would be discoverable by the buyer in the exercise of ordinary care and due diligence.

Marshall v. Kusch, 84 S.W.3d 781 (Tex. Ct. App. 2002) , review denied, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 380 (2003) , motion for rehearing on petition for review denied, 2003 Tex. LEXIS 662 (2003) . The original owner sold the property after animals were killed by an anthrax outbreak. The original owner represented that there was no anthrax on the property in the presence of a real estate broker. The ranch was sold to a real estate investment company, which then sold it to the buyer. After anthrax broke out, the buyer sued the original owner. Since the misrepresentation was not communicated to the buyer, there was no evidence the property's original owner made an affirmative misrepresentation that could have influenced the buyer in purchasing the property. Without evidence that the property's original owner was connected with the sale to the buyer, the Deceptive Trade Practices Act claim failed as a matter of law.

Larsen v. Carlene Langford & Associates, Inc., 41 S.W.3d 245 (Tex. App. 2001) , petition for review denied (Jul. 26, 2001). The validity of an "as is" agreement is determined in light of the parties' sophistication, the terms of the "as is" agreement, whether the "as is" clause is freely negotiated, whether it was an arm's length transaction, and whether there was a knowing misrepresentation or concealment of a known fact. The record supported the conclusion that the contract was negotiated by parties of equal bargaining strength in an arm's length transaction. The statement made by the seller's licensee referencing the seller's disclosure form that the house needed some leveling was not a misrepresentation of material fact because even if the buyers attached significance to this statement, there is no evidence whatsoever in the record that the licensee knew or had any reason to suspect that the seller's disclosure form was not correct, or that the seller knew the reason for the cracks.

Fernandez v. Schultz, 15 S.W.3d 648 (Tex. App. 2000) . An independent inspection does not always supersede a seller's misrepresentations as a producing cause of damages to the buyer. Instead the seller's misrepresentations may be one of several producing causes of the damages suffered.

Kessler v. Fanning, 953 S.W.2d 515 (Tex. App. 1997) , no writ. The Property Condition Disclosure Statement indicated that the sellers were unaware of any improper drainage or previous structure repair on the property. The terms "improper drainage" or "previous structural repair" are not vague. The terms clearly pertain to a past or current condition of the property at the time of the sale. The court affirmed judgment for the buyers under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act.

Sanchez v. Guerrero, 885 S.W.2d 487 (Tex. App. 1994) . The agent failed to disclose that house's prior occupant had molested children in the house. The buyers sued alleging that the broker had violated the Deceptive Trade Practices Act for failing to disclose this information. The jury's finding that the Act had been violated was supported by evidence that the buyers had asked the agent who the previous owner had been and had told agent that the identity of the previous occupant was important to them.

Utah

Salt Lake County v. Western Dairymen Cooperative, Inc., 2002 UT 39, 48 P. 3d 910 (Utah 2002) An agency disclosure statement can be a valid contract which would support a contract action subject to a statute of limitations longer than that applied to tort actions. The parties can create a contractual duty that parallels a common law obligation.

Hermansen v. Tasulis, 2002 UT 52, 48 P.3d 235 (Utah 2002) . Though not occupying a fiduciary relationship with prospective purchasers, a real estate agent hired by the seller is expected to be honest, ethical, and competent and is answerable at law for his or her statutory duty to the public. Real estate agents and sellers are often unaware of latent defects in the home at the time of sale. The fact that the agent has a duty to disclose known defects to potential purchasers does not mean that the seller's agent is liable for all subsequent problems. The purchasers must also demonstrate that the agent misrepresented, or had prior knowledge of, defects in the home. Only when the purchaser can establish that the agent had both the duty to disclose and knowledge of the defects is recovery appropriate.

Mitchell v. Christensen, 2001 UT 80, 31 P.3d 572 (Utah 2001) . Summary judgment for the sellers was reversed. The sellers had a legal duty to disclose swimming pool leaks prior to the sale of their property. Assuming it is determined on remand that the sellers knew of the existence of the leaks, swimming pool leaks could not have been discovered through reasonable care.

Dugan v. Jones, 615 P.2d 1239 (Utah 1980) . The rule of caveat emptor does not apply to those dealing with licensed real estate agent.

Vermont

Vastano v. Killington Valley Real Estate, 182 Vt. 550, 929 A.2d 720, 2007 VT 33 (2007) A real estate agent's failure to inform purchasers about the ongoing environmental monitoring of a well for gasoline contamination constituted a material omission as a matter of law and a violation of the Consumer Fraud Act (Vt. Stat. tit. 9, §§ 2451 to 2480n).

Carter v. Gugliuzzi, 168 Vt. 48, 716 A.2d 17 (1998) . The knowledge of broker's agent's supervisor regarding high wind risks on property being sold was properly imputable to the broker. The broker had a statutory duty to disclose all material facts regardless of the source of the knowledge. This rule reflects the reality that a broker's business consists of acquiring and conveying information about the community, neighborhood conditions, comparable properties, and other local factors that may affect the value, marketing and sale of property.

Virginia

Norris v. Mitchell, 255 Va. 235, 495 S.E.2d 809 (1998) . Under the circumstances of this case, the sellers of residential property were not required to disclose to the purchasers the contents of a public document describing a restriction on the use of the property being sold.

Washington

Svendsen v. Stock, 143 Wash. 2d 546, 23 P.3d 455 (2001) . The seller disclosure statute precludes an action under the Consumer Protection Act (CPA) against an agent or broker when the claim for fraudulent concealment arises directly from the completion of the disclosure statement. However, if the broker or agent's fraudulent concealment was separate and apart from the seller's completion of the disclosure statement, a plaintiff can establish the elements of an independent cause of action against a broker or agent under the CPA.

Bloor v. Fritz, 2008 Wash. App. LEXIS 743 (April 1, 2008) . The agent knew methamphetamine had been manufactured on the property. The agent violated his duty to disclose known material facts about the property under Wash. Rev. Code § 18.86.030. The trial court did not err in concluding that the agent negligently misrepresented a material fact in failing to disclose this illegal drug manufacturing. Listing and showing the property without disclosing its illegal drug manufacturing history could deceive members of the public, thus the agent violated the Washington Consumer Protection Act. The court ordered a rescission of the real estate purchase and sale agreement. To restore the buyers to their pre-contract position, the sellers had to pay the $ 149,000 debt together with the unpaid interest that actually accrued, penalties, and foreclosure costs that the lender assessed against the buyers.

Brown v. Johnson, 109 Wn. App. 56, 34 P.3d 1233 (2001) . A prudent home buyer should hire a reputable inspector prior to purchasing. But the failure of a buyer to obtain an adequate professional inspection should not relieve a seller of liability for failing to disclose material defects, which she had both a common law and statutory duty to disclose. The trial court erred in limiting the buyer's attorney fee award. The buyer was entitled to fees because the purchase and sale agreement provided for attorney fees to the prevailing party in the event of a dispute.

Pacific Northwest Life Ins. Co. v. Turnbull, 51 Wash. App. 692, 754 P.2d 1262 (1988) , review denied, 111 Wash. 2d 1014 (1988) . The broker had duty to employ reasonable degree of effort and expertise to confirm or refute seller's information which broker knew was pivotal to the transaction from the buyer's perspective.

West Virginia

Terra Firma Co. v. Morgan, 674 S.E.2d 190, 2008 W. Va. LEXIS 119 (W. Va. 2008) . The West Virginia Real Estate License Law requires that a licensee disclose who they are representing in every transaction using a form prescribed by the West Virginia Real Estate Commission. The agent has a duty to disclose all facts known to the agent, which materially affect the value or desirability of the property. The buyer's agent disclosed that he was acting on behalf of the buyer. He violated no duty when he failed to disclose the identity of his client or his client's intended use of the land. The sellers never notified the agent that these facts were material to their decision to sell.

Kidd v. Mull, 215 W. Va. 151, 595 S.E.2d 308 (2004) . An agent represented that certain commercial property had water access. A title search would have revealed the inaccuracy of the agents' statements. The court held that this did not defeat the lessee's fraud claim and a grant of summary judgment in favor of the lessor's agent and lessor was wrong. The doctrine of constructive notice will not defeat a cause of action for fraud or negligent misrepresentation where the entity asserting the cause of action did not undertake independent investigation to ascertain the truth of the allegedly fraudulent representation.

Logue v. Flanagan, 213 W. Va. 552, 584 S.E.2d 186 (2003) . The buyers argued that there was evidence showing that the sellers knew about the defective septic system and conveyed the property without disclosing this knowledge. In a per curiam opinion, the court held that the trial court erred in relying on the caveat emptor doctrine, and summary judgment was improper. The fact that the property was purchased "as is" and without any warranties did not bar the cause of action. Sellers arguably knew of the true conditions of the septic system and failed to disclose this information to the buyers.

Darrisaw v. Old Colony Realty Co., 202 W. Va. 23, 501 S.E.2d 187 (1997) (summary judgement in favor of seller and broker reversed in part, a prior foundation repair had not been disclosed to the buyers, while no actual misrepresentations were made and no evidence of defect existed at the time of the sale, there still existed a genuine issue of material fact regarding whether a condition affecting the value of the home existed, precluding the grant of summary judgement).

Thomson v. McGinnis, 195 W. Va. 465, 465 S.E.2d 922 (1995) . Summary judgment for the seller's agent was improper where evidence showed that the agent retained control over the actions of an individual who inspected a furnace. The buyer also had alleged a cause of action for negligent hiring. Fraud in the procurement of an agreement vitiates benefits under contract.

Teter v. Old Colony Co., 190 W. Va. 711, 441 S.E.2d 728 (1994) . The broker had no independent duty to inspect and uncover latent defects on residential premises.

Wisconsin

Wangard Partners, Inc. v. Graf, 294 Wis. 2d 507, 719 N.W.2d 523, 2006 WI App 115 (2006) . Wis. Stat. § 452.135 requires disclosures regarding the brokerage relationship. The disclosures can be made in a separate form; it is not necessary for the disclosures to be in the parties' agency or listing agreement.

Eddy v. B.S.T.V., Inc., 280 Wis. 2d 508, 696 N.W.2d 265, 2005 WI App 78 (2005) , review denied, 2005 WI 134, 282 Wis. 2d 722, 700 N.W.2d 274 (2005) . Wis. Stat. § 452.133 establishes the duties of real estate brokers to not only their clients but to all parties to a transaction.

Huxhold, v. Campbell, 273 Wis. 2d 785, 680 N.W.2d 833, 2004 WI App 109 (2004) , review denied, 2004 WI 138, 276 Wis. 2d 28, 689 N.W.2d 56 (2004) . A broker was denied recovery of a commission because the broker failed to provide the statutorily required written agency disclosure form. The court stated that to allow the broker to commit this violation, and then seek compensation for his prohibited services, was contrary to the legislative intent under any reasonable view.

Stathus v. Horst, 260 Wis. 2d 166, 659 N.W.2d 165, 2003 WI App 28 (2003) . The home's basement had a seepage problem and an outside spring water problem. For two years during the listing agreement sellers noted these problems on the real estate condition report. During this period, agent informed sellers that the number one reason why the home was not selling was the "leaky basement." Sellers hired a new agent, but, when the residence was re-listed, the sellers failed to disclose both the seepage in the basement and the existence of the spring under the front lawn, which was causing water to run over the sidewalk. Trial court concluded that this willful concealment was of such a nature to warrant trebling the damages. Regarding award of attorney fees, trial court award was based on an hourly rate multiplied by the hours spent. However, attorney agreed to be compensated on a contingent basis, not total hours. The appellate court concluded that the award of attorney fees was in error, as it was not based on the fees that the sellers actually incurred, and the fees should have been reasonable.

Johnson v. Neuville, 226 Wis. 2d 365, 595 N.W.2d 100 (Wis. Ct. App. 1999) . A purchaser's claim that the broker was negligent in failing to verify the existence of an access easement, and structuring the transactions in a way that limited the purchaser's ability to verify the easement stated the basis for liability separate from the broker's duty to make disclosures.

Grube v. Daun, 173 Wis. 2d 30, 496 N.W.2d 106 (Wis. Ct. App. 1992) , review denied. A broker has duty to conduct reasonably competent and diligent investigation to determine existence of material facts adverse to transaction, and must disclose such facts to buyer in writing in timely manner.

Wyoming

Roney v. B.B.C. Corp., 2004 WY 113, 98 P.3d 196 (2004) . A real estate agent substantially complied with the brokerage relationship disclosure law.

Hulse v. BHJ, Inc., 2003 WY 75, 71 P.3d 262 (2003) . The buyers purchased property for commercial use. Buyers alleged that seller's broker failed to disclose that the easement providing the only access to the property prohibited commercial use of the easement. Buyers alleged that broker failed to exercise care, skill, and diligence that those in the profession would ordinarily exercise under similar circumstances. On remand, broker filed a second motion for summary judgment on the statute of limitations, which was granted. The court affirmed, holding that a professional negligence claim against a real estate broker under Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 33-28-303 was not controlled by the four-year statute of limitations imposed by Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 1-3-105(a)(iv)(c) but was instead governed by the two-year statute of limitations in Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 1-3-107.

Alexander v. Meduna, 2002 WY 83, 47 P.3d 206 (2002) . The sellers misrepresented the condition of their home. The sellers acknowledged the duty to complete the property condition statement honestly and fully, yet they made an affirmative false statement. The trial court unquestionably determined there was clear and convincing evidence of fraud because the sellers knew of the defects and purposely made misrepresentations regarding the property condition to induce the buyers, to their significant detriment, to make a purchase offer and enter into a purchase contract.

Sundown, Inc. v. Pearson Real Estate Co., Inc., 8 P.3d 324 (Wyo. 2000) . Brochure statements are opinions that are not actionable under the law. The failure to disclose the existence and the effect of mining agreements in the brochure and the map are not fraudulent unless the statements violate the accepted standards in the real estate field as provided by Wyoming statute. Wyoming does not recognize a claim for negligent nondisclosure.

Snyder v. Lovercheck, 992 P.2d 1079 (Wyo. 1999) . The buyer is not precluded from asserting a claim for fraudulent misrepresentation against the seller and agents by either the merger or disclaimer clauses in the sales contract. However, the buyer cannot assert a claim for negligent misrepresentation where the contract contains a disclaimer provision stating that the buyer is not relying upon any representation of the seller or seller's agents.

84 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 4.syn

§ 4.syn Synopsis to Chapter 4: The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

§ 4.01 Introduction

§ 4.02 Requirement that Title Close--Majority Rule

[1] Closing Not Required

[2] Effect of Contractual Provisions

[3] Financial Ability of the Purchaser

§ 4.03 Requirement that Title Close--Minority Rule

[1] Closing Required: Dobbs v. Johnson

[a] Introduction

[b] The Facts

[c] The Law

[d] Effect on Contractual Provisions

[e] Critique

[2] Dobbs in Other Jurisdictions

[a] Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen

[b] Massachusetts: Tristram's Landing, Inc. v. Wait

[c] Nebraska: Cornett v. Nathan

[d] Oregon: Brown v. Grimm

[e] Idaho: Margaret H. Wayne Trust v. Lipsky

§ 4.04 Excusing the Condition of Title Closing

[1] In General: Vendor's Default

[2] Effect of Vendor's Unmarketable Title

[3] Effect of Failure or Refusal of Contracting Party's Spouse to Sign Sales Contract or Deed

§ 4.05 Effect of Licensing Laws on Broker's Right to Compensation

[1] Introduction

[2] Isolated Transactions

[3] Finders or Middlemen

[4] Time of Procurement of License

[5] Where Broker Is Licensed But Associates or Employees Are Unlicensed

[6] Corporations

[7] Partnerships

[8] Conflict of Laws Issues

[9] Business Brokers--Where Real Property Is Included in Sale of Business

[10] Disciplinary Actions Resulting from Commission Disputes

[11] Can Fees Paid to an Unlicensed Broker Be Recovered?

[12] Employees of Developers May Need to Be Licensed to Recover Commission

[13] Assignment of a Commission

[14] Substantial Compliance Doctrine

[15] Out-of-State Cooperating Brokers

[16] Location Where the Brokerage Services Are Performed

[17] Consulting Fees Versus Commissions

§ 4.06 Effect of the Brokerage Agreement

- [1] General Considerations
- [2] Open Listings
- [3] Exclusive Listings
- [4] Exchanges Subject to Commission
- [5] Measure of Broker's Recovery
 - [a] Generally
 - [b] Possible Limitations on the Broker's Right to Compensation--The Interactive Properties Decision
 - [c] Customary Commission Rate
 - [d] Brokers Are Not Entitled to a Double Recovery
- [6] Who May Sue to Collect a Commission
- [7] Seller's Duties
- [8] Agreements Which Violate Public Policy
- [9] Liquidated Damages

§ 4.07 Requirement That the Broker Be the Procuring Cause of the Transaction

- [1] In General
- [2] Rule Illustrated: Competing Brokers
- [3] Tracing Connection Between Broker's Efforts and Ultimate Sale
- [4] Evidence of Procuring Cause
- [5] Essential Terms

§ 4.08 Effect of Breach of Fiduciary Duty

§ 4.09 Effect of Eminent Domain

§ 4.10 Broker's Rights Against the Purchaser

- [1] The Traditional Rule: Purchaser Not Liable
- [2] Exceptional Situations
- [3] The Holding of Ellsworth Dobbs

[4] The Dobbs Holding Qualified: Rothman Realty Corp. v. Bereck

§ 4.11 A Broker's Voluntary Reduction or Modification of Commission

§ 4.11A Other Theories of Recovery

[1] Quantum Meruit

[2] Fraud

[3] Tortious Interference

[4] Civil Conspiracy

[5] Implied-in-Fact Contract

[6] Equitable Estoppel

[7] Promissory Estoppel

§ 4.11B Broker's Liens

§ 4.11C Punitive Damages

§ 4.11D Broker Rebates

§ 4.12 Arbitration

[1] Realtor(R) Code of Ethics

[2] Duty to Arbitrate

[3] Arbitration Procedures

[4] The Arbitration Award

[5] Judicial Enforcement

§ 4.12A Broker Disputes Over Commissions

§ 4.13 Illustrative Forms

[1] Introduction

[2] Complaint in Action for Inducing Breach of Contract

[a] Complaint in Action for Tortious Interference With Broker's Contract--Another Form

[b] Answer and Third-Party Complaint in Action For Tortious Interference With Broker's Contract

[3] Complaint in Action Where Principal Repudiates Before Written Agreement of Sale Executed

[4] Illustrative Opening Statement to Jury in Action for Broker's Commission (Globerman v. Lederer)

[a] Plaintiff's Opening Statement

[b] Defendant's Opening Statement

[5] Illustrative Requests by Plaintiff to Charge--Action for Broker's Commission

85 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Scope

Scope

SCOPE

A perusal of case law involving real estate brokers will quickly highlight that many cases involve brokers suing customers who have decided not to pay brokers for their services. As discussed in Chapter 4, numerous factors affect a broker's right to compensation (§ 4.01). There are instances when a broker is entitled to a commission even though the transaction never closes. For example, a majority of courts will allow a broker to recover a commission when the sale fails to close due to the seller's actions (§ 4.02). However, a substantial minority of courts holds that a successful closing is required as a condition to a broker's right to a commission. The jurisdictions holding this minority position are discussed (§ 4.03). However, even these jurisdictions will under some circumstances excuse the condition of title closing and title closing can be excused under some circumstances even though the listing agreement specifically requires that closing occur before the broker is due a commission (§ 4.04).

Real estate brokers who have legitimately earned commissions may find that they are legally unable to collect if the brokers were unlicensed. Section 4.05 discusses situations in which an unlicensed broker attempts to collect a commission. Chapter 4 also considers the effect of the brokerage agreement upon a broker's right to compensation (§ 4.06).

It is generally held that the broker must be the procuring and efficient cause of the transaction, particularly if the listing agreement is not an exclusive right-to-sell or exclusive agency listing. This general rule and a broker's proof of this causal connection are discussed (§ 4.07). A broker's fiduciary duties and a breach of those duties will affect the broker's right to compensation (§ 4.08) as will an eminent domain taking (§ 4.09).

Normally, the purchaser has no obligation to pay the broker's commission. However, in limited circumstances the broker may have a cause of action against the purchaser (§ 4.10).

Chapter 4 also discusses a broker's voluntary reduction of his or her commission in order to facilitate a sale (§ 4.11) and theories of recovery that generally involve equitable doctrines or tort claims (§ 4.11A). A few states offer brokers the protection of a statutory lien. This protection is also discussed (§ 4.11B).

Although litigation is frequently resorted to by the parties when a commission dispute is involved, the National Association of Realtors(R) and its member boards provide an arbitration system for resolving disputes. This means of alternative dispute resolution is discussed in this chapter (§ 4.12). (Readers are also directed to Chapter 17, Alternative Resolution of Disputes Involving Brokers.)

Chapter 4 concludes with illustrative pleadings and other trial material (§ 4.13) including complaints and opening statements.

86 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.01

§ 4.01 Introduction

Few areas of real estate brokerage law generate as much dispute and litigation as the broker's right to a commission. Principals never see the efforts put in by the broker in the transactions that do not close. If a transaction is consummated quickly and smoothly, the principals may view the broker's efforts as minimal and resent the necessity of paying a commission; they may try to renegotiate or renege on payment. Brokers, on the other hand, frustrated in attempting to bring a deal to fruition, are sometimes tempted to collect a commission from a principal who received no proceeds from which to pay it. Courts of every jurisdiction have had to litigate cases in which a broker seeks to collect a commission where none is owed, or a principal refuses to pay a commission that has been earned. Several states have adopted real estate brokers lien acts to protect brokers from such twelfth-hour renegotiating tactics. These acts grant a lien on property to enable the collection of unpaid commissions without necessitating the time and expense of litigation. n1

There are many factors that come into play in determining a broker's right to a commission. n1.1 These include:

- (1) whether the broker was the procuring cause of the transaction; n2
- (2) whether the broker procured agreement on all essential terms of a bargain; n3
- (3) whether the broker was properly licensed and authorized; n4
- (4) whether or not the broker performed the duties required by the law of agency; n5
- (5) whether the broker met the conditions of the brokerage agreement; n6
- (6) whether the transaction was completed, that is, title closed; n7 and
- (7) if title did not close, whether the broker procured a financially able buyer n8 or, alternatively, whether the seller either "accepted" the prospect or the seller and purchaser entered into a binding contract of sale. n9
- (8) if the licensee meets all the requirements of the real estate licensing act of that licensee's individual state. n10

Generally, the basis for the payment of the brokerage commission is found in the agreement of sale together with the listing agreement. n10.1

Absent unusual circumstances, it is an accepted legal principle that one is bound by one's own contract. n11
Consequently, it is generally no defense to a broker's claim for compensation that the seller did not understand the terms of the listing agreement. n12

Once a broker has earned his or her commission, the broker typically has no duty to mitigate his or her damages. n13
One court in addressing the property owner's mitigation argument stated that there is no way for the broker to minimize a commission to which the broker was entitled for services already rendered and that was already owed pursuant to the parties' brokerage agreement. n14

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325a(c).

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. §§ 44-14-600-44-14-605.

Illinois: 770 Ill. Comp. Stat. 15/10.

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. Real Prop. §§ 14-301-14-313.

Virginia: Va. Code Ann. §§ 55-526-55-527.

New York: N.Y. Lien Law §§ 2, 3, 10.

For a more in-depth discussion of broker's liens, see Streiker, Getting Paid Commissions: A New Power Balance Between Real Estate Brokers, Appraisers and their Clients under the Missouri Commercial Real Estate Brokers' and State Certified Real Estate Appraisers' Lien Act, 63 U.M.K.C. L. Rev. 727 (Summer 1995) .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See, e.g., Bodine v. Barecky, 761 S.W.2d 525 (Tex. Civ. App. 1988) (the Texas Court of Appeals held that a written document, advising purchasers of their right to examine the abstract or the policy of title insurance which was signed by all parties to the purchase of the real estate, was sufficient to meet the requirements of the Texas Real Estate Licensing Act and broker was therefore entitled to bring an action for collection of commission). But see Jones v. Del Anderson & Assocs., 539 S.W.2d 348, 19 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 402 (Tex. 1976) .

(n3)Footnote 2. See § 4.07 below.

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 4.07 below.

(n5)Footnote 4. See § 4.05 and ch. 6 below.

Atlantic Commercial Group, Inc. v. George W. Dunham, 303 N.J. Super 122, 696 A.2d 85 (N.J. 1997) . ("While a broker may not have earned his commission until such time, there is no sound or just reason why a broker who was duly licensed when the brokerage services were performed and completed should not be entitled to a commission for such services simply because the broker was not licensed at the time of closing. To deny the broker the commission in such circumstances is both unfair and inequitable and would lead to a windfall to the seller because the seller would not have to pay a commission which was justly due and owing").

(n6)Footnote 5. See § 4.08 below and ch. 3 above . See also Hoff & Leight, Inc. v. Byler, 62 P.3d 1077, 1078-1079 (Colo. Ct. App. 2002) (transaction-broker held entitled to recover commission even though the broker allegedly did not perform certain statutory duties).

(n7)Footnote 6. See § 4.06 below.

(n8)Footnote 7. See § 4.03 below.

(n9)Footnote 8. See § 4.02 and ch. 5 below.

(n10)Footnote 9. See ch. 5 below.

(n11)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Tex. Occ. Code § 1101.351.

(n12)Footnote 10.1. See Smith v. Coldwell Banker Commercial N.E.R.A., LLC, 91 Conn. App. 360, 364, 880 A.2d 1012, 1015 (2005) .

(n13)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Allied Van Lines, Inc. v. Bratton, 351 So. 2d 344, 347-348 (Fla. 1977) . Exceptions to this rule include situations where a party was prevented from reading the contract or where a party is induced by statements of the other party to refrain from reading the contract.

(n14)Footnote 12. See First Florida Realty & Auction Co., Inc. v. Peacock, 703 So. 2d 1199, 1200 (Fla. App. 1997) . Mathews Partners, LLC v. Lemme, 2009 Tenn. App. LEXIS 667, at *20 (Tenn. Ct. App. Oct. 2, 2009) .

(n15)Footnote 13. See Rudy v. Carter, 2009 Ohio 2729, 2009 Ohio App. LEXIS 2255, at *13 (June 11, 2009) ; Kunkle v. Jaffe, 71 N.E.2d 298, 47 Ohio Law Abs. 77, 1946 Ohio App. LEXIS 731, at *8 (1946) .

(n16)Footnote 14. See Rudy v. Carter, 2009 Ohio 2729, 2009 Ohio App. LEXIS 2255, at *13 (June 11, 2009) .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

87 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.02

§ 4.02 Requirement that Title Close--Majority Rule

[1] Closing Not Required

There are two types of circumstances that may entitle a broker to collect a commission if no closing occurs. In the first situation, sometimes referred to as the "no-written-sales-contract" pattern, the broker produces a prospect who is agreeable to the terms of the seller. At this point, the seller changes his mind, repudiates the transaction and refuses to enter into a written contract. If the jurisdiction requires title to close in order to collect a commission, then there is no recourse. The majority of jurisdictions hold that if a broker has in fact produced a buyer who is ready, able and willing to accept the principal's terms, the broker has earned the commission even though no written sales contract has been executed. n1 The rationale for the rule is that the principal cannot take advantage of his or her own obstruction of the contract process. n2 Some states, however, support the ability of the owner and broker to agree to the contrary. n3

When the parties actually meet to sign a contract, the deal may fall apart because of an inability to resolve open points on which the parties have good faith differences. In that circumstance, the broker has not earned a commission--despite the broker's best efforts, no deal has been made, and the failure to go forward was not a result of the seller's reneging on the agreed-upon terms of the sale. n4

The justice of requiring the seller to pay the broker's commission when the buyer reneges has, however, been questioned in the following manner:

[i]s it just to permit a broker to recover commission from an owner simply because he entered into a contract on mutually agreeable terms with a buyer produced by the broker, when it later develops that the buyer cannot or will not complete the transaction by closing the title? n5

The question posed in this extract from a New Jersey Supreme Court opinion constitutes another frequently litigated issue in contemporary brokerage law. Although the court that posed the question answered: "[w]e do not think so," n6 the great majority of courts over the years have answered, in effect, "we do think so." While the parties are always free to expressly condition the broker's right to a commission on some particular event, such as actual transfer of the deed and payment of the price (closing of title), where the brokerage contract contains no such stated conditions most courts hold that the broker's right to a commission accrues when he or she produces a purchaser who is ready, willing and able to buy the property on the terms set forth in the brokerage contract, or on other terms acceptable to the vendor. n7

As stated by the Utah Supreme Court, in characterizing its holding as the majority rule:

[a]bsent a contractual provision, which conditions the right to a commission on the performance of the buyer, the general rule accepted in Utah is that a broker has earned his commission upon the procuring of a buyer who is ready, willing and able and who is accepted by the seller. The broker is not an insurer of the subsequent performance of the contract and is not deprived of his right to a commission by the failure or refusal of the buyer to perform. n8

In 1934, the Arizona Supreme Court could say that "it is the almost universally accepted rule of law" that:

in the absence of a specific contract to the contrary, when a real estate broker has brought together the parties to a sale or exchange of real estate, and they have agreed fully on the terms and entered into a binding contract for such sale or exchange, his duties are at an end and his commission is fully earned, and it is immaterial that the parties to the contract rescind mutually or that one or the other thereof defaults and the sale or exchange is not fully effected. n9

This case established that even if litigation is required to complete the sale the lawsuit is not the procuring cause of the ultimate sale; rather, the agent is and as such is entitled to his commission.

Bringing the parties to a meeting of the minds is an expensive and sometimes problematic venture. The broker advertises the property, shows the property, and participates in negotiations. When the vendor and purchaser reach an agreement, theoretically the broker's job is done. Steering the deal to closing of title should then become the task of the parties and their attorneys. As the New York Court of Appeals stated in 1893:

If from a defect in the title of the vendor, or from a refusal to consummate the contract on the part of the purchaser for any reason in no way attributable to the broker, the sale falls through, nevertheless the broker is entitled to his commissions, for the simple reason that he has performed his contract. n10

The justice of this rule is seldom challenged when the sale collapses through the fault of the one who employed the broker--usually the vendor. Case law provides that a broker's right to compensation is not defeated by the seller's refusal or inability to honor the sales agreement. Yet the traditional majority view is not confined to cases where the vendor is at fault. It applies to cases where the purchaser is at fault, n11 and even to cases where no one is at fault. n11.1 In some instances, when the broker is a buyer's agent, the buyer may be liable for the broker's commission when the buyer fails to complete the transaction. n11.2

For example, under the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act, unless the contract of sale provides otherwise, the risk of loss due to material destruction of the property continues to rest with the vendor until the purchaser takes either possession or title. In the New York case of Hecht v. Meller, n12 the property was substantially destroyed by fire after the contract was signed but before title closed and while the vendor still remained in possession. The purchaser exercised his statutory right to rescind the contract and recover his deposit. Since the contract between the vendor and the broker was silent on the vital question of when the commission was earned, the general rule was applied in favor of the broker. The court reasoned that the broker had "fully performed his part of the agreement with the vendor and his right to commission [became] enforceable." n13 The court found additional support for its adherence to the traditional rule in the "contractual flexibility" available to the vendor in dealing with the broker. Since the vendor could insist on conditioning the broker's right to a commission on closing of title, the court reasoned that his failure to do so refuted any suggested inequity in the traditional rule. However, if the seller (or purchaser) is not aware that a broker's commission must be paid even though the transaction is not completed through no fault of his own, it is of no consolation to be informed after the fact that including a condition precedent in the brokerage agreement would have protected the parties from owing the commission. n14

Nevertheless, a clear majority of states adhere to the view that the vendor owes the broker a commission under the "ready, willing and able" rule even though title never closes because of the purchaser's default. n15 A growing number of states, however, have denied the broker a commission when the buyer defaults. n16

[2] Effect of Contractual Provisions

A significant number of states require real estate brokers to obtain written brokerage contracts as a prerequisite to collecting a commission. n16.1 The rights, obligations, and duties of all parties should be in language that is clear and unambiguous. The courts generally will construe any ambiguity against the drafter of the document. If the broker's commission will be contingent upon the actual closing of title and payment of the purchase price, it should be so stated. n17 Such a provision, often called an "if, be and when" clause, is generally agreeable to both parties. As long ago as 1919, the New York Court of Appeals observed that "[n]o collections, no commissions has a fair business appeal to both seller and broker." n18 When there are specific requirements other than closing, however, and the broker meets the terms of the listing contract, the broker's commission will be enforceable. In Edward S. Gordon v. TPD Corp., n19 the broker submitted documentary evidence establishing that the conditions for the commission had been met.

The term of the listing agreement must be carefully drafted. In Callaway v. Overholt, n20 the court held that a stipulation to a brokerage agreement requiring payment of a brokerage commission to a broker upon the consummation of a sale only affected the time at which a broker's commission was payable, and did not modify the seller's obligation to pay the commission when a broker procured a ready, willing and able buyer. n21

An important qualification of the effect of such a clause is that it will not shield the vendor from liability to pay a commission where the failure to close is the vendor's fault. n22 To overcome this qualification some brokerage agreements specifically state that no commission is due if title fails to close for "any reason whatsoever," n23 or "fault of the seller." n24 Such provisions shield the vendor from all liability for conduct short of fraud. n25

A New York case furnishes an interesting interpretation of a clause, widely used in the state, that stated: "The aforesaid commission is due and payable to the above named licensed broker as, if and when title passes [rider omitted], except for willful default on the part of the seller, in which case the commission shall be payable upon demand after said default." n26 A more disturbing result occurred in R.L. Friedland Realty v. Modern Cabinets Corp., n27 wherein the New York court upheld the vendors' right not to pay a commission when the brokerage agreement required the commission to be paid "upon passing of title." In this case, the title did not pass because the vendors refused to provide a certificate of occupancy prior to the closing, and the court held that the broker failed to prove that the vendors willfully breached an enforceable contract.

The broker produced a ready, willing and able buyer on the vendor's previously stated terms, but the vendor refused to sign a contract because he had a better offer. A majority of the court found the clause ambiguous and since it was drafted by the broker, construed the term most strongly against the broker and held that "willful default" only applied to a vendor who breached a binding contract, finding that refusal to enter into a contract was not a default. n28

This theory is not without its limits, however. If a brokerage agreement provides that a broker's commission is to be paid upon sale, it most likely contemplates an actual sale and not a transfer of title due to foreclosure, where one court has held that no commission was due. n29

One should also note that in an option agreement, the almost universal rule is that if the buyer has a mere option to perform and does not perform, no commission will be payable because the broker has not produced a ready, willing and able buyer. n30 The drafting of the agreement must leave no room for doubt that both parties intended the agreement to be an option and not a binding contract. n30.1

Leases, however, fall under the traditional rule. Under most state statutes, a lease is considered a "sale" within the contemplation of the state's licensing statute. n31 The difficulty of leasing commissions is that they are often paid over a long period of time. Leasing commissions represent personal obligations that are not covenants running with the land, so that if the existing landlord sells the property, the new purchaser is not liable for the commission payments. n32 Brokers have sometimes attempted to record information pertaining to their commission and, in effect, to block the sale. The broker should be very cautious about this, however, because it could give rise to a slander of title suit, as a brokerage commission is normally a personal property right, not a real property right. n33 This also includes the broker's right to file lis pendens or place equitable liens on the property in order to enforce the right to a commission. n34

Long-term contracts for sale, frequently referred to as installment land contracts, create additional problems for brokerage commissions. In Chicago Title Agency of Las Vegas, Inc. v. Schwartz, n35 the Nevada Supreme Court held that "closing" occurred at the disbursement of escrow proceeds and not after all the terms of the contract for sale had been completed. The Connecticut courts have held "[i]n the case of an ordinary, unconditional brokerage arrangement, a commission is due when the broker produces a buyer who is ready, willing and able." Where the broker's right to a commission is "expressly made dependent upon the occurrence of a specific condition" then this reasoning would not control. n36 Some jurisdictions will enforce the payment of commission even if the written contract is entered into after the services have been rendered by the broker. n37

[3] Financial Ability of the Purchaser

In those jurisdictions following the majority rule, that is, where a broker may earn the right to a commission without a successful closing, or where the brokerage contract obviates the need for closing, a broker suing a vendor for payment of a commission must generally show that the prospective buyer had the financial ability to make the purchase.

Where, however, the vendor enters into a binding written contract with the purchaser produced in good faith by the broker, the majority view holds that no further proof of the purchaser's financial ability is traditionally required. As the Oregon Supreme Court stated:

If the employer [enters into a binding contract with the customer/buyer], he in effect says to the broker:

"I accept the customer as a person ready, able, and willing to purchase or exchange lands, as the case may be; you have done what you agreed to do; I have accepted the services rendered by you; and you have earned your commission."

The employer has a reasonable opportunity to investigate the ability of the customer to perform and when, without fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the broker, the employer accepts the customer by effecting a valid and binding contract with him, it is equivalent to a determination that the customer is a person ready, able and willing to purchase or exchange, and the employer is estopped thereafter to deny the ability or willingness of the customer to complete the contract. n38

When a broker must prove the financial ability of the purchaser and how a broker proves such ability are issues that constitute a major source of litigation in this field. n39 The subject is treated extensively in Chapter 5.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

California: Freeman v. Creelman, 60 Cal. App. 14, 212 P. 56 (1922) .

Georgia: Ben Farmer Realty, Inc. v. Owens, 286 Ga. App. 678, 681, 649 S.E.2d 771, 774 (2007) , cert.

denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 81 (Jan. 7, 2008) .

Massachusetts: Hillis v. Lake, 421 Mass. 537, 658 N.E.2d 687 (Mass. 1995) (under Massachusetts law, where the broker produces a ready, willing, and able buyer whom the seller, for whatever reason, refuses to accept, the broker is entitled to a commission only if it appears that the closing was prevented by wrongful conduct on the seller's part or if the brokerage contract included a specific provision that the broker is entitled to the commission notwithstanding the seller's refusal to accept the buyer).

New York: Lane-- The Real Estate Dept. Store v. Lawlet Corp., 28 N.Y.2d 36, 319 N.Y.S.2d 836, 268 N.E.2d 635 (1971) ; Tanenbaum v. Boehm, 202 N.Y. 293, 95 N.E. 708 (1911) .

See also Mecox Realty Corp. v. Rose, 202 A.D.2d 404, 608 N.Y.S.2d 526, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1950 (2d Dept. 1994) (holding that a broker's right to a commission is not dependent upon the closing of title, unless there is an agreement to the contrary).

(n2)Footnote 2. 3A Corbin, Contracts (1960); Annot. 45 A.L.R.3d 1936 (1972) .

See:

Federal: Duckworth v. Field, 516 F.2d 952 (5th Cir. 1975) .

New York: Ostroff v. Doctor, 238 N.Y. 264, 144 N.E. 577 (1924) .

See also §§ 4.04[1], 4.06[1] below .

(n3)Footnote 3. Mecox Realty Corp. v. Rose, 202 A.D.2d 404, 608 N.Y.S.2d 526, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1950 (2d Dept. 1994) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Verity v. Ottinger, 223 A.D. 344, 1928 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6210, 227 N.Y.S. 650 (1st Dept. 1928) ; House v. Hornburg, 267 App. Div. 557, 1944 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4776 (4th Dept. 1944) . On the question of open points in the transaction, see the discussion on "Essential Terms" at § 4.07[5] below .

(n5)Footnote 5. Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 852 (1967) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 852 (1967) .

(n7)Footnote 7. An early and much-cited authority is McGavock v. Woodlief, 61 U.S. (20 How.) 221, 15 L. Ed. 884 (1858) .

See also:

New Hampshire: Blais v. Remillard, 643 A.2d 967 (N.H. 1994) .

Ohio: Driscoll v. Norprop, Inc., 129 Ohio App. 3d 757, 719 N.E.2d 48, 52-53 (1998) (agent or broker who makes a contract with a property owner to find a buyer for the real estate at a specified commission and then produces a buyer is, absent fraud, entitled to compensation for his services; a purchase agreement that contained an option allowing the buyer to cancel the agreement upon written notice was supported by valid consideration in the form of the buyer's earnest money deposit and was an enforceable contract for purposes of a claim for a commission).

Texas: Bayer v. McDade, 610 S.W.2d 171 (Tex. Civ. App.--Houston 1980) writ of error refused no reversible error (July 8, 1981); Ramesh v. Johnson, 681 S.W.2d 256 (Tex. Ct. App. 1984) writ of error refused no reversible error (Mar. 20, 1985), rehearing of writ of error overruled (May. 1, 1985) (where the requirements of procurement and a writing were satisfied, courts will regularly treat the broker's rights under the contract as continuing in existence for a reasonable time after the contract's termination by mutual rescission of the purchaser and owner so as not to deprive the broker of the commission he has earned).

For discussion of the "ready, willing, and able" requirements, see ch. 5 below.

(n8)Footnote 8. Bushnell Real Estate, Inc. v. Nielson, 672 P.2d 746, 751 (Utah 1983) ; Robert Langston, Ltd. v. Mcquarrie, 741 P.2d 554, 64 Utah Adv. Rep. 42 (Utah 1987) cert. denied, 765 P.2d 1277 (Utah 1987) (once the broker meets the obligation under the exclusive listing agreement, it is irrelevant that the buyer later failed to complete his payment obligation or that the sale agreement was rescinded years later). See also Fairbourn Commercial, Inc. v. American Housing Partners, Inc., 2004 UT 54, at P13, 94 P.3d 292, 295 (Utah 2004) (the phrase "at closing," by itself, is not a condition precedent to a broker's receipt of commission).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lockett v. Drake, 43 Ariz. 357, 31 P.2d 499, 500 (1934) . Interestingly, the court remarked: "It is unfortunate that [the owner] is compelled to pay a commission, when the services of the broker did not produce the result which she anticipated ... "; Manning v. Blackwelder, 146 Ariz. 411, 706 P.2d 737 (Ariz. 1985) ; Campbell v. Mahany 620 P.2d 711 (Ariz. App. 1980) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Gilder v. Davis, 137 N.Y. 504, 506, 33 N.E. 599, 600 (1893) ; Bass Inv. Co. v. Banner Realty, Inc., 103 Ariz. 75, 436 P.2d 894 (Ariz. 1968) ; Nationwide Resources Corp. v. Ngai, 129 Ariz. 226, 630 P.2d 49 (Ariz. App. 1981) .

(n11)Footnote 11. For cases discussing damages upon breach by the purchaser, see:

Minnesota: Real Estate Dynamics v. Genzler, 369 N.W.2d 22 (Minn. Ct. App. 1985) (the Court of Appeals of Minnesota found that where the seller had a choice between liquidated damages and specific performance after a prospective buyer defaulted, and the seller chose the liquidated damages, the broker could not collect his commission).

New York: Schaechter v. Regency Properties, Inc., 115 A.D.2d 981, 497 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 55371 (4th Dept. 1985) (holding that a purchaser who employed a broker, but breached the contract procured by that broker, is liable to the broker for the commission he would have received if the contract had been executed).

Tennessee: Wayne Boykin & Associates v. Tinsley, 2008 Tenn. App. LEXIS 178 (Mar. 26, 2008) (Defaulting buyer was liable to both the listing agent and the buyer's agent for their commissions. The court had found that the buyer was financially able to complete the sale but chose not to because of a conflict with his agent).

Texas: Davidson v. Suber, 553 S.W.2d 430 (Tex. Civ. App. - Austin 1977) (holding that if a purchaser backs out of the agreement, and the seller chooses not to enforce specific performance, the broker may still maintain an action for a commission).

(n12)Footnote 11.1. See Bychowski v. ERA Tempo Realty, 274 Ill. App. 3d 1093, 211 Ill. Dec. 389, 655 N.E.2d 292

(Ill. App. 1 Dist. 1995) (the broker remained entitled to the commission, notwithstanding the fact that the buyer and the seller agreed to rescind the sale shortly after the closing). Byrd v. Wilson Trust, 182 S.W.3d 701, 708 (Mo. Ct. App. 2006) (In the absence of an express stipulation in the contract to the contrary, a broker is entitled to a commission upon producing a buyer ready, willing, and able to purchase the real estate on terms agreeable to the seller. This rule, which was applied to an auctioneer, allowed the auctioneer to recover a commission even though the house burned prior to settlement and the buyer refused to complete the sale.).

(n13)Footnote 11.2. See:

New Mexico: Bogle v. Summit Investment Co., LLC, 107 P.3d 520, 527, 2005 NMCA 24 (N.M. Ct. App. 2005) (This case involved a buyer's broker. The court stated that the law implies certain promises between a buyer and a broker even if the commission is to be paid by the seller, as in this case. Generally, a purchaser is liable to a broker for breach of an implied promise when the purchaser fails to complete the transaction.).

New York: Duross Co. v. Evans, 22 A.D.2d 573, 574-575, 257 N.Y.S.2d 674, 677, 1965 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4596 (N.Y. App. Div. 1965) (The purchasers' breach of their contract with the broker entitled the broker to damages because the purchasers' action prevented the broker from earning his commission. Although a proposed purchaser does not undertake to pay the commission, the purchaser may be liable for consequential damages by reason of the breach of his contract with the broker, which damages include compensation for the deprivation of the commission the broker would have been paid by the owner of the property.).

Cf. Blache v. Goodier, 22 So. 2d 82, 85-86 (La. Ct. App. 1945) (A broker is entitled to his commission as soon as he has obtained a purchaser ready, willing and able to buy at the price agreed upon by the owner, and that the commission is due by the prospective purchaser if, after binding himself, the prospective purchaser refuses to comply with his agreement.).

(n14)Footnote 12. 23 N.Y.2d 301, 296 N.Y.S.2d 561, 244 N.E.2d 77 (1968) .

(n15)Footnote 13. 23 N.Y.2d at 305 .

(n16)Footnote 14. See Manzin v. United Bank & Trust Co., 6 Conn. App. 513, 506 A.2d 169 (1986) (a broker was denied a commission where the real estate brokerage commission agreement was modified to provide that the broker would accept as payment of his commission ten percent of the payments made by the purchaser and the purchaser failed to perform).

See also Bersani v. Basset, 184 A.D.2d 996, 585 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8213 (4th Dept. 1992) (holding that the parties may agree to payment of commissions only on passage of title).

(n17)Footnote 15.

Federal: Otero v. Buslee, 695 F.2d 1244 (10th Cir. 1982) (in suit by seller for buyer's breach of contract, award for commission was upheld as seller incurred an obligation to pay broker for producing a ready, willing and able buyer).

Arkansas: Bailey v. Montgomery, 31 Ark. App. 1, 786 S.W.2d 594 (Ark. 1990) (broker's right to recover commission may not be predicated on a completed sale but there must be a contractual relationship and the broker must have been employed by the person from whom the commission is claimed. Here, the broker attempted to recover his lost commission from the buyers when the contract in question was between the broker and the sellers); Gautrau v. Long, 271 Ark. 394, 609 S.W.2d 107 (Ark. Ct. App. 1980) (broker's commission was earned when buyer and seller executed binding contract, even though bank refused buyer's assumption of the mortgage and buyer thereby defaulted, as contract was not conditional on bank's granting assumption).

California: In re Estate of Lopez, 8 Cal. App. 4th 317, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 67 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) (holding that California does not generally require consummation of a sale before a commission becomes due and owing and noting, however, that the California Probate Code does not permit the payment of a broker's commission until the sale is consummated).

Connecticut: Walsh v. Turlick, 164 Conn. 75, 316 A.2d 759 (1972) (broker earned commission by producing a buyer who signed a binding contract, irrespective of whether he was a ready, willing and able buyer who thereafter defaulted; clause in contract of sale that broker's commission is earned upon transfer of title was of no consequence, as broker was not a party to that contract, and no such provision was contained in brokerage agreement).

Delaware: Heldmyer v. Cleaver, 30 Del. 135, 104 A. 635 (1918) (if contract is signed, buyer's refusal to complete transaction, without broker's fault, does not prevent broker from recovering his commission).

Florida: Acheson v. Smiths, 110 Fla. 240, 148 So. 576 (1933) (liquidated damage clause does not cause valid contract for sale to be treated as an option which, if not exercised, prevents broker from earning commission).

Georgia: Davis v. Holbrook, 75 Ga. App. 417, 43 S.E.2d 791 (1947) (broker's right to commission depends not upon completion of sale, but is earned when a broker produces a ready, willing and able buyer who actually offers to buy on the owner's terms). But see Bentley Group, Ltd. v. Paces Ferry Anesthesiology Assocs., 180 Ga. App. 818, 350 S.E.2d 826 (1986) (where the Court of Appeals of Georgia held that a broker could not recover his commission where there were inconsistencies between the seller's offered sales terms and the contract prepared by the broker).

Illinois: Real Estate Buyer's Agents, Inc. v. Foster, 600 N.E.2d 83 (Ill. App. Ct. 1992) (where the broker obtained a signed offer for the property on the defendant's terms but the defendant refused to sign, the court, relying on Illinois law, held that brokerage contracts may be oral or governed by ordinary contract law and that the statute of frauds is inapplicable); Wilfong v. W.A. Schickedanz Agency, Inc., 85 Ill. App. 3d 333, 40 Ill. Dec. 625, 406 N.E.2d 828 (1980) (contract made pursuant to auction sale entitled broker to full commission even though sale was not consummated; brokerage agreement provided for full commission if property sold at auction, but only $400 if property was not sold).

Iowa: Nickelsen v. Morehead, 238 Iowa 970, 29 N.W.2d 195 (1947) (where buyer unable to proffer purchase price in accordance with contract, and seller released him from contract for consideration, broker was still entitled to commission).

Kentucky: Shanklin v. Townsend, 431 S.W.2d 874 (Ky. Ct. App.), modified on other grounds, 434 S.W.2d 655 (Ky. 1968) (word "sale" is not interpreted as requiring consummation of transaction for purposes of broker's commission).

Maryland: DeFranceaux Realty Group, Inc. v. Leeth, 283 Md. 611, 391 A.2d 1209 (1978) (Maryland's common-law minority rule was changed by statute. Requirement that statute applies only without special agreement is strictly construed).

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.02

Michigan: Smith-Burns Inv. Co. v. Jones, 240 Mich. 89, 214 N.W. 946 (1927) (broker entitled to commission for bringing about sale even though buyer defaulted on payments and seller thereafter declared contract void).

Minnesota: Nelson v. Rosenblum Co., 289 Minn. 32, 182 N.W.2d 666 (1970) (broker supplied purchaser in performance of written net listing agreement and was entitled to commission paid out of buyer's forfeited earnest money when buyer breached legally enforceable purchase agreement).

Mississippi: Varner Real Estate, Inc. v. Bobb, 491 So. 2d 528 (Miss. 1986) (a real estate broker was entitled to his commission when he produced a ready, willing and able buyer on terms acceptable to the seller, notwithstanding the seller's inability to deliver possession and the buyer's disregard of a non-enforceable extension provision); New South Corp. v. Godley, 301 So. 2d 307 (Miss. 1974) (when down payments on property were made, brokers earned commissions, notwithstanding later defaults; if the default had occurred in the down payment (e.g., bad check) commission would not have been earned).

Missouri: Kelly v. Craigmiles, 460 S.W.2d 577 (Mo. 1970) (broker may recover commission without further proof that buyers were ready, willing and able to purchase, where sellers signed purchase agreement with buyers).

Montana: Johnson v. N.Y. Hart, 889 P.2d 1170 (Mont. 1995) (it is well established in Montana that a broker's right to recover a commission is conditioned on the broker's ability to accomplish that which he or she undertook to do in the contract of employment); Sayegusa v. Rogers, 846 P.2d 1005 (Mont. 1993) (supporting the broker's right to obtain his commission, the court strictly construed the terms of the listing agreement, wherein the seller had agreed to pay a commission upon execution of an agreement for the sale or exchange of the property).

New York: Hecht v. Meller, 23 N.Y.2d 301, 296 N.Y.S.2d 561, 244 N.E.2d 77 (1968) (broker was entitled to a commission when he procured a buyer who entered into a contract with the seller, even though before closing, the house was destroyed by fire and the buyer rescinded, as allowed by N.Y. G.O.L. § 5-1311); Sauerhoff-Kessler Realty Corp. v. Roma Shopping Plaza, Inc., 201 A.D.2d 477, 607 N.Y.S.2d 404, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1012 (2d Dept. 1994) (holding that a default by a tenant on its obligations under the lease shortly after the tenant assumed occupancy did not affect the broker's ability to recover a commission pursuant to the brokerage agreement); Cornelia and Broad Streets, Inc. v. Chase, 186 A.D.2d 341, 587 N.Y.S.2d 809, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10810 (3d Dept. 1992) (holding that, where uncontroverted evidence charged that the plaintiff-broker procured a buyer, conclusionary assertions without evidentiary support that commissions would be earned only when title passed, are insufficient to defeat the broker's motion for summary judgment); Bersani v. Basset, 184 A.D.2d 996, 585 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8213 (4th Dept. 1992) (holding that any preparatory work that a broker does to procure a ready, willing and able buyer is irrelevant once he agrees to forego his commission until title passes, and he bears the risks of the deal until the condition precedent is satisfied).

North Carolina: Harrison v. Brown, 222 N.C. 610, 24 S.E.2d 470 (1943) (court-appointed receiver employed broker to sell property, and broker found buyer at price fixed, but buyer, with court's permission, withdrew offer and recovered down payment: court held broker was entitled to commission); but see Jones v. Palace Realty Co., 226 N.C. 303, 37 S.E.2d 906 (1946) (North Carolina Supreme Court held that an agreement to pay commission "when the deal is closed up" is enforceable only upon consummation of the sale).

Ohio: Ballard v. Thompson, 5 Ohio App. 2d 92, 34 Ohio Op. 2d 197, 214 N.E.2d 102 (1965) (this case presents a brokerage commission dispute where a purchase agreement incorporated an earlier commission letter which placed the burden of the broker's commission on the buyer; the buyer refused to pay the full commission depending upon verbal agreements made between the buyer and the broker at the time of the signing of the commission letter; the court held the broker acted in accordance with his obligations pursuant to the contract; in the absence of fraud, broker's commission is earned upon the signing of a valid contract for sale, whether or not the sale is ever consummated).

Oklahoma: Waggoner v. Johnston, 1965 OK 192, 408 P.2d 761 (Okla. 1965) (buyer defaulted, claiming fraud, and sued for return of earnest money lost under liquidated damages provision; no fraud was established and court held that the broker, who, without misconduct, effected the sale agreement, was entitled to commission); Eastern Oklahoma Land & Cattle Co. v. Dorris, 549 P.2d 78 (Okla 1976) (if a broker enters into a contract with knowledge of a defect in title, or is aware of facts sufficient to put a reasonably prudent person on inquiry, and the transaction fails because of that defect, the broker is not entitled to a commission).

Pennsylvania: Shumaker v. Lear, 235 Pa. Super. 509, 345 A.2d 249 (1975) (while a broker earns commission as soon as a binding contract is signed, when the contract is conditional, and the condition does not arise to make the contract binding, the broker is not entitled to a commission unless seller has prevented the condition); Coldwell Banker Phyllis Rubin Real Estate v. Romano, 422 Pa. Super. 319, 619 A.2d 376 (1993), appeal denied, 534 Pa. 635, 626 A.2d 1154 (1993) (seller and broker entered into an Exclusive Right-to-Sell agreement, which contained a right of refusal by another entity; that entity purchased the property; because the broker drafted the agreements, any ambiguities would be construed against the broker, who was held to the language of the contract).

South Carolina: Thomas-McCain, Inc. v. Siter, 268 S.C. 193, 232 S.E.2d 728 (S.C. 1977) (provision providing for payment of commission "on or before settlement" related only to time of payment; thus, deletion in brokerage agreement of word "before," coupled with buyer's default on valid contract, did not serve to deprive the broker of his right to a commission); Bishop Realty & Rentals, Inc. v. Perk, Inc., 292 S.C. 182, 355 S.E.2d 298 (S.C. Ct. App. 1987) (the court recognized the general rule that, unless the parties agree otherwise, a broker earns his commission when the seller accepts a buyer procured by the broker and a contract of sale is entered) cert. denied, 293 S.C. 538, 362 S.E.2d 26 (S.C. 1987).

South Dakota: Heinrich v. R.L. Oil & Gas Co. Inc., 442 N.W.2d 467 (S.D. 1989) (seller refused to furnish buyer with financial records needed to acquire financing and the transaction failed; the broker produced a buyer ready, willing, and able to purchase seller's property under a real estate listing agreement and was entitled to a commission).

Tennessee: Dobson & Johnson, Inc. v. Von Weiland, 644 S.W.2d 394 (Tenn. 1982) (the fact that the buyer stopped payment of a check in relation to a land purchase does not deprive the broker of his right to a commission which accrued when he effected a valid, written contract of sale) Branson v. Fitzgerald, 2009 Tenn. App. LEXIS 810, at *23 (Tenn. Ct. App. Dec. 4, 2009).

Texas: Cotten v. Deasey, 766 S.W.2d 874 (Tex. App. - Dallas 1989) writ denied (Sep. 6, 1989); Stiles v. De Angelo, 706 S.W.2d 175 (Tex. Ct. App. 1986) (a real estate broker who procures a buyer who is ready, willing, and able to buy on the seller's terms is entitled to a commission if completion of the sale is prevented by the seller, even if, after having been granted specific performance, the buyer later defaults).

Virginia: Edmonds v. Coldwell Banker Residential Real Estate Servs., Inc., 237 Va. 428, 377 S.E.2d 443 (1989) (a real estate broker is the procuring cause of a sale when it has originated or caused a series of events which, without a break in their continuity, resulted in the accomplishment of the prime object of employment, i.e., to procure a purchaser ready, willing and able to buy on the owner's terms); Kuga v. Chang, 241 Va. 179, 399 S.E.2d 816 (1991) (under a general contract of employment, as distinguished from a special contract, the broker is entitled to its commission from the owner when the broker produces a purchaser ready, willing, and able to buy the property on the owner's terms regardless of whether the sale is ultimately consummated).

Washington: Dryden v. Vincent D. Miller, Inc., 56 Wash. 2d 657, 354 P.2d 900 (1960) .

Wisconsin: Menard v. Sass, 127 Wis. 2d 397, 379 N.W.2d 344 (Wis. Ct. App. 1985) (where it was held that a broker was entitled to a full commission even though the buyer he secured defaulted and despite the fact that the standard printed listing agreement form used contained a standard clause providing for the broker to be paid one half of the amount paid by the buyer when the seller elected to take such amount as liquidated damages).

For discussion of the "ready, willing, and able" requirements, see ch. 5 below.

(n18)Footnote 16. The following states place no liability on seller to pay commission when the buyer defaults after a contract of sale (ordinary brokerage agreements):

Alabama: Brown v. Robinson, 354 So. 2d 272 (Ala. 1977) (due to defects in title, the purchasers were justified in delaying the tendering of the purchase price and the sellers were in default for refusing to convey the land, the broker was entitled to his commission); Taylor Real Estate & Ins. Co. v. Greene, 274 Ala. 694, 151 So. 2d 397 (1963) (court upheld rule in Walmore Inv. Co. of Delaware v. Farrior-Jackson Realty Co., 218 Ala. 447, 118 So. 665 (1928) ; buyer didn't go through with the deal).

Colorado: Dunton v. Stemme, 117 Colo. 327, 187 P.2d 593 (1947) where purchaser's payments were late, violating "time of the essence" clause in a sales contract, the broker was not entitled to a commission as per Colo. Rev. Stat. § 12-61-201); Green v. Grant, 635 P.2d 236 (Colo. Ct. App. 1981) (the contract provided for commission payments by installments; buyer defaulted as to subsequent annual payment; obligations under the commission agreement were extinguished as to all payments but the first).

Florida: Arvida Realty Sales v. William Tinnerman, 13 Fla. L. Weekly 1563, 536 So. 2d 1041 (1988) (the broker produced three clients who made deposits under contracts but then defaulted prior to closing; the court found the language of the contract to be clear and unambiguous, and held that no commission was earned where no closing took place).

Idaho: Margaret H. Wayne Trust v. Lipsky, 123 Idaho 253, 846 P.2d 904 (1993) (wherein the Idaho Supreme court clearly adopted the Ellsworth Dobbs rule, discussed in § 4.03 below).

Kansas: Harrin v. Brown Realty Co., 226 Kan. 453, 602 P.2d 79 (1979) (where a purchaser was financially unable to perform, the court upheld the rule in Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (1974)) .

Louisiana: Adams v. Adams, 283 So. 2d 503 (La. Ct. App. 1973) (commission was denied to a broker where a buyer failed to have sale contract notarized, thus killing the deal). See also Puckett v. Broussard, 356 So. 2d 1021 (La. Ct. App. 1977) .

Massachusetts: Tristram's Landing, Inc. v. Wait, 367 Mass. 622, 327 N.E.2d 727 (1975) , (the court followed Ellsworth Dobbs v. Johnson, saying that a commission is earned when: (1) a ready, willing and able buyer is produced; (2) a binding sales contract is made; and (3) a purchaser completes the transaction).

New Jersey: Rothman Realty Corp. v. Bereck, 73 N.J. 590, 376 A.2d 902 (1977) ; Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843 (1967) .

North Dakota: Goetz v. Anderson, 274 N.W.2d 175 (N.D. 1978) (where neither the broker nor the purchaser would assure the seller of the financial ability of the buyer, the broker had not earned a commission based on the signing of an earnest money agreement). Note: This is an assumption of the minority rule through implication. The court never really verbalizes the rule.

Oregon: Engelking v. Boyce, 278 Or. 237, 563 P.2d 703 (1977) (the court recognized the rule that "the broker's right to a commission against the seller comes into existence only when his buyer performs in accordance with the contract of sale... ." 563 P.2d at 705).

The following jurisdictions adhere to the rule that if a buyer is unable to financially perform, the seller does not have to pay the broker's commission:

District of Columbia: Sweet v. H.R. Howenstein, 73 F.2d 660, 64 App. D.C. 20 (1934) (broker's commission was denied on grounds of a special conditional contract).

Nebraska: Cornett v. Nathan, 196 Neb. 277, 242 N.W.2d 855 (1976) .

New Hampshire: Dunn v. Staples, 109 N.H. 251, 248 A.2d 635 (1968) .

North Dakota: Goetz v. Anderson, 274 N.W.2d 175 (N.D. 1978) .

Rhode Island: Gartner v. Higgins, 214 A.2d 849 (R.I. 1965) .

Texas: Nugent v. Scharff, 476 S.W.2d 414 (Tex. Civ. App. 1971) .

(n19)Footnote 16.1. See Comment, International Interference with Prospective Economic Advantage: A Tort that Eviscerates the Real Estate Brokers' Statute of Frauds, 36 Santa Clara L. Rev. 150 (1996).

(n20)Footnote 17. As the court stated in Wagner v. Derecktor, 306 N.Y. 386, 390, 118 N.E.2d 570, 575 (1954) :

[a]lthough in the conventional brokerage transaction the broker does not assume the risk of performance, and has earned his commission when he procures purchaser ready, able and willing to buy, the parties may agree that payment is to be conditioned upon complete performance of the contract which the broker procures.

Accord:

Federal: Enerdyne Corp. v. William Lyon Dev. Co., 488 F.2d 1237 (10th Cir. 1973) (applying Colorado law); Helmsley-Spear, Inc. v. Westdeutsche Landesbank Girozentrale, 692 F. Supp. 194 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) (no commission was due because the consummation requirement of the brokerage agreement was unfulfilled).

Maine: Chamberlain v. Porter, 562 A.2d 673 (Me. 1989) (finding that a broker was not entitled to a commission despite his procurement of a ready, willing and able buyer, where the brokerage agreement required the commission to be paid out of the proceeds of the closing, and the sale fell through due to defects in seller's title).

New Jersey: Leadership Real Estate, Inc. v. Harper, 271 N.J. Super. 152, 638 A.2d 173 (Law Div. 1993) (holding that the common understanding of the term "the property shall be sold" requires, at a minimum, that the buyer and the seller enter into a binding contract of sale, pursuant to which the buyer would have an equitable remedy of specific performance and the seller a remedy of damages upon the breach by the buyer).

New York: Cimarron Realty 100 Ltd. v. Horner, 114 A.D.2d 924, 495 N.Y.S.2d 196, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 53970 (2d Dept. 1985) (a broker was not entitled to a commission where the contract specifically provided for payment of the commission when the property was "sold or exchanged" and not merely when the broker obtained a prospective buyer, and the seller refused to enter into a contract of sale with the buyer produced by the broker); The Corcoran Group, Inc. v. Morris, 107 A.D.2d 622, 484 N.Y.S.2d 7, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42481 (1st Dept. 1985) (where the terms of an agreement between a seller and real estate broker clearly condition the broker's entitlement to a commission upon the actual closing of title, no commission is earned absent such a closing); Ralph J. Taibi v. American Banknote, 135 A.D.2d 810, 1987 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52740 (2d Dept. 1987) (mere agreement as to price on a proposed sale of real property does not constitute a meeting of the minds of buyer and seller so as to entitle the real estate broker to a commission). Sometimes a seller will agree to pay a commission on the occurrence of some specified future event; see, e.g., Cross & Brown Co. v. Laboratory Furniture, Inc., 79 A.D.2d 535, 433 N.Y.S.2d 467, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13837 (1st Dept. 1980) (payment of commission upon renewal or execution of a new lease). Even when such a "contingency commission" is agreed to by the parties, problems as to whether the action by the broker fall within the realm of commissionable activities may arise. See, e.g., Kenneth D. Laub and Co., Inc. v. 101 Park Ave. Assoc., 101 A.D.2d 744, 475 N.Y.S.2d 64, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18378 (1st Dept. 1984) (summary judgment denied factual issues as to scope of broker's activities).

Oklahoma: Zuhdi v. Cohen Realty, Inc., 836 P.2d 686 (Okla. Ct. App. 1992) (in a case of first impression, where a brokerage agreement provided that the broker's commission was to come in installments when "cash" due on installments on the purchaser's note came in to the seller, and the purchaser defaulted and the seller received the property back at a foreclosure sale, the return of the home to the seller did not constitute "cash" for purposes of payment of the broker's commission).

Pennsylvania: Sork v. Rand, 422 Pa. 512, 222 A.2d 890 (1966) .

(n21)Footnote 18. Colvin v. Post Mortgage & Land Co., 225 N.Y. 510, 517, 122 N.E. 454, 456 (1919) . The parties may agree, however, for a payment of commission only upon passage of title. This also applies to the execution of leases when the listing agreement conditions any commissions on a completed transaction. R.B. Schlesinger & Co., Inc. v. Delson & Gordon, 184 A.D.2d 393, 585 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8506 (1st Dept. 1992) .

See also Bersani v. Basset, 184 A.D.2d 996, 585 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8213 (4th Dept. 1992) .

(n22)Footnote 19. 182 A.D.2d 516, 582 N.Y.S.2d 699, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6081 (1st Dept. 1992) .

(n23)Footnote 20. 796 S.W.2d 828 (Tex. App. 1990) .

(n24)Footnote 21. 796 S.W.2d 828, 833 (Tex. App. 1990) .

See also Iowa Realty of Pella v. Boomsma's, Inc., 533 N.W.2d 549 (Iowa 1995) (under Iowa law, a letter agreement extending the protective clause for the broker's commission beyond the expiration date set forth in the original listing agreement was unenforceable, where there was no provision in the original listing agreement establishing a definite protection period).

(n25)Footnote 22. Koupal & Anton, Inc. v. Wieczorek, 375 N.W.2d 639 (S.D. 1985) (a jury could properly conclude that a principal has wrongfully revoked a listing agreement where, after presentation to the principal by the broker of a signed purchase offer, the principal stated that the land was priceless and that he would not sell the farm for even $2,000 per acre); White v. Nemastil, 29 Ohio App. 3d 1, 503 N.E.2d 189 (Ohio 1985) . See generally § 4.04 below.

(n26)Footnote 23. Roberts v. Food Fair Stores, Inc., 54 A.D.2d 635, 387 N.Y.S.2d 623 (1st Dept. 1976) , aff'd, 42 N.Y.2d 917, 397 N.Y.S.2d 1005, 366 N.E.2d 1359 (1977) .

(n27)Footnote 24. Langfan v. Walzer, 13 N.Y.2d 171, 244 N.Y.S.2d 305, 194 N.E.2d 124 (1963) .

(n28)Footnote 25. Langfan v. Walzer, 13 N.Y.2d 171, 244 N.Y.S.2d 305, 194 N.E.2d 124 (1963) .

See also:

Federal: Dixon v. Bernstein, 182 F.2d 104 (D.C. Cir. 1950) .

New York: Grenell Realty Agency, Inc. v. Gruner, 63 N.Y.S.2d 443, 1946 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2421 (1st Dept. 1946) .

(n29)Footnote 26. Graff v. Billet, 64 N.Y.2d 899, 902, 487 N.Y.S.2d 733, 735, 477 N.E.2d 212, 214 (1985) .

(n30)Footnote 27. 194 A.D.2d 657, 598 N.Y.S.2d 817, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6134 (2d Dept. 1993) ; Gulf Oil Corp. v. American Louisiana Pipe Line Co., 282 F.2d 401 (6th Cir. 1960) (the court held that where a contract depends upon a condition precedent one cannot avoid his liability by making the performance of the condition precedent impossible, or by preventing it).

(n31)Footnote 28. Graff v. Billet, 64 N.Y.2d 899, 902, 487 N.Y.S.2d 733, 735, 477 N.E.2d 212, 214 (1985) .

(n32)Footnote 29. Zuhdi v. Cohen Realty, Inc., 836 P.2d 686 (Okla. Ct. App. 1992) . Cf. Premier Van Schaack Realty, Inc. v. Sieg, 51 P.3d 24, 30, 2002 UT App. 173, at P16 (Utah Ct. App. 2002) (no commission due when the seller transferred property to a separate legal entity in which he was an investor; the owner retained essentially the same ownership interest he had in the property prior to the conveyance). But see Sutton v. East River Sav. Bank, 55 N.Y.2d 550, 435 N.E.2d 1075 (1982) (broker was awarded a commission when his client's nominee bid on property subject to a commission agreement at the foreclosure sale and subsequently closed title).

(n33)Footnote 30. John Dull & Co. v. Life of Nebraska Ins. Co., 642 S.W.2d 1 (Tex. App. - Houston 1982) .

(n34)Footnote 30.1. Rubinstein v. Rubinstein, 23 N.Y.2d 293, 296 N.Y.S.2d 354, 244 N.E.2d 49 (1968) .

(n35)Footnote 31. See:

Alabama: Glover v. Irving Winter Co., Inc., 595 So. 2d 881 (Ala. 1992) (holding that a broker's efforts in arranging the original lease of the property sparked the tenant's interest in purchasing the property and, therefore, the broker was entitled to his commission, even though the original lease had expired and the tenant purchased the property indirectly, where the tenant remained in continuous possession of the property, whether under the original lease or a continuation thereof, and had become the equitable owner of the property).

California: John B. Kilroy Co. v. Douglas Furniture of Cal., Inc., 21 Cal. App. 4th 26, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 752 (Cal. Ct. App. 1993) (where the landlord pleaded that the leases had terminated and that no commission was due under the original terms of the lease, the California Court of Appeals held that the new leases involved the same tenants, landlord and premises, together with continuous occupancy, and that there were no material changes between the original lease and the existing lease).

Idaho: Strout Realty v. Milhous, 107 Idaho 330, 689 P.2d 222 (Idaho Ct. App. 1984) .

Texas: Moser Co. v. Awalt Indus. Properties, Inc., 584 S.W.2d 902 (Tex. Civ. App.--Amarillo 1979) .

(n36)Footnote 32. Dauley v. First Nat'l Bank of Fort Worth, 565 S.W.2d 346 (Tex. Civ. App.--Ft. Worth 1978) .

(n37)Footnote 33. Walker v. Ruggles, 540 S.W.2d 470 (Tex. App.--Houston, 1976) .

(n38)Footnote 34. VRG Corp. v. GKN Realty Corp., 641 A.2d 519 (N.J. 1994) .

(n39)Footnote 35. 851 P.2d 419 (Nev. 1993) .

(n40)Footnote 36. Nugent v. Del Vecchio, 36 Conn. Supp. 532, 415 A.2d 1339 (1980) .

(n41)Footnote 37. Isaguirre v. Echevarria, 96 Idaho 641, 534 P.2d 471 (1975) .

(n42)Footnote 38. Oregon Home Builders v. Montgomery Inv. Co., 94 Or. 349, 184 P. 487 (1919) .

Accord:

Florida: Sticht v. Shull, 543 So. 2d 395 (Fla. 4th DCA 1989) .

Illinois: Western Pride Builders Inc. v. Zicha, 23 Ill. App. 3d 770, 320 N.E.2d 181 (1974) .

New York: Flicker v. Ragan, 126 Misc. 185, 1925 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1151, 212 N.Y.S. 703 (1925) .

Wisconsin: Mansfield v. Smith, 88 Wis. 2d 575, 277 N.W.2d 740, 745 (1979) .

While entering into a binding contract shows "acceptance" of the purchaser, conduct amounting to less than an actual contract signing can produce the same conclusion, where it unequivocally shows satisfaction with the purchaser. See Rosenblatt v. Bergen, 237 N.Y. 88 (1923) .

Contra:

Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (1974) .

Rhode Island: Mangano v. Rooney, 77 R.I. 324, 74 A.2d 867 (1950) ; Butler v. Baker, 17 R.I. 582, 23 A. 1019 (1892) .

Vermont: Staab & Messier, 128 Vt. 380, 264 A.2d 790 (1970) .

(n43)Footnote 39. Carroll v. Harry Norman, Inc., 198 Ga. App. 614, 402 S.E.2d 357 (Ga. 1991) (at issue was whether purchaser qualified for a fixed-rate loan and made a reasonable effort to obtain one; agent-plaintiff did not carry burden of demonstrating purchaser failed to make a reasonable attempt to obtain the loan she was obligated to seek under the contract, or that she qualified for such, or that she agreed to close with the optional loan).

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

88 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.03

§ 4.03 Requirement that Title Close--Minority Rule

[1] Closing Required: Dobbs v. Johnson

[a] Introduction

In 1967, the case of *Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson*ⁿ¹ caused the New Jersey Supreme Court to reevaluate the traditional rule long followed by the state with respect to the accrual of a broker's right to a commission. ⁿ² The court established the general rule that a successful closing is required as a condition to a broker's right to a commission, thereby firmly establishing a minority holding on this issue. Basing its decision on public policy grounds and the inequality in bargaining power between the average homeowner-seller and the average broker, the court, in dictum, also declared that a contract provision purporting to eliminate closing of title as a prerequisite to the right of the broker to a commission might be declared unenforceable as against public policy.

[b] The Facts

The Johnsons wished to sell a one-hundred forty-four acre tract of farm land and listed it with several brokers on a non-exclusive basis. A party named Iarussi was interested in acquiring land for residential development and consulted the Ellsworth Dobbs Agency, with whom the Johnson property had been listed. ⁿ³ Thomas Fleming, a Vice President of Dobbs, showed Iarussi the Johnson tract and sometime in 1960 an oral agreement was reached between the Johnsons and Iarussi. This deal collapsed because of Iarussi's lack of financial support. Subsequently, in early 1961 Iarussi renewed his interest in the Johnson tract, and on May 1, 1961 signed a contract with the Johnsons to purchase it for $250,000 payable as follows:

On execution of the contract etc.	$1,500
Further, on June 15, 1961 additional	1,000
On passing of title.....	10,000
On purchase money mortgage, etc.	237,500

Closing was set for September 1, 1961. As to brokerage commissions, the contract provided:

The commission hereinafter mentioned shall be payable as follows: $5,000.00 when sellers shall have received a total of $25,000.00 on account of the above purchase price ($10,000.00 herewith and $15,000.00 on account of the principal sum of the above-mentioned purchase money note and mortgage); an additional $5,000.00 when an additional $25,000.00 shall have been paid on account of the principal sum of purchase money note and mortgage; and the remaining $5,000.00 when an additional $25,000.00 shall have been paid on account of the principal sum of said purchase money note and mortgage. The entire commission of $15,000.00 shall become immediately due and payable upon any sale or assignment by sellers of said purchase money note and mortgage.

And the Seller hereby agrees to pay to Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc., a commission of Six (6) percent on the purchase price aforesaid, said commission to be paid in consideration of services rendered in consummating this sale; said commission to become due and payable as above mentioned. n4

Iarussi made the first two payments, totalling $2,500 but never made any further payments because of inability to secure financing. The vendor, the purchaser and the broker gave conflicting evidence as to knowledge of the purchaser's financial problems and whether the broker had agreed to assist in the raising of money. In any event, after prolonged negotiations, including litigation between the vendor and the purchaser, the purchaser finally confessed his inability to make the remaining payments and the vendor released him on May 15, 1962, after the property had been tied up for about a year. Dobbs then commenced an action against the Johnsons and Iarussi, claiming a $15,000 commission. The trial court directed a verdict against the Johnsons and the jury found for Dobbs against Iarussi on an implied agreement to complete the contract. The Appellate Division reversed both judgments and the Supreme Court granted Dobbs' application to appeal. On the merits the Supreme Court held: (1) as a matter of law the Johnsons owed no commission to Dobbs; and (2) as to Iarussi:

Under all the circumstances we hold that the Appellate Division erred in finding that Dobbs had no cause of action against Iarussi as a matter of law and in directing entry of judgment in favor of Iarussi. In our judgment, there is a jury question as to the nature of the relationship between Dobbs and Iarussi. A jury should also decide whether Dobbs (through Fleming) knew and agreed, expressly or impliedly, that performance was subject to the financing contingency and that commission would be earned only on satisfaction of that contingency. If the jury finds in favor of Iarussi on this issue, Dobbs is not entitled to recover. n5

[c] The Law

Although the court cited numerous New Jersey authorities in support of the traditional rule it found that rule deficient in point of justice and out of harmony with the reasonable expectations of the parties. In reaching this conclusion the court quoted extensively from the distinguished English jurist, Lord Denning, as follows:

When a house owner puts his house into the hands of an estate agent, the ordinary understanding is that the agent is only to receive a commission if he succeeds in effecting a sale; but if not, he is entitled to nothing. That has been well understood for the last 100 years or more. ... The agent in practice takes what is a business risk: he takes on himself the expense of preparing particulars and advertising the property in return for the substantial remuneration--reckoned by a percentage of the price--which he will receive if he succeeds in finding a purchaser.

No particular words are needed to create the relationship. All the familiar expressions "please find a purchaser," "find someone to buy my house," "sell my house for me", and so on, mean the same thing: they mean that the agent is employed on the usual terms; but none of them gives any precise guide as to what is the event on which the agent is to be paid. The common understanding of men is, however, that the agent's commission is payable out of the purchase price. The services rendered by the agent may be merely an introduction. He is entitled to commission if his introduction is the efficient cause in bringing about the sale. ... But that does not mean that commission is payable at the moment of the introduction: it is only payable on completion of the sale. The house-owner wants to find a man who will actually buy his house and pay for it. He does not want a man who will only make an offer or sign a contract. He wants a purchaser "able to purchase and able to complete as well" [citing cases].

Some confusion has arisen because of the undoubted fact that, once there is a binding contract for sale, the vendor cannot withdraw from it except at the risk of having to pay the agent his commission. This has led some people to suppose that commission is payable as soon as a contract is signed: and I said so myself in McCallum v. Hicks [(1950) 2 K.B. 277, 1 All Eng. Rep. (1950) 864].

But this is not correct. The reason why the vendor is liable in such a case is because, once he repudiates the contract, the purchaser is no longer bound to do any more towards completion: and the vendor cannot rely on the non-completion in order to avoid payment of commission, for it is due to his own fault. ... [citing cases]. But if the vendor could show that the purchaser would not in any event have been able or willing to complete, he would not be liable for commission. ... When it is not the vendor, but the purchaser, who withdraws, the case is entirely different; for, even though a binding contract has been made, nevertheless, if the purchaser is unable or unwilling to complete, the agent is not entitled to his commission. n6

The extract was taken from Dennis Reed, Ltd. v. Goody [1950] 2 K.B. 277, at pp. 284-85 .

The New Jersey Supreme Court summarized its holding as follows:

Study of the problems involved in this case in light of the above considerations leads us to the following conclusions as to what the controlling rule should be in New Jersey: When a broker is engaged by an owner of property to find a purchaser for it, the broker earns his commission when (a) he produces a purchaser ready, willing and able to buy on the terms fixed by the owner, (b) the purchaser enters into a binding contract with the owner to do so, and (c) the purchaser completes the transaction by closing the title in accordance with the provisions of the contract. If the contract is not consummated because of lack of financial ability of the buyer to perform or because of any other default of his, [citation omitted] there is no right to commission against the seller. On the other hand, if the failure of completion of the contract results from the wrongful act or interference of the seller, the broker's claim is valid and must be paid. In short, in the absence of default by the seller, the broker's right to commission against the seller comes into existence only when his buyer performs in accordance with the contract of sale. n7

Interestingly, the court at one point in its discussion emphasized the "wrongful act or interference of the seller." This leaves in some uncertainty the common situation where the purchaser justifiably rejects the vendor's title because it is unmarketable. This is a breach by the vendor but does not necessarily represent a wilful act on his part. n8 Other jurisdictions have divided on this point, as discussed elsewhere in this text. n9

[d] Effect on Contractual Provisions

The New Jersey court did not stop with holding that a brokerage contract will ordinarily be interpreted to require a successful closing as a condition to the broker's right to a commission. Such a holding clearly solves the problem insofar as it is based on the reasonable expectations of laypersons. But what about a case where the brokerage agreement expressly negates such a condition and states in no uncertain terms that the broker's commission shall be earned when the vendor signs a contract with a purchaser produced by the broker? The court anticipated such a case and, in a bold dictum, declared that such an agreement violates public policy. The court stated:

The rules which we have set down above to govern dealings, rights, and duties between brokers and owners are necessary for the protection of property owners, and constitute the public policy of our

[s]tate. Whenever there is substantial inequality of bargaining power, position or advantage between the broker and the other party involved, any form of agreement designed to create liability on the part of the owner for commission upon the signing of a contract to sell to a prospective buyer, brought forward by the broker, even though consummation of the sale is frustrated by the inability or the unwillingness of the buyer to pay the purchase money and close the title, we regard as so contrary to the common understanding of men, and also so contrary to common fairness, as to require a court to condemn it as unconscionable. [Citation omitted].

In view of our holding here that a broker is not entitled to commission from the seller if title does not pass because of the inability or fault of the customer, and the further rule to be expounded hereafter respecting the liability of the buyer to the broker where the buyer is the defaulting party, in our judgment public policy requires the courts to read into every brokerage agreement or contract of sale a requirement that barring default by the seller, commissions shall not be deemed earned against him unless the contract of sale is performed. By the same token, whenever the substantial inequality of bargaining power, position or advantage to which we have adverted appears, a provision to the contrary in an agreement prepared or presented or negotiated or procured by the broker shall be deemed inconsistent with public policy and unenforceable. n10

By its emphasis on inequality of bargaining power the court seems to focus on the ordinary layperson selling his house through the agency of a professional broker. One might imply that the rule may not apply to more sophisticated parties in an environment where brokers are highly competitive.

The aspect of the case dealing with the broker's rights against a defaulting purchaser is discussed elsewhere in the text. n11

[e] Critique

It cannot be denied that the classic objective theory of contracts could operate harshly in particular cases. If a listing owner were distracted or inattentive and failed to read the "fine print" of a listing agreement, he was nevertheless bound by the terms set forth. n12 Even if the owner read the agreement he might not appreciate the meaning of terms that had the effect of vesting the broker's right to a commission on the signing of the contract of sale, though deferring its payment until the closing.

If a court is convinced that the usual understanding of laypersons is that, absent fault, a commission is payable only out of proceeds at closing, then not only may such court imply this term when the brokerage agreement is silent; it may go further--without going as far as the Dobbs court in holding continuing provisions substantively unconscionable per se. There is authority for a middle ground that modifies the severity of the traditional objective theory of contracts. The middle view is this: a term fixing the right to a commission at some time prior to closing is harsh and unusual--it crosses "the common understanding of mankind." n13 It is within the parties' competence to bind themselves to such a term but only by informed consent, not just the manifestation of assent traditionally associated with signing a writing, whether one has read and understood it or not. Accordingly, the owner may become bound by a harsh and unc customary term, but only if his attention is specifically called to it and its significance explained to him. n14

[2] Dobbs in Other Jurisdictions

The New Jersey Supreme Court's legal reasoning in the Dobbs case n14.1 has been adopted in several jurisdictions.

[a] Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen

Wishing to sell a ranch of some 9000 acres for $356,800, the owner gave a non-exclusive listing to plaintiff broker. The broker produced a twenty-two year-old farmer with a net worth of $6,000. Based on conflicting testimony, the trial court found that an oral agreement was reached between the vendor and purchaser at a price of $320,000. The purchaser was to pay $20,000 in cash, assume an existing mortgage, and pay the balance in installments. The vendor later received an offer of $356,920 from another source and declined to enter into a written contract with the purchaser procured by the plaintiff broker. The Kansas Supreme Court reversed a lower court judgment for the broker. n15

As with other cases that have approved of the Dobbs rationale, the facts of the Kansas case could justify a holding in the vendor's favor even under the traditional majority rule. The Court found no evidence that the intending purchaser had sufficient resources to complete the purchase without depending on third persons who were not bound to finance him. As stated elsewhere, n16 the broker has failed, under these circumstances, to demonstrate that he procured a ready, willing and able purchaser.

The court nevertheless took this case as the occasion to adopt the main features of the Dobbs holding. In particular the court approved of the Dobbs view that "acceptance" of a purchaser by entering into a contract with him should neither estop the vendor from disputing the purchaser's financial ability, nor relieve the broker of the burden of proving it. The Kansas court concluded:

Some jurisdictions have always had the rule announced in Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, above [Citation omitted]. Other jurisdictions are following New Jersey's lead. Decisions which have either adopted or expressly approved Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, above are: Setser v. Commonwealth, Inc., 256 Or. 11, 470 P.2d 142 (1970) ; Staab v. Messier, 128 Vt. 380, 264 A.2d 790 (1970) ; Potter v. Ridge Realty Corporation, above; Rogers v. Hendrix, 92 Idaho 141, 438 P.2d 653 (1968) ; and Mullenger v. Clause, 178 N.W.2d 420 (Iowa 1970) . For a comprehensive discussion of the New Jersey case see Note, 23 Rutgers L. Rev. 83 (1968); Note, 9 Ariz. L. Rev. 519 (1968); Note 17 Cath. U.L. Rev. 487 (1968); and Note, 10 Wm. & Mary L. Rev. 240 (1968).

We are persuaded by the cogent reasoning in Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, above, and adopt the rules stated in the above quoted portion thereof as the law in Kansas.

On the facts in the instant case the appellant did not sign the contract tendered by the appellee. Factually, therefore, the case presently before us does not involve an executed contract wherein the purchaser subsequently defaults because he is financially unable to perform. But in either situation the broker is obligated to produce a qualified purchaser before he is entitled to a commission. The argument that the appellant "accepted" [the purchaser] during the course of negotiations, and in particular on the 26th day of September, 1970, when the appellee claims the appellant accepted him as a purchaser, is not availing to the broker, Mr. Winkelman. The "acceptance" of [the purchaser] by the appellant did not constitute a waiver on the appellant's part of the financial ability of [the purchaser] to purchase the property. The burden is upon the appellee, the broker, to show that he has produced an able buyer in the financial sense. Accordingly, the appellant is not estopped to assert in defense of this action that [the purchaser] was not a qualified purchaser. n17

[b] Massachusetts: Tristram's Landing, Inc. v. Wait

Plaintiff broker learned that defendant owner had property for sale on Nantucket Island. Plaintiff received oral permission to show the property (non-exclusively), and was told that the price was $110,000. The broker procured a customer who made a written offer of $100,000. The defendant then authorized the broker to make a counter-offer of $105,000. The purchaser orally accepted this offer and signed a written contract prepared by the broker. The broker presented this writing, together with a check for a down payment of $10,500, to the defendant, who also signed it. The purchaser, for undisclosed reasons, refused to go through with the purchase and forfeited the down payment. Upon defendant's refusal to pay a commission, the broker sued for five percent of the agreed sales price--the amount that was customary in the area.

The Supreme Judicial Court overruled a line of prior precedents and held that, since there was no closing because of the buyer's default, the broker was not entitled to a commission. n18 The court stated: "We believe, however, that it is both appropriate and necessary at this time to clarify the law, and we now join the growing minority of [s]tates who have adopted the rule of Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson" n19

The court reviewed the reasons of policy supporting the Dobbs rule, emphasizing the layperson's normal expectations that the money paid at the closing will be the source for payment of the broker's commission. The rule was formulated as follows, quoting from the Dobbs case:

Thus, we adopt the following rules: When a broker is engaged by an owner of property to find a purchaser for it, the broker earns his commission when (a) he produces a purchaser ready, willing and able to buy on the terms fixed by the owner, (b) the purchaser enters into a binding contract with the owner to do so, and (c) the purchaser completes the transaction by closing the title in accordance with the provisions of the contract. If the contract is not consummated because of lack of financial ability of the buyer to perform or because of any other default of his ... there is no right to commission against the seller. On the other hand, if the failure of completion of the contract results from the wrongful act or interference of the seller, the broker's claim is valid and must be paid. Id at 551, 236 A.2d at 855 . n20

The parties may contractually vary the prerequisite of an actual closing by including a provision that is clear and specific as to the seller's potential liability for a commission if the buyer does not purchase the realty. n20.1 The burden is on the broker to ensure that the provision is adequate to alert the seller that the listing agreement varies from the Tristram's Landing rule. n20.2 Provisions that are not sufficiently clear are against public policy. n20.3

[c] Nebraska: Cornett v. Nathan

In this case, n21 defendant owners listed their property with plaintiff broker for sale at a price of $349,700. The broker was to receive a seven percent commission. The broker produced a prospective purchaser who offered $251,680. The owner accepted this offer, signed a written contract of sale, and received a deposit of $5,000, expressly stated to be forfeited should the buyer fail to complete the sale. The buyer eventually defaulted because of financial inability and the broker sued for a $17,617.60 commission. One need only read the court's summary of the claim to make a good guess as to the holding to come:

The defendant's property was not sold, but the plaintiff still demanded his $17,617.60 commission. This placed the defendants in the position where they were entitled to only $5,000 in damages from the buyer, but owed the plaintiff over $17,000 in commission. Thus, the defendants would lose over $12,000 and still be in the same position as they were before the plaintiff presented the buyer. n22

The court dealt with the issue in less sweeping terms than the New Jersey Court in Dobbs. It analyzed the issue in the traditional formula of the production of a "ready, willing and able" purchaser. After discussing the normal expectations of those who employ brokers (to pay the commission out of the proceeds at closing) and the superior ability of professional brokers to ascertain the financial ability of intending purchasers, the court held that financial ability to close is the test of a ready, willing and able purchaser.

[d] Oregon: Brown v. Grimm

In Brown v. Grimm n23 an owner listed his property with the broker for $20,000 "net" with the terms of payment to be cash. The broker found a purchaser willing to accept these terms and a written earnest money contract was entered into. The vendor received no cash down payment, merely a promissory note for $1,000. The purchaser's performance was conditioned on "obtaining zone change, adequate financing and building permits and sewer permits on proposed new construction." n24 The purchaser eventually defaulted and the broker sued for her commission.

Although failure to satisfy the conditions precedent to the buyer's duty to perform would probably have justified a judgment for the defendant vendor even under the majority rule, n25 the court nevertheless relied on Dobbs for its conclusion that, notwithstanding the signing of a contract of sale, the law required actual closing and payment by a financially responsible purchaser. n26

[e] Idaho: Margaret H. Wayne Trust v. Lipsky

In Margaret H. Wayne Trust v. Lipsky, n27 the Idaho Supreme Court addressed a situation in which a purchaser changed his mind and the vendor sued for damages and specific performance. The court acknowledged that Idaho had, in the past, adopted the traditional rule that a broker earned his commission when he procured a buyer ready, willing and able to purchase on terms acceptable to the owner. n28 The court, however, adopted the Ellsworth Dobbs Rule, holding that the broker earns his commission when: (1) he produces a purchaser ready, willing and able to buy on the terms fixed by the owner; (2) the purchaser enters into a binding contract with the owner to do so; and (3) the purchaser completes the transaction by closing the title in accordance with the provisions of the contract. n29

The court qualified its opinion, however, in that the adoption of the rule did not alter the obligation to pay the commission if the sale was not completed due to the fault of the seller. In reaching its decision, the court relied on a prior case involving an installment land contract. n30

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843 (1967) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hatch v. Dayton, 130 N.J.L. 425, 33 A.2d 350 (Sup. Ct. 1943) ; Hinds v. Henry, 36 N.J.L. 328 (Sup. Ct. 1873) . See generally Note, Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson: A Reexamination of the Broker-Buyer-Seller Relationship in New Jersey, 23 Rutgers L. Rev. 83 (1968).

(n3)Footnote 3. Iarussi purchased four other parcels through the Dobbs Agency. In each case the transaction was completed and Dobbs earned a commission from the sellers. 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 847 (1967) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 848 (1967) . It was contended by the Johnsons that the language of the commission agreement made the broker's rights expressly conditional on the stated stages in the process of his completion, and that parol evidence should be admitted to support this interpretation. Because of the court's sweeping holding it was not necessary to resolve these contentions. The court stated:

On the basis of all we have said above, and although we agree with the Appellate Division that the provision in the contract of sale between Dobbs and the Johnsons respecting the time when the commission could be considered earned is at the very least ambiguous (compare Alnor Constr. Co. v. Herchet, above), we hold as a matter of law that title not having closed solely because of the financial incapacity of Iarussi, the claim against the Johnsons for commission must fail.

50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 858 (1967) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 861 (1967) .

(n6)Footnote 6. 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 853-54 (1967) ; but see Jacob Gold Realty, Inc. v. Stefan Skocyzylas, 178 Misc. 2d 409, 679 N.Y.S. 2d 499, 1998 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 462 (1998) , citing Graff v. Billet, 101 A.D.2d 355, 475 N.Y.S. 2d 122, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 17825 (2d Dept. 1984) . The vendor rejected the purchaser because the purchaser altered or deleted certain mortgage contingency clauses in the proposed contract. The broker sued to recover his commission based on the theory that the agreement failed because the vendor had willfully defaulted. The court found it was well-settled law that before a broker may properly rely upon "willful default" language in a brokerage agreement, the broker must demonstrate that a sales contract or agreement existed and was entered into by both parties. See also Corcoran Group, Inc. v. Morris, 107 A.D.2d 622, 484 N.Y.S. 2d 7, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42481 (1st Dept. 1985), aff'd, 64 N.Y.2d 1034, 489 N.Y.S.2d 66, 478 N.E.2d 207 (1985).

(n7)Footnote 7. 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 855 (1967). See also Drake v. Hosley, 713 P.2d 1203 (Alaska 1986) (citing Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson with approval, but noting that the adoption of the Dobbs rule would not help the plaintiff in the instant case).

(n8)Footnote 8. In an earlier New Jersey case, where the brokerage contract conditioned the right to a commission on an actual closing, the court denied a commission where the closing failed because of a defect in the vendor's titles. All parties acted in good faith. Blau v. Friedman, 26 N.J. 397, 140 A.2d 193 (1958). Failure to offer marketable title was not viewed as a willful act which prevented closing. This case furnishes a useful precedent in applying the rule of the Dobbs case.

The court's use of the term "default" of the seller in the case of Apfelbaum v. Topf, 104 N.J.L. 343, 140 A. 295 (Ct. of Errors and Appeals 1928) is also helpful. A seller who was unable to convey a marketable title because of:

a restrictive covenant with respect to the use of the land of which the owner was unaware, was not held liable to pay the brokerage commission. The commission agreement called for payment unless title did not close for a reason not due to the seller's default. The court reasoned that the word "default" reasonably read referred only to some wilful act of the seller which defeated the passing of title.

(n9)Footnote 9. See § 4.03[3] below

(n10)Footnote 10. 236 A.2d at 857-58. See Van Winkle & Liggett v. G.B.R. Fabrics, Inc., 103 N.J. 335, 511 A.2d 124 (1986).

(n11)Footnote 11. See § 4.10 below

(n12)Footnote 12. Pilkington v. Flack, 152 E.G. 366 (1948).

(n13)Footnote 13. Jaques v. Lloyd D. George & Partners, Ltd., 2 A.E.R. 187, 190 (1968).

(n14)Footnote 14. See id., the Opinion of Denning, M.R. In discussing manifestations of assent to standardized contracts, Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 211(3) states:

Where the other party has reason to believe that the party manifesting such assent would not do so if he knew that the writing contained a particular term, the term is not part of the agreement. Several recent cases have recognized the necessity of actual assent, not merely objective assent, to harsh or unusual terms buried in a written contract.

See:

Federal: Silvestri v. Italia Societa Per Azioni Di Navigazione, 388 F.2d 11 (2d Cir. 1968) (steamship ticket limiting time to sue for personal injury); Mattes v. National Fidelity Life Ins. Co., 506 F. Supp. 955 (M.D. Pa. 1980) (applying Pennsylvania law to a term in an insurance policy).

Connecticut: Griffin v. Nationwide Moving & Storage Co., 187 Conn. 405, 446 A.2d 799 (1982) (limitation of moving company's liability).

Pennsylvania: Standard Venetian Blind Co. v. American Empire Ins. Co., 469 A.2d 563 (Pa. 1983) .

(n15)Footnote 14.1. Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843 (1967) , discussed in § 4.03[1][a], [b] above.

(n16)Footnote 15. Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (1974) .

(n17)Footnote 16. See § 4.02[2][b] above

(n18)Footnote 17. 519 P.2d at 1390 . The holding in Winkelman was reaffirmed in Harrin v. Brown Realty Co., 226 Kan. 453, 602 P.2d 79 (1979) .

(n19)Footnote 18. Tristram's Landing, Inc. v. Wait, 367 Mass. 622, 327 N.E. 2d 727 (1975) .

(n20)Footnote 19. Tristram's Landing, Inc. v. Wait, 367 Mass. 622, 327 N.E. 2d 727, 730 (1975) .

(n21)Footnote 20. Tristram's Landing, Inc. v. Wait, 367 Mass. 622, 327 N.E. 2d 727, 731 (1975) .

(n22)Footnote 20.1. See Richard Corapi, Inc. v. C & C Realty Dev., LLC, 2009 Mass. App. Div. 231, 2009 Mass. App. Div. LEXIS 62, at *5 (2009) .

(n23)Footnote 20.2. Id.

(n24)Footnote 20.3. Id.

(n25)Footnote 21. Cornett v. Nathan, 196 Neb. 277, 242 N.W.2d 855 (1976) .

(n26)Footnote 22. Cornett v. Nathan, 196 Neb. 277, 242 N.W.2d 855, 856 (1976) .

(n27)Footnote 23. 258 Or. 55, 481 P.2d 63 (1971) .

(n28)Footnote 24. Id., 258 Or. at 65 .

(n29)Footnote 25. See § 4.02 above. The court also noted a prior undisclosed relationship between the purchaser and the broker which supported a finding of lack of good faith performance of fiduciary duty. See § 4.08 below.

(n30)Footnote 26. See Clark v. Wright, 699 S.W.2d 174 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1985) (prospective purchaser held liable to the broker for damages based upon the amount of commission the broker would have earned if the transaction had closed).

(n31)Footnote 27. 846 P.2d 904 (Idaho 1993) .

(n32)Footnote 28. See Rogers v. Hendrix, 438 P.2d 653 (Idaho 1968) .

(n33)Footnote 29. Margaret H. Wayne Trust v. Lipsky, 846 P.2d 904, 911 (Idaho 1993) . See Commercial Ventures, Inc. v. The Rex M. & Lynn Lea Family Trust, 177 P.3d 955, 960 (Idaho 2008) (This Court expressly adopted the rule from Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson.), reh'g denied, 2008 Ida. LEXIS 36 (Feb. 15, 2008) .

(n34)Footnote 30. Strout Realty v. Milhous, 107 Idaho 330, 689 P.2d 222 (Idaho Ct. App. 1984) . In that case, the seller, under an installment land contract claimed that he was not liable for a commission because the buyer defaulted before he had fully performed, and he was therefore not ready, willing and able. The court saw no difficulty in applying this to a more traditional real estate transaction.

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

89 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.04

§ 4.04 Excusing the Condition of Title Closing

[1] In General: Vendor's Default

The subject matter of this section becomes relevant only when closing of title is a condition precedent to the vendor's duty to pay a commission. This condition exists in states following the minority view ⁿ¹ or, in states following the majority view, when the parties have by contract made closing a condition precedent. ⁿ² Consequently, the following discussion presupposes that closing is a condition precedent.

It is a standard and familiar rule that one under a duty subject to a condition precedent cannot hide behind the condition if his own unjustified act caused the condition to fail. In such case, the condition is excused and the duty becomes absolute. ⁿ³ Thus, if the vendor refuses to close with a purchaser procured by the broker, he owes a commission even though the condition was not satisfied. ⁿ⁴ Moreover, where a broker is required to retain counsel to enforce the rights that the broker had under a brokerage agreement, the seller will be required to pay reasonable attorney's fees, particularly when the seller cancels the sales agreement in bad faith.

It is usually held that some definite, affirmative act is necessary to excuse the condition; a passive refusal by the vendor to seek specific performance against a defaulting purchaser will not nullify the condition of closing. ⁿ⁵ Two common situations involve the existence of title defects and the refusal of a co-owner, usually the vendor's spouse, to sign a deed. These will be separately discussed in the following two subsections.

[2] Effect of Vendor's Unmarketable Title

Clearly, in those jurisdictions that follow the traditional rule that the broker's commission is earned when the sales agreement is reached, irrespective of successful consummation, no issue will arise concerning the effect of the vendor's unmarketable title on the right to a commission. Indeed, since in these jurisdictions the commission is payable even where the purchaser defaults and the vendor is wholly free from fault, it follows a fortiori that the commission is payable where the purchaser justifiably rescinds because of a defect that renders the vendor's title unmarketable. ⁿ⁶

One exception to this position, even in jurisdictions that otherwise follow the traditional rule is where the broker knows or ought to know of the title problem when the broker accepts the listing. For example, in Eastern Oklahoma Land & Cattle Co. v. Dorris, ⁿ⁷ the broker who accepted employment from a widow knew that she owned only a one-third undivided interest in the property. She told him that she thought she could get the other co-owners to agree to the sale but the broker was thereby put on notice that consummation of the sale was uncertain. When the other owners refused to assent and the purchaser procured by the broker justifiably refused to close, it was held that the broker was not entitled to a commission. n8

Where, because of an express condition in the brokerage agreement, or because of the prevailing local rule of law, the broker's right to a commission is contingent on closing of title, the cases are divided on the effect of a failure to close because of a defect in the vendor's title. n9 The issue is whether an unmarketable title is a "fault" within the doctrine that non-fulfillment of a condition precedent (closing of title) is excused when its non-fulfillment is due to the fault of the promisor. In terms of equity and policy the issue is a close one, and predictably the courts have focused on particular nuances, such as the broker's knowledge of the title defect n10 and whether the vendor could have cured it by reasonable actions. n11 If the vendor warrants to the broker that there are no encumbrances, the broker will be entitled to a commission. n12

The rule could apparently be different, however, when the brokerage commission contains a provision regarding the issue of a marketable title as a condition precedent to the payment of the commission. In Brotsky v. Gozzola, n13 the builder, through no fault of his own, rendered title unmarketable because he did not receive final approval of the subdivision plat. The court held that the broker was not entitled to his commission because the brokerage agreement required the subdivision approval as a condition precedent to the payment of the commission.

Due to the closeness of the issue, cases within a given jurisdiction have vacillated. In New York, for example, a closely-divided Court of Appeals ruled that even though the commission was contingent on title closing, it would nevertheless be payable if closing failed because of the vendor's failure to take affirmative action to remove liens for taxes and assessments that made the title unmarketable. n14 The implication of this case was that if reasonable efforts by the vendor were unavailing to remove the defect the condition would not be excused and no duty to pay a commission would arise. However, some courts soon whittled away this protection to the vendor by finding an implied warranty by the vendor to the broker that his title was marketable. n15

In 1968, the New York Court of Appeals, without referring to the implied warranty theory, reversed a judgment for a broker whose right to a commission was conditional, when title was rejected because it was unmarketable. After interpreting the brokerage agreement as making the commission contingent on closing, the court stated:

As was pointed out above, however, such an agreement will not absolve the seller of the obligation of paying a commission where the sale fails of completion through the seller's own fault and, therefore, if, upon the new trial that must be had here, plaintiff can show that it was through defendants' fault that the contract of sale was never consummated, he must prevail. With respect to the proceedings to be had following remand, though, it must be noted that our decisions discussing when a condition in a brokerage agreement that title actually close will be deemed waived speak of "fault" [citation omitted], "defendant's own wrong" [citation omitted], "waiver" or "active conduct of the conditional promisor, preventing or hindering the fulfillment of the condition" [citation omitted], and the vendor's "refus[ing] to perform his obligations under the contract of sale" [citation omitted]. The prospective seller will be held to have waived the condition that title actually close where closing of title was prevented solely by his refusal to remove curable defects or clouds on his title [citation omitted], but in a case such as this, where the defendants were presented by the prospective purchaser, Frazer, with a seemingly impossible ultimatum under which he expressed the desire to cancel the agreement if the title defects could not be cured within 30 days, a much closer question, going to the reasonableness of defendants' conduct in not undertaking themselves to cure the title defects, but, rather, of giving Frazer the option of bringing the necessary proceedings himself or of canceling, is presented. n16

[3] Effect of Failure or Refusal of Contracting Party's Spouse to Sign Sales Contract or Deed

Generally, where a sale does not occur due to the owner's inability to convey full title, and the broker is not at fault, he can recover full commission for his efforts. n17 This situation may arise when one spouse lists property with a broker, but when the closing date arrives, the other spouse will not sign the deed.

Cases in at least thirty states express the principle that it is no defense to a broker's action for compensation that the principal's spouse refuses to join the sale. n18 This rule holds equally when the wife, and not the husband, lists the property. n19

While some dicta to the contrary exists, generally the broker can recover his commission, if one spouse refuses to go through with the sale even where a clause in the brokerage contract calls for the commission to be paid "upon completion of a sale." n20 Further, refusal of a spouse to sign the deed is not a "title defect" that may excuse the payment of commissions. n21

When a broker knows that the cooperation of the lister's spouse will be necessary to consummate the deal, there is a split in authority concerning the broker's right to commission. The majority rule is that the broker's knowledge will not hinder his claim for commissions, n22 based on the theory that it is the listing spouse who obligates himself, and thus is liable. n23 A minority of states have held the broker's knowledge of the necessity of the wife's acquiescence to be a defense to an action for commissions. n24 In addition, some cases have included dicta indicating that commissions might have been denied if the broker had known that another signature would be required. n25

However, when the broker knows that the other spouse has no intention of cooperating with any sale of the property, the majority holds that the broker cannot recover commissions. n26

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Discussed in § 4.03[1], above

(n2)Footnote 2. See LaRosa Realty, Inc. v. Kim, 123 A.D.2d 839, 507 N.Y.S.2d 454, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 60960 (2d Dept. 1986) (held that a broker was not entitled to a commission, under an agreement which conditioned payment of the commission on the passing of title or the seller's breach, when the sale fell through during the contract closing because there was no wilful breach).

(n3)Footnote 3. 3 Corbin, Contracts § 768 (West 1960); 10 Williston, Contracts § 1287 (LCP 3d ed. 1967); Restatement (Second) Agency § 445, comment d (1958).

See:

Louisiana: Succession of Saulny, 637 So. 2d 1248 (La. App. 4th Cir. 1994) (the broker may sue the owner of a partial interest in the property, where the partial owner signed the listing agreement authorizing the broker to sell the property which the partial owner stated she owned in full).

Maryland: W.C. Pinkard & Co. v. Castlewood Realty Co., 271 Md. 598, 319 A.2d 123 (1974) .

New Jersey: A.S. Goldstein Co. v. Bloomfield Plaza Assocs., 272 N.J. Super. 59, 639 A.2d 347 (App. Div. 1994) (the broker was entitled to a commission where the transaction is defeated by the seller's willful conduct, notwithstanding the fact that a contingency clause in the commission agreement was not satisfied); Leadership Real Estate, Inc. v. Harper, 271 N.J. Super. 152, 638 A.2d 173 (Law Div. 1993) (bad faith on the part of the seller may be found where the seller refuses, without legal justification, to close title; fraudulently conceals existence of a title defect; materially misrepresents to the broker and the buyer the gross earnings of the business; misrepresents that a unit will be vacant on the date set for the closing; or fails to refer a prospective buyer to the broker during the term of the exclusive agency and instructs the prospective buyer to delay making an offer for the property until the listing agreement with the broker expires).

New York: Ely-Cruikshank Co., Inc. v. Bank of Montreal, 81 N.Y.2d 399, 599 N.Y.S.2d 501, 615 N.E.2d 985 (1993) (in an action brought by a real estate broker against the vendor for breach of a contract that granted the broker the exclusive right to sell and thereby earn a commission, the court held that the cause of action accrued when the vendor failed to reveal its preliminary discussions with the purchaser prior to termination of the agreement, and not when the vendor actually sold the building after the agreement was terminated); Wilsen Assocs. Real Estate Corp., Inc. v. Pizilly, 204 A.D.2d 777, 611 N.Y.S.2d 694, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4722 (3d Dept. 1994) (the vendor's attorney was not liable to the broker for a commission, where the broker admitted she was aware of the vendor's serious financial difficulties and acknowledged that the attorney never promised to pay a commission out of his own resources; therefore, the broker was not entitled to rely on the attorney's intimations that the broker might be paid); Schuckman v. Sayville Plaza Dev. Co., 201 A.D.2d 638, 608 N.Y.S.2d 248, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1479 (2d Dept. 1994) (a partnership was not bound by the brokerage agreement executed by a deceased general partner, where the "personal" agreement was written in the first person singular on the partner's personal stationery, included an express assertion that the partnership did not authorize brokers to act in a brokerage capacity, and concluded that the agreement would be binding on the partner; the fact that the partnership benefited as a result of the agreement did not make the agreement binding on the partnership); Aiello v. B.E.P.R.A., Inc., 39 A.D.2d 541, 331 N.Y.S.2d 924, 1972 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5030 (2d Dept. 1972) .

Ohio: White v. Nemastil, 29 Ohio App. 3d 1, 503 N.E.2d 189 (1985) (transaction terminated due to seller's insistence that buyers sign an addendum to the mortgage deed subsequent to the execution of the purchase agreement).

(n4)Footnote 4. Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 160, 209 P.3d 741, 750 (2009) ; Coldwell Banker v. CitiBank & Trust of Shreveport, 602 So. 2d 1051 (La. 1992) . A broker is entitled to a commission if a sale to a third party is a straw transaction designed to avoid paying the commission. Farm Credit Bank of St. Louis v. Miller, 316 Ark. 388, 872 S.W.2d 376 (Ark. 1994) . Grommet v. Newman, 2009 WY 150, 220 P.3d 795, 804 (Wyo. 2009) Cf. R.L. Friedland Realty v. Modern Cabinets, 194 A.D.2d 657, 598 N.Y.S.2d 817, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6134 (2d Dept. 1993) (where the brokerage agreement required payment of a commission only upon the passing of title, title failed to close because the seller failed to obtain a certificate of occupancy; the court held that no commission was due, even though the contract of sale did not require a certificate of occupancy to be produced at closing).

(n5)Footnote 5. Amies v. Wesnofske, 255 N.Y. 156, 174 N.E. 436 (1931) . See also Beattie-Firth v. Colebank, 143 W. Va. 740, 105 S.E.2d 5 (1958) .

But see Davidson v. Suber, 553 S.W.2d 430 (Tex. Civ. App. - Austin 1977) .

(n6)Footnote 6.

Arkansas: Sorma v. Fairweather, 248 Ark. 742, 453 S.W.2d 715 (1970) .

Louisiana: Russell v. Smith, 671 So. 2d 356 (La. App. 1 Cir. 1995) (brokers were not entitled to a commission on grounds that the sellers failed to provide marketable title at the time of the buy-sell contract, where two lender-approved attorneys stated that title was marketable and another attorney offered title insurance and notwithstanding that the purchaser's attorney contended that the title was unmarketable).

California: Williams v. Gaither, 202 Cal. App. 2d 308, 20 Cal. Rptr. 779 (1962) .

New York: Van Vliet & Place, Inc. v. Gaines, 249 N.Y. 106, 162 N.E. 600 (1928) . The court stated:

Both owner and broker acted in good faith; neither was aware of the [restrictive] covenant nearly a century in age. The established rule in this state does not impose any obligation upon the broker to become acquainted with the title. This broker performed its part of the agreement when it procured a purchaser ready to buy according to the terms offered in the owner's letter [to the broker].

249 N.Y. at 110, 162 N.E. at 601 . See also Willard v. Mercer, 83 A.D.2d 656, 442 N.Y.S.2d 200, 1981 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 14956 (3d. Dept.) , aff'd, 58 N.Y.2d 840 . 460 N.Y.S.2d 18, 446 N.E.2d 774 (1981) .

Tennessee: Smithwick v. Young, 623 S.W.2d 284 (Tenn. 1981) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 549 P.2d 78 (1976) .

(n8)Footnote 8. For cases in accord with Eastern Oklahoma, n.7 above, see:

Federal: Gatzemeyer v. Vogel, 544 F.2d 988 (8th Cir. 1976) (applying Iowa law).

Alabama: Rabren v. Norton, 381 So. 2d 645 (Ala. 1980) .

Kentucky: Ford v. Hurt, 265 S.W.2d 475 (Ky. 1954) .

Maine: Perry v. MacArthur, 358 A.2d 385 (Me. 1976) .

New York: Burkard v. Midvale Estates, Inc., 45 Misc. 2d 403, 257 N.Y.S.2d 62 , aff'd, 45 Misc. 2d 870, 257 N.Y.S.2d 615, 1965 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2243 (1964) .

The decision would be otherwise if the broker reasonably assumed that the defect was curable and that the vendor would correct it. Mayberry v. Davis, 288 Minn. 73, 178 N.W.2d 911 (1970) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Cases from various jurisdictions are analyzed in Annot., 28 A.L.R.4th 1007 (1984) .

(n10)Footnote 10.

Alabama: Rabren v. Norton, 381 So. 2d 645 (Ala. Ct. App. 1980) (broker aware of defect; commission denied).

New Jersey: Blau v. Friedman, 26 N.J. 397, 140 A.2d 193 (1958) (vendor's good faith is a critical fact where closing fails because of an unmarketable title).

(n11)Footnote 11. Levy v. Lacey, 22 N.Y.2d 271, 239 N.E.2d 378 (1968) (where a commission was contingent on closing vendor would be liable because of unreasonable refusal to remove a curable defect in title).

But see R.L. Friedland Realty v. Modern Cabinets Corp., 194 A.D.2d 657, 598 N.Y.S.2d 817, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6134 (2d Dept. 1993) , where the seller's failure to obtain a certificate of occupancy excused the owner's obligation to pay a commission.

(n12)Footnote 12.

Federal: Gatzemeyer v. Vogel, 544 F.2d 988 (8th Cir. 1976) (applying Iowa law).

Arizona: Bradley v. Westerfield, 1 Ariz. App. 319, 402 P.2d 577 (1965) .

Missouri: Duggins v. Simons, 517 S.W.2d 82 (Mo. 1974) .

New York: O'Hara v. Bronx Consumers' Ice Co., 254 N.Y. 210, 172 N.E.472 (1930) .

(n13)Footnote 13. 183 A.D.2d 1051, 583 N.Y.S.2d 641, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6885 (3d Dept. 1992) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Stern v. Gepo Realty Corp., 289 N.Y. 274, 45 N.E.2d 440 (1942) .

(n15)Footnote 15. Magrill v. Langan, 43 N.Y.S.2d 210, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2156 (1943) ; Coward v. McLaughlin, 100 N.Y.S.2d 444, 1950 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2136 (1950) . But see Leder v. Dry Dock Sav. Inst., 8 N.Y.S.2d 68, 1938 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2156 (1938) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Levy v. Lacey, 22 N.Y.2d 271, 276, 239 N.E.2d 378, 381 (1968) .

(n17)Footnote 17. The clearest examples of this are where the seller is not the owner of the property, or the seller's interest in the property is less than 100 percent. See, e.g.:

Arizona: Nationwide Resources Corp. v. Ngai, 129 Ariz. 226, 630 P.2d 49 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1981) .

Connecticut: Investors Mortgage Co. v. Jessco, 6 Conn. Cir. 445, 275 A.2d 287 (1970) .

Illinois: Reavy Grady & Crouch Realtors v. Hall, 110 Ill. App. 3rd 325, 66 Ill. Dec. 35, 442 N.E.2d 307 (1982) .

Mississippi: C. Buck Bush Realty Co. v. Whetstone, 266 So. 2d 135 (Miss. 1972) .

New York: U-Buy Realty, Inc. v. Aliota, 151 Misc. 2d 485, 487-488, 573 N.Y.S.2d 824, 826, 1991 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 417 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1991) , citing this Treatise.

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Guillotte v. Pope & Quint, Inc., 349 So. 2d 62 (Ala. Civ. App. 1977) .

California: McAlinden v. Nelson, 121 Cal. App. 2d 136, 262 P.2d 627 (1953) .

Delaware: Tebo v. Mitchell, 21 Del. (5 Penn) 356, 63 A. 327 (1905) .

Florida: Chastain v. Carroll, 307 So. 2d 491 (Fla. DCA 1975) .

Maine: Roy v. Huard, 157 Me. 477, 174 A.2d 41 (1961) .

New York: U-Buy Realty, Inc. v. Aliota, 151 Misc. 2d 485, 487-88, 573 N.Y.S.2d 824, 826 (N.Y. Civ. Ct. 1991) , citing this Treatise.

Oregon: Woodworth v. Vranizan, 273 Ore. 111, 539 P.2d 1055 (Or. 1975) .

Pennsylvania: Rick v. Moyer, 296 Pa. 176, 145 A. 793 (1929) .

Tennessee: Award Realty, Inc. v. Copeland, 698 S.W.2d 337 (Tenn. 1985) ; Campbell v. Arthur H. Campbell & Co., 155 Tenn. 515, 296 S.W. 9 (1927) .

Wyoming: Guggenmos v. Tom Searl-Frank McCue, Inc., 481 P.2d 48 (Wyo. 1971) .

See also Hale & Hale, Ltd. v. Arnold & Jeanie Pettit Declaration of Trust, 298 S.W.3d 104, 110 (Mo. Ct. App. 2009) (The wife's interactions with one of the brokers and her testimony supported the finding that her husband was acting as her agent when he contracted with the broker to sell the property.), transfer denied, 2009 Mo. LEXIS 580 (Dec. 22, 2009) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Pasley v. Barber, 368 P.2d 549 (Alaska 1962) .

District of Columbia: Pepper v. Chatel, 185 A.2d 508 (D.C. 1962) .

Louisiana: Cox v. Green, 70 So. 2d 724 (La. Ct. App. 1954) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See, e.g.:

Kansas: Staley v. Hufford, 73 Kan. 686, 85 P. 763 (1906) (letter showing that plaintiffs expected to pay nothing if the deal was not closed did not alter the general rule).

Pennsylvania: Smith v. Graham, 101 Pa. Super. 604 (1930) .

Texas: Caneer v. Martin, 238 S.W.2d 828 (Tex. Civ. App. 1951) (despite condition in brokerage contract that transaction be closed before commission became due, the court held that the defendant's arbitrary refusal to sign superceded the agreement).

(n21)Footnote 21. Clark v. Ray, 25 S.W.2d 656 (Tex. Civ. App. 1930) (brokerage contract called for commissions to be paid unless the deal fell through due to "title defects" and decision not to sign was held not to constitute a defect in title as contemplated at the time of signing).

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g.:

Arkansas: Portis v. Thrash, 216 Ark. 946, 229 S.W.2d 127 (1950) .

Maine: Roy v. Huard, 157 Me. 477, 174 A.2d 41 (1961) .

Texas: Cotten v. Willingham, 232 S.W. 572 (Tex. Civ. App. 1921) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Max Broock, Inc. v. Walker, 349 Mich. 63, 84 N.W.2d 336 (1957) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See, e.g.:

Florida: Hensley Ins. Co. v. Echols, 159 Fla. 324, 31 So. 2d 625 (1947) .

Louisiana: Guy L. Deano, Inc. v. Michel, 191 La. 233, 185 So. 9 (1938) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See, e.g.:

California: Russell v. Ramm, 200 Cal. 348, 254 P. 532 (1927) .

District of Columbia: Pepper v. Chatel, 185 A.2d 508 (D.C. 1962) .

Michigan: Koffman v. Pack, 224 Mich. 102, 194 N.W. 586 (1923) .

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g.:

Alaska: Pasley v. Barber, 368 P.2d 549 (Alaska 1962) .

California: McAlinden v. Nelson, 121 Cal. App. 2d 136, 262 P.2d 627 (1953) .

Kentucky: Hurt v. Sands Co., 236 Ky. 729, 33 S.W.2d 653 (1930) .

Contra:

Texas: Peters v. Coleman, 263 S.W.2d 639 (Tex. Civ. App. 1953) writ of error refused no reversible error.

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

90 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.05

§ 4.05 Effect of Licensing Laws on Broker's Right to Compensation

[1] Introduction

Depending on how each state's real estate licensing law defines real estate, no state allows a real estate broker to recover a commission unless the broker has a real estate license recognized by that state. n1 Real estate broker licensing laws are regulatory n2 in nature, are designed to protect the public from dishonest and incompetent brokers and include penalties for violation of their provisions. n3 Contracts made in violation of licensing laws are generally held to be illegal and courts will not enforce them, n4 even though the unlicensed broker has performed his or her task conscientiously and to the satisfaction of his or her principal. n5 It is irrelevant whether the unlicensed person stated that he or she did or did not have a license. The issue is whether that person did the things that a licensed broker would have done. n6

Courts have acknowledged that application of statutes requiring that individuals be licensed before they can recover a commission seems harsh and unjust in that it may deprive plaintiffs from receiving money duly earned. n7 One court has stated that it is possible that, "Injustice is the hallmark of the brokers' licensing acts." n8

Licensing laws often require that sellers and lessors pay their commissions to a broker agency rather than to the individual agent who works under the auspices of the broker agency. n9 Often a lawsuit to recover a commission must be filed by the agent's broker rather than the individual agent involved in the transaction. n9.1

A statute that prevents an unlicensed individual from recovering a commission can have a broad reach. For example, New York Real Property Law § 442-d, which prevents an unlicensed individual from pursuing an action to recover broker's fees, has been held to bar suits in federal courts as well as state courts. n10 This statute has also been held to apply to property located outside New York. n11 However, § 442-d applies only in transactions where real estate is the dominant feature; it will not apply where the real estate involved is only incidental to the transaction. n12 In considering such a statute, counsel must consider the particular statute and how it has been applied by courts that have interpreted it.

Some jurisdictions define the term real estate broker to include more than the traditional providing of services in connection with the sale or purchase of real estate. For example, the District of Columbia defines this term to include anyone who negotiates a loan secured by a mortgage, deed of trust, or other encumbrance on real property. n13 Persons providing such services who are not licensed as real estate brokers may find themselves unable to sue to collect the compensation allegedly due for such services. However, some courts have allowed severability of contracts involving a broad range of services to be provided by an unlicensed person. While the unlicensed person cannot recover compensation for services which required a license, the unlicensed person can recover compensation for those services performed under the contract which did not require a license. n14 The issue of compensation for the provision of services requiring a broker's license and services not requiring a broker's license, in the context of a business broker, is discussed in § 12.02, below.

The requirement that a real estate broker be licensed to legally enforce his or her right to a commission seems very straightforward. Problems arise, however, in situations where a broker acquires the license after the listing contract is made but before his or her cause of action arises, or when a broker performs services under a lapsed license, having negligently failed to renew it, or if a party licensed in one state does business in or affecting land in another. A broker may forfeit his or her right to a commission if the broker employs unlicensed salespersons or arranges to split fees with an unlicensed broker. Problems can also arise if the broker was licensed when the brokerage services were rendered, but was not licensed when the closing occurred. This was the situation in Atlantic Commercial Group, Inc. v. Dunham n15 which involved the sale of commercial real estate pursuant to an option contract. The problem stemmed from New Jersey Statutes Annotated 45:15-3 which precluded a broker from suing to collect a commission without alleging and proving that he or she was a licensed broker when the cause of action arose. The seller in this case, who failed to pay the broker's commission, argued that the cause of action arose at closing. This argument was rejected. The court found that the governing statutory provision required that the broker be licensed when the brokerage services were performed and completed. The court stated that even though the broker may not have earned the commission until closing, there was no sound reason why a broker who was duly licensed when the brokerage services were rendered should not be entitled to the commission simply because the broker was not licensed at the time of closing. n16 Real estate broker licensing statutes may even affect business brokers if the sale of a business involves incidental real estate.

California statutorily imposes a duty on an escrow holder to obtain evidence that a real estate broker was regularly licensed before delivering compensation to the broker. n17

Though it appears to be a well settled rule in most jurisdictions that an agreement to compensate an unlicensed real estate broker is illegal and unenforceable, an illegal agreement for real estate brokerage services, by itself, does not invalidate or require rescission of the underlying real estate contract procured through the efforts of the unlicensed broker. n18

One court has held that a substantial violation of a broker licensing law could constitute a defense to a brokerage commission claim even though the applicable state licensing law did not require forfeiture of a commission for a substantial violation. n18.1

[2] Isolated Transactions

An unlicensed broker, suing for a commission, may claim that he or she has engaged in a single, isolated transaction. While many early cases held that a person need not get a license for an isolated transaction, n19 a single transaction will today be held to bring a party within the licensing requirements. For example, in Owens v. Capri, n20 the Supreme Court of Wyoming denied recovery of a commission to a cattle rancher whose only act as a broker was the subject of the suit. The statute cited by the court read, in pertinent part: "One act for a compensation or valuable consideration of buying or selling real estate ... shall constitute the person ... performing, offering, or attempting to perform any of the acts enumerated herein, a real estate broker or a real estate salesman within the meaning of this Act." n21 In fact, only the Virgin Islands, which requires licensing only for those "engaging in any such business" n22 of real estate brokering, will allow recovery for one who engaged in one isolated transaction and did not hold himself or herself out as a broker. n23 Approximately one-half of the states have enacted "single act" provisions to require licensure for any single transaction involving real estate. n24

[3] Finders or Middlemen

Commonly, a party suing for a commission will claim that he or she is a finder or a middleman and, therefore, outside the purview of a broker licensing statute. n25 The difference between a broker and a finder is that a broker has authority to engage in negotiations while a finder's role is limited to bringing two parties together--a "door opener." n26 In Tyrone v. Kelly, n27 the plaintiff sued to recover a commission for finding a lender for a construction project. The California Supreme Court held that the policies underlying licensing statutes do not apply to mere finders. The court stated:

One who merely introduces two parties to a real estate transaction, whether or not he solicits those persons, does not need to be as knowledgeable about real estate transactions as a licensed broker, unless, of course he participates in the negotiations. n28

On the other hand, the Superior Court of Pennsylvania held in Harrison v. Soffer, n29 "that the mere introduction of two willing parties comes within the purview of the [Pennsylvania] statute." n30 It continued:

We cannot give to the word "negotiate", in the sense intended by the Legislature, the strict construction contended for by appellee. If we should do so, it would exclude from the regulatory purpose of the Act a great percentage of brokers and salesmen who normally do no more than acquaint prospective buyers and sellers with the location and price of available property, and who annually comply with the licensing feature of the Act in the belief that they are covered by it. n31

It should be borne in mind, as noted previously (see § 3.02 above) that it is not the descriptive word that counts, but whether the activity of the finder or middleman is embraced within the licensing statute. Most states draft their license laws with a very broad application in order to achieve a maximum regulatory effect on the brokerage business. Under most state statutes, a "finder" would fall under the definition of "broker" if he or she ultimately has the goal of achieving a sale, rent, purchase or lease of real estate. n32

Finders must show that the transaction flowed directly from the finder's introduction of the parties in order to be entitled to collect his or fee. Brokerage commissions ordinarily become due when the broker produces to his or her principal a party ready, willing and able to purchase on the terms of sale authorized or accepted by such principal. While a finder may be entitled to a finder's fee in a special business situation for merely introducing and bringing the parties together to conduct their own negotiations, a licensed real estate broker generally cannot recover unless the broker brings the parties to an agreement. n32.1

While non-licensed individuals frequently assert that they are finders, there are instances when a licensed broker may be found to have been a finder. In such a case, the broker may be found to have no fiduciary duties or disclosure obligations to the seller. However, the seller may owe the broker a commission for acting as a finder. n33

[4] Time of Procurement of License

Sometimes a real estate broker will be unlicensed at the time a listing contract is executed but will have acquired a license at some time thereafter. n34 Where the state statute requires that a broker be licensed before engaging in the business of a real estate broker, courts have held that a license acquired after services are rendered will not apply retroactively and will deny a broker's recovery. n35 Geneva Invest. Ltd. v. Trafalgar Developers, Ltd., n36 construed a Florida licensing statute, which reads:

475.41 Contracts of unregistered person for commissions invalid

No contract for a commission or compensation for any act or service ... shall be valid unless the broker or salesman shall have complied with this chapter in regard to registration and renewal of the certificate at the time the act or service was performed [Emphasis supplied by court.] n37

The Geneva court interpreted this to mean that a license is not required at the time of contracting, but a broker must be licensed "at the time he renders the services for which he is entitled to compensation." n38 Courts in Arkansas and Louisiana, which have statutes requiring only that a broker be duly licensed in order to recover a commission, hold that contracts entered into by unlicensed brokers are illegal and void as against public policy. n39

Many states require a broker to be licensed when the cause of action arose. A few states have construed such a provision to allow a broker to recover a commission as long as the broker is licensed before his or her services are completed or the contract is breached. n40 For example, in Schreibman v. L.I. Combs & Sons, Inc., n41 the plaintiff broker signed a listing contract to sell land in Indiana. At the time of contracting, plaintiff, a licensed broker in New York, was unlicensed in Indiana, but subsequently, and before defendant breached the agreement, acquired an Indiana broker's license. The Seventh Circuit held that, under Indiana law, the fact that a broker is unlicensed at the time a contract is entered into does not of itself make the contract void, where a license is subsequently obtained before the broker's cause of action arose. n42

In several jurisdictions, the requirement that a broker be licensed at the time the cause of action arose has been construed to mean that a broker must be licensed when his or her services are performed, and having a license when the sale is consummated or the commission is due, is insufficient. n43 Bendell v. DeDominicis, n44 a New York case, involved a broker whose license had expired. Before he renewed it he procured a buyer who made an offer for a parcel of land which was not accepted. The buyer, however, entered into a contract after the broker had renewed his license but without further intervention on his part. Holding that the broker was not entitled to a commission for services illegally rendered without a license, the court wrote:

Otherwise an unlicensed broker might negotiate sales with impunity up to the point of a complete agreement and then obtain his license for the purpose of recovering his commissions on the execution of a formal contract. The law is not so toothless. n45

The Bendell court also reasoned that, since a broker's commission usually becomes due when he produces a ready, willing and able buyer, obtaining a license after such point but before the consummation of the transaction is ineffective.

If a broker's license expires subsequent to the making of a listing contract but before performance, he will not be able to recover a commission. n46 Conversely, if a broker's license expires after performance, but before the closing, or before he brings an action for the commission, the broker will be granted a recovery. n47

[5] Where Broker Is Licensed But Associates or Employees Are Unlicensed

Even though a broker is duly licensed, he may have trouble recovering his commission if he worked on a sale with unlicensed partners or salespersons. n48 A real estate salesperson, who must be employed by a broker, is also required to be licensed. Where a licensed broker employs an unlicensed salesperson who works on a transaction the broker may be denied recovery of the commission. n49 In Meltzer v. Crescent Leaseholds, Ltd., n50 a federal district court, construing New York's broker licensing statute n51 stated that "the participation of the unlicensed broker or salesman as a substantial factor in effectuating the transaction renders it unlawful." n52

A broker will be precluded from recovering a commission if his licensed salesperson performs acts reserved under the applicable state statute to licensed brokers. n53 Of course, if the unlicensed salesperson was not a party to the particular transaction sued upon, the broker will not be precluded from recovery. n54 The rule is different when both are licensed. In Braden v. Isabell K. Horsely Real Estate, n55 a licensed salesperson obtained a listing but ended his affiliation with the sponsoring broker prior to closing. The court held that the salesperson would not be deprived of the right to sue for his part of the commission, particularly since the sale was consummated and the broker received a substantial commission.

When a licensed broker and an unlicensed broker enter into a listing contract, neither one may be able to recover. n56 The court, in Wasson v. Hart, n57 for example, denied a licensed broker's action for commission, on the grounds that his fee-splitting arrangement with an unlicensed broker made the entire commission agreement void and illegal under Texas law. The court in Kemmerer v. Rascher n58 reached the same result, when the parties were an individual licensed as a real estate broker and a corporation that was not so licensed at the time the cause of action arose. However, if the licensed broker justifiably but mistakenly believed that a broker with whom he was working had a license, he would probably be allowed to recover. n59 In an interpleader action to establish rights to a commission between a licensed broker and an unlicensed broker, the licensed broker may be unable to plead the other's lack of license, as he is not within the class intended to be protected by licensing statutes. n60

Under Maryland law it is held that a holder of a Maryland broker's license may not recover a commission where the broker's agents, in procuring the sale of real estate, do not have a Maryland license. The fact that the agent is licensed in another jurisdiction will not save the commission. One factor considered by the court in coming to this holding was the relative ease by which individuals who are licensed in other states can obtain a Maryland license. n61

[6] Corporations

Licensing of corporations depends entirely upon each state's statutes. n62 In most cases, it involves the issuance of two licenses--one for the corporation and one for a designated broker of that corporation--making the ability to engage in a brokerage practice interdependent on both licenses remaining active. n63 Conversely, if there is a defalcation or a breach of fiduciary duty on the part of the corporation, both licenses are in danger of suspension by the licensing authority.

Where a licensed broker, working for an unlicensed corporation, or an unlicensed broker working for a licensed corporation makes a sale, the corporation may have trouble recovering a commission. In Magoba Management v. Central Zone Property Corp., n64 the New York Supreme Court denied a commission to a licensed corporation where the negotiations were entered into by an unlicensed officer (rather than the duly designated officer) of the brokerage corporation. On the other hand, Matthews-Pelton, Inc. v. LeBlanc n65 held that a licensed corporation could recover its commission, even though the employee acting for the corporation did not become licensed until after the sale was consummated.

Conversely, in Star Realty Corp. v. Sellers, n66 the president of a corporation was a licensed real estate broker, but the corporation was not duly licensed. The Supreme Court of New Mexico, in denying the claim for commission, wrote:

Even though there is evidence that the corporation may have been entitled to a broker's license, there is no evidence that one was ever applied for or issued to it It is not enough that Mr. Williams [corporation president] held such a license. He is not the plaintiff. n67

Not all jurisdictions strictly impose such double licensing requirements. For example, Connecticut requires that if a corporation is licensed as a real estate broker, every officer who actively participates in its brokerage business must be licensed as a broker. In a case where the corporation's president was licensed as a salesperson rather than a broker, the court found that this failure to be duly licensed as a broker was not a bar to the corporation's recovery of a commission because the licensing law also provided that it should not prevent any licensee from recovering any commission, compensation or other payment in respect to any acts done or services rendered, if it would be inequitable to deny such recovery. The court found that a corporate broker licensee, whose president was not licensed as a broker, may not be denied its right to recover a commission otherwise earned solely because of that licensing failure. Instead, the corporation's right to recover was to be gauged under all of the facts and circumstances of the case and whether it would be inequitable, in light of those facts and circumstances, to deny the broker the right to recover its commission. n68

[7] Partnerships

A licensed brokerage partnership may not be able to recover commissions if an unlicensed partner performed the services under a listing contract, n69 as the individual partner would be acting in violation of the statute. But if, in an unlicensed partnership, all the partners are licensed, a partner may recover individually if acting in his own right and not on behalf of the partnership. n70

In Heinfelt v. Arth, n71 the California District Court of Appeal upheld the right of licensed brokers to act in partnership, even though the partnership is not separately licensed and the statute calls for partnerships to be licensed. The court wrote:

The essential requirement of the act is that every person, natural or artificial, operating as a real estate broker, must obtain a license so to do ... [I]t is in accord with both the letter and the spirit of the act to hold that fully licensed individuals may work in partnership with each other without obtaining another license in the firm name, the only possible effect of which would be to license the same individuals who are already licensed. n72

[8] Conflict of Laws Issues

Complex questions of conflict of laws arise when brokers are employed to sell land in states in which they are not licensed. n73 The relevant factors to consider when faced with such a situation include:

- (1) where the contract was formed;
- (2) where performance is to take place;
- (3) where the land is located; and
- (4) in what jurisdiction(s) the broker is licensed. n74

Landmark Commercial Realty, Inc. v. Developers Diversified, Ltd. n75 illustrates the problem with pursuing a commission that can arise when a broker acts in a foreign jurisdiction. The broker in this case was licensed in Florida, but the land that was sold was located in Ohio. The court found that the broker was precluded under Ohio law from claiming a commission on the sale of Ohio real estate since the broker was not registered in Ohio. n76

Often laws of the affected states are the same with respect to real estate licensees: to collect a commission, the broker must be a duly licensed real estate broker. When the law is the same and the resolution of a dispute would be the same in all potentially affected states, it has been held that no state has an interest in having its own law applied with the result being that there is no conflict of laws. n77

[9] Business Brokers--Where Real Property Is Included in Sale of Business

While Wisconsin requires business brokers to be licensed under the same rules as real estate brokers, n78 most states do not require business brokers to be licensed. n79 This may create problems for a business broker in obtaining commissions, as sales of businesses generally include, to some extent, transactions involving real property. There are two general theories under which commissions can be determined on the sale of businesses involving real estate:

- (1) the "bright-line" theory or,
- (2) the "mere incidental" theory.

The "bright-line" theory holds that if a sale of the ongoing business includes any real estate component, no matter how small that component may be, the broker will be denied any commission unless he has a real estate license. n80

In a number of other jurisdictions, however, the test is whether the real estate involved was "merely incidental" to the sale of the business.

In Weingast v. Rialto Pastry Shop, Inc., n81 a business broker sued for a commission for his part in effecting the sale of a restaurant. In finding for the broker, the New York Court of Appeals wrote:

One who makes a specialty of procuring purchasers for restaurants, drug stores, grocery stores, and the like as going concerns, where a lease simply goes with the place as a part of the good will, does not become, within this law, a real estate broker. As failure to procure a license is made a crime, the statute must not be extended by implication. [citation omitted] n82

Other jurisdictions hold similarly. The courts supporting the "mere incidental" theory stress that real estate broker statutes are intended to protect unsophisticated home buyers, and not knowledgeable individuals buying and selling entire businesses, which seems to assume that all people who deal in businesses are sophisticated and all people who deal in residential real estate are not.

Either the "bright-line" or the "mere incidental" theory begs the question as to whether or not the conveyances involve real estate. In many areas of the law, fixtures constitute real estate, as do certain mineral interests, even though they may be excluded under individual states' statutes involving real estate licensees. Therefore, in either case, state law determines whether or not the items being conveyed constitute "real estate." n83

There is always an exception to the general rule. At least one jurisdiction (New Jersey) requires that the personal property component outweigh the real estate component in order for the business broker to recover a commission on the personal property. In Kazmer-Standish Consultants v. Schoeffel Instruments Corp., n84 the court supported the severability view (i.e., that the business broker may only recover a commission based on the personalty element of the commission, not the value of the entire transaction), arguing that the real estate licensing statute should not apply to parties buying and selling businesses.

A South Carolina court has followed the lead of the New Jersey court. In Roberts v. Gaskins n85 the court stated:

[A] business broker unlicensed as a real estate broker may enforce a commission contractually earned on the sale of the personal property of a business, irrespective of the form of sale, even though the sale may include real estate; provided, of course, no commission can be based either directly or indirectly on the value of the real property involved. n86

Issues involving business brokers are discussed in greater detail in Chapter 12 below .

[10] Disciplinary Actions Resulting from Commission Disputes

It is a relatively simple matter for a disgruntled purchaser or seller to file a complaint with the state real estate commission. It should be no surprise that disputes over commissions have triggered such complaints. Ohio Department of Commerce, Division of Real Estate v. DePugh n87 illustrates the importance of relying upon an attorney's advice before pursuing the collection of a disputed commission. After consulting with his attorney and receiving the attorney's advice to sue the sellers, the broker sued for his commission. He lost at trial. The sellers (the defendants in the commission dispute case) subsequently filed a grievance against the broker. The commission's formal hearing notice stated that the broker had "demanded, without reasonable cause, by way of a lawsuit ... a real estate commission

Your conduct in this regard is a violation of Ohio Revised Code Section 4735.18(A)(10) and is misconduct, incompetency, and/or gross negligence" n88 The hearing commissioner concluded that the broker had reasonably relied upon the advice of his attorney when filing suit against the sellers and that there had been no statutory violations. The commission disagreed and found that the broker had committed the violations alleged in its hearing notice. The broker appealed this decision and the first court hearing this appeal reversed the commission's order. The commission then appealed. The reversal of the commission's order was sustained. This court discussed the hearing examiner's conclusion regarding the broker's reliance upon his attorney. This court stated:

The hearing examiner recognized the difference between two types of reliance when he wrote that a real estate licensee's significant reliance on an attorney's advice "is not unfettered," but rather is a basic consideration which may weigh strongly in a case. The hearing examiner further concluded that [the broker's] reliance on his attorney's advice weighed strongly in the case sub judice because "the attorney did the primary evaluation of the case [against the sellers] and decided legal action was warranted." ... We readily acknowledge that under different circumstances, a real estate licensee facing an R.C. 4735.18 misconduct action may not be able to use a legal professional's advice as a shield. Whether a real estate licensee's reliance upon legal advice was reasonable, proper, and in accordance with real estate licensee professional standards must be evaluated under each case's unique facts and circumstances. n89

Brokers who choose to sue for their commissions should ensure that they have a reasonable legal basis for asserting their right to payment. If they lose their case, there is the possibility that a complaint may be filed against them by the disgruntled, but successful seller. A spurious suit may ultimately subject a broker to disciplinary sanctions.

The DePugh case also illustrates an attitude of some state real estate commissions which appear to function with an anti-broker attitude. Brokers and their counsel should realize that this appears to be the climate with some commissions and pursue appropriate appeals when state real estate commissions, such as the one in the DePugh case, behave arbitrarily and capriciously.

[11] Can Fees Paid to an Unlicensed Broker Be Recovered?

Most jurisdictions bar actions to recover commissions earned by unlicensed brokers. The issue may arise, however, as to whether fees paid to an unlicensed broker may be recovered. n90 Frequently statutes that bar unlicensed brokers from suing to collect commissions are silent as to whether individuals are entitled to recover compensation already paid. Generally, more is required to impel a court to action than to convince the court to leave matters where they are. Justice Cardozo wrote while on the New York Court of Appeals:

The law may at times refuse to aid a wrongdoer in getting that which good conscience permits him to receive; it will not for that reason aid another in taking away from him that which good conscience entitles him to retain. n91

Under this reasoning, many jurisdictions reject any automatic recovery rule. n92 One court has stated that the case for recovery for amounts paid is a function "of the strength of the public policy involved together with the degree of violation of that policy under the facts of the case." n93 However, some states statutorily permit the recovery of a commission paid to an unlicensed broker. n94

The Supreme Court of New Hampshire has held that a condominium association that acted as an unlicensed real estate broker by collecting commissions on the sale and rental of condominiums could be ordered to return commissions on a theory of unjust enrichment. This decision was based in part on the fact that if an unlicensed broker was allowed to retain any commissions it had collected, such unlicensed persons would be encouraged to seek advance payments which would undermine the purpose of the licensing statute. n95

When the disgorgement of compensation paid to an unlicensed broker is not automatic, the circumstances of the particular case must be considered to determine whether disgorgement is required to vindicate public policy underlying the statute. n96 Circumstances that favor disgorgement include:

- Significant injury to the user as a result of acts of the type the statute was intended to protect against.
- Bad faith or knowing violation of the law by the unlicensed broker.
- The vulnerability or relative lack of sophistication of the user of the services.
- Whether the applicable statute expressly or by clear implication favors, but does not require, disgorgement.

Circumstances weighing against disgorgement are the converse of the above and include the following:

- Whether disgorgement would unjustly enrich the user of the services.
- Whether the sanction of disgorgement would be disproportionate to the violation.
- Whether the unlicensed broker acted in good faith and can retain the payments in equity and good conscience.
- Whether the user violated the law, especially if the user was in pari delicto.
- Whether the violation was merely technical or was not a knowing violation.
- Whether the user of services was knowledgeable and sophisticated.

The balancing of the equities in light of relevant public policy is usually left to the discretion of the trial court. n97

[12] Employees of Developers May Need to Be Licensed to Recover Commission

A developer may employ salespersons to sell the houses or condominiums the developer builds. If the employment agreement with these salespersons provides compensation in the form of a commission, the employee is advised to carefully read any applicable licensing statutes. Some statutory licensing laws provide a separate category of licensure for employees of builders and developers. n98 The failure to be licensed may result in the employee receiving no compensation should the developer refuse to pay the agreed upon commission. n99

[13] Assignment of a Commission

As a general rule, one real estate licensee can assign a commission to another real estate licensee as long as the underlying brokerage agreement does not contain a valid anti-assignment clause and there is no statutory prohibition regarding such an assignment. n99.1

The assignment of a commission to an unlicensed party by a licensee may raise the issue of whether the non-licensed assignee can step into the shoes of the licensee. An Ohio court considered this issue when a licensed broker assigned its right to receive a commission to one of its former real estate salespersons. Since the salesperson was not a licensed broker, he had no independent right to sue for the commission. This issue was governed by a statutory provision which stated in part, "No right of action shall accrue to any person, partnership, association, or corporation for the collection of compensation for the performance of the acts mentioned in section 4735.01 of the Revised Code, without alleging and proving that such person, partnership, association, or corporation was licensed as a real estate broker or foreign real estate dealer." n100 The court found that the crucial phrase was "no right of action shall accrue." There was no question but that the broker, the entity claiming the initial entitlement to the commission, was a licensed real estate broker at the time the cause of action accrued. The court held that when a right of action accrues for the payment of compensation, a broker who is licensed at the time the right of action accrues may validly assign that right of action, and the assignee of that right of action is not required to prove that the assignee is a licensed broker in order to maintain that right of action. n101

Other courts have held that an agent should be able to assign a commission due pursuant to his or her independent contractor agreement with his or her broker. Under such an assignment, the assignee should be able sue to collect the commission should the broker refuse to pay the commission. n102

There are lenders who make loans to real estate licensees where the licensee assigns a commission from a pending real estate transaction to secure the loan. Such lenders consider this practice to be factoring, but as discussed below, one court has found such a transaction to be a consumer loan. At least two courts have held that the assignment of a pending real estate commission in exchange for a cash advance does not involve commission splitting because the licensee's and the assignee's claims to the commission are supported by separate and distinct consideration. Since both the earning of the commission and its assignment are supported by discrete and valuable consideration, such specialized lenders are not engaging in commission splitting. n103

In Decision Point, Inc. v. Nichols & Reece Realtors, Inc., n104 the Supreme Court of Kansas held that a lender who advanced cash to a real estate agent for personal, family, or household purposes in return for the assignment of an anticipated commission had made a consumer loan subject to the Uniform Consumer Credit Code (UCCC). n105 The plaintiff provided cash advances to real estate agents with commissions pending from real estate transactions. In return, the plaintiff took a percentage of the real estate commission. The plaintiff required that agents sign a Master Repurchase and Security Agreement (agreement), which irrevocably assigned the real estate agent's rights to receive the pending commission to the plaintiff and authorized the settlement agent or real estate company to pay the plaintiff directly. The agent was required to acknowledge that the transaction was "not a loan or a consumer transaction, but the sale of a business account receivable at a discount for commercial purposes." If the assigned commission was insufficient to satisfy the obligation, the agent was required to immediately pay the deficiency and any penalties assessed by the agreement. If the commission was not paid because the real estate transaction failed to close, the agent was required to repurchase the accounts receivable for the full amount of the assigned commission. The agreement also granted the plaintiff a security interest in all of the real estate agent's current and future commissions, accounts, general intangibles, contract rights, leases, chattel paper, other rights to receive money, and all cash and noncash proceeds from the foregoing items.

Litigation arose when cash advances the plaintiff had made were not repaid at settlement; instead the broker paid the commissions directly to the agents involved rather than the plaintiff even though the plaintiff had filed the necessary documents to perfect its security interest. When the agents involved defaulted on their agreements, the plaintiff sued the agents' broker. The plaintiff argued that the transactions were secured transactions governed by Article 9 of the Uniform Commercial Code. The plaintiff asserted that it had purchased the agents' accounts for a discount rather than issuing credit. The plaintiff claimed that UCCC did not apply because the transactions at issue were not consumer transactions. The broker argued that the transactions were subject to the UCCC because the cash advances received by the agents were consumer loans used for personal, family, or household purposes. The court agreed with the broker and found that commissions paid to agents who worked as independent contractors were earnings under the UCCC. The UCCC precluded the assignment of earnings. Since the agents had assigned their earnings in violation of the UCCC, the plaintiff could not enforce the assignment against the broker. n106

When an agent changes brokers, issues can arise regarding the departing agent's commissions. The handling of such commissions must accord with the applicable laws regulating brokers and agents. For example, in Richard Bowers &

Co. v. Creel, n107 the agent's agreement with his former broker provided for an equal split of commissions between the broker and agent for existing lease accounts when the agent departed, but changed this split to 45% for the former agent and 55% for the prior broker if existing lease accounts were renewed or expanded through the agent after his departure from the broker. When the agent's former broker sued to enforce this agreement, the court held that a contract term requiring an agent to pay his former broker commissions earned with a new broker, absent a written agreement between the former and new broker, was unlawful. n108 The court relied upon Georgia Code § 43-40-19 (c) which provides that an agent transferring to a new broker may continue to act for the former broker with regard to transactions begun prior to the transfer, provided that both brokers have a written agreement listing the transactions involved, the former broker assumes responsibilities for the agent's activities in these listed transactions and the agreement states how the former broker will compensate the agent.

[14] Substantial Compliance Doctrine

Washington courts apply a substantial compliance doctrine with respect to statutory provisions that require licensure before a person can sue with respect to an activity requiring licensure. n109 If the party has substantially complied with the licensing law and the failure is a technical defect that does not defeat the purpose of the underlying law, Washington courts will allow the unlicensed party to proceed with its suit. In a case involving an unlicensed corporate salesperson that was suing for its commission, the court noted that a corporation cannot sit for an examination. All that was required for a license was the submission of the articles of incorporation and a list of officers to ensure the legitimacy of the corporate entity. In this case there was no question but that the corporate entity was legal and its officers and employees were themselves duly licensed. Had the officers filed a corporate application and submitted the articles and the list of officers, the corporation would have been licensed because there was no other requirement. The court held that the doctrine of substantial compliance applied to the brokers' act, and that under the facts of the case before it there had been substantial compliance. The court stated: "To hold otherwise under these circumstances would stress form over substance and could transform a socially desirable licensing scheme 'into an unwarranted shield for the avoidance of a just obligation.' " n110

Other courts have rejected any application of a substantial compliance doctrine to real estate licensees. n111

[15] Out-of-State Cooperating Brokers

Some courts have held that an out-of-state broker need not comply with local real estate licensure requirements as long as the out-of-state broker works through a cooperating local broker. n112 This has been referred to as a "cooperating broker exception" to the licensing statutes. n113 Some legislatures have chosen to address this "exception" statutorily. n114 Some courts have found statutes that attempt to prohibit an in-state licensee from sharing a commission with a broker licensed in another state to be unconstitutional and in violation of the Commerce Clause by acting as a protectionist economic restraint on commerce by favoring in-state over out-of-state brokers. n115

Conversely some jurisdictions do not allow a broker to share a commission with an unlicensed broker. n116 Even when the unlicensed broker is a cobroker licensed in another state, the ban on sharing a commission with an unlicensed broker will apply. The existence of such a cobrokerage agreement may be found to bar recovery of a commission by the properly licensed broker involved in the transaction when the other participant is not licensed in the applicable jurisdiction. n117

[16] Location Where the Brokerage Services Are Performed

In some instances a duly licensed broker is involved with the sale of property located in another state where the broker is unlicensed. Normally this situation will result in the broker being unable to collect a commission. However, in some cases the broker has argued that even though the subject property is located in a state where the broker is unlicensed, the brokerage services were rendered in the state where the broker was licensed.

In the typical transaction involving a broker, some brokerage services are performed in the state where the subject property is located. In this scenario, many jurisdictions bar recovery of any commission by the broker who is not licensed in the state where the property is located. There are cases, however, where brokers have either successfully made this argument or where courts have appeared willing to accept this argument.

In Wayne A. Vandenburg Enterprises, Inc. v. Park Drive Manor, Inc.,ⁿ¹¹⁸ a case involving a plaintiff "finder," the real estate was located in Pennsylvania, but material elements of the plaintiff's performance occurred in Illinois. The matter before the court was a motion for summary judgment. The court stated that the purpose of the statute prohibiting recovery of compensation by unlicensed brokers was to prevent recovery for activities conducted within Pennsylvania.ⁿ¹¹⁹ The court found that the plaintiff's introduction of the parties in Illinois appeared to be the contractual performance on which the plaintiff's claim was founded and that the meetings which occurred in Pennsylvania "amounted to no more than collateral and incidental services." In denying summary judgment, the court stated that unless it could be shown that brokerage services occurred in Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania brokerage law did not apply.ⁿ¹²⁰

In Sun Sales Corp. v. Block Land, Inc.,ⁿ¹²¹ the court held that the Pennsylvania Licensing Act did not apply to transactions occurring outside of Pennsylvania even though the subject property was located in Pennsylvania. This case involved New York corporations that had contracted to sell Pennsylvania land throughout the United States. The court stated that the New York corporations were suing over rights contained in a New York contract, written in New York and governed by New York law, to be performed in New York and elsewhere, but presumably not in Pennsylvania.ⁿ¹²²

Other courts, however, find that the location of the property is a paramount factor in considering the application of a licensing law. In a case involving a broker licensed in New York and the sale of New Jersey property, the broker argued that New York law should be applied to the case because the broker was licensed as a real estate broker in New York, the defendants resided and were headquartered in New York, all information concerning the subject property came through defendants' New York offices, the final sale of the property was closed in New York, and New York has a paramount interest in seeing that its licensed brokers are compensated.ⁿ¹²³ The court stated that among the traditional factors in a choice-of-law analysis involving a property transaction, "the heaviest weight is given to the location of the property being transferred."ⁿ¹²⁴ Since the property was located in New Jersey and the plaintiff admitted that over 100 meetings were held at the property site, this was more than the "single act" required to trigger the application of the New Jersey licensing statute. The court found that the plaintiff's claim was barred since the broker was not licensed as a real estate broker in New Jersey when the cause of action arose.ⁿ¹²⁵

[17] Consulting Fees Versus Commissions

When a party lacking the appropriate licensure claims that the party is due compensation, sometimes an argument is made that the party was acting as a consultant rather than as a broker. Typically, licensure statutes prevent such arguments from succeeding.ⁿ¹²⁶

There are cases where a real estate licensee asserts that compensation was a consultant's fee rather than a commission earned in the capacity as a real estate licensee. One example where this may occur with a licensee is where a licensee seeks compensation for work performed in a state where the individual is not licensed.ⁿ¹²⁷ In some situations the individual claims to have been acting in a capacity other than as a real estate licensee.ⁿ¹²⁸

As a general rule, courts will not allow an individual to call compensation a consultant fee in order to avoid the effects of a statute that required that an individual be licensed in order to seek recovery of the compensation.ⁿ¹²⁹ Changing the title of the compensation or the services provided will not allow recovery of income by an unlicensed individual.

Missouri law contains a provision providing that notwithstanding the requirement that those acting in the capacity of a real estate broker or salesperson must be licensed, a broker who refuses to pay a person who assisted in a real estate transaction, knowing that person was not licensed, is liable to that person for the reasonable value of his or her work. n130 This provision could assist an unlicensed person asserting a quantum meruit claim provided that the person they are suing is duly licensed. n131

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See ch. 6 below. See also Kirkpatrick v. Lawrence, 908 S.W.2d 125 (Ky. App. 1995) (the court restated the "rigid rule" under Kentucky law precluding the enforcement of commission contracts procured by unlicensed brokers. The court specifically rejected the plaintiff's argument that the rule did not apply to a mere "finder," as distinguished from a broker). But see Hunt v. Dark Hill Enters., 867 S.W.2d 497 (Ky. App. 1993) (unlicensed brokers who arranged coal leases, and who were to be compensated ten cents per ton of coal mined and sold under the leases, fell within the exception to the statutory definition of a broker in Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 324.010(1)(a); thus, they were permitted to recover on their finder's fee agreement for coal that came from properties they found and that was sold under the leases).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Blackthorne Group, Inc. v. Pines of Newmarket, Inc., 150 N.H. 804, 806, 848 A.2d 725, 728 (N.H. 2004) , rehearing denied, 2004 N.H. LEXIS 99 (N.H. May 28, 2004) .

Previous statutes under which the licensing requirement was found to be merely a revenue measure and not primarily an exercise of the state's policy power had been held not to preclude an unlicensed broker from recovering a commission. See Garvin v. Gordon, 36 N.M. 304, 14 P.2d 264 (1932) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See:

Federal: Huffman v. Cohen, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51912, at *5 (N.D. Okla. June 19, 2009) , applying Oklahoma law.

New Jersey: Sammarone v. Bovino, 395 N.J. Super. 132, 141-42, 928 A.2d 140, 146 (App. Div. 2007) , cert. denied, 193 N.J. 275, 937 A.2d 977 (2007) .

New York: Handy v. Cohen, 195 Misc. 2d 548, 551-552, 759 N.Y.S.2d 627, 630 (N.Y. City Ct. 2003) aff'd in part, modified in part, 2005 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 709, 2005 NY Slip Op 25143 (N.Y. App. Term Apr. 13, 2005) (statutory quadruple damage award affirmed where broker was not licensed and failed to disclose conflict of interest).

Tennessee: Business Brokerage Centre v. Dixon, 874 S.W.2d 1, 3 (Tenn. 1994) .

Texas: Henry S. Miller v. Treo Enters., 585 S.W.2d 674 (Tex. 1979) .

(n4)Footnote 4.

Alabama: Ex Parte Ledford, 761 So. 2d 990, 994-995 (Ala. 2000) (if a person violates the licensing statute, any agreement to compensate that person is void and unenforceable).

Arizona: Farragut Baggage & Tr. Co. v. Shadron Realty, Inc., 18 Ariz. App. 197, 200, 501 P.2d 38, 41 (1972) ("A plaintiff cannot recover where his cause of action cannot be established without showing that he has broken the law. ... Whenever a statute is made for the protection of the public, a contract in violation of its provisions is void... [citations omitted].").

Colorado: Amedeus Corp. v. McAllister, 2009 Colo. App. LEXIS 221, at *4 (Colo. Ct. App. Feb. 19, 2009) Shotkoski v. Denver Investment Group Inc., 134 P.3d 513, 515 (Colo. Ct. App. 2006) .

District of Columbia: Ashton Gen. Partnership, Inc. v. Federal Data Corp., 682 A.2d 629 (D.C. App. 1996) (under District of Columbia law, an action to collect a commission is barred unless the broker alleges that he or she was duly licensed on the date the cause of action accrued. Upon failure to satisfy the mandatory pleading statute, a defendant may assert that no claim has been stated upon which relief can be granted); RDP Dev. Corp. v. Schwartz, 657 A.2d 301 (D.C. App. 1995) (statute barring recovery of a commission by an unlicensed broker was to be construed generously to encompass commercial real estate transactions involving knowledgeable and sophisticated parties who are capable of protecting themselves).

Florida: Meteor Motors, Inc. v. Thompson Halbach & Associates, 914 So. 2d 479, 483 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2005) .

Indiana: Hoffman v. Dunn, 496 N.E.2d 818 (Ind. Ct. App. 1986) (statute that required a real estate broker or a partnership operating as a real estate broker to procure a license was proper exercise of the state's authority).

New Hampshire: Blackthorne Group, Inc. v. Pines of Newmarket, Inc., 150 N.H. 804, 807, 848 A.2d 725, 729 (N.H. 2004) , rehearing denied, 2004 N.H. LEXIS 99 (N.H. May 28, 2004) (general rule is that contracts with unlicensed brokers are void).

New York: Chappo & Co., Inc. v. Allan Riley Co., Inc., 225 A.D.2d 468, 639 N.Y.S.2d 383, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3173 (1st Dept. 1996) (unlicensed real estate broker cannot bring an action for a commission, notwithstanding the broker's effort to recharacterize the mortgage negotiated by the broker as a leasebacked note transaction); NFS Serv., Inc. v. West 73rd St. Assocs., 102 A.D.2d 388, 477 N.Y.S.2d 135, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18796 (1st Dept. 1984) (real estate broker licensed in New Jersey but not in New York could not recover for breach of contract for services rendered in New York).

Utah: Consolidated Realty Group v. Sizzling Platter, Inc., 930 P.2d 268 (Utah App. 1996) cert. denied, 936 P.2d 407 (Utah 1997) (any terms set forth in agreement between broker and seller with respect to prospective purchasers are indications of those purchasers ultimately desired by the seller, but do not constitute conditions to receiving a commission unless the agreement specifically so requires).

Wisconsin: Greenlee v. Rainbow Auction/Realty Co., 202 Wis. 2d 653, 553 N.W.2d 257 (Wis. App. 1996) review denied, 205 Wis. 2d 134, 555 N.W.2d 815 (Wis. 1996) (the requirement under Wisconsin law that a broker may not collect a commission unless the broker is duly licensed cannot be waived by contracting parties who know that the broker was not licensed).

But cf. Penmont, LLC v. Blue Ridge Piedmont, LLC, 607 F. Supp. 2d 1266, 1270 (M.D. Ala. 2009) , applying Alabama law (The law does not void every contract entered into by an unlicensed real estate broker, but rather only those providing for compensation of the unlicensed broker.).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Terry v. Allied Bancshares, 760 S.W.2d 45 (Tex. App.--Ft. Worth 1988) ; Shehab v. Xanadu, Inc., 698 S.W.2d 491 (Tex. Civ. App. 1985) (unlicensed real estate agent acting as on-site manager of condominium project was precluded from recovering commission on sale of units for failure to comply with Real Estate License Act). See generally Comment, Recovery of Commissions by Unlicensed Real Estate Brokers, 80 Dick. L. Rev. 500 (1976).

See also Winthrop & Co., Inc. v. Milgrom, 447 Pa. Super. 140, 668 A.2d 557 (Pa. Super. 1995) (an unlicensed broker is not barred from receiving a commission in connection with the sale of business assets, even if the same purchaser also bought related real estate, where the sale of the assets occurred in a transaction separate from the sale of the real estate and where the broker sought compensation only for the sale of the assets. The Pennsylvania courts have not yet determined whether the broker could recover compensation based solely on the sale of the business assets where the sale of the assets took place in the same transaction involving the sale of the real estate).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Ex Parte Ledford, 761 So. 2d 990, 995 (Ala. 2000) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Klein v. Antebi, 15 Misc. 3d 901, 911, 832 N.Y.S.2d 904, 912, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1476 (2007) aff'd in part, 53 A.D.3d 529, 861 N.Y.S.2d 143 (App. Div. 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Burke v. Israel, 264 Pa. Super. 286, 294, 399 A.2d 779, 783 (1979) , citing Comment, Recovery of Commissions by Unlicensed Real Estate Brokers, 80 Dick. L. Rev. 500, 524 (1976). But see Sammamone v. Bovino, 395 N.J. Super. 132, 928 A.2d 140 (App. Div. 2007) , cert. denied, 193 N.J. 275, 937 A.2d 977 (2007) , where an unlicensed plaintiff sought promised compensation for introducing the defendant to Leona Helmsley. This contact allowed the defendant to acquire land. The defendant was an experienced real estate developer who was familiar with litigation. It did not escape the court's notice that the defendant had been involved in a prior case where he successfully invoked N.J. Stat. § 45:15-3 to defeat a claim for a commission. The trial court had dismissed the claim because of the plaintiff's unlicensed status. In reversing and remanding for further proceedings, the court stated that if this statute's purpose was to protect the public against unscrupulous and dishonest persons, the court was uncertain as to how that purpose would be furthered by dismissing plaintiff's claim if it developed that the defendant intended to rely upon the statute from the outset.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Venturi & Co. LLC v. Pacific Malibu Development Corp., 172 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1423-1424, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 123, 129 (2009) Axtmann v. Chillemi, 2007 ND 179, 740 N.W.2d 838, 846 (N.D. 2007) ; Rockport Realty Investments, Inc. v. Riedel, 2008 Ohio 820, 2008 Ohio App. LEXIS 711, at *9 (Feb. 29, 2008) Dowlen v. Weathers, 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 289, at *4 (May 17, 2005) , citing Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-13-312(b)(11).

(n10)Footnote 9.1. See, e.g., Matusik v. Ward, 68 A.D.3d 1213, 1214, 892 N.Y.S.2d 561, 563 (2009) .

(n11)Footnote 10. See Tukas Co. v. The Continuum Co., LLC, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5040, at *3 (S.D. N.Y. Mar. 31, 2003) ; American Property Consultants, Ltd. v. Walden Lisle Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9984, at *22 (S.D. N.Y. July 14, 1997) .

(n12)Footnote 11. See Tukas Co. v. The Continuum Co., LLC, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5040, at *3 (S.D. N.Y. Mar. 31, 2003) ; American Property Consultants, Ltd. v. Walden Lisle Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9984, at *23 (S.D. N.Y. July 14, 1997) ; J.I. Kislak, Inc. v. Carol Mgmt. Corp., 7 A.D.2d 428, 184 N.Y.S.2d 315, 317, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9348 (1st Dept. 1959) , appeal denied, 8 A.D.2d 698, 185 N.Y.S.2d 745, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8704 (1st Dept. 1959) .

(n13)Footnote 12. See Berg v. Wilpon, 271 A.D.2d 629, 707 N.Y.S.2d 861, 862, 2000 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4525 (2d Dept. 2000) ; Sorice v. DuBois, 25 A.D.2d 521, 267 N.Y.S.2d 227, 228, 1966 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4870 (1st Dept. 1966) .

(n14)Footnote 13. See Stephen A. Goldberg Co. v. Remsen Partners, Ltd., 170 F.3d 191, 195 (D.C. Cir. 1999) (consultant who assisted client with securitized financing acted as a real estate broker under the District of Columbia Real Estate Licensure Law, D.C. Code § 45-1926).

(n15)Footnote 14. See Mousa v. Saba, 222 Ariz. 581, 586-88, 218 P.3d 1038, 1043-45 (Ariz. Ct. App. 2009) ; Venturi & Co. LLC v. Pacific Malibu Development Corp., 172 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1421-1422, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 123, 127-128 (2009) ; Lindenstadt v. Staff Builders, Inc., 55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 894, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 484, 491 (1997) . Cf. Marathon Entertainment, Inc. v. Blasi, 42 Cal. 4th 974, 990-93, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 727, 737-40, 174 P.3d 741, 750-52 (2008) (allowing partial severability for enforcement of a personal manager employment contract when a license was required for some, but not of the services rendered under the contract).

(n16)Footnote 15. 303 N.J. Super. 122, 696 A.2d 85 (1997) .

(n17)Footnote 16. 303 N.J. Super. 122, 130, 696 A.2d 85, 89 (1997) .

(n18)Footnote 17. See Kangarlou v. Progressive Title Co., Inc., 128 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1179, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 754, 756 (2005) , citing Cal. Business and Professions Code § 10138.

(n19)Footnote 18. See Shotkoski v. Denver Investment Group Inc., 134 P.3d 513, 515 (Colo. Ct. App. 2006) ; United National Bank v. Airport Plaza Ltd. Partnership, 537 So. 2d 608, 610 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1988) , review denied, 547 So. 2d 1209 (Fla. 1989) .

(n20)Footnote 18.1. See Skiff re Business, Inc. v. Buckingham Ridgeview, LP, 2010 PA Super 43, 2010 Pa. Super. LEXIS 71, at *32-*35 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2010) (the violations were material breaches of the broker's contract which forfeited the broker's entitlement to a commission).

(n21)Footnote 19.

Kentucky: Miller & Damron v. Batten, 247 Ky. 339, 57 S.W.2d 33 (1933) .

Louisiana: Sheppard v. Hulseberg, 171 La. 659, 131 So. 840 (1931) .

Exceptions were often made for isolated transactions when the statute required those "engaging in the business" of real estate broker to be licensed as in Sheppard above, or when the statute was designed to raise revenue, as in Miller & Damron above.

(n22)Footnote 20. 65 Wyo. 325, 202 P.2d 174 (1949) .

(n23)Footnote 21. 65 Wyo. at 325, 202 P.2d at 176 . See Wyo. Stat. § 37-2101 et seq .

See also Loomis v. Lange Fin. Corp., 109 Nev. 1121, 865 P.2d 1161 (Nev. 1993) .

(n24)Footnote 22. V.I. Code Ann. tit. 27, § 301.

(n25)Footnote 23. Comment, Recovery of Commissions by Unlicensed Real Estate Brokers, 80 Dick. L. Rev. 500, 505 (1976).

(n26)Footnote 24. See § 6.02[1][b] below.

(n27)Footnote 25. But cf. PKG Assocs. v. Dubb, 306 A.D.2d 333, 760 N.Y.S.2d 681, 682 (2d Dept. 2003) (a licensed real estate broker is not barred from maintaining a lawsuit to recover a finder's fee where the broker has entered into a special contract to act solely as a finder).

(n28)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Futersak v. Perl, 897 N.Y.S.2d 886, 2010 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 612, at *11-*12 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2010) Brochu v. Santis, 939 A.2d 449, 453 (R.I. 2008) . But see Amedeus Corp. v. McAllister, 2009 Colo. App. LEXIS 221, at *7 (Colo. Ct. App. Feb. 19, 2009) (Colorado's statutory definition of real estate broker does not recognize any distinction between a broker and a finder.).

(n29)Footnote 27. 9 Cal. 3d 1, 106 Cal. Rptr. 761, 507 P.2d 65 (1973) .

(n30)Footnote 28. 507 P.2d at 72 . Cf Katayama v. Heller White Hotels Co., Inc., 692 F. Supp. 1239 (D. Haw.

1988) (dismissal of motion for summary judgment in action for finder's fee) aff'd, 956 F.2d 1167 (9th Cir. 1992) .

(n31)Footnote 29. 221 Pa. Super. 275, 289 A.2d 752 (1972) .

(n32)Footnote 30. Harrison v. Soffer, 221 Pa. Super. 275, 289 A.2d 752, 756 (1972) .

(n33)Footnote 31. Harrison v. Soffer, 221 Pa. Super. 275, 289 A.2d 752, 756 (1972) allocatur denied (quoting Alfred v. Raschiatore, 163 Pa. Super. 635, 63 A.2d 366, 368 (1949)) .

(n34)Footnote 32. Andalex Resources, Inc. v. Myers, 871 P.2d 1041 (Utah App. 1994) .

See also:

Massachusetts: Turnpike Motors, Inc. v. Newbury Group, Inc., 413 Mass. 119, 596 N.E.2d 989 (Mass. 1992) (where plaintiff-property sellers sought a declaratory judgment denying the defendant-broker's commissions on the sale of assets of two automobile dealerships, because the broker was unlicensed, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, finding for the broker, held that (1) there was adequate evidence presented by the broker at trial to establish that the sellers knew he was unlicensed, (2) the defendant told the plaintiff-broker that a license would be unnecessary since the deal would be structured, not as a sale of real estate, but as a sale of stock, (3) the jury reasonably could have inferred from the seller's testimony that he did not intend to pay the agreed-upon commissions when he signed the agreements with the broker and (4) the broker sought out and procured buyers for the seller's businesses and the sellers refused to compensate the broker in accordance with their agreement).

Pennsylvania: Golibart v. Reamer, 610 A.2d 56 (Pa. App. 1992) appeal denied, 532 Pa. 664, 616 A.2d 985 (1992) , wherein the defendants contracted to purchase a 170-acre land parcel at a meeting between the defendant-seller and plaintiff-broker. The broker indicated that he did not want to be involved in the sale of the property, but rather, would help to find investors in exchange for a commission. The broker found an investor and put the investor in touch with the defendants, with whom a partnership was ultimately formed. The defendants refused to pay the commission. Reversing the trial court, the Superior Court held that the trial court should have directed the jury to find for the defendants since the broker was unlicensed, irrespective of the fact that the broker was engaged, not in the sale of real estate, but rather in the finding of investors for a condominium development.

Texas: Swor v. Tapp Furniture Co., 146 S.W.3d 778, 782 (Tex. App. 2004) (The fee for handling a property sale which included real estate is considered a real estate commission. The definition of real estate broker covers compensation labeled as a finder's fee. The plaintiff expected to be compensated for assisting in a transaction contemplating a sale of real estate. Therefore, the Texas Real Estate License Act applied to the plaintiff as a broker.).

(n35)Footnote 32.1. See Futersak v. Perl, 897 N.Y.S.2d 886, 2010 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 612, at *14-*15 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2010) .

(n36)Footnote 33. See Wardley Corp. v. Welsh, 962 P.2d 86, 90-91 (Utah App. 1998) .

(n37)Footnote 34. For an extensive collection of cases on this topic, see 80 A.L.R.3d 318 .

In California, a broker's action for a commission arises when the commission becomes due and payable, although it is unnecessary for the sale to be completed in order for the broker to be entitled to a commission, unless the brokerage agreement specifies otherwise. When the realty is estate property, however, the broker's commission is not triggered as due until consummation of the sale. Where a broker was unlicensed when the agreement to purchase estate property was made, his subsequent licensing at the time of actual sale, however, entitled him to maintain an action for recovery of a commission. In re Estate of Lopez, 8 Cal. App. 4th 317, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 67 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) .

(n38)Footnote 35. See:

Federal: Rheinberger v. Security Life Ins. Co., 47 F. Supp. 196 (N.D. Ill. 1942) .

Illinois: Cooper v. Schoeberlein, 247 Ill. App. 147 (1928) .

Tennessee: Johnson v. Stuart, 7 Tenn. App. 1 (1928) .

See also Smith v. Cannell, 1999 Me. 19, 723 A.2d 876, 880-881 (Me. 1999) . The agent was not licensed when the alleged services were rendered, but was relicensed when the transaction closed. The court found that the agent had no reasonable expectation of compensation for services she provided while unlicensed as required for a quantum meruit recovery.

(n39)Footnote 36. 274 So. 2d 581 , appeal dismissed, 285 So. 2d 593 (Fla. DCA 1973) .

(n40)Footnote 37. Fla. Stat. Ann. § 475.41, quoted at 274 So. 2d at 583 .

(n41)Footnote 38. 274 So. 2d at 583 . Pennsylvania Courts have construed a similarly worded statute in the same way. See, e.g., Burns v. Gartzman, 139 Pa. Super. 453, 11 A.2d 708 (1940) . See also Hale & Hale, Ltd. v. Arnold & Jeanie Pettit Declaration of Trust, 298 S.W.3d 104, 108 (Mo. Ct. App. 2009) (The licensee must plead and prove that he or she was licensed at the time the licensee performed the services for which compensation is sought.), transfer denied, 2009 Mo. LEXIS 580 (Dec. 22, 2009) .

(n42)Footnote 39.

Arkansas: Nelson v. Stolz, 197 Ark. 1053, 127 S.W.2d 138 (1939) ; Birnbach v. Kirspel, 188 Ark. 792, 67 S.W.2d 730 (1934) .

Louisiana: Trentman Co. v. Brown 176 LA. 854, 147 So. 14 (1932) . Bergeron v. Mumphrey, 38 So. 2d 411 (La. Ct. App. 1949) .

(n43)Footnote 40.

Federal: Schreiber v. L.I. Combs & Sons, 337 F.2d 410 (7th Cir. 1964) (applying Indiana law), cert. denied, 380 U.S. 911 (1965) .

California: Bernasconi Commercial Real Estate v. Omni Health Plan, Inc., 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 (Cal. App. 3d Dist. 1995) (under California law, a real estate broker may bring an action for breach of contract prior to the broker's performance of the contract, where the broker was licensed at the time the alleged breach occurred, notwithstanding that the broker was not licensed when the contract was executed).

Connecticut: CMG Realty of Conn., Inc. v. Colonnade One at Old Greenwich Ltd. Partnership, 36 Conn. App. 653, 653 A.2d 207 (1995) (under Connecticut law, to bring an action for a broker's commission, the plaintiff must be licensed and must have been licensed at the time the services were rendered; the statute does not require that the plaintiff be licensed as of the date the brokerage contract was made or authorized).

Iowa: Pound v. Brown, 258 Iowa 994, 140 N.W.2d 183 (1966) .

New Mexico: Lakeview Invest., Inc. v. Alamogordo Lake Village, Inc., 86 N.M. 151, 520 P.2d 1096 (1974) .

Ohio: Pierce v. Isabel, 70 Ohio App. 385, 25 Ohio Op. 115, 40 N.E.2d 481 (1941) .

(n44)Footnote 41. 337 F.2d 410 (7th Cir. 1964) , cert. denied, 380 U.S. 911 (1965) .

(n45)Footnote 42. 337 F.2d 410, 413 (7th Cir. 1964) , cert. denied, 380 U.S. 911 (1965) (construing Ind. Code Ann. §§ 63-2407, 63-2408 (1961)).

(n46)Footnote 43.

California: Davis v. Chipman, 210 Cal. 609, 293 P. 40 (1930) .

New Jersey: Rosenthal v. Art Metal, Inc., 101 N.J. Super. 156, 243 A.2d 828 (1968) (where nothing was done to accomplish sale after broker obtained license, all services performed were illegal, and broker was not entitled to commission).

New York: Bendell v. De Dominicis, 251 N.Y. 305, 167 N.E. 452 (1929) ; Hudson Michael Realty, Inc. v. Oliner, 184 A.D.2d 929, 585 N.Y.S.2d 127 (3d Dept. 1992) .

Oregon: Hunter v. Cuning, 176 Or. 250, 154 P.2d 562, 574 (1944) ("at the time the alleged cause of action arose" is to be interpreted as meaning at the time, or throughout the period, when the broker performed the services which culminated in the accrual of his cause of action); Jolma v. Steinbock, 40 Or. App. 657, 596 P.2d 980 (1979) .

Texas: Justice v. Willard 538 S.W.2d 651 (Tex. Civ. App. 1976) (fact that broker was licensed when he brought suit did not satisfy the licensing requirement).

Washington: Irons Inv. Co. v. Richardson, 184 Wash. 118, 50 P.2d 42 (1935) (broker was not entitled to a commission where he negotiated a lease without a license but obtained a license before the commission was due).

Wisconsin: Kemmerer v. Roscher, 9 Wis. 2d 60, 100 N.W.2d 314 (1960) (unlicensed corporation given exclusive listing contract could not recover a commission when another broker sold the property, notwithstanding that the corporation was licensed at the time of sale).

(n47)Footnote 44. 251 N.Y. 305, 167 N.E. 452 (1929) .

(n48)Footnote 45. 251 N.Y. at 306, 167 N.E. at 454 .

(n49)Footnote 46.

Ohio: Stanson, Inc. v. McDonald, 147 Ohio St. 191, 34 Ohio Op. 77, 70 N.E.2d 359 (1946) .

Texas: Furman v. Keith, 226 S.W.2d 218 (Tex. Civ. App. 1949) .

See also Douglas v. Schuette, 607 N.W.2d 142, 147-148 (Minn. App. 2000) , review denied (agent whose license expired before the sale settled lacked standing to sue for a commission because he was not a licensed agent when the sale was consummated).

(n50)Footnote 47. See:

Maryland: Ohlandorf v. Shall, 260 Md. 665, 668, 273 A.2d 181, 183 (1991) .

New York: Bersani v. Basset, 184 A.D.2d 996, 585 N.Y.S.2d 245 (4th Dept. 1992) ; Philip Mehler Realty, Inc. v. Kayser, 176 A.D.2d 104, 574 N.Y.S.2d 1, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11478 (1st Dept. 1991) (ruling that a corporate real estate brokerage firm that was not licensed as such when the services were performed could not recover its commission on the theory that the president of the corporation was, in fact, properly licensed).

(n51)Footnote 48. A broad collection of cases dealing with this topic may be found at 8 A.L.R. 3d 523.

(n52)Footnote 49. See:

California: Firpo v. Murphy, 72 Cal. App. 249, 236 P. 968 (1925) .

Florida: Willner v. Wilder, 280 So. 2d 1 (Fla. DCA 1973) .

Ohio: Frieman v. Greaves, 80 Ohio App. 341, 36 Ohio Op. 39, 74 N.E.2d 860 (1947) .

But see

Louisiana: Matthews-Pelton v. LeBlanc, 13 La. App. 596, 126 So. 449 (1939) , in which the court held that the fact that a duly licensed broker employed an unlicensed salesperson to assist in finding a buyer did not preclude the broker from recovering his commission.

(n53)Footnote 50. 315 F. Supp. 142 (S.D.N.Y. 1970) , aff'd, 442 F.2d 293 (2d Cir. 1971) .

(n54)Footnote 51. N.Y. Real Prop. L. §§ 140, 440-a, 442-d.

(n55)Footnote 52. 315 F. Supp. at 146 .

(n56)Footnote 53. See:

California: Tatterson v. Standard Realty Co., 81 Cal. App. 23, 253 P. 770 (1927) .

Oregon: Miller v. Ziedrich, 199 Or. 505, 263 P.2d 611 (1953) .

(n57)Footnote 54. Hahn v. Hauptman, 107 Cal. App. 739, 291 P. 418 (1930) .

(n58)Footnote 55. 425 S.E.2d 481 (Va. 1993) . But in New York an unlicensed insurance company is not entitled to a commission, even where its owner was an attorney who could recover a commission without a license. S. Kornreich & Sons, Inc. v. Goldsmith Murphy, Inc., 592 N.Y.S.2d 228, 1992 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 568 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. County 1992) .

(n59)Footnote 56. See:

New York: Brandenburger & Marx, Inc. v. Heimberg, 34 N.Y.S.2d 935, 1942 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1585 (Mun. Ct. 1942) .

Wisconsin: Payne v. Volkman, 183 Wis. 412, 198 N.W. 438 (1924) .

(n60)Footnote 57. 244 S.W.2d 258 (Tex. Civ. App. 1951) . But see Volkman v. Wortham, 189 S.W.2d 776 (Tex. Civ. App. 1945) (licensed broker, who might be subject to penalties under the statute for sharing a commission with an unlicensed broker, was nevertheless able to recover a commission from seller).

(n61)Footnote 58. 9 Wis. 2d 60, 100 N.W.2d 314 (1960) .

(n62)Footnote 59. "Where the illegality is due to facts of which one party is justifiably ignorant and the other party is not, the illegality does not bar recovery by the innocent party of compensation for performance rendered while he remains justifiably ignorant of the facts establishing illegality." Holland v. Morgan & Peacock Properties Co., 168 Cal. App. 2d. 206, 335 P.2d 769, 772 (1959) .

(n63)Footnote 60. See Marx v. Lining, 231 Ala. 445, 165 So. 207 (1935) .

(n64)Footnote 61. See In re Merry-Go-Round Enters., Inc., 231 B.R. 241, 248 (Bkrtcy. D. Md. 1999) , applying Maryland law.

(n65)Footnote 62. See § 6.03[7] below.

(n66)Footnote 63. Cf. Meteor Motors, Inc. v. Thompson Halbach & Associates, 914 So. 2d 479, 483 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2005) (Fla. Stat. § 475.15 requires a corporation "which acts as a broker" to "register with the commission" and "renew the licenses or registrations of its ... officers and directors for each license period.").

(N67)Footnote 64. 3 Misc. 2d 824, 156 N.Y.S.2d 313, 1956 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1554 , rev'd, 4 A.D.2d 145, 163 N.Y.S.2d 462, 1957 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5165 (1st Dept. 1956) . See Willner v. Wilder, 280 So. 2d 1 (Fla. DCA 1975) cert. denied, 287 So. 2d 97 (Fla. 1973) .

See also Venturi & Co. LLC v. Pacific Malibu Development Corp., 172 Cal. App. 4th 1417, 1423-24, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 123, 129 (2009) (Only a licensed broker may provide broker services. The employment of a licensed salesperson by an unlicensed broker will not allow recovery of compensation for broker services provided by the unlicensed broker.).

But see Galbreath-Ruffin Corp. v. 40th & 3rd Corp., 19 N.Y.2d 354, 280 N.Y.S.2d 126, 227 N.E.2d 30 (1967) (licensed brokerage corporation could recover a commission though negotiations were conducted by an officer licensed as a broker for a second brokerage corporation but unlicensed as to the one at bar). A similar result was achieved in Loomis v. Lange Fin. Corp., 109 Nev. 1121, 865 P.2d 1161 (Nev. 1993) .

(n68)Footnote 65. 13 La. App. 596, 126 So. 449 (1930) . See also E.M. Glynn, Inc. v. Duplantis, 250 La. 381, 196 So. 2d 47 (1967) (licensed realty corporation is not precluded from recovering a commission where its president was not personally licensed but was the sole owner and controller of the corporation).

(n69)Footnote 66. 73 N.M. 207, 387 P.2d 319 (1963) .

(n70)Footnote 67. 387 P.2d at 320 .

See also:

New York: Philip Mehler Realty, Inc. v. Kayser, 176 A.D.2d 104, 574 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1st Dept. 1991) appeal dismissed without opinion, 79 N.Y.2d 977, 583 N.Y.S.2d 195, 592 N.E.2d 803 (1992) , rehearing denied, 79 N.Y.2d 1041, 584 N.Y.S.2d 450, 594 N.E.2d 944 (1992) .

Texas: Henry S. Miller v. Treo Enters., 585 S.W.2d 674 (Tex. 1979) .

Wisconsin: Kemmerer v. Roscher, 9 Wis. 2d 60, 100 N.W.2d 314 (1960) (discussed at text accompanying n.42 above).

(n71)Footnote 68. See Location Realty, Inc. v. General Financial Services, Inc., 273 Conn. 766, 781, 873 A.2d 163, 172 (2005) . See also Location Realty, Inc. v. Colaccino, 287 Conn. 706, 720, 949 A.2d 1189, 1197-98 (2008) (discussing Location Realty, Inc. v. General Financial Services, Inc.).

(n72)Footnote 69. See Lee v. Moseley, 40 Ga. App. 371, 149 S.E. 808 (1929) .

(n73)Footnote 70. Fort Orange Co. v. O'Neal, 138 Fla. 325, 189 So. 685 (1939) .

(n74)Footnote 71. 135 Cal. App. 445, 27 P.2d 420 (1933) .

(n75)Footnote 72. 27 P.2d at 422 . Cf. Hoffman v. Dunn, 496 N.E.2d 818 (Ind. Ct. App. 1986) (where several partners of brokerage firm unlicensed, partnership did not qualify for license under statute).

(n76)Footnote 73. See, e.g.:

Federal: Illustrative of the fact that there is to be no quick resolution of the conflicts problem by a mechanical reference to the location of the land is Lucas v. Gulf & Western, 666 F.2d 800 (3d Cir. 1981) (applying Florida law, recovery was allowed to a New Jersey broker on a transaction involving Florida land where the activities were conducted outside of Florida).

Arizona: Adams Realty Corp. v. Realty Ctr. Inv., Inc., 149 Ariz. 405, 719 P.2d 291 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1986) (real estate broker licensed in California, but not in Arizona, was legally entitled to share in the commissions with a real estate broker licensed in Arizona, for commissions earned in Arizona).

New York: Equis Corp. v. Mack-Cali Realty Corp., 6 A.D.3d 264, 265-267, 775 N.Y.S.2d 35, 37-39, 2004 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4631 (1st Dept. 2004) (New Jersey has an interest in seeing that brokerage services in connection with property located in New Jersey are rendered in conformance with its laws, New York broker denied commission); Andover Realty Corp. v. Western Elec. Co., Inc., 100 A.D.2d 157, 473 N.Y.S.2d 393 (1st Dept. 1984) , aff'd , (memo) 64 N.Y.2d 1006, 478 N.E.2d 193 (1985) (New Jersey Law requiring brokerage agreement to be in writing applied to deny recovery).

But see Rosenberg & Rosenberg, P.C. v. Hoffman, 195 A.D.2d 343, 600 N.Y.S.2d 228, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7186 (1st Dept. 1993) (holding that New York had an interest in seeing that its licensed brokers were compensated on contracts arising from initial contacts in New York and contracts made in New York, even though the real estate was located in New Jersey).

See generally Ehrenzweig, The Real Estate Broker and the Conflict of Laws, 59 Colum. L. Rev. 303

(1959); Annot., 159 A.L.R. 266 (1945) .

(n77)Footnote 74. Gold v. Wolpert, 876 F.2d 1327 (7th Cir. 1989) (law of state in which subject matter is located or the law of the state in which the purchaser's reside will be applied and not the law of the state of the broker's residence). For a discussion of conflict of laws problems as they apply to real estate broker's right to commissions, see Comment, Recovery of Commissions by Unlicensed Real Estate Brokers, 80 Dick. L. Rev. 500, 511-16 (1976). See also Ehrenzweig, The Real Estate Broker and the Conflict of Laws, 59 Colum. L. Rev. 303 (1959).

(n78)Footnote 75. 163 F.3d 389 (6th Cir. 1998) .

(n79)Footnote 76. 163 F.3d 389, 391 (6th Cir. 1998) . See also Klein v. Antebi, 53 A.D.3d 529, 531-32, 861 N.Y.S.2d 143 (2008) (brokers were licensed in New York, the land sold was in Pennsylvania, brokers were barred by Pennsylvania law from receiving a commission).

(n80)Footnote 77. See Erwin v. Cotter Health Centers, Inc., 161 Wash.2d 676, 692-93, 167 P.3d 1112, 1120 (2007) (finding that there was a conflict of laws).

(n81)Footnote 78. Wis. Stat. §§ 452.01, 452.03.

(n82)Footnote 79. See Comment, Recovery of Commissions by Unlicensed Real Estate Brokers, 80 Dick. L. Rev. 500 (1976). For a definition of a business broker, see ch. 12 above. In Turnpike Motors, Inc. v. Newbury Group, Inc., 413 Mass. 119, 127, 596 N.E.2d 989 (Mass. 1992) (Mass. 1992), the property sellers brought a declaratory judgment against the broker, claiming that he was not entitled to a commission on the sale of assets of two automobile dealerships because the broker was unlicensed. The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts held that the way in which the deal was structured constituted a sale of stock; therefore, a license was unnecessary.

(n83)Footnote 80. See:

Federal: Doran v. Imeson Aviation, Inc., 419 F. Supp. 586 (D. Wyo. 1976) .

Arizona: Bonasera v. Roffe, 8 Ariz. App. 1, 442 P.2d 165 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1968) .

Colorado: Broughall v. Black Forest Dev. Co., 196 Colo. 503, 593 P.2d 314 (1978) .

Kansas: Thomas v. Jarvis, 518 P.2d 532 (Kan. 1974) .

Kentucky: Lockridge v. Hale, 764 S.W.2d 84 (Ky. Ct. App. 1989) .

Missouri: Knight v. Johnson, 741 S.W.2d 842 (Mo. Ct. App. 1987) .

Nebraska: Chapin v. Neuhoff Broadcasting-Grand Island, Inc., 268 Neb. 520, 526, 684 N.W.2d 588, 593 (Neb. 2004) ; Ford v. American Medical Intern, Inc., 228 Neb. 226, 422 N.W.2d 67 (Neb. 1988) .

(n84)Footnote 81. 243 N.Y. 113, 152 N.E. 693 (1926) .

See also:

California: Nittler v. Continental Casualty Co., 94 Cal. App. 498, 271 P. 555 (1928) .

Mississippi: Quick Shops of Mississippi v. Bruce, 232 So. 2d 351 (Miss. 1970) .

Washington: Grammer v. Scaggit Valley Lumber Co., 299 P. 376 (Wash. 1931) .

(n85)Footnote 82. 152 N.E. at 694 .

See:

Federal: Schultz v. Palmer Wellcot Tool Corp., 107 F.2d 652 (3d Cir. 1953) (applying Pennsylvania law (majority rule) to deny recovery but citing with approval the New York rule); Scott Hubbard Co. v. Sika Chem. Corp., 708 F. Supp. 945 (N.D. Ill. 1989) (applying Illinois law).

Arkansas: Frier v. Terry, 323 S.W.2d 415 (Ark. 1959) .

Maryland: Glaser v. Shostack, 213 Md. 383, 131 A.2d 724 (1957) .

Mississippi: Quick Shops of Miss., Inc. v. Bruce, 232 So. 2d 351 (Miss. 1970) .

New York: Myer v. Jova Brick Works, Inc., 38 A.D.2d 615, 326 N.Y.S.2d 321, 1971 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2890 (3d Dept. 1971) .

Tennessee: Business Brokerage Centre v. Dixon, 874 S.W.2d 1 (Tenn. 1994) .

(n86)Footnote 83. Kerr v. Australia Pacific Resources, Ltd., 841 P.2d 401 (Colo. App. 1992) .

(n87)Footnote 84. 89 N.J. 286, 445 A.2d 1149 (1982) . See also Cooney v. Ritter, 939 F.2d 81, 90 (3d Cir. 1991) , applying New Jersey law (following Kazmer-Standish Consultants and allowing recovery of commission on the personal property).

(n88)Footnote 85. 327 S.C. 478, 486 S.E.2d 771 (S.C. App. 1997) .

(n89)Footnote 86. 327 S.C. 478, 490, 486 S.E.2d 771, 777 (S.C. App. 1997) .

(n90)Footnote 87. 129 Ohio. App. 3d 255, 717 N.E.2d 763 (Ohio App. 1998) .

(n91)Footnote 88. 129 Ohio. App. 3d 255, 717 N.E.2d 763, 765 (Ohio App. 1998) .

(n92)Footnote 89. 129 Ohio. App. 3d 255, 717 N.E.2d 763, 769 (Ohio App. 1998) .

(n93)Footnote 90. See The Stephen A. Goldberg Co. v. Remsen Partners, Ltd., 170 F.3d 191, 196 (D.C. Cir. 1999) .

(n94)Footnote 91. Schank v. Schuchman, 212 N.Y. 352, 359, 106 N.E. 127, 129 (1914) .

(n95)Footnote 92. See The Stephen A. Goldberg Co. v. Remsen Partners, Ltd., 170 F.3d 191, 197 (D.C. Cir. 1999) . See generally Brunner, Annot., Recovery Back of Money Paid to Unlicensed Person Required by Law to Have Occupational License or Permit to Make Contract, 74 A.L.R.3d 637 (1976) .

(n96)Footnote 93. See The Stephen A. Goldberg Co. v. Remsen Partners, Ltd., 170 F.3d 191, 196 (D.C. Cir. 1999) , quoting from CitaraManis v. Hallowell, 328 Md. 142, 613 A.2d 964, 971-972 (1992) .

(n97)Footnote 94. Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 6573a, § 19; Wyo. Stat. Ann. § 33-28-114. See Holloman v. Denson, 640 S.W.2d 417, 420 (Tex. App. 1982) , rehearing denied.

(n98)Footnote 95. See Kowalski v. Cedars of Portsmouth Condominium Association, 146 N.H. 130, 132-134, 769 A.2d 344, 347-48 (N.H. 2000) .

(n99)Footnote 96. See Remsen Partners, Ltd. v. The Stephen A. Goldberg Co., 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 26677 (D.C. May 25, 2000) .

(n100)Footnote 97. See Remsen Partners, Ltd. v. The Stephen A. Goldberg Co., 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 26677 (D.C. May 25, 2000) .

(n101)Footnote 98. See 63 Pa. Stat. § 455.201.

(n102)Footnote 99. See Meyer v. Gwynedd Development Group, Inc., 756 A.2d 67, 71-72, 2000 Pa. Super. 193 (Pa. Super. 2000) .

(n103)Footnote 99.1. *See Easton Business Opportunities, Inc. v. Town Executive Suites, 2010 Nev. LEXIS 14, at *9-10 (2010) .

(n104)Footnote 100. Ohio Rev. Code § 4735.21.

(n105)Footnote 101. See Ritchie v. Weston, Inc., 143 Ohio App. 3d 176, 180, 757 N.E.2d 835, 838 (2001) . See also Schaffter v. Creative Capital Leasing Group, LLC, 166 Cal. App. 4th 745, 759, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 19, 29 (Cal. Ct. App. 2008) (broker's assignment of its right to earn commissions did not violate public policy reasons behind a statutory provision prohibiting an unlicensed person from receiving a commission on the sale of real estate.). Kavian v. Vernah Homes Company, 19 A.D.3d 649, 651, 799 N.Y.S.2d 75, 76, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7326 (2005) (The assignment of the commission agreement did not constitute a forbidden splitting of the real estate commission. The assignee did not provide any service in the real estate transaction. The right to receive the sums due under the commission agreement was assigned, for value, after the real estate services were rendered by the broker. The fact that the closing occurred after the assignment was irrelevant.).

(n106)Footnote 102. See Long & Foster Real Estate, Inc. v. NRT Mid-Atlantic, Inc., 357 F. Supp. 2d 911, 918-919 (E.D. Va. 2005) , applying Virginia law. Cf. Delacy Investments, Inc. v. Thurman, 693 N.W.2d 479, 484 (Minn. Ct. App. 2005) review denied, 2005 Minn. LEXIS 350 (Minn. June 14, 2005) (The plaintiff was in the business of factoring receivables from real estate agents. Since the agent-assignor was in arrears on his fees due his broker, the plaintiff was unable to collect because the commissions earned by the firm as a result of the fact that the agent's commissions did not exceed the agent's past-due obligations to the firm.).

(n107)Footnote 103. *See Kentucky Real Estate Commission v. Hilliard Financial, LLC, 246 S.W.3d 910, 2008 Ky. App. LEXIS 38, at 4 (Feb. 15, 2008) ; Kavian v. Vernah Homes Co., 19 A.D.3d 649, 651, 799 N.Y.S.2d 75, 2005 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7326 (N.Y. 2005) .

(n108)Footnote 104. 282 Kan. 381, 144 P.3d 706 (2006) .

(n109)Footnote 105. The Uniform Consumer Credit Code has been adopted in the following states: Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Utah, Wisconsin and Wyoming. See generally J. Barry Harper, The Uniform Consumer Credit Code: A Critical Analysis, 44 N.Y.U. L. Rev. 52 (1969); Robert L. Jordan & William D. Warren, The Uniform Consumer Credit Code, 68 Colum. L. Rev. 387 (1968); Chris Peterson, Failed Markets, Failing Government, or Both? Learning from the Unintended Consequences of Utah Consumer Credit Law on Vulnerable Debtors, 2001 Utah L. Rev. 543 (2001).

(n110)Footnote 106. 282 Kan. 381, 390, 144 P.3d 706, 713 (2006) .

(n111)Footnote 107. 280 Ga. App. 199, 633 S.E.2d 555 (2006) , cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 722 (Sept. 18, 2006)

(n112)Footnote 108. 280 Ga. App. 199, 201, 633 S.E.2d 555, 557 (2006) , cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 722 (Sept. 18, 2006) . See also Morgan v. Richard Bowers & Co., 280 Ga. App. 533, 536-37, 634 S.E.2d 415, 418 (2006) , cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 796 (Ga., Oct. 2, 2006) (Ga. Code § 43-40-19(c) permits an agent to pay his former broker commissions only when the former broker and the new broker enter into a written agreement to that effect.).

(n113)Footnote 109. See Murphy v. Campbell Investment Co., 79 Wash. 2d 417, 486 P.2d 1080 (1971) (contractor registration act); Williamson, Inc. v. Calibre Homes, Inc., 106 Wash. App. 558, 570, 23 P.3d 1118, 1125 (2001) , aff'd, 147 Wash. 2d 394, 54 P.3d 1186 (2002) (real estate brokers' and salespersons' act).

(n114)Footnote 110. See Williamson, Inc. v. Calibre Homes, Inc., 106 Wash. App. 558, 570, 23 P.3d 1118, 1125 (2001) , aff'd, 147 Wash. 2d 394, 54 P.3d 1186 (2002) .

(n115)Footnote 111. See:

Georgia: Northside Realty Associates, Inc. v. MPI Corp., 245 Ga. 321, 265 S.E.2d 11, 12 (1980) .

New York: Philip Mehler Realty, Inc. v. Kayser, 176 A.D.2d 104, 574 N.Y.S.2d 1, 2 (1st Dept. 1991) appeal dismissed without opinion, 79 N.Y.2d 977, 583 N.Y.S.2d 195, 592 N.E.2d 803 (1992) , rehearing denied, 79 N.Y.2d 1041, 584 N.Y.S.2d 450, 594 N.E.2d 944 (1992) ; NFS Services, Inc. v. West 73rd Street Associates, 102 A.D.2d 388, 477 N.Y.S.2d 135, 138, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18796 (1st Dept. 1984) , aff'd, 64 N.Y.2d 919, 488 N.Y.S.2d 648, 477 N.E.2d 1102 (1985) .

Rhode Island: New England Retail Properties, Inc. v. Commerce Park Associates 11, LLC., 824 A.2d 504, 506-508 (R.I. 2003) .

Texas: Conrad v. Artha Garza Co., 615 S.W.2d 238, 240-241 (Tex. Civ. App. 1981) .

(n116)Footnote 112. See Marcus & Millichap Real Estate Investment Brokerage Co. v. Skeeters, 395 F. Supp. 2d 541, 549 (W.D. Ky. 2005) , applying Kentucky law; Williams Real Estate Co., Inc. v. CC&F Lincoln Street LLC, 59 Mass. App. Ct. 714, 718, 797 N.E.2d 496, 499 (2003) , citing: Howell v. Steffey, 204 A.2d 695 (D.C. App. 1964) ; Klein v. Antebi, 15 Misc. 3d 901, 911, 832 N.Y.S.2d 904, 912, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1476 (2007) ; Furr v. Fonville Morisey Realty, Inc., 130 N.C. App. 541, 503 S.E.2d 401 (1998) review dismissed, 351 N.C. 41, 519 S.E.2d 314 (1999) ; Bell v. United Farm Agency, Inc., 1956 OK 73, 296 P.2d 149 (Okla. 1956) Gold & Co., Inc. v. Northeast Theater Corp., 281 Pa. Super. 69, 74, A.2d 1151, 1153-54 (1980).

(n117)Footnote 113. See Williams Real Estate Co., Inc. v. CC&F Lincoln Street LLC, 59 Mass. App. Ct. 714, 717-718, 797 N.E.2d 496, 499 (2003) .

(n118)Footnote 114. See:

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 32-2163(A) ("licensed broker in this state may pay compensation to and receive compensation from a broker lawfully operating in another state").

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. tit. 59, § 858-306(C) ("A broker who is duly licensed in another state ... may enter a cooperative brokerage agreement with a licensed real estate broker in this state").

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-13-302 ("A licensed broker may pay a commission to a licensed broker of another state if such nonresident broker does not conduct in this state any of the negotiations for which a commission is paid").

(n119)Footnote 115. See Marcus & Millichap Real Estate Investment Brokerage Co. v. Skeeters, 395 F. Supp. 2d 541, 549 (W.D. Ky. 2005) , applying Kentucky law.

(n120)Footnote 116. See Conn. Agencies Regs. § 20-328-8a(e).

(n121)Footnote 117. See:

Federal: Meltzer v. Crescent Leaseholds, Ltd., 315 F. Supp. 142, 146 (S.D.N.Y. 1970) , aff'd, 442 F.2d 293 (2d Cir. 1971) (under New York law, licensed broker cannot recover commission if broker agreed to split commission with unlicensed cobroker).

Arizona: Farragut Baggage & Transfer Co. v. Shadron Realty, Inc., 18 Ariz. App. 197, 201, 501 P.2d 38, 42 (1972) (licensed broker cannot recover commission from defendant seller for services provided by unlicensed agent).

California: Firpo v. Murphy, 72 Cal. App. 249, 254-255, 236 P. 968, 970 (1925) (licensed broker cannot recover commission from defendant landlord for services provided by unlicensed employee of broker).

Connecticut: Dow and Condon, Inc. v. Brookfield Developjent Corp., 266 Conn. 572, 595, 833 A.2d 908, 922 (2003) (a violation of Conn. Agencies Regs. § 20-328-8a(e) bars recovery of a commission by a licensed real estate broker who has violated the regulation by agreeing to share its commission with an unlicensed party).

Illinois: White v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 99 Ill. App. 3d 323, 332, 54 Ill. Dec. 800, 425 N.E.2d 1017, 1023 (1981) (licensed broker cannot recover commission for services provided by unlicensed agent).

Maryland: Thorpe v. Carte, 252 Md. 523, 527, 250 A.2d 618, 620 (1969) (a broker, licensed in another state but not in Maryland could not recover a commission on an agreement made in Maryland for the sale of property in Maryland).

Ohio: Frieman v. Greaves, 80 Ohio App. 341, 350, 36 Ohio Op. 39, 74 N.E.2d 860, 864, 48 Ohio Law Abs. 493 (1947) (stating in dicta that licensed broker cannot recover commission if commission to be shared with unlicensed broker).

Texas: Wasson v. Hartt, 244 S.W.2d 258, 261 (Tex. Civ. App. 1951) , writ of error refused no reversible error (agreement between licensed broker and unlicensed person to divide commission was void and barred recovery of commission by licensed broker from defendant seller).

Wisconsin: Kemmerer v. Roscher, 9 Wis. 2d 60, 63, 100 N.W.2d 314, 316 (1960) (joint contract by brokers, one of whom is unlicensed, invalid as to all).

See generally Annot., Licensed Real-Estate Broker's Right to Compensation as Affected by Lack of License on the Part of Partners, Coadventurers, Employees, or Other Associates, 8 A.L.R.3d 523 (1966)

(n122)Footnote 118. 678 F. Supp. 515 (E.D. Pa. 1987) .

(n123)Footnote 119. 678 F. Supp. 515, 517 (E.D. Pa. 1987) .

(n124)Footnote 120. 678 F. Supp. 515, 517 (E.D. Pa. 1987) .

(n125)Footnote 121. 456 F.2d 857 (3d Cir. 1972) , disapproved as stated in Cohen v. Wolgin, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 972, at *22 (E.D. Pa. Jan. 24, 1995) (on other grounds).

(n126)Footnote 122. 456 F.2d 857, 861 (3rd Cir. 1972) .

(n127)Footnote 123. See TDH-Berkshire Inc. v. Korff, 33 A.D.3d 437, 823 N.Y.S.2d 20, 21, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12388 (2006) .

(n128)Footnote 124. Id. See also Klein v. Antebi, 15 Misc. 3d 901, 911, 832 N.Y.S.2d 904, 912, 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1476 (2007) (New York precedent gives deference to the law of the foreign jurisdiction in determining claims for commissions by New York brokers unlicensed in the states where the property is located. Applying choice of law analysis, New York courts have held that the law of the state where the land is situated is to be applied.)

(n129)Footnote 125. See TDH-Berkshire Inc. v. Korff, 33 A.D.3d 437, 438, 823 N.Y.S.2d 20, 21, 2006 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12388 (2006) .

(n130)Footnote 126. See In re Capitol Hill Group, 344 B.R. 709, 712 (D.D.C. 2006) , applying D.C. law.

(n131)Footnote 127. See Erwin v. Cotter Health Centers, Inc., 161 Wash.2d 676, 167 P.3d 1112 (2007) , for a case involving this scenario.

(n132)Footnote 128. See Fieger v. Pitney Bowes Credit Corp., 251 F.3d 386 (2d Cir. 2001) (an unlicensed individual claimed to be acting as a financial advisor).

(n133)Footnote 129. See, e.g., Schexnayder v. Gish, 948 So. 2d 1259, 1266 (La. Ct. App. 2007) .

(n134)Footnote 130. Mo. Rev. Stat. § 339.150.3.

(n135)Footnote 131. See Brennan v. Dorsett Village, L.L.C., 203 S.W.3d 770, 772 (Mo. Ct. App. 2006) .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

91 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.06

§ 4.06 Effect of the Brokerage Agreement

[1] General Considerations

Although some states do not require it, n1 most states do require that brokerage agreements be in writing in order to be enforceable. n2 In general terms, the listing agreement may be subject to the statute of frauds under a particular state statute. n3 Courts will generally require that brokers comply with the contract terms before they have a right to earn a commission. n4 The rule for interpreting brokerage agreements follows the law of contracts regardless of whether or not the agreement is required to be in writing. n4.1 In general, the agreement must include provisions for the licensee's employment. An agreement is normally considered to be adequate when:

- (1) it is in writing and signed by the person to be charged with a commission;
- (2) it promises that a definite commission will be paid, or refers to a written commission schedule;
- (3) it specifies the name of the broker to whom the commission will be paid; and
- (4) it must either, by itself or by reference to some other existing writing, identify with a reasonable certainty the land to be conveyed. n5

When the seller is a natural person, it is clear that this individual should sign the brokerage agreement. However, the question of who should sign if a general partnership or other entity is involved is not as clear. In such a situation, the applicable statutes should be consulted in order to determine who can sign on behalf of an entity and what formalities must be observed.

While the statute of frauds requires the signature of the person to be charged with paying the commission, the Supreme Court of Idaho has held that a brokerage contract requires the signature of both the owner and the broker since the contract is not a unilateral contract that a broker can accept by full performance. This court held that an agreement lacking the broker's signature could not act as a brokerage agreement. n5.1

The broker's name stated in a listing agreement should agree with the broker's name as shown on the broker's license.

However, a misnomer should not affect the validity of the listing when all parties know the identity of the real party.
n5.2

Different rules apply to buyer's broker's agreements. Since the property to be purchased cannot be identified in a buyer's broker's agreement, the property description element of the writing requirement is inapplicable to such a contract. n6 Procuring cause also becomes an issue. n7 The purchaser's refusal to contract with the seller, who is willing to contract on the purchaser's terms, makes the purchaser liable to the broker for the commission that the broker would have received from the seller. n8

State statutes require that the real estate salesperson be paid through the sponsoring broker. The salesperson has no control over the listing, as the agreement is between the owner and the sponsoring broker. The same strict rules of construction apply as in listing agreements generally. n9 Although this limits the salesperson's rights, it is consistent throughout the various states. Salespersons are not beneficiaries of broker's liens or rights to commissions, unless otherwise provided in their employment contract. n10

The broker's agreement determines when the commission is earned. n10.1 A broker's listing agreement may make the broker's compensation dependent on any lawful condition. n10.2 A broker employed "to sell" or "effect a sale" of the property is not entitled to compensation until the broker effects a sale or procures from the buyer a binding contract of purchase within the terms of his or her authority. n10.3 This type of agreement is distinguished from an agreement to find a purchaser. This latter type of agreement only requires that the broker find a purchaser ready, willing, and able to buy the property. n10.4

The general requirement that an agreement to pay a commission must be in writing applies to the agreement between the seller and the broker. There is generally no requirement that there be a written subagency agreement between brokers to share in a commission. Generally this authority is expressly contained in the listing agreement and in the real estate sales contract executed by the buyers. n10.5

A broker may also be unable to collect a commission if the listing agreement fails to contain terms that are required by statute or regulation. For example, a Texas court found that a regulatory requirement that a listing agreement contain a termination date is a condition precedent, which if absent, renders the listing agreement unenforceable. n10.6 However, other courts have held that a licensee's failure to strictly adhere to requirements regarding listing and brokerage agreements do not make the agreement void or deprive the licensee of the right to receive compensation even though the failure may subject the licensee to disciplinary proceedings. n10.7

If a broker's right to a commission is dependent upon the satisfaction of any condition other than the production of a ready, willing and able purchaser, the listing agreement should clearly state the additional condition or conditions. n10.8 Furthermore, the seller is expected to cooperate with the broker and act in good faith toward the broker. n10.9

A contract for a brokerage commission may be strictly construed. n10.10 Furthermore, the broker typically has the burden of proof to prove that he or she is entitled to a commission under a brokerage contract. n10.11 Furthermore, since most brokerage agreements are drafted by the broker, courts will often construe such an agreement against the broker. n10.12

[2] Open Listings

A non-exclusive listing, which specifies no particular duration of employment, is a mere offer of a unilateral contract inviting the broker's acceptance by performance, i.e., producing a ready, willing and able buyer. n11 Like any other offer, this may be revoked at any time, n12 provided that the owner acts in good faith. Specifically, if the owner sees that the broker's efforts are nearing success and revokes his authorization for the purpose of denying him the reward of his efforts and reaping the benefits thereof without paying, then all courts will deny the right to revoke and award the broker his commission. n13 Where a broker and a seller enter into a sales contract, however, its terms supersede the listing agreement. n14

A non-exclusive listing can be for a stated duration. But merely listing a property with one broker pursuant to a non-exclusive listing does not preclude a sale of the property through the efforts of the owner or another broker. Pursuant to a non-exclusive listing, the broker is generally entitled to a commission only if he or she was the procuring cause of the transaction. n15

[3] Exclusive Listings

A listing agreement which gives the broker an exclusive right to sell is interpreted to deny the owner the right to sell to a purchaser procured by himself. n15.1 An abbreviated form of an exclusive right to sell is often termed an exclusive agency, which allows the owner to sell the property himself and not pay a commission to the listing broker. n16 Where the transfer is deemed not to be a sale, the broker is not entitled to a commission. n17

A broker who has an exclusive listing agreement and substantially performs is entitled to a commission. n17.1 In this context, substantial performance means the expenditure of time, effort, or money. n17.2

Poorly drafted listing agreements may raise an issue as to whether an exclusive listing is an exclusive right-to-sell listing or an exclusive agency listing. This becomes an issue if the owner sells the property to a buyer that the owner has procured. Under an exclusive right-to-sell listing, the broker would be entitled to a commission while there would be no commission due under the exclusive agency agreement. As a general rule, any ambiguity in the agreement will result in it being found to be an exclusive agency agreement. n17.3

In Foltz v. Begnoche n17.4 several rules were applied in interpreting an exclusive listing. First, the title of the listing, while important, is not controlling. Second, the use of the phrase "exclusive right," standing alone, should not be determinative in creating an exclusive right-to-sell listing. Third, if the listing contains a phrase allowing a commission upon a sale made by the broker, it contemplates a sale by the owner without liability for a commission. Finally, ambiguity is further raised if the agreement provides that the right to sell was given in consideration of the broker's agreement to list the property. Listing agreements are usually prepared by the broker. Therefore, as a general rule, if the listing agreement is ambiguous it will be found to be an exclusive agency listing which allows the owner to sell the property without incurring liability for a commission. Exclusive right-to-sell listings must be created by clear and unambiguous language. n17.5

In J.C. Nichols Company v. Osborn n17.6 the court found that a listing agreement was an exclusive right-to-sell listing because:

- (1) the listing was titled, "Exclusive Right to Sell Agreement,"
 - (2) the agreement granted the broker the "exclusive and irrevocable right to sell" the parcels involved,
 - (3) the agreement provided that the broker would receive a commission if a buyer was "found"; it did not require that the buyer be found by the broker, and
 - (4) the contract required that the owner refer all offers and inquiries concerning the parcels to the broker.
- n17.7

Those drafting exclusive right-to-sell listing agreements should include a referral provision as this appears to be a defining hallmark of this type of listing. n17.8 This provision may also save a broker's commission. In J.C. Nichols Company, the agreement provided that the broker was entitled to a commission if within 120 days after the termination date the property was sold to anyone to whom it was shown by the broker or if a purchaser was found during the time the agreement was in effect. The broker had not shown the property to the purchaser so the broker was not entitled to a commission based upon showing the property. Nor had the broker found a willing purchaser while the agreement was in effect. Despite the broker not satisfying either contractual basis for payment of a commission, the court found that the owner was not entitled to summary judgment in the broker's action to recover a commission because of the breach of the contract's referral provision. n17.9

The referral provision stated that the owner would refer all offers and inquiries concerning the parcels to the broker. The court said that by breaching the referral provision, the owner deprived the broker of the opportunity to show the property to the purchaser. The court concluded that the Kansas Supreme Court, if faced with the issue, would hold that a broker was entitled to recover its commission under an exclusive right-to-sell agreement if the seller breached a referral provision during the agreement's term, and then sold the property on the seller's own after the agreement expired. n17.10 This court also stated that it appeared that every court that had considered this issue under similar circumstances, where the seller breached the referral provision and then sold the property without the broker, found that the seller's breach entitled the broker to the commission. n17.11

The meaning of what it means to "show" a property may also arise in the context of a referral or extension provision. One court has applied the common meaning of the word "shown" as meaning "to cause or allow to be seen; display." It found that providing documents which were eventually reviewed by the ultimate purchaser did not qualify as a showing of the property which would entitle the broker to a commission. n17.12

One question that arises is whether the owner is bound by his promise to give the broker the exclusive sale or whether he may revoke it. This, in turn, depends on whether the broker gave consideration to the owner so as to bind the promise. The listing agreement may contain an express promise by the broker to use his best efforts to effect a sale n18 and, if it does not, the promise may reasonably be implied. n19 Some courts take this as creating a bilateral contract binding the owner from the moment of its execution. n20 More frequently, courts will consider the obligation to use best efforts as too ephemeral to constitute consideration when wholly executory, n21 and will bind the owner to his promise of exclusivity only after the broker partly performs his promise by investing time and expense, such as by advertising, showing the property, etc. n22 Differing rationales have been given for this result. Section 45 of the Restatement of Contracts, for example, states:

(1) Where an offer invites an offeree to accept by rendering a performance and does not invite a promissory acceptance, an option contract is created when the offeree tenders or begins the invited performance or tenders a beginning of it.

(2) The offeror's duty of performance under any option contract so created is conditional on completion or tender of the invited performance in accordance with the terms of the offer. n23

Other courts have reasoned as follows:

The type of contract involved here is basically a unilateral contract until it is converted into a bilateral contract by substantial performance. This is the view that we are adopting for the disposition of the issues in the instant case, even though there is authority to the contrary. n24

In either analysis, substantial efforts by the broker bind the owner to the terms of the listing (exclusive sale or exclusive agency) for the life of the contract. n25 There have been some defenses alleged by sellers against the enforcement of the exclusivity provisions. In Lyle v. Moore, n26 where the seller defended the cause of action by alleging that he was induced to sign the listing contract and that the exclusivity provisions were not properly explained to him, the Montana Supreme Court struck down the enforceability of the listing agreement. By contrast, however, the Indiana Supreme Court in Campbell v. Vencel n27 upheld the enforceability of the provision against the fraudulent inducement defense.

[4] Exchanges Subject to Commission

Exclusive brokerage agreements may contain language to the effect that if the subject property is sold or exchanged during the term of the listing, the property owner is liable to the broker for the commission. Consequently, owners may find themselves liable for a commission even though a sale has not occurred. Hagan v. Adams Property Associates, Inc., n27.1 is illustrative of this situation. This case involved an exclusive right-to-sell listing of an apartment complex that triggered the payment of the commission if the property was sold or exchanged. The owner and two other persons organized a limited liability company (LLC). The apartment complex was transferred to this LLC by a deed dated during the listing term. The broker sought payment of its commission as a result of this transfer.

The owner argued that the transfer of legal title represented his contribution to the capital of the LLC and that capitalization of a new venture should not be classified as the sale of property. The owner also asserted that since he had not received any present valuable consideration, the transfer did not constitute a sale. The court disagreed. It stated that the owner received more than an interest in the LLC. Under the terms of the LLC's operating agreement, the LLC assumed all liabilities on the property, which included a first deed of trust. It was not clear whether the lender relieved the owner of personal liability under this assumption. The court had no problem with this uncertainty. It stated, "Even assuming such substitution did not occur, [the owner] nonetheless received substantial relief from his debt obligation because, upon assuming all liabilities on the property, [the LLC] became liable to [the owner] for any amount [the owner] would have had to pay the holder of the first deed of trust note." n27.2 The owner also received a second deed of trust from the LLC.

The usual brokerage transaction involves a licensed broker entering into a written brokerage agreement with a principal for compensation. Consequently, a broker's commission is predicated on an agency or employment relationship with a third party. When a broker agrees to purchase property on his or her own behalf, there is no agency or employment relationship with a third party and therefore no entitlement to a commission. In this situation, some brokers attempt to receive a "commission." It has been held that when a broker purchases property on his or her behalf, any agreement to pay a purported commission is, in essence, an agreement to a reduction in the purchase price. n27.3 If the sale fails to occur due to a default by the seller, the broker would not be entitled to a commission, but would instead be subject to damages for the breach. These damages would be computed using the reduced purchase price. n27.4

The court also rejected the proposition that contributions of property to an LLC was not a sale, but the capitalization of a new company. The court distinguished contributions made to a partnership or other entity governed by partnership law since a partnership was not an entity separate and distinct from the partners themselves. n27.5 The court stated that in the case of a contribution to a partnership there is no transfer of property from one person to another, but only a change in the form of ownership. In this case, the new venture was an LLC, not a partnership. Pursuant to Virginia law, LLCs were entities separate from their members. The court stated, "[T]he transfer of property from a member to the limited liability company is more than a change in the form of ownership; it is a transfer from one entity or person to another." n27.6 Thus, the owner was liable to the broker for a commission on this transfer.

[5] Measure of Broker's Recovery

[a] Generally

Where the brokerage contract gives the broker an exclusive right of sale and expressly provides that a commission is payable if the property is sold by anyone, including the owner himself, or withdrawn from the market, most cases hold the broker entitled to the broker's commission if any of the stated eventualities happen. n28 The duty to pay the commission is not viewed as a remedial penalty for breach of an executory contract but as a debt owed for a fully performed contract. n29 In such a case, it is unnecessary for the broker to prove that he would have been able to produce a ready, willing and able purchaser or that he was the procuring cause of the sale. n30 The duty to pay the commission may also exist after the expiration of the listing, provided that there is a provision in the listing agreement for the payment of commissions for prospects introduced to the property during the listing period. The courts have reached differing results in this regard. n31

Where the broker has an exclusive agency contract and the owner breaches by selling through another agent, the action is necessarily one for damages. Nevertheless, most courts appear to measure the damages based upon the agreed commission, n32 though some cases require some proof that the plaintiff-broker could have found a suitable purchaser. n33

The statute of limitations for recovery of brokers' commissions begins to run at the time of the sale. n34 The statute of limitations, at least in New York, for recovery of commissions begins to run when a cause of action accrues, which is at the time of the breach. In Ely-Cruikshank Co. v. Bank of Montreal, n35 the listing agreement provided that either party could terminate the entire agreement for any reason at any time after January 31, 1991, with thirty days' notice. The broker alleged that the owner had undertaken negotiations for the sale to a potential purchaser prior to the termination of the agreement, and therefore earned his commission pursuant to the exclusive rights under the listing agreement. The broker alleged that the statute of limitations began to run on February 1, 1994, when the building was sold, and therefore, was not time-barred. The court disagreed, however, noting that the cause of action accrues at the time of the breach of contract and that the alleged breach, if any, occurred when the bank reportedly failed to reveal its preliminary discussions with the purchaser prior to the termination of the brokerage agreement.

If a broker is successful in a suit seeking recovery of a commission, the broker may also be entitled to prejudgment interest. n35.1 This is particularly true if the payment due under a listing agreement is a fixed and certain sum and the vendor breaches the agreement by failing to pay the commission. The fact that the disputed funds are held in escrow should not prevent an award of prejudgment interest n35.2

[b] Possible Limitations on the Broker's Right to Compensation--The Interactive Properties Decision

In the case of Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, n36 the New York Court of Appeals denied a motion for leave to appeal from a ruling of the Appellate Division, First Department, which ruling as some commentators have noted, may serve to severely weaken a broker's right to recover commissions pursuant to an exclusive brokerage arrangement. n37 In the instant case, the plaintiff, Interactive Properties, was a licensed real estate broker who undertook to negotiate, on an exclusive basis, the leasing of office space for the defendant, the advertising agency of Doyle Dane. n38 Plaintiff was acting pursuant to a nine-month exclusive written brokerage contract. n39 Accordingly, plaintiff brought an action seeking to recover its commissions when defendant secretly utilized another broker to negotiate and procure office space located at 437 Madison Avenue ("Madison Avenue"). n40

After noting that damages in connection with a breach of contract "must, as nearly as possible, restore to the injured party all that he has lost by the breach and all that he, in reasonable probability, would have gained had there been no breach," n41 the Appellate Division expressly stated that the "precise issue of the proper measure of damages for breach of an exclusive agency to negotiate for the leasing of property" had never been addressed by the New York Courts. n42 In this regard, the court recognized that under current New York law n43 damages in the case of the breach of an exclusive agency agreement are based upon two distinct items. n44 These items include:

- (1) expenses actually incurred by the broker; and
- (2) any profits or commissions "lost on a sale the exclusive broker would have made." n45

Thus, the court's reasoning in effect required that in order for the plaintiff to recover the full commission in connection with the lease, the plaintiff would be required to show that "it would have earned the entire commission by independently procuring the Madison Avenue lease... ." n46

In light of the principles governing damages in the case of the breach of an exclusive agency agreement, the court concluded that plaintiff was unable to establish either of the above noted elements of damage. n47 In addition, the court held that plaintiff had not proved any avarice or willful breach on the part of the defendant which would have entitled it to damages against the defendant. n48 The court did hold, however, that the breach by the defendant prevented the plaintiff from conducting negotiations for certain office space and, consequently, plaintiff would be entitled to half of the commission. n49 In so holding, the court rejected the claim by plaintiff that a claim for the entire commission could be sustained on the theory that plaintiff's contract was similar to an "exclusive right to sell." n50 In rejecting plaintiff's theory, the court stated that:

It is well-accepted that a principal who makes a direct sale of property in violation of an exclusive right to sell certain property is liable to the broker for the agreed-upon commission, regardless of whether he would have effected the sale. [citations omitted]. Those cases, however, are not here dispositive, since each involved a specified commission and none involved the principal's use of another broker. In contrast, there was no specified commission here, and plaintiff had an exclusive agency, which prevented defendant from employing another broker, but did not preclude defendant from itself making a deal without becoming liable to plaintiff for a commission. [citations omitted]. Bagley v. Butler [301 N.Y.S.2d 148, 1969 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1745] ... is distinguishable because it involved an agreement which expressly provided for payment of the commission if another person effected the sale. We believe that plaintiff was required to prove that it would have independently procured the lease signed by defendant in order to receive the entire commission as the measure of damages. A careful reading of Hammond v. C.I.T. Financial Corp. ... [citation omitted] indicates the infirmity of plaintiff's claim to the entire commission. The court there held that the principal who, in breach of an exclusive right to sell, dealt directly with a buyer rather than referring the buyer to the broker was liable for the full commission because the broker demonstrated that he would have been as successful as the principal in negotiating with the purchaser. ... Here, as discussed ... the evidence demonstrated that plaintiff, acting independently, would not have been as successful as the other broker in procuring the Madison Avenue lease, but would have successfully conducted the negotiations and earned half of the commission. n51

Accordingly, the court awarded the plaintiff damages in the amount of $325,000 discounted to present value as of July 7, 1975, plus interest, cost and disbursement, inasmuch as such amount represented one half of the commission. n52

[c] Customary Commission Rate

In some instances, an agreement is entered into by a seller and a broker with no commission rate being set. One court has stated that persons seeking commissions in connection with real estate transactions are required to prove by a preponderance of the evidence, that

- (1) there was an agreement;
- (2) they were the procuring cause of the sale;
- (3) there was a customary and usual brokerage commission; and
- (4) the customary commission was certain, uniform, and notorious. n53

In this particular case, the seller kept ducking the broker's efforts to agree to a specific commission rate. When the commercial property later sold for $1,131,000 due to the broker's efforts, the seller tried to offer her a finder's fee of $15,000, which she rejected. n54 The trial court in this case determined that the customary commission rate was 10%. This holding was affirmed on appeal. n55

In Mitchell Realty Group, LLC v. Holt, n56 the broker claimed that he was due a commission based upon a provision in a sales contract which stated that the broker was due a commission, but which failed to specify the amount of the commission. n57 The court found that under the Georgia Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions Act, agreements between a broker and its clients regarding the amount of brokerage compensation were required to be in writing. Since there was no written agreement covering the amount of the commission, the broker was not entitled to a recover a commission. n58

[d] Brokers Are Not Entitled to a Double Recovery

As a general rule, a broker cannot receive a double recovery. This principle is illustrated by Holzman v. Blum n59 where a broker sued the sellers to recover his commission which was allegedly owed under an exclusive listing agreement. The sellers had canceled the first sales contract which they had entered into in order to enter into a second sales contract with another buyer. n60 The commission dispute stemmed from the fact that the broker was entitled to the full commission under the first contract since there was no cooperating broker whereas under the second contract the commission had to be split with the buyer's real estate agent. The sellers preferred the second contract because the sales price was higher than the first. n61 The broker sued the sellers alleging that they had breached the listing contract by failing to pay the commission on the first sales contract.

The court found that the listing agreement was unambiguous and expressly provided that the broker's commission was not contingent upon settlement. Specifically, the court stated that the agreement did not state that the commission was to be paid from the sales proceeds, but rather that payment of the commission was due if the sellers executed a written agreement to sell the property. The trial court, however, had reduced the commission due on this first sale by the amount of commission the broker received on the second sale. In affirming the trial court on this issue, the court stated that the commission clause contemplated one fee from the sellers with respect to the property's sale. n62 It stated that based on the facts of the case, the commission clause did not contemplate double recovery by the broker. n63

[6] Who May Sue to Collect a Commission

Some states limit who is entitled to sue to collect a commission. For example, Pennsylvania holds that only the broker has the capacity to sue for an unpaid commission. Therefore, an agent or salesperson cannot sue a third party for a commission. n64 Pursuant to this rule, it has been held that a salesperson cannot sue another salesperson to collect his share of a commission. However, this principle does not prevent a salesperson from suing the licensed broker with whom he or she is affiliated to recover an unpaid commission. n65

[7] Seller's Duties

A seller's failure to fulfill his or her duties under a listing agreement can affect a broker's right to a commission. Some listing agreements require that the seller

- refer to the seller's broker or agent all prospective purchasers or brokers who contact the seller for any reason and
- provide the seller's broker or agent with the names and addresses of these third parties.

If the listing agreement contains such a provision and the seller fails to abide by this provision, a subsequent sale to a prospective purchaser not properly referred to seller's broker or agent can result in the broker or agent recovering a commission. n66

[8] Agreements Which Violate Public Policy

In Rotemi Realty, Inc. v. Act Realty Co., Inc., n67 the Florida high court validated a brokerage agreement where the broker, in negotiating a sale to a governmental agency (a school district) within a specified time period, would receive a commission "equal to the amount of the sales proceeds due the owner at closing that is over $1,000,000." n68 A Florida intermediate appellate court had found that the broker was not entitled to a commission because this arrangement violated public policy. n69 In considering this issue, the Supreme Court of Florida framed the question as follows: "We consider whether the common practice of paying real estate commissions contingent on consummation of the sale violates the public policy of this state when applied to a purchase or sale by the government." n70 In holding that this common practice does not violate Florida public policy, the Florida high court stated that the general rule continues to be that an employment in which compensation is contingent on success in securing contracts from public officials is not illegal on its face, but rather is illegal only if shown to involve "favors or corrupt means." n71 This court found that there was no reason why this general rule should not apply specifically to the real estate brokerage industry. n72

[9] Liquidated Damages

A listing agreement can contain a liquidated damages clause. Various courts have upheld the validity of such provisions in real estate sales contracts. n73 In a case of first impression, an Illinois court has upheld the validity of a liquidated damages clause in a broker's listing agreement. n74 This clause allowed the broker to recover liquidated damages from a seller who prematurely terminated an exclusive listing agreement. The Illinois court stated that there was no reason to treat a liquidated damages clause in a real estate brokerage contract any differently than one found in any other contract. n75 This court also found that liquidated damage provisions in listing agreements that based the amount of liquidated damages upon the broker's bargained-for commission, as opposed to an estimate of damages "made from whole cloth," would be upheld as a reasonable estimate of damages. n76

In order for a liquidated damages provision in a listing agreement to be valid, the provision must meet the three tests imposed on these types of provisions: (1) the parties intended to agree in advance to the settlement of damages that might arise from the breach; (2) the amount of liquidated damages was reasonable at the time of contracting, bearing some relation to the damages which might be sustained; and (3) actual damages would be uncertain in amount and difficult to prove. n77 Liquidated damage provisions in listing agreements that fail the tests generally applied to liquidated damage provisions in other types of contracts will not be enforced. n78 Conversely, liquidated damages provisions in listing agreements that pass these tests will typically be found to be valid and enforceable. n79 However, provisions that allow the broker to recover a full commission in addition to costs, expenses, and attorney's fees based upon the seller's breach of a listing agreement have been found to be void as penalty clauses. n80

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Hill v. Capps, 248 Miss. 601, 612, 160 So.2d 186, 190 (1964) ; Leary v. Stockman, 937 So. 2d 964, 971 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006) ; Moody Realty Co. v. Huestis, 237 S.W.3d 666, 677 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2007) , appeal denied, 2007 Tenn. LEXIS 702 (Aug. 13, 2007) Wyoming Realty Co. v. Cook, 872 P.2d 551 (Wyo. 1994) .

See also N.J. Stat. Ann. § 25:1-16(d) which permits a broker to collect a commission if, within five days after making an oral agreement, the broker provides a writing to the principal who enlisted the broker's services, stating the terms of the oral agreement and the rate or amount of commission to be paid.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Coldwell Banker Commercial v. Resource Realty of Central Jersey, 368 N.J. Super. 382, 392, 846 A.2d 633, 639 (2004) Andersen v. Schenk, 353 Mont. 424, 428-29, 2009 MT 399, 220 P.3d 675, 679 (2009) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See:

District of Columbia: D.C. Code § 42-1705; In re Capitol Hill Group, 344 B.R. 709, 713 (D.D.C. 2006) , applying D.C. law.

Rhode Island: Brochu v. Santis, 939 A.2d 449, 453 (R.I. 2008) , citing R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-1-4 (6).

Texas: Givens v. Dougherty, 671 S.W.2d 877 (Tex. 1984) rehearing of cause overruled (Jul. 18, 1984).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Insignia/Frain Camins & Swartchild v. Querrey & Harrow, 36 F. Supp. 2d 1051, 1054-1055 (N.D. Ill. 1999), applying Illinois law; Limehouse v. Resolution Trust Corp., 862 F. Supp. 97 (D.S.C. 1994). See also Coldwell Banker v. Pauson, 647 A.2d 146 (N.H. 1994) (holding that a broker was not entitled to a commission on a sale which occurred after the listing agreement protection period provided therein had expired, since a broker is entitled to a commission only if he achieves the result within the specified time); Property Plus, Inc. v. Management & Rentals, Inc., 703 So. 2d 1363, 1364 (La. App. 1997) (the broker's failure to complete and have the property owner sign a property disclosure addendum in accordance with the marketing agreement resulted in the owner having no obligation to pay a commission on the property's sale) writ denied, 709 So. 2d 777, 1998 La. LEXIS 631 (La. Feb. 20, 1998). Leary v. Stockman, 937 So. 2d 964, 970 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006); (The broker has the burden of proving the terms of the brokerage contract.); Reece & Nichols Realtors v. Zoll, 201 S.W.3d 516, 519 (Mo. Ct. App. 2006) (If the broker substantially complied with the contract, the broker is entitled to a commission); Trezevant Realty Corp. v. Threlkeld, 2008 Tenn. App. LEXIS 618, at *23 (Oct. 14, 2008) (whether a broker is entitled to a commission is a contractual matter.) Sonday v. Dave Kohel Agency, Inc., 2006 WI 92, 293 Wis. 2d 458, 474, 718 N.W.2d 631, 639 (2006) (Without a valid listing contract, a broker would not be entitled to any commission).

(n5)Footnote 4.1. See, e.g., Tom Heal Commercial Real Estate, Inc. v. York, 167 P.3d 523, 526, 2007 UT App 265 (2007). See also Georgia Real Estate Properties, Inc. v. Lindwall, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 272, at *5 (Mar. 22, 2010) (listing agreement must be construed according to its express terms).

(n6)Footnote 5. Knight v. Hicks, 505 S.W.2d 638 (Tex. Civ. App.--Amarillo, 1974) writ of error refused no reversible error (Apr. 10, 1974), rehearing of writ of error overruled (May. 8, 1974).

(n7)Footnote 5.1. See Commercial Ventures, Inc. v. The Rex M. & Lynn Lea Family Trust, 177 P.3d 955, 963 (Idaho 2008), reh'g denied, 2008 Ida. LEXIS 36 (Idaho, Feb. 15, 2008).

(n8)Footnote 5.2. See Realty Center New Homes Div., LLC v. Dowlen Constr., LLC, 2008 Tenn. App. LEXIS 782, at *21-*24 (Tenn. Ct. App. Dec. 30, 2008).

(n9)Footnote 6. LA&N Interests, Inc. v. Fish, 864 S.W.2d 745, 750 (Tex. App.--Houston [14th Dist.] 1993) overruled by Trammel Crow Co. No. 60 v. Harkinson, 944 S.W.2d 631, 634 (Tex. 1997) (on other grounds).

(n10)Footnote 7. Lanstar Int'l Realty, Inc. v. New York News, Inc., 206 A.D.2d 411, 614 N.Y.S.2d 438, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7316 (2d Dept. 1994).

(n11)Footnote 8. Park-Haden, Inc. v. Loews Theater Management Corp., 789 F. Supp. 1257, 1262 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (citing the application of New York law).

(n12)Footnote 9. Braden v. Isabell K. Horsley Real Estate, Ltd., 245 Va. 11, 425 S.E.2d 481 (Va. 1993).

(n13)Footnote 10. Batt v. Scully, 168 B.R. 541 (D.N.J. 1994).

(n14)Footnote 10.1. Statutory law may address how a commission is earned if the listing agreement is silent on this issue. See Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 14-105. Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 157, 209 P.3d 741, 748 (2009).

See also Grubb & Ellis/Centennial, Inc. v. Gaedeke Holdings, Ltd., 401 F.3d 770, 774-776 (6th Cir. 2005), applying Tennessee law (listing contract did not require that the broker establish that it was the procuring cause of a signed lease in order to receive a commission); Helms Realty v. Gibson-Wall Co., 363 S.C. 334, 338, 611 S.E.2d 485, 487 (S.C.

2005) (In executing a listing agreement, a seller and a real-estate broker may agree to any condition precedent to the seller's obligation to pay a commission. If the listing agreement is silent as to what triggers the broker's right to a commission, then the common law fills the gap.); The Boerke Company, Inc. v. Protein Genetics, Inc., 273 Wis. 2d 786, 680 N.W.2d 833, 2004 WI App 109, 2004 Wisc. App. LEXIS 336, at *6 (Wis. Ct. App. Apr. 22, 2004) (Ordinarily, a broker earns a commission when the broker procures a ready, willing, and able buyer. However, when the parties negotiate a non-form listing agreement, the parties' intent controls.).

(n15)Footnote 10.2. See Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 152, 209 P.3d 741, 746 (2009) .

(n16)Footnote 10.3. See Granger v. Schachenmayr, 49 A.D.3d 1079, 1081, 857 N.Y.S.2d 239, 240-41 (2008) (non-binding letter of intent was insufficient to entitle broker to a commission).

(n17)Footnote 10.4. See Ben-Shmuel v. Wimbish-Riteway, Inc., 722 So. 2d 955, 957 (Fla. App. 1998) .

(n18)Footnote 10.5. See Jones v. Lee, 126 N.M. 467, 971 P.2d 858, 867, 1999 NMCA 8 (N.M. App. 1998) .

See also Hubbell Commercial Brokers, L.C. v. Fountain Three, 652 N.W.2d 151, 157 (Iowa 2002) (Real Estate Commission Rule requiring that listing agreements be written and contain certain information did not apply to fee agreements between two brokers since the reason behind this rule is to protect the public by regulating brokers, not to protect brokers from other brokers).

(n19)Footnote 10.6. See Perl v. Patrizi, 20 S.W.3d 76, 80 (Tex. App. 2000) , review denied.

(n20)Footnote 10.7. See Exit A Plus Realty v. Zuniga, 395 N.J. Super. 655, 663-64, 930 A.2d 491, 496 (App. Div. 2007) (agent failed to leave a fully executed copy of the listing agreement with the sellers); Moody Realty Co. v. Huestis, 237 S.W.3d 666, 677 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2007) , appeal denied, 2007 Tenn. LEXIS 702 (Tenn. Aug. 13, 2007) (agent failed to leave a copy of the agency contract executed by both parties).

(n21)Footnote 10.8. See Resort Realty of the Outer Banks v. Brandt, 163 N.C. App. 114, 117-118, 593 S.E.2d 404, 408 (2004) , review denied, 358 N.C. 236, 595 S.E.2d 154 (2004) (seller unsuccessfully argued that the listing agreement placed the duty on the broker to locate and secure replacement property).

(n22)Footnote 10.9. See Resort Realty of the Outer Banks v. Brandt, 163 N.C. App. 114, 117-119, 593 S.E.2d 404, 408-409 (2004) , review denied, 358 N.C. 236, 595 S.E.2d 154 (2004) .

(n23)Footnote 10.10. See Avatar Business Connections, Inc. v. Uni-Marts, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37506, *25 (D. N.J. Dec. 29, 2005) , applying New Jersey law; Steve Schmidt & Co. v. Berry, 183 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1305, 228 Cal. Rptr. 689, 692 (1986) , review denied. But cf. Dow & Condon, Inc. v. Muros N. Ltd. P'ship, 69 Conn. App. 220, 226, 794 A.2d 554, 558 (2002) (While a written agreement is still strictly required, a broker may recover a commission if the broker has substantially complied with the statute and it would be inequitable to deny recovery).

(n24)Footnote 10.11. See Avatar Business Connections, Inc. v. Uni-Marts, Inc., 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37506, *25 (D. N.J. Dec. 29, 2005) , applying New Jersey law; Clammer v. Eddy, 41 Colo. 235, 239, 92 P. 722, 723 (Colo. 1907) ; White v. Miller, 259 Iowa 609, 615, 145 N.W.2d 28, 32 (Iowa 1966) ; Hand Realty Co. v. Meyers, 234 Kan. 304, 307, 672 P.2d 583, 585 (Kan. 1983) ; Porter v. Hunter, 60 Utah 222, 226, 207 P. 153, 155 (Utah 1922) .

(n25)Footnote 10.12. See Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Invs., Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 153, 209 P.3d 741, 746 (2009) .

(n26)Footnote 11. Garrett v. Richardson, 149 Colo. 449, 369 P.2d 566 (1962) . But see Callaway v. Overholt, 796 S.W.2d 828 (Tex. Ct. App. 1990) writ denied, (Feb. 13, 1991), rehearing of writ of error overruled (Mar. 20, 1991)

(holding that a stipulation in a brokerage agreement requiring payment of a commission to the broker upon the consummation of the sale only affected the time at which the broker's commission was payable, and did not modify seller's obligation to pay the commission when the broker procured a ready, willing and able buyer).

(n27)Footnote 12.

Colorado: Garrett v. Richardson, 149 Colo. 449, 369 P.2d 566 (1962) .

District of Columbia: W. W. Chambers, Inc. v. Audette, 385 A.2d 10 (D.C. App. 1978) .

Massachusetts: Cadigan v. Crabtree, 179 Mass. 474, 61 N.E. 37 (1901) .

New Jersey: Ettinger v. Loux, 96 N.J.L. 522, 115 A. 384 (1921) .

New York: Sibbald v. Bethlehem Iron Co., 83 N.Y. 378 (1881) .

Ohio: Walker v. David Davies, Inc. 34 Ohio App. 2d 139, 63 Ohio Op. 2d 244, 296 N.E.2d 691 (1973) .

(n28)Footnote 13.

Arkansas: Branch v. Moore, 84 Ark. 462, 105 S.W. 1178 (1907) .

Maryland: Anderson-Stokes, Inc. v. Muslimani, 83 Md. App. 267, 574 A.2d 320 (Md. 1990) (holding that an owner could not deprive a broker of his right to a commission by selling to broker's client at a price lower than the broker was authorized to pursue, particularly where the owner had not revoked authority).

Michigan: Davis-Fisher Co. v. Hall, 182 Mich. 574, 148 N.W. 713 (1914) .

New York: Goodman v. Marcol, 261 N.Y. 188, 184 N.E. 755 (1932) .

North Carolina: Jaudon v. Swink, 276 S.E.2d 511 (N.C. Ct. App. 1981) .

Oregon: Snyder v. Schram, 274 Or. 539, 547 P.2d 102 (1976) .

See generally Note, The New York Real Estate Broker: Earning a Commission, 30 Ford. L. Rev. 137 (1961).

(n29)Footnote 14. See, e.g.,

Tennessee: Needham v. Winter, No. 426 (Tenn. App. June 9, 1989) (LEXIS, State Library, Omni file) (when two agreements are in conflict as to when a broker is entitled to a sales commission, the last executed agreement applies).

Cf.:

Colorado: Fallenius v. Walker, 787 P.2d 203 (Colo. Ct. App. 1989) (holding that the broker was not entitled to a commission where a third party preempted the sale by exercising its right to match offer, as provided in the brokerage agreement).

North Carolina: Thomco Realty, Inc. v. Helms, 107 N.C. App. 224, 418 S.E.2d 834 (1992) .

Ohio: Nate Doss v. Mosen & Sloan, No. 845 (Ohio Ct. App. Mar. 17, 1989) (LEXIS, State Library, Omni file) (a real estate broker was not entitled to a commission where a condition precedent imposed upon the listing agreement by contract remained unfulfilled).

(n30)Footnote 15. See Cartel Realty, Inc. v. Southern Bearing & Parts Co., Inc., 243 Ga. App. 653, 534 S.E.2d 119, 121 (2000) ; Gilmer v. Fauteux, 723 A.2d 1150, 1151 (Vt. 1998) (one-year non-exclusive listing agreement).

(n31)Footnote 15.1. 12 Am. Jur. 2d, Brokers § 5231. Courts still conflict on this issue. In Crowell v. Investment Realty Ctr., Inc., 597 So. 2d 907 (Fla. DCA 1992) , a court upheld the enforceability of the exclusive listing agreement in spite of the seller's protests that he had not agreed to the same. But see Lyle v. Moore, 599 P.2d 336 (Mont. 1979) , wherein the Montana Supreme Court maintained a contrary position.

(n32)Footnote 16. Flynn v. LaSalle Nat'l Bank, 9 Ill. 2d 129, 137 N.E.2d 71 (1956) .

(n33)Footnote 17.

Colorado: Cooley Inv. Co. v. Jones, No. 87 CA 1764 (Colo. App. May 4, 1989) (LEXIS, State Library, Omni file) (seller's transfer of real property to a partnership in which she held an interest did not constitute a "sale or exchange" for the purposes of the listing agreement, and, therefore the broker was not entitled to a commission).

Maine: Chamberlain v. Porter, 562 A.2d 675 (Me. 1989) (where the brokerage agreement required the commission to be paid out of the proceeds of the closing, and the sale fell through due to defects in seller's title, the court found that a broker was not entitled to a commission, despite his procurement of a ready, willing and able buyer).

Oklahoma: Zuhdi v. Cohen Realty, Inc., 836 P.2d 686 (Okla. Ct. App. 1992) , where a transfer of title pursuant to a foreclosure was held not to be a sale entitling a broker to a commission.

(n34)Footnote 17.1. See Argabright v. Rodgers, 2003 ND 59, 659 N.W.2d 369, 371 (N.D. 2003) .

(n35)Footnote 17.2. See Argabright v. Rodgers, 2003 ND 59, 659 N.W.2d 369, 371 (N.D. 2003) .

(n36)Footnote 17.3. See J.C. Nichols Co. v. Osborn, 12 F. Supp. 2d 1196, 1199 (D. Kan. 1998) (applying Kansas law); Foltz v. Begnoche, 222 Kan. 383, 385-386, 565 P.2d 592 (1977) .

(n37)Footnote 17.4. 222 Kan. 383, 565 P.2d 592 (1977) .

(n38)Footnote 17.5. 222 Kan. 383 . 387-389, 565 P.2d 592 (1977) .

(n39)Footnote 17.6. 12 F. Supp. 2d 1196 (D. Kan. 1998) (applying Kansas law).

(n40)Footnote 17.7. 12 F. Supp. 2d 1196, 1200 (D. Kan. 1998) (applying Kansas law).

(n41)Footnote 17.8. See Hammond v. C.I.T. Fin. Corp., 203 F.2d 705, 707 (2d Cir. 1953) (construction of broker age contract as an exclusive right-to-sell agreement was reasonable in view of a referral provision contained therein); J.C. Nichols Co. v. Osborn, 12 F. Supp. 2d 1196, 1200 (D. Kan. 1998) (applying Kansas law) (referral provision indicates that owners could not sell property on their own without incurring liability for broker's commission); Doll v. Thornhill, 6 So. 2d 793, 795 (La. Ct. App. 1942) (effect of a referral provision was that the owner could not trade directly with prospective purchasers); Kislak Co. v. Geldzahler, 210 N.J. Super. 255, 509 A.2d 320, 326 (1985) ("[T]he presence of a referral term has been recognized as an essential component of an exclusive agreement so much so that it has been found, of itself, to confer upon a broker the exclusive right to sell."); Gaillard Realty Co. v. Rogers Wire Works, 215 A.D. 326, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10961, 213 N.Y.S. 616, 621 (1926) (referral clause made the contract an exclusive right-to-sell agreement); E & E Mining, Inc. v. Flying "D" Group, Inc., 718 P.2d 58, 61 (Wyo. 1986) (agreement with referral clause unambiguously granted an exclusive right to sell).

See generally Marvel, Annot., "Exclusive Right to Sell" and Other Terms in Real-Estate Broker's Contract as Excluding Owner's Right to Sell, 88 A.L.R.2d 936, 961 (1963) .

(n42)Footnote 17.9. 12 F. Supp. 2d 1196, 1201 (D. Kan. 1998) .

(n43)Footnote 17.10. 12 F. Supp. 2d 1196, 1203 (D. Kan. 1998) .

(n44)Footnote 17.11. 12 F. Supp. 2d 1105, 1112 (D. Kan. 1998) .

(n45)Footnote 17.12. See Prudential Kahler Realtors v. Schmitendorf, 673 N.W.2d 663, 666, 2003 SD 148 (S.D. 2003) .

(n46)Footnote 18.

California: Baumgartner v. Meek, 126 Cal. App. 2d 505, 272 P.2d 552 (1954) .

Florida: Mark Realty, Inc. v. Rogness, 418 So. 2d 373 (Fla. DCA 1982) .

(n47)Footnote 19. Wood v. Lucy, Lady Duff Gordon, 222 N.Y. 88, 118 N.E. 214 (1917) .

(n48)Footnote 20.

Florida: Flynn v. McGinty, 61 So. 2d 318 (Fla. 1952) .

South Dakota: Berven Co. v. Newman, 281 N.W.2d 268 (S.D. 1979) .

(n49)Footnote 21. Kruger v. Soreide, 246 N.W.2d 764 (N.D. 1976) .

Restatement (Second) of Agency § 449, comment a states:

In the ordinary listing of property with a real estate broker, the broker's promises to use his best efforts or other similarly indefinite promises are not, without other facts, sufficient to indicate that consideration has been given.

(n50)Footnote 22.

Connecticut: Harris v. McPherson, 97 Conn. 164, 115 A. 723 (1922) .

Kansas: Braniff v. Baier, 101 Kan. 117, 165 P. 816 (1927) .

Michigan: Ladd v. Teichman, 359 Mich. 587, 103 N.W.2d 338 (1960) .

Ohio: Bell v. Dimmerling, 149 Ohio St. 165, 36 Ohio Op. 505, 78 N.E.2d 49 (1948) .

Tennessee: Jenkins v. Vaughan, 197 Tenn. 578, 276 S.W.2d 732 (1954) (exclusive agency for 90 days held revocable where broker expended no substantial effort in attempting to sell property).

Texas: James v. Baron Indus., Inc. 605 S.W.2d 330 (Tex. Civ. App. 1980) (substantiality of broker's efforts prior to vendor's revocation held a question of fact for the jury; summary judgment for vendor reversed and remanded).

Contra:

Massachusetts: Bartlett v. Keith, 325 Mass. 265, 90 N.E.2d 308 (1950) (exclusive sale held unilateral offer and revocable despite expenditure of effort by broker).

New York: R.B. Schlesinger & Co., Inc. v. Delson and Gordon, 184 A.D.2d 393, 585 N.Y.S.2d 373, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8506 (1st Dept. 1992) (where the defendant-seller executed an exclusive brokerage agreement, permitting the defendant to consider competing offers, since the agreement conditioned any commissions on a completed transaction, a mere tender of an offer to sublease the available premises was made, but never executed or accepted by the defendant, for which no right to commission was created).

(n51)Footnote 23. Comment G to § 45 states:

Agency contracts. This Section frequently applies to agency arrangements, particularly offers made to real estate brokers. Sometimes there is a return promise by the agent, particularly if there is an agreement for exclusive dealing, since such an agreement normally imposes an obligation on the agent to use best efforts. See Uniform Commercial Code § 2-306(2); compare Restatement, Second, Agency § 378. In other cases the agent does not promise to act, but the principal must compensate him if he does act

Although the courts are not always explicit in stating the rationale, the following cases may fairly be viewed as supporting § 45 of the Restatement:

California: Baumgartner v. Meek, 126 Cal. App. 2d 505, 272 P.2d 552 (1954) .

Connecticut: Harris v. McPherson, 97 Conn. 164, 115 A. 723 (1922) .

Minnesota: Confer Bros. v. Colbrath, 149 Minn. 259, 183 N.W. 524 (1927) ; Lapham v. Flint, 86 Minn. 376, 90 N.W. 780 (1902) .

Ohio: Bell v. Dimmerling, 149 Ohio St. 165, 36 Ohio Op. 505, 78 N.E.2d 49 (1948) .

(n52)Footnote 24. Kruger v. Soreide, 246 N.W.2d 764, 773 (N.D. 1976) . See Huff v. Rammell, 108 Idaho 113, 697 P.2d 453 (Idaho Ct. App. 1985) (unilateral termination of exclusive brokerage agreement prior to expiration date is ineffective).

(n53)Footnote 25. There is no implied extension of a listing agreement. See Lynn Beechler Realty Co. v. Warnygora, 396 N.W.2d 717 (Minn. Ct. App. 1986) .

(n54)Footnote 26. Lyle v. Moore, 183 Mont. 274, 599 P.2d 336 (Mont. 1979) .

(n55)Footnote 27. 604 N.E.2d 601 (Ind. 1992) .

(n56)Footnote 27.1. 253 Va. 217, 482 S.E.2d 805 (Va. 1997) . But cf. Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 157, 209 P.3d 741, 748 (2009) (no express agreement to pay a commission if the property was gifted during the listing period).

(n57)Footnote 27.2. 253 Va. 217, 219, 482 S.E.2d 805, 807 (Va. 1997) .

(n58)Footnote 27.3. See Horning v. Shilberg, 130 Cal. App. 4th 197, 204, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 717, 723 (2005) ; Stout v. Edmonds, 180 Cal. App. 3d 66, 70, 225 Cal. Rptr. 345 (1986) , review denied.

(n59)Footnote 27.4. See Horning v. Shilberg, 130 Cal. App. 4th 197, 206, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 717, 725 (2005) .

(n60)Footnote 27.5. For cases involving partnerships that were held not to be subject to the payment of a commission since there was held to be only a change in the form of ownership, see Southpace Properties, Inc. v. Acquisition Group, 5 F.3d 500, 504 (11th Cir. 1993) ; Cooley Inv. Co. v. Jones, 780 P.2d 29, 31 (Colo. App. 1989) ; Miller, Cowherd & Kerver, Inc. v. De Montejo, 406 So. 2d 1196, 1198 (Fla. App. 1981) ; McElhinney v. Belsky, 165 Pa. Super. 546, 69 A.2d 178, 181 (1949) .

(n61)Footnote 27.6. 253 Va. 217, 220, 482 S.E.2d 805, 807 (Va. 1997) .

(n62)Footnote 28.

California: Blank v. Borden, 11 Cal. 3d 963, 524 P.2d 127 (1974) .

Maine: E.A. Strout Farm Agency v. McTeer, 111 Me. 169, 88 A. 411 (1913) .

Michigan: Ladd v. Teichman, 359 Mich. 587, 103 N.W.2d 338 (1960) .

Minnesota: Confer Bros., Inc. v. Colbrath, 149 Minn. 259, 183 N.W. 524 (1921) .

Texas: Holmes v. Holik, 238 S.W.2d 260 (Tex. Civ. App. 1951) .

Contra:

New York: Ackerman v. Dobbs, 181 A.D.2d 704, 580 N.Y.S.2d 793, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3284 (2d Dept. 1992) (holding that no commission was due where (1) the ultimate buyer had already offered to purchase the property before the listing agreement had been executed, (2) the buyer was not introduced to the seller by the broker, and (3) the broker never showed the buyer the premises or discussed any terms and conditions of the deal; under these circumstances, it could not be said that the broker brought the parties together or that the broker was the procuring cause of the sale).

(n63)Footnote 29. In Confer Bros., Inc. v. Colbrath, 149 Minn. 259, 183 N.W. 524, 525 (1921) , the court stated:

The cases cited by defendant in respect to the measure of damages where a party who has undertaken to perform an executory contract is prevented from doing so by the other party are not in point. Defendant agreed to pay a specified commission in the event of a sale. The sale was made, plaintiff brought suit on the contract for the stipulated amount, and, if entitled to recover at all, was entitled to recover that amount.

See Easton Business Opportunities, Inc. v. Town Executive Suites, 2010 Nev. LEXIS 14, at *25-*26 (2010), quoting this Treatise.

Accord:

California: Blank v. Borden, 11 Cal. 3d 963, 524 P.2d 127 (1974).

(n64)Footnote 30. Kimmell v. Skelly, 130 Cal. 555, 62 P.1067 (1900); Carlsen v. Zane, 261 Cal. App. 2d 399, 67 Cal. Rptr. 747 (1968). Easton Business Opportunities, Inc. v. Town Executive Suites, 2010 Nev. LEXIS 14, at *25-*26 (2010), quoting this Treatise. Cf. Van C. Argiris & Co. v. FMC Corp., 144 Ill. App. 3d 750, 98 Ill. Dec. 601, 494 N.E.2d 723 (1986) (broker cannot recover in quantum meruit for services rendered unless such services can be proven to be the procuring cause of the sale).

(n65)Footnote 31. In Pacifico v. Plate, 183 A.D.2d 986, 583 N.Y.S.2d 600, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6721 (3d Dept. 1992), where a broker brought the parties together and actively participated in negotiations, and the parties executed agreements while the exclusive listing was in effect, the court deemed that it was irrelevant that the transfer of title occurred after the listing had expired, since the broker proved that it had been the procuring cause of the sale. But see Dale Denton Real Estate, Inc. v. Fitzgerald, 635 A.2d 925 (D.C. 1993), where the court held that a summary judgment was unavailable to the broker when the exclusive listing had expired prior to the broker's procuring a ready, willing and able buyer.

(n66)Footnote 32.

Federal: Parke-Hayden v. Loews Theatre Management Corp., 789 F. Supp. 1257 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (holding that punitive damages are not available for a breach of a brokerage agreement unless the allegations support the conclusion that a fraud upon the public was involved).

Alabama: F.W. Woolworth Co. v. Grimmer, 601 So. 2d 1043 (Ala. 1992) (emphasizing the need for specific commission amounts, the court held that the commission to the broker could only be paid on the lower amount because the listing agreement was not clear as to how commissions would be handled when the rentals increased).

Connecticut: Harris v. McPherson, 97 Conn. 164, 115 A. 723 (1922).

District of Columbia: Sandler v. Denston, 183 A.2d 392 (D.C. 1962).

Louisiana: Sam Fullilove & Assocs., Inc. v. Day, 639 So. 2d 801 (La. App. 2d Cir. 1994) (holding that, under the proration rule, the broker was entitled to a pro rata commission upon the owner's sale of the listed property for an amount less than the agreed upon listing price).

Maryland: Garfinkel v. Schwartzman, 253 Md. 710, 254 A.2d 667 (1969).

Missouri: Gordon A. Gundaker Real Estate Co., Inc. v. Missouri Real Estate Comm'n, 878 S.W.2d 466 (Mo. App. E.D. 1994) (upholding a real estate sales incentive program under which one successful agent at random was awarded $10,000 accrued as a result of listing owners paying additional commissions; since only selling agents, and not purchasers, benefited from the program, it did not violate state law prohibiting the use of lotteries, prizes or money to induce or influence customers).

Nevada: Flamingo Realty, Inc. v. Midwest Dev., Inc., 879 P.2d 69 (Nev. 1994) (holding that "established customs" are to be considered in determining the reasonable value of a real estate agent's services).

Oklahoma: Shorten v. Mueller, 206 Okla. 62, 241 P.2d 187 (1952) .

(n67)Footnote 33.

Federal: Parke-Hayden, Inc. v. Loews Theatre Management Corp., 789 F. Supp. 1257 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (punitive damages are not available for breach of a brokerage agreement, unless the allegations support the conclusion that a "fraud upon the public" was involved).

Michigan: Crawford v. Cicotte, 186 Mich. 269, 152 N.W. 1065 (1915) .

Minnesota: Fairchild v. Rogers, 32 Minn. 269, 20 N.W. 191 (1884) .

Oregon: Brady v. E. Portland Sheet Metal Works, 222 Or. 584, 352 P.2d 144 (1960) .

See Restatement (Second) of Agency § 449, Comment a.

(n68)Footnote 34. See:

District of Columbia: Dale Denton Real Estate, Inc. v. Fitzgerald, 635 A.2d 925 (D.C. 1993) .

Pennsylvania: Coldwell Banker Phyllis Rubin v. Romano, 619 A.2d 376 (Pa. Super. Ct. 1993) .

(n69)Footnote 35. 81 N.Y.2d 399, 599 N.Y.S.2d 501, 615 N.E.2d 985 (1993) . But see Panetta v. Tonetti, 182 A.D.2d 977, 582 N.Y.S.2d 303, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5739 (3d Dept. 1992) .

(n70)Footnote 35.1. See Furr v. Fonville Morisey Realty, Inc., 503 S.E.2d 401, 408 (N.C. App. 1998) .

(n71)Footnote 35.2. See J.R. Waymire Co. v. Antares Corp., 975 S.W.2d 243, 248-249 (Mo. App. 1998) .

(n72)Footnote 36. 125 A.D.2d 265, 509 N.Y.S.2d 806, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 62538 (1st Dept. 1986) (motion for leave to appeal denied by the New York Court of Appeals on Dec. 17, 1987).

(n73)Footnote 37. See Exclusive Brokerage Pacts Weakened for Realty Dealers, N.Y.L.J., at 1, col. 2 (Dec. 21, 1987). See § 13A.07 below for an illustrative brokerage agreement for an office lease.

(n74)Footnote 38. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 266, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 807.

(n75)Footnote 39. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 266, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 807.

(n76)Footnote 40. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 266-67, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 808 . The court noted that:

[c]onsonant with its implied obligation not to impede or frustrate performance by plaintiff, defendant cannot rely upon its wrongful conduct, which prevented plaintiff from negotiating the Madison Avenue lease, to prove that plaintiff sustained no injury.

Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 269, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 810 .

See also § 4.07 below discussing the requirement that the broker be the "procuring cause of the transaction" to recover his commissions.

(n77)Footnote 41. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 267, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 809 .

(n78)Footnote 42. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 268, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 809 .

(n79)Footnote 43. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 268, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 809. The court also noted that the New York position on the damages issue was a minority position.

(n80)Footnote 44. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 268, 509 N.Y.S. 2d at 809.

(n81)Footnote 45. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 268, 509 N.Y.S. 2d at 809.

(n82)Footnote 46. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 268, 509 N.Y.S. 2d at 809 .

(n83)Footnote 47. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 268, 509 N.Y.S. 2d at 809 .

(n84)Footnote 48. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 268, 509 N.Y.S. 2d at 809 . Indeed, the court reasoned in this regard that the breach was the direct result of the defendant's "secret pact" with City Center.

(n85)Footnote 49. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 268, 509 N.Y.S. 2d at 809 .

(n86)Footnote 50. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 272-273, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 812.

(n87)Footnote 51. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 272-73, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 812 .

(n88)Footnote 52. Interactive Properties, Inc. v. Doyle Dane, 125 A.D.2d at 265, 509 N.Y.S.2d at 807 .

(n89)Footnote 53. See Loyola Federal Sav. Bank v. Hill, 114 Md. App. 289, 689 A.2d 1268, 1273 (1997) .

(n90)Footnote 54. Loyola Federal Sav. Bank v. Hill, 114 Md. App. 289, 689 A.2d 1268, 1270 (1997) .

(n91)Footnote 55. Loyola Federal Sav. Bank v. Hill, 114 Md. App. 289, 689 A.2d 1268, 1276 (1997) . See also T.G. Slater & Son, Inc. v. The Donald P. And Patricia A. Brennan, LLC, 385 F.3d 836, 842 (4th Cir. 2004) , applying Virginia law (where a contract is silent or ambiguous as to the commission to be paid for services, certain custom or usage of the business and of the locality, known to the parties, or so generally and notoriously known that it is presumed to be known, is admissible to establish the rate the parties agreed to under the contract.).

(n92)Footnote 56. 266 Ga. App. 217, 596 S.E.2d 625 (Ga. Ct. App. 2004) , reconsideration denied (March 12, 2004).

(n93)Footnote 57. There was no listing agreement between the seller and the broker. 266 Ga. App. 217, 219, 596 S.E.2d 625, 626 (Ga. Ct. App. 2004) , reconsideration denied (March 12, 2004).

(n94)Footnote 58. 266 Ga. App. 217, 220, 596 S.E.2d 625, 627 (Ga. Ct. App. 2004) , reconsideration denied (March 12, 2004). This court also stated that since the broker did not make a quantum meruit claim it was not considering this issue. See also Pargar, LLC v. Jackson, 294 Ga. App. 882, 670 S.E.2d 547, 551 (2008) (following Mitchell Realty Group, LLC, the compensation provision in the buyer brokerage agreement had been stricken).

(n95)Footnote 59. 125 Md. App. 602, 726 A.2d 818 (1999) .

(n96)Footnote 60. 125 Md. App. 602, 726 A.2d 818, 822-823 (1999) . The first contract contained a provision which provided that in the event of the seller's default, the buyers' sole remedy was limited to a return of their deposit.

(n97)Footnote 61. When the sellers entered into the first contract they were aware of the higher offer from the second buyers. The court stated that the record did not reveal why the sellers entered into the first contract after they learned of the higher offer from the second buyers.

(n98)Footnote 62. 125 Md. App. 602, 726 A.2d 818, 833 (1999) . The court stated that the broker was attempting to "double dip" and asked rhetorically whether the broker would have complained if the sellers' second sale had not involved a cooperating broker since it then would have received a higher commission on the second sale.

(n99)Footnote 63. 125 Md. App. 602, 726 A.2d 818, 834 (1999) .

(n100)Footnote 64. See Kreider v. Kleinfelter, 314 Pa. Super. 571, 461 A.2d 304, 306-307 (Pa. Super. 1983) . See also Matusik v. Ward, 68 A.D.3d 1213, 1214, 892 N.Y.S.2d 561, 563 (2009) (an action to recover a commission may only be initiated, on the salesperson's behalf, by the broker associated with the salesperson); Coldwell Banker-Hoffman Burke v. KRA Holdings, 42 S.W.3d 868, 874 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2000) (under Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-13-105 an affiliate broker lacks standing to sue a property owner for a real estate commission; an affiliate broker lacks the legal capacity to bring an action directly against the broker's client); Ohio Rev. Code § 4735.21 ("No real estate salesman shall collect any money in connection with any real estate brokerage transaction, whether as a commission, deposit, payment, rental, or otherwise, except in the name of and with the consent of the licensed real estate broker under whom he is licensed").

(n101)Footnote 65. See Eill v. Tegler, 722 A.2d 200, 202 (Pa. Super. 1998) . This case involved a dispute between a licensed broker and two salespersons concerning the apportionment of a commission that was already paid by the third-party vendor.

(n102)Footnote 66. See Wood/Fay Realty Group, Inc. v. New Aquarius Corp., 842 So. 2d 914, 917 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) ; Gretencord v. Cryder, 336 Ill. App. 3d 930, 934, 271 Ill. Dec. 166, 784 N.E.2d 384, 387 (2003) .

(n103)Footnote 67. 911 So. 2d 1181 (Fla. 2005) , rehearing denied, 2005 Fla. LEXIS 1838 (Fla. Sept. 13, 2005) .

(n104)Footnote 68. 911 So. 2d 1181, 1183 (Fla. 2005) , rehearing denied, 2005 Fla. LEXIS 1838 (Fla. Sept. 13, 2005) .

(n105)Footnote 69. See Act Realty Co. v. Rotemi Realty, Inc., 863 So. 2d 334, 336 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2003) , reversed, 911 So. 2d 1181 (Fla. 2005) .

(n106)Footnote 70. 911 So. 2d 1181, 1183 (Fla. 2005) , rehearing denied, 2005 Fla. LEXIS 1838 (Fla. Sept. 13, 2005) .

(n107)Footnote 71. 911 So. 2d 1181, 1188 (Fla. 2005) , rehearing denied, 2005 Fla. LEXIS 1838 (Fla. Sept. 13, 2005) . citing and quoting from Robert & Co. v. Mortland, 160 Fla. 125, 33 So. 2d 732 734 (Fla. 1948) .

(n108)Footnote 72. 911 So. 2d 1181, 1188 (Fla. 2005) , rehearing denied, 2005 Fla. LEXIS 1838 (Fla. Sept. 13, 2005) . The court observed that contingency fees had long been the norm in real estate brokerage and that flat-fee real estate brokerage agreements are virtually unheard of.

(n109)Footnote 73. See Jameson Realty Group v. Kostner, 351 Ill. App. 3d 416, 426, 286 Ill. Dec. 431, 813 N.E.2d 1124, 1132 (Ill. App. Ct. 2004) .

But cf. Wright v. Schutt Construction Co., Inc., 262 Or. 619, 631, 500 P.2d 1045, 1051 (Or. 1972) (contract provision requiring payment of a commission based on the full listed price was a penalty).

(n110)Footnote 74. See Jameson Realty Group v. Kostner, 351 Ill. App. 3d 416, 426, 286 Ill. Dec. 431, 813 N.E.2d 1124, 1132 (Ill. App. Ct. 2004) .

(n111)Footnote 75. See Jameson Realty Group v. Kostner, 351 Ill. App. 3d 416, 425-426, 286 Ill. Dec. 431, 813 N.E.2d 1124, 1132 (Ill. App. Ct. 2004) .

(n112)Footnote 76. See Jameson Realty Group v. Kostner, 351 Ill. App. 3d 416, 425-426, 286 Ill. Dec. 431, 813 N.E.2d 1124, 1132 (Ill. App. Ct. 2004) .

(n113)Footnote 77. See Jameson Realty Group v. Kostner, 351 Ill. App. 3d 416, 423, 286 Ill. Dec. 431, 813 N.E.2d 1124, 1130 (Ill. App. Ct. 2004) .

(n114)Footnote 78. Cf. CMG Realty of Connecticut, Inc. v. Colonnade One at Old Greenwich Ltd. Partnership, 36 Conn. App. 653, 667, 653 A.2d 207, 215 (Conn. App. Ct. 1995) (a provision requiring the seller to pay the broker $50,000 if termination occurred before 84 units had been sold and $100,000 if termination occurred after 84 had been sold was an unenforceable penalty because $50,000 was not related to any amount of damage that the broker would actually suffer in the event of a breach and because the doubling of the fee, dependent upon the amount of units that had been sold, could only serve to threaten the seller not to terminate the listing agreement).

Dean Vincent, Inc. v. McDonough, 281 Ore. 239, 246-247, 574 P.2d 1096, 1099 (Or. 1978) (A broker was not entitled to set aside the jury's verdict awarding him nominal damages based on the owners' failure to plead the invalidity of the liquidated damages provision because: (1) at the time of trial the burden of proof was on the broker to plead and prove that the liquidated damages provision was valid; and (2) even if the burden had been placed upon the owners, there was ample evidence to sustain a finding that the liquidated damages provision was invalid because the amount fixed was not a reasonable forecast of just compensation for the harm that would be caused by a breach of the agreement, and the harm that would be caused by a breach was not one that was incapable of accurate estimation.).

(n115)Footnote 79. Cf. Larson-Hegstrom & Associates, Inc. v. Jeffries, 145 Ariz. 329, 333-34, 701 P.2d 587, 591-92 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1985) (applying the Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 356 and finding enforceable a clause which provided the broker its 6% commission if the seller terminated the exclusive listing agreement before the end of the listing period); Coldwell Banker-First Realty, Inc. v. Meide & Son, Inc., 422 N.W.2d 375, 380 (N.D. 1988) ; DiTommaso Realty, Inc. v. Moak Motorcycles, Inc., 96 Or. App. 431, 434-35, 773 P.2d 391, 392-93 (Or. Ct. App. 1989) , aff'd, 309 Ore. 190, 785 P.2d 343 (Or. 1990) (finding valid a provision that provided the broker with its 10% commission if the seller prematurely terminated the exclusive listing agreement).

(n116)Footnote 80. See Southpace Properties, Inc. v. Acquisition Group, 5 F.3d 500, 505-506 (11th Cir. 1993) , applying Alabama law.

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

92 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.07

§ 4.07 Requirement That the Broker Be the Procuring Cause of the Transaction

[1] In General

Aside from showing that he or she has produced a ready, willing and able buyer, in order to prevail in a suit for compensation, a broker may have to show that he or she was the "procuring and efficient cause" of the transaction. n1 This is particularly true when a broker has not obtained an exclusive right-to-sell or an exclusive agency listing. There cannot be multiple procuring causes. n1.1 Conflicts may arise when the broker introduces the buyer and seller, but the transaction does not close for an extended period of time. For example, intervening events may arise to deprive the broker of the right to a commission, or two competing brokers may seek to introduce the buyer and seller, with the ultimate goal of the sale, exchange or lease of real estate. n2 A broker is not entitled to a commission upon a sale merely because the purchaser is one whom the broker introduced to the property. n2.1 A broker is the procuring cause of a sale when it has originated or caused a series of events that, without break in their continuity, result in the accomplishment of the prime objective of procuring a purchaser ready, willing, and able to buy on the seller's terms. n2.2

The common law procuring cause doctrine does not apply when an express contract establishes the conditions under which a commission is to be paid. n2.2.1

The procuring cause doctrine does not apply to an exclusive right-to-sell contract. Such a contract entitles the broker to a commission upon a sale of the property during the contract period even if the owner makes the sale. Consequently, the procuring cause doctrine only applies to sales consummated outside the confines of an exclusive right-of-sale contract. n2.3

Without an exclusive right to sell or an exclusive agency agreement, cases are decided primarily on the basis of the facts involved. Merely introducing the buyer to the property does not make the broker the procuring cause of the sale. n3 Thus, where the services of two or more brokers have jointly contributed to the successful negotiations resulting in a transfer of real estate for an owner, the resolution of the question of which broker is entitled to the commission from the owner for effecting such transfer "depends upon whose efforts were the proximate and procuring cause" of the transfer negotiated. n4 A broker makes out a prima facie case that he or she was the procuring cause when the broker shows that negotiations for the sale were initiated through the broker's efforts and that the broker performed every possible service required by the broker's employment. n5 A North Carolina court has stated that:

The term procuring cause refers to "a cause originating or setting in motion a series of events which, without break in their continuity, results in the accomplishment of the prime object of the employment of the broker, which may variously be a sale or exchange of the principal's property, an ultimate agreement between the principal and a prospective contracting party, or the procurement of a purchaser, who is ready, willing and able to buy on the principal's terms." n6

It is not sufficient that a broker is the first to bring the parties together; if negotiations are unproductive and the parties withdraw from negotiations or abandon the sale, a subsequent sale by another broker does not entitle the first to a commission. n7 Furthermore, a broker is not entitled to a commission if the broker brings the parties together during the term of the listing agreement, and a sale is subsequently made by the owner to that other party produced by the broker, but on terms that are substantially different from those offered through the broker's efforts. n7.1

However, where the vendor who has listed his or her property at one price manifests a willingness to sell at a lower price to a purchaser procured by the broker, the right to a commission accrues and is not defeated even though the vendor subsequently rejects the first purchaser and sells at his or her original price to another purchaser not procured by the broker. Nor does it matter that the first agreement was oral n8 and unenforceable under the statute of frauds. For example, in Arjay Properties, Inc. v. Hicks, n9 the broker had an open listing from the owner for sale at $79,500 "or any other price or terms acceptable" to the owner. The owner orally accepted an offer of $75,000 from a purchaser procured by the broker. The owner never signed the written contract, however, and she subsequently signed a contract to sell for $79,500 to a purchaser obtained by another broker (to whom the vendor presumably became obligated to pay a commission). The Vermont Supreme Court, approving of the modern view which requires a closing to perfect the broker's right to a commission, held that the first broker had earned his commission, notwithstanding the failure of the deal between the vendor and the purchaser procured by him. The court stated:

Here, defendant orally accepted the terms offered by plaintiff's purchasers, purported to be awaiting their signed purchase and sale agreement, and then silently signed a subsequent agreement offering a higher purchase price. Thus, defendant not only failed to notify plaintiff that she had found another purchaser, but she never rescinded her oral acceptance of July 9. Therefore, it is apparent from these facts that plaintiff's broker produced the first purchaser who satisfied the other elements of the test cited above [Osler v. Landis, 138 Vt. at 356, 415 A.2d at 1318] and that "[t]he bargain fell through by defendant's fault or inability to complete it and not because of any fault or failure of the plaintiff." [Pond v. Carter, 126 Vt. at 305, 229 A.2d at 252]. The fact that the purchaser was ready, able and willing to buy, and would have done so had defendant not accepted a subsequent offer, must be regarded as controlling, and as dispensing with, and as a waiver of, the necessity of a binding sales contract, which might otherwise exist. n10

[2] Rule Illustrated: Competing Brokers

The rule is sometimes expressed that a broker is compensated only for producing success and not for "planting seeds." n11 It is for the broker to establish that he or she was the procuring cause of the deal which was eventually made. This may become a very perplexing problem where there are claims by competing brokers.

Consider, for example, that Broker A submits the offer of a prospective purchaser which is rejected. Broker A does not pursue the matter any further. Some time later, Broker B, acting completely independently, contacts the same purchaser and at that time procures an offer which meets the price of the principal. The principal pays Broker B a commission, whereupon Broker A, presses a claim, asserting that she was the procuring cause of the deal. Assuming no aspect of fraud in such a case, it has been held Broker A cannot recover. n12 This example illustrates a type of difficulty with which a principal may be faced--a difficulty for which the principal will derive no aid from an agreement, conditioning commission on closing of title because, in our example, title has closed.

One should also note the difficult position that a selling broker maintains, particularly in those states that require a written employment agreement to maintain a cause of action to recover a commission. The selling broker may have a cause of action against the listing broker for failure to split the commission, but loses his or her right to pursue the seller regardless of whether or not he or she was the procuring cause of the transaction. n13 Whether the broker was a procuring cause is a question of fact for the jury. n14

[3] Tracing Connection Between Broker's Efforts and Ultimate Sale

Tracing the connection between the broker's employment and the eventual concluded transaction is a question of fact and, though the negotiations may have extended over a considerable period of time, the triers of fact may still find that the connection exists. n15 Moreover, even though the broker does not participate in every aspect of the negotiations between the principal and the purchaser, he may still collect a commission. The principal may accept the services of a broker in procuring the customer and thereafter undertake to do the negotiating himself. n16 This does not defeat the broker's right to recover or make him any less the procuring cause of the deal. Such a pattern often occurs in leasing transactions, where the landlord, tenant and their lawyers take over negotiations after the preliminary groundwork has been laid by the broker. However, absent a special agreement, the broker still must be the procuring cause of the lease in order to be entitled to a commission. n16.1 Nor is it of consequence that the principal is unaware that the person with whom he makes a deal was procured by the broker he employed; the procurement is still the broker's. n17 A broker may also be willing to show that he is the procuring cause of the sale even though the seller sells the property to an intervening third party (without the broker's assistance) if such third party then sells the property to a purchaser procured by the broker. n18 However, a change in the property's ownership frequently works against the broker's claim to a commission. n18.1

[4] Evidence of Procuring Cause

Too often lawyers, while acquainted with the substantive rule, find themselves in a quandary when they must apply the rule as advocates. Consider this in the matter of proof of procuring cause. Here the witness who most dramatically can relate the events of his dealings with the customer is, of course, the broker. At first blush, the broker's testimony as to his conversations with the prospect being hearsay would seem excludable on that ground. The New York Court of Appeals, however, ruled many years ago that such conversations are admissible to show procuring cause on the part of the broker notwithstanding their hearsay quality. n19

From the point of view of planning and drafting, the most effective way to satisfy the requirement that the broker is the procuring cause is to insert a clause in the contract between the vendor and the purchaser that the broker [stating name] brought about the sale. n20

Whether a broker is considered the procuring cause of a sale depends on the facts and circumstances of the case and is ordinarily a question of fact. n20.05 The broker's efforts need not be the sole cause of the sale, but must be the predominant cause. n20.1

Antrim, Piper, Wenger, Inc. v. Lowe n20.2 presents an interesting case in the context of proving procuring cause. The sellers in this case sought to deny the broker his commission because the sellers had handled the showing of their property and had prepared their own sales contract. The broker prevailed in the subsequent action to recover his commission because it was undisputed that the buyer became aware of the property's availability through the broker's website.

[5] Essential Terms

Where the broker relies upon an oral bargain, it is generally said, in jurisdictions where there is no requirement for closing of title, that to perform his engagement, the broker must bring the parties together on all the "essential terms" of a bargain. n21

In the normal sales transaction, for example, the object of the prospective purchaser and seller is to come to an understanding upon all terms of the bargain and then have this reduced to writing as an enforceable contract. While this is the achievement for which the broker strives, it would be most unusual, to say the least, if particulars were submitted to a broker in the detail found in a printed form of sales contract. Businessmen do not conduct themselves in that way. More often than not, the broker is given incomplete terms. What liability does the principal incur if the broker produces a customer willing to meet the incomplete terms and the broker is discharged before a total bargain is made?

By the way of illustration, let us consider an all cash deal for a vacant parcel of land, and the only term given to the broker is price. The principal repudiates after the price is met but before any discussion is had on closing date or down payment. Does this defeat the broker's recovery? The answer is no. n22 In these circumstances the omitted items are merely "lawyer terms"--details to be worked out at the time of preparation of the contract--and the broker, in those jurisdictions which do not require a title closing, may recover the agreed commission if the proof shows that the purchaser would have been willing and able to meet any reasonable terms as to down payment and closing date. We have here an application of the rule concerning impeding the performance of conditions, the principal being powerless to take advantage of his own repudiation.

Suppose, however, the deal contemplates a purchase money mortgage, the terms of which were never given to the broker. The parties are brought together on all other aspects of the deal, but before there is any discussion on the terms of the mortgage, the principal discharges the broker and repudiates the deal. In such case, the principal incurs no liability to the broker. n23 It is obvious that it would be impossible to produce a standard of reasonable conduct as in the all cash deal, since mortgage terms vary so widely.

As indicated above, the parties negotiating a deal view the transaction in a business light and they expect all business terms to be agreed upon and the transaction ultimately reduced to writing. It is no easy matter to generalize this expectation into a guiding rule. If a generalization can be accepted on the basis of an aid to understanding the cases, and not as an inflexible pattern to mold conduct, perhaps it can be said that if what the parties have agreed upon would, if reduced to writing, make an enforceable agreement, with no terms left open for discussion and none discussed on which there was failure to agree, the parties are in agreement on "essential terms". It should be noted that what normally is needed to make an enforceable contract is not the datum on which liability is grounded; it is the terms given to the broker--whatever they may be--that the broker must bring agreement on. The seller can insist that the contract be drawn on green paper; if that is an element of the seller's offering then that requirement must be satisfied, bizarre as it may be.

Mere familiarity with the applicable cases dealing with essential terms leaves unfinished the task of adapting these to the tools of the courtroom. This is the advocates' problem. And from the viewpoint of that problem, it should be borne in mind that it is for the court to instruct the jury as to what the essential terms are in a particular transaction; it is not for the jury to make this determination. n24 With the difficulties inherent in the concept of essential terms, proper trial preparation would demand that requests to charge be carefully worked out in advance and not be prepared "off the cuff" so to speak. n25 When a broker has substantially performed under the brokerage agreement, the broker is entitled to his or her commission even if there have been changes in performance under the contract, provided these changes were immaterial and resulted in minimal or no harm to the broker's client. n26

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g.:

Federal: Christo v. Ramada Inns, Inc., 609 F.2d 1058 (3d Cir. 1979) .

New Hampshire: Belleau v. Hopewell, 120 N.H. 46, 411 A.2d 456 (1980) .

New Jersey: Schettino v. Roizman Dev., Inc., 310 N.J. Super. 159, 708 A.2d 446, 449 (1998) aff'd, 158 N.J. 476, 730 A.2d 797 (1999) .

New York: Zere Real Estate Servs. v. Adamag Realty Corp., 60 A.D.3d 758, 759, 875 N.Y.S.2d 162, 164 (2009) .

Ohio: Torbeck v. Iannelli, 2007 Ohio 4539, 2007 Ohio App. LEXIS 4102, at *11 (Sept. 4, 2007) .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Grommet v. Newman, 2009 WY 150, 220 P.3d 795, 808 (Wyo. 2009) .

(n3)Footnote 2. For cases holding brokers entitled to a commission, see:

Florida: South Pac. Enters., Ltd. Partnership v. Cornerstone Realty, Inc., 672 So. 2d 568 (Fla. App. 4 Dist. 1996) (the broker was entitled to a commission as the procuring cause of the sale, notwithstanding that the broker did not introduce the parties to each other and did not participate in the sales negotiations, where the broker played a pivotal role in generating the buyer's interest in the property and where the parties specifically and purposefully excluded the broker from the negotiations) review denied, 682 So. 2d 1100 (Fla. 1996) .

New Hampshire: Finlay v. Frederick, 135 N.H. 482, 606 A.2d 1375 (N.H. 1992) (holding that a plaintiff-broker was entitled to a commission on the lease and sale of defendant's property as procuring broker where: (1) the broker informed the buyer of the availability of the subject property, which led the buyer to contact the seller; and (2) the seller, although rejecting the buyer's initial offer through the broker, thereafter accepted the buyer's same offer without the services of the broker).

For cases holding against the broker's right to a commission, see:

Florida: Lee Giusti Realty, Inc. v. L.D. Corp., 603 So. 2d 39 (Fla. 4th DCA 1992) (holding that a real estate broker was not a procuring cause of a real estate transaction, and, thus, was not entitled to a commission on the transaction, even though the broker had an oral open listing on the property and showed it to one partner of a joint venture of which another partner subsequently purchased the property).

Louisiana: Century 21 Flavin Realty, Inc. v. Erwin Heirs, Inc., 657 So. 2d 108 (La. App. 3d Cir. 1995) (a broker who negotiated with a governmental entity that expropriated the seller's property one year after the extension clause in the listing agreement expired was not entitled to a commission as the procuring cause of the sale of the property).

New Jersey: Leadership Real Estate, Inc. v. Harper, 271 N.J. Super. 152, 638 A.2d 173 (Law. Div. 1993) (a real estate broker was not the efficient producing cause of the sale, where there was a substantial break in negotiations between the seller and the buyer, the seller did not act in bad faith and there was no evidence of collusion between the seller and the buyer to delay execution of the sales contract and thereby defeat the broker's claim for a commission).

New York: Ryan v. Bettiol, 620 N.Y.S.2d 625, 1995 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 52 (3d Dept. 1995) (the broker was not entitled to a commission on a theory of quantum meruit, where the broker introduced the parties to each other and attended an initial meeting, but there was no evidence that the broker's action prompted lease negotiations that did not begin until almost a year after that meeting); Helmsley-Spear, Inc. v. Melville Corp., 203 A.D.2d 517, 611 N.Y.S.2d 240, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4303 (2d Dept. 1994) (the broker was not entitled to a commission on the basis of an alleged oral agreement to "cover" and "protect" the broker, where the broker failed to undertake extensive efforts with respect to the property in reliance on the agreement); Brown & Son Realty, Inc. v. Greenberg, 195 A.D.2d 583, 601 N.Y.S.2d 7, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7569 (2d Dept. 1993) (holding that a broker was not entitled to a commission when he merely provided the buyers with information about a building after one of the buyers spotted the building from the roof of another building he was being shown by the broker, and the buyers subsequently concealed their interest in the property from the broker and purchased the property directly from the owner); ERA Joseph Green Real Estate, Inc. v. Daubert, 186 A.D.2d 885, 588 N.Y.S.2d 922, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12140 (3d Dept. 1992) (holding that a broker, who introduced the parties who subsequently entered into a contract for the construction of an office building, was not entitled to a commission, since at the time the broker brought the parties together, no architectural plans or drawings were available and no discussion was had concerning the scope or cost of the project).

But see R.B. Miller Org. v. VASAP Constr. Corp., 184 A.D.2d 763, 585 N.Y.S.2d 473, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8668 (2d Dept. 1992) (where a landlord alleged that the broker was not entitled to a commission because the commission was contingent upon the tenant paying rent, and the tenant had vacated the premises, the court upheld the broker's right to a commission under the general rule that the broker who produces a person ready, willing and able to enter into a contract has earned his commission).

Pennsylvania: Coldwell Banker Phyllis Rubin Real Estate v. Romano, 422 Pa. Super. 319, 328-329, 619 A.2d 376, 381 (1993), appeal denied, 534 Pa. 635, 626 A.2d 1154 (1993) (holding that a third party, which exercised its right of first refusal after the broker had produced a purchaser, was not a broker's prospect as required for the broker to be entitled to a commission under the parties' exclusive agency listing, since the third party had a long-standing option to purchase the property, which arose through no effort of the broker).

Washington: Roger Crane & Assocs., Inc. v. Felice, 74 Wash. App. 769, 875 P.2d 705 (1994) (holding that a cooperating broker was not entitled to a commission as the procuring cause of the sale, where the broker merely spoke to purchasers about the home, drove one purchaser past the home and arranged a viewing of the property).

(n4)Footnote 2.1. See Schaller v. Weier, 319 Ill. App. 3d 172, 179, 253 Ill. Dec. 94, 744 N.E.2d 376, 381 (2001); Business Consulting Services, Inc., v. Wicks, 703 N.W.2d 427, 431 (Iowa 2005); Upper Valley Realty, Inc. v. Hanson, 2006 Ohio 314, 2006 Ohio App. LEXIS 269, at *14 (Jan. 20, 2006); Whitten v. Smith, 2002 Tenn. App. LEXIS 165, at *11 (Tenn. Ct. App. February 27, 2002); Shalimar Development, Inc. v. F.D.I.C., 257 Va. 565, 515 S.E.2d 120, 124 (Va. 1999). See also Earnest & Stewart, Inc. v. Codina, 732 So. 2d 364, 365-366 (Fla. App. 1999), rehearing denied (simple act of telling eventual purchasers that the piece of property was for sale did not entitle broker to recover commission). But cf. Snipes v. Marcene P. Powell & Associates, Inc., 273 Ga. App. 814, 818, 616 S.E.2d 152, 156-157 (2005), cert. denied, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 742 (Oct. 24, 2005) (The extension clause in the listing agreement stated that if the seller sold the property to any buyer "introduced" to the property by broker within 90 days after the expiration of the listing period, the seller was obligated to pay the broker's commission. The broker successfully sued for his commission when during the listing period, the buyer contacted the broker and made appointments to see the sellers' property but always cancelled. After the listing period expired but before the extension period expired, the buyer purchased the sellers' property. The court found that a broker introduces a purchaser to a principal if, through any means the broker uses to attract attention, the purchaser is led to the principal.); Perimeter Realty v. GAPI, Inc., 243 Ga. App. 584, 533 S.E.2d 136, 148 (2000), cert. denied, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 762 (Ga. Oct. 2, 2000) (broker may be the procuring cause of the sale even though the buyer and seller decide to negotiate the sale without the presence of the broker after the broker brings the principals together).

(n5)Footnote 2.2. See Strategic Alliance Partners, LLC v. Dress Barn, Inc., 386 F. Supp. 2d 312, 317 (S.D. N.Y. 2005), applying New York law; Rotemi Realty, Inc. v. Act Realty Co., Inc., 911 So. 2d 1181, 1188 (Fla. 2005), rehearing denied, 2005 Fla. LEXIS 1838 (Fla. Sept. 13, 2005); Leary v. Stockman, 937 So. 2d 964, 971 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006); Shalimar Development, Inc. v. F.D.I.C., 257 Va. 565, 515 S.E.2d 120, 123 (1999).

(n6)Footnote 2.2.1. See Gadsby v. Norwalk Furniture Corp., 71 F.3d 1324, 1327 (7th Cir. 1995), reh'g en banc denied, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 1330 (7th Cir. Jan. 29, 1996), applying Ohio law; Georgia Real Estate Properties, Inc. v. Lindwall, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 272, at *7-*8 (Mar. 22, 2010); Hill v. Boozer, 289 Ga. App. 750, 751, 658 S.E.2d 268, 269 (2008); B&R Realty v. Carroll, 245 Ga. App. 44, 45, 537 S.E.2d 183, 186 (2000).

(n7)Footnote 2.3. See Atkins v. L.L. Cole & Sons, Inc., 79 Ark. App. 124, 127-128, 84 S.W.3d 899, 901-902 (2002); First Florida Realty & Auction Co., Inc. v. Peacock, 703 So. 2d 1199, 1200 (Fla. App. 1997).

(n8)Footnote 3. Mollyann, Inc. v. Demetriades, 206 A.D.2d 415, 614 N.Y.S.2d 437, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7319 (2d Dept. 1994).

(n9)Footnote 4. See, e.g.:

Georgia: Doyal & Assocs., Inc. v. Wilma Southeast Inc., 174 Ga. App. 851, 332 S.E.2d 24 (1985) (broker not the procuring cause); Nestle' Co. v. J.H. Ewing & Sons, 153 Ga. App. 328, 265 S.E.2d 61, 64 (1980), citing Gresham v. Lee, 152 Ga. 829, 830, 111 S.E. 404, 405 (1922).

Nebraska: Marathon Realty Corp. v. Gavin, 224 Neb. 458, 398 N.W.2d 689 (Neb. 1987) (broker was the efficient procuring cause of a sale when the broker had secured a prospective buyer who was ready, willing and able to buy the property on terms acceptable to the seller).

New York: Levy Wolf Real Estate Brokerage, Inc. v. Lizza Indus., Inc., 118 A.D.2d 688, 500 N.Y.S.2d 37, 1986 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 54553 (2d Dept. 1986) (the court rejected an attempt by a brokerage firm to collect a commission because their best efforts were negligible in comparison with the firm which received the commission for leasing the property); Aegis Property Servs. v. Hotel Empire Corp., 106 A.D.2d 66, 484 N.Y.S.2d 555, 1985 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 42535 (1st Dept. 1985) (broker was not the procuring cause of a lease when the broker: (1) "at no point had procured for the [landlord] a tenant 'ready, willing and able to lease the space in question' and (2) had not brought 'the minds of the buyer and seller to an agreement' or brought 'the parties together in an amicable frame of mind, with an attitude toward each other and toward the transaction in hand which permits their working out the terms of their agreement.'"); Philip Winogad, Inc. v. Prudential Ins. Co., 102 A.D.2d 715, 476 N.Y.S.2d 854, 1984 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18875 (1st Dept. 1984) (broker did not earn a commission where the extent of his effort was to provide the selling broker with a listing of information concerning the property).

North Carolina: Hecht Realty, Inc. v. Whisnant, 41 N.C. App. 702, 255 S.E.2d 647, reh'g denied, 259 S.E.2d 912 (1979) (a corporate realty firm was not the procuring cause of a sale and could not recover a commission for the value of services rendered where the firm showed the vendor's house to purchasers, presented the purchaser's offer and was met by an unaccepted counteroffer by the vendors).

(n10)Footnote 5. See:

Georgia: Kraft Servs., Inc., 165 Ga. App. 358, 300 S.E.2d 186 (1983); Nestle' Co. v. J.H. Ewing & Sons, 153 Ga. App. 328, 265 S.E.2d 61, 64 (1980).

New Jersey: Flood v. Caro Corp., 272 N.J. Super. 398, 640 A.2d 306 (App. Div. 1994) (the broker was entitled to a commission, notwithstanding that all twenty-five condominium units were sold in bulk rather than one at a time).

See also: Provost v. St. Francis Commandery Hall Ass'n, 118 A.D.2d 922, 499 N.Y.S.2d 489 (3d Dept. 1986) (broker cannot recover commission merely by calling the property to the attention of the ultimate purchaser).

(n11)Footnote 6. Hecht Realty, Inc. v. Whisnant, 255 S.E.2d at 649 . It should be noted that for a real estate broker to earn a commission it may not be necessary that he participate in final negotiations leading to a sale of property. See Belleau v. Hopewell, 120 N.H. 46, 411 A.2d 456 (1980) . Moreover, a broker may collect a commission where his services were accepted in bringing the parties together with the understanding that negotiations would be left to the parties. See, e.g., Eugene J. Busker Co., Inc. v. Galbreath Ruffin Realty Co. Inc., 22 A.D.2d 879, 254 N.Y.S.2d 673 (1st Dept. 1964) , aff'd, 15 N.Y.2d 992, 260 N.Y.S.2d 12, 207 N.E.2d 608 (1965) .

For cases holding that the broker did not perform sufficient services to recover a commission, see:

Federal: Follman Properties Co. v. Daly, 790 F.2d 57 (8th Cir. 1986) .

Missouri: Ham v. Morris, 711 S.W.2d 187 (Mo. 1986) .

(n12)Footnote 7. See:

Alabama: First Real Estate Corp. of Ala., Inc. v. Spiller, 603 So. 2d 954 (Ala. 1992) (summary judgment was properly granted to the seller, where the evidence showed that the plaintiff-broker was not the procuring cause of the sale of the subject property).

Missouri: Malone v. Johnson, 866 S.W.2d 935 (Mo. App. 1993) (when there were terms and conditions yet to be negotiated in the sale of a bank, and a number of unresolved issues (including drafting of a promissory note, drafting of security and escrow agreements, and the selection of an escrow agent), the selling broker was not yet entitled to a commission); C. Meyers & Simpson Co. v. Feese Real Estate, Inc., 705 S.W.2d 600, 1986 Mo. App. LEXIS 3513 (Mo. Ct. App. 1986) ; Mix v. Broyles, 567 S.W.2d 696 (Mo. Ct. App. 1978) .

New York: Mautner-Glick Corp. v. Dime Sav. Bank of Williamsburgh, 647 N.Y.S.2d 782, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10090 (A.D. 1st Dept. 1996) (individual buyers were not ready, willing, and able to purchase the property where they elected not to sign the purchase agreement, notwithstanding that the same individuals successfully bid for the property at a foreclosure sale the next day).

(n13)Footnote 7.1. See Coldwell Banker Town & Country Realty of Hastings, Inc. v. Johnson, 249 Neb. 523, 544 N.W.2d 360, 363 (1996) .

(n14)Footnote 8. Restatement (Second) Agency § 445 comment d states:

Irrespective of the completeness of the terms given the broker, if he is paid when he finds a customer "able, ready and willing", he is entitled to his commission if he finds such a customer who enters an oral agreement with the principal which he is willing to perform at the time fixed for the performance of the transaction, even though the agreement is not binding upon the principal; after the oral contract has been made the principal cannot avoid payment to the broker by refusing to perform it. If the broker produces a customer who, without misrepresentation as to his assets or his intent to purchase, makes a binding contract with the principal, the broker's right to his commission is not defeated by a subsequent default on the customer's part, unless the principal's promise to the broker is expressed to be conditional upon actual performance by the customer, or unless the broker has failed to reveal to the principal facts known to him which would indicate the likelihood of such default, or unless he is guilty of some similar breach of duty to the principal.

See De Angelis v. Graham, 96 A.D.2d 570, 465 N.Y.S.2d 258 (2d Dept. 1983) (lack of sufficient writing does not determine right to recover commission).

(n15)Footnote 9. 143 Vt. 335, 465 A.2d 777 (1983) .

(n16)Footnote 10. Id., 465 A.2d at 779 .

(n17)Footnote 11. Donovan v. Weed, 182 N.Y. 43, 74 N.E. 563 (1905) ; Sibbald v. The Bethlehem Iron Co., 83 N.Y. 378, 383-384 (1881) . See also Muldoon v. Silvestre, 283 A.D. 886, 129 N.Y.S.2d 420, 1954 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 5648 (2d Dept. 1954) .

(n18)Footnote 12. In re Fox's Will, 126 N.Y.S.2d 158 (Sur. Ct. 1953) ; Baker v. Thomas, 12 Misc. 432, 1895 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 431, 33 N.Y.S. 613 (1895) ; Wylie v. Marine Nat'l Bank, 61 N.Y. 415 (1875) . While it may be said that only one broker can be the effectuating cause of procuring a customer [Sussdorff v. Schmidt, 55 N.Y. 319 (1873) ; Bickart v. Hoffmann, 46 N.Y. St. Rep. 886 (1892)] , this does not aid one in making sure that he pays the right broker. As to the effect of a stipulation in a sales contract, that the named broker brought about the sale, see Hevia v. Wheelock, 155 A.D. 387, 140 N.Y.S. 351 (2d Dept. 1913) . Such stipulation is only an evidentiary factor and not the basis of liability. See also:

Federal: Coldwell Banker Residential Real Estate v. O'Brien & Assocs., 762 F. Supp. 131 (E.D. Va. 1991) (where one broker may have been the first to show the subject property to the ultimate buyer, the court found that he could not sustain his claim against the listing brokers as being the procuring cause of the sale, since he lacked an agency employment relationship with the seller).

Alabama: First Real Estate Corp. of Alabama, Inc. v. Spiller, 603 So. 2d 954 (Ala. 1992) (the Alabama Supreme Court held that evidence showed that the plaintiff-broker was not the procuring cause of the sale on the subject property and that it did not have an exclusive agency contract with the vendor).

Nebraska: Coldwell Banker Town & Country Realty of Hastings, Inc. v. Johnson, 249 Neb. 523, 544 N.W.2d 360 (Neb. 1996) (broker was not entitled to a commission, where the sale, made after the listing agreement terminated, to purchaser obtained by the broker was consummated as the result of the work done by the seller's attorney on terms substantially different from those in the purchase offer negotiated by the broker).

North Dakota: Schmidt v. First Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 453 N.W.2d 602 (N.D. 1990) (finding that a broker who procured a prospective purchaser who only sought an option to purchase the seller's property was not entitled to a commission).

(n19)Footnote 13. See Re/Max Homes and Estates, Inc. v. Leist, 308 A.D.2d 439, 440, 764 N.Y.S.2d 107, 109, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9258 (2d Dept. 2003) ; Boyert v. Tauber, 834 S.W.2d 60, 35 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 1092 (Tex. 1992) .

(n20)Footnote 14. Bersani v. Basset, 184 A.D.2d 996, 585 N.Y.S.2d 245, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8213 (4th Dept. 1992).

(n21)Footnote 15. Brown, Wheelock, Harris, Stevens, Inc. v. Coty, Inc., 291 N.Y. 601, 50 N.E.2d 1011, aff'd, (no op.) 265 A.D. 1048, 39 N.Y.S.2d 848, 1943 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 6833 (1st Dept. 1943); Seckendorff v. Halsey, Stuart & Co. Inc., 259 N.Y. 353, 182 N.E. 14 (1932). In the Seckendorff case, not only did eighteen months elapse between employment of the broker and consummation of the deal, but in the interim there was a period of suspended animation, so to speak, and when the deal was revived, it took a modified form with new parties becoming interested in the syndicate employing the plaintiff.

See also:

Louisiana: Moody v. Thibodeaux, 495 So. 2d 1328 (La. Ct. App. 1986) (when the evidence supports a finding that a real estate broker actually was the procuring cause of an ultimate sale, even though the sale took place after the listing agreement expired, the broker was entitled to the sales commission).

New York: American Corporate Real Estate, Inc. v. Lifetime Hoan Corp., 233 A.D.2d 413, 650 N.Y.S.2d 271, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11973 (2d Dept. 1996) (broker was not entitled to a commission, where the building ultimately purchased was not available for purchase at the time the broker brought the building to the buyer's attention nor during the time the broker claimed to have performed under an alleged oral exclusive broker's agreement with the buyer).

Pennsylvania: Strout Realty Inc. v. Haverstock, 555 A.2d 210 (Pa. Super. 1989) (realty corporation, through its agent, was the efficient procuring cause of sale of property; therefore, a commission was due).

(n22)Footnote 16. See:

Arkansas: McKay & Co. v. Garland, 701 S.W.2d 392 (Ark. Ct. App. 1986) (sham conveyance arranged to attempt to defeat recovery of commission and ultimate sale by owner).

New Hampshire: Finlay v. Frederick, 135 N.H. 482, 606 A.2d 1375 (N.H. 1992) (holding that it was irrelevant, for purposes of the payment of the broker's commission, that the owner carried on the negotiations that ultimately led to the agreement).

New York: Lloyd v. Matthews, 51 N.Y. 124 (1872); Sholom & Zuckerbrot Realty Corp. v. 101 Fleet Place Assocs., 206 A.D.2d 965, 615 N.Y.S.2d 148, 1994 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7670 (4th Dept. 1994); Fanning v. Maggi, 127 N.Y.S.2d 152, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2332 (Sup. Ct. Rockland County 1953); Shapiro v. Greenwich Sav. Bank, 266 A.D. 359, 42 N.Y.S.2d 316 (1st Dept. 1943), aff'd, (no op.) 293 N.Y. 724, 56 N.E.2d 734 (1944); Karlin v. Heller, 137 Misc. 261, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1283, 242 N.Y.S. 188 (City Ct. Bronx County 1930).

North Carolina: Koger Properties, Inc. v. Lowe, 106 N.C. App. 387, 416 S.E.2d 585 (1992) (merely furnishing the name to a prospective lessor under a letter of registration was enough to support an action for commission).

(n23)Footnote 16.1. See Goldstein v. Ballirano, 694 N.Y.S.2d 404, 405, 1999 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7029 (1999) (absent special agreement, broker does not automatically earn a commission simply because he initially calls the property to the attention of the ultimate lessee).

(n24)Footnote 17. Lloyd v. Matthews, 51 N.Y. 124 (1872) . See also:

Federal: Risser v. Hirshhorn, 199 F.2d 917 (2d Cir. 1952) .

New York: Cohen v. City Bank Farmers Trust Co., 276 A.D. 195, 93 N.Y.S.2d 609, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3142 (1st Dept. 1949) (on the question of lack of knowledge of the customer by the principal where there is a question of fraud).

(n25)Footnote 18. Farm Credit Bank of St. Louis v. Miller, 316 Ark. 388, 872 S.W.2d 376 (1994) .

(n26)Footnote 18.1. See Shalimar v. F.D.I.C., 257 Va. 565, 515 S.E.2d 120, 124 (Va. 1999) (the owner who entered into a listing agreement subsequently went into receivership and the property was transferred to new financial institution, the listing agreement was terminated prior to the receivership).

(n27)Footnote 19. Lockhart v. Hamlin, 190 N.Y. 132, 82 N.E. 1094 (1907) . But see Karlin v. Heller, 137 Misc. 261, 1930 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1283, 242 N.Y.S. 188 (City Ct. Bronx County 1930) , as to conversations between the defendant seller and the prospective purchaser.

(n28)Footnote 20. 1 Williston, Contracts § 922 (3d ed. Forms). See also Greene v. Hellman, 51 N.Y.2d 197, 433 N.Y.S.2d 75, 412 N.E.2d 1301 (1980) .

A caution should be noted as to the suggested broker's clause in the text on the matter of planning and drafting. While the clause suggested may appear acceptable to both a vendor and purchaser as a rational design to reduce risks of brokerage claims, the clause is not entirely free of such risks. It might be seized upon by a competing claimant to a commission as evidence of tortious conspiratorial conduct on the part of the purchaser and vendor. The claim would be that the design was to give the appearance of legitimacy to a scheme that in reality was conduct inducing a breach of the competing claimant's contract for a commission. See Hornstein v. Podwitz, 254 N.Y. 443, 173 N.E. 674 (1930) . The presence of such a clause could thus be the basis of joining the purchaser as a party defendant in a brokerage action on the allegation (stated on "information and belief") that the purchaser conspired with the seller to deprive the suing broker of a commission--a tort claim. (cf. Julien J. Studley, Inc. v. Gulf Oil Corp., 386 F.2d 161, 167-68 (2d Cir. 1967)) ; see also Collins Tuttle & Co. v. Ausnit, 95 A.D.2d 668, 463 N.Y.S.2d 219, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 18561 (1st Dept. 1983) . Such a claim contains a suggestion of unfair dealing--something more than a controversy based on mere business differences, with the consequent need to defend against that unsavory intimation. Thus, caution by the purchaser, in the light of the facts which may prevail, may compel an insistence by the purchaser that any contract provision be limited to a statement of the names of the parties that the purchaser dealt with (as distinguished from the "broker who brought about the sale"). Added to the clause can be a statement that the purchaser makes no warranty as to the party entitled to a commission, with the seller agreeing to pay whatever brokerage commission that derives from the transaction, other than from a hiring of a broker by the purchaser. The question that still remains, nevertheless, even with amendments to the clause, is whether, with Studley as a warning sign, the clause in its final version in a particular fact situation may create more problems than it was intended to resolve, with the preferable course being to omit the clause completely--recalling the wisdom that the wicked flee when no man pursueth, but the righteous are bold as a lion.

Finally, we note that while a brokerage clause may give the impression that it is a matter of secondary importance, the clause may, in fact, not have that status at all. Rather, it may be a matter of first-line importance to the seller--i.e., an "essential term" of the overall bargain on which the broker must come to an understanding with the seller if the broker is to be entitled to a commission. (See § 4.07[5] below). (cf. Albert Bialek Assocs., Inc. v. Arden-Esquire Realty Co., 110 A.D.2d 578, 487 N.Y.S.2d 794 (1st Dept.) , aff'd, 65 N.Y.2d 1020, 484 N.E.2d 667 (1985)) .

(n29)Footnote 20.05. See, e.g., Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 154-55, 209

P.3d 741, 747 (2009); Sudeen v. Castleberry, 794 So. 2d 237, 246 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

(n30)Footnote 20.1. See Sudeen v. Castleberry, 794 So. 2d 237, 245 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

(n31)Footnote 20.2. 37 Kan. App. 2d 932, 936, 159 P.3d 215, 219-20 (2007).

(n32)Footnote 21. Thoens v. J.A. Kennedy Realty Corp., 279 A.D. 216, 108 N.Y.S.2d 882, aff'd, 304 N.Y. 753, 108 N.E.2d 616 (1st Dept. 1951).

See also:

Illinois: Real Estate Buyer's Agents, Inc. v. Foster, 234 Ill. App. 3d 257, 600 N.E.2d 83 (1992) (where the plaintiff-broker was offered a 3% commission if it was able to find a buyer on the defendant's terms, and the broker obtained a signed offer for the property on the defendant's terms, but the defendant refused to sign, the plaintiff's small claims action for recovery of the commission was dismissed as being within the statute of frauds, since the contract for the sale of the property was unsigned).

Missouri: Malone v. Johnson, 866 S.W.2d 935 (Mo. App. 1993) (holding that the selling broker was not entitled to a commission where the parties had not agreed to the terms and conditions).

New York: Posson v. Hayes, 37 A.D.3d 936, 937, 829 N.Y.S.2d 286, 288, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1430 (2007) (The broker must bring the parties in agreement not only with respect to the price but "to all terms customarily encountered in such a transaction" before the commission is earned.); Kling Real Estate, Ltd. v. DePalma, 306 A.D.2d 445, 445-446, 762 N.Y.S.2d 256, 257, 2003 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 7397 (2d Dept. 2003), appeal denied, 100 N.Y.2d 516, 769 N.Y.S. 2d 203, 801 N.E.2d 424 (2003) (prospective purchasers' unilateral modification of the proposed sales contracts constituted a counter offer which the seller rejected; since there was no meeting of the minds as to an essential term of the agreement, the prospective purchasers were not ready, willing, and able to purchase on the sellers' terms).

Texas: Collins v. Beste, 840 S.W.2d 788 (Tex. App. 1992) writ denied (Apr. 14, 1993) (where an employer accepted and received the benefit from the real estate sales generated by a broker, the court upheld the enforceability of the parties commission agreement, even though the agreement did not precisely describe the property).

(n33)Footnote 22. Mengel v. Lawrence, 276 A.D. 180, 93 N.Y.S.2d 443 (1st Dept. 1949).

(n34)Footnote 23. See Kaelin v. Warner, 27 N.Y.2d 352, 267 N.E.2d 86 (1971).

(n35)Footnote 24. Thoens v. J.A. Kennedy Realty Corp., 279 A.D. 216, 108 N.Y.S.2d 882, 1951 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2902 (1st Dept.), aff'd, 304 N.Y. 753, 108 N.E.2d 616 (1951).

(n36)Footnote 25. See § 4.11[5] below.

(n37)Footnote 26. Scanlon v. Jensen, 867 P.2d 560 (Or. App. 1994) (the broker earned his $70,000 commission related to the exchange of the client's apartment building and ultimate sale of the exchanged property, in spite of the fact that properties other than those originally contemplated at the time of the agreement were traded for the apartments). But see Barry Mogul and Assocs., Inc. v. Terrestris Dev. Co., 643 N.E.2d 245 (Ill. App. 2d Dist 1994) (an agent whose compensation is subject to a clearly expressed condition is not entitled to compensation if, as a result of the agent's efforts, a transaction is effected on different or modified terms).

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

93 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.08

§ 4.08 Effect of Breach of Fiduciary Duty

As an agent of the party who employs him, the broker is viewed as a fiduciary and comes under the duty of good faith and subordination of his own interests to those of his principal. n1 Not only must the broker refrain from misrepresentation or other affirmative wrong to his principal; full and fair disclosure of all facts pertaining to their mutual dealing is required. n2 As a general rule, if the broker violates his fiduciary duty, he is not entitled to a commission and must make restitution on a commission previously collected. In the changing law of agency, as more states revise their licensing laws to change the scope of agency of real estate licensees, this becomes a much more complex issue. n3 In such a case Judge Cardozo stated "Commissions were not earned unless duty has been done." n4

In addition, a broker or other agent employed by an intending purchaser to assist in acquiring a property, who instead acquires it for himself, will be held as a constructive trustee of the property and will be required to transfer title to his principal upon reimbursement for his outlay. n5 This must be distinguished from the situation where two parties orally agree to become co-tenants of a property to be initially acquired by one of them with his own funds. When he subsequently refuses to convey an interest therein to the other, his promise is usually held unenforceable under the statute of frauds. n6

Although a broker employed by a vendor is not ordinarily in a fiduciary relationship with the prospective purchaser he may become liable to the purchaser for secret profits he acquires through misrepresentation. n7

A particular circumstance that raises issues regarding a broker's right to a commission occurs when the broker breaches his or her fiduciary duty by engaging in an undisclosed dual agency. Though courts are split, it appears that the majority rule is that a broker is entitled to no commission if the broker fails to timely disclose to the seller that the broker is also representing the buyer. n8 However, there are jurisdictions that have allowed a broker to receive a commission in this circumstance. n9 In addition, some courts have held that if an agent has assumed to act in a double capacity, a principal with no knowledge of the dual representation may avoid the transaction. n10

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

New Jersey: Young v. Hughes, 32 N.J. Eq. 372 (E.P.A. 1880) .

New York: Haydock v. Stow, 40 N.Y. 363 (1869) .

Oklahoma: Wilcox v. Reynolds, 169 Okla. 153, 36 P.2d 488 (1934) .

For discussion of the nature of the broker's duties and liabilities, see ch. 3 above

(n2)Footnote 2.

Alabama: Eastburn v. Espalla, 215 Ala. 650, 112 So. 232 (1927) .

Arkansas: Bennett v. Thompson, 126 Ark. 61, 189 S.W. 363 (1916) .

California: Rattray v. Scudder, 28 Cal. 2d 214, 169 P.2d 371 (1946) .

Massachusetts: Veasey v. Garson, 177 Mass. 117, 58 N.E. 177 (1900) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See id

The problems of divided loyalty are ably discussed in Currier, Finding the Broker's Place in the Typical Residential Real Estate Transactions, 33 U. Fla. L. Rev. 655 (1981). The author comments:

Obtaining the seller's consent to a dual agency arrangement is another problem. Optimally, a seller would consent to his broker acting as dual agent with respect to all buyers working with the broker so that separate consent would not need to be obtained for each client. If the agency relationship with the buyer commences at or near the outset of the broker's contact with each prospect, the seller's consent to the dual agency should be contained in the listing agreement. A seller who understands the implications of buyer-broker agency might be deterred from fully explaining his hopes and expectations about the sale to the broker. This would interfere with the broker's satisfactory servicing of seller's needs. Sellers might, therefore, resist dual agency.

Id. at 675 (footnotes omitted).

See:

California: Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232 (Cal. Ct. App. 1992) (where a dual agent failed to provide the seller with his dual representation form, thereby failing to disclose his dual representation of the buyer and seller, the court awarded damages to the seller and denied the recovery of the commission, even though the seller suffered no injury).

Idaho: Enright v. Jonassen, 931 P.2d 1212 (Idaho 1997) (purchasers in action alleging broker's breach of fiduciary duty lacked standing to pursue disgorgement of broker's commission paid out of funds that the seller received for sale of the property).

Illinois: Bear Kaufman Realty, Inc. v. Spec Dev., Inc., 645 N.E.2d 244 (Ill. App. 1 Dist. 1994) (a broker's failure to inform the seller of the identity of a prospective purchaser procured by the broker is a breach of fiduciary duty and may preclude recovery by the broker of a commission).

New York: Donati v. Shaffer, 83 N.Y.2d 828, 611 N.Y.S.2d 495 (1994) (holding that the New York Secretary of State has the authority to require interest payments to be added to restitution for a wrongfully obtained commission).

(n4)Footnote 4. Wendt v. Fischer, 243 N.Y. 439, 154 N.E. 303 (1926) .

(n5)Footnote 5.

Florida: Quinn v. Phipps, 93 Fla. 805 . 113 So. 419 (1927) .

Massachusetts: Berenson v. Nirenstein, 326 Mass. 285, 93 N.E.2d 610 (1950) .

New Jersey: Harrop v. Cole, 85 N.J. Eq. 32, 95 A. 378, 379 (1915) , aff'd, 86 N.J. Eq. 250, 98 A. 1085 (1916) . Stevenson, V.C. stated:

When one man assumes to act as agent for another, as the representative of another, he necessarily establishes a fiduciary relation between himself and the other person who stands as his principal. This is in the very nature of the transaction because the agent undertakes to act, not for his own benefit, but for the benefit of his principal, and his principal stays out of his own business, and confides in the agent to attend to this business for him. It is the assumption by the agent of his representative status and the confidence necessarily reposed in him by the principal which create the agent's peculiar liabilities and cast special limitations and obligations upon him. The agency may be established by a written contract, or a verbal contract, or no contract whatever, the assumption and confidence involving a purely gratuitous service, for which the agent is to receive no compensation in any form.

New York: Kaplan v. Meyer, 271 A.D. 837, 65 N.Y.S.2d 765, 1946 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3358 (2d Dept. 1946) .

Pennsylvania: Hamberg v. Barsky, 355 Pa. 462, 50 A.2d 345 (1947) .

Wisconsin: Krzysko v. Gaudynski, 207 Wis. 608, 242 N.W. 186 (1932) .

(n6)Footnote 6.

Missouri: Cohn v. Jefferson Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 349 S.W.2d 854 (Mo. 1961) .

New Hampshire: Clark v. Lovelace, 102 N.H. 97, 151 A.2d 224 (1959) .

New York: Bauman v. Holzhausen, 26 Hun. 505 (N.Y. Gen Term 1882) ; Eidelberg v. Zellermyer, 5 A.D.2d 658, 174 N.Y.S.2d 300 , aff'd, 6 N.Y.2d 815, 188 N.Y.S.2d 204, 159 N.E.2d 691 (1958) (distinguishing partnership agreements).

Vermont: Pinnock v. Clough, 16 Vt. 500, 42 Am. Dec. 521 (1844) .

(n7)Footnote 7.

California: Ward v. Taggart, 51 Cal. 2d 736, 336 P.2d 534 (1959) .

Maryland: Homa v. Friendly Mobile Manor, 93 Md. App. 337, 359, 612 A.2d 322, 329 (1992) , appeal dismissed without opinion, 330 Md. 318, 624 A.2d 490 (1993) (holding that a broker lost his right to a commission when he failed to inform the seller of an impending financial interest in an assignee of the purchase agreement).

New York: All Industrial Real Estate Corp. v. Northgate Plaza, 186 A.D.2d 103, 587 N.Y.S.2d 708, 1992 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10558 (2d Dept. 1992) (holding that a real estate broker was entitled to summary judgment against a landlord to recover its entire brokerage commission, where it was uncontroverted that it procured a tenant ready and willing to enter into a lease, and the tenant paid the first four month's rent, which according to the brokerage agreement, rendered the commission enforceable).

Vermont: Quechee Lakes Rental Corp. v. Boggess, 158 Vt. 258, 608 A.2d 39 (Vt. 1992) (holding that a real estate agent owed a fiduciary duty to disclose to its principal any material information relevant to the sale, and that the agent's failure to communicate promptly to buyers that the seller had rescinded his counteroffer and was willing to accept buyers' last offer constituted a material breach of the agent's duty to the seller).

(n8)Footnote 8. Courts so holding include:

California: McConnell v. Cowan, 44 Cal. 2d 805, 809, 285 P.2d 261, 264 (1955) (neither principal is liable for the commission unless both knew of the dual representation); Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685-686, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (1992) , review denied (Mar. 11, 1993).

Georgia: Richardson v. Dupree, 32 Ga. App. 3, 4, 122 S.E. 707 (1924) , cert. denied (where a broker's dual agency is relied on to defeat a claim for commissions, the defendant must prove, not only the fact of such dual agency, but also that it was not known to both parties).

Illinois: Duffy v. Setchell, 38 Ill. App. 3d 146, 150, 347 N.E.2d 218, 222 (1976) (a broker who has acted for both buyer and seller without the full knowledge of both is not allowed to recover compensation from either).

Kansas: Crawford v. The Surety Investment Co., 91 Kan. 748, 752, 139 P. 481, 482-483 (Kan. 1914) (a dual agent may not recover a commission from either principal without a showing that each of the principals had full knowledge of all the circumstances and assented to the double employment).

Minnesota: PMH Properties v. Nichols, 263 N.W.2d 799, 802 (Minn. 1978) .

Ohio: Reef v. Nagle, 85 Ohio App. 323, 326, 40 Ohio Op. 213, 88 N.E.2d 424, 425 (1949) .

Texas: Clark v. Price, 112 S.W.2d 256, 257 (Tex. Civ. App. 1937) , writ of error dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Washington: Investment Exchange Realty, Inc. v. Hillcrest Bowl, Inc., 82 Wash. 2d 714, 718, 513 P.2d 282, 284 (Wash. 1973) (commercial lease transaction).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Highlands Business Park, LLC v. Grubb & Ellis Co., 2005 Ohio 3139, 2005 Ohio App. LEXIS

2938, at *18 (June 23, 2005) (commission was earned on a commercial lease).

(n10)Footnote 10. See:

California: McConnell v. Cowan, 44 Cal. 2d 805, 809, 285 P.2d 261, 264 (1955) ; Huijers v. DeMarrais, 11 Cal. App. 4th 676, 685-686, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 238 (1992) , review denied (Mar. 11, 1993).

Florida: Quest v. Barge, 41 So. 2d 158, 162-163 (Fla. 1949) .

Illinois: Duffy v. Setchell, 38 Ill. App. 3d 146, 149-150, 347 N.E.2d 218, 221 (1976) .

Minnesota: PMH Properties v. Nichols, 263 N.W.2d 799, 802 (Minn. 1978) .

Cf. Governor's Ranch Professional Center, Ltd. v. Mercy of Colorado, Inc., 793 P.2d 648, 651 (Colo. Ct. App. 1990) (when founded on the dual agency defense, a summary judgment granting rescission of a contract may be upheld only if it is undisputed that the alleged agent represented two principals with respect to the transaction, the principals had no knowledge of the common agency, and the party seeking to void the transaction has not waived the remedy of rescission by representing that it intended to perform after learning of the dual agency.); Mohnk v. Seyfarth, 339 Ill. 371, 380, 171 N.E. 510, 514 (Ill. 1930) (if the agent is in the secret employment of the purchaser, a contract between the principal and purchaser through the agent's efforts is not binding upon the principal and that fact is a good defense to a bill for specific performance).

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

94 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.09

§ 4.09 Effect of Eminent Domain

There may be incidences where the property listed by a broker is involved in condemnation proceedings. It is unsettled whether the broker becomes entitled to a commission where the property is taken by a governmental entity n1 through its power of eminent domain, or where the property is sold to the government after condemnation proceedings. In Dalvis v. Coz, n2 the court held that the broker was not entitled to a commission where:

- (1) the defendant-seller owned a recreational property for which the municipality had a right of first refusal on any sale;
- (2) a broker entered into a brokerage agreement with the seller with full knowledge of the municipality's right; and
- (3) the municipality exercised its right by matching a $1.3 million offer to the seller.

The determinative question is whether such transfer constitutes a "sale." n3 Some courts have suggested that the following three-prong test be used in order to determine whether there was a sale:

- (1) whether the owner has been deprived of the power to negotiate what property should be sold;
- (2) whether the owner has been deprived of the power to negotiate the time when possession should be given; and
- (3) whether the owner has been deprived of the power to negotiate the price. n4

It is clear under condemnation proceedings that the property owner does not sell his property under the aforementioned test. n5 Furthermore, the broker offers his services to produce a ready, willing and able buyer, and does not offer to produce a condemnation of the listed property by a public authority. n6 Therefore, the fact that the seller receives a higher price than originally listed does not alter the general rule of no commission. n7

The rule of no commission has been adopted in those cases where the seller agrees to sell to the governmental entity in light of pending or threatening condemnation proceedings. n8 Even where the broker is the procuring catalyst, a commission will not normally be awarded. n9 This is based upon the conclusion that the agreement is the "practical equivalent of a condemnation." n10 However, in most cases of condemnation, the broker is not the efficient cause of the sale. n11

A broker may be awarded a commission where the seller contracts with the broker to sell the property to the governmental entity. Where an agreement to sell to the governmental entity fails to transpire and the government obtains the property by eminent domain, the broker may be able to obtain a commission. n12 However, there must be a defect in the title, and a refusal by the seller to cure, so that the sale to the governmental entity failed due to the defect in the seller's title. n13 Similarly, where the broker's agreement could be construed to allow a commission for finding a purchaser, instead of limited to commission on a sale, and the broker procures the government as purchaser, but the seller frustrates the purchase and the government then condemns the property, a commission may be due. n14 The exceptions to the general rule of no commission have generally involved a seller who contacts the broker to sell the property to the government and problems arose that led to a condemnation instead of a voluntary sale. n15

In order to protect themselves from losing the potential commission, brokers could include a clause in the brokerage agreement that provides that a commission will be due if the property is condemned by the government during the period of the agreement. n16 Furthermore, a broker could seek recovery under the theory of quantum meruit. n17

Where the broker has procured a third party to purchase the property, but the property is condemned before the transfer is complete, a commission is not due under the brokerage agreement. n18 Courts have indicated that since the sale is not consummated, no commission is necessary. It would seem in such a situation that there is a basis to seek relief under quantum meruit. n19

The Supreme Court of Florida has considered whether a commission was due where the seller and broker specifically contemplated condemnation as an alternative to a sale. n20 The court found that in this situation, ordinary contract principles should apply to determine the existence and parameters of a commission agreement. n21 In coming to this holding, the Florida high court considered Wilson v. Frederick R. Ross Investment Co., n22 which it described as the first case to consider whether a real estate broker was entitled to a commission for condemnation of the property. n23 Wilson denied the broker a commission, reasoning that in a condemnation proceeding, the owner cannot designate or negotiate the property to be sold, cannot determine when the grantee may take possession, and cannot refuse to transfer the property if the offered price is inadequate, but must either reach an accord or litigate the question of just compensation. But the Florida high court stated that the court in Wilson did not intimate that its holding would apply where the owner sought condemnation. n24

The Florida court stated that since Wilson, other courts had held that condemnation can never constitute a sale for purposes of a brokerage commission. n25 The Florida court also observed, however, that the rule was not always strictly applied and that some courts had considered the facts of a particular case. n26 The Florida court stated that a recurring theme of these cases was that when property was condemned, the owner was not a willing seller.

The case before the Florida court presented a different situation as the seller had not only consented to the condemnation, but had specifically sought condemnation when a traditional sale appeared unlikely. The court stated that while Wilson may apply where the condemnation was involuntary, the court did not believe the holding in Wilson was intended to apply where the property owner authorized the broker to seek condemnation. The court found that in the circumstances of voluntary condemnations, whether a broker is entitled to a commission for condemnation of property should be analyzed according to ordinary contract principles, including those applicable to oral contracts and contract modification, with the focus being on the agreed scope of the broker's employment. n27

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The governmental entity may include the federal government. See, e.g., Mealey v. Orlich, 120 Ariz.

321, 585 P.2d 1233 (1978) (Uniform Real Acquisite Policy Act of 1970, 42 U.S.C. § 4651).

(n2)Footnote 2. 594 N.E.2d 890 (Mass. App. Ct. 1992) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Lundstrom, Inc. v. Nikkei Concerns, Inc., 52 Wash. App. 250, 758 P.2d 561 (1988) . See also Sonday v. Dave Kohel Agency, Inc., 2006 WI 92, 293 Wis. 2d 458, 482, 718 N.W.2d 631, 642-43 (2006) . This court stated "The jurisdictions that have concluded that a transfer of property by condemnation does not constitute a sale for purposes of a broker's commission have relied on the fact that the brokerage contract under review did not contain any explicit reference to a condemnation action."

(n4)Footnote 4.

Colorado: Wilson v. Frederick R. Ross, Inc., 116 Colo. 249, 180 P.2d 226 (1947) .

New York: Shaw v. Avenue D Stores, Inc., 115 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1648 (Sup. Ct. 1952) .

But cf. McIver v. St. Joe Corp., 828 So. 2d 394, 397-399 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2002) (The three factors are not a bright-line rule that once the state has initiated a condemnation action, any conveyance that occurs while that action is pending does not constitute a sale for purposes of a broker's commission, unless the brokerage agreement provides for such a contingency. Instead, the three-factor test should be examined in light of the facts in each case.).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Dauer v. Pichowski, 413 So. 2d 62, 63-4 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1982) , review denied, 419 So. 2d 1199 (Fla. 1982) , overruled in part, St. Joe Corp. v. McIver, 875 So. 2d 375, 377 (Fla. 2004) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Schwenn v. S. Goldberg & Co., Inc., 88 N.J. Super. 113, 210 A.2d 808 (Law. Div. 1965) , aff'd on opinion below, 91 N.J. Super. 346, 220 A.2d 421 (App. Div.) , cert. denied, 48 N.J. 111, 223 A.2d 490 (1966) . The court noted that in "strict terms, the condemnation did not represent performance by [the] broker."

(n7)Footnote 7. Id.

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Preston v. Carnation Co., 196 Cal. App. 2d 43, 16 Cal. Rptr. 240 (1961) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Dauer v. Pichowski, 413 So. 2d 62, 63-4 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1982) , review denied, 419 So. 2d 1199 (Fla. 1982) , overruled in part, St. Joe Corp. v. McIver, 875 So. 2d 375, 377 (Fla. 2004) .

But see Sonday v. Dave Kohel Agency, Inc., 2006 WI 92, 293 Wis. 2d 458, 718 N.W.2d 631 (2006) (A transfer of property by a condemnation action constituted a sale under the contract terms. The broker was entitled to a commission based on the jurisdictional award. Public policy did not preclude recovery of this commission.).

(n10)Footnote 10. Mealey v. Orlich, 120 Ariz. 321, 585 P.2d 1233 (1978) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Morgan v. Ezzard, 121 Ga. App. 208, 173 S.E.2d 423 (1970) .

(n12)Footnote 12.

California: But see Preston v. Carnation Co., 196 Cal. App. 2d 43, 16 Cal. Rptr. 240 (1961) .

New York: Tyler v. Seiler, 76 Misc. 185, 1912 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 772, 136 N.Y.S. 394 (App. Term. 1912) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Lundstrom, Inc. v. Nikkei Concerns, Inc., 52 Wash. App. 250, 758 P.2d 561 (1988) (distinguishing Tyler v. Seller). In other words, in Tyler the broker procured the city as a ready, willing and able buyer so that the commission was earned at that time (See ch. 5 below). Therefore, the fact that the seller defaulted on the sale forcing the city to condemn the property did not undermine the broker's right to commission.

(N14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Keyes Co. v. Florida Nursing Corp., 340 So. 2d 1254 (Fla. DCA 1976).

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Lundstrom, Inc. v. Nikkei Concerns, Inc., 52 Wash. App. 250, 758 P.2d 561 (1988).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g.:

New York: Shaw v. Avenue D Stores, Inc., 115 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1648 (1952).

Washington: Lundstrom, Inc. v. Nikkei Concerns, Inc., 52 Wash. App. 250, 758 P.2d 561 (1988).

(n17)Footnote 17. Cf.:

Colorado: Wilson v. Frederick R. Ross Inv. Co., 116 Colo. 249, 180 P.2d 226 (1947).

New York: Polley v. Plainshun Corp., 8 A.D.2d 638, 186 N.Y.S.2d 295, 1959 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 8950 (2d Dept. 1959).

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g., City of Turlock v. Paul M. Zagaris, Inc., 209 Cal. App. 3d 189, 256 Cal. Rptr. 902 (1989); Snell v. Wickersham, 140 Cal. App. 2d 812, 295 P.2d 918 (1956).

(n19)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Carey v. Cusack, 245 Cal. App. 2d 57, 54 Cal. Rptr. 244 (1966).

(n20)Footnote 20. See St. Joe Corp. v. McIver, 875 So. 2d 375 (Fla. 2004), rehearing denied, 2004 Fla. LEXIS 960 (Fla. June 2, 2004).

(n21)Footnote 21. See St. Joe Corp. v. McIver, 875 So. 2d 375, 379 (Fla. 2004), rehearing denied, 2004 Fla. LEXIS 960 (Fla. June 2, 2004).

(n22)Footnote 22. 116 Colo. 249, 180 P.2d 226 (1947).

(n23)Footnote 23. See St. Joe Corp. v. McIver, 875 So. 2d 375, 379 (Fla. 2004), rehearing denied, 2004 Fla. LEXIS 960 (Fla. June 2, 2004).

(n24)Footnote 24. See St. Joe Corp. v. McIver, 875 So. 2d 375, 380 (Fla. 2004), rehearing denied, 2004 Fla. LEXIS 960 (Fla. June 2, 2004).

(n25)Footnote 25. See St. Joe Corp. v. McIver, 875 So. 2d 375, 380 (Fla. 2004), rehearing denied, 2004 Fla. LEXIS 960 (Fla. June 2, 2004), citing Preston v. Carnation Co., 196 Cal. App. 2d 43, 16 Cal. Rptr. 240 (1961); Haigler v. Ingle, 119 Colo. 145, 200 P.2d 913 (1948); Shaw v. Ave. D Stores, Inc., 115 N.Y.S.2d 194, 1952 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1648 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1952).

(n26)Footnote 26. See St. Joe Corp. v. McIver, 875 So. 2d 375, 380 (Fla. 2004), rehearing denied, 2004 Fla. LEXIS 960 (Fla. June 2, 2004), citing Tyler v. Seiler, 76 Misc. 185, 1912 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 772, 136 N.Y.S. 394 (N.Y. App. Term 1912) (allowing a commission where the city condemned the property in order to clear a defect in the seller's title that had prevented a voluntary sale); Keyes Co. v. Florida Nursing Corp., 340 So. 2d 1254 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App.

1976) (acknowledging the rule that condemnation does not equate to a sale, but concluding that, despite condemnation, a factual issue remained about whether the owner frustrated the sale to avoid a commission).

(n27)Footnote 27. See St. Joe Corp. v. McIver, 875 So. 2d 375, 380-381 (Fla. 2004) , rehearing denied, 2004 Fla. LEXIS 960 (Fla. June 2, 2004) . The court disapproved Dauer v. Pichowski, 413 So. 2d 62, 63-64 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1982) , to the extent that it held that a condemnation can never constitute a sale for purposes of a brokerage commission.

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

95 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.10

§ 4.10 Broker's Rights Against the Purchaser

[1] The Traditional Rule: Purchaser Not Liable

Since the broker's right to a commission is based on a contract of employment, it has traditionally been held that the broker has no right against one who did not employ him. n1

Consequently, a broker employed by a vendor cannot look to a defaulting purchaser for his commission. n2 This rule can be modified, however, by an agreement between the purchaser and the seller. n3 And in some instances the buyer may agree to pay the broker's commission. n4

The purchaser cannot recover the commission paid to the broker when the vendor is alleged to have engaged in fraud or negligent misrepresentation. The purchaser has no legal interest in the commission paid to the broker by the vendor. n5

New York courts have also held that a defaulting purchaser may not be compelled to indemnify the seller for payment of a real estate licensee's commission in the absence of an express agreement. n6 These courts hold that this is a contractual matter; when there is no contractual indemnification clause in the contract of sale, a claim against the purchaser for a commission is without merit. n7

[2] Exceptional Situations

The advent of buyer's brokers has brought new issues concerning the broker's ability to sue the purchaser for the commission. A buyer's brokerage agreement may provide that the buyer will pay the broker his or her commission. If this is the situation, the brokerage agreement will be interpreted similarly to the traditional agreement usually found between sellers and brokers. The broker's right to a commission will be governed by the agreement, applicable agency law and contract law. n7.1 The parties to a buyer's brokerage agreement can make the broker's compensation dependent upon any lawful condition that they agree to place in their agreement. n7.2

Where a prospective purchaser engages a broker to find a suitable property it is sometimes expressly agreed between them that the broker will look only to the seller for a commission notwithstanding his original employment by the purchaser. While such an agreement will be given effect, it does give rise to a duty on the part of the purchaser that would not otherwise exist. It has been held that willful default by the purchaser that has the effect of absolving the vendor of the duty to pay a commission violates an implied duty of cooperation running from the purchaser to the broker. n8

Somewhat similar to the above-stated case is the familiar situation where a vendor engages the broker with payment conditioned on closing and the purchaser agrees in the sales contract with the vendor to be responsible for the broker's commission. If the sale is consummated, the broker has standing to enforce the purchaser's promise: The vendor is the promisee, the purchaser is the promisor, and the broker is the third party creditor beneficiary, since performance of the purchaser's promise will discharge an obligation to pay a commission owed by the promisee (the vendor) to the third party (the broker). n9

Note that in this situation there are no dealings between the broker and the purchaser and no direct privity between them. The broker's rights derive wholly from the contract between the vendor and the purchaser. Yet, in an interesting case, the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit held the purchaser liable for commissions to the broker under circumstances in which the vendor, who had employed the broker, would not have been liable. In Massengale v. Transitron Electronic Corp., n10 a corporation, Thermo King, engaged a broker to assist in the sale of its business assets. The broker's commission was subject to consummation of the sale. The broker found a prospective purchaser, Transitron, which signed a contract of purchase with Thermo King to acquire all of its assets in exchange for shares of Transitron stock. In the contract with Thermo King, Transitron agreed to pay the commission in the following language:

Transitron and Thermo King each represents that neither of them has retained any broker or paid or agreed to pay any brokerage fee or commission to any agent or broker for or on account of the transaction herein contemplated, except that Thermo King has agreed to pay a fee of $300,000 to Messrs. McClellan & Burck, Inc. of New York, New York, in the event that the said transactions are consummated, but not otherwise. Such fee shall be paid by Transitron if and when such transactions are effected. n11

Transitron, it was alleged, subsequently breached its contract with Thermo King by raising unjustified objections to Thermo King's financial condition. When the broker's assignee sued Transitron for its unpaid commission the District Court granted summary judgment to the defendant. It reasoned that Transitron only agreed to pay such commission as the promisee, Thermo King, was responsible for; and since Thermo King's duty was conditioned on consummation, which failed through no fault of its own, Thermo King owed no commission; hence, Transitron owed none.

The Court of Appeals reversed and remanded for a trial. The court conceded that, because of the failure to complete, the condition precedent to Thermo King's duty failed, and Thermo King owed no commission. But the court reasoned that it did not follow that Transitron owed nothing. The purchaser was more than a mere guarantor of the seller's contractual duty to the broker. The purchaser, said the court, "has come directly into legal relationship with" the broker, n12 and this relationship made the buyer's duty to the broker "co-extensive" with the seller's. n13 The seller clearly had a duty to the broker not to renege on the contract, thereby causing the condition (consummation of the sale) to fail--had it done so the condition would have been excused. Since the buyer's duty was held to be co-extensive with the seller's, the buyer likewise incurred a similar implied duty, which it violated when it unjustifiably reneged on its contract with the seller.

In evaluating this case it might be noted that the court was quite sweeping in its conclusion that the purchaser's duty to the broker became "co-extensive" with the seller's, by virtue of the quoted clause in the contract of sale. What interest of the promisee (the seller) is served by interpreting the buyer's promise to cover a situation in which the seller was under no obligation to the broker? Since the rights of the third party derive primarily from the manifested intent of the promisee, n14 and since the promisee theoretically must pay for every additional obligation he bargains to have the promisor undertake, it is hard to understand why the buyer's promise was anything more than one to hold the seller harmless for any broker's commission. n15

[3] The Holding of Ellsworth Dobbs

It will be recalled that in a previous discussion of the leading modern case of Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson,ⁿ¹⁶ the court in limiting the broker's rights against the vendor who employed him, enlarged his rights against the purchaser whose default occasioned the collapse of the sale. Emphasizing that the prospective purchaser had approached the broker to assist him in obtaining a suitable property, the New Jersey Court stated:

This Court has held that when a prospective buyer solicits a broker to find or to show him property which he might be interested in buying, and the broker finds property satisfactory to him which the owner agrees to sell at the price offered, and the buyer knows the broker will earn commission for the sale from the owner, the law will imply a promise on the part of the buyer to complete the transaction with the owner. If he fails or refuses to do so without valid reason, and thus prevents the broker from earning the commission from the owner, he becomes liable to the broker for breach of the implied promise. The damages chargeable to him will be measured by the amount of commission the broker would have earned from the owner. If no amount or percentage had been agreed upon, recovery will be based on quantum meruit and measured by the amount accepted as reasonable according to the usual custom in such brokerage business.ⁿ¹⁷

It will be noted that this rationale does not assume that the broker is a third party beneficiary of the contract between the vendor and the purchaser. It rests on a direct contract, implied in fact, between the purchaser and the broker.ⁿ¹⁸ As in every other brokerage agreement the key concept is that of employment. Where a broker employed by the owner approached the purchaser, the New York Court of Appeals refused as a matter of law to find a double employment.ⁿ¹⁹

[4] The Dobbs Holding Qualified: Rothman Realty Corp. v. Bereck

In Rothman Realty Corp. v. Bereck,ⁿ²⁰ the New Jersey Supreme Court was confronted with a fact pattern that caused it to qualify some of the sweeping language of the Dobbs decision concerning a defaulting purchaser's liability to the broker. In December of 1971 Mr. and Mrs. Bereck consulted the broker, Rothman Realty, with a view to buying a home. Rothman found a suitable home under construction and the Berecks contracted to purchase it, the commission being payable by the vendor on closing. The price of the house was $135,000. The Berecks made a $14,000 deposit; the broker was to procure a $6,000 mortgage commitment and the Berecks were to pay $61,000 at the closing.

The primary asset owned by the Berecks was 5600 shares of an over-the-counter stock, then worth $135,000. It was planned to sell some of this stock to raise the money needed at the closing. Before closing, however, adverse information was published concerning the company and in a three-day period its value dropped from $25.00 to $9.00 per share, reducing the value of the Berecks' holding from $135,000 to $50,000--an amount substantially less than the $61,000 needed to close. Because of this financial adversity the Berecks failed to close and forfeited their $14,000 deposit. The suit by Rothman followed.

The trial court found that the purchasers' good faith attempt to close, frustrated by financial inability, took them out of the Dobbs ruling. The Appellate Division reversed, holding that only a legally sufficient justification for failure to close could bar the broker's claim. The Supreme Court reversed, holding the buyers in this case not liable for the commission. The Court stated:

The nature of the relationship between the broker and the buyer should be considered in light of all the circumstances. In most cases where individuals are seeking to purchase homes, the members of the public are engaging realtors who, licensed by the State, N.J.S.A. 45:15-1, have superior expertise and knowledge with respect to financing acquisitions. They, practically speaking, dominate the market, so that would-be home owners must seek their services. [citation omitted]. To imply an obligation on the part of a buyer that he will pay the broker a commission, even though the buyer has acted in good faith with every intentment of acquiring the premises, but is unavoidably through no fault of his own prevented from consummating the purchase, is unquestionably contrary to the buyer's expectable understanding when he engages the broker

It must be remembered that the buyer has not entered into any written or formal agreement with the broker, but that the promise between the broker and the buyer has been implied by law. In these circumstances the "risk of such inability at that crucial time [the closing] must be treated as a normal incident of the brokerage business." [citation omitted]. n21

The considerations of relative bargaining power and public policy that made Bereck distinguishable from Dobbs appear in the following passage:

We held in Ellsworth Dobbs that the buyer's inability to obtain the necessary financing was not a defense to the broker's action unless the financial ability contingency was a term, express or implied, in the agreement between the buyer and the broker. However, our holding there is distinguishable. The buyer was not seeking a home, but was a residential developer who agreed to purchase a 144 acre tract of farm land for $250,000. The buyer was engaged in a commercial enterprise and his position vis-a-vis the broker was quite different than that of the individual who is purchasing a residence. In Tanner Associates, Inc. v. Ciraldo, 33 N.J. 51, 161 A.2d 725 (1960) , upon which Ellsworth Dobbs relied, the buyer also was a land developer which contracted for the acquisition of a large tract of land for $220,000. The bargaining power and expertise of such buyers are far superior to those of the average home purchaser. The added protection which we afford to consumer purchasers today is not warranted or required for the type of buyer exemplified in Ellsworth Dobbs and Tanner Associates. n22

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

Ohio: Young v. Equitec Real Estate Investors Fund, 100 Ohio. App. 3d 136, 652 N.E.2d 234 (Ohio App. 8th Dist. 1995) (the lessor remained responsible for paying commissions to the broker arising from lease agreement, notwithstanding subsequent appointment of a receiver for the property in a foreclosure action; the receiver did not become the lessor responsible for the commissions once the receivership opened).

(n2)Footnote 2. Restatement of Agency § 372 (2). See also Annot. 30 A.L.R.3d 1395.

Alabama: Messer-Johnson Realty Co. v. Newman, 210 Ala. 340, 98 So. 20 (1923) .

District of Columbia: Giovannoni v. Waple & James, 105 F.2d 108, 70 App. D.C. 229 (D.C. Cir. 1939) .

Florida: Moss v. Sperry, 140 Fla. 301, 191 So. 531 (1939) .

Georgia: Reynolds Props. v. Bickelmann, 300 Ga. App. 484, 486-87, 685 S.E.2d 450, 452 (2009) (Parties entered into a termination and release agreement when the buyer decided not to complete the transaction.).

Missouri: McIntosh v. Frisinger, 507 S.W.2d 419 (Mo. App. 1974) .

New York: Hoka Prod. Corp. v. Griscom & Co., 40 N.Y.S.2d 54, 1943 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1618 (1945) .

Contra:

New Jersey: Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843 (1967) .

Louisiana: Treigle v. Patrick, 138 So. 2d 652 (La. Ct. App. 1962) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g.:

Federal: Park-Haden, Inc. v. Loews Theater Management Corp., 789 F. Supp. 1257 (S.D.N.Y 1992) .

Texas: LA&N Interests, Inc. v. Fish, 864 S.W.2d 745 (Tex. App.--Houston [14th Dist.] 1993) .

But cf.:

Florida: In egregious situations, the buyer and seller who intentionally exclude the broker may risk more than the amount of the broker's commission. In one case, in which the commission would have been over $150,000, a broker stated a cause of action against the buyer for tortious interference with the broker's contract with the seller. The appellate court reversed the trial court's dismissal of the broker's complaint, which, among other things, alleged that before executing the standard form contract, the seller crossed out the commission percentage and amount, and that after signing the contract, the buyer and seller dealt directly with each other and concealed the closing details from the broker. Riteway Real Estate v. Bentley Ocean View, 659 So. 2d 1194 (Fla. 3d DCA 1995) review denied, 666 So. 2d 142 (Fla. 1995) [excerpt from discussion written by William Ryan, Esq. in Boyer, Florida Real Estate Transactions, ch. 2 (Matthew Bender)].

(n4)Footnote 4. See Sudeen v. Castleberry, 794 So. 2d 237, 243 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Snierston v. Scruton, 145 N.H. 73, 79, 761 A.2d 1046, 1050 (2000) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Monahan v. Lewis, 51 A.D.3d 1308, 1310-11, 858 N.Y.S.2d 812, 814 (2008) ; Blackman DeStefano Real Estate, Inc. v. Smith, 157 A.D.2d 932, 934, 550 N.Y.S.2d 443, 445 (1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Blackman DeStefano Real Estate, Inc. v. Smith, 157 A.D.2d 932, 934, 550 N.Y.S.2d 443, 445 (1990) .

(n8)Footnote 7.1. See RC Royal Development and Realty Corp. v. Standard Pacific Corp., 177 Cal. App. 4th 1410, 1418, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 115, 121 (2009) , review denied, 2010 Cal. LEXIS 252 (Jan. 13, 2010) .

(n9)Footnote 7.2. See RC Royal Development and Realty Corp. v. Standard Pacific Corp., 177 Cal. App. 4th 1410, 1413, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 115, 117 (2009) (Under the parties' agreement, the broker earned its commission when the buyer entered into a buy-sell agreement. The close of escrow was not a condition precedent to the right to a commission.), review denied, 2010 Cal. LEXIS 252 (Jan. 13, 2010) .

(n10)Footnote 8. Gronich & Co., Inc. v. 649 Broadway Equities Co., 169 A.D.2d 600, 565 N.Y.S.2d 18, 1991 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 588 (1st Dept. 1991) ; Long Island Business Exch., Inc. v. DeLuca, 58 A.D.2d 594, 395 N.Y.S.2d 244, 1977 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12637 (2d Dept. 1977) . But the right of a buyer's broker to maintain an action for commission against the purchaser is not always clear cut. For instance, if the purchaser and the buyer's broker enter into a contract, which turns out to be faulty, no commission is payable.

See also:

Federal: New Spectrum Realty Servs., Inc. v. The Nature Co., 42 F.3d 773 (2d Cir. 1994) (holding that a broker may recover in quasi-contract against a lessee, where the record demonstrates unjust enrichment or similar advantage accruing to the lessee sufficient to move the court to act for the broker's benefit or protection); Park-Haden, Inc. v. Loews Theater Management Corp., 789 F. Supp. 1257 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) .

Alabama: Betts v. McDonald's Corp., 567 So. 2d 1252 (Ala. 1990) .

(n11)Footnote 9.

New York: Ficor v. National Kinney Corp., 67 A.D.2d 659, 412 N.Y.S.2d 621, 1979 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 10229 (1st Dept. 1979) . Note should be made of the regulation promulgated by the New York Secretary of State prohibiting a seller from employing a broker on a "net listing" basis. (See 19 N.Y.C.R.R. § 175.19).

North Carolina: Chipley v. Morrell, 228 N.C. 240, 45 S.E.2d 129 (1947) .

(n12)Footnote 10. 385 F.2d 83 (1st Cir. 1967) .

(n13)Footnote 11. Id. at 86 .

(n14)Footnote 12. Id. at 89 .

(n15)Footnote 13. Id. But see VRG Corp. v. GKN Realty Corp., 135 N.J. 539, 641 A.2d 519 (N.J. 1994) (the broker was not permitted to recover commissions due from the developer by means of an equitable lien imposed on commercial rental income derived from long-term tenants; the new owner of the shopping center was aware of the broker's claim, but had not agreed to be responsible for the commissions).

(n16)Footnote 14. Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 302 (1980); Farnsworth, Contracts § 10.3 (Little Brown 1982).

(n17)Footnote 15. Wales v. Ripperger, 262 A.D. 1062, 30 N.Y.S.2d 233 (1941) is in accord with the Massingale Case; Cox v. Dolvin Realty Co., 56 Ga. App. 649, 193 S.E. 467 (1937) is contra.

See also Mortgage Bankers Ass'n of N.J. v. New Jersey Real Estate Comm'n, 283 N.J. Super. 233, 661 A.2d 832 (N.J. Super A.D. 1995) (statute prohibiting a broker from "[c]ollecting a commission as a real estate broker in a transaction, when at the same time representing either party in a transaction in a different capacity for a consideration" [N.J.S.A. 45:15-17(i)] does not bar the broker from receiving a commission from the seller when the broker also receives consideration from the buyer for aiding the buyer in the mortgage transaction; "transaction" refers only to the real estate sale, and aiding the buyer does not constitute "representing" the buyer).

(n18)Footnote 16. 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843 (1967) , discussed in § 4.03 above.

(n19)Footnote 17. 236 A.2d at 859 .

(n20)Footnote 18. See Bogle v. Summit Investment Co., LLC, 107 P.3d 520, 527, 2005 NMCA 24 (N.M. Ct. App. 2005) .

(n21)Footnote 19. Grossman v. Herman, 266 N.Y. 249, 194 N.E.2d (1935). The New York Court stated:

The mere fact that brokers have been employed by an owner to procure a sale or lease of real estate need not in itself necessarily prevent such brokers, under proper circumstances, from accepting employment also from a purchaser or a lessee. The question always is whether the facts in a given case may be held as matter of law to justify an inference of a double employment. In Pease & Elliman, Inc., v. Gladwin Realty Co., 216 A.D. 421, 1926 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9241, 215 N.Y.S. 346, the Appellate Division, in weighing the evidence, inferred an employment by defendant as well as the owner. When, as in the case before us, the complaint alleges an employment of plaintiffs by defendants as prospective purchasers, the right to recovery must depend upon proof of such allegations. There must be an existing contract between the plaintiffs and defendants which the latter had broken with resulting liability for damages. Parker v. Simon, 231 N.Y. 503, 508 132 N.E. 404 (N.Y. 1921).

See generally Epstein, Indoor Air Pollution and the "Duty to Warn," 5 A.B.A. Prob. & Prop. 23 (Nov./Dec. 1991).

(n22)Footnote 20. 73 N.J. 590, 376 A.2d 902 (1977) .

(n23)Footnote 21. 376 A.2d at 907-8 .

(n24)Footnote 22. 376 A.2d at 908 .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

96 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.11

§ 4.11 A Broker's Voluntary Reduction or Modification of Commission

In certain situations brokers will voluntarily agree to reduce their commissions in order to make a sale go through. For example, in one case the sellers refused to pay an extra $540 to decrease a home's radon level, so the buyer's broker offered to reduce its commission by one half of the $540 if the seller's agent would do the same. n1 While this is a common technique to facilitate a sale when the parties have reached an impasse, it can lead to disputes regarding a broker's commission. While such disputes can raise issues regarding promissory estoppel and waiver, the primary issue to consider first is whether there has been a modification of the underlying contract.

Jones v. Best n2 illustrates some of the difficulties that can arise. John Paul Jones, a licensed real estate agent, entered into a one-year exclusive listing agreement with Peter Best to sell a 96-acre apple orchard. The orchard was listed for $800,000 and Jones had the right to sell the orchard at that price or any other price to which Best agreed. Jones was to receive 5% of the sales price as his commission, whether he or someone else sold the property. Two or three months after the agreement was made, Jones learned that Pacific Fruit Growers & Packers, Inc. was a potential purchaser. Earl Nordberg, a real estate agent with whom Jones had worked in the past, represented Pacific Fruit. Best informed Jones that he was considering Pacific Fruit's offer of $735,000 or $740,000. At their next meeting, Best told Jones that he had made a deal on the orchard. Figuring that five percent of the purchase price of $740,000 was $37,000, Jones told Best, "Pete, I'll take $18,000 and you take care of Nordberg." While Jones knew he was entitled to the full $37,000, he intended to take slightly less than half the commission and have the remainder paid to Nordberg, who had procured the buyer. In similar transactions involving Nordberg, Jones testified that each took half of the commission and that he expected that this would occur in this sale. Jones testified that Best shook hands and "was evidently well pleased." n3

The sale closed and Jones called Best to ask for his $18,000 commission. Best was hostile and stated that Jones had no commission coming as he had not procured the buyer. Best subsequently asked Jones to show the listing agreement to Best's attorney, which Jones did. About that time, Jones learned that Nordberg had never received a commission.

Best's attorney later spoke to Jones and asked if he had agreed to take $18,000 for his commission. Jones replied that he had as long as Best took care of Nordberg. The attorney later sent a letter stating that he would send Jones a check for $18,000 upon receipt of a release signed by both Nordberg and Jones showing that the $18,000 was a complete settlement. Jones responded in writing, stating that as the exclusive listing agent, he was entitled to the full five percent, or $37,000. He also stated that he would accept $18,500 plus interest and costs as a full release of his claims under the agreement, but would need the full $37,000 to get a release from Mr. Nordberg. Jones later received a final letter from Best's attorney along with a check for $18,000. The letter stated that the check was forwarded as a means of settlement and compromise. Jones sued for the full $37,000. n4

The trial court found that Jones had not waived a commission greater than $18,000, but had agreed to reduce his commission by $500. The trial judge awarded Jones $36,500, prejudgment interest and attorney fees. The intermediate appellate court, in an unpublished opinion, held that Jones was estopped from claiming more than $18,000 commission and that he was not entitled to attorney's fees. However, it allowed the prejudgment interest.

In an en banc decision, the Supreme Court of Washington stated that the trial court and the Court of Appeals had confused several theories in their attempts to resolve the issues. Since there was a valid written contract between the parties, the parties' subsequent conversation did not constitute an agreement to reduce the commission. The intermediate court's application of promissory estoppel was found to be inapplicable to this case. n5 The trial court heard the evidence, judged the witnesses' credibility, and found that Jones made no promise to accept $18,000 as the entire commission. The court stated, "The sine qua non of promissory estoppel is the existence of a promise; there was no promise here." n6 Furthermore, there was no justifiable change in position by Best that would implicate promissory estoppel.

This court stated that neither the litigants nor the courts had addressed the case as one of attempted, but unsuccessful modification of a valid contract. This the court concluded was the appropriate analysis. The court found that there had been an attempted modification of the written listing agreement, but that Best's silence did not constitute acceptance. Mutual assent was required for a modification; one party could not unilaterally modify the agreement. n7 Since there was no modification of the agreement, Jones was entitled to his five percent commission under the original contract terms.

This court also addressed the issue of waiver. It found that at most, the circumstances did not evidence an intent to waive over half the commission. Instead, the evidence pointed to a desire to have a portion of the commission paid to someone else.

If a commission is to be modified in some manner or reduced, the parties should comply with the statute of frauds and reduce the modification or reduction to a writing signed by both parties. n8 This can avoid a costly dispute.

One area where reduced commissions are expected involves lender sales of property where the debt encumbering the property exceeds the property's value. In this situation, the lender agrees to accept less than the indebtedness in order to sell the property. These sales have been referred to as "short sales." n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See In re Appeal of Sheaffer, 116 Ohio App. 3d 98, 100-101, 686 N.E.2d 1382, 1384 (1996) .

(n2)Footnote 2. 134 Wash. 2d 232, 950 P.2d 1 (1998) (en banc).

(n3)Footnote 3. 134 Wash. 2d 232, 235, 950 P.2d 1, 3 (1998) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 134 Wash. 2d 232, 235, 950 P.2d 1, 3 (1998) .

(n5)Footnote 5. 134 Wash. 2d 232, 237-239, 950 P.2d 1, 4-5 (1998) . The Court of Appeals had discussed whether equitable or promissory estoppel applied and concluded that promissory estoppel was the proper doctrine.

(n6)Footnote 6. 134 Wash. 2d 232, 239-240, 950 P.2d 1, 5 (1998) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 134 Wash. 2d 232, 239-240, 950 P.2d 1, 5 (1998) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Cf. American Garment Properties, Inc. v. CB Richard Ellis-El Paso, L.L.C., 155 S.W.3d 431, 437 (Tex. App. 2004) (Oral agreements to modify a real estate commission agreement raised defensively by owners are not treated any differently from oral agreements asserted by brokers seeking to recover their commissions. The court refused to enforce an allegedly oral agreement to reduce the broker's commission.).

(n9)Footnote 9. See In re Marcoux, 301 B.R. 381, 383 (Bankr. D. Conn. 2003) ; Gale v. Commissioner, 2006 Tax Ct. Summary LEXIS 54, *3 n. 2 , T.C. Summary Opinion 2006-152 (2006).

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

97 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.11A

§ 4.11A Other Theories of Recovery

Although actions to recover a brokerage commission are usually based upon the terms of a broker's listing agreement or other promise involving a commission, n1 other causes of action include quantum meruit, fraud, constructive fraud and civil conspiracy. An additional cause of action is intentional interference with the broker's efforts, commonly referred to as tortious interference, which almost always involves the interference of a party with the broker's efforts to find a ready, willing and able purchaser for the property.

[1] Quantum Meruit

The theory of quantum meruit applies almost exclusively in states which do not require real estate listing agreements to be in writing. n2 Where a broker is unable to fully perform its obligation under the agreement because of a wrongful act on the part of the vendor, and is therefore not entitled to recover under the agreement for full performance, it will have a cause of action in quantum meruit to recover the reasonable value of its services. n3 In awarding damages under quantum meruit, courts may use the customary method and rate of compensation prevailing in the real estate industry, n4 usually a percentage of the sale price. n5

To recover on a quantum meruit claim, the broker must allege that:

- (1) the broker performed service to benefit the defendant,
- (2) the broker performed the service nongratuitiously,
- (3) the defendant accepted the service, and
- (4) no contract existed to prescribe payment for the service. n6

The basis for quantum meruit recovery is equitable and results from the receipt by a defendant from a plaintiff of a benefit that is unjust for the defendant to retain without paying for it. n7 A failure to plead that the broker expected payment from the defendant can prove fatal to a broker's quantum meruit claim. n8

In Georgia, in order for a broker to recover on a quantum meruit claim, the broker must also prove that he or she was the procuring cause of the completed transaction. n9

If a seller withdraws listed property from the market before the broker's efforts have produced a purchaser, the seller is responsible to the broker only for such damages as may be established for breach of contract or on a quantum meruit basis for special services rendered in connection with reasonable efforts to sell the property, undertaken before the property was withdrawn from the market. However, ordinary services of a general nature rendered by the broker are not recoverable even on a quantum meruit basis since they are a cost of doing business. This result is considered in accordance with the principle that in the absence of bad faith or special circumstances, the seller is not liable for the full commission unless a sale occurs. n10

Quantum meruit was applied in a case where the listing broker believed that the selling broker was a member of the multiple listing service (MLS). n11 Pursuant to that organization's rules, a finder was entitled to a 1.6% commission. After the sale was consummated, the listing broker learned that the selling broker was not a member of MLS. The listing broker then took the position that the selling broker was entitled to none of the commission. It was held that the trial court was well within its equitable discretion to allow the selling broker quantum meruit for his services. n12

Quantum meruit is generally unavailable as a remedy if a valid legally enforceable contract between the parties exists. n13 This remedy is a form of restitution where the plaintiff seeks to recover the fair value of services performed for the defendant. It is not consensual, nor is it a contract. This remedy seeks to accomplish justice and avoid unjust enrichment. Consequently, if there is a valid listing agreement, quantum meruit should be unavailable for pursuit of a commission. n14 Instead, the broker's remedy is for breach of contract.

Quantum meruit may also be unavailable as a remedy if the broker or agent is unlicensed since one of the elements of this remedy is that the services be rendered under circumstances that make it reasonable for the plaintiff to expect payment. If the state prohibits the payment of commissions to unlicensed persons, it would not be reasonable for an unlicensed person to expect to receive a commission. n15

Courts that require a written listing agreement may reject quantum meruit as a basis of recovery because of the belief that this theory would in effect render the statute requiring a written commission agreement a nullity. These courts hold that to allow performance to take a claim for a commission out of the statute of frauds would leave nothing on which the statute would operate. n16 Such courts may be willing, however, to allow compensation for other services even though there is no written listing agreement for the transaction consummated if another written document provides for compensation. n17 If a court rejects quantum meruit as a basis of recovery because there is no written listing agreement, the court may allow the broker to pursue compensation on an hourly based compensation if the parties' express oral agreement supports this remedy. n18

If a broker is allowed to pursue compensation based on a theory of quantum meruit and the compensation is for services rendered over a period of time, it has been held that the statute of limitations begins to run when the final services have been performed. n19

[2] Fraud

Absent a special statute requiring real estate brokerage commission agreements to be in writing, such contracts would not fall within the traditional statute of frauds. n20 Most states now have statutes requiring that an agreement to pay a commission for or upon the sale of an interest in real estate be in writing.

[3] Tortious Interference

Tortious interference is an emerging cause of action based on tort theories as they relate to contractual obligations. This theory can be divided into two basic components:

- (1) tortious interference with a prospective economic advantage; n21 and
- (2) tortious interference with a contract, also known as civil conspiracy, discussed below.

The elements of tortious interference with a contract include:

- (1) a contract subject to interference;
- (2) with which the defendant willfully and intentionally interferes;
- (3) without justification or excuse; and
- (4) proximately causes injury to the plaintiff. n22

While this cause of action supports a broker's right to pursue the buyer, it also has been upheld as a right to be pursued against competing buyers' brokers, as when a second buyer's broker interferes with the first buyer's broker. n23 Merely being the first broker to introduce a buyer to a property may be insufficient to support this tort claim if another broker also shows the same property to the same buyer and negotiates a sale with that buyer. n24

Most states, by regulation or statute, prohibit and will sanction a broker or agent who induces any party to a contract, sale, or lease to break the contract for the purpose of substituting in lieu thereof a new contract where the substitution is motivated by the licensee's personal gain. n25

In some jurisdictions and under certain circumstances, a violation of well-defined, established rules or standards of a trade, association or profession (such as a Realtors(R) association) may constitute the type of wrongful conduct that will support a cause of action for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. n26

[4] Civil Conspiracy

Civil conspiracy requires two or more persons seeking to accomplish an unlawful purpose or to accomplish a lawful purpose by unlawful means. n27 Civil conspiracy has also been termed "conspiring to interfere with contractual relations." n28 To establish a cause of action for tortiously interfering with a prospective economic advantage, the plaintiff is required to prove: (1) unlawful, intentional interference with the prospect of, or reasonable expectation of, economic advantage; and (2) a reasonable probability that plaintiff would have received the anticipated economic benefits had there been no interference. n29 This cause of action seems to be most successfully pursued by buyer brokers who have been induced into transactions by buyers promising them that "they will be taken care of," but then later cutting the brokers out of the transactions. n30

The broker must be entitled to receive a commission before there can be a conspiracy to deprive the broker of his or her commission. n30.1

[5] Implied-in-Fact Contract

In Moshovitis v. The Bank Companies, n31 the court held that the absence of a written contract, by itself, did not bar a real estate broker from receiving a commission based on an unwritten implied-in-fact contract. The seller in this case had rescinded a contract in bad faith to avoid paying two separate commissions. This bad faith determination was supported by evidence that showed that the day after rescinding the contract, the seller contacted the buyer and resumed negotiations without the broker's involvement. There was no substantial difference between the rescinded contract and the subsequently executed contract except that the later contract excluded the broker's commission.

Moshovitis was decided based on D.C. Code § 45-1945, which was repealed in 1997. This prior statute had been construed as not altering D.C. common law which allowed brokers to collect commissions on oral listing agreements. D.C. Code § 42-1705, which was enacted in 1997, provides that a written listing contract is required in the District for the sale of all real property. Thus, pursuant to D.C. Code § 42-1705, a licensee cannot receive a commission in the absence of a written listing agreement. n31.1

[6] Equitable Estoppel

A Connecticut court relied upon the doctrine of equitable estoppel to allow a broker a commission where the seller had not signed the listing agreement. The seller had signed the original listing agreement, but when it expired her husband signed her name to an extension of this listing. This extension also reduced the property's listing price. When the husband signed, he had the seller's oral authorization to act on her behalf. The broker, however, believed that the defendant had signed the extension. Subsequently, the property was sold at an even lower price which was insufficient to pay the broker's commission. n32 Rather than attempt to work out an agreement with the broker regarding the commission, the seller tried to avoid paying the commission altogether. The broker sued to collect his commission.

The court found that the statutory requirement that the seller sign the listing agreement was mandatory. Therefore, the statutory requirements were not met. n33 However, the court found that the defective listing agreement extension was valid due to the equitable estoppel doctrine. The court stated that it had previously rejected application of this doctrine against homeowners seeking to avoid paying a broker's commission, but that this case was factually distinguishable from its prior decisions. The court specifically noted that the broker's need for relief did not result from his ignorance of the laws governing his profession. The broker had what he believed to be a valid extension of the listing agreement signed by the owner. The broker was unaware that the owner's husband had signed the extension on the owner's behalf and with her consent. The broker had relied upon this document to his detriment. Furthermore, applying the doctrine in this case did not emasculate the statutory licensing system since the broker believed he was operating within the law's requirements and the owner and her husband allowed the broker to believe that. n34 A concurring judge agreed with the result, but would have applied a bad faith exception doctrine rather than the doctrine of equitable estoppel. n35

[7] Promissory Estoppel

Promissory estoppel is another theory brokers have used to recover a commission. Section 90 of the Restatement (Second) of Contracts states that promissory estoppel arises from a promise that the promisor should reasonably expect to induce action or forbearance on the part of the promisee or a third person and that does induce such action or forbearance is binding if injustice can be avoided only by enforcement of the promise. Promissory estoppel applies to promises that are otherwise unenforceable. A seller's repeated promises to a broker who does not have a written listing to continue trying to sell a property because the seller would make sure that the broker's commission would be protected was found to support recovery of the commission under a theory of promissory estoppel. n36

Not all jurisdictions accept promissory estoppel as a theory under which a broker can recover a commission. The Supreme Court of Texas has rejected promissory estoppel as a recovery theory stating that a licensed real estate broker cannot act or forbear from acting in reliance on anything less than a signed written commission agreement. It stated that when a broker relies on an oral promise to sign a written agreement that would satisfy statutory requirements, the broker does so at his or her peril. n37

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 4.01 above.

(n2)Footnote 2. Cf. Uhar & Co. v. Jacob, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43025, at *19 (D.D.C. May 3, 2010) (D.C. law does not allow recovery for brokerage services under quasi-contract theories in the absence of a true contract); PKG Associates, Inc. v. Dubb, 306 A.D.2d 333, 760 N.Y.S.2d 681, 682 (2d Dept. 2003) (plaintiffs were licensed real estate brokers and therefore recovery in quantum meruit for the reasonable value of their services was not precluded by the absence of a signed writing evidencing the parties' alleged agreement).

(n3)Footnote 3. Joseph Sternberg, Inc. v. Walber 36th St. Assoc., 187 A.D.2d 225, 594 N.Y.S.2d 144, 1993 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1706 (1st Dept. 1993) .

See also Christopher Inv. Properties, Inc. v. Cox, 219 Ga. App. 440, 465 S.E.2d 680 (1995) (a broker may prevail on a quantum meruit claim notwithstanding that the broker was not the procuring cause of the sale).

(n4)Footnote 4. Flamingo Realty, Inc. v. Midwest Dev., Inc., 110 Nev. 984, 879 P.2d 69 (Nev. 1994) .

See also Mills Realty, Inc. v. Wolff, 910 S.W.2d 320 (Mo. App. E.D. 1995) (in a suit to recover a commission based on quantum meruit, the broker cannot establish the reasonable value of the broker's services merely by citing the terms of the contract, unless the contract has been fully performed except for the payment of the commission).

(n5)Footnote 5. 879 P.2d at 72 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Owen Wagener & Co. v. U.S. Bank, 297 Ill. App. 3d 1045, 232 Ill. Dec. 160, 697 N.E.2d 902, 908 (1998) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Owen Wagener & Co. v. U.S. Bank, 297 Ill. App. 3d 1045, 232 Ill. Dec. 160, 697 N.E.2d 902, 908 (1998) ; Coldwell Banker Commercial v. Resource Realty of Central Jersey, 368 N.J. Super. 382, 392, 846 A.2d 633, 639 (2004) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Owen Wagener & Co. v. U.S. Bank, 297 Ill. App. 3d 1045, 232 Ill. Dec. 160, 697 N.E.2d 902, 909 (1998) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Amend v. 485 Properties, 280 Ga. 327, 330, 627 S.E.2d 565, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 167, at *7 (Mar. 13, 2006) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Island Realty v. Bibbo, 329 N.J. Super. 528, 748 A.2d 620, 624 (2000) , cert. denied, 165 N.J. 487, 758 A.2d 646 (2000) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Bozzelli v. Hollenbaugh, 594 N.E.2d 782 (Ind. 1992) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See 594 N.E.2d 782, 783 (Ind. 1992) .

(n13)Footnote 13. But see Scheerer v. Fisher, ___ N.C. App. ___, 688 S.E.2d 472, 476-77 (2010) (Despite the existence of a valid oral brokerage contract, the court found that the broker should have been able to state a claim for quantum meruit as the broker was entitled to seek alternative forms for relief. The court also found that the broker had sufficiently stated a claim for quantum meruit.); Carolantic Realty, Inc. v. Matco Group, Inc., 151 N.C. App. 464, 470-471, 566 S.E.2d 134, 138-139 (2002) . Quantum meruit may apply even though there is a valid written listing agreement if the broker renders services after the listing period has terminated.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Prestige Homes Real Estate Co. v. Hanson, 151 Or. App. 756, 761-762, 951 P.2d 193, 195-196 (1997) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Everett v. Goodloe, 268 Ga. App. 536, 541, 602 S.E.2d 284, 289-290 (Ga. Ct. App. 2004) (unlicensed individual cannot pursue a quantum meruit claim); Smith v. Cannell, 1999 Me. 19, 723 A.2d 876, 881 (Me. 1999) . The agent in this case was unlicensed at the time the services were rendered, but was licensed at the time the transaction closed. Despite a quantum meruit argument, the agent was not allowed any compensation.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Patterson-Woods & Associates., LLC v. Realty Enterprises, LLC, 2008 Del. Super. LEXIS 196, at *45-*46 (May 21, 2008) reargument denied, 2008 Del. Super. LEXIS 286 (July 29, 2008) . Trammel Crow Co. No. 60 v. Harkinson, 944 S.W.2d 631, 636, 40 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 425 (Tex. 1997) , rehearing overruled. See also Amato & Stella Associates, Inc. v. Florida North Investments, Ltd., 678 F. Supp. 445, 449 (D. Del. 1988) , applying Delaware law (a broker who neglects a statutory demand for a written listing contract cannot alternatively recover in quantum meruit; allowing a broker to recover based on an oral listing contract even though services were rendered would undercut the purpose and intent of the regulation requiring a written listing agreement). See generally Annot., Real Estate Broker's Right To Recover in Quantum Meruit For Services Although Contract Is Not in Writing as Required by Statute, 41 A.L.R. 2d 906. But see Coldwell Banker Commercial/Feist & Feist Realty Corp. v. Blancke P.W. L.L.C., 368 N.J. Super. 382, 392-402, 846 A.2d 633, 639-645 (2004) (Though strict compliance with the statute of frauds is essential for a broker to recover a commission for the sale of real estate, the doctrine of substantial compliance avoids the rejection of a legitimate legal claim solely on a technical basis. The technical violation of the governing condition to enforce an agreement, in this case the statute of frauds, precluded the broker's recovery under the agreement. However, a factfinder may conclude that because plaintiffs conferred a benefit on defendant, the circumstances are such that to deny plaintiffs recovery would be unjust. The broker in such a situation may be able to recover under a theory of quantum meruit.).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Chabbott Petrosky Commercial Realtors, Ltd v. Peterson, 859 A.2d 77, 80 (Del. 2004) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See In re Capitol Hill Group, 320 B.R. 460, 471-472 (Bankr. D. D.C. 2005) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Tesser v. Allboro Equipment Co., 2007 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 8952, at *14-*15 (Sup. Ct. Dec. 31, 2007) .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Restatement (2d) of Contracts § 126, comment b (1981).

(n21)Footnote 21. Harper-Lawrence, Inc. v. United Merchants, 261 N.J. Super. 554, 619 A.2d 623 (App. Div. 1993) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Snyder Realty, Inc. v. BMW of N. Am., Inc., 233 N.J. Super. 65, 558 A.2d 28 (App. Div.) , cert. denied, 117 N.J. 165, 564 A.2d 883 (1989) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Harris v. Perl, 197 A.2d 359 (N.J. 1964) ; Sustick v. Slatina, 137 A.2d 54 (N.J. App. Div. 1957) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Team Resources, Inc. v. Exodus Communications, Inc., 60 Fed. Appx. 899, 2003 U.S. App. LEXIS 4476, *9-*11 (3d Cir. Mar. 12, 2003) , applying New Jersey law.

(n25)Footnote 25. Cf. Mississippi Real Estate Comm'n v. Anding, 732 So. 2d 192, 197 (Miss. 1999) (there was no evidence in the record that the salesperson acted to induce any clients of her former broker to breach a contract with the broker; the salesperson's letter to clients informing them of her new employment did not amount to inducing clients to break contracts).

(n26)Footnote 26. See Stevenson Real Estate Services, Inc. v. CB Richard Ellis Real Estate Services, Inc., 138 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1223, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 235, 242 (2006) .

(n27)Footnote 27. See Prism Marketing Co. v. Casino Factory Shoppes, LLC, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 110759, at *15 (N.D. Miss. Nov. 30, 2009) ; Massey v. Armco Steel Co., 652 S.W.2d 932, 934 (Tex. 1983) rehearing of cause overruled (Jul. 20, 1983).

(n28)Footnote 28. BIEC International, Inc. v. Global Steel Services, Ltd., 791 F. Supp. 489, 492 (E.D. Pa. 1992) .

(n29)Footnote 29. See generally Zamore, Business Torts, Chapter 12 (LexisNexis 2010).

(n30)Footnote 30. L A & N Interests, Inc. v. Fish, 864 S.W.2d 745 (Tex. App.--Houston [14th Dist.] 1993) .

(n31)Footnote 30.1. See Georgia Real Estate Properties, Inc. v. Lindwall, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 272, at *9 (Mar. 22, 2010) .

(n32)Footnote 31. 694 A.2d 64 (D.C. App. 1997) .

(n33)Footnote 31.1. See Uhar & Co. v. Jacob, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 43025, at *12 (D.D.C. May 3, 2010) .

(n34)Footnote 32. This situation resulted from the debts encumbering the property.

(n35)Footnote 33. Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325a (b) required in part that the listing agreement be signed by the owner or an agent authorized to act on behalf of the owner only by a written document executed in the manner statutorily provided for real property conveyances. The husband only had oral authorization to sign the extension on his wife's behalf.

(n36)Footnote 34. See Rapin v. Nettleton, 50 Conn. App. 640, 718 A.2d 509, 514-515 (1998) .

Conn. Gen. Stat. § 20-325a (d) provides that a licensee cannot be prevented from recovering a commission if it would be inequitable to deny such recovery and the licensee has substantially complied with certain subdivisions depending upon the type of real estate transaction involved. See Location Realty, Inc. v. Colaccino, 287 Conn. 706, 723-30, 949 A.2d 1189, 1199-1203 (2008) for a discussion of this provision and unjust enrichment.

(n37)Footnote 35. Rapin v. Nettleton, 50 Conn. App. 640, 718 A.2d 509, 515-516 (1998) .

(n38)Footnote 36. See Daigle Commercial Group, Inc. v. St. Laurent, 1999 Me. 107, 734 A.2d 667, 673 (Me. 1999) . The seller in this case also promised to make up a prior commission where the broker believed he had been short changed.

(n39)Footnote 37. See Trammell Crow Co. No. 60 v. Harkinson, 944 S.W.2d 631, 636, 40 Tex. Sup. Ct. J. 425 (Tex. 1997) , rehearing overruled.

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

98 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.11B

§ 4.11B Broker's Liens

Some states statutorily provide for a commercial broker's lien. For example, Georgia provides for a commercial broker's lien that arises from the management, sale, or lease of, or conveyance of an interest in commercial real estate. n1 Maryland on the other hand limits its broker's lien to the leasing of commercial property. n2 If a state recognizes or statutorily provides for a broker's lien, the broker must first be owed a commission before there can be a basis for a lien. n3

The Court of Appeals of Georgia considered the scope of its broker's lien in Padgett v. City of Moultrie. n4 The broker's services in this case went beyond traditional brokerage services, and included services for which no broker's license was required. The court held that the statutory lien was not limited strictly to licensed services. The court also addressed the priority of the broker's lien. The applicable code provision stated, "Prior recorded liens and liens for ad valorem taxes shall have priority over a broker's lien." n5 The court held that the broker's lien was entitled to priority over not only the subsequently recorded deed to secure a debt, but also over a prior encumbrance where the encumbrancer had agreed to subordinate to this subsequently recorded deed. The court reasoned that when the subordination agreement was recorded, the prior encumbrancer knew of the broker's intervening lien both through its earlier recordation and by the encumbrancer's receipt of a copy of the lien. n6

Wisconsin allows brokers to file a lien with respect to commercial real estate. n7

The Missouri Commercial Real Estate Brokers and State Certified Real Estate Appraisers Lien Act n8 has been interpreted as applying to broker's commissions arising from leases as well as sales. n9 Under this act, valid prior recorded liens or mortgages have priority over a real estate broker's lien. n10

New York's mechanic's lien law allows brokers in some instances to file a lien for services rendered. A 1982 amendment to this law expanded the definition of "improvement" to include the performance of certain real estate brokerage services. n11 The amended law states that improvement includes:

the performance of real estate brokerage services in obtaining a lessee for a term of more than three years of all or any part of real property to be used for other than residential purposes pursuant to a written contract of brokerage employment or compensation n12

This definition has been held to mean that in order for a broker to have a lien, there must be a brokerage contract between the broker and the property owner (i.e., the lessor). n13

Pennsylvania's Commercial Real Estate Broker's Lien Act n14 has been interpreted as imposing two requirements in order for a broker to place a lien on a commercial property. First, the broker and the commercial real property owner must have signed a listing agreement for the sale of commercial property. Second, during the term of the listing agreement, the broker must have provided services which resulted in a buyer for the commercial real property. This Act embodies a public policy of creating a broker's lien only where the commission was earned by the broker. n15 Because of this second requirement, a broker could be contractually entitled to a commission pursuant to an exclusive agency agreement, but the broker would not be entitled to a broker's lien under the Act if the sale did not result from the broker's services.

It should be noted that a statutory broker's lien differs from a broker placing a mortgage on the public land records for the purpose of collecting a commission. The later act may be statutorily prohibited. n16

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Ga. Code Ann. §§ 44-14-600 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. §§ 14-301 et seq. Maryland's broker's lien statute is modeled to a large extent upon the Maryland mechanic's lien statute. The broker's lien statute is remedial and should be so construed to give effect to its purpose. See Howard Chertkof & Co., Inc. v. Gimbel, 157 Md. App. 118, 132, 849 A.2d 1036, 1044-1045 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 2004) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Sherlock Homes, Inc. v. Wilcox, 2001 Ohio App. LEXIS 792 (Ohio App. Mar. 6, 2001) , appeal denied, 92 Ohio St. 3d 1430, 749 N.E.2d 757, 2001 Ohio LEXIS 1768 (2001) ; Re/Max Select Realty v. DeAugustino, 73 Pa. D. & C.4th 371, 376 (2005) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 229 Ga. App. 500, 494 S.E.2d 299 (Ga. Ct. App. 1997) , cert. denied, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 393 (Ga. Mar. 6, 1998) and 1998 Ga. LEXIS 413 (Ga. Mar. 6, 1998) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Ga. Code Ann. § 44-14-603.

(n6)Footnote 6. 229 Ga. App. 500, 505, 494 S.E.2d 299, 303 (1997) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Wis. Stat. § 779.32; Sondag v. Dave Kohel Agency, Inc., 2006 WI 92, 293 Wis. 2d 458, 466, 718 N.W.2d 631, 635 (2006) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 429.600 through 429.630. See generally Streiker, Getting Paid Commissions: A New Power Balance Between Real Estate Brokers, Appraisers and Their Clients Under the Missouri Commercial Real Estate Brokers' and State Certified Real Estate Appraisers' Lien Act, 63 U.M.K.C. L. Rev. 727 (1995) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Incentive Realty, Inc. v. Hawatmeh, 983 S.W.2d 156, 160 (Mo. App. 1998) reh'g denied (1999).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Dalton Invs., Inc. v. Nooney Co., 10 S.W.3d 590, 592-593 (Mo. App. 2000) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See generally Powell on Real Property § 38.13 (Michael Allan Wolf ed., Matthew Bender) for a discussion of the types of services for which a mechanic's lien may be filed.

(n12)Footnote 12. N.Y. Lien Law § 2(4).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Robert Plan Corp. v. Greiner-Maltz Co., 229 A.D.2d 122, 655 N.Y.S.2d 648, 649-650, 1997 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3074 (1997) , appeal denied, 90 N.Y.2d 808, 664 N.Y.S.2d 270, 686 N.E.2d 1365 (1997) .

Pursuant to N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 294-b, a real estate broker who meets the requirements of this section can act to require that his or her commission in connection with residential property be escrowed before there has been a judgment that the commission has been earned. The broker must file an affidavit of entitlement to commission with the county clerk. The required contents of this affidavit are stated in N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 294-b (2). Subsection (5)(k) defines the affected residential real property which may be subjected to this escrow requirement. Included are properties improved by a one to four family dwelling, individual condominium units and individual cooperative apartments. The property must be used or occupied, or intended to be used or occupied, wholly or partly, as the home or residence of one or more persons. In order for a broker to file this affidavit, there must be a written brokerage contract containing the following statement in clear and conspicuous bold face type:

At the time of closing, you [seller] may be required to deposit the broker's commission with the county clerk in the event that you do not pay the broker his and her commission as set forth herein. Your obligation to deposit the broker's commission with the county clerk may be waived by the broker.

While an affidavit can be filed with respect to other real property (i.e., non-residential), the affidavit does not invalidate the transfer of property or create a lien. Since the affidavit outside of the residential context does not require the escrowing of the broker's commission, this provision is less effective in protecting the broker's commission with these types of property.

(n14)Footnote 14. 68 P.S. § 1051 et seq.

(n15)Footnote 15. See Re/Max Select Realty v. DeAugustino, 73 Pa. D. & C.4th 371, 377 (2005) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Fla. Stat. Ann. § 475.42(l)(j). See Michel v. Beau Rivage Beach Resort, Inc., 774 So. 2d 900, 902 (Fla. App. 2001) .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

99 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.11C

§ 4.11C Punitive Damages

As a general rule, punitive damages are not awarded in breach of contract actions. n1 However, some jurisdictions allow the recovery of punitive damages in breach of contract actions when the breach is attended by intentional wrong, insult, abuse, or such gross negligence as to amount to an independent tort. n2 While punitive damages are often awarded in tort actions, punitive damages are awarded in contract actions only in extreme cases. It has been stated that such an award must be done with caution and within narrow limits. n3 It is possible for a broker to be awarded punitive damages in an action to recover a commission when the party responsible for paying the commission engages in willful or wanton conduct in refusing to pay a commission. n4 Counsel representing a broker seeking to recover a commission should also not overlook the possibility of an award of prejudgment interest since such an award is usually within the court's discretion n5 and may be awarded in a breach of contract action. n6

It is also possible for an unlicensed individual to be assessed damages which are penal in nature for unlawfully accepting a commission on the sale of real estate. For example, New York Real Property Law Article 12-A states that no person may receive a commission arising out of the sale of real estate unless that person has a real estate license. Section 442-e(3) of New York Real Property Law provides that unlicensed brokers who have received funds in violation of the provisions of Article 12-A may be liable for not less than the amount received by them and not more than quadruple the amount. Quadruple damages under this provision are penal in nature and discretionary with the court. n7

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Dodge, The Case for Punitive Damages in Contracts, 48 Duke L. J. 629 (1999).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Polk v. Sexton, 613 So. 2d 841, 845 (Miss. 1993) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bryant v. Alpha Entertainment Corp., 508 So. 2d 1094, 1098 (Miss. 1987) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Sudeen v. Castleberry, 794 So. 2d 237, 252 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001) (punitive damages of $100,000 awarded on a commission of $48,000).

See generally Black, Client Liability to Real Estate Brokers: From Contract to Punitive Damages, 25 Real Est. L. J. 78 (Summer 1996). This article examines theories of agency, contract, and tort that form the basis of client liability to brokers.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Sunburst Bank v. Keith, 648 So. 2d 1147, 1152 (Miss. 1995) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Warwick v. Matheney, 603 So. 2d 330, 340 (Miss. 1992) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Handy v. Cohen, 195 Misc. 2d 548, 549-550, 759 N.Y.S.2d 627, 629, 2003 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 69 (N.Y. City Ct. 2003) .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

100 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.11D

§ 4.11D Broker Rebates

One marketing scheme used by some real estate brokers is to offer a rebate of the broker's commission. Since the majority of sellers are not licensed as brokers, agents or salespersons, the issue this conduct raises is whether this scheme constitutes an illegal sharing a commission with an unlicensed person. It appears that some states bar this type of activity due to specific statutory language which prohibits brokers from paying rebates. For example, Oregon Revised Statutes § 696.290 states in part:

No real estate licensee shall offer, promise, allow, pay or rebate, directly or indirectly, any part or share of the licensee's commission or compensation arising or accruing from any real estate transaction or pay a finder's fee to any person who is not a real estate licensee...

Thus, Oregon outright bars a rebate marketing plan. Similarly, Minnesota and Mississippi have similar statutory restrictions. n1

By regulation, in Kentucky it is illegal for any licensee to offer a prize, money, free gift, rebate or any other thing of value for the purpose of influencing a purchaser or prospective purchaser of real estate. n2 However, a licensee may offer refreshments or snacks to the general public and may give a gift that has a value of less than $100.00 as a closing gift so long as it was not offered before closing.

Not all states bar rebate programs, however. Nevada's Attorney General has opined that in the absence of any judicial or legislative prohibition, buyer's broker rebates, gifts, or discounts are probably lawful in Nevada real estate transactions. However, the Nevada Attorney General noted that the Nevada Real Estate Division has the authority to adopt regulations defining the perimeters of a buyer's brokerage agreement. n3

The Florida Attorney General has opined that Florida allows a broker to offer and promote a program in which purchasers of property listed by a broker receive a discount at a specific retail outlet. Florida's Attorney General found that such a program was in the nature of a gift and that neither Chapter 475 nor the Florida Real Estate Commission rules prohibited such conduct if the recipient purchased property listed with the broker. n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Minn. Stat. Ann. § 696.290; Miss. Code Ann. § 73-35-21(1)(j).

(n2)Footnote 2. 201 KAR 11:121, Section 2.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Nevada Attorney General's Opinion No. 97-28 (Dec. 31, 1997).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Florida Attorney General Opinion No. 83-48.

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

101 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.12

§ 4.12 Arbitration

Commission disputes between brokers in some cases never reach the courthouse. The National Association of Realtors(R) and member boards provide an arbitration system for resolving disputes on agency, subagency and commission issues between members, and in some cases, members and non-members of a particular board.

[1] Realtor(R) Code of Ethics

Article 17 of the Realtor(R) Code of Ethics provides that "[i]n the event of a contractual dispute between Realtor(R) associated with different firms, arising out of their relationship as Realtors(R), the Realtors(R) shall submit the dispute to arbitration in accordance with the regulations of their Board or Boards, rather than litigate the matter. The term "dispute" means "a controversy arising out of a real estate transaction and all of the related agency and subagency questions between Realtors(R) and their clients and the contractual matters arising out of their relationship with customers." n1 Article 17 further provides that "[i]n the event clients of Realtors(R) wish to arbitrate contractual disputes arising out of real estate transactions, Realtors(R) shall arbitrate those disputes in accordance with the regulations of their Board, provided the clients agree to be bound by the decision." The structure of the arbitration procedure is set out in the Code of Ethics and Arbitration Manual published by the National Association of Realtors(R). n2

[2] Duty to Arbitrate

Having signed the agreement to abide by the bylaws of the Board, every member, where consistent with applicable law, agrees to submit to arbitration by the Board's facilities all disputes with any other member under the following conditions:

1. Every Realtor(R) and non-resident member of the Board who as a principal broker of a real estate firm involving any disputes arising out of the real estate business with a Realtor(R) who is a principal broker in another real estate firm to a Realtor(R) or a non-resident member other than a principal of a Realtor(R) Associate shall have the right to invoke the arbitration facilities of the board in a business dispute with a Realtor(R), Realtor(R) Associate or non-resident member in another firm within the same or a different board. Arbitration in such cases shall be between the principle brokers. This type of dispute can include Realtors(R) (non-principals) and Realtors(R) Associates who are affiliated with one of the participants and have a vested financial interest in the outcome.

2. A client of a Realtor(R) or a non-resident member (principal) shall have the right to invoke the arbitration facilities of the board in a business dispute with a Realtor(R) (principal) arising out of an agency relationship, provided the client agrees to be bound by the arbitration.

The arbitration may be available, but is not required to be available for other disputes involving Realtors(R) in the same firm with non-member brokers, and in some cases, including customers, provided that all parties to the dispute agree in writing to arbitrate the dispute.

[3] Arbitration Procedures

Arbitration procedures are set out in the Arbitration Manual. n3 Not sooner than fifteen days, and no later than twenty-one days after the mailing of a notice to the respondent of the request for arbitration, the Secretary of the Board must mail to the claimant a copy of the response and respondent's affirmative claim, if any. The Professional Standards Committee Chairperson of the Board shall appoint from a list of potential panel members, three or more arbitrators to hear the dispute. The chairperson of the Professional Standards Committee shall also select one of the panel members to serve as chairperson for the Hearing Panel. Any Hearing Panel must have an odd number of members, of which at least two shall be Realtors(R). In the event a Realtor(R) Associate is involved in the dispute, one of the arbitrators must also be a Realtor(R) Associate or a Realtor(R) other than a principal. In the case of an arbitration involving issues related to areas of the commercial or industrial real estate business, the Board can be requested to provide a representative peer panel.

[4] The Arbitration Award

An award by the arbitration panel is required to be in writing and signed by the arbitrators (or a majority of them) and must state only the amount of the award. An arbitration award is binding and is not subject to review or appeal unless there are alleged irregularities occurring in the conduct of the proceeding. In that situation, the aggrieved party can appeal to the Board of Directors of the Board. n4

[5] Judicial Enforcement

The Arbitration Manual provides that, after the award is entered, judgment may be rendered upon the award by any competent court of record in the country. If the member fails to comply with the award, the recipient is advised by the Board to seek judicial enforcement to request reimbursement of legal fees incurred in seeking enforcement, which is provided under most state statutes.

The scope of judicial review is very limited. An award will be upheld, absent clear error, manifest disregard of a contractual provision or a completely irrational result, or unless it can be shown that the trial judge overlooked material evidence. n5

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Code of Ethics and Arbitration Manual, Part 10, Section 43.

(n2)Footnote 2. Note Volume 110a-1995.

(n3)Footnote 3. Part 10, Section 51.

(n4)Footnote 4. Part 10, Section 53.

(n5)Footnote 5. Berthod Realtors, Inc. v. J.W. Riker-Northern Rhode Island, Inc., 636 A.2d 1328 (R.I. 1994) .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

102 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.12A

§ 4.12A Broker Disputes Over Commissions

While many disputes between brokers as to the sharing of a commission are handled by arbitration under the Realtor(R) Code of Ethics, some of these disputes are decided by the courts. The few decisions addressing disputes between brokers over a commission do not mention the concept of procuring cause, but rather apply general contract principles. n1 Generally, the procuring cause rule does not apply to disputes between brokers arising out of an agreement to divide a commission. n2 Instead, the issue is what was the agreement between the brokers regarding the distribution of the commission. The client typically does not have to know of the broker's intent to split or share the commission with another broker. n2.1

When brokers agree to share a commission it is the majority rule that the principal must pay the commission before one broker becomes liable to share the commission with another broker. n3 This is also the general rule when the commission is shared by the selling broker and an agent supervised by that broker; the agent is due his or her share of the commission when the funds are paid to the broker. n4

When a transaction involves a listing broker and a selling broker, the seller's brokerage agreement is with the listing broker. Should the selling broker not receive his or her commission, the broker's cause of action lies against the listing broker since the seller has no contract with the selling broker. Consequently, courts have rejected arguments based on subagency assertions in these cases where the selling broker has sought to hold the seller responsible for the commission. n4.1

Commission disputes can also arise between the broker and the agent. Agents are typically independent contractors. n5 Under some arrangements, a percentage of the agent's commission is retained by the broker. Under other arrangements, the agent is entitled to 100% of the commissions the agent earns, but the agent must pay a monthly amount to the broker in exchange for management, shared office expenses, miscellaneous shared expenses and institutional advertising. Under this latter arrangement, the broker functions in part as a conduit for payment of the commissions. A broker who wrongfully releases a client from its obligation to pay a commission to an agent may be liable to the agent for damages. n6

Disputes can also arise between an agent and his or her broker concerning commissions earned while the agent was associated with the broker, but which are collected or paid after the agent and broker have terminated their relationship.

When the parties' agreement provides guidance, it should determine whether the agent is due a commission on sales which close after the agent departs from the broker's business. n7 When there is either no agreement or the agreement is silent on this issue, the court may apply a general rule used with respect to employees when the agent is an employee. n8

The underlying sale may determine whether the former agent is due a commission. In one case, the former agent was not entitled to commissions where the sales closed after the agent had been terminated and each listing had expired by its terms before a sales contract had been executed and before the property had been sold. In each instance, a new and separate listing agreement had been obtained by another agent affiliated with the broker and the sale was made under the new listing. None of the new listing agreements referred to any renewal of an earlier agreement. n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Deer Run Properties, L.L.C. v. Keys to the Lake Lodgings, Co., L.L.C., 2010 Mo. App. LEXIS 519, at *9 (Apr. 26, 2010) Maxwell v. Michael P. Doyle, Inc., 164 N.C. App. 319, 324, 595 S.E.2d 759, 762 (N.C. Ct. App. 2004) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Howell v. Steffey, 204 A.2d 695, 696 (D.C. 1964) ; Blake v. Gunkey, 88 Kan. 272, 274, 128 P. 181, 182 (Kan. 1912) ; Drew v. Maxim, 150 Me. 322, 324-25, 110 A.2d 602, 604 (Me. 1954) ; De Benedictis v. Gerechoff, 134 N.J. Super. 238, 242-43, 339 A.2d 225, 228 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1975) ; Maxwell v. Michael P. Doyle, Inc., 164 N.C. App. 319, 324-325, 595 S.E.2d 759, 762-763 (N.C. Ct. App. 2004) . See generally Perovich, Annot., Construction of Agreement Between Real-Estate Agents to Share Commissions, 71 A.L.R.3d 586 (1976).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Puckett v. Burris, 2009 Tex. App. LEXIS 9056, at *36 (Tex. App. Nov. 24, 2009) , pet. for review filed (Jan. 12, 2010).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Overseas Dev. Disc Corp. v. Sangamo Constr. Co., 840 F.2d 1319, 1332 (7th Cir. 1988) , applying Illinois law; Sven Salen AB v. Jacq. Pierot, Jr., & Sons, Inc., 559 F. Supp. 503, 506 (S.D. N.Y. 1983) , aff'd without opinion, 738 F.2d 419 (2d Cir. 1984) , applying New York law (dicta); Valdina v. Martin, 47 A.D.3d 1159, 1160, 849 N.Y.S.2d 364, 365, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 371 (2008) William T. Bell & Assocs., LLP v. Pyramid Brokerage Co., 281 A.D.2d 943, 721 N.Y.S.2d 893, 894, 2001 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 2759 (N.Y. App. Div. 2001) ; White v. Robinson, 153 App. Div. 776, 777, 1912 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 9361, 1912 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 11266, 138 N.Y.S. 992, 993 (N.Y. App. Div. 1912) ; Chears v. Robert A. Young & Associates, Inc., 49 N.C. App. 674, 677, 272 S.E.2d 402, 404 (N.C. Ct. App. 1980) . Perovich, Annot., Construction of Agreement Between Real-Estate Agents to Share Commissions, 71 A.L.R.3d 586, 606-10 (1976).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Young v. Wardley Corporation, 182 P.3d 412, 415-416, 2008 UT App 104 .

(n6)Footnote 4.1. See Deer Run Props., L.L.C. v. Keys to the Lake Lodgings, Co., L.L.C., 2010 Mo. App. LEXIS 519, at *5-*9 (Apr. 26, 2010) ; Valdina v. Martin, 47 A.D.3d 1159, 1160, 849 N.Y.S.2d 364, 365 (2008) ; Geoffrey S. Matherson & Associates, Ltd. v. Calderone, 190 Misc. 2d 775, 739 N.Y.S.2d 876, 877 (2001) . See also McCombs v. Moss, 121 Ark. 533, 536, 181 S.W. 907, 908 (Ark. 1916) (Where a sale of real estate is made by an agent with the assistance of a sub-agent under an agreement to divide the commissions with him, such sub-agent is not entitled to recover the commission from the seller since there is no privity of contract between them.).

(n7)Footnote 5. Cf. Goodale v. Langenberg, 243 S.W.3d 575, 582-83 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2007) (agent properly found to be an independent contractor), appeal denied, 2007 Tenn. LEXIS 1063 (Tenn. Nov. 19, 2007) .

(n8)Footnote 6. See Dowlen v. Weathers, 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 289, at *4 (May 17, 2005) (agent awarded treble damages for the broker's inducement of breach of contract when the broker released the client from liability for the agent's commission).

(n9)Footnote 7. See Smith v. Johnston, 73 Ill. App. 3d 601, 603, 29 Ill. Dec. 409, 391 N.E.2d 1092, 1094 (1979) .

(n10)Footnote 8. See Citigroup Realty, Inc. v. Valdes, 8 So. 3d 383, 385 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2009) (general rule is that employee is entitled to commissions earned during employment, but collected after termination and noting three exceptions to this rule).

(n11)Footnote 9. See Braden v. Isabell K. Horsley Real Estate, Ltd., 245 Va. 11, 14, 425 S.E.2d 481, 482 (1993) .

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

103 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation
 CHAPTER 4 The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation*

10-4 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 4.13§ 4.13 Illustrative Forms[1] Introduction

This section provides examples of pleadings and other trial materials. Set out below is an illustrative complaint in an action alleging that defendant induced the breach of a brokerage agreement. n1 Section 4.13[3] sets out an illustrative complaint in an action where the principal repudiated a brokerage agreement, pleading alternative causes of action in addition to that of the mere repudiation. Section 4.11[4] provides examples of opening statements by both the plaintiff's and defendants' counsel in an action for a broker's commission, and Section 4.11[5] sets out a plaintiff--broker's requested charge to the jury in an action for a brokerage commission.

[2] Complaint in Action for Inducing Breach of Contract Complaint in Action for Inducing Breach of Contract

COURT OF THE STATE OF COUNTY OF

_____	)
AUTREFOIS ASSOCIATES, INC.,	)
Plaintiff,	)
	)
-against-	)
INFINITIVE REALTY CO., INC. and	)
JISMO & JISMO, a Partnership,	)
Defendants.	)
_____	)

Plaintiff, for its complaint, by and, its attorneys, alleges as follows:

AS AND FOR A FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION

FIRST: At all times herein mentioned, plaintiff was, and now is, a domestic corporation.

SECOND: Upon information and belief, at all times herein mentioned the defendant Infinitive Realty Co., Inc. (hereinafter called Infinitive) was, and now is, a domestic corporation.

THIRD: At all times hereinafter mentioned, plaintiff was, and now is, regularly engaged in business as a real estate broker and was, and now is, duly licensed as such broker.

FOURTH: In and about the month of, 19.... the defendant Infinitive employed the plaintiff to procure a tenant for certain real property owned by Infinitive, then located at Street and Avenue, in the Borough of, City of FIFTH: Infinitive promised and agreed to pay the plaintiff for its services [here, state the agreed percentages relative to the rentals under the lease procured].

SIXTH: The plaintiff procured a tenant for said property, to wit, Iago Realty Corp., a nominee of Othello Mfg. Co., and on or about, 19....., a lease for said property for a term of 5 years from, 19, was duly made between the said Infinitive, as landlord, and said Iago Realty Corp., as tenant, which lease reserved a rental of $..... per annum.

SEVENTH: The commission earned by the plaintiff under plaintiff's engagement above alleged is $..... which said sum is also the reasonable value of the work, labor and services performed by the plaintiff for the defendant.

EIGHTH: By reason of the premises, there is now due and owing from Infinitive to the plaintiff the sum of $....., with interest thereon, no part of which has been paid, although duly demanded.

AS AND FOR A SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION

NINTH: Plaintiff repeats and re-alleges as part of this cause of action each and every allegation contained in paragraphs 'FIRST' to 'SEVENTH', inclusive, as if herein re-alleged in full.

TENTH: Upon information and belief, at all times herein mentioned the defendant Jismo & Jismo was a partnership having an office for the transaction of business at Avenue, Borough of, and was regularly engaged in business as a real estate broker and was, and now is, duly licensed as such broker.

ELEVENTH: Upon information and belief, the defendant Jismo & Jismo, with intent to deprive the plaintiff of its commissions and to induce the defendant Infinitive to breach its agreement of employment with the plaintiff hereinabove alleged, fraudulently caused Infinitive to conspire with the defendant Jismo & Jismo that any knowledge of the progress and course of the negotiations in the making and consummation of the aforesaid lease with said Iago Realty Corp. should be withheld from the plaintiff; that Infinitive should execute and deliver said lease without the knowledge of the plaintiff and that upon the making of the lease, Infinitive should without the knowledge of the plaintiff pay the commission to the defendant Jismo & Jismo each of the defendants well knowing that it was the plaintiff and not the defendant Jismo & Jismo who had been hired by Infinitive to procure a tenant for the property hereinabove alleged and that it was the plaintiff and not the defendant Jismo & Jismo who had procured the tenant hereinabove mentioned for said property.

TWELFTH: Upon information and belief, in pursuance of the fraudulent conspiracy hereinabove alleged, Infinitive paid said commissions to the defendant Jismo & Jismo without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiff.

THIRTEENTH: No commission has been paid to the plaintiff by the defendants or any of them, though due demand has been made by the plaintiff for the commission earned by plaintiff, as above alleged.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff demands judgment in the sum of $, with interest from, 19.....

(a) against the defendant Infinitive hereinabove described on the first cause of action, and

(b) against the defendant Jismo & Jismo on the second cause of action, together with costs and disbursements of this action

..... &

Attorneys for Plaintiff

Office & P.O. Address:

.....

.....

(Verification)

[a] Complaint in Action for Tortious Interference With Broker's Contract--Another Form Complaint in Action for Tortious Interference With Broker's Contract--Another Form

Attorney for Plaintiff

....., INC. REALTORS	)
[Plaintiff-Broker]	)	SUPERIOR
Plaintiff	)	COURT OF
v.	)	NEW JERSEY
..... and, his Wife [sellers] and	)	LAW DIVISION
..... [Purchaser]	)
Defendants	)	 COUNTY
	)	DOCKET NO.
	)
	)	CIVIL ACTION
	)	COMPLAINT
	)	AND JURY DEMAND
	)

Plaintiff, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of New Jersey with its principal place of business located at Street, in the Borough of, County of, State of New Jersey says:

FIRST COUNT

1. During all the times hereinafter mentioned, Plaintiff was and is a duly licensed real estate broker, engaged in such business in County, New Jersey.
2. On 19, at, New Jersey, the Defendants, ... [sellers], entered into a written agreement with the Plaintiff for good and valuable consideration whereby the Defendants, ... [sellers], retained the services of the Plaintiff as exclusive sales agent for the purpose of selling the property of Defendants, ... [sellers], at Road in the Township of, County of, State of New Jersey, also known as lot No. on Block No. of the tax map of the aforesaid municipality. A true copy of the agreement is annexed hereto and made a part hereof, marked Exhibit "A."
3. The aforementioned agreement provides inter alia that Plaintiff is entitled to a commission in the amount of 6% of the selling price if the property of the Defendants, ... [Sellers], is sold between, 19....., and, 19.... or if the property is sold within six(6) months after, 19, to parties who have been shown the said property during the term of the agreement.
4. In accordance with the terms of the agreement and in reliance thereon, Plaintiff proceeded to extensively advertise the property of the Defendants, ... [Sellers], for sale to the general public and to other real estate brokers, and Plaintiff continually made every feasible effort to obtain a purchaser for said property.
5. During the term of the agreement between Plaintiff and Defendants, ... [Sellers], said property was shown to Defendant, ... [Purchaser], a prospective purchaser.
6. During the term of the agreement between Plaintiff and Defendants, ... [Sellers], Defendant, ... [Purchaser], made several offers to purchase the subject property, ultimately offering to purchase said property for $ 00.
7. Plaintiff participated in the negotiating process between Defendants, ... [Sellers] and Defendant, ... [Purchaser]. All Defendants were at all times aware of Plaintiff's participation.
8. Defendants, ... [Sellers] rejected Defendant's, ... [Purchaser] offers to purchase their property.
9. Subsequently, during the six (6) month period referred to in Paragraph 3 above and, more specifically, on, 198....., Defendants, ... [Sellers], sold their property to Defendant, ... [Purchaser], entering into a binding and enforceable contract of sale for the price of $ 00.
10. Plaintiff has become entitled to a commission for its services pursuant to the agreement between Plaintiff and Defendants, ... [Sellers], and has duly demanded the same from the Defendants,

_____[Sellers].

11. Defendants, _____[Sellers], have not paid such commission nor any part thereof.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff demands judgment against the Defendants, _____[Sellers], in accordance with the terms of their agreement together with interest thereon and costs of suit.

SECOND COUNT

1. Plaintiff repeats the allegations of the First Count herein in their entirety.

2. The course of conduct of Defendants, _____[Sellers], as alleged above represents a tortious, intentional interference with the Plaintiff's business opportunity to earn a commission as a licensed real estate broker.

3. The course of conduct of Defendants, _____[Sellers], as alleged above, represents a knowing and willful attempt by Defendants, _____[Sellers], to defraud Plaintiff of monies due to Plaintiff.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff demands judgment against Defendants, _____[Sellers], for damages and punitive damages, interest and costs of suit.

THIRD COUNT

1. Plaintiff repeats the allegations of the FIRST COUNT herein in their entirety.

2. The Defendants, _____[Sellers], and the Defendant, _____[Purchaser], for the purpose of interfering with Plaintiff's business opportunity to earn a commission and in an attempt to defraud Plaintiff of monies due Plaintiff, conspired and agreed between themselves to conduct negotiations in secret, as far as Plaintiff was concerned.

3. Defendants, _____[Sellers], and Defendant, _____[Purchaser], conspired and agreed to consummate the sale of the subject property in such a fashion as to avoid the payment of a commission to Plaintiff.

4. The sale of the property of Defendants, _____[Sellers], to Defendant, _____[Purchaser], has been consummated and no commission has been paid to Plaintiff.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff demands judgment against Defendants, _____[Sellers] and Defendant, _____[Purchaser], jointly and severally, for damages and punitive damages, interest and costs of suit.

JURY DEMAND

Plaintiff demands trial by jury of twelve (12) persons.

.....

Attorney for Plaintiff

Date

Attorneys for Defendants--Third-Party Plaintiffs

	)
	)	SUPERIOR
	)	COURT OF
	)	NEW JERSEY
	)	LAW DIVISION
Plaintiff, INC., REALTORS,	)
[Plaintiff-Broker]	)	 COUNTY
vs.	)
Defendants-Third-Party Plaintiffs, ... and	)	Docket No.
..... his wife [Sellers] and Defendant,	)
....., [Purchaser]	)
vs.	)	CIVIL ACTION
Third-Party Defendants, LMN REAL ESTATE and	)	ANSWER
XYZ REAL ESTATE	)	AND
	)	THIRD-PARTY
	)	COMPLAINT
	)

FIRST COUNT

1. Defendants do not possess knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the allegations of Paragraph 1 of the First Count and, therefore, leave plaintiff to their proofs.
2. Defendants admit the allegations of Paragraph 2 of the First Count.
3. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 3 of the First Count.
4. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 4 of the First Count.
5. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 5 of the First Count.
6. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 6 of the First Count.
7. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 7 of the First Count.
8. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 8 of the First Count.

9. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 9 of the First Count.
10. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 10 of the First Count.
11. Defendants admit the allegations of Paragraph 11 of the First Count.

WHEREFORE, defendants, _____[Sellers], demand judgment against plaintiff dismissing the Complaint, together with attorneys' fees and costs of suit.

SECOND COUNT

1. Defendants repeat their answers to the First Count.
2. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 2 of the second Count.
3. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 3 of the second Count.

WHEREFORE, defendants, _____[Sellers], demand judgment against plaintiff dismissing the Complaint, together with attorneys' fees and costs of suit.

THIRD COUNT

1. Defendants repeat their answers to the First and Second Counts.
2. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 2 of the Third Count.
3. Defendants deny the allegations of Paragraph 3 of the Third Count.
4. Defendants admit the allegations of Paragraph 4 of the Third Count.

WHEREFORE, defendants, _____[Sellers], demand judgment against plaintiff dismissing the Complaint, together with attorneys' fees and cost of suit.

FIRST SEPARATE DEFENSE

The Complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

SECOND SEPARATE DEFENSE

Defendants _____[Sellers] have paid all real estate commissions due on the sale of their property to the proper real estate brokers.

THIRD SEPARATE DEFENSE

The "trailer clause" in the plaintiff's agreement expired prior to the sale of the property owned by defendants, _____[Sellers].

FOURTH SEPARATE DEFENSE

Plaintiff did not introduce defendant, _____[Purchaser], to the property owned by defendants _____[Sellers].

FIFTH SEPARATE DEFENSE

Defendants _____[Sellers] acted at all times relevant to this action in a proper and reasonable manner.

SIXTH SEPARATE DEFENSE

The "trailer clause" in the plaintiff's agreement is unconscionable.

THIRD-PARTY COMPLAINT

Defendants and Third-Party Plaintiffs, _____[Sellers], by way of Third-Party Complaint against LMN REAL ESTATE and XYZ REAL ESTATE say:

FIRST COUNT

1. Third-Party plaintiffs, _____[Sellers], sold their property located _____, _____ Township, _____ County, New Jersey to defendant, _____[Purchaser], on _____, 19

2. Following this sale, Third-Party Plaintiffs, _____[Sellers], paid all real estate commissions due. Commissions in the amount of $ 00 were paid to the defendant-purchaser's real estate broker and Third Party Defendant XYZ REAL ESTATE and commission in the amount of $.....00 to Third-Party Defendant LMN REAL ESTATE, the Defendant-Third-Party Plaintiffs' real estate broker.

3. Therefore, if Defendants-Third-Party Plaintiffs _____[Sellers] are found to be liable to Plaintiff, then Third-Party Defendants LMN REAL ESTATE and XYZ REAL ESTATES are required to indemnify Defendant-Third-Party Plaintiffs.

WHEREFORE, Defendant-Third-Party Plaintiffs _____[Sellers] demand judgment against Third-Party Defendants LMN REAL ESTATE and XYZ REAL ESTATE for indemnification together with attorneys' fees and costs of suit.

Attorneys for Defendants

.....

Third-Party Plaintiffs

..... and

By:.....

For the Firm

Dated:.....

[3] Complaint in Action Where Principal Repudiates Before Written Agreement of Sale Executed n2
Complaint in Action Where Principal Repudiates Before Written Agreement of Sale Executed

..... COURT OF THE STATE OF
COUNTY OF

_____	)
.....	)
Plaintiff,	)
	)
-against-	)
.....	)
Defendants.	)
	)

* * *

PLAINTIFF'S ORIGINAL PETITION

* * *

TO THE HONORABLE JUDGE OF SAID COURT:

COMES NOW, ..., hereinafter called "Plaintiff," complaining of, (hereinafter called "....."), ..., (hereinafter called "....."), ..., (hereinafter called "....."), which are hereinafter collectively called "Defendants," unless they are specifically addressed by their name.

PARTIES, JURISDICTION AND VENUE

PARTIES

1. Plaintiff, ..., is an individual, who resides and conducts business in, County, ...
2. Defendant, ..., is an individual doing business at and may be served with process at that address.
3. Defendant, ..., is an individual doing business at and may be served with process at that address.

4. Defendant, ..., is an individual doing business at and may be served with process at that address.

JURISDICTION

All parties are domiciliaries of or each defendant is subject to the jurisdiction of due to sufficient contacts which are the basis of this action. All or part of the complained of transactions occurred in and the amount in controversy exceeds the Court's minimum jurisdiction and Plaintiffs are suing under the common laws and statutes of

VENUE

Venue. Venue is mandatory and proper in the above county pursuant to the Civil Practice and Remedies Code, Sections where: all or part of the causes of action accrued; in which all parties reside as a result of their minimum contacts, business activities, tortious conduct and torts occurred. The following Paragraphs regarding factual background, causes of action and damages are specifically incorporated herein by reference.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

At all times mentioned herein Plaintiff was, and now is, regularly engaged in business as a real estate broker, and was, and is now duly licensed under the laws of the State of, as a real estate broker. On or about, Defendant, ..., by and through, as agent, officer and director of employed Plaintiff to act as a real estate broker and agreed to pay real estate broker's commission by executing an enforceable agreement, a true copy of which is attached and incorporated herein as Exhibit "A." According to the Commission Agreement, Plaintiff was to assist in the acquisition of certain nursing home facilities located within the state of, More particularly, these facilities are known as the (herein after referred to as the "properties"). All of the properties were owned by Defendants.

Defendants promised and agreed to pay the Plaintiff two percent (2%) of the final sales price for the above properties for his professional services. Plaintiff, presented the above properties to Defendant. After extensive negotiations, Defendant acting as agent, officer and director for Defendants executed a contract to purchase the properties from, the seller procured by Plaintiff, for $

The two percent (2%) commission earned by the Plaintiff under Plaintiff's engagement above is $ Said sum is also the reasonable value of the work, labor and services performed by the Plaintiff for the Defendants.

During the negotiation of the sale of the properties from June 1990 through late 1994 Plaintiff provided professional assistance and had numerous conversations with Defendant regarding the sale of the properties and utilized Plaintiff's facilities in County, ... During these negotiations Defendant represented to Plaintiff that the sale of the properties was forthcoming and that Defendant would keep Plaintiff informed as to all material developments relating to the sale of the properties. During these conversations the Defendants that the acquisition of the properties from the seller would take place and the commission would be paid to Plaintiff. Plaintiff relied at all times stated herein on these representations.

On or about August 9, 1994 Plaintiff had a further conversation with Defendant during which Defendant represented to Plaintiff that the seller had agreed to sell the properties and that Defendant would forward a copy of the contract to Plaintiff once the written agreement was signed. Defendant instructed Plaintiff that Plaintiff did not need to do anything else to assist in the transaction. Plaintiff and Defendant had several additional conversations, during each of which Defendant made representations that the acquisition of the properties from the seller that Plaintiff produced would, in fact, take place.

Plaintiff made numerous offers to assist Defendant in the required formalities of the acquisition of the properties, but was assured by Defendant that everything was proceeding forward without delay. On or about November 16, 1994 Defendant had a telephone conversation with Plaintiff at Plaintiff's Houston office, Defendant informed Plaintiff that a $50,000.00 earnest money contract had been signed with the seller for the acquisition of the properties. Subsequent to this conversation Plaintiff faxed a copy of the May 4, 1990 agreement to Defendant's office. During a subsequent phone conversation Defendant stated that he had received the fax and that he would discuss the matter with Plaintiff at a subsequent date. After this Defendant failed to respond to any additional requests from Plaintiff for information regarding the sale of the properties. (See the Agreement of Purchase and Sale of Assets which is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit "B"). Defendants used this material omission to intentionally deceive Plaintiff.

On or about December 1, 1994 [other broker] called Plaintiff and attempted to convince Plaintiff that Plaintiff did not have any right to the commission from the sale of the properties. During this conversation [other broker] revealed to Plaintiff that [other broker] had been working with Defendants in an attempt to obtain the commission for the sale of the properties. Plaintiff is informed and believes that Defendants collectively, knowingly and maliciously entered in to a conspiracy to attempt to deprive Plaintiff his right to a commission from the sale of the properties.

By reason of the premises, there is now due and owing from Defendants to the Plaintiff the sum of at least $ with interest thereon, no part of which has been paid, although duly demanded.

CAUSES OF ACTION

The following causes of action are based upon and grow out of the factual background and complaints aforementioned which were and continue to be the proximate or producing causes of the damages aforementioned.

I.

BREACH OF CONTRACT

Contract. Defendants became obligated to perform the contractual duties set out herein. Plaintiff, having performed all of its prerequisites and contractual duties, is entitled to all benefits of the bargain from Defendant.

Defendant has failed to provide all entitled consideration pursuant to its contract with Plaintiff as set out herein.

Damages. Plaintiff is entitled to recover all damages and all benefits of the bargain as set forth at length herein, plus recovery of attorneys' fees, costs and expenses as requested in the subject contract and applicable law.

II.

TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE WITH CONTRACT

A. Interference. By the aforementioned intentional unlawful acts, omissions and conspiracy of [other broker], set forth herein, Defendants thereby breached their legal duties to Plaintiff by tortiously interfering with contractual benefits belonging or potentially belonging to Plaintiff, thereby proximately damaging Plaintiff.

Plaintiff asserts that [other broker] tortiously interfered with:

1. Plaintiff's binding written contract;
2. That such interference was willful and intentional because said contract was known to [other broker] in whole or generally;
3. By actively inducing the breach by persuasion, defamation, fraud or other unlawful means;
4. Thereby proximately damaging Plaintiff without justification or privilege.

B. Damages. As a proximate result of [other broker]' interference and conversion, Plaintiff has been damaged and prays for recovery as set forth below.

III.

CONVERSION

A. Duty, Breach and Proximate Cause. Defendants had a duty to protect and preserve Plaintiff's property and property rights and/or had a duty to not unreasonably interfere with Plaintiff's property, property interests, use and benefits of Plaintiff's property and rights. As set out herein, Defendants' intentional acts amount to an unlawful exercise of dominion and control over property rights, uses and benefits adverse to Plaintiff's rights and interest. Defendants' acts are tantamount to one or more of the following wrongful acts: wrongful acquisition, wrongful transfer, wrongful detention, without right or permission substantially changing or withhold Plaintiff's property and keeping the consideration of sale or transfer and/or severely damaging or destroying and/or misusing Plaintiff's property and property rights. Said acts constitute serious interference with Plaintiff's property and property rights, use and benefits.

Defendants had a duty to protect Plaintiff's property and to account for all the money and property including mutations thereof, and interest, income and increases therefrom that Defendant received from or for the benefit of Plaintiff and to deliver the profits due and property of Plaintiff to Plaintiff, to allow Plaintiff to use unfettered, its property and goodwill; to allow Plaintiff the exclusive use and benefits of its property and goodwill. By Defendants' serious interference or the consequences thereof, Defendants converted the foregoing for Defendants' own use and benefit thereby proximately damaging Plaintiff.

B. Damages. As a proximate result of Defendants' conversion of the foregoing property, Plaintiff has been deprived of the use and benefit of such property by the assertion, dominion and control over them by Defendants for which Plaintiff should be compensated in the actual and equivalent value of said property at the time and place of conversion and an accounting of the benefits unlawfully received by Defendants. In addition to entitled monetary damages, Plaintiff requests replevin of all of Plaintiff's property, mutations thereof and interest, income and increases therefrom and other consequential property rights, uses and benefits or their equivalent value at the time Defendants acquired Plaintiff's property or the present value which ever is higher, and such other damages set forth below to which Plaintiff may show itself entitled.

IV.

CIVIL CONSPIRACY

Defendants combined to unlawfully deprive Plaintiff of his right to receive a commission for the sale of the properties. Defendants made numerous material misrepresentations to Plaintiff and withheld information in an effort to deprive Plaintiff of his commission. Further, Defendants, in an effort to illegally deprive Plaintiff of his commission refused to allow Plaintiff access to, or participation in, the closing of the properties so as to avoid their legal obligations to Plaintiff. As a direct and proximate result of the conduct of Defendants, Plaintiff has been damaged in that Defendants conspired to deceive Plaintiff so as to deprive him of commission for his professional services.

Defendants are jointly and severally liable for all claims and causes of action because Defendants acted in conspiracy to form an unlawful scheme or plan, and then Defendants intentionally acted in conspiracy with one or more of the other Defendants to further the conspiracy by performing the complained of unlawful acts against Plaintiff which proximately resulted in damage Plaintiff. The Defendants conspired with each other to acquire the business and property rights and advantages of Plaintiff and to circumvent their duties and debts to Plaintiff.

V.

NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION

Defendant made specific representations to plaintiff regarding the acquisition of the properties. More particularly, Defendant assured Plaintiff, as late as November of 1994, that the sale of the properties would take place and that a commission would be paid to Plaintiff. These representations were false and were made to Plaintiff at his office in response to Plaintiff's request for material information regarding the acquisition of the properties; Defendant did not exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information regarding the acquisition of the properties; and Plaintiff suffered damages as set forth below by justifiably relying on these representations.

VI.

FRAUD AND MISREPRESENTATION

Defendants made misrepresentations of past, present and/or future material facts or conditions as alleged herein, knowing their falsity or should have known they were false or made the statements with reckless disregard as to their truth or falsity intending, knowing or calculating that Plaintiff would act with reasonable reliance upon such misrepresentations. Defendant thereby induced Plaintiff to enter into the transactions and agreements described herein. Defendant knew or should have known at the time said statements were made that Plaintiff would not have entered into the transactions described herein had Plaintiff known that the statements were false or misleading.

Reliance and Causation. Plaintiff reasonably and actually relied upon said misrepresentations which played a substantial part in inducing Plaintiff to take the aforementioned action.

Damages. As a proximate result of said reliance, Plaintiff has been damaged and Defendant has unlawfully acquired Plaintiff's property by such false pretext and intentional malfeasance and is therefore entitled recover as set out herein, for which Plaintiff requests recovery.

VII.CONSTRUCTIVE OR RESULTING TRUST

A. Relationship. Defendants and their responsible employees, shareholders, officers and directors had a duty at law and in equity as a result of their contractual relationship with Plaintiff, confidential business relationship with Plaintiff, and/or as Plaintiff's trustee, fiduciary or property custodian, to act as reasonable and prudent people similarly situated and reposed with such trust, duty, authority and ability would have acted under the same or similar circumstances.

B. Trust Creation. By acting and failing to act when honest, fair, diligent and faithful duty required, Defendant took unreasonable and unlawful advantage of their superior, fiduciary or confidential relationship with Plaintiff. By committing the malfeasance and fraud complained of herein, said Defendants acquired Plaintiff's property, failed to give Plaintiff all benefits entitled and/or caused Plaintiff the losses, damages and injuries to Plaintiff's property under the asserted inequitable and unlawful circumstances and conditions described. Wherefore, by operation of law, an imputed constructive or resulting trust has been created and been impressed upon for the benefit of Plaintiff. The subject or res of the trust is Plaintiff's property, including mutations and increases thereof and income and interest therefrom.

VIII.STATUTORY VIOLATIONS

Defendants' conduct, as set forth above, violates the following sections of the Real Estate Fraud Statute _____[citation], and Plaintiff is entitled to damages as set out therein. Defendants' acts and omissions are per se violations of these statutes for which Plaintiff requests recovery in the maximum amount and benefit allowed and as set forth herein.

IX.ATTORNEYS' FEES

The undersigned attorney, by this pleading makes demand for performance and/or has or will have made demand on each Defendant by certified mail, return receipt requested, or as otherwise allowed by law, for all damages incurred by Plaintiff as alleged herein. Defendant has failed and refused to tender performance, cure or make the demanded payment and more than thirty (30) days will have elapsed since said demand and the time of judgment. Upon proof thereof, Plaintiff requests its costs of court and reasonable and necessary attorneys' fees, plus interest thereon, for which Plaintiff is entitled recovery for Defendant's breach of contract, or as punitive damages, or as otherwise may be shown to be entitled under contract rights, statute or common law at time of trial, including attorneys' fees, costs and expenses for contract defense, if any. The following will be shown: that this requesting party will be the prevailing party; that Plaintiff has been damaged by the opposing party's breach; that the undersigned has been hired to prosecute Plaintiff's rights growing out of that breach, and that Plaintiff is entitled to recover its attorneys' fees.

Without waiving the foregoing, to the extent that Plaintiff is entitled to recovery under contractual provisions mentioned in any contract referred to herein and/or as provided by any additional statute, Plaintiff requests recovery of all reasonable, necessary and allowed attorneys' fees.

X.

DAMAGES

Plaintiff seeks damages within the jurisdictional limits of the Court.

Actual Damages. In the amount of at least $

General Damages. To the extent Plaintiff is entitled to general damages, as a proximate or producing cause and the result of the malfeasance of Defendant, Plaintiff has suffered general damages in excess of the jurisdictional limits of this Court.

Consequential Damages. As a proximate result of the malfeasance enumerated herein, Plaintiff has and will suffer consequential damages.

Punitive Damages. Plaintiff alleges that the aforementioned malfeasance and breaches were intentional, fraudulent, willful, malicious, grossly negligent or showed wanton or conscious disregard for the rights of and duties owed to Plaintiff, and as such, Plaintiff is entitled to recover exemplary or punitive damages to deter future commission of similar wrongs in an amount of at least twenty (20) times the actual damages or as allowed by law since Plaintiff will prove an intentional tort, malice or other justifiable grounds, and to have the Court order Defendant to pay Plaintiff's attorney fees and all other expenses of litigation, because said fees and expenses were a foreseeable required remedial consequence of Defendants unjustified conduct.

XI.

DEMAND FOR JURY

Plaintiff hereby formally makes this demand and application for a jury trial in this litigation. The required fee has been paid.

XII.

PIERCING THE CORPORATE VEIL

The corporate veil of each corporate Defendant should be disregarded and the shareholders, directors and officers should be held liable for the acts and omissions of said corporations based upon the following grounds:

A. Alter Ego. There exists one or more of the following conditions with respect to each corporate Defendant which entitles Plaintiff to pierce their corporate veil:

1. Unity between corporation and individual is such that the corporation ceases to be separate.
2. Disregard of the corporate entity is necessary to promote justice.

3. Failure of the shareholders to maintain the corporation as a distinct legal entity.
4. Owners failure (neglect) to maintain the formal existence of the corporation as required by law.
5. Failure of the corporation to obey state law by maintaining corporate formalities.
7. Inadequate capitalization.
8. It would be unfair to the Claimant to allow the corporate and/or limited partnership status.
9. Corporate formalities have not been kept.
10. Corporate and individual property have not been kept separately.
11. There is an excessive amount of financial interest which is guiding the decisions of the limited partnership.
12. The corporation has been used for personal purposes.

B. Sham to Perpetrate a Fraud. There exists one or more of the following conditions:

1. Recognizing the separate corporation entity would bring about an inequitable result.
2. The facts will show constructive fraud.
3. There is or would be excessive reliance of the financial backing of the owners should the corporation become insolvent.
6. Corporate form is used to evade an existing obligation.
7. Corporate form is used as a protection of a crime or to justify a wrong.
8. An injustice or unfairness was done to the claimant caused by the corporation and its owners.

C. Illegal Purpose. Based upon the relationship between and among the corporation, its owners, officers, directors and the laws of the State and/or their purposes, which are unlawful, the separate corporate status of said corporation should be ignored.

D. Factual Basis. One or more of the foregoing grounds for piercing the corporate veil is justified based upon the alleged facts stated in the preceding sections.

XIII.

PRAYER

All conditions precedent have been performed or have occurred to entitle Plaintiff to recover as pled, wherefore, Plaintiff prays that:

1. Defendant be cited to appear and answer herein;
2. Judgment against each Defendant jointly and severally as above requested and for all relief requested by Plaintiff and for Plaintiff's attorneys and that in the event that an election of remedies is required that Plaintiff recover the maximum allowable and/or cumulative and/or alternative recovery authorized by law;
3. That in event any statute, code, or other legislative enactment upon which Plaintiff seeks relief is amended, revised, superseded, or in any way modified that this Honorable Court grant relief to Plaintiff based upon the controlling amended, revised, or superseded enactment or common law ruling which will provide Plaintiff with the maximum allowable recovery and rights;
4. Plaintiff be granted judgment for the recovery requested herein at least in the amount of $
..... ;
5. Plaintiff be granted judgment for prejudgment interest at the maximum allowable rate for the maximum allowable time through the date of judgment;
6. Plaintiff be granted judgment for attorneys' fees plus all allowed interest thereon;
7. Plaintiff be granted judgment for all costs of court and allowable expenses;
8. Plaintiff be granted attorneys fees for post-judgment discovery and collection services to recover the judgment in the amount of at least $
..... ; attorneys' fees in the event of appeal to the Court of Civil Appeals in the amount of at least $
..... ; attorneys' fees in the event of filing writ to the Supreme Court in the amount of at least $
..... ; and attorneys' fees in the event the writ to the Supreme Court is granted at least in the amount of $
..... ;
9. Plaintiff be granted judgment for the maximum allowable post-judgment interest on the total amount of the judgment including the attorneys fees from the date of judgment until paid;
10. Plaintiff be granted such other and further relief, special or general, legal or equitable as Plaintiff may show itself justly entitled to receive at time of trial.

Respectfully submitted,

.....

Attorneys for plaintiff

Office & P.O. Address:

.....

.....

(Verification)

[4] Illustrative Opening Statement to Jury in Action for Broker's Commission (Globerman v. Lederer) n3

[a] Plaintiff's Opening Statement

Mr. Green: May it please your Honor, ladies and gentlemen.

At this point our purpose is just in one direction, for each of us to tell you what we intend to prove. So, before we start putting witnesses on the stand to fill in the pattern, you will have a fair idea of what both sides contend.

In this case, as we mentioned before, Philip I. Globerman is suing these other people who are the Lederers. It is all one family. The Lederers, and Maass, their daughter.

He is suing them because he claims they owe him a brokerage, which is a payment made for getting a purchaser for property after he had been employed, after he had been told to find such a purchaser at a certain price.

He has not been paid. There is a controversy as to whether he should be paid, and the only way of resolving it is to be right here.

Now, what is the story? We go back to early July, 1951, last year. Mr Globerman is a real estate broker. He has been that for some 28 years. These brokers must all be licensed under the law.

Early in July he finds out that certain property, which is called Riverside Drive West, up at 158th Street is for sale. He finds out that the people who have it are the Lederers. The Lederers and Maass. I will call them by one name.

Mr. Globerman had some dealings on this property some eight or nine years before. About that.

So, he goes up to see Mr. Lederer, and he asks him, "Is it true that this is for sale?" Mr. Lederer tells him it is.

Now, at this point there is much which may be of little interest in the case. You see, the Lederers don't actually own these buildings. You have a situation like Rockefeller Center, or this new Lever Bros. building. The land is owned by a certain person. That person gives a lease, where you put up the building, so that the person who owns the lease owns the building, and he has a right to it for a certain number of years, and you pay the owner of the land a certain rent. So, if you, or I owned the property, and we lease it to somebody else, that other person pays the taxes, he pays the interest on the mortgage, he takes care of all the expenses, and you and I, we get a certain amount of every year as rent. It is what they call a net lease.

So, here the Lederers had this lease for the property, a lease where they were paying somebody $25,000 a year rent, and they themselves paid the taxes, the interest on the mortgage, mortgage expenses, and of course they took in all the rent.

This lease had until 1960 to run; about nine years. But, they also had a right to renew it later for another 21 years. So, you see, the one who bought it is not technically the owner of the property. He is the owner of the lease, which means that after paying all the expenses, he has the profit from this land, as if he were the owner.

So, when we talk here, we don't talk about selling property. We are going to talk about selling a lease. In effect, it is just what I tell you.

So, on July 10th, Mr. Globerman comes up to see Mr. Lederer; to Mr. Lederer's office. They do business under the name of Reredel Associates. Reredel is just the word Lederer spelled backwards. And, when Mr. Globerman asked Lederer if this leasehold, if this property is for sale, Lederer tells him it is. In fact, he has many brokers working on it. He himself will tell you about 150.

It was so much for sale that he had printed up mimeographed sheets giving you all the details, the price, the rentals, the expenses, and then he was giving it to brokers, whoever might be interested in getting a purchaser, and he gave those to this broker Globerman, and just the main thing which I will tell you, because you will see the sheets, it says, "We have a mortgage on the property now of $811,000," and he will sell it if he gets $300,000 in cash. That means you pay $300,000 in cash, and then when you take over the property, there is still a mortgage on it of $811,000. But the important term, which I will leave with you now, is Lederers wanted $300,000 cash for that property. As you will find, they have been trying to sell it through, as he would tell you, 150 brokers. And when Globerman was there, it had not yet been sold, and he told Globerman, "Go ahead; it is yours; sell it."

It is one of these propositions, sometimes you can work on for years, and sometimes, if you are lucky enough, you will get a purchaser.

Negotiations were had, on and off. Globerman got one prospective purchaser, two, three. He made different offers to Lederer, which were under $300,000. Lederer wouldn't budge. One of the people he was negotiating with was a Dr. Weinraub, a man of very extensive property interests.

We move along, and I will skip over all of Globerman's negotiations with his purchasers, and with Dr. Weinraub, and going back to Lederer, because not only did Lederer give him these details, but he had given him the floor plan, and we come to a Tuesday. These dates are important, and there are very few of them, so I will mention them.

We come to a Tuesday late in July. The date is July 24th; and Dr. Weinraub, who has been very much interested in this property, as he will tell you, has reached the point where he wanted it, if he could check on the further details, and he wanted the broker to give him more details on rentals, the rentals of each apartment, and Globerman, the broker, anxious to make a sale, comes back to Mr. Lederer, and he tells him that this man seems to be interested now in that price, and wants detailed statements of this, and on this Tuesday, July 24th, Mr. Lederer gets to work and copies all of these figures off himself. It took him a couple of hours.

I mention this to show you that on this day, whether he was anxious to sell at the price that he gave Globerman, the price he gave him in writing, because up to this point I don't want you to have to rely too much on anybody's word.

Mr. Lederer writes all this off, gave it to Globerman, Globerman rushes it back to his man. It is a case of where you see a person sometimes three or four times a day in order to make a sale, and by late that night his man authorizes him to go ahead, he wants to buy it for the $300,000. You see, they discussed that matter.

Mr. Lederer wanted ten per cent cash when you make the contract. "Be sure you have the purchase amount." It is a proper thing. So, this happened on Tuesday, July 24th.

The fact that Lederer gave him all this data, you will see all the writing. The fact that Globerman took it back to his man and got the acceptance after they examined it, and you will have all that here.

And the very next morning, on Wednesday, July 25th, Mr. Globerman is down to Mr. Lederer's office, and he is there to tell him, "We are ready to buy this; here is my purchaser; this is his name; this is his address; this is his attorney's name; ten per cent was to be paid on the contract."

Their closing was to be made in the usual time, thirty days afterward. Mr. Lederer writes it down. His attorney will get together with their attorney. This is Wednesday. It is agreed. Globerman reports to his purchaser.

Now, it is only fair to tell you at this stage I am giving you--at this point I am giving you our side, because they are going to dispute some of these things, and that will be for you to decide.

Globerman comes back Friday morning.

"Are you ready? I can have my doctor right down here."

It turns out Mr. Lederer never called the purchaser's lawyer and he says, "No, we won't sell. We don't want to give away our shirts. We changed our minds. We now want $400,000."

And, with that, he gives Globerman a new printed sheet on which you will see is the same thing that he gave him weeks before, except, instead of $300,000, it is $400,000.

We will show you that where they couldn't sell that property for $300,000, as they say, with 150 brokers, we gave them a purchaser for $300,000. We are the only ones who did. And then, when they saw they could get that, and after this broker had made a deal, one of these things you are lucky to have one in five years, they then changed their minds, and instead of $300,000 they said they wanted $400,000.

That was no deal to us. We say we complied with everything. We complied with the arrangement to get a purchaser for $300,000 which was their agreement with us, and on that basis we are entitled to the commission.

The commission is what? Where you agree to be bound by the rates, it is what the New York Real Estate Board puts out; whatever that is. We say it is about $21,000.

Now, we will prove to you the fact that they engaged us. A lot of these things we will prove through the words of Mr. Lederer where we examined him. We will prove that we brought him this purchaser. We brought them the offer of purchase; that the man we offered to purchase was ready. We will prove that he was able to buy it, and as the best proof of that, we will show you that later they did make a deal, some months later they gave him a deed to this very property, to our man's corporation, for a much higher price, which shows you that our man was not only able to buy it on the $300,000 basis, but able to buy it on a much higher basis, which he then paid for it.

Ladies and gentlemen, we will prove these facts to you.

On that basis we will ask you to give us a verdict for the payment we should have had, to which we were entitled, except for the fact that they, after seeing that we brought them a purchaser for their price, then at the last minute decided instead of $300,000, now that they had a buyer, "Maybe we won't sell. Maybe we can get more. Now we want $400,000."

But, that is no excuse not to sell the property to us. We did everything to earn the money we are suing for, and we will ask you to give us a recovery.

[b] Defendant's Opening Statement

(Mr. Goldstein thereupon opened to the jury as follows:)

Mr. Goldstein: May it please the Court, ladies and gentlemen of the jury.

As I listened to my adversary, one would think that there is no reason for the defendant to be here.

Now, of course, we are here because there is a real controversy. Our version of the transaction differs from what Mr. Green has outlined to you. Because of that controversy, because of that difference, we are here, and our contention is of course that the plaintiff is entitled to no recovery; to nothing.

We feel that the evidence that we have is convincing on that point. And we hope that after you have listened to the evidence which the defendant will adduce, that you will likewise feel the same way and agree with us.

Our contention is that the plaintiff did not produce any customer on July 25th. In one of the legal papers that the plaintiff signed in this action he said he produced a customer on July 25, 1951.

We will adduce evidence to show that on that particular day that he came to the defendants and pleaded for more time; pleaded for time for his customer, because his customer couldn't make the deal. His customer had to rearrange his finances, and he asked the Lederers to take this property off the market, so that he could arrange with his customer to rearrange his financing.

As a matter of fact, on that day the plaintiff was told nothing like that would be done; that the defendants wouldn't keep this property off the market for anybody, and that the price was being changed to $400,000; and he was given a mimeographed offering showing the change in the price.

Now, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I wish you would bear in mind the dates here, because they are vitally important, particularly the date of July 25, 1951.

To support the defendants' contentions, you will hear from two of the defendants who dealt with the plaintiff. There will also be corroborating testimony by the defendants' bookkeeper, all of which we feel sustains our position, and we hope after you have listened to them, you will agree with us.

Before I conclude, I might just refer to an anecdote of an Eastern Potentate who was trying cases and who listened to the plaintiff, and turned around to the majordomo and said, "I decide for the plaintiff," and then the majordomo said to the Potentate, "Now you have to listen to the defendant."

He said, "Very well, bring the defendant up."

So, he listened to the defendant, and then decided for the defendant, and he turned around to the majordomo and said, "Now, hereafter, I only want to hear one side of the case. Two sides confuse me."

Now, all I ask you to do, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, is to keep an open mind in this lawsuit. You are going to hear the plaintiff first. Reserve your judgment until you have had an opportunity to hear the defendant's version of the transaction.

[5] Illustrative Requests by Plaintiff to Charge--Action for Broker's Commission

1. The plaintiff contends that the defendant acting through its president, Mr. Jones, promised to buy the plaintiff a 6% commission calculated on the purchase price if the plaintiff would procure a purchaser for premises Avenue, ..., on certain terms given to the plaintiff by Mr. Jones. This the plaintiff contends occurred in March of 1982. If you find that the defendant's president, Mr. Jones, made such promise, then the defendant employed the plaintiff to sell that property.

2. Plaintiff contends that the terms given to him by the defendant's president, Mr. Jones, were the following: Purchase price, $100,000 with $35,000 cash and a mortgage of $65,000 for three years at an interest rate of 13% per annum; amortization of 3% per annum, with the balance payable at maturity, the interest and amortization to be payable monthly. The plaintiff further contends that he procured one, Mr. Harold Caster to meet those terms and that he so notified the defendant, but that the defendant then refused to go forward with the deal. If you find, as the plaintiff contends, that he did what he was supposed to do and procured Mr. Caster to meet the terms just mentioned and so notified the defendant but the defendant refused to go forward, then the plaintiff procured a sale to be made on the defendant's terms. n4

3. It is not necessary for Mr. Caster to have made a written contract with the defendant in order for the plaintiff to recover. If the purchaser procured by the plaintiff, that is Mr. Caster, orally met the terms given by the defendant to the plaintiff and then the defendant refused to go through with the deal, the plaintiff is nevertheless entitled to recover. n5

4. It is not necessary that Mr. Jones in the terms given by him to the plaintiff should have specified the closing date or the down payment, that is to say, the amount to be paid on the contract. If you find that the defendant stopped the progress of the deal so that the parties were never able to work out these details, the plaintiff may nevertheless recover. n6

5. Mr. Caster, according to the plaintiff, was prepared to make a contract immediately, to pay 10% of the purchase price on the signing of the contract and to take title in thirty days and that he was prepared to make any reasonable changes in these terms that the defendant asked for, and that he told all this to Mr. Jones who offered no dissent. If you so find, then the defendant, by interrupting the progress of the deal, cannot now insist that the terms stated by Mr. Caster were not agreeable to it. n7

6. The purchaser must be a financially able party. n8 This means that it had the means to meet the down payment of 10% of the purchase price of $100,000, namely, $10,000, on or about April 12, 1982, and that as to the balance of cash, that is $25,000, it had the means to meet this thirty days later. If you find that Mr. Caster had these means, then he was financially able to close the deal (Globerman v. Lederer, 281 App. Div. 39, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3061 (1st Dept., 1952)) .

7. If you find for the plaintiff, he is entitled to recover the full agreed commission of $6,000.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 4.13[2] below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 4.02 above

(n3)Footnote 3. Taken from the record in Globerman v. Lederer, 281 A.D. 39, 117 N.Y.S. 549 (1st Dept. 1952).

(n4)Footnote 4. Tanenbaum v. Boehm, 202 N.Y. 293, 95 N.E. 708 (1911) . See § 4.02[1] above

(n5)Footnote 5. Id

(n6)Footnote 6. Mengel v. Lawrence, 276 A.D. 180, 1949 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3139 (1st Dept. 1949) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Id.; Ostroff v. Doctor, 238 N.Y. 264 (1924) ; Rees v. Gair, 144 A.D. 294, 1911 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1690 (2d Dept. 1911) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See generally ch. 5 below

* This chapter was revised by Charles J. Jacobus, Esq., a partner in the firm of Jacobus, Boltz & Melamed, L.L.P., Houston, Texas. In 1999, Sections 4.01 through 4.03 were revised by Mary Fallon, Esq. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq.

104 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 5 The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

10-5 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 5.syn

§ 5.syn Synopsis to Chapter 5: The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

§ 5.01 Broker Commission Hinges on Presenting Purchaser Who Is Ready, Willing and Able to Complete Transaction on Seller's Terms

§ 5.02 Purchaser Must Be Ready, Willing and Able to Complete Transaction

[1] "Able" Purchaser Commands Necessary Funds

[2] Modern View Weighs Several Factors to Determine Financial Ability

[3] Courts May Examine Personal Information to Determine Purchaser's Ability to Complete Transaction

[a] Determination May Be Highly Subjective

[b] Decisions Lack Uniformity

[4] Financial Ability May Depend on Commitment of Funds from Third Parties

[a] Financial Ability May Be Based on Complex Funding

[b] Third Parties Must Be Under Legal Obligation to Provide Funds

[c] Family Loans Generally Do Not Support Determination of Financial Ability

[d] "Straw" Purchasers Must Be Financially Able to Complete Transaction

[5] Subsequent Purchases by Buyer Generally Considered Irrelevant to Show Financial Ability

§ 5.03 Broker May Be Required to Prove Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate Transaction

[1] Determination Depends on Several Factors Including Rule of Jurisdiction, Status of Parties' Agreement, and Which Party Defaulted

[a] Traditionally Financial Ability Presumed When Unconditional Sales Contract Is Executed

[b] Traditional Rule Based on "Acceptance" Doctrine

[2] Contract Must Be Binding and Enforceable

[a] Commission Earned When Conditions of Sales Contract Are Met

[b] Conditions to Sale May Be Implied

[3] Broker Must Offer Proof if Negotiations Are Not Finalized

[4] Traditional Rule Increasingly Subject to Exceptions

[5] Minority Rule Requires Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability Whenever Sale Is Not Consummated

[a] Minority View Neutralizes Harsh Effect of Acceptance Doctrine

[b] Broker Entitled to Commission Only if Transaction Fails Due to Seller's Wrongful Act

[6] Broker May Be Entitled to Commission Even in Absence of Sales Contract

§ 5.04 Seller May Waive Ready, Willing and Able Requirement

[1] Seller May Investigate Purchaser's Financial Ability

[2] Seller's Repudiation Prior to Contract Does Not Amount to Waiver

[a] Broker Must Prove Purchaser's Financial Ability

[b] Broker Must Prove That Performance Could Have Occurred but for Repudiation

[c] Determination Depends on Seller's Basis for Repudiation

§ 5.05 Broker Has Burden of Proving Financial Ability of Purchaser

[1] Determination Is Fact-Based

[2] Broker Must Show That Purchaser Is Ready, Willing and Able During Negotiations

[a] Seller May Reject Purchaser if Broker Fails to Provide Adequate Proof

[b] Seller May Accept Subsequent Purchaser Prior to Accepting First

[3] Testimony Regarding Purchaser's Ability May Be Presented at Trial

[a] Purchaser May Testify to Readiness, Willingness and Ability

[b] After Purchaser Testifies, Burden of Proof Shifts to Seller

[c] Financial Experts May Testify

§ 5.06 Courts May Consider the Seller's and Buyer's Negotiations Occurring After Expiration of Listing Agreement

§ 5.07 Practitioner Checklists

[1] Checklist for Representing Brokers

[2] Checklist for Representing the Owner

105 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 5 The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

10-5 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Scope

Scope

SCOPE

Chapter 5 discusses the "ready, willing and able" element of the general rule which states that a broker earns a commission by bringing to a property seller, a purchaser who is ready, willing and able to buy the property upon the terms the seller has prescribed, or when a written contract upon any terms acceptable to the seller has been entered into by the seller and a purchaser procured by the broker. In particular, Chapter 5 focuses on the able aspect.

The purchaser's ability to consummate the purchase has evolved over the years and the meaning of "able" has varied due to the changing patterns of real estate financing. Factors that enter into what constitutes a purchaser's ability are discussed in detail (§ 5.02) as is the evidence that a broker may have to produce in order to be entitled to his or her commission (§ 5.03). In some circumstances, the seller may waive the requirement that the proffered buyer be ready, willing and able to purchase the property. These circumstances and the proof a broker must present in order to be entitled to a commission are discussed (§ 5.04). The burden to prove that the purchaser was financially able to complete the purchase is placed upon the broker. This burden and how it can be met are discussed (§ 5.05). Chapter 5 concludes with two practitioner checklists, one for attorneys representing brokers (§ 5.07[1]) and one for attorneys representing owners (§ 5.07[2]).

106 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 5 The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

10-5 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 5.01

§ 5.01 Broker Commission Hinges on Presenting Purchaser Who Is Ready, Willing and Able to Complete Transaction on Seller's Terms

In general, a real estate broker earns a commission by bringing to the seller of the property a purchaser who is ready, willing and able to buy the property upon the terms that the seller has prescribed, or when a written contract upon any terms acceptable to the seller has been entered into by the seller and a purchaser procured by the broker. n1 Chapter 4 discusses variations and exceptions to this general rule and offers a comprehensive review of all factors that affect a broker's right to compensation. n2 This chapter focuses on the "ready, willing and able" element of the general rule--especially the "able" aspect.

The seller is obliged to pay a commission to the broker only if a buyer is found who is ready, willing, and able to purchase the property on the terms specified by the seller. Though this chapter focuses on the buyer's financial ability to consummate the transaction, brokers have been found to have no entitlement to a commission when the buyer is unwilling to purchase the property on terms specified by the seller. If the parties cannot agree on the material terms, there is no transaction to consummate. Without a binding contract, the broker will have no right to a commission. n2.1

Not all cases require proof of a ready, willing and able buyer. Generally, there are two classes of cases in which this issue is relevant:

- (1) Seller's or buyer's failure to perform: Although the seller and buyer may sign a binding, enforceable sales agreement, the sale may not be consummated due to one party's failure or inability to perform. In this situation, the states differ considerably on whether the broker must prove that the buyer was financially able to complete the sale in order to recover a commission. The traditional rule is that the broker need not prove the purchaser's financial ability in this situation, even if the transaction does not close due to the fault of the buyer.
- (2) Seller refuses to proceed with sale: Even if the broker presents an offer on behalf of a buyer that complies with the terms of the listing (or the seller agrees to a modification of those terms), the seller may change his or her mind and refuse to proceed with the sale. In this situation, the broker must prove that the buyer was ready, willing and able to complete the sale in order to recover a commission. n3

In the first class of cases, jurisdictions that strictly adhere to the traditional rule find the purchaser's financial ability irrelevant if there is an executed sales agreement. However, many jurisdictions have created exceptions and variations to the traditional rule and other jurisdictions have adopted one of several minority views on whether proof of the buyer's financial ability is required. n4 Proof of the purchaser's financial ability is still required in many situations in these jurisdictions. Another situation where the ready, willing and able rule will not apply is where the broker represents the buyer. In this case the broker will probably be bound by the terms of the agreement with the buyer since these agreements typically contain a special provision addressing the broker's compensation. n4.1

The question of whether a broker produced a "financially able" buyer is a frequently litigated issue. It is clearly a question of fact and is sometimes based on subjective criteria. n4.2 This chapter examines the many different factors that affect such a determination.

The timing and manner in which a broker must prove a purchaser's financial ability is reviewed in § 5.05 below . Finally, § 5.06 below presents practical checklists for attorneys representing brokers or sellers.

Excluded from the scope of this chapter are the following related issues:

- (1) whether the purchaser's offer conforms to the terms required by the owner (which is discussed in § 4.07[5] above);
- (2) the effect of the terms of the brokerage agreement on the broker's right to a commission (which is addressed in § 4.02[2] above); and
- (3) whether the broker was the procuring cause of the sale (which is outlined in § 4.07 above).

For purposes of this chapter, it is assumed that the broker's duty to produce a ready, willing and able buyer is not negated by these or other factors.

Another related but separate issue is whether the broker should be denied a commission due to a breach of fiduciary duty in failing to disclose financial information about the purchaser. (See §§ 3.05[4], 4.08 above for a discussion of the broker's fiduciary duty to disclose material information). A broker's breach of fiduciary duty to disclose material information to the seller can be a defense to a broker's claim for a commission, n5 but this is a separate defense and should be distinguished from the broker's duty to prove that he or she produced a ready, willing and able buyer as an affirmative element of his or her case. n6 These two issues can be intertwined when a broker has knowledge of a buyer's financial inability and fails to disclose this information to the seller. The court will often find both a breach of fiduciary duty and a failure by the broker to produce a financially able buyer. n7 This chapter will not deal directly with the broker's fiduciary duty to disclose material information, which is covered in §§ 3.05[4], 4.08 above .

It is clear from the volume of litigation in which the purchaser's financial ability is a central issue that the careful practitioner should treat the matter of proof of this requirement seriously and, ideally, far in advance of trial. The challenge for trial counsel representing the real estate broker is to demonstrate a strong financial profile of the purchaser, by tangible and admissible evidence, from which a fair and reasonable inference can be drawn that the purchaser could have consummated the transaction. Case law illustrates that considerable attention to this problem is necessary to produce the financial evidence to support a verdict for the broker.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Mapes v. City Council of the City of Walsenburg, 151 P.3d 574, 578 (Colo. Ct. App. 2006) , cert. denied, 2007 Colo. LEXIS 44 (Jan. 16, 2007) ; ch. 4, The Broker's Right to Compensation, above. It should be noted that, as employed in this chapter, the term "seller" includes a lessor and the term "purchaser" includes a prospective tenant in a leasing brokerage transaction. See also Posson v. Hayes, 37 A.D.3d 936, 937, 829 N.Y.S.2d 286, 288, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1430 (2007) (The broker must bring the parties in agreement not only with respect to the price but "to all terms customarily encountered in such a transaction" before the commission is earned.).

See generally, What Does A Real Estate Broker Have To Do To Earn A Commission?, 5 J. Suffolk Acad. L. 1 (1988).

(n2)Footnote 2. A sample brokerage clause is the following:

Seller gives Broker the sole and exclusive right to procure a purchaser for the property described below at the price and upon the terms set forth in this contract. If a purchaser is procured for the property by Broker, by Seller, or by any other person, at the price and upon the terms set forth in this contract, or at any other price or upon any other terms accepted by Seller during the term of this contract, ... Seller agrees to pay Broker a commission as set forth in this contract regardless when the transaction closes.

Another example is the following:

If during the said period of one year, the property is sold by the Agent, by Seller or anyone else; or if the Agent produces a purchaser ready, willing and able to purchase the property; or within sixty days after the expiration of said period a sale is made to any person to whom the property has been shown by Seller or referred by the Agent, Seller agrees to pay the Agent a commission of _____% of the selling price.

A basic listing provisions is the following:

Seller agrees to pay _____percent of the selling price in the event that during the period of this agreement Broker, or Broker's agent, or cooperating brokers, secure a purchaser on the above terms or other terms to which Seller may consent, or if property is sold or exchanged by Broker or any other person, including Seller.

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Coldwell Banker/Hunneman v. Shostack, 62 Mass. App. Ct. 635, 639-640, 818 N.E.2d 1079, 1083-1084 (Mass. App. Ct. 2004) ; Posson v. Hayes, 37 A.D.3d 936, 937, 829 N.Y.S.2d 286, 288, 2007 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 1430 (2007) . But see Dabbs v. Southern Real Estate, Inc., 2008 Ala. Civ. App. LEXIS 3, at *9 (Jan. 11, 2008) (where it was not necessary for the seller to have accepted the buyers' purchase offer in order for the broker to be entitled to a commission), cert. denied, 2008 Ala. LEXIS 78 (Ala. Apr. 25, 2008) .

(n4)Footnote 3. See § 4.02 above.

(n5)Footnote 4. This is discussed in §§ 4.02, 4.03 above and § 5.03[1] below .

(n6)Footnote 4.1. See Hamilton v. Hopkins, 834 So. 2d 695, 702 (Miss. 2003) (ready, willing and able rule was not dispositive).

(n7)Footnote 4.2. See Dabbs v. Southern Real Estate, Inc., 2008 Ala. Civ. App. LEXIS 3, at *6 (Jan. 11, 2008) , cert. denied, 2008 Ala. LEXIS 78 (Ala. Apr. 25, 2008) .

(n8)Footnote 5.

Florida: Young v. Field, 548 So. 2d 784, 785 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1989) (holding that to preserve fiduciary relationship between broker and seller, broker may neither purchase from nor sell to his or her principal unless principal assents thereto or acquiesces in such course, with full knowledge of all facts and circumstances).

Illinois: United Investors, Inc. v. Tsotsos, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 179, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 442, 477 N.E.2d 40, 43 (1985) (stating that brokers owe fiduciary duty of loyalty to sellers which requires that brokers keep sellers fully informed of all pertinent facts regarding the transaction and if duty is breached brokers are precluded from receiving commission); Winternitz v. National Bank, 289 Ill. App. 3d 753, 683 N.E. 2d 492 (1997) .

(n9)Footnote 6. Gordon v. Bauer, 177 Ill. App. 3d 1073, 127 Ill. Dec. 26, 532 N.E.2d 855 (Ill. App. 5 Dist. 1988) (discussing fiduciary duty and proof of financial ability).

(n10)Footnote 7. See, e.g., McGarry v. McCrone, 56 Ohio Op. 479, 118 N.E.2d 195 (Ohio 1954) .

* This chapter was revised by Roslyn K. Myers, a writer and attorney working in New York City; B.A., University of California, Berkeley; J.D., Fordham University School of Law; a member of the New York, Washington D.C., Connecticut, Minnesota and Wisconsin bars. It was previously revised by Linda Breen Pierce, a member of the State Bar of California. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq. and Mary Fallon, Esq.

107 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 5 The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

10-5 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 5.02

§ 5.02 Purchaser Must Be Ready, Willing and Able to Complete Transaction

[1] "Able" Purchaser Commands Necessary Funds

A real estate broker earns a commission only when the broker produces a purchaser who is ready, willing and able to buy. n1 Within the context of the "ready, willing and able" rule, the accepted definition of the term "able" has evolved over the years, largely due to the changing patterns of real estate financing. n2 Obviously, the simplest and most convincing method to establish the purchaser's financial ability is to show that the buyer had the means to pay for the property entirely with cash. However, most real estate transactions are more "financially challenged" than that, and it is not common today to find a purchaser who has "cash in hand" for the entire purchase price of the property at the time the offer is made. The courts have adapted to the changing face of real estate financing and have interpreted the ready, willing and able requirement accordingly.

The term "able" means "more than mere mental competence to make a contract or physical ability to sign it." n3 At core, prospective purchasers meet the legal standard of "ready, willing and able" to buy, although they may not have the cash in hand, if they are able to command the necessary funds to complete the purchase within the time fixed for performance. n4 The word "command" is important; it means "to have control of." n5 Thus, the purchaser must have sufficient assets, which may consist in part of the property to be purchased, and a credit rating that enables the purchaser with reasonable certainty to command the requisite funds at the closing. n6 The required funds include any initial payments as well as any deferred or installment payments provided for in the sales contract. n7 Establishing that the purchaser was "able" does not require proof that the purchaser had "all the money in his pocketbook or to his credit at the bank" at the time the offer to purchase was made or a contract was executed. n8 In fact, the precise source of the buyer's anticipated funds for purchase need not be identified. n9 Rather, the "able" requirement refers more to the power to effect the necessary funds at the time for payment. n10 In other words, the financially able condition of the buyer relates to the time of closing. n11 Consequently, a signed binder and good faith deposit is insufficient by itself to establish the purchaser's financial ability. n12 Moreover, a purchaser's default after the closing does not affect a broker's right to a commission. n13

While it is widely accepted that the meaning of "able" refers to the purchaser's financial ability, it should be noted that "able" has also been interpreted to include the purchaser's legal capacity as well. n14

[2] Modern View Weighs Several Factors to Determine Financial Ability

There are no absolute rules to test the purchaser's financial ability. Each case is fact-specific, and courts generally base their decisions on the totality of all factors. The modern view, which applies a concise summary of factors, has been widely accepted in brokerage commission cases. n15 Under the modern view, a purchaser is deemed financially ready and able to buy when the purchaser:

- has the "needed cash in hand"
- is "personally possessed of assets--which in part may consist of the property to be purchased--and a credit rating that enables him with reasonable certainty to command the requisite funds at the required time."
- has "definitely arranged to raise the necessary money--or as much thereof as he is unable to supply personally--by obtaining a binding commitment for a loan to him for that purpose by a financially able third party, irrespective of whether such loan be secured in part by the property to be purchased" n16

When a purchaser relies primarily upon the "proceeds of a contemplated loan or loans to be made to him by a third party, he is financially able to buy only if he has a definite and binding commitment from such third-party loaner." n17 The purchaser must show adequate consideration for the loan. "A purchaser who personally has little, if any, cash or other assets must establish that the financial crutches to be loaned him by others are both legally and financially dependable." n18 The flexible criteria are tailored to the purpose of establishing a "purchaser's financial ability to buy with reasonable certainty," n19 and prevent unreasonable hardship to either the purchaser or seller:

A purchaser may not have the necessary cash in hand, but that alone, it is recognized, does not disqualify him if he is otherwise so situated that he is reasonably able to command the requisite cash at the required time. On the other hand, the seller is not required to part with his property to a purchaser whose financial ability rests upon nothing more than shoestring speculation or upon attractive probabilities that fall short of reasonable certainty. In short, the rules are designed to protect the seller by binding him to a sale only when there is a reasonable certainty of the purchaser's financial ability to pay and, on the other hand, to protect the purchaser--and persons similarly situated--from a technical, insubstantial, or sharp-dealing disqualification. n20

Obviously, no one set of criteria can encompass the myriad fact patterns that are involved in establishing that a purchaser was ready, willing and able to buy. What constitutes financial ability depends upon such a variety of circumstances as to make it difficult to state a general rule. In all cases, "able" must be given a reasonable construction. n21 These guidelines offer a modern view of the common-law rules regarding the purchaser's financial ability in a concise, summary format. These guidelines are frequently cited and used by the courts in many states to analyze the factual evidence of the purchaser's financial ability.

Practice Note

The courts generally base their decisions on the totality of all factors involved, with the result that any one factor may support a finding of financial ability in one case and a lack of financial ability in another. In fact, this area of the law is filled with inconsistent decisions among the states with respect to the nature and quality of the evidence required to establish a purchaser's financial ability.

While the factors have been widely applied, they have produced inconsistent results. Any one factor may support a finding of financial ability in one case and a lack of financial ability in another. For example, see § 5.02[5] below (subsequent purchases by the purchaser), § 5.04 below (waiver by owner when issue of buyer's financial ability is not raised), and § 5.05[3] below (self-serving testimony of purchaser). It behooves the practitioner to be well versed in the facts of the authoritative cases in the relevant jurisdiction when arguing the facts of the subject case. n22

[3] Courts May Examine Personal Information to Determine Purchaser's Ability to Complete Transaction

[a] Determination May Be Highly Subjective

Courts will consider a wide range of personal and financial factors in deciding whether a buyer has the requisite financial ability to purchase a particular property. Consideration should be given to the following information about the buyer:

- assets;
- credit;
- financial rating;
- enforceable agreements for loans; and
- other data indicating ability or inability to command requisite funds at the required time n23

The "other data" can include the buyer's personal information such as:

- age;
- business experience;
- employment history;
- length of residence in the area; and
- other general and somewhat subjective factors.

In short, one's purchasing ability may be demonstrated by showing that the purchaser is a "person of substance." n24 A person of substance conveys an idea of wealth, the ability to deal in business ventures, and the ability to make do in an above-average fashion. n25

Courts will also note characteristics of the buyer that illustrate the court's thinking that the buyer is not a person of substance. For example, it is not uncommon for a court to refer to the buyer's youth and relative lack of experience when concluding that the buyer is not deemed to be financially able to buy. n26

Practice Note

The fact that these ideas are quite subjective in nature--one might ask how much wealth is needed, what exactly constitutes the "ability to deal in business ventures" or the "ability to make do in an above-average fashion"--presents a challenge to practitioners. A common-sense approach, given the totality of the circumstances, is likely to prevail.

[b] Decisions Lack Uniformity

Although there are general patterns found in the cases, there is little uniformity among the states. As part of the basis for determining the purchaser's financial ability or inability to complete the transaction, courts commonly consider the following factors:

Net worth v. purchase price: Courts commonly consider the relationship between the buyer's net worth and the purchase price. n27 The buyer's net worth and assets can be significant without regard to the nature or liquidity of the buyer's assets. n28

Ability to raise money: Some courts hold that the mere fact that a purchaser may own property upon which the buyer could raise the money is insufficient by itself to establish the buyer's financial ability. n29

Employment: The courts look favorably on the buyer's employment in supporting his or her financial ability; n30 however if that employment is recent, it may be discounted by the court. n31

Business experience: Courts give weight to the purchaser's general business experience, especially if that experience is related to the type of property or business involved in the subject transaction. n32

[4] Financial Ability May Depend on Commitment of Funds from Third Parties

[a] Financial Ability May Be Based on Complex Funding

In considering the issue of third-party financing, the courts recognize that real estate financing today is not always a simple matter. n33 Courts apply "a reasonable and factual determination" to decide whether a purchaser is financially able to pay. n34 A reasonable construction should be applied in determining a purchaser's financial ability. Each case is evaluated based on its unique facts. n35

[b] Third Parties Must Be Under Legal Obligation to Provide Funds

Purchasers of property commonly obtain loans from institutional or individual lenders, or rely on family or friends, for some or all of the purchase price. The financial ability of the buyer who is relying on third-party funds is determined in part on the identity of the third-party lender and how speculative or definite that loan might be.

When purchasers rely primarily on borrowed funds, i.e., their own contribution is small compared with the funds supplied by third parties, they cannot be considered financially able without a legally binding commitment from either an institutional or individual lender. n36 Thus, a lender's non-binding verbal promise made to a prospective buyer without assets of his or her own is insufficient to prove the buyer's financial ability. n37

In fact, buyers generally are not considered financially able if they rely, to any degree, on funds from third parties who are under no legal obligation to lend. n38 "A proposed purchaser cannot be said to be able to purchase when he is dependent upon third parties who are in no way bound to furnish the funds." n39

The courts give greater weight to lending agreements from a well-established institutional lender that is in the business of lending (and may have an incentive to lend) than the promises of a buyer's friend or relative. n40 Courts will not necessarily require a formal written commitment from the commercial lender to establish the buyer's financial ability. n41 This is in contrast to cases involving loans from family members.

[c] Family Loans Generally Do Not Support Determination of Financial Ability

Proposed loans from family members are viewed with skepticism by the courts. Unless the relatives were legally obligated to provide the funds, the courts tend to discount such evidence as being too speculative. n42 Courts recognize that proposed loans from family members are often wishful thinking on the part of the buyer. n43 Similarly, loans from brokers involved in the transaction are not generally considered favorably by the courts in determining a buyer's financial ability. n44 Thus, in these cases, the courts tend to require a legally binding commitment on the part of the lender. n45

[d] "Straw" Purchasers Must Be Financially Able to Complete Transaction

It is generally recognized that a seller cannot circumvent the listing broker by changing the terms of the contract or selling to a strawman who then acts as a conduit and ultimately conveys the property to the purchaser who originally was procured by the broker. n45.1 The use of a "straw" buyer, i.e., a person acting on behalf of others, can present a challenge for brokers in proving that they produced a financially able buyer. Since the unnamed buyers are generally not obligated to proceed with the transaction, it is the so-called "straw" buyer who must be financially able to buy. n46

[5] Subsequent Purchases by Buyer Generally Considered Irrelevant to Show Financial Ability

Generally, evidence that a purchaser has subsequently acquired property is irrelevant and not admissible to prove financial ability. n47 However, if the property subsequently acquired is the same property for which the broker's suit seeks a commission, that transaction would support a conclusion that the broker produced a ready, willing, and able buyer. n47.1

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g.,

Colorado: City of Pueblo v. Leach Realty Co., 149 Colo. 92, 94-95, 368 P.2d 195, 196 (1962) ; Mapes v. City Council of the City of Walsenburg, 151 P.3d 574, 578 (Colo. Ct. App. 2006) , cert. denied, 2007 Colo. LEXIS 44 (Jan. 16, 2007) .

Connecticut: Howland v. Schweir, 7 Conn. App. 709, 713, 510 A.2d 215 (1986) ("To recover a commission, a broker must ordinarily show ... that he has produced a customer ready, willing and able to buy on terms acceptable to the seller."); McCutcheon & Burr, Inc. v. Berman, 218 Conn. 512 , 519, 590 A.2d 438 (1991); Ditchkus Real Estate Co. v. Storm, 25 Conn. App. 51, 54, 592 A.2d 959 , cert. denied, 220 Conn. 905, 593 A.2d 971 (1991) ; New England Investment Properties, Inc. v. Spire Realty and Development Corp., 31 Conn. App. 682, 626 A.2d 1316 (1993) .

Illinois: United Investors, Inc. v. Tsotsos, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 178, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 441, 477 N.E.2d 40, 42 (1985) .

Kansas: Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 153, 209 P.3d 741, 746 (2009) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See generally Annotation, What Constitutes Financial Ability to Perform Within Rule Entitling Broker to Commission for Producing Ready, Willing, and Able Purchaser of Real Property, 87 A.L.R.4th 11 (1991).

(n3)Footnote 3. Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 851 (1967) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g.:

Florida: Sticht v. Shull, 543 So. 2d 395, 397 (Dist. Ct. App. Fla. 1989) (broker failed to show that purchaser commanded sufficient funds); Hollywood Mall, Inc. v. Capozzi, 545 So. 2d 918, 921 (Dist. Ct. App. Fla. 1989) (stating that "[t]here was no proof that [purchaser] had cash in hand or that he was personally possessed of assets and a credit rating which would enable him with reasonable certainty to command the requisite funds to close.").

Illinois: Telander v. Posejpal, 94 Ill. App. 3d 616, 624-25, 49 Ill. Dec. 590, 598, 418 N.E.2d 444, 452 (1981) (holding that purchaser is deemed ready and able to buy if he or she "has sufficient funds on hand or if he [or she] is able to command the necessary funds with which to complete the purchase within the time set by the offer.").

Kansas: Premier Realty, LLC v. I.T.J. Investments, Inc., 42 Kan. App. 2d 148, 154, 209 P.3d 741, 746-47 (2009) ; Moody Invest., Inc. v. Baldwin, 12 Kan. App. 2d 686, 754 P. 2d 810 (1988) review denied, 243 Kan. 779 (1988) ; Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (1974) .

Minnesota: Century 21-Birdsell Realty, Inc., v. Hiebel, 379 N.W.2d 201, 203 (Minn. App. 1986) .

Wisconsin: Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 (1972) (individual lender).

Cf.

Minnesota: Jones v. Amoco Oil Co., 483 N.W.2d 718 (Minn. App. 1992) (breach of contract).

(n5)Footnote 5.

Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (1974) .

(n6)Footnote 6. The Heritage Group v. Jonas, 204 Wis. 2d 110, 552 N.W.2d 898 1996 Wisc. App. LEXIS 890 (Wis. Ct. App. 1996) (unpublished opinion) review denied, 205 Wis. 2d 135, 555 N.W.2d 815 (Wis. 1996) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g.:

Tennessee: Gatlinburg Real Estate Co., Inc. v. Booth, 651 S.W.2d 203 (Tenn. 1983) .

Washington: Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wn. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191 (1976) .

Minnesota: Shell Oil Co. v. Kapler, 235 Minn. 292, 50 N.W.2d 707 (1951) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514, 519 (1972) (quoting McCabe v. Jones, 141 Wis. 540, 124 N.W. 486, 487 (1910)) ; Century 21 Blowers & Assoc. v. PCA of Southeast Wis., 169 Wis. 2d 466, 487 N.W.2d 660, (Wis. App. 1992) (unpublished opinion).

(n9)Footnote 9. McGill Corp. v. Werner, 631 P.2d 1178 (Colo. App. 1981) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g.:

New Hampshire: Philbrick v. Chase, 95 N.H. 82, 58 A.2d 317 (1948) (holding that the fact that the bank had not actually approved the loan at the time the action was commenced did not defeat the financial ability of the buyer when there was evidence that the buyer could have qualified for the loan).

Colorado: McGill Corp. v. Werner, 631 P.2d 1178 (1981) (finding that the buyers obtained a tentative loan commitment and had sufficient funds to comply with contract, and therefore the precise source of anticipated funds needed for the transaction need not be identified at time of offer); Daybreak Construction Specialties, Inc. v. Saghatoleslami, 712 P.2d 1028, 1032 (Colo. Ct. App. 1985) ; Colorado

Inv. Servs., Inc. v. Hager, 685 P.2d 1371, 1375 (Colo. App. 1984) .

(n11)Footnote 11.

Minnesota: Birdsell Realty, Inc. v. Hiebel, 379 N.W.2d 201 (Minn. App. 1985) (finding that the buyer had not obtained loan approval at the time seller refused to proceed on contract, and therefore the broker had until the closing date to produce able buyer and that once contract was rescinded, broker's duty ended).

North Dakota: Allied Realty, Inc. v. Boyer, 302 N.W.2d 774 (N.D. 1981) (holding that financially able condition did not apply to developments subsequent to closing in case when buyer defaulted on payments due after closing). Goetz v. Anderson, 274 N.W.2D 175 (N.D. 1978) .

(n12)Footnote 12. O'Connor Realty Services, Inc. v. Higgins, 149 A.D.2d 492, 539 N.Y.S.2d 975, 1989 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4583 (1989) .

(n13)Footnote 13. Agency, Broad and Cornelia Street, Inc. v. Lavigne, 470 N.Y.S.2d 729, 730, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20724 (3d Dept. 1983) (purchasers' default shortly after closing did not raise question of fact as to their ability to meet vendors' terms when they entered into the contract and default did not affect broker's right to commission); Kaplon-Belo Assocs. v. Farrelly, 221 A.D.2d 321, 633 N.Y.2d (2d Dept. 1995).

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g.:

Texas: Campbell v. Hood, 35 S.W.2d 93 (Tex. Civ. App. 1931) (holding that the corporate purchaser was not an able buyer because it was expressly prohibited by Texas State Law to enter into the subject contract to buy the property).

(n15)Footnote 15. Shell Oil Co. v. Kapler, 235 Minn. 292, 50 N.W.2d 707 (1951) .

See, e.g.:

Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (Kan. 1974) .

North Dakota: Goetz v. Anderson, 274 N.W.2d 175 (N.D. 1978) .

South Dakota: Heinrich v. R.L. Oil & Gas Co., Inc., 442 N.W.2d 467 (1989) .

Washington: Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wash. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191 (1976).

(n16)Footnote 16. 50 N.W.2d at 712-713, n.11 .

(n17)Footnote 17. 50 N.W.2d at 712-713, n.11 (emphasis in original).

(n18)Footnote 18. 50 N.W.2d at 712-713, n.11 .

(n19)Footnote 19. 50 N.W.2d at 712-713, n.11 .

(n20)Footnote 20. 50 N.W.2d at 712-713, n.11 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Glascocock v. James, 183 Va. 561, 32 S.E.2d 734 (1945) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Annotation, 87 A.L.R.4th 11 (1991) for a comprehensive summary of cases on this subject.

(n23)Footnote 23. Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wash. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191 (1976) ; Shell Oil Co. v. Kapler, 235 Minn. 292, 50 N.W.2d 707 (1951) ; Walton v. Hudson, 38 Ohio Op. 28, 79 N.E.2d 921 (Ohio 1947) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Mogul v. McClaskey Realty, 309 So. 2d 254, 255 (4th Dist. Ct. App. Fla. 1975) (citing Sharp v. Long, 283 So. 2d 567 (4th Dist. Ct. App. Fla. 1973)) .

(n25)Footnote 25. Mogul v. McClaskey Realty, 309 So. 2d 254, 256 (4th Dist. Ct. App. Fla. 1975) . In the Mogul case, the court found the buyer to be a person of substance because, among other things, he agreed to a price increase, he signed the sales contract, he had a contracting business, he employed engineers to inspect the property, and the realtor testified that the buyer was a "select" client. 309 So. 2d 254 . Also noted was the lack of rebuttal testimony by the owner. See § 5.05[3] below for a discussion of this point.

(n26)Footnote 26. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Potter v. Ridge Realty Corp., 28 Conn. Super. 304, 259 A.2d 758 (1969) (27-year-old prospective buyer with no business experience).

Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (Kan. 1974) (finding that the buyer, a 22-year-old man who wanted to get financial help from his father, could not handle the purchase without his father's participation).

(n27)Footnote 27. See, e.g.:

Illinois: Gordon v. Bauer, 177 Ill. App. 3d 1073, 1097, 127 Ill. Dec. 26, 41, 532 N.E.2d 855, 869 (Ill. App. 5th Dist. 1988) (noting net worth of prospective purchasers as evidence of their ability to consummate transaction).

Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (Kan. 1974) (finding that buyer with a net worth of $6,000 was not financially able to purchase property for $320,000).

Nebraska: Fleming Realty & Ins., Inc. v. Evans, 199 Neb. 440, 259 N.W.2d 604 (1977) (buyer was financially able to purchase land for $155,840 when he had 800 acres of pasture land, a net worth of approximately $239,000 and a reputation that he was a good farmer and could perform on the contract).

South Dakota: Heinrich v. R.L. Oil & Gas Co., Inc., 442 N.W.2d 467, 470 (S.D. 1989) .

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g.:

California: Mitidiere v. Saito, 246 Cal. App. 2d 535, 54 Cal. Rptr. 665 (Cal. 1966) (buyer was financially able to buy property for $120,000 when he had a net worth of $225,000 and also had authority to commit his partner whose net worth was approximately $120,000; there was no discussion of the liquidity of assets).

Louisiana: Joiner v. Lockart, 350 So. 2d 199 (La. 1977) (court found that buyer's employment as a teacher and coach, and his ownership of 87 acres were sufficient to establish his ability to obtain a loan, notwithstanding the fact that he did not have much in his savings account).

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g.:

South Dakota: Watters v. Dancey, 23 S.D. 481, 122 N.W. 430 (1909) (holding that evidence that buyer has an abundance of property, from which he could raise the cash, is not sufficient to show he was financially able when cash is required).

Iowa: Reynor v. Mackrill, 181 Iowa 210, 164 N.W. 335 (Iowa 1917) (the court found the buyer was financially able based on her testimony that "the money was ready for her, was at her command..."; merely having property from which she could raise the cash would not be sufficient).

(n30)Footnote 30. See Joiner v. Lockart, 350 So. 2d 199 (La. 1977) .

(n31)Footnote 31. See Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wash. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191 (Wash. 1976) (court found that the buyer who was employed as a used car salesperson, having recently moved to the area, with no showing of assets, income, etc. did not show financial ability).

(n32)Footnote 32. See

Florida: Hollywood Mall, Inc. v. Capozzi, 545 So. 2d 918, 921 (Dist. Ct. App. Fla. 1989) (evaluating purchaser's business experience, court found that although purchaser has business experience as sole shareholder of savings and loan association, it had been taken over by the Federal regulatory agency and the purchaser had been excluded from its operations; although purchaser had built several large real estate projects, nothing in the record indicated whether he owned those projects or whether they were financially successful; thus evidence did not show financial ability).

Minnesota: ERA Town and Country Realty v. Tevac, Inc. 376 N.W.2d 526 (Minn. App. 1985) (in purchase of mobile home park for $125,000, it was significant that buyer was the successful owner of four other mobile home parks that generated a net income of approximately $1500 per month and an apartment building with monthly income of $998 per month).

But see R. Zemper & Assoc. v. Scozzafava, 28 Conn. App. 557, 611 A.2d 449 (1992) (in a purchase of a dry-cleaning business, the buyer's testimony that he owned two other dry cleaners and later purchased three more was insufficient evidence of the buyer's financial ability without any evidence of the earnings of his other businesses).

(n33)Footnote 33. Heinrich v. R.L. Oil & Gas Co., Inc., 442 N.W.2d 467, 470 (S.D. 1989) (prospective purchaser was required to obtain a bank loan, backed by the Small Business Administration ("SBA"), but seller failed to provide sufficient information required by the SBA and the sale was not consummated; broker's award of the commission was affirmed by the Supreme Court of South Dakota, which noted that "[a]lthough Buyer's ability to finance [the purchase] had some hurdles to overcome, on this record we do not deem the trial court's finding of fact, that the Buyer was financially able, to be clearly erroneous. There are always some wrinkles to iron out in financing large sums of money.").

(n34)Footnote 34. 442 N.W.2d at 470.

(n35)Footnote 35. Shell Oil Co. v. Kapler, 235 Minn. 292, 50 N.W.2d 707 (1951) .

(n36)Footnote 36. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Potter v. Ridge Realty Corp., 28 Conn. Super. 304, 259 A.2d 758 (1969) (27-year-old prospective buyer with no business experience and only $3,000 in cash was not financially able to purchase property for $275,000 when he offered no testimony from the bank or his in-laws that they had in fact agreed to loan the buyer the funds required for the purchase).

Louisiana: Morere v. Dixon Real Estate Co., 188 So. 2d 623 (La. App. 1966) (corporate purchaser was not financially "able" when it had only one asset (land), no credit rating and was entirely dependent on shareholder's financial ability).

(n37)Footnote 37. See, e.g.:

Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (Kan. 1974) (the court found that the broker failed to prove the buyer's financial ability when the buyer was relying on his father to co-sign a note for the down payment funds, but his father had not committed to do so and there were only "tentative agreements" on the part of the bank to issue the loans).

California: Merzoian v. Kludjian, 191 P. 673 (1920) (buyer was not financially able when he had only $1,000 of a $5,000 down payment with the balance to come from the broker and a friend based on verbal promises with inadequate consideration and buyer's assets and financial standing were questionable).

(n38)Footnote 38. Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 (1972) .

(n39)Footnote 39. 201 N.W.2d at 520 (buyer's testimony that he could either obtain a mortgage or borrow from his mother, who was in no way bound to furnish the funds, was insufficient to establish financial ability).

(n40)Footnote 40. See Heinrich v. R.L. Oil & Gas Co., Inc., 442 N.W.2d 467 (S.D. 1989) (court made a distinction between the subject case involving an SBA loan and Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 (1972) , in which the proposed lender was the buyer's mother).

(n41)Footnote 41. See Epstein v. Bossard, 206 Misc. 48, 131 N.Y.S.2d 709, 1954 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3356 (1954) , aff'd, 286 A.D. 920, 143 N.Y.S.2d 659, 1955 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 4505 (4th Dept. 1955) (court ruled that buyer's testimony that the bank made an oral commitment to lend was insufficient to establish financial ability. However, the court did not require a written loan commitment, but stated that, at a minimum, the bank officer should testify giving the owner an opportunity to cross examine the witness).

(n42)Footnote 42. See, e.g.:

Florida: Sticht v. Shull, 543 So. 2d 395 (Dist. Ct. App. Fla. 1989) (holding that broker failed to adequately prove financial ability of purchaser with net worth of only $150,000 for $650,000 purchase and claimed difference would be made up by assistance from his mother, who was under no contractual commitment to provide funds to either vendors or prospective purchaser).

Wisconsin: Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 (1972) .

(n43)Footnote 43. McGarry v. McCrone, 56 Ohio Op. 479, 118 N.E.2d 195, 198 (Ohio 1954) (buyer failed to obtain funds from a relative).

(n44)Footnote 44. See Hare v. Bauer, 223 Minn. 292, 26 N.W.2d 359 (1947) (finding that the buyer was not financially able when the contract called for down payment of $1,000, and $700 of that was in the form of a unsecured note from the buyer to the broker).

(n45)Footnote 45. See, e.g., Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 (1972) .

(n46)Footnote 45.1. See Shands v. Wm. R. Winton, Ltd., 91 P.3d 416, 2003 Colo. App. LEXIS 1783, at *6 (Colo. Ct. App. Nov. 20, 2003) , rehearing denied, 2003 Colo. App. LEXIS 1964 (Colo. Ct. App., Dec. 18, 2003) .

(n47)Footnote 46. See Epstein v. Howard, 5 Ill. App. 2d 553, 126 N.E.2d 162 (1955) (there was no evidence that the owner was aware of the other parties involved and the trial court properly disregarded evidence of their financial status. There was also no evidence that the named buyer could command the funds to buy the property).

(n48)Footnote 47. See, e.g.:

Wisconsin: Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 (1972) (the court noted that the jury could not infer from the subsequent purchase that the buyer had a sufficient credit rating under the Shell Oil guidelines at the time the buyer was attempting to purchase the property in the instant case).

Washington: Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wn. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191 (1976) (exhibit showing that purchaser purchased another house after transaction in question fell through did not substantiate the buyer's financial ability when there was no evidence of the purchase price of the second home or evidence that the buyer could afford the home in the instant case).

But see:

Weinrib v. Krich, 17 Misc. 2d 868, 191 N.Y.S.2d 874, 1959 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 3747 (2d Dept. 1959) (purchaser reneged on the offer and three months later used the cash he claimed was available to him to purchase another building. The court held that this undisputed fact was sufficient to submit the question of the buyer's financial ability to the jury).

(n49)Footnote 47.1. See Resort Realty of the Outer Banks, Inc. v. Brandt, 163 N.C. App. 114, 118, 593 S.E.2d 404, 409 (N.C. Ct. App. 2004) , appeal dismissed, 358 N.C. 236, 595 S.E.2d 154 (N.C. 2004) , motion dismissed, 597 S.E.2d 134 (N.C. 2004) .

* This chapter was revised by Roslyn K. Myers, a writer and attorney working in New York City; B.A., University of California, Berkeley; J.D., Fordham University School of Law; a member of the New York, Washington D.C., Connecticut, Minnesota and Wisconsin bars. It was previously revised by Linda Breen Pierce, a member of the State Bar of California. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq. and Mary Fallon, Esq.

108 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 5 The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

10-5 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 5.03

§ 5.03 Broker May Be Required to Prove Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate Transaction

[1] Determination Depends on Several Factors Including Rule of Jurisdiction, Status of Parties' Agreement, and Which Party Defaulted

[a] Traditionally Financial Ability Presumed When Unconditional Sales Contract Is Executed

A common factual situation involves a seller and a buyer who enter into a sales contract, but the transaction does not close because either the buyer or the seller is unwilling or unable to perform. In jurisdictions that adhere to the traditional rule, the broker earns his or her commission at the time the sales contract is executed, assuming it is not subject to any conditions, regardless of whether the transaction is ultimately closed. n1 Therefore, proof of the purchaser's financial ability is immaterial and irrelevant.

Under the traditional rule, the broker never has to prove the purchaser's financial ability in any case in which the sales contract is executed. n2

[b] Traditional Rule Based on "Acceptance" Doctrine

The traditional rule is based on the "acceptance" doctrine, that when the seller enters into a contract of sale with a purchaser procured by the broker, the seller is deemed to have "accepted" the purchaser and "cannot thereafter question the purchaser's capacity to complete the transaction except in cases involving fraud or bad faith" on the part of the broker. n3 Accordingly, the broker's right to a commission accrues at the time the sales contract is executed. n4

The rationale underlying the traditional rule of "acceptance," or estoppel by contract, is that a broker is hired to produce the customer; once a contract is signed, the owner is in effect telling the broker that he or she is satisfied with the broker's services. n5 "The seller will be presumed to have satisfied himself with respect to the purchaser's financial ability before entering into the contract ... and to have waived proof of the issue." n6 Thus, "[t]he existence of a written contract renders testimony with respect to the question of financial ability immaterial on the issue of the broker's right to a commission ... and not admissible at the trial." n7

An additional justification for the rule is that "[t]he broker is not an insurer of the subsequent performance of the contract and is not deprived of his right to a commission by the failure or refusal of the buyer to perform." n8

[2] Contract Must Be Binding and Enforceable

[a] Commission Earned When Conditions of Sales Contract Are Met

Even in a jurisdiction that adheres to the traditional rule, i.e., in an action for a commission the broker need prove no more than that the principal entered into a binding contract of sale with the purchaser, courts will give effect to conditions in the contract of sale that may prevent the contract from becoming binding and enforceable, thereby precluding application of the "acceptance" rule. For example, when a buyer and seller enter into a contract that is conditioned upon the buyer obtaining a loan or on the approval of another party, the broker will not earn his or her commission at the time of execution of the contract based on the theory that the contract does not become binding and enforceable until that condition is met. n9 In these cases, the broker must offer proof of the purchaser's financial ability in order to earn his or her commission.

Another theory supporting the denial of a broker's commission in a conditional sales contract--until the purchaser's financial ability is proven--is that the broker's knowledge of and acquiescence in a contingent sales contract transforms the owner's agreement to pay the commission into a conditional agreement, contingent on the event(s) forming the condition in the sales contract. n10 In effect, when the sales contract is conditional, there is no presumption of the purchaser's qualifications at the time the contract is executed n11 and the broker earns his or her commission only when the condition is fulfilled. n12 Therefore, if the buyer is unable to obtain a mortgage commitment within the time specified in a conditional sales contract, the seller may terminate the sales contract without being liable to the broker for a commission. n13

[b] Conditions to Sale May Be Implied

If there is no written condition, some courts imply a condition to alleviate the harshness of the "acceptance" doctrine in cases in which the purchaser defaults. They construe the purchase agreement as conditional on the performance of the buyer, thereby avoiding the seller's "acceptance" of the buyer at the time of contract execution. n14

[3] Broker Must Offer Proof if Negotiations Are Not Finalized

When a broker undertakes to sell property, there are often details that are not specified in the listing agreement or in the offer to purchase. If the listing agreement between the seller and the broker contemplates negotiation of terms of sale, the broker does not earn a commission until the seller and buyer reach an agreement. n15 If the agreement has not been finalized, there is no presumption that the seller has accepted the purchaser's offer and the broker will be required to prove that the buyer was ready, willing, and able to obtain a commission. n16 Generally, a seller cannot deny a broker's otherwise legitimate right to a commission based on terms that are not material to the seller's rejection of the offer. Once the offer to purchase satisfies all material terms in the listing agreement, the seller becomes obligated to pay the broker's commission. n17

[4] Traditional Rule Increasingly Subject to Exceptions

The trend by the courts is to create exceptions to or to overrule altogether the traditional rule of acceptance. This may very well be in response to the changing patterns of real estate transactions. For example, prior to the advent of mortgages and other forms of third-party financing, a buyer often would pay an earnest money deposit at the time the contract was signed and then the balance of the down payment, or the full purchase price, at closing. If the buyer was unable to pay the entire purchase price with cash, the seller often would finance the balance of the purchase price. Today, with third-party financing a common occurrence and with increasingly complex issues involving disclosures, environmental concerns, zoning, easements, and other complications of modern life, there is more potential for something to go wrong in a real estate transaction, resulting in a failure to close the sale. The courts have responded accordingly to avoid requiring the seller to pay a commission when the failure to close was not due to the wrongdoing of the seller. This is part of a judicial trend to apply a standard of reasonableness when requiring a seller to pay a broker's commission when the transaction does not close.

Another factor supporting this trend is that most sellers and brokers today expect that the commission will be paid to the broker at closing out of the proceeds realized by the seller. In fact, this understanding is often incorporated into a brokerage agreement between the seller and the broker. See § 4.02[2] above for a more detailed discussion of this topic.

[5] Minority Rule Requires Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability Whenever Sale Is Not Consummated

[a] Minority View Neutralizes Harsh Effect of Acceptance Doctrine

Some jurisdictions have abandoned the traditional rule altogether. These courts unequivocally reject the "acceptance" doctrine and, in effect, require the broker, in any case that does not result in a closed sale, to prove the purchaser's financial ability regardless of whether it is the buyer or the seller who fails to consummate the sale. n18 The minority rule attempts to make more equitable the harsh results of the traditional acceptance doctrine under which the seller remains liable for the broker's commission even if the buyer later fails to perform the contract. n19 The minority rule acknowledges the reality that a seller hires a broker to find a buyer who is able to complete the transaction, not merely able to sign a contract. n20 Because this is the broker's job, the risk that a purchaser will turn out to be financially incapable is placed with the broker. n21 A seller's obligation to pay the broker a commission arises only if and when the sale is consummated, unless the seller's own conduct prevents the transaction from closing. Thus, jurisdictions applying the minority rule hold that a broker earns his or her commission when

- the broker produces a purchaser ready, willing and able to buy on the seller's terms;
- the purchaser enters into a binding contract with the seller; and
- the transaction is completed by closing the title in accordance with the provisions of the contract. n22

[b] Broker Entitled to Commission Only if Transaction Fails Due to Seller's Wrongful Act

Under the minority rule, if the transaction is not consummated because the purchaser defaults, the broker is not entitled to commission. If the transaction fails because of the wrongful act or interference of the seller, the broker is entitled to commission. n23 If, for example, the buyer defaults because he or she is not able to secure the necessary financing or to convert his or her assets into the cash needed for the purchase, the broker will not be able to recover from the seller because the broker will not be able to prove an essential element of the broker's case, i.e., that the buyer was "able" to complete the purchase. n24 In order for a broker to recover when the buyer's financial ability is in doubt, the broker must "establish that the seller's refusal to consummate the sale was arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable, or wrongful and was not for good cause." n25 With respect to whether the failure to close resulted from a wrongful act or interference of the seller, the courts apply a standard of reasonableness. n26

What if the seller is unable to deliver marketable title or the transaction fails to close due to some other "fault" of the seller that is not entirely within the seller's control? This has been a grey area in minority jurisdictions. n27

Finally, some states have always held the view that a signed sales contract does not obviate a broker's duty to prove that he or she produced a ready, willing and able buyer. n28

[6] Broker May Be Entitled to Commission Even in Absence of Sales Contract

In some jurisdictions, a binding sales contract between a seller and a purchaser need not be executed in order for a broker to recover a commission. n29 If a broker produces a buyer who is ready, willing and able to purchase the owner's property on terms acceptable to the owner within the required time and the owner then refuses to sign a contract, the broker is entitled to a commission. n30 The fact that an owner changes his or her mind or that the owner's spouse chooses not to sell is insufficient to shield the owner from paying a commission under a listing agreement. n31

However, the broker must prove the purchaser's financial ability as an essential element of the broker's cause of action (see § 5.02 above), n32 unless such proof has been waived by the owner (see § 5.04 below), even if the seller refuses to sign the contract for no legally justifiable reason. For example, the seller may refuse a purchaser's offer even though it conforms to the terms of the listing or the seller may renege upon terms that are orally agreed to between the seller and the buyer.

This general rule applies in jurisdictions following both the traditional and the minority rules.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g.,

Florida: Quantum Realty, Inc., v. Laudherill Apt. Investors, 391 So. 2d 228, 229 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1980) , petition denied, 399 So. 2d 1143 (Fla. 1981) . ("Regardless of whether the employment contract requires the finding of a purchaser or a sale, the broker is entitled to a commission if the seller is responsible for the failure to consummate the sale.").

Hawaii: Property House, Inc. v. Kelley, 715 P.2d 805 (Haw. 1986) .

Illinois: Gordon v. Bauer, 177 Ill. App. 3d 1073, 1097, 127 Ill. Dec. 26, 42, 532 N.E.2d 855, 870 (1988) cert. denied, 125 Ill. 2d 564, 130 Ill. Dec. 480, 537 N.E.2d 809 (Ill. 1989) ("[W]hen the seller enters into an enforceable contract with a purchaser to sell real estate, the readiness, willingness and ability of the purchaser is no longer open to question and the broker's right to compensation accrues regardless of whether the sale is completed."); United Investors, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 179, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 442, 477 N.E.2d 40, 43 (1985) ("By entering into [an unconditional, enforceable purchase agreement], the seller is precluded from asserting that the buyer was not ready, willing and able to purchase the property, and the broker is entitled to his commission even if the sale is never consummated.").

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Walsh v. Turlick, 164 Conn. 754, 316 A.2d 759 (1972) .

Kentucky: Neel v. Wagner-Shuck Realty Co., 576 S.W.2d 246 (Ky. App. 1978) .

Minnesota: Bailie v. Ridker, 249 Minn. 161, 81 N.W.2d 798 (1957) .

Montana: Wood v. Strodbeck, 142 Mont. 180, 382 P.2d 170 (1963) .

New Mexico: Ranch World of New Mexico, Inc. v. Berry Land & Cattle Co., Inc., 110 N.M. 402, 796 P.2d 1098 (1990) .

For an exhaustive list of jurisdictions applying the rule that an executed contract of sale entitles the broker to his or her commission, see Annotation, Modern view as to right of real estate broker to recover commission from seller-principal where buyer defaults under valid contract of sale, 12 A.L.R.4th 1083 (1982); Real Property-Brokerage Commission-Threshold Standard for Imposing Seller Liability for A Brokerage Commission in A Failed Transaction Is

A Determination That The Seller Breached The Sales Contract-Van Winkle and Liggett, 18 Seton Hall L. Rev. 183 (1988); Annotation, Real-estate broker's right to recover commission from seller where sale fails because of seller's failure to deliver good title-modern cases, 28 A.L.R.4th 1007 (1984).

(n3)Footnote 3. Bailie v. Ridker, 249 Minn. 161, 81 N.W.2d 798, 806 (1957) .

See also McLeod v. Wilson, 445 So. 2d 280, 282 (Ala. 1984) ("Acceptance by the seller is conclusive evidence of the fact that the purchaser was ready, able, and willing, thereby dispensing with the necessity of a factual determination on the issue.").

Accord Heinrich v. R.L. Oil & Gas Co., Inc., 442 N.W.2d 467 (S.D. 1989) .

*But see F. Richard Wolff & Son, Inc. v. Tutora, 2008 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3519, 4, 2008 NY Slip Op 3583 (Apr. 22, 2008) (where the mere signing of a contract does not establish that the buyer is financially able to complete the transaction and meet the purchase price).

(n4)Footnote 4. *United Investors, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 178, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 441, 477 N.E.2d 40, 42 (1985) ("Where a seller of real estate, enters into an enforceable contract of sale with a purchaser procured by a broker, the readiness, willingness and ability of the purchaser is no longer open to question and the broker's right to compensation accrues whether or not the sale is completed."); Door Knob Realty, Inc. v. James Northrop, 86 Misc. 2d 675, 383 N.Y.S.2d 484, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2503 (Sup. Ct. 1976) . But see Dabbs v. Southern Real Estate, Inc., 2008 Ala. Civ. App. LEXIS 3, at 9 (Jan. 11, 2008) (where it was not necessary for the seller to have accepted the buyers' purchase offer in order for the broker to be entitled to a commission), cert. denied, 2008 Ala. LEXIS 78 (Ala. Apr. 25, 2008) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Oregon Home Builders v. Montgomery Inv. Co., 94 Or. 349, 363, 184 P. 487, 492 (1919) (citations omitted). But see Brown v. Grimm, 258 Or. 55, 481 P.2d 63 (1971) (rejecting "acceptance" doctrine).

(n6)Footnote 6. Door Knob Realty, Inc. v. Northrop, 86 Misc. 2d 675, 383 N.Y.S.2d 484, 486, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2503 (Sup. Ct. 1976) (citations omitted); Agency, Broad and Cornelia Street, Inc. v. Lavigne, 470 N.Y.S.2d 729, 730, 1983 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 20724 (3d Dept. 1983) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Door Knob Realty, Inc. v. Northrop, 86 Misc. 2d 675, 383 N.Y.S.2d 484, 486, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2503 (Sup. Ct. 1976) (citations omitted).

(n8)Footnote 8. Bushnell Real Estate, Inc. v. Nielson, 672 P.2d 746, 751 (Utah 1983) .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g.:

California: Kopf v. Milam, 60 Cal. 2d 600, 35 Cal. Rptr. 614, 387 P.2d 390 (1963) (sales contract was subject to buyer assuming existing loan).

Illinois: Telander v. Posejpal, 94 Ill. App. 3d 616, 625, 49 Ill. Dec. 590, 598, 418 N.E.2d 444, 452 (1981) (holding that because the contract was dependent on loan conditions, agreement to pay real estate commission was also dependent on loan condition unless seller waived ready, willing and able requirement).

Iowa: Mullenger v. Clause, 178 N.W.2d 420 (Iowa 1970) .

New York: Stiefvater Real Estate, Inc. v. Hinsdale, 812 F.2d 805, 808 (2d Cir. 1987) (no presumption of buyer's readiness, willingness or ability when contract of sale was conditioned on purchaser obtaining a mortgage).

Missouri: Dark v. MRO Mid-Atlantic Corp., 876 S.W.2d 714 (Mo. App. 1994) (holding that contract conditioned on senior management approval of corporate buyer was not binding and enforceable and the buyer never became ready, willing and able to purchase).

Pennsylvania: Shumaker v. Lear, 235 Pa. Super. 509, 345 A.2d 249 (1975) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Cooper v. Liberty Nat'l Bank of Chicago, 332 Ill. App. 459, 75 N.E.2d 769 (1947) .

Cf. The Huffines Co., LLC v. Lockhart, 365 S.C. 178, 194-195, 617 S.E.2d 125, 133 (S.C. Ct. App. 2005) , rehearing denied, 2005 S.C. App. LEXIS 190 (S.C. Ct. App., Aug. 26, 2005) (an option contract did not meet the requirement that a sale or transfer occur within six months of the expiration of the listing agreement in order to trigger payment of a commission).

(n11)Footnote 11. Kopf v. Milam, 60 Cal. 2d 600, 35 Cal. Rptr. 614, 387 P.2d 390 (1963) .

(n12)Footnote 12. Schumaker v. Lear, 235 Pa. Super. 509, 345 A.2d 249, 251, n.8 (1975) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See 345 A.2d 249, 251, n.8 (1975) (holding that seller is excused from paying the broker's commission where buyer allegedly obtained a mortgage nine days after the financing deadline).

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g.,

Cabry v. Ionidas, 122 Ill. App. 2d 167, 258 N.E. 2d 45 (1970) (involving purchasers who defaulted at closing, were unable to tender the down payment, and never executed a contract for a deed, court rejected broker's suit for a commission finding that the preliminary purchase agreement was conditioned upon the tender of the down payment at closing, and that when the seller signed the agreement he was not accepting the buyers as purchasers, irrespective of their financial ability to tender the down payment at closing).

(n15)Footnote 15. Moore and Moore Real Estate v. Aloj, 234 A.D.2d 683, 650 N.Y.S.2d 450, 451-51, 1996 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 12351 (3d Dept. 1996) (holding that broker failed to establish agreement on essential term and, in the absence of bad faith on seller's part, he was not entitled to brokerage commission).

See also Wilson v. W.E. Upchurch, 425 N.E.2d 236, 238 (Ind. App. 1981) .

(n16)Footnote 16. Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 158, 201 N.W.2d 514, 518 (1972) .

See also Wilson v. W.E. Upchurch, 425 N.E.2d 236, 238 (Ind. App. 1981) (noting that broker does not have to bring the buyer and seller to a binding enforceable purchase agreement before the broker earns his commission, but "[b]efore a broker is entitled to his commission he must prove 1) an actual sale of the real estate or 2) that he had secured a buyer who was ready, willing and able to purchase the property upon terms listed by the seller and the seller refuses to complete the transaction or 3) that by and through the procurement of the broker, a third party had entered into a valid executory contract with the seller for the purchase of the land.").

(n17)Footnote 17. Century 21 Blowers & Assocs., Inc. v. Product Credit Ass'n of Southeast Wisconsin, 487 N.W.2d 660 (Wis. App. 1992) .

Here, plaintiff produced buyers who, after negotiating with defendants, entered into a contract for the sale of the real property. Failure of the contract attributable to a purchaser's default is not attributable to the broker.

(n18)Footnote 18. Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson, 50 N.J. 528, 236 A.2d 843, 855 n.17 (1967) (involving broker's claim for a commission when the purchaser defaulted on the contract of sale, court stated "Execution of a contract to sell to the tendered purchaser, without more, will not bar the owner from relying upon the financial or other inability or failure of the buyer to complete his undertaking as an absolute defense to the broker's suit.").

See also:

Idaho: Strout Realty, Inc. v. Milhous, 107 Idaho 330, 334, 689 P.2d 222, 226 (Idaho App. 1984) (noting that minority rule modifies traditional rule of estoppel, which estops sellers from defending against a broker's claims for a commission once he accepts the buyer by entering a contract of sale, to enforcing estoppel once the closing has occurred).

Illinois: Daybreak Constr. Specialties, Inc. v. Saghatoleslami, 712 P.2d 1028, 1032 (Ill. App. 1985) (stating that "[i]n the absence of a completed sale, a broker is entitled to a commission only if he has procured a purchaser who is ready, willing, and able to consummate the sale on the terms and conditions prescribed by the seller, and the broker must prove that he has presented such a purchaser to the seller.").

Massachusetts: Bennett v. McCabe, 808 F.2d 178, 180 (1st Cir. 1987) ; Tristram's Landing, Inc. v. Wait, 367 Mass. 622, 629-30, 327 N.E.2d 727, 731 (1975) (holding that a seller need not pay a broker's commission if the broker's customer defaults on a signed purchase and sale agreement).

Oregon: Setser v. Commonwealth, Inc., 256 Or. 11, 470 P.2d 142 (1970) .

See generally Sonja A. Soehnel, Annotation, Modern View As To Right Of Real Estate Broker To Recover Commission From Seller-Principal Where Buyer Defaults Under Valid Contract of Sale, 12 A.L.R.4th 1083 (1981); Note, Ellsworth Dobbs, Inc. v. Johnson: A Reexamination of the Broker-Buyer-Seller Relationship in New Jersey, 23 Rutgers L. Rev. 83 (1968).

The New Jersey Supreme Court in Van Winkle & Liggett v. G.B.R. Fabrics, Inc., 511 A.2d 124 (N.J. 1986) , offered a succinct summary of the development of the minority rule:

Prior to Ellsworth Dobbs, the common-law rule was that in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, a real estate broker earned its commission by producing a willing and able purchaser who entered into a contract of sale. Any perceived ambiguity in the language of a listing agreement, such as a provision that the commission would be "paid on closing" or "payable when title passes," was often construed as controlling the time of the payment of the commission and not as a condition precedent to the broker's right to receive the commission. Even if title did not close because the buyer was financially unable to perform, the broker would still be entitled to a commission.

In rejecting this rule, we were mindful of the fact that when an owner lists his property with a broker, the owner invariably expects that the money for a brokerage commission will be paid out of the proceeds of sale. We noted that the owner's expectation is reasonable and consistent with the broker's expectation as to the kind of purchaser his engagement requires him to tender to the owner. A seller seeks a buyer who is able to close, not merely one who is able to sign a contract, and the risk of a financially incapable purchaser should be borne by the broker. Accordingly, we held that a seller's liability for the commission will arise only if the sale is consummated, unless the title "does not pass because of the owner's improper or frustrating conduct."

Van Winkle & Liggett v. G.B.R. Fabrics, Inc., 511 A.2d 124, 128--129 (N.J. 1986) (citations and footnotes omitted).

(n19)Footnote 19. Tristram's Landing, Inc. v. Wait, 367 Mass. 622, 327 N.E.2d 727 (1975) (citing Gaynor v. Laverdure, 362 Mass. 828, 291 N.E.2d 617 (1973) (applied the acceptance rule to award broker a commission despite purchaser's default)).

(n20)Footnote 20. Drake v. Hosley, 713 P.2d 1203, 1206 (Alaska 1986) ("In a practical world the true test of a willing buyer is not met at the time a purchase agreement is signed, but at the time of closing of title.").

(n21)Footnote 21. Drake v. Hosley, 713 P.2d 1203, 1206 (Alaska 1986) .

(n22)Footnote 22. Drake v. Hosley, 713 P.2d 1203, 1206 (Alaska 1986) .

(n23)Footnote 23. Drake v. Hosley, 713 P.2d 1203, 1206 (Alaska 1986) (stating that "absent default by the owner, the contract of sale must be performed by the buyer before liability for commission is imposed upon the owner").

See also:

Massachusetts: Benn v. Halyard Realty Trust (In re Halyard Realty Trust), 37 B.R. 260, 263 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1983) ("When a broker finds a buyer who enters into a purchase and sale agreement which is not consummated because of the seller's inability to deliver good title as promised, the broker has earned his commission even though title has not passed.").

New Jersey: Schenck v. HJI Assocs., 295 N.J. Super. 445, 685 A.2d 481 (N.J. Super A.D. 1996) (relying on the language of the lease agreement and the interrelationship of its provisions, the court held that the broker was entitled to a commission only if financing was obtained, notwithstanding a provision that the commission was to be earned upon the signing of the agreement).

Oregon: Setser v. Commonwealth, Inc., 256 Or. 11, 470 P.2d 142, 147 (1970) (noting that minority rule does not require buyer to completely perform all terms of an installment contract of sale before the broker is entitled to his commission; "if the broker has done everything necessary under the contract to close the sale and there remains only the payment of future installments, the broker need not wait until the future installments are paid before he is entitled to his commission.").

(n24)Footnote 24. Asset Realty, Inc. v. Guyuron, No. 70431, 1996 Ohio App. LEXIS 5620 (Ohio App. 8th Dist. 1996) (unpublished opinion) (stating that "[t]he law is clear that the record must demonstrate that the broker procured a ready, willing and able buyer before the court can find that the broker performed its part of the broker's agreement.").

(n25)Footnote 25. 274 N.W.2d at 183 .

(n26)Footnote 26. Goetz v. Anderson, 274 N.W.2d 175 (N.D. 1978) (in action involving rescission due to the seller's concerns about the buyer's financial ability, the broker failed to produce any evidence at trial that the seller's doubts about the financial ability of the purchaser were unfounded which would justify commission).

(n27)Footnote 27. Bennett v. McCabe, 808 F.2d 178 (1st Cir. 1987) (applying Massachusetts law). The Bennett court appeared to interpret the meaning of a "wrongful act" of the seller to include a defect in title or some other "innocent" act of the seller. However, the Massachusetts Supreme Court criticized this ruling, without explicitly overruling it, in Hillis v. Lake, 421 Mass. 537, 658 N.E.2d 687 (1995) . The case involved a seller's representation that there were no hazardous materials. It was later discovered that there were hazardous materials and this resulted in a failure to close. The court ruled that the seller's misrepresentation was not a "wrongful act" within the Ellsworth Dobbs rule because it was only a representation, made in good faith, and not a promise. 421 Mass. 537, 658 N.E.2d 687 .

But see Hillis v. Lake, 421 Mass. 537, 658 N.E.2d 687 (Mass. 1995) .

(n28)Footnote 28. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Nugent v. Del Vecchio, 415 A.2d 1339, 1341 (Conn. Super. 1980) .

Illinois: Telander v. Posejpal, 94 Ill. App. 2d 616, 418 N.E.2d 444 (1981) (holding that when the seller refuses to perform on the contract, the broker must still prove that the buyer was ready, willing and able to purchase the property on the proposed terms); United Investors, 132 Ill. App. 3d 175, 179, 87 Ill. Dec. 439, 442, 477 N.E.2d 40, 43 (1985) .

Minnesota: Century 21-Birdsell Realty, Inc. v. Hiebel, 379 N.W.2d 201 (Minn. App. 1985) (finding that where the seller's repudiation made it unnecessary for the buyer to proceed with the loan process, that the broker had until the closing date to establish the buyer's financial ability).

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g.:

New Jersey: Stanchak v. Cliffside Park Lodge No. 1527 L.O.M., Inc., 116 N.J. Super. 471, 282 A.2d 775 (1971) .

New Hampshire: Philbrick v. Chase, 95 N.H. 82, 58 A.2d 317 (1948) .

California: Woodbridge Realty v. Plymouth Development Corp., 130 Cal. App. 2d 270, 278 P.2d 713 (1955) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Perper v. Edell, 160 Fla. 477, 35 So. 2d 387 (1948)

Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 445(e).

(n31)Footnote 31. See, e.g.:

Minnesota: Century 21-Birdsell Realty, Inc. v. Hiebel, 379 N.W.2d 201 (Minn. App. 1985) (change of mind).

California: Russell v. Ramm, 254 P. 532 (1927) (spouse refused to sell).

(n32)Footnote 32. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: Potter v. Ridge Realty Corp., 28 Conn. Super. 304, 259 A.2d 758 (1969) (rejecting claim that it is seller's burden to prove affirmatively that prospect lacked financial ability to complete transaction).

Florida: Perper v. Edell, 160 Fla. 477, 35 So. 2d 387 (1948) .

Washington: Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wn. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191 (1976) .

New York: Globerman v. Lederer, 281 A.D. 39, 117 N.Y.S.2d 549 (1st Dept. 1952) .

New Jersey: Stanchak v. Cliffside Park Lodge No. 1527 L.O.M., Inc., 116 N.J. Super. 471, 282 A.2d 775 (1971) .

* This chapter was revised by Roslyn K. Myers, a writer and attorney working in New York City; B.A., University of California, Berkeley; J.D., Fordham University School of Law; a member of the New York, Washington D.C., Connecticut, Minnesota and Wisconsin bars. It was previously revised by Linda Breen Pierce, a member of the State Bar of California. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq. and Mary Fallon, Esq.

109 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 5 The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

10-5 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 5.04

§ 5.04 Seller May Waive Ready, Willing and Able Requirement

[1] Seller May Investigate Purchaser's Financial Ability

A seller may waive the requirement that the proffered buyer be ready, willing and able to purchase the property, and agree to accept the purchaser regardless of his or her financial ability. n1 Waiver can occur in both classes of cases in which the purchaser's financial ability may be an issue, i.e., in cases in which an owner refuses to sign a contract and in cases involving an executed sales contract and a subsequent failure to close.

The most compelling argument for waiver by the owner is "where there has been affirmative evidence that the seller investigated the financial ability of the prospective buyer and after due investigation satisfied himself of that ability, thereby waiving the conditions of readiness, willingness and ability to purchase." n2 When a seller makes an independent determination as to the purchaser's financial ability to complete the transaction, the seller may not use failure of the ready, willing and able requirement as a defense to payment of the broker's commission. n3

Once the seller approves and accepts the buyer, and executes a written contract of sale with the buyer, the broker becomes entitled to a commission. n4

[2] Seller's Repudiation Prior to Contract Does Not Amount to Waiver

[a] Broker Must Prove Purchaser's Financial Ability

When a seller reneges prior to contract signing, the courts generally hold that the broker is not excused from offering proof of a financially able buyer unless the seller rejected on grounds of the buyer's financial inability. Four issues must be considered:

(1) What if the seller gives no reason for rejecting the offer other than that he or she has had a change of heart about selling?

(2) Should the seller be estopped from later claiming that the buyer procured by the broker was not "able" when the broker sues for a commission?

(3) Should the seller be deemed to have waived the "able" purchaser requirement by failing to base his or her rejection on that ground, thereby relieving the broker of the broker's usual burden to prove financial ability when no binding sales contract has been executed?

(4) Should it make any difference whether the seller had initially agreed, either orally or in writing, to enter into a contract of sale with the prospective buyer, but later backed away from the deal on grounds other than the purchaser's lack of financial ability?

[b] Broker Must Prove That Performance Could Have Occurred but for Repudiation

To recover his or her commission, "the broker must show that he did perform or could have performed had the contract not been repudiated." n5 Based on general principles of contract law, the financial ability of the purchaser is considered a substantial condition. A broker must "prove performance of the conditions precedent to the duty of the seller to pay a commission, to wit, to prove production of a 'ready, able and willing' buyer." n6 Otherwise, brokers could recover for full performance when no performance whatsoever had been given. Thus, "the broker must show that the condition could have occurred had its performance not been prevented by the seller." n7

[c] Determination Depends on Seller's Basis for Repudiation

When sellers change their minds about parting with their property and give no additional reason for rejecting the offer to buy, many courts have held that the sellers have not waived the condition that the broker procure a buyer who is ready, willing and able to buy on the sellers' terms. Accordingly, the broker must still prove that the prospective purchaser was financially able to meet the terms of the listing in order to recover a commission on the brokerage agreement itself. n8

A seller cannot be said to have waived the financial inability of the buyer as a defense simply because the seller gives no reason for rejecting the offer. n9 On the other hand, if the seller does give a reason for rejecting an offer, but that reason does not relate to the buyer's financial ability and is not legally justifiable, many courts prevent the owner from raising the issue of the buyer's financial ability at time of trial. n10

A few courts have applied the "acceptance" by contract doctrine to a seller who has agreed, orally or in writing, to enter into a contract of sale and who has failed to specify that he or she was reneging on grounds of financial ability. n11 At least one court has stated the rationale for such a result as follows:

In a contested case of this nature the agent ordinarily must also prove the prospective buyer's financial ability to consummate the transaction The owner's right to require such proof, however, may be waived, and is waived when the owner changes his mind and unqualifiedly and absolutely refuses to complete the contract of purchase. In that case the agent is relieved of the necessity of going forward or proceeding further, since the law does not require the doing of a useless thing The owner may not defeat the agent's right to a commission under these circumstances by refusing to consummate the transaction on the ground that they changed their minds and decided not to sell. n12

A seller who revokes an earlier acceptance cannot defeat a broker's claim upon grounds not originally stated. n13 Some courts, however, have rejected the argument that by orally agreeing to contract with the buyer the seller has "accepted" the buyer as financially able. n14

In several of the cases that have concluded that the broker is relieved of the burden of proving financial ability when the seller reneges on an oral agreement to sell, the court concluded that there was in fact sufficient evidence of the prospective buyer's financial ability. n15

Furthermore, if the seller interferes with or prevents the buyer from establishing his or her financial ability, the seller will not be able to use the buyer's lack of financial ability as a defense. n16

When the seller comes to terms with the buyer and agrees, either orally or in writing, to enter into a contract of sale but later reneges on a ground other than the buyer's financial inability, should the result be different from that reached in cases in which the offer is rejected from the outset? Here, again, there is no binding contract from which to conclude that the seller has "accepted" the buyer; and again, principles of contract law would seem to require that the broker prove that, but for the wrongful prevention by the seller, the broker could have satisfied the condition that he or she procure an "able" buyer. n17

The lesson to be drawn from these cases is that there is no facile formula that permits relying on the owner's failure to object to the purchaser's financial ability at the time of rejection as a means to escape the burden of proving financial ability. The vast majority of states require the broker to prove the financial ability of the buyer as an affirmative element in the broker's case, even if the owner did not object to the buyer's financial ability at the time of rejection. Prudence dictates that the broker should be wary of seeking to avoid the burden of proving financial ability when an owner reneges on an oral agreement to sell by relying on a claim of waiver or "acceptance."

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Welek Realty, Inc. v. Juneau, 596 S.W.2d 495 (Mo. App. 1980) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Telander v. Posejpal, 94 Ill. App. 3d 616, 418 N.E.2d 444 (1981) (finding no evidence of waiver).

(n3)Footnote 3. Wood v. Johnson, 264 N.E.2d at 262-263 (court refused to vacate a default judgment against the seller in a brokerage commission action because the defendant-seller had exercised independent judgment as to the buyer's financial ability before signing the contract of sale, and therefore had no meritorious defense).

(n4)Footnote 4. Wood v. Johnson, 264 N.E.2d at 262-263

The Wood court stated:

The circumstance that the purchaser was held in default following the execution of the contract would be no defense to [a] suit for [a] broker's commission under the contract, since defendant accepted the purchaser after investigating his financial stability. Where a seller had obtained credit reports or makes an independent investigation, and thereafter executes an agreement to sell to such purchaser, the transaction amounts to a conclusive arrangement between the seller and the buyer, and the actions of the seller in concluding such contract, following receipt of credit reports, amounts to a waiver of a condition relating to the readiness, willingness and ability of the purchaser to complete the transaction, that might otherwise have obtained.

Id. at 262-263.

See, e.g.:

New Jersey: Stanchak v. Cliffside Park Lodge No. 1527 L.O.M., Inc., 116 N.J. Super. 471, 282 A.2d 775 (1971) (change of heart).

Washington: Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wn. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191 (1976) (change of heart).

Wisconsin: Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 (1972) (seller offered no reasons for rejecting offer).

(n5)Footnote 5. Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wash. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191 (1976) (citations omitted) (in action involving seller who, when presented with an earnest money agreement signed by the proposed purchaser, stated that he had decided not to sell the property no matter what offer was presented, court rejected broker's contention that a seller who so repudiates is estopped from defending an action on the ground of failure of the condition that the broker present an "able" buyer).

(n6)Footnote 6. Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wash. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191, 195, n.52 (1976) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wash. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191, 194 (1976) .

Massachusetts: Real Advantage, Inc. v. Howard H. Hood, 2000 Mass. Super. Lexis 404 (Sup. Ct. Mass 2000) citing Tristram's Landing, 367 Mass. at 629 (broker earns a commission even though the transaction is not consummated so long as (1) the broker produces a ready, willing, and able buyer (2) the purchaser and seller enter into a binding contract, and (3) there is a wrongful conduct on the part of the seller which undermines completion of the sale.

(n8)Footnote 8. 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 .

(n9)Footnote 9. 552 P.2d at 195, citing Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 (1972) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Russell v. Ramm, 254 P. 532 (Cal. 1927) (owner's stated reason for rejecting offer was his wife's refusal to sell; held: owner could not thereafter defend the broker's claim on buyer's lack of financial ability. It should be noted that court went on to find that there was evidence of the buyer's financial ability).

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g.:

Minnesota: Bailie v. Ridker, 249 Minn. 161, 81 N.W.2d 798 (1957) (holding that presumption of purchaser's financial ability arises on an oral agreement to sell after the seller's attorney reviewed the buyer's financial status).

Missouri: Welek Realty, Inc. v. Juneau, 596 S.W.2d 495 (Mo. App. 1980) (seller who changed mind about selling after orally agreeing to terms with broker's customer waived proof of financial ability).

New York: Door Knob Realty, Inc. v. Northrop, 86 Misc. 2d 675, 383 N.Y.S.2d 484, 1976 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 2503 (Sup. Ct. 1976) (oral agreement to enter into contract constitutes acceptance unless seller's subsequent refusal to sign the contract is based upon the buyer's alleged financial incapacity).

(n12)Footnote 12. Welek, 596 S.W.2d at 497, n. 46 above.

(n13)Footnote 13. Julian James Stores, Inc. v. Bennett, 250 Ark. 279, 465 S.W.2d 94 (1971) (buyer was financially able based on the purchaser's testimony that he was in the retail furniture business, he owned a farm, he had interests in other businesses and that he was able to come up with the down payment money). In Julian James, the seller revoked because he wanted to sell the property in lots at a higher price. However, the buyer was financially acceptable to the seller. When the seller revoked the acceptance and increased the price, the seller stated that he hoped the buyer would be the purchaser at the new, higher price. The court acknowledged that other courts create an exception to the doctrine of waiver if the objection was one for which there was no cure, such as the buyer's financial inability.

250 Ark. 279, 465 S.W.2d 94 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g.,

Arkansas: Julian James Stores, Inc. v. Bennett, 250 Ark. 279, 465 S.W.2d 94 (1971) .

Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (1974)

Vermont: Arjay Properties, Inc. v. Hicks, 143 Vt. 335, 465 A.2d 777 (1983) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Russell v. Ramm, 254 P. 532 (Cal. 1927) ; Julian James Stores, Inc. v. Bennett, 250 Ark. 279, 465 S.W.2d 94 (1971) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g.:

South Dakota: Heinrich v. R.L. Oil & Gas Co., Inc. 442 N.W.2d 467 (1989) (seller failed to provide sufficient information required by the SBA, and the sale never was consummated).

New York: Roberts v. H. Gin Realty Corp., 185 A.D.2d 209, 586 N.Y.S.2d 264 (1992) (seller's withdrawal of property after an oral agreement was reached thwarted the buyer's efforts to syndicate the purchase).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Peter M. Chalik & Assocs. v. Hermes, 56 Wis. 2d 151, 201 N.W.2d 514 (1972) (seller offered no reasons for rejecting offer).

* This chapter was revised by Roslyn K. Myers, a writer and attorney working in New York City; B.A., University of California, Berkeley; J.D., Fordham University School of Law; a member of the New York, Washington D.C., Connecticut, Minnesota and Wisconsin bars. It was previously revised by Linda Breen Pierce, a member of the State Bar of California. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq. and Mary Fallon, Esq.

110 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 5 The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

10-5 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 5.05

§ 5.05 Broker Has Burden of Proving Financial Ability of Purchaser

[1] Determination Is Fact-Based

When evidence is required of the purchaser's financial ability, the broker has the burden of proving that he or she has produced a ready, willing and able buyer n1 by a preponderance of the evidence. n2 The fact that the word "able" is omitted from the listing agreement does not relieve the broker of this burden of proof. n3 However, the broker must offer tangible evidence from which the trier of fact may reasonably infer the competency of the purchaser to complete the transaction. n4 The matter ought not to be left to innuendo or speculation; proof and not "irresistible inferences, ... [is] required, facts and not surmises." n5 The nature and quality of evidence that is sufficient to establish a purchaser's financial ability, or lack thereof, is discussed in § 5.05[2] below.

[2] Broker Must Show That Purchaser Is Ready, Willing and Able During Negotiations

[a] Seller May Reject Purchaser if Broker Fails to Provide Adequate Proof

A key issue is whether the broker must present evidence of the purchaser's financial ability to the owner at the time the offer is made or whether this can be established at a later time, usually at trial. The answer will depend on a number of factors. If the owner questions the purchaser's financial ability during the offer and negotiation phase, the broker must show that such financial ability was communicated to the seller in a sufficiently objective manner before any duty on the part of the owner arises. If the broker fails to do this, notwithstanding the fact that the purchaser may in fact be financially able to complete the transaction, the owner may have a legally justifiable reason to reject the offer. For example, if the owner requests financial information on the buyer but the broker fails to provide such information or offers only his own statements regarding buyers' ability, this will be insufficient. n6 Proving purchaser is ready, willing, and able to complete a transaction requires more than the broker's assurances about the purchaser's general characteristics. Seller must be reasonably satisfied that the purchaser can complete the transaction, including making mortgage payments.

[b] Seller May Accept Subsequent Purchaser Prior to Accepting First

The issue of timing is critical when a seller receives an offer from a buyer, and then subsequently receives and accepts an offer from a second buyer. Is the seller obligated to pay a commission to the broker of the first buyer? The answer is no unless, at the time of acceptance of the second buyer, the first buyer was both

- legally obligated to purchase, by either tendering a deposit or signing a written offer; and
- financially able to purchase. n7

If the first buyer has not tendered a deposit or signed a written offer, the seller may accept a subsequent purchaser. Seller's acceptance of a subsequent purchaser may negate the seller's obligations to pay commission to the original purchaser's broker. Verbal discussions between the first buyer and the seller's attorney do not legally obligate either party. In such cases, the owner does not owe a commission to the broker of the first buyer. n8

As to the "able" requirement, the owner is free to reject the offer of the first buyer if the owner doubts the buyer's financial ability based on a reasonable evaluation of facts. n9 As one court explained, "The seller has it within his power to reject an offer of purchase if he doubts the prospective purchaser's ability ... such rejection must be based on a reasonable evaluation of the facts." n10 Would-be buyers cannot tie up property until they become financially able, nor can their brokers expect to get a commission if the sellers find another buyer in the meantime.

An issue of timing also can be critical in cases when the seller and buyer have executed a sales contract. If the contract is contingent on the buyer obtaining financing within a limited period of time, and he fails to do so, resulting in the owner terminating the contract, the broker may not later argue that the buyer could have obtained financing had the owner not terminated. n11

Practice Note

Practitioners representing purchasers should be sure to include a clause in the contract of sale conditioning the sale on purchaser's obtaining adequate financing. In such cases, practitioners representing sellers should recognize that purchaser's failure to obtain financing may negate seller's obligation to pay the broker's commission.

Whether an owner's failure to specifically raise the purchaser's lack of financial ability at the time the buyer is rejected constitutes a waiver of this requirement is discussed in § 5.04 above.

[3] Testimony Regarding Purchaser's Ability May Be Presented at Trial

[a] Purchaser May Testify to Readiness, Willingness and Ability

At trial, the purchaser's testimony, if strong and plausible, and especially if supported by evidence that the purchaser is a person of substance, can be sufficient to establish a prima facie case that the purchaser was financially able. At least one court has held that a buyer's self-serving testimony stating that he or she was able to go through with the transaction is not a mere expression of opinion but essentially a statement of fact—a thought that is expressed in the form of a conclusion that rests upon facts known to the speaker. n12

Thus, in some instances, a purchaser's testimony that is self-serving and general in nature can be sufficient to establish financial ability. n13

But this is not a reliable rule. It is usually not sufficient to have a witness merely assert that he or she has the necessary funds or that he or she is able to perform. n14 Similarly, statements by the broker that the buyer was able to perform generally will not be sufficient to establish the purchaser's financial ability without further evidence substantiating this claim. n15 As one court stated: "some facts must be adduced, beyond the mere conclusion of the prospective purchaser, that he could have performed his obligations in the transaction." n16 The determination in each case has less to do with the specific testimony of the purchaser and more to do with whether the court views the purchaser as a "person of substance." This concept is analyzed in detail in § 5.02 above .

Practice Note

Purchasers may be reluctant to testify, but should be encouraged to do so. Although the prospective purchasers are not directly involved in the controversy between the broker and seller, they may be called upon to disclose their financial affairs--a disclosure that they may resent, resulting in a reluctance to speak freely when they take the stand as witnesses. However, by utilization of proper discovery devices, i.e., deposition and subpoena duces tecum, procuring information about the prospective purchaser's financial affairs should be possible.

[b] After Purchaser Testifies, Burden of Proof Shifts to Seller

After the purchaser testifies, the burden shifts to the owner to overcome the broker's case either through cross-examination or affirmative evidence of the lack of the buyer's financial ability. n17 More than one court has commented on the owner's failure to cross examine the purchaser to support a finding that the purchaser's testimony was sufficient to establish financial ability. n18

Practice Note

The purchaser's own testimony is often the most essential evidence in establishing the purchaser's financial ability to buy. Courts also give weight to testimony of businesses related to credit or banking.

[c] Financial Experts May Testify

In addition to the purchaser's own testimony, testimony from others who are in a business related to credit, banking and similar businesses can be very effective. For example, testimony from a representative of Dunn & Bradstreet, a commercial rating agency, was properly admitted over a hearsay objection on the issue of the prospective purchaser's financial responsibility and general business standing. n19

Counsel must be conscious of the need to establish financial ability by competent, admissible and relevant evidence. The hearsay rule has stymied more than one broker suing for a commission. n20 However, if not objected to, such hearsay testimony may well be binding on an appellate court in a jurisdiction that limits the scope of appellate review. n21 Or an appellate court may rule that the admission of hearsay testimony is nonreversible error. n22

As discussed in § 5.02[5] above, evidence of a subsequent purchase by the buyer will generally not be deemed relevant and admissible in deciding the buyer's financial ability. However, there may be some creative ways around this rule. The testimony of a loan representative regarding a loan made to a buyer may be relevant and admissible. n23 Such a witness's familiarity with the buyer's financial situation and credit standing provide the foundation for the witness to answer a hypothetical question about whether the lender would have made a loan to the buyer. n24

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

California: Abbott v. Floyd, 136 Cal. App. 365, 28 P.2d 929 (1934) .

Connecticut: Potter v. Ridge Realty Corp., 28 Conn. Super. 304, 259 A.2d 758 (1969) .

Kansas: Winkelman v. Allen, 214 Kan. 22, 519 P.2d 1377 (1974) .

Washington: Record Realty, Inc. v. Hull, 15 Wn. App. 826, 552 P.2d 191 (Wash. 1976) .

Cf. Property House, Inc. v. Kelley, 715 P.2d 805 (Haw. 1986) (holding that once vendors accepted purchaser and its offer by agreeing to terms of sale, subsequent bad faith of sellers preventing sale from being consummated caused burden to shift to vendors to show purchaser was not a ready, willing, and able buyer, in absence of which broker was entitled to a real estate commission without being required to show financial ability of purchaser).

(n2)Footnote 2. R. Zemper & Assoc. v. Scozzafava, 28 Conn. App. 557, 560, 611 A.2d 449, 450 (1992) ; William T. Beazley Co. v. Streeto, 20 Conn. App. 718, 721, 570 A.2d 233 (1990) (plaintiff must show by a preponderance of the evidence that the buyer it produced was ready, willing and financially able to make purchase).

(n3)Footnote 3. Goetz v. Anderson, 274 N.W.2d 175 (N.D. 1978) .

How the courts define a "financially able" purchaser is discussed at length in § 5.02 above . No hard and fast rules can be formulated; financial ability is, after all, a question of fact and must necessarily turn on the facts of each case as explained in § 5.02 above .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Globerman v. Lederer, 281 A.D. 39, 117 N.Y.S.2d 549, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3061 (1st Dept. 1952) . Accord Stiefvater Real Estate, Inc. v. Hinsdale, 812 F.2d 805, 808 (2d Cir. 1987) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Jaffe v. Lederer, 1920 N.Y. Misc. LEXIS 1778, 184 N.Y.S. 585, 587 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1st Dept. 1920) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Gatlinburg Real Estate Co., Inc. v. Booth, 651 S.W.2d 203 (Tenn. App. 1983) (broker assurances that buyers were "strong" and "fine people" held to be insufficient to provide owner with reasonable assurance and satisfaction that the buyers were able to complete the purchase).

(n7)Footnote 7. Wood v. Strodtbeck, 142 Mont. 180, 382 P.2d 170 (1963) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Wood v. Strodtbeck, 142 Mont. 180, 382 P.2d 170, 173 (1963) (seller did not reject the buyer outright, but sold to another buyer while the first buyer was trying to raise the down payment money).

(n9)Footnote 9. Wood v. Strodtbeck, 142 Mont. 180, 382 P.2d 170 (1963) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Wood v. Strodtbeck, 142 Mont. 180, 382 P.2d 170, 173 (1963) . In this case, the court supported the owner's rejection of a buyer who was a young man who had not yet come up with down payment money. This buyer was employed, had a good reputation and owned some assets, including 90 head of cattle. The loan agent testified that the security for the loan was ample and the buyer would be able to repay the loan. The buyer planned to raise the down payment money (plus money to buy owner's cattle) by mortgaging his own cattle and the owner's cattle and obtaining a loan from future in-laws. The buyer did in fact raise the money to complete the transaction, but was a few days too late. The owner sold the property to another buyer one day before the first buyer was ready to consummate the purchase. Presumably, if the first buyer had signed a written offer and had obtained some written assurances of the mortgage commitment and the loan commitment from his in-laws, the broker could have prevailed. This case illustrates how important timing is in real estate transactions.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Shumaker v. Lear, 345 A.2d 249 (Pa. Super. 1975) (explaining this variation to its usual "acceptance" doctrine (upon signing of the contract) by concluding that there is no enforceable contract when a finance contingency is included); see also § 5.03[2] above for discussion of the effect of a conditional sales contract in a jurisdiction adhering to the traditional rule of acceptance.

(n12)Footnote 12. Driscoll v. Bunar, 328 Mass. 398, 103 N.E.2d 809, 812 (Mass. 1952) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g.:

Arkansas: Sarna v. Fairweather, 248 Ark. 742, 453 S.W.2d 715 (Ark. 1970) (buyer's testimony that she owned quite a bit of real estate and had the required $35,000 cash payment, along with testimony from a witness who had participated in making loans to the buyer in the past, was sufficient to establish the buyer's financial ability).

California: Russell v. Ramm, 254 P. 532 (Cal. 1927) (one buyer's testimony that the buyers were able to raise the down payment, and had considerable property and money in the bank, was sufficient. Court noted that since the buyer was familiar with the owner and lived in the area, the owner probably was equally familiar with the buyers' properties and financial standing).

(n14)Footnote 14. Cherry v. Montgomery, 242 Ark. 233, 412 S.W.2d 845 (1967) .

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g.:

Connecticut: R. Zemper & Assoc. v. Scozzafava, 28 Conn. App. 557, 611 A.2d 449 (1992) (broker's testimony that he always prequalified his buyers prior to showing them property was insufficient evidence of the purchaser's financial ability).

Florida: Sharp v. Long, 283 So. 2d 567 (1973) (the fact that the buyer made a deposit and the broker testified that the buyer intended to pay cash was insufficient by itself to show financial ability.)

(n16)Footnote 16. Globerman v. Lederer, 281 A.D. 39, 117 N.Y.S.2d 549, 552, 1952 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 3061 (1st Dept. 1952) ; see also Ramsdell v. Krehmke, 95 Cal. App. 195, 272 P. 333 (Cal. 1928) (buyer's testimony that she had the funds for most of the down payment with specifics of how she raised the money and when and where she deposited the funds, together with testimony from the bank manager confirming that the bank would loan the buyer the difference, was sufficient to establish buyer's financial ability).

(n17)Footnote 17. Russell v. Ramm, 254 P. 532 (Cal. 1927) ; Lathrop v. Gauger, 127 Cal. App. 2d 754, 274 P.2d 730 (Cal. 1954) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See, e.g.:

Florida: Mogul v. McClaskey Realty, Inc., 309 So. 2d 254 (Fla. 1975) (lack of rebuttal testimony by owner failed to challenge conclusion that buyer was "person of substance").

California: Pellaton v. Brunski, 69 Cal. App. 301, 231 P. 583 (1924) (finding that owner did not rebut presumption of the buyer's financial ability, that owner failed to cross examine buyer and that the buyer would not have gone to the trouble and expense of borrowing the needed funds if he had not had the balance himself).

(n19)Footnote 19. Perper v. Edell, 160 Fla. 477, 35 So. 2d 387 (Fla. 1948) .

(n20)Footnote 20.

Colorado: Horton-Cavey Realty Co. v. Reese, 34 Colo. App. 323, 527 P.2d 914 (1974) (there was no proof of financial ability when hearsay was stricken upon objection and purchaser was not called).

Illinois: Manxi v. Kimbley, 351 Ill. App. 377, 115 N.E.2d 343 (1953) (testimony by broker that prospective buyer was worth $1.5 million and owned various pieces of valuable property was inadmissible hearsay).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Gatlinburg Real Estate Co., Inc. v. Booth, 651 S.W.2d 203 (Tenn. App. 1983) (appellate court bound by trial court's findings on financial ability that were based on hearsay).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Drake v. Conkling, 129 N.H. 660, 531 A.2d 333 (N.H. 1987) (court held that the admission of the buyer's agent's testimony that the buyer was ready, willing and able to buy was at most a harmless error and not reversible).

(n23)Footnote 23. Scott v. Cravaack, 53 Ohio App. 2d 248, 7 Ohio Op. 3d 302, 372 N.E.2d 1375 (Ohio 1977) .

(n24)Footnote 24. Scott v. Cravaack, 53 Ohio App. 2d 248, 7 Ohio Op. 3d 302, 372 N.E.2d 1375 (Ohio 1977) .

* This chapter was revised by Roslyn K. Myers, a writer and attorney working in New York City; B.A., University of California, Berkeley; J.D., Fordham University School of Law; a member of the New York, Washington D.C., Connecticut, Minnesota and Wisconsin bars. It was previously revised by Linda Breen Pierce, a member of the State Bar of California. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq. and Mary Fallon, Esq.

111 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 5 The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

10-5 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 5.06

§ 5.06 Courts May Consider the Seller's and Buyer's Negotiations Occurring After Expiration of Listing Agreement

In determining whether a buyer was ready, willing, and able, under some circumstances a court may be entitled to consider the negotiations of the seller and buyer which extend beyond the expiration of a listing agreement. This was the holding in East Kendall Investments, Inc. v. Bankers Real Estate Partners.ⁿ²⁵ The exclusive listing agreement provided that the commission was to be paid if the broker, the seller, or any other party found a buyer ready, willing and able to purchase the property at the terms and for the price specified in the agreement. This agreement expired on August 10, 1996. The property was listed for sale at $3,950,000.

On August 9, 1996, a letter of intent was presented that contained a purchase price of $3,400,000. On August 13, 1996, the buyer increased his offer to $3,950,000, the full asking price. On August 16, 1996, the seller presented a counteroffer of $3,995,000--a figure above the original asking price. Negotiations continued until the buyer met the new asking price. On September 10, the seller orally accepted the buyer's letter of intent at the new price. On September 11, a second letter of intent was prepared on behalf of the buyer reflecting these terms. The seller failed to respond and the transaction did not proceed. The trial court found that the seller was responsible for the failure to consummate the sale.ⁿ²⁶

After the seller refused to pay the broker's commission, the broker sued alleging that it was entitled to a commission because it had produced a ready, willing, and able buyer during the term of the listing agreement. The seller argued that because the buyer's only offer before the expiration of the listing agreement was at a purchase price lower than the full listing price, the buyer could not have been ready, willing, and able. The seller also asserted that whatever happened after expiration of the listing agreement was legally irrelevant. The court disagreed. It stated that in determining whether the buyer was ready, willing, and able, the trial court was entitled to look at the parties' continuous negotiations, which extended beyond the expiration of the listing agreement, and culminated in an above-price offer on terms accepted by the seller.ⁿ²⁷

Another issue raised by the seller concerned the fact that the buyer had only presented a nonbinding letter of intent. The seller argued that since the buyer did not present his offer in a form which, if accepted, would be legally binding, it followed that the buyer could not be considered ready, willing, and able. Under the particular facts of this case the court disagreed because the seller was responsible for the failure to consummate the sale. However, the court noted that the seller was correct in asserting that a broker is ordinarily not deemed to have located a ready, willing, and able buyer if the buyer has presented the offer in the form of a legally nonbinding letter of commitment. n28 The court agreed that under normal circumstances, the presentation of the letter of intent would be insufficient to demonstrate that the buyer was ready and willing. However, since the seller failed to consummate the transaction, the broker was entitled to its commission. n29

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 25. 742 So. 2d 302, 304 (Fla. App. 1999) , rehearing denied.

(n2)Footnote 26. 742 So. 2d 302, 304 (Fla. App. 1999) , rehearing denied.

(n3)Footnote 27. 742 So. 2d 302, 304 (Fla. App. 1999) , rehearing denied.

(n4)Footnote 28. See Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 445, comment d. (1958).

(n5)Footnote 29. 742 So. 2d 302, 305-306 (Fla. App. 1999) , rehearing denied.

* This chapter was revised by Roslyn K. Myers, a writer and attorney working in New York City; B.A., University of California, Berkeley; J.D., Fordham University School of Law; a member of the New York, Washington D.C., Connecticut, Minnesota and Wisconsin bars. It was previously revised by Linda Breen Pierce, a member of the State Bar of California. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq. and Mary Fallon, Esq.

112 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART II The Broker's Obligation and Right to Compensation

CHAPTER 5 The "Ready, Willing and Able" Requirements--Proof of Purchaser's Financial Ability to Consummate the Transaction *

10-5 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 5.07

§ 5.07 Practitioner Checklists

[1] Checklist for Representing Brokers

Ideally, the broker will have clear evidence that the buyer had the cash needed for the down payment and, if not an actual written loan commitment, evidence of the ability to obtain any required financing.

(1) Obtain Early Third-Party Commitments: Unless the buyer has sufficient liquid cash to pay all cash for the property, the broker should encourage the buyer to obtain a firm, written commitment for any third-party financing as soon as possible in the offer and negotiation stage. If a contract is signed and the transaction is consummated, the work undertaken by the buyer to obtain early loan approval will simply make the transaction go more smoothly with less stress and uncertainty for both parties.

(2) Use Commitment as Negotiation Advantage: Written loan approval can facilitate the negotiations and offer a purchaser an advantage if there are other buyers bidding for the property who do not have loan approval.

(3) Establish Purchaser's Financial Ability: If, after the purchaser has obtained a loan commitment, the owner unreasonably refuses to accept an offer that conforms to the listing (or on such terms as agreed to by the parties), the evidence of the financial ability of the purchaser is in place.

(4) Communicate Financial Ability to Seller: The broker should communicate the buyer's financial ability to the owner at the time the offer is made. Otherwise there could be some question as to whether an owner may be justified in rejecting a purchaser based on lack of financial ability.

(5) Provide Additional Information When Requested: If the owner requests further information on the buyer's financial position, the broker should definitely arrange to provide any data that is the subject of a reasonable request.

(6) Obtain Evidence of Purchaser's Financial Ability: If the broker anticipates proving the purchaser's financial ability at trial, start gathering such evidence as soon as possible.

(7) Secure Early Cooperation from Purchaser: If the buyer has not obtained loan approval at the time the seller unreasonably rejects the buyer's offer or the contract is canceled, the broker should still attempt to identify evidence of the purchaser's financial ability as soon as possible. The broker is more likely to have the purchaser's cooperation and the facts may be easier to ascertain at this time rather than waiting for the trial.

(8) Obtain Written Documentation: Obtain as much written evidence of the buyer's financial ability as possible, e.g., copies of bank statements showing cash savings, employment records establishing income and tangible evidence of other assets such as stock certificates and deeds to property.

(9) Request a Letter from the Lender: If the buyer has a relationship with a lender, request that the lender write a letter stating, in effect, that if the buyer had applied for a loan, it would have been granted.

(10) Call Witnesses to Testify: At trial, counsel representing a broker should consider calling as witnesses people who can testify that the buyer is a "person of substance."

(11) Call Business Institutions to Testify: If the buyer is a business entity, testimony from banks, vendors, and other commercial institutions that do business with the buyer could be helpful.

(12) Obtain Written Documentation: Evidence in the form of credit reports, net worth statements, and tax returns can be effective.

[2] Checklist for Representing the Owner

(1) Advise Sellers Regarding Bases of Rejection: Proactive counseling when representing an owner is also advisable. Counsel should advise owners that they cannot arbitrarily reject an offer that conforms to the listing without incurring potential liability for the broker's commission.

(2) Advise Sellers that Change of Heart Does Not Change Commission Obligation: The fact that an owner has changed his or her mind or that an owner's spouse does not really want to sell is not sufficient justification to unilaterally terminate the brokerage agreement.

(3) Caution Seller to Carefully Evaluate Buyer's Financial Ability: An owner should be cautious about rejecting a purchaser based on lack of financial ability. It is important for the owner to evaluate the buyer's financial position before rejecting a buyer.

(4) Request Specific Financial Information: Evaluating a buyer's financial position may involve requesting specific information on how the buyer is going to pay for the property. If the owner does not do this, his or her rejection of the purchaser may be viewed as arbitrary and unreasonable.

(5) Condition Commission on Closing: One of the most effective tools in representing the owner on this issue is to provide in the brokerage agreement, unequivocally, that the broker earns his or her commission if, and only if, the transaction actually closes. If done properly, this will eliminate the issue of the purchaser's financial ability altogether.

(6) Cross-Examine Purchaser: At trial, counsel representing the owner should always cross-examine the purchaser. Failure to cross-examine the purchaser can result in a finding for the purchaser, even if the purchaser's testimony was general and conclusive in nature.

* This chapter was revised by Roslyn K. Myers, a writer and attorney working in New York City; B.A., University of California, Berkeley; J.D., Fordham University School of Law; a member of the New York, Washington D.C., Connecticut, Minnesota and Wisconsin bars. It was previously revised by Linda Breen Pierce, a member of the State Bar of California. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra Bullington, Esq. and Mary Fallon, Esq.

113 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation
CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 6.syn

§ 6.syn Synopsis to Chapter 6: Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

§ 6.01 Introduction

§ 6.02 Regulation

[1] Scope of Regulation

[a] Who Must Comply

[b] Activities Subject to Regulation

[c] Single Act Laws

[2] Licensing Agency Has Broad Authority

[3] Regulation of Advertising

[a] Disciplinary Proceedings Arising from Advertising Activities

[b] Regulation of Internet Advertising

[c] National Association of Realtors(R) Internet Data Exchange Policy

[4] Unlicensed Assistants and Office Staff

[5] Record Retention and Electronic Media

§ 6.03 Licensing Procedure

[1] In General

[2] Age

[3] Education

[4] Experience Requirements

[5] Residence and Reciprocity

[a] Residency

[b] Reciprocity

[6] Examination Requirements

[7] Entity Licensing

[8] Grounds for Denial of License

§ 6.04 License Terms and Renewal

[1] Terms of Licenses

[2] Continuing Education Requirements

§ 6.05 Suspension or Termination of License

[1] Grounds

[2] Administrative Procedures and Judicial Review

[3] Legislative Remedies

[a] In General

[b] Recovery Funds

§ 6.06 State Statutes

[1] Alabama

[2] Alaska

[3] Arizona

[4] Arkansas

[5] California

[6] Colorado

- [7] Connecticut
- [8] Delaware
- [9] District of Columbia
- [10] Florida
- [11] Georgia
- [12] Hawaii
- [13] Idaho
- [14] Illinois
- [15] Indiana
- [16] Iowa
- [17] Kansas
- [18] Kentucky
- [19] Louisiana
- [20] Maine
- [21] Maryland
- [22] Massachusetts
- [23] Michigan
- [24] Minnesota
- [25] Mississippi
- [26] Missouri
- [27] Montana
- [28] Nebraska
- [29] Nevada
- [30] New Hampshire
- [31] New Jersey

[32] New Mexico

[33] New York

[34] North Carolina

[35] North Dakota

[36] Ohio

[37] Oklahoma

[38] Oregon

[39] Pennsylvania

[40] Rhode Island

[41] South Carolina

[42] South Dakota

[43] Tennessee

[44] Texas

[45] Utah

[46] Vermont

[47] Virginia

[48] Washington

[49] West Virginia

[50] Wisconsin

[51] Wyoming

§ 6.07 Mortgage Foreclosure Consultants

[1] Regulation of Mortgage Foreclosure Consultants

[2] California Mortgage Foreclosure Consultants Act

§ 6.08 Film Location Representatives

§ 6.09 Apartment Information Vendors and Apartment Sharing Agents

114 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Scope

Scope

SCOPE

Chapter 6 discusses the licensing of real estate brokers, agents, and salespersons. Every state and the District of Columbia imposes licensure requirements on these real estate professionals. The justification for licensure and regulation of the real estate brokerage industry is the protection of the public from unlicensed, incompetent, and untrustworthy individuals.

Generally, states restrict who can be licensed. For example, most applicants must pass a written examination to show their competency before they can be licensed. Licensure is not automatic. Statutes frequently address grounds that would justify a real estate commission's decision to deny a license to an individual. Furthermore, each state regulates these professionals. Once individuals are licensed, they must comply with rules and regulations that address their conduct. Frequently, licensees must participate in continuing education in order to renew their licenses. Certain egregious conduct can result in licensees having their licenses suspended or revoked, or the imposition of disciplinary sanctions.

Chapter 6 discusses who must be licensed and the authority of the licensing authority (§ 6.02). About half of the states have provisions that make a single act of acting as an unlicensed broker or agent subject to penalties and fines. The licensing procedure is discussed, including some of the requirements common to most states such as minimum age, education, experience requirements, residency requirements, reciprocity with other jurisdictions, and examinations (§ 6.03). License terms and renewal requirements are discussed (§ 6.04) as are grounds for suspension or termination of a license (§ 6.05). The chapter also contains citations to each state's licensing requirements (§ 6.06). Additional topics include mortgage foreclosure consultants (§ 6.07), film location representatives (§ 6.08), apartment information vendors and apartment sharing agents (§ 6.09).

115 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.01

§ 6.01 Introduction

Most individuals employed in the private sector can pursue their occupations without official authorization, with little or no governmental oversight and without fear of sanctions such as the revocation or suspension of the right to pursue their careers. Certain private sector occupations, however, are so fraught with overriding public policy considerations that governmental intrusion is warranted. The medical and legal professions are examples of regulated professions. The real estate industry is yet another.

The real estate industry is regulated in all fifty states and the District of Columbia. n1 State government determines who can become a licensed real estate broker or salesperson. n1.1 The states establish minimum age, education and standards of acceptable conduct; provide criteria for license renewal and suspension; and can impose sanctions against licensed and unlicensed individuals and entities. n2 Real estate licensees are generally regulated for public policy reasons (i.e., to protect the public from incompetent and untrustworthy licensees). n2.1 Licensees owe duties of care not only to the real estate commissions that regulate them, but also to the public in general. n3 The public has a right to rely on a real estate licensee to be honest, trustworthy and have integrity. n4

While all states and the District of Columbia have statutes governing brokers and salespersons, the various state laws are not uniform. Minimum work experience, education and examination criteria vary from state to state. In an effort to find constancy and relationship among the various state laws, an organization was formed in 1930 called the National Association of Real Estate License Law Officials (NARELLO). It was established as a federation of real estate license law officials to assist each other in the administration and enforcement of license laws in the United States and Canada. In 1993, this organization's membership voted to change its name to Association of Real Estate License Law Officials (ARELLO) to better reflect the organization's international scope. ARELLO monitors licensing law provisions and has developed a Model License Law. n5 ARELLO has also addressed issues concerning real estate schemes and scams involving land sales, time-sharing, consumer fraud and misrepresentation. ARELLO's mission statement is as follows:

The primary purpose of this Association of Real Estate License Law Officials shall be better administration and enforcement of real estate license and regulatory laws in the member jurisdictions. This distinctive task of the Association is to help equip its members to fulfill their roles as regulators. That role is to protect the public interest in real estate brokerage transactions. Protecting the public interest does not mean advocating an industry or consumer position. Instead, it means assuring each individual's right to justice and equal opportunity under the law. Therefore, the public interest demands the regulator's best effort to achieve impartial administration of the law.

While it is beyond the scope of this chapter to examine every license law, the following discussion will emphasize the general rules and the NARELLO Model Law, along with significant exceptions as noted from state to state. ARELLO publishes an annual Digest of Real Estate License Laws. The cost of the 2010 Digest was $47.50. The current Digest can be obtained by writing or telephoning, or it can be ordered from ARELLO's web site:

ARELLO Address:

8361 S. Sangre De Cristo Road, Suite 250, Littleton, Colorado 80127; Phone: 303-979-6190;

Website: <http://www.arello.org>.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Stroman Realty, Inc. v. Antt, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16048, at *26 (S.D. Tex. July 28, 2005) .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See § 6.02 infra for definitions of "broker" and "salesperson." See also Crandall v. Grbic, 36 Kan. App. 2d 179, 198, 138 P.3d 365, 379 (2006) (Kansas Real Estate Brokers' and Salespersons' License Act deals with the process of getting and keeping a real estate license.).

(n3)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Smith v. Real Estate Agency, 148 Or. App. 62, 67-68, 939 P.2d 77, 79-80 (1997) . The court affirmed the Oregon Real Estate Commissioner's imposition of a penalty of $112,547.50 against an individual for engaging in professional real estate activities without a license.

Licensing laws affect a broker's right to compensation. The general rule is that a broker must be licensed to collect the broker's commission. However, issues may arise as to when the broker must possess the license in order to collect his commission. For a discussion of the effect of the licensing laws on these issues, see § 4.05 supra. See also Annot., Licensed Real-Estate Broker's Right to Compensation as Affected by Lack of License on the Part of Partners, Coadventurers, Employees, or Other Associates, 8 A.L.R.3d 523 (1966).

(n4)Footnote 2.1. See Huffman v. Cohen, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 51912, at *5 (N.D. Okla. June 19, 2009) , applying Oklahoma law; Robinson v. New Hampshire Real Estate Comm'n, 157 N.H. 729, 731, 958 A.2d 958, 960 (2008) . Fitzgerald v. Hutchins, 2009 ME 115, 983 A.2d 382, 390 (2009) ; Re/Max v. Wausau Ins. Cos., 162 N.J. 282, 744 A.2d 154, 158 (2000) . Sammarone v. Bovino, 395 N.J. Super. 132, 141-42, 928 A.2d 140, 146 (App. Div. 2007) , cert. denied, 193 N.J. 275, 937 A.2d 977 (2007) .

See also Chabott Petrosky Commer. Realtors v. Peterson, 859 A.2d 77, 79 (Del. 2004) (The Delaware Real Estate Commission regulates the licensing and conduct of real estate brokers. The Commission's primary purpose is to protect the general public, especially those persons who are direct recipients of services regulated by this chapter from unsafe practices, and from occupational practices which tend to reduce competition or fix the price of services rendered.).

(n5)Footnote 3. Henry S. Miller v. Treo Enters., 585 S.W.2d 674 (Tex. 1979) .

(n6)Footnote 4. Ellis v. Flink, 301 So. 2d 493 (Fla. 2d DCA 1974) .

(n7)Footnote 5. Note that the organization's model law continues to be called the NARELLO Model License Law.

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

116 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.02

§ 6.02 Regulation

[1] Scope of Regulation

[a] Who Must Comply

The transactions subject to licensing vary from state to state. As a general rule, once the state regulates persons or licensees, it extends its coverage to a broad scope of regulated activities and businesses.

The NARELLO Model License Law is typical. Section 3(4) of that model law broadly defines a "Broker" as:

an individual or professional association while acting for another for commissions or other compensation or the promise thereof, or a licensee under this chapter, while acting in his own behalf who:

- (a) Sells, exchanges, purchases, rents, or leases real estate.
- (b) Offers to sell, exchange, purchase, rent or lease real estate.
- (c) Negotiates, offers, attempts or agrees to negotiate the sale, exchange, purchase, rental or leasing of real estate.
- (d) Lists, offers, attempts or agrees to list real estate for sale, lease or exchange.
- (e) Auctions, offers, attempts or agrees to auction real estate.
- (f) Buys, sells, offers to buy or sell or otherwise deals in options on real estate or improvements thereon.
- (g) Collects, offers, attempts or agrees to collect rent for the use of real estate.
- (h) Advertises or holds himself out as being engaged in the business of buying, selling, exchanging, renting or leasing real estate.

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.02

(i) Assists or directs in the procuring of prospects, calculated to result in the sale, exchange, lease or rental of real estate.

(j) Assists or directs in the negotiation of any transaction calculated or intended to result in the sale, exchange, leasing or rental of real estate.

(k) Engages in the business of charging an advance fee in connection with any contract whereby he undertakes to promote the sale or lease of real estate either through its listing in a publication issued for such purpose or for referral of information concerning such real estate to brokers or both.

(l) Performs any of the foregoing acts as an employee of, or on behalf of, the owner of, or any person who has a real or equitable interest in, real estate for compensation.

A "salesperson" is defined under the NARELLO Model Act as "an individual or professional association other than the associate broker who is licensed under a broker."

The Model Act exempts the following persons from regulation:

- (1) a person who purchases property for his or her own account;
- (2) an attorney in fact under a duly executed and recorded power of attorney or for services rendered by an attorney at law in the performance of his or her duty as an attorney at law;
- (3) any person acting as a receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, administrator, executor or guardian while acting under a court order or under the authority of a will or a trust instrument;
- (4) any person acting as a resident manager when such resident manager resides in the dwelling and is engaged in the leasing of property in connection with his or her employment;
- (5) any officer employed with a federal agency in the performance or conduct of his or her official duties;
- (6) any officer or employee of the state government or any political subdivision thereof in performing his or her official duties.

Most of these exemptions are for people acting in the scope of their official capacity. They are narrowly construed to limit the exempted conduct. One noteworthy exception is attorneys. Most statutes recognize that attorneys engage in the negotiation of real estate transactions on a regular basis in their capacity as attorneys. Not to exempt attorneys would require state brokerage licensure for performing legal functions if those functions fell under that state's definition of a brokerage function.

This statutory exemption varies from state to state. Some states provide wholesale exemptions for lawyers, apparently feeling that lawyers have the ability to engage in brokerage functions without any regulation. In some states lawyers are given broker's licenses merely upon application to the department regulating real estate licensees. Other statutes, including the Model Act, exempt lawyers only when they act in their capacity as lawyers. Under this form of statute, a lawyer could not sue for a real estate commission or otherwise engage in brokerage activities unless licensed to do so.

n1 Other states simply prohibit splitting commissions with non-licensees. n2 Virtually all state statutes require that real estate salespersons receive their compensation through a sponsoring broker. n2.01 Therefore, if an attorney is not a licensed broker, he cannot employ a salesperson to engage in the real estate business.

It may be illogical to think that a license to practice law should exempt a person from real estate licensure. Such loose regulation does not support the general theory of real estate licensure (i.e., to protect the public from incompetent licensees engaging in the business). A second problem involves disciplinary matters. If the attorney is performing a brokerage function, the state bar does not have jurisdiction; if the attorney is not licensed as a broker, the real estate licensing agency has no jurisdiction. This lack of regulation over two otherwise heavily state-regulated activities is a potentially serious problem.

In some jurisdictions it is a crime to impersonate a licensed professional. n2.02

Some states statutorily allow an individual harmed by the conduct of a party while acting as an unlicensed broker to recover damages. n2.03

[b] Activities Subject to Regulation

The key elements of most real estate license acts involve: (1) performing brokerage service for another person (performing a brokerage function for yourself is exempt); and (2) performing the brokerage service for consideration. It is common for licensing acts to list activities that constitute the activities of a real estate agent and broker. n2.1

Many states, because of their unique real estate laws, have enacted real estate licensure requirements for other activities such as: (1) the sale of cemetery lots; n3 (2) the sale of oil and gas interests; n4 (3) auctioneers of real estate; n5 (4) the sale of campgrounds; n6 (5) the management of rental property; n7 (6) the management of condominiums; n8 (7) mortgage brokers; n9 (8) business brokerage; n10 and (9) time share sales. n11

[c] Single Act Laws

Approximately half the states have so-called "single act" provisions that subject a person to fines and penalties, regardless of whether that person is licensed or not, based upon a "single act" or "single transaction" carried out without a license. n12 Other state licensure statutes do not apply to those who are not regularly engaged in the real estate industry.

[2] Licensing Agency Has Broad Authority

Each state administers its real estate license act through some government agency, referred to under different names from state to state (e.g., Real Estate Commission, Department of Licensing and Regulation, Department of State). This regulatory commission regulates and enforces the broker licensing provisions, passes rules and regulations to enforce and perform the provisions of that state's licensing act. As discussed in § 6.05[2], the agencies' decisions are given great deference by the courts.

The commission's makeup varies from state to state. The number of commissioners ranges from as few as three (West Virginia) to as many as twelve (Connecticut and Indiana). Most require that a majority of the members be from the real estate industry, but some consumer input is provided by appointees who are not actively engaged in the real estate business. However, there are states that require no appointees from the public.

The agency enforcing the broker licensing laws generally has the authority to promulgate regulations. n12.1 For example, in Campo v. State Real Estate Commission, n13 the court upheld the Pennsylvania Real Estate Commission's regulation requiring that salespersons and associate brokers list the business name and telephone number of their employing broker in advertisements. The court also affirmed the imposition of fines against salespersons and associate brokers who failed to list their employing broker's directory assistance telephone number. n14

Penalties for acting as an unlicensed broker can be substantial. n14.1 In some jurisdictions, any penalty imposed for unlicensed activity may be awarded to the person aggrieved by the unlicensed activity. n14.2

Certain statements made to a regulatory agency may be subject to judicial immunity. Skoglund v. Durham n15 involved an individual's application for a real estate broker's license. The applicant brought a defamation action alleging that the defendants falsely stated that a jury had found the applicant guilty of defrauding the defendants. This statement was made in a "Request for Investigation" filed with the Georgia Real Estate Commission. The court found that these statements were absolutely privileged. The court stated that these statements were judicial in nature and that public policy supported application of an absolute privilege. n16

[3] Regulation of Advertising

[a] Disciplinary Proceedings Arising from Advertising Activities

Most real estate commissions regulate advertising by real estate brokers and can hold disciplinary proceedings if a broker engages in false or misleading advertising. n17 However, such commissions should not seek disciplinary action because a broker makes statements that may be unpopular with his or her fellow brokers. Such commissions should rely upon substantial evidence in determining whether broker advertisements are misleading. n18

In Snider v. State of Oklahoma Real Estate Commission n19 the real estate commission sanctioned a real estate broker because of statements made in a booklet used in his advertising. He asserted that buyers' agents saved buyers thousands of dollars and that buyers should beware of any agent who mentioned words such as "dual agent," "assigned agent," or "contract broker." The booklet stated that these were all methods of conducting real estate transactions which gave the buyer less than full representation. n20 This booklet stated that the traditional real estate firm represented the seller, and that when such a firm tries to represent the seller and the buyer, it cannot meaningfully represent both. The booklet continuously referred to the law of agency. After administrative proceedings, the commission ordered that the broker be formally reprimanded and fined $200. The Supreme Court of Oklahoma held that the advertising booklet was not false and misleading in stating that dual agents provide less than full representation. The court stated that agency law was not an area in which the Oklahoma Real Estate Commission could claim expertise superior to the courts of Oklahoma. n21 The court found that the order of the Commission was clearly erroneous, contrary to its own rule, and without evidentiary support and had to be set aside. n22

One issue that may arise is whether or not a licensee can use a nickname rather than the licensee's legal name. In response, some states allow a licensee to use a nickname. For example, Maryland Code Annotated, Business Occupations & Professions § 17-527.2 allows licensees to register a nickname with Real Estate Commission and thereby hold themselves out to the public by that nickname.

[b] Regulation of Internet Advertising

Many brokers maintain extensive websites where prospective purchasers or sellers can view the broker's listings and obtain other information about the firm and its agents or salespersons. While some websites are relatively simple, others are quite complex. It should be anticipated that the importance and incidence of Internet advertising in the real estate brokerage industry will only increase over time (see Ch. 10, The Effect of E-Commerce on the Real Estate Brokerage Business below). The significance of the Internet to this industry is highlighted by the fact that the National Association of Realtors(R) offers a professional designation for real estate professionals who work in the online real estate industry (see § 2.06, above, for a discussion of professional designations). The advent of Internet advertising by real estate brokers has led to various states either regulating such advertising or offering policy guidelines. For example, in California all licensees who advertise on the Internet must disclose their license status. n23

It should be anticipated that courts and regulatory agencies will be confronted with issues arising from Internet advertising. Examples of conduct that may lead to disciplinary actions would include maintaining on a website a listing for a property when in fact the listing had expired. Another example would be the continued advertising of a property even though it had been sold and the transaction had settled. Ohio has addressed these issues in part by requiring that information on an Internet website maintained by a licensee that becomes outdated or expired must be updated within 14 days of the information becoming outdated or expired. In addition, Ohio requires that each website maintained by a licensee must disclose when the information contained therein was most recently updated. n24

California has broadly defined a broker as anyone charging an advance fee in connection with the sale, listing, or advertisement of real property. n24.1 The phrase advance fee was defined as including any fee charged for listing, advertising, or offering to sell or lease real property, except that a "newspaper of general circulation" is expressly exempted from that definition. n24.2 An Internet website that advertised properties for sale, including properties for sale in California, challenged the real estate licensing requirements, as codified in California Business and Professions Code § 10000 et seq., on constitutional grounds. This website which catered to owners selling their property without the services of a broker, charged a flat fee to property owners to advertise their homes. The Forsalebyowner.com website contended that any distinction between the treatment accorded its website and the exemption for newspapers was nonsensical. It was undisputed that many newspapers maintained websites operating in much the manner as the Forsalebyowner.com website. n24.3 The court agreed with the Forsalebyowner.com website. The court stated that the California Department of Real Estate had not shown any compelling state interest in requiring a real estate broker's license for the Forsalebyowner.com website but not for virtually identical newspaper websites. The court found that the presumption of unconstitutionality triggered by this disparity of treatment has not been overcome and that California Business & Professional Code § 10026 failed constitutional muster on that basis. n24.4

[c] National Association of Realtors(R) Internet Data Exchange Policy

The National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR) has adopted a policy authorizing Multiple Listing Service (MLS) participants to display the listings of other participants on their websites, subject to certain limitations. The NAR refers to this policy as Internet Data Exchange (IDX). n25 This policy mandates that as of January 1, 2002, all local MLSs must afford brokers the opportunity to place the entire MLS database of active listings on their own web sites. A broker can either choose to participate in the Internet Data Exchange program or a broker can choose to prohibit the display of his or her company's listings on another broker's site. If a broker opts not to participate, that broker's listings will be made unavailable by the MLS to other brokers and the non-participating broker will not have access to the listings of the IDX participating brokers. One effect of this policy is that a small broker with relatively few listings can display many listings thereby appearing to have a large "inventory" of available property.

[4] Unlicensed Assistants and Office Staff

Brokers often employ clerical and secretarial employees. Issues can arise as to the tasks that such unlicensed persons can perform. Clearly, unlicensed personnel should not be performing acts that require licensure as a broker, agent, or salesperson. The Idaho Real Estate Commission has issued Guideline No. 17 n26 to assist Idaho licensees in the proper use of unlicensed assistants and office staff. In its Guideline, the Idaho Real Estate Commission stated that inquiries it receives generally fit into two categories:

- (1) whether the activity performed is one which requires a license, and
- (2) what are the supervisory responsibilities of an employing broker?

Though this Guideline is specific to Idaho, its basic concepts should apply to other states.

In addressing the use of unlicensed personnel, the Idaho Real Estate Commission noted that personal assistants who hold active real estate licenses and the brokers in whose offices they work must realize that brokers are responsible for all licensees, regardless of their job title and that licensed assistants are fully subject to Idaho License Law and Rules. Idaho license law prohibits unlicensed persons from negotiating, listing, or selling real property. The commission advises that personal assistants must be restricted so that their activities avoid illegal brokerage practice. This Guideline states that while personal assistants may complete forms prepared and as directed by licensees, they should never independently draft legal documents such as listing and sales contracts, nor should they offer opinions, advice, or interpretations. Unlicensed assistants also cannot distribute information on listed properties other than information that has been prepared by the employing broker or broker associate. This Guideline states that unlicensed assistants can perform the following duties:

1. Perform clerical duties for an employing broker or broker associate which may include the gathering of information for a listing;
2. Provide access to a property other than showings to potential buyers and hand out preprinted, objective information, so long as no negotiating, offering, selling or contracting is involved;
3. Distribute preprinted, objective information at an open house, so long as no negotiating, offering, selling or contracting is involved;
4. Distribute information on listed properties when such information is prepared by the broker or broker associate;
5. Deliver paperwork to other brokers;
6. Deliver paperwork to sellers or purchasers, if such paperwork has already been reviewed by a broker;
7. Deliver paperwork requiring signatures in regard to financing documents that are prepared by lending institutions; and
8. Prepare market analyses for sellers or buyers on behalf of a broker, but disclosure of the name of the preparer must be given, and it must be submitted by the broker.

Brokers are advised to have a written office policy explaining the duties, responsibilities, and limitations on the use of personal assistants. This policy should be understood by all employees.

The Texas Real Estate Commission has offered similar advice to the brokers it regulates. In its "Information for Brokers and Salespersons Regarding Use of Unlicensed Assistants in Real Estate Transactions,"²⁷ the Texas Real Estate Commission advises that an unlicensed assistant cannot make telephone calls to determine whether a person is interested in buying or selling property, or has property they wish to sell. However, under appropriate circumstances an unlicensed assistant can:

- (1) Sit in on an open house so long as the unlicensed assistant does not "show" the house to prospective purchasers. The unlicensed assistant can serve as a hostess, attendant, or custodian at homes offered for sale by the broker, but the unlicensed assistant's duties should be limited to welcoming the visitors, registering guests, and referring inquiries to a licensee. The unlicensed assistant should not point out features of the home or neighborhood to visitors. However, the unlicensed assistant may distribute a flyer or brochure that describes the property.

- (2) Set appointments to show a listing. An unlicensed assistant can telephone a homeowner and schedule an appointment for the broker to bring a potential buyer to see the home. If the broker becomes unavailable for the appointment, the unlicensed assistant can also drive the purchaser to the listing and let them in the home, but this individual cannot "show" the property. The individual should identify himself or herself as an unlicensed assistant and explain the assistant's limited role. Questions regarding the property or the purchase of the property must be referred to a licensee.
- (3) Place "for sale" signs as directed by the broker.
- (4) Open a property or accompany inspectors as directed by the broker.
- (5) Place newspaper advertisements as directed by the broker.
- (6) Serve as a bookkeeper and handle personnel matters. Such an employee may also serve as a trainer. However, an unlicensed assistant may not direct or supervise agents in their work as licensees.
- (7) Assist in arranging financing. At the direction of a licensee, an unlicensed assistant may gather information, contact lenders, and set appointments.

In considering the conduct of an unlicensed employee, the Texas Real Estate Commission advises that the broker should analyze any new factual situation to determine the extent to which the unlicensed assistant is being allowed to act with discretion, and how close the unlicensed assistant is to "directly" assisting others in buying, selling, or leasing property. Brokers can consult with their own attorney or write the Commission (or call in an emergency) for an informal opinion based on a particular fact situation.

Alaska Administrative Code title 12, § 64.140 directly addresses the employment of unlicensed personnel. This rule specifically states that a licensee may not authorize an unlicensed assistant to perform any duties for which a license is required, including:

- (1) discussing a listing or property management agreement with an owner or with licensees;
- (2) showing any property available for sale or rental;
- (3) negotiating or discussing the terms of a sale or rental;
- (4) having a prospective buyer or lessee sign an offer to purchase or lease;
- (5) presenting an offer to a seller;
- (6) making prospecting calls or visits; and
- (7) reading prepared information in response to inquiries about properties.

Many state real estate commissions have similar policies, guidelines, and rules. Brokers must exercise caution in using unlicensed personnel and should adopt policies to prevent the violation of applicable licensing laws. The effect of the use of unlicensed employees on a broker's right to a commission is discussed in § 4.05(5) above.

[5] Record Retention and Electronic Media

Real estate licensees typically are obligated by statute or regulation to retain records for a designated period of time. For example, Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10148 requires that a licensed real estate broker retain for three years "copies of all listings, deposit receipts, canceled checks, trust records, and other documents executed by him or her or obtained by him or her in connection with any transactions for which a real estate broker license is required." The retention period commences from the date of the closing of the transaction or from the date of the listing if the transaction is not consummated. These documents are to be available for examination, inspection, and copying by the commissioner during regular business.

This record retention requirement can be costly since it can require a lot of space to retain such records. California, by regulation, permits licensees to meet the requirements of Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10148 by storing these documents on electronic media. California Code of Regulations, Title 10, § 2729 permits a licensee to use electronic image storage media to retain and store copies of these documents provided certain requirements are met. Among the requirements is that the electronic image storage must be nonerasable "write once, read many" ("WORM") that does not allow changes to the stored document or record. The electronic image storage system must contain a reliable indexing system that provides ready access to a desired document or record, appropriate quality control of the storage process to ensure the quality of imaged documents or records, and date ordered arrangement of stored documents or records to assure a consistent and logical flow of paperwork to preclude unnecessary search time.

It should be anticipated that more states, by statute or regulation, will specifically address record retention through electronic media.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. In Matter of Roth, 120 N.J. 665, 577 A.2d 490 (N.J. 1990) , the Supreme Court of New Jersey examined this issue at length as an attorney disciplinary matter to determine the appropriate ethics standards governing an attorney who undertakes to represent a client as both an attorney and real estate broker in the same transaction. A complaint was filed against the attorney-broker alleging a conflict of interest, stating that it was not unlawful or unethical per se for an attorney to engage in the business of a real estate broker so long as the two functions were separated, citing a New Jersey disciplinary rule. The attorney-broker alleged that he sought not to profit from the transaction but to reduce the purchase price for the client. The court concluded that the statutory exemption for attorneys, however, was not meant to provide the equivalent of a broker's license to one exempt from the requirement of the license law, but rather to authorize attorneys to perform only those services "incidental to the normal practice of the profession or business," and that it was "surely not the Legislature's intent to allow attorneys to freely engage in all aspects of the real estate brokerage business." 577 A.2d at 494 . The court also held that a licensed attorney who seeks to act as both a broker and lawyer for the same client in the same transaction must confine any broker's services to those that are obviously minor, incidental, ancillary, and subordinate to the legal services entailed in the client's representation. A similar holding was made by the Kentucky Supreme Court in Kentucky Bar Ass'n v. Burbank, 539 S.W.2d 312 (Ky. 1976) .

See also Wiseman v. Ruwe (In re Estate of Ronan), 277 Neb. 516, 763 N.W.2d 704 (2009) (An attorney was barred from recovering compensation when he acted as a broker without obtaining a broker's license. This conduct fell outside the attorney exemption.).

See generally Zitter, Annot., Right of Attorney as Such, to Act or Become Licensed to Act as Real-Estate Broker, 23 A.L.R.4th 230 (1983).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Tex. Occ. Code § 1101.652 (b)(11).

(n3)Footnote 2.01. See Axtmann v. Chillemi, 2007 ND 179, 740 N.W.2d 838, 846 (N.D. 2007) ; Rockport Realty Investments, Inc. v. Riedel, 2008 Ohio 820, 2008 Ohio App. LEXIS 711, at *9 (Feb. 29, 2008) .

(n4)Footnote 2.02. See State v. Camacho 2007 Tenn. Crim. App. LEXIS 831, at *20 (Oct. 29, 2007) , citing Tenn.

Code § 39-16-302.

(n5)Footnote 2.03. See Miss. Code § 73-35-31(2) (civil penalty of not less than the sum of money received and not more than four times the sum of money received by the unlicensed broker from the aggrieved person).

(n6)Footnote 2.1. See G.C. Timmis & Co. v. Guardian Alarm Co., 468 Mich. 416, 433, 662 N.W.2d 710, 720 (2003).

(n7)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 32-2122.

(n8)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Cal Bus & Prof Code § 10500.

(n9)Footnote 5. An auctioneer's license is separate from a real estate broker's license. See, e.g., Tex. Occ. Code § 1802.051. Often an auctioneer who sells real estate must also be licensed as a real estate broker.

(n10)Footnote 6. See, e.g., 63 Pa. Stat. § 455.301.

(n11)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Ohio Rev. Code § 4735.01(A)(5).

(n12)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Fla. Stat. §§ 468.431 to 468.438.

(n13)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Ala. Code § 5-25-1, et seq. (Alabama Mortgage Brokers Licensing Act); 205 ILCS 635/1-1, et seq. (Illinois Residential Mortgage License Act of 1987). See generally Lloyd T. Wilson, A Taxonomic Analysis of Mortgage Broker Licensing Statutes: Developing a Programmatic Response to Predatory Lending, 36 N.M.L. Rev. 297 (2006).

In 2008, Congress enacted the Secure and Fair Enforcement for Mortgage Licensing Act of 2008 (Pub. L. No. 110-289, 122 Stat. 2810 (July 30, 2008)). This Act is also referred to as the S.A.F.E. Mortgage Licensing Act of 2008. The Act is codified at 12 U.S.C. § 5101, et seq. The Act provides that the States, through the Conference of State Bank Supervisors and the American Association of Residential Mortgage Regulators, are encouraged to establish a Nationwide Mortgage Licensing System and Registry for the residential mortgage industry. A majority of states have agreed to participate in this Nationwide Mortgage Licensing System. This System is used by state residential mortgage regulators to accept and process national, uniform license applications and renewal forms that have been created by state regulators. Licensees will be able to electronically manage a single record in the System to apply for, amend, renew, and surrender licenses in one or more regulators. This System began operations in 2008. See generally Lloyd T. Wilson, Jr., All Things Considered: The Contribution of the National Mortgage Licensing System to the Battle Against Predatory Lending, 24 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 415 (2007).

(n14)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Mass. Gen. Laws ch. 259, § 7; Mich. Comp. Laws § 339.2501.

(n15)Footnote 11. See generally Rohan, Condominium Law & Practice, § 55.05[5] (licensing of time share salespersons).

(n16)Footnote 12. For example, in Correll v. Boulware, 74 N.C. App. 631, 329 S.E.2d 695, 701 (N.C. Ct. App. 1985), in a discussion affirming the six-month suspension of a broker's license, the court found that the state licensing statute allowed the Real Estate Licensing Board to revoke or suspend a salesperson's or broker's license for any one of several listed misdeeds. The court stated that "[o]nly one violation of one section is needed to revoke or suspend one's license."

The following states have "single act" statutes:

Arkansas: Ark. Stat. Ann. § 17-42-301(b).

California: Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 12-61-101(2).

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 475.01(3).

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. § 43-40-30(a).

Illinois: 225 Ill. Comp. Stat. 454/20-15.

Iowa: Iowa Code Ann. § 543B.6.

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 324.010(2).

Maine: Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 32, § 13001(2).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. § 73-35-3(1).

Montana: Mont. Code Ann. § 37-51-103.

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. § 81-885.03.

Nevada: Nev. Rev. Stat. § 645.260.

New Jersey: N.J. Stat. Ann. § 45:15-2.

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. § 61-29-2(C).

New York: N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 442(e)(1).

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code § 43-23-06.1(8).

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. § 696.040.

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-13-103.

Texas: Tex. Occ. Code § 1101.004.

Utah: Utah Code Ann. § 61-2-4.

Virginia: Va. Code § 54.1-2107.

West Virginia: W. Va. Code § 47-12-2(e).

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat. § 33-28-104.

*See also Arnold v. Bowman, 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 363, at 27 (June 23, 2005), appeal denied, 2005 Tenn. LEXIS 1054 (Dec. 5, 2005) (any person who attempts to perform or performs a single statutorily enumerated act enumerated is deemed a broker).

(n17)Footnote 12.1. See Walker v. Johnson, 278 Ga. App. 806, 812-13, 630 S.E.2d 70, 76 (2006) overruled in part, Kleber v. City of Atlanta, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 396, at *15 (Mar. 28, 2008) (on other grounds).

(n18)Footnote 13. 723 A.2d 260 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1998) , reargument denied (1999).

(n19)Footnote 14. 723 A.2d 260, 262-263 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1998) , reargument denied (1999). Fines of $500 were imposed against first-time offenders and $750 fines were imposed against second-time offenders. These offenders had used a telephone number in their advertisements that was owned by the employing broker, but which provided a direct connection to the advertising salesperson or associate broker, rather than the employing broker's number as maintained by directory assistance.

(n20)Footnote 14.1. See Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-13-110(b) (imposing a penalty of not less than the amount of the money received by the unlicensed individual and not more than three times the amount received, as determined by the court). See also Arnold v. Bowman, 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 363, at *32 (June 23, 2005) , appeal denied, 2005 Tenn. LEXIS 1054 (Dec. 5, 2005) (affirming a penalty of twice the amount of commission collected by the unlicensed broker).

(n21)Footnote 14.2. See Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-13-110(b); See also Arnold v. Bowman, 2005 Tenn. App. LEXIS 363, at *32 (June 23, 2005) , appeal denied, 2005 Tenn. LEXIS 1054 (Dec. 5, 2005) (The purchaser was aggrieved in that he probably paid more than the sellers would have been willing to take, had the unlicensed broker not extracted his fee. The court found no error in awarding the penalty to the buyer.).

(n22)Footnote 15. 233 Ga. App. 158, 502 S.E.2d 814 (Ga. App. 1998) .

(n23)Footnote 16. 233 Ga. App. 158, 502 S.E.2d 814, 816 (Ga. App. 1998) .

(n24)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Okla. Stat. tit. 59, § 858-312(2).

(n25)Footnote 18. See Snider v. State of Oklahoma Real Estate Comm'n, 1999 Okla. 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1208-1209 (1999) , rehearing denied (statements made by broker regarding dual agency, for which the broker was sanctioned, were neither false nor misleading).

(n26)Footnote 19. 1999 Okla. 55, 987 P.2d 1204 (1999) , rehearing denied.

(n27)Footnote 20. 1999 OK 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1206 (1999) , rehearing denied.

(n28)Footnote 21. 1999 Okla. 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1208 (1999) , rehearing denied.

(n29)Footnote 22. 1999 Okla. 55, 987 P.2d 1204, 1210 (1999) , rehearing denied.

(n30)Footnote 23. See Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10235.5 and 10140.6.

(n31)Footnote 24. See Ohio Administrative Code § 1301:5-1-02 Advertising.

(n32)Footnote 24.1. See Forsalebyowner.com Corp. v. Zinnemann, 347 F. Supp. 2d 868, 871 (E.D. Ca. 2004) , citing Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10131.2.

(n33)Footnote 24.2. See Forsalebyowner.com Corp. v. Zinnemann, 347 F. Supp. 2d 868, 871 (E.D. Ca. 2004) , citing Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10026.

(n34)Footnote 24.3. See Forsalebyowner.com Corp. v. Zinnemann, 347 F. Supp. 2d 868, 872 (E.D. Ca. 2004) .

(n35)Footnote 24.4. See Forsalebyowner.com Corp. v. Zinnemann, 347 F. Supp. 2d 868, 879 (E.D. Ca. 2004) .

(n36)Footnote 25. The NAR's Statement of Multiple Listing Policy became effective on May 19, 2001. For additional information about this policy, see the library of the National Association of Realtors(R) at <http://www.realtor.org> (search term "Internet Data Exchange").

(n37)Footnote 26. This Guideline and others can be found online at:
<http://www.idahorealestatecommission.com/rules.html#guidelines>.

(n38)Footnote 27. Found online at:
<http://www.trec.state.tx.us/formsrulespubs/publications/unlicensed-assistants.asp>.

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

117 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation
CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.03

§ 6.03 Licensing Procedure

[1] In General

All states require that minimum standards be met before a person or entity is eligible for licensing as a broker or salesperson. Most states address requirements relating to minimum age, education, prior experience and residence. See § 6.07 for specific state statutory requirements.

As a general rule, the requirements for brokerage licensure are higher than those of salesperson licensure.

Many states, by statute or regulation, require that applicants be subjected to a criminal background check. For example, Ark. Code § 17-42-306 (a)(4)(B) states that upon successful completion of the license exam, a license cannot be issued until the commission receives and approves the state and federal criminal background check. Such an applicant, prior to sitting for the license exam must submit a request to the Identification Bureau of the Department of Arkansas State Police for a state and federal criminal background check. n0.1 If the federal criminal background check has not been received by the commission within ninety (90) days of the date of the examination, the date may be extended by the commission until receipt of the federal criminal background check. n0.2 The Arkansas Code is unambiguous; a real estate license cannot be issued until receipt and approval by the commission of the state and federal criminal background check. n0.3 More states are implementing requirements that real estate licensees must undergo criminal background checks before they can be licensed. n0.4 Typically, the applicant is responsible for the cost of obtaining the criminal background check.

[2] Age

In most states, one must be at least eighteen years of age to obtain a broker's license. In some jurisdictions, there is a minimum experience requirement for salespersons before they can apply for a broker's license (usually two years). Although not statutorily mandated, it makes the minimum brokerage age in those states twenty years old.

[3] Education

As in other areas of licensing regulation, educational requirements vary widely. Most states separate educational requirements into pre-licensing and post-licensing requirements and, in recent years, have enacted continuing education requirements to require that licensees be updated on changes in the law and industry issues. The Real Estate Educators Association, dedicated solely to the real estate education issue, can be contacted at:

Real Estate Educators Association
19 Mantua Road
Mt. Royal, NJ 08061
Telephone: 856-423-3215
Fax: 856-423-3420
Website: <http://www.reea.org/contact>.

The requirements for salesperson pre-licensure range from no classroom hours (New Hampshire) to 180 classroom hours (Texas). Texas, which has the highest educational requirements, defines core courses of required real estate class study. See § 6.07[44]. Educational requirements for brokerage licensure similarly range from no classroom hours (Arkansas) to 630 classroom hours (Texas).

Defining the quality of the educational requirement is difficult. In most states the regulatory commission establishes course outlines and criteria that must be taught in a given course. The course materials, instructors and subject matter must be approved by the regulatory commission. If not, the regulatory commission may disapprove licensure for the school teaching the subjects or, alternatively, revoke the approval of the instructor. Absent classroom monitoring of each individual class, this is as close as regulations can come to assuring quality and competence.

Most state regulatory agencies have blanket approval for courses taught in colleges and universities under any state's boards of higher education. The theory is that any real estate course that qualifies for approval at the college or university level automatically qualifies for real estate commission approval. University-approved courses also have the benefit of being transferable from university to university, and therefore possibly from state to state. This has prompted a new hybrid of educational program in which a proprietary school obtains university approval for their curriculum which, oddly enough, can be transferred to another four-year institution in the home state.

[4] Experience Requirements

Experience requirements for brokers always involve licensure as a salesperson for a minimum time. Some experience requirements are only licensure, while other experience requirements include a certain number of years experience of being actively engaged in the brokerage business. n0.5

[5] Residence and Reciprocity

Residency and reciprocity of real estate licensees has been a sensitive and political issue. Each state has its own culture, history, and laws pertaining to real estate. These facts, coupled with the intangible pride that people have in their own states, have formed the basis for the affirmative regulation of real estate licensure as well as the prohibition of other state's licensees from engaging in business in the home state without meeting the home state's requirement for education and competence.

This understandably conflicts with theories of encouraging uniform laws among the states, which many believe promotes interstate commerce. It would also presumably make licensee regulation easier for national real estate companies and license law officials. The differences, however, remain substantial, although one case has recently held that the Privileges and Immunities Clause as well as the Commerce Clause of the Constitution need to be addressed to assure nondiscriminatory practices among the states. n1 These differences tend to involve residency of the broker and the transferability of licenses between states and the criteria for that transferability.

[a] Residency

The requirement that a broker maintain a residence in a state in order to be licensed is not a new requirement, and has been upheld in other areas of the law involving trade associations. In the case of state licensure, however, the application of the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution to state-regulated activities invokes two other areas of constitutional law: the Privileges and Immunities Clauseⁿ² and the Commerce Clause.ⁿ³

The United States Supreme Court established the criteria for interpretation of whether or not a statute violates a Privileges and Immunities Clause in Supreme Court of New Hampshire v. Piper.ⁿ⁴ The test is whether (1) there is a substantial reason for the difference in treatment; and (2) whether the discrimination practiced against nonresidents bears a substantial relationship to the State's objective.ⁿ⁵ Therefore, it is imperative that in state license laws all applicants for licensure, whether resident or nonresident, be subject to the same duties and restrictions or they will violate the Privileges and Immunities test. For instance, requiring the same hours of educational requirements and the same educational criteria for a course would presumably not violate the Privileges and Immunities Clause, provided that these requirements are applied equally to residents and nonresidents.

The Commerce Clause, as interpreted by the courts over the years, has different criteria. In interpreting the Commerce Clause, the courts presume that where a statute regulates even-handedly to effectuate a legitimate local public interest, and its effects on interstate commerce are only incidental, it will be upheld unless the burden imposed on such commerce is clearly excessive in relation to the local benefits.ⁿ⁶ The Commerce Clause test addresses burdens affecting interstate commerce and whether or not that burden represents legitimate state interests, and assures that the burdens imposed by the state legislation or regulations are not unreasonable discriminators in affecting interstate commerce.

In Georgia Ass'n of Realtors, Inc. v. Alabama Real Estate Comm'n,ⁿ⁷ the court found that the requirement to maintain an in-state office for an out-of-state business imposes a considerable burden on interstate commerce because of the expense of maintaining that office when it achieves no benefit for the owner of the office. The court refused to follow the holding of Georgia Ass'n of Realtors v. Alabama Real Estate Com.,ⁿ⁸ that upheld the Alabama Real Estate Commission's in-state office requirement. Georgia Association, found that the Alabama Real Estate Commission's requirement that the broker operate a "place of business" in the state that could be performed more efficiently elsewhere, was per se illegal.ⁿ⁹ Alabama's licensing statute also required that the licensee attend course requirements taught within the State of Alabama, along with proof that the licensee had an active real estate broker's or salesperson's license in any state for a required time period. The statute effectively barred access to Alabama licensing on the basis of experience except to those who obtained such experience in Alabama. The Georgia Association court held that the fifteen-semester hour requirement, in conjunction with the requirement that experience and education be obtained in Alabama, unduly burdened interstate commerce and violated the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution.

Presumably, educational requirements, by themselves, would not affect interstate commerce unless coupled with an in-state education requirement or an in-state place of business requirement, although this area of legal interpretation remains fact oriented.

[b] Reciprocity

The issue of reciprocity usually surfaces in two areas: (1) whether or not a state will grant a license to a nonresident; and (2) the requirements of a nonresident to apply for licensure in the home state. Virtually all states grant licenses to nonresidents,ⁿ¹⁰ provided that they meet minimum educational and competency requirements.

A more complicated issue involves qualifying for state licensure. In states with uniform examination procedures (administered by professional testing companies such as Assessment Systems, Inc. ("ASI") or American College Testing ("ACT")), the examinations have sections that apply to all states, in addition to state-specific sections. If a state uses one of these uniform examination procedures, it frequently waives the requirement that the uniform section of the examination be retaken, recognizing that the same section of the examination was passed in another jurisdiction.

Some states allow a full waiver of licensing exams, effectively allowing any licensee who has passed the examination in another state to obtain a license in the home state. ⁿ¹¹ A more proprietary attitude is represented in those states which only recognize a full waiver of examination requirements if the reciprocal state recognizes the home state's license and waives requirements of examination. An additional concern develops when a nonresident licensee moves to the home state. Some states require that the nonresident take an exam to convert their nonresident license to a resident license.

Virtually all states treat their nonresident licensee as having the same privileges as resident licensees. This may create a conflict in those states that require additional exams when moving into the home jurisdiction, and may be additional grounds for litigation under the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution.

[6] Examination Requirements

All states require passing a licensing exam before an individual or entity can be licensed. ⁿ¹² It is considered the sole test of competence by most states. Examinations must be written to test competence and must be administered to provide the proper security so that exams do not get lost, stolen or otherwise diverted to unintended parties. For purposes of convenience, most states have the exams administered by professional examination services such as ASI or ACT. A minority of states use their own agency and staff for both administration and security.

[7] Entity Licensing

There are provisions in most states to allow business entities to be licensed as salespersons or brokers, the most common of these being licensure for corporations or partnerships. If there is a breach of a duty by that licensee, who will be responsible for the liability or damage? Can a negligent licensee be protected by the corporate shield?

In many states there is dual licensure, wherein the corporation is licensed and the designated broker must also be licensed. ⁿ¹³ One entity (e.g., Jane Jones Corporation, a licensed broker, and Jane Jones, designated broker for that corporation) pays two license fees. Contrary to appearances, this is not charging twice for one service. If only the broker is licensed, the regulatory commission has no jurisdiction over the company. For instance, if Jane Jones Corporation is found guilty of fraud, the broker's license can be revoked, but the company can stay in business. Since in this situation there is no jurisdiction of the licensing authority over a corporation engaged in the brokerage business, licensure of the company may need to be separately maintained for jurisdictional and enforcement purposes.

In licensing a partnership, a majority of states require that one of the partners be licensed, while other states maintain a separate licensure for the partnership as a separate entity.

A more genuine concern is the personal liability of the designated broker. For instance, it is often thought that if an individual (Jane Jones) incorporates herself as Jane Jones Inc., it may shield her from personal liability for torts and contracts of the brokerage corporation. The more logical theory seems to be that if the corporation condones the conduct, the licensing agency will attempt to pursue both licensees rather than let a broker hide behind a corporate veil for a breach of fiduciary duty.

[8] Grounds for Denial of License

Real estate has been held to be one of those "common occupations of the community" invoking due process protection. In light of most applicants' substantial interest in their real estate license based upon their investment of time and money, substantial risk of erroneous deprivation due to lack of opportunity to explain criminal misconduct must be balanced against the real estate licensing authority's substantial interest in licensing honest and trustworthy agents. ⁿ¹⁴ All jurisdictions include in their licensing statutes specific provisions relating to the denial of licenses. All statutory provisions are subject to due process scrutiny, and all statutes provide for appeal in the event of denial. The grounds for denial coordinate with the rules for suspension and revocation, discussed below.

Since there is always a factual basis for denial of due process, virtually all of the denials are handled on a case-by-case basis. Denial can be upheld so long as it is not arbitrary or capricious and there is a reasonable basis for denial of the licensure. If it exceeds the bounds of reasonableness, the suspension will not be upheld. n15 It is not necessary that the denial be based on a real estate activity so long as it involves untrustworthy business dealings. n16 The right to deny includes crimes involving moral turpitude n17 which have been held to include passing bad checks, n18 federal tax evasion, n19 perjury, n20 incest, n21 interference with commerce by threats of violence, n22 felony stealing of moneys, n23 bookmaking, n24 solicitation to commit a "crime against nature," n25 and the possession of marijuana for sale. n26

Denial can also be based on matters other than crimes. In Tuerk v. State of Washington, Dept. of Licensing n27 a real estate broker refused to provide her home address to the Department. Consequently, the Department refused to renew her license. The broker argued that the statutory provisions did not authorize this requirement, i.e., that brokers must provide their home address on a change of business address form. The court disagreed, stating that requiring the broker's home address was within the Department's statutory authority. The court stated that a broker's home address allowed the Department to efficiently locate brokers who did not yet have a business location, who were in the process of moving their businesses, or who no longer used their business address. It should be noted that many states statutorily require that brokers keep the licensing authority advised of their current address and that failure to do so can result in suspension or revocation of a license. n28

The NARELLO Model Act is silent on grounds for denial of licensure. Perhaps it is too difficult to define denial of one's rights in general terms, without dealing with specific state issues. n29

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 0.1. Ark. Code § 17-42-306 (a)(4)(A).

(n2)Footnote 0.2. Ark. Code § 17-42-306 (b)(1)(B)(1).

(n3)Footnote 0.3. Ark. Code § 17-42-306 (b)(1)(B)(1)(ii).

(n4)Footnote 0.4. Cf., e.g., Ky. Rev. Stat. § 324.045 (4).

(n5)Footnote 0.5. Cf. Paolucci v. Ohio Div. of Real Estate, 2009 Ohio 5551, 2009 Ohio App. LEXIS 4666 (Oct. 20, 2009) (The applicant was not allowed to sit for the broker examination, because he failed to submit evidence that he had completed at least 20 real estate transactions), citing Ohio Rev. Code § 4735.07(B)(5).

(n6)Footnote 1. Georgia Ass'n of Realtors, Inc. v. Alabama Real Estate Comm'n, 748 F. Supp. 1487 (M.D. Ala. 1990).

(n7)Footnote 2. U.S. Const. art. IV, § 2, cl. 1.

(n8)Footnote 3. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 3.

(n9)Footnote 4. 470 U.S. 274, 105 S. Ct. 1272, 84 L. Ed. 2d 205 (1985).

(n10)Footnote 5. 470 U.S. at 284.

(n11)Footnote 6. See Pike v. Bruce Church, Inc., 397 U.S. 137, 142, 90 S. Ct. 844, 847, 25 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1970).

(n12)Footnote 7. Georgia Ass'n of Realtors, Inc. v. Alabama Real Estate Comm'n, 748 F. Supp. 1487 (M.D. Ala. 1990), relying on Underhill Assocs. v. Coleman, 504 F. Supp. 1147 (E.D. Va. 1981).

(n13)Footnote 8. 748 F. Supp. 1487 (M.D. Ala. 1990) .

(n14)Footnote 9. 394 Mass. 608, 476 N.E.2d 955 , appeal dismissed, 474 U.S. 991, 106 S. Ct. 401, 88 L. Ed. 2d 353 (1985) (dismissing appeal for lack of a substantial federal question).

(n15)Footnote 10. 748 F. Supp. at 1494 (M.D. Ala. 1990) .

(n16)Footnote 11. According to the website of the Real Estate Branch of the Hawaii Professional and Vocational Licensing Division, Hawaii is not reciprocal with any other state, however, a salesperson may qualify for an equivalency to the prelicense education requirement and/or the equivalency to the Uniform Examination.

(n17)Footnote 12. But see Williamson, Inc. v. Calibre Homes, Inc., 106 Wash. App. 558, 562, 566, 23 P.3d 1118, 1121, 1123 (2001) , aff'd, 147 Wash. 2d 394, 54 P.3d 1186 (Wash. 2002) (Washington broker act allows a corporation to become a licensed real estate salesperson, as to the application requirement for corporate salespersons, obviously a corporation cannot sit for an examination).

(n18)Footnote 13. Cf. Still v. Arakelyan (In re Still) 393 B.R. 896, 912 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2008) (real estate license of a corporation is dependent upon the valid real estate broker's license of its designated officer and not vice versa.).

(n19)Footnote 14. The following states do not require any additional educational or examination requirements for applicants who have passed an examination in another state: Georgia, Illinois, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, and Virginia. See ARELLO 1996 Digest of 1996 Real Estate License Laws in the United States and Canada, § I, p. 37.

(n20)Footnote 15. Becker v. Illinois Real Estate Administrative and Disciplinary Bd., 884 F.2d 955 (7th Cir. 1989) cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1088, 110 S. Ct. 1154, 107 L. Ed. 2d 1058 (1990) .

(n21)Footnote 16. Rogers v. Division of Real Estate of Dep't of Business Regulations, 790 P.2d 102 (Utah Ct. App. 1990) .

(n22)Footnote 17. In 2007, Cal Bus & Prof Code § 10177 (b) removed the phrase "moral turpitude" from the list describing activity that could result in an applicant being denied a license. This subsection now states in part that the commissioner may revoke, suspend or deny a license to an individual who has "[e]ntered a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to, or been found guilty of, or been convicted of, a felony, or a crime substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of a real estate licensee ..."

(n23)Footnote 18. Missouri Real Estate Com. v. McCormick, 778 S.W.2d 303 (Mo. Ct. App. 1989) . See generally Blum, Annot., Grounds for Revocation or Suspension of License of Real--Estate Broker or Salesperson, 7 A.L.R.5th 474 (1992); Zitter, Annot., Revocation or Suspension of Real--Estate Broker's License for Conduct Not Connected with Business as Broker, 22 A.L.R.4th 136 (1983).

(n24)Footnote 19. Harrington v. Department of Real Estate of California, 214 Cal. App. 3d 394 (1989) .

(n25)Footnote 20. Bear v. Nicholls, 142 Ariz. 560, 691 P.2d 326 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1984) (broker pled nolo contendere to federal tax evasion).

(n26)Footnote 21. Application of O'Neill, 24 A.D. 2d 940, 265 N.Y.S.2d 95 (1965) .

(n27)Footnote 22. Jennings v. Karpe, 36 Cal. App. 3d 709, 111 Cal. Rptr. 776 (1974) .

(n28)Footnote 23. Coles v. Department of Registration and Educ., 59 Ill. App. 3d 1046, 17 Ill.Dec. 270, 376 N.E.2d 269 (1978) ; Kerley v. Real Estate Agency, 337 Ore. 309, 317-318, 96 P.3d 1211, 1215 (Or. 2004) (embezzlement of partnership funds before the individual became a licensee).

(n29)Footnote 24. Missouri Real Estate Com. v. McCormick, 778 S.W.2d 303 (Mo. App. 1989) .

(n30)Footnote 25. Hodgkins v. North Carolina Real Estate Comm'n, 504 S.E.2d 789 (N.C. App. 1998) .

(n31)Footnote 26. Carp v. Florida Real Estate Comm'n, 211 So. 2d 240 , cert. dismissed, 219 So. 2d 427 (Fla. App. DCA 3d 1968) .

(n32)Footnote 27. Golde v. Fox, 98 Cal. App. 3d 167, 159 Cal. Rptr. 864 (1979) .

(n33)Footnote 28. 123 Wash. 2d 120, 864 P.2d 1382 (1994) (en banc).

(n34)Footnote 29. See statutory provisions cited at § 6.05, n.1 infra .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

118 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.04

§ 6.04 License Terms and Renewal

[1] Terms of Licenses

The term of a broker's or salesperson's license varies from one year to four years, depending on the state. States generally have the same term for broker's and salesperson's licenses. n1

[2] Continuing Education Requirements

With the exception of New Jersey, every state and the District of Columbia have adopted continuing professional education requirements as a condition of license renewal. This is the fastest growing industry in real estate education. Most states not only have extensive continuing education requirements, but also have criteria for both course content and instructor evaluation to ensure that courses include current and useful information. Courses on "How to List Real Estate" or "Farming Real Estate Effectively" are generally not considered to be updating law, finance, agency or licensing information which the real estate licensee needs, nor are such "fluff" subjects substantive enough that they need updating on a regular basis.

Many states have a significant amount of continuing education. Iowa, for instance, requires thirty-six hours of continuing education each year and New Mexico requires thirty hours of continuing education per year. Many states require mandatory continuing education over a two-year period that coincides with the term of a salesperson's or broker's license.

Some states designate the real estate topics that must be taught in continuing education courses. Frequently there are requirements that a minimum number of continuing education hours must be in specific real estate topics. States use different terms such as classroom hours, actual hours, or clock hours. In some states, the continuing education is defined according to its duration. For example, Florida Statutes Annotated § 475.182 states, "The renewal application for an active license as broker, broker-salesperson, or salesperson shall include proof satisfactory to the commission that the licensee has, since the issuance or renewal of his current license, satisfactorily completed at least 14 classroom hours of 50 minutes each of continuing education courses during each biennium, as prescribed by the commission." n2 Most states have approved instructor materials, require some sort of monitor, and require student evaluations of the materials in course study. n3

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See ARELLO 1996 Digest of Real Estate License Laws of United States and Canada, § I, p. 8.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 6.07[10] infra for a full discussion of Florida statutory requirements.

(n3)Footnote 3. See ARELLO 1996 Digest of Real Estate License Laws of United States and Canada, § II, p. 8.

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

119 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation
CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.05

§ 6.05 Suspension or Termination of License

[1] Grounds

Each licensing statute includes provisions for license suspension or revocation, n1 although the statutes differ in the degree of particularity in which the grounds for discipline are set out. Typically, disciplinary measures include suspension or revocation of a license. n2 The following have been held to be a proper basis for license revocation:

- murder of a business associate; n3
- inflating appraisals to help a buyer obtaining financing; n4
- passing bad checks, which applicant "forgot" to mention in his license application; n5
- not acting "promptly" in fulfilling duties of selecting an arbitrator; n6
- withdrawing funds from an escrow account without obtaining consenting signatures; n7
- incompetence and untrustworthiness; n8 and
- failing to deposit a purchaser's funds into an escrow account in accordance with a contract. n9
- suspension of the licensee's law license. n10

The NARELLO Model Act has adopted strong provisions for license suspension and revocation. Licensees who engage in prohibited acts are subject to the following disciplinary action:

The state regulatory agency may investigate the actions of any person engaged in the business or acting in the capacity of a real estate broker, associate broker, or real estate salesperson, regardless of whether the transaction was for his or her own account or in his or her capacity as broker, associate broker, or salesperson and if found guilty of violating this chapter may impose any one or more of the following sanctions: suspend, revoke or deny a license or the renewal thereof, levy a fine not to exceed

..... dollars for each offense, require the completion of a course in a selected area of real estate practice relevant to the section of this chapter violated, or order a refund of compensation collected from consumers injured by the violation of this chapter. n11

Some states require that the conduct be related to the licensee's real estate activities. n11.1 This has lead to speculation as to what type of conduct is so related to the licensee's real estate activities that it would subject a licensee to disciplinary conduct. n11.2 However, some state statutes also provide for revoking a broker's license for conduct not directly related to the individual's brokerage. n12 Some courts have also revoked a broker's license in the absence of an express statutory mandate. n13 Courts that have so held reason in part that an individual who is incompetent or dishonest with respect to non-brokerage activities will probably behave in a similar manner in connection with such individual's brokerage activities. n14 Other courts have come to varying conclusions on whether a broker's license could be suspended or revoked for conduct not directly related to one's brokerage activities, depending upon the acts involved and the statutory section violated. n15 Therefore, in addition to reviewing the applicable state statutory scheme providing for license suspension or revocation, the broker would be well advised to be aware of relevant case law construing such statute. n16 Absent exigent circumstances, the court will not overturn the decision of a real estate commission unless the administrator's decision exceeds the bounds of reasonableness or is otherwise arbitrary and capricious. n17

A real estate licensee should not indicate that he or she is a member of the National Association of Realtors(R) or a state or local Realtors(R) association unless the licensee is indeed a member. Falsely indicating this membership is a violation of licensing laws in some jurisdictions and can subject a licensee to discipline. n18

The Supreme Court of New Hampshire considered a case involving a misrepresentation concerning a seller's status as a broker and a Realtor(R). n19 Dale Robinson (Robinson) had been a licensed broker and salesperson for over twenty years. His licenses were revoked in 1989. In 2005, Roberson placed for sale signs on property he owned. These signs and his business card which he distributed to the buyers indicated that he was a Realtor(R). The business cards also indicated that Roberson was a broker. When the buyers filed a complaint with the New Hampshire Real Estate Commission, the Commission, despite Robinson's argument that the Commission lacked jurisdiction, held that Robinson had violated statutory provisions by acting as a real estate broker without a license, by disregarding the Commission's prior order revoking his licenses, and by misrepresenting his membership in a state or national realty organization. n20 This decision was upheld on by the superior court, but was subsequently reversed by the New Hampshire high court which agreed with Robinson's jurisdictional argument. N.H. Rev. Stat. § 331-A:4, I, provides that the provisions of the New Hampshire Real Estate Practices Act do not apply to an owner selling his property. The court agreed with Robinson's assertion that since he was exempt under the Act, the Commission lacked jurisdiction to conduct a hearing on the buyers' complaint. This court emphasized that the owner exemption contained no qualifying language.

A North Carolina court has held that the owner exemption found in the North Carolina broker licensing law did not apply to a licensed broker involved in the sale of real estate by a corporation in which she held an ownership interest. The broker owned 8% of the corporation's outstanding stock. This court rejected the broker's argument that the North Carolina Real Estate Licensing Board lacked the jurisdiction to revoke her real estate broker's license. The court found that the broker acted as a real estate broker, not as an owner, in negotiating the sale of the subject house and lot. n21

A real estate licensee has been found to have violated a Montana statute addressing unprofessional conduct when the licensee used a buy-sell agreement form copyrighted by the National Association of Realtors(R) (NAR) which was intended for use by a member of the NAR or the Montana Association of Realtors(R). When the licensee used the form, he was not a member of either group. The disciplinary action of imposing a monetary fine against this licensee was found to be correct. n22

Brokers must also adequately supervise agents and salespersons who work for them. n23 A broker's failure to adequately supervise those working for the broker may find that their broker's license is revoked or suspended. n24 In some jurisdictions, it is not necessary that the broker have actual knowledge of the misconduct since a failure to adequately supervise such persons can leave a broker without knowledge of the misconduct of such individuals. n25

Practitioners should also review statutes that proscribe activities in which brokers may engage in an effort to sell real estate. A Missouri statute that prohibited brokers from using prizes or other valuable consideration as an inducement to secure customers to purchase real property was upheld against a challenge that it unduly restricted commercial speech. n26

Brokers who act in several different capacities should realize that claiming to act in a capacity other than as a broker may not protect them from having their licenses suspended or revoked. n27 The zealous approach of some state real estate commissions may lead to unnecessary disciplinary actions. Even if the brokers ultimately prevail, they will have incurred expenses and emotional turmoil in defending themselves against charges. n28 Perhaps the best advice for brokers who act in different capacities is that they should always comply with the high standards of conduct imposed on brokers. Anything short of that may invite trouble.

Regulatory agencies are not limited to the severe remedy of revoking or suspending a broker's license, but are generally able to impose sanctions for violating rules. n29 Regulatory agencies generally are granted the authority to review a broker's records and accounts. In Waxler v. Maine Real Estate Commission n30 this authority was upheld against a broker's challenge that such authority violated the broker's right to be free of unreasonable searches. This case also illustrates that a broker's carelessness can result in sanctions. The broker paid his license renewal with a check from his real estate trust account, rather than his regular account. The broker notified the Maine Real Estate Commission of his error. The Commission had already caught this error and informed the broker that it would seek to inspect, examine and audit his trust account records. The broker refused to allow the Commission to examine these records. Sanctions were imposed and the broker challenged the statute allowing examination of a broker's books and records. n31 This challenge failed and the statute was found to be constitutionally valid. n32

The revocation or suspension of a real estate broker's license generally does not constitute punishment for the purposes of double jeopardy analysis. n33

[2] Administrative Procedures and Judicial Review

Before a license is revoked or suspended, there is usually some form of administrative review. n34 Additionally, most state statutes allow judicial review of various facets of administrative proceedings. n35 The primary concern is that due process must be addressed before any license revocation. n36 In practice, however, because of the Administrative Procedures Act of most states, few revocation decisions are overturned unless they can be proven to be arbitrary and capricious conduct on the part of the State Regulatory Commission. Decisions to sanction will be reversed, however, if the commission fails to follow statutory guidelines or its own procedures. In one case the commission's omission of certain procedural documents from the record submitted to the court on the agent's appeal and the commission's failure to adhere to statutory time limits for holding a hearing on a complaint resulted in a reversal of its decision to sanction an agent. n37 Regulatory commissions also cannot sanction any conduct at will; before a commission may prohibit conduct that is not malum per se, it must notify a licensee that his or her conduct is forbidden. n38

Brokers and agents usually are not entitled to jury trials or Miranda warnings since violations of brokerage statutes generally are not subject to criminal punishment or custodial interrogations. n39 However, one court has stated that when a broker is threatened with the suspension or loss of his or her license, the testimony must clearly establish guilt. n40

The NARELLO Model Act requires the following notice and hearings before the administrative agency may issue a cease and desist order:

(1) The [Department/agency/Commission] may issue a cease and desist order to a person after notice and hearing and upon a determination that the person has violated a provision of this chapter or a lawful order or rule of the [Department/agency/Commission].

(2) If the [Department/agency/Commission] makes a written finding of fact that the public interest will be irreparably harmed by delay in issuing an order, a temporary cease and desist order may be issued. Before issuing the temporary cease and desist order, whenever possible the [Department/agency/Commission] shall give notice by telephone or otherwise of the proposal to issue a temporary cease and desist order to the person. Every temporary cease and desist order shall include a provision that a hearing will be held upon request to determine whether or not the order will become permanent.

At the time the temporary cease and desist order is served, the person or the licensee shall be notified that he is entitled to request a hearing for the sole purpose of determining whether or not the public interest imperatively requires that the temporary cease and desist order be continued or modified pending the outcome of the hearing to determine whether or not the order will become permanent. The hearing shall be held within thirty days after the [Department/agency/Commission] receives the request for hearing, unless the licensee requests a later hearing. The person may secure review of any decision rendered at a temporary cease and desist order review hearing as provided in [state statute], the Administrative Procedures Act. n41

A real estate commission is usually statutorily restricted as to the punishment it can mete out to a licensee. For example, it has been held that a statute which authorized a commission to order that a licensee perform or refrain from performing any acts (including community service without compensation) that the commission considered appropriate to the public interest or to the rehabilitation or treatment of the licensee did not grant the commission the authority to order that the licensee refund the commission she had received as a sanction for her actions in connection with her principal's purchase of a home. n42

[3] Legislative Remedies

[a] In General

There is a remarkably small number of complaints against real estate brokers in relation to the number of licensees. n43 To protect the public, however, all states provide some sort of recovery for aggrieved parties. This takes the form of a bond required for all agents upon licensure, errors and omissions insurance, or a recovery fund. Most states provide a fund to provide recovery for aggrieved parties in the event there is a breach of duty on the part of a licensee to the general public. n44 Refunds are paid out of the license fees of the licensee or assessed, as a general rule, either annually or biannually depending upon licensing procedures. Ten states require that licensees carry errors and omission insurance. n45

[b] Recovery Funds

Most recovery funds are established to reimburse persons who have been damaged by certain acts of a real estate licensee when they cannot collect their damages from that licensee. n46 There are two basic theories for recovery from such a fund. The first is that the person submitting the claim must be an aggrieved party who can maintain a claim as defined by the statute. The second involves the basis of the claim itself.

The "aggrieved party," in general terms, means a member of the general public who stood as a principal in a real estate transaction. It has been held that another licensee can stand as an aggrieved person. n47

The basis for a claim against the fund usually involves an aggrieved person who has a valid but uncollectible judgment against the licensee in the state claiming jurisdiction over the transaction, or a cause of action based upon a specific violation of the state's real estate license act. Recovery against such a fund has been allowed where the agent was alleged to have engaged in fraudulent conduct, but the parties stipulated to a judgment wherein the agent expressly denied her liability on the claims alleged in the complaint. n48

Generally, a recovery fund statute provides that the aggrieved party can be reimbursed for his uncollected losses against the licensee, subject to statutory limitations. n49 Usually, the statute provides that the aggrieved party can only recover actual damages, and does not include punitive damages, n50 although the claim could allow reimbursement for attorney's fees. n51 Statutes typically provide that an aggrieved claimant can recover an amount up to a statutory limit for that person's damage, although the transaction may support a cause of action for more than one claimant with a higher limit in the aggregate.

Some states limit an injured party's recovery to situations in which the licensee was acting as a broker or agent. For example, under such a rule, the injured party cannot recover from the fund if the broker was sued as the purchaser. n52

To date, virtually all states provide for the fund out of licensee's fees either upon licensure, upon renewal of the licensure or perhaps through an annual or biennial contribution to the fund. n53

Recovery funds are generally intended to be a remedy of last resort. Therefore, they are to be accessed only when other potential sources of recovery are unavailable. For this reason, it is possible that an injured party may be denied recovery from a fund for failing to diligently pursue damages from other potentially liable persons. n54 Through this theory the industry basically polices itself and pays for damages to the public out of the industry's contributions to the fund.

Claims against these funds usually must be filed within a certain time period. n55 A late filing will result in no recovery. n56

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. The relevant citations are:

Alabama: Ala. Code §§ 34-27-31(e)(6), 34-27-32(h), 34-27-36.

Alaska: Alaska Stat. §§ 08.88.037, 08.88.071(a)(3), 08.88.291.

Arizona: Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 32-2125(D), 32-2126(A), 32-2130(E), 32-2153, 32-2157(B), 32-2161(A), 32-2188(H), 32-2126(A).

Arkansas: Ark. Stat. Ann. §§ 17-42-311 and 17-42-312.

California: Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10165.

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. §§ 12-61-109(1), 12-61-110(5), 12-61-113, 12-61-118.

Connecticut: Conn. Gen. Stat. Ann. §§ 20-320, 20-320a, 20-323, 20-324e(f), 20-329f(a), 20-329i.

Delaware: Del. Code Ann. tit. 24, §§ 2912, 2915, 2919, 2920, 2921(h), 2947.

District of Columbia: D.C. Code § 47-2853.197.

Florida: Fla. Stat. Ann. § 475.25.

Georgia: Ga. Code Ann. §§ 43-40-14, 43-40-15, 43-10- 17.

Hawaii: Hawaii Rev. Stat. §§ 467-14, 467-17(b), 467- 18(e).

Idaho: Idaho Code §§ 54-2035E, 54-2040, 54-2050.

Illinois: 225 ILCS 455/9, 225 ILCS 455/15.1, 225 ILCS 455/18, 225 ILCS 455/22.

Indiana: Ind. Code Ann. §§ 25-34.1-6-1.1.

Iowa: Iowa Code Ann. § 543B.29.

Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. §§ 58-3050, 58-3062, 58-3072.

Kentucky: Ky. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 324.160, 324.170, 324.230, 324.420(3).

Louisiana: La. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 37:1442, 37:1447, 37:1448, 37:1450(B), 37:1455, 37:1463(G).

Maine: Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 32, §§ 13066, 13067, 13068, 13069, 13182, 13194.

Maryland: Md. Code Ann. Bus. Occ. & Prof. §§ 17-322, 17-327, 17-328.

Massachusetts: Mass. Gen. Laws Ann. ch. 112, §§ 87 VV, 87 YY, 87 AAA.

Michigan: Mich. Stat. Ann. §§ 339.2512, 339.2513.

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. Ann. §§ 82.20(4)(d), (9), (10); 82.27; 82.34(13).

Mississippi: Miss. Code Ann. §§ 73-35-17(4), 73-35- 21.

Missouri: Mo. Ann. Stat. § 339.100.

Montana: Mont. Code Ann. § 37-51-321.

Nebraska: Neb. Rev. Stat. §§ 81-885.14(1), 81-885.24, 81-885.29.

Nevada: Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 645.321, 645.324(2), 645.420(6), 645.570(3), 645.577, 645.630, 645.633, 645.635, 645.645, 645.660, 645.847.

New Hampshire: N.H. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 331-A:26, 331- A:28.

New Jersey: N.J. Rev. Stat. Ann. §§ 45:15-15, 45:15-17; 45:15-12.1, 45:15-19.1, 45:15-19.2, 45:15-13, 45:15-19, 45:15-41.

New Mexico: N.M. Stat. Ann. §§ 61-29-12; 61-29-11(C), 61-29-27.

New York: N.Y. Real Prop. L. § 441-c.

North Carolina: N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 93A-6, 93A-7, 93A- 22.

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.05

North Dakota: N.D. Cent. Code §§ 43-23-11.1(1), 43-23-12(2), 43-23-13.1, 43-23.2-09.

Ohio: Ohio Rev. Code Ann. §§ 4735.141(c), 4735.18, 4735.12(E), 4735.13(C), (D).

Oklahoma: Okla. Stat. Ann. tit. 59, § 858-312.

Oregon: Or. Rev. Stat. §§ 696.174(2), 696.200(2), 696.232(1), 696.301, 696.310(3), 696.320(1).

Pennsylvania: Pa. Cons. Stat. Ann. tit. 63, §§ 455.604(a), 455.702, 455.803(f).

Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. Laws §§ 5-20.5-5(c)(5), 5-20.5-6, 5-20.5-14, 5-20.5-15.

South Carolina: S.C. Code Ann. § 40-57-170.

South Dakota: S.D. Comp. Laws Ann. §§ 36-21A-45, 36-21A-68, 36-21A-69, 36-21A-70.

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. §§ 62-13-208(g), 62-13-311, 62-13-312.

Texas: Tex. Occ. Code § 1101.652.

Utah: Utah Code Ann. §§ 61-2-11, 61-2-13.

Vermont: Vt. Stat. Ann. tit. 26, § 2296.

Virginia: Va. Code § 54.1-2119.

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 18.85.230.

West Virginia: W. Va. Code § 42-12-8, 42-12-11, 42-12-17(b).

Wisconsin: Wis. Stat. Ann § 452.14.

Wyoming: Wyo. Stat § 33-28-111.

(n2)Footnote 2. As an alternative to license suspension, one state provides that the real estate commissioner is permitted to accept, on petition of the licensee, a monetary penalty in lieu of a license suspension. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10175.2 provides in pertinent part:

(a) If the Real Estate Commissioner determines that the public interest and public welfare will be adequately served by permitting a real estate licensee to pay a monetary penalty to the department in lieu of an actual license suspension, the commissioner may, on the petition of the licensee, stay the execution of all or some part of the suspension on the condition that the licensee pay a monetary penalty and the further condition that the licensee incur no other cause for disciplinary action within a period of time specified by the commissioner.

* * *

(d) The amount of the monetary penalty payable under this section shall not exceed two hundred dollars and fifty ... for each day of suspension stayed nor a total of ten thousand ... dollars per decision regardless of the number of days of suspension stayed under the decision.

(e) Any monetary penalty received by the department pursuant to this section shall be credited to the Recovery Account of the Real Estate Fund.

(n3)Footnote 3. Cannizzaro v. Commonwealth, Dep't of State, Bureau of Professional & Occupational Affairs, 129 Pa. Commw. 39, 564 A.2d 564 (Pa. Commw. 1989) .

(n4)Footnote 4. Grygiel v. Shaffer, 154 A.D.2d 763, 546 N.Y.S.2d 211 (1989) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Harrington v. Department of Real Estate, State of California, 214 Cal. App. 3d 394 (1989) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Wallen v. Florida Dep't of Professional Regulation, Div. of Real Estate, 568 So. 2d 975 (Fla. 3d DCA 1990) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Muller v. California State Dept. of Real Estate, 204 Cal. App. 3d 295 (1988) .

(n8)Footnote 8. Eckley v. Colorado Real Estate Comm'n, 752 P.2d 68 (Colo. 1988) (finding that the terms "incompetence" and "untrustworthiness" are not unconstitutionally vague, because they are sufficiently descriptive as standards of acceptable practice as developed by custom and tradition over the years in the real estate brokerage profession); License of Nick Topik, 761 P.2d 32 (Utah 1988) (similar holding).

See also Mississippi Real Estate Comm'n v. Hennessee, 672 So. 2d 1209 (Miss. 1996) (in a case of first impression, the Supreme Court of Mississippi held that a real estate broker may be subject to licensing disciplinary actions while selling property wholly owned by the broker).

(n9)Footnote 9. White v. Department of Business and Professional Regulation, 715 So. 2d 1130, 1131 (Fla. App. 1998) .

(n10)Footnote 10. Herrera v. Department of Real Estate, 88 Cal. App. 4th 776, 779-80, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 232, 234-35 (2001) , review denied, 2001 Cal. LEXIS 4848 (July 18, 2001) .

(n11)Footnote 11. NARELLO Model Act, § 20, ARELLO 1996 Digest of Real Estate License Laws in United States and Canada, § XIII, p. 14.

(n12)Footnote 11.1. See Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 490; Robbins v. Davi, 175 Cal. App. 4th 118, 122-23, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792, 795-96 (2009) , review denied, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 9831 (Sept. 17, 2009) .

(n13)Footnote 11.2. Cf. Robbins v. Davi, 175 Cal. App. 4th 118, 122-23, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 792, 795-96 (2009) (violation of municipal fire protection and prevention provision which were strict liability offenses supported revoking a broker's license), review denied, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 9831 (Sept. 17, 2009) .

(n14)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Wetzel v. Arizona State Real Estate Dep't, 151 Ariz. 330, 727 P.2d 825 (Ariz. Ct. App. 1986) cert. denied, 482 U.S. 914, 107 S. Ct. 3186, 96 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1987) (applying Ariz. Rev. Stat. Ann § 32.215B4, which authorized the revocation of a broker's license "when it appear[ed] that the holder ... [was] ... [n]ot ... a person of honesty, truthfulness and good reputation," to revoke a broker's license based on findings made at his disbarment proceeding); Harris v. Hunt, 122 S.W.3d 683, 687-688 (Mo. Ct. App. 2003) (conduct leading to license suspension occurred in broker's personal real estate investment activity, broker was not representing a principal). See also Moran v. Ohio Dept. of Commerce, Div. of Real Estate, 109 Ohio App. 3d 494, 672 N.E.2d 699 (Ohio App. 9 Dist. 1996) (the court upheld the revocation of the agent's license for misconduct, where the agent failed to inform the Commission of her being convicted of theft and forgery after she completed the real estate license application and before she received her license); Richard T. Kiko Agency, Inc. v. Ohio Dept. of Commerce, Division of Real Estate, 48 Ohio St. 3d 74, 549 N.E.2d 509 (1990) rehearing granted in part, 49 Ohio St. 3d 709, 551 N.E.2d 1305, 2 Ohio Pending Op. Rep. 17 (1990); and Missouri Real Estate Comm'n v. McCormick, 778 S.W.2d 303 (Mo. Ct. App. 1989) .

(n15)Footnote 13. See e.g.:

Arkansas: Black v. Arkansas Real Estate Comm'n, 275 Ark. 55, 626 S.W.2d 954 (Ark. 1982) .

Nevada: Laman v. Nevada Real Estate Advisory Comm'n, 95 Nev. 50, 589 P.2d 166 (Nev. 1979) .

Oregon: Klein v. Real Estate Comm'r, 19 Or. App. 646, 528 P.2d 1355 (1974) . See also South Carolina Real Estate Comm'n v. Boineau, 267 S.C. 574, 230 S.E.2d 440 (S.C. 1976) , cert. denied, 431 U.S. 954, 97 S. Ct. 2673, 53 L. Ed. 2d 270 (1977) ("realtors may have their licenses revoked for conduct not strictly related to a transaction in which they are acting as broker [sic]").

But cf. Pacella v. Ohio Department of Commerce, Division of Real Estate, 2003 Ohio 3432, 2003 Ohio App. LEXIS 3106, at *7-*11 (Ohio Ct. App. June 30, 2003) (Division found the licensee's conduct violated Ohio Rev. Code Ann. § 4735.58(A) because the disclosure did not contain either the seller's signature or a notation of rejection, dated prior to the marketing and showing of the real estate. Though the court found that the statute clearly stated a seller's agent was to provide the seller the disclosure prior to marketing or showing the seller's property, § 4735.58 did not require that the agent obtain proof of the seller's approval or secure the seller's signature when providing the disclosure. By enforcing, and effectively creating a duty to secure the seller's signature, the division exceeded its administrative power and encroached upon the legislative policy-making power of the general assembly.).

(n16)Footnote 14. See, e.g.:

Nebraska: Wright v. State, 208 Neb. 467, 304 N.W.2d 39 (Neb. 1981) .

Pennsylvania: State Real Estate Comm'n v. Tice, 200 Pa. Super. 553, 190 A.2d 188 (1963) (stating that "[a] broker who is dishonest or incompetent in the real estate activities in which he is involved as an owner, is not likely to be honest or competent in his activities which are purely brokerage in nature" [Citations omitted]) allocatur denied.

(n17)Footnote 15. Compare Ring v. Smith, 5 Cal. App. 3d 197, 85 Cal. Rptr. 227 (1970) , Tushner v. Savage, 219 Cal. App. 2d 71, 33 Cal. Rptr. 247 (1963) and Phillips v. Mann, 147 So. 2d 559 (Fla. 2d DCA 1962) , with Schlinder v. Florida Real Estate Comm'n, 144 So. 2d 862 (Fla. 3d DCA 1962) and Cannizzaro v. Commonwealth, Dep't of State, Bureau of Professional & Occupational Affairs, 129 Pa. Commw. 39, 564 A.2d 564 (Pa. Commw. 1989) appeal denied, 525 Pa. 605, 575 A.2d 570 (1990) . See also Petropoulos v. Dept. of Real Estate, 142 Cal. App. 4th 554, 567, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812, 823 (2006) (A broker had pled guilty to misdemeanor battery against his girlfriend and he had pled nolo contendere to misdemeanor battery against his former wife. Both convictions were later expunged. The court held that Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 490 does not provide independent statutory authorization for the suspension or revocation of the license of a person based on his or her conviction of a crime.), rehearing denied, 2006 Cal. App. LEXIS 1448 (Sept. 21, 2006) .

(n18)Footnote 16. See South Carolina Real Estate Comm'n v. Boineau, 267 S.C. 574, 230 S.E.2d 440 (S.C. 1976) , cert. denied, 431 U.S. 954, 97 S. Ct. 2673, 53 L. Ed. 2d 270 (1977) (broker's license could be revoked on both statutory and common law grounds).

(n19)Footnote 17. Rogers v. Division of Real Estate of Dep't of Business Regulations, 790 P.2d 102 (Utah Ct. App. 1990) .

(n20)Footnote 18. Cf. Tenn. Code Ann. § 62-13-312(b)(4) (prohibiting "Misleading or untruthful advertising, including use of the term 'Realtor' by a person not authorized to do so, or using any other trade name or insignia or membership in any real estate association or organization, of which the licensee is not a member.").

(n21)Footnote 19. See Robinson v. New Hampshire Real Estate Comm'n, 157 N.H. 729, 958 A.2d 958 (2008) .

(n22)Footnote 20. See Robinson v. New Hampshire Real Estate Comm'n, 157 N.H. 729, 730-31, 958 A.2d 958, 959 (2008) . The statutory provisions were N.H. Rev. Stat. §§ 331-A:3, 331-A:34, 331-A:26, II, and 331-A:26, XVI.

(n23)Footnote 21. See Cox v. North Carolina Real Estate Licensing Board, 47 N.C. App. 135, 266 S.E.2d 851, 1980 N.C. App. LEXIS 2992 (1980) , petition denied, 301 N.C. 87, 273 S.E.2d 296 (1980) . See also Gresco Real Estate Inv. Trust v. Nathaniel Greene Development Corp., 218 Va. 228, 237 S.E.2d 107, 1977 Va. LEXIS 183 (1977) (the owner's exemption in Va. Code Ann. § 54-734 did not apply because a shareholder was not an owner of a corporation's land).

(n24)Footnote 22. See White v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 2007 MT 252N, 2007 Mont. LEXIS 441 (Mont. Oct. 2, 2007) (unpublished opinion). The statutes violated were Mont. Code §§ 37-1-316(5), 37-1-316(18) and 37-51-321(1)(d). The latter statute allows revocation or suspension of a license if the licensee is found "guilty" of using the term "realtor" when he or she is not authorized to do so or using another trade name or insignia of membership in a real estate organization of which the licensee is not a member.

(n25)Footnote 23. See Farris v. Miss. Real Estate Comm'n, 994 So. 2d 229, 233-34 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008) , cert. denied, 998 So. 2d 1010 (Miss. 2008) Gibbons v. Bureau of Professional and Occupational Affairs, State Real Estate Commission, 921 A.2d 551, 553-54 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2007) .

(n26)Footnote 24. Id.

(n27)Footnote 25. See Gibbons v. Bureau of Professional and Occupational Affairs, State Real Estate Commission, 921 A.2d 551, 554 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2007) ; Dougherty v. Commonwealth, State Real Estate Commission, 99 Pa. Commw. 397, 400, 513 A.2d 555, 557 (1986) , appeal denied, 515 Pa. 587, 527 A.2d 547 (1987) .

(n28)Footnote 26. Coldwell Banker Residential Real Estate Servs. v. Missouri Real Estate Comm'n, 712 S.W.2d 666 (Mo. 1986) (en banc) (upholding Mo. Rev. Stat. § 339.100.2(12)); contra: Coldwell Banker Residential Real Estate v. Clayton, 105 Ill. 2d 389, 86 Ill. Dec. 322, 475 N.E.2d 536, (1985) (holding, on substantially similar facts, that an Illinois statute was an unconstitutional regulation of commercial speech).

(n29)Footnote 27. Harris v. Hunt, 122 S.W.3d 683, 687-688 (Mo. Ct. App. 2003) ; White v. Department of Business and Professional Regulation, 715 So.2d 1130, 1131 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1998) .

(n30)Footnote 28. See Ohio Div. of Real Estate v. Vantell, 128 Ohio App. 3d 410, 715 N.E.2d 217, 221-222 (Ohio App. 1998) . This case involved a broker who entered into a joint venture with an investor to acquire, improve, and resell the property. The commission found that the broker committed misconduct by having authorized the investor to act in a representative real estate capacity on behalf of another when the investor was not licensed. An exemption to the licensure statute provided an exception for owners and individuals who had an interest in property on their own account. The court reversed the commission's decision stating that the commission misinterpreted this exemption and that the commission had no jurisdiction to suspend the broker's license.

See also Franich v. The Real Estate Commission of the State of Iowa, 681 N.W.2d 620, 623-624 (Iowa 2004) . As a sanction, the commission permanently prohibited a broker from using a marketing plan that had been found to be a prohibited practice. The court found that the commission did not err in imposing this sanction.

(n31)Footnote 29. Cf., e.g., Staff of the Idaho Real Estate Comm'n v. Nordling, 135 Idaho 630, 135 Idaho 630, 22 P.3d 105 and 112 (Idaho Mar. 29, 2001)(in addition to suspending an agent's license for fourteen days, the commission fined her $3,000 and ordered her to pay up to $55,000 of costs and attorneys fees incurred by the commission in prosecuting the action).

(n32)Footnote 30. 1998 Me. 65, 708 A.2d 663 (1998) .

(n33)Footnote 31. The statute challenged was Me. Rev. Stat. Ann. tit. 32, § 13178.

(n34)Footnote 32. 1998 Me. 65, 708 A.2d 663, 666 (1998) .

(n35)Footnote 33. See Clark v. Tyrrell, 16 Neb. Ct. App. 692, 700, 750 N.W.2d 364, 373 (2008) . See also Wendte v. State, 70 P.3d 1089, 1094 (Alaska 2003) (suspension of an appraiser's license) (revoking or suspending a professional license is not punishment for double jeopardy purposes when it furthers a regulatory goal). See generally Robyn Scheina Brown, Double Jeopardy: Can Non-Monetary Civil Sanctions Constitute Punishment under the Fifth Amendment , 26 U. Balt. L.F. 14, 15-17 (1996) (stating that virtually every jurisdiction that has been confronted with whether suspensions and revocations of driver's licenses and professional licenses implicate the prohibitions of the Double Jeopardy Clause has held that the suspension of these licenses does not violate the protections afforded by the Fifth Amendment).

(n36)Footnote 34. See Krantz v. Utah Dep't of Commerce, 856 P.2d 369 (Utah. App. 1993) (finding that the Utah Real Estate Commission's failure to notify a real estate broker of his statutory right to apply for reconsideration was presumed to be substantially prejudicial since the commission could not know whether the reconsideration would be granted, and remanding the matter to the Executive Director of Commerce to direct the Real Estate Commission to issue an order advising the broker of his right to apply for reconsideration of the decision to revoke his license).

(n37)Footnote 35. See, e.g.:

Alabama: Lambert v. Alabama Real Estate Comm'n, 479 So. 2d 68 (Ala. Ct. App. 1985) (real estate broker whose license was revoked by the Commission was entitled to an oral hearing by the State Circuit Court before that court could dismiss the broker's appeal of the revocation).

Montana: Matter of Sorini, 717 P.2d 7 (Mont. 1986) (the fact that the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were both state deputy attorneys did not deny broker's right to an administrative hearing).

North Carolina: Correll v. Boulware, 329 S.E.2d 695 (N.C. Ct. App. 1985) (noting that in reviewing the sufficiency of the Real Estate Licensing Board's findings of fact in a license suspension hearing, a reviewing court must examine the "whole record" to determine if there is substantial evidence in the record to support the board's findings).

Pennsylvania: Fumo v. State Real Estate Comm'n, 515 A.2d 1349 (Pa. 1986) (defense of laches must normally be raised at the administrative level to be considered on appeal; however, that defense had to be considered in the instant case in the light of an earlier court ruling that the defense of laches was available against the Commonwealth in an administrative disciplinary proceeding by a licensing board). For a case reviewing an administrative suspension of a broker's license and reversing such administrative determination on the basis of a narrow construction of the license suspension statute, see Gobao v. Commonwealth, State Real Estate Com., 96 Pa. Commw. 341, 507 A.2d 917 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 1986) , in which the court narrowly construed a statute that listed numerous criminal offenses, conviction of which required suspension of a real estate broker's license.

(n38)Footnote 36. Cf. Morris v. Real Estate Comm'n, 2008 Del. Super. LEXIS 140 (Del. Super. Ct. Apr. 11, 2008) (Since there was no evidence that the licensee had received proper notice of the hearing, the Delaware Real Estate Commission's decision was reversed.).

(n39)Footnote 37. See Royer v. Ohio Real Estate Comm'n, 131 Ohio App. 3d 265, 722 N.E.2d 172, 175-176 (1999) .

(n40)Footnote 38. See Ohio Dept. of Commerce v. Flenniken, 2000 Ohio App. LEXIS 5633 (Ohio App. Nov. 30, 2000) (an agent did not commit misconduct by using four business names on three separate agency disclosure statements with no form listing the same combination of businesses for three offers made on the same property).

(n41)Footnote 39. See McDerment v. Mississippi Real Estate Comm'n, 748 So. 2d 114, 119-120 (Miss. 1999) .

(n42)Footnote 40. See Mississippi Real Estate Comm'n v. Anding, 732 So. 2d 192, 196 (Miss. 1999) .

(n43)Footnote 41. NARELLO Model Act, § 22, ARELLO 1996 Digest of Real Estate License Laws United States and Canada, § VIII, p. 20.

(n44)Footnote 42. See Indiana Real Estate Commission v. C.M.B. III Enterprises, Inc., 734 N.E.2d 653, 662 (Ind. App. 2000) . The statute involved was Ind. Code § 25-1-11-12(a)(5)(D).

(n45)Footnote 43. See ARELLO Digest of Real Estate License Law United States and Canada, § I, p. 19 for a table of complaint statistics. For example, this Digest shows that as of June 30, 1995, Florida had 71,392 licensed brokers and 218,810 licensed salespersons. For the period of July 1994 through June 1995, 5,499 complaints were received which resulted in 3,067 investigations.

(n46)Footnote 44. The exceptions are Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, Oregon, South Carolina, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

(n47)Footnote 45. These states have mandatory errors and omissions insurance requirements: Alabama, Idaho, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Nebraska, Rhode Island, South Dakota, and Tennessee. New Mexico statutorily provides for optional errors and omissions insurance coverage.

(n48)Footnote 46. See Texas Real Estate Comm'n v. Nagle, 767 S.W.2d 691, 693 (Tex. 1989) .

(n49)Footnote 47. Texas Real Estate Comm'n v. Century 21 Security Realty, Inc., 598 S.W.2d 920, 922 (Tex. Civ. App. 1980) .

(n50)Footnote 48. See Smith v. I.W. Levin and Co., Inc., 800 A.2d 374, 379 (Pa. Commw. Ct. 2002) .

(n51)Footnote 49. See Paris v. Feder, 179 Ill.2d 173, 688 N.E.2d 137, 139 (1997) (recoveries from Real Estate Recovery Fund are limited to $10,000 per transaction and are not intended to be fully compensatory).

(n52)Footnote 50. See Cairone, Inc. v. Frey Realty, Inc., 703 A.2d 585, 588 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1997) (punitive damages are not recoverable from the Real Estate Recovery Fund).

(n53)Footnote 51. Texas Real Estate Comm'n v. Hood, 617 S.W.2d 838, 840 (Tex. Ct. App. 1981) .

(n54)Footnote 52. See Fla. Stat. § 475.482(1)(b) (no recovery if the licensee was the seller, buyer, landlord or tenant in the transaction); Dorcely v. State Dep't of Bus. & Prof'l Regulation, 22 So. 3d 834, 836-37 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App.

2009) ; Wasser v. Dep't of Bus. & Prof'l Regulation, 717 So.2d 633, 634 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1998) .

(n55)Footnote 53. See ARELLO 1996 Digest of Real Estate License Laws United States and Canada, § I, p. 42.

(n56)Footnote 54. See Bedow v. Watkins, 552 N.W.2d 543, 544, 547-548 (Minn. 1996) .

(n57)Footnote 55. See, e.g.,0 Fla. Stat. § 475.483(1)(c) (two-year period, but a four-year period under some circumstances).

(n58)Footnote 56. See Dorcely v. State Dep't of Bus. & Prof'l Regulation, 22 So. 3d 834, 836 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2009) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

120 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.06

§ 6.06 State Statutes

Every state and the District of Columbia requires that real estate brokers and salespersons must be licensed. The following subsections provide citations to each state's licensing laws. Note that the requirements to receive a broker's license are more exacting than those for a salesperson's license.

[1] Alabama

Statutory provisions governing the licensing of Alabama brokers and salespersons are found at Alabama Code §§ 34-27-1 to 37-27-88, 40-12-149, and 40-12-150.

The Alabama Real Estate Commission may be reached at 1201 Carmichael Way, Montgomery, Alabama 36106-4350, Phone: 334-242-5544, Fax: 334-270-9118. The Alabama Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.arec.alabama.gov/>.

[2] Alaska

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Alaska real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Alaska Statutes §§ 08.88.011 through 08.88.990.

The Alaska Real Estate Commission may be reached at 550 West 7th Avenue, Suite 1500, Anchorage, Alaska 99501-3567; Telephone: 907-269-8162, Fax: 907-269-1066. The Alaska Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.dced.state.ak.us/occ/prec.htm>.

[3] Arizona

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Arizona real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Arizona Revised Statutes Annotated §§ 32-2101 through 32-2164.

The Arizona Department of Real Estate may be reached at 2910 North 44th Street, Suite 100, Phoenix, Arizona 85018, Phone: 602-468-1414, Customer Service Fax: 602-955-6284, Administration Division Fax: 602-468-0562. The Arizona Department of Real Estate may be found on the Internet at <http://www.re.state.az.us/>.

[4] Arkansas

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Arkansas real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Arkansas Code Annotated §§ 17-42-101 through 17-42-314.

The Arkansas Real Estate Commission may be reached at 612 South Summit Street, Little Rock, Arkansas 72201-4740, Phone: 501-683-8010, Fax: 501-683-8020. The Arkansas Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.ar.us/arec/frmain.htm>.

[5] California

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of California real estate brokers and salespersons are found at California Business and Professions Code §§ 10150 through 10165.

The California Department of Real Estate may be reached at 2201 Broadway, P.O. Box 187000, Sacramento, California 95818-7000, 916-227-0931. The California Department of Real Estate may be reached on the Internet at <http://www.dre.ca.gov/>.

[6] Colorado

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Colorado brokers and salespersons are found at Colorado Revised Statutes §§ 12-61-101 through 12-61-309.

The Department of Regulatory Agencies, Division of Real Estate may be reached at 1560 Broadway, Suite 925, Denver, Colorado 80202, Phone: 303-894-2166, Fax: 303-894-2683. The Colorado Division of Real Estate may be found on the Internet at <http://www.dora.state.co.us/real-estate/>.

[7] Connecticut

Statutory provisions governing the licensing of Connecticut real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Connecticut General Statutes §§ 20-311 through 20-329ff.

The Connecticut Department of Consumer Protection, Real Estate and Professional Trades Division may be reached at 165 Capitol Avenue, Room 110, Hartford, Connecticut 06106, Phone: 860-566-3290, Fax: 860-566-7630. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.ct.us/dcp/>.

[8] Delaware

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Delaware real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Delaware Code Annotated §§ 2901 through 2929A.

The Delaware Department of Administrative Services, Division of Professional Regulation, Real Estate Commission may be reached at 861 Silver Lake Boulevard, Suite 203, P.O. Box 1401, Dover, Delaware 19903, Phone: 302-739-4522, ext. 219, Fax: 302-739-2711. It may be found on the Internet at <http://dpr.delaware.gov/boards/realestate/index.shtml>.

[9] District of Columbia

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of District of Columbia real estate brokers and salespersons are found at District of Columbia Code Annotated §§ 47-2853.161 through 47-2853.198. Provisions addressing a real estate broker's duties are found at D.C. Code Annotated §§ 42-1701 through 42-1709.

Information on real estate licenses in the District of Columbia may be obtained from the Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs, Government of the District of Columbia, 941 North Capitol Street NE, Washington, DC 20002, Phone: (202) 442-4400, Fax: (202) 442-9445. It may be found on the Internet at <http://dcra.dc.gov>.

[10] Florida

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Florida real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Florida Statutes Annotated §§ 475.001 through 475.5017.

The Florida Department of Business and Professional Regulation (DBPR), Division of Real Estate, can be reached at 400 West Robinson Street, N309 (Post Office Box 1900, Zip Code 32802-1900), Orlando, Florida 32801-1772, Phone: 850-487-1395, Fax: 850-921-0038. The Florida Division of Real Estate may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.fl.us/dbpr/re/index.shtml>.

[11] Georgia

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Georgia real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Georgia Code Annotated §§ 43-40-1 to 43-40-31.

The Georgia Real Estate Commission may be reached at Suite 1000, International Tower, 229 Peachtree Street, N.E., Atlanta, Georgia 30303-1605, Phone: 404-656-3916, Fax: 404-656-6650. The Georgia Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.greab.state.ga.us/>.

[12] Hawaii

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Hawaii real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Hawaii Revised Statutes §§ 467.1 through 467.30.

The Hawaii Real Estate Commission may be reached at 335 Merchant Street, Room 333, Honolulu, HI 96813. Phone (808) 586-2643. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.hawaii.gov/hirec/>.

[13] Idaho

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Idaho real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Idaho Code §§ 54-2021 through 54-2097.

The Idaho Real Estate Commission may be reached at 633 North Fourth Street, P.O. Box 83720, Boise, Idaho 83720, Phone: 208-334-3285, Fax: 208-334-2050. The Idaho Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www2.state.id.us/irec/>.

[14] Illinois

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Illinois real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Smith-Hurd Illinois Compiled Annotated §§ 455/1 through 455/34.

The Illinois Office of Banks and Real Estate may be reached at 500 East Monroe Street, Suite 200, Springfield, Illinois 62701, Phone: 217-785-3000, Fax: 217-524-5941. The Illinois Office of Banks and Real Estate may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.il.us/obr>.

[15] Indiana

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Indiana real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Indiana Code §§ 25-34.1-1-1 through 25-34.1-7-13.

The licensing of Indiana brokers is handled by the Indiana Professional Licensing Agency, 402 West Washington Street, Room W072, Indianapolis, Indiana 46204, Phone: 317-234-3009, Fax: 317-232-2312. Web site: <http://www.in.gov/pla/bandc/estate/>.

[16] Iowa

Statutory provisions regarding Iowa real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Iowa Code Annotated §§ 543B.1 through 543B.55.

The Iowa Professional Licensing & Regulation Division, Real Estate Commission, 1920 SE Hulsizer Avenue, Ankeny, Iowa 50021-3941, Phone: 515-281-7393, Fax: 515-281-5910. The Iowa Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.ia.us/government/com/prof/sales/home.html>.

[17] Kansas

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Kansas real estate brokers and salespersons are found beginning at Kansas Statutes Annotated § 58-3034.

The Kansas Real Estate Commission may be reached at Three Townsite Plaza, Suite 200, 120 SE 6th Avenue, Topeka, Kansas 66603-3511; Phone: 785-296-3411; Fax: 785-296-1771. The Kansas Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.accesskansas.org/krec>.

[18] Kentucky

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Kentucky real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Kentucky Revised Statutes §§ 324.010 through 324.990.

The Kentucky Real Estate Commission may be reached at 10200 Linn Station Road, Suite 201, Louisville, Kentucky 40223, 502-425- 4273. Its toll free number is 1-888-373-3300 and its fax number is 502-426-2717. The Kentucky Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://krec.ky.gov/index.html>.

[19] Louisiana

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Louisiana real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Louisiana Revised Statutes Annotated §§ 37:1430 through 37:1468.

The Louisiana Real Estate Commission may be reached at P.O. Box 14785, Baton Rouge, Louisiana 70898-4785 Street Address: 9071 Interline Avenue, Baton Rouge, LA 70809; Telephone: 225-925-1923, Fax: 225-925-4501, Phone: 504-925-4771, Fax: 504-925-4431. It can be reached on the Internet at <http://www.lrec.state.la.us/>.

[20] Maine

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Maine real estate brokers and sales agents are found at Maine Revised Statutes Annotated §§ 13001 through 13201.

The Maine Real Estate Commission may be reached at 35 State House Station, Augusta, Maine 04333-0035, Phone: 207-624-8603, Fax: 207-624-8637. It can be reached on the Internet at <http://www.state.me.us/pfr/olr/categories/cat38.htm>.

[21] Maryland

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Maryland brokers and salespersons are found at Annotated Code of Maryland Business Occupations and Profession §§ 17-101 through 17-614.

The Maryland Real Estate Commission may be reached at 500 N. Calvert Street, Baltimore, Maryland 21202-2272, Phone: 410-230-6230, Toll-free 1-888-218-5925, Fax: 410-333-0851. The Maryland Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.dllr.state.md.us/license/occprof/recomm.html>.

[22] Massachusetts

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Massachusetts real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Massachusetts General Laws chapter 112, §§ 87P through 87DDD.

The Massachusetts Division of Professional Licensure, Real Estate Board may be reached at 239 Causeway Street, Suite 500, Boston, Massachusetts 02114; Phone: 617-727-2373; Fax: 617-727-2669. The Real Estate Board may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.ma.us/reg>.

[23] Michigan

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Michigan real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Michigan Compiled Laws §§ 339.2501 through 339.2515.

The regulatory agency is the Department of Energy, Labor & Economic Growth, Michigan State Board of Real Estate Brokers & Salespersons, 2501 Woodlake Circle, Okemos, Michigan 48865; Telephone: 517-373-7353; Fax: 517-373-1044; Website: www.michigan.gov/realestate.

[24] Minnesota

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Minnesota real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Minnesota Statutes Annotated §§ 82.17 through 82.34.

The Minnesota Department of Commerce may be reached at 85 7th Place East, St. Paul MN 55101, Phone: 651-296-6319. The Minnesota Department of Commerce may be found online at <http://www.state.mn.us/> (click on "more" under licensing and forms and then click on "Department of Commerce License Lookup").

[25] Mississippi

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Mississippi real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Mississippi Code Annotated §§ 73-35-1 through 73-35-35.

The Mississippi Real Estate Commission may be reached at Post Office Box 12685, Jackson, Mississippi 39236 (Street address: 2506 Lakeland Drive, Suite 300, Jackson, MS 39232); Phone: 601-932-9191; Fax: 601-932-2990. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.mrec.state.ms.us/>.

[26] Missouri

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Missouri real estate brokers and agents are found at Annotated Missouri Statutes §§ 339.010 through 339.617.

The Missouri Real Estate Commission may be reached at 3605 Missouri Boulevard, P.O. Box 1339, Jefferson City, Missouri 65102-1339, Phone: 573-751-2628, Fax: 573-751-2777. It may be found on the Internet at <http://pr.mo.gov/realestate.asp>.

[27] Montana

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Montana real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Montana Code Annotated §§ 37-51-102 through 37-51-608.

The Montana Board of Realty Regulation may be reached at Post Office Box 200513, 301 South Park Avenue, Helena, Montana 59620-0513, Phone: 406-444-2961; Fax: 406-841-2323. The Montana Board of Realty Regulation may be found on the Internet at Website: <http://mt.gov/>.

[28] Nebraska

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Nebraska real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Nebraska Rev. Stat. §§ 81-855.01 through 81-887.03.

The Nebraska Real Estate Commission may be reached at 1200 N. Street, Suite 402, P.O. Box 94667, Lincoln, Nebraska 68509-4667, Phone: 402-471-4492, Fax: 402-471-4492. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.nrec.state.ne.us/>.

[29] Nevada

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Nevada real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Nevada Revised Statutes §§ 645.0005 through 645.440.

The Nevada Department of Business & Industry, Real Estate Division may be reached at 2501 E. Sahara Ave., Suite 102, Las Vegas, Nevada 89104-4137; Phone: 702-486-4033; Fax: 702-486-4275. The Real Estate Division may be found on the Internet at <http://www.red.state.nv.us/>.

[30] New Hampshire

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of New Hampshire real estate brokers and salespersons are found at New Hampshire Revised Statutes Annotated §§ 331-A:1 through 331-A:35.

The New Hampshire Real Estate Commission may be reached at State House Annex, Room 434, 25 Capitol Street, Concord, New Hampshire 03301, 603-271-2701. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.nh.us/nhrec/>.

[31] New Jersey

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of New Jersey real estate brokers and salespersons are found at New Jersey Revised Statutes §§ 45:15-1 through 45:15-29.2.

The New Jersey Real Estate Commission may be reached at 20 West State Street, CN-328, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, 609-292-8280, Fax: 609-292-0944. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.nj.gov/dobi/remnu.shtml>.

[32] New Mexico

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of New Mexico real estate brokers and salespersons are found at New Mexico Statutes Annotated §§ 61-29-1 to 61-29-29.

The New Mexico Real Estate Commission may be reached at 5200 Oakland Ave. NE Albuquerque, NM 87113; Phone: 505-222-9820; Fax: 505-222-9886. The New Mexico Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.rld.state.nm.us/RealEstateCommission/>.

[33] New York

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of New York real estate brokers and salespersons are found at New York Real Property Law § 440 et seq.

The New York Division of Licensing may be reached at Street Address: Alfred E. Smith Office Building, 80 S. Swan Street, 10th Floor, Albany, NY 12210; Mailing Address: P.O. Box 22001, Albany, NY 12201-2001; Phone: 518-474-4429; Fax: 518-473-6648. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.dos.state.ny.us/lcns/licensing.html>.

[34] North Carolina

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of North Carolina real estate brokers and salespersons are found at North Carolina General Statutes §§ 93A-1 through 93A-59.

The North Carolina Real Estate Commission may be reached at P.O. Box 17100, Raleigh, North Carolina 27619-7100, 919-733-9580. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.ncrec.state.nc.us/default.asp>.

[35] North Dakota

The statutory provisions regarding the licensing of North Dakota real estate brokers and salespersons are found at North Dakota Century Code §§ 43-23-02 through 43-23-18.

The North Dakota Real Estate Commission may be reached at Mailing address: P.O. Box 727, Bismarck ND 58502-0727; 200 East Main Avenue, Suite 204, 727, Bismarck, ND 58502-0727, 701-328-9749, Fax: 701-328-9751. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.realestatend.org/>.

[36] Ohio

The statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Ohio real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Ohio Revised Code Annotated §§ 4735.01 through 4735.99.

The Ohio Division of Real Estate may be reached at 77 South High Street, 20th Floor, Columbus, Ohio 43266-0547, 614-466-4100, Fax: 614-644-0584. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.com.ohio.gov/real/>.

[37] Oklahoma

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Oklahoma real estate brokers and real estate sales associates are found at Oklahoma Statutes §§ 858-101 through 858-604.

The Oklahoma Real Estate Commission may be reached at Shepherd Mall, 2401 N.W. 23rd, Suite 18, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73107, Phone: 405-521-3387; Fax: 405-521-2189. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.orec.state.ok.us/>.

[38] Oregon

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Oregon real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Oregon Revised Statutes § 696.007 et seq.

The Oregon Real Estate Agency may be reached at 1177 Center Street, N.E., Salem, Oregon 97310-2503, 503-378-3256, Fax: 503-378-2491. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.rea.state.or.us/>.

[39] Pennsylvania

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Pennsylvania real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Pennsylvania Consolidated Statutes §§ 455.101 through 455.902.

The Pennsylvania Real Estate Commission may be reached at P.O. Box 2649, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17105-2649, Phone: 717-783-3658, Fax: 717-787-0250. It may be found on the Internet at www.dos.state.pa.us/estate.

[40] Rhode Island

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Rhode Island real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Rhode Island General Laws §§ 5-20.5-1 through 5-20.5-25.

The Rhode Island Department of Business Regulation, Division of Commercial Licensing and Regulation, Real Estate may be reached at 1511 Pontiac Avenue, Cranston, RI 02920, Telephone: 401-462-9500; Fax: 401-462-9532. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.dbr.state.ri.us/>.

[41] South Carolina

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of South Carolina real estate brokers and salespersons are found at South Carolina Code Annotated §§ 40-57-10 through 40-57-240.

The South Carolina Real Estate Commission may be reached at Kroger Office Park, Kingtree Building, 110 Centerview Drive, Suite 201, Columbia, South Carolina 29210. Its mailing address is P.O. Box 11847, Columbia, South Carolina 29211-1847. Its telephone numbers are: Voice: 803-896-4400, Fax: 803-896-4404. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.llronline.com/POL/REC/>.

[42] South Dakota

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of South Dakota real estate brokers and salespersons are found at South Dakota Codified Laws §§ 36-21A-1 through 36-21A-123.

The South Dakota Real Estate Commission may be reached at 221 W. Capitol Suite 101, Pierre, South Dakota 57501; Phone: 605-773-3600; Fax: 605-773-4356. The South Dakota Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.sd.us/sdrec/>.

[43] Tennessee

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Tennessee real estate brokers and Tennessee Code Annotated §§ 63-13-101 through 63-13-408.

The Tennessee Real Estate Commission may be reached at 500 James Robertson Parkway, Suite 180, Volunteer Plaza, Nashville, Tennessee 37243-1151, 615-741-2273, Fax: 615-741-0313. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.tn.us/commerce/boards/trec/index.html>.

[44] Texas

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Texas real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Texas Occupations Code § 1101.001, et seq.

The Texas Real Commission may be reached at P.O. Box 12188, Austin, Texas 78711-2188, 512-459-6544, Toll-free: 800-250-TREC (8732), Fax: 512-465-3910. Its street address is 1101 Camino La Costa, Austin, Texas 78752. The Texas Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at <http://www.trec.state.tx.us>.

[45] Utah

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Utah real estate brokers and sales agents are found at Utah Code Annotated §§ 61-2-1 through 61-2-22.

The Utah Division of Real Estate may be reached at Post Office Box 146711, Salt Lake City, Utah 84114-6711 (Street address: Heber M. Wells Building, 160 East 300 South, 2nd Floor, Salt Lake City, UT 84111), Phone: 801-530-6747, Fax: 801-530-6749. The Utah Division of Real Estate may be found on the Internet at <http://www.commerce.utah.gov/dre/>.

[46] Vermont

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Vermont real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Vermont Statutes Annotated tit. 26, §§ 2211 through 2299.

The Vermont Real Estate Commission may be reached at Vermont Real Estate Commission, Office of Professional Regulation, National Life Building, North FL2, Montpelier, VT 05620-3402; 802-828-3228, Fax: 802-828-2368. The Vermont Real Estate Commission may be found on the Internet at http://www.vtprofessionals.org/opr1/real_estate/.

[47] Virginia

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Virginia real estate brokers and sales persons are found at Virginia Code Annotated §§ 54.1-2100 through 54.1-2141.

The Virginia Department of Professional and Occupational Regulation may be reached at 9960 Mayland Drive, Suite 400, Richmond, Virginia 23233, Phone: 804-367-8500 or 804-367-8552, Fax: 804-527-4298. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.state.va.us/dpor/>.

[48] Washington

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Washington real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Washington Revised Code §§ 18.85.010 through 18.85.920.

The Washington Real Estate Program of the Department of Licensing--Business and Professions Division may be reached at P.O. Box 9015, Olympia, Washington 98507, 360-586-6101, Fax: 360-586-0998. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.dol.wa.gov/business/realestate/index.html>.

[49] West Virginia

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of West Virginia real estate brokers and salespersons are found at West Virginia Code §§ 47-12-1 through 47-12-23.

The West Virginia Real Estate Commission may be reached at 300 Capitol Street, Suite 400, Charleston, West Virginia 25301; Phone: 304-558-3555, Fax: 304-558-6442. It may be found on the Internet at <http://www.wvrec.org/>.

[50] Wisconsin

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of Wisconsin real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Wisconsin Statutes §§ 452.01 through 452.23.

The Wisconsin Department of Regulation and Licensing may be reached at P.O. Box 8935, Madison, WI 53708-8935 (Street address: 1400 E. Washington Avenue, Madison Wisconsin 53703); Telephone: 608-266-2112; Fax: 608-261-7083. It may be found on the Internet at <http://drl.wi.gov>.

[51] Wyoming

Statutory provisions regarding the licensing of real estate brokers and salespersons are found at Wyoming Statutes §§ 33-28-101 through 33-28-206. Wyoming's real estate brokerage laws were amended effective July 1, 2009. n57

The Wyoming Real Estate Commission may be reached at 2020 Carey Avenue, Suite 720, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82002-0180, 307-777-7141, Fax: 307-777-3796. The Wyoming Real Estate Commission may be reached on the Internet at <http://realestate.state.wy.us/>.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 57. 2009 Wy. ALS 20; 2009 Wyo. Sess. Laws 20; 2009 Wy. Ch. 20; 2009 Wy. SF 110; 2009 Wy. EA 12.

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

121 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.07

§ 6.07 Mortgage Foreclosure Consultants

[1] Regulation of Mortgage Foreclosure Consultants

The term "mortgage fraud" encompasses a wide variety of fraudulent behaviors intended to victimize lenders and/or borrowers. One particular type of mortgage fraud involves unscrupulous individuals who seek out homeowners facing foreclosure and offer to "help" such a homeowner out of his or her financial predicament. Often homeowners who agree to accept such "help" are unsophisticated and lower income. Instead of helping the homeowner, the individual often dupes the homeowner into conveying his or her home to the individual. The perpetrator then strips the home of its equity through a loan, or charges the homeowner rent with the promise that the perpetrator will pay the underlying mortgage. Instead, the perpetrator walks away with the cash and leaves the homeowner facing foreclosure and eviction.

The increase of mortgage fraud by mortgage foreclosure consultants has resulted in a minority of states enacting laws regulating this activity. n1 Mortgage foreclosure consultant laws vary, but states that regulate these individuals legislatively are seeking to lessen the chance that a financially strapped homeowner will enter into an imprudent loan or be taken advantage of by an unscrupulous individual.

Mortgage foreclosure consultant laws typically provide the homeowner with statutory rights to cancel or rescind a contract entered into with a consultant. These laws require that specific statutory notices be provided to the homeowner. Typically, consultants cannot take a security interests or wage assignments from the homeowner or receive compensation from a third party.

Readers wanting to learn more about mortgage fraud and the regulation of mortgage foreclosure consultants are directed to Chapter 5A of Real Estate Financing (LexisNexis 2009).

[2] California Mortgage Foreclosure Consultants Act

"Mortgage foreclosure consultants" are defined by California law as:

any person who makes any solicitation, representation, or offer to any owner to perform for compensation, or who, for compensation, performs any service which the person in any manner represents will in any manner do any of the following:

- (1) Stop or postpone the foreclosure sale.
- (2) Obtain any forbearance from any beneficiary or mortgagee.
- (3) Assist the owner to exercise the right of reinstatement provided in Section 2924c.
- (4) Obtain any extension of the period within which the owner may reinstate his or her obligation.
- (5) Obtain any waiver of an acceleration clause contained in any promissory note or contract secured by a deed of trust or mortgage on a residence in foreclosure or contained that deed of trust or mortgage.
- (6) Assist the owner to obtain a loan or advance of funds.
- (7) Avoid or ameliorate the impairment of the owner's credit resulting from the recording of a notice of default or the conduct of a foreclosure sale.
- (8) Save the owner's residence from foreclosure. n2
- (9) Assist the owner in obtaining from the beneficiary, mortgagee, trustee under a power of sale, or counsel for the beneficiary, mortgagee, or trustee, the remaining proceeds from the foreclosure sale of the owner's residence.

The conduct of such consultants is limited in California by the Mortgage Consultant Foreclosure Act. n3 California Civ. Code § 2945(a) states the purpose of this act as follows:

The Legislature finds and declares that homeowners whose residences are in foreclosure are subject to fraud, deception, harassment, and unfair dealing by foreclosure consultants from the time a Notice of Default is recorded ... until the time of the foreclosure sale. Foreclosure consultants represent that they can assist homeowners who have defaulted on obligations secured by their residences. These foreclosure consultants, however, often charge high fees, the payment of which is often secured by a deed of trust on the residence to be saved, and perform no services or essentially a worthless service. Homeowners, relying on the foreclosure consultants' promises of help, take no other action, are diverted from lawful businesses which could render beneficial services, and often lose their homes, sometimes to the foreclosure consultants who purchase homes at a fraction of their value before the sale.

Real estate brokers are exempt from this act, when with their own funds, they make direct loans to homeowners secured by a deed of trust on the property. n4 However, brokers who make a direct loan must in good faith attempt to assign the loan to a lender rather than foreclose upon the property. The lending broker may not acquire any interest in the property directly from the owner other than as a beneficiary under a deed of trust. n5

Penalties for violating this act are severe, as illustrated by Onofrio v. Rice. n6 In that case, Onofrio, a homeowner, was in serious financial difficulty. Her home was in foreclosure and she was in bankruptcy. She was not only delinquent on the first and second mortgages, but was also delinquent in her community association dues. Onofrio was working with an individual to obtain new financing. A broker named Marshall Rice (Marshall) approached Onofrio and told her that he knew the individual with whom she was working and he believed that this other party did not know what she was doing. Marshall persuaded Onofrio to work with him instead.

Marshall subsequently prepared a promissory note and a deed of trust indicating that his spouse, Myra Rice (Myra), would lend Onofrio $14,000. The accompanying disclosure statement indicated a 35% per year interest rate. The $14,000 was insufficient, so Marshall prepared an identical note and trust deed, except that the amount was now $21,000. The escrow statement acknowledged: "Marshall D. Rice is a licensed Real Estate Broker in the State of California and is acting as the BROKER and the escrow company in this transaction. No escrow fee is charged." n7

Marshall was required to produce a settlement statement within 24 hours, however he did not do so until 6 days later.

Onofrio's financial affairs did not improve and the Rices recorded a notice of default and election to sell under Myra's deed of trust. The Rices had purchased the second deed of trust. They subsequently recorded an assignment of deed of trust from the second lienholder, and bought the property at the foreclosure sale conducted pursuant to Myra's notice of default. The Rices later recorded a trustee's deed upon sale acknowledging that they owned the property. Onofrio sued, alleging federal truth in lending violations, and violations of Marshall's duties as a real estate broker and foreclosure consultant. The trial court dismissed the federal truth in lending actions, but the Rices did not fare so well with Onofrio's other claims. Onofrio claimed violations of the statutory provisions regarding real estate brokers and foreclosure consultants. The court entered judgment against the Rices awarding $230,097 in damages and $52,788 in attorneys fees and costs. The trial court also rescinded the foreclosure and voided the Rices' note and purchase of the second deed of trust. This judgment was affirmed.

Marshall contended that he could not be in violation of both the statutory provisions regarding foreclosure consultants and those provisions regarding real estate brokers. The court disagreed. Pursuant to California Business and Professions Code § 10131(d), a real estate broker was defined as including one who negotiated loans or performed services for borrowers in connection with loans secured directly or collaterally by liens on real property. Marshall had secured a loan for which he was entitled to compensation. Marshall acquired an interest in a residence directly from the foreclosure when it was his spouse, not he, who loaned the home owner the money. Even if the funds had come from Marshall, he was in violation of the real estate broker laws as he had not attempted to place the loan. The court quoted from the Senate Judiciary Committee in its original analysis of the senate bill which warned of just the conduct in which Marshall had engaged. The court stated:

Many homeowners who have found themselves in default on their home mortgage payments have actually lost their homes through deceptive loans made to them by unscrupulous business [people.] [P] These "loans" usually require the homeowner in default to convey, via a Trust Deed, the homeowner's interest in his [or her] home (i.e. [] equity) in exchange for the payment of the full amount of the regular mortgage arrearage. The loans are usually written with high finance charges, and the payments become difficult for the homeowner to make. [P] As soon as the homeowner defaults on the second loan, the money lender, or a third party to whom the Trust Deed had been conveyed in the meantime, attempts to evict the homeowner out of his [or her] home. n8

The court also stated that the purpose of this statutory scheme was to prevent exactly the type of conduct in which Marshall and his spouse engaged.

Marshall objected to the computation of damages. At trial, the court determined that the home owner's actual damages were $65,174, the difference between what Marshall and his spouse paid for the property at foreclosure and the property's market value at that time. In essence, the Rices' unbegotten gain was considered to be the home owner's lost equity. Marshall argued that this computation made no sense, as it disregarded their three years of payments on the property liens, as well as the money they loaned. Moreover, the property was returned to the home owners and the second and third notes and deeds of trust were canceled. The appellate court found that the damage award made "perfect sense" in the context of the statutory provisions. n9 It stated that the violations were cumulative and that the Legislature intended that the remedies were to be construed liberally. The Legislature also intended that any real property lien received by a foreclosure consultant was to be voidable and unenforceable. This court discussed the damages in the context of constructive fraud and found that the appropriate measure of damages was the benefit of the bargain. Since Marshall breached his fiduciary obligation to the home owner, she was to be compensated accordingly.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See:

California: Cal. Civ. Code § 2945, et seq .

Colorado: Colo. Rev. Stat. § 6-1-1101, et seq .

Illinois: 765 Ill. Comp. Stat. 940/1, et seq .

Maryland: Md. Code Ann., Real Prop. § 7-301, et seq .

Minnesota: Minn. Stat. § 325N.01, et seq.

Missouri: Mo. Rev. Stat. § 407.935, et seq.

Rhode Island: R.I. Gen. Laws § 5-79-1, et seq .

Tennessee: Tenn. Code Ann. § 45-20-110, et seq .

Washington: Wash. Rev. Code § 61.34.010, et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Cal. Civ. Code § 2945.1.

(n3)Footnote 3. Cal. Civ. Code § 2945 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 4. Cal. Civ. Code § 2945.1(b)(3). See Still v. Arakelyan (In re Still) 393 B.R. 896, 911-12 (Bankr. C.D. Cal. 2008) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Cal. Civ. Code § 2945.1(b)(3).

(n6)Footnote 6. 55 Cal. App. 4th 413, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 74 (1997) , review denied, 1997 Cal. LEXIS 5129 (Aug. 13, 1997) .

(n7)Footnote 7. 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d at 76 .

(n8)Footnote 8. 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d at 78 .

(n9)Footnote 9. 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d at 79 .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

122 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.08

§ 6.08 Film Location Representatives

California Civil Code § 10133.4 provides that persons acting in the capacity of a film location representative need not be licensed as a real estate broker. This provision defines a film location representative as "an employee of a principal arranging for the use of real property for photographic purposes." n1 A principal is the person who will use the real property for photographic purposes. n2 In every transaction arranged by a film location representative, the principal must maintain liability insurance in an amount not less than five hundred thousand dollars per person or one million dollars per occurrence for personal injury, and five hundred thousand dollars for property damage. n3

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.4(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.4(b)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 10133.4(c).

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

123 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 6 Licensing of Brokers and Salespersons *

10A-6 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 6.09

§ 6.09 Apartment Information Vendors and Apartment Sharing Agents

New York requires the licensure of apartment information vendors and apartment sharing agents. n1 An apartment information vendor is defined as a person who engages "in the business of claiming, demanding, charging, receiving, collecting, or contracting for the collection of, a fee from a customer for furnishing information concerning the location and availability of real property, including apartment housing, which may be leased, rented, shared or sublet as a private dwelling, abode, or place of residence." n2 The definition of an apartment information vendor also includes an "apartment sharing agent" which is defined as a person who, for a fee, arranges, conducts, coordinates, handles or causes meetings between a customer and the current owner or occupant of legally occupied real property, including apartment housing, who wishes to share that housing with one or more individuals as a private dwelling, abode or place of residence" n3 The licensing of apartment information vendors is intended to prevent fraudulent advertising practices and breach of contract resulting from sales of rental listings that contain non-existent or unavailable apartments. n4 This law has withstood a constitutional challenge. n5

Among the requirements imposed upon apartment information vendors, a licensed apartment information vendor licensed must furnish customers with a contract prepared on a form approved by the New York Secretary of State. The contract must include in plain language form a statement showing the sources of information concerning the location and availability of real property. n6 A failure to include this information in plain language form constitutes grounds for license suspension. n7

Being licensed as a real estate broker does not entitle an individual to function as an apartment information vendor. One licensed broker who continued to function as an apartment information vendor without obtaining this specific license despite repeated warnings from the New York Department of State had her broker's license suspended on the ground that her defiance and refusal to obtain the proper license showed an untrustworthiness within the meaning of New York Real Property Law § 441-c(1). n8

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 446-b.

(n2)Footnote 2. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 446-a(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. N.Y. Real Prop. Law § 446-a(2). The term apartment sharing agent does not apply to any person who for another and for a fee, commission or other valuable consideration, supervises, organizes, arranges, coordinates, handles or is otherwise in charge of or responsible for the relocation of commercial or residential tenants from buildings or structures that are to be demolished, rehabilitated, remodeled or otherwise structurally altered.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Wang v. Pataki, 396 F. Supp. 2d 446, 451 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) . The court observed that prior to amendment of this law, apartment information vendors had been referred to as "apartment referral agents."

(n5)Footnote 5. See Wang v. Pataki, 396 F. Supp. 2d 446, 455-459 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See New York Real Prop. § 446-c(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. See New York Real Prop. § 446-c(1-a).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lan Lan Wang v. Daniels, 305 A.D.2d 186, 187, 757 N.Y.S.2d 857 (N.Y. App. Div. 2003) , appeal denied, 100 N.Y.2d 511, 766 N.Y.S.2d 165, 798 N.E.2d 349 (N.Y. 2003) , cert. denied, 124 S. Ct. 1417, 158 L. Ed. 2d 83, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 1086, 72 U.S.L.W. 3535 (U.S. 2004) .

* Revised by Sandra R. Bullington. Ms. Bullington, a member of the Maryland Bar, has written on a variety of real estate issues, including licensing issues, has practiced in the areas of tax, business and probate law, and is licensed as a C.P.A. in the State of Maryland.

124 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 7 The Real Estate Broker and the Unauthorized Practice of Law *

10A-7 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice 7.syn

§ 7.syn Synopsis to Chapter 7: The Real Estate Broker and the Unauthorized Practice of Law *

§ 7.01 Introduction

§ 7.02 Broker Authority in Relation to Real Estate Documents

§ 7.03 Policy Decisions

§ 7.04 The Regulation of Real Estate Brokers: Selected Approaches

§ 7.05 Realtor(R) Code of Ethics and the Model Definition of the Practice of Law

§ 7.06 The Role of Paralegals and Legal Technicians

§ 7.07 Conclusion

125 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 7 The Real Estate Broker and the Unauthorized Practice of Law *

10A-7 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice Scope

Scope

SCOPE

Chapter 7 discusses the unauthorized practice of law by real estate brokers and examines the issues that arise because of a broker's involvement with sales contracts and other legal documents.

Section 7.02 discusses significant case law and statutory law concerning brokers and the unauthorized practice of law. The policy arguments given by those in the legal and brokerage industries to support their respective positions on the authority that should be granted to brokers are discussed in § 7.03, and the various approaches adopted by different states are discussed in § 7.04. The issue of the unauthorized practice of law by brokers has resulted in some conflict between the legal profession and brokers. This conflict resulted in the issuance of a joint statement by the American Bar Association and the National Association of Realtors(R), discussed in § 7.05. Section 7.06 addresses the expanding role of paralegals and other legal technicians in the real estate brokerage industry.

126 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 7 The Real Estate Broker and the Unauthorized Practice of Law *

10A-7 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 7.01

§ 7.01 Introduction

A myriad of non-lawyer professionals have come under fire from members of the legal profession who have accused these professionals of the "unauthorized practice of law." Among those targeted have been accountants, architects, bankers, collection agents, insurance brokers, title insurance companies, and, the subject of this treatise, real estate brokers. A precise definition of what constitutes the practice of law is elusive and varies from state to state.

Real estate brokers may run the risk of unauthorized practice not only through involvement in court proceedings, but also through the advising of clients, or through the preparation of contracts or deeds or any other instrument by which legal rights are secured. n1 In some instances, courts have considered the preparation of documents by a realtor to be the "practice of law," but have not prohibited such activity. n2 The Supreme Court of Washington, for example, has held that the completion by a licensed real estate broker or salesperson of a standard form earnest money agreement was not prohibited in spite of the fact that such activities constituted the "practice of law." n3 The court found "sound and practical reasons why some activities that fall within the broad definition of 'the practice of law' should not be unauthorized simply because they are done by lay persons." n4 Absolute attorney hegemony over the practice of law is not necessary to protect the public, stated the court. "It is in the public interest to permit licensed real estate brokers or salespersons to complete lawyer-prepared standard form agreements, provided that in doing so they comply with the standard of care demanded of an attorney." n5

Judicial decisions on the unauthorized practice of law have been consistent in at least one respect: agreement that the purpose of the prohibition against unauthorized practice is not for the benefit of attorneys but for the protection and benefit of the public. n6 Control of the practice of law has generally been attempted through statutory enactments, decisional law and various combinations of the two. A real estate broker in one state may be permitted to prepare virtually all kinds of documents relating to a sale, while in another state may be permitted to prepare almost no documents at all. The broker may be given the right in one state to draft a document from scratch, while in another state may be permitted only to fill in the blanks of a previously prepared document. n7 Accordingly, a broker must be aware of the restriction on: (1) the kind of document he may deal in: i.e., preliminary or post-contract; and (2) the extent to which he may prepare the instrument: i.e., drafting or merely filling in the blanks.

It should be noted that brokers and agents who engage in the unauthorized practice of law run the risk of statutory treble damages in some jurisdictions. This risk is greater if the broker or agent charges a separate fee for the legal services. n8

This chapter explores the current law on unauthorized practice applicable to real estate brokersⁿ⁹ as well as the rationale behind such law. ⁿ¹⁰ Also examined are the approaches adopted by various jurisdictions for controlling the unauthorized practice of law by real estate brokersⁿ¹¹ and the use of lawyer-broker accords designed to reach agreement between attorneys and brokers on the proper role of these parties in a real estate transaction. ⁿ¹² The impact of the growing use of "paralegals" and "legal technicians" on what tasks non-lawyers may legally perform is also explored. ⁿ¹³

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g.:

Kentucky: Howton v. Morrow, 269 Ky. 1, 106 S.W.2d 81 (1937) .

Missouri: Bray v. Brooks, 41 S.W.3d 7, 13-14 (2001) .

Utah: Malia v. Giles, 100 Utah 562, 114 P.2d 208 (1941) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g.:

Colorado: Conway-Bogue Realty Inv. Co. v. Denver Bar Ass'n, 135 Colo. 398, 312 P.2d 998 (1957) .

Wisconsin: State ex rel. Reynolds v. Dinger, 14 Wis. 2d 193, 109 N.W.2d 685 (1961) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Cultum v. Heritage House Realtors, Inc., 103 Wash. 2d 623, 694 P.2d 630 (1985) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 694 P.2d at 633 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Id.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Dacey v. New York County Lawyers Ass'n, 290 F. Supp. 835 (S.D.N.Y. 1968) , aff'd, 423 F.2d 188 (2d Cir. 1969) , cert. denied, 398 U.S. 929, 90 S. Ct. 1819, 26 L. Ed. 2d 92 (1970) .

(n7)Footnote 7. Cf. Sims v. Century 21 Capital Team, Inc., 2006 Tex. App. LEXIS 7990, at *6 (Sept. 7, 2006) (A licensee must use Texas Real Estate Commission form contracts in most transactions pursuant to 22 Tex. Admin. Code § 537.11(b). The licensee is prohibited from giving advice or opinions as to the legal effect of any of the form contract's provisions.).

(n8)Footnote 8. Cf. Bray v. Brooks, 2001 Mo. App. LEXIS 14 (Mo. App. Jan. 9, 2001) (the court reversed the trial court's award of treble damages $22,800 against a broker found to have engaged in the unauthorized practice of law).

(n9)Footnote 9. See § 7.02 infra.

(n10)Footnote 10. See § 7.03 infra.

(n11)Footnote 11. See § 7.04 infra.

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 7.05 infra.

(n13)Footnote 13. See § 7.06 infra.

* This chapter was revised by Professor Paul Teich, New England School of Law, Boston, Massachusetts. Additional updates were contributed by Sandra R. Bullington, Esq.

127 of 163 DOCUMENTS

Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

PART III Public Regulation

CHAPTER 7 The Real Estate Broker and the Unauthorized Practice of Law *

10A-7 Real Estate Brokerage Law and Practice § 7.02

§ 7.02 Broker Authority in Relation to Real Estate Documents

A non-attorney is clearly engaged in the unauthorized practice of law where he holds himself out as an attorney without having first been duly and regularly licensed and admitted to practice law. n1 Moreover, unauthorized practice will be found where a non-attorney counsels or advises a client as to matters which require the use of legal skills and which will secure the client's legal rights. n2 In a number of jurisdictions, statutory provisions award exclusive authority to attorneys to prepare "legal documents," n3 although it should be noted that most courts have not interpreted these statutes to forbid preparation by non-attorneys of such documents as earnest money contracts. In every state except North Carolina the bar association may enforce unauthorized practice prohibitions, n4 and the majority of the states have unauthorized practice committees. Informal enforcement activities undertaken by bar associations and unauthorized practice committees include issuance of cease and desist letters, negotiation of informal compliance agreements, and issuance of advisory opinions. n5 Formal penalties for violation of unauthorized practice prohibitions vary widely. Thirty-seven states make a violation a misdemeanor, n6 while some states treat it as contempt. n7 Probably the most frequently provided judicial remedy is injunctive relief. n8

