(n72)Footnote 55. See Felt v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1416, 1420 ; see Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Lai (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1299, 1304-1305 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 812 (1995) (knowing waiver requirement is apparent from text and legislative history of Title VII); but see Brookwood v. Bank of Am., NT & SA (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1667, 1673-1674, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515 (criticizing Prudential rule requiring "knowing" agreement to arbitrate); see also Renteria v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1104, 1106-1107 (upholding Prudential's knowing agreement and waiver requirement for arbitration; inclusion of language, "as may be amended from time to time" does not effect adequate notice of arbitration agreement that fails to identify types of disputes subject to arbitration). For discussion of effect of individual arbitration agreements, see § 90.20.

(n73)Footnote 56. Saridakis v. United Airlines (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1272 .

(n74)Footnote 57. See Saridakis v. United Airlines (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1272, 1276-1277 .

(n75)Footnote 58. Saridakis v. United Airlines (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1272, 1276-1277 .

5 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part A. GENERAL PRINCIPLES

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.03

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.03 Effect of Collective Bargaining Agreements

[1] Discriminatory Agreements

Although discrimination by labor unions is beyond the scope of this publication,ⁿ¹ discrimination by employers may often be the result of union actions, such as when a union is responsible for a discriminatory collective bargaining agreement. Labor unions cannot lawfully bargain for the establishment of discriminatory practices.ⁿ² Title VII expressly prohibits a union from causing or attempting to cause an employer to discriminate in a collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ³ In addition, a union may be liable under Title VII if it acquiesces or joins in an employer's discriminatory practices.ⁿ⁴ Thus, in negotiating and administering a collective bargaining agreement, a union is obliged to protect all those it represents and may not consent to provisions or take positions that discriminate against some of its members.ⁿ⁵

[2] Antidiscrimination Provisions and Preemption

In Emporium Capwell Co. v. Community Org.,ⁿ⁶ the United States Supreme Court declared that "the elimination of discrimination and its vestiges is an appropriate subject of bargaining, and an employer may have no objection to incorporating into a collective agreement the substance of his [or her] obligation not to discriminate in personnel decisions." Antidiscrimination provisions contained in collective bargaining agreements may be enforced through contractual grievance procedures,ⁿ⁷ but resort to such remedies does not waive or preclude an employee's Title VII cause of action.ⁿ⁸ Furthermore, Section 301(a) of the federal Labor Management Relations Act (Section 301),ⁿ⁹ which provides federal-court jurisdiction over controversies involving collective bargaining agreements, does not preempt FEHA claims that do not depend on the meaning of such agreements.ⁿ¹⁰ For example, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that a FEHA disability discrimination claim was not preempted by Section 301 even though it was filed by an employee who was covered by a collective bargaining agreement containing a general antidiscrimination provision.ⁿ¹¹ The court explained that an employee's right to be free from handicap discrimination is defined and enforced under the FEHA without reference to the terms of any collective bargaining agreement, and consequently the FEHA claim was independent of the agreement covering the employee.ⁿ¹² Even if a court is required to "refer" to a collective bargaining agreement, a FEHA claim will not be preempted because preemption is only appropriate if the agreement must be interpreted, and "reference" and "interpret" are not equivalent terms.ⁿ¹³

If, however, specific issues related to a discrimination claim are properly covered by a collective bargaining agreement, a FEHA action may be preempted by the applicable federal employment relations statute. For example, liability for disability discrimination under the FEHA depends in part on whether a disability interferes with job performance.ⁿ¹⁴ One California court, in determining whether the federal Railway Labor Act (RLA)ⁿ¹⁵ preempted a railroad employee's FEHA disability discrimination claim, observed that parties may agree to arbitrate the question of interference with job duties.ⁿ¹⁶ If an employee's lack of fitness to perform his or her duties is made arbitrable under the parties' collective bargaining agreement, the FEHA action would be preempted by the RLA to the extent that the action raised an issue determinable solely under procedures established by the RLA.ⁿ¹⁷

One Ninth Circuit panel likewise held that state-law claims relating to wrongful termination under Nevada state law were preempted by Section 301 since evaluation of the reasonableness of the employer's behavior from the point of view of the CBA provision on just cause termination was required.ⁿ¹⁸

For additional discussion of federal labor law preemption, see Chapter 60.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Discrimination by labor unions is expressly prohibited by various state and federal equal employment opportunity laws. See, e.g., Gov. Code § 12940(b) (FEHA); 29 U.S.C. §§ 206(d)(2) (EPA), 623(c) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(c) (Title VII). Such discrimination may also violate the union's "duty fairly to represent all ... [union] employees." See Vaca v. Sipes (1967) 386 U.S. 171, 177, 190, 87 S. Ct. 903, 17 L. Ed. 2d 842 (Labor Management Relations Act; breach of duty occurs when union conduct is arbitrary, discriminatory, or in bad faith); Steele v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (1944) 323 U.S. 192, 203, 65 S. Ct. 226, 89 L. Ed. 173 (Railway Labor Act; breach of duty occurs when collective bargaining agreement designed to restrict employment opportunities and seniority of African-American firemen).

(n2)Footnote 2. Emporium Capwell Co. v. Community Org. (1975) 420 U.S. 50, 70, 95 S. Ct. 977, 43 L. Ed. 2d 12 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(c)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1304 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Macklin v. Spector Freight Sys., Inc. (D.C. Cir. 1973) 478 F.2d 979, 989 ; see also Kaplan v. Int'l Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees (9th Cir. 1975) 525 F.2d 1354, 1360 (union liable for collective bargaining agreement that perpetuates past discrimination).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Emporium Capwell Co. v. Community Org. (1975) 420 U.S. 50, 69, 95 S. Ct. 977, 43 L. Ed. 2d 12 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Emporium Capwell Co. v. Community Org. (1975) 420 U.S. 50, 66-67, 95 S. Ct. 977, 43 L. Ed. 2d 12 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 52, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 (employee may pursue both grievance procedure under collective bargaining agreement and Title VII action).

(n9)Footnote 9. 29 U.S.C. § 185(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Jackson v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 638, 644 ; Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 1514, 1517-1518 ; see also Detabali v. St. Luke's Hospital (9th Cir. 2007) 482 F.3d 1199, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 8620 (district court erred in finding that FEHA discrimination and retaliation claims were preempted by § 301 of LMRA, where viability of FEHA claims depended on whether nurse was legitimately terminated for refusing to work outside of her cluster; in order to make that determination, court would have to refer to cluster provision of collective bargaining agreement, but because there was no dispute over meaning of terms within agreement, resolution of central issue, whether employer discriminated against nurse in applying agreement, did not depend on interpretation of collective bargaining agreement); Lingle v. Norge Div., Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410, 418-418 (state-law claim preempted by § 301 if resolution of claim depends on meaning of collective bargaining agreement); Teamsters Union v. Lucas Flour Co. (1962) 369 U.S. 95, 103-104, 82 S. Ct. 571, 7 L. Ed. 2d 593 (§ 301 requires resort to federal rules of law in order to ensure uniform interpretation of collective bargaining agreements).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 1514, 1517-1518 ; see also Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1522-1528 (three-prong test for LMRA preemption not met since CBA did not establish comprehensive framework for determining fitness to work or reasonable accommodation, FEHA standard on reasonable accommodation of disabled employees was clear, and state intended that FEHA disability discrimination prohibitions not be altered by private contract); Gov. Code § 12940(a). For discussion of disability and handicap discrimination, see ch. 41, pts. B and D.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 1514, 1517 ; see also Ramirez v. Fox Television Station, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 743, 748 (national origin discrimination); Cook v. Lindsay Olive Growers (9th Cir. 1990) 911 F.2d 233, 240 (religious discrimination); Chmiel v. Beverly Wilshire Hotel Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 873 F.2d 1283, 1286-1287 (age discrimination).

(n13)Footnote 13. Ramirez v. Fox Television Station, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 743, 748-749 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1); ch. 41, pt. B.

(n15)Footnote 15. See 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Evans v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1378, 1385-1387, 262 Cal. Rptr. 416 (relying on McCall v. Chesapeake & Ohio Ry. Co. (6th Cir. 1988) 844 F.2d 294, 302-303 ; Stephens v. Norfolk and W. Ry. Co. (6th Cir. 1986) 792 F.2d 576, 581) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Evans v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1378, 1386, 262 Cal. Rptr. 416 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Herman v. United Broth. of Carpenters (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1375, 1385 .

6 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part A. GENERAL PRINCIPLES

2-40 California Employment Law §§ 40.04 through 40.09

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 40.04[Reserved]

7 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part B. STATE LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.10

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.10 California Fair Employment and Housing Act

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

The primary California statute prohibiting employment discrimination is the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), which is set forth in Government Code Section 12900 et seq. The FEHA applies to California employers,ⁿ¹ labor organizations,ⁿ² apprenticeship and training programs,ⁿ³ employment agencies,ⁿ⁴ and anyone who aids or abets in employment discrimination.ⁿ⁵ It proscribes employment discrimination, and any limitation, specification, harassment, or retaliation on the basis of several enumerated protected characteristics,ⁿ⁶ and also requires reasonable steps to prevent discrimination and harassment.ⁿ⁷

Administrative regulations promulgated by the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC),ⁿ⁸ which are contained in Title 2 of the California Code of Regulations,ⁿ⁹ establish comprehensive rules applicable to employment discrimination under the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁰ The regulations also interpret, implement, and supplement the enforcement and hearing procedures of the FEHAⁿ¹¹ and the Administrative Procedure Act.ⁿ¹² The Administrative Adjudication Bill of Rights^{n12.1} and the rules for judicial review in Government Code Section 11523 also apply to the Commission.^{n12.2}

In construing the FEHA, the FEHC and the California courts have often turned to federal Title VII authority to interpret analogous provisions in the FEHA, although they do not always follow precedent.ⁿ¹³

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

Two administrative bodies enforce the FEHA:ⁿ¹⁴ the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH)ⁿ¹⁵ and the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC).ⁿ¹⁶ The DFEH is the "prosecutorial" body, which has power to create rules and regulations to carry out its functions and duties,ⁿ¹⁷ investigate employment discrimination complaints,ⁿ¹⁸ conduct discovery and various investigative measures,ⁿ¹⁹ accuse and prosecute employment discrimination,ⁿ²⁰ and publish the results of its investigations.ⁿ²¹ The FEHC is the "adjudicative" body, which has power to issue regulations interpreting the FEHA,ⁿ²² hold hearings on DFEH discrimination accusations,ⁿ²³ and decide the issues raised in the accusations.ⁿ²⁴ The FEHC also has the power to conduct mediations at the request of the DFEH at any time after a complaint is filed.^{n24.1} The DFEH may withdraw a request for mediation at any time to pursue an investigation.^{n24.2} If the FEHC finds that employment discrimination exists, it must order the respondent to cease and desist and may take certain other remedial action.ⁿ²⁵ For a detailed discussion relating to the powers, functions, and procedures of the DFEH and FEHC, see Chapter 42, Part B.

Individual employees or applicants may also enforce their rights under the FEHA by filing a civil action in court if the DFEH decides not to issue an accusation, or does not issue an accusation within 150 days after the filing of a discrimination complaint with the DFEH.ⁿ²⁶ The prevailing party in such an action may receive reasonable attorney's fees, costs,ⁿ²⁷ and all relief generally available in noncontractual actions, including punitive damages.ⁿ²⁸ Private civil actions under the FEHA are discussed in Chapter 43, Part A.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

The FEHA offers complainants an inexpensive administrative remedy. Counsel, however, should assist complainants in framing their charges with an eye toward further (judicial) proceedings, if they should prove necessary. The administrative procedure permits the employer to make an early assessment of a potential lawsuit and an opportunity to resolve the matter early without further exposure. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

Except as discussed below, the FEHA applies to all California employers and their agents,ⁿ²⁹ including the state, any political or civil subdivision of the state, cities,ⁿ³⁰ and nonprofit corporations or associations.ⁿ³¹ To be covered by the FEHA,ⁿ³² private employers must regularly employ five or more persons, except when a discrimination claim involves harassment. In that case, employers regularly employing one or more persons or regularly receiving the services of one or more persons providing services pursuant to a contract or their agent are covered.ⁿ³³ The state of California and other public entities are not subject to the five-employee requirement.ⁿ³⁴ With respect to whether an employer "regularly employs" the required number of employees, the number of employees on the payroll, including part-time employees, is determinative, not the number of employees working on any particular day.ⁿ³⁵

An individual employed by a temporary agency and assigned to work on the premises of the agency's client has "dual employers." Both the agency and the client are employers.^{n35.1} Thus, for example, in Mathieu v. Norrell Corp.,^{n35.2} the plaintiff alleged sexual harassment by a coworker at the company in which she was placed by a temporary agency. She was paid by the temporary agency that assigned her to work at a client, and she was required to report to the agency if, for example, she were to miss a day of work. Accordingly, the agency was properly considered her general employer and the client her special employer, and she could look to both for redress.^{n35.3}

Notwithstanding any other FEHA provision, a rebuttable presumption exists that the "employer"ⁿ³⁶ includes any person or entity identified as the employer on the employee's federal Form W-2 (Wage and Tax Statement).ⁿ³⁷

Factors to be taken into account in assessing whether an entity is an employer under the FEHA include:^{n37.1}

- Payment of salary or other employment benefits and social security taxes.
- Ownership of the equipment necessary to performance of the job.
- The location where the work is performed.
- The entity's obligation to train the employee.
- The authority of the entity to hire, transfer, promote, discipline or discharge the employee.

- The authority to establish work schedules and assignments.
- The entity's discretion to determine the amount of compensation earned by the employee.
- The skill required of the work performed and the extent to which it is done under the direction of a supervisor.
- Whether the work is part of the entity's regular business operations.
- The skill required in the particular occupation.
- The duration of the relationship of the parties.
- The duration of the plaintiff's employment.

Of these factors, the extent of the defendant's right to control the means and manner of the workers' performance is the most important. In all cases, an employer must be an individual or entity who extends a certain degree of control over the plaintiff.^{n37.2} Further, the absence of direct or indirect remuneration from the entity to the plaintiff, while not controlling, is at least strong evidence that an employment relationship does not exist.^{n37.3}

The state cannot be held liable as an employer under the FEHA based on the promulgation of regulations affecting employment.^{n37.4}

As discussed in [1], above, the FEHA also applies to apprenticeship training programs or other training programs leading to employment,ⁿ³⁸ and employment agencies.ⁿ³⁹ An "employment agency" includes any person who undertakes, for compensation, to procure employees or opportunities to work.ⁿ⁴⁰ In addition, the FEHA covers labor organizations,ⁿ⁴¹ although discussion of such organizations is not within the scope of this chapter.

The FEHA does not cover religious organizations that are not organized for private profit,ⁿ⁴² unless they operate unrelated businesses that regularly employ five or more persons and are subject to state or federal income tax.ⁿ⁴³ Before recent amendments to the FEHA, which expanded coverage to include nonprofit religious corporations and associations in certain circumstances,ⁿ⁴⁴ nonprofit religious organizations were exempt from the anti-discrimination provisions of the FEHA regardless of the nature of the alleged discrimination.ⁿ⁴⁵ Further, the establishment and free exercise clauses of the First Amendment bar judicial review of employment disputes between religious organizations and their ministerial employees;ⁿ⁴⁶ the ministerial exception of Title VIIⁿ⁴⁷ applies with equal force to FEHA cases.ⁿ⁴⁸

Notwithstanding Government Code Section 12926(d), and except as otherwise provided in Government Code Section 12926.2(d), the term "employer" covers a religious corporation or association with respect to persons employed to perform duties, other than religious duties, at a health care facility that is not restricted to adherents of the religion that established the association or corporation.ⁿ⁴⁹ "Religious duties" are duties of employment connected with carrying on the religious activities of a religious corporation or association.ⁿ⁵⁰ However, "employer" does not include a religious corporation with respect to either the employment, including promotion, of an individual of a particular religion, or the application of the employer's religious doctrines, tenets, or teachings, in any work connected with the provision of health care.ⁿ⁵¹ Nor does "employer" cover a nonprofit public benefit corporation formed to provide health care on behalf of a religious organizationⁿ⁵² with respect to the employment, including promotion, of an individual of a particular religion in an executive or pastoral-care position connected with the provision of health care.ⁿ⁵³ A nonprofit public benefit corporation formed by or affiliated with a particular religion and operating an educational institution as its sole or primary activity may restrict employment, including promotion, in any or all employment categories to individuals of a particular religion; but it is subject to the FEHA in all other respects, including, but not limited to, prohibitions against discrimination that are unlawful employment practices under the FEHA.n54

An employee of an entity subject to regulation by Government Code Section 12940(j) is personally liable for any prohibited harassment that is perpetrated by the employee, regardless of whether the employer or covered entity knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.n54.1

The FEHA does not apply to employment within a federal enclave. A federal enclave is land over which the federal government exercises legislative jurisdiction. Federal power over these enclaves emanates from article I, section 8, clause 17 of the United States Constitution, which gives Congress the power to exercise exclusive legislative authority over all places purchased by the consent of the legislature of the state in which those places are located, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards and other needful buildings, including federal prisons. State law in effect at the time of the cession not inconsistent with federal law continues to apply within the enclave unless it is abrogated by Congress. State law that did not exist at the time of cession will also extend to the enclave when the state regulation has been expressly permitted by Congress.n54.2 The federal enclave doctrine will not leave an employee without a remedy for discrimination claims, because federal antidiscrimination law applies to claims arising on federal enclaves.n54.3 The federal enclave doctrine applies even if the challenged employment decision is made at a location that is not a federal enclave, if the employment occurs on the federal enclave.n55

[3A] Aiders and Abettors of Discrimination

It is an unlawful employment practice for any person to aid, abet, incite, compel, or coerce the doing of any acts forbidden by the Fair Employment and Housing Act or to attempt to do so.n55.1 The FEHA does not provide a definition of aiding and abetting.n55.2 Under the common law, liability may be imposed on one who aids and abets the commission of an intentional tort under either of the following circumstances:n55.3

- If the person knows the other's conduct constitutes a breach of duty and gives substantial assistance or encouragement to the other to so act.
- If the person gives substantial assistance to the other in accomplishing a tortious result and the person's own conduct, separately considered, constitutes a breach of duty to the third person.

Mere knowledge that a tort is being committed and the failure to prevent it does not constitute aiding and abetting.n55.4

The "aid and abet" language of Government Code section 12940(i) makes it unlawful, for example, for third parties such as customers or suppliers to induce or coerce prohibited discrimination or harassment.n55.5

Liability for aiding and abetting a discriminatory employment practice under the FEHA is imposed by Government Code section 12940(i) only on a "person."n55.6 The term "person" is defined in Government Code section 12925(d) to include individuals, partnerships, associations, corporations, limited liability companies, legal representatives, trustees, trustees in bankruptcy, and receivers or other fiduciaries. Further, the discrimination provisions of the FEHA apply only to employers, and individuals who do not qualify as employers may not be sued under the FEHA for alleged discriminatory acts.n55.7

In Vernon v. State of California, n55.8 the court held that liability could not be imposed on the State under the aiding and abetting provisions of the FEHA based on the promulgation of regulations governing employment for several reasons. The State was not the plaintiff's employer and could not be liable to him for unlawful discrimination. Nor was the State a person as defined in Government Code section 12940(i), because although explicitly designated as a potential "employer" in Government Code section 12926(d), it is not listed as a "person." The most reasonable interpretation of the statutory scheme is that if the Legislature had intended to include public agencies in the definition of parties who may be liable as persons under Government Code section 12925(d), it would have expressly done so.^{n55.9} The court also found that the complaint did not contain allegations that the State aided and abetted the plaintiff's employer in effectuating discriminatory employment practices. Nothing in the pleading asserted that the State and the employer acted jointly to implement the new respiratory protection policy, only that the State enacted and demanded enforcement of the CAL-OSHA regulations. As a result the employer implemented a new policy that prohibited employees with visible facial hair from testing or using SCBA respirators. In fact, according to the pleading the employer opposed the CAL-OSHA regulations. The complaint alleged a discriminatory practice caused by two separate entities acting independently, not assisting one another.^{n55.10}

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

With the exceptions noted below, the FEHA applies to all California employees and applicants for employment,ⁿ⁵⁶ including persons compensated by temporary-service agencies.ⁿ⁵⁷ The FEHA itself does not contain a precise definition of "employee." However, the regulations define "employee" for the purposes of the FEHA as an individual under the direction and control of an employer, under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written.^{n57.1} The regulations include within the definition of employee the common law requirement that the employer exercise direction and control over the person's work. The existence of the right of control is often tested by determining whether, if instructions were given, they would have to be obeyed and whether there was a right to terminate the service at any time.^{n57.2}

An individual compensated by a temporary service agency for work to be performed for an employer contracting with the temporary service agency may be considered an employee of the contracting employer for the terms, conditions and privileges of employment under the control of that employer. That individual is an employee of the temporary service agency with regard to the terms, conditions and privileges of employment under the control of the temporary service agency.^{n57.3} Thus, the employment relationship for FEHA purposes is tied directly to the amount of control exercised over the employee.^{n57.4} Nothing in the regulations mandates that the contract of employment be direct.^{n57.5}

In order to be an employee, an individual need not be compensated directly by the employer. A contracting employer acts as an "employer" for purposes of applying state and federal anti-discrimination laws.^{n57.6}

There is no magic formula for determining whether the requisite employment relationship exists. When a statute fails to define the term "employee," courts routinely look at the common law definition for guidance, focusing on the amount of control the employer exercises over the employee.^{n57.7} The prevailing view is to consider the totality of the circumstances, reflecting upon the nature of the work relationship between the parties, and placing emphasis on the control exercised by the employer over the employees' performance of employment duties.^{n57.8}

In Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation,^{n57.9} a social worker who was hired from a registry to work in a state prison was found to be a special employee of the state for purposes of the FEHA. The FEHA expressly identifies the state as an employer for purposes of its protections.^{n57.10} The Department regularly hired registry employees as a common practice to meet its staffing needs throughout the state prison system, as evidenced by its contract with the registry. Excluding from the protection of the FEHA a large number of people working daily in the state prison system (and presumably in other state agencies) would be inconsistent with the legislative intent to expand FEHA protection to the largest number of individuals possible, including those who traditionally would be excluded from the employment relationship because they exercise complete control of the services provided, and contrary to statutory language stating that the FEHA applies to the state as an employer. Further, the Department's own sexual harassment policy indicated that it applied to individuals who provided contract services to the Department. The fact that the Department's contract with the registry provided that the social worker was an agent or employee of the registry, and not an employee of the state, did not preclude coverage under the FEHA, because the contract also granted all control of the employment relationship to the Department, not the registry. The Department's control precluded a finding that she was an independent contractor or a person providing services pursuant to a contract as defined by the FEHA.^{n57.11} The language of the governing contract was one factor to be considered in determining the nature of the employment relationship, but it was not controlling.ⁿ⁵⁷ 12 The FEHA does not apply to persons employed by a parent, spouse, or child; nor does it apply to persons employed under a special license in a nonprofit sheltered workshop or rehabilitation facility.ⁿ⁵⁸ The FEHA also does not apply to independent contractors as defined in Labor Code Section 3353, governing workers' compensation.ⁿ⁵⁹ Under this provision, an "independent contractor" is any person who renders service for compensation for a specified result. The contractor is under the control of a principal regarding only the result of the work, and not regarding the means by which the result is accomplished.ⁿ⁶⁰ Nevertheless, in the context of harassment, the prohibition extends to persons providing services pursuant to a contract,ⁿ⁶¹ that is, a person meeting all the following criteria:ⁿ⁶²

- The person has the right to control the performance under the contract for services and discretion as to the manner of performance.
- The person is customarily engaged in an independently established business.
- The person has control over the time and place of performance, supplies tools and instrument used in the work, and performs work that requires a particular skill not ordinarily used in the course of the employer's work.

For further discussion of the definition of "independent contractor" under workers' compensation law, see Chapter 20. In addition, the FEHA does not apply to nonresidents when the wrongful conduct occurred outside of California.ⁿ⁶³

The FEHA does not apply to employment disputes between religious organizations and their ministerial employees. Further, the establishment and free exercise clauses of the First Amendment bar judicial review of these employment disputes.ⁿ⁶⁴

The FEHA does not apply to a student-athlete who is not a school employee.ⁿ⁶⁵ The FEHA also does not apply to an uncompensated volunteer.^{n65.1}

[5] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination

The FEHA prohibits employment discrimination based on the following:ⁿ⁶⁶

1. Race;
2. Color;
3. Ancestry;
4. National Origin;
5. Religious creed;ⁿ⁶⁷
6. Sex and sexual orientation;ⁿ⁶⁸
7. Marital status;ⁿ⁶⁹
8. Pregnancy, child birth or related medical conditions;ⁿ⁷⁰
9. Physical and mental disability;ⁿ⁷¹

10. Medical condition;ⁿ⁷²

11. Age, with respect to persons who are 40 years of age or older.ⁿ⁷³

For a detailed discussion relating to specific prohibited bases of discrimination, see Chapter 41, Part B.

[6] Prohibited Employment Practices

The FEHA broadly prohibits discrimination in hiring, selection for training leading to hiring, and discharges, as well as discrimination in compensation or other terms and conditions of employment based on the classifications listed in [5], above.ⁿ⁷⁴ The prohibition includes discriminatory tests and other selection procedures.ⁿ⁷⁵ Other unlawful practices include publishing items or making non-job-related inquiries that express such discrimination.ⁿ⁷⁶ The FEHA also prohibits a policy limiting or prohibiting the use of any language at the workplace unless the restriction is justified by business necessity.ⁿ⁷⁷

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Government Code Section 12951 makes language policies more difficult to adopt and to maintain. A threshold question is: What is a language policy? Set aside the easy cases involving written policies and consider the more common and difficult circumstance in which an employer long has orally encouraged employees to speak English when conducting company business on work time. Is such oral encouragement a policy? The answer now depends upon whether the employer intends to punish violations. If it does not intend to do so, it does not appear that the statute requires the creation of a written language policy. If it intends to administer discipline, the employer must create a written policy that meets the statutory requirements. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

The FEHA prohibits retaliation against an employee for opposing discriminatory practices, filing a complaint, or testifying or assisting in any FEHA proceeding.ⁿ⁷⁸ The FEHA also prohibits the harassment of employees, applicants, or persons providing services pursuant to a contract in a protected class,ⁿ⁷⁹ as well as discrimination because an employee's religious beliefs conflict with an employment requirement, unless the employer makes reasonable efforts to accommodate those beliefs.ⁿ⁸⁰ The FEHA prohibits an employer from failing to reasonably accommodate the known physical or mental disability of an applicant or employee, unless the employer can demonstrate that the accommodation would produce undue hardship to the operation of its business.ⁿ⁸¹ The FEHA also prohibits an employer from neglecting to engage in a timely, good-faith, interactive process with an employee or applicant with a known physical or mental disability or medical condition to determine effective reasonable accommodations, if any, to an employee or applicant requesting them.ⁿ⁸² Finally, the FEHA prohibits employers from subjecting any employee, applicant, or other person to a test for the presence of a genetic characteristic.ⁿ⁸³ For detailed discussion of prohibited discriminatory practices, see Chapter 41, Parts A, C, D, and F.

[7] Defenses

The FEHA and the regulations interpreting it afford employers certain limited defenses against claims of discrimination, which are discussed in detail in Chapter 41, Part E. These include specific defenses that relate to particular classifications such as physical or mental disability,ⁿ⁸⁴ certain medical conditions,ⁿ⁸⁵ marital status,ⁿ⁸⁶ race and color,ⁿ⁸⁷ religious creed,ⁿ⁸⁸ age,ⁿ⁸⁹ and sex.ⁿ⁹⁰ The FEHA also specifies defenses that relate to types of employment practices, rather than protected classifications. These include the concepts of "bona fide occupational qualification,"ⁿ⁹¹ business necessity,ⁿ⁹² job-relatedness,ⁿ⁹³ security regulations,ⁿ⁹⁴ bona fide voluntary affirmative action plans,ⁿ⁹⁵ and requirements of the law.ⁿ⁹⁶

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission General Overview Public Health & Welfare Law Housing & Public Buildings General Overview Public Health & Welfare Law Housing & Public Buildings Fair Housing

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Gov. Code § 12940(a), (d)-(h), (j)-(o).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Gov. Code § 12940(b), (g), (h), (j), (k).

(n3)Footnote 3. Gov. Code § 12940(c), (j)-(l).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Gov. Code § 12940(d)-(h), (j), (k).

(n5)Footnote 5. Gov. Code § 12940(i); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.7.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12945; see also [5], [6], below.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Gov. Code § 12940(j), (k).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Gov. Code § 12935(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7285.4, 7286.4; see also [2], below.

(n9)Footnote 9. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7285.0 et seq.

(n10)Footnote 10. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7289.4-7289.5 (national origin and ancestry), 7290.6-7291.2 (sex), 7292.0-7292.6 (marital status), 7293.0-7293.4 (religion), 7293.5-7294.2 (disability), 7295.0-7296.4 (age).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Gov. Code §§ 12960-12976; see also [2], below.

(n12)Footnote 12. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7400; see Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.; see also Gov. Code § 12972(a) (Commission conducts all actions and procedures in accordance with its procedural regulations); Gov. Code § 12972(b)(1) (if Commission does not have procedural regulation on issue, Commission must rely on pertinent provisions of Administrative Procedure Act, commencing with Gov. Code § 11370).

(n13)Footnote 12.1. Gov. Code § 11425.10 et seq..

(n14)Footnote 12.2. Gov. Code § 12972(b)(2).

(n15)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Price v. Civil Service Com. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 257, 270-277, 161 Cal. Rptr. 475, 604 P.2d 1365; City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 985, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716; but cf. Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 540, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 (FEHC is not bound to consider or follow federal precedent construing Title VII); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 606, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (noting that when Title VII precedent does not appear sound, or conflicts with essential purpose of FEHA, FEHC does not rely on it).

(n16)Footnote 14. See State Personnel Bd. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 422, 428-429, 217 Cal. Rptr. 16, 703 P.2d 354 (overview of respective roles of DFEH and FEHC).

(n17)Footnote 15. See Gov. Code §§ 12901, 12930-12933.

(n18)Footnote 16. Gov. Code §§ 12903, 12935.

(n19)Footnote 17. See Gov. Code § 12930(e).

(n20)Footnote 18. See Gov. Code § 12930(f).

(n21)Footnote 19. See Gov. Code § 12930(g).

(n22)Footnote 20. See Gov. Code §§ 12930(h), 12965, 12972(b).

(n23)Footnote 21. See Gov. Code § 12930(i).

(n24)Footnote 22. Gov. Code § 12935(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7285.4, 7286.4; see [1], above.

(n25)Footnote 23. See Gov. Code §§ 12935(b), (f), 12967.

(n26)Footnote 24. See Gov. Code §§ 12935(b), (f), 12967-12972; 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7285.5, 7285.6.

(n27)Footnote 24.1. Gov. Code § 12935(c). See Gov. Code §§ 12960, 12961, 12980.

(n28)Footnote 24.2. Gov. Code § 12935(c).

(n29)Footnote 25. See Gov. Code § 12970(a)-(d).

(n30)Footnote 26. See Gov. Code § 12965(b).

(n31)Footnote 27. Gov. Code § 12965(b) (attorney's fees and costs are not available if action filed by public agency or public official acting in official capacity).

(n32)Footnote 28. Commodore Home Systems, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 213, 216, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912 ; Monge v. Superior Court (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 503, 509, 222 Cal. Rptr. 64 .

(n33)Footnote 29. See Gov. Code §§ 12925(d) (individuals, partnerships, associations, corporations, limited liability companies, legal representatives, trustees, trustees in bankruptcy, and receivers or other fiduciaries), 12926(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a); see also DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 10 (in considering whether person is "employer" in agency sense, FEHC looks to degree which person significantly affects access to employment); DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 19 (same; FEHC does not look to whether person is "employer" or "agent" in conventional sense).

(n34)Footnote 30. Gov. Code § 12926(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)(4).

(n35)Footnote 31. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)(6); see also Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Comm'n (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 (FEHA applies to social and nonreligious nonprofit organizations).

(n36)Footnote 32. Gov. Code § 12926(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a).

(n37)Footnote 33. See Gov. Code § 12940(j); DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 6.

(n38)Footnote 34. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)(4).

(n39)Footnote 35. Robinson v. Fair Employment & Housing Comm'n (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 226, 234-243, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 782, 825 P.2d 767 .

(n40)Footnote 35.1. Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1183-1184, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 (dual employers where both employment agency and client company had right to exercise certain powers of control over employee). See Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal.3d 168, 174, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811 (possibility of dual employment is well recognized in case law, and where employer sends employee to do work for another person, and both have right to exercise powers of control over employee, employee may be held to have two employers, i.e., original or general employer and second or special employer); Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1247-1248, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718 (when employer lends employee to another employer and relinquishes to borrowing employer all right of control over employee's activities, two-employer situation is created). For discussion of dual employment in the workers' compensation context, see § 20.20[2][d].

(n41)Footnote 35.2. Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 .

(n42)Footnote 35.3. Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1183-1184, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 .

(n43)Footnote 36. See Gov. Code § 12926(d) (definition).

(n44)Footnote 37. Gov. Code § 12928.

(n45)Footnote 37.1. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 125, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 . See Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid (1989) 490 U.S. 730, 751-752, 109 S. Ct. 2166, 104 L. Ed. 2d 811 ; Broussard v. L.H. Bossier, Inc. (5th Cir. 1986) 789 F.2d 1158, 1159 ; Spirides v. Reinhardt (D.C. Cir. 1979) 613 F.2d 826, 832, 198 U.S. App. D.C. 93 ; Hatcher v. Augustus (E.D.N.Y. 1997) 956 F. Supp. 387, 390 ; Goudeau v. Dental Health Servs. (M.D.La. 1995) 901 F. Supp. 1139, 1142 ; Jeffries v. Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu Intern. (E.D.Pa. 1995) 893 F. Supp. 455, 458-459 ; Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1485, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 .

(n46)Footnote 37.2. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 126, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 , citing Lee v. Mobile County Com'n (S.D.Ala. 1995) 954 F. Supp. 1540, 1546 , aff'd without op., 103 F.3d 148 ; Deal v. State Farm County Mut. Ins. Co. of Texas (5th Cir. 1993) 5 F.3d 117, 118-119 ; Fields v. Hallsville Independent School Dist. (5th Cir. 1990) 906 F.2d 1017, 1019 ; Bampoe v. Coach Stores, Inc. (S.D.N.Y. 2000) 93 F. Supp. 2d 360, 369-370 ; E.E.O.C. v. Fawn Vendors, Inc. (S.D.Tex. 1996) 965 F. Supp. 909, 911 ; Goudeau v. Dental Health Servs. (M.D.La. 1995) 901 F. Supp. 1139, 1142 ; Magnuson v. Peak Technical Services, Inc. (E.D.Va. 1992) 808 F. Supp. 500, 507 .

(n47)Footnote 37.3. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 126, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 , citing York v. Ass'n of the Bar (2d Cir. 2002) 286 F.3d 122, 125-126 ; Pietras v. Board of Fire Comrs of Farmingville (2d Cir. 1999) 180 F.3d 468, 473 ; O'Connor v. Davis (2d Cir. 1997) 126 F.3d 112, 115-116 ; Scaglione v. Chappaqua Central School Dist. (S.D.N.Y. 2002) 209 F. Supp. 2d 311, 314-315 ; Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1486, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 .

(n48)Footnote 37.4. See Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 121-131, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 (state was not liable to firefighter under FEHA for allegedly discriminatory adoption and enforcement of employment regulations governing use of respirators by employees with facial hair).

(n49)Footnote 38. Gov. Code § 12940(c).

(n50)Footnote 39. Gov. Code § 12940(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(c). but see Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 339, 396-400, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29 (television screenwriters could not sue talent agencies for age discrimination in violation of FEHA, because FEHA did not create direct liability for age discrimination by employment agencies until passage of amendments effective January 1, 2003, and amendments as they apply to employment agencies in Gov. Code § 12940(d) do not apply retroactively).

(n51)Footnote 40. Gov. Code § 12926(e).

(n52)Footnote 41. See Gov. Code §§ 12926(g) ("labor organization" defined), 12940(b); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(d).

(n53)Footnote 42. See Gov. Code § 12926(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)(5); see also McKeon v. Mercy

Healthcare Sacramento (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 321, 324-325, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319, 965 P.2d 1189 (religious entity exemption includes religious entities organized under Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law); DFEH v. Bohemian Club (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-01, pp. 12-15 (1988-1989 CEB FEHC Decisions) (holding that nonprofit organization must be religious to be exempt from FEHA); see also Arriaga v. Loma Linda University (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1556 (nonprofit religious corporation excluded from FEHA coverage even if it receives state funds).

(n54)Footnote 43. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)(5) (nonprofit religious organization exempt from federal and state income tax is presumed not to be employer); McKeon v. Mercy Healthcare Sacramento (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 321, 331, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319, 965 P.2d 1189 (in evaluating religious nature of religious entity organized under Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law and claiming exemption from FEHA, Court noted that entity was exempt from federal and state taxation).

(n55)Footnote 44. See Gov. Code § 12926.2(c).

(n56)Footnote 45. See Kelly v. Methodist Hospital of Southern California (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1108, 1116-1117, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514, 997 P.2d 1169 ; see Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 227-230, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 .

(n57)Footnote 46. Schmoll v. Chapman Univ. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1438-1444, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426 .

(n58)Footnote 47. See McClure v. Salvation Army (5th Cir. 1972) 460 F.2d 553, 560 (Salvation Army (church) terminated plaintiff's commission as an officer (minister)); see also Scharon v. St. Luke's Episcopal Presbyterian Hosp. (8th Cir. 1991) 929 F.2d 360, 362 (ministerial exception extends to church-related institutions that have "substantial religious character"); See also § 40.10[3].

(n59)Footnote 48. Schmoll v. Chapman Univ. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1438-1444, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426 ; see E.E.O.C. v. Pacific Press Pub. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1982) 676 F.2d 1272, 1278 (First Amendment not implicated when religious institution makes employment decision about employee whose duties do not go to heart of church's function in manner of minister or seminary teacher, such as dispute between church publishing house and editorial secretary).

(n60)Footnote 49. Gov. Code § 12926.2(c). For the definition of "religious corporation," see Gov. Code § 12926.2(a).

(n61)Footnote 50. Gov. Code § 12926.2(b).

(n62)Footnote 51. Gov. Code § 12926.2(d).

(n63)Footnote 52. See Corp. Code § 5110 et seq.

(n64)Footnote 53. Gov. Code § 12926.2(e).

(n65)Footnote 54. Gov. Code § 12926.2(f).

(n66)Footnote 54.1. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3).

(n67)Footnote 54.2. Lockhart v. MVM, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1455-1458, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 206 (claims under FEHA by former employee of federal contractor operating federal prison on land federal government had purchased from state was properly dismissed under federal enclave doctrine, where neither FEHA nor predecessor statutes existed at time of sale of land to federal government and no congressional action since sale authorized state FEHA claims against employers operating on federal enclaves within California); Taylor v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 472, 478, 481-482, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873 .

(n68)Footnote 54.3. Lockhart v. MVM, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1458 n.5, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 206 ;

Taylor v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 472, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 873 .

(n69)Footnote 55. Lockhart v. MVM, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1458-1460, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 206 (although termination was decided and implemented at site admittedly not on federal enclave and employee was informed of her termination at her home, which also was not on federal enclave, summary judgment for employer was proper, where she was employee of federal contractor operating on federal enclave and her employment claims were governed by enclave's law, not law where termination decision was made).

(n70)Footnote 55.1. Gov. Code § 12940(i).

(n71)Footnote 55.2. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 131, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 .

(n72)Footnote 55.3. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 131, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 ; Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1318, 1323-1324, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308 .

(n73)Footnote 55.4. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 131, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 ; Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1318, 1323-1324, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308 .

(n74)Footnote 55.5. Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 655, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333 .

(n75)Footnote 55.6. Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App.4th 598, 603-604, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 .

(n76)Footnote 55.7. Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 660, 663, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333 . See LeVine v. Weis (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 201, 212-213, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562 (FEHA draws distinction between harassment and discrimination; while employer and any person is prohibited from harassing employee, only employer is prohibited from engaging in improper discrimination); see also Walrath v. Sprinkel (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1237, 1241, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806 .

(n77)Footnote 55.8. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 .

(n78)Footnote 55.9. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 132-133, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 . See also Trinkle v. California State Lottery (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1203, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496 (state is not "person" within meaning of Unfair Competition Law).

(n79)Footnote 55.10. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 133, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 .

(n80)Footnote 56. See Gov. Code § 12940(a) (discrimination in employment, hiring, or selection for training leading to employment prohibited); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7286.5(b) ("employee" defined), (h) ("applicant" defined), 7287.3 (discrimination in considering employment applications prohibited); see Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1052-1055, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143 (FEHA protects job applicants from retaliation).

(n81)Footnote 57. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(b)(5).

(n82)Footnote 57.1. 2 Cal. Code Regs. § 7286.5(b).

(n83)Footnote 57.2. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1625, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 .

(n84)Footnote 57.3. 2 Cal. Code Regs. § 7286.5(b)(5).

(n85)Footnote 57.4. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1625-1626, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 .

(n86)Footnote 57.5. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1625, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 . See Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 123, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 (FEHA requires some connection with employment relationship, but connection need not be direct).

(n87)Footnote 57.6. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1626, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 . See Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1184, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 .

(n88)Footnote 57.7. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1626, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 . See Metropolitan Water Dist. v. Superior Court (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 491, 500-501, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 857, 84 P.3d 966 (under statute that expressly excluded independent contractors but did not define "employee," under common law definition, employees supplied by labor contractor to public agency participating in state retirement plan were participants in state plan).

(n89)Footnote 57.8. Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 124-125, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 ; Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1626, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 .

(n90)Footnote 57.9. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 .

(n91)Footnote 57.10. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(A). For discussion of covered employers, see [3], above.

(n92)Footnote 57.11. See Gov. Code § 12940(j)(5).

(n93)Footnote 57.12. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1627, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 . See Metropolitan Water Dist. v. Superior Court (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 491, 508, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 857, 84 P.3d 966 (replacing established common law test for employment with complete deference to parties' characterization of relationship is improper, especially when issue is one of statutory interpretation); Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 951, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 (contractual terms not conclusive; key is right to control); Vernon v. State of California (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 114, 124-125, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 121 (no one factor is decisive in determining nature of employment relationship under FEHA).

(n94)Footnote 58. See Gov. Code § 12926(c); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(b)(2), (3).

(n95)Footnote 59. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(b)(1); see Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 618, 622, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 ; but see Sada v. Robert F. Kennedy Medical Ctr. (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 138, 144, 157-160, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 112 (fact that plaintiff is independent contractor is irrelevant when plaintiff brings FEHA retaliation claim as job applicant).

(n96)Footnote 60. Lab. Code § 3353.

(n97)Footnote 61. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1), (4).

(n98)Footnote 62. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(5). See Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1624, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 (as matter of law, social worker did not fall within statutory definition of one providing services pursuant to contract nor was she independent contractor covered by FEHA, where she had no control over means by which she provided her services and was not hired to produce end product or for special skills beyond those normally provided by employer's employees, she was told when and where to report to work and what her job duties would be, she was not compensated for specific result but for her time working alongside facility staff, and she was not customarily engaged in independently established business of providing services to inmates).

(n99)Footnote 63. See Campbell v. Arco Marine, Inc. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1850, 1857-1858, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626 .

(n100)Footnote 64. Schmoll v. Chapman Univ. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1438-1444, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426 . For further discussion, see [3], above, and § 41.106.

(n101)Footnote 65. Shephard v. Loyola Marymount University (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 837, 842-847, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 829 .

(n102)Footnote 65.1. Mendoza v. Town of Ross (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 625, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 452, 2005 Cal. App. LEXIS 612, *8-*22 (community service officer who volunteered at school was not employee of town for purposes of FEHA, where his service was not result of appointment by town, was not governed by an express or implied contract and was not an apprenticeship; moreover, the absence of any remuneration prevented him from attaining "employee" status under the FEHA).

(n103)Footnote 66. Gov. Code §§ 12940(a), 12943, 12945.

(n104)Footnote 67. See Gov. Code § 12926(o) ("religious creed" defined); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.1 (establishing "religious creed" discrimination).

(n105)Footnote 68. See Gov. Code § 12926(p) ("sex" includes, but is not limited to, pregnancy, childbirth, or medical conditions related to pregnancy or childbirth, and person's gender, as defined in Pen. Code § 422.56(q) ("sexual orientation" means heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.7 ("sex" and "sex stereotype" defined).

(n106)Footnote 69. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.1 ("marital status" defined).

(n107)Footnote 70. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.2 ("pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions" defined).

(n108)Footnote 71. See Gov. Code § 12926(i) ("mental disability" defined), (k) ("physical disability" defined).

(n109)Footnote 72. See Gov. Code § 12926(h) ("medical condition" defined; term includes "genetic characteristics").

(n110)Footnote 73. See Gov. Code § 12926(b) ("age" defined).

(n111)Footnote 74. Gov. Code § 12940(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7287.1-7287.9.

(n112)Footnote 75. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4 (adopting federal uniform guidelines on employee testing and other employee-selection procedures); City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 986-987, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (applying uniform guidelines); see also Harris v. Civil Serv. Comm'n (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1368-1369, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366 (commission has no legal duty to adopt, use, or validate tests when undisputed evidence showed dramatic disparate impact (almost one-half) far below invalidity threshold of four-fifths rule). For discussion of scope of federal uniform guidelines, see § 40.30.

(n113)Footnote 76. See Gov. Code § 12940(d).

(n114)Footnote 77. Gov. Code § 12951.

(n115)Footnote 78. Gov. Code § 12940(h); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.8. The FEHA also prohibits retaliation for reporting potential neglect or abuse pursuant to Penal Code § 11161.8. See Gov. Code § 12940(e). Penal Code § 11161.8 applies to persons or entities, and their employees, that manage hospitals and receive patients from health or community care facilities.

(n116)Footnote 79. Gov. Code § 12940(j).

(n117)Footnote 80. See Gov. Code § 12940(l).

(n118)Footnote 81. See Gov. Code § 12940(m); see also Gov. Code § 12926(n) ("reasonable accommodation" defined), (s) ("undue hardship" defined).

(n119)Footnote 82. Gov. Code § 12940(n); for a discussion of accommodation of disabilities generally, see § 41.51.

(n120)Footnote 83. Gov. Code § 12940(o).

(n121)Footnote 84. See Gov. Code §§ 12926(i), (k), 12940(a)(1), (k); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.8.

(n122)Footnote 85. See Gov. Code § 12940(a)(2).

(n123)Footnote 86. See Gov. Code §§ 12940(a)(3), 12993(b); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.3.

(n124)Footnote 87. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7289.4.

(n125)Footnote 88. See Gov. Code § 12940(l); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.2.

(n126)Footnote 89. See Gov. Code § 12940(a)(5); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.3.

(n127)Footnote 90. See Gov. Code §§ 12940(a)(4), 12993(b); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.8.

(n128)Footnote 91. See Gov. Code § 12940; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(a).

(n129)Footnote 92. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(b).

(n130)Footnote 93. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(c).

(n131)Footnote 94. Gov. Code § 12940; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(d).

(n132)Footnote 95. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(e).

(n133)Footnote 96. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(f).

8 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part B. STATE LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.11

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.11 California Equal Pay Act

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

The California Equal Pay Actⁿ¹ prohibits wage discrimination based solely on sex. The act is not a part of the FEHA;ⁿ² it is included in the wage-and-hour provisions of the Labor Code. The act codifies the principle that an employee is entitled to equal pay for equal work without regard to gender, on jobs requiring equal skill, effort, and responsibility, and performed under similar working conditions.ⁿ³

For further discussion of the substantive provisions of the California Equal Pay Act, see Chapter 41, Part D. For a detailed discussion relating to sex as a prohibited basis for discrimination generally, see Chapter 41, Part B.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

Alternative remedies to the California Equal Pay Act include the federal Equal Pay Act,ⁿ⁴ the FEHA,ⁿ⁵ and Title VII.ⁿ⁶ The strengths and weaknesses of each remedial scheme, as applied to a particular employee's claim, should be assessed before a choice is made. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

The act is enforced by the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) of the Department of Industrial Relations.ⁿ⁷ The DLSE must investigate complaints filed under the act by an employeeⁿ⁸ and may commence and prosecute civil actions on behalf of the employee, or an affected group of employees, to recover unpaid wages and liquidated damages.ⁿ⁹

An aggrieved employee may also file a civil action to recover back wages, interest, costs, and attorney's fees,ⁿ¹⁰ without exhausting any administrative remedies.ⁿ¹¹ However, if an aggrieved employee consents to administrative action, that employee waives his or her private cause of action unless the Department of Industrial Relations or the DLSE dismisses the employee's complaint without prejudice.ⁿ¹² The employee may intervene in an action brought by the DLSE, or may commence an independent action, if the DLSE does not resolve the employee's claim within 180 days after the date the complaint was filed.ⁿ¹³ For a detailed discussion relating to judicial actions by private parties under the California Equal Pay Act, see Chapter 43, Part A.

An employer who violates the act is liable for unpaid wages and interest, together with liquidated damages (additional amount equal to wages and interest deprived) and costs.ⁿ¹⁴ An employee who prevails in a private action is entitled to attorney's fees.ⁿ¹⁵ An employer who willfully violates the act may also be subject to criminal sanctions.ⁿ¹⁶

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

The California Equal Pay Act, unlike the FEHA,ⁿ¹⁷ contains no requirement that an employer have a minimum number of employees to be covered by its provisions. The act has been applied to both publicⁿ¹⁸ and privateⁿ¹⁹ employers. Thus, the act applies to all California employers, without exception.

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

The California Equal Pay Act applies to individuals employed in any occupation, trade, or industry, except for individuals employed as outside salespersons, whether compensation is measured by time, piece, or otherwise.ⁿ²⁰ For discussion of the definition of outside salespersons, see Chapter 2.

[5] Prohibited Employment Practices

The California Equal Pay Act prohibits an employer from paying a wage rate less than the rate paid to employees of the opposite sex in the same establishment for equal work on jobs that require the same skill, effort, and responsibility, and which are performed under similar working conditions.ⁿ²¹ For a detailed discussion of employment practices prohibited by the California Equal Pay Act, see Chapter 41, Parts B and D.

[6] Defenses

The California Equal Pay Act permits wage differentials based on seniority or merit systems, systems that measure earnings by quantity or quality of production, or on bona fide factors other than sex.ⁿ²² For a detailed discussion of defenses under the California Equal Pay Act, see Chapter 41, Part E.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEqual PayGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEqual PayEqual Pay ActGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 1197.5.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Gov. Code § 12900 et seq., discussed in § 40.10.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Jones v. Tracy Sch. Dist. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 99, 104, 165 Cal. Rptr. 100, 611 P.2d 441 ; Lab. Code § 1197.5(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d), discussed in § 40.22.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Gov. Code § 12900 et seq., discussed in § 40.10.

(n6)Footnote 6. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq., discussed in § 40.20.

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 1197.5(c); see Lab. Code § 79 (creation of Division of Labor Standards Enforcement within Department of Industrial Relations).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code § 1197.5(e) (investigation procedure is same as for discrimination complaints under Lab. Code § 98.7(b)).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 1197.5(e), (f).

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 1197.5(g).

(n11)Footnote 11. Bass v. Great Western Sav. & Loan Assn. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 770, 773, 130 Cal. Rptr. 123 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 1197.5(f).

(n13)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 1197.5(f).

(n14)Footnote 14. Lab. Code § 1197.5(b), (c), (f), (g).

(n15)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 1197.5(g); see Jones v. Tracy Sch. Dist. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 99, 118-122, 165 Cal. Rptr. 100, 109-111, 611 P.2d 441 (award of attorney's fees mandatory).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Lab. Code § 1199.5.

(n17)Footnote 17. See Gov. Code § 12926(d) (private employers must employ five or more employees for FEHA to apply).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Jones v. Tracy Sch. Dist. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 99, 165 Cal. Rptr. 100, 611 P.2d 441 .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Bass v. Great Western Sav. & Loan Assn. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 770, 130 Cal. Rptr. 123 .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Lab. Code § 1171 (defining scope of Lab. Code §§ 1178.5-1199.5, relating to wages, hours, and working conditions).

(n21)Footnote 21. Lab. Code § 1197.5(a).

(n22)Footnote 22. Lab. Code § 1197.5(a).

9 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part B. STATE LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.12

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.12 Unruh/Ralph Acts, Public Access of Disabled Persons, and Prohibited Business Transactions

[1] The Unruh Civil Rights Act

The Unruh Civil Rights Act (Unruh Act)ⁿ¹ guarantees equal accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges, or services in all business establishments to "all persons," regardless of sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability or medical condition. The Unruh Act does not merely prohibit exclusionary practices; it requires equal treatment,ⁿ² and it applies to "all business establishments of every kind whatsoever,"ⁿ³ except for "truly private" relationships that take place outside "public view."ⁿ⁴ However, nothing in the Unruh Act may be construed to require any construction, alteration, repair, or modification to a structure that is not otherwise required by other laws.ⁿ⁵

Despite the broad language of this statute, both the FEHC and the courts have indicated that the Unruh Act does not apply to the employment relationship or to claims of employment discrimination.ⁿ⁶ Although claims under the act may be filed with the DFEH,ⁿ⁷ as well as in court,ⁿ⁸ such claims typically arise outside the employment relationship, and involve issues such as housing discrimination against children and families,ⁿ⁹ or refusals to do business with homosexualsⁿ¹⁰ and persons of unconventional appearance or dress.ⁿ¹¹

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

In light of the express language of the Unruh Act and the FEHA, the holding that the Unruh Act doesn't apply to employment discrimination is somewhat surprising. The FEHA expressly provides that the denial of rights created by the Unruh Act is unlawful under the FEHA,ⁿ¹² and that the FEHA is not intended to limit the application of the Unruh Act.ⁿ¹³ Thus, the two statutes might have been interpreted to make the Unruh Act an alternative remedy for claims of employment discrimination. However, the California Supreme Court's decision in Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁴ which was based on the former Fair Employment Practices Act and predated the enactment of Government Code Section 12948 (making violations of the Unruh Act unlawful under the FEHA), has been consistently reaffirmed in subsequent cases under the FEHA, and the FEHC itself has declined to extend the reach of the Unruh Act to the employment relationship.ⁿ¹⁵ Thus, the operative intent of the FEHA appears to be to "occupy the field of regulation of discrimination in employment ... encompassed by the provisions of [the FEHA]"ⁿ¹⁶ and to make the Unruh Act the basis for discrimination claims in other business relationships and public accommodations. Commentary by Erica B. Grubb.

However, a claim under the Unruh Act that originally arises out of an employment relationship context but is not against the employer may be cognizable under the Unruh Act. For example, in Alch v. Superior Court,^{n16.1} television screenwriters sued both employers, i.e., networks and studios, for age discrimination, alleging they could not obtain television-writing opportunities with the networks and studios because of their age. They also sued talent agencies for age discrimination under the Unruh Act. The court held that no employer-employee relationship existed between the screenwriters and the talent agencies. However, because the agencies were business establishments providing a service to their clients, and the Unruh Act on its face forbids them from discriminating in the provision of that service, the screenwriters could assert a claim of age discrimination against the agencies under the Unruh Act.

Relief under the Unruh Act is available when the plaintiff is in a relationship with the offending business establishment similar to that of the customer in the customer-proprietor relationship that the Act and its predecessors have most commonly covered.^{n16.2} One court has held that a physician may assert an Unruh Act claim against the hospital where he treated patients, because the physician did not have the type of employment relationship with the hospital that would have foreclosed relief.^{n16.3}

[2] The Ralph Civil Rights Act and the Bane Civil Rights Act

Because Civil Code section 51.7, also known as the Ralph Civil Rights Act, and section 52.1, also known as the Tom Bane Civil Rights Act, were not enacted as part of the Unruh Civil Rights Act, there is no bar to asserting a violation of those statutory protections against discriminatory violence and intimidation^{n16.4} and against denial of civil rights by means of threats and intimidation^{n16.5} as a separate cause of action in an action arising out of the employment relationship.^{n16.6]}

The Ralph Civil Rights Actⁿ¹⁷ guarantees all persons in California the right to be free from violence, or intimidation by threat of violence, because of their race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, political affiliation, sex, sexual orientation,ⁿ¹⁸ age, disability, or position in a labor dispute, or because another person perceives them to have one or more of those characteristics.ⁿ¹⁹ Like the list of protected characteristics in the Unruh Act, the bases of discrimination in the Ralph Act are illustrative rather than restrictive.ⁿ²⁰

As with the Unruh Act, it is an unlawful practice under the FEHA to deny Ralph Act rights,ⁿ²¹ and the DFEH is empowered to investigate complaints alleging Ralph Act violations.ⁿ²² Ralph Act violations are not normally associated with employment discrimination, but violations may occur in that context. For example, in a given factual setting, an employee subject to sexual harassment might also have been subject to violence or threats of violence.

The Tom Bane Civil Rights Act^{n22.1} was enacted in the 1980s, with the goal of deterring violence based on racial, ethnic, religious, or other minority status.^{n22.2} The Act permits the government to bring an action to enjoin crimes of hate violence when they are threatened and to seek substantial civil penalties of $25,000 in favor of each individual whose rights have been violated.ⁿ²³ The Act also permits individuals to bring an action for damages against someone who "interferes by threats, intimidation, or coercion, or attempts to interfere by threats, intimidation, or coercion" with the exercise of that individual's rights.ⁿ²⁴

At least one other court has upheld the application of the Ralph Act in the context of an employment action. In Winarto v. Toshiba America Electronics Components, Inc.,ⁿ²⁵ the Ninth Circuit held that, because substantial evidence supported the jury's verdict in favor of a former employee's cause of action based on Civil Code Sections 51.7, 52, and 52.1, the district court erred in vacating that verdict.ⁿ²⁶ The evidence established that a fellow employee had committed and threatened to commit violent acts against the plaintiff. The court found that a reasonable jury could have found that the wrongdoer employee was motivated in his violence by gender or national origin animus and that he had targeted the plaintiff, at least partly because she spoke with an accent and was the only woman in his work group. The court also marginally considered the liability of the plaintiff's supervisor and employer.ⁿ²⁷ The court found that as a matter of law, the supervisor could be liable for "aiding, inciting, or conspiring in the denial" of plaintiff's rights under Section 51.7.ⁿ²⁸ The court then held that it followed that the employer could be liable for the acts of its agent. Finally, the court held that the record supported the jury's finding that the supervisor and the employer aided the employee in depriving the plaintiff of her rights under the Ralph Act. The court also allowed for the possibility that punitive damages could be awarded if the record showed that an officer, director, or managing agent of the employer ratified or authorized wrongful conduct.ⁿ²⁹

Like the Unruh Act, the Ralph Act may be enforced by private civil actionⁿ³⁰ and, under some circumstances, by the Attorney General or any district or city attorney.ⁿ³¹ However, nothing in the Ralph Act may be construed to require any construction, alteration, repair, or modification to a structure that is not otherwise required by other laws.ⁿ³²

[3] Public Access of Disabled Persons

It is also an unlawful practice under the FEHAⁿ³³ for a person to deny or to aid, incite, or conspire in the denial of the rights created by Civil Code Sections 54, 54.1, and 54.2, relating to the rights of disabled persons or persons with medical conditions to full and equal access to all public accommodations.ⁿ³⁴ Presumably, the same arguments supporting the holdings that the proscriptions of section 51 of the Unruh Actⁿ³⁵ do not apply to employment discrimination cases would also apply to violation of the prohibition against denying equal access to public accommodations to disabled persons. If so, violations of Civil Code Sections 54, 54.1, and 54.2 would not provide grounds for a cause of action in an employment discrimination action.ⁿ³⁶

[4] Prohibited Business Transactions

It is also an unlawful business practice under the FEHAⁿ³⁷ for a business establishment to discriminate against, boycott or blacklist, or refuse to buy from, contract with, sell to, or trade with any person, firm, organization, or other business entity in California because of the race, creed, religion, color, national origin, sex, disability or medical condition of the person or of the person's partners, members, stockholders, directors, officers, managers, superintendents, agents, employees, business associates, suppliers, or customers. Similarly, it is an unlawful business practice to take any of the above actions based on the perception that the person has one or more of these characteristics, or because the person is associated with a person who has (or is perceived to have) any of these characteristics.ⁿ³⁸ The FEHC is authorized to receive, investigate, and conciliate complaints alleging violations of this prohibition.ⁿ³⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Rights Law Civil Rights Acts General Overview Labor & Employment Law General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 51.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Koire v. Metro Car Wash (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 24, 29, 30, 219 Cal. Rptr. 133, 707 P.2d 195 (prohibiting sex-based price discounts).

(n3)Footnote 3. Civ. Code § 51; see O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 790, 795, 191 Cal. Rptr. 320, 662 P.2d 427 ("business" is "often synonymous with calling, occupation, or trade, engaged in for the purpose of making a livelihood or gain").

(n4)Footnote 4. See Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz, Inc. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 84 n.14, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212 (dictum; "continuous, personal, and social" relationships); Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (Boy Scouts do not constitute business establishment); see also Board of Dirs. v. Rotary Club of Duarte (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474, 484 (factors to determine whether association is "truly private" include size, purpose, selectivity, and whether others are excluded from critical aspects of relationship).

(n5)Footnote 5. Civ. Code § 51.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 493, 497-498, 86 Cal. Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216 ; Isbister v. Boys' Club of Santa Cruz, Inc. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 72, 83 n.12, 219 Cal. Rptr. 150, 707 P.2d 212 (dictum); People v. Levinson (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 13, 19 , 203 Cal. Rptr. 426 (dictum); Bass v. County of Butte (9th Cir. 2006) 458 F.3d 978, 980-983 (California courts have historically rejected attempts by plaintiffs to expand scope of Unruh Act to include employment claims, and amendment to Unruh Act in 1992 did not expand scope of Act to include employment discrimination); Jurado v. Eleven-Fifty Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1985) 630 F. Supp. 569, 573 , aff'd, 813 F.2d 1406 (9th Cir. 1987) ; DFEH v. Children's Hosp. & Health Ctr. (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-24, at 8-9.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Civ. Code § 52(f); see also Gov. Code § 12948 (violation of Unruh Act constitutes violation of FEHA).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Civ. Code § 52(a) (private action by aggrieved individual); see also Civ. Code § 52(c), (d) (actions for "conduct of resistance" to full enjoyment of Unruh Act rights).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Marina Point, Ltd. v. Wolfson (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 721, 725, 732, 180 Cal. Rptr. 496, 640 P.2d 115 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Rolon v. Kulwitzky (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 289, 291, 200 Cal. Rptr. 217 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See In re Cox (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 205, 217-218, 90 Cal. Rptr. 24, 474 P.2d 992 (characteristics protected by Unruh Act are "illustrative" rather than exclusive).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Gov. Code § 12948.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Gov. Code § 12993(c).

(n14)Footnote 14. Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 493, 497-498, 86 Cal. Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. Children's Hosp. and Health Ctr. (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-24, at 8-9.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Gov. Code § 12993(c).

(n17)Footnote 16.1. Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 339, 391-396, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29 .

(n18)Footnote 16.2. Strother v. Southern California Permanente Medical Group (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 859, 874 .

(n19)Footnote 16.3. Payne v. Anaheim Memorial Hospital (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 729, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 230 (2005) . Compare Johnson v. Riverside Healthcare System, LP (9th Cir. 2008) 534 F.3d 1116, 1124-1127 (physician's claims under Unruh Act against hospital at which he treated patients were foreclosed by fact that his relationship with hospital was materially indistinguishable from that of employee and not similar to that of customer in customer-proprietor relationship, where, unlike situation in Payne, hospital compensated physician and controlled manner of his practice).

(n20)Footnote 16.4. Civ. Code § 51.7.

(n21)Footnote 16.5. Civ. Code § 52.1.

(n22)Footnote 16.6. Stamps v. Superior Court (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1445-1459, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 706 (former African-American employee of mining company could allege wrongful termination in violation of public policy, retaliation in violation of public policy, and violation of Civ. Code §§ 51.7, 52.1).

(n23)Footnote 17. Civ. Code § 51.7, 52.

(n24)Footnote 18. See Civ. Code § 51.7(b) ("sexual orientation" means heterosexuality, homosexuality, or bisexuality).

(n25)Footnote 19. Civ. Code § 51.7(a).

(n26)Footnote 20. Civ. Code § 51.7(a).

(n27)Footnote 21. See Gov. Code § 12948.

(n28)Footnote 22. See Gov. Code § 12930(f)(2); see also Civ. Code § 52(f) (person aggrieved by Ralph Act violation permitted to file DFEH complaint pursuant to Gov. Code § 12948).

(n29)Footnote 22.1. Civ. Code § 52.1.

(n30)Footnote 22.2. Stamps v. Superior Court (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1441 .

(n31)Footnote 23. Civ. Code § 52.1.

(n32)Footnote 24. Civ. Code § 52.1.

(n33)Footnote 25. Winarto v. Toshiba America Electronics Components, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 274 F.3d 1276 .

(n34)Footnote 26. Winarto v. Toshiba America Electronics Components, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 274 F.3d 1276, 1288-1290 .

(n35)Footnote 27. Winarto v. Toshiba America Electronics Components, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 274 F.3d 1276, 1290 n.16 .

(n36)Footnote 28. Civ. Code § 52(b).

(n37)Footnote 29. Winarto v. Toshiba America Electronics Components, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 274 F.3d 1276, 1292 , citing Civ. Code § 3294.

(n38)Footnote 30. See Civ. Code § 52(b); see also Civ. Code § 52.2 (action under Civ. Code § 52 or 54.3 may be brought in small claims court if damages sought do not exceed jurisdictional limits stated in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 116.220, 116.221). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements in a civil action brought under the Ralph Act, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3032 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on a claim under the Ralph Act, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-3013 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n39)Footnote 31. See Civ. Code § 52(c), (d).

(n40)Footnote 32. Civ. Code § 52(g).

(n41)Footnote 33. Gov. Code § 12940 et seq.

(n42)Footnote 34. See Gov. Code § 12948.

(n43)Footnote 35. Civ. Code § 51.

(n44)Footnote 36. See Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 493, 497-498, 86 Cal. Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216 ; Bass v. County of Butte (9th Cir. 2006) 458 F.3d 978, 980-983 (amendment to Disabled Persons Act in 1996 did not expand scope of act to include employment discrimination); see also [1] and [2], above.

(n45)Footnote 37. Gov. Code § 12940 et seq.

(n46)Footnote 38. Gov. Code § 12948; Civ. Code § 51.5.

(n47)Footnote 39. Gov. Code § 12930(f)(2).

10 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part B. STATE LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.13

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.13 Government Code Section 11135--Prohibition Against Discrimination in State-Funded Program or Activities

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

Under Government Code Section 11135, employers undertaking programs or activities that are funded directly by the state, and employers that receive any financial assistance from the state, may not unlawfully deny benefits or discriminate on the basis of race, national origin, ethnic group identification, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation color, or physical or mental disability.ⁿ¹ As used in Section 11135, the prohibition of discrimination based on race, national origin, ethnic group identification, religion, age, sex, sexual orientation, color, or disability includes a perception that a person has any of those characteristics or that the person is associated with a person who has, or is perceived to have, any of those characteristics.^{n1.1}

The Secretary of the Health and Welfare Agency, together with the FEHC, have established regulations determining what persons are protected by Government Code Sections 11135-11139.5, and what practices are discriminatory.ⁿ² In addition, the FEHC regulations interpreting and applying the FEHAⁿ³ are incorporated by reference into the Health and Welfare Agency's regulations. Thus, any act or omission contrary to the FEHA regulations is also a violation of the regulations implementing Government Code Section 11135.ⁿ⁴ For a discussion of the FEHC regulations, see § 40.10.

Pursuant to Government Code Section 11135(b), with respect to discrimination on the basis of disability, state-funded programs and activities must meet the protections and prohibitions contained in Section 202 of the Americans With Disabilities Actⁿ⁵ and its rules and regulations,ⁿ⁶ unless California law provides greater protection, in which case, the stronger law applies.ⁿ⁷ The applicable ADA provision prohibits the discrimination against, or the exclusion of any qualified individual with a disability from participating in or obtaining the benefits of the services, programs, or activities of a public entity.ⁿ⁸ As used in Government Code section 11135, "disability" means any mental or physical disability as defined in Government Code section 12926.ⁿ⁹ State governmental entities, including the California State University,^{n9.1} must comply with the accessibility requirements of Section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973ⁿ¹⁰ and regulations implementing that Act.ⁿ¹¹ in developing, procuring, maintaining, or using electronic or information technology, indirectly or through the use of state funds by other entities. Any entity that contracts with a state or local entity subject to Government Code Section 11135 for the provision of electronic or information technology or the provision of related services must agree to respond to and resolve any complaint brought to its attention regarding accessibility of its products or services.ⁿ¹²

A "program or activity" is any project, action, or procedure undertaken directly by recipients of state support,ⁿ¹³ or indirectly by recipients through others by contracts, arrangements, or agreements, with respect to the public generally, or with respect to any private or public entity.ⁿ¹⁴ Government Code Sections 11135 to 11139.5 apply to employment discrimination, because the "provision of employment" is a "program or activity."ⁿ¹⁵ In sharp contrast, the Ninth Circuit, while acknowledging a split among the circuit courts, holds that Title II of the ADA, discussed above, does not apply to employment.ⁿ¹⁶

A program or activity is "funded directly by the state" if there is any payment, transfer, or allocation of state funds to any recipient.ⁿ¹⁷ "State financial assistance" means any grant, entitlement, loan, cooperative agreement, contract, or any other arrangement by which a state agency provides, or makes otherwise available, aid to recipients in the following forms:ⁿ¹⁸

1. Funds;
2. Services of state personnel; or
3. Real or personal property, or any interest in or use of such property.

An "interest in or use of" real or personal property includes transfers or leases for less than fair market value, or for reduced consideration. It also includes proceeds from a subsequent transfer or lease if the state share of the property's fair market value is not returned to the state.ⁿ¹⁹

State contractors and subcontractors for public works, goods, or services also must comply with the nondiscrimination and contract compliance provisions of the FEHA.ⁿ²⁰ However, the FEHA requires that the rules and regulations promulgated under the FEHA must be coordinated with Government Code Sections 11135-11139.5 and the Health and Welfare Agency's implementing regulations.ⁿ²¹ As a practical matter, the various rules and regulations are internally consistent.

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

Recipients of state funds must submit compliance reports to the state agency administering the funded program or activity.ⁿ²² Failure to comply with reporting requirements constitutes noncompliance with the recipient's obligation under Government Code Sections 11135 to 11139.5 and grounds for sanctions by the responsible agency.ⁿ²³

Any person, including an interested third party, may file a discrimination complaint with the administering agency.ⁿ²⁴ However, if a complaint alleges employment discrimination only, the FEHC and DFEH have exclusive investigative and adjudicative authority.ⁿ²⁵ If a complaint alleges both employment discrimination and discrimination in other areas covered under Government Code Sections 11135 to 11139.5,ⁿ²⁶ the DFEH and FEHC must proceed according to their own statutory authority with respect to the employment discrimination. The administering agency must proceed against the other types of discrimination alleged.ⁿ²⁷ In fact, separate complaints must be filed with the DFEH and the state agency.ⁿ²⁸ For a general discussion of enforcement procedures and remedies under the FEHA, see § 40.10[2]. For a detailed discussion relating to the powers and functions of the DFEH and FEHC, see Chapter 42, Part B.

Although the FEHC's exclusive authority to fashion remedies for employment discrimination is not limited by Government Code Sections 11135 to 11139.5 or the Health and Welfare Agency's implementing regulations, the administering agency must determine from the FEHC's findings of fact the appropriate action to take.ⁿ²⁹ Thus, if the FEHC determines that a violation has occurred, the administering agency must, among other things, curtail state funding in whole or in part.ⁿ³⁰ Also, the recipient must take such remedial action as the administering agency deems necessary to overcome the effects of the violation.ⁿ³¹

Individuals may also seek judicial review of agency decisions under Government Code Sections 11135-11139.5.ⁿ³² However, since the DFEH and the FEHC have exclusive authority over employment discrimination, the FEHA procedure for seeking judicial review is presumably the one that must be used for such claims.ⁿ³³ For a general discussion of FEHA enforcement, see § 40.10[2]. Administrative proceedings before the FEHC are discussed in detail in Chapter 42, Part B.

At least one California court of appeal decision has held that there is no private right to bring a civil action under Government Code Section 11135.ⁿ³⁴

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

As discussed in [1][a], above, Government Code Sections 11135 to 11139.5 apply to all recipients of state funds or financial assistance.ⁿ³⁵ However, the Health and Welfare Agency's implementing regulations define a "recipient" as any contractor, local agency, or person who regularly employs five or more persons, and who receives state support in an amount in excess of $10,000 in the aggregate per state fiscal year, or in an amount in excess of $1,000 per transaction. The support may come through grants, contracts, or otherwise, directly or through another recipient.ⁿ³⁶

A "contractor" is a person or local agency that receives state support under contract or subcontract, including prime contractors and subcontractors at any tier.ⁿ³⁷ A "local agency" is a public district, public corporation, authority, agency, board, commission, county, city, city and county, school district, or other public entity.ⁿ³⁸ A "person" is any individual, proprietorship, firm, partnership, joint venture, syndicate, corporation, association, committee, legal representative, trustee, trustee in bankruptcy, receiver, and any other organization or group of persons acting in concert.ⁿ³⁹

Government Code Sections 11135-11139.5 do not apply to employers who do not receive state support,ⁿ⁴⁰ to employers who do not regularly employ five or more persons,ⁿ⁴¹ or to state agencies.ⁿ⁴² However, state agencies may look to the Health and Welfare Agency's implementing regulations for guidance in the administration of their programs and activities.ⁿ⁴³

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

Government Code Section 11135 broadly declares that "no person" in California may be subject to unlawful discrimination under any state-supported program or activity.ⁿ⁴⁴ Thus, any person who receives, applies for, or is unlawfully deterred from receiving or applying for, the benefits of, or employment under, a program or activity that receives state support is an "ultimate beneficiary" of Government Code Sections 11135-11139.5.ⁿ⁴⁵ However, state employees are not covered by Government Code sections 11135 to 11139.5, because state agencies are not "recipients" of state support.ⁿ⁴⁶

[5] Prohibited Employment Practices

Employers who receive state support may not unlawfully discriminate on the basis of any protected characteristic listed in [1][a], above, in any state-funded program or activity.ⁿ⁴⁷ Unlawful discriminatory practices include the following:ⁿ⁴⁸

1. Denying the opportunity to participate in, or benefit from, an aid, benefit,ⁿ⁴⁹ or service;

2. Affording the opportunity to participate in, or benefit from, an aid, benefit, or service;
3. Providing an aid, benefit, or service that is not as effective in affording an equal opportunity to obtain the same result, to gain the same benefit, or to reach the same level of achievement;
4. Providing different or separate aid, benefits, or services to a person, or to any class of persons, than is provided to others, or to provide aid, benefits, or services at a different time, unless that action is clearly necessary to provide those persons with an equal opportunity to receive as truly effective aid, benefits, or services as those provided to others;
5. Aiding or perpetuating discrimination by transferring state support to another recipient that discriminates in providing aid, benefit, or service;
6. Excluding a person from participation as a member of a planning or advisory board;ⁿ⁵⁰
7. Otherwise limiting a person in the enjoyment of any right, privilege, advantage, or opportunity enjoyed by others receiving any aid, benefit, or service resulting from a program or activity;ⁿ⁵¹
8. Denying the opportunity to participate in "programs or activities [that] are not separate or different, despite the existence of permissibly separate or different programs or activities";

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

This language is somewhat unclear, and no reported cases have interpreted it. The likely intent is to preserve state-funded training programs or other activities that are designed to benefit particular groups (such as welfare recipients or certain handicapped individuals), without authorizing discriminatory or exclusionary policies in state-funded programs or activities that are not targeted in such ways.
Commentary by Erica B. Grubb.

9. Utilizing criteria or methods of administration that (1) have the purpose or effect of discrimination on the basis of a protected classification; (2) have the purpose or effect of defeating or substantially impairing the objectives of a recipient's program with respect to a person belonging to a protected classification; or (3) perpetuate discrimination by another recipient on the basis of a protected classification; or
10. Making or permitting the selection of facility sites or locations that have the purpose or effect of (1) excluding from, denying the benefits of, or otherwise discriminating under, any program or activity, or (2) defeating or substantially impairing the objectives of a recipient's program with respect to a person belonging to a protected classification.

[6] Defenses

As discussed in [3][a] and [4][a] above, Government Code sections 11135 to 11139.5 do not apply to state agencies or employers who regularly employ fewer than five employees.ⁿ⁵² The Health and Welfare implementing regulations also contain exemptions and exceptions. Thus, the proscription against discrimination based on religion does not apply to the religious activities of nonprofit religious corporations or organizations.ⁿ⁵³ Also, it is not a discriminatory practice for a recipient to take an otherwise prohibited actionⁿ⁵⁴ that is based on a factor other than age, even if that action has a disproportionate effect on a protected age group. However, the other factor must bear a direct and substantial relationship to the normal operation of the program or activity, or to the achievement of a statutory objective.ⁿ⁵⁵

Substantive defenses to employment discrimination in general are discussed in detail in Chapter 41, Part E.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disability Discrimination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Gov. Code § 11135(a); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98100; see 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98006-98008 (duration of obligation depends on type of state support). See also Gov. Code § 11135(e), defining "sex" and "sexual orientation" as used in § 11135 as having the same meanings as those terms are defined in Gov. Code § 12925(p),(q).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Gov. Code § 11135(f).

(n3)Footnote 2. See Gov. Code § 11139.5; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98000 et seq.; see also Gov. Code §§ 11138 (state agencies that enter into public service contracts exceeding $100,000 per year required to adopt their own rules and regulations to carry out purpose of Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139.5), 11340 et seq. (standards for adopting agency regulations); 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98302 (requirements for adopting agency regulations), 98304 (process for adopting agency regulations), 98305 (review of agency regulations).

(n4)Footnote 3. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7285.0 et seq.

(n5)Footnote 4. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98400.

(n6)Footnote 5. See 42 U.S.C. § 12131 et seq.

(n7)Footnote 6. See 28 C.F.R. § 35.101 et seq.

(n8)Footnote 7. For general discussion of state and federal laws that may contemporaneously apply to employers who discriminate against disabled employees or applicants, see ch. 41, pt. B.

(n9)Footnote 8. 42 U.S.C. § 12132.

(n10)Footnote 9. Gov. Code § 11135(c)(1); for the definition of "disability" under Gov. Code § 12926, see § 41.32[2][c].

(n11)Footnote 9.1. See Gov. Code § 11135(c)(2).

(n12)Footnote 10. 29 U.S.C. § 794d. For discussion of the federal Rehabilitation Act, see § 40.23.

(n13)Footnote 11. Gov. Code § 11135(d)(2). See Part 1194 of Title 36 of the Federal Code of Regulations.

(n14)Footnote 12. Gov. Code § 11135(d)(3).

(n15)Footnote 13. See discussion in [3], below.

(n16)Footnote 14. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n17)Footnote 15. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010 ("program or activity" also includes provision of goods; procurement of goods or services; provision of education, training, health, welfare, rehabilitation, housing, or other services; provision of cash or loan assistance; provision of facilities for furnishing services, financial aid, or other benefits); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98410-98413 (discriminatory practices relating to employment and other areas covered by Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139.5).

(n18)Footnote 16. Zimmerman v. State of Oregon Dep't of Justice (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 1169 (finding that Congress unambiguously expressed its intent that Title II not apply to employment, Ninth Circuit rejected Attorney General regulation (28 C.F.R. § 35.140(a)) stating that Title II applies to employment; court noted that most cases to contrary have presumed application of Title II to employment without analysis).

(n19)Footnote 17. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n20)Footnote 18. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n21)Footnote 19. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n22)Footnote 20. See Gov. Code § 12990.

(n23)Footnote 21. See Gov. Code § 12990(d)(5).

(n24)Footnote 22. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98310-98314.

(n25)Footnote 23. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98314, 98370 (state agency enforcement powers).

(n26)Footnote 24. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98343; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98344, 98345 (complaint procedure).

(n27)Footnote 25. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98410.

(n28)Footnote 26. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n29)Footnote 27. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98411, 98412 (administering state agency as solely responsible for discriminatory practices that do not relate to employment).

(n30)Footnote 28. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98413.

(n31)Footnote 29. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98410.

(n32)Footnote 30. See Gov. Code § 11137; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98370 (termination or suspension of support, debarment from or ineligibility for future support, probationary or conditional support, referral to Attorney General or other law enforcement agencies).

(n33)Footnote 31. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98110 (mandatory remedial action), 98111 (permissive remedial action).

(n34)Footnote 32. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98002 (rights under Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139.5 enforceable by Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 administrative mandamus).

(n35)Footnote 33. See Gov. Code § 12965(b).

(n36)Footnote 34. Arriaga v. Loma Linda University (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1556 ; contra, Greater Los Angeles Council on Deafness v. Zolin (9th Cir. 1987) 812 F.2d 1103, 1113-1114 (holding private right of action is available under Gov. Code § 11135).

(n37)Footnote 35. See Gov. Code § 11135; 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98100, 98101; see also People v. Levinson (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 13, 18 , 203 Cal. Rptr. 426 (Gov. Code § 11135 applies to those charged with effectuating programs or activities that receive, directly or indirectly, state support).

(n38)Footnote 36. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n39)Footnote 37. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n40)Footnote 38. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n41)Footnote 39. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n42)Footnote 40. See discussion in [1], above.

(n43)Footnote 41. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n44)Footnote 42. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010. A "state agency" is an administrative subdivision or instrumentality of the state government, including, but not limited to, agencies, departments, offices, commissions, boards, bureaus, and divisions, that has the statutory or constitutional authority to provide state support to any person. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n45)Footnote 43. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n46)Footnote 44. Gov. Code § 11135; see discussion in [1], above.

(n47)Footnote 45. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n48)Footnote 46. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010; see discussion in [3], above.

(n49)Footnote 47. See Gov. Code § 11135; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98101.

(n50)Footnote 48. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98101, 98102(a) (enumeration in 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98101 does not limit general prohibition against discrimination); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 98200-98263 (discriminatory practices relating to specific groups protected by Gov. Code §§ 11135-11139.5).

(n51)Footnote 49. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010 ("benefit" is anything contributing to an improvement in condition, including, but not limited to, aid or services provided as result of state support).

(n52)Footnote 50. It is also a discriminatory practice to fail to make reasonable efforts to achieve a representative board, but this requirement is not deemed to impose adherence to a quota system. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98101(f).

(n53)Footnote 51. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010; see discussion in [1], above.

(n54)Footnote 52. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98010.

(n55)Footnote 53. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98222.

(n56)Footnote 54. See discussion in [5][a], above.

(n57)Footnote 55. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 98234.

11 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part B. STATE LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.14

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.14 Miscellaneous State Provisions

[1] Generally

The foregoing sections cover the major California laws that prohibit employment discrimination based on personal characteristics such as an individual's race, religion, ancestry, age, or sex. Other state laws covering this type of discrimination are briefly described in [2] through [5], below.

In addition, as of January 1, 2004, AB 2900 incorporates all of the protected categories under the FEHA into various provisions of the Education Code, Government Code, Labor Code, Military and Veterans Code, Public Utilities Code, Unemployment Insurance Code, and Welfare and Institutions Code. These provisions formerly prohibited discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, and sex; they did not prohibit discrimination on all of the grounds prohibited by the FEHA, including national origin, ancestry, gender, sexual orientation, marital status, physical and mental disability, and medical condition.

Many other state provisions prohibit "discrimination" against an employee who engages in certain protected activities. These types of provisions are outlined in Chapter 60. For example, the state wage and hour laws forbid discrimination or retaliation against employees who file claims with the Labor Commissioner or who otherwise participate in such proceedings.ⁿ¹

[2] California Constitution

The due process and equal protection clauses of California Constitution, Article I, Section 7, apply to state and local government employees.

California Constitution Article I, Section 8, provides that a person may not be disqualified from entering or pursuing a business, profession, vocation, or employment because of sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin. This provision is a restraint on the law-making power of the state, and legislative enactments contrary to it are void.ⁿ² Some courts have interpreted "business, vocation, or profession" to designate a particular type of gainful activity as opposed to a particular job at a particular location.ⁿ³ The constitutional provision does not prohibit regulation of an occupation that excludes a protected classification from a particular position under certain justifiable circumstances; it only forbids a prohibition from the pursuit of that occupation by the classification.ⁿ⁴

More recently, the California Supreme Court has held that California Constitution, Article I, Section 8, besides restraining the state's lawmaking power, also sets forth a fundamental public policy against employment discrimination on the basis of sex, race, color, creed, or national or ethnic origin. Thus, the Court held, Article I, Section 8, may serve as the basis for a tort cause of action against a private employer for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, independent of the FEHA.ⁿ⁵ For discussion of tort causes of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, see Chapter 60.

California Constitution Article I, Section 31, provides that the state may not discriminate against or grant preferential treatment to any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, color, ethnicity, or national origin in the operation of public employment, public education, or public contracting, thus prohibiting racial discrimination.^{n5.1} "Racial discrimination," however, is not defined in Section 31 of Article I, and the lack of a legal definition for that term has led to confusion and conflict over implementation of Section 31 of Article I.^{n5.2} Government Code Section 8315(a) now defines "racial discrimination" or "discrimination on the basis of race" for the purposes of Section 31 of Article I as having the same meaning as "racial discrimination" as defined and used in paragraphs 1 and 4 of Article 1 of Part I of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, which was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly and signed by the United States.^{n5.3} The Convention defines "racial discrimination" to mean any distinction, exclusion, restriction or preference based on race, color, descent, or national or ethnic origin which has the purpose or effect of nullifying or impairing the recognition, enjoyment or exercise, on an equal footing, of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the political, economic, social, cultural or any other field of public life. Further, special measures taken for the sole purpose of securing adequate advancement of certain racial or ethnic groups or individuals requiring such protection as may be necessary in order to ensure such groups or individuals equal enjoyment or exercise of human rights and fundamental freedoms will not be deemed racial discrimination, provided that they do not, as a consequence, lead to the maintenance of separate rights for different racial groups and that they will not be continued after the objectives for which they were taken have been achieved.^{n5.4}

As a signatory to the Convention, the federal government has an international obligation to pursue a policy to eliminate all forms of racial discrimination as provided in the Convention.^{n5.5} To allow the state to assist the federal government in fulfilling that obligation, the following provisions must be used to interpret and implement California Constitution Article I, Section 31:^{n5.6}

- (1) Section 31 of Article I, except as to the prohibition of granting preferential treatment, cannot be interpreted as granting an individual a private cause of action to challenge any special measures undertaken for the purpose of securing adequate advancement of those racial groups requiring protection pursuant to the Convention. Special measures cannot be interpreted as preferential treatment.
- (2) Section 31 of Article I cannot be construed as requiring the government to prove racial discrimination before undertaking special measures for the purpose of securing adequate advancement of those racial minority groups needing that protection pursuant to the Convention.

[3] Public Works Projects

A contractor may not discriminate in the employment of persons on public works on any basis listed in Government Code Section 12940(a), as those bases are defined in Government Code Sections 12926 and 12926.1.ⁿ⁶ Also, employers and labor unions may not refuse to accept otherwise qualified employees as apprentices on public works projects on any basis listed in Government Code Section 12940(a), as those bases are defined in Government Code Sections 12926 and 12926.1, except as provided by Labor Code section 3077.ⁿ⁷

The body awarding a public works contract must take cognizance of violations of the public works lawsⁿ⁸ committed in the execution of such a contract.ⁿ⁹ Unlawful discrimination is subject to all the penalties imposed for a violation of the public works laws,ⁿ¹⁰ including forfeiture of payment after an investigation by the DLSE.ⁿ¹¹

[4] Business Transactions

An addition to the Cartwright Act,ⁿ¹² California's antitrust law, prohibits any exclusions from business transactions based on written policies requiring discrimination on the basis of sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation, or because a person conducts business in a particular location.ⁿ¹³ Violation of this provision of the Cartwright Act is a "conspiracy against trade."ⁿ¹⁴

There are no cases construing the "conspiracy against trade" statute in an employment context. However, when the California Legislature enacted the statute, it expressly recognized that the California constitutional prohibition against disqualifying a person from entering or pursuing a business, profession, vocation, or employment because of membership in a protected classification was undermined by certain on-going practices in the business and commercial world.ⁿ¹⁵ Furthermore, one court construing the "conspiracy against trade" statute relied on O'Connor v. Village Green Owners' Assn.,ⁿ¹⁶ which defined the term "business" as it is used in the Unruh Civil Rights Act; that is, the term encompasses every aspect of employment and is often synonymous with "calling, occupation, or trade, engaged in for the purpose of making a livelihood or gain."ⁿ¹⁷ Since the "conspiracy against trade" statute applies to "business transactions," the statute may arguably apply to claims of employment discrimination by private employers.

[5] Employment Assistance for Workers With Disabilities

The governor is required to authorize the secretary of the Labor and Workforce Development Agency, in collaboration with the secretary of the California Health and Human Services Agency, to make available the expertise of state employees and programs to support the employment-related needs of individuals with disabilities. Using existing resources, the agencies must develop a sustainable, comprehensive strategy to do all of the following:ⁿ¹⁸

1. Bring adults with disabilities into gainful employment at a rate as close as possible to that of the general adult population;
2. Support the goals of equality of opportunity, full participation, independent living, and economic self-sufficiency for these individuals;
3. Ensure that state government is a model employer of individuals with disabilities; and
4. Support state coordination with, and participation in, benefits planning training and information dissemination projects supported by private foundations and federal grants.

There are specific provisions in the Unemployment Insurance Code for employment assistance, such as outreach and skills assessment, for workers with disabilities.ⁿ¹⁹

[6] Unfair Competition Law

The Unfair Competition Law (UCL)ⁿ²⁰ defines unfair competition as including any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice.ⁿ²¹ The FEHAⁿ²² makes it an unlawful employment practice for an employer to engage in age discrimination.ⁿ²³ An employer that practices age discrimination has an unfair competitive advantage over employers who comply with the FEHA because older workers frequently are more highly compensated than their younger colleagues. Further, the UCL's remedies are cumulative to the remedies available under the FEHA.ⁿ²⁴ Therefore, injunctive relief under the UCL is an appropriate remedy when a business engages in an unlawful practice of discriminating against older workers.²⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 98.6; see also discussion in ch. 5.

(n2)Footnote 2. Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 8, 95 Cal. Rptr. 329, 485 P.2d 529 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Long v. State Personnel Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 1000, 1007, 116 Cal. Rptr. 562 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Long v. State Personnel Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 1000, 1007, 116 Cal. Rptr. 562 (no constitutional violation when female Methodist minister was denied a position in a Youth Authority facility given a "male only" certification by State Personnel Board).

(n5)Footnote 5. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 89-91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n6)Footnote 5.1. See, e.g., C&C Construction Co. v. Sacramento Municipal Utility District (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 284, 298-312, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 715 (municipal utility district impermissibly discriminated on basis of race in some of its public contracting activities under Cal. Const. Art. I § 31, where utility district failed to proffer substantial evidence that its race-based discrimination was necessary to maintain federal funding).

(n7)Footnote 5.2. 2003 Cal. Stats. Ch. 211 § 1(a), (b).

(n8)Footnote 5.3. 2003 Cal. Stats. Ch. 211 § 1(c).

(n9)Footnote 5.4. Gov. Code § 8315(b), citing the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, Part I, Article 1, paragraphs 1 and 4.

(n10)Footnote 5.5. See Gov. Code § 8315(d).

(n11)Footnote 5.6. Gov. Code § 8315(c).

(n12)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 1735; see also Lab. Code §§ 1720 ("public works" defined), 1720.2 ("public works" includes construction work done under private contract), 1720.3 ("public works" includes hauling of refuse); but see Lab. Code § 1720.4 ("public works" do not include certain projects involving work performed entirely by volunteer labor). For discussion of wage and hour provisions relating to public works contracts, see Ch. 1. For discussion of the prohibited bases for discrimination under Gov. Code § 12940, see § 40.10[5].

(n13)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 1777.6; see Lab. Code § 1777.5 (requirements for employing apprentices on public works). Lab. Code § 3077 requires apprentices to be at least 16 years of age. For discussion of the prohibited bases for discrimination under Gov. Code § 12940, see § 40.10[5].

(n14)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code §§ 1720-1861.

(n15)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code § 1726.

(n16)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 1735.

(n17)Footnote 11. See Lab. Code §§ 1727-1734.

(n18)Footnote 12. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16700 et seq.

(n19)Footnote 13. Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721; see also Civ. Code §§ 51.5, 51.8 (Unruh Act; discrimination in business transactions and granting of franchises prohibited); see § 40.12[1].

(n20)Footnote 14. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721(c).

(n21)Footnote 15. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.

(n22)Footnote 16. O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 790, 191 Cal. Rptr. 320, 662 P.2d 427 .

(n23)Footnote 17. O'Connor v. Village Green Owners Ass'n (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 790, 795, 191 Cal. Rptr. 320, 662 P.2d 427 (emphasis added); see also Pines v. Tomson (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 370, 385, 206 Cal. Rptr. 866 ; for a discussion relating to the Unruh Civil Rights Act, see § 40.12.

(n24)Footnote 18. Gov. Code § 12803.6(a).

(n25)Footnote 19. See Unempl. Ins. Code § 18000 et seq..

(n26)Footnote 20. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq..

(n27)Footnote 21. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200.

(n28)Footnote 22. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq..

(n29)Footnote 23. Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n30)Footnote 24. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17205.

(n31)Footnote 25. Herr v. Nestle U.S.A., Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 779, 781, 789-790, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477 .

12 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part B. STATE LAW

2-40 California Employment Law §§ 40.15through 40.19

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 40.15[Reserved]

13 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.20

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.20 Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII)ⁿ¹ is the foremost federal law governing employment discrimination. Title VII prohibits unlawful employment discriminationⁿ² by public and private employers,ⁿ³ employment agencies,ⁿ⁴ labor organizations,ⁿ⁵ and training programsⁿ⁶ on the basis of several specified protected classifications.ⁿ⁷ Employment discrimination by federal employers is prohibited by a separate provision in Title VII.ⁿ⁸

Specific bases of discrimination and prohibited employer practices are described in [6] and [7], below.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), a federal agency created to prevent unlawful employment practices,ⁿ⁹ has promulgated procedural regulationsⁿ¹⁰ and substantive "guidelines"ⁿ¹¹ to assist in the enforcement of Title VII.

For further discussion relating to the purpose, scope, and application of the guidelines, see § 40.30. For a detailed discussion relating to the substantive requirements of the guidelines, see Chapter 41, Part C.

[2] Effect on State Law

Title VII does not exempt or relieve any person from any liability, duty, penalty, or punishment provided by any present or future state or local law, unless the law requires or permits an act that would be unlawful under Title VII.ⁿ¹² As discussed in § 40.02[2], Title VII explicitly does not preempt state law, or "occupy the field" of employment discrimination; Title VII preempts state law only to the extent that state law permits practices that are prohibited by the federal law.ⁿ¹³ In fact, as discussed in [3] below, when state or local law prohibits an employment practice, federal enforcement of Title VII must be deferred until state or local officials, under state or local law, have an opportunity to remedy the practice alleged.ⁿ¹⁴

For additional discussion relating to federal preemption of state employment discrimination laws, see § 40.02[2]. For a discussion of the FEHA, the primary California statute prohibiting employment discrimination, see § 40.10.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

Title VII is the chief federal alternative to the FEHA,ⁿ¹⁵ the primary state employment discrimination statute.ⁿ¹⁶ Both Title VII and the FEHA have administrative and judicial enforcement mechanisms.ⁿ¹⁷ Complainants may file administrative charges under both statutes. Charges may be "cross-filed" with both the EEOC and the DFEH, a procedure by which charges filed with either agency are deemed filed with the other as well, if the complainant wishes. Cross-filing preserves both federal Title VII and state FEHA claims. Employers or other respondents, however, need not respond separately, because a cross-filed charge is investigated by only one agency. Under a "work sharing" agreement between the EEOC and the DFEH, charges originally filed with either agency are usually investigated by the agency that receives the original charge. For full discussion of administrative procedures under both the FEHA and Title VII, see Chapter 42. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[3] Enforcement and Remedies

Title VII is enforced by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC),ⁿ¹⁸ which is empowered to prevent unlawful employment practices under the substantive provisions of Title VII.ⁿ¹⁹ Written discrimination "charges" are filed with the EEOC by aggrieved persons, by third parties on behalf of aggrieved persons, or by EEOC members.ⁿ²⁰ However, because the types of employment discrimination prohibited by Title VII are also unlawful in California under the FEHAⁿ²¹ and Government Code Section 11135,ⁿ²² which are enforced by the DFEH and FEHC,ⁿ²³ discrimination charges may not be filed with the EEOC until 60 days after state proceedings are commenced, unless the state proceedings are terminated.ⁿ²⁴ Under a work-sharing agreement between the DFEH and the EEOC, complaints that are within the jurisdiction of both agencies may be first processed by the agency with which the complaint is originally filed.ⁿ²⁵ If a charge is filed by one of the five EEOC commissioners (a "commissioner's charge"), the EEOC must notify the appropriate state agency and allow the agency at least 60 days to act.ⁿ²⁶ For a detailed discussion relating to the authority and structure of the EEOC, the procedure for filing EEOC charges, and deferral to state agencies, see Chapter 42, Part C.

The EEOC must investigate discrimination charges,ⁿ²⁷ and if the EEOC determines that there is reasonable cause to believe that a discrimination charge is true,ⁿ²⁸ it must attempt to eliminate the alleged employment discrimination by informal methods of conference, conciliation,ⁿ²⁹ and persuasion.ⁿ³⁰ The EEOC may seek temporary or preliminary relief pending final disposition of discrimination charges.ⁿ³¹ If there is no reasonable cause to believe that the discrimination charge is true, the EEOC must dismiss the charge.ⁿ³² For further discussion relating to EEOC investigations, conciliation, and civil actions, see Chapter 42, Part C.

If the EEOC is unable to obtain a conciliation agreement,ⁿ³³ the EEOC may bring a civil action against a private employer.ⁿ³⁴ The aggrieved person has the right to intervene in the action.ⁿ³⁵ The EEOC may also bring a civil action against a private employer in federal court if it has reasonable cause to believe that there is a pattern or practice of discrimination.ⁿ³⁶ For a detailed discussion relating to class action or "pattern or practice" discrimination claims, see Chapter 41, Part A.

An aggrieved person may also bring a civil action against an employer named in an EEOC discrimination charge if a "right-to-sue" letter is issued by the EEOC. A right-to-sue letter may be issued if (1) the aggrieved person requests the letter 180 days or later after submission of the charge and the administrative processing is incomplete, or prior to 180 days if the EEOC determines that it will be unable to complete administrative processing within the 180-day period; (2) the EEOC finds reasonable cause but is unable to obtain voluntary compliance; or (3) the EEOC dismisses the charge.ⁿ³⁷ For a detailed discussion relating to judicial actions by private parties under Title VII, see Chapter 43, Part B.

A court finding that unlawful employment practices exist may enjoin such practices and order appropriate affirmative action, including, but not limited to, reinstatement or hiring (with or without back pay).ⁿ³⁸ In addition, compensatory and punitive damages, up to a statutory maximum, are available in Title VII civil actions involving intentional discrimination.ⁿ³⁹ The court may also, in its discretion, award attorney's fees (including expert fees) to the prevailing party, as long as that party is not the EEOC or the United States.ⁿ⁴⁰ For a detailed discussion relating to relief available in civil actions under Title VII, see Chapter 43, Part B.

[4] Employers Covered and Exempted

[a] Generally

Covered "employers" are persons engaged in an industry that affects commerce and who have 15 or more employees for each working day in 20 or more weeks of the current or preceding year.ⁿ⁴¹ A "person" includes one or more individuals, governments, governmental agencies, political subdivisions, labor unions,^{n41.0.1} partnerships, associations, corporations, legal representatives, mutual companies, joint-stock companies, trusts, unincorporated organizations, trustees, trustees in bankruptcy cases under Title 11 of the United States Code, or receivers.^{n41.1}

The numerical qualification in Title VII's definition of "employer" does not affect federal-court subject-matter jurisdiction over a claim under Title VII. Rather, it delineates a substantive ingredient of a Title VII claim for relief and is thus an element of plaintiff's claim for relief.ⁿ⁴²

Two or more employers may be considered "joint employers" under Title VII if both employers control the terms and conditions of employment of the employee.^{n42.1} In determining joint employment, courts consider the following factors:^{n42.2}

- The nature and degree of control of the workers.
- The degree of supervision, direct or indirect, of the work.
- The power to determine the pay rates or the methods of payment of the workers.
- The right, directly or indirectly, to hire, fire, or modify the employment conditions of the workers.
- Preparation of payroll and payment of wages.
- The alleged employee's opportunity for profit or loss depending upon the alleged employee's managerial skill.
- The alleged employee's investment in equipment or materials required for the task or the employee's employment of helpers.
- Whether the service rendered requires a special skill.
- The degree of permanence of the working relationship.
- Whether the service rendered is an integral part of the alleged employer's business.
- Ownership of property or facilities where work occurred.
- Whether responsibility under the contracts between a labor contractor and an employer passes from one labor contractor to another without material changes.

- Whether the organization can hire or fire the individual or set the rules and regulations of the individual's work.
- Whether and, if so, to what extent the organization supervises the individual's work.
- Whether the individual reports to someone higher in the organization.
- Whether and, if so, to what extent the individual is able to influence the organization.
- Whether the parties intended that the individual be an employee, as expressed in written agreements or contracts.
- Whether the individual shares in the profits, losses, and liabilities of the organization.

In the context of the National Labor Relations Act,^{n42.3} the basis of a finding of joint employers is that one employer, while contracting in good faith with an otherwise independent company, has retained for itself sufficient control of the terms and conditions of employment of the employees who are employed by the other employer. The joint employer concept recognizes that the business entities are in fact separate but share or co-determine matters governing the essential terms and conditions of employment.^{n42.4}

In Equal Employment Opportunity Commission v. Pacific Maritime Association, ^{n42.5} the Ninth Circuit held that a nonprofit association of stevedoring and shipping companies that performs organizational tasks on behalf of its members, negotiates collective bargaining agreements, operates a dispatch hall jointly with the union and provides payroll service for member companies, was not a joint employer with one of its members in a sexual harassment action brought by an employee of one of its members. The court found that the association did not supervise the longshore workers, had no power to hire or fire them, had no power to discipline them, and did not supervise the work sites of its member-employers, which was within the sole province of the member-employers. Further, the association did not own the member employer.^{n42.6}

Because Title VII primarily governs relations between employees and employers, it does not cover relations between employees and third parties.ⁿ⁴³ However, the term "employer" in Title VII includes employers' agents.ⁿ⁴⁴ Thus, an employer may be subject to agency liability for the discriminatory programs of third parties if the employer affirmatively and actively participates in such a program, and has some control over the terms of the program.ⁿ⁴⁵ For example, entering into contracts governing the terms of such a program, administering such a program, and mandatory employee participation in such a program may be sufficient to establish employer liability.ⁿ⁴⁶

Title VII also prohibits unlawful discrimination by "employment agencies,"ⁿ⁴⁷ which are defined as any person regularly undertaking, with or without compensation, to procure employees for an employer, or to procure for employees opportunities to work for an employer.ⁿ⁴⁸ Title VII also applies to labor organizations,ⁿ⁴⁹ although discussion of employment agencies and labor organizations is beyond the scope of this chapter.

Employers who have fewer than 15 employees for each working day in 20 or more weeks of the current or preceding year are not covered by Title VII.ⁿ⁵⁰ For purposes of making this determination, the United States Supreme Court has declared that an employer "has" an employee on any day on which the employer maintains an employment relationship with that person, without regard to whether the employee actually worked or received compensation.ⁿ⁵¹ Thus, according to the Court, an individual is counted as an employee for each working day between the time employment begins and ends. However, individuals who depart employment in the middle of a workweek do not count toward the fifteen-employee minimum for that week.ⁿ⁵²

Title VII expressly does not apply to an employer with respect to the employment of aliens outside any state.ⁿ⁵³ Note, however, that United States citizens employed in a foreign country are covered "employees" and thus Title VII applies to them.ⁿ⁵⁴

Title VII also does not apply to a religious corporation, association, educational institution, or society with respect to the employment of individuals of a particular religion to perform work connected with carrying on the organization's activities.ⁿ⁵⁵ It has been held that the sincere religious beliefs of a secular corporation's owners and operators are not enough in themselves to make the corporation "religious" for Title VII purposes.ⁿ⁵⁶

In addition, Title VII excludes the following from the definition of "employer":ⁿ⁵⁷

1. The United States;
2. Corporations wholly owned by the United States;
3. Indian tribes;ⁿ⁵⁸
4. Departments or agencies of the District of Columbia subject by statute to procedures of the competitive service;ⁿ⁵⁹ and
5. Bona fide private membership clubs that are exempt from taxation.ⁿ⁶⁰

[b] Industry Affecting Commerce

As discussed in [a], above, Title VII applies only to employers engaged in industry affecting commerce.ⁿ⁶¹ "Commerce" means trade, traffic, commerce, transportation, transmission, or communication (1) among the several states; (2) between a state and any place outside the state; (3) within the District of Columbia or a possession of the United States; or (4) between points in the same state but through a point outside the state.ⁿ⁶² An employer engaged in "industry affecting commerce" is one that is engaged in any activity, business, or industry in commerce or in which a labor dispute would hinder or obstruct commerce or the free flow of commerce, and includes any activity or industry "affecting commerce" within the meaning of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act,ⁿ⁶³ and further includes any governmental industry, business, or activity.ⁿ⁶⁴ The fact that an employer is a tax-exempt, charitable organization does not preclude it from being deemed an employer engaged in an "industry affecting commerce."ⁿ⁶⁵

In Polish Nat'l Alliance v. National Labor Rel. Bd.,ⁿ⁶⁶ a case construing the power of Congress to regulate commerce under the National Labor Relations Act,ⁿ⁶⁷ the United States Supreme Court declared that Congress regulates not only commerce, but also matters that affect, interrupt, or promote interstate commerce.ⁿ⁶⁸ The Court said that "Congress ... explicitly regulate[s] not merely transactions or goods in interstate commerce[,] but activities which in isolation might be deemed to be merely local[,] but in the interlacings of business across state lines adversely affect such commerce."ⁿ⁶⁹ The Court added that whether practices are deemed to affect interstate commerce is not determined by confining judgment to the quantitative effect of particular activities, but by the total incidence of similar activities that, if left unchecked, may become far-reaching in their harm to interstate commerce.ⁿ⁷⁰

The Title VII "affecting commerce" requirement is generally very liberally construed. Thus, the requirement is satisfied if a defendant uses items that have moved through interstate commerce at some point, or serves persons from out of state, or engages in activity that, even if purely local, would alter the relationships of an interstate market.ⁿ⁷¹

[c] Labor Unions

Section 703(c)(1) of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 makes it an unlawful employment practice for a labor organization to discriminate against any individual because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.^{n71.1} Thus, a union violates Title VII if it deliberately declines to pursue a member's claim because of the member's gender.^{n71.2}

The standard burden-shifting framework established by the United States Supreme Court in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green,^{n71.3} applies to a Title VII action against a union.^{n71.4} Adapting the McDonnell Douglas criteria to a § 703(c)(1) action, a union member can make a prima facie claim of discrimination by introducing evidence that the member was singled out and treated less favorably than others similarly situated on account of race or any other criterion impermissible under the statute.^{n71.5} If the member succeeds in establishing a prima facie case of discrimination against the union, the burden of production shifts to the union to articulate a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the less favorable treatment.^{n71.6} The union must provide reasons for its actions which, if believed by the trier of fact, support a finding that unlawful discrimination was not the cause of the action of which the member complains.^{n71.7} Once the union produces sufficient evidence to satisfy this burden, the McDonnell Douglas framework, with its presumptions and burdens, disappears,^{n71.8} and the member retains the ultimate burden of persuading the trier of fact that he or she has been the victim of intentional discrimination.^{n71.9}

In the context of a union member's action against the union under Title VII, the McDonnell Douglas test may be stated as requiring the union member to show the following:^{n71.10}

1. The employer violated the collective bargaining agreement with respect to the employee.
2. The union breached its duty of fair representation by allowing the breach to go unrepaired.
3. The union member was singled out and treated less favorably than others similarly situated on account of race or any other criterion impermissible under Title VII.

The trier of fact may infer the ultimate fact of intentional discrimination from the member's prima facie case and disbelief of the union's explanation for the action.^{n71.11} However, a trier of fact is not required to infer discrimination even if the union's proffered explanation is unpersuasive.^{n71.12}

A union member bringing a discrimination action against a union under Title VII may prove the union's discriminatory motive through circumstantial evidence alone.^{n71.13} Evidence that one or more similarly situated individuals outside of the protected class received more favorable treatment can constitute sufficient evidence of discrimination for a Title VII union-member plaintiff to prevail.^{n71.14}

In Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union,^{n71.15} a union member proved intentional discrimination by her union in failing to represent her based on her prima facie case. The employer violated the collective bargaining agreement in terminating the plaintiff without just cause. The union then failed to repair the breach of the collective bargaining agreement by not filing a grievance, despite the plaintiff's request and the union representative's knowledge that the employer intended to terminate the plaintiff. There was evidence to show that the union's failure to repair the breach was due to a discriminatory motivation based on plaintiff's sex. There was evidence that for men, the union was an aggressive advocate, but for women like the plaintiff and another woman, the union effectively accepted the employer's decisions instead of taking their claims to arbitration, and the same union representatives failed to provide the same quality of representation for the plaintiff as for similarly situated males. There also was evidence that at least one male employee who received more favorable treatment than the plaintiff was similarly situated in all material respects to her. There also was evidence of the union's handling of the grievance of another female member, which strengthened the inference that the union intentionally discriminated on the basis of sex in handling the grievances of female members. The Ninth Circuit found that the plaintiff's evidence was comparative in nature, rather than statistical, and that, as a matter of law, the evidence was not an insufficient basis for the district court's conclusion that the union had intentionally discriminated against the plaintiff, even though the comparative evidence was based on only three individuals in addition to the plaintiff.

[5] Employees Covered and Exempted

Title VII defines an "employee" simply as an individual employed by an employer;ⁿ⁷² if an employer is covered by Title VII,ⁿ⁷³ so are its employees. However, Title VII coverage is not limited to current employees. By its terms Title VII also applies to applicants for employment,ⁿ⁷⁴ and to former employees.ⁿ⁷⁵

Title VII coverage also extends to some "individuals" who are not applicants or current or former employees.ⁿ⁷⁶ For example, in Sibley Memorial Hospital v. Wilson,ⁿ⁷⁷ the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia held that a male private duty nurse employed through a local registry by patients in private hospitals could maintain a Title VII action against a private hospital that refused to allow him to report to a patient because he was a male, despite the absence of an employment relationship between the nurse and the hospital.ⁿ⁷⁸ The court stated that "[t]o permit a covered employer to exploit circumstances peculiarly affording it the capability of discriminatorily interfering with an individual's employment opportunities with another employer, while it could not do so with respect to employment in its own service, would be to condone continued use of the very criteria for employment that Congress has prohibited."ⁿ⁷⁹

The Sibley court noted that there are no substantive provisions in Title VII that restrict the meaning of the term "individual" to an employee of an employer.ⁿ⁸⁰ The court opined that there is no good reason to confine the meaning of "individual" to include only former employees and applicants for employment.ⁿ⁸¹ It also emphasized that the enforcement provisions of Title VII use the term "person claiming to be aggrieved"ⁿ⁸² rather than "employees."ⁿ⁸³ The court explained that the former term "can certainly be taken as comprehending individuals who do not stand in a direct employment relationship with an employer," and because Title VII thus purports to provide remedies for a class broader than "direct" employees, there is a strong indication that Title VII proscriptions reach beyond the immediate employment relationship.ⁿ⁸⁴

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals appears to agree with the Sibley analysis.ⁿ⁸⁵ The Ninth Circuit in Gomez v. Alexian Bros. Hosp. of San Jose,ⁿ⁸⁶ and Lutcher v. Musicians Union Local 47,ⁿ⁸⁷ suggested that Title VII may apply, for example, when an employer subject to Title VII interferes with an individual's employment with another employer,ⁿ⁸⁸ even though the individual is not an applicant, employee, or former employee of the interfering employer.

Title VII does not apply if the only relationship between the complainant and the person charged with discrimination is that of independent contractor.ⁿ⁸⁹ Some cases have applied a common-law test for distinguishing between employees and independent contractors for purposes of Title VII.ⁿ⁹⁰ Under the common-law test, an individual is an employee, rather than an independent contractor, if the person for whom work is being done reserves (1) the right to control the result accomplished, and (2) the details and means by which that result is accomplished.ⁿ⁹¹ However, most courts and the EEOC have abandoned the common-law test as too narrow for analyzing employee status under the equal employment laws.ⁿ⁹² In any event, the determination of whether a relationship is one of employment or independent contractual affiliation requires a fact-specific inquiry that relies on the economic realities of the situation.ⁿ⁹³

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The decision in Adcock ⁿ⁹⁴ should not be viewed as precedent for the argument that independent contractors may bring discrimination claims under Title VII. On the contrary, Adcock follows a traditional Title VII analysis. It involves an alleged hiring claim by a plaintiff who believed that the defendant had denied her employment as an employee. The defendant countered that the plaintiff had sought to become a franchise car dealer and that the denial of her application barred her only from an independent contractor relationship, a status not covered under Title VII. The Ninth Circuit agreed with the defendant, relying primarily upon the terms of the proposed franchise agreement. In finding a predominance of factors indicating the formation of an independent contractor relationship, the court concluded that the defendant had not barred the plaintiff from employment on the basis of her sex.

Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

For discussion of common-law rules relating to independent contractors, see Ch. 30.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The "hybrid" test of independent contractor status focuses less on the label given by an employer, and more on the specific facts of a particular arrangement. The hybrid test examines the following eleven factors: (1) the kind of occupation, with reference to whether the work is usually done under the direction of a supervisor, or is done by a specialist without supervision; (2) the skill required in the particular occupation; (3) whether the "employer" or the individual in question furnishes the equipment used and the work place; (4) the length of time during which the individual has worked; (5) the method of payment, whether by time or by the job; (6) the manner in which the work relationship is terminated--whether by one or both parties, with or without notice and explanation; (7) whether annual leave is afforded; (8) whether the work is an integral part of the business of the "employer"; (9) whether the worker accumulates retirement benefits; (10) whether the "employer" pays social security taxes; and (11) the intention of the parties.ⁿ⁹⁵ The hybrid test is refined enough to preserve a true independent contractor relationship,ⁿ⁹⁶ but the fact-intensive nature of the inquiry makes it difficult to predict whether a given independent contractor relationship will be upheld as such. Employers should be aware that the labels they choose will be subject to close scrutiny and that if an individual is found to be an employee rather than an independent contractor, liability under Title VII or other equal employment laws may follow. Commentary by Erica B. Grubb.

Certain employees are expressly or presumptively excluded from Title VII coverage. Thus, aliens employed outside the United States and its territories, and individuals performing work in connection with the activities of religious corporations, associations, educational institutions, or societies are not covered by Title VII.ⁿ⁹⁷ However, with respect to employment in a foreign country, the term "employee" includes an individual who is a citizen of the United States.ⁿ⁹⁸

Also, individuals elected to public office in any state or political subdivision, and individuals selected by an elected official to serve on official's staff, or appointed as a policy-maker or advisor, are not considered "employees" under Title VII.ⁿ⁹⁹ Uniformed, active-duty members of the military also are excluded from the coverage of Title VII.ⁿ¹⁰⁰

[6] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination

Title VII prohibits employment discrimination based on the following classifications:ⁿ¹⁰¹

1. Race;
2. Color;
3. Religion;ⁿ¹⁰²
4. Sex;ⁿ¹⁰³ or
5. National origin.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

The proscription against sex discrimination includes pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions,ⁿ¹⁰⁵ as well as discrimination against married women.ⁿ¹⁰⁶

A detailed discussion relating to specific prohibited bases of discrimination is contained in Chapter 41, Part B.

[7] Prohibited Employment Practices

Title VII prohibits discriminatory failure or refusal to hire or refer for employment, discriminatory discharge, and other discriminatory acts with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment,ⁿ¹⁰⁷ as well as limitations, segregation, classifications, referrals, or other acts that deprive employees and other individuals of employment opportunities, or adversely affect their employment status.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ Also, employers, labor organizations, or joint labor-management committees controlling apprenticeship or other training or retraining, including on-the-job training programs, may not unlawfully discriminate in admission to, or employment in, such programs.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ Moreover, retaliation for opposition to employment discrimination is unlawful,ⁿ¹¹⁰ and notices or advertising indicating preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on a protected classification is prohibited, unless the notice or advertising reflects a bona fide occupational qualification.ⁿ¹¹¹

For a detailed discussion relating to prohibited discriminatory practices, see Chapter 41, Parts C, D, and F.

[8] Defenses

It is not unlawful to discriminate on the basis of religion, sex, or national origin under circumstances in which such a classification is a "bona fide occupational qualification reasonably necessary to the normal operation of [a] particular business or enterprise."ⁿ¹¹² Also, employers may apply different standards of compensation, or different terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, pursuant to a bona fide seniority or merit system, or a system that measures quality or quantity of production, or apply such different standards or conditions to employees who work in different locations, as long as such differences are not the result of an intention to discriminate based on a protected classification.ⁿ¹¹³ Employers may also use professionally developed ability tests, provided the tests are not designed, intended, or used to discriminate on the basis of a protected classification.ⁿ¹¹⁴

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

All of these statutory defenses have been narrowly interpreted by the courts, and therefore employers should not take comfort in the expansive language of the statute. As a practical matter, the bona fide occupational-qualification defense insulates only classifications that go to the essence of a "job" (such as wet nurses, sperm donors, or actors/actresses), the bona fide seniority defense insulates seniority systems that are not intentionally discriminatory, and the bona fide ability-testing defenses insulate only tests that do not have an adverse impact on any protected classifications. These defenses are fully discussed in Chapter 41. Commentary by Erica B. Grubb.

Employers may defend against claims of religious discrimination by demonstrating that they cannot reasonably accommodate an individual's religious observance or practice without undue hardship on the conduct of the employer's business.ⁿ¹¹⁵ Also, it is not unlawful discrimination for educational institutions to employ individuals of a particular religion if the institution is, in whole or substantial part, owned, supported, controlled, or managed by a particular religion, or by a particular religious corporation, association, or society, or if the curriculum is directed toward the propagation of a particular religion.ⁿ¹¹⁶ It is also not unlawful to discriminate against Communists,ⁿ¹¹⁷ or individuals who have not fulfilled requirements imposed in the interest of national security.ⁿ¹¹⁸

An employer is not liable under Title VII if he or she acted in good faith, in conformity with, and in reliance on, any written interpretation of opinion of the EEOC.ⁿ¹¹⁹ It is also not unlawful for an employer to differentiate on the basis of sex in determining the amount of wages or compensation paid or to be paid to employees if the differentiation is authorized by the federal Equal Pay Act.ⁿ¹²⁰ Differentiations authorized by the federal Equal Pay Act are discussed in § 40.22[6].

Substantive defenses to employment discrimination are discussed in detail in Chapter 41, Part E.

[9] Anti-SLAPP Motions

A federal civil rights claim brought in a California state court is subject to a special motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 to strike a cause of action against a person arising from any act of that person in furtherance of the person's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution, in connection with a public issue.ⁿ¹²¹ When a defendant makes a threshold showing that a cause of action arises from speech or conduct protected under § 425.16, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to show a probability of prevailing on the merits at trial.ⁿ¹²² The plaintiff must show the complaint is legally sufficient and supported by a sufficient prima facie showing of facts to sustain a favorable judgment at trial.ⁿ¹²³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws Statutory Application Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2000e-17.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)-(d) ("unlawful employment practices" prohibited).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e(b), 2000e-2(a); the term "employer" in Title VII includes employers' agents (42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b)); see Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 718 n.33, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657; Morgan v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1214; see also discussion in [4] below.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(b); see also discussion in [4], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(d); see also discussion in [7], below.

(n7)Footnote 7. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2.

(n8)Footnote 8. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16.

(n9)Footnote 9. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-4, 2000e-5.

(n10)Footnote 10. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-12(a); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.1 et seq.

(n11)Footnote 11. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.1-1604.11 (guidelines on sex discrimination), 1605.1-1605.3 (guidelines on religious discrimination), 1606.1-1606.8 (guidelines on national origin discrimination), 1607.1-1607.18 (uniform guidelines on employee selection procedure).

(n12)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-7; see California Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613, 629-630 fn. 29. ("permit" under 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-7 means to sanction expressly; thus, state laws that are silent on a particular practice do not "require" or "permit" it and therefore are not preempted).

(n13)Footnote 13. See California Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613, 623. (FEHA provision requiring employers to provide leave and reinstatement to pregnant employees (see Gov. Code § 12945(a)) is not preempted by Title VII).

(n14)Footnote 14. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(c); California Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613, 625 fn. 13 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Gov. Code §§ 12900-12996.

(n16)Footnote 16. See discussion in § 40.10.

(n17)Footnote 17. See discussion in [3], below.

(n18)Footnote 18. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-4 (creation, membership, and powers of EEOC).

(n19)Footnote 19. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(a); see 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2 (unlawful employment practices), 2000e-3 (retaliation).

(n20)Footnote 20. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(a); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.7-1601.9, 1601.11, 1601.12.

(n21)Footnote 21. See discussion in § 40.10.

(n22)Footnote 22. See discussion in § 40.13.

(n23)Footnote 23. See § 40.10[2].

(n24)Footnote 24. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(c); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.13; New York Gaslight Club, Inc. v. Carey (1980) 447 U.S. 54, 65, 100 S. Ct. 2024, 64 L. Ed. 2d 723 (Title VII proceedings before EEOC and federal courts supplement available state remedies for employment discrimination); see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.70-1601.80 (procedures for designating state and local fair employment practice agencies as "deferral agencies" under 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(c)). The DFEH is a certified "deferral" or "FEP agency." See 29 C.F.R. § 1601.80.

(n25)Footnote 25. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 5.4.

(n26)Footnote 26. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(d).

(n27)Footnote 27. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-5(b), 2000e-8 (investigations), 2000e-9 (29 U.S.C. § 161, governing investigatory powers of National Labor Relations Board, applies to EEOC investigations and hearings); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.15-1601.17.

(n28)Footnote 28. See 29 C.F.R. § 1601.21 (procedure and authority for reasonable-cause determination); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1601.20 (EEOC empowered to encourage parties to settle prior to issuance of reasonable-cause determination).

(n29)Footnote 29. See 29 C.F.R. § 1601.24 (procedure and authority for conciliation).

(n30)Footnote 30. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(b); see Edwards v. North American Rockwell Corp. (C. D. Cal. 1968) 291 F. Supp. 199, 203 (primary purpose in setting up EEOC is to establish method of eliminating unlawful employment practices through conference, conciliation, and persuasion without necessity of instituting civil actions).

(n31)Footnote 31. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.23; see also Wagner v. Taylor (D.C. Cir. 1987) 836 F.2d 566, 572-574 (42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(2) does not foreclose individual claimants from seeking interim injunctive relief to preserve status quo and to prevent retaliation while administrative process is advancing).

(n32)Footnote 32. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(b); see 29 C.F.R. § 1601.18.

(n33)Footnote 33. See 29 C.F.R. § 1601.25 (notice requirement when EEOC is unable to obtain conciliation).

(n34)Footnote 34. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.27.

(n35)Footnote 35. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1).

(n36)Footnote 36. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-6(a), (c)-(e); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-6(b) (exclusive jurisdiction of federal courts).

(n37)Footnote 37. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 1601.28 (notice of right to sue); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(a) (EEOC required to dismiss charge if it determines there is no reasonable cause to believe charge is true); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(3) (exclusive jurisdiction of federal courts).

(n38)Footnote 38. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g); see also Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 421, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (courts have only limited discretion to deny back pay to prevailing Title VII plaintiffs).

(n39)Footnote 39. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981a; see Pavon v. Swift Transp. Co. (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 902 (Title VII's damage cap does not limit damages under theories such as 42 U.S.C. § 1981 and state common law claims; excess damages over statutory maximum could be attributed to non-Title VII claims).

(n40)Footnote 40. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(k).

(n41)Footnote 41. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b); Goldman v. Wilsey Foods, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1096, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294 (Title VII allegation that employer is corporation regularly employing five or more persons was subject to demurrer); Childs v. Local 18, Intern. Broth. of Elec. Wkrs. (9th Cir. 1983) 719 F.2d 1379, 1382 (using four-prong test to determine whether two employing entities constitute single employer under 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b)); see also Kang v. U. Lim America, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 296 F.3d 810, 814-816 (using Childs test to determine that Title VII applied to two companies employing American and Mexican workers, respectively, in Tijuana shared facilities was integrated enterprise; fact that some employees of integrated enterprise were not covered by federal antidiscrimination law did not preclude counting them as employees for purpose of determining Title VII coverage); Morgan v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1213 (using Childs test to determine that employer and credit union should not be consolidated for Title VII purposes).

(n42)Footnote 41.0.1. See [c], below.

(n43)Footnote 41.1. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(a).

(n44)Footnote 42. Arbaugh v. Y & H Corp. (2006) 126 S. Ct. 1235 .

(n45)Footnote 42.1. EEOC v. Pac. Mar. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 1270, 1275 . See Swallows v. Barnes & Noble Book Stores, Inc. (6th Cir. 1997) 128 F.3d 990, 993 n.4 , citing NLRB v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of Pa. (3d Cir. 1982) 691 F.2d 1117, 1123 ; Wynn v. NBC (C.D. Cal. 2002) 234 F. Supp. 2d 1067, 1093 .

(n46)Footnote 42.2. EEOC v. Pac. Mar. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 1270, 1275-1276 ; see 29 C.F.R. § 500.20(h)(4)(ii) (regulation implementing Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Workers Protection Act, listing factors to consider in determining whether entity or person is joint employer; list is not exhaustive); Bonnette v. California Health and Welfare Agency (9th Cir. 1983) 704 F.2d 1465 ("economic reality" test). See also Clackamas Gastroenterology Assocs. v. Wells (2003) 538 U.S. 440, 123 S. Ct. 1673, 1680, 155 L. Ed. 2d 615 (six factors relevant to whether shareholder-director is employee for purposes of federal antidiscrimination statutes, quoting EEOC Compliance Manual § 605:0009, discussed at § 40.22A[3]).

(n47)Footnote 42.3. 29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n48)Footnote 42.4. EEOC v. Pac. Mar. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 1270, 1276-1277 .

(n49)Footnote 42.5. EEOC v. Pac. Mar. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 1270 .

(n50)Footnote 42.6. EEOC v. Pac. Mar. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 1270, 1277 .

(n51)Footnote 43. Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 718 n.33, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 (pension fund contributions); EEOC v. Pac. Mar. Ass'n (9th Cir. 2003) 351 F.3d 1270, 1274 (non-profit association of stevedoring and shipping companies that performs organizational tasks on behalf of its members, negotiates collective bargaining agreement, operates dispatch hall jointly with union and provides payroll service for member companies is not employer for Title VII purposes of longshore worker, where association does not supervise longshore workers, has no power to hire or fire or discipline them, and does not supervise work sites of its member-employers, which is within sole province of member-employer); Anderson v. Pacific Maritime Association (9th Cir. 2003) 336 F.3d 924 , (non-profit association of stevedoring and shipping companies that employed plaintiffs, which was bargaining agent for plaintiffs' employers with plaintiffs' union, where association did not exercise control over work environment plaintiffs claimed was hostile, and association's purported failure to remedy situation did not amount to interference with plaintiffs' employment relationship with their employers); Morgan v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1214 (credit union).

(n52)Footnote 44. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b); Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 718 n.33, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 (employer cannot avoid liability by delegating discriminatory programs to third parties); Morgan v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1214 (same).

(n53)Footnote 45. See Morgan v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1214-1215 (holding employer not liable for discriminatory insurance program offered by its credit union because employer did not specify program terms, did not require its employees to secure insurance, did not establish any conditions for receiving credit union benefits, and did not develop program terms in coordination with credit union).

(n54)Footnote 46. See Morgan v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1214-1215 .

(n55)Footnote 47. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(b).

(n56)Footnote 48. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(c); see Brush v. San Francisco Newspaper Printing Company (N.D. Cal. 1970) 315 F. Supp. 577, 580 , aff'd, 469 F.2d 89 (9th Cir. 1972) , cert. denied, 410 U.S. 943 (employment agency "regularly undertaking" to procure employees or employment opportunities is one that is engaged to significant degree in that kind of activity as its profession or business).

(n57)Footnote 49. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e(c) ("labor organization" defined), 2000e-2(c).

(n58)Footnote 50. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b).

(n59)Footnote 51. See Walters v. Metropolitan Educ. Enters. (1997) 519 U.S. 202, 117 S. Ct. 660, 136 L. Ed. 2d 644 .

(n60)Footnote 52. See Walters v. Metropolitan Educ. Enters. (1997) 519 U.S. 202, 117 S. Ct. 660, 136 L. Ed. 2d 644 .

(n61)Footnote 53. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(a).

(n62)Footnote 54. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(f); see also [5], below. Employers are exempt from liability under Title VII, however, if compliance at a workplace located outside the United States would violate the laws of the country in which workplace is located. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(b),(c). For further discussion, see ch. 41, pt. E.

(n63)Footnote 55. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(a). Under the religious exemption in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(a), religious institutions or organizations may base relevant hiring decisions on religious preferences, but they may not make such decisions based on race, sex, or national origin. Rayburn v. General Conf. of Seventh-Day Adventists (4th Cir. 1985) 772 F.2d 1164, 1166 ; E.E.O.C. v. Pacific Press Pub. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1982) 676 F.2d 1272, 1277 . For further discussion, see ch. 41, pt. E.

(n64)Footnote 56. See E.E.O.C. v. Townley Eng'g & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 619 . For a full discussion of the religious exemption as a substantive defense, see ch. 41, pt. F.

(n65)Footnote 57. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b).

(n66)Footnote 58. Dawavendewa v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement & Power District (9th Cir. 2001) 276 F.3d 1150, 1159 n.9 (pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b), Indian tribes are specifically exempt from requirements of Title VII); Pink v. Modoc Indian Health Project, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 1185, 1188-1189 (nonprofit organization incorporated by two recognized Indian tribes is "tribe" for purposes of Title VII exemption; Indian corporation did not waive its immunity by performing services off reservation).

(n67)Footnote 59. See 5 U.S.C. § 2102 ("competitive service" defined).

(n68)Footnote 60. See 26 U.S.C. § 501(c) (list of tax-exempt organizations).

(n69)Footnote 61. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b).

(n70)Footnote 62. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(g); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(i) ("state" includes any state of the United States, District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, Wake Island, Canal Zone, and Outer Continental Shelf lands defined in Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act).

(n71)Footnote 63. See 29 U.S.C. § 401 et seq. The definitions of "industry affecting commerce" under Title VII and the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act are identical, and the latter specifies that the term includes any activity within the meaning of the Labor Management Relations Act (see 29 U.S.C. § 141 et seq.) or the Railway Labor Act (see 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.). See 29 U.S.C. § 402(c). The definition of "industry affecting commerce" in the Labor Management Relations Act is also essentially identical to Title VII. See 29 U.S.C. § 142(1). However, there is no definition of the term in the Railway Labor Act.

(n72)Footnote 64. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(h).

(n73)Footnote 65. Martin v. United Way of Erie County (3d Cir. 1987) 829 F.2d 445, 447-449 .

(n74)Footnote 66. Polish Nat'l Alliance v. National Labor Rel. Bd. (1944) 322 U.S. 643, 88 L. Ed. 1509 .

(n75)Footnote 67. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 151-168; see also E.E.O.C. v. California Teachers Ass'n (N.D. Cal. 1982) 534 F. Supp. 209, 218 (Title VII and National Labor Relations Act are closely related, and contain similar definitions of "commerce" and "industry affecting commerce").

(n76)Footnote 68. Polish Nat'l Alliance v. National Labor Rel. Bd. (1944) 322 U.S. 643, 647, 88 L. Ed. 1509 .

(n77)Footnote 69. Polish Nat'l Alliance v. National Labor Rel. Bd. (1944) 322 U.S. 643, 648, 88 L. Ed. 1509 .

(n78)Footnote 70. Polish Nat'l Alliance v. National Labor Rel. Bd. (1944) 322 U.S. 643, 648, 88 L. Ed. 1509 ; see also Martin v. United Way of Erie County (3d Cir. 1987) 829 F.2d 445, 449-450 (applying Polish Nat'l Alliance and other cases in determining whether charitable organization is engaged in industry that affects commerce within meaning of Title VII and ADEA).

(n79)Footnote 71. E.E.O.C. v. Ratliff (9th Cir. 1990) 906 F.2d 1314, 1316 .

(n80)Footnote 71.1. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(c)(1).

(n81)Footnote 71.2. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 882 . See Pejic v. Hughes Helicopters (9th Cir. 1988) Inc. 840 F.2d 667, 671-674 .

(n82)Footnote 71.3. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (1973) . For discussion of the McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting test in disparate treatment cases generally, see § 41.11, and in disparate impact cases generally, see § 41.20.

(n83)Footnote 71.4. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 882 . See Pejic v. Hughes Helicopters, Inc., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 840 F.2d 667, 674 .

(n84)Footnote 71.5. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 882-883 . See Pejic v. Hughes Helicopters, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 840 F.2d 667, 674 ; Gay v. Waiters' & Dairy Lunchmen's Union (9th Cir. 1982) 694 F.2d 531, 537 .

(n85)Footnote 71.6. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 883 . See Pejic v. Hughes Helicopters, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 840 F.2d 667, 674 .

(n86)Footnote 71.7. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 883 . See St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 507, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 .

(n87)Footnote 71.8. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 883 . See Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Prods., Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 142-143, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 ; St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 510, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 .

(n88)Footnote 71.9. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 883 . See St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 508, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 .

(n89)Footnote 71.10. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 884 . See also Goodman v. Lukens Steel Co. (1987) 482 U.S. 656, 107 S. Ct. 2617, 96 L. Ed. 2d 572 (Title VII plaintiff need not show union had negative animus toward protected class) ; Gay v. Waiters' & Dairy Lunchmen's Union (9th Cir. 1982) 694 F.2d 531, 537 ; Bugg v. Int'l Union of Allied Indus. Workers of Am., 674 F.2d 595 (7th Cir. 1982) ; EEOC v. Reynolds Metals Co. (E.D. Va. 2002) 212 F. Supp. 2d 530, 539-40 .

(n90)Footnote 71.11. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 883 . See Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Prods., Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 147, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 ; St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 511, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 .

(n91)Footnote 71.12. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 883 . See Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Prods., Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 148, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 ; St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 524, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 .

(n92)Footnote 71.13. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 883 . See Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 100, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84 (2003) ; USPS Bd. of Governors v. Aikens (1983) 460 U.S. 711, 716, 103 S. Ct. 1478, 75 L. Ed. 2d 403 ; Cornwell v. Electra Cent. Credit Union (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 1018, 1030 .

(n93)Footnote 71.14. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 883-884 . See, e.g., McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 282, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 (plaintiff can establish Title VII violation based on evidence that two white employees were discharged for their alleged participation in misappropriation of cargo but fellow nonwhite employee was not).

(n94)Footnote 71.15. Beck v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 2007) 506 F.3d 874, 884-885 .

(n95)Footnote 72. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(f); see also E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1517 n.10 (assuming without deciding that undocumented alien workers were "individuals" entitled to Title VII protections).

(n96)Footnote 73. See [4], above.

(n97)Footnote 74. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (unlawful employment practice includes failure or refusal to hire based on protected classification), (2) (unlawful employment practice includes limiting, segregating, or classifying employees or applicants for employment).

(n98)Footnote 75. See Robinson v. Shell Oil Co. (1997) 519 U.S. 337, 341-342, 117 S. Ct. 843, 136 L. Ed. 2d 808 (former employee may sue for postemployment retaliation); Hackett v. McGuire Bros., Inc. (3d Cir. 1971) 445 F.2d 442, 446 .

(n99)Footnote 76. See Sibley Memorial Hosp. v. Wilson (D.C. Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 1338, 1341 ; see also Hishon v. King & Spalding (1984) 467 U.S. 69, 74 n.5, 104 S. Ct. 2229, 81 L. Ed. 2d 59 (reserving question whether Title VII applies to partners in law firm).

(n100)Footnote 77. Sibley Memorial Hosp. v. Wilson (D.C. Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 1338 .

(n101)Footnote 78. See Sibley Memorial Hosp. v. Wilson (D.C. Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 1338, 1339 .

(n102)Footnote 79. Sibley Memorial Hosp. v. Wilson (D.C. Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 1338, 1341 ; see also Baker v. McNeil Island Corrections Ctr. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 124, 128 (noting that pursuant to EEOC's notice of policy statement, Title VII applies to work-release prisoners in their relationship with prison; prison is third party with ability to control or interfere with prisoner's employment opportunities).

(n103)Footnote 80. See Sibley Memorial Hosp. v. Wilson (D.C. Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 1338, 1341 .

(n104)Footnote 81. See Sibley Memorial Hosp. v. Wilson (D.C. Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 1338, 1341 .

(n105)Footnote 82. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(b).

(n106)Footnote 83. See Sibley Memorial Hosp. v. Wilson (D.C. Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 1338, 1341 .

(n107)Footnote 84. See Sibley Memorial Hosp. v. Wilson (D.C. Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 1338, 1341 .

(n108)Footnote 85. See Gomez v. Alexian Bros. Hosp. of San Jose (9th Cir. 1983) 698 F.2d 1019, 1021 ; Lutcher v. Musicians Union Local 47 (9th Cir 1980) 633 F.2d 880, 883 .

(n109)Footnote 86. Gomez v. Alexian Bros. Hosp. of San Jose (9th Cir. 1983) 698 F.2d 1019 .

(n110)Footnote 87. Lutcher v. Musicians Union Local 47 (9th Cir 1980) 633 F.2d 880, 883 .

(n111)Footnote 88. See Gomez v. Alexian Bros. Hosp. of San Jose (9th Cir. 1983) 698 F.2d 1019, 1021 ; Lutcher v. Musicians Union Local 47 (9th Cir 1980) 633 F.2d 880, 883 n.3 ; but see Mitchell v. Frank R. Howard Memorial Hosp. (9th Cir. 1988) 853 F.2d 762, 767 (physician's allegations that hospital interfered with his relationships with patients failed to state Lutcher Title VII claim because patient-physician relationship is not one of employer-employee).

(n112)Footnote 89. Adcock v. Chrysler Corp. (9th Cir.1999) 166 F.3d 1290, 1292 ; Lutcher v. Musicians Union Local 47 (9th Cir. 1980) 633 F.2d 880, 883 .

(n113)Footnote 90. See Smith v. Dutra Trucking Co. (N.D. Cal. 1976) 410 F. Supp. 513, 515-516 , aff'd, 580 F.2d 1054 (9th Cir. 1978) (no indication that Congress intended to construe "employee" in any manner other than in accordance with common-law agency principles).

(n114)Footnote 91. Smith v. Dutra Trucking Co. (N.D. Cal. 1976) 410 F. Supp. 513, 516 , aff'd, 580 F.2d 1054 (9th Cir. 1978) ; see also E.E.O.C. v. Zippo Mfg. Co. (3d Cir. 1983) 713 F.2d 32, 36 (decided under ADEA).

(n115)Footnote 92. See, e.g., E.E.O.C. v. Zippo Mfg. Co. (3d Cir. 1983) 713 F.2d 32, 36 ; Spirides v. Reinhardt (D.C. Cir. 1979) 613 F.2d 826, 831-832 ; EEOC Policy Statement on Title VII Coverage of Independent Contractors and Independent Businesses (Sept. 4, 1987) (both endorsing a hybrid test of employee status, which is based on both the common-law test and a more liberal "economic realities" test); but see Adcock v. Chrysler Corp. (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1290, 1292 n.3 (common law agency approach essentially indistinguishable from multi-factor approach).

(n116)Footnote 93. Adcock v. Chrysler Corp. (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1290, 1292, 1292 n.3 (overwhelming majority of factors established car dealership franchise agreement as contract not employment relationship subject to Title VII; court applied Lutcher multi-factor approach because precise question was whether agreement would constitute employment relationship rather than definition of employee).

(n117)Footnote 94. Adcock v. Chrysler Corp. (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1290 .

(n118)Footnote 95. See Spirides v. Reinhardt (D.C. Cir. 1979) 613 F.2d 826, 831-832 ; see also Mitchell v. Frank R. Howard Memorial Hosp. (9th Cir. 1988) 853 F.2d 762, 766 .

(n119)Footnote 96. See, e.g., Lutcher v. Musicians Union Local 47 (9th Cir. 1980) 633 F.2d 880, 883 (upholding independent contractor status of musician who performed concerts for school district but was responsible for employing, equipping, transporting, and controlling the members of his group).

(n120)Footnote 97. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(a); see [4], above. The statutory exclusion of religious organization employees only applies to discrimination based on religious preference. Such employees are protected from discrimination based on race, sex, or national origin. See Rayburn v. General Conf. of Seventh-Day Adventists (4th Cir. 1985) 772 F.2d 1164, 1166 ; E.E.O.C. v. Pacific Press Pub. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1982) 676 F.2d 1272, 1277 . For further discussion, see ch. 41, pt. E.

(n121)Footnote 98. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(f); but see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(b),(c) (under certain circumstances, employer not liable under Title VII if compliance would violate laws of foreign country where workplace is located), discussed in ch. 41, pt. E.

(n122)Footnote 99. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(f). However, employees subject to state civil service laws are not included in this exemption. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(f).

(n123)Footnote 100. See Hodge v. Dalton (9th Cir. 1997) 107 F.3d 705 , cert. denied, 139 L. Ed. 2d 25 (1997) .

(n124)Footnote 101. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2(a)-(d).

(n125)Footnote 102. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j) ("religion" defined as including all aspects of religious observance and practice, as well as belief); see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1605.1-1605.3 (guidelines on religious discrimination).

(n126)Footnote 103. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.1-1604.11 (guidelines on sex discrimination).

(n127)Footnote 104. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1606.1-1606.8 (guidelines on national origin discrimination).

(n128)Footnote 105. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k) (Pregnancy Discrimination Act).

(n129)Footnote 106. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.4(a).

(n130)Footnote 107. See Hishon v. King & Spalding (1984) 467 U.S. 69, 77, 104 S. Ct. 2229, 81 L. Ed. 2d 59 (benefit denied need not be employment; it need only be a term, condition, or privilege of employment).

(n131)Footnote 108. 42 U.S.C. 2000e-2(a)-(c); see Gomez v. Alexian Bros. Hosp. of San Jose (9th Cir. 1983) 698 F.2d 1019, 1021 (employer covered by Title VII prohibited from discriminatorily interfering with individual's employment opportunities with another employer); Sibley Memorial Hosp. v. Wilson (D.C. Cir. 1973) 488 F.2d 1338, 1341 (same); see also [5], above.

(n132)Footnote 109. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(d).

(n133)Footnote 110. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a).

(n134)Footnote 111. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(b); see 29 C.F.R. § 1604.5 (sex discrimination); see also [8], below.

(n135)Footnote 112. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.2(a) (EEOC interprets exception narrowly with respect to sex discrimination), 1606.4 (same; national origin); see also Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 334, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 (sex discrimination; BFOQ exception meant to be extremely narrow); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(b) (bona fide occupational qualification defense with respect to discriminatory advertising).

(n136)Footnote 113. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h). See also Lorance v. AT&T Technologies, Inc. (1989) 490 U.S. 900, 908, 109 S. Ct. 2261, 104 L. Ed. 2d 961 (42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h) not regarded as defense, but as provision that delineates which employment practices relating to seniority systems are illegal and thereby prohibited, and which are not); See also ch. 41, pt. E.

(n137)Footnote 114. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h).

(n138)Footnote 115. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j); see 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2 (clarification of "reasonable accommodation" requirement).

(n139)Footnote 116. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e).

(n140)Footnote 117. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(f).

(n141)Footnote 118. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(g); 29 C.F.R. § 1606.3 (national origin).

(n142)Footnote 119. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-12(b).

(n143)Footnote 120. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h); see 29 U.S.C. § 206(d) (Equal Pay Act).

(n144)Footnote 121. Vergos v. McNeal (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1392 n.4, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647 ; Bradbury v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1117-1118, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207 . For discussion of Vergos, see § 40.26[9].

(n145)Footnote 122. Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b); Navellier v. Sletten (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 82, 88, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530, 52 P.3d 703 . See Vergos v. McNeal (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1400-1404, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647 (because defendant was employee, she was not liable to plaintiff under title VII).

(n146)Footnote 123. Navellier v. Sletten (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 82, 93, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 530, 52 P.3d 703 .

14 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.21

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.21 Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

The Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA)ⁿ¹ prohibits employment discrimination based on age with respect to individuals who are at least 40 years old.ⁿ²

The substantive provisions of the ADEA are similar to the substantive provisions in Title VII.ⁿ³ Like Title VII, the ADEA prohibits discrimination by employers,ⁿ⁴ employment agencies,ⁿ⁵ and labor organizationsⁿ⁶ and apprenticeship programs.ⁿ⁷ Age discrimination by federal employers is prohibited by a separate provision in the ADEA.ⁿ⁸

Specific prohibited employment practices are discussed in [5], below.

The ADEA provides that the EEOC may issue such rules and regulations as it may consider necessary or appropriate to carry out the ADEA.ⁿ⁹ Accordingly, the EEOC has promulgated federal regulations interpreting and implementing the ADEA.ⁿ¹⁰

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

The EEOC enforces the ADEA pursuant to different procedures than those that govern Title VII. By statute, the EEOC investigates claims, promulgates recordkeeping requirements, and enforces the ADEA in accordance with the powers, remedies, and procedures provided in the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).ⁿ¹¹ The ADEA also provides that any act prohibited by the ADEA is deemed a prohibited act under the FLSA.ⁿ¹² For full discussion of the enforcement provisions of the FLSA, see Chapter 5.

An EEOC investigation under the ADEA is initiated by a "charge" filed with the EEOC alleging age discrimination.ⁿ¹³ When the EEOC receives the charge, it must promptly notify all persons named as prospective defendants, and it must investigate and promptly seek to eliminate any unlawful practices by informal methods of conciliation.ⁿ¹⁴ A notice regarding conciliation is not a Notice of Dismissal and Termination for purposes of bringing a civil action.^{n14.1} A civil action may be brought under the ADEA by either the EEOCⁿ¹⁵ or an aggrieved individual,ⁿ¹⁶ but an individual may not bring a civil action until 60 days after filing an EEOC charge.ⁿ¹⁷ Also, the individual's private right of action terminates on commencement of an EEOC civil action.ⁿ¹⁸

Before the EEOC institutes a civil action, it must attempt to eliminate the alleged discrimination and to effect voluntary compliance with the ADEA through informal methods of conciliation, conference, and persuasion.ⁿ¹⁹ For further discussion relating to EEOC investigations, conciliation, and civil actions, see Chapter 42, Part C.

Employers who violate the ADEA may be compelled to employ, reinstate, or promote an aggrieved individual, or may be liable for monetary damages.ⁿ²⁰ If the violation is "willful," the employer may be liable for liquidated damages amounting to twice the actual damages.ⁿ²¹ Employers may also be liable for reasonable attorney's fees and costs.ⁿ²² However, according to the weight of case authority, exemplary, punitive, and compensatory damages are not recoverable.ⁿ²³ Federal courts do have jurisdiction to issue injunctions against ADEA violations.ⁿ²⁴ For a detailed discussion relating to relief available in civil actions under the ADEA, see Chapter 43, Part B.

Employers who forcibly resist, oppose, impede, intimidate, or interfere with an EEOC representative engaged in the performance of its duties under the ADEA may also be subject to criminal penalties.ⁿ²⁵

The ADEA, as amended by Title II of the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990 (OWBPA)ⁿ²⁶ generally provides that an individual may waive any right or claim under the ADEA if the waiver is knowingly and voluntarily made.ⁿ²⁷ For example, to qualify as "knowing and voluntary," a waiver included in an agreement between an employer and its employees must, among other things, be written in a manner calculated to be understood by the average employee eligible to participate in the agreement.^{n27.1} Specifically, an individual may agree to waive ADEA rights in settlement of a charge filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), or an action filed in court by the individual or the individual's representative.ⁿ²⁸ The OWBPA provides that the individual must be given a reasonable period of time within which to consider the settlement agreement,ⁿ²⁹ and lists several other specified minimum requirements for a knowingly and voluntarily made waiver.ⁿ³⁰ However, no waiver agreement may affect the EEOC's rights and responsibilities to enforce the ADEA. In addition, no waiver may be used to justify interfering with the protected right of an employee to file a charge or participate in an investigation or proceeding conducted by the EEOC.ⁿ³¹

For a detailed discussion relating to the minimum requirements for a knowingly and voluntarily made waiver, see ch. 41, pt. D.

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

The ADEA applies to all employers, public or private, who affect commerce and have more than 20 employees.ⁿ³² The ADEA defines "employers" as persons engaged in an industry that affects commerce and who have 20 or more employees for each working day in each of 20 or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year.ⁿ³³ Agents of "employers," states and their political subdivisions, and state and interstate agencies are also "employers."ⁿ³⁴ The definition of "person" includes one or more individuals, partnerships, associations, labor organizations, corporations, business trusts, or any organized groups of persons.ⁿ³⁵ The definitions of the terms "commerce" and "industry affecting commerce" in the ADEA are essentially identical to the same terms under Title VII.ⁿ³⁶ For a detailed discussion of those terms, see § 40.20[4][b].

The ADEA also applies to employers that control corporations incorporated in a foreign country who unlawfully discriminate on the basis of age.ⁿ³⁷ The determination of whether an employer controls a foreign corporation is based on the (1) interrelation of operations, (2) common management, (3) centralized control of labor relations, and (4) common ownership or financial control of the employer and the corporation.ⁿ³⁸

As discussed in [1], above, employment agencies are also covered by the ADEA. An "employment agency" covered by the ADEA is any person, or that person's agent, who regularly undertakes, with or without compensation, to procure employees for an employer,ⁿ³⁹ whether or not the employer is covered.ⁿ⁴⁰ The ADEA also applies to all apprenticeship programs, including those created or maintained by joint labor-management organizations.ⁿ⁴¹

Further, pension trust funds established or maintained by employers and unions together are covered by the ADEA.ⁿ⁴² The ADEA bars "an employer, an employment agency, a labor organization, or any combination thereof" from establishing or maintaining an employee pension plan that, in the context of a defined benefit plan, requires or permits the cessation of an employee's benefit accrual or a reduced rate of benefit accrual based on age.ⁿ⁴³ In a case of first impression, the Ninth Circuit construed this language to cover pension trust funds established or maintained by employers and unions together.ⁿ⁴⁴

A plaintiff can sue a labor union in its capacity as an employer, but the statutory definition of employer must be satisfied rather than the definition of a labor organization,ⁿ⁴⁵ which is also subject to suit under the ADEA, but under a different standard.ⁿ⁴⁶ In addition, when counting the number of employees employed by a local union for purposes of meeting the definition of employer under the ADEA, the plaintiff cannot aggregate the number of employees employed by the local union with those of the international union without demonstrating that the operations of those entities are sufficiently intertwined.ⁿ⁴⁷ The topic of bringing suit against a union in its capacity as a union under the ADEA is beyond the scope of this chapter.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Herman v. United Brotherhood of Carpenters, Local 971, ⁿ⁴⁸ contains important holdings for union employers and at least one important holding for employers generally.

Local 971 summarily discharged Jeanne Herman on one day's notice after 36 years of employment. Ms. Herman was 68 years old and disabled from childhood polio. She filed a collective bargaining grievance which the union pursued through a portion of the contractually mandated grievance processing stages and then abandoned. Ms. Herman brought claims for breach of contract, age discrimination, disability discrimination under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and variety of state law claims. Despite appealing facts, Ms. Herman fared poorly in court.

The Ninth Circuit held that she could maintain her contract action without exhaustion of the collectively bargained grievance process, because Local 971 had breached its duty of fair representation. The circuit panel, however, dismissed each of the remaining claims. The age claim failed, because the employer (Local 971) had fewer than 20 employees. Thus, even though the Local had certain obligations to its membership that were not dependent upon the size of its workforce, its duties as an employer were directly linked to the 20-person threshold. The Rehabilitation Act claim failed because Local 971 received no federal financial assistance. It received NLRA certification (which was held akin to a "license"), it fell under federal regulation of apprenticeship programs and Davis-Bacon regulation of wages, and it received the benefit of occasional FMCS mediation. None of these activities, however, were deemed an equivalent of financial assistance. Finally, Ms. Herman's state-law claims failed for reasons specific to Nevada law.

Of all these rulings, the one most likely to be relevant to larger, private employers is the reaffirmation that federal licensure and federal regulation are not certain to qualify as surrogates for federal financial assistance. Herman thus follows Jacobson v. Delta Airlines, Inc. ⁿ⁴⁹ This conclusion may appear to have little relevance in light of the greater breadth of the ADA than the ADEA, but defense practitioners are well aware of the difficulties of summary judgment when a plaintiff has multiple causes of action based on the same facts (e.g., both ADA and Rehabilitation Act claims). When it is possible to remove at least one overlapping cause of action based upon a jurisdictional defect, discovery and trial will be that much more manageable. It is, therefore, important that the Circuit panel adhered to precedent to confined the jurisdictional trigger for Rehabilitation Act coverage. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

An "employee" under the ADEA is an individual employed by an employer.ⁿ⁵⁰ The foregoing definition is virtually identical to the definition of "employee" under Title VII,ⁿ⁵¹ and since the ADEA and Title VII have a similar purpose--to eliminate discrimination in various forms--cases construing the definitional provisions of one are persuasive authority when interpreting the other.ⁿ⁵²

Essentially, the ADEA applies to all employees and applicants for employment,ⁿ⁵³ including United States citizens employed by such a covered employer in a workplace in a foreign country.ⁿ⁵⁴ ADEA coverage is not limited to rank-and-file "employees," but may also apply to stockholders, officers, and directors who are also "employees."ⁿ⁵⁵

Members of the boards of directors of nonprofit organizations will not be considered employees within the meaning of the ADA unless they satisfy the criteria for a traditional employer-employee relationship.^{n55.1} In determining whether directors are employees, the court will use the factors delineated by the United States Supreme Court in Clackamas Gastroenterology Associates, P.C. v. Wells:^{n55.2}

- Whether the organization can hire or fire the individual or set the rules and regulations of the individual's work.
- Whether and, if so, to what extent the organization supervises the individual's work.
- Whether the individual reports to someone higher in the organization.
- Whether and, if so, to what extent the individual is able to influence the organization.
- Whether the parties intended that the individual be an employee, as expressed in written agreements or contracts.
- Whether the individual shares in the profits, losses, and liabilities of the organization.

Thus, the members of the board of directors of a nonprofit organization that operated a cable access television station were not employees, because the nonprofit did not hire or fire the directors; the nonprofit did not supervise or regulate the directors' work; the directors did not report to someone higher in the organization in any traditional way; because of their advisory and supervisory function, the directors were in a position to influence the nonprofit; the directors considered themselves volunteers, not employees, and there was no evidence to contradict this or suggest the nonprofit intended otherwise; and whether the directors shared in the profits, losses, and liabilities of the organization was not appropriate to the non-profit setting.^{n55.3} Similarly, independent volunteer producers for the same nonprofit were not employees, because there was no evidence of a traditional employer-employee relationship or master-servant relationship between the nonprofit and the producers.^{n55.4}

There are express statutory and regulatory exemptions to employee coverage under the ADEA. For example, persons elected to public office in any state or state political subdivision, and their personal staff, appointees, and advisors are exempted from the ADEA definition of "employees";ⁿ⁵⁶ however, civil service employees are not covered by this exemption.ⁿ⁵⁷ There are also limited exceptions relating to firefighters and law enforcement officers.ⁿ⁵⁸ Under certain circumstances, the ADEA does not prohibit compulsory retirement of bona fide executives and high policymakers at age 65.ⁿ⁵⁹

The ADEA provides that the EEOC may establish such reasonable exemptions to and from the ADEA as it may find necessary and proper in the public interest.ⁿ⁶⁰

The ADEA also does not apply to individuals properly classified as partners.ⁿ⁶¹ Also, independent contractors are not "employees" under the ADEA and thus are not covered.ⁿ⁶²

Although the ADEA, unlike Title VII,ⁿ⁶³ contains no express provision regarding religious institutions, constitutional issues may arise when the ADEA is applied to the ecclesiastical policies of such institutions. Thus, one court has held that an ADEA claim against a church for denying a minister a promotion to pastorship because of his age violated the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment to the United States Constitution.ⁿ⁶⁴

[5] Prohibited Employment Practices

Like Title VII, the ADEA prohibits discriminatory failure or refusal to hire or refer for employment, discriminatory discharge, and other discriminatory acts, with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of age.ⁿ⁶⁵ It is also unlawful to limit, segregate, or classify an individual over 40 years in any way that would deprive the individual of employment opportunities because of his or her age or otherwise adversely affect his or her status as an employee.ⁿ⁶⁶ In addition, the ADEA prohibits reducing an employee's wage rate in an effort to comply with the ADEA.ⁿ⁶⁷ The ADEA also prohibits age discrimination in help-wanted notices or advertisementsⁿ⁶⁸ and employment applications.ⁿ⁶⁹ Furthermore, retaliation against any individual because of that individual's opposition to unlawful discrimination, or because the individual made a charge, testified, assisted, or participated in an ADEA investigation, proceeding, or litigation, is also prohibited under both the ADEA private-sector provision,ⁿ⁷⁰ and the ADEA federal-sector provision,^{n70.1} which allows federal employees to sue under the ADEA, even though it does not contain the same explicit protection against retaliation as the private-sector provisions of the ADEA,^{n70.2}

The ADEA prohibits not only age discrimination against persons age 40 or older in favor of persons younger than 40,ⁿ⁷¹ but also discrimination between individuals protected by the ADEA.ⁿ⁷² For example, if two individuals over 40 years of age apply for the same job, an employer may be liable for selecting the younger one on the basis of age.ⁿ⁷³

Although bona fide seniority systems and employee benefit plans are not unlawful,ⁿ⁷⁴ they may not excuse the failure to hire, or require or permit the involuntary retirement of, anyone age 40 or older because of age.ⁿ⁷⁵ However, the firing of an employee for the purpose of preventing a pension from vesting, or for some other reason that is correlated with age but is based on years of service as distinct from age, does not violate the ADEA.ⁿ⁷⁶

The ADEA prohibits employers, employment agencies, labor organizations, and any combination from establishing or maintaining an employee pension plan that, in the context of a defined benefit plan, requires or permits the cessation of an employee's benefit accrual or a reduced rate of benefit accrual based on age.ⁿ⁷⁷

For a detailed discussion relating to prohibited discriminatory practices, see Chapter 41, Parts C, D, and F.

[6] Defenses

Practices that are otherwise prohibited by the ADEA are not unlawful when age is a bona fide occupational qualification reasonably necessary to the normal operation of a particular business.ⁿ⁷⁸ Also, such actions may be based on reasonable factors other than age.ⁿ⁷⁹ It is also not unlawful to observe the terms of a bona fide seniority system, or any bona fide employee benefit plan established, modified, or otherwise affected on or after October 16, 1990, in which age-based distinctions are made because of specified cost justifications,ⁿ⁸⁰ or that is a voluntary early retirement incentive plan consistent with the ADEA's purposes.ⁿ⁸¹ Bona fide employee benefit plans established before October 16, 1990 (and not thereafter modified or otherwise affected) are lawful as long as they are not a subterfuge to evade the purposes of the ADEA.ⁿ⁸² Such systems or plans may not unlawfully discriminate in hiring or force the retirement of

anyone protected by the ADEA.ⁿ⁸³

Based on Eleventh Amendment immunity, states cannot be compelled to submit to the jurisdiction of the federal courts in actions under the ADEA.ⁿ⁸⁴ However, a state may waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity on a case-by-case basis by failing to assert the defense and thereby subject itself to suit under the ADEA.ⁿ⁸⁵ If an otherwise prohibited employment practice involves an employee in a workplace in a foreign country, and compliance with the ADEA would cause the employer, or a corporation controlled by the employer, to violate the foreign country's laws, the practice is not unlawful under the ADEA.ⁿ⁸⁶ Also, the ADEA does not apply to practices by corporations incorporated in foreign countries that are not controlled by an American employer.ⁿ⁸⁷ Although an Indian tribe does not enjoy sovereign immunity in ADEA suits brought by the federal government,ⁿ⁸⁸ the ADEA does not apply to Indian tribes.ⁿ⁸⁹

Substantive defenses to employment discrimination are discussed in detail in Chapter 41, Part F.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Age Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Age Discrimination Coverage & Definitions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. §§ 621-634.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 623, 631(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Compare, e.g., 29 U.S.C. § 623 with 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; see Gregory v. Ashcroft (1991) 501 U.S.452, 111 S. Ct. 2395, 115 L. Ed. 2d 410, 428 (appointed state judges); Monce v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 560, 561 (complementary provisions of Title VII and ADEA are construed consistently); Aronsen v. Crown Zellerbach (9th Cir. 1981) 662 F.2d 584, 589, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1200 (1983) (provisions of Title VII, and cases construing them, may be used to interpret ADEA); see also discussion in § 40.20.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 C.F.R. § 1625.21.

(n8)Footnote 8. See 29 U.S.C. § 633a(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 29 U.S.C. § 628.

(n10)Footnote 10. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1625.1-1627.17.

(n11)Footnote 11. 29 U.S.C. § 626(a), (b); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1626.4, 1626.15; see also 29 U.S.C. §§ 209, 211, 216(b)-(d), 217 (investigations, inspections, records, homework regulations, and remedies under FLSA).

(n12)Footnote 12. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(b); see also 29 U.S.C. § 215 (prohibited acts under FLSA).

(n13)Footnote 13. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(d); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1626.5-1626.8.

(n14)Footnote 14. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(d); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1626.11, 1626.12.

(n15)Footnote 14.1. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1626.12, 1626.17.

(n16)Footnote 15. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(a), (b); 29 C.F.R. § 1626.15(d); see also 29 U.S.C. § 216(c) (FLSA); E.E.O.C. v. Pan American World American Airways, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 897 F.2d 1499, 1504 .

(n17)Footnote 16. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(c); 29 C.F.R. § 1626.15(d); see also 29 U.S.C. § 216(b) (individual and class private right of action under FLSA); see also E.E.O.C. v. Pan American World American Airways, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 897 F.2d 1499, 1504-1505 (both ADEA and FLSA authorize private litigation for age discrimination). For a discussion of ADEA class actions, see ch. 43, pt. B.

(n18)Footnote 17. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(d); 29 C.F.R. § 1626.7(a).

(n19)Footnote 18. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(c); see also E.E.O.C. v. Pan American World American Airways, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 897 F.2d 1499, 1505 & n.4, 1506 & n.6, 1508 ("commencement" means filing of complaint; due process does not require EEOC to notify claimants that they have lost their right to bring private actions).

(n20)Footnote 19. 29 U.S.C. § 626(b); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1626.12, 1626.15(b) (conciliation commences when EEOC has reasonable basis to conclude that an ADEA violation has occurred or will occur).

(n21)Footnote 20. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(b); see also 29 U.S.C. § 216(b) (FLSA).

(n22)Footnote 21. 29 U.S.C. § 626(b); see also 29 U.S.C. § 216(b) (FLSA). For a discussion of the difference between intentional and "willful" for purposes of the ADEA, see Chapter 43, Part B.

(n23)Footnote 22. See 29 U.S.C. § 216(b).

(n24)Footnote 23. Naton v. Bank of California (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1981) 649 F.2d 691, 699 .

(n25)Footnote 24. See 29 U.S.C. § 217; see also 29 U.S.C. § 626(b) (ADEA enforced in accordance with 29 U.S.C. § 217; courts have jurisdiction to grant such legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to effectuate purposes of ADEA); see also EEOC v. Pan American World American Airways, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 897 F.2d 1499, 1505 .

(n26)Footnote 25. See 29 U.S.C. § 629.

(n27)Footnote 26. See Pub. L. No. 101-433m §§ 201-202.

(n28)Footnote 27. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1).

(n29)Footnote 27.1. 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1)(A). See also Syverson v. Int'l Bus. Machines Corp. (9th Cir. 2006) 461 F.3d 1147, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 22504, *7-*39 (waiver form used by employer in connection with severance benefit package for reduction in force did not satisfy "manner calculated" requirement of OWBPA).

(n30)Footnote 28. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(2).

(n31)Footnote 29. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(2)(B).

(n32)Footnote 30. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1)(A)-(E), (2)(A).

(n33)Footnote 31. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(4).

(n34)Footnote 32. See Action Alliance of Senior Citizens v. Heckler (D.C. Cir. 1986) 789 F.2d 931, 934 fn. 1 (dictum; distinguishing Age Discrimination Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 6101-6107, which prohibits age discrimination with regard to any type of benefit in federally assisted programs, from ADEA).

(n35)Footnote 33. 29 U.S.C. § 630(b).

(n36)Footnote 34. See 29 U.S.C. § 630(b); see also EEOC v. Wyoming (1983) 460 U.S. 226, 243, 103 S. Ct. 1054, 75 L. Ed. 2d 18 (extension of ADEA to state and local governments is constitutional); E.E.O.C. v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1983) 706 F.2d 1039, 1040, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1073 (1984) (same); but see Kimel v. Florida Bd. of Regents (2000) 528 U.S. 62, 85-87, 120 S. Ct. 631, 145 L. Ed. 2d 522 (ADEA's purported abrogation of states' sovereign immunity is invalid).

(n37)Footnote 35. 29 U.S.C. § 630(a).

(n38)Footnote 36. Compare 29 U.S.C. § 630(g), (h), with 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(g), (h) ("industry affecting commerce" under Title VII includes any governmental industry, business, or activity).

(n39)Footnote 37. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(h)(1).

(n40)Footnote 38. 29 U.S.C. § 623(h)(3).

(n41)Footnote 39. 29 U.S.C. § 630(c).

(n42)Footnote 40. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.3(a).

(n43)Footnote 41. 29 C.F.R. § 1625.21.

(n44)Footnote 42. Lee v. California Butchers' Pension Trust Fund (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 1075, 1078-1079.

(n45)Footnote 43. 29 U.S.C. § 623(i)(1).

(n46)Footnote 44. Lee v. California Butchers' Pension Trust Fund (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 1075, 1078-1079 (identifying similar holdings under Title VII and ADA).

(n47)Footnote 45. See 29 U.S.C. § 630(d).

(n48)Footnote 46. See Herman v. United Broth. of Carpenters (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1375, 1384-1385.

(n49)Footnote 47. See Herman v. United Broth. of Carpenters (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1375, 1385.

(n50)Footnote 48. Herman v. United Broth. of Carpenters (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1375.

(n51)Footnote 49. Jacobson v. Delta Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 742 F.2d 1202.

(n52)Footnote 50. 29 U.S.C. § 630(f).

(n53)Footnote 51. See § 40.20[5].

(n54)Footnote 52. See Hyland v. New Haven Radiology Assoc., P.C. (2d Cir. 1986) 794 F.2d 793, 796.

(n55)Footnote 53. See Hyland v. New Haven Radiology Assoc., P.C. (2d Cir. 1986) 794 F.2d 793, 796.

(n56)Footnote 54. See 29 U.S.C. § 630(f).

(n57)Footnote 55. Hyland v. New Haven Radiology Assoc., P.C. (2d Cir. 1986) 794 F.2d 793, 797.

(n58)Footnote 55.1. See Fichman v. Media Center (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1157, 1160-1161.

(n59)Footnote 55.2. Clackamas Gastroenterology Associates, P.C. v. Wells (2003) 538 U.S. 440, 449-450, 123 S.

Ct. 1673, 155 L. Ed. 2d 615 .

(n60)Footnote 55.3. Fichman v. Media Center (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1157, 1160-1161 .

(n61)Footnote 55.4. Fichman v. Media Center (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1157, 1161-1162 (nonprofit did not have power to hire or fire producers and did not supervise them in traditional employer-employee manner, and producers were not paid salary nor were they entitled to employee benefits).

(n62)Footnote 56. See 29 U.S.C. § 630(f); Monce v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 560, 561 (deputy city attorney).

(n63)Footnote 57. See 29 U.S.C. § 630(f).

(n64)Footnote 58. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(j); see [6], below.

(n65)Footnote 59. See 29 U.S.C. § 631(c) (employee must be executive for two years, and must be entitled to retirement benefits equaling, in aggregate, $44,000); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1625.12, 1627.17 (calculating amount of qualifying retirement benefits); see also 29 C.F.R. § 541.1 ("bona fide executive" defined). Individuals in a "high policymaking position" have little or no line authority, but their position and responsibility are such that they play a significant role in the development and implementation of corporate policy and effectively recommend the implementation of policy. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.12(e).

(n66)Footnote 60. See 29 U.S.C. § 628.

(n67)Footnote 61. Hyland v. New Haven Radiology Assoc., P.C. (2d Cir. 1986) 794 F.2d 793, 797 ("partner" status characterized by business ownership and management).

(n68)Footnote 62. See E.E.O.C. v. Zippo Mfg. Co. (3d Cir. 1983) 713 F.2d 32, 35, 38 . For a further discussion relating to independent contractors, see § 40.20[5].

(n69)Footnote 63. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1(a); see also discussion in .

(n70)Footnote 64. See Minker v. United Methodist Church (D.C. Cir. 1990) 894 F.2d 1354, 1356-1358 .

(n71)Footnote 65. 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)-(c); see [1], above.

(n72)Footnote 66. 29 U.S.C. § 623(a), (b).

(n73)Footnote 67. 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(3).

(n74)Footnote 68. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(e); 29 C.F.R. § 1625.4.

(n75)Footnote 69. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(e); 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5.

(n76)Footnote 70. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(d).

(n77)Footnote 70.1. 29 U.S.C. § 633a(a).

(n78)Footnote 70.2. Gomez-Perez v. Potter (2008) 128 S. Ct. 1931, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 4518, *10-*32 .

(n79)Footnote 71. See 29 U.S.C. § 621 (purpose of ADEA).

(n80)Footnote 72. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.2(a).

(n81)Footnote 73. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.2(a). But the converse is not true. An employer does not violate the ADEA by favoring an older employee over a younger employee, even if both are over age 40. General Dynamics Land Sys., Inc. v. Cline, 124 S. Ct. 1236 (2004) .

(n82)Footnote 74. See [6], below.

(n83)Footnote 75. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B).

(n84)Footnote 76. Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 611-612, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 347-348 .

(n85)Footnote 77. 29 U.S.C. § 623(i)(1); Lee v. California Butchers' Pension Trust Fund (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 1075, 1078-1079 (ADEA covers pension trust funds established or maintained by employers and unions together).

(n86)Footnote 78. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 1625.6; Western Air Lines, Inc. v. Criswell (1985) 472 U.S. 400, 412-417, 105 S. Ct. 2743, 86 L. Ed. 2d 321 (defense is narrowly construed).

(n87)Footnote 79. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 1625.7.

(n88)Footnote 80. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B)(i); 29 C.F.R. § 1625.10(a)(1); See also ch. 41, pt. E.

(n89)Footnote 81. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B)(ii); See also ch. 41, pt. E.

(n90)Footnote 82. See former 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1625.7-1625.10; United Air Lines, Inc. v. McMann (1977) 434 U.S. 192, 203 ("subterfuge" under ADEA as scheme, plan, stratagem, or artifice of evasion); Marshall v. Hawaiian Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1978) 575 F.2d 763, 766 ("bona fide" plan defined).

(n91)Footnote 83. See [5], above.

(n92)Footnote 84. See Kimel v. Florida Bd. of Regents (2000) 528 U.S. 62, 85-87, 120 S. Ct. 631, 145 L. Ed. 2d 522 (ADEA's purported abrogation of states' sovereign immunity is invalid).

(n93)Footnote 85. Katz v. Regents of the University of California (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 831, 834 .

(n94)Footnote 86. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1).

(n95)Footnote 87. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(h)(2).

(n96)Footnote 88. E.E.O.C. v. Karuk Tribe Housing Authority (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1071, 1075 .

(n97)Footnote 89. E.E.O.C. v. Karuk Tribe Housing Authority (9th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 1071, 1078-1082 .

15 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.22

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.22 Equal Pay Act of 1963

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

The federal Equal Pay Act (EPA),ⁿ¹ which is part of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA),ⁿ² prohibits wage discrimination by employersⁿ³ and labor organizationsⁿ⁴ on the basis of sex. Since the EPA is a part of the FLSA, it covers the same employees and employers as the FLSA, except as discussed in [4], below.ⁿ⁵ For a full discussion of the scope and applicability of the FLSA, see Chapters 1, 2, and 3. For a discussion of remedies under the FLSA, see Chapter 5.

The EPA was enacted to overcome the outmoded belief that a man, because of his role in society, should be paid more than a woman even though his duties are the same.ⁿ⁶ However, although passage of the EPA was motivated by concern for the weaker bargaining position of women, it expressly applies to both sexes.ⁿ⁷

The EEOC has promulgated regulations governing administration of the EPA.ⁿ⁸ Among other things, the regulations provide that if the jurisdictional prerequisites of both the EPA and Title VII are satisfied, any violation of the EPA is also a violation of Title VII.ⁿ⁹

The EPA is very similar to the California Equal Pay Act.ⁿ¹⁰ Compliance with one law does not, however, excuse noncompliance with the other.ⁿ¹¹

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

The EPA is enforced by the EEOC,ⁿ¹² but unlike the enforcement scheme of Title VII, EEOC administrative procedures need not be exhausted before the aggrieved individual may bring an EPA claim in court.ⁿ¹³ Generally, the EEOC may (1) investigate and gather data;ⁿ¹⁴ (2) enter and inspect establishments and records, make transcriptions of records, and interview individuals;ⁿ¹⁵ (3) advise employers regarding any changes necessary or desirable to comply with the EPA; (4) subpoena witnesses and order production of documents and other evidence;ⁿ¹⁶ (5) supervise the payment of amount owing to any aggrieved individual under the EPA;ⁿ¹⁷ and (6) initiate and conduct litigation.ⁿ¹⁸

The basic remedy under the EPA is the recovery of unpaid wages,ⁿ¹⁹ which may be recovered through the FLSA enforcement provisions in the same manner as that provided for the recovery of unpaid minimum wages and overtime compensation.ⁿ²⁰ Thus, an employer may be liable for back pay plus liquidated damages and attorney's fees.ⁿ²¹ Courts also have the power to enjoin EPA violations,ⁿ²² and to impose criminal penalties for willful violations.ⁿ²³

For a detailed discussion relating to FLSA enforcement procedures, see Chapter 5. For further discussion of EPA remedies, see Chapter 43, Part B.

[3] Employers and Employees Covered and Exempted

The EPA applies to employers that have employees subject to the FLSA.ⁿ²⁴ For full discussion of employer and employee coverage under the FLSA, see Chapter 1. For discussion of exemptions from the FLSA, see Chapters 2 and 3.

Although the EPA is part of the FLSA, there is one express difference with respect to employee coverage. Executive, administrative, and professional employees are covered by the EPA,ⁿ²⁵ whereas they are exempt from general FLSA coverage.ⁿ²⁶ For a detailed discussion of the executive, administrative, and professional employees exemption under the FLSA, see Chapter 2.

[4] Prohibited Employment Practices

The EPA prohibits wage differentials based on sex for jobs requiring equal skill, effort, and responsibility, and that are performed under similar working conditions.ⁿ²⁷ In essence, it requires equal pay for equal work.ⁿ²⁸ However, employers may not reduce the wage rate of any employee in order to comply with the EPA.ⁿ²⁹ For a detailed discussion relating to prohibited compensation practices based on sex, see Chapter 41, Parts B and D.

[5] Defenses

The EPA does not prohibit differentials based on (1) a seniority system; (2) a merit system; (3) a system that measures earnings by quantity or quality of production; or (4) any factor other than sex.ⁿ³⁰ However, differentials based on "head of household" status,ⁿ³¹ employment costs,ⁿ³² and collective bargaining agreementsⁿ³³ are not defenses to the EPA.

Substantive defenses to employment discrimination are discussed in detail in Chapter 41, Part F.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEqual PayEqual Pay ActGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEqual PayEqual Pay ActBurdens of ProofLabor & Employment LawEqual PayRemedies

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 206(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq.; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.1(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.1(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 195, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.1(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.1 et seq.

(n9)Footnote 9. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.27(a). However, since the protections afforded by Title VII are broader than those under the EPA, an employment practice that is not a violation of the EPA may nevertheless be a violation of Title VII. See County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 166-181, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 ; 29 C.F.R. § 1620.27(a). For discussion of Title VII, see § 40.20.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code § 1197.5; See also § 40.11.

(n11)Footnote 11. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.28.

(n12)Footnote 12. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 204(d)(1), (f), 209, 211(a), (b), (c), 216(b), (c), 217; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.30. The foregoing statutes actually vest general administrative and enforcement authority under the FLSA in the Secretary of Labor, the Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor, and the Civil Service Commission. However, under the President's Reorganization Plan of 1978, authority to enforce the EPA was transferred to the EEOC. See also E.E.O.C. v. First Citizens Bank of Billings (9th Cir. 1985) 758 F.2d 397, 399-400 (enforcement power granted to EEOC by Reorg. Plan No. 1 of 1978 as ratified and affirmed by Congress in subsequent enactment).

(n13)Footnote 13. See 29 U.S.C. § 216(b) (any employee is entitled to maintain action for violation of 29 U.S.C. §§ 206 and 207); Ososky v. Wick (D.C. Cir. 1983) 704 F.2d 1264, 1265 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See 29 U.S.C. § 211; 29 C.F.R. § 1620.30(a).

(n15)Footnote 15. See 29 U.S.C. § 211; 29 C.F.R. § 1620.30; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.31 (issuance of subpoenas).

(n16)Footnote 16. See 29 U.S.C. § 209; 29 C.F.R. § 1620.30(a); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.31 (issuance of subpoenas).

(n17)Footnote 17. See 29 U.S.C. § 216(c); 29 C.F.R. § 1620.30(a).

(n18)Footnote 18. See 29 U.S.C. § 216(c); 29 C.F.R. § 1620.30(a).

(n19)Footnote 19. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(3); 29 C.F.R. § 1620.33(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 206(d)(3), 216(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1620.33(b).

(n21)Footnote 21. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.33(b); see E.E.O.C. v. First Citizens Bank of Billings (9th Cir. 1985) 758 F.2d 397, 401, 403 ; see also 29 U.S.C. §§ 216(b), (c), 260.

(n22)Footnote 22. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.33(b), (d) (violation of EPA as unlawful under 29 U.S.C. § 215(a)(2)); see also 29 U.S.C. § 217.

(n23)Footnote 23. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.33(c), (d) (violation of EPA as unlawful under 29 U.S.C. § 215(a)(2)); E.E.O.C. v. First Citizens Bank of Billings (9th Cir. 1985) 758 F.2d 397, 401 ("willful" violation defined); see also 29 U.S.C. § 216(a).

(n24)Footnote 24. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1).

(n25)Footnote 25. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.1(a)(1).

(n26)Footnote 26. See 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1).

(n27)Footnote 27. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1620.13-1620.19.

(n28)Footnote 28. See Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 195, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 ; see also County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 .

(n29)Footnote 29. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 1620.25.

(n30)Footnote 30. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1); Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 196, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 (EPA exceptions are affirmative defenses on which employer has burden of proof).

(n31)Footnote 31. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.21; E.E.O.C. v. Fremont Christian Sch. (N.D. Cal. 1984) 609 F. Supp. 344, 351 , aff'd, 781 F.2d 1362 (9th Cir. 1986) (limitation of health insurance benefits to "heads of households" as presumptive violation of EPA).

(n32)Footnote 32. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.22.

(n33)Footnote 33. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.23. For a discussion relating to the effect of collective bargaining agreements on equal employment opportunity laws, generally, see § 40.02.

16 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.22A

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.22A Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

Title I of the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA),ⁿ¹ prohibits employment discrimination against disabled persons by employers, employment agencies, labor organizations, and joint labor-management committees.ⁿ² Additional remedial provisions relevant to employment discrimination are contained in Title V of the ADA.ⁿ³ Except as otherwise provided, the ADA does not apply a lesser standard than the standards applied under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 or the regulations promulgated under that statute.ⁿ⁴ Furthermore, it does not invalidate or limit other laws, including the FEHA,ⁿ⁵ which provide greater or equal protection of the rights of disabled people.ⁿ⁶ Nothing in the ADA or the amendments to the ADA effective January 1, 2009, provides the basis for a claim by an individual without a disability that the individual was subject to discrimination because of the individual's lack of disability.^{n6.1} Further, an employer need not provide a reasonable accommodation or a reasonable modification to policies, practices, or procedures to an individual who meets the definition of "disability" under the ADA solely as being regarded as disabled.^{n6.2} Nothing in the ADA alters the standards for determining eligibility for benefits under state worker's compensation laws or under state and federal disability benefit programs.^{n6.3}

The EEOC has promulgated regulations interpreting the employment discrimination provisions of the ADA.^{n6.4} The authority to issue regulations granted to the EEOC under the ADA includes the authority to issue regulations implementing the definitions of "disability"^{n6.5} and the definitions in 42 U.S.C. § 12103, consistent with the ADA Amendments Act of 2008.ⁿ⁷ However, the persuasive authority of the EEOC regulations is less than clear.^{n7.1} The EEOC also has issued detailed enforcement guidance on various issues involving the ADA.^{n7.2} The ADA is not retroactive and does not apply to actions taken prior to its effective date of July 26, 1992.^{n7.3} The EEOC must coordinate its actions with other agencies that enforce the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 in order to avoid duplication of effort and inconsistent or conflicting standards for the same requirements under the ADA and the Rehabilitation Act.ⁿ⁸

Title II of the ADA,^{n8.1} which covers the provision of services by government entities, does not apply to employment.^{n8.2} It also does not apply to the provision of post-employment fringe benefits.^{n8.3}

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

The ADA adopts the same remedies and enforcement procedures as those provided under Title VII.ⁿ⁹ These include EEOC investigation of discrimination charges; informal methods of conference, conciliation, and persuasion; and civil actions seeking equitable remedies, including injunctive relief, reinstatement with or without back pay, and front pay.^{n9.1} For further discussions of Title VII enforcement and remedies, see § 40.20[3], Chapter 42, Part C, and Chapter 43, Part B.

To successfully seek injunctive relief for a violation of the ADA, an employee must have standing to seek the type of injunctive relief sought in the complaint. To have standing to bring a claim for injunctive relief, a plaintiff must show that he or she has (1) suffered an injury that (2) was caused by the defendant and (3) is likely to be redressed by the relief the employee seeks.ⁿ¹⁰

In Equal Employment Opportunity Commission v. Waffle House,^{n10.1} the United States Supreme Court held that an agreement between an employer and an employee to arbitrate employment-related disputes does not bar the EEOC from pursuing victim-specific judicial relief, such as backpay, reinstatement, and damages, in an ADA enforcement action.^{n10.2}

Attorney's fees, including reasonable costs, are also available, in the EEOC's or court's discretion, to the prevailing party in an ADA action.^{n10.3} Attorney's fees should be awarded to a prevailing defendant only if the plaintiff's action was frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation.^{n10.4} The same test applies to an award of costs to a prevailing defendant under the ADA.^{n10.5} Although the United States government may not be awarded attorney's fees, it may be liable for them.ⁿ¹¹

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

An "employer" covered by the ADA is a person with 15 or more employees for each working day in each of 20 or more calendar weeks in the current or preceding calendar year.ⁿ¹² The ADA applies only to employers engaged in an "industry affecting commerce."ⁿ¹³ The terms "person" and "industry affecting commerce," as they are used in the ADA, have the same meaning as they do under Title VII.ⁿ¹⁴ For discussion of the Title VII definitions of these terms, see § 40.20[4].

The ADA does not apply to the United States or corporations wholly owned by the United States, to Indian tribes, or to bona fide private membership clubs.ⁿ¹⁵ States are, however, subject to ADA actions.ⁿ¹⁶ The ADA also applies to employment agencies, labor organizations, and joint labor-management committees.ⁿ¹⁷ These entities are the same as those defined and covered by Title VII and discussed in § 40.20[4][a].ⁿ¹⁸

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

Like Title VII, the ADA defines an "employee" as an individual employed by an employer.ⁿ¹⁹ With respect to employment in a foreign country, the term "employee" includes an individual who is a citizen of the United States.ⁿ²⁰

Specifically, the ADA protects every "qualified individual," which means "an individual who, with or without reasonable accommodation, can perform the essential functions of the employment position that such individual holds or desires."ⁿ²¹ Generally, the ADA provides that the EEOC and courts must consider the employer's determination as to what the "essential functions" of a job are.ⁿ²²

Under the ADA, a "disabled" employee is one who (1) has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of his or her major life activities; (2) has a record of such an impairment; or (3) is regarded as having such an impairment.ⁿ²³ For these purposes, "major life activities" include, but are not limited to, caring for oneself, performing manual tasks, seeing, hearing, eating, sleeping, walking, standing, lifting, bending, speaking, breathing, learning, reading, concentrating, thinking, communicating, and working, and the operation of a major bodily function, including but not limited to, functions of the immune system, normal cell growth, digestive, bowel, bladder, neurological, brain, respiratory, circulatory, endocrine, and reproductive functions.^{n23.1} For a more detailed discussion of "disability" under the ADA, see Chapter 41, Part B. For further discussion of this term under the Rehabilitation Act, see § 40.23[1][d], [2][d] and Chapter 41, Part B.

The ADA expressly provides that a qualified individual with a disability does not include an individual who is currently engaging in the illegal use of drugs, when an employer acts on the basis of such use.ⁿ²⁴ However, the ADA does not exclude a qualified individual who:ⁿ²⁵

1. Has successfully completed a supervised drug rehabilitation program and is no longer engaging in the illegal use of drugs, or has otherwise been rehabilitated successfully and is no longer using drugs;
2. Is participating in a supervised rehabilitation program and is no longer using drugs; or
3. Is erroneously regarded as using drugs.

Homosexuals, bisexuals, transvestites, and individuals with certain specified sexual and behavioral disorders, including compulsive gambling, kleptomania, pyromania, and psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from current illegal use of drugs, are expressly not covered by the ADA.ⁿ²⁶ For further discussion, see Chapter 41, Parts B, C, and D.

[5] Prohibited Employment Practices

The ADA generally prohibits disability discrimination in job application procedures, hiring, advancement, discharge, compensation, job training, and other terms, conditions, and privileges of employment.ⁿ²⁷ Specifically, an employer is prohibited from discriminating on the basis of disability against a qualified individual with a disability with regard to: (1) recruitment, advertising, and job application procedures; (2) hiring, upgrading, promotion, award of tenure, demotion, transfer, layoff, termination, right of return from layoff, and rehiring; (3) rates of pay of any other form of compensation and changes in compensation; (4) job assignments, job classifications, organizational structures, position description, lines of progression, and seniority lists; (5) leaves of absence, sick leave, or any other leave; (6) fringe benefits available by virtue of employment, whether or not administered by the employer; (7) selection and financial support for training, including apprenticeships, professional meetings, conferences, and other related activities, and selection for leaves of absence to pursue training; (8) activities sponsored by an employer, including social and recreational programs; and (9) any other term, condition, or privilege of employment.ⁿ²⁸

The ADA also prohibits retaliation for opposing any unlawful practice under the ADA or for making a charge, testifying, assisting or participating in an ADA investigation, proceeding, or hearing.ⁿ²⁹ An employer may also not coerce, intimidate, threaten, or interfere with any person's ADA rights.ⁿ³⁰ Nor may an employer participate in an arrangement with another entity (e.g., an employment agency) that effectively discriminates against a disabled person.ⁿ³¹

The ADA also prohibits preemployment medical examinations and inquiries made to determine whether a job applicant is disabled or as to the nature or severity of a disability. An employer may, however, inquire into the ability of an applicant to perform job-related functions,ⁿ³² and, under specified conditions, may require a medical examination after an employment offer has been made.ⁿ³³ For detailed discussions relating to preemployment inquiries and medical examinations, see Chapter 41, Part C.

The ADA also requires employers to reasonably accommodate disabled persons,ⁿ³⁴ if they are able to perform the essential functions of the position with or without such accommodation,^{n34.1} unless the accommodation would cause an employer undue hardship.ⁿ³⁵ Employers also may not discriminate on the basis of being required to make such an accommodation.ⁿ³⁶

For a comprehensive discussion relating to physical handicap accommodation generally, see Chapter 41, Part D.

The ADA does not prohibit a covered employer from adopting reasonable policies, including drug testing, to determine whether an employee is participating in or has successfully completed a drug rehabilitation program (as discussed in [4], above) and whether or not the employee is currently engaging in drug use.ⁿ³⁷ It is also not unlawful to prohibit the use of illegal drugs and alcohol in the workplace, and to hold drug users and alcoholics to the same standards as other employees.ⁿ³⁸ For further discussion of EEO considerations relating to drug testing and drug abuse rules, see Chapter 41, Parts C and D.

[6] Defenses

The standard defenses of job-relatedness and business necessity are available under the ADA.ⁿ³⁹ In addition, an employer may require that an individual not pose a direct threat to the individual's own health or to the health or safety of others in the workplace.ⁿ⁴⁰ However, an employer may not use qualification standards, employment tests, or other selection criteria based on an individual's uncorrected vision unless the standard, test, or other selection criteria, as used by the covered entity, is shown to be job-related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity.^{n40.1}

Also, religious entities may give employment preference to individuals of a particular religion, and may require that all applicants and employees conform to the religious tenets of the entity,ⁿ⁴¹ although they may not discriminate against a qualified individual because of a disability, when that person satisfies the religious criteria.ⁿ⁴²

States may assert Eleventh Amendment immunity to bar suits by state employees in federal court to recover money damages based on the state's failure to comply with the ADA.^{n42.1} The decision to extend sovereign immunity to a public entity turns on whether the entity is to be treated as an arm of the state partaking of the state's Eleventh Amendment immunity, or is to be treated as a municipal corporation or other political subdivision to which the Eleventh Amendment does not extend.^{n42.2} The Ninth Circuit employs a five-factor test to determine whether an entity is an arm of the state.^{n42.3}

Furthermore, as discussed in [5], above, an employer's undue hardship is a defense to a charge of failure to accommodate.ⁿ⁴³

Also, an employer may lawfully refuse to assign an individual with specified infectious and communicable diseases to a job involving food handling if reasonable accommodation will not eliminate the problem.ⁿ⁴⁴

For a complete discussion of substantive equal employment opportunity defenses, see Chapter 41, Part F.

[7] Individual Liability

Individual defendants cannot be held personally liable for violations of Title I of the ADA. In Walsh v. Nevada Dept. of Human Resources,ⁿ⁴⁵ the Ninth Circuit, which had not addressed the issue before, held that because Title I of the ADA adopts a definition of "employer" and a remedial scheme identical to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964,ⁿ⁴⁶ the bar on suits against individual defendants articulated in *Miller v. Maxwell's International, Inc.*ⁿ⁴⁷ also applies to suits brought under Title I of the ADA.ⁿ⁴⁸

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsAmericans With Disabilities ActGeneral OverviewCivil Rights

LawProtection of Disabled PersonsAmericans With Disabilities ActScopeLabor & Employment LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111(2), 12112; 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(b). For a discussion of "disabled persons," see [4], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 12201 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 4. 42 U.S.C. § 12201(a); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.1(c)(1); see 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq. (Rehabilitation Act of 1973); See also § 40.23.

(n5)Footnote 5. See § 40.10.

(n6)Footnote 6. See 42 U.S.C. § 12201(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.1(c)(2).

(n7)Footnote 6.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12201(g). See P.L. 110-325.

(n8)Footnote 6.2. 42 U.S.C. § 12201(h). For the definition of "disability," see 42 U.S.C. § 12102(1).

(n9)Footnote 6.3. 42 U.S.C. § 12201(e).

(n10)Footnote 6.4. See 29 C.F.R., pts. 1601, 1630; see also 42 U.S.C. § 12116 (statutory authority for regulations).

(n11)Footnote 6.5. See 42 U.S.C. § 12102(1), (4) (including rules of construction).

(n12)Footnote 7. 42 U.S.C. § 12206. See P.L. 110-325.

(n13)Footnote 7.1. Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams (2002) 534 U.S. 184, 122 S. Ct. 681, 151 L. Ed. 2d 615, 629 , overruled by statute on other grounds [see P.L. 110-325, §§ 1, 2] (assuming without deciding that regulations are reasonable because parties have done so, but declining to decide what level of deference, if any, they warrant).

(n14)Footnote 7.2. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902.

(n15)Footnote 7.3. Brown v. General Tel. Co. of Cal. (9th Cir. 1997) 108 F.3d 208, 209 .

(n16)Footnote 8. 42 U.S.C. § 12117(b).

(n17)Footnote 8.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12131 et seq.

(n18)Footnote 8.2. Zimmerman v. State of Oregon Dep't of Justice (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 1169 (ADA claims concerning employment discrimination may not be asserted under Title II, but lie only under Title I, which covers employers).

(n19)Footnote 8.3. See Brown v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2008) 521 F.3d 1238, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 7650, *4.*5 .

(n20)Footnote 9. 42 U.S.C. § 12117(a); see 29 C.F.R. § 1601.1 et seq. (EEOC procedural regulations).

(n21)Footnote 9.1. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-4-2000e-6, 2000e-8-2000e-9; see also 42 U.S.C. § 12213 (encouraging use of alternative means of dispute resolution to resolve disputes arising under ADA).

(n22)Footnote 10. See Walsh v. Nev. Dep't. of Human Res. (9th Cir. 2006) 471 F.3d 1033, 1036-1037 (former employee lacked standing to bring claim for injunctive relief to force defendant to adopt and enforce lawful policies regarding discrimination based on disability under ADA, where although employee asserted that defendant discriminated against her due to her disability, she was no longer employee of defendant and there was no indication she had any interest in returning to work for defendant, so she would not stand to benefit from injunction requiring anti-discriminatory policies she requested at her former place of work).

(n23)Footnote 10.1. EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 122 S. Ct. 754, 151 L. Ed. 2d 755, 767-768 .

(n24)Footnote 10.2. For discussion of the effect of arbitration agreements on employment discrimination actions generally, see Ch. 90.

(n25)Footnote 10.3. 42 U.S.C. § 12205.

(n26)Footnote 10.4. Summers v. A. Teichert & Son, Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 127 F.3d 1150, 1154 , quoting Christiansburg Garment Co. v. EEOC (1978) 434 U.S. 412, 421, 98 S. Ct. 694, 54 L. Ed. 2d 648 .

(n27)Footnote 10.5. Brown v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 246 F.3d 1182, 1190 (remanded to trial court to explain why it denied costs to the prevailing defendants).

(n28)Footnote 11. 42 U.S.C. § 12205.

(n29)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(5)(A); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(e)(1); see Clackamas Gastroenterology Assocs., P.C. v. Wells (2003) 538 U.S. 440, 123 S. Ct. 1673, 155 L. Ed. 2d 615 (four physicians actively engaged in medical practice as shareholders and directors of professional medical corporation could not be counted as "employees" for purposes of ADA coverage; common-law element of control is principal guidepost that should be followed); 2 Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, Compliance Manual §§ 605:0008-605:00010 (2000) (listing 16 factors relevant to whether employer controls means and manner of worker's performance and six factors to be considered in answering whether individual acts independently and participates in managing organization, or whether individual is subject to organization's control); see also Le Bourgeois v. Fireplace Mfrs., Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660 (supervisory personnel cannot be held individually liable for discrimination under ADA).

(n30)Footnote 13. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(5)(A); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(e)(1).

(n31)Footnote 14. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(7); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(c).

(n32)Footnote 15. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(5)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(e)(2).

(n33)Footnote 16. 42 U.S.C. § 12202.

(n34)Footnote 17. See 42 U.S.C. § 12111(2); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(b).

(n35)Footnote 18. See 42 U.S.C. § 12111(7); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(c).

(n36)Footnote 19. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(4); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(f). For discussion relating to "employers" covered by the ADA, see [3], above; See also § 40.20[5] for a discussion of "employees" covered by Title VII.

(n37)Footnote 20. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(4). However, an employer may be exempt from liability under the ADA with respect to actions taken in a foreign workplace if compliance with the ADA would violate the laws of the country where the workplace is located. See 42 U.S.C. § 12112(c). For discussion, see ch. 41, pt. E.

(n38)Footnote 21. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(m).

(n39)Footnote 22. See 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(n). For further discussion, see ch. 41, pt. B.

(n40)Footnote 23. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(1); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(q).

(n41)Footnote 23.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(2), added effective January 1, 2009.

(n42)Footnote 24. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(a), 12211(a); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(a).

(n43)Footnote 25. 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(b), 12211(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(b).

(n44)Footnote 26. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12209, 12212; 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(d), (e).

(n45)Footnote 27. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a); see 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b), 29 C.F.R. §§ 1630.5-1630.13 (defining "discriminate").

(n46)Footnote 28. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.4.

(n47)Footnote 29. 42 U.S.C. § 12203(a); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.12(a); see Barnett v. United States Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1121, petition for cert. filed 2-1-2001 (court applied framework used in Title VII retaliation claims to ADA retaliation claims).

(n48)Footnote 30. 42 U.S.C. § 12203(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.12(b).

(n49)Footnote 31. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.6.

(n50)Footnote 32. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(2)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(a).

(n51)Footnote 33. See 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(3); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(b).

(n52)Footnote 34. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111(9), 12112(b)(5)(A); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1630.2(o), 1630.9(a).

(n53)Footnote 34.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8); see Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450, 450, 459, overruled by statute on other grounds [see P.L. 110-325, §§ 1, 2].

(n54)Footnote 35. See 42 U.S.C. § 12111(10); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(d).

(n55)Footnote 36. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(5)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.9(b).

(n56)Footnote 37. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(c).

(n57)Footnote 38. See 42 U.S.C. § 12114(d)(1)-(4); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(b).

(n58)Footnote 39. See 42 U.S.C. § 12113(a); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(b)(1).

(n59)Footnote 40. 42 U.S.C. § 12113(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(b)(2). See Chevron U.S.A., Inc. v. Echazabal (2002) 536 U.S. 73, 122 S. Ct. 2045, 153 L. Ed. 2d 82 (upholding 29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(b)(2) and reversing Ninth Circuit's holding in Echazabal v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 226 F.3d 1063 that regulation was in excess of EEOC's rulemaking authority). Echazabal v. Chevron USA, Inc. (9th Cir. 2003) 336 F.3d 1023, 1027-1035 (material issues of fact remained as to whether employer had met requirements for assertion of defense that employee posed direct threat to his own health so that district court erred in granting employer summary judgment).

(n60)Footnote 40.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12113(c).

(n61)Footnote 41. 42 U.S.C. § 12113(d); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(a).

(n62)Footnote 42. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(a).

(n63)Footnote 42.1. Board of Trustees of the University of Alabama v. Garrett (2001) 531 U.S. 356, 368-369, 121 S. Ct. 955, 148 L. Ed. 2d 866, 880 ; Walsh v. Nev. Dep't. of Human Resources (9th Cir. 2006) 471 F.3d 1033, 1036 (trial court properly granted judgment on pleadings because State of Nevada was immune from liability for money damages under ADA).

(n64)Footnote 42.2. Mt. Healthy City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle (1977) 429 U.S. 274, 280, 97 S. Ct. 568, 50 L. Ed. 2d 471 .

(n65)Footnote 42.3. Belanger v. Madera Unified School District (9th Cir. 1992) 963 F.2d 248, 250-251 ; Mitchell v. Los Angeles Community College District (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 198, 201 . See, e.g., Beentjes v. Placer County Air Pollution Control Dist. (9th Cir. 2005) 397 F.3d 775 (under five-factor test, county air pollution control district not entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity in former employee's action under ADA).

(n66)Footnote 43. See 42 U.S.C. § 12111(10); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(d); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(5).

(n67)Footnote 44. See 42 U.S.C. § 12113(e); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(e). For further discussion, see ch. 41, pts. B and E.

(n68)Footnote 45. Walsh v. Nev. Dep't. of Human Resources (9th Cir. 2006) 471 F.3d 1033, 1037-1038 .

(n69)Footnote 46. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq., discussed at § 40.20, above.

(n70)Footnote 47. Miller v. Maxwell's International, Inc. 991 F.2d 583 (9th Cir. 1993) .

(n71)Footnote 48. See also Koslow v. Commonwealth of Pennsylvania (3d Cir. 2002) 302 F.3d 161, 177 ; Sullivan v. River Valley Sch. Dist. (6th Cir. 1999) 197 F.3d 804, 808 n.1 ; Butler v. City of Prairie Village (10th Cir. 1999) 172 F.3d 736, 744 ; Mason v. Stallings (11th Cir. 1996) 82 F.3d 1007, 1009 ; EEOC v. AIC Sec. Investigations, Ltd. (7th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 1276, 1279-80 ; Ostrach v. Regents of the Univ. of California (E.D. Cal. 1997) 957 F. Supp. 196, 200 .

17 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.23

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.23 Rehabilitation Act of 1973

[.5] Section 501--Discrimination Against Disabled in Federal Employment Decisions

Section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973ⁿ¹ announces a federal government policy to prevent discrimination against the disabled in employment decisions, and expressly encourages federal government employers to employ individuals with disabilities.^{n1.1}

Section 501 substantive standards are similar to those under the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).^{n1.2} For complaints filed under section 501, the Rehabilitation Act borrows the remedies, procedures, and rights from Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.^{n1.3} Title VII waives sovereign immunity by permitting actions for compensatory damages brought by federal employees and applicants for federal employment.^{n1.4}

An individual can state a claim against the federal government or an agency of the federal government only if that individual is a federal employee.^{n1.5} The Rehabilitation Act does not define who is a federal employee for purposes of section 501.^{n1.6} While the multi-factor common law hybrid test to determine whether an individual is an employee or an independent contractor is ill suited for these purposes, the hybrid common law test of an employment relationship used in Title VII cases can be used to determine whether an individual is a federal employee for purposes of section 501.^{n1.7} Section 501 applies to the Departments of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force,^{n1.8} but it does not apply to uniformed military personnel.^{n1.9}

[1] Section 503--Employers With Federal Contracts

[a] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

The Rehabilitation Act of 1973^{n1.10} was enacted (1) to empower individuals with disabilities to maximize employment, economic self-sufficiency, independence, and inclusion and integration into society, through comprehensive and coordinated state-of-the-art programs in vocational rehabilitation; independent living centers and services; research; training; demonstration projects; and the guarantee of equal opportunity; and (2) to ensure that the federal government plays a leadership role in promoting the employment of individuals with disabilities, especially individuals with severe disabilities, and in assisting states and providers of services in fulfilling the aspirations of such individuals with disabilities for meaningful and gainful employment and independent living.ⁿ² Section 503 of the Actⁿ³ requires a clause in federal government contracts and subcontracts in excess of $10,000 requiring the contractor to take affirmative action to employ and advance qualified individuals with disabilities.ⁿ⁴ Section 503 is implemented by regulations promulgated by the Department of Labor.ⁿ⁵

[b] Enforcement and Remedies

The Department of Labor, Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (OFCCP) enforces Section 503.ⁿ⁶ If any individual with a disability believes that Section 503 was violated, he or she may file a complaint with the OFCCP.ⁿ⁷ The OFCCP must then promptly investigate the complaint and take warranted actions,ⁿ⁸ such as notifying the complainant if there is no violation,ⁿ⁹ or attempting informal conciliation, persuasion, and corrective programs,ⁿ¹⁰ as well as holding a formal hearing,ⁿ¹¹ if there is a violation.ⁿ¹² OFCCP enforcement procedures are further discussed in Chapter 44, Part C.

The OFCCP must develop procedures to ensure that administrative complaints filed under Section 503 and the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA)^{n12.1} are dealt with in a manner that avoids duplication of effort and prevents imposition of inconsistent or conflicting standards for the same requirements under Section 503 and the ADA.^{n12.2}

The OFCCP may seek judicial remedies to enforce Section 503, including appropriate injunctive relief,ⁿ¹³ but there is no private right of action.ⁿ¹⁴ Other remedies for noncompliance include withholding progress payments pending corrective action,ⁿ¹⁵ canceling or terminating the contract in whole or in part,ⁿ¹⁶ and debarring contractors from receiving future contracts.ⁿ¹⁷ The prevailing party in a judicial proceeding to enforce or charge a violation of Section 503 may receive reasonable attorney's fees as part of the costs.ⁿ¹⁸

[c] Employers Covered and Exempted

Section 503 applies to federal contractors.ⁿ¹⁹ A "contractor" is a prime contractor or subcontractor.ⁿ²⁰ A "prime contractor" is any person who holds a federal contract covered by Section 503 as discussed in [a], above.ⁿ²¹ A "subcontractor" is a person holding a covered subcontract.ⁿ²² A "person" is any natural person, corporation, partnership or joint venture, unincorporated association, state or local government, and any agency, instrumentality, or subdivision of such a government.ⁿ²³ Section 503 is not applicable to any agency, instrumentality, or subdivision of any state or local government that does not participate in work on or under the contract or subcontract.ⁿ²⁴

[d] Employees Covered and Exempted

Section 503 applies to qualified individuals with disabilities.ⁿ²⁵ By its terms, Section 503 applies to disabled applicants for employment as well as disabled employees. Under Section 503, federal contractors must take affirmative action to both "employ" and "advance in employment" qualified disabled individuals.ⁿ²⁶

The term "individual with a disability" means any person who (1) has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of that person's major life activities, (2) has a record of such an impairment, or (3) is regarded as having such an impairment.ⁿ²⁷ An individual with a disability is "substantially limited" if he or she is likely to experience difficulty in securing, retaining, or advancing in employment because of the disability.ⁿ²⁸ "Qualified disabled individuals" are disabled individuals who are capable of performing a particular job, with reasonable accommodation to his or her handicap.ⁿ²⁹

The term "individual with a disability" does not include an individual who is currently engaging in the illegal use of drugs, when an employer acts on the basis of such use.ⁿ³⁰ However, the Rehabilitation Act does cover the following persons:^{n30.1}

1. An individual who has successfully completed a supervised drug rehabilitation program and is no longer engaging in the illegal use of drugs, or has otherwise been rehabilitated successfully and is no longer engaging in such use;
2. An individual who is participating in a supervised rehabilitation program and is no longer engaging in such use; or
3. An individual who is erroneously regarded as engaging in such use, but is not engaging in such use.

The term "individual with a disability" also does not include the following:

1. An individual who is an alcoholic whose current use of alcohol prevents that individual from performing the duties of the job in question or whose employment, because of his or her current alcohol abuse, would constitute a direct threat to property or to the safety of others;^{n30.2}
2. An individual who has a currently contagious disease or infection and who, because of such disease or infection, would constitute a direct threat to the health or safety of other individuals or who, because of the disease or infection, is unable to perform the duties of the job;ⁿ³¹
3. An individual on the basis of homosexuality or bisexuality;^{n31.1}
4. An individual on the basis of transvestism, transexualism, pedophilia, exhibitionism, voyeurism, gender identity disorders not resulting from physical impairments, or other sexual behavior disorders;^{n31.2}
5. An individual on the basis of compulsive gambling, kleptomania, or pyromania;^{n31.3} or
6. An individual on the basis of psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from current illegal use of drugs.^{n31.4}

[e] Prohibited Employment Practices

Section 503 prohibits employment discrimination against qualified individuals with disabilitiesⁿ³² and requires affirmative action to employ and advance such individuals.ⁿ³³ Section 503 applies to all employment practices, including, but not limited to, hiring, upgrading, demotion or transfer, recruitment or recruitment advertising, layoff or termination, rates of pay or other forms of compensation, and selection for training, including apprenticeship.ⁿ³⁴

A contractor or subcontractor must also make a reasonable accommodation to the physical and mental limitations of an employee or applicant, unless the contractor or subcontractor can demonstrate that such an accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the conduct of the contractor's or subcontractor's business.ⁿ³⁵ In addition, if an employer offers employment or promotions to individuals with disabilities, the contractor or subcontractor may not reduce the amount of compensation offered because of any disability income, pension, or other benefit the applicant or employee receives from another source.ⁿ³⁶

The standards used to determine whether Section 503 has been violated in a complaint alleging nonaffirmative action employment discrimination are the standards applied under Title I of the ADA^{n36.1} and the provisions of Sections 501-504 and 510 of the ADA,^{n36.2} as such sections relate to employment.^{n36.3}

For discussion of the requirements of OFCCP affirmative action programs, see Chapter 44, Part C.

[f] Defenses

The affirmative action clause requirements of Section 503 may be waived by the OFCCP under certain circumstances.ⁿ³⁷ Thus, the OFCCP may waive the requirements for work performed outside the United States by employees who were not recruited within the United States.ⁿ³⁸ Also, on request by a contractor or subcontractor, the OFCCP may waive the requirements with respect to any of a prime contractor's facilities that are in all respects separate and distinct from activities related to the performance of the contract or subcontract.ⁿ³⁹ In addition, the requirements may be waived for any contract or subcontract when the OFCCP deems that special circumstances in the national interest so require.ⁿ⁴⁰ Waivers may also be granted to groups or categories of contracts or subcontracts of the same type when it is (1) in the national interest, (2) found to be impracticable to act on each request individually, and (3) a substantial contribution to convenience in administration of the act.ⁿ⁴¹ The OFCCP must waive the requirements when the head of a contracting agency determines that a contract or subcontract is essential to the national security, and that its award without complying with the requirements is necessary to the national security.ⁿ⁴²

[2] Section 504--Employers Who Receive Financial Assistance From Federal Government

[a] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 prohibits discrimination against otherwise qualified individuals with disabilities by (1) programs or activities receiving federal financial assistance, and (2) programs or activities conducted by executive agencies or the United States Postal Service.ⁿ⁴³ Each federal agency providing federal financial assistance promulgates its own regulations to administer Section 504,ⁿ⁴⁴ but the Department of Justice, which coordinates all agency implementation of Section 504,ⁿ⁴⁵ has adopted regulations promulgated by the Department of Health and Human Services,ⁿ⁴⁶ the agency formerly responsible for coordinating agency implementation.ⁿ⁴⁷

[b] Enforcement and Remedies

As discussed in [a], above, each federal agency providing federal assistance enforces Section 504,ⁿ⁴⁸ although the Department of Justice coordinates implementation and enforcement.ⁿ⁴⁹ The Rehabilitation Act provides that the remedies, procedures, and rights set forth in Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VI)ⁿ⁵⁰ are available to anyone aggrieved by a violation of Section 504.ⁿ⁵¹ Accordingly, the Department of Justice requires that each agency's procedures for enforcement of Section 504 include (1) the enforcement and hearing procedures that the agency has adopted pursuant to Title VI, and (2) a requirement that recipients of federal assistance sign assurances of compliance with Section 504.ⁿ⁵² For a discussion relating to enforcement and remedies under Title VI, see § 40.29[2].

An aggrieved individual also has a private right of action under Section 504,ⁿ⁵³ and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that exhaustion of administrative remedies is not required.ⁿ⁵⁴

[c] Employers Covered and Exempted

Section 504 applies to employers receiving federal financial assistance or involved in programs or activities conducted by any executive agency or the United States Postal Service.ⁿ⁵⁵ The Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1987ⁿ⁵⁶ amended Section 504 to clarify that the term "program or activity" means all of the operations of an entity receiving federal financial assistance,ⁿ⁵⁷ thus overturning a previous decision of the Supreme Court that had adopted a more narrow construction of the statute.ⁿ⁵⁸ A "recipient" of federal financial assistance is the following:ⁿ⁵⁹

1. Any state or its political subdivision;

2. Any instrumentality of a state or political subdivision;
3. Any public or private agency, institution, organization, or other entity; or
4. Any person to whom federal financial assistance is extended directly or through another recipient, including any successor, assignee, or transferee, but excluding the ultimate beneficiary of the assistance.

The "program or activity" language of section 504 has constitutional significance, because it limits section 504's reach so that it does not encompass all the activities of the state, ensuring Congress acted within its Spending Clause power when it conditioned the receipt of Section 504 funds on a waiver of sovereign immunity.^{n59.1} Whether a particular state entity is a program or activity receiving federal financial assistance within the meaning of section 504 can be answered only after considering the provisions of state law that define the agency's character.^{n59.2}

For purposes of section 504, federal financial assistance can be direct or indirect.^{n59.3} Entities that receive federal assistance through an intermediary are recipients under section 504, but entities that only benefit economically from federal assistance are not.^{n59.4}

Section 504's reach encompasses a department or agency receiving federal funds in only those periods during which the funds are accepted.^{n59.5}

Section 504 expressly applies to "any program or activity" receiving federal assistanceⁿ⁶⁰ and thus is not limited to programs that receive federal aid for the primary purpose of promoting employment.ⁿ⁶¹

One Ninth Circuit case has held that Section 504 does not apply to a labor union, being sued as an employer, that does not receive federal financial assistance other than that received via (1) NLRB certification, (2) federal assistance for apprenticeship programs, (3) federal wage regulation under the Davis-Bacon Act,^{n61.1} and (4) union access to federal mediation services.^{n61.2}

[d] Employees Covered and Exempted

Section 504 applies to otherwise qualified individuals with disabilities.ⁿ⁶² The definition of an "individual with disabilities" is the same as the one used under Section 503, discussed in [1][d], above. ⁿ⁶³ An "otherwise qualified" individual is one who is able to meet all of a job's requirements in spite of his or her disabilities.ⁿ⁶⁴ Thus, an individual must be able to perform the essential functions of the job.ⁿ⁶⁵

As under Section 503, individuals who, because of current alcohol or drug abuse, cannot perform the duties of the job in question, or who would constitute a direct threat to property or safety of others are not "individuals with disabilities" under Section 504.ⁿ⁶⁶

[e] Prohibited Employment Practices

Section 504 prohibits unlawful exclusion from, denial of the benefits of, or discrimination under federally financed programs or activities, or programs or activities conducted by any executive agency or the United States Postal Service.ⁿ⁶⁷ Section 504 also bars recipient programs or activities from limiting, segregating, or classifying applicants or employees in any way that adversely affects their opportunities or status because of disability.ⁿ⁶⁸ The prohibition against discrimination applies to the following:ⁿ⁶⁹

1. Recruitment, advertising, and the processing of employment applications;
2. Hiring, upgrading, promotion, award of tenure, demotion, transfer, layoff, termination, right of return from layoff, and rehiring;

3. Rates of pay or any other form of compensation and changes in compensation;
4. Job assignments, job classifications, organizational structures, position descriptions, lines of progression, and seniority lists;
5. Leaves of absence, sick leave, or any other leave;
6. Fringe benefits available by virtue of employment, whether or not administered by the recipient;
7. Selection and financial support for training, including apprenticeship, professional meetings, conferences, and other related activities, and selection for leaves of absence to pursue training;
8. Employer sponsored activities, including social or recreational programs; and
9. Any other term, condition, or privilege of employment.

An employee may state a claim under the Rehabilitation Act for being "regarded as" disabled as well. In order to state a "regarded as" claim, a plaintiff must establish that the employer believed that the plaintiff has an impairment and provide evidence that the employer subjectively believed that the plaintiff was substantially limited in a major life activity. If the plaintiff does not have direct evidence of the employer's subjective belief that the plaintiff was substantially limited in a major life activity, the plaintiff must further provide evidence that the impairment imputed to the plaintiff was, objectively, a substantially limiting impairment.^{n69.1} An employee also may state a claim for discrimination on the basis of having a record of impairment.^{n69.2}

Recipients also may not participate in a contractual or other relationship with employment and referral agencies, labor unions, and organizations providing or administering employee fringe benefits or training and apprenticeship programs if the relationship has the effect of subjecting qualified applicants or employees with disabilities to unlawful discrimination.ⁿ⁷⁰ Furthermore, recipients may not use discriminatory employment tests or criteria,ⁿ⁷¹ conduct preemployment medical examinations, or make preemployment inquiries about whether an applicant is disabled or about the nature of the disability,ⁿ⁷² except when the recipient is correcting past discrimination, taking steps to increase the participation of disabled individuals, or taking affirmative action.ⁿ⁷³

Recipients also must make reasonable accommodation to the known physical or mental limitations of qualified disabled applicants or employees.ⁿ⁷⁴ They also must ensure that employment tests are adapted for use by persons who have disabilities that impair sensory, manual, or speaking skills.ⁿ⁷⁵ For discussion relating to employer accommodation of disabled individuals, see Chapter 41, Part D.

The standards used to determine whether Section 504 has been violated in a complaint alleging nonaffirmative action employment discrimination are the standards applied under Title I of the ADA of 1990ⁿ⁷⁶ and the provisions of Sections 501-504 and 510 of the ADA,ⁿ⁷⁷ as such sections relate to employment.ⁿ⁷⁸

[f] Defenses

A recipient need not make reasonable accommodation for handicapped applicants or employees if the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of its program.ⁿ⁷⁹

By accepting federal Rehabilitation Act funds, a state waives the Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity defense.ⁿ⁸⁰

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsRehabilitation ActGeneral OverviewCivil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsRehabilitation ActScopeLabor & Employment LawGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 791.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Lopez v. Johnson (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 959, 961 (per curiam); see Buckingham v. United States (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 735, 739 (duty on federal employers goes beyond mere nondiscrimination, and regulations promulgated under section 501 emphasize affirmative obligation to accommodate).

(n3)Footnote 1.2. Lopez v. Johnson (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 959, 961 (per curiam). See 29 U.S.C. § 791(g); for discussion of the ADA, see § 40.22A.

(n4)Footnote 1.3. Lopez v. Johnson (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 959, 961 (per curiam); see 29 U.S.C. § 794a(a)(1); for discussion of Title VII, see § 40.20.

(n5)Footnote 1.4. Lopez v. Johnson (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 959, 961 (per curiam); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16(c).

(n6)Footnote 1.5. See Lopez v. Johnson (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 959, 961-964 (per curiam) (individual could not state claim under section 501 based on denial of parking space against Secretary of Navy because he was employee of private contractor working within Navy-controlled premises, not federal employee, and Navy did not retain any control over terms and conditions of his work).

(n7)Footnote 1.6. Lopez v. Johnson (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 959, 961 (per curiam).

(n8)Footnote 1.7. See Lopez v. Johnson (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 959, 962-964 (per curiam); Redd v. Summers (D.C. Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 933, 344 U.S. App. D.C. 44 (in lawsuit for discriminatory termination under section 501 by obese woman employed by private contractor to provide tours at Treasury Department, common law hybrid test applied, placing greatest emphasis on whether Treasury had right to control and direct plaintiff's work as to result to be achieved and as to details by which result was achieved, and concluding that plaintiff was not federal employee). See, e.g., Lutcher v. Musicians Union Local 47 (9th Cir. 1980) 633 F.2d 880, 883-884 (applying multi-factor common law hybrid test for Title VII purposes to determine whether professional musician performing concerts for school district under contract was employee of school district or independent contractor). For discussion of the Title VII test, see § 40.20[5].

(n9)Footnote 1.8. 29 C.F.R. § 1614.103(b)(1).

(n10)Footnote 1.9. 29 C.F.R. § 1614.103(d)(1). See Bledsoe v. Webb (9th Cir. 1988) 839 F.2d 1357, 1359 (addressing Title VII claim by civilian employee of Navy as justiciable, as opposed to claims by uniformed military personnel); Gonzalez v. Dep't of Army (9th Cir. 1983) 718 F.2d 926, 928 (distinguishing between civilian employees of Army and enlisted personnel).

(n11)Footnote 1.10. 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.

(n12)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. § 701(b).

(n13)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 793.

(n14)Footnote 4. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(a); 29 C.F.R. § 60-741.1.

(n15)Footnote 5. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.1 et seq. Section 503 actually provides that the President shall promulgate implementing regulations. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(a). However, the President delegated that authority to the Secretary of Labor pursuant to Exec. Order No. 11758. See Exec. Order No. 11758.

(n16)Footnote 6. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(b); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.25.

(n17)Footnote 7. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(b); 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-741.25, 60-741.26 (complaint procedures and investigations).

(n18)Footnote 8. 29 U.S.C. § 793(b).

(n19)Footnote 9. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.26(g)(1).

(n20)Footnote 10. See 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-741.26(g)(2), 60-741.28(a).

(n21)Footnote 11. See 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-741(g)(3), 60-741.29.

(n22)Footnote 12. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.27.

(n23)Footnote 12.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq. For discussion of ADA complaint procedures, see ch. 42, pt. C.

(n24)Footnote 12.2. 29 U.S.C. § 793(e).

(n25)Footnote 13. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.28(b).

(n26)Footnote 14. Meyerson v. State of Ariz. (9th Cir. 1983) 709 F.2d 1235, 1238, vacated and remanded on different grounds 465 U.S. 1095 (1984).

(n27)Footnote 15. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.28(c).

(n28)Footnote 16. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.28(d).

(n29)Footnote 17. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.28(e).

(n30)Footnote 18. 29 U.S.C. § 794a(b).

(n31)Footnote 19. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(a).

(n32)Footnote 20. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2.

(n33)Footnote 21. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2. For enforcement purposes, a contractor also includes any person who has held a covered contract. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2.

(n34)Footnote 22. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2. For enforcement purposes, a subcontractor also includes any person who has held a covered subcontract. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2.

(n35)Footnote 23. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2.

(n36)Footnote 24. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.3(a)(4).

(n37)Footnote 25. 29 U.S.C. § 793(a).

(n38)Footnote 26. 29 U.S.C. § 793(a).

(n39)Footnote 27. 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(B); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2; see 29 U.S.C. § 793(a) (incorporating 29 U.S.C. § 706(8) definition by reference).

(n40)Footnote 28. 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2.

(n41)Footnote 29. 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2.

(n42)Footnote 30. 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(C)(i); see ch. 41, pts. B, C, and D.

(n43)Footnote 30.1. 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(C)(ii).

(n44)Footnote 30.2. 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(C)(v); see ch. 41, pts. B, C, and D.

(n45)Footnote 31. 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(D).

(n46)Footnote 31.1. 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(E).

(n47)Footnote 31.2. 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(F)(i).

(n48)Footnote 31.3. 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(F)(ii).

(n49)Footnote 31.4. 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(F)(iii).

(n50)Footnote 32. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(a); 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-741.1, 60-741.4 (affirmative action clause requires statement that contractor or subcontractor will not discriminate); see also discussion in [a] and [d], above.

(n51)Footnote 33. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(a); 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-741.1, 60-741.4; see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.5 (contractor or subcontractor must prepare and maintain written affirmative action program if contract or subcontract is for $50,000 or more and contractor or subcontractor has at least 50 employees).

(n52)Footnote 34. 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.6(a).

(n53)Footnote 35. 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.6(d); see discussion in [f], below.

(n54)Footnote 36. 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.6(e).

(n55)Footnote 36.1. See 42 U.S.C. § 12111 et seq. For further discussion, see ch. 41, pts. B, D, and G.

(n56)Footnote 36.2. 42 U.S.C. §§ 12201-12204 and 12211.

(n57)Footnote 36.3. 29 U.S.C. § 793(d)

(n58)Footnote 37. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(c); see discussion in [a], above.

(n59)Footnote 38. 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.3(a)(3).

(n60)Footnote 39. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.3(a)(5).

(n61)Footnote 40. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.3(b)(1).

(n62)Footnote 41. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.3(b)(1).

(n63)Footnote 42. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.3(b)(2).

(n64)Footnote 43. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a).

(n65)Footnote 44. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a); see also 7 C.F.R. § 15b.1 et seq. (Department of Agriculture); 10 C.F.R. §§ 4.101 et seq. (Nuclear Regulatory Commission), 1040.61 et seq. (Department of Energy); 11 C.F.R. § 6.101 et seq. (Federal Election Commission); 13 C.F.R. § 113.1 et seq. (Small Business Administration); 14 C.F.R. § 1251.100 et seq. (NASA); 15 C.F.R. § 8b.1 et seq. (Department of Commerce); 18 C.F.R. § 1307.1 et seq. (Tennessee Valley Authority); 22 C.F.R. §§ 142.1 et seq. (Department of State), 217.1 et seq. (Agency for International Development); 28 C.F.R. §§ 41.1 et seq., 42.501 et seq. (Department of Justice); 29 C.F.R. § 32.1 et seq. (Department of Labor); 32 C.F.R. § 56.1 et seq. (Department of Defense); 34 C.F.R. § 104.1 et seq. (Department of Education); 38 C.F.R. § 18.1 et seq. (Veterans Administration); 40 C.F.R. § 7.10 et seq. (Environmental Protection Agency); 43 C.F.R. § 17.1 et seq. (Department of Interior); 45 C.F.R. §§ 84.1 et seq. (Department of Health and Human Services), 605.0 et seq. (National Science Foundation), 1151.1 et seq. (National Endowment for Arts), 1170.1 et seq. (National Endowment for Humanities), 1232.1 et seq. (ACTION); 49 C.F.R. § 27.1 et seq. (Department of Transportation).

(n66)Footnote 45. See Exec. Order No. 12250.

(n67)Footnote 46. See 45 C.F.R. § 84.1 et seq.

(n68)Footnote 47. See CONRAIL v. Darrone (1984) 465 U.S. 624, 634 n.14, 104 S. Ct. 1248, 79 L. Ed. 2d 568 .

(n69)Footnote 48. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a).

(n70)Footnote 49. See Exec. Order No. 12250; see also 28 C.F.R. § 41.1 et seq. (implementation of Exec. Order No. 12250).

(n71)Footnote 50. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq.

(n72)Footnote 51. See 29 U.S.C. § 794a(a)(2); CONRAIL v. Darrone (1984) 465 U.S. 624, 630-631, 637, 104 S. Ct. 1248, 79 L. Ed. 2d 568 .

(n73)Footnote 52. 28 C.F.R. § 41.5(a).

(n74)Footnote 53. See CONRAIL v. Darrone (1984) 465 U.S. 624, 630 n.7, 104 S. Ct. 1248, 79 L. Ed. 2d 568 .

(n75)Footnote 54. See Kling v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 633 F.2d 876, 879 , reh. denied 106 S. Ct. 873 (handicapped person denied admission to school; Section 504 administrative remedies inadequate); see also Cannon v. University of Chicago (1979) 441 U.S. 677, 706-707 n.41, 99 S. Ct. 1946, 60 L. Ed. 2d 560 (Title IX, which contains enforcement provision identical to enforcement provision in Title VI, does not require exhaustion of administrative remedies); but see Doe v. Colautti (E.D. Pa. 1978) 454 F. Supp. 621, 630 , aff'd, 592 F.2d 704 (3d Cir. 1979) (requiring exhaustion of administrative remedies).

(n76)Footnote 55. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a).

(n77)Footnote 56. See Pub. L. No. 100-259.

(n78)Footnote 57. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(b).

(n79)Footnote 58. See Grove City College v. Bell (1984) 465 U.S. 555, 571-574, 104 S. Ct. 1211, 79 L. Ed. 2d 516 . See also Consolidated Rail Corp. v. Darrone (1984) 465 U.S. 624, 635-36, 104 S. Ct. 1248, 79 L. Ed. 2d 568 (narrowly construing "program or activity" to reach only specific parts of recipient's operation directly benefiting from federal assistance).

(n80)Footnote 59. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.3(d). "Federal financial assistance" is any grant, loan, contract (other than a procurement contract or a contract of insurance or guarantee), or any other arrangement by which the agency provides or otherwise makes available assistance in the form of (1) funds; (2) services of federal personnel; or (3) real or personal property or any interest in or use of such property including (a) transfers of leases for less than fair market value or for reduced consideration, and (b) proceeds from a subsequent transfer or lease if the federal share of its fair market value is not returned to the federal government. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.3(e).

(n81)Footnote 59.1. Sharer v. Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F.3d 1176, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20856, *4 ; Lovell v. Chandler (9th Cir. 2002) 303 F.3d 1039, 1051 . See also Jim C. v. United States (8th Cir. 2000) 235 F.3d 1079, 1081 (en banc) (section 504 does not violate Spending Clause because State and its instrumentalities can avoid section 504's waiver requirement on piecemeal basis, by simply accepting federal funds for some departments and declining them for others).

(n82)Footnote 59.2. Sharer v. Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F.3d 1176, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20856, *5-*11 (although state's judicial branch of government received federal financial assistance, and under state constitutional and statutory regime governing state public defender services, it, together with state's courts and their administrative apparatus, comprised uniform "judicial department" under state constitution, state justice department could not be considered unitary department or agency for section 504 purposes, where state statutes drew distinction between state's "judicial department," referring to judicial branch of government in its entirety, and "Judicial Department," referring to predominant administrative agency within judicial branch, and units within judicial department had distinct funding sources and administration). See Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. Doe (1977) 519 U.S. 425, 429 n.5, 117 S. Ct. 900, 137 L. Ed. 2d 55 (discussing whether agency is arm of state for Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity purposes); Haybarger v. Lawrence County Adult Prob. & Parole (3d Cir. 2008) 551 F.3d 193, 201 (though not dispositive, state's characterization of entity under state law is significant in determining whether entity is "program or activity" under section 504).

(n83)Footnote 59.3. Sharer v. Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F.3d 1176, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20856, *12 ; Herman v. United Bhd. of Carpenters (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1375, 1381 .

(n84)Footnote 59.4. NCAA v. Smith (1999) 525 U.S. 459, 466 n.3, 468, 119 S. Ct. 924, 142 L. Ed. 2d 929 (NCAA's acceptance of dues from colleges receiving federal funding did not render NCAA liable under Title IX; scope of federal funding requirements of several other federal antidiscrimination measures, including section 504, defined in nearly identical terms to Title IX requirement); Sharer v. Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F.3d 1176, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20856, *12-*14 (no evidence that Judicial Department financed state public defender service's provision of transcripts with federal funds earmarked for that purpose, and under statutory framework operative during relevant period, costs of indigent defendants' transcripts were paid by the state from funds for that purpose).

(n85)Footnote 59.5. Sharer v. Oregon (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F.3d 1176, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20856, *12 (circumstances of employee's hiring in 1997 were irrelevant to whether she could bring section 504 claim based on discrimination that allegedly occurred in 2003). See also Garcia v. SUNY Health Scis. Ctr. (2d Cir. 2001) 280 F.3d 98, 113 n.2 .

(n86)Footnote 60. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a) (emphasis added).

(n87)Footnote 61. See CONRAIL v. Darrone (1984) 465 U.S. 624, 632-634, 637, 104 S. Ct. 1248, 79 L. Ed. 2d 568 .

(n88)Footnote 61.1. 40 U.S.C. § 276a.

(n89)Footnote 61.2. Herman v. United Broth. of Carpenters (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1375, 1381-1383 .

(n90)Footnote 62. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a); see discussion in [a], above.

(n91)Footnote 63. See 29 U.S.C. § 706(8) ("individual with a disability" defined); see also 29 U.S.C. § 794(a) (incorporating 29 U.S.C. § 706(8) by reference); 28 C.F.R. § 41.31.

(n92)Footnote 64. See Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 406, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980 (refusal to admit individual with hearing disability to nursing program did not violate Section 504); Thornhill v. Marsh (9th Cir. 1989) 866 F.2d 1182, 1183-1184 (employee was "otherwise qualified" because he could meet job requirements despite congenital spine deformity).

(n93)Footnote 65. School Board of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 287 n.17, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307 .

(n94)Footnote 66. See 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(C); Gonzalez v. State Personnel Bd. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 422, 434-436, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 282 (alcoholic employee who engages in egregious misconduct is not "otherwise qualified" as a matter of law); see also discussion in [1][d], above.

(n95)Footnote 67. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a); 28 C.F.R. § 41.52(a).

(n96)Footnote 68. 28 C.F.R. § 41.52(b).

(n97)Footnote 69. 28 C.F.R. § 41.52(c).

(n98)Footnote 69.1. Walton v. United States Marshals Service (9th Cir. 2007) 476 F.3d 723, 728-731 (employee failed to raise genuine issue of material fact that employer regarded her as disabled with respect to major life activities of hearing, working, and localizing sound). See Thornton v. McClatchy Newspapers, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 789, 798 (affirming district court's judgment for defendant on plaintiff's "regarded as" claim, because there was no specific evidence that employer viewed her as substantially limited and employee's restrictions did not rise to level of substantial limitation).

(n99)Footnote 69.2. Walton v. United States Marshals Service (9th Cir. 2007) 476 F.3d 723, 732 (a doctor's two reports regarding hearing test results constituting medical record of having only one functioning ear and being unable to localize sound failed to raise genuine issue of material fact that impairment was substantially limiting impairment, and any record of impairment did not meet requirements of 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(k)).

(n100)Footnote 70. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.52(d).

(n101)Footnote 71. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.54.

(n102)Footnote 72. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.55.

(n103)Footnote 73. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.513.

(n104)Footnote 74. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.53; see [f], below.

(n105)Footnote 75. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.54.

(n106)Footnote 76. 42 U.S.C. § 12111 et seq. For further discussion, see ch. 41, pts. B, D, and G.

(n107)Footnote 77. 42 U.S.C. §§ 12201-12204 and 12211.

(n108)Footnote 78. 29 U.S.C. § 794(d).

(n109)Footnote 79. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.53.

(n110)Footnote 80. Douglas v. Cal. Dep't of Youth Auth. (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 812, 819-821 , amended on other grounds, 271 F.3d 910 (9th Cir. 2001) ; Clark v. State of California (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1267, 1271 .

18 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.24

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.24 Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974 and Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

Two federal statutes protect veterans of the armed forces against employment discrimination. The Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974 (VEVRAA)ⁿ¹ requires federal contractors and subcontractors (see [3], below) who receive $10,000ⁿ² or more for the procurement of personal property and nonpersonal services (including construction) to take affirmative action to employ and advance specified veterans.ⁿ³

The Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994 (USERRA)ⁿ⁴, formerly the Veterans' Reemployment Rights Act,ⁿ⁵ provides generally for employment and reemployment of, and nondiscrimination against, persons returning to their jobs after service in the uniformed services. "Uniformed service" means the Armed Forces, the Army National Guard and the Air National Guard when engaged in active duty for training, inactive duty training, or full-time National Guard duty, the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service, and any other category of persons designated by the President in wartime or a national emergency.ⁿ⁶ The USERRA provides that once a person is reemployed, he or she cannot be discharged except for cause for one year after the date of reemployment if the person served more than 180 days, or for 180 days after the date of reemployment if the person served more than 30 but less than 181 days.ⁿ⁷

A person reemployed under the USERRA also is entitled to (1) seniority and other rights and benefits that he or she had on the date of commencement of the service;ⁿ⁸ (2) coverage under employer health plans;ⁿ⁹ and (3) accrual of credit for up to five years on employee pension plans.ⁿ¹⁰

USERRA supersedes any state law contract, agreement, or other matter that reduces, limits, or eliminates in any manner any right or benefit provided by USERRA.^{n10.1} Thus, for example, because USERRA directs that its provisions may not be eliminated by a contract, the release of rights in a severance agreement obtained from a captain in the United States Marine Corps Reserves, terminating his employment on the day he returned from duty, could not be enforced to the extent the severance agreement dealt with the claims of termination based on plaintiff's membership in the military or his military service.^{n10.2}

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

The affirmative action provisions of the VEVRAA are enforced by the OFCCP,ⁿ¹¹ under the same procedures as those applicable to Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.ⁿ¹² The remedies and penalties for violation of VEVRAA, like Section 503, include injunctions,ⁿ¹³ withholding of progress payments,ⁿ¹⁴ termination of the contract,ⁿ¹⁵ and debarment.ⁿ¹⁶ For a discussion relating to OFCCP enforcement procedures and remedies under Section 503, see § 40.23[1][b]. OFCCP enforcement procedures are discussed in detail in Chapter 44, Part C.

Administrative enforcement of USERRA's provisions is available through the Secretary of Labor, who must provide assistance to any person with respect to complaints of violation of their employment or reemployment rights under USERRA.ⁿ¹⁷ The Secretary investigates complaints filed and gives technical assistance when requested to complainants and employers.ⁿ¹⁸ If after investigating, the Secretary determines that USERRA's provisions have been violated, the Secretary must make reasonable efforts to ensure compliance.ⁿ¹⁹ If the Secretary's efforts to ensure compliance are unsuccessful, the Secretary notifies the complainant of the results of the investigation and the complainant's right to request that the Secretary transfer the complaint to the Attorney General for processing of an action in federal district court. Not later than 60 days after the Secretary receives such a request with respect to a complaint, the Secretary must refer the complaint to the Attorney General.ⁿ²⁰ Not later than 60 days after the Attorney General receives a referral, the Attorney General must decide whether to appear on behalf of, and act as attorney for, the person on whose behalf the complaint is submitted and notify the person in writing of the decision.^{n20.1} Alternatively, a person may commence a district court action on his or her own behalf instead of applying for relief from the Secretary of Labor or the Attorney General, or a person may do so if the Attorney General has refused to represent the person with regard to the complaint.ⁿ²¹ Employers, prospective employers, and other entities cannot initiate actions under USERRA.ⁿ²²

The inability of the Secretary or the Attorney General to comply with deadlines applicable to them does not affect the authority of the Attorney General to represent and file an action or submit a complaint on behalf of a person, and does not affect the right of a person to commence an action. It also does not constitute a defense, including a statute of limitations period, that an employer may raise in an action filed by the Attorney General or the person.^{n22.1} There is no limitations period for a complaint or claim to be filed with the Secretary or a federal or state court.^{n22.2}

In a private USERRA action, the employee first has the burden of showing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that his or her protected status based on service in the uniformed services was a substantial or motivating factor in the adverse employment action. The employer's discriminatory motivation may be reasonably inferred from a variety of factors, including the following:ⁿ²³

- Proximity in time between the employee's military activity and the adverse employment action;
- Inconsistencies between proffered reason and other actions of the employer;
- An employer's expressed hostility toward members protected by the statute together with knowledge of the employee's military activity; and
- Disparate treatment of certain employees compared to other employees with similar work records or offenses.

To be considered "service in the uniformed services," the performance of duty must be "under competent authority."ⁿ²⁴ The employer may then avoid liability only by showing, as an affirmative defense, that the employer would have taken the same action without regard to the employee's protected status.ⁿ²⁵

The district court can require a party to comply with the provisions of the USERRA, award compensation for loss of wages or benefits, and award liquidated damages for willful failure to comply.ⁿ²⁶ The court must use, in any case in which the court determines it is appropriate, its fully equity powers, including injunctions, temporary restraining orders, and contempt orders to vindicate a person's USERRA rights.ⁿ²⁷ No fees or court costs may be taxed against any person claiming rights under USERRA,ⁿ²⁸ but a person who prevails in a suit on his or her own behalf with the use of private counsel may receive reasonable attorney's fees, expert witness fees, and other litigation expenses, plus prejudgment interest.ⁿ²⁹

USERRA does not create a cause of action against state employee-supervisors.^{n29.1}

For additional discussion of civil actions under the USERRA, see Chapter 43, Part B.

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

The affirmative action provisions of the VEVRAA apply to federal "contractors,"ⁿ³⁰ or persons holding contracts or subcontracts covered by the act as discussed in [1], above. The types of contractors (i.e. "prime contractors" and "subcontractors")ⁿ³¹ subject to the act are the same as those subject to section 503, as discussed in § 40.23[1][c].

USERRA broadly defines an "employer" as including a person or entity that pays salary or wages for work performed or or that has control over employment opportunities, including a person or entity to whom the employer has delegated the performance of employment-related responsibilities.ⁿ³² "Employer" also includes the state and federal governments, persons or entities who discriminatorily denied initial employment in violation of USERRA, and successors in interest.ⁿ³³

USERRA has been amended to confer jurisdiction only on state courts in private suits against state employers.ⁿ³⁴ There is federal jurisdiction over an action against a state or a private employer commenced by the United States.^{n34.1} Because Congress' intent to limit USERRA suits against state employers to state courts is unmistakable, federal jurisdiction cannot continue under the general federal question jurisdictional statute.ⁿ³⁵

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

The affirmative action provisions of the VEVRAA apply to "qualified special disabled veterans" and "veterans of the Vietnam era."ⁿ³⁶ A "special disabled veteran" is (1) one who is entitled to compensation (or who, but for the receipt of military pay, would be entitled to compensation) under laws administered by the Veteran's Administration for a disability (a) rated at 30 percent or more, or (b) rated at 10 or 20 percent in the case of a veteran who, as determined under Title 38 United States Code Section 3106, has a serious disability,ⁿ³⁷ or (2) one who was discharged or released from active duty because of a service-connected disability.ⁿ³⁸ A "qualified" special disabled veteran is one who is capable of performing a particular job, with reasonable accommodation to his or her disability.ⁿ³⁹ Effective Nov. 7, 2003, the affirmative action provisions of the VEVRAA apply to "qualified covered veterans."ⁿ⁴⁰ A covered veteran is one of any of the following:ⁿ⁴¹

1. Disabled veterans;
2. Veterans who served on active duty in the Armed Forces during a war or in a campaign or expedition for which a campaign badge has been authorized;
3. Veterans who, while serving on active duty in the Armed Forces, participated in a U.S. military operation for which an Armed Forces service medal was awarded pursuant to Executive Order No.

12985 (61 Fed. Reg. 1209); and

4. Recently separated veterans.

Under VEVRAA, qualified, with respect to an employment position, means having the ability to perform the essential functions of the position with or without reasonable accommodation for an individual with a disability.ⁿ⁴² For a discussion relating to employer accommodation of handicaps, see Chapter 41, Part D.

A veteran of the Vietnam era is a person who (1) served on active duty for a period of more than 180 days, any part of which occurred between August 5, 1964, and May 7, 1975, and was discharged or released from duty with other than a dishonorable discharge, or (2) was discharged or released from active duty because of a service-connected disability if any part of the active duty occurred between August 5, 1964, and May 7, 1975.ⁿ⁴³

USERRA defines an employee as "any person employed by an employer."ⁿ⁴⁴ As noted above, it also specifies that its provisions regarding reemployment rights apply to any person whose absence from a position of employment is necessitated because of service in the uniformed service.ⁿ⁴⁵ The USERRA also applies to persons in the uniformed service who are denied initial employment.ⁿ⁴⁶ Because of the broad definition of "employer," one commentator has argued that the USERRA may apply to independent contractors and their employees.ⁿ⁴⁷

A person's entitlement to benefits under USERRA terminates if he or she is separated from uniformed service with a dishonorable or bad conduct discharge or under other than honorable conditions or is dismissed or dropped from the rolls under Title 10 United States Code Section 1161(a) or (b).ⁿ⁴⁸

[5] Prohibited Employment Practices

The nondiscrimination and affirmative action provisions of the VEVRAA are the same as the requirements and prohibitions of Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act.ⁿ⁴⁹ For a detailed discussion relating to those practices and prohibitions, see § 40.23[1][e].

USERRA prohibits employers from denying to a member, or applicant to be a member, of the uniformed services the right to initial employment, reemployment, retention in employment, promotion, or any benefit of employment because of any relationship or obligation arising from that membership.ⁿ⁵⁰ A person is not entitled to reemployment benefits unless that person's absence from employment is necessitated by service in the uniformed services.ⁿ⁵¹ USERRA also prohibits employers from retaliating for any actions taken by a person to enforce protections afforded by USERRA.ⁿ⁵²

A violation of USERRA occurs when membership, application for membership, service, application for service, or obligation to serve in the uniformed services is a motivating factor in the employer's action, unless the employer can prove the action would have been taken in the absence of the membership, application for membership, service, application for service, or obligation to serve.ⁿ⁵³

[6] Defenses

The defenses to the affirmative action provisions of the VEVRAA are similar to the Section 503 defenses. Thus, there is no liability under the VEVRAA if persons denied reemployment are not "qualified special disabled veterans" or "veterans of the Vietnam era."ⁿ⁵⁴ Effective Nov. 7, 2003, VEVRAA applies to "qualified covered veterans."ⁿ⁵⁵ For a detailed discussion relating to Section 503 defenses and waivers, see § 40.23[1][f].

An employer is not required to reemploy a person under USERRA if: (1) the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make such reemployment impossible or unreasonable; (2) it would impose an undue hardship on the employer to comply with certain specified duties regarding the accommodation or training of persons who were disabled or whose disabilities were aggravated by service and who could no longer perform certain duties as specified in Title 38 United States Code Section 4313(a)(3), (4), and (b)(2)(B); or (3) the employment from which the person left to serve in the uniformed services was for a brief, nonrecurrent period and there was no reasonable expectation that such employment would continue indefinitely or for a significant period.ⁿ⁵⁶

In addition, a person submitting an application for reemployment under the USERRA must provide certain documentation establishing the timeliness of the person's application, that the person has not exceeded specified service limitations, and the person's entitlement to benefits was not terminated by a dishonorable discharge following military service of 31 days or more.ⁿ⁵⁷ Although failure to provide such documentation because it is unavailable or nonexistent does not initially entitle the employer to not comply with the reemployment requirements of the USERRA, if after reemployment, documentation becomes available that establishes that the person does not meet one or more of those requirements, the employer may terminate the person.ⁿ⁵⁸

In a private action against an employer for discrimination based on the person's military status, the employer may avoid liability only by showing, as an affirmative defense, that the employer would have taken the same action without regard to the employee's protected status.ⁿ⁵⁹ The burden of proof is on the employer.ⁿ⁶⁰

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawGeneral OverviewMilitary & Veterans LawVeteransBenefitsVietnam Era Veterans
Readjustment Assistance ActPensions & Benefits LawEqual ProtectionVeterans

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 38 U.S.C. § 4211 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. With respect to contracts entered into on or after Nov. 7, 2003, the amount increases to $100,000. See P.L. 107-288, § 2(b)(3).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 38 U.S.C. § 4212(a); 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.1; see also [4], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. 38 U.S.C. § 4301 et seq. The Veterans' Employment and Training Service ("VETS") has issued rules implementing the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994. See 20 C.F.R. Part 1002. VETS also has developed an Internet-based system to allow USERRA claimants to officially submit a claim via the VETS Website using an electronic version of the claim form. See <http://www.dol.gov/elaws/userra.htm>.

(n5)Footnote 5. Former 38 U.S.C. § 2021 et seq.

(n6)Footnote 6. 38 U.S.C. § 4303(16).

(n7)Footnote 7. 38 U.S.C. § 4316(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. 38 U.S.C. § 4316(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. 38 U.S.C. § 4317.

(n10)Footnote 10. 38 U.S.C. § 4318.

(n11)Footnote 10.1. 38 U.S.C. § 4302(b).

(n12)Footnote 10.2. Perez v. Uline (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 953, 957-958, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 .

(n13)Footnote 11. See 38 U.S.C. § 4212(b) (aggrieved veteran entitled to file complaint with Secretary of Labor, who must promptly investigate and take appropriate action); see also Clementson v. Donovan (D. 1985) 608 F. Supp. 152, 154 (enforcement is delegated by Secretary of Labor to OFCCP).

(n14)Footnote 12. See 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.; see also 29 U.S.C. § 793(b) (individuals aggrieved under Section 503 entitled to file complaint with OFCCP, which must promptly investigate and take warranted actions); compare 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-250.20-60-250.32 (Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act enforcement regulations) with 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-741.20-60-741.32 (Rehabilitation Act enforcement regulations).

(n15)Footnote 13. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.28(a).

(n16)Footnote 14. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.28(c).

(n17)Footnote 15. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.28(d).

(n18)Footnote 16. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.28(e).

(n19)Footnote 17. See 38 U.S.C. § 4321.

(n20)Footnote 18. 38 U.S.C. § 4322(a), (c).

(n21)Footnote 19. 38 U.S.C. § 4322(d).

(n22)Footnote 20. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(a)(1).

(n23)Footnote 20.1. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(a)(2).

(n24)Footnote 21. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(a)(3).

(n25)Footnote 22. See 38 U.S.C. § 4323(f).

(n26)Footnote 22.1. 38 U.S.C. § 4327(a).

(n27)Footnote 22.2. 38 U.S.C. § 4327(b).

(n28)Footnote 23. Leisek v. Brightwood Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 895, 899-900 (evidence supported inference that employee's military status was motivating factor in employer's decision to terminate his employment due to its concern regarding significant number of absences from work that employee's participation in National Guard program required).

(n29)Footnote 24. 38 U.S.C. § 4303(13); see Leisek v. Brightwood Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 895, 899-900 (employee not acting under National Guard orders, or under any other "competent authority," when he traveled rather than returning to work; employer's policy made unexcused absences ground for termination of employment so that unexcused absences would have been legitimate basis for decision to terminate his employment; however, court was required to examine whether record supported inference that employer was also motivated by employee's Guard status in terminating his employment).

(n30)Footnote 25. See Leisek v. Brightwood Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 895, 899-900 ; for discussion of affirmative defenses, see [6], below.

(n31)Footnote 26. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(d).

(n32)Footnote 27. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(e).

(n33)Footnote 28. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(h).

(n34)Footnote 29. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(h).

(n35)Footnote 29.1. *Townsend v. Univ.of Alaska (9th Cir. 2008) 543 F.3d 478, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 18974, *14-20 (structure of USERRA and its legislative history made plain that Congress did not intend to create either express or implied cause of action against state supervisors).

(n36)Footnote 30. See 38 U.S.C. § 4212(a).

(n37)Footnote 31. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.2; see Partridge v. Reich (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 920, 923-925 (no basis for VEVRAA coverage based on grant agreements between federal government and county fire department, contract between federal government and county that did not involve fire department, and grant between FEMA and state and county even though agreement mentioned fire department as organization to provide rescue services).

(n38)Footnote 32. 38 U.S.C. § 4303(4)(A)(i).

(n39)Footnote 33. 38 U.S.C. § 4303(4)(A)(ii)-(v).

(n40)Footnote 34. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(b); Pub. L. 105-368 (Nov. 11, 1998); see Pub L. 105-368, § 211(b)(1) (amendment made expressly applicable to pending cases); *Townsend v. University of Alaska (9th Cir. 2008) 543 F.3d 478, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 18974, *6-14.

(n41)Footnote 34.1. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(b)(1).

(n42)Footnote 35. *Townsend v. Univ. of Alaska (9th Cir. 2008) 343 F.3d 478, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 18974, *6-14 (Congress intended that actions brought by individuals against a state be commenced in state court).

(n43)Footnote 36. See 38 U.S.C. § 4212(a). The OFCCP regulations state that the affirmative action provisions of the act apply to "qualified disabled veterans" as opposed to "qualified special disabled veterans." See 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.1. Those terms have slightly different meanings under the act. See 38 U.S.C. § 4211(1), (3).

(n44)Footnote 37. See 38 U.S.C. § 3106(a) (Veteran's Administration Administrator as required to provide initial eligibility and feasibility evaluation for veteran with service-connected disability who applies for vocational rehabilitation benefits).

(n45)Footnote 38. 38 U.S.C. § 4211(1).

(n46)Footnote 39. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.2.

(n47)Footnote 40. 38 U.S.C. § 4212(a). See P.L. 107-288 § 2(b)(3).

(n48)Footnote 41. 38 U.S.C. § 4212(a)(3)(A).

(n49)Footnote 42. 38 U.S.C. § 4212(a)(3)(B).

(n50)Footnote 43. 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.2; see 38 U.S.C. § 4211(2), (4).

(n51)Footnote 44. 38 U.S.C. § 4303(3).

(n52)Footnote 45. 38 U.S.C. § 4312(a); see discussion in [1], above, for definition of "uniformed service."

(n53)Footnote 46. 38 U.S.C. § 4311(a).

(n54)Footnote 47. See Klein & Pappas, The Return from Uniformed Service, New York Law Journal (Dec. 5, 1994) 3, p. 3.

(n55)Footnote 48. 38 U.S.C. § 4304.

(n56)Footnote 49. See 38 U.S.C. § 4212(a); 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-250.4-60-250.5.

(n57)Footnote 50. See 38 U.S.C. § 4311(a).

(n58)Footnote 51. 38 U.S.C. § 4312(a); see Leisek v. Brightwood Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 895, 901 (employee who attended National Guard event without orders to do so, so that his absence while attending the event not necessitated by his service, not entitled to reemployment benefits).

(n59)Footnote 52. See 38 U.S.C. § 4311(c)(2). See Wallace v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 2006) 460 F.3d 1181, 1188-1195 (in action under USERRA for constructive discharge by former police officer, to extent district court concluded that employer's actions taken prior to time officer submitted his application for reemployment could not as matter of law be retaliatory, it was incorrect; officer had repeatedly exercised his right to reemployment on several occasions, and evidence suggested officer's relationship with his superiors was strained at least in part due to his military service, permitting inference the adverse employment actions were taken because of his exercise of rights protected by USERRA; that officer resigned almost immediately following civilian's threat to bring false charges of discrimination against him did not preclude finding of constructive discharge, because, although threatened charges might have been groundless and not survived investigation, there was evidence to support conclusion that department had history of taking disciplinary action against officer for pretextual reasons and without investigation).

(n60)Footnote 53. 38 U.S.C. § 4311(c)(1); compare Monroe v. Standard Oil Co. (1981) 452 U.S. 549 (interpreting VEVRAA, USERRA's predecessor, to require that employee's military status be sole motivation, rather than motivating factor, for employer's action).

(n61)Footnote 54. See 38 U.S.C. § 4212(a).

(n62)Footnote 55. See § 40.24[4], above.

(n63)Footnote 56. 38 U.S.C. § 4312(d)(1).

(n64)Footnote 57. 38 U.S.C. § 4312(f)(1).

(n65)Footnote 58. 38 U.S.C. § 4312(f)(3)(A).

(n66)Footnote 59. Leisek v. Brightwood Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 895, 899 .

(n67)Footnote 60. Leisek v. Brightwood Corp. (9th Cir. 2002) 278 F.3d 895, 900 .

19 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.25

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.25 Civil Rights Act of 1866 (Title 42 United States Code Section 1981)

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

Among other things, Title 42 United States Code Section 1981, originally enacted as part of the Civil Rights Act of 1866, guarantees all persons in the United States the same right as white persons to make and enforce contracts,ⁿ¹ including contracts of employment.ⁿ² As used in Section 1981, the term "make and enforce contracts" includes the making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship.ⁿ³

The definition of "make and enforce contracts" was added by the Civil Rights Act of 1991.ⁿ⁴ The purpose of this provision was to overrule Patterson v. McLean Credit Union,ⁿ⁵ in which the United State Supreme Court had narrowly limited the application of Section 1981 to racially discriminatory conduct involving the formation of new contracts and their enforcement.ⁿ⁶ Thus, the Court in Patterson had held that employment discrimination was not actionable under Section 1981 unless it involved a discriminatory refusal to enter into an employment contract (e.g., discrimination in hiring) or a discriminatory impairment of the ability to enforce contractual rights. Under the holding in Patterson, discriminatory conduct relating to the terms and conditions of continuing employment, such as racial harassment, was not actionable.ⁿ⁷ The Court also held that discriminatory denial of promotional opportunities was not actionable under Section 1981 unless the promotion "rises to the level of an opportunity for a new and distinct" employer-employee relationship.ⁿ⁸ Furthermore, Patterson left in doubt the question of whether discriminatory discharge was actionable under Section 1981.ⁿ⁹ In light of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, it now appears clear that racial discrimination in hiring and discharge, and in all other "benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions" of employment is actionable under Section 1981.ⁿ¹⁰ Section 1981 also encompasses a claim of retaliation against a person who has complained about a violation of another person's contract-related right.^{n10.1}

To state a claim under Section 1981, there must be a contractual relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant. A plaintiff who lacks any rights under an existing contractual relationship with a defendant, and who has not been prevented from entering into such a contractual relationship, may not bring suit under 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Section 1981 offers relief when racial discrimination blocks the creation of a contractual relationship, as well as when racial discrimination impairs an existing contractual relationship, so long as the plaintiff has or would have rights under the existing or proposed contractual relationship.^{n10.2}

Section 1981 requires proof of intentional discrimination.ⁿ¹¹ If an employment discrimination claim is not based on a disparate impact theory, it is intentional discrimination.ⁿ¹² In analyzing employment-related claims under Section 1981, courts apply the same legal principles as those applicable in a Title VII disparate treatment case.^{n12.1} Typically, courts apply the burden-shifting framework established in McDonnell Douglas.^{n12.2} However, courts also have held that although the McDonnell Douglas burden shifting framework is a useful tool to assist at the summary judgment stage, nothing compels the parties to invoke the McDonnell Douglas presumption.^{n12.3} When responding to a summary judgment motion, plaintiff may proceed by using the McDonnell Douglas framework, or may simply produce direct or circumstantial evidence demonstrating that a discriminatory reason more likely than not motivated the employer.^{n12.4} When the plaintiff offers direct evidence of discriminatory motive, a triable issue as to the actual motivation of the employer is created, even if the evidence is not substantial.^{n12.5}

In the Ninth Circuit, a claim that the employer was aware of the racial harassment an employee faced from coworkers and failed to take steps to address it, thereby creating a hostile work environment, is cognizable under Section 1981.^{n12.6} By not basing a Section 1981 claim on disparate impact and by proving each of the following, a plaintiff will make out a claim of racial harassment under Section 1981:ⁿ¹³

- The employee was subjected to verbal or physical conduct of a harassing nature because of race;
- The conduct was unwelcome; and
- The conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment and create an abusive working environment.

The plaintiff is not required to prove that white employees were not subject to similar harassment.ⁿ¹⁴

In considering whether the discriminatory conduct was "severe or pervasive," courts look to all the circumstances, including the following:^{n14.1}

- The frequency of the discriminatory conduct.
- The severity of the discriminatory conduct.
- Whether the discriminatory conduct is physically threatening or humiliating, or a mere offensive utterance.
- Whether the discriminatory conduct unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance.

An isolated incident of harassment by a coworker will rarely, if ever, give rise to a reasonable fear that the harassment has become a permanent feature of the employment relationship.^{n14.2}

Discriminatory conduct directed at an individual other than the plaintiff may be relevant to a plaintiff's hostile work environment claim in certain circumstances.^{n14.3}

Although Section 1981 and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964ⁿ¹⁵ both prohibit certain types of racial discrimination in employment, they are not coextensive in their coverage. The two laws are separate, distinct, and independent avenues of relief.ⁿ¹⁶ However, hostile work environment claims under Title VII contain the same elements as a § 1981 hostile work environment claim so that the legal principles guiding a court in a Title VII dispute apply with equal force in a § 1981 action.ⁿ¹⁶ For an overview of the protection afforded by Title VII, see § 40.20.

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

Unlike the more recently enacted employment discrimination laws,ⁿ¹⁷ there are no administrative enforcement procedures for Title 42 United States Code Section 1981.ⁿ¹⁸ Aggrieved individuals may enforce Section 1981 in federal or state court.ⁿ¹⁹ Such individuals are entitled to both equitable and legal relief, including compensatory and, under certain circumstances, punitive damages.ⁿ²⁰ They may also be entitled to recover attorney's fees.ⁿ²¹

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

In Runyan v. McCrary,ⁿ²² involving private schools that excluded qualified children from admission on the basis of race, the United States Supreme Court held that Title 42 United States Code Section 1981 applies to private acts of discrimination.ⁿ²³ The Court relied, in part, on its decision in Johnson v. Railway Express Agency,ⁿ²⁴ which held that since Section 1981 relates primarily to racial discrimination in the making and enforcement of contracts,ⁿ²⁵ it affords a federal remedy against racial discrimination in private employment.ⁿ²⁶ The Court reaffirmed Runyan in Patterson v. McLean Credit Union.ⁿ²⁷ Pursuant to the Civil Rights Act of 1991,ⁿ²⁸ Section 1981 now expressly provides that the rights protected by that section are protected against impairment by nongovernmental discrimination.ⁿ²⁹

Section 1981 also applies to state and local public employers,ⁿ³⁰ but does not apply to federal employers because the federal employment provision in Title VIIⁿ³¹ is the exclusive judicial remedy for claims of discrimination in federal employment.ⁿ³²

[4] Employees Covered

Section 1981 expressly applies to "[a]ll persons within the jurisdiction of the United States."ⁿ³³

[5] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination

Title 42 United States Code Section 1981 prohibits employment discrimination on the basis of race,ⁿ³⁴ but does not apply to sex, age, or religious discrimination.ⁿ³⁵ Race discrimination has been held to involve distinctions based solely on ancestry or ethnic characteristics,ⁿ³⁶ as well as claims by white persons for reverse discrimination.ⁿ³⁷

Although some courts have held that an individual may assert a Section 1981 claim based on national origin,ⁿ³⁸ most have held that claims based solely on national origin are not covered by Section 1981.ⁿ³⁹ However, race has been defined broadly to cover immigrant ethnic groups.ⁿ⁴⁰ If there is a racial component to a national origin claim, and racial discrimination is also alleged, Section 1981 apparently does apply.ⁿ⁴¹ Thus, in Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji,ⁿ⁴² the United States Supreme Court held that a United States citizen born in Iraq may be protected from racial discrimination under Section 1981 if he could prove that he was subjected to intentional discrimination because he was an Arab, rather than solely because of the place or nation of his origin.

[6] Defenses

Employers may defeat claims under Title 42 United States Code Section 1981 by articulating a legitimate business reason for an alleged unlawful employment practice.ⁿ⁴³ Also, public officials who violate Section 1981 in executing their duties in a way that they in good faith believe the law to require may have a legitimate defense.ⁿ⁴⁴

A mixed-motive defense to liability is available for a retaliation claim brought under Section 1981. If the mixed-motive defense to retaliation is proven as an undisputed fact, it can provide a basis for summary judgment.ⁿ⁴⁵

For discussion of substantive defenses to discrimination claims, see Chapter 41, Part E.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Rights Law Civil Rights Acts General Overview Labor & Employment Law General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 affords federal remedy against discrimination in private employment on basis of race).

(n3)Footnote 3. 42 U.S.C. § 1981(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 101(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132, 109 S. Ct. 2363 ; see Pub. L. No. 101-166, § 3(1),(4) (purposes of Civil Rights Act of 1991).

(n6)Footnote 6. Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 176-178, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132, 109 S. Ct. 2363 . The Supreme Court has subsequently held that the provision of the Civil Rights Act of 1991 overturning the Patterson holding may not be applied retroactively to cases pending at the time of enactment of that legislation. Rivers v. Roadway Express (1994) 511 U.S. 298, 303-309, 114 S. Ct. 1510, 128 L. Ed. 2d 274 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 177-182, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132, 109 S. Ct. 2363 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 185, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132, 109 S. Ct. 2363 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Compare Courtney v. Canyon Television & Appliance Rental (9th Cir. 1990) 899 F.2d 845, 849 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 not applicable to discriminatory termination) with Hicks v. Brown Group, Inc. (8th Cir. 1992) 982 F.2d 295 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 is applicable to discriminatory termination).

(n10)Footnote 10. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981(a), (b).

(n11)Footnote 10.1. CBOCS West, Inc. v. Humphries (2008) 128 S. Ct. 1951, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 4516, *7-*26 .

(n12)Footnote 10.2. Domino's Pizza, Inc. v. McDonald (2006) 126 S. Ct. 1246, 1249-1252, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1069 (plaintiff could not sue in individual capacity under § 1981, when injury was to corporation of which he was shareholder and contracting officer).

(n13)Footnote 11. Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 806 (but "intentional" need not be included in jury instructions).

(n14)Footnote 12. Kolstad v. Am. Dental Ass'n (1999) 527 U.S. 526, 534, 119 S. Ct. 2118, 144 L. Ed. 2d 494 ; Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 806 .

(n15)Footnote 12.1. Metoyer v. Chassman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 919, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22750, *24 ; Fonseca v. Sysco Food Servs. of Ariz. Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 840, 850 .

(n16)Footnote 12.2. See Fonseca v. Sysco Food Servs. of Ariz. Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 840, 850 . For discussion of the McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting framework, see § 41.11[1].

(n17)Footnote 12.3. Metoyer v. Chassman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 919, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22750, *24 ; McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1122 .

(n18)Footnote 12.4. Metoyer v. Chassman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 919, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22750, *24-*25 ; McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1122 .

(n19)Footnote 12.5. Metoyer v. Chassman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 919, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22750, *25, *43-*49 (district court erred in granting summary judgment, because African-American plaintiff presented both direct and circumstantial evidence demonstrating that management harbored discriminatory animus toward African-Americans); Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 1217, 1221 . See also Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 889 (on summary judgment, requisite degree of proof necessary to establish prima facie case is minimal and does not even need to rise to level of preponderance of evidence).

(n20)Footnote 12.6. Johnson v. Riverside Healthcare System (9th Cir. 2008) 534 F.3d 1116, 1122 .

(n21)Footnote 13. Johnson v. Riverside Healthcare System (9th Cir. 2008) 534 F.3d 1116, 1122-1124 (physician's complaint sufficiently alleged cause of action for racial harassment under § 1981, where complaint included at least three allegations that were relevant to claim he was subjected to a hostile work environment because of his race); Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 806-807 (jury instructions adequately included these elements and mirrored Ninth Circuit model civil jury instruction for disparate treatment under Title VII, which is analogous for instant purposes), citing Pavon v. Swift Transp. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 902, 908 .

(n22)Footnote 14. Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 807 .

(n23)Footnote 14.1. Johnson v. Riverside Healthcare System (9th Cir. 2008) 534 F.3d 1116, 1122 ; Kortan v. Cal. Youth Auth. (9th Cir. 2000) 217 F.3d 1104, 1110 .

(n24)Footnote 14.2. Johnson v. Riverside Healthcare System (9th Cir. 2008) 534 F.3d 1116, 1123 ; Brooks v. City of San Mateo (9th Cir. 1999) 229 F.3d 917, 924 .

(n25)Footnote 14.3. Johnson v. Riverside Healthcare System, LP (9th Cir. 2008) 534 F.3d 1116, 1123 . See Monteiro v. Tempe Union High Sch. Dist. (9th Cir. 1998) 158 F.3d 1022, 1033-1034 .

(n26)Footnote 15. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n27)Footnote 16. Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295 ; see Miller v. Fairchild Indus., Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 498, 503 ; (42 U.S.C. § 1981 provides independent but overlapping federal remedey for race discrimination in employment); Ellis v. Naval Air Rework Facility (N.D. Cal. 1975) 404 F. Supp. 377, 380 (Title VII does not preempt 42 U.S.C. § 1981; Title VII and 42 U.S.C. § 1981 as independent and supplemental grounds for jurisdiction).

(n28)Footnote 16.1. Johnson v. Riverside Healthcare System (9th Cir. 2008) 534 F.3d 1116, 1122 n.3 .

(n29)Footnote 17. See, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-4 (Title VII enforced by EEOC); See also § 40.20[3][a].

(n30)Footnote 18. See Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295 (assistance in investigation, conciliation, counsel, and waiver of court costs are unavailable under specific terms of 42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n31)Footnote 19. See 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(4) (federal courts have jurisdiction of civil action commenced by any person under any civil rights laws enacted by Congress); DeHorney v. Bank of America Nat. Trust and Sav. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 459, 463 (state and federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction over 42 U.S.C. § 1981 cases). Originally, the Civil Rights Act provided for exclusive federal jurisdiction. see Act of Apr. 9, 1866, § 3, 14 Stat. 27.

That limitation was deleted, and 28 U.S.C. § 1343(a)(4) provides for original, but not exclusive, jurisdiction.

(n32)Footnote 20. Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295 .

(n33)Footnote 21. See 42 U.S.C. § 1988(b), (c). For discussion, see § 43.14[6][h].

(n34)Footnote 22. Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 .

(n35)Footnote 23. Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 175, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 .

(n36)Footnote 24. Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295 .

(n37)Footnote 25. See [1], above.

(n38)Footnote 26. See Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 172, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 ; Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295 .

(n39)Footnote 27. Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 171-175, 109 S. Ct. 2363, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132 , superseded on other grounds by statute by amendment of 42 U.S.C. § 1981 (see 105 Stat. 1071).

(n40)Footnote 28. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 101(2).

(n41)Footnote 29. 42 U.S.C. § 1981(c).

(n42)Footnote 30. See Sethy v. Alameda County Water Dist. (9th Cir. 1976) 545 F.2d 1157, 1160 ; 42 U.S.C. § 1981(c) (statute applies to impairment of rights "under color of State law").

(n43)Footnote 31. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16; see West v. Gibson (1999) 527 U.S. 212, 119 S. Ct. 1906, 144 L. Ed. 2d 196, 204 (EEOC has authority to require federal agencies to pay compensatory damages when they discriminate in violation of Title VII).

(n44)Footnote 32. See Brown v. GSA (1976) 425 U.S. 820, 835, 96 S. Ct. 1961, 48 L. Ed. 2d 402 ; see also Ellis v. Naval Air Rework Facility (N.D. Cal. 1975) 404 F. Supp. 377, 380 (although Title VII has express waiver to sovereign immunity (see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16(c)), 42 U.S.C. § 1981 has no such waiver).

(n45)Footnote 33. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981(a).

(n46)Footnote 34. See Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295 .

(n47)Footnote 35. See Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 167, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 (dictum); see also League of Academic Women v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (N.D. Cal. 1972) 343 F. Supp. 636, 639 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 not applicable to sex discrimination).

(n48)Footnote 36. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 ; Fonseca v. Sysco Food Services of Arizona, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 840, 850 .

(n49)Footnote 37. See McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 279, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 .

(n50)Footnote 38. See Ortiz v. Bank of America (E.D. Cal. 1982) 547 F. Supp. 550, 568 , aff'd, 824 F.2d 692 (1987) .

(n51)Footnote 39. See Gradillas v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (D. Ariz. 1975) 407 F. Supp. 865, 867 .

(n52)Footnote 40. Fonseca v. Sysco Food Services of Arizona, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 840, 850 .

(n53)Footnote 41. See Gonzalez v. Stanford Applied Eng'g (9th Cir. 1979) 597 F.2d 1298, 1300 (national origin claim by Mexican-American amended to include claim that discrimination was based on dark skin is racial discrimination claim covered by 42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n54)Footnote 42. Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 .

(n55)Footnote 43. See Johnson v. Bunny Bread Co. (8th Cir. 1981) 646 F.2d 1250, 1254 .

(n56)Footnote 44. See Faraca v. Clements (5th Cir. 1975) 506 F.2d 956, 960 .

(n57)Footnote 45. Metoyer v. Chassman (9th Cir. 2007) 504 F.3d 919, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22750, *26-*36, *49-*53 (employer did not present sufficient evidence to support summary judgment based on mixed-motive defense, where facts of plaintiff's misconduct were undisputed, but employer's contention that it would have made the same decision to terminate her employment was undermined by plaintiff's declaration that other persons engaged in similar questionable practices and faced no disciplinary consequences).

20 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.26

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.26 Civil Rights Act of 1871 (Title 42 United States Code Section 1983)

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

Title 42 United States Code Section 1983 is derived from the Civil Rights Act of 1871, which was passed to enforce the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution.ⁿ¹ Section 1983 prohibits "the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws" by any person acting "under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any [s]tate[,], or [t]erritory[,], or the District of Columbia,"ⁿ² and thus generally applies only to public employment or employment involving state action.ⁿ³ Unlike Section 1981,ⁿ⁴ Section 1983 creates no substantive statutory rights.ⁿ⁵ Rather, it is a vehicle for the enforcement of "rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the [United States] Constitution and laws."ⁿ⁶ For example, it may be used to assert employment discrimination in violation of constitutional guarantees.ⁿ⁷ However, although Section 1983 may be used to enforce rights under some federal "laws,"ⁿ⁸ courts have held that Section 1983 may not be used to enforce Title VII and the ADEA, because those statutes contain their own exclusive remedies.ⁿ⁹ Title VII and the ADEA do not, however, preempt Section 1983 when an aggrieved employee bases his or her claim on specific constitutional violations,ⁿ¹⁰ even if the same facts would also suggest a violation of those statutes.ⁿ¹¹

A plaintiff alleging an adverse employment actionⁿ¹² in violation of First Amendment rights must show that the protected conduct was a "substantial" or "motivating" factor of the employer's action. The burden then shifts to the employer to demonstrate that it would have taken the same actions even in the absence of the protected conduct.ⁿ¹³

To establish an equal protection violation, the employee must show the defendants were motivated by a racially discriminatory purpose.ⁿ¹⁴

For purposes of an action under § 1983, an employee suffers a constructive discharge when a reasonable person in the employee's position would have felt that he or she was forced to quit because of intolerable and discriminatory working conditions. An employee's decision to retire or resign can constitute a constructive discharge for purposes of a § 1983 action when an employee alleges the resignation was due to intolerable working conditions.^{n14.1} A retirement or resignation may be involuntary and constitute a deprivation of property for purposes of a due process claim in the absence of intolerable working conditions. An employee may demonstrate that the decision to resign or retire was involuntary under circumstances not involving intolerable or discriminatory working conditions, such as the coercion inherent in the choice between retirement and a complete deprivation of income.^{n14.2} Under a coercion theory, the employee has the burden to come forward with sufficient evidence to demonstrate that a reasonable person in the employee's position would feel he or she had no choice but to resign or retire.^{n14.3} In evaluating claims of coercion, the court determines voluntariness by an objective standard, rather than by the employee's purely subjective evaluation; rejects cases in which the employee did have a choice, even if between comparatively unpleasant alternatives; and considers additional case-specific factors that cut against a finding of coercion, such as whether the employee was given an alternative to resignation or retirement, understood the choice, had a reasonable time in which to decide, or could select the timing of the retirement or resignation.^{n14.4}

Because Section 1983 normally applies only to employment discrimination by public employers, it is covered only briefly in this chapter. For a detailed analysis of Section 1983 as it relates to employment discrimination, see Larson, Employment Discrimination, Chapter 2, § 7.32. For full discussion of civil rights actions under Section 1983, see Cook and Sobieski, Civil Rights Actions.

[2] "Color of Law" Requirement

In Adickes v. S. H. Kress & Co.,ⁿ¹⁵ the United States Supreme Court held that Section 1983 requires two elements: (1) deprivation of a right secured by the United States Constitution and laws; and (2) action under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any state or territory. The Court stated that the second element requires a plaintiff to show that the defendant acted "under color of law."ⁿ¹⁶ In Blair v. City of Pomona,ⁿ¹⁷ the Ninth Circuit found that acts by police officers against a fellow officer who had blown the whistle on department corrupt practices, such as blocking the plaintiff's mother with a police cruiser, cutting off his radio communications, failing to provide him with backup, failing to provide him with a guard after a death threat, and removing him from his position as head of his unit to a subordinate position under an unfriendly head, were acts under color of law.ⁿ¹⁸ The court noted that other acts by fellow police officers including insults to the plaintiff, spitting on his locker, trashing his uniform, theft of his equipment, drinks poured on his car, and insults and threats to his family could be acts under color of law if the evidence showed that the acts were departmental custom, to punish the officer for informing against fellow officers.ⁿ¹⁹

The "color of law" requirement may be satisfied by direct involvement of state officials,ⁿ²⁰ but private employers do not act under the "color of law" unless their infringement of employment rights is "fairly attributable to the state."ⁿ²¹ Receipt of public funds does not transform the acts of a private employer into state acts.ⁿ²² Also, state regulation does not suffice unless it compels or influences employer action.ⁿ²³ Finally, a public function performed by a private employer is not under the "color of law" unless it is "traditionally the exclusive prerogative of the [s]tate."ⁿ²⁴

[3] Enforcement and Remedies

Title 42 United States Code Section 1983 may be enforced in federal court.ⁿ²⁵ State courts also have concurrent jurisdiction to enforce section 1983.ⁿ²⁶ However, states are not subject to suit in federal court under section 1983 because the Eleventh Amendment to the United States Constitution grants them sovereign immunity.ⁿ²⁷

Section 1983 provides that "persons" who violate the statute will "be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress."ⁿ²⁸ Thus, an employer who acts under color of law and who satisfies the definition of "person,"ⁿ²⁹ faces liability for monetary, declaratory, or injunctive relief if a violation of section 1983 is established.ⁿ³⁰ However, in any action brought against a judicial officer for an act taken or omission in that officer's judicial capacity, injunctive relief may not be granted unless a declaratory decree was violated or declaratory relief was unavailable.ⁿ³¹

[4] Employers Covered and Exempted

Section 1983 applies to "persons,"ⁿ³² including "municipalities" or local government entities.ⁿ³³ Section 1983 also applies to local government officials.ⁿ³⁴ Although state officials are subject to section 1983 in their individual capacities,ⁿ³⁵ neither the state itself nor its officials acting in their official capacities are "persons" within the meaning of section 1983.ⁿ³⁶ Also, section 1983 does not apply to federal officials, because they do not act "under color" of any state or territorial law.ⁿ³⁷

[5] Employees Covered and Exempted

Section 1983 applies to persons who are "citizen[s] of the United States or other person[s] within the jurisdiction [of the United States],"ⁿ³⁸ and who are either public employees or employees of private employers acting under the "color of law."ⁿ³⁹

[6] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination

Title 42 United States Code Section 1983 prohibits discrimination based on race,ⁿ⁴⁰ national origin,ⁿ⁴¹ religion,ⁿ⁴² and sex.ⁿ⁴³

[7] Prohibited Employment Practices

Section 1983 prohibits employers from depriving employees of the "rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the [United States] Constitution and laws."ⁿ⁴⁴ As discussed in [1], above, section 1983 enforces the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution, including the equal protection clause, and thus it prohibits the denial of equal employment opportunities by persons authorized to act for the state.ⁿ⁴⁵

[8] Defenses

Private employers are not liable under section 1983 if they do not act under the "color of law" as discussed in [2], above.ⁿ⁴⁶ Also, as discussed in [4], above, state governments are protected by sovereign immunity under the Eleventh Amendment of the United States Constitution.ⁿ⁴⁷ Government officials also have absolute immunity regarding legislativeⁿ⁴⁸ and judicialⁿ⁴⁹ functions. Government officials may also have "qualified" immunity if they take "good faith" actions within the scope of their authority.ⁿ⁵⁰

[9] Anti-SLAPP Motions

A federal civil rights claim brought in a California state court is subject to a special motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 to strike a cause of action against a person arising from any act of that person in furtherance of the person's right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution, in connection with a public issue.ⁿ⁵¹

Thus, for example, in an action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and Title VII, a manager's statements and communicative conduct in handling sexual harassment grievances filed by a subordinate were protected by § 425.16, because they were connected with an issue under review by an official proceeding authorized by law, and furthered the right to petition of plaintiff and similarly-situated employees. The case involved Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e)(2), covering statements or writings made in connection with an issue under review in an official proceeding authorized by law. Section 425.16(e)(2) did not require the defendant to show a public issue or issue of public interest; all that mattered was that the First Amendment activity took place in an official proceeding or was made in connection with an issue being reviewed by an official proceeding.ⁿ⁵² The manager reviewed the grievances pursuant to a manual established by the Regents of the University of California, which is a constitutional entity having quasi-judicial powers,ⁿ⁵³ whose policies and procedures have the force and effect of statute.ⁿ⁵⁴ Statutory hearing procedures qualify as official proceedings authorized by law for § 425.16 purposes.ⁿ⁵⁵ The manager acted in furtherance of the right to petition within the meaning of § 425.16, even though it was not her own right to petition at stake. Section 425.16 does not require that a defendant moving to strike demonstrate that the protected statements or writings were made on defendant's own behalf rather than, for example, on behalf of its clients or the general public.ⁿ⁵⁶ Finally, the subordinate failed to show a probability of prevailing on the civil rights claim so as to avoid the striking of the claim under § 425.16.ⁿ⁵⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Rights Law Section 1983 Actions General Overview Labor & Employment Law General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Act of April 20, 1871, ch. 22, § 1, 17 Stat. 13; see also Sischo-Nownejad v. Merced Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1991) 934 F.2d 1104, 1112 .

(n2)Footnote 2. 42 U.S.C. § 1983; see Goldman v. Wilsey Foods, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1096, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294 (failure to plead that employer acted under "color of law" constitutes failure to state 42 U.S.C. § 1983 cause of action).

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion in [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. See discussion in § 40.25.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Irby v. Sullivan (5th Cir. 1984) 737 F.2d 1418, 1427 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Irby v. Sullivan (5th Cir. 1984) 737 F.2d 1418, 1427 ; see also 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Hollister v. Tuttle (9th Cir. 2000) 210 F.3d 1033, 1035 (public college professor's allegation that institution retaliated against him for his open opposition to its pro-feminist educational policy states cognizable claim under section 1983); Lutcher v. Musicians Union Local 47 (9th Cir 1980) 633 F.2d 880, 885 (U.S. Const., Amend. I); Poolaw v. City of Anadarko (10th Cir. 1981) 660 F.2d 459, 462 , (U.S. Const., Amend. XIV).

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Maine v. Thiboutot (1980) 448 U.S. 1, 4-5, 100 S. Ct. 2502, 65 L. Ed. 2d 555 (Social Security Act as enforceable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Ahlmeier v. Nev. Sys. of Higher Educ. (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 1051, 1055-1060 (because ADEA provides comprehensive remedial scheme, it should be read as precluding § 1983 actions in area of age discrimination in employment). See also Briggs v. Potter, 463 F.3d 507, 517 (6th Cir. 2006) ; Lafleur v. Tex. Dep't. of Health (5th Cir. 1997) 126 F.3d 758, 760 ; Chennareddy v. Bowsher (D.C. Cir. 1991) 935 F.2d 315, 318, 290 U.S. App. D.C. 149 ; Zombro v. Baltimore City Police Dep't. (4th Cir. 1989) 868 F.2d 1364, 1369 . For a discussion of enforcement and remedies under Title VII and the ADEA, see §§ 40.20[2][a] and 40.21[2][a], respectively.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Roberts v. College of the Desert (9th Cir. 1988) 870 F.2d 1411, 1414-1415 (42 U.S.C. § 1983 and Title VII); Ratliff v. City of Milwaukee (7th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 612, 623-624 (42 U.S.C. §§ 1983, 1985 and Title VII).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Ratliff v. City of Milwaukee (7th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 612, 624 (42 U.S.C. §§ 1983, 1985 and Title VII); accord, Zombro v. Baltimore City Police Dep't (4th Cir. 1989) 868 F.2d 1364, 1367 (plaintiff alleged age discrimination under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, and asserted that he need not establish liberty or property interest; thus 42 U.S.C. § 1983, standing alone, preempted by comprehensive ADEA).

(n12)Footnote 12. Note: In Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway Co. v. White (2006) 126 S. Ct. 2405, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345 , discussed at § 41.130[1A], below, the United States Supreme Court held that the scope of the anti-retaliation provision in Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 extends beyond workplace-related or employment-related retaliatory acts and harm, so that an employee need only allege and prove "adverse action" rather than "adverse employment action" under Title VII's anti-retaliation provision. No court has yet held that 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and the anti-retaliation provision of Title VII are to be construed coextensively, so case law requiring "adverse employment action" under § 1983 still appears to be good law.

(n13)Footnote 13. Thomas v. City of Beaverton (9th Cir. 2004) 379 F.3d 802, 807-811 (there was sufficient evidence to create genuine issue of material fact as to whether municipal court administrator's refusal to acquiesce in human resource director's allegedly retaliatory treatment of African American employee was expressive conduct on matter of public concern); Strahan v. Kirkland (9th Cir. 2002) 287 F.3d 821, 825-827 (law enforcement officer did not present sufficient evidence of employer's concern about employee's motorcycle-group affiliation from which jury could infer that association, protected by First Amendment, was substantial factor in demotion and transfer).

(n14)Footnote 14. Thomas v. City of Beaverton (9th Cir. 2004) 379 F.3d 802, 812 (although there was evidence public employer retaliated against plaintiff for opposing retaliation against African American whom employee recommended for promotion, there was insufficient evidence that retaliation against either employee was motivated by racial animus); Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1404 ; Stones v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1986) 796 F.2d 270, 275 .

(n15)Footnote 14.1. Knappenberger v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 2009) 566 F.3d 936, 940 (former police officer's complaint failed to allege facts amounting to this type of constructive discharge). See Huskey v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2000) 204 F.3d 893, 900-901 . Cf. Wallace v. City of San Diego (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 616, 626 (articulating this standard for constructive discharge for purposes of Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act); Watson v. Nationwide Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 360, 361 (same under Title VII).

(n16)Footnote 14.2. Knappenberger v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 2009) 566 F.3d 936, 940-941 (district court's ruling that former police officer who retired could not establish he was deprived of liberty or property interest because he did not allege he retired after facing "intolerable and discriminatory working conditions" was too limited). See Kalvinskas v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1305, 1308 (retirement of long-time employee was involuntary under ADEA, where employee was effectively given choice between retiring and receiving his pension or remaining employed but having disability benefits he was receiving reduced to nothing, and reasonable person in his position would have felt he had no choice but to retire); Lojek v. Thomas (9th Cir. 1983) 716 F.2d 675, 683 (suggesting employee coerced into resigning could demonstrate he left his employment involuntarily). See also Leheny v. City of Pittsburgh (3d Cir. 1999) 183 F.3d 220, 227-228 ; Stone v. Univ. of Md. Med. Sys. Corp. (4th Cir. 1988) 855 F.2d 167, 173 ; Angarita v. St. Louis County (8th Cir. 1992) 981 F.2d 1537, 1544 ; Parker v. Bd. of Regents (10th Cir. 1992) 981 F.2d 1159, 1162 ; Hargray v. City of Hallandale (11th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 1560, 1568 (per curiam). Cf. Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders (2004) 542 U.S. 129, 141, 124 S. Ct. 2342, 159 L. Ed. 2d 204 (constructive discharge concept was originally developed by National Labor Relations Board to address situations in which employers coerced employees to resign).

(n17)Footnote 14.3. Knappenberger v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 2009) 566 F.3d 936, 941-942 . See Kalvinskas v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1305, 1308 .

(n18)Footnote 14.4. Knappenberger v. City of Phoenix (9th Cir. 2009) 566 F.3d 936, 941-942 (former police officer did not allege facts that, if taken as true, would have met his burden of showing involuntary retirement, where his complaint alleged merely that he anticipated he would be terminated and he resigned in order to retain his lifetime health insurance; where employer did not request his resignation or retirement or tell him he would be terminated, he was required to make on-the-spot decision, and he could and did choose date of his retirement; and where he did not even allege that termination would have been inevitable). See, e.g., Hargray v. City of Hallandale (11th Cir. 1995) 57 F.3d 1560, 1568-1570 ; Angarita v. St. Louis County (8th Cir. 1992) 981 F.2d 1537, 1544 .

(n19)Footnote 15. Adickes v. S. H. Kress & Co. (1970) 398 U.S. 144, 150, 90 S. Ct. 1598, 26 L. Ed. 2d 142 .

(n20)Footnote 16. Adickes v. S. H. Kress & Co. (1970) 398 U.S. 144, 150, 90 S. Ct. 1598, 26 L. Ed. 2d 142 .

(n21)Footnote 17. Blair v. City of Pamona (9th Cir. 2000) 223 F.3d 1074 .

(n22)Footnote 18. Blair v. City of Pamona (9th Cir. 2000) 223 F.3d 1074, 1080 .

(n23)Footnote 19. Blair v. City of Pamona (9th Cir. 2000) 223 F.3d 1074, 1080 .

(n24)Footnote 20. Adickes v. S. H. Kress & Co. (1970) 398 U.S. 144, 152, 90 S. Ct. 1598, 26 L. Ed. 2d 142 .

(n25)Footnote 21. See Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 838, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418 ; see also Martin v. Pacific Northwest Bell Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1971) 441 F.2d 1116, 1118 (state required to be involved with activity that caused injury).

(n26)Footnote 22. See Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 840, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418 ; see also Ivey v. Board of Regents of University of Alaska (9th Cir. 1982) 673 F.2d 266, 268 (showing of direct connection between state action and alleged discrimination).

(n27)Footnote 23. See Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 841, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418 ; see also Martin v. Pacific Northwest Bell Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1971) 441 F.2d 1116, 1118 (fact that private corporation enjoys economic monopoly that is protected and regulated by state does not necessarily bring its every act within purview of 42 U.S.C. § 1983).

(n28)Footnote 24. See Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 841, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418 (emphasis in original).

(n29)Footnote 25. See 28 U.S.C. § 1343(4).

(n30)Footnote 26. See Brown v. Pitchess (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 518, 521-523, 119 Cal. Rptr. 204, 531 P.2d 772 (nonemployment claim by county jail inmates). For the standard jury instruction to be used in state court for the essential factual elements of a cause of action for violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3000 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim of violation of federal civil rights under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-3000 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction on municipal liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3007 (Matthew Bender). For the CACI special verdict form on municipal liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-3005 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction defining "official policy" under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3008 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a cause of action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for failure to train, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3009 (Matthew Bender). For the CACI special verdict form on public entity liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for failure to train, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-3006 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n31)Footnote 27. See Quern v. Jordan (1979) 440 U.S. 332, 341, 99 S. Ct. 1139, 59 L. Ed. 2d 358 ; Alabama v. Pugh (1978) 438 U.S. 781, 782, 98 S. Ct. 3057, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1114 . Furthermore, as noted in [4], below, the U.S. Supreme Court has held that neither states nor state officials acting in their official capacities are "persons" within the meaning of the statute. See Will v. Michigan Dep't of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 109 S. Ct. 2304, 105 L. Ed. 2d 45, 58 .

(n32)Footnote 28. 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

(n33)Footnote 29. See discussion in [4], below.

(n34)Footnote 30. See Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 690, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; see also Carey v. Phipps (1978) 435 U.S. 247, 259, 98 S. Ct. 1042, 55 L. Ed. 2d 252 (compensatory damages available when injury and causation proven).

(n35)Footnote 31. 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

(n36)Footnote 32. See 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

(n37)Footnote 33. See Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 690, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 . See also Harman v. City and County of San Francisco (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 1279 (under Monell, city was liable to white male for racial discrimination in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for one personnel decision affecting him, where there was sufficient evidence that the personnel decision not to appoint male to desired position arose from execution of city's official policy or custom).

(n38)Footnote 34. Monell v. Dep't of Soc. Servs. (1978) 436 U.S. 658, 690 fn. 55, 98 S. Ct. 2018, 56 L. Ed. 2d 611 ; but see Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1230 (official must be responsible for establishing government policy with respect to challenged employment activity).

(n39)Footnote 35. See Kentucky v. Graham (1985) 473 U.S. 159, 165-166, 105 S. Ct. 3099, 87 L. Ed. 2d 114 .

(n40)Footnote 36. Will v. Michigan Dep't of State Police (1989) 491 U.S. 58, 109 S. Ct. 2304, 105 L. Ed. 2d 45, 58 .

(n41)Footnote 37. See Wheeldin v. Wheeler (1963) 373 U.S. 647, 650 fn. 2, 83 S. Ct. 1441, 10 L. Ed. 2d 605 . For a discussion of the "color of law" requirement, see [2], above.

(n42)Footnote 38. 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

(n43)Footnote 39. See 42 U.S.C. § 1983; see also discussion in [2] and [4], above.

(n44)Footnote 40. See Scott v. University of Delaware (D. Del. 1974) 385 F. Supp. 937, 945 .

(n45)Footnote 41. See Puntolillo v. New Hampshire Racing Commission (D. N.H. 1975) 390 F. Supp. 231, 236 .

(n46)Footnote 42. See Martin v. Pacific Northwest Bell Telephone Company (9th Cir. 1971) 441 F.2d 1116, 1118 .

(n47)Footnote 43. See Weise v. Syracuse University (2d Cir. 1975) 522 F.2d 397 .

(n48)Footnote 44. 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

(n49)Footnote 45. See Sischo-Nownejad v. Merced Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1991) 934 F.2d 1104, 1112 ; see also Larson, employment discrimination, ch. 10, Other Procedural Matters, § 52.10 (Matthew Bender).

(n50)Footnote 46. See 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

(n51)Footnote 47. See Quern v. Jordan (1979) 440 U.S. 332, 341, 99 S. Ct. 1139, 59 L. Ed. 2d 358 ; Alabama v. Pugh (1978) 438 U.S. 781, 782, 98 S. Ct. 3057, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1114 .

(n52)Footnote 48. See Lake Country Estates v. Tahoe Planning Agcy. (1979) 440 U.S. 391, 404-405, 99 S. Ct.

1171, 59 L. Ed. 2d 401 (immunity equally applicable to federal, state, and regional legislators).

(n53)Footnote 49. See Forrester v. White (7th Cir. 1986) 792 F.2d 647, 651 .

(n54)Footnote 50. See Harlow v. Fitzgerald (1982) 457 U.S. 800, 815-816, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396 . See, e.g., Robinson v. York (9th Cir. 2009) 566 F.3d 817, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 8844, *5-*18 (in action by county police sergeant against county and several officers under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging he was denied promotion in violation of his First and Fourteenth Amendment rights because he reported misconduct within his department, trial court properly denied defendants qualified immunity, where at time defendants acted, both constitutional protection of employee speech and First Amendment cause of action for retaliation against protected speech were clearly established and potentially applicable to defendants' conduct); Eng v. Cooley (9th Cir. 2009) 552 F.3d 1062, 1067-1076 (district court properly partially denied defendants qualified immunity for deputy district attorney's claim of retaliation in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, based on alleged adverse employment actions resulting from his participation in task force and interview his attorney gave to press; deputy district attorney had personal First Amendment interest in attorney's speech and his allegations demonstrated that his First Amendment rights were violated; existing case law was sufficient to put defendants on notice of common sense conclusion that government could not retaliate against public employee for speech spoken by employee's lawyer on employee's behalf).

(n55)Footnote 51. Vergos v. McNeal (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1392 n.4, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647 ; Bradbury v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1117-1118, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207 .

(n56)Footnote 52. Vergos v. McNeal (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1395, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647 . See Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope & Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1116-1117, 1123, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564 .

(n57)Footnote 53. Cal. Const., art. IX, § 9; Campbell v. Regents of University of California (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311, 319-321, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 320, 106 P.3d 976 .

(n58)Footnote 54. Kim v. Regents of University of California (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 160, 165, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10 .

(n59)Footnote 55. Vergos v. McNeal (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1396, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647 .

(n60)Footnote 56. Vergos v. McNeal (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1399, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647 . See also Briggs v. Eden Council for Hope & Opportunity (1999) 19 Cal. 4th 1106, 1116, 1123, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471, 969 P.2d 564 (§ 425.16 applied to nonprofit provider of tenant counseling services); Mission Oaks Ranch, Ltd. v. County of Santa Barbara (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 713, 718, 728, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (§ 425.16 protected independent environmental consultant, hired by county, who prepared environmental impact report for required public hearings concerning potential development of projects); Dowling v. Zimmerman (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1418-1420 . 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 174 (§ 425.16 protected attorney who furthered petition rights of client).

(n61)Footnote 57. Vergos v. McNeal (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1400-1404, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 647 (there was no probability of subordinate prevailing on the merits, because manager showed her actions were legitimate, and subordinate failed to show by admissible evidence that she did anything wrong).

21 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.27

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.27 Executive Order 11246: Prohibition Against Discrimination by Government Contractors

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

Executive Order 11246ⁿ¹ prohibits employment discrimination based on race, color, national origin, religion, and sex, by federal contractors and contractors performing under federally assisted construction contracts.ⁿ² Federal regulations promulgated by the OFCCPⁿ³ implement the provisions of Executive Order 11246.

[2] Enforcement

The OFCCP enforces Executive Order 11246.ⁿ⁴ The OFCCP investigates the employment practices of federal contractors to ensure compliance with Executive Order 11246.ⁿ⁵ If it finds a violation, the OFCCP must make reasonable efforts to secure compliance through conciliation and persuasion.ⁿ⁶

The OFCCP may also receive and investigate complaints by employees or prospective employees.ⁿ⁷ The OFCCP may refer appropriate complaints to the EEOC for processing under Title VII rather than processing under Executive Order 11246.ⁿ⁸ If a complaint investigation indicates a violation of Executive Order 11246, the OFCCP must attempt an informal resolution through conciliation.ⁿ⁹ If informal conciliation is not possible, the OFCCP may hold administrative hearings to enforce Executive Order 11246.ⁿ¹⁰ If there is a substantial or material violation, the OFCCP may refer the matter to the Department of Justice, and the Attorney General may bring a civil action in federal court.ⁿ¹¹ The Attorney General may also, subject to approval by the OFCCP, independently initiate investigations, attempt informal resolutions, and bring suit in federal court if he or she has reason to believe Executive Order 11246 was violated.ⁿ¹²

The OFCCP may bring administrative enforcement proceedings to enjoin any violation, seek appropriate relief, including back pay, and impose appropriate sanctions or penalties.ⁿ¹³ The sanctions and penalties include publication of the names of violators,ⁿ¹⁴ cancellation, termination, or suspension of contracts,ⁿ¹⁵ and debarment of contractors from entering into further contracts.ⁿ¹⁶ If the matter is referred to the Department of Justice, it may seek injunctive and additional appropriate relief, including back pay.ⁿ¹⁷ For additional discussion of OFCCP complaint procedure, see Chapter 44, Part C.

Executive Order 11246 does not appear to afford a complainant a private right of action.

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Pursuant to a memorandum of understanding,ⁿ¹⁸ the OFCCP and EEOC have agreed that charges received by the OFCCP within the jurisdiction of the EEOC shall be deemed filed jointly with the EEOC and deemed filed with the EEOC when received by the OFCCP. Generally, the OFCCP's practice is to refer to the EEOC charges concerning individual cases of discrimination and to retain for investigation charges concerning discrimination of a systematic or class-wide nature. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

Executive Order 11246 applies to federal contractors and "applicants" (defined below) performing under federally assisted construction contracts.ⁿ¹⁹ It also applies to labor unions, employment agencies, and training or apprenticeship programs referring or providing workers to federal contractors.ⁿ²⁰ Federal "contracts" and "contractors" are defined by the OFCCP regulations,ⁿ²¹ and Executive Order 11246 coverage is the same as coverage by section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.ⁿ²² For discussion of contracts and contractors covered under section 503, see § 40.23[1][c].

An "applicant" is an applicant for federal assistance involving a construction contract, or another participant in a program involving a construction contract as determined by regulation of an administering agency.ⁿ²³ The term also includes applicants after they become recipients of federal assistance.ⁿ²⁴

A "construction contract" or "construction work" is any contract for the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, conversion, extension, or repair of buildings, highways, or other improvements to real property, including facilities providing utility services.ⁿ²⁵ "Construction work" also means the supervision, inspection, and other onsite functions incidental to actual construction.ⁿ²⁶ A "federally assisted construction contract" is any contract for construction work that is (1) paid for in whole or in part with funds obtained from the federal government, or borrowed on the credit of the government pursuant to any federal program involving a grant, contract, loan, insurance, or guarantee, or (2) undertaken pursuant to any federal program involving a grant, contract, loan, insurance, or guarantee, or any modification approved by the government for a grant, contract, loan, insurance, or guarantee, under which the applicant itself participates in the construction work.ⁿ²⁷

Executive Order 11246 does not apply to contractors hiring persons outside the United States for work to be performed outside the United States.ⁿ²⁸ It also does not apply to any state or local government, agency, instrumentality, or subdivision that contracts with the federal government when the state or other entity does not participate in work under the contract.ⁿ²⁹ Also, schools, colleges, universities, or other educational institutions do not violate Executive Order 11246 when they hire employees of a particular religion if the institution is, in whole or in substantial part, owned, supported, controlled, or managed by a particular religious corporation, association, or society, or if the curriculum of the institution is directed toward the propagation of a particular religion.ⁿ³⁰ Section 202 of Executive Order 11246 does not apply to a government contractor or subcontractor that is a religious corporation, association, educational institution, or society, with respect to the employment of individuals of a particular religion to perform work connected with the carrying on by such corporation, association, educational institution, or society of its activities. Such contractors and subcontractors are not exempted or excused from complying with the other requirements contained in the Order.^{n30.1}

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

Executive Order 11246 applies to all persons employed or seeking employment with federal contractors and applicants performing under federally assisted construction contracts.ⁿ³¹

[5] Prohibited or Required Employment Practices

Executive Order 11246 prohibits unlawful discrimination with respect to employment, upgrading, demotion, transfer, recruitment or recruitment advertising, layoff or termination, rates of pay or other forms of compensation, and selection for training, including apprenticeship.ⁿ³² Contractors must also ensure that employee facilities do not segregate on the basis of a protected classification.ⁿ³³ Furthermore, contractors and applicants must ensure that no person intimidates, threatens, coerces, or discriminates against any individual in order to interfere with enforcement of Executive Order 11246 or any other equal employment opportunity law.ⁿ³⁴

Executive Order 11246 requires every federal contract and construction contract to include a clause stating that the contractor agrees not to discriminate, and agrees to take affirmative action to prevent discrimination.ⁿ³⁵ Written affirmative action plans must be developed by any contractor with 50 or more employees that (1) has a contract of $50,000 or more; or (2) has government bills of lading that in any 12-month period total, or can reasonably be expected to total, $50,000; or (3) serves as a depository of government funds in any amount; or (4) is a financial institution that is an issuing and paying agent for United States savings bonds and savings notes in any amount.ⁿ³⁶ For discussion of OFCCP affirmative action plans in general, see Chapter 44, Part C.

With respect to sex discrimination, the OFCCP guidelines require contractors to recruit employees of both sexes for all jobs.ⁿ³⁷ Advertisements for employment must not express a sexual preference.ⁿ³⁸ Written employment policies must expressly indicate that sex discrimination will not occur.ⁿ³⁹ Qualified employees of both sexes must have equal opportunity to any available job,ⁿ⁴⁰ and sexual distinctions may not be made relating to employment opportunities, wages, hours, or other conditions of employment.ⁿ⁴¹ Sexual distinctions based on marriage or young children are also prohibited.ⁿ⁴² Contractors must assure appropriate physical facilities to both sexes and may not refuse to hire anyone because of a lack of such facilities,ⁿ⁴³ nor may they rely on state "protective" laws to deny female employees the right to any job.ⁿ⁴⁴ Also, contractors may not penalize women for taking pregnancy leaves of absence.ⁿ⁴⁵ They may not specify any differences based on sex relating to mandatory or optional retirement age,ⁿ⁴⁶ seniority systems, and wage schedules,ⁿ⁴⁷ and they may not restrict one sex to certain job classifications.ⁿ⁴⁸

[6] Defenses

Express exemptions under the OFCCP regulations provide defenses for noncompliance with Executive Order 11246. Thus, contracts not exceeding $10,000, other than government bills of lading and contracts with depositories of federal funds or with financial institutions that are issuing and paying agents for United States savings bonds and savings notes, are exempt from the requirements of the equal opportunity clause discussed in [5], above.ⁿ⁴⁹ Also, the equal opportunity clause is not required in contracts for indefinite quantities if the purchaser has reason to believe that the order will not exceed $10,000.ⁿ⁵⁰ Contracts also need not include the equal opportunity clause with respect to work performed outside the United States by employees who were not recruited within the United States.ⁿ⁵¹

The OFCCP may exempt any federal agency or person from requiring the equal opportunity clause when the OFCCP deems that special circumstances in the national interest so require.ⁿ⁵² The OFCCP may also exempt contractor facilities that it finds to be in all respects separate and distinct from activities related to the performance of a federal contract, provided that the exemption will not interfere with or impede the effectuation of Executive Order 11246.ⁿ⁵³ Also, the OFCCP regulations do not apply to any federal contract whenever the head of the contracting federal agency determines that the contract is essential to the national security, and that its award without complying with the regulations is necessary to the national security.ⁿ⁵⁴

Preferences for employment of Indians living on or near Indian reservations is not a violation of Executive Order 11246, as long as there is no religious, sex, or tribal affiliation discrimination.ⁿ⁵⁵

Several OFCCP guidelines allow various sexual distinctions if sex is a bona fide occupational qualification,ⁿ⁵⁶ or if construction of physical facilities for both sexes would be unreasonable because of excessive expense or lack of space.n57

Substantive defenses to employment discrimination are discussed in detail in Chapter 41, Part E.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment Law Discrimination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Exec. Order No. 11246, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Exec. Order No. 11246, §§ 202, 301; 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; see also discussion in [5], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 201; 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-1.1-60-1.47; see also 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-20.1-60-20.6 (OFCCP guidelines regarding sex discrimination).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Exec. Order No. 11246, §§ 201, 205; 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-1.20-60-1.34. Executive Order 11246 actually provides that it will be enforced by the Secretary of Labor. However, the Secretary has delegated administrative and enforcement duties to the Director of the OFCCP. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.2.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 206(a); 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.20 (compliance reviews).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.20(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 206(b); 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-1.21-60-1.23 (complaint procedures), 60-1.24 (complaint investigations by OFCCP).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 209(a)(3); 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.24(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 209(b); 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.24(c)(2); see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.33 (conciliation agreements required to be in writing).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 208; 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.26(a), (c) (enforcement proceedings procedures). Administrative hearings are required before a federal contractor can be debarred from further contracts. Exec. Order No. 11246; 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.26(a)(2).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 209(a)(2); 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) ; 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.26(a)(2), (e). The Attorney General first investigates the complaint and may attempt informal conciliation. 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.26(e)(1)-(3).

(n12)Footnote 12. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.26(f).

(n13)Footnote 13. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.26(a)(2); see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.27 (sanctions are required to be exercised only by or with approval of OFCCP; referrals to Department of Justice or EEOC to be made by OFCCP).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 209(a)(1), 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.30 (OFCCP required to distribute contract ineligibility list to all executive departments and agencies).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 209(a)(5), 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 209(a)(6), 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965).

(n17)Footnote 17. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.26(a)(2).

(n18)Footnote 18. See 46 Fed. Reg. 7435 (effective Jan. 23, 1981).

(n19)Footnote 19. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.1.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 207, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.9; see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.6(b), (c) (OFCCP sex discrimination guidelines relating to training programs).

(n21)Footnote 21. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.3.

(n22)Footnote 22. See 41 U.S.C. § 793(a).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 302(c), 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.3; 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.3 also defines "Internet applicant."

(n24)Footnote 24. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 302(c), 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.3.

(n25)Footnote 25. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 302(a), 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.2.

(n26)Footnote 26. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.3.

(n27)Footnote 27. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.3.

(n28)Footnote 28. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.10; see discussion in [6], below.

(n29)Footnote 29. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(a)(4).

(n30)Footnote 30. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(a)(6) (directed at religiously oriented church-related colleges and universities).

(n31)Footnote 30.1. 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(a)(5).

(n32)Footnote 31. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 202, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.1; see also discussion in [3], above.

(n33)Footnote 32. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 202, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.41 (requirements for solicitations or advertisements for employees).

(n34)Footnote 33. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.8(a); see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.2(e) (OFCCP sex discrimination guidelines relating to appropriate facilities).

(n35)Footnote 34. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.32.

(n36)Footnote 35. See Exec. Order No. 11246, §§ 202 (federal contractors), 301 (applicants performing under federally assisted construction contracts), 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.4 (equal opportunity clauses); see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.6 (OFCCP sex discrimination affirmative action programs).

(n37)Footnote 36. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.40; see also 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-2.1-60-2.32 (procedures relating to affirmative action programs).

(n38)Footnote 37. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.2(a).

- (n39)Footnote 38. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.2(b).
- (n40)Footnote 39. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.3(a).
- (n41)Footnote 40. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.3(b).
- (n42)Footnote 41. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.3(c).
- (n43)Footnote 42. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.3(d).
- (n44)Footnote 43. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.3(e).
- (n45)Footnote 44. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.3(f).
- (n46)Footnote 45. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.3(g).
- (n47)Footnote 46. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.3(h).
- (n48)Footnote 47. See 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-20.4, 60-20.5(a).
- (n49)Footnote 48. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.5(b).
- (n50)Footnote 49. 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(a)(1).
- (n51)Footnote 50. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(a)(2).
- (n52)Footnote 51. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(a)(3); see also discussion in [3], above.
- (n53)Footnote 52. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(b)(1).
- (n54)Footnote 53. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(b)(2).
- (n55)Footnote 54. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(c).
- (n56)Footnote 55. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-1.5(a)(7).
- (n57)Footnote 56. See 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-20.2(a), (b), 60-20.3(b), (f)(2).
- (n58)Footnote 57. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-20.3(e).

22 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.28

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.28 Executive Order 11141: Prohibition Against Age Discrimination by Federal Contractors

[1] Scope of Coverage

Executive Order 11141ⁿ¹ prohibits age discrimination by federal contractors. Unlike the ADEA,ⁿ² Executive Order 11141 sets no specific minimum age limit with respect to its applicability.ⁿ³

Executive Order 11141 is essentially a policy statement that age discrimination is inconsistent with the social and economic objectives of society, and that the federal government should provide leadership in encouraging and hastening the acceptance of the principle of equal employment opportunity for older persons.ⁿ⁴ Although the federal government has adopted the foregoing principle as an express policy with respect to employees of federal contractors,ⁿ⁵ the OFCCP has promulgated no regulations to implement Executive Order 11141.ⁿ⁶

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

Executive Order 11141 contains no enforcement provisions, although it does state that the head of each department and agency must enunciate the policy of Executive Order 11141.ⁿ⁷ Also, the OFCCP has promulgated no regulations enforcing Executive Order 11141. According to one commentator, the Justice Department views Executive Order 11141 as a statement of policy only, and all charges and complaints are referred to the EEOC for processing under the ADEA.ⁿ⁸ There is no private right of action based on Executive Order 11141.ⁿ⁹

For a discussion of EEOC enforcement procedures, see Chapter 42, Part C.

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

Executive Order 11141 applies to federal contractors, subcontractors, and persons acting on their behalf.ⁿ¹⁰

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

Executive Order 11141 applies to "persons employed by contractors and subcontractors engaged in the performance of [f]ederal contracts."¹¹

[5] Prohibited or Required Employment Practices

Under Executive Order 11141, federal contractors may not discriminate on the basis of age in connection with the employment, advancement, or discharge of employees, or with the terms, conditions, or privileges of their employment.¹² Also, contractors or persons acting on their behalf may not specify a maximum age limit in solicitations or advertisements for employees to work on federal contracts.¹³

[6] Defenses

Federal contractors may discriminate because of age on the basis of a bona fide occupational qualification, retirement plan, or statutory requirement.¹⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Rights Law
Protection of Disabled Persons
Americans With Disabilities Act
General Overview
Civil Rights Law
Protection of Disabled Persons
Americans With Disabilities Act
Scope
Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 621-634.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 29 U.S.C. § 631(a) (ADEA applicable only to individuals who are at least 40 years of age); see also discussion in § 40.21[a].

(n4)Footnote 4. See Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (2d ed. 1983), Ch. 14, "Age," p. 482 fn. 1.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (2d ed. 1983), Ch. 14, "Age," p. 482 fn. 1.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Kodish v. United Airlines, Inc. (D. Colo. 1979) 463 F. Supp. 1245, 1251, aff'd, 628 F.2d 1301, 1303 (10th Cir. [Colo.] 1980) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) .

23 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.29

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.29 Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VI)ⁿ¹ proscribes unlawful discrimination by programs or activities receiving federal financial assistance.ⁿ² However, Title VI may not be used to attack employment discrimination unless a primary objective of the federal financial assistance is to provide employment.ⁿ³ Each federal agency empowered to extend federal financial assistance implements its own rules and regulations under Title VI.ⁿ⁴ The Department of Justice and the EEOC coordinate the implementation and enforcement of Title VI,ⁿ⁵ and both agencies have promulgated identical regulations setting forth procedures for filing and investigating Title VI employment discrimination complaints.ⁿ⁶

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

Title VI is enforced by each individual agency that extends federal financial assistanceⁿ⁷ and by the EEOC.ⁿ⁸ A complaint regarding employment discrimination must initially be filed with the appropriate agency.ⁿ⁹ The agency must then notify the federal assistance recipient that a complaint has been received.ⁿ¹⁰ The agency determines whether it has jurisdiction over the complaint,ⁿ¹¹ and whether the EEOC may have jurisdiction under Title VII or the Equal Pay Act of 1963.ⁿ¹² Complaints over which the agency does not have jurisdiction, but over which the EEOC may have jurisdiction, must be transferred to the EEOC.ⁿ¹³

Aggrieved individuals may also file "joint complaints," which are complaints covered by Title VII or the Equal Pay Act of 1963, as well as by Title VI, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972,ⁿ¹⁴ or the Revenue Sharing Act.ⁿ¹⁵ Joint complaints may be transferred to the EEOC.ⁿ¹⁶ All joint complaints alleging employment discrimination only must be transferred to the EEOC, but special circumstances may warrant an investigation by the agency providing the financial assistance.ⁿ¹⁷ If there are special circumstances, the agency must determine whether the complainant filed a similar charge with the EEOC.ⁿ¹⁸ If so, the agency may investigate if the EEOC agrees to defer its investigation pending the agency investigation.ⁿ¹⁹ If the complainant does not file a similar charge with the EEOC, the agency may investigate if special circumstances so warrant.ⁿ²⁰

Joint complaints alleging a "pattern or practice" of employment discrimination may not be referred to the EEOC unless special circumstances warrant transfer.ⁿ²¹ Also, absent special circumstances, a joint complaint alleging discrimination in employment and other practices should be handled by the agency providing the financial assistance.ⁿ²² However, if a similar charge is filed with the EEOC, the EEOC and the agency must coordinate their activities, and the EEOC will ordinarily defer its investigation pending the agency investigation.ⁿ²³

Complaints received or transferred to the EEOC under Title VI are deemed "charges."ⁿ²⁴ If the EEOC investigates a joint complaint and determines that there is reasonable cause to believe Title VII has been violated, it must attempt to resolve the complaint by informal methods of conference, conciliation, and persuasion.ⁿ²⁵ If those methods fail, the EEOC must (1) so notify the recipient,ⁿ²⁶ (2) transmit a copy of its investigative file to the referring agency, together with its determination and notice of failure of conciliation, (3) determine whether it will sue under Title VII, and (4) either issue a notice of right to sue under Title VII,ⁿ²⁷ or, if the recipient is a government, government entity, or political subdivision, refer the matter to the Attorney General for possible civil action.ⁿ²⁸ For more detailed discussion relating to EEOC and Attorney General enforcement procedures under Title VII, see § 40.20[2][a] and Chapter 42, Part C.

When an agency receives a transmittal of the EEOC's reasonable-cause determination, it must determine whether the recipient has violated any applicable civil rights provisions that the agency has a responsibility to enforce.ⁿ²⁹ If a violation did occur, the agency must so notify the complainant and the recipient of federal financial assistance, and must determine whether further efforts to secure voluntary compliance are warranted.ⁿ³⁰ However, if further efforts are not warranted, or if further efforts fail, the agency must initiate appropriate enforcement proceedings under its own regulations.ⁿ³¹

Title VI requires a hearing and finding of noncompliance by the agency.ⁿ³² If such a finding is made, an agency may terminate assistance, or refuse to grant or continue it.ⁿ³³ The agency may also secure compliance "by any other means authorized by law."ⁿ³⁴

There is also an implied private right of action under Title VI.ⁿ³⁵ However, there is no private right of action when the claim is solely based on disparate impact.^{n35.1} Further, unless discrimination is intentional, compensatory relief is not available,ⁿ³⁶ and no Title VI private action includes the right to recover back pay or other monetary losses.ⁿ³⁷ A private plaintiff may recover only injunctive or declaratory relief for unintentional violations of Title VI.ⁿ³⁸

Private actions brought under Title VI are subject to California's two-year statute of limitations for personal injury actions.^{n38.1}

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

Title VI applies to "any program or activity receiving [f]ederal financial assistance."ⁿ³⁹ The Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1987ⁿ⁴⁰ amended Title VI to clarify that the term "program or activity" means all of the operations of an entity receiving federal financial assistance,ⁿ⁴¹ thus overturning a previous decision of the Supreme Court that had adopted a more narrow construction of the statute.ⁿ⁴² "Recipients" are defined in the Department of Justice regulations as any state, or instrumentality or political subdivision of a state, any public or private agency, institution, organization, or other entity, or any individual, in any state, to whom federal financial assistance is extended, directly or through another recipient, for any program, including any successor, assignee, or transferee of the program.ⁿ⁴³ The ultimate beneficiary of such a program is not a "recipient."ⁿ⁴⁴

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

Title VI applies to employees of programs or activities receiving federal financial assistance.ⁿ⁴⁵

[5] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination

Title VI prohibits discrimination based on race, color, or national origin.ⁿ⁴⁶

[6] Prohibited Employment Practices

Under Title VI, "recipients" of federal funds may not exclude any person from participation in, deny the benefits of, or discriminate under any federally assisted program or activity directed towards providing employment on the basis of race, color, or national origin.ⁿ⁴⁷ Furthermore, agencies extending federal financial assistance must refrain from discriminatory practices and also must police the operations of, and prevent discrimination by, "recipients" of federal funds.ⁿ⁴⁸

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964
Coverage & Definitions
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000d-2000d-4.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d. For discussion relating to specific bases of discrimination, see [5], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-3; see also Temengil v. Trust Territory of Pacific Islands (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 647, 653 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-1; see also 7 C.F.R. §§ 15.1-15.143 (Department of Agriculture); 10 C.F.R. §§ 1040.1-1040.14 (Department of Energy); 15 C.F.R. §§ 8.1-8.15 (Department of Commerce); 22 C.F.R. §§ 141.1-141.12 (Department of State); 24 C.F.R. §§ 1.1-1.12 (Department of Housing and Urban Development); 28 C.F.R. §§ 42.1-42.112 (Department of Justice); 29 C.F.R. §§ 31.1-31.12 (Department of Labor); 32 C.F.R. § 195.1 et seq. (Department of Defense); 34 C.F.R. §§ 100.1-100.13 (Department of Education); 43 C.F.R. §§ 17.1-17.12 (Department of Interior); 45 C.F.R. §§ 80.1-80.13 (Department of Health and Human Services); 49 C.F.R. §§ 21.1-21.23 (Department of Transportation).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Exec. Order No. 12250, 45 Fed. Reg. 72995 (1980) ; Exec. Order No. 12067, 43 Fed. Reg. 28967 (1978) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See 28 C.F.R. §§ 42.601-42.613; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1691.1-1691.13.

(n7)Footnote 7. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-1; 28 C.F.R. §§ 42.605, 42.610 (agency processing of employment discrimination complaints); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5, 1691.10 (same); see discussion in [1], above.

(n8)Footnote 8. See 28 C.F.R. §§ 42.605-42.609; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1691.5-1691.9.

(n9)Footnote 9. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605; 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5.

(n10)Footnote 10. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605; 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5; see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-1 (department or agency must notify appropriate person of violation of implementing regulations).

(n11)Footnote 11. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(b)(i); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(b)(1).

(n12)Footnote 12. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(b)(ii); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(b)(2). For discussions relating to employment discrimination under Title VII and the Equal Pay Act of 1963, respectively, see §§ 40.20 and 40.22.

(n13)Footnote 13. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(c).

(n14)Footnote 14. See 20 U.S.C. §§ 1681-1683; see also discussion in § 40.31[3].

(n15)Footnote 15. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.613(f); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.13(f); see also 31 U.S.C. §§ 6701-6724 (Revenue Sharing Act); discussion in § 40.31 [4]. The Revenue Sharing Act was repealed effective October 18, 1986, by the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985. See Pub. Law 99-272, § 14001(a)(1), 100 Stat. 82 (1986). However, the act's prohibition against discrimination continues in effect. see 52 Fed. Reg. 16323 (1987) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(d); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(d).

(n17)Footnote 17. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(e); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(e).

(n18)Footnote 18. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(e); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(e).

(n19)Footnote 19. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(e)(i); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(e)(1).

(n20)Footnote 20. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(e)(ii); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(e)(2).

(n21)Footnote 21. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(f); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(f). For a discussion relating to "pattern or practice" employment discrimination, see Ch. 41, Part A.

(n22)Footnote 22. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(g); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(g).

(n23)Footnote 23. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.605(g); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.5(g).

(n24)Footnote 24. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.606(a) (EEOC Title VI complaint procedures); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.6(a) (same); see also discussion in § 40.20[2][a].

(n25)Footnote 25. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.609(a); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.9(a).

(n26)Footnote 26. See 29 C.F.R. § 1601.25.

(n27)Footnote 27. See 29 C.F.R. § 1601.28 (notice of right to sue under Title VII).

(n28)Footnote 28. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.609(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.9(b); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1601.29 (referral to Attorney General under Title VII).

(n29)Footnote 29. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.610(a); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.10(a).

(n30)Footnote 30. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.610(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.10(b); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-1 (notice of failure to comply with Title VI and determination that compliance cannot be secured by voluntary means is required before enforcement actions may be taken).

(n31)Footnote 31. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.610(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1691.10(b).

(n32)Footnote 32. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-1.

(n33)Footnote 33. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-1.

(n34)Footnote 34. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-1.

(n35)Footnote 35. See Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 593-597, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866 .

(n36)Footnote 35.1. See Alexander v. Sandoval (2001) 532 U.S. 275, 285-286, 121 S. Ct. 1511, 149 L. Ed. 2d 517 (nonemployment case alleging disparate impact of state regulations requiring that drivers' license examinations be conducted only in English).

(n37)Footnote 36. See Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 584, 602-603, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866 .

(n38)Footnote 37. See Drayden v. Needville Independent School Dist. (5th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 129, 133 .

(n39)Footnote 38. See Guardians Ass'n v. Civil Service Comm'n (1983) 463 U.S. 582, 584, 602-603, 103 S. Ct. 3221, 77 L. Ed. 2d 866 .

(n40)Footnote 38.1. See Taylor v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 1993) 993 F.2d 710, 712 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1.

(n41)Footnote 39. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d.

(n42)Footnote 40. See Pub. Law 100-259.

(n43)Footnote 41. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d-4a.

(n44)Footnote 42. See Grove City College v. Bell (1984) 465 U.S. 555, 571-574, 104 S. Ct. 1211, 79 L. Ed. 2d 516 .

(n45)Footnote 43. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.613(g); see also 28 C.F.R. § 42.613(e) ("federal financial assistance" defined).

(n46)Footnote 44. 28 C.F.R. § 42.613(g).

(n47)Footnote 45. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d.

(n48)Footnote 46. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d.

(n49)Footnote 47. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000d, 2000d-3.

(n50)Footnote 48. See NAACP, Western Region v. Brennan (D.D.C. 1973) 360 F. Supp. 1006, 1012 ; see also discussion in [2], above.

24 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.30

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.30 Uniform Guidelines Relating to Tests and Employee Selection Procedures

[1] Purpose and Application

The EEOC, the Office of Personnel Management (formerly the Civil Service Commission), the Department of Labor, and the Department of Justice have jointly adopted uniform guidelinesⁿ¹ that incorporate a single set of principles relating to tests and other employment selection procedures.ⁿ² The guidelines are designed to assist in compliance with the requirements of federal law prohibiting employment discriminationⁿ³ and are used by the EEOC in enforcing Title VII and by the OFCCP in enforcing Executive Order 11246.ⁿ⁴ They are designed to provide a framework for determining the proper use of tests and other selection procedures.ⁿ⁵

Although the guidelines are "entitled to great deference,"ⁿ⁶ they are not administrative regulations promulgated pursuant to formal procedures established by Congress,ⁿ⁷ and thus are accorded less weight than administrative regulations that Congress has declared have the force of law, or that may themselves supply the basis for the imposition of liability.ⁿ⁸

The guidelines derive from administrative guidelines of the EEOC and the OFCCP, and from the holding of the Supreme Court that Title VII prohibits not only overt discrimination, but also "practices that are fair in form, but discriminatory in operation."ⁿ⁹ The approach of the guidelines is commonly known as "disparate-impact analysis," as distinguished from "disparate-treatment analysis" used to ferret out intentional or overt discrimination. For discussion of the distinction between disparate-treatment and disparate-impact analysis, see Chapter 41, Part A.

The guidelines have been adopted by the FEHC as an authoritative construction of the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁰ For discussion of the FEHA, see § 40.10.

[2] Scope of Coverage and Substantive Requirements

The guidelines apply to various equal employment opportunity laws, particularly Title VII and Executive Order 11246.ⁿ¹¹ They apply to tests and other selection procedures that are used as a basis for any employment decision, including hiring, promotion, demotion, membership, referral, retention, licensing and certification, and selection for training or transfer.ⁿ¹²

The guidelines do not apply to responsibilities under the ADEA,ⁿ¹³ or Sections 503 and 504ⁿ¹⁴ of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.ⁿ¹⁵

For a detailed discussion relating to the substantive requirements of the guidelines, see Chapter 41, Part C.

[3] Enforcement

The EEOC, the OFCCP, the Office of Personnel Management, and various federal agency employers rely on the guidelines in their enforcement of Title VII and Executive Order 11246.ⁿ¹⁶ For a discussion relating to the enforcement duties of the foregoing agencies, see §§ 40.20[3] and 40.27[2].

[4] Employers and Employees Covered and Exempted

The guidelines apply to employers, labor organizations, employment agencies, and other entities subject to Title VII, Executive Order 11246, or other federal equal employment opportunity laws.ⁿ¹⁷ An "employer" under the guidelines includes state and local governments covered by Title VII, any federal agency subject to the federal employment provision of Title VII, and any federal contractor or subcontractor or federally assisted construction contractor or subcontractor covered by Executive Order 11246.ⁿ¹⁸ For discussion of employers covered by Title VII and Executive Order 11246, respectively, see §§ 40.20 [4] and 40.27[3].

Since the guidelines are used to enforce Title VII, Executive Order 11246, and other equal employment opportunity laws,ⁿ¹⁹ they apply to employees and other individuals, such as applicants for employment, who are covered by those laws. For a discussion relating to employees covered and exempted by Title VII and Executive Order 11246, respectively, see §§ 40.20 [5] and 40.27[4].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.1-1607.18 (EEOC). The guidelines are also set forth in 28 C.F.R. § 50.14 (Department of Justice) and 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-3.1-60-3.18 (OFCCP). See also 5 C.F.R. § 300.103(c) (Office of Personnel Management regulations; incorporating guidelines by reference).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.1A, 1607.1B.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.1B.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.2A.

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.1B.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (predecessor guidelines constitute administrative interpretation of Title VII); Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 434, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158; Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1483 ret'd to panel 827 F.2d 439, rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (when guidelines are consistent with statutory language and legislative history, they are entitled to great deference and can be treated as expressing the will of Congress); Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 664, cert. denied 450 U.S. 919; see also Vinson v. Taylor (D.C. Cir. 1985) 753 F.2d 141, 148 fn. 60, aff'd, 477 U.S. 57 (1986) (sex discrimination guidelines in 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.1-1604.11 are also entitled to great deference); Berg v. Richmond Unified School Dist. (9th Cir. 1975) 528 F.2d 1208, 1213 (same).

(n7)Footnote 7. Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 431, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 .

(n8)Footnote 8. General Electric Co. v. Gilbert (1976) 429 U.S. 125, 140-141 n.20, 50 L. Ed. 2d 343, 97 S. Ct. 401 (explaining that although EEOC does have authority to issue procedural regulations, guidelines are not procedural in nature or effect); see Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 664 (compliance with guidelines is not mandatory); but see Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1281, cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (employer who disregards guidelines is required to articulate some cogent reason for doing so, and generally bears a heavier than usual burden of proving job-relatedness).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158; see also background information and general overview preceding 29 C.F.R. Part 1607.

(n10)Footnote 10. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4.

(n11)Footnote 11. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.2A. For discussion relating to coverage of Title VII and Exec. Order No. 11246, see §§ 40.20 and 40.27.

(n12)Footnote 12. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.1-1607.2B.

(n13)Footnote 13. See discussion in § 40.21.

(n14)Footnote 14. See discussion in § 40.23.

(n15)Footnote 15. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.2C.

(n16)Footnote 16. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.2A.

(n17)Footnote 17. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.2D; see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.16H ("employment agency" covered by Title VII), 1607.16N ("labor organization" covered by Title VII).

(n18)Footnote 18. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.16G; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1607.1A (same principles are applied to federal government as are applied to other employers).

(n19)Footnote 19. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.2A; see discussion in [2], above.

25 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.31

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.31 Miscellaneous Federal Provisions

[1] Generally

Although the foregoing sections discuss the principal federal equal employment opportunity laws, other laws may be used to attack employment discrimination. Subsections [2] through [4], below, briefly discuss the most important of those sources. For a more thorough analysis, see Larson, employment discrimination, Chapter 2 (Matthew Bender).

[1A] Civil Rights Act of 1991

The Civil Rights Act of 1991 ("CRA")ⁿ¹ amended several of the federal civil rights laws discussed in this Part, including Title VII, the ADA, the ADEA, and Section 1981, to make significant changes in the law regarding employment discrimination. It also overruled a number of Supreme Court decisions that were seen as limiting plaintiffs' rights under the federal antidiscrimination laws. The major changes involved the addition of remedies against intentional discrimination and harassment in the workplace, the overruling of the proof burdens enunciated in Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio ⁿ² for disparate impact cases, and the reinstitution of those standards set forth in Griggs v. Duke Power Co. ⁿ³ The CRA also made the following important changes, among others:

1. The implicit overruling of Patterson v. McLean Credit Union, ⁿ⁴ by expanding the right to bring suit under Section 1981 beyond the making and enforcing of contracts to include the "making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship;"ⁿ⁵
2. The authorization of compensatory and punitive damages (with an upper cap) under Title VII and the ADA for intentional discrimination;ⁿ⁶
3. The overruling of Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins, ⁿ⁷ by changing the standard of proof in mixed motive cases;ⁿ⁸

4. The allowance of jury trials for parties seeking compensatory or punitive damages;n9
5. The prohibition of "race norming," i.e., adjusting employment test scores based on the race or other protected characteristic of the test taker in order to raise minority scores;n10
6. The prohibition of late challenges to consent decrees by parties who had actual notice of and reasonable opportunity to object at the time of the judgment or order;n11
7. The extraterritorial application of Title VII to U.S. citizens working abroad,n12 implicitly overruling EEOC v. Arabian American Oil Co.;n13
8. The expansion of the right to challenge discriminatory seniority systems;n14 and
9. The inclusion of expert fees as a part of attorney's fees in employment discrimination cases,n15 implicitly overruling West Va. Univ. Hospitals v. Casey. n16

The United States Supreme Court has held that certain provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1991 do not apply retroactively to cases pending at the time that the CRA was enacted.n17 The Court held in one case that the expanded damages provisions enacted by the CRA, as well as the provision for the right to jury trial in Title VII cases, do not apply retroactively to cases pending at the time of enactment.n18 In a companion case, the Court held that the CRA's repudiation of Patterson and expansion of rights under Title 42, United States Code, Section 1981 to include the right to enforce an established employment contract were not applicable to cases that were pending at the time of the CRA's enactment.n19 However, the Court emphasized that each provision of the CRA should be addressed separately with regard to the issue of retroactivity in light of the ordinary judicial principles concerning the application of new statutes to pending cases and preenactment conduct.n20

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that the CRA provision overruling Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins n20.1 cannot be applied retroactively.n20.2 Nor may the statute of limitations provision of the CRA be applied retroactively to revive a plaintiff's claim that would otherwise be barred under the old statutory scheme.n20.3

[2] United States Constitution

Besides being a basis for congressional enactment of various equal employment opportunity laws, the United States Constitution is a direct source of equal employment opportunity rights against public employers. The most widely invoked constitutional provisions are the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments.n20.4 but since both require "state action,"n21 they provide no remedy against discrimination by purely private employers.

[2A] Immigration Reform and Control Act

The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA),n22 which generally legalizes specified long-time resident aliens and sanctions employers for hiring illegal aliens,n23 also prohibits employment discrimination against any individual (other than an "unauthorized alien")n24 because of that individual's national origin or, if he or she is a "protected individual," because of his or her citizenship status.n25 A "protected individual" is a United States citizen or national,n26 or an alien who is a lawful permanent resident, a temporary resident under the IRCA's legalization provisions,n27 a refugee,n28 a special agricultural worker,n29 or an individual who has been granted asylum.n30 The IRCA also prohibits intimidation, threats, coercion, or retaliation against any individual (1) in order to interfere with any rights or privileges secured under the statute's antidiscrimination provisions, or (2) because the individual intends to file or has filed a discrimination charge or complaint, or has testified, assisted, or participated in any manner in a discrimination investigation, proceeding, or hearing.n31

The IRCA's antidiscrimination provisions apply to employers with four or more employees.ⁿ³² They do not apply to national origin discrimination that is also covered by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.ⁿ³³ Nor do they apply to citizenship discrimination that (1) is required in order to comply with a federal, state, or local law, regulation, or executive order; or (2) the Attorney General determines to be essential for an employer to do business with a federal, state, or local government agency or department.ⁿ³⁴

The Department of Justice enforces the IRCA antidiscrimination provisions, and has promulgated regulations to implement those provisions.ⁿ³⁵ Specifically, the IRCA and the regulations set forth procedures for filing discrimination charges with the Justice Department's Special Counsel for Immigration-Related Unfair Employment Practices,ⁿ³⁶ investigating charges,ⁿ³⁷ filing discrimination complaints with and holding hearings before an administrative law judge,ⁿ³⁸ and issuing discrimination determinations.ⁿ³⁹ Remedies under IRCA include requiring employers to hire aggrieved individuals, with or without back pay,ⁿ⁴⁰ and specified civil penalties.ⁿ⁴¹ In addition, the prevailing party in an administrative discrimination proceeding may be entitled to attorney's fees.ⁿ⁴²

Administrative determinations are subject to review and enforcement by the United States court of appeals,ⁿ⁴³ and thereafter by writ of certiorari in the United States Supreme Court.ⁿ⁴⁴ If no appeal is taken, the Special Counsel (or, if the Special Counsel fails to act, the individual filing the charge) may petition the United States district court to enforce the administrative law judge's order.ⁿ⁴⁵ The prevailing party in any of these judicial proceedings may be entitled to receive attorney's fees.ⁿ⁴⁶

For a comprehensive discussion of the IRCA's antidiscrimination provisions and procedures for enforcing them, see Gordon and Mailman, Immigration Law and Procedure, Chapter 7 (Matthew Bender).

[2B] Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993

The Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (FMLA)ⁿ⁴⁷ requires covered employers to provide eligible employees with unpaid family care leave for specified purposes, including the birth or adoption of a child of the employee, or the serious health condition of the employee or specified members of his or her family.ⁿ⁴⁸ The FMLA became effective for most private employers on August 5, 1993.ⁿ⁴⁹ For full discussion of the FMLA, see Chapter 41, Part D.

The Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division enforces the FMLAⁿ⁵⁰ and promulgates implementing regulations.ⁿ⁵¹ An employee may bring a civil action to recover damages caused by an employer's failure to provide leave as required by the FMLA.ⁿ⁵²

[3] Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX)

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX)ⁿ⁵³ prohibit sex discrimination in federally assisted education programs.ⁿ⁵⁴ The substantive and procedural provisions of Title IX are similar to Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964,ⁿ⁵⁵ except that Title IX is limited to sex discrimination in federally funded educational programs,ⁿ⁵⁶ whereas Title VI prohibits discrimination based on race, color, or national origin in any federally funded program or activity.ⁿ⁵⁷ Initially, the courts held that Title IX applied only to students or beneficiaries of federal funds,ⁿ⁵⁸ but in North Haven Board of Education v. Bell,ⁿ⁵⁹ the United States Supreme Court held that Title IX also proscribes employment discrimination in federally funded educational programs.

The Court in North Haven also held that Title IX applies only to the specific program receiving federal funds, and thus does not prohibit all discriminatory practices of a funded institution.ⁿ⁶⁰ In response, Congress enacted the Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1987,ⁿ⁶¹ which amended Title IX to provide that "program or activity" refers to an entire educational institution any part of which receives federal financial assistance,ⁿ⁶² thus overturning the North Haven decision.

Title IX contains an enforcement provision that is identical to the enforcement provision in Title VI discussed in § 40.29 [2]. Thus, Title IX is enforced by each individual agency that extends federal financial assistance,ⁿ⁶³ and by the EEOC.ⁿ⁶⁴ The Department of Justice and the EEOC coordinate enforcement of Title IX,ⁿ⁶⁵ and enforcement regulations promulgated jointly by those agencies are discussed in detail in § 40.29[2].

[4] Revenue Sharing Act

The now-repealed Revenue Sharing Act,ⁿ⁶⁶ which provided for state and local governments to share funds collected from the federal income tax,ⁿ⁶⁷ contained a provision that prohibited discrimination based on sex, race, color, or national origin in any state or local government program or activity receiving a payment under the act.ⁿ⁶⁸ The act also incorporated the prohibitions set forth in the ADEA (age discrimination) and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (disability discrimination).ⁿ⁶⁹ The Revenue Sharing Act was repealed in 1986,ⁿ⁷⁰ but the nondiscrimination obligations of the act remain in effect.ⁿ⁷¹ The nondiscrimination requirements of the act are enforced by the Office of Revenue Sharing in the Department of the Treasury, and the Department of Justice.ⁿ⁷²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission General Overview Labor & Employment Law U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Enforcement General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pub. L. No. 102-166.

(n2)Footnote 2. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642 ; see discussion in ch. 41, pt. A.

(n3)Footnote 3. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 176-177, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132, 109 S. Ct. 2363 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981(b); see also discussion in § 40.25[1].

(n6)Footnote 6. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981a; see also discussion in §§ 40.20[3], 40.22A [2]; ch. 43, pt. B.

(n7)Footnote 7. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 234-235, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268, 109 S. Ct. 1775 ; see discussion in ch. 41, pt. A.

(n8)Footnote 8. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(m).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(c)(1); see also discussion in ch. 43, pt. B.

(n10)Footnote 10. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(l) ; see also discussion in ch. 41, pt. C.

(n11)Footnote 11. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(n); see also discussion in ch. 44, pt. A.

(n12)Footnote 12. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(f); see also discussion in § 40.20[4][a]; ch. 41, pt. E.

(n13)Footnote 13. E.E.O.C. v. Arabian American Oil Co. (1991) 499 U.S. 244, 246-248, 111 S. Ct. 1227, 113 L. Ed. 2d 274 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e)(2); see also discussion in ch. 41, pt. D; ch. 42, pt. C.

(n15)Footnote 15. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(k); see also discussion in ch. 43, pt. B.

(n16)Footnote 16. West Va. Univ. Hosps. v. Casey (1991) 499 U.S. 83, 102, 113 L. Ed. 2d 68, 111 S. Ct. 1138 .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Rivers v. Roadway Express (1994) 511 U.S. 298, 303-309, 114 S. Ct. 1510, 128 L. Ed. 2d 274 ; Landgraf v. USI Film Prods. (1994) 511 U.S. 244, 257-263, 280-286, 114 S. Ct. 1483, 128 L. Ed. 2d 229 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Landgraf v. USI Film Prods. (1994) 511 U.S. 244, 257-263, 280-286, 114 S. Ct. 1483, 128 L. Ed. 2d 229 ; Yamaguchi v. United States Dep't of the Air Force (9th Cir. [Haw.] 1997) 109 F.3d 1475, 1481 (jury trial and damages provisions of CRA are not retroactive); see also McGinnis v. Kentucky Fried Chicken of California (9th Cir. 1994) 51 F.3d 805, 807-808 (declining to apply punitive damages provision of CRA retroactively to allegedly discriminatory conduct occurring before CRA passed); Chenault v. U.S. Postal Serv. (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 535, 538 (damages provision of CRA not to be applied retroactively).

(n19)Footnote 19. Rivers v. Roadway Express (1994) 511 U.S. 298, 303-309, 114 S. Ct. 1510, 128 L. Ed. 2d 274 .

(n20)Footnote 20. Landgraf v. USI Film Prods. (1994) 511 U.S. 244, 273-280, 114 S. Ct. 1483, 128 L. Ed. 2d 229 .

(n21)Footnote 20.1. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 234-235, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268, 109 S. Ct. 1775 .

(n22)Footnote 20.2. Chenault v. U.S. Postal Serv. (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 535, 538-539 .

(n23)Footnote 20.3. Chenault v. U.S. Postal Serv. (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 535, 538-539 .

(n24)Footnote 20.4. U.S. Const., amends. V, XIV § 1; see, e.g., Gregory v. Ashcroft (1991) 501 U.S. 452, 111 S. Ct. 2395, 115 L. Ed. 2d 410, 430-432 .

(n25)Footnote 21. See Rendell-Baker v. Kohn (1982) 457 U.S. 830, 837, 102 S. Ct. 2764, 73 L. Ed. 2d 418 ; see also discussion in § 40.26[2].

(n26)Footnote 22. Pub. L. No. 99-603.

(n27)Footnote 23. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1255a, 1324a(a), (e)(4)(A).

(n28)Footnote 24. An "unauthorized alien" is an alien who is not, at the time of prospective employment, either (1) an alien lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence, or (2) authorized to be employed by the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.) or by the Attorney General. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(h).

(n29)Footnote 25. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(1); 28 C.F.R. § 44.200(a). The IRCA contains "sunset" provisions that would have repealed its sanctions and antidiscrimination provisions if the Comptroller General had found, by a specified date, that the IRCA caused widespread discrimination. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1324a(l), 1324b(k)(1). In addition, the IRCA's antidiscrimination provisions contain separate "sunset" sections that would have been triggered by a Comptroller General's finding that the IRCA did not cause significant discrimination. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(k)(2). In fact, a 1990 Comptroller General's report did find that the IRCA causes widespread discrimination. see U.S. General Accounting Office (now the U.S. Government Accountability Office), Pub. No. GAO 166D-90-62, Immigration Reform, Employers Sanctions and the Question of Discrimination (March 1990). However, the IRCA's sanctions provisions were not repealed; instead, a task force required by the IRCA reviewed the report and recommended adding civil penalty and retaliation provisions, which were in fact added by the Immigration Act of 1990. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(k) (requiring review of Comptroller General Report by executive task force); Administrative Task Force Recommends Measures to Reduce Discrimination, 67 Interpreter Releases 1085 (Oct. 1, 1990); see also 8 U.S.C. §

1324b(a)(5) (prohibiting retaliation), (g)(2)(B)(iv) (civil penalties); Pub. L. No. 101-649 (Immigration Act of 1990). Because the Comptroller General found that there is widespread discrimination, the IRCA's antidiscrimination "sunset" provisions were not triggered, and are obsolete. See also Robison Fruit Ranch, Inc. v. United States (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 798, 800-802 (construing IRCA before 1996 amendments adding express discrimination requirement; 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(6)'s document abuse prohibition against requiring more or different documentation required finding of discrimination but not actual damages; requesting specific documents permitted when those documents are routinely produced during employment process).

(n30)Footnote 26. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(3)(A); see U.S. v. Todd Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 164, 165 (construing IRCA prior to amendment by Immigration Act of 1990; Congress was concerned about discrimination against "foreign looking and sounding" U.S. citizens).

(n31)Footnote 27. See 8 U.S.C. § 1255a.

(n32)Footnote 28. See 8 U.S.C. § 1157.

(n33)Footnote 29. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1160, 1161.

(n34)Footnote 30. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(3)(B); 28 C.F.R. § 44.101(c); see also 8 U.S.C. § 1158 (asylum); cf. U.S. v. Todd Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 164, 165 (construing IRCA prior to amendment by Immigration Act of 1990, which prohibited discrimination against "intending citizens," rather than "protected individuals").

(n35)Footnote 31. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(5); 28 C.F.R. § 44.201.

(n36)Footnote 32. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(2)(A).

(n37)Footnote 33. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(2)(B); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq. (Title VII); See also § 40.20. For a general discussion of national origin discrimination prohibited by Title VII, see ch. 41, pt. B.

(n38)Footnote 34. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(2)(C).

(n39)Footnote 35. See 28 C.F.R. § 44.100 et seq.

(n40)Footnote 36. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(b), (c); 28 C.F.R. §§ 44.300, 44.301.

(n41)Footnote 37. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(d)(1); 28 C.F.R. § 44.302.

(n42)Footnote 38. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(d)(2), (3), (e), (f).

(n43)Footnote 39. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(g); 28 C.F.R. § 44.303.

(n44)Footnote 40. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(g)(2)(B)(iii), (C).

(n45)Footnote 41. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(g)(2)(B)(iv).

(n46)Footnote 42. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(h).

(n47)Footnote 43. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(i)(1), (j)(3); Robison Fruit Ranch, Inc. v. United States (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 798, 802 (construing IRCA before 1996 amendments; ALJ's statutory interpretation not entitled to deference when congressional intent is clear or when agency has not consistently interpreted statute); U.S. v. Todd Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 164, 165.

(n48)Footnote 44. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(i).

(n49)Footnote 45. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(j)(1), (2).

(n50)Footnote 46. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(j)(4).

(n51)Footnote 47. Pub. L. No. 103-3, codified at 29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.

(n52)Footnote 48. See 29 U.S.C. § 2612.

(n53)Footnote 49. See Pub. L. No. 103-3, § 405(b).

(n54)Footnote 50. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 2611(10), 2617(b).

(n55)Footnote 51. See 29 U.S.C. § 2654; 29 C.F.R. pt. 825.

(n56)Footnote 52. See 29 U.S.C. § 2617(a).

(n57)Footnote 53. See 20 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.

(n58)Footnote 54. See 20 U.S.C. § 1681.

(n59)Footnote 55. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq.; See also § 40.29.

(n60)Footnote 56. See 20 U.S.C. § 1681.

(n61)Footnote 57. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d.

(n62)Footnote 58. See Islesboro Sch. Comm. v. Califano (1st Cir. 1979) 593 F.2d 424, 426 .

(n63)Footnote 59. North Haven Bd. of Educ. v. Bell (1982) 456 U.S. 512, 520, 530, 535, 102 S. Ct. 1912, 72 L. Ed. 2d 299 .

(n64)Footnote 60. North Haven Bd. of Educ. v. Bell (1982) 456 U.S. 512, 536-537, 102 S. Ct. 1912, 72 L. Ed. 2d 299 ; see Grove City College v. Bell (1984) 465 U.S. 555, 571-574, 104 S. Ct. 1211, 79 L. Ed. 2d 516 .

(n65)Footnote 61. See Pub. L. No. 100-259.

(n66)Footnote 62. See 20 U.S.C. § 1687.

(n67)Footnote 63. See 20 U.S.C. § 1682.

(n68)Footnote 64. See 28 C.F.R. §§ 42.601-42.613; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1691.1-1691.13; see § 40.29[1] and [2].

(n69)Footnote 65. See Exec. Order No. 12250, 45 Fed. Reg. 72995 (1980) ; Exec. Order No. 12067, 43 Fed. Reg. 28967 (1978) ; see § 40.29[1].

(n70)Footnote 66. See former 31 U.S.C. § 6701 et seq.

(n71)Footnote 67. See former 31 U.S.C. § 6702.

(n72)Footnote 68. See former 31 U.S.C. § 6716(a).

(n73)Footnote 69. See former 31 U.S.C. § 6716(b); see also 29 U.S.C. § 623 (prohibitions under ADEA); Pub. L. No. 794(a) (prohibitions under Section 504).

(n74)Footnote 70. See Pub. L. No. 99-272, § 14001(a)(1), 100 Stat. 82 (1986) (Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985).

(n75)Footnote 71. See 52 Fed. Reg. 16323 (1987) ; see also Pub. L. No. 99-272, § 14001(a)(5), 100 Stat. 82 (1986) (recipient governments continue to be subject to terms of Revenue Sharing Act despite repeal).

(n76)Footnote 72. See 52 Fed. Reg. 16323 (1987) .

26 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part C. FEDERAL LAW

2-40 California Employment Law §§ 40.32 through 40.39

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 40.32[Reserved]

27 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part D. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.40

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.40 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 112, Civil Rights, (Matthew Bender).

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Pt. II, Employment Discrimination (Matthew Bender).

Larson, Employment Discrimination (Matthew Bender).

Ogletree, Deakins, Nash, Smoak & Stewart, Americans with Disabilities Act: Employee Rights & Employer Obligations (Matthew Bender).

Schlei & Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (BNA 2d ed. 1983).

Simmons, Employment Discrimination and EEO Practice Manual for California Employers (Castle Publications 4th ed. 1991).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawU.S. Equal Employment Opportunity CommissionGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawU.S. Equal Employment Opportunity CommissionEnforcementGeneral Overview

28 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part D. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.41

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.41 Encyclopedias

41 Cal. Jur. 3d, Labor, §§ 3-5.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawU.S. Equal Employment Opportunity CommissionGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment
LawU.S. Equal Employment Opportunity CommissionEnforcementGeneral Overview

29 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part D. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.42

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.42 Legal Periodicals

Huibonhoa, Sherr, Beckstrom, Sharma, Smith, Glick & Anderson, Celebrating the FEHA's 50th Anniversary: A Review of the Most Significant Cases, 2009 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 1 (January 2009).

Beachboard, Supreme Court Finds Title VII's 15- Employee Threshold Is Not Jurisdictional, 2006 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 98 (March 2006).

Gray, Individual Supervisor Liability in Employment Discrimination Claims in California, 37 Santa Clara L. Rev. 517 (1997).

Weiss, Ninth Circuit Broadens Reasonableness Standard for Hostile Work Environment Sexual Harassment: Fuller v. City of Oakland, 31 U.S.F. L. Rev. 665 (1997).

Willis, Stress-Related Disability Claims Under the ADA, 43(2) Prac. Law. 73 (1997).

Brown & Shallow, Some FMLA Basics, 42(5) Prac. Law. 23 (1996).

Comment, Same-Gender Sexual Harassment: Is it Sex Discrimination Under Title VII? 36 Santa Clara L. Rev. 517 (1996).

Note, Farmers Insurance Group v. County of Santa Clara: Indemnity and Vicarious Liability in Sexual Harassment Cases, 30 U.S.F. L. Rev. 825 (1996).

Davis, The After-Acquired Defense Doctrine: A Dubious Defense in Employment Discrimination Cases, 22 Pepperdine L. Rev. 365 (1995).

O'Brien, Employment Discrimination Claims Remain Valid Despite After-Acquired Evidence of Employee Wrongdoing, 23 Pepperdine L. Rev. 65 (1995).

Young & Wells, Managing AIDS in the Workplace, 41(3) Prac. Law. 29 (1995).

Levy, Sex, Promotions, and Title VII: Why Sexual Favoritism is Not Sexual Discrimination, 45 Hastings L.J. 667 (1994).

Recent Cases, Employment Discrimination --Sexual Harassment-- New Jersey Supreme Court Adopts a Gender-Specific Reasonableness Standard, 107 Harv. L. Rev. 955 (February 1994).

Kadue & Dritsas, When What You Didn't Know Can Help You-- Employers' Use of After-Acquired Evidence of Employee Conduct to Defend Wrongful Discharge Claims, 27 Bev. Hills. B.A.J. 117 (Summer 1993).

Recent Cases, Employment Law--Gender Discrimination--Third Circuit Rules that Denial of Promotion Based on Equally Applied Legitimate Subjective Criterion is Not Discrimination, 106 Harv. L. Rev. 2039 (June 1993).

Comment, Group Health Benefits Discrimination Against AIDS Victims: Falling Through the Gap of Federal Law--ERISA, the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act, 24 Loy. L.A.L. Rev. 1247 (1991).

Johnson, The Americans With Disabilities Act Offers Important New Coverage for the Physically and Mentally Impaired, 11(6) Cal. Law. 63 (1991).

Wiencek, How the Older Workers' Benefit Protection Act Affects Employers, 37(5) Prac. Law. 69 (1991).

Bagby & Gray, How the Americans with Disabilities Act Affects Employers, 36(7) Prac. Law. 17 (1990).

Franklin, The Civil Rights Act of 1866 Revisited, 41 Hastings L.J. 1135 (1990).

Note, Agreements to Arbitrate Claims Under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 104 Harv. L. Rev. 568 (1990).

Note, Relief for Hostile Work Environment Discrimination: Restoring Title VII's Remedial Powers, 99 Yale L.J. 1611 (1990).

Recent Cases, Employment Discrimination--Gender Discrimination--Seventh Circuit Upholds Employer's Fetal Protection Plan (UAW v. Johnson Controls, Inc. 7th Cir. 1989), 103 Harv. L. Rev. 977 (February 1990).

Oppenheimer & Baumgartner, Employment Discrimination and Wrongful Discharge: Does the California Fair Employment and Housing Act Displace Common Law Remedies? 23 U.S.F. L. Rev. 145 (1989).

Comment, The Application of Handicap Discrimination Laws to AIDS Patients, 22 U.S.F. L. Rev. 317 (1988).

Gelb & Frankfurt, California's Fair Employment and Housing Act: A Viable State Remedy for Employment Discrimination, 34 Hastings L.J. 1055 (1983).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Rights LawProtection of Disabled PersonsAmericans With Disabilities ActGeneral OverviewLabor &

Employment Law Discrimination Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 General Overview Labor & Employment Law U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission General Overview

30 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

2-41 California Employment Law 41.syn

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.syn Synopsis to Chapter 41: Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

§ 41.01 Overview of Discrimination Actions

§ 41.02 Applicable Laws

[1] Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[2] Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA)

[3] Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA)

[4] Sections 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act--Substantive Provisions

[5] Title 42, United States Code Section 1981

[6] Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

§ 41.03 Federal and State Discrimination Laws Applied

§ 41.04 Interrelationship of Federal and State Antidiscrimination Laws

§§ 41.05 through 41.09 [Reserved]

§ 41.10 Definition and Application

§ 41.11 Proof

[1] Individual Actions

[a] Discriminatory Intent Must Be Shown

[b] Prima Facie Proof--Federal Test (McDonnell Douglas)

[c] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Proof(McDonnell Douglas/Burdine)

[d] Proving Pretext or "Mixed Motive"

[e] Fair Employment and Housing Commission Test

[2] Class-Wide or "Pattern or Practice" Discrimination Claims

[a] Generally

[b] Prima Facie Proof

[c] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Proof

[d] Proving Pretext

§§ 41.12 through 41.19 [Reserved]

§ 41.20 Definition and Application

[1] Generally

[2] Statutes Subject to Disparate Impact Theory

[3] Employment Practices Subject to Disparate Impact Theory

§ 41.21 Proof: Establishing Liability Under Disparate Impact Theory

[1] Discriminatory Intent Need Not Be Shown

[2] Order and Burden of Proof

[3] Establishing Prima Facie Case of "Significant" Adverse Impact

[a] Generally

[b] Federal Uniform Guidelines

[c] Other Statistical Methods

[4] Establishing "Job-Relatedness" and "Business Necessity"

[5] Establishing "Pretext" or Alternative With Less Adverse Impact

§§ 41.22 through 41.29 [Reserved]

§ 41.30 Introduction

§ 41.31 Age Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

[2] Scope of Protection

§ 41.32 Disability and Medical Condition Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Americans With Disabilities Act

[b] Sections 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act

[c] Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

[3] Issues Relating to Specific "Disabilities"

[a] Alcoholism and Drug Abuse

[b] Contagious Diseases

[c] HIV and AIDS Status

[d] Homosexuality and Bisexuality, Sexual Practices, and Compulsive Behavior Disorders

[e] Obesity

[f] Uncorrected and Monocular Vision

[g] Diabetes

§ 41.33 National Origin Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Generally

[b] Ancestry or Ethnic Discrimination as "Racial" Discrimination Under Section 1981

[c] Citizenship, Lawful Permanent Residency, and Work Authorization Requirements Distinguished

§ 41.34 Race and Color Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Race Discrimination

[b] "Color" Discrimination

§ 41.35 Religious Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Generally

[b] Issues Relating to Particular Observances, Practices, and Beliefs

[c] Notice to Employer of Conflict

[d] Exemption for Religious Educational Institutions

[e] Exemption for Nonprofit Religious Corporations

[f] Reverse Religious Discrimination

§ 41.36 Sex Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Generally

[i] Discrimination Based Solely on Sex

[ii] Discrimination Based on "Sex Plus"

[iii] Discrimination Based on Sex-Related Traits

[b] Marital Status

[c] Pregnancy

[d] Sexual Orientation

§ 41.37 Genetic Information Discrimination

§§ 41.38 through 41.39 [Reserved]

§ 41.40 Introduction

§ 41.41 Employee Selection Procedures

§ 41.42 Employee Selection Criteria

[1] Generally

[2] Objective Criteria

[a] Generally

[b] Arrest and Criminal Record

[c] Citizenship Requirements

[d] Client Preferences

[e] Credit History and Other Financial Condition

[f] Drug and Alcohol Use

[g] Education

[h] English Fluency

[i] Experience

[i] Generally

[ii] FEHA Regulations

[iii] Maximum Experience Qualifications

[j] Family or Marital Status and Responsibilities

[k] Height and Weight Restrictions

[l] "No-Spouse" Rules

[m] Personal Appearance

[i] Grooming and General Appearance

[ii] Characteristics Resulting From Physiological Disorder

[iii] Height and Weight Restrictions

[m.1] Physical Limitations

[n] Veteran Status

[3] Subjective Criteria

§ 41.43 Advertising and Other Recruiting Methods

[1] Advertising

[a] Gender

[b] Age

[c] Liability of Advertising Media

[2] Channeling

[3] Nepotism

[4] Referrals

[a] Fair Employment and Housing Act

[b] Federal Prohibitions: Title VII, ADA, and ADEA

[5] Word of Mouth

§ 41.44 Preemployment Inquiries in Employment Applications and Interviews

[1] Generally

[2] Issues Relating to Specific Inquiries

[a] Age

[b] Citizenship

[c] Criminal Records

[d] Marital Status

[e] Membership in Organizations and Participation in Activities

[f] Physical or Mental Condition or Disability

[g] Pregnancy and Family Responsibilities

[h] Religion

[i] Sex

§ 41.45 Preemployment Testing

[1] Generally

- [a] Title VII, the ADA, and the FEHA

- [b] Other Sources of Protection

- [2] Validity Studies

- [a] General Principles

- [b] EEOC Guidelines

- [c] Use of Nonvalidated Tests

- [d] Use of Other Validity Studies

- [3] Discriminatory Adjustment of Test Scores

- § 41.46 Preemployment Medical Examinations

- [1] Tests for Functional Limitations

- [a] Federal Law

- [b] California Law

- [2] Drug Tests

- § 41.47 Affirmative Action

- §§ 41.48 through 41.49 [Reserved]

- § 41.50 Equal Opportunity Employment Practices and Violations, Generally

- § 41.51 Accommodation of Disabilities

- [1] Generally

- [2] Duty to Accommodate Under Federal Law

- [a] Americans With Disabilities Act

- [i] Statutory and Regulatory Provisions

- [ii] Accommodation of Known Disabilities

- [iii] Determining Reasonable Accommodations

- [iv] Illustrative Particular Accommodations

- [v] Judicial Estoppel in Federal Courts

- [vi] Judicial Estoppel in State Courts

[b] Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act

[c] Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act

[i] Generally

[ii] Affirmative Action Not Required

[iii] Reasonable Accommodation Is Minimum Requirement

[3] Duty to Accommodate Under the FEHA

[a] Reasonable Accommodation Required

[b] Affirmative Action Required

[i] Employer's Obligations

[ii] Employee Not Required to Request Accommodation

[c] Disability Coverage Does Not Preempt Claim

[d] Workers' Compensation Preemption

[e] Judicial Estoppel

[4] Undue Hardship

[a] Federal Law

[b] Fair Employment and Housing Act

[5] Temporary Disability Due to Pregnancy

[a] Duty to Reasonably Accommodate Employee by Transferring to Less Strenuous Duties

[b] Transfer Excused Under Certain Circumstances

§ 41.52 Accommodation of Religious Beliefs and Practices

[1] Generally

[2] Duty to Accommodate Under Title VII

[a] Scope of Duty

[b] Work Schedule Conflicts

[c] Union Membership Conflicts

[d] Personal Appearance Conflicts

[3] Duty to Accommodate Under the FEHA

[4] Undue Hardship

[a] Title VII

[b] Fair Employment and Housing Act

§ 41.53 Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Rules and Tests

[1] Adverse Employment Decisions Based on Drug and Alcohol Use

[2] Drug Testing

§ 41.54 Appearance, Grooming, and Dress Standards

§ 41.55 Bankruptcy and Garnishment Rules

§ 41.56 Compensation

[1] Generally

[2] Federal Equal Pay Act of 1963

[a] Scope of Protection

[b] "Equal Work"

[i] Burden of Proof

[ii] Substantial Identity Standard

[c] Jobs Requiring Equal Skill, Effort, and Responsibility

[i] "Equal Skill" Defined

[ii] "Equal Effort" Defined

[iii] "Equal Responsibility" Defined

[d] Jobs Performed Under Similar Working Conditions

[e] Male Comparators

[3] California Equal Pay Act

[4] Equal Pay Act Exceptions

[a] Generally

[b] Seniority Systems, Merit Systems, and Systems Measuring Earnings by Quantity or Quality of Production

[c] Differentials Based on Any Factor Other Than Sex

[5] Title VII

[a] Scope of Protection

[b] Proof

[6] Comparable Worth

§ 41.57 Demotion

§ 41.58 Discharge

[1] Federal Law

[2] California Law

[3] Scope of Protection

[4] Constructive Discharge

§ 41.58A Disciplinary Suspension

§ 41.59 English-Only Rules

[1] EEOC Guidelines

[1A] FEHA

[2] Cases Rejecting English-Only Guideline

[3] EEOC Notice

§ 41.60 "Fetal Protection" Policies

§ 41.61 Fringe Benefits

[1] Generally

[2] Age Issues

[3] Gender Issues

[a] Generally

[b] Family Benefits

[c] "Head of Household" Rules

[d] Pregnancy Benefits

[e] Retirement and Pension Plans

[4] Disability and Medical Condition Issues

§ 41.62 Layoffs and Reductions in Force

[1] General Discrimination Issues

[2] Disparate Treatment Cases

[3] Disparate Impact Cases

§ 41.63 Medical Examinations

§ 41.64 Nepotism

§ 41.65 No-Spouse Rules

§ 41.66 Promotion

§ 41.67 Retirement or Pension Plans and Benefits

[1] Generally

[2] Age Discrimination Issues

[a] Mandatory Retirement

[i] ADEA

[ii] FEHA

[b] Voluntary Early Retirement

[i] Basic Requirements of OWBPA

[ii] Disputes About Validity of OWBPA Agreements

[c] Prevention of Pension-Vesting

[3] Sex Discrimination Issues

[a] Contributions and Benefits

[b] Retirement Eligibility

§ 41.68 Seniority Systems

[1] Title VII "Bona Fide Seniority System" Exception (Teamsters)

[2] EEOC Guidelines

[3] The ADEA "Bona Fide Seniority System" Exception

[4] Seniority and Layoffs

§ 41.69 Training and Advancement

§ 41.70 Transfer

§§ 41.71 through 41.79 [Reserved]

§ 41.80 Prohibited Bases of Workplace Harassment

[1] California Law

[a] Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

[i] Definition and Scope of Harassment

[ii] Employers Covered Under FEHA

[b] Unruh Civil Rights Act

[c] Common Law

[d] Workplace Violence Safety Act

[2] Federal Law

[a] Title VII

[b] Other Federal Statutes

[i] Title IX

[ii] Section 1983

[iii] Section 1981

§ 41.81 Sexual Harassment

[1] Types of Sexual Harassment

[a] "Quid Pro Quo" Harassment

[i] Definition

- [ii] Proof

- [b] "Hostile Work Environment" Harassment

- [i] Definition

- [ii] Proof

- [2] Unwelcomeness

- [3] Soured Relationship Cases

- [4] Same Sex Harassment

- [5] Sexual Favoritism

- [6] Liability

- [a] Employer Direct Liability

- [i] Generally

- [ii] Federal Law

- [iii] California Law

- [b] Employer Vicarious Liability for Supervisor Conduct

- [c] Employer Liability for Nonsupervisor Conduct

- [d] Employer Liability for Nonemployee Conduct

- [e] Individual Liability

- [7] Preventive and Corrective Actions Regarding Sexual Harassment

- [a] Employer's Duty to Prevent

- [b] Employer's Duty to Effectively Respond to Complaints

- [c] Employee's Obligation to Utilize Employer's Preventive and Corrective Opportunities

- [d] Employer's Duty to Train

- [8] Remedies

- [a] Generally

- [b] Employer's Liability for Punitive Damages

§ 41.82 Other Prohibited Bases of Harassment

[1] Statutes Prohibiting Harassment

[2] National Origin Harassment

[3] Racial Harassment

[4] Religion Based Harassment

[5] Sexual Orientation Harassment

§§ 41.83 through 41.89 [Reserved]

§ 41.90 Defenses, Generally

§ 41.91 Affirmative Action or Nondiscrimination Plans

§ 41.92 After-Acquired Evidence (Including Application or Resume Fraud)

§ 41.92A Antiharassment Policy

§ 41.93 Bona Fide Employee Benefit Plans

[1] ADEA

[a] Generally

[i] Benefit Plans Established or Modified On or After October 16, 1990

[ii] Benefit Plans Established Before October 16, 1990

[b] Specified Additional Exemptions

[2] FEHA

§ 41.94 Bona Fide Occupational Qualification

[1] Under Title VII

[a] Generally

[b] BFOQ as Applied to Religion

[c] BFOQ as Applied to Sex

[i] Generally

[ii] Effect of True Sexual Characteristics

[iii] Stereotyped Characterizations

[iv] Customer Preference

[v] Nonpregnancy as BFOQ

[d] BFOQ as Applied to National Origin

[2] Under ADEA

[3] Under FEHA

§ 41.95 Business Necessity/Job-Relatedness

[1] Generally

[2] Preemployment Tests

[2A] Medical Testing Of Employees

[3] Experience Requirements

§ 41.96 Communist Party Affiliation

§ 41.97 Employee's Inability to Perform Job or Danger to Health and Safety

[1] Under FEHA

[2] Under ADA

[a] Generally

[b] Food-Handling

§ 41.98 "Foreign Laws" Defense

[1] Under Title VII and ADA

[2] Under ADEA

§ 41.99 Health Plans Provided by Employers May Provide Greater Benefits for Dependents

§ 41.100 Indian Preference

§ 41.101 Legally Required Action

§ 41.102 Medical Examination or Health Benefit Plan Under ADA

§ 41.103 Nondiscrimination Under ADA

§ 41.104 Reasonable Factor Other Than Age Defense and Good Cause Defense

[1] Reasonable Factor Other Than Age

[2] Good Cause

§ 41.105 Reliance on EEOC Opinion

§ 41.106 Religious Exemptions and Exceptions

§ 41.107 Same Decision Made Even in Absence of Discrimination

§ 41.108 Security Regulations

§ 41.109 Seniority or Merit System

[1] Generally

[2] Determining Whether System Is "Bona Fide"

[3] Determining Whether Practice Is "Seniority System"

[4] Applicability of Seniority Exemption to Other Statutes

§ 41.110 Spouses Working Together

§ 41.111 Veterans' Preferences

§ 41.112 Written Release of Claims

§§ 41.113 through 41.129 [Reserved]

§ 41.130 Governing Law

[1] Generally

[1A] Scope of Protection Against "Discrimination"

[2] Opposition to Employment Discrimination

[a] Scope of Protection

[b] Opposition to "Unlawful Practice"

[3] Participation in Employment Discrimination Proceedings

[4] Protection for Former Employees

[5] Supervisor Liability

[6] Failure to Prevent Retaliation

§ 41.131 Proof

[1] Generally

[2] Prima Facie Case

[3] Employer's Rebuttal

[4] Proof of Pretext

§ 41.132 Defenses

§§ 41.133 through 41.139 [Reserved]

§ 41.140 State Law

[1] Fair Employment and Housing Act

[a] Recordkeeping Requirements, Generally

[b] Preservation of Records

[i] Generally

[ii] Particular Records

[iii] After Filing of Complaint

[c] California Employer Information Reports

[d] Applicant Identification Records

[e] Penalties and Remedies

[i] Unlawful Practices and Misdemeanors

[ii] Enforcing FEHA Recordkeeping and Reporting Requirements

[f] Posting

[g] Dissemination of Information About Sexual Harassment

[h] Contractors

[i] Access to Records

[ii] Construction Contracts--Reporting Requirements

[iii] Service and Supply Contracts--Small Contracts

[iv] Service and Supply Contracts--Regulated Contracts

[v] Decertification for Failure to Keep Records or Make Reports

[2] California Equal Pay Act

[3] State-Supported Programs

[a] Discrimination Prohibited

[b] Compliance Reports and Compliance Information

[c] Agency Access to Information

[d] Failure to Comply With Reporting or Access Requirements

§ 41.141 Federal Law

[1] Title VII

[a] Records and Reports

[i] General Requirement

[ii] Employer Information Reports (EEO-1)

[iii] Access

[b] Posting

[c] Uniform Guidelines

[i] Purpose

[ii] Information on Impact

[iii] Documentation of Impact and Validity Evidence

[2] Americans With Disabilities Act

[3] Age Discrimination in Employment Act

[a] Recordkeeping Requirement; Form of Records

[b] Content of Required Records

[c] Records That Must Be Preserved if Made, Obtained, or Used in the Regular Course of Business

[i] The General Rule

[ii] Employee Benefit Plans, Seniority Systems, and Merit Systems

[iii] Temporary Positions

[iv] After an Enforcement Action Is Commenced

[d] Transcriptions and Reports

[e] Posting

[f] Petitions for Exceptions

[4] Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act

[a] Regulations Under the Two Acts

[b] Recordkeeping

[c] Access to Records

[d] Posting

[5] The Equal Pay Act

[6] Executive Order 11246

[a] Regulations

[b] Reports

[i] Prime Contractors and Subcontractors

[ii] Bidders and Prospective Contractors

[c] Records

[d] Posting

§§ 41.142 through 41.149 [Reserved]

§ 41.150 Legal Texts

§ 41.151 Encyclopedias

§ 41.152 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

[1] Generally

[2] Age Discrimination in Employment Act

[3] California Fair Employment and Housing Act

[4] Title VII

By Christine Curtis, J.D.,^{n*} Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D.,^{n} and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.^{n}

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Christine Curtis is an employment law attorney who has practiced in California and New York and has also worked for the California State Legislature, Joint Committee on Legal Equality, and the California State Department of Industrial Relations, Office of the Director.

(n2)Footnote . Lori A. M. Middlehurst is an employment law specialist, presently practicing at her own firm, HR COUNSEL, which is located in Palo Alto, California. She was formerly employed by the firm of Baker & McKenzie (formerly Macdonald, Halsted & Laybourne) in California and in Sydney, Australia.

(n3)Footnote . Elizabeth W. Mandel is an attorney on the editorial staff of Matthew Bender & Co. Ms. Mandel formerly practiced as an employment litigation specialist in San Francisco, California.

Portions of this chapter which appeared in earlier releases were written by other members of the Matthew Bender editorial staff.

31 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

2-41 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

Scope

By Christine Curtis, J.D.,^{n*} Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D.,^{n} and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.^{n} SCOPE

This chapter discusses substantive requirements imposed on employers under state and federal equal employment opportunity laws. Part A discusses the two basic models for establishing liability under equal employment opportunity laws--disparate treatment and disparate impact. Part B discusses the different bases of discrimination prohibited under the various equal employment opportunity statutes. Part C discusses requirements and limitations imposed on employers with regard to recruiting and hiring of employees. Part D discusses the application of equal employment opportunity law to various post-hiring policies, such as compensation, promotion, termination, retirement, and other terms, conditions, and privileges of employment. Part E discusses workplace harassment. Part F discusses substantive defenses to charges of unlawful employment discrimination. Part G discusses the prohibition against retaliation for an employee's opposition to unlawful discriminatory practices or for an employee's participation in administrative or judicial proceedings under the equal employment opportunity laws. Finally, Part H discusses posting and recordkeeping requirements under the equal employment opportunity laws.

For an overview of the scope and coverage of the different equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40. For discussion of administrative enforcement of those laws, see Chapter 42. For discussion of and forms for use in civil actions under the equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 43. For discussion of affirmative action plans, see Chapter 44. For a discussion of employer obligations and employee rights pertaining to leaves of absence, see Chapter 8.

FOOTNOTES:

(n4)Footnote *. Christine Curtis is an employment law attorney who has practiced in California and New York and has also worked for the California State Legislature, Joint Committee on Legal Equality, and the California State Department of Industrial Relations, Office of the Director.

(n5)Footnote . Lori A. M. Middlehurst is an employment law specialist, presently practicing at her own firm, HR COUNSEL, which is located in Palo Alto, California. She was formerly employed by the firm of Baker & McKenzie (formerly Macdonald, Halsted & Laybourne) in California and in Sydney, Australia.

(n6)Footnote . Elizabeth W. Mandel is an attorney on the editorial staff of Matthew Bender & Co. Ms. Mandel formerly practiced as an employment litigation specialist in San Francisco, California.

Portions of this chapter which appeared in earlier releases were written by other members of the Matthew Bender editorial staff.

32 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart A. Introduction

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.01

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.01 Overview of Discrimination Actions

To establish that an employer is liable for violating a particular equal employment opportunity law, an individual must demonstrate, first, that the employer is subject to the law, and second, that the individual was adversely affected in his or her employment as a result of discrimination based on a classification protected by the law, such as race, sex, religion, or age. This means an employer's conduct, either intentionally or in its effect, discriminated on one of the enumerated bases. Discriminatory employer conduct resulting from intentional acts is referred to as disparate treatment; conduct which may not intentionally discriminate but has a discriminatory effect is referred to as disparate impact.ⁿ¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII; prima facie showing of discrimination); O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corporation (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433 (ADEA, upholding McDonnell Douglas framework); Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA; same). Gonzales v. Metpath, Inc. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 422, 426, 262 Cal. Rptr. 654 (FEHA; The term "discrimination" simply means the making of distinctions... . Notwithstanding the term's current connotation of racism, an employer is not forbidden from perceiving the difference between a good employee and an incompetent one, or a good employee and a better one); see also Los Angeles County Dept. of Parks & Recreation v. Civil Service Com. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 273, 281, 283, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 150; Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 199-202, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 (California application of McDonnell Douglas and Mixon and the shifting burden of proof to FEHA claims).

33 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart A. Introduction

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.02

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.02 Applicable Laws

[1] Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964

Title VII¹ provides that it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to do the following:

1. Fail or refuse to hire, or to discharge, any individual, or otherwise to discriminate against any individual with respect to his or her compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of that individual's race, color, national origin, religion, or sex; or
2. Limit, segregate, or classify his or her employees in any way that would deprive or tend to deprive any individual of employment opportunities, or otherwise adversely affect his or her status as an employee, because of the individual's race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

For full discussion of the scope and application of Title VII, see § 40.20.

[2] Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA)

The ADEA² protects individuals who are at least 40 years old. It provides that it is unlawful for an employer to do the following:³

1. Fail or refuse to hire, or to discharge, any individual, or otherwise discriminate against any individual with respect to his or her compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of the individual's age;
2. Limit, segregate, or classify his or her employees in any way that would deprive or tend to deprive any individual of employment opportunities, or otherwise adversely affect the individual's status as an employee, because of the individual's age; or

3. Reduce the wage rate of any employee in order to comply with the ADEA.

For detailed discussion regarding the scope and application of the ADEA, see § 40.21.

[3] Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA)

The ADAn⁴ provides generally that no covered entity may discriminate against a qualified individual on the basis of disability in regard to job application procedures, the hiring, advancement, or discharge of employees, employee compensation, job training, and other terms, conditions, and privileges of employment. Among other things, unlawful "discrimination" includes limiting, segregating, or classifying a job applicant or employee in a way that adversely affects the opportunities or status of the applicant or employee because of his or her disability.n⁵

For a full discussion of the scope and application of the ADA, see § 40.22A.

[4] Sections 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act--Substantive Provisions

Section 503 of the federal Rehabilitation Actn⁶ is an affirmative action law. It provides that any contract in excess of $10,000 for the procurement of personal property and nonpersonal services (including construction) that a federal department or agency enters into must contain a provision requiring the contracting party, in carrying out the contract, to take affirmative action to employ and advance qualified individuals with disabilities.

Section 504 is a nondiscrimination law. It provides that no otherwise qualified individual with a disability in the United States may, solely because of his or her disability, be excluded from the participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subject to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance, or under any program or activity conducted by any federal executive agency or by the United States Postal Service.n⁷

For detailed discussion of the scope and application of Sections 503 and 504, see § 40.23.

[5] Title 42, United States Code Section 1981

Title 42 U.S.C., Section 1981(a) provides that all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States must have the same right in every state and territory to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, give evidence, and to receive the full and equal benefit of the laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens, and also must be subject to like punishments, pains, penalties, taxes, licenses, and exactions of every kind, and to no other. For a detailed discussion relating to the scope and application of Section 1981, see § 40.25.

For purposes of Section 1981, the term "make and enforce contracts" includes the making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship.n⁸

[6] Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

The FEHAn⁹ provides that it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to do the following:

1. Refuse to hire or employ any person, or refuse to select the person for a training program leading to employment, because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical or mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation; or
2. Bar or discharge any person from employment, or from a training program leading to employment, because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical or mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation; or

3. Discriminate against any person in compensation or in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, because of race, color, ancestry, national origin, religious creed, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, age, physical or mental disability, or medical condition.

The FEHA also provides that nothing in FEHA prohibits an employer from refusing to employ an individual who is at least 40 years age because of his or her age if the law compels or provides for that refusal.ⁿ¹⁰ Promotions within the existing staff, hiring or promotion on the basis of experience and training, rehiring on the basis of seniority and prior service with the employer, or hiring under an established recruiting program from high schools, colleges, universities, or trade schools do not, in and of themselves, constitute unlawful employment practices.ⁿ¹¹ Under the FEHA, is an unlawful employment practice to harass an employee, applicant, or person providing services pursuant to a contractⁿ¹² for employment because of race, color, ancestry, national origin, religious creed, sex, sexual orientation, marital status, age, physical or mental disability, or medical condition.ⁿ¹³ Because the FEHA treats harassment in a separate provision, there is no reason to construe the FEHA's prohibition against discrimination broadly to include harassment.^{n13.1} The FEHA's discrimination provision addresses only explicit changes in the "terms, conditions, or privileges of employment,"^{n13.2} i.e., changes involving some official action taken by the employer.^{n13.3} In the case of an institutional or corporate employer, the institution or corporation itself must have taken some official action with respect to the employee, such as hiring, firing, failing to promote, adverse job assignment, significant change in compensation or benefits, or official disciplinary action.^{n13.4} By contrast, harassment often does not involve any official exercise of delegated power on behalf of the employer.^{n13.5} Courts have employed the concept of delegable authority as a test to distinguish conduct actionable as discrimination from conduct actionable as harassment. The exercise of personnel management authority properly delegated by an employer to a supervisory employee might result in discrimination, but not in harassment.^{n13.6} The statute also directs employers, labor organizations, employment agencies, apprenticeship training programs, or any training program leading to employment, to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent discrimination and harassment from occurring.ⁿ¹⁴ Employers and other covered entities must also explore reasonable alternative means of accommodating religious beliefs or observances when selecting hires and trainees and when making termination decisions.ⁿ¹⁵ For a detailed discussion relating to the scope and application of the FEHA, see § 40.10.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationActionable DiscriminationLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 U.S.C. § 631(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 623(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. 29 U.S.C. § 793(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 U.S.C. § 794(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. 42 U.S.C. § 1981(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. Cal. Gov. Code § 12926(b).

(n11)Footnote 11. Gov. Code § 12940(a)(5).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Gov. Code § 12940(j)(5) (definition).

(n13)Footnote 13. Gov. Code § 12940(j).

(n14)Footnote 13.1. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *32 .

(n15)Footnote 13.2. Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n16)Footnote 13.3. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *32 ; Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 645-647 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333 .

(n17)Footnote 13.4. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *32-*33 .

(n18)Footnote 13.5. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *33 .

(n19)Footnote 13.6. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *33 ; Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 645-647 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333 . For discussion of harassment under the FEHA, see § 41.80[1][a], below.

(n20)Footnote 14. Gov. Code 12940(k). See also California Fair Employment & Housing Com. v. Gemini Aluminum Corp. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1004, 1024-1025, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906 (employer failed to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent religious discrimination, where instead of investigating employee's complaint of discrimination, employer retaliated; where management committee was primarily concerned with workplace safety, and employer had not developed complaint or grievance procedure relating to discrimination and had no policy addressing religious accommodation).

(n21)Footnote 15. Gov. Code 12940(l).

34 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart A. Introduction

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.03

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.03 Federal and State Discrimination Laws Applied

Under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII)ⁿ¹ and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA),ⁿ² an individual may rely on two separate theories to establish unlawful discrimination--disparate treatment and disparate impact.

Disparate treatment occurs when an individual is treated differently because of membership in a protected class. Disparate impact involves a facially neutral employment policy or practice that in fact falls more harshly on one protected class than on another without sufficient business justification.

The United States Supreme Court articulated the disparate treatment and disparate impact theories in the landmark cases of McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green ⁿ³ (disparate treatment) and Griggs v. Duke Power Co., ⁿ⁴ (disparate impact); many decisions have since developed and refined these theories.ⁿ⁵

For discussion of disparate treatment and disparate impact (see §§ 41.10-41.21). For discussion of the various protected classifications, see Part B of this chapter (§§ 41.30-41.36). For a complete discussion of the scope of the various equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationActionable DiscriminationLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 430-435, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158
(codified by Congress in 1991 legislation).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335-336 & n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) .

35 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart A. Introduction

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.04

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.04 Interrelationship of Federal and State Antidiscrimination Laws

California courts have applied the theories used to prove Title VII cases when deciding actions brought under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA),ⁿ¹ usually following federal authority even though it is not binding on state courts,ⁿ² since California and federal equal employment opportunity statutes are analogous. The federal law provides a minimum or floor for state activity. It does not preempt state law if state law is not in conflict.ⁿ³ Title VII specifically states that it shall not exempt or relieve anyone from liability from compliance with state law unless the conduct in question would be unlawful under Title VII.ⁿ⁴

The decision and subsequent fate of General Electric Co. v. Gilbert ⁿ⁵ illustrates the primacy of this rule. In Gilbert, the Supreme Court held that an employer disability plan which excluded pregnant workers' disabilities did not contravene the purpose of Title VII, which is to prohibit discrimination based on sex. Rejecting the reasoning of Gilbert, Congress amended Title VII to expressly include pregnancy discrimination in the definition of sex discrimination.ⁿ⁶ California then went one step further and required employers to grant a leave to employees disabled by pregnancy, even if employees disabled by other conditions are not entitled to a leave.^{n6.1} The California law was challenged as sex discrimination under Title VII, but it was upheld by the United States Supreme Court, which held that in amending Title VII to overrule Gilbert, Congress did not mean to prohibit more favorable treatment of pregnancy, but intended to enhance employment opportunities for women.^{n6.2}

State equal opportunity law can offer greater, not less, protection than federal law.ⁿ⁷

For a discussion of the application of the disparate treatment and disparate impact theories to specific employment practices, see Part C (§§ 41.40-41.47) and Part D (§§ 41.50-41.70), below.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disability
Discrimination Federal & State Interrelationships Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Gender & Sex Discrimination Federal & State Interrelationships

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Price v. Civil Service Com. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 257, 276, 161 Cal. Rptr. 475, 604 P.2d 1365 .
cf. Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 540, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158
(FEHC is not bound to consider or follow federal precedent construing Title VII); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp.
(1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 606, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n3)Footnote 3. California Federal S. & L. Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613
.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-7.

(n5)Footnote 5. General Electric Co. v. Gilbert (1976) 429 U.S. 125, 97 S. Ct. 401, 50 L. Ed. 2d 343 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See California Federal S. & L. Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n7)Footnote 6.1. Gov. Code § 12945(b)(2).

(n8)Footnote 6.2. California Federal Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n9)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 606, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 ; Yurick v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1116, 1121, 257 Cal. Rptr. 665 ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1316, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884, (California courts rely on federal law to interpret analogous state law) ; City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 985-986, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (applicability of Title VII analysis to resolve issues arising under FEHA); see also Green v. Rancho Santa Margarita Mortgage Co. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 686, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706 .

36 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart A. Introduction

2-41 California Employment Law §§ 41.05 through 41.09

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 41.05[Reserved]

37 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart B. Disparate Treatment

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.10

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.10 Definition and Application

Disparate treatment occurs when an employer treats some employees less favorably than others because of their race, color, national origin, religion, sex, national origin, or other protected characteristic.ⁿ¹ For example, in Teamsters v. United States,ⁿ² the United States Supreme Court found an employer and a nationwide labor union liable for a deliberate violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII)ⁿ³ when qualified minority applicants "had their requests ignored, were given false or misleading information about requirements, opportunities, and application procedures, or were not considered or hired on the same basis [as] whites."ⁿ⁴

The courts have applied the theory to a broad range of employment practices, including hiring,ⁿ⁵ firing,ⁿ⁶ promotion,ⁿ⁷ denial of tenure,ⁿ⁸ wage disparity,ⁿ⁹ layoff,ⁿ¹⁰ height and weight policy,ⁿ¹¹ and segregation.ⁿ¹²

Although most disparate treatment theory cases have been brought under Title VII,ⁿ¹³ the disparate treatment theory also applies to cases arising under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA),ⁿ¹⁴ the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA),ⁿ¹⁵ and the Civil Rights Acts of 1866ⁿ¹⁶ and 1871.ⁿ¹⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentCoverage & DefinitionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentProofGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335-336, n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884

(FEHA) .

(n2)Footnote 2. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n3)Footnote 3. 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2000e-17.

(n4)Footnote 4. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 337-338, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Furnco Construction Corp. v. Waters (1978) 438 U.S. 567, 575-576, 98 S. Ct. 2943, 57 L. Ed. 2d 957 (Title VII) .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 259-260, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII) ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317-1319, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884(FEHA) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See U.S. Postal Service Bd. of Govs. v. Aikens (1983) 460 U.S. 711, 103 S. Ct. 1478, 75 L. Ed. 2d 403 (Title VII) ; McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1122-1124 (Title VII; race) .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lynn v. Regents of the Univ. of California (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1337, 1339-1345 (Title VII).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Uviedo v. Steves Sash & Door Co. (5th Cir. 1984) 738 F.2d 1425, 1431 , modified, 753 F.2d 369 (5th Cir. 1985) (Title VII).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Nellis v. Sunshine Dairy (D. Or. 1979) 21 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 327, 329-331 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Frank v. United Airlines, Inc., (9th Cir. 2000) 216 F.3d 845, 854 (weight maximums of male female flight attendants corresponded to large-frame MetLife's tables, but to medium-frame tables for female attendants).

(n12)Footnote 12. See United States v. Jacksonville Terminal Co. (5th Cir. 1971) 451 F.2d 418, 458 (Title VII).

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (plaintiff alleging refusal to rehire after layoff in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1), 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a); Warren v. City of Carlsbad (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 439 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1171 (1996) ; Heyne v. Caruso (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1475 ; Brazil v. United States Dep't of the Navy (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 193 , cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1103 (1996) .

(n14)Footnote 14. Gov. Code § 12940 et seq.; see, e.g., Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Comm'n. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1316-1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 ; Ibarbia v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1327, 1328, 237 Cal. Rptr. 92 ; Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 199-202, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 ; Strother v. Southern Cal. Permanente Med. Group (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 859 (claims brought under FEHA).

(n15)Footnote 15. 29 U.S.C. §§ 621-634; see, e.g., O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433 (fact that employee who was discharged at age 56 was replaced by 40 year old worker also covered under ADEA, did not bar claim of disparate treatment on basis of age); Enlow v. Salem-Keizer Yellow Cab Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 371 F.3d 645, 649-650 ; Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1421-1423 ; Merrick v. Farmers Ins. Group (9th Cir. 1990) 892 F.2d 1434, 1436 ; Mundy v. Household Fin. Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 542, 545-546 ; Williams v. Edward Apffels Coffee Co. (9th Cir. 1986) 792 F.2d 1482, 1484 (case decided under ADEA); O'Day v. McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 756 .

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Civil Rights Act of 1866, 14 Stat. 27; London v. Coopers & Lybrand (9th Cir. 1981) 644 F.2d 811, 818 (guarantees of 42 U.S.C. § 1981 and Title VII as coextensive); Tagupa v. Board of Directors (9th Cir. [Haw.] 1980) 633 F.2d 1309, 1312 .

(n17)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Congressional legislation, in 1991, reversed limits on the scope of § 1981 created in Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 186-188, 109 S. Ct. 2363, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132 . See Stender v. Lucky Stores (N.D. Cal.1992) 780 F. Supp. 1302, 1305-1306 ; Estate of Reynolds v. Martin (9th Cir. 1993) 985 F.2d 470 ; Washington v. Garrett (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1421 ; Rodriguez v. General Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 531, 532 .

38 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
 CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
 PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
 OPPORTUNITY LAWS
 Subpart B. Disparate Treatment

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.11

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.11 Proof

[1] Individual Actions

[a] Discriminatory Intent Must Be Shown

An individual alleging disparate treatment must demonstrate intentional discrimination.ⁿ¹ Intent is established under Title VII when an employer chooses a particular policy because of, not merely in spite of, its effect on members of a protected class.ⁿ² However, actionable disparate treatment does not require a malevolent motive. The beneficence of an employer's motive does not undermine a finding of unlawful disparate treatment.ⁿ³ Conversely, however, mere awareness of adverse consequences to a protected group is insufficient to prove intent required for disparate treatment liability. For example, in AFSCME v. State of Washington ⁿ⁴ the Ninth Circuit held that payment of wages according to prevailing market rates will not by itself support an inference of intentional discrimination, even if the market reflects a historical pattern of lower wages to positions staffed predominantly by members of a protected class. Disparate treatment under Title I of the ADA means that an individual was treated differently on the basis of his or her disability.ⁿ⁵

"Intent" for disparate treatment purposes should not be confused with "willfulness," which is required for "liquidated" (double) damages under some equal employment opportunity laws, such as the ADEA.ⁿ⁶ In Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston, ⁿ⁷ the United States Supreme Court declared that a violation of the ADEA is "willful" if an employer "knew or showed reckless disregard for the matter of whether its conduct was prohibited by the ADEA."ⁿ⁸ Thus, "willfulness" is established by showing a disregard for the law and an indifference to its requirements,ⁿ⁹ rather than a discriminatory motive in regard to an individual's protected status.ⁿ¹⁰

The evidence presented to show discriminatory intent need not necessarily be contemporaneous with or causally related to the allegedly discriminatory decision. For example, evidence of discrimination transpiring at any stage of the university's hiring process is admissible if it would tend to show that discriminatory motive affected the hiring committee's final decision.n10.1 On the other hand, the evidence must show a nexus between the allegedly discriminatory acts and subsequent employment decisions.n10.2

In Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc.,n10.3 the United States Supreme Court held that although a word such as "boy" will not always be evidence of racial animus, it does not follow that the term, standing alone, is always benign. The speaker's meaning may depend on various factors including context, inflection, tone of voice, local custom, and historical usage. In Ash, there was evidence that the employer's plant manager, who made the hiring decisions that plaintiffs challenged as based on race, had referred on some occasions to each of the plaintiffs as "boy." The Supreme Court held that insofar as the Court of Appeals held that modifiers or qualifications were necessary in all instances to render the disputed term probative of bias, the court's decision was erroneous.n10.4

Although the pivotal issue in disparate treatment cases is whether a particular individual was discriminated against and why,n10.5 remarks by the decision-maker reflecting a general intent to discriminate against members of the same protected group as the plaintiff provide substantial evidence of a discriminatory animus toward the plaintiff.n10.6

The Ninth Circuit has found that under Title VII, evidence that the same actor both hired and terminated plaintiff raises an inference that puts an enhanced burden on a plaintiff attempting to rebut the employer's articulated business reason for an adverse employment action.n10.7 In Harvey v. Sybase, n10.8 the Court of Appeal concluded that "same actor" evidence is entitled to no special weight. The court found that same actor evidence often will generate an inference of nondiscrimination, and the factors that influence the strength of the inference are:n10.9

- The nature of the benefit(s) conferred and the adverse employment action taken by the actor.
- The length of time between the positive and negative actions taken.
- The existence and nature of any motivating factors for the adverse action that arose after the benefit was conferred.

The existence of same actor evidence in an employment discrimination case does not change the standard for reviewing the denial of a motion for JNOV or alter the meaning of the term "substantial evidence" contained in that standard.n10.10

[b] Prima Facie Proof--Federal Test (McDonnell Douglas)

The most compelling proof of liability under a disparate treatment theory would be direct evidence of discriminatory intent, such as an express admissionn11 or policyn12 excluding members of a protected class from certain jobs or employment privileges. Direct evidence is evidence which, if believed, proves the fact of discriminatory animus without inference or presumption. For example, direct evidence that a cab driver's employment was terminated because the employer's insurance policy did not cover drivers older than seventy years of age was sufficient to support an inference that by terminating the employment after purchasing the policy, the employer adopted a practice of intentionally discriminating against employees over seventy years of age.n12.1 Further, racist or sexist statements constitute direct evidence of discrimination.n12.2

1. Statements by a decision maker with respect to the individual who is the subject of the challenged decision;
2. Statements by a decision maker with respect an individual who is not the subject of the challenged decision, but from which the plaintiff seeks to infer discrimination;n12.3
3. Statements by someone other than the decision maker who nevertheless provided input into the challenged decision; and

4. Statements by someone other than the decision maker who provided no input into the challenged decision.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

When analyzing alleged racist or sexist statements, it is important to determine whether the statements have a direct or tenuous link to the decision that the plaintiff has challenged. Consider the following hierarchy from most to least direct:

1. Statements by a decision maker with respect to the individual who is the subject of the challenged decision;

2. Statements by a decision maker with respect an individual who is not the subject of the challenged decision, but from which the plaintiff seeks to infer discrimination;

3. Statements by someone other than the decision maker who nevertheless provided input into the challenged decision; and

4. Statements by someone other than the decision maker who provided no input into the challenged decision.

After placing the alleged racist or sexist comment into its proper context (with respect to its direct or tenuous bearing upon the challenged decision), it is also important to consider the age of the statement and its character (e.g., offensive per se or boorish). Only then is it possible to determine whether the alleged statement is direct evidence of discrimination, inferential evidence of discrimination or neither. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

However, in most cases, a plaintiff will be unable to produce such evidence,ⁿ¹³ and discriminatory intent must be proved by circumstantial evidence,ⁿ¹⁴ such as a comparison of treatment between members of a protected class and majority class members.ⁿ¹⁵

In recognition of these problems, the United States Supreme Court designed a test in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green ⁿ¹⁶ to aid in establishing discriminatory intent when only circumstantial evidence is available.ⁿ¹⁷ If direct evidence is available, the McDonnell Douglas test is inapplicable.ⁿ¹⁸ Plaintiff is not required to prove he or she was qualified for the position as part of his or her prima facie case.^{n18.1}

McDonnell Douglas establishes the order and allocation of proof in most private, nonclass, disparate treatment cases. It should be noted that the McDonnell Douglas framework is meant only as a burden-shifting tool and is not a subject on which the jury should be instructed.^{n18.2} Further, although the McDonnell Douglas burden shifting framework is a useful tool to assist plaintiffs at the summary judgment stage so that they may reach trial, nothing compels the parties to invoke the McDonnell Douglas presumption. When responding to the employer's summary judgment motion, the plaintiff may proceed by using the McDonnell Douglas framework or may produce direct or circumstantial evidence demonstrating that a discriminatory reason more likely than not motivated the employer.^{n18.3} In the context of summary judgment, Title VII does not require a disparate treatment plaintiff relying on circumstantial evidence to produce more, or better, evidence than a plaintiff who relies on direct evidence.^{n18.4} Under the McDonnell Douglas test, a plaintiff must carry the burden of establishing, by a preponderance of the evidence,ⁿ¹⁹ a prima facie case of employment discrimination by showing (1) that he or she is a member of a protected class;ⁿ²⁰ (2) that he or she applied and was qualified for a job (or other employment opportunity or benefit) for which an employer was seeking applicants;^{n20.1} (3) that, despite the plaintiff's qualifications, he or she was rejected or suffered some other adverse employment action;^{n20.2} and (4) that, after the plaintiff's rejection, the position remained open and the employer continued to seek applicants from persons with the plaintiff's qualifications (or provide the benefit to other such persons).ⁿ²¹ With regard to Step 2, a plaintiff may not take inconsistent positions as to whether he or she was actually qualified for the job. For example, in one case,^{n21.1} the doctrine of judicial estoppel precluded a plaintiff who received workers' compensation benefits from bringing an employment discrimination action against her employer on the ground that sworn statements she had previously made asserting her inability to work in order to obtain workers' compensation benefits were inconsistent with her later assertion in her civil discrimination action of her ability to perform her job satisfactorily. Step (3) does not require that a plaintiff establish that he or she was rejected because of his or her protected status. The plaintiff must only show the threshold factor that he or she was rejected despite his or her qualifications. The latter showing raises an inference of disparate treatment, while the former would require actual proof of the ultimate question to be decided.ⁿ²² However, a plaintiff need not show, as part of the prima facie case, that similarly-situated employees outside the protected class received the employment terms and conditions sought by the plaintiff.^{n22.1} On the other hand, the plaintiff must show an adverse employment action.^{n22.2} The courts define adverse employment action broadly.^{n22.3} Courts recognize an adverse employment action when an employer's action negatively affects its employee's compensation.^{n22.4} A warning letter or negative review also can be considered an adverse employment action.^{n22.5} However, purely subjective detriment is not sufficient to establish an adverse employment action.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The Rissetto case is an important addition to EEO law. The plaintiff took the position before the Worker's Compensation Appeals Board that she was temporarily totally disabled from work. During the period that the plaintiff claimed that disability, she also claimed that she was a victim of age discrimination. Prima facie proof of age discrimination by an existing employee, however, requires that the he or she establish satisfactory job performance. The Ninth Circuit held that the plaintiff in this case could not claim total disability in one forum and satisfactory performance in another. In so doing, the Circuit Panel invoked the doctrine of judicial estoppel -- a doctrine which permits a court to bar a litigant from taking incompatible positions in separate actions involving the same opponent. Although the formulation of the doctrine takes different forms in different circuits, the Ninth Circuit in this instance appears to have stated the following rule:

A federal judge has the discretion (irrespective of state law regarding the doctrine of judicial estoppel) to bar a plaintiff who has prevailed by judgment or settlement against a defendant in a prior civil or administrative proceeding from seeking to secure a judgment against the same defendant in a subsequent federal civil action by resort to a theory of recovery which is incompatible with the theory upon which the plaintiff prevailed in the first proceeding.

The utility of this doctrine cannot be overstated. It is not at all uncommon for an employee to claim disability status under the Worker's Compensation Act or State Disability Insurance Act and to simultaneously claim satisfactory performance in a discrimination suit against the same employer. In the Ninth Circuit, at least, the opportunities for such lawsuits to proceed to conclusion are now greatly diminished. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Warren v. City of Carlsbad, ⁿ²³ provides instructive commentary on the burden of proof necessary to obtain summary judgment in an EEO case. Citing Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co., ⁿ²⁴ the panel stated that "the mere existence of a prima facie case, based on the minimum evidence necessary to raise a McDonnell Douglas presumption, does not preclude summary judgment." However, citing Lindahl v. Air France, ⁿ²⁵ the panel made it clear that "the plaintiff [who has established a prima facie case] need produce very little evidence of discriminatory motive to raise a genuine issue of fact as to pretext. In fact, any indication of discriminatory motive may suffice to raise a question that can only be resolved by the factfinder." Yet, the panel stressed that a plaintiff cannot defeat summary judgment through "generalizations." "He must produce evidence of facts that either directly show a discriminatory motive or show that the [employer's] explanation [for its actions] is not credible." In the Warren case, the plaintiff presented testimony on credibility which precluded summary judgment, but it is important to note that the burden of defeating an employer's motion with "direct evidence" of discriminatory motive or evidence that the employer's defenses are "not credible" is not a burden that a plaintiff can assume that he or she will meet. Where an employer has dealt with a plaintiff according to fair and regular procedures (oral or written) and assertions of misconduct are unsupported or buttressed by attenuated facts, summary judgment remains a viable device for limiting or foreclosing weak EEO claims. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Generally, evidence offered to satisfy the McDonnell Douglas test gives rise to an inference of unlawful discrimination; that is, a prima facie case establishes an inference of discrimination that the defendant must rebut.ⁿ²⁶ Several courts have held that the requisite degree of proof to establish a prima facie case is minimal since the plaintiff is only required to raise an inference that the discriminatory misconduct occurred.ⁿ²⁷ Further, cases have held that when a plaintiff establishes a prima facie inference of disparate treatment through direct or circumstantial evidence of discriminatory intent, the plaintiff will necessarily have raised a genuine issue of material fact with respect to the legitimacy or bona fides of the employer's articulated reasons for its employment decision.^{n27.1}

An employee's own statement of having performed at a level equal to that of other employees is relevant at the prima facie stage, even if it would be insufficient by itself to raise a genuine issue of material fact.^{n27.2}

Statistical evidence may substantiate the inference, even if it is not directly probative of any particular element,ⁿ²⁸ as long as it shows a "stark pattern of discrimination [that is] unexplainable on [other] grounds."ⁿ²⁹ For example, statistical evidence may establish a general discriminatory pattern in hiring and promotion practices,ⁿ³⁰ which creates an inference of discriminatory intent with respect to the individual employment decision at issue.ⁿ³¹ However, there is some debate about whether statistical evidence alone is sufficient to establish a prima facie case of disparate treatment.ⁿ³²

When the sample size is small, the court may make no statistical inference of intentional discrimination.^{n32.1} The utility of statistics in disparate treatment cases depends on all of the surrounding facts and circumstances. Statistical evidence derived from an extremely small universe has little predictive value and must be disregarded. The problem with a small number is that slight changes in the data can drastically alter the result.^{n32.2}

Inferences drawn from statistical proof are strongest when they are substantiated by other evidence in the case which brings "the cold numbers convincingly to life."ⁿ³³ The relevance and usefulness of statistical data depends upon all of the surrounding facts and circumstances.ⁿ³⁴ For example, in Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc.,^{n34.1} the fact that three of four casual employees singled out for layoff were white was insufficient to raise an inference of racial discrimination. The statistical evidence constituted too small a sample size to support a statistical inference of intentional discrimination. Further, the statistical evidence presented no stark pattern of racial discrimination, nor did it account for possible nondiscriminatory variables, such as job performance.^{n34.2}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Statistics are not a substitute for analysis. While it is true that gross disparities based upon large sample sizes may alone be sufficient to raise an inference of discrimination, such disparities rarely present themselves in litigation. Typically, statistics are just one aspect of a plaintiff's prima facie case or a defendant's legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for its challenged decision. And courts are increasingly aware that statistics are a reflection of the impact of past decisions, but do not explain the causes for those decisions.

Thus, bare statistical disparities rarely prove anything by themselves. Only if statistical proof includes large sets of relevant data and robust explanatory variables or corroborative evidence of discrimination or non-discrimination can a court make a fair assessment of a plaintiff's claim of discriminatory treatment or impact. Small sample sizes present the most glaring example of statistical slight-of-hand. A layoff comprised of 75% of the group that has brought a lawsuit gives an impression of overwhelming disparity. When one learns that the layoff encompassed just four individuals, three of whom were members of the same racial group, the disparity immediately becomes unimpressive and, according to Aragon, n34.3 irrelevant without more. Any change in the layoff list by even one individual moves the percentage 25%. Small samples are simply too unstable to provide any explanatory power. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

One Ninth Circuit panel held that a plaintiff had not made out a prima facie case of discriminatory termination under the ADEA when he did not specify the person outside the protected age group who took his place by name, age, or inferior qualifications.ⁿ³⁵ The court found that the vagueness of the allegation did not raise a material issue of fact as to whether he had been replaced by a person outside the protected class. The court also rejected the plaintiff's attempt to show that because he worked in a number of projects and positions that were eventually subject to cutbacks and layoffs there was an inference of "subterfuge" based on age discrimination, finding that the plaintiff had failed to present sufficient evidence of such subterfuge.ⁿ³⁶

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. n37 is a reminder that the McDonnell Douglas model of proof is just one way to prove a disparate treatment case under Title VII or the ADEA. A plaintiff can elect not to use the three-step procedure articulated in McDonnell Douglas and instead elect to use direct, statistical, or circumstantial evidence of discriminatory conduct. Mr. Ritter was unable to establish a violation of the ADEA on any basis, but it is significant to note that the court gave him several pathways to follow. The limited practice pointer here is that, in the analysis of potential ADEA liability, it is not enough for an employer to defend itself by saying: (a) "He or she was not replaced"; or (b) "He or she was replaced, but not by a younger employee." Liability may exist without regard to replacement, if the requisite animus can be established without the need for drawing inferences under the McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting scheme. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

In O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corporation, the United States Supreme Court permitted the application of the McDonnell Douglas standards to the prima facie proof required in an ADEA case. The Court noted that it had never had occasion to decide whether that application is correct, but assumed its application in light of the fact that the parties did not contest it.ⁿ³⁸ The Court said, "In McDonnell Douglas, we 'established an allocation of the burden of production and an order for the presentation of proof in Title VII discriminatory-treatment cases.' [Cites] We held that a plaintiff alleging racial discrimination in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964... could establish a prima facie case by showing '(i) that he belongs to a racial minority; (ii) that he applied and was qualified for a job for which the employer was seeking applicants; (iii) that, despite his qualifications, he was rejected; and (iv) that, after his rejection, the position remained open and the employer continued to seek applicants from persons of [the] complainant's qualifications' Once the plaintiff had met this initial burden, the burden of production shifts to the employer 'to articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the employee's rejection.' " The O'Connor court held that while there needs to be a logical connection between each element of the prima facie case and the illegal discrimination, it is not necessary that plaintiff prove he or she was displaced by someone under 40 years of age.ⁿ³⁹

In Hersant v. Department of Social Services,^{n39.1} a California court of appeal applied the McDonnell Douglas standards to prima facie and rebuttal proof required in a FEHA age discrimination case. Noting that it is impossible to establish an exact, all-inclusive statement of the elements of a prima facie age discrimination case, the court found that the employee met the burden by showing that (1) the employee was 40 years of age or older; (2) an adverse employment action was taken against the employee; (3) the employee was satisfactorily performing the job when the adverse action was taken; and (4) the employee was replaced by a significantly younger person.^{n39.2} The court held that the general requirement that the employee offer circumstantial evidence sufficient to raise a reasonable inference of age discrimination is not an onerous one.^{n39.3}

In Trop v. Sony Pictures Entertainment, Inc.,^{n39.4} a California appellate court applied the McDonnell Douglas standards to a sex discrimination action under the FEHA to find that plaintiff had not made out a prima facie case of discrimination based on pregnancy. The court found first that the plaintiff failed to show that plaintiff's boss, who was responsible for her termination, knew that she was pregnant at the time he made the decision to terminate her employment.^{n39.5} The court then held that even assuming plaintiff's evidence could be construed as supporting a finding that her boss knew of her pregnancy, the boss presented a nondiscriminatory basis for firing plaintiff based on poor job performance, and plaintiff did not present credible evidence to overcome the nondiscriminatory reason for the firing. The court rejected plaintiff's argument that she presented direct evidence of discrimination, which would have rendered the McDonnell Douglas test inapplicable.^{n39.6}

Once a prima facie case is established, the employer has the burden of articulating some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for its action.ⁿ⁴⁰ In Caldwell v. Paramount Unified School Dist.,ⁿ⁴¹ the court explained that under McDonnell Douglas, there is no rigid standard for establishing a prima facie case, as proof will vary according to the facts of the particular case. The adequacy of the proof is a question of law for the trial court, not a question of fact for the jury. "If the employee establishes a prima facie case, the employer must offer a legitimate reason for his actions." ⁿ⁴² Once the employer has rebutted the prima facie case by producing a nondiscriminatory reason for its employment decision, which will support a summary judgment for the employer, "the McDonnell/Burdine presumption 'drops from the case,' " and the factfinder must decide on all of the evidence before it whether defendant intentionally discriminated against plaintiff. "In short, the trier of fact decides whether it believes the employer's explanation of its actions or the employee's."ⁿ⁴³... That is to say, once the defendant has succeeded in carrying its burden of production, the McDonnell Douglas framework--with its presumptions and burdens--is no longer relevant ."ⁿ⁴⁴

Thus the construct of the shifting burdens enunciated in McDonnell Douglas is an analytical tool for use by the trial judge in applying the law, not a concept to be understood and applied by the jury in the fact-finding process.ⁿ⁴⁵ If the employer meets that burden, the aggrieved individual must have a fair opportunity to show that the employer's stated reason was in fact a pretext for discrimination.ⁿ⁴⁶ For discussion relating to rebuttal and proof of pretext, see [c] and [d], below.

[c] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Proof(McDonnell Douglas/Burdine)

In Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine,ⁿ⁴⁷ the United States Supreme Court explained that a McDonnell Douglas prima facie case establishes a rebuttable presumption of unlawful discrimination.ⁿ⁴⁸ The burden then shifts to the employer to articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the challenged action.ⁿ⁴⁹ When the employer moves for summary judgment, the employer bears the initial burden of demonstrating that at least one of the elements of plaintiff's employment discrimination claim is without merit.^{n49.1} Yet, the ultimate burden of persuading the trier of fact that the employer discriminated remains at all times with the plaintiff.ⁿ⁵⁰ Thus, the employer's burden is one of "production" of evidence. It is sufficient if the employer raises a genuine issue of fact about whether the employer discriminated against the aggrieved individual.ⁿ⁵¹ The employer may satisfy this burden by clearly setting forth, through the introduction of admissible evidence, the reasons for the plaintiff's rejection.ⁿ⁵² For example, in one FEHA sex discrimination case, an employer sustained its burden by offering declarations that an employee was denied promotion based on neutral nondiscriminatory criteria, together with transcripts of the employee's deposition testimony stating that the individuals who evaluated her did not act in sexually discriminatory manner when they voted not to recommend her for promotion.ⁿ⁵³ However, the Ninth Circuit has held that an employer cannot avoid liability for discrimination on the ground that its employment criteria are neutral on the surface if the evidence establishes that the employer implemented a discriminatory scheme in such a manner as to give the appearance of neutrality.ⁿ⁵⁴

Evidence of the employer's having filled a particular position with a member of plaintiff's protected class is properly evidence that can rebut an inference of discrimination; but it is not evidence essential to the plaintiff's prima facie case. However, even as rebuttal evidence it will not necessarily be dispositive. Thus, in one case, proof that the employer filled two of five positions with applicants from plaintiffs' protected class did not impede plaintiffs' ability to raise an inference of discrimination with regard to the three other positions, although it might have had some relevance to the employer's motive.^{n54.1}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

It is possible to read too much into that portion of the Lyons ^{n54.2} opinion which holds that the plaintiff may be able to raise an inference of discrimination with respect to three out of the five placements in question that the employer assigned to non-African-Americans. The Ninth Circuit was careful to explain that the promotion of protected group members into target positions is relevant to an employer's motive. Thus, barring evidence of the kind that plaintiff offered in Lyons to successfully impugn that motive, an employer can still secure summary judgment in a case involving multiple challenged promotions by showing that its advancement of protected group members to some--but not every one--of those positions was consonant with their qualifications and availability. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

The employer may also show statistically that its work force is racially balanced or that it contains a disproportionately high percentage of minority employees.ⁿ⁵⁵ However, statistical evidence that an employer has a good nondiscrimination record for the period after a discrimination claim is filed is irrelevant to the merits of the initial claim.ⁿ⁵⁶

In Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Products, Inc.,^{n56.1} the Supreme Court held that a plaintiff's prima facie case of discrimination as defined in McDonnell Douglas Corp., combined with sufficient evidence for a reasonable fact finder to find that the employer's asserted justification is false, may be adequate to sustain a finding of liability for intentional discrimination under ADEA. According to the Court, "Proof that the defendant's explanation is unworthy of credence is simply one form of circumstantial evidence that is probative of intentional discrimination, and it may be quite persuasive."^{n56.2} In the appropriate circumstances, the trier of fact can reasonably infer from the falsity of the explanation that the employer is covering up a discriminatory purpose.^{n56.3} The Court noted that, "[O]nce the employer's justification has been eliminated, discrimination may well be the most likely alternative explanation, especially since the employer is in the best position to put forth the actual reason for its decision."^{n56.4}

In St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks, ⁿ⁵⁷ the Supreme Court held that because the defendant's rebuttal burden under Title VII is one of producing evidence and because the burden of proof remains at all times with the plaintiff, the defendant's failure to persuade the factfinder that its proffered nondiscriminatory reason was the true reason for its action does not necessarily entitle plaintiff to judgment as a matter of law.ⁿ⁵⁸ According to the Court, once the defendant meets its burden of production, the presumption of discrimination raised by the prima facie case under McDonnell Douglas is no longer relevant, and plaintiff retains the burden of proving intentional discrimination. Although the trier of fact is permitted to infer intentional discrimination from its disbelief of the defendant's proffered reasons, together with the elements of the prima facie case, it is not compelled to do so.ⁿ⁵⁹ In St. Mary's, for example, the district court disbelieved the defendant employer's explanation for plaintiff's discharge (plaintiff's alleged frequent and increasingly severe violations of the employer's regulations), but ultimately ruled in favor of the employer because it found that although plaintiff had succeeded in proving the existence of a "crusade" to terminate him, he had failed to prove that the crusade was racially rather than personally motivated. The Supreme Court held that the district court was not required to find for the plaintiff under these circumstances.ⁿ⁶⁰

In one case decided subsequent to St. Mary's, a Ninth Circuit panel applied the St. Mary's standard to hold that when a plaintiff presents a prima facie case and then raises a genuine factual issue regarding the authenticity of the employer's proffered reason for its action, summary judgment for the defendant is inappropriate.ⁿ⁶¹ However, another Ninth

Circuit panel has held that if the plaintiff presents only a minimal prima facie case and does not supply additional evidence to refute the employer's proffered explanation, summary judgment for the defendant-employer may be appropriate.ⁿ⁶²

Where an employer takes action against an employee because it believes the employee breached or violated the employer's rules or standards, it does not matter, for purposes of establishing the employer's initial burden of proof, whether plaintiff actually did commit the violation or breach, as long as the employer honestly believed plaintiff did.^{n62.1}

[d] Proving Pretext or "Mixed Motive"

The Supreme Court in McDonnell Douglas and Burdine stated that once the employer meets its burden of production, the employee must have an opportunity to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the employer's "legitimate" reasons were not its true reasons, but were a pretext for discrimination.ⁿ⁶³ For example, an employer may not use an employee's alleged deficiencies on the job as a pretext for race discrimination.ⁿ⁶⁴

Once a plaintiff has established a prima facie case, he or she need produce very little evidence of discriminatory motive to raise a genuine issue of fact as to pretext.ⁿ⁶⁵ However, to avoid summary judgment after the defendant offers evidence of a nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse action, the plaintiff must offer substantial evidence that the defendant's reason was untrue or pretextual, that the defendant acted with discriminatory animus, or a combination, to a degree that a reasonable trier of fact could conclude that the defendant engaged in intentional discrimination.^{n65.1} In Hersant v. Department of Social Services, the court analysed the requisite showing to avoid summary judgment in relation to the Supreme Court's decision in St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks.^{n65.2} In the context of a motion for summary judgment, courts and commentators considering the Hicks opinion have come to varying conclusions: some have concluded that an employee's prima facie case, even in the face of an employer's showing of a non-age based reason for the adverse action, is alone sufficient to avoid summary judgment; others have concluded that Hicks requires the employee, once the employer has offered a nondiscriminatory reason, to show both that the reason is false and that the true reason for the adverse action was a discriminatory animus. However, the Hersant court adopted the predominant view:^{n65.3} an employee cannot simply show that the employer's decision was wrong or mistaken because the factual dispute at issue is whether discriminatory animus motivated the employer, not whether the employer is wise, shrewd, prudent, or competent. The employee must demonstrate such weaknesses, implausibilities, inconsistencies, incoherencies, or contradictions in the employer's proffered legitimate reasons for its action that a reasonable factfinder could rationally find unworthy of credence and infer that the employer did not act for the asserted non-discriminatory reasons.^{n65.4} While the plaintiff can demonstrate pretext by showing shifting, conflicting, and retracted justifications for adverse treatment, pretext is not shown if an employer simply supplements its explanation and there has been no retraction of any of its reasons and none of its reasons are inconsistent or conflicting.^{n65.5} In any event, in considering a motion for summary judgment, the trial court must draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party and must not substitute its judgment concerning the weight of the evidence for the jury's.^{n65.6}

In the context of a trial, once the employer succeeds in carrying its burden of production, the McDonnell Douglas framework, including the presumption of discrimination, disappears. The burden shifts back to the plaintiff to prove that the employer's proffered justification is mere pretext.^{n65.7} Although the McDonnell Douglas presumption shifts the burden of production to the defendant, the ultimate burden of persuading the trier of fact that the defendant intentionally discriminated against the plaintiff remains at all times with the plaintiff.^{n65.8} Only when the employer fails to rebut the presumption must the court enter judgment for the plaintiff because no issue of fact remains.^{n65.9}

The employee may show pretext either directly by persuading the court that a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the employer, or indirectly, by showing that the employer's proffered explanation is not believable.ⁿ⁶⁶ Statistical evidence relating to employment policy and practice may be used to prove pretext.^{n66.1} A showing that the employer treated similarly situated employees outside the plaintiff's protected class more favorably would be probative of pretext.ⁿ⁶⁷ In Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc.,^{n67.1} the Ninth Circuit addressed the apparently differing standards discussed above: (1) production of "very little evidence" beyond the prima facie case to rebut the defendant's showing and (2) production of "specific, substantial evidence" of pretext.^{n67.2} The court reconciled the two standards, which depend on the nature of the plaintiff's evidence. When a plaintiff offers direct evidence of discriminatory motive, a triable issue as to the actual motivation of the employer is created even if the evidence is not substantial. "Direct evidence" is evidence that, if believed, proves the fact of discriminatory animus without inference or presumption.^{n67.3} When direct evidence is unavailable and the plaintiff must rely on circumstantial evidence (that is, evidence tending to show that the employer's proffered motives were not the actual motives because they are inconsistent or otherwise not believable), that evidence of "pretense" must be "specific" and "substantial" to create a triable issue with respect to whether the employer intended to discriminate on an impermissible basis.^{n67.4}

■ COMMENTARY:

Godwin highlights a serious tension in the decisions from the Ninth Circuit regarding the proof that a plaintiff must offer at the pretext phase to defeat an employer's offer of legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for its challenged conduct. Godwin concludes that a plaintiff's required degree of proof varies with the type of evidence presented to challenge the employer's rebuttal. If the plaintiff offers direct evidence of discrimination, the required showing is met, even if the evidence is not substantial. If the plaintiff offers circumstantial evidence of discrimination, the required showing is met only if the evidence is "specific," "substantial," and tends to show that the employer's motives are inconsistent or unbelievable.

Unfortunately, Godwin, despite an attempt to do so, does not help practitioners identify the dividing line between direct and circumstantial evidence. Ninth Circuit precedent on this issue is not just unclear—it is irreconcilably conflicting. In Godwin, for example, we learn that the plaintiff may classify as direct evidence of discrimination an event pertaining to a coworker who received a sexually explicit prank "gift" from an unknown sender at a sales meeting that the plaintiff did not attend. We also learn that the president of the defendant, who was not among those who made the challenged decisions, uttered an unspecified number of further unspecified "derogatory" comments about women "at meetings." However, we have gathered from many other Ninth Circuit decisions that comments and actions made by nondecisionmakers outside the presence of the plaintiff are just "stray" and immaterial.

Under these circumstances, it is predictable that counsel for plaintiffs and defendants will be forced to litigate with "labels"—depicting evidence as "direct" or "circumstantial." It is equally predictable that the trial courts will be forced to rely more on instinct than past case law to draw the necessary line because the case law offers no clear guidance. It would be helpful to have an en banc opinion on the subject, but it is unlikely that any are forthcoming soon. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Qualifications evidence may suffice, at least in some circumstances, to show pretext.^{n67.5} In Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc.,^{n67.6} the United States Supreme Court held that the Court of Appeals erred in articulating the standard for determining whether asserted nondiscriminatory reasons for the employer's hiring decisions were pretextual. Plaintiffs had introduced evidence that their qualifications were superior to those of the successful applicants. The Court of Appeals, in finding the qualification evidence insufficient, found that pretext can be established by comparing qualifications only when "the disparity in qualifications is so apparent as virtually to jump off the page and slap you in the face."^{n67.7} Federal courts have articulated various other standards: that "disparities in qualifications must be of such weight and significance that no reasonable person, in the exercise of impartial judgment, could have chosen the candidate selected over the plaintiff for the job in question,"^{n67.8} that qualifications evidence standing alone may establish pretext when the plaintiff's qualifications are clearly superior to those of the selected job applicant,^{n67.9} or that the factfinder may infer pretext if a reasonable employer would have found the plaintiff to be significantly better qualified for the job.^{n67.10} In Ash, the Court of Appeals itself qualified its statement by suggesting that superior qualifications may be probative of pretext when combined with other evidence.^{n67.11} The Court, although rejecting the "slap you in the face" standard, declined to define more precisely what standard should govern pretext claims based on superior qualifications, or to hold that the plaintiffs' evidence necessarily showed pretext.^{n67.12}

In Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc.,^{n67.13} the California Supreme Court found that defendant's explanation of nondiscriminatory reasons for terminating plaintiff was credible on its face.^{n67.14} Plaintiff thus had the burden to rebut the facially dispositive showing by providing evidence that nonetheless raised a rational inference that intentional discrimination occurred. The Court found that the plaintiff had failed to do so.^{n67.15}

Generally, the court must give the employee a fair opportunity to refute the employer's stated reasons for an adverse employment action.ⁿ⁶⁸ For example, in one case, an employer's reasons were legitimate, but they were inconsistent. Thus, the inconsistencies required a credibility judgment by the trier of fact, and a summary judgment based on the employer's reasons was held to be inappropriate.ⁿ⁶⁹ In another case, a plaintiff effectively refuted her own pretext argument by testifying at a deposition that she did not feel that she was terminated because of her physical limitation. The court of appeal upheld a summary judgment for defendant on plaintiff's physical disability discrimination cause of action because plaintiff's deposition testimony negated her argument that the employer's stated reason for the plaintiff's termination was a pretext to mask the illegal motive of disability discrimination.ⁿ⁷⁰ Generally, however, if an employer shows as a matter of law that there was a proper basis for an adverse employment action, and no substantial responsive evidence is presented to show the untruth of the employer's justification or to establish a pretext, summary judgment for the employer is appropriate.ⁿ⁷¹

In Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co.,ⁿ⁷² the Ninth Circuit explained that an earlier decision in which it had held that summary judgment for the employer was not appropriate after the plaintiff had made out a prima facie caseⁿ⁷³ must be read as simply standing for the proposition that in deciding whether an issue of fact has been created about the credibility of the employer's nondiscriminatory reasons, the district court must look at the evidence supporting the prima facie case, as well as the other evidence offered by the plaintiff to rebut the employer's proffered reasons.ⁿ⁷⁴ Thus, the Ninth Circuit stated that the mere existence of a prima facie case based on only the minimum necessary to create a presumption of discrimination does not preclude summary judgment for the employer.ⁿ⁷⁵ The Ninth Circuit held that to withstand a defense summary judgment motion, a plaintiff must produce some evidence to permit the factfinder to find the employer's proffered legitimate reasons pretextual, even if the plaintiff has established a minimal prima facie case.ⁿ⁷⁶ Additionally, some courts have held that an employer's proffering of two rationales for discharging an employee that were not inconsistent with each other, e.g., inadequate job performance and a legitimate reduction in force, did not succeed in establishing pretext sufficient to avoid summary judgment.ⁿ⁷⁷

As discussed in [c], above, even if the trier of fact disbelieves defendant's proffered reasons, plaintiff is not necessarily entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The trier of fact is permitted to infer discrimination in those circumstances, but is not required to do so; plaintiff retains the ultimate burden of proving intentional discrimination.ⁿ⁷⁸ If, however, a plaintiff establishes a prima facie case of discrimination and presents sufficient evidence for a reasonable fact finder to find that the employer's asserted justification for its actions is false, a finding of liability for intentional discrimination is appropriate.^{n78.1}

An employee is not required to pursue any particular means of demonstrating pretext.ⁿ⁷⁹ Thus, in Patterson v. McLean Credit Union,ⁿ⁸⁰ the United States Supreme Court held that it was error for a trial court to instruct a jury that an African-American employee could carry her burden of persuasion only by showing that she was in fact better qualified than the white employee who got the job.ⁿ⁸¹ Although the employee may prove pretext by so demonstrating, there were other ways to do so. For example, the employee could present evidence of the employer's past conduct, including instances of alleged racial harassment and failure to train the employee for the job in question.ⁿ⁸² An employer's shifting rationales for an adverse employment decision may also give rise to an inference of pretext.^{n82.1} Direct evidence of a supervisor's discriminatory animus can constitute direct evidence of pretext, and may, in combination with other evidence, allow a jury to find pretext.^{n82.2} Testimony by other employees also may be relevant. Although subjective evaluations of an employee's skills may differ for a variety of reasons, specific positive evaluations of performance, both by coworkers and other managers, may critically undermine the credibility of an official evaluation in a manner relevant to determining the existence of pretext.^{n82.3}

Stray remarks by supervisors or fellow employees, on which the employer did not act or which were not communicated to a decision maker, are insufficient to establish pretext.^{n82.4} However, an agent's biased remarks against an employee because of, for example, the employee's gender are admissible to show an employer's discriminatory animus if the agent was involved in the employment decision.ⁿ⁸³

A plaintiff's subjective beliefs in an employment discrimination case do not create a genuine issue of fact; nor do uncorroborated and self-serving declarations.^{n83.1} Plaintiff's evidence must relate to the motivation of the decision makers to prove, by nonspeculative evidence, an actual causal link between prohibited motivation and termination.^{n83.2}

Proof of pretext also does not require the employee to show that the employer would have in any event taken discriminatory adverse action, without regard to the employee's alleged deficiencies. Rather, the employee need only show that membership in a protected classification was a "but for" cause of the action.^{n83.3}

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

In most McDonnell Douglas cases, the key inquiry is one of pretext because neither the prima facie showing nor the employer's articulation burden is onerous. Because of the limitations of the prima facie case showing, the plaintiff should investigate and, if appropriate, plead and prove the case under direct evidence or "pattern or practice" disparate treatment or disparate impact. An individual case may be proved by demonstrating the existence of a broadly applicable discriminatory practice that affects the plaintiff. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

In Coghlan v. American Seafood Co. LLC, ^{n83.4} the Ninth Circuit found that the plaintiff failed to satisfy the enhanced burden the same actor inference imposes on a plaintiff attempting to rebut the employer's articulated business reason for an adverse employment action. Under the same-actor inference, when the same actor is responsible for both hiring and firing a discrimination plaintiff, and both actions occur within a short period of time, a strong inference arises that there was no discriminatory action. The inference is based on the principle that an employer's initial willingness to hire the employee-plaintiff is strong evidence that the employer is not biased against the protected class to which the employee belongs.^{n83.5} In Coghlan, the man who made all of the challenged employment decisions was the same man who earlier made favorable employment decisions for plaintiff. The court found that the logic of the same-actor inference applied to cases such as Coghlan, in which the plaintiff was not actually fired, but merely offered a less desirable job assignment.^{n83.6} The court distinguished cases not involving hiring and firing in which the same-actor inference would be inappropriate. For example, if a plaintiff were alleging that the employer systematically excluded members of a certain class from upper-management positions, the mere fact that the employer was willing to hire members of that class for lower-level positions would not prove otherwise.^{n83.7} The same-actor inference applies when the favorable and unfavorable employment actions take place within a short period of time. In Coghlan, three years elapsed between the actions. The court held that the length of time would be significant only had plaintiff proffered evidence suggesting that the person who took both the favorable and unfavorable actions developed a bias against Norwegians during that period, but he did not. Moreover, the person took favorable action toward plaintiff during the period and only one year before the earliest adverse employment decision.

On the other hand, in EEOC v. Boeing Co., ^{n83.7.1} the EEOC was able to overcome the same actor inference to show that the employer's articulated business reasons were pretextual and that a jury could have concluded that an employee was laid off based on her sex. The same actors who made an adverse employment decision against the employee had twice given her scores high enough to avoid vulnerability to discharge. While recent positive employment decisions made by the same actors who later make an adverse employment decision against an employee may give rise to an inference that no discrimination took place,^{n83.7.2} the inference was weaker in this case. Although a termination is rarely motivated by bias when initiated by the same actors who recently selected the same employee for the job or promotion in the first place, the logic differs when applied to less overtly "positive" employment decisions, such as refraining from firing an employee at the earliest opportunity or giving an employee a lukewarm evaluation, rather than a poor one. A supervisor who hires or promotes an employee affirmatively forwards the employee's career; this affirmative enhancement of the employee's career prospects is strong circumstantial evidence of a lack of bias on the supervisor's part. In contrast, when a supervisor discharges an employee (whom the supervisor did not affirmatively hire or promote) by lowering the employee's scores over time, rather than by firing her precipitously, there is no such strong circumstantial evidence of lack of bias. A strong inference also was inappropriate, because none of the male employees the supervisors ranked lower than the female employee ultimately suffered as a result, and none was laid off. Further, given that a jury could find the evidence suggested the female employee's reduction-in-force scores were not credible, a jury could infer that she suffered discrimination notwithstanding any inference arising from her supervisors' prior employment decisions.

In Nazir v. United Airlines, Inc., n83.7.3 the court found that no California case or statute creates a same actor presumption under the FEHA, but that there is a same actor inference. Thus, when the same actor is responsible for both the hiring and the firing of a discrimination plaintiff, and both actions occur within a short period of time, a strong inference arises that there was no discriminatory motive.n83.7.4 Although same actor evidence will often generate an inference of nondiscrimination, the effect is not an a priori determination divorced from its factual context. The evidence is not placed into a special category, and does not have undue importance attached to it, because that could undermine the right to a jury trial by improperly easing the burden on employers in summary judgment.n83.7.5 In Nazir, the same actor evidence did not help the employer on summary adjudication, because from the time of his promotion, plaintiff had complained to his supervisor about the way he was being treated, and, more significantly, complained about his supervisor to world headquarters. Further, there was a triable issue of fact as to pretext based on the employer's investigation into allegations of harassment by plaintiff for which his employment was terminated, given the employer's failure to interview witnesses for potentially exculpatory information and other evidence to support a reasonable inference for plaintiff.

"An unlawful employment practice" encompasses any situation in which a protected characteristic was "a motivating factor" in an unlawful employment action, even if there were other motives. These cases are sometimes labeled mixed-motive cases. If the employee succeeds in proving that a protected characteristic was one of several factors motivating the employment action, an employer cannot avoid liability altogether. However, the employer may assert an affirmative defense to bar certain types of relief by showing its use of a protected characteristic was not the "but for" cause for the challenged decision.

The inquiry in any mixed motive case is whether the plaintiff has shown, by a preponderance of evidence, that race, color, religion, sex, or national origin was a motivating factor in an employment practice, thus violating Title VII.n83.8 The proof that a prohibited characteristic was a "motivating factor" may be either direct or circumstantial.n83.9 Plaintiff does not face any special evidentiary rule or hurdle in a Title VII mixed-motive case.n83.10 However, the employer can escape damages and orders of reinstatement, hiring, promotion and the like, but not attorney's fees or declaratory or injunctive relief, by proving the absence of "but for" causation as an affirmative defense.n84

A good example of a mixed motive case is Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins, n85 a Title VII case involving a female employee whose candidacy for partnership was held for reconsideration based on evaluations that not only criticized her interpersonal skills (a permissible consideration), but also contained comments resulting from sex stereotyping (an impermissible consideration).n86 Finding that the employee proved that her employer relied on the stereotyped comments,n87 the United States Supreme Court held that when an employee proves that gender played a motivating part in an employment decision, the employer may avoid liability only by proving, by a preponderance of the evidence, that it would have made the same decision even if it had not taken the employee's gender into account.n88 According to a later Ninth Circuit decision, consideration of a discriminatory factor does not automatically result in a Title VII violation; a court must make a specific finding as to whether the employer would have made the same decision without consideration of the illegitimate factor.n89

However, subsequent to Price Waterhouse, Title VII was amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991 to provide that, except as otherwise provided in Title VII, an unlawful employment practice is established when the complaining party demonstrates that race, color, national origin, religion, or sex, was a motivating factor for any employment practice, even though other factors also motivated the practice.ⁿ⁹⁰ Thus, the fact that an employer might have made the same decision in any case, based on lawful considerations, is no longer a complete defense.

In the aftermath of Price Waterhouse and the subsequent passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, in Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa,^{n90.1} a unanimous United States Supreme Court held that a plaintiff need not present direct evidence of discrimination to obtain a mixed-motive instruction under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991.^{n90.2} After the passage of the 1991 Act, the Circuit Courts of Appeals divided over the question of whether a plaintiff must prove by direct evidence that an impermissible consideration was a "motivating factor" in an adverse employment action.^{n90.3} In Costa, the plaintiff presented evidence that she was the only female warehouse worker and heavy equipment operator employed by the employer and the only woman in her local Teamsters bargaining unit. Her evidence also showed she had experienced problems with management and her co-workers leading to disciplinary sanctions, denial of privileges, suspension, and ultimately termination. The employer finally terminated her after she had a physical altercation with a male Teamsters member, who had a clean disciplinary record and received only a 5-day suspension. At trial, the employee presented evidence that she was singled out for "intense stalking" by one of her supervisors, subjected to harsher discipline than men for the same conduct, and received less favorable treatment than men in the assignment of overtime. She alleged gender discrimination and a claim that supervisors had repeatedly "stacked" her disciplinary record and "frequently used or tolerated" sex-based slurs against her.^{n90.4} The district court gave the jury a mixed-motive instruction that if it found the plaintiff's sex a motivating factor in the employer's treatment of her, she was entitled to its verdict, even if it found the employer's conduct was also motivated by a lawful reason. Furthermore, if the jury found the employer's treatment of plaintiff was motivated by both gender and lawful reasons, it was to find that she was entitled to damages, unless the employer proved by a preponderance of the evidence that the employer would have treated her similarly even if her gender had played no role in the employment decision.^{n90.5} The Supreme Court held that to obtain a mixed-motive jury instruction, a plaintiff need only present sufficient evidence for a reasonable jury to conclude, by a preponderance of the evidence, that race, color, religion, sex, or national origin was a motivating factor for an adverse employment practice. The Court found that the Ninth Circuit had correctly concluded that the district court did not abuse its discretion in giving a mixed-motive instruction to the jury.^{n90.6}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The Ninth Circuit's opinion in *Costa*ⁿ⁹¹ provides one of the few analyses of mixed-motive theory in Title VII discrimination cases. A claim is considered a mixed-motive case if a plaintiff is able to show direct evidence of discrimination--that is, that the employer "knowingly [gave] substantial weight to an impermissible criterion," even if that criterion is only one of the factors considered.^{n91.1} The court may then analyze the claim under the Price Waterhouse framework, which requires the employer to prove "by a preponderance of the evidence that it would have made the same decision even if it had not taken the plaintiff's [protected characteristic] into account."^{n91.2} The principal value of Costa is its discussion of the quantum of evidence a plaintiff must offer to prove that his or her protected status was a "motivating factor"^{n91.3} in an adverse employment action and thereby take advantage of the Price Waterhouse analysis. The court held that anecdotal evidence simply demonstrating disparate treatment in the application of disciplinary standards and working conditions is not sufficient. Thus, in Costa, a female supervisor's use of the term "bitch" did not constitute direct evidence of discrimination, based on evidence that there was personal animosity between the plaintiff and the female supervisor and that the supervisor's aggressive management style offended other warehouse employees, both male and female. A plaintiff must offer something more--evidence directly reflecting the alleged discriminatory animus. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

The Civil Rights Act of 1991 provides that if the employer can demonstrate that it would have taken the same action in the absence of the impermissible motivating factor, the court may grant only declaratory relief, injunctive relief (other than hiring, admission, promotion, or reinstatement), and attorney's fees and costs demonstrated to be directly attributable only to the pursuit of a claim under Title 42 United States Code Section 2000e-2(m).^{n91.4} The court may not award damages or issue an order requiring any admission, reinstatement, hiring, promotion, or payment of back pay.^{n91.5}

FEHA actions can be mixed-motive cases.ⁿ⁹² For example, in Harris v. City of Santa Monica,^{n92.1} although the trial court erred in refusing to give the jury the mixed-motive instruction requested by the employer,^{n92.2} the court did not err in refusing to grant the employer judgment notwithstanding the jury verdict in favor of the employee, because there was substantial evidence to support the verdict.^{n92.3} The lack of a form instruction for a mixed motive defense in the Judicial Council's California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI) does not undermine the viability of the defense; instead it is a likely recognition by the drafters of CACI that the law involving the mixed-motive defense is not stable and clear, but instead arguably in flux.^{n92.4}

For full discussion of remedies for violations of Title VII, see Chapter 43, Part B.

[e] Fair Employment and Housing Commission Test

Although some California courts have used the test in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green ⁿ⁹³ in litigation under the FEHA,ⁿ⁹⁴ the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC) no longer uses it.ⁿ⁹⁵ Formerly, the FEHC followed a modified version of the McDonnell Douglas test, requiring a plaintiff to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that (1) the individual is within the group of people for whose benefit the FEHA was enacted; (2) the individual suffered an adverse employment decision; and (3) a causal connection exists between the individual's protected status and the adverse action.ⁿ⁹⁶

The primary difference between the former FEHC test and the McDonnell Douglas test was the FEHC requirement that a plaintiff show a causal connection between his or her protected status and an adverse employment decision.ⁿ⁹⁷ The causal connection was proved (1) by showing an inference of discrimination, as in McDonnell Douglas; (2) by showing actual bias against the individual's group; or (3) by other competent evidence.ⁿ⁹⁸ Thus, the McDonnell Douglas test was just one way of raising an inference of discrimination.ⁿ⁹⁹

It now appears, however, that the FEHC will not rely on McDonnell Douglas at all for administrative proceedings under the FEHA. In Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. Church's Fried Chicken, ⁿ¹⁰⁰ the FEHC rejected the McDonnell Douglas framework and held that discrimination is established if a preponderance of all the evidence demonstrates a causal connection between an individual's protected status and adverse employer action; it need not be shown that such status was the sole or even the dominant cause of adverse treatment.ⁿ¹⁰¹

The FEHC criticized the McDonnell Douglas framework as "unnecessary and artificial" because FEHC procedural and evidentiary requirements differ from those that apply to FEHA litigation. The FEHC explained that the prima facie step may produce unfair results by forcing a plaintiff to prove the elements of a specific formula, failure of any one of which would be fatal.ⁿ¹⁰² The FEHC also explained that the pretext stage requires the plaintiff to show that an employer's nondiscriminatory reason played no role in an adverse action; however, because employers take adverse employment actions for multiple reasons, both discriminatory and nondiscriminatory, such a showing may be difficult to make.ⁿ¹⁰³ The FEHC therefore reduced its own test to simply "whether a preponderance of all the evidence demonstrates that an adverse employment action was caused[,] at least in part[,] by a discriminatory motive."ⁿ¹⁰⁴ The Ninth Circuit has held that the Church's test is not the appropriate standard for California courts and that the Church's standard is limited to cases before the FEHC.ⁿ¹⁰⁵

■ PRACTICE TIP:

The approach of the FEHC is consistent with the McDonnell Douglas decision itself, in which the Court noted that the McDonnell Douglas evidentiary standards were characterized as not exclusive, and that other evidentiary methods could be used when circumstances required. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[2] Class-Wide or "Pattern or Practice" Discrimination Claims

[a] Generally

"Pattern or practice" claims involve circumstances in which "discrimination [is] the [employer's] standard operating procedure--the regular rather than the unusual practice."ⁿ¹⁰⁶ Such claims involve class-wide discrimination because they involve an allegation that an employer's actions constitute a pattern of conduct in which the employer has intentionally discriminated against the plaintiff's protected class.ⁿ¹⁰⁷ Intent to discriminate may be inferred from a statistical showing of disparity between protected class members and comparably qualified members of the majority group.ⁿ¹⁰⁸

"Pattern or practice" claims may be brought by private plaintiffs as a class action,ⁿ¹⁰⁹ or by the EEOC if it has reasonable cause to believe that there is a "pattern or practice of resistance to the full enjoyment of any of the rights secured" by Title VII.ⁿ¹¹⁰ Most courts characterize "pattern or practice" claims as a type of disparate treatment claim because the ultimate issue is whether intentional discrimination existed,ⁿ¹¹¹ but they also have similarities to actions based on disparate impact.ⁿ¹¹² In fact, plaintiffs in "pattern or practice" actions typically assert both disparate treatment and disparate impact claims.ⁿ¹¹³ Although the allocations of proof differ in disparate treatment and disparate impact claims,ⁿ¹¹⁴ "pattern or practice" claims create "an important point of convergence" between the two theories.ⁿ¹¹⁵ Both "pattern or practice" and disparate impact analyses attack employment practices that have a systematic adverse effect on members of a protected class,ⁿ¹¹⁶ and both claims involve a showing of disparity between the minority and majority groups in an employer's workforce.ⁿ¹¹⁷ For a detailed discussion relating to disparate impact actions, see §§ 41.21 and 41.22.

[b] Prima Facie Proof

The prima facie case in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green,ⁿ¹¹⁸ which expressly applies to "private, non-class-action[s],"ⁿ¹¹⁹ is not appropriate in "pattern or practice" actions. In Teamsters v. United States,ⁿ¹²⁰ a leading "pattern or practice" case, the United States Supreme Court rejected an employer's assertion that the McDonnell Douglas test must always be used.ⁿ¹²¹ The Court observed that McDonnell Douglas did not purport to create an inflexible formulation.ⁿ¹²² It noted that "[t]he facts necessarily will vary in Title VII cases, and the specification [in McDonnell Douglas] of the prima facie proof required ... is not necessarily applicable in every respect to differing factual situations."ⁿ¹²³

The Teamsters Court stressed that the importance of McDonnell Douglas is not in its specification of discrete elements of proof, but in its recognition of the general principle that any Title VII plaintiff must carry the initial burden of offering evidence adequate to create an inference of illegal discrimination.ⁿ¹²⁴ The plaintiff's initial burden in "pattern or practice" actions is to demonstrate, by a preponderance of the evidence, a regular procedure or policy of unlawful discrimination.ⁿ¹²⁵ This may be done by showing a disparity between the position of members of a protected class and the position of comparably qualified majority group members.ⁿ¹²⁶ It is not necessary to show that each person in the plaintiff class was a victim of the employer's discriminatory policy, as it would be if the McDonnell Douglas elements were applied.ⁿ¹²⁷ Rather, the existence of a discriminatory hiring pattern and practice establishes a prima facie case of discrimination against individual class members.ⁿ¹²⁸

Evidence of disparity in "pattern or practice" actions often turns on statistical evidence comparing the representation of a protected class in an employer's workforce with its representation in the general population.ⁿ¹²⁹ Such evidence is an important source of proof in "pattern or practice" actions,ⁿ¹³⁰ and when "gross statistical disparities can be shown, they alone may in a proper case constitute prima facie proof of a pattern of [sic] practice of discrimination."¹³¹ More often than not, however, statistical evidence is bolstered with anecdotal evidence relating specific instances of discrimination. Testimony regarding personal experiences tends to bring the "cold numbers convincingly to life."¹³² For a discussion relating to the use of statistical data in disparate impact cases, see § 41.21[3].

[c] Rebuttal of Prima Facie Proof

If the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case in a pattern or practice action,¹³³ the burden shifts to the employer to rebut the showing.¹³⁴ The rebuttal must be designed to meet the plaintiff's prima facie case,¹³⁵ and accordingly the sequential pattern of proof in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green ¹³⁶ (i.e., employee prima facie case, employer rebuttal, employee proof of pretext), is ill-suited to "pattern or practice" actions. In Vuyanich v. Republic Nat. Bank of Dallas, ¹³⁷ one federal district court declared that in complex class actions using statistical proof and counterproof, the McDonnell Douglas sequence is "about as relevant as a minuet is to a thermonuclear battle."¹³⁸ The court explained that the McDonnell Douglas sequence "contemplates an initial thrust by a plaintiff, a parry by a defendant, followed by a traditional fight with the burden on the challenger."¹³⁹ The sequence is appropriate when a plaintiff "has only the evidentiary strength for the first thrust or is unable to anticipate the nature of the parry."¹⁴⁰ However, the sequence "works poorly, if at all, when a plaintiff class loads overwhelming force into its opening shot."¹⁴¹

In an exhaustive analysis in Segar v. Smith, ¹⁴² the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia identified and explained two paths that an employer rebuttal may follow in "pattern or practice" actions. First, an employer may demonstrate that the plaintiff's proof is either inaccurate or statistically insignificant.¹⁴³ Thus, an employer may show that an alleged disparity does not exist, or may challenge the integrity of the plaintiff's statistical data and the significance of the results shown. The employer may use alternative statistical analyses to refute the plaintiff's evidence.¹⁴⁴ The employer's proof must at least raise a genuine issue of material fact concerning the accuracy of the plaintiff's proof,¹⁴⁵ but its burden does not end there. The evidence must cast sufficient doubt on the plaintiff's proof to cause the trier of fact to conclude that the plaintiff has not proved discrimination by a preponderance of the evidence.¹⁴⁶

It is usually not enough, however, to merely point to possible flaws in the plaintiff's statistics, such as the omission of various factors in an employment decision.¹⁴⁷ Although some factors, such as differences in education, work experience, or job level, may be so essential that their omission may defeat a statistical inference of discrimination,¹⁴⁸ a defendant will generally not succeed by simply alleging that some factors were omitted without showing that had they been included, they would have eliminated disparities established by the statistics.¹⁴⁹ For example, in one Title VII sex discrimination case, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the defendant did not rebut a statistical inference of discrimination by simply contending that the analyses did not "adequately account for differences in job interest among men and women."¹⁵⁰

Second, the employer may attempt to provide a nondiscriminatory explanation for an apparently discriminatory result.¹⁵¹ The strength of the evidence sufficient to meet the employer's burden of explanation is much higher than the strength of the evidence sufficient in individual actions.¹⁵² As discussed in [b], above, the plaintiff will typically use statistical evidence showing pervasive disparities and eliminating most, if not all, potential nondiscriminatory explanations.¹⁵³ The employer does not have the burden of persuasion on rebuttal, but its explanation must cast sufficient doubt on the plaintiff's proof to permit the trier of fact to decline to draw an inference of discrimination.¹⁵⁴ A "bare articulation of a legitimate nondiscriminatory explanation," although sufficient to rebut individual claims of disparate treatment,¹⁵⁵ is not enough in "pattern or practice" actions.¹⁵⁶

[d] Proving Pretext

At least one court has suggested that the sequence of proof in "pattern or practice" actions effectively collapses the prima facie and pretext stages of individual disparate treatment actions.¹⁵⁷ As discussed in [1][c], above, the ultimate burden of persuasion remains at all times with the plaintiff,ⁿ¹⁵⁸ notwithstanding any sequence of proof. In "pattern or practice" actions, the plaintiff's initial proof of discrimination may be sufficient to meet that ultimate burden if the employer's rebuttal attempts are inadequate.ⁿ¹⁵⁹ Thus, in Teamsters v. United States,ⁿ¹⁶⁰ the United States Supreme Court declared that if an employer's rebuttal fails, a trial court may conclude that a violation has occurred "[w]ithout any further evidence from the [g]overnment."ⁿ¹⁶¹ However, this does not necessarily require a plaintiff to rely on its initial proof. The plaintiff is free to--and if the employer's rebuttal is sufficiently strong may have to--introduce evidence to discredit the rebuttal.ⁿ¹⁶²

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

A pattern or practice disparate treatment case usually can be presented with a disparate impact case. Because the prima facie case in either analysis is similar, if not identical, plaintiff does not need to prepare substantially more evidence using both theories. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

Evidence that the employer's claimed reason is false, such as that it conflicts with other evidence, or appears to have been contrived after the fact, will tend to suggest that the employer seeks to conceal the real reason for its actions, and this in turn may support an inference that the real reason was unlawful. This does not mean that the fact finder can examine the employer's stated reasons and impose liability solely because they are found wanting. But it can take account of manifest weaknesses in the cited reasons in considering whether those reasons constituted the real motive for the employer's actions, or have instead been asserted to mask a more sinister reality.ⁿ¹⁶³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Actionable Discrimination Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Treatment Proof General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Treatment Proof Circumstantial & Direct Evidence

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 1991 Congressional legislation, Pub. L. No. 104-66, 105 Stat. 1071 overruled Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1488, ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439, rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989); Estate of Reynolds v. Martin (9th Cir. 1993) 985 F.2d 470; Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335-336, & n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII; proof of discriminatory motive is critical); Mixon v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA); Foster v. Arcata Assocs., Inc. (9th Cir. 1985) 772 F.2d 1453, 1460 (proof varies considerably according to the situation). See Enlow v. Salem-Keizer Yellow Cab Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 371 F.3d 645, 651-653 (taxi cab company presented sufficient evidence to demonstrate that its temporary discharge of 73-year-old driver was without discriminatory intent and was solely to avoid losing its business license based on fact all of its employees were not covered by automobile liability insurance; driver failed to present evidence that cab company acted pursuant to explicit facially discriminatory company practice to fire taxi cab drivers over seventy years of age, where company demonstrated its intent to protect his employment rights by successfully obtaining temporary employment for him with another cab company and obtaining insurance company's tentative agreement to waive age-based exclusion of coverage if driver would submit to physical examination and offered to reemploy him, both of which he rejected, presenting genuine issue of material fact regarding whether company could demonstrate at trial that its employment decision fell within exception to ADEA for bona fide occupational qualification or where differentiation based on reasonable factors other than age); Frank v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 805, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 430, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 530, *34-*59 (FEHA; in action by county police officers alleging race discrimination based on disparities with pay received by sheriff's deputies, there was no evidence from which jury could reasonably infer county police officers were paid less than sheriff's deputies because of intentional racial discrimination; although county was aware that majority of county police officers were members of racial minority while majority of deputies were Caucasian, there was no evidence to indicate county was aware that gross disparities in wages and benefits between county police and sheriff's deputies were associated with race; salary surveys showed that all county police were underpaid whatever their race; evidence of pay disparity between county police officers and sheriff's deputies did not demonstrate requisite racial animus because conclusion that duties of sheriff's deputies and county police officers were comparable was not supported by reliable statistical evidence; there was no evidence sheriff's department personnel disparaged county police on basis of race; and there was no evidence county did not follow its own procedures in determining classification and salary).

(n2)Footnote 2. AFSCME v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405 (Title VII); see Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335-336 & n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (disparate treatment occurs when employer treats some employees less favorably than others "because of" membership in protected class); cf. Personnel Administrator of Mass. v. Feeney (1979) 442 U.S. 256, 279, 99 S. Ct. 2282, 60 L. Ed. 2d 870 (equal protection claim of sex discrimination in civil service hiring requires more onerous proof of intent than Title VII claim of disparate treatment); Heyne v. Caruso (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1475 (proof of employer's sexual harassment of other female employees admissible).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Int'l Union, United Auto., etc. v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158, 173 (Title VII; defendant's asserted reason for sex-based exclusion from hazardous jobs was to protect women's unconceived offspring).

(n4)Footnote 4. AFSCME v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405, rehearing granted followed by settlement prior to rehearing.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.; 29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523.

(n8)Footnote 8. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 126, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 (emphasis added).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 127, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523.

(n10)Footnote 10. See also Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 350-351 (upholding and reiterating Thurston standard).

(n11)Footnote 10.1. Lam v. University of Hawaii (9th Cir. 1998) 164 F.3d 1186, 1188 (court considered itself bound by law of case; previous decision did not limit evidence to comments made during final stages of hiring process).

(n12)Footnote 10.2. Vasquez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 640 (plaintiff offered no direct evidence of discriminatory intent, where he offered evidence of remarks by coworker, not decisionmaker, and no evidence of discriminatory remarks by decisionmaker, and failed to show nexus between discriminatory remarks and subsequent employment decisions, because decisionmaker conducted her own thorough investigation and plaintiff presented no evidence that discriminatory animus motivated decision; to extent coworker's remarks and decisionmaker's knowledge of prior conflicts between coworkers constituted circumstantial evidence of discriminatory intent, evidence was insufficient to make out prima facie case).

(n13)Footnote 10.3. Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (2006) 126 S. Ct. 1195, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1053.

(n14)Footnote 10.4. Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (2006) 126 S. Ct. 1195, 1197, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1053.

(n15)Footnote 10.5. See Heard v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1735, 1756, 52 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 620 .

(n16)Footnote 10.6. Cordova v. State Farm Ins. Companies (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1145, 1149 ; Harvey v. Sybase, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 580, *20-*21 (number of statements demonstrating discriminatory animus in termination of plaintiff's employment supported jury verdict in favor of plaintiff, including remark by senior manager to chief operating officer that chief operating officer relayed to employee who terminated plaintiff, and which chief operating officer understood to mean that plaintiff's department had "diversity problems," as well as comments by employee who terminated plaintiff that she understood remark to her as directive to increase proportion of White males in department and discharge was designed to help accomplish this goal). See Chuang v. University of California Davis (9th Cir. 2000) 225 F.3d 1115, 1128 ; Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 1217, 1221 .

(n17)Footnote 10.7. See Coghlan v. American Seafoods Co. LLC (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 1090, 1096-1100 ; Bradley v. Harcourt, Brace & Co., (9th Cir. 1996) 104 F.3d 267, 270-271 . See also Hartsel v. Keys (9th Cir. 1996) 87 F.3d 795, 804 n.9 (applying same-actor inference where decision-maker had not hired plaintiff, but had previously promoted her). For discussion of the "same actor" inference under Title VII, see [d], below.

(n18)Footnote 10.8. Harvey v. Sybase, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 580, *21-*27 .

(n19)Footnote 10.9. Harvey v. Sybase, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 580, *24-*25 .

(n20)Footnote 10.10. Harvey v. Sybase, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 580, *25-*26 . See also West v. Bechtel Corp. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 966, 980, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647 .

(n21)Footnote 11. See Chuang v. University of California Davis (9th Cir. 2000) 225 F.3d 1115, 1128-1129 (direct evidence of pretext need not be specific and substantial; bigoted insults by persons in positions to make hiring and firing decisions is sufficient); Rosenfeld v. Southern Pacific Co. (9th Cir. 1971) 444 F.2d 1219, 1223 (Title VII; woman denied employment assignment on ground that women, considered generically, are not physically or biologically suited for assignment); cf. Fragante v. City and County of Honolulu (9th Cir. 1989) 888 F.2d 591, 595-596 (Title VII; assuming without deciding that plaintiff established prima facie case of discrimination with direct evidence that he was not hired because of his accent).

(n22)Footnote 12. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 121, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 (age-based disqualification of airline captains as violating ADEA).

(n23)Footnote 12.1. Enlow v. Salem-Keizer Yellow Cab. Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 371 F.3d 645, 649-651 .

(n24)Footnote 12.2. Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 662 (more favorable treatment of white employees was circumstantial, not direct evidence). See also Fonseca v. Sysco Food Services of Arizona, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 840, 848-849 (evidence of the following was sufficient to establish prima facie case: that supervisor pretended not to understand and mocked Hispanic employee's accent within one month of two incidents of disparate treatment, i.e., discriminatory suspension and passing over employee for overtime opportunity in favor of white employee and refusing to pay employee even though supervisor had immediately arranged to compensate two white employees who came to him with exact same complaint one week earlier, and another supervisor's comment about accent similarly related to allegedly discriminatory treatment because earlier in same year supervisor disparaged accent and supervisor was most likely supervisor who skipped employee on seniority list and gave overtime to white employee instead and supervisor skipped employee again later that year).

(n25)Footnote 12.3. See, e.g., EEOC v. Boeing Co. (9th Cir. 2009) 577 F.3d 1044, 1050 (frequent demeaning and derogatory comments by supervisor about women, along with supervisor's interactions with female employee over course of her employment, were sufficient to create inference of discriminatory motive even though comments were not directed specifically at employee or made in regard to decisions about her employment, because comments are more severe than ambivalent stray remarks, and sufficient to establish prima facie case).

(n26)Footnote 13. See Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 662 ("particularly because employers now know better, direct evidence of employment discrimination is rare"); Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA, to allocate the burden and order of presentation of proof to achieve a fair determination of the elusive factual question of intentional discrimination, citing Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 259-260, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207).

(n27)Footnote 14. See U.S. Postal Service Bd. of Govs. v. Aikens (1983) 460 U.S. 711, 714, n.3, 103 S. Ct. 1478, 75 L. Ed. 2d 403 (Title VII; plaintiff entitled to prove case by direct or circumstantial evidence); Cucuzza v. City of Santa Clara (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1038, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660 (proof of employer's reasons for adverse action often depends on inferences rather than direct evidence; material, triable controversy not established if inference not reasonable, and inference is reasonable only if it implies unlawful motive was more likely than employer's proffered explanation); Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 199-202, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 ("[W]e offer this advice to those practicing employment law. If you hope to prevail in your discrimination claim, or choose to defend an employment discrimination case, solely on the basis of the other party's failure to satisfy one of the elements of McDonnell Douglas's intermediate burdens (that is, the plaintiff's prima facie case or the defendant's legitimate nondiscriminatory reasons), you must seek a determination from the trial court, by means of any of the vehicles at a litigant's disposal, that you are entitled to judgment as a matter of law. If you do not do so, and the case is submitted to the trier of fact, the intermediate burdens set forth in McDonnell Douglas will fall away, and the fact finder will have only to decide the ultimate issue of whether the employer's discriminatory intent was a motivating factor in the adverse employment decision.").

(n28)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Leong v. Potter (9th Cir. 2003) 347 F.3d 1117, 1124 (Title VII; terminated Postal Service employee failed to provide evidence that similarly situated employees were treated more favorably by not being terminated, because, although other employees committed serious violations involving obscenity and/or physical abuse, terminated employee was subject to "Last Chance Agreement" negotiated as alternative to termination after earlier, serious violations of Postal Service rules and comparators were not, and because none had amassed record of misconduct comparable to terminated employee's); Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 663 (mere fact that three of the four individuals laid off were white does not require conclusion that employer discriminated on basis of race; to establish discrimination, court would have had to infer that "race played invidious role in decision"); Slack v. Havens (9th Cir. 1975) 522 F.2d 1091, 1095 (trial court finding of discrimination reasonable when black employees were fired for refusing to do work from which similarly-situated white employee was excused).

(n29)Footnote 16. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 .

(n30)Footnote 17. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 121, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523, 533 (ADEA; test simply designed to assure that plaintiff has day in court despite unavailability of direct evidence); Larson, Employment Discrimination, ch. 10, § 50.10 (Matthew Bender); see also Norris v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 1326, 1329, 1332 (Title VII; vacating and remanding because district court's findings did not specifically address burden and allocation of proof set forth in McDonnell Douglas and Texas Dept. of Community Affairs v. Burdine and therefore court could not determine whether district court properly applied law to facts).

(n31)Footnote 18. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 121, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523, 533 (ADEA) ; see Schnidrig v. Columbia Machine, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 1406, 1409-1410 (prima facie case established by direct evidence of discriminatory motives in the form of statements and notes); Lowe v. Monrovia (9th Cir. 1985) 775 F.2d 998, 1006-1007, amended 784 F.2d 1407 (1986) (prima facie case of disparate treatment established by direct evidence without satisfying McDonnell Douglas test).

(n32)Footnote 18.1. See Schnidrig v. Columbia Machine, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 1406, 1410 .

(n33)Footnote 18.2. See Costa v. Desert Palace, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 299 F.3d 838, 855-856 (question of whether to invoke McDonnell Douglas presumption involves summary judgment rather than jury instructions and is unrelated to number of possible motives for challenged action); Heard v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1735, 1758-1759, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620 ; Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 199-202, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 .

(n34)Footnote 18.3. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1122 (Title VII) . See Vasquez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 640 (Title VII; for prima facie case, plaintiff must offer evidence giving rise to inference of unlawful discrimination either through McDonnell Douglas framework or with direct or circumstantial evidence of discriminatory intent).

(n35)Footnote 18.4. Cornwell v. Electra Cent. Credit Union (9th Cir. 2006) 439 F.3d 1018, 1027-1036 (employee's evidence of race discrimination was sufficient to create genuine issue of material fact regarding motives for his demotion under either Godwin standard, which would require "specific" and "substantial" circumstantial evidence of pretext, or McGinest standard, which would not, where employee offered circumstantial evidence from which reasonable jury could conclude that employer demoted him because he is African-American, and where employee offered "specific" and "substantial" evidence that employer's explanation for demotion was pretext for race discrimination; however, employee did not produce evidence sufficient to create genuine issue of material fact of whether employer fired him because he is African-American or that employer illegally retaliated against him). See Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 100, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84 ; McGinest v. GTE Serv. Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1124 .

(n36)Footnote 19. See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 252-253, 256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII) ; Sischo-Nownejad v. Merced Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1991) 934 F.2d 1104, 1113 (the amount of evidence that must be produced in order to create a prima facie case is very little); Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1406 ; (reh'g granted followed by settlement prior to reh'g).

(n37)Footnote 20. See Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 659 (Title VII; race discrimination); Diaz v. American Tel. & Tel. (9th Cir. 1985) 752 F.2d 1356, 1359 (Title VII; national origin discrimination); Sutton v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 646 F.2d 407, 411 (ADEA; age discrimination); Blizard v. Fielding (1st Cir. 1978) 572 F.2d 13, 15 (Title VII; sex discrimination); Chavez v. Tempe U. High Sch. Dist. No. 213 (9th Cir. 1977) 565 F.2d 1087, 1091 (Title VII; national origin discrimination); see also Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1406 (reh'g granted followed by settlement prior to reh'g) (Title VII; sex discrimination); but see Robinson v. Adams (9th Cir. 1987) 830 F.2d 128, 129 (Title VII; employer must know that job applicant is member of protected class; thus, "[a]n employer cannot intentionally discriminate against a job applicant based on race unless the employer knows the applicant's race").

(n38)Footnote 20.1. See Lyons v. England (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1092, 1113-1115 (failure to produce evidence of qualification will typically prevent plaintiff from satisfying either second or the fourth prong of McDonnell Douglas test, but plaintiffs presented sufficient circumstantial evidence from which trier of fact could reasonably infer they possessed minimum qualifications for positions sought).

(n39)Footnote 20.2. See, e.g., Davis v. Team Electric Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 520 F.3d 1080, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 6476, *15-*19 (female electrician established adverse employment action sufficient for prima facie case, where employer did not deny that in aggregate she was given disproportionate amount of dangerous and strenuous work compared to male co-workers, and where she alleged that all of her male co-workers on site were invited to meetings from which she was excluded; that even after she was allowed to attend meetings, she was, unlike male employees, prohibited from entering trailer to take breaks, or to talk with project superintendent about work matters; and that she was sometimes ignored by supervisors when she would attempt to communicate with them via radio; employer's conduct was not mere ostracism, because there was evidence that restriction prevented her from discussing work matters with her supervisor and her ability to work was similarly hampered by alleged fact she was sometimes ignored by supervisors when she called in over radio; however, allegations she was given inferior quality vest, gloves, and other equipment did not establish adverse employment actions, where she provided no evidence vest and gloves affected her work conditions or that other workers were given better equipment); Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 660 ("being laid off from one's position certainly constitutes adverse employment action").

(n40)Footnote 21. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668. See, e.g., Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 660 (in context of layoff, plaintiff need not show he or she was replaced by member of different race, but must show that layoff occurred under circumstances giving rise to inference of discrimination, such as employer's continuing need for plaintiff's skills and services demonstrated by continued performance of plaintiff's various duties or showing of more favorable treatment of others not in plaintiff's protected class).

(n41)Footnote 21.1. Risetto v. Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 343 (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 597, 601, 605-606.

(n42)Footnote 22. See Warren v. City of Carlsbad (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 439, 442.

(n43)Footnote 22.1. See Heard v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1735, 1754, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 620.

(n44)Footnote 22.2. Lyons v. England (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1092, 1118 (mediocre evaluations without any meaningful change in work assignments, in form of either relieving plaintiff of responsibilities or saddling him with additional burdensome tasks, did not constitute adverse employment action); Hammond v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1579, 1599 (FEHA; substantially reducing or eliminating nursing instructor's classroom teaching assignments was adverse employment action, where it impaired her ability to perform job for which she was hired and relegated her to some undefined, but lesser, status other than that of full-time classroom instructor). Cf. Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway Co. v. White (2006) 126 S. Ct. 2405, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345 (scope of anti-retaliation provision of Title VII extends beyond workplace-related or employment-related retaliatory acts and harm, so employee need only allege and prove "adverse action" rather than "adverse employment action" under Title VII's anti-retaliation provision), discussed at § 41.130[1A], below.

(n45)Footnote 22.3. Fonseca v. Sysco Food Services of Arizona, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 840, 847; Ray v. Henderson (9th Cir. 2000) 217 F.3d 1234, 1241; see also Brooks v. City of San Mateo (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 917, 928 (collecting cases).

(n46)Footnote 22.4. Fonseca v. Sysco Food Services of Arizona, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 840, 847-848 (Hispanic employee presented sufficient evidence of adverse employment action to overcome employer's summary judgment motion, where in less than one year period, there were between ten and thirteen times when supervisor called at least one white employee to work overtime that should have been assigned to Hispanic employee, because he had seniority and there was evidence of only one occasion on which white employees were similarly passed over; where, when white employee was passed over, supervisor immediately arranged for white employees to be paid, but when Hispanic employee was wrongly denied overtime opportunity, employee had to file grievance and was never paid for successful grievances within 48 hours as required by CBA, while white employees were routinely compensated in next paychecks); Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 301 F.3d 958, 970 (reduction in base monthly pay was adverse employment action even though with commission and bonuses it might have equaled same net pay); cf. University of Hawai'i Prof'l Assembly v. Cayetano (9th Cir. 1999) 183 F.3d 1096, 1105-1106 (receiving pay even couple of days late can seriously affect employee's financial situation and constitutes substantial impairment under federal constitutional contracts clause).

(n47)Footnote 22.5. Fonseca v. Sysco Food Services of Arizona, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 840, 848 (warning letter issued to Hispanic employee accidentally dropping pallet of food someone else improperly loaded was evidence of adverse employment action, where employer publicized all discipline to all employees, and at least two white employees caused similar or worse damage to warehouse goods, but did not receive any sort of discipline); Yartzoff v. Thomas (9th Cir. 1987) 809 F.2d 1371, 1376 (transfers of job duties and undeserved performance ratings, if proven, would constitute adverse employment decisions).

(n48)Footnote 23. Warren v. City of Carlsbad (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 439 .

(n49)Footnote 24. Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 890 .

(n50)Footnote 25. Lindahl v. Air France (9th Cir. 1991) 930 F.2d 1434, 1437 .

(n51)Footnote 26. See Diaz v. American Tel. & Tel. (9th Cir. 1985) 752 F.2d 1356, 1359, 1361 (Title VII) ; see also Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1420 & n.1 (ADEA; burden of establishing prima facie case only requires production of evidence that "suggests" that employment decision was based on age); but see Nesbit v. Pepsico, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 994 F.2d 703, 705 (ADEA; statistical evidence was insufficient to connect termination with pattern of discrimination, and allegedly discriminatory comments were not sufficiently tied to termination to create inference of discrimination); Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 545, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 (FEHA; refusing to adopt analysis that holds that "overt, facial discrimination" creates only a presumption of discrimination).

(n52)Footnote 27. See, e.g., Coghlan v. American Seafoods Co. LLC (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 1090, 1094 (requisite degree of proof necessary to establish prima facie case on summary judgment is minimal and does not even need to rise to level of preponderance of evidence; fisherman who belonged to protected class of non-Norwegian-born workers, presented evidence to meet burden, where he had previously served as master of two of employer's vessels and was offered important position of mate on another vessel, he was twice not appointed as relief master of vessel, he was removed as mate of vessel and was not appointed master of another vessel, and people chosen instead were Norwegian-born and outside protected class); Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 659-660 (white plaintiff presented enough evidence to establish prima facie case of racial discrimination, and district court erred in granting summary judgment to employer at prima facie stage of burden-shifting analysis); Chuang v. University of California Davis (9th Cir. 2000) 225 F.3d 1115, 1124 (record supports finding of illegal discrimination and warrants resolution by trial); Cordova v. State Farm Ins. Cos. (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1145, 1148-1150 (requisite degree of proof to establish prima facie case for Title VII on summary judgment is minimal and does not need to rise to level of preponderance of evidence); Messick v. Horizon Industries Inc. (9th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 1227, 1229 ; Warren v. City of Carlsbad (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 439, 442 ; Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 889 ; Schmidrig v. Columbia Mach., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 1406, 1410 ; but see Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 454, 457 (vagueness of evidence did not support prima facie case); Nesbit v. Pepsico, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 994 F.2d 703, 705 (ADEA; statistical evidence was insufficient to connect termination with pattern of discrimination, and allegedly discriminatory comments were not sufficiently tied to termination to create inference of discrimination).

(n53)Footnote 27.1. Cordova v. State Farm Ins. Cos. (9th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 1145, 1150 quoting Sischo-Nownejad v. Merced Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1991) 934 F.2d 1104, 1111 (emphasis in original); see also Chuang v. University of California Davis (9th Cir. 2000) 225 F.3d 1115, 1127 (evidence constituting prima facie case was sufficiently strong to raise genuine issue of material fact).

(n54)Footnote 27.2. Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 660 .

(n55)Footnote 28. See Diaz v. American Tel. & Tel. (9th Cir. 1985) 752 F.2d 1356, 1362-1363 (Title VII); Cook v. Boorstin (D.C. Cir. 1985) 763 F.2d 1462, 1468 .

(n56)Footnote 29. Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1423 (ADEA); Nesbit v. Pepsico, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 994 F.2d 703 ; Palmer v. United States (9th Cir. 1986) 794 F.2d 534, 537 .

(n57)Footnote 30. Diaz v. American Tel. & Tel. (9th Cir. 1985) 752 F.2d 1356, 1363 (Title VII); Mangold v. California Public Utils. Comm'n (9th Cir. 1995) 67 F.3d 1470 .

(n58)Footnote 31. Diaz v. American Tel. & Tel. (9th Cir. 1985) 752 F.2d 1356, 1363 (Title VII).

(n59)Footnote 32. Compare, e.g., Diaz v. American Tel. & Tel. (9th Cir. 1985) 752 F.2d 1356, 1363 (Title VII; statistical evidence alone as sufficient) with Gay v. Waiters' and Dairy Lunchmen's Union (9th Cir. 1982) 694 F.2d 531, 552-553 (Title VII; statistical evidence alone rarely sufficient); Laborde v. Regents of University of California (9th Cir. 1982) 686 F.2d 715, 718 (Title VII; statistical evidence relevant, though not necessarily sufficient, in establishing prima facie case).

(n60)Footnote 32.1. See, e.g., Gibbs v. Consolidated Services (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 794, 801, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 (that employer terminated only three former employees, all of whom were over 40, had virtually no significance in itself, where given variety of factors involved in termination decisions, statistical sample was too small to support inference of discrimination).

(n61)Footnote 32.2. Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 663 (although three of four casuals singled out for layoff were white, sample size was too small); Sengupta v. Morrison-Knudsen Co. (9th Cir. 1986) 804 F.2d 1072, 1075 (fact that four of five employees laid off (out of 28 total) were African American too small sample).

(n62)Footnote 33. Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 339, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 1856, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (statistical data is bolstered by anecdotal data).

(n63)Footnote 34. Hazelwood School Dist. v. United States (1977) 433 U.S. 299, 312, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 2744, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768 .

(n64)Footnote 34.1. Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654 .

(n65)Footnote 34.2. Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 663 .

(n66)Footnote 34.3. Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 663 .

(n67)Footnote 35. Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 454, 457 .

(n68)Footnote 36. Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 454, 457 .

(n69)Footnote 37. Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 454 .

(n70)Footnote 38. O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 1309-1310, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433 .

(n71)Footnote 39. O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 1309-1310, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433 .

(n72)Footnote 39.1. Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1002, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 .

(n73)Footnote 39.2. See also Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 355, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089; Gibbs v. Consolidated Services (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 794, 799, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 (prima facie case of age discrimination requires evidence plaintiff is over 40, was performing satisfactorily and was discharged under circumstances giving rise to inference of unlawful discrimination, i.e., others not over 40 were retained or plaintiff's job was filled by someone of comparable skill not over 40).

(n74)Footnote 39.3. Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1002-1003, 1006, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 (replacement employee, although over 40, was seven years younger than plaintiff, which could reasonably be described as significant). See also Gibbs v. Consolidated Services (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 794, 799-801, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 (although plaintiff was over 40 when he was discharged, there was no evidence giving rise to inference of unlawful age discrimination, where employer had legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for terminating plaintiff's employment based on restructuring of plaintiff's former position leading to increase in job responsibilities for which plaintiff was not qualified; stray remarks about plaintiff's age did not establish discrimination because opinion that plaintiff was too old to drive played no role in decision to terminate him from position of operations supervisor).

(n75)Footnote 39.4. Trop v. Sony Pictures Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1144-1150, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144 .

(n76)Footnote 39.5. Trop v. Sony Pictures Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1145-1146, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144 .

(n77)Footnote 39.6. Trop v. Sony Pictures Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1146-1150, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144 .

(n78)Footnote 40. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 505-506, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407; McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668; see Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 661-662 (seasonal downturn in trash volume and poor job performance leading to layoff constituted legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for terminating employment); see also Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1002, 1006, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 (if employer fails to offer legitimate non-age based rationale for adverse action, employee prevails).

(n79)Footnote 41. Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 199-202, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 .

(n80)Footnote 42. Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 201, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 (citing Clark v. Claremont University Center (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 639, 662-664, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151).

(n81)Footnote 43. Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 201, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 (citing Mixon v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1319, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884).

(n82)Footnote 44. Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 201, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 (citing St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 2749, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407, 418 .

(n83)Footnote 45. Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 202, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 .

(n84)Footnote 46. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 .

(n85)Footnote 47. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 .

(n86)Footnote 48. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 254, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII) ; see Mixon v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1318, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA) .

(n87)Footnote 49. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 ; Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1003, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 .

(n88)Footnote 49.1. King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 432-433, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 ; Scalf v. D. B. Log Homes, Inc. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 1518-1519, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 826 .

(n89)Footnote 50. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407, 416 ; Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 ; but see Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1051, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726 (FEHA; on defendant's motion for summary judgment, as contrasted to trial, defendant cannot rely on plaintiff's failure to produce evidence establishing prima facie case of discrimination; defendant must present evidence negating disparate treatment claim or establishing undisputed legitimate, nondiscriminatory basis for employment action); and University of Southern California v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1036, 272 Cal. Rptr. 264 (FEHA claim evaluated under federal law interpreting Title VII; although burden ultimately rests with plaintiff, in case of defendant's motion for summary judgment or summary issue adjudication, burden rests with moving party to negate plaintiff's right to prevail on particular issue). See, e.g., Cucuzza v. City of Santa Clara (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1043-1046, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660 (plaintiff did not produce substantial responsive evidence to employer's evidence articulating legitimate business reasons for allegedly adverse actions taken to demonstrate material triable controversy, because employer presented evidence showing that supervisor implemented procedures that reduced frequency with which jobs formerly done by plaintiff needed to be done or reassigned certain duties for purposes of efficiency, and moved plaintiff's work area out of his office because Director of Human Resources had recommended he do so to have privacy for meetings and confidential records; in choosing male over plaintiff for specific position, employer used neutral method of evaluating candidates and chose man over female plaintiff for reasons unrelated to gender).

(n90)Footnote 51. See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 254, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 ; see also Rodriguez v. General Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 531, 533 (42 U.S.C. § 1981; to "articulate" means to produce evidence, not "to express an argument"); Hammond v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1579, 1600 (FEHA; because employer did not submit evidence of neutral, nondiscriminatory reason for substantially reducing plaintiff's workload, but instead denied that any such substantial reduction took place, it failed to satisfy its burden to show neutral, nondiscriminatory reason under McDonnell Douglas test); Begnal v. Canfield & Associates, Inc. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 66, 76, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 611 (evidence that terminated employee was replaced by older person did not conclusively establish absence of age discrimination, but certainly weighed against inference).

(n91)Footnote 52. See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 255, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 ; see Vasquez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 641 (assuming plaintiff could present prima facie case, person making adverse employment decision proffered legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for her decision to transfer plaintiff to field position and issue warning letter, i.e., plaintiff disobeyed direct order from his supervisor); Leong v. Potter (9th Cir. 2003) 347 F.3d 1117, 1124 (Postal Service offered legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for terminating employee, i.e., that on several occasions employee violated Last Chance Agreement, negotiated as alternative to termination after earlier, serious violations of Postal Service rules); Villanueva v. City of Colton (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1195-1196, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343 (employer provided competent, admissible evidence of legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons for suspending Hispanic employee after alarm incident and, as result of anticipated multimillion dollar budget shortfall, in eliminating his position as part of its reduction in force, where evidence was uncontroverted that employee was negligent in addressing issues presented by alarm incident, justifying his brief suspension, and where law is settled that employer's depressed economic condition can be good cause for discharging employee); Hicks v. KNTV Television, Inc. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 994, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240 (employer presented evidence of nondiscriminatory reason for not renewing contract of white television news anchor, who was replaced by African-American man, based on his on-air performance, where fact that supervisor's assessment was based on subjective criteria did not by itself demonstrative pretext, there was no discriminatory pattern of hiring minorities to replace white anchors, and there was no evidence of pressure to hire minorities or that defendants' asserted reason for not renewing contract was false; further, plaintiff's cumulative evidence did not raise triable issue of fact as to racial discrimination). But see Norris v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 1326, 1329, 1331 (Title VII; employer may not proffer data acquired after time adverse decision was made to articulate hypothetical nondiscriminatory reason for decision). The purpose of the employer's articulation of a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason is not only to rebut the plaintiff's prima facie case, but also to "frame the factual issue with sufficient clarity so that the plaintiff will have a full and fair opportunity to demonstrate pretext." Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 255-256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207; see also discussion of pretext in [d], below.

(n92)Footnote 53. See University of Southern California v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1036, 272 Cal. Rptr. 264 (defendant's motion for summary adjudication).

(n93)Footnote 54. E.E.O.C. v. Farmer Bros. Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 891, 899-900 .

(n94)Footnote 54.1. Lyons v. England (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1092, 1117 .

(n95)Footnote 54.2. Lyons v. England (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1092 .

(n96)Footnote 55. See Furnco Construction Corp. v. Waters (1978) 438 U.S. 567, 575-576, 98 S. Ct. 2943, 57 L. Ed. 2d 957 .

(n97)Footnote 56. See Gonzales v. Police Dep't, City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 758, 761-762 (Title VII). An exception may exist if an employer seeks to use post-claim figures to explain the significance or effect of pre-claim data. Gonzales v. Police Dept., City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 758, 762 n.3 (Title VII).

(n98)Footnote 56.1. Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Products, Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 2111-2112, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 .

(n99)Footnote 56.2. Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Products, Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 2108, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 .

(n100)Footnote 56.3. Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Products, Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 2108, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 .

(n101)Footnote 56.4. Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Products, Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 2108-2109, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 .

(n102)Footnote 57. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 .

(n103)Footnote 58. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407, 416-419 .

(n104)Footnote 59. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407, 418-419 .

(n105)Footnote 60. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407, 414-415, 417-419 .

(n106)Footnote 61. Washington v. Garrett (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1421, 1433 .

(n107)Footnote 62. Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 890 ; see also Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 202-203, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 (The construct of the shifting burden of proof is used by the court to order the evidence; it is used as an analytical tool by the trial court judge to assure that meritless claims do not proceed to trial and that an employer does not escape liability if its reason is merely pretextual. Merely articulating a non-discriminatory reason is not sufficient. The shifting burdens are amenable to pretrial proceedings, such as summary judgment.).

(n108)Footnote 62.1. King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 433, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 (employer's evidence that decision makers entertained honest belief that plaintiff had either personally falsified timecard of driver he supervised in violation of employer's policies or directed driver to do so was sufficient to meet employer's burden.).

(n109)Footnote 63. See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 255-256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII) (The rationale of the shifting burden of proof helps the judge determine whether the litigants have created an issue of fact to be decided by a jury. Allocation of burdens and creation of a presumption by the establishment of a prima facie case is intended progressively to sharpen the inquiry into the elusive factual questions of intentional discrimination); McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII) ; Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 202, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 (FEHA) ; Lowe v. Monrovia (9th Cir. 1985) 775 F.2d 998, 1005 , as amended (9th Cir. 1986) 784 F.2d 1407 .

(n110)Footnote 64. See McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 281-282, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 (Title VII and 42 U.S.C. § 1981); McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII) .

(n111)Footnote 65. See Lyons v. England (9th Cir. 2002) 307 F.3d 1092, 1116 (plaintiffs' evidence discrediting employer's proffered legitimate reason was substantial and specific, showing employer subverted established procedures for assigning temporary details to prevent African-American employees from obtaining experience at positions above GS-12 level, just as plaintiffs alleged employer had subverted established promotion procedures in 1996 for same unlawful purpose); Warren v. City of Carlsbad (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 439, 442 ; Lindahl v. Air France (9th Cir. 1991) 930 F.2d 1434, 1437-1438 ; see also Messick v. Horizon Indus. Inc. (9th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 1227, 1229-1231 (examination of evidence presented gave rise to genuine issue of material fact that employer's reasons for firing plaintiff were pretextual); but see Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 454, 457 (plaintiff provided insufficient evidence to raise genuine issue of material fact that employer's proffered reasons for its actions were pretextual).

(n112)Footnote 65.1. Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1003-1005, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 ; but see Fonseca v. Sysco Food Services of Arizona, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 374 F.3d 840, 850 (disparate treatment plaintiff can survive summary judgment without producing any evidence of discrimination beyond that constituting prima facie case, if evidence raises genuine issue of material fact regarding truth of employer's proffered reasons); Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1193 (disparate treatment plaintiff can survive summary judgment without producing any evidence of discrimination beyond that constituting prima facie case, if evidence raises genuine issue of material fact regarding truth of employer's proffered reasons). See Davis v. Team Electric Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 520 F.3d 1080, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 6476, *20-*28 (female electrician offered specific and substantial circumstantial evidence of pretext, where she established genuine factual issue with regard to employer's motive in assigning her disproportionate amount of dangerous and strenuous work); Surrell v. Cal. Water Service Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1097, 1106-1107 (African-American employee failed to show employer's articulated reason for promoting younger white woman over her to position of office manager, i.e., that she was more qualified, was pretextual, where, while district court should have considered plaintiff's testimony that she had never seen any black people promoted to office management positions, without more, general statement was insufficient for trier of fact to conclude that employer's articulated reason was pretextual, and five years of management experience of woman who was promoted significantly distinguished her from plaintiff as most-qualified candidate for management position; employer also produced non-discriminatory reason for not cross-training plaintiff and for cross-training white employee, where white employee had already done portion of job that she learned on her own and required less training than plaintiff, and employer's time for training was limited because it was in process of converting to new computer system and taking over new billing account); McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1122-1124 (after employer claimed its failure to promote African-American plaintiff to position was due to hiring freeze, employer's presentation of absence of any documentation confirming that company hiring freeze was in place during relevant time period was sufficient to raise genuine factual dispute as to whether asserted reason was pretextual; additionally, employer's permissive response to harassing actions undertaken by coworkers and supervisors, combined with absence of black supervisors and managers in workplace, was circumstantial evidence of pretext); see also Hammond v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1579, 1600 (FEHA; even though employer did not satisfy its burden under McDonnell Douglas test to rebut presumption of race discrimination, plaintiff supplied requisite evidence of racial animus through testimony about supervisor's "Ebonics" comment and plaintiff's testimony that supervisor made derogatory remarks about other African-American coworkers, constituting independent evidence of racial animus, and through plaintiff's testimony that she was only African-American among four instructors in unit and supervisor asked plaintiff to "demote," took away her teaching assignments, gave those assignments to other instructors who were not African-American, and monitored plaintiff's classroom performance but not performance of instructors who were not African-American; finally, department's investigation of plaintiff's allegations about supervisor's conduct toward her and other employees concluded plaintiff's allegations were "founded"); Deschene v. Pinole Point Steel Co. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 33, 44-46, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 15 (employer denied summary judgment because genuine issue of material fact existed in employer's claim that employee was terminated for 'blowing up' at supervisor and plaintiff's claim that immediately following his termination, a co-worker who had not been previously scheduled appeared and took plaintiff's place, as if termination had been preplanned). but see Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1193 (disparate treatment plaintiff can survive summary judgment without producing any evidence of discrimination beyond that constituting prima facie case, if evidence raises genuine issue of material fact regarding truth of employer's proffered reasons).

(n113)Footnote 65.2. Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1003-1004, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 ; see St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 505-511, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 . Compare Barber v. Rancho Mortgage & Inv. Corp. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 1819, 1835, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906 (suggestion that employee's prima facie case of discrimination is alone sufficient to avoid summary judgment, and need not present evidence to rebut employer's claimed non-discriminatory motivation) with Martin v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1718, 1735, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 181 (requiring discharged employee, to avert summary judgment, to produce "substantial responsive evidence" that employer's showing was untrue or pretextual).

(n114)Footnote 65.3. Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1003-1005, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 .

(n115)Footnote 65.4. Villanueva v. City of Colton (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1195-1198, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343 (employee could not show pretext where every piece of evidence on which he relied was excluded by trial court and employee did not challenge evidentiary rulings on appeal); Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1005, 1008-1009, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 (rebuttal evidence that stated motives were invalid did not constitute substantial responsive evidence; triable issues as to whether employer's actions were reasonable and well considered cannot permit trier of fact to reasonably conclude that stated reasons were implausible, inconsistent, or baseless); Horn v. Cushman & Wakefield W., Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 798, 810-813, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 (plaintiff failed to offer substantial evidence of pretext or discriminatory animus because job was actually altered in employer's restructuring; focus of actual job duties rather than position description controls); see Sheridan v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours and Co. (3d Cir. 1996) 100 F.3d 1061, 1072 , cert. denied, 521 U.S. 1129 (1997) .

(n116)Footnote 65.5. Villiarimo v. Aloha Island Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 1054, 1063 ; see Nidds v. Schindler Elevator Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 912, 918 (holding in context of retaliation that presence of shifting or different justifications for adverse action not sufficient to defeat summary judgment when justifications are not incompatible).

(n117)Footnote 65.6. Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1192-1195 .

(n118)Footnote 65.7. Perez v. County of Santa Clara (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 671, 676, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 867 , citing Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 356, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 .

(n119)Footnote 65.8. St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 507, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 , quoting Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 ; Perez v. County of Santa Clara (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 671, 675-677, 3 Cal Rptr. 3d 867 (although plaintiff initially presented sufficient evidence of race and national origin discrimination to establish prima facie case with respect to delay in promotion and denial of four-fifths position, court's findings were not sufficient to compel verdict in plaintiff's favor, but only shifted burden to employer, which rebutted each instance of alleged discrimination by producing evidence of legitimate nondiscriminatory reasons for its actions and establishing reasons by clear and convincing evidence).

(n120)Footnote 65.9. Green v. County of Santa Clara (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 671, 677, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 867 .

(n121)Footnote 66. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII) ; Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1194 ; Merrick v. Farmers Ins. Group (9th Cir. 1990) 892 F.2d 1434, 1437 (ADEA) ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1318-1319, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (FEHA) ; see also Norris v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 1326, 1330 (Title VII; district court should separately evaluate the specific rationale offered for each employment decision when the employer has repeatedly rejected an employee).

(n122)Footnote 66.1. See McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 805, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 ; Diaz v. American Tel. & Tel. (9th Cir. 1985) 752 F.2d 1356, 1363 ; See also § 41.21[2].

(n123)Footnote 67. Vasquez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 641-642 (plaintiff failed to show coworkers were similarly situated, where one coworker was not involved in same type of offense as plaintiff and her position was supervisory one with much greater responsibility, and where although plaintiff and another coworker held same level position, other coworker did not engage in problematic conduct of comparable seriousness because he did not know he was disobeying direct order from supervisor).

(n124)Footnote 67.1. Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 1217 .

(n125)Footnote 67.2. Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 1217, 1220-1221 .

(n126)Footnote 67.3. Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 1217, 1221 (direct evidence included statement that supervisor did not want to deal with another female, presentation of sex-related gift, and exclusionary company-sponsored trips).

(n127)Footnote 67.4. Vasquez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 642 ; Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 1217, 1222 (plaintiff offered substantial evidence of unreliability of employer's proffered reasons when all evidence supporting those reasons came from statements, depositions, and declarations prepared during the litigation (after employment decision was made), and they were inconsistent with contemporaneous reasons for selection of male applicant); see also Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1192-1195 (at summary judgment stage, court was compelled by standard of review to infer from distinct difference between plaintiff's qualifications for full-time teaching position and qualifications of person who received job, that plaintiff had demonstrated genuine factual dispute as to whether school district's proffered reasons were pretextual, given statement's that plaintiff was denied position due to her accent). Bergene v. Salt River Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1136, 1143 (plaintiff presented specific and substantial circumstantial evidence, raising genuine issue of material fact, that employer's purported reason for promoting male coworker was pretext for discrimination on basis of sex; decision maker changed selection criteria after plaintiff applied, thus allowing male to qualify and eliminating plaintiff's competitive advantage; plaintiff referred to as "Mommy" in workplace, indicating she was singled out on the basis of sex; and, apart from human resources personnel, there were no women supervisors during plaintiff's tenure).

(n128)Footnote 67.5. See Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (2006) 126 S. Ct. 1195, 1197-1198, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1053; Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 187-188, 109 S. Ct. 2363, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132, superseded on other grounds by 42 U.S.C. § 1981(b); Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 259, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207. Cf. Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Products, Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 148, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 (plaintiff's prima facie case, combined with sufficient evidence to find that employer's asserted justification is false, may permit trier of fact to conclude employer unlawfully discriminated).

(n129)Footnote 67.6. Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (2006) 126 S. Ct. 1195, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1053.

(n130)Footnote 67.7. Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (2006) 126 S. Ct. 1195, 1197, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1053.

(n131)Footnote 67.8. Cooper v. Southern Co. (11th Cir. 2004) 390 F.3d 695, 732 (internal quotation marks omitted).

(n132)Footnote 67.9. Raad v. Fairbanks North Star Borough School Dist. (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1194.

(n133)Footnote 67.10. Aka v. Washington Hospital Center (D.C. Cir. 1998) 156 F.3d 1284, 1294, 332 U.S. App. D.C. 256 (en banc).

(n134)Footnote 67.11. Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (11th Cir. 2005) 129 Fed. Appx. 529, 533.

(n135)Footnote 67.12. Ash v. Tyson Foods, Inc. (2006) 126 S. Ct. 1195, 1198, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1053.

(n136)Footnote 67.13. Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089.

(n137)Footnote 67.14. Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 357, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089.

(n138)Footnote 67.15. Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 357-358, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089.

(n139)Footnote 68. See McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII); Rodriguez v. General Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 531, 533 (42 U.S.C. § 1981). Cf. Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway Co. v. White (2006) 126 S. Ct. 2405, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345 (scope of anti-retaliation provision of Title VII extends beyond workplace-related or employment-related retaliatory acts and harm, so employee need only allege and prove "adverse action" rather than "adverse employment action" under Title VII's anti-retaliation provision), discussed at § 41.130[1A], below.

(n140)Footnote 69. Rodriguez v. General Motors Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 904 F.2d 531, 533 (42 U.S.C. § 1981); see Washington v. Garrett (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1421, 1434 (employer's simultaneous offering of two distinct and arguably inconsistent reasons for discharging employee gives rise to genuine issue of fact regarding existence of pretext); Payne v. Norwest Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1079, 1080 (multiple inconsistent reasons for termination raise genuine issue of fact regarding pretext); see also Messick v. Horizon Indus. Inc. (9th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 1227, 1229-1231 (material issues of fact existed regarding whether plaintiff performed his job satisfactorily and whether employer's proffered reasons for discharging him were pretextual). but see Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 661 (although fundamentally different justifications for employer's action can give rise to genuine issue of fact on issue of pretext because they suggest possibility that neither reason was true reason; employer's reasons were not inconsistent, and court would not infer pretext from simple fact employer had two different, although consistent, reasons for laying plaintiff off).

(n141)Footnote 70. See Walker v. Blue Cross of Cal. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 985, 998, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184 (FEHA) .

(n142)Footnote 71. Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 890 (Title VII) ; University of S. Cal. v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1039-1040, 272 Cal. Rptr. 264 (FEHA claim evaluated under federal law interpreting Title VII; nature of shifting burden of proof in McDonnell Douglas and Burdine does not preclude summary judgment for defendant).

(n143)Footnote 72. Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885 .

(n144)Footnote 73. See Sischo-Nownejad v. Merced Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1991) 934 F.2d 1104, 1112 .

(n145)Footnote 74. Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 890 .

(n146)Footnote 75. Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 890 .

(n147)Footnote 76. Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 890 ; see also Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 454, 458 ; Heyne v. Caruso (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1475, 1480 (evidence of behavior toward others of same class admissible to prove motive pretext; trial court's exclusion of evidence of employer's harassment of other women employees in quid pro quo sexual harassment case was error).

(n148)Footnote 77. See Ritter v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 58 F.3d 454, 458 .

(n149)Footnote 78. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407, 416-419 ; Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1002-1003, 1006, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 .

(n150)Footnote 78.1. Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Products, Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 2111-2112, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 .

(n151)Footnote 79. Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 187-188, 109 S. Ct. 2363, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132 (altered by 1991 legislation).

(n152)Footnote 80. Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 109 S. Ct. 2363, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132 (42 U.S.C. § 1981) (altered by 1991 Civil Rights legislation).

(n153)Footnote 81. See Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 186, 189, 109 S. Ct. 2363, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132 (42 U.S.C. § 1981) (altered by 1991 legislation).

(n154)Footnote 82. See Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 187-188, 109 S. Ct. 2363, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132 (42 U.S.C. § 1981) (altered by 1991 legislation).

(n155)Footnote 82.1. Norris v. City and County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 1326, 1331 (Title VII).

(n156)Footnote 82.2. EEOC v. Boeing Co. (9th Cir. 2009) 577 F.3d 1044, 1050-1051 (from supervisor's sexist comments, although they did not refer specifically to female employee, jury might have reasonably inferred that supervisor's decision to transfer employee, rather than male coworker about whom she complained, to new position where her job was less secure, may have resulted from improper motivations, including discriminatory intent, retaliatory intent, or both, and there was additional specific and substantial circumstantial evidence on which jury could rely to support conclusion transfer might have been discriminatory; there was also sufficient evidence from which jury could find that employee's later poor reduction-in-force evaluation scores, which led to her termination, were pretextual).

(n157)Footnote 82.3. EEOC v. Boeing Co. (9th Cir. 2009) 577 F.3d 1044, 1051, 1052-1053 . See also Abuan v. Level 3 Communications, Inc. (10th Cir. 2003) 353 F.3d 1158 (co-workers' assessments of plaintiff's work should be considered because they can be probative of pretext).

(n158)Footnote 82.4. Mondero v. Salt River Project (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 1207, 1213 (female employee failed to present evidence that employer declined to repeat experimental program for her because decision makers were influenced or even aware of alleged gender bias of some of its agents, where employee failed to show that alleged comments by foremen related in any way to decision not to repeat experimental program for her). See Nidds v. Schindler Elevator Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 113 F.3d 912, 919 (comment by supervisor that he intended to get rid of all "old timers" was insufficient to create genuine issue of material fact, because comment was not tied directly to layoff).

(n159)Footnote 83. Godwin v. Hunt Wesson, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 150 F.3d 1217, 1221 .

(n160)Footnote 83.1. King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 433, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 (FEHA) ; see also Villiarimo v. Aloha Island Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 281 F.3d 1054, 1063 (Title VII) .

(n161)Footnote 83.2. Saelzler v. Advanced Group 400 (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 763, 774, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 23 P.3d 1143 ; King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 433-434, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 .

(n162)Footnote 83.3. See McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 282 n.10, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 (Title VII and 42 U.S.C. § 1981); accord, McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII; employer may justifiably refuse to hire one who has engaged in unlawful, disruptive acts against it, but only if criterion is applied alike to members of all races).

(n163)Footnote 83.4. Coghlan v. American Seafood Co. LLC (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 1090, 1096-1100 .

(n164)Footnote 83.5. Bradley v. Harcourt, Brace & Co., (9th Cir. 1996) 104 F.3d 267, 270-271 .

(n165)Footnote 83.6. See Hartsel v. Keys (9th Cir. 1996) 87 F.3d 795, 804 n.9 (applying same-actor inference where decisionmaker had not hired plaintiff, but had previously promoted her).

(n166)Footnote 83.7. Coghlan v. Am. Seafoods Co. LLC (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 1090, 1096 n.9 .

(n167)Footnote 83.7.1. EEOC v. Boeing Co. (9th Cir. 2009) 577 F.3d 1044, 1051-1053 .

(n168)Footnote 83.7.2. Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1288 .

(n169)Footnote 83.7.3. Nazir v. United Airlines, Inc. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 243, 271-286 .

(n170)Footnote 83.7.4. Horn v. Cushman & Wakefield Western, Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 798, 809, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 .

(n171)Footnote 83.7.5. See Waldron v. SL Industries, Inc. (3d Cir. 1995) 56 F.3d 491, 496, fn. 6 (fact that same actor conferred employment benefit on employee before discharging employee is simply evidence and should be treated like any other piece of proof).

(n172)Footnote 83.8. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 95-96 .

(n173)Footnote 83.9. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 92-96 .

(n174)Footnote 83.10. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 93-95 (Congress did not impose special or heightened evidentiary burden on plaintiff in Title VII case in which discriminatory animus may have constituted one of two or more reasons for employer's challenged actions, citing 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(m)).

(n175)Footnote 84. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(m); see Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 93 .

(n176)Footnote 85. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 .

(n177)Footnote 86. See Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 234-235, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 .

(n178)Footnote 87. See Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 251, 256-257, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 (partially superseded by 1991 legislation); see also O'Day v. McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 756, 764 (applying the rules for mixed motive cases to after-acquired evidence cases and holding that after acquired evidence will not immunize the employer from liability although it may affect damages).

(n179)Footnote 88. See Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 258, 260, 261, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 (affected by 1991 legislation); A plurality of the Court in Price Waterhouse explained that gender plays a motivating part in an employment decision if, at the moment of the decision, one of the reasons for the decision is that the applicant or employee is a woman. See Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 250, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 (Brennan, Marshall, Blackmun, Stevens, JJ.) (partially superseded by 1991 legislation); see Odima v. Westin Tucson Hotel Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 595, 601 .

(n180)Footnote 89. See Odima v. Westin Tucson Hotel Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 595, 601 , appeal after remand (9th Cir. 1995) 53 F.3d 1484 .

(n181)Footnote 90. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(m), as added by Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 107.

(n182)Footnote 90.1. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 93-95 .

(n183)Footnote 90.2. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 93-95 . See also Galdamez v. Potter (9th Cir. 2005) 415 F.3d 1015, 1020-1021 (evidence in record supported mixed motive instruction, asking jury whether plaintiff's national origin was a motivating factor, not the motivating factor, in employer's decision to take adverse action).

(n184)Footnote 90.3. See 42 U.S.C. 2000e-2(m); see also Mohr v. Dustrol, Inc. (8th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 636, 640-641 ; Fernandes v. Costa Bros. Masonry, Inc. (1st Cir. 1999) 199 F.3d 572, 580 ; Trotter v. Board of Trustees of Univ. of Ala. (11th Cir. 1996) 91 F.3d 1449, 1453-1454 ; Fuller v. Phipps (4th Cir. 1995) 67 F.3d 1137, 1142 (all holding direct evidence is required to establish liability under section 2000e-2(m)). Compare Costa v. Desert Palace, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 238 F.3d 1056 (plaintiff may establish mixed motive by resort to circumstantial evidence).

(n185)Footnote 90.4. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 96, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84 .

(n186)Footnote 90.5. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 92-93 .

(n187)Footnote 90.6. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84, 95-96 .

(n188)Footnote 91. Desert Palace, Inc. v. Costa (2003) 539 U.S. 90, 123 S. Ct. 2148, 156 L. Ed. 2d 84 .

(n189)Footnote 91.1. See Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 261-262, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 .

(n190)Footnote 91.2. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 258, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 .

(n191)Footnote 91.3. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 258, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268, 109 S. Ct. 1775 .

(n192)Footnote 91.4. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g)(2)(B).

(n193)Footnote 91.5. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g)(2)(B).

(n194)Footnote 92. See Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2010) 2010 Cal. App. LEXIS 135; Grand-Burton v. Covenant Care, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1379, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 204, BAJI No. 12.26 ("If you find that the employer's action ... was actually motivated by both discriminatory and non-discriminatory reasons, the employer is not liable if it can establish by a preponderance of the evidence that its legitimate reason, standing alone, would have induced it to make the same decision."). But see CACI 2500 (employer is liable if discriminatory factor was motivating reason or factor for adverse employment action).

(n195)Footnote 92.1. Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2010) 2010 Cal. App. LEXIS 135.

(n196)Footnote 92.2. BAJI No. 12.26.

(n197)Footnote 92.3. Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2010) 2010 Cal. App. LEXIS 135 .

(n198)Footnote 92.4. Harris v. City of Santa Monica (2010) 2010 Cal. App. LEXIS 135 . See, e.g., Gross v. FBL Financial Services, Inc. (2009) 557 U.S. --, 129 S. Ct. 2343, 2349, 174 L. Ed. 2d 119 (defense is subject to criticism for its workability but continues to be available in employment discrimination cases other than those based on age discrimination).

(n199)Footnote 93. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 ; see discussion in [b], above.

(n200)Footnote 94. See, e.g., Clark v. Claremont University Center (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 639, 662-664, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151 ; University of Southern California v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1035, 272 Cal. Rptr. 264 ; Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1317, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 .

(n201)Footnote 95. See DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-11, at 11-17. (The FEHC has modified and reissued its precedential decision in DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken, cited in fns. 95 and 100-104, although the FEHC's analysis regarding disparate treatment was unaffected by the modification; the new cite is DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-11.).

(n202)Footnote 96. DFEH v. Ambylou Enterprises, Inc. (1982) FEHC Dec. No. 82-06, at 5; see also Williams v. Edward Appfels Coffee Co. (9th Cir. 1986) 792 F.2d 1482, 1487 ; Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 199-202, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 (applying McDonnell Douglas test under FEHA and finding there is no rigid standard, since proof will vary according to the facts of the particular case); Strother v. S. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 859 (discussion of prima facie case of retaliation under the FEHA); Clark v. Claremont University Center (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 639, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 151 .

(n203)Footnote 97. See Ibarbia v. Regents of University of California (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1328, 237 Cal. Rptr. 92 .

(n204)Footnote 98. Ibarbia v. Regents of University of California (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1328, 237 Cal. Rptr. 92 .

(n205)Footnote 99. See Ibarbia v. Regents of University of California (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1328, 237

Cal. Rptr. 92 .

(n206)Footnote 100. Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. Church's Fried Chicken (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-18. (The FEHC has modified and reissued its precedential decision in DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken, cited in fns. 95 and 100-104, although the FEHC's analysis regarding disparate treatment was unaffected by the modification; the new cite is DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-11.)

(n207)Footnote 101. Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. Church's Fried Chicken (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-18, at 10, 12. (The FEHC has modified and reissued its precedential decision in DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken, cited in fns. 95 and 100-104, although the FEHC's analysis regarding disparate treatment was unaffected by the modification; the new cite is DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-11.) See also DFEH v. General Dynamics, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. 90-08, p. 8; DFEH v. Ca. State University--Sacramento (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-08, p. 16; DFEH v. Aluminum Precision Products, Inc. (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-05, p. 5; see also Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1425 (discrimination claim fails under test in Church's Fried Chicken when there is no evidence to suggest that age was factor in discharge decisions); Watson v. Department of Rehabilitation (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1290, 261 Cal. Rptr. 204 (citing Church's Fried Chicken; applicability of McDonnell Douglas test in FEHA disparate treatment cases is unsettled).

(n208)Footnote 102. Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. Church's Fried Chicken (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-18, at 14. For example, an individual would not prevail, even if discrimination exists, if he or she could not prove that his or her performance was entirely satisfactory. See Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. Church's Fried Chicken (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-18, at 15 n.5. (The FEHC has modified and reissued its precedential decision in DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken, cited in fns. 95 and 100-104, although the FEHC's analysis regarding disparate treatment was unaffected by the modification; the new cite is DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-11.)

(n209)Footnote 103. See Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. Church's Fried Chicken (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-18, at 15-16. (The FEHC has modified and reissued its precedential decision in DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken, cited in fns. 95 and 100-104, although the FEHC's analysis regarding disparate treatment was unaffected by the modification; the new cite is DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-11.)

(n210)Footnote 104. Department of Fair Employment and Housing v. Church's Fried Chicken (1987) FEHC Dec. No. 87-18, at 16-17 (emphasis added). (The FEHC has modified and reissued its precedential decision in DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken, cited in fns. 95 and 100-104, although the FEHC's analysis regarding disparate treatment was unaffected by the modification; the new cite is DFEH v. Church's Fried Chicken (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-11.)

(n211)Footnote 105. Nesbit v. Pepsico, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 994 F.2d 703, 704 .

(n212)Footnote 106. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 336, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed 2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n213)Footnote 107. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law, (2d ed. 1983) Ch. 36, "Proof."

(n214)Footnote 108. Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1265-1266 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII); see Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1480 (Title VII); see also discussion in [b], below.

(n215)Footnote 109. See, e.g., Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479 , ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1989) ("pattern or practice" class action by private individuals); Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) ("pattern or practice" action by individual plaintiffs and association; later certified as class).

(n216)Footnote 110. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-6(a); Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed 2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n217)Footnote 111. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1266 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII); see also Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 fn. 15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed 2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n218)Footnote 112. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n219)Footnote 113. See, e.g., Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479, 1480 , ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (1989) .

(n220)Footnote 114. See discussion in [1], above, and § 41.21.

(n221)Footnote 115. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(N222)Footnote 116. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n223)Footnote 117. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n224)Footnote 118. See McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII) ; see discussion in [1][a], above.

(n225)Footnote 119. See McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 800, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII; emphasis added) .

(n226)Footnote 120. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII)

(n227)Footnote 121. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 358, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n228)Footnote 122. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 358, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n229)Footnote 123. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 358, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 ; see also McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802 fn. 13, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII) .

(n230)Footnote 124. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 336, 358, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) ; see also Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1267 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n231)Footnote 125. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 336, 358, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII); see Mundy v. Household Finance Corp. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 542, 546 (ADEA; in large corporation with branch offices throughout country, discharge of seven older employees over two and one half year period alone does not establish pattern or practice of discrimination); see discussion in [a], above.

(n232)Footnote 126. Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1267 , cert. denied,

471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n233)Footnote 127. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed.2d 396 (Title VII) ; see also Franks v. Bowman Transportation Co. (1976) 424 U.S. 747, 772, 96 S. Ct. 1251, 47 L. Ed. 2d 444 (trial court erred when it placed burden on each individual member of class to prove that he or she was qualified for job sought and that vacancy was available).

(n234)Footnote 128. See Franks v. Bowman Transportation Co. (1976) 424 U.S. 747, 772, 96 S. Ct. 1251, 47 L. Ed. 2d 444 .

(n235)Footnote 129. See, e.g., E.E.O.C. v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 577 (Title VII; "regression analyses"). see Larson, Employment Discrimination, Ch. 10, "Other Procedural Matters," § 50.85(b); Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (2d ed. 1983) Ch. 36, "Proof."

(n236)Footnote 130. See Hazelwood School District v. United States (1977) 433 U.S. 299, 307, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768 (Title VII) ; Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 339, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed 2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n237)Footnote 131. Hazelwood School District v. United States (1977) 433 U.S. 299, 307-308, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768 (Title VII) .

(n238)Footnote 132. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 338, 339, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) ; E.E.O.C. v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 577, 579 (Title VII).

(n239)Footnote 133. See discussion in [b], above.

(n240)Footnote 134. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed.2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n241)Footnote 135. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360 fn. 46, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) ; see discussion in [b], above.

(n242)Footnote 136. See McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 800, 802, 804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII) ; see discussion in § 40.02[2][a][ii].

(n243)Footnote 137. Vuyanich v. Republic Nat. Bank of Dallas (N.D. Tex. 1981) 521 F. Supp. 656 , vacated on other grounds, 723 F.2d 1195 (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1984) (Title VII).

(n244)Footnote 138. See Vuyanich v. Republic Nat. Bank of Dallas (N.D. Tex. 1981) 521 F. Supp. 656, 661 , vacated on other grounds, 723 F.2d 1195 (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1984) (Title VII).

(n245)Footnote 139. Vuyanich v. Republic Nat. Bank of Dallas (N.D. Tex. 1981) 521 F. Supp. 656, 661 , vacated on other grounds, 723 F.2d 1195 (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1984) (Title VII;).

(n246)Footnote 140. Vuyanich v. Republic Nat. Bank of Dallas (N.D. Tex. 1981) 521 F. Supp. 656, 661 , vacated on other grounds, 723 F.2d 1195 (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1984) (Title VII).

(n247)Footnote 141. Vuyanich v. Republic Nat. Bank of Dallas (N.D. Tex. 1981) 521 F. Supp. 656, 661 , vacated on other grounds, 723 F.2d 1195 (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1984) (Title VII).

(n248)Footnote 142. Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n249)Footnote 143. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed.2d 396 (Title VII) ; Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1268 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n250)Footnote 144. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1268 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n251)Footnote 145. Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1268 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n252)Footnote 146. Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1268 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n253)Footnote 147. E.E.O.C. v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 579, 581 , cert. denied, (1990) 498 U.S. 950, 111 S. Ct. 370 (Title VII) .

(n254)Footnote 148. E.E.O.C. v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 580 n.7 (Title VII); Bazemore v. Friday (1986) 478 U.S. 385, 400 n.10, 106 S. Ct. 3000, 92 L. Ed. 2d 315 (Title VII) ; (there may be some analyses so incomplete as to be inadmissible as relevant).

(n255)Footnote 149. E.E.O.C. v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 579-581, 583 (Title VII); Bazemore v. Friday (1986) 478 U.S. 385, 400, 106 S. Ct. 3000, 92 L. Ed. 2d 315 (Title VII) ; (statistical analysis that includes less than all measurable variables may serve to prove plaintiff's case).

(n256)Footnote 150. E.E.O.C. v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 579-581, 583 (Title VII).

(n257)Footnote 151. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 360 fn. 46, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed 2d 396 (Title VII) ; see also Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1266, 1268 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII).

(n258)Footnote 152. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1269-1270 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) .

(n259)Footnote 153. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1269 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) .

(n260)Footnote 154. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1269 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) .

(n261)Footnote 155. See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 254, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 ; McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 ; see discussion in [1][c], above.

(n262)Footnote 156. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1269 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) .

(n263)Footnote 157. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1270 fn. 15 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) .

(n264)Footnote 158. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 .

(n265)Footnote 159. See Vuyanich v. Republic Nat. Bank of Dallas (N.D. Tex. 1981) 521 F. Supp. 656, 662 , vacated on other grounds, 723 F.2d 1195 (5th Cir. [Tex.] 1984); see also Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 255 fn. 10, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (plaintiff's initial evidence, combined with effective cross-examination of employer, possibly sufficient to discredit employer's rebuttal); Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1269-1270 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) .

(n266)Footnote 160. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n267)Footnote 161. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 361, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (emphasis added); Romero v. Am. Pres. Lines, Ltd. (1st. Dist. 1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1202 (summary judgment was entered for the employer as there was no competent evidence to support the claims of alleged race, sex, or age discrimination but rather the employer decision was based on the superior qualifications of others.

(n268)Footnote 162. Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1270 fn. 15 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) .

(n269)Footnote 163. Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 715, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 .

39 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart B. Disparate Treatment

2-41 California Employment Law §§ 41.12 through 41.19

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 41.12[Reserved]

40 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart C. Disparate Impact

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.20

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.20 Definition and Application

[1] Generally

The disparate impact theory applies to employment practices and criteria that are facially neutral in their treatment of different groups, but in fact fall more harshly on one group than another and cannot be justified by business necessity.ⁿ¹ Title VII as originally enacted did not include an express prohibition of policies or practices that produce a disparate impact.^{n1.1} The theory was first articulated by the United States Supreme Court in Griggs v. Duke Power Co.,ⁿ² which declared that Title VII "proscribes not only overt discrimination, but also practices that are fair in form but discriminatory in operation."ⁿ³

Twenty years after Griggs, the Civil Rights Act of 1991 amended Title VII to codify the prohibition on disparate-impact discrimination.^{n3.1} Under the disparate-impact statute, a plaintiff establishes a prima facie violation by showing that an employer uses a particular employment practice that causes a disparate impact on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.^{n3.2} An employer may defend against liability by demonstrating that the practice is job-related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity.^{n3.3} If the employer meets that burden, the plaintiff may still succeed by showing that the employer refuses to adopt an available alternative employment practice that has less disparate impact and serves the employer's legitimate needs.^{n3.4}

Although plaintiff in a disparate impact case must show that the challenged practice adversely affects a protected group of which plaintiff is a member,ⁿ⁴ an individual member of the affected group may bring an individual claim based on this theory.ⁿ⁵ Thus, in one case, a black employment applicant alleged that she was not hired because a city's employment policy had a disparate impact on blacks as a class.ⁿ⁶ The applicant's claim did not succeed, but only because the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with the district court that the applicant failed to produce evidence sufficient to establish a prima facie case of disparate impact.ⁿ⁷ Although individual claimants may rely on the disparate impact theory,ⁿ⁸ it generally does not apply to "ad hoc" or isolated application of employment criteria to individuals when a protected class is not affected.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has stated that the theory may be used only in cases involving class-wide application of employment criteria.ⁿ⁹ For example, in one case, the court held that a plaintiff must show the effect of employment criteria on an employer's work force.ⁿ¹⁰ The court held that an African-American employment applicant failed to show that a job requirement had a significant discriminatory impact on African-Americans as a class, observing that, although only a small proportion of the employer's employees were African-American, there was no evidence that the requirement was used to choose among applicants for positions other than the one sought by the plaintiff.ⁿ¹¹ In another case, the court rejected an employee's disparate impact claim because there was no evidence that her employer applied the disputed promotion criteria to anyone but her. The court concluded that the claim was one of discriminatory treatment.ⁿ¹²

In Ricci v. DeStefano,^{n12.1} the United States Supreme Court held that race-based action like refusing to certify the results of a promotional examination that appears to have a disparate impact on racial minorities is impermissible under Title VII unless the employer can demonstrate a strong basis in evidence that, had it not taken the action, it would have been liable under the disparate-impact statute. In Ricci, a city administered promotional examinations for firefighters for the positions of captain and lieutenant. The city then refused to certify the results when they showed that white candidates had outperformed minority candidates. Some firefighters threatened a discrimination lawsuit if the city made promotions based on the tests, even though other firefighters threatened a discrimination lawsuit if the city, relying on the statistical racial disparity, ignored the test results and denied promotions to the candidates who had performed well. The Court began with the premise that the city's actions violated the disparate-treatment prohibition of Title VII absent some valid defense, because the city chose not to certify the examination results because of the statistical disparity based on race, i.e., how minority candidates had performed when compared to white candidates.^{n12.2} Without some other justification, this express, race-based decisionmaking violated Title VII's command that employers cannot take adverse employment actions because of an individual's race.^{n12.3} The Court then considered whether the city's purpose to avoid disparate-impact liability excused what otherwise would be prohibited disparate-treatment discrimination. The Court found that if the city could not rescore a test based on the candidates' race,^{n12.4} it followed a fortiori that it could not take the greater step of discarding the test altogether to achieve a more desirable racial distribution of promotion-eligible candidates, absent a strong basis in evidence that the test was deficient and discarding the results was necessary to avoid violating the disparate-impact provision. The Court also found that restricting an employer's ability to discard test results and thereby discriminate against qualified candidates on the basis of their race also was in keeping with Title VII's express protection of bona fide promotional examinations.^{n12.5} Thus, the Court adopted the strong-basis-in-evidence standard as a matter of statutory construction to resolve any conflict between the disparate-treatment and disparate-impact provisions of Title VII. The Court then found that the city failed to meet that standard. Even if the city was motivated as a subjective matter by a desire to avoid committing disparate-impact discrimination, the record made clear there was no support for the conclusion that the city had an objective, strong basis in evidence to find the tests inadequate, with some consequent disparate-impact liability in violation of Title VII.^{n12.6}

[2] Statutes Subject to Disparate Impact Theory

The disparate impact theory may be used to establish liability under most equal employment opportunity laws, including Title VII,ⁿ¹³ the federal Equal Pay Act,ⁿ¹⁴ the ADA,ⁿ¹⁵ the ADEA,^{n15.1} and the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁶ The ADA expressly incorporates the disparate impact theory, providing that an employer may not use standards, criteria, or methods of administration that have the effect of disability discrimination or that perpetuate discrimination against others who are subject to common administrative control.ⁿ¹⁷ However, the disparate impact theory may not be used to establish discrimination in actions brought under the Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1871,ⁿ¹⁸ or the *Fifth Amendment*ⁿ¹⁹ and the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.ⁿ²⁰ⁿ²¹⁻²⁶

There are two substantive Title VII equal employment opportunity sections, providing respectively that an employer may not unlawfully (1) "fail or refuse to hire or to discharge ... or otherwise to discriminate ... with respect to ... compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment,"ⁿ²⁷ or (2) "limit, segregate, or classify ... employees or applicants ... in any way [that] would deprive or tend to deprive any individual of employment opportunities or otherwise adversely affect his [or her] status as an employee."ⁿ²⁸ Griggs was decided under the latter section,ⁿ²⁹ but in light of the textual differences between the two sections, there is some question as to whether the disparate impact theory may be applied to cases involving the former section.ⁿ³⁰ The United States Supreme Court has expressly reserved judgment on the question.ⁿ³¹

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, in Garcia v. Spun Steak Co.,ⁿ³² has held that there is no reason to restrict disparate impact claims to cases relating to the denial of employment opportunities because the Supreme Court has stated that Title 42 United States Code Section 2000e-2(a)(1) is to be construed broadly.ⁿ³³ Thus, the Ninth Circuit has held that a disparate impact claim may be based on a challenge to a practice or policy that has a significant adverse impact on the "terms, conditions, or privileges" of the employment of a protected group.ⁿ³⁴ Other courts have long assumed that either disparate treatment or disparate impact analyses may be "applied to a particular set of facts" without deciding what Title VII section a particular claim was brought under.ⁿ³⁵

[3] Employment Practices Subject to Disparate Impact Theory

The disparate impact theory most clearly applies to cases that challenge specific, clearly delineated employment practices, used at a single point in the job selection process.ⁿ³⁶ Such "objective" employment practices include education and intelligence tests,ⁿ³⁷ grooming rules,ⁿ³⁸ minimum height requirements,ⁿ³⁹ prior military service, training, and work experience,ⁿ⁴⁰ and shareholder preference plans.ⁿ⁴¹ For a detailed discussion of specific pre-employment practices, see §§ 41.40-41.46.

Until 1988, there was a conflict in the federal courts over whether disparate impact analysis may be applied to "subjective" employment practices, such as the use of separate hiring channels for different types of employees, "word-of-mouth" recruitment, nepotism, and rehiring policiesⁿ⁴² that lack the well-defined criteria of specific "objective" practices.ⁿ⁴³ However, in Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust,ⁿ⁴⁴ the United States Supreme Court conclusively resolved the conflict by holding that subjective employment practices may be challenged under the disparate impact theory in appropriate cases.ⁿ⁴⁵ The Court perceived that *Griggs v. Duke Power Co.*ⁿ⁴⁶ and succeeding cases could largely be nullified if disparate impact analysis applied only to objective employment practices.ⁿ⁴⁷ The Court explained that employer practices that combine both "objective" and "subjective" criteria generally must be considered subjective in nature. For example, if the employer in Griggs had consistently preferred applicants with high school diplomas and passing scores on the employer's general aptitude test, the selection system could nonetheless have been considered "subjective" if it also included brief interviews with candidates. The Court reasoned accordingly that if an employer refrained from making objective criteria absolutely determinative, it would remain free to give such tests almost as much weight as it chooses without risking a disparate impact challenge. Announcing a rule that allowed employers so easily to insulate themselves from liability under Griggs might effectively abolish disparate impact analysis.ⁿ⁴⁸

The Watson Court also determined that disparate impact is in principle no less applicable to subjective employment criteria than to objective criteria. The Court explained that in either case, a facially neutral employment practice, adopted without discriminatory intent, may have effects that are indistinguishable from intentionally discriminatory practices.ⁿ⁴⁹

The Court recognized that "validity studies," such as those which determine whether objective criteria predict actual job performance, may be impracticable for analyzing the legality of subjective criteria,ⁿ⁵⁰ and a plurality of the Court expressed concern that extending the disparate impact theory to subjective practices could increase the risk that employers will adopt unlawful quotas or engage in preferential treatment.ⁿ⁵¹ However, these members of the Court also expressed the view that employers will often find it easier to produce evidence of a "manifest relationship" between subjective criteria and the job in question because "[i]t is self-evident that many jobs, for example those involving managerial responsibilities, require personal qualities that have never been considered amenable" to objective criteria.ⁿ⁵² The plurality explained that in evaluating job-relatedness, "it must be borne in mind that '[c]ourts are generally less competent than employers to restructure business practices, and unless mandated to do so by Congress they should not attempt it.' "ⁿ⁵³

The employer who fails to articulate and apply objective employment practices may "reinforce prejudices, unconscious or not," which Title VII disapproves as a basis for employment.ⁿ⁵⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Disparate Impact
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Disparate Impact
Coverage & Definitions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 fn. 15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) . For a discussion and examples of discriminatory employment criteria, see [3], below.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2658, 2672, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490 .

(n3)Footnote 2. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII) .

(n4)Footnote 3. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII) .

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2658, 2673, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490 . See 105 Stats. 1071.

(n6)Footnote 3.2. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(i).

(n7)Footnote 3.3. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(i).

(n8)Footnote 3.4. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(ii), (C).

(n9)Footnote 4. See Peters v. Lieuallen (9th Cir. 1984) 746 F.2d 1390, 1392 (facially neutral system having significantly discriminatory impact on group protected by Title VII); Yartsoff v. Oregon, Employment Div. of Dep't of Human Resources (9th Cir. 1984) 745 F.2d 557, 559 (ADEA; employment practices having substantially disproportionate exclusionary impact on protected group).

(n10)Footnote 5. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 fn. 15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII; either disparate impact theory or disparate treatment theory applicable to particular set of facts); see also Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827, 839-841 (plurality opinion explaining burdens of proof that apply to both theories of objective and subjective proof. The first task is to identify the specific employment practice challenged, then there must be establishment of the disparate impact on a protected group, and finally there must be a demonstration that the disparity is the causal result of one or more employment practices); Albamarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII; observing that complaining party or class must make out prima facie case of disparate impact).

(n11)Footnote 6. See Lowe v. Monrovia (9th Cir. 1985) 775 F.2d 998, 1004 (Title VII), amended 784 F.2d 1407 (1986) .

(n12)Footnote 7. See Lowe v. Monrovia (9th Cir. 1985) 775 F.2d 998, 1004 (Title VII), amended 784 F.2d 1407 (1986) .

(n13)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 (four black employees sued under disparate impact theory, claiming discriminatory promotion practices); Hung Ping Wang v. Hoffman (9th Cir. 1982) 694 F.2d 1146 (upholding plaintiff's right to bring disparate impact claim based on promotion selection process).

(n14)Footnote 9. See Stout v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 1118, 1121 (plaintiff establishes prima facie case of disparate impact by showing significant disparate impact on protected class caused by specific, identified employment practice or selection criterion).

(n15)Footnote 10. Peters v. Lieuallen (9th Cir. 1984) 746 F.2d 1390, 1392 (Title VII).

(n16)Footnote 11. See Peters v. Lieuallen (9th Cir. 1984) 746 F.2d 1390, 1392 (Title VII).

(n17)Footnote 12. See Yartzoff v. Or., Emp. Div., State of (9th Cir. 1984) 745 F.2d 557, 559 (ADEA).

(n18)Footnote 12.1. Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2658, 2673-2681, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490 .

(n19)Footnote 12.2. Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2658, 2673, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490 .

(n20)Footnote 12.3. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1).

(n21)Footnote 12.4. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(l).

(n22)Footnote 12.5. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h) (giving and acting upon results of any professionally developed ability test does not violate Title VII provided test, its administration or action upon results is not designed, intended or used to discriminate because of race). Cf. AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898 .

(n23)Footnote 12.6. Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2658, 2677-2681, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490 .

(n24)Footnote 13. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k); Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 425-426, 430-432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n25)Footnote 14. See Laffey v. Northwest Airlines, Inc. (D.C. Cir. 1984) 740 F.2d 1071 .

(n26)Footnote 15. See 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.; see also appendix to 29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(b), (c); Frank v. United Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 216 F.3d 845, 855-856 .

(n27)Footnote 15.1. Smith v. City of Jackson, Mississippi (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1536, 161 L. Ed. 2d 410 (claim can be stated under ADEA by alleging disparate impact of employment policy on employees over age of 40).

(n28)Footnote 16. See City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 985-986, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 .

(n29)Footnote 17. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(3).

(n30)Footnote 18. See General Bldg. Contractors v. Pennsylvania (1982) 458 U.S. 375, 390-391, 102 S. Ct. 3141, 73 L. Ed. 2d 835 (disparate impact not applicable under 42 U.S.C. § 1981); Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 247-248, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (disparate impact not applicable under 42 U.S.C. § 1981); Griffin v. Breckenridge (1971) 403 U.S. 88, 102, 91 S. Ct. 1790, 29 L. Ed. 2d 338 (disparate impact not applicable under 42 U.S.C. § 1985); Buck v. Board of Elections of City of New York (2d Cir. 1976) 536 F.2d 522, 524 (same); cf. Sischo-Nownejad v. Merced Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1991) 934 F.2d 1104, 1112 (42 U.S.C. § 1983 requires proof of intent to discriminate). but see Paige v. State of California (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 1141, 1144-1150 (disparate impact analysis of relevant pool for statistical comparison in § 1983 class action alleging race discrimination in California Highway Patrol promotional process had discriminatory impact on non-white officers in violation of Title VII).

(n31)Footnote 19. Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 247-248, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 .

(n32)Footnote 20. Personnel Administrator of Mass. v. Feeney (1979) 442 U.S. 256, 272, 99 S. Ct. 2282, 60 L. Ed. 2d 870 .

(n33)Footnote 21-26. [Reserved]

(n34)Footnote 27. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (emphasis added); see also discussion in § 41.02[1].

(n35)Footnote 28. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(2) (emphasis added); see also discussion in § 41.02[1].

(n36)Footnote 29. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 426, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n37)Footnote 30. See, e.g., Colby v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (7th Cir. 1987) 811 F.2d 1119, 1126-1127 (considering argument that language "to discriminate" in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) requires proof of intentional discrimination, while "tend to deprive" language in 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(2) allows proof of disparate impact).

(n38)Footnote 31. See Nashville Gas Co. v. Satty (1977) 434 U.S. 136, 144, 98 S. Ct. 347, 54 L. Ed. 2d 356 (declining to decide whether, when confronted by facially neutral plan, it is necessary to prove intent to establish prima facie violation of 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1)).

(n39)Footnote 32. Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1485 .

(n40)Footnote 33. See Meritor Sav. Bank v. Vinson (1985) 477 U.S. 57, 64, 106 S. Ct. 2399 , 91 L. Ed. 2d. 2d 49.

(n41)Footnote 34. Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1485-1486 ; see also Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1983) 705 F.2d 1492, 1494 (holding without explanation that disparate impact theory is appropriate to case alleging discrimination in terms, conditions, and privileges of employment).

(n42)Footnote 35. See E.E.O.C. v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (6th Cir. 1988) 843 F.2d 249, 251-252 ; Colby v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (7th Cir. 1987) 811 F.2d 1119, 1126-1127 ; see also Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335-336 & n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n43)Footnote 36. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405-1406 (Title VII); Zahorik v. Cornell University (2d Cir. 1984) 729 F.2d 85, 95 ; but see Green v. USX Corp. (3d Cir. 1988) 843 F.2d 1511, 1521-1525 (analysis of multicomponent challenge to hiring system under disparate impact theory held proper).

(n44)Footnote 37. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n45)Footnote 38. See EEOC v. Trailways, Inc. (D. Colo. 1981) 530 F. Supp. 54 .

(n46)Footnote 39. See Boyd v. Ozark Air Lines, Inc. (E.D. Mo. 1976) 419 F. Supp. 1061 , aff'd, 568 F.2d 50 (8th Cir. 1977) .

(n47)Footnote 40. See Bailey v. Southeastern Area Joint Apprenticeship Committee (N.D. 1983) 561 F. Supp. 895 .

(n48)Footnote 41. See Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303-1304 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984) .

(n49)Footnote 42. See Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479 (en banc), ret'd to panel 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) .

(n50)Footnote 43. Compare, e.g., Hung Ping Wang v. Hoffman (9th Cir. 1982) 694 F.2d 1146, 1148-1149 (application of disparate impact theory to "subjective" practices) with Heagney v. University of Washington (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 1157, 1163 (disparate impact analysis inappropriate if not applied to "well-defined objective employment practices"); see also Zahorik v. Cornell University (2d Cir. 1984) 729 F.2d 85, 95-96 (Title VII; disparate impact theory applied to "subjective criteria"); Page v. U.S. Industries, Inc. (5th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1038, 1045-1046 (disparate impact theory may be applied to "subjective criteria"); Grant v. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (2d Cir. 1980) 635 F.2d 1007, 1017-1020 , cert. denied, 452 U.S. 940 (1981) (Title VII; same); Bunch v. Bullard (5th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 384, 394 (Title VII; "subjective" practices fitting within disparate treatment analysis, rather than disparate impact analysis); E.E.O.C. v. Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond (4th Cir. 1983) 698 F.2d 633, 639 , rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Cooper v. Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond (1984) 467 U.S. 867, 104 S. Ct. 2794, 81 L. Ed. 2d 718 (Title VII; disparate treatment not applicable when there is no "objective standard, applied evenly and automatically"); Pope v. City of Hickory, N.C. (4th Cir. 1982) 679 F.2d 20, 22 (Title VII; disparate impact as applicable only to "specific procedure").

(n51)Footnote 44. Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 .

(n52)Footnote 45. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 991, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII) .

(n53)Footnote 46. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n54)Footnote 47. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 989-990, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII) .

(n55)Footnote 48. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 990, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII) .

(n56)Footnote 49. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 990, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII) .

(n57)Footnote 50. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 1006-1007, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII) . For a detailed discussion relating to validity studies, see discussion in § 41.45[2].

(n58)Footnote 51. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 991-993, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII; opinion of O'Connor, J.; Rehnquist, C.J., White, Scalia, JJ., concurring).

(n59)Footnote 52. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 999, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII; opinion of O'Connor, J.; Rehnquist, C.J., White, Scalia, JJ., concurring). For discussion relating to the "manifest relationship" standard, see [4], below.

(n60)Footnote 53. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 999, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII; O'Connor, J.; Rehnquist, C.J., White, Scalia, JJ., concurring; quoting Furnco Construction Corp. v. Waters (1978) 438 U.S. 567, 578, 98 S. Ct. 2943, 57 L. Ed. 2d 957 (Title VII)) .

(n61)Footnote 54. E.E.O.C. v. Rath Packing Co. (8th Cir. 1986) 787 F.2d 318, 328 , cert. denied, (1986) 479 U.S. 910 (quoting Stewart v. General Motors Corp. (7th Cir. 1976) 542 F.2d 445).

41 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart C. Disparate Impact

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.21

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.21 Proof: Establishing Liability Under Disparate Impact Theory

[1] Discriminatory Intent Need Not Be Shown

Unlike the disparate treatment theory,ⁿ¹ the disparate impact theory does not require proof of discriminatory intent.ⁿ² In Griggs v. Duke Power Co.,ⁿ³ the United States Supreme Court explained that Title VII is directed to the consequences of employment practices, not simply the motivation.ⁿ⁴ Title VII requires "the removal of artificial, arbitrary, and unnecessary barriers to employment when the barriers operate invidiously to discriminate on the basis of racial or other impermissible classification."ⁿ⁵ Thus, "good intent or absence of discriminatory intent does not redeem employment procedures or testing mechanisms that operate as 'built-in headwinds' for minority groups and are unrelated to measuring job capability."ⁿ⁶

[2] Order and Burden of Proof

Under Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991,ⁿ⁷ a complaining partyⁿ⁸ may establish an unlawful employment practice based on disparate impact in one of two ways:

1. The complaining party demonstrates that a respondentⁿ⁹ uses a particular employment practice that causes a disparate impact on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin (as further discussed in [3], below), or age,^{n9.1} and the respondent fails to demonstrate that the challenged practice is job related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity (as further discussed in [4], below);ⁿ¹⁰ or
2. The complaining party demonstrates that there is an alternative employment practice with less adverse impact (as further discussed in [5], below).ⁿ¹¹

"Demonstrate," for the above purposes, means meeting the burdens of production of evidence and persuasion.ⁿ¹²

Similar rules regarding proof of disparate impact and business necessity apply under the ADA,ⁿ¹³ the ADEA,ⁿ¹⁴ and the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁵

[3] Establishing Prima Facie Case of "Significant" Adverse Impact

[a] Generally

A plaintiff must initially establish a prima facie case by showing that an employment practice has a "significant adverse impact" on a protected classification.ⁿ¹⁶ This showing appears to be less exacting than the "gross disparity" showing required under the disparate treatment/pattern and practice theory.ⁿ¹⁷ Although the meaning of "significant" adverse impact does vary depending on the facts of a case and the courts that apply the standard,ⁿ¹⁸ the statistical showing need not rise to the level of "gross disparity."ⁿ¹⁹ Whether plaintiff is qualified for a specific position is not relevant to the issue of disparate impact.ⁿ²⁰

Disparate impact is not proved merely because all members of a disadvantaged subgroup are also members of a protected group. The mere fact that each person affected by a practice or policy is also a member of a protected group does not establish a disparate impact.^{n20.1} Thus, for example, in Carter v. CB Richard Ellis, Inc.,^{n20.2} a woman over the age of 40, who had attained the job title of administrative manager, sued her employer based on the employer's reorganization, which significantly changed the job description of administrative managers, resulting in a demotion and reduction in salary. All of the people affected by the reorganization were women and most were over 40 years old. The court found that plaintiff failed to establish a prima facie case of disparate impact discrimination because her data set was incomplete. Plaintiff offered no evidence regarding the gender or age composition of all of the employer's 10,000 employees; the evidence was entirely about the effect of the reorganization on the administrative managers, which is not a group protected by law. Even more fundamentally, plaintiff did not present evidence of the total impact on women or those over 40.

A plaintiff must actually prove discriminatory impact, rather than merely an inference of discriminatory impact.ⁿ²¹ The plaintiff need not prove discrimination with "scientific certainty," but must prove the charge by a preponderance of the evidence.^{n21.1}

A plaintiff may use reliable statistical data to show adverse impact.ⁿ²² In a proper case, statistical data alone may be adequate to prove causation.ⁿ²³ However, the statistical disparities must be sufficiently substantial to raise an inference of causation.ⁿ²⁴ The probative value of any statistical comparison is limited by a small available sample.ⁿ²⁵ The first step in a statistical analysis is to identify the base population for comparison. Generally, the appropriate population is the applicant pool or relevant labor market from which the positions at issue are filled.ⁿ²⁶ The composition of the applicant pool or relevant labor market is then compared to the composition of the successful applicants.ⁿ²⁷ In using statistical data, the law does not require the near-impossible standard of eliminating all possible nondiscriminatory factors.ⁿ²⁸

The primary statistical comparison used in cases challenging objective selection devicesⁿ²⁹ is "pass-fail" rate data. Such data compares the percentage of the protected class members who "pass" with the success rate for majority group members.ⁿ³⁰

Statistical comparisons are also probative in cases challenging overall hiring procedures that include both objective and subjective devices.ⁿ³¹ The statistical evidence in such cases, as in pattern or practice disparate treatment cases,ⁿ³² usually compares a protected class representation in the work force with its representation in a relevant pool. Generally, the proper comparison is between the composition of "at-issue" jobs (i.e., those that are alleged to involve discrimination) and the composition of the qualified population in the relevant labor market.ⁿ³³ If labor market statistics are difficult or impossible to obtain, however, other statistics--such as measures indicating the composition of otherwise qualified applicants--are equally probative.ⁿ³⁴

In Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio,ⁿ³⁵ plaintiffs brought a Title VII action against a cannery, alleging that the cannery's hiring practices had a disparate impact on racial minorities, resulting in a disproportionately low percentage of nonwhites being hired for higher paid office jobs. In support of their disparate impact claim, plaintiffs relied, in part, on a statistical comparison between the percentage of unskilled cannery workers who were nonwhite and the percentage of skilled office workers who were nonwhite. The United States Supreme Court held that plaintiffs' statistical comparison did not establish a prima facie case of disparate impact.ⁿ³⁶ The Court explained that, with respect to "at-issue" skilled jobs, the cannery's unskilled work force did not reflect the pool of qualified job applicants or the qualified population of the labor market for the skilled jobs.ⁿ³⁷

Under Title VII, the plaintiff must generally prove that a particular challenged employment practice causes a disparate impact on a protected group.ⁿ³⁸ For example, the nonadverse results of ultimate promotion decisions cannot refute a prima facie case of disparate impact at a dispositive interview selection stage.ⁿ³⁹ However, if the plaintiff can demonstrate to the court that the elements of the employer's decision-making process are not capable of separation for analysis, the decision-making process may be analyzed as one employment practice.ⁿ⁴⁰ This provision, which was added by the Civil Rights Act of 1991,ⁿ⁴¹ relaxes the rule set forth in Wards Cove, in which the Court had held that the plaintiff must demonstrate in all cases that application of a specific or particular employment practice or practices created the disparate impact and that disparate impact may not be proved by showing that the employer's practices created a disparate impact "at the bottom line."ⁿ⁴²

For discussions of various statistical methods used to measure disparity, see [b] and [c], below.

[b] Federal Uniform Guidelines

One measure of "significant adverse impact" derives from the Uniform Guidelines on Employment Selection Proceduresⁿ⁴³ adopted by the EEOC, the Departments of Labor and Justice and the federal Civil Service Commission.ⁿ⁴⁴ Under the guidelines, a selection rate for any race, sex, or ethnic group that is less than 80 percent of the rate for the group with the highest rate will generally be regarded by the federal enforcement agencies as evidence of adverse impact.ⁿ⁴⁵ For example, if 50 percent of the applicants of one race, sex, or ethnic group passes a preemployment test while only 40 percent of another such group passes, there is no evidence of adverse impact because the pass rate for the latter group is 80 percent of the pass rate for the former group.

The "80 percent rule" is a "rule of thumb" because a smaller difference (for example, a 90 percent selection rate) may constitute a significant adverse impact if the difference is significant in both statistical and practical terms, or if an employer's actions disproportionately discourage applicants who belong to a particular protected group.ⁿ⁴⁶ Conversely, greater differences (e.g., a 70 percent selection rate) may not constitute significant adverse impact when they are based on small numbers and are not statistically significant, or if special recruiting or other programs cause the pool of candidates belonging to a protected class to be atypical of the normal pool of applicants from that group.ⁿ⁴⁷ According to the Ninth Circuit, a combination of small sample size and small success rate may call into question the statistical significance of a violation of the "80 percent rule."ⁿ⁴⁸

As discussed in Chapter 40, the guidelines are not legally binding on federal courts because they are not formal regulations with the force of law.ⁿ⁴⁹ Nevertheless, the guidelines are entitled to "great deference,"ⁿ⁵⁰ and the "80 percent rule," although criticized by some courts and commentators,ⁿ⁵¹ is widely used in Title VII litigation. In California, the guidelines have been adopted by the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC),ⁿ⁵² and therefore govern the determination of adverse impact in cases brought under the FEHA.ⁿ⁵³ For a detailed discussion relating to the purpose and application of the EEOC guidelines, see Chapter 40.

The guidelines also provide that if an employer's selection process in its entirety does not have an adverse impact, federal enforcement agencies will not take enforcement action against any component of the process that has an adverse impact.ⁿ⁵⁴ This appears to be inconsistent with the United States Supreme Court decision in Connecticut v. Teal,ⁿ⁵⁵ which held that nondiscriminatory "bottom-line" results of employer practices do not preclude a Title VII challenge if a discriminatory component of that process denies protected individuals employment opportunities at any stage.ⁿ⁵⁶ However, the Teal Court explained that the "bottom-line" concept in the guidelines only applies to the initiation of agency enforcement action, and does not address the underlying question of law. Individuals who are denied employment opportunities because of a particular component in a procedure that, as a whole, has no adverse impact, retain the right to proceed through the appropriate agencies and into federal court.ⁿ⁵⁷

[c] Other Statistical Methods

Another measure of "significant adverse impact" derives from the statistical concept of "standard deviation" enunciated by the United States Supreme Court in Castaneda v. Partida,ⁿ⁵⁸ an equal protection jury selection case, which a number of federal courts have applied to measure the significance of statistical disparities in an employer's workforce.ⁿ⁵⁹

The "standard deviation" test involves a comparison between the actual rate of selection in a work force and an expected rate of selection. If the difference between the two rates is greater than two or three "standard deviations," a statistician would not consider the difference to be random, and would infer discrimination.ⁿ⁶⁰ For example, if there are 5000 qualified applicants in a pool, comprised of 3000 majority group members and 2000 minority group members, the expected rate of selection for 500 employment positions would be 300 majority group members and 200 minority group members. If, however, only 100 minority group members are hired, there is a deviation of 100 from the expected rate of selection. A "standard deviation" is defined in Castaneda as the square root of the product of the total number in the sample (500) times the probability of selecting a minority group member (40%) times the probability of selecting a majority group member (60%).ⁿ⁶¹ Therefore, in the foregoing example, a "standard deviation" is the square root of 120, which is approximately 10.95. Thus, the difference of 100 in the actual selection is approximately nine standard deviations, and the employment practice would be deemed to have a significant adverse impact.ⁿ⁶² In Clady v. County of Los Angeles,ⁿ⁶³ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, citing *Contreras v. City of Los Angeles*ⁿ⁶⁴ and *Craig v. County of Los Angeles*ⁿ⁶⁵ with approval, declared that "[w]ithout endorsing either [the Uniform Guidelines or the standard deviation] method, this circuit analyzes whether [a] statistical disparity is 'substantial' or 'significant' in a given case."ⁿ⁶⁶ Both Contreras and Craig relied on simple percentage comparisons to determine the significance of a particular discriminatory impact. Thus, in Craig, the court of appeals held that statistics showing that 33 percent of the protected class members who took a required written examination failed, while only 13 percent of the majority class members failed, were sufficient to establish a significant adverse impact.ⁿ⁶⁷ By contrast, in Contreras, although statistical evidence showed that 55 percent of the majority class members passed a required written examination while only 29.4 percent of the protected class members passed, the figures "were not statistically significant when tested at a 0.05 level of significance" because the sample on which the statistics were based was too small.ⁿ⁶⁸ The court held that judges may accept some statistical inferences and reject others based on their perception of the oral and documentary evidence.ⁿ⁶⁹

In another Ninth Circuit case, involving a "pattern or practice" of sex discrimination,ⁿ⁷⁰ the court relied on a "regression analysis," which isolates the influence of a particular independent variable (e.g., sex) on a dependent variable (e.g., salary). The analysis uses an algebraic formula to express the influence of the independent variable on the average level of the dependent variable.ⁿ⁷¹

From the foregoing cases, it seems that the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals will determine "significant" adverse impact on a case-by-case basis, without applying any set formula.

[4] Establishing "Job-Relatedness" and "Business Necessity"

Under Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991, if a plaintiff establishes that an employment practice has a "significant" adverse impact on a protected class,ⁿ⁷² the employer must either refute the plaintiff's evidence and demonstrate that the employment practice does not have a disparate impactⁿ⁷³ or demonstrate that the challenged practice is "job related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity."ⁿ⁷⁴ "Demonstrate," for the above purposes, means meeting the burdens of production of evidence and persuasion.ⁿ⁷⁵ This definition, which was added by the Civil Rights Act of 1991,ⁿ⁷⁶ was intended to overrule the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio,ⁿ⁷⁷ in which the Court had held that the employer had only the burden of producing evidence regarding a business justification for the challenged employment practice and that the burden of persuasion remained at all times with the plaintiff.ⁿ⁷⁸

Similarly, under the FEHA, the burden of persuasion regarding business necessity appears to be on the defendant employer.ⁿ⁷⁹ "Business necessity" is also set forth as a "defense" under the ADA, but the ADA does not clearly set forth the burden of proof regarding that defense.ⁿ⁸⁰

Title VII does not contain express definitions of "business necessity" or "job related," but one of the express purposes of the Civil Rights Act of 1991 was to codify the concepts of "business necessity" and "job related" enunciated by the U.S. Supreme Court in Griggs v. Duke Power Co.,ⁿ⁸¹ and in other Supreme Court decisions prior to Wards Cove.ⁿ⁸² In Wards Cove, the Court had indicated that an employment practice with a disparate impact was justified under Title VII if it merely "serve[d], in a significant way, the legitimate employment goals of the employer."ⁿ⁸³ Furthermore, the Wards Cove Court held that although "an insubstantial justification ... will not suffice, ... there is no requirement that the challenged practice be 'essential' or 'indispensable' to the employer's business...".ⁿ⁸⁴ However, under the Civil Rights Act of 1991, the Wards Cove standard is no longer applicable, and the standard for justifying an employment practice will instead be governed by Griggs and other pre-Wards Cove decisions.

Under the Griggs "business necessity" test, any given employment requirement must have "a manifest relationship to the employment in question."ⁿ⁸⁵ Griggs engendered some confusion about what is required by "business necessity," but in the Ninth Circuit, the essence of "business necessity" has been "job-relatedness."ⁿ⁸⁶ However, the United States Supreme Court has consistently used the "manifest relationship" standard in cases in which the Court has implicitly approved employment practices that are neither required by nor necessary to the employer's legitimate interests.ⁿ⁸⁷

Under the "manifest relationship" standard, "business necessity/job-relatedness" means that an employment practice predicts, or significantly correlates with, important methods of work behavior that comprise, or are relevant to, the job.ⁿ⁸⁸ Thus, a disparate impact is tolerable only if it is an "incidental product" of a selection device that genuinely predicts or significantly correlates with successful job performance.ⁿ⁸⁹ The greater the adverse impact, the higher the correlation with job performance required to justify the practice.ⁿ⁹⁰

The employer must show that a test or other selection device actually measures skills, knowledge, or ability required for successful performance of a particular job.ⁿ⁹¹ For example, the requirement of a certain number of years of experience on the job may not necessarily bear a "manifest relationship" to the job,ⁿ⁹² nor would an employer's administrative convenience be sufficient in itself to justify an adverse impact.ⁿ⁹³ In addition, it is not enough simply to identify some other facially nondiscriminatory factor that correlates with the alleged disparate impact. For example, an employer does not escape the obligation to validate by offering evidence that a disparity between men and women on a promotion exam is attributable to the fact that on average women have fewer years of experience and are more likely to be first-time test-takers than men. Rather, the employer must show that the exam is a realistic measure of job performance.ⁿ⁹⁴

The process involved in establishing "business necessity/job-relatedness" is called "validation."ⁿ⁹⁵ Statistical analysis is critical to "validation," and several professionally acceptable techniques may be used.ⁿ⁹⁶ For example, the federal Uniform Guidelinesⁿ⁹⁷ provide detailed technical standards for validity studies.ⁿ⁹⁸ *Clady v. County of Los Angeles*ⁿ⁹⁹ involved a method ("criterion-related validation") that seeks a significant positive correlation between success on a test and success on some measure of job performance.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ The method measures the degree of correlation with a statistical concept called a "correlation coefficient."ⁿ¹⁰¹ Although the federal Uniform Guidelines state that no minimum correlation coefficient applies to all employment situations,ⁿ¹⁰² the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has relied on a standard of the American Psychological Association (APA) Division of Organizational and Industrial Psychology (Division 14), which does attempt to establish such guidelines.ⁿ¹⁰³ Under the APA guide, correlation coefficients range from -1.0 (perfect negative correlation) to +1.0 (perfect positive correlation). The guide provides that a +0.20 correlation between a single employment test and a measure of job performance is often high enough to be useful; that such correlations rarely exceed +0.50; that a correlation of +0.40 is ordinarily very good; and that most personnel research workers are usually pleased with a correlation of +0.30.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

For additional discussion of validation of employee selection procedures and tests, see § 41.45[2]. For further discussion relating to "business necessity" as a defense, see § 41.95.

[5] Establishing "Pretext" or Alternative With Less Adverse Impact

Under Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991, disparate impact is also established if "the complaining party makes the demonstration described in Title 42 United States Code Section 2000e-2(k)(1)(C) with respect to an alternative employment practice and the respondent refuses to adopt such alternative employment practice."ⁿ¹⁰⁵ Title 42 United States Code Section 2000e-2(k)(1)(C) provides that "[t]he demonstration referred to ... shall be in accordance with the law as it existed on June 4, 1989 [the day before Wards Cove was decided], with respect to the concept of 'alternative employment practice.' "

Under prior law, if the employer meets the "manifest relationship" standard,ⁿ¹⁰⁶ a plaintiff may still prevail if he or she shows that a test or selection criterion was used as a pretext for discrimination.ⁿ¹⁰⁷ Alternatively, a plaintiff may show that a practice allegedly based on legitimate business reasons was not a business necessity by establishing that alternative tests or selection devices exist that would have comparable business utility and less adverse impact.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ Factors such as the cost or other burdens of proposed alternatives are relevant in determining whether the alternatives are equally as effective as a challenged practice.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ The plaintiff has the burden of persuasion that there is a less discriminatory alternative.ⁿ¹¹⁰

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

It is not clear whether an employer may rely on cost considerations to defend against a plaintiff's contentions regarding the suitability of alternative employment practices under the Civil Rights Act of 1991. Employers can be expected to rely on cases such as Clady v. County of Los Angeles ⁿ¹¹¹ and Chrisner v. Complete Auto Transit, Inc. ⁿ¹¹² Employees likely will cite to Los Angeles Dept. of W & P v. Manhart. ⁿ¹¹³ Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Impact General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Impact Coverage & Definitions Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Impact Proof General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Impact Proof Burdens of Proof

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in § 41.11[1][a].

(n2)Footnote 2. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) ; Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII) ; Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1291(ADEA) ; Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1427 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); City and County of San Francisco v. Fair

Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 985, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (FEHA) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, §§ 104, 105.

(n8)Footnote 8. The term "complaining party" under Title VII means the EEOC, the Attorney General, or a person who may bring an action or proceeding under Title VII. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(l) .

(n9)Footnote 9. The term "respondent" under Title VII means an employer, employment agency, labor organization, joint labor-management committee controlling apprenticeship or other training or retraining program, including an on-the-job training program, or Federal entity subject to 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(n).

(n10)Footnote 9.1. See Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 740, 749 (statistical analysis of RIF tended to show at least some relationship between age and termination); Katz v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 831, 835 .

(n11)Footnote 10. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(i).

(n12)Footnote 11. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(ii).

(n13)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(m).

(n14)Footnote 13. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12112(b)(1)-(3), (6), 12113(a).

(n15)Footnote 14. See generally Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1424 (ADEA); but see Markham v. Geller (1981) 451 U.S. 945, 947, 101 S. Ct. 2028, 68 L. Ed. 2d 332 (Rehnquist, J., dissenting from denial of certiorari; arguing that disparate impact analysis is inapplicable to ADEA cases).

(n16)Footnote 15. See City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 989, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(b) (FEHC regulations).

(n17)Footnote 16. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A), (B); Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 446, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 (Title VII) ; Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII) ; see also Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 740, 749-750 (statistical analysis of RIF tended to show at least some relationship between age and termination, but individual's disparate impact claim failed because he was not terminated as part of RIF); Paige v. State of California (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 1141, 1144-1145 (§ 1983); Katz v. Regents of the University of California (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 831, 835 .

(n18)Footnote 17. See Hazelwood School District v. United States (1977) 433 U.S. 299, 307-308, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768 (Title VII) .

(n19)Footnote 18. See Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1424 (ADEA; "significance" or "substantiality" of numerical disparities is judged on case-by-case basis); see also discussion in [b] and [c], below.

(n20)Footnote 19. See Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1278 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII); see also City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing

Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 987, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (FEHA; statistics showing significant disparity alone may constitute prima facie proof of discrimination under disparate impact theory). In Segar, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia explained that the "gross disparity" standard applies when a plaintiff relies on "population/workforce" comparisons and lacks any other evidence. Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1278, cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII); for a discussion of "population/workforce" statistical comparisons, see § 41.11[2]. The "gross disparity" rule is appropriate for such comparisons because they are not "finely tuned," and yield only rough evidence of discrimination. Segar v. Smith (D.C. Cir. 1984) 238 U.S. App. D.C. 103, 738 F.2d 1249, 1278, cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1115 (1985) (Title VII). However, the "pass/fail" statistics generally used in disparate impact claims are more "finely tuned," and thus, may create a prima facie case of discrimination if they establish a "significantly" disproportionate selection rate.

(n21)Footnote 20. Foss v. Thompson (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 1131, 1134 (Title VII).

(n22)Footnote 20.1. Carter v. CB Richard Ellis, Inc. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 1324. See also Katz v. Regents of University of California (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 831 (early retirement offered to participants in one public retirement plan and not another was not age discrimination, where taking into account total population of employees only 27 percent were adversely affected, which statistical evidence was insufficient to raise inference that disparate impact fell on employees by virtue of their membership in protected age group, and where factor that determined employees' eligibility to participate in favored plan was not employee's age, but whether employee was member of preferred plan); Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1424 (elimination of duplicative vice presidents in special assets division following bank merger was not prima facie evidence of disparate impact discrimination, even though older persons were terminated at higher rate than younger persons); Beale v. GTE California (C.D. Cal. 1996) 999 F. Supp. 1312, 1323 (prima facie case of disparate impact age and gender discrimination not proved where entire category of workers known as frame maintainers was eliminated, even though 97 percent were women and 98 percent were over 40, because, inter alia, plaintiff failed to provide data about gender and age of employees remaining after reduction in force); Frank v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 805, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 430, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 530, *21-*34 (FEHA; evidence that all county police officers, 70 percent of whom were minority, were paid less and received fewer benefits than sheriff's deputies, 70 percent of whom were Caucasian, did not establish basis for disparate impact claim, where county's policies were to pay class members, Caucasian and minority alike, less because they were members of county police rather than sheriff's deputies, and plaintiffs presented no evidence that county established policies that worked as barrier or deterrent to minority application to and hiring by sheriff).

(n23)Footnote 20.2. Carter v. CB Richard Ellis, Inc. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 1324-1326.

(n24)Footnote 21. Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1421 (ADEA).

(n25)Footnote 21.1. Paige v. State of California (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 1141, 1145 n.4 (§ 1983).

(n26)Footnote 22. See Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1427, cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); see also Katz v. Regents of the University of California (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 831, 836 (ADEA; statistical evidence insufficient to raise inference that disparate impact fell on employees by virtue of membership in protected group); Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1424 (ADEA; statistical evidence must be substantial enough to raise inference of causation). See also Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1224 (Title VII; prima facie case of disparate impact does not require statistical evidence to be uncontroverted).

(n27)Footnote 23. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 650, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733.

(n28)Footnote 24. Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 995, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d

827 ; Paige v. State of California (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 1141, 1145 (§ 1983); Stout v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 1118, 1122 ; see also Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1428-1429 .

(n29)Footnote 25. Stout v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 1118, 1123 (sample involving six female applicants in pool of 38 likely applicants too small to produce statistically significant results); see Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 996-997, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (statistical evidence may not be probative if based on small or incomplete data set); Contreras v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1272-1273 (discounting probative value of statistical sample consisting of 57 test takers, 17 of whom belonged in plaintiffs' protected class); Morita v. Southern Cal. Permanente Med. Group (9th Cir. 1976) 541 F.2d 217, 219-220 (statistical evidence derived from extremely small universe has little predictive value and must be disregarded; finding 8-case sample too small), quoting Harper v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (8th Cir. 1975) 525 F.2d 409, 412 .

(n30)Footnote 26. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 650, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 ; Paige v. State of California (9th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 1141, 1144-1147 (in class action challenging promotional practices of Highway Patrol as racially discriminatory, internal applicant pool was proper comparative group for disparate impact analysis); Hemmings v. Tidyman's Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 285 F.3d 1174, 1186-1187 (in action challenging compensation and promotion practices of employer which filled higher management by internal promotions, potential applicant pool--and thus appropriate comparison pool for promotions to upper and middle management jobs--was current employees in lower management positions).

(n31)Footnote 27. Stout v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 1118, 1123 (in context of promotions, appropriate comparison is between composition of candidates seeking promotion and composition of those actually promoted); see Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 650-651, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 ; Hazelwood Sch. Dist. v. United States (1977) 433 U.S. 299, 308, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768 (appropriate comparison was between racial composition of qualified public school teachers in relevant labor market and racial composition of school's teaching staff).

(n32)Footnote 28. Hemmings v. Tidyman's Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 285 F.3d 1174, 1186 ; see Bazemore v. Friday (1986) 478 U.S. 385, 400, 106 S. Ct. 3000, 92 L. Ed. 2d 315 .

(n33)Footnote 29. See discussion in § 41.20[3], above.

(n34)Footnote 30. See Larson, Employment Discrimination, ch. 10, § 50.85(a); Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law, ch. 36 (BNA 2d ed. 1983).

(n35)Footnote 31. See Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 650, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (Title VII) ; see also discussion in § 41.20[3], above.

(n36)Footnote 32. See discussion in § 41.11[2].

(n37)Footnote 33. Foss v. Thompson (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 1131, 1134 (Title VII; male plaintiff failed to establish prima facie case of disparate impact of nursing degree requirement on males because plaintiff's showing left to conjecture whether among pool of individuals qualified for position, gender disparity resulting from nursing degree requirement would be sufficiently significant to support prima facie case).

(n38)Footnote 34. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 650-651, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (Title VII) .

(n39)Footnote 35. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 .

(n40)Footnote 36. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 651-655, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 .

(n41)Footnote 37. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 651, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 .

(n42)Footnote 38. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(i), (B)(i); see also Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 656-657, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 . See, e.g., Stout v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 1118, 1122, 1124-1125 (district court erroneously focused on final results of promotion process, where plaintiffs challenged intermediate stage that functioned as pass or fail barrier to further consideration; further, plaintiffs failed to identify specific employment practice that disproportionately excluded female applicants because of gender).

(n43)Footnote 39. See Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 452, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 2533, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 ; Stout v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 1118, 1122 .

(n44)Footnote 40. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(B)(i); see Stout v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 1118, 1122-1123 (results of two rounds of interviews at selection stage for promotion could not be analytically separated for purposes of disparate impact analysis; although interview stage as a whole functioned as pass/fail barrier to further consideration for promotion, there was no such barrier between two screening rounds, and failure to be selected in first round did not foreclose consideration for interview in second round).

(n45)Footnote 41. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 105(a) added as 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k).

(n46)Footnote 42. See Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 656-657, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 . It has been held that the Civil Rights Act of 1991 does not apply retroactively to the Wards Cove case itself, even though this holding in Wards Cove was effectively reversed by the Civil Rights Act of 1991. See Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1485, 1496 .

(n47)Footnote 43. 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.1-1607.18.

(n48)Footnote 44. See Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1428 (Title VII); 43 Fed. Reg. 38, 291, 38, 294 (1978) (introducing and enacting Uniform Guidelines).

(n49)Footnote 45. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.4(D). See, e.g., Stout v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 1118, 1123 (Title VII; no disparate impact shown where selection rate for female applicants to be interviewed was 33 percent (2 of 6) and rate for male applicants was 41 percent (13 of 32), so that rate of selection for women was 81 percent of rate of interview for men); Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1225 (Title VII; two promotion tests violated "80 percent rule" because pass rate for women on first test was only 66 percent of men's (with 53 percent promotion rate) and on second test was only 67 percent of men's (with 66 percent promotion rate)).

(n50)Footnote 46. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.4(D); see Watson v. Forth Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 995-996, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (80 percent (also referred to as four-fifths rule) is mere rule of thumb rather than mechanical substitute for requisite case-by-case determination); see also Harris v. Civil Serv. Comm'n (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1368-1369, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366 (commission has no legal duty to adopt, use, or validate tests when undisputed evidence showed dramatic disparate impact (almost one-half) far below invalidity threshold of four-fifths rule).

(n51)Footnote 47. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.4(D).

(n52)Footnote 48. Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1226 (Title VII).

(n53)Footnote 49. See General Elec. Co. v. Gilbert (1976) 429 U.S. 125, 141-142, 97 S. Ct. 401, 50 L. Ed. 2d 343 (Title VII) ; Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1428 (Title VII) ; see also Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1225 (Title VII).

(n54)Footnote 50. Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 431, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII) ; Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1281 (Title VII) ; Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 664 (Title VII).

(n55)Footnote 51. See Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1428 ,cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) ; Shoben, Differential Pass-Fail Rates in Employment Testing: Statistical Proof Under Title VII, 91 Harv. L. Rev. 793, 805-811 (1978) (rule criticized because it does not account for samples of varying size). but see Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1225 (Title VII; acknowledging that court has criticized "80 percent rule," but while guidelines are not dispositive, they are instructive).

(n56)Footnote 52. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4.

(n57)Footnote 53. See City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 986 n.8, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716(FEHA) ; Harris v. Civil Serv. Comm'n (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1368-1369, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366 (commission has no legal duty to adopt, use, or validate tests when undisputed evidence showed dramatic disparate impact (almost one-half) far below invalidity threshold of four-fifths rule); see also Gov. Code § 12935(a)(1) (FEHC as authorized to interpret FEHA by adopting "suitable rules, regulations, and standards").

(n58)Footnote 54. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.4(C).

(n59)Footnote 55. Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 .

(n60)Footnote 56. See Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 448, 451, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 (invalidating written examination that had discriminatory impact on African-American employees, although result of entire hiring process reflected no adverse impact); Harris v. Civil Serv. Comm'n (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1370, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366 ("bottom line" evidence of one group's adequate representation does not excuse employment practice that has disparate impact on group; court cannot compel validation study through administrative mandate for benefit of one protected group when agency has properly exercised discretion to cancel employment test shown to have disparate impact on another protected group); see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(2) (employers prohibited from limiting or classifying employees or applicants in any way that denies employment opportunities).

(n61)Footnote 57. See Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 453 n.12, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 (Title VII) .

(n62)Footnote 58. Castaneda v. Partida (1977) 430 U.S. 482 n.17, 496, 97 S. Ct. 1272, 51 L. Ed. 2d 498 .

(n63)Footnote 59. See, e.g., Rivera v. City of Wichita Falls (5th Cir. 1982) 665 F.2d 531, 536 n.7 ; Guardians Ass'n of New York City v. Civil Serv. (2d Cir. 1980) 630 F.2d 79, 86-87 .

(n64)Footnote 60. Hazelwood Sch. Dist. v. United States (1977) 433 U.S. 299, 308 n.14, 97 S. Ct. 2736, 53 L. Ed. 2d 768 (Title VII) .

(n65)Footnote 61. Castaneda v. Partida (1977) 430 U.S. 482, 496 n.17, 97 S. Ct. 1272, 51 L. Ed. 2d 498 .

(n66)Footnote 62. See Larson, Employment Discrimination, ch. 10, § 50.86(b).

(n67)Footnote 63. Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421 (Title VII).

(n68)Footnote 64. Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267 (Title VII).

(n69)Footnote 65. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659 (Title VII).

(n70)Footnote 66. Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1428-1429 (Title VII).

(n71)Footnote 67. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (1981) (Title VII).

(n72)Footnote 68. Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1272-1273 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII). The Contreras court explained that the existence of a 0.05 level of significance means that the disparate results of the written test would be the product of chance only one time in 20. Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1273 n.3 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII). The federal Uniform Guidelines use the 0.05 significance threshold in determining the probative value of statistical test validation studies. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14B(5).

(n73)Footnote 69. Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1273 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII).

(n74)Footnote 70. See discussion in § 41.11[2].

(n75)Footnote 71. See E.E.O.C. v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 577 & n.3 (Title VII).

(n76)Footnote 72. See discussion in [3], above.

(n77)Footnote 73. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(B)(ii).

(n78)Footnote 74. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(i).

(n79)Footnote 75. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(m).

(n80)Footnote 76. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 104; 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)-(n).

(n81)Footnote 77. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 . However, it has been held that the Civil Rights Act of 1991 does not apply retroactively to the Wards Cove case itself, even though this holding in Wards Cove was effectively reversed by the Civil Rights Act of 1991. See Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1485, 1496 .

(n82)Footnote 78. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 659-660, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 .

(n83)Footnote 79. See City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 989, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 ; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.7(b) (FEHC regulations).

(n84)Footnote 80. See 42 U.S.C. § 12113(a) ("business necessity" is express defense to disability discrimination under ADA). For discussion of the ADA, see §§ 41.02[3], 41.32; for "business necessity," see § 41.95.

(n85)Footnote 81. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n86)Footnote 82. Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 3(2); see also Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 2(2) (congressional finding that Wards Cove decision had weakened the scope and effectiveness of federal civil rights protections).

(n87)Footnote 83. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 659, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 .

(n88)Footnote 84. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 659, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d

733 . However, it has been held that the Civil Rights Act of 1991 does not apply retroactively to the Wards Cove case itself, even though this holding in Wards Cove was effectively reversed by the Civil Rights Act of 1991. Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1485, 1496 .

(n89)Footnote 85. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII) .

(n90)Footnote 86. See Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1276, 1278 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII; "job related" and "business necessity" as interchangeable terms representing same standard); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12113(a) ("business necessity" as shown by "job-relatedness" under ADA); Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425 (Title VII; employer's burden as proving "job-relatedness"); Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1424 (ADEA); Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1430 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII; burden as on employer to prove job-relatedness). It seems that the confusion was created by a footnote in Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 331 n.14, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 (Title VII) , in which the United States Supreme Court stated that a discriminatory employment practice that is "necessary to safe and efficient job performance" would survive a Title VII challenge. Some courts interpreted this as an additional requirement for job-relatedness, thus making the employer's burden more severe; see, e.g., E.E.O.C. v. Rath Packing Co. (8th Cir. 1986) 787 F.2d 318, 327 n.10, 331-333 (Title VII); Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1376 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 928 (1980) (Title VII). However, in Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1279 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021(1982) (Title VII), the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals construed the Dothard footnote as unnecessary because the text of the Supreme Court's opinion relied on the broader "manifest relationship" standard. See Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 329, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 (Title VII) .

(n91)Footnote 87. See New York City Transit Authority v. Beazer (1979) 440 U.S. 568, 587, 99 S. Ct. 1355, 59 L. Ed. 2d 587 (Title VII; "manifest relationship" demonstrated when goals of safety and efficiency are significantly served by--even if they do not require--employer's rule against hiring methadone users).

(n92)Footnote 88. Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1430 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1280 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII); see City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 989-990, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (FEHA) .

(n93)Footnote 89. Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1277 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII); City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 986, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716 (FEHA) .

(n94)Footnote 90. Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1432 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); Guardians Ass'n of New York City v. Civil Serv. (2d Cir. 1980) 630 F.2d 79, 105-106 , cert. denied, 452 U.S. 940 (1981) (Title VII).

(n95)Footnote 91. See Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1427-1428 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII).

(n96)Footnote 92. See Lewis v. Bloomsburg Mills, Inc. (4th Cir. 1985) 773 F.2d 561, 569-571 (Title VII) .

(n97)Footnote 93. See City and County of San Francisco v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 976, 990, 236 Cal. Rptr. 716(FEHA) ; Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1376 , cert. denied, 446 U.S. 928 (1980) (Title VII).

(n98)Footnote 94. See Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1227-1228 (Title VII).

(n99)Footnote 95. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 662 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (Title VII) .

(n100)Footnote 96. See Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1430 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 664 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (1981) (Title VII).

(n101)Footnote 97. See discussion in [3][c], above.

(n102)Footnote 98. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14.

(n103)Footnote 99. Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII).

(n104)Footnote 100. See Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1431-1432 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII).

(n105)Footnote 101. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law, ch. 4 (BNA 2d ed. 1983).

(n106)Footnote 102. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14B(6).

(n107)Footnote 103. See Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1431-1432 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII).

(n108)Footnote 104. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law ch. 4 (BNA 2d ed. 1983).

(n109)Footnote 105. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(ii).

(n110)Footnote 106. See discussion in [4], above.

(n111)Footnote 107. Connecticut v. Teal (1982) 457 U.S. 440, 447, 102 S. Ct. 2525, 73 L. Ed. 2d 130 (Title VII) ; Albamarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII) .

(n112)Footnote 108. See Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1428 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) (Title VII); see also Albamarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII) ; Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1424 (ADEA) .

(n113)Footnote 109. See Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 660, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (Title VII) ; Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 998, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII) ; Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421, 1432 , cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1109 (1986) ; Chrisner v. Complete Auto Trans., Inc. (6th Cir. 1981) 645 F.2d 1251, 1263 .

(n114)Footnote 110. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e(m), 2000e-2(k)(1)(A)(ii); Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 660, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 (Title VII) ; Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1285 , cert. denied, 455 U.S. 1021 (1982) (Title VII).

(n115)Footnote 111. Clady v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1421 .

(n116)Footnote 112. Chrisner v. Complete Auto Trans, Inc. (6th Cir. 1981) 645 F.2d 1251 .

(n117)Footnote 113. Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 .

42 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART A. GENERAL THEORIES FOR PROVING DISCRIMINATION UNDER EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY LAWS
Subpart C. Disparate Impact

2-41 California Employment Law §§ 41.22 through 41.29

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 41.22[Reserved]

43 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART B. PROHIBITED BASES OF DISCRIMINATION

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.30

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.30 Introduction

California and federal equal employment opportunity laws prohibit discrimination based on race, color, sex, national origin or ancestry, religion, age, marital status, physical or mental disability, handicap, and medical condition. This part discusses the definitions and scope of the foregoing classifications and the equal employment opportunity laws that apply to them. For discussions relating to specific preemployment and employment practices that are unlawfully based on those classifications, and the defenses available for such practices, see Parts C, D, E, and F of this chapter.

This part focuses on the following bases of discrimination: age (§ 41.31), disability and medical condition (§ 41.32), national origin (§ 41.33), race and "color" (§ 41.34), religion (§ 41.35), and sex (§ 41.36). The principal governing statutes examined are Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII)ⁿ¹ (race, color, religion, sex, or national origin), the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)ⁿ² (race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, or age), the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA)ⁿ³ (age), Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA)ⁿ⁴ (disability), Sections 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973ⁿ⁵ (handicap), and Title 42 United States Code Section 1981 (race). For a general overview of the various federal and California equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 4. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.

44 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART B. PROHIBITED BASES OF DISCRIMINATION

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.31

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.31 Age Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

The federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA)ⁿ¹ and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)ⁿ² are the principal statutes that prohibit employment discrimination on the basis of age.ⁿ³ The ADEA and the FEHA apply to public as well as private employers.ⁿ⁴ In addition, due process and equal protection provisions of the Fifth Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution may provide some protection to employees when the requisite "state action" is present,ⁿ⁵ but because age is not a "suspect" classification under constitutional law, such challenges are rarely successful.ⁿ⁶

Other authorities also proscribe age discrimination. For example, Executive Order No. 11141 prohibits age discrimination by federal contractors,ⁿ⁷ and California Government Code Section 11135 prohibits age discrimination by state-funded programs and activities.ⁿ⁸ An action under the Unfair Competition Law^{n8.1} for injunctive relief is appropriate when a business engages in an unlawful practice under the FEHA^{n8.2} of discriminating against older workers.^{n8.3}

For a general discussion relating to the scope and application of these and other state and federal equal employment opportunity laws and regulations, see Chapter 40.

Because Title VII is materially different with respect to the relevant burden of persuasion, decisions under Title VII do not control a court's construction of the ADEA.^{n8.4}

[2] Scope of Protection

Both the ADEA and FEHA protect individuals who are 40 years of age or older.ⁿ⁹ Thus, individuals who are less than 40 years old are not protected from age discrimination at all,ⁿ¹⁰ a phenomenon which produces some seemingly anomalous results. For example, one case challenged, under both the ADEA and the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, a state statute that prohibited hiring police officers over 29 years old.ⁿ¹¹ The court found the statute to be valid under the Constitution, but invalid under the ADEA, insofar as it affected individuals over the age of 40.ⁿ¹²

Nothing in FEHA prohibits an employer from refusing to employ an individual based on age if the law compels or provides for that refusal. Further, promotions within the existing staff, hiring or promotion on the basis of experience and training, rehiring on the basis of seniority and prior service with the employer, or hiring under an established recruiting program from high schools, colleges, universities, or trade schools do not, in and of themselves, constitute unlawful employment practices.ⁿ¹³

In Esberg v. Union Oil Co.,ⁿ¹⁴ the California Supreme Court upheld the Court of Appeal's conclusion that the FEHA's prohibition against age discrimination in employment extended to hiring, discharging, suspension, and demotion, but not to the furnishing of employee benefits, such as educational assistance.ⁿ¹⁵ Former Gov. Code § 12941, the specific FEHA provision addressing age discrimination in employment, made it an unlawful employment practice for an employer to refuse to hire or employ, or to discharge, dismiss, reduce, suspend, or demote, any individual over the age of 40 on the ground of age, except in cases in which the law compelled or provided for such action. At the same time, the Court noted, although the relevant version of Gov. Code § 12940 prohibited discrimination in the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment on various other bases, it did not prohibit discrimination on the basis of age.ⁿ¹⁶ Based on the unambiguous language of the relevant FEHA provisions, the Court concluded that the FEHA did not prohibit age discrimination in the furnishing of employee benefits.ⁿ¹⁷

Effective January 1, 2003, the California Legislature acted to reject the holding in Esberg. The Legislature repealed former Gov. Code § 12941 and amended Gov. Code § 12940 to prohibit age discrimination in employment, without distinguishing age from other bases of discrimination. The Legislature expressly stated its intent to construe and clarify the meaning and effect of existing law and to reject the interpretation given to the law in Esberg.ⁿ¹⁸

To prove age discrimination under a disparate treatment theory, the plaintiff must show that his or her age actually played a role in the employer's decision-making process and had a determinative influence on the outcome.ⁿ¹⁹ In evaluating age discrimination claims, courts employ the familiar framework developed in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green,ⁿ²⁰ requiring plaintiff to make out a prima facie case of discrimination,ⁿ²¹ then shifting the burden to defendant to articulate a legitimate reason for the employment action, and then shifting the burden back to the plaintiff to show that the employer's articulated reason is a pretext for discrimination.

Under the McDonnell Douglas three-part test, if the employer produces substantial evidence of a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse employment action, the presumption of discrimination created by the prima facie case drops out of the picture and the burden shifts back to the employee to prove intentional discrimination. If the employer has met its burden by showing a legitimate reason for its conduct, the employee must demonstrate a triable issue by producing substantial evidence that the employer's stated reasons were untrue or pretextual, or that the employer acted with a discriminatory animus, such that a reasonable trier of fact could conclude that the employer engaged in intentional discrimination or other unlawful action. The plaintiff may establish pretext either directly, by persuading the court that a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the employer, or indirectly, by showing that the employer's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence. With direct evidence of pretext, a triable issue as to the actual motivation of the employer is created even if the evidence is not substantial. The plaintiff is required to produce very little direct evidence of the employer's discriminatory intent to move past summary judgment. The same evidence can be used both to set forth a prima facie case of discrimination, and to demonstrate the existence of a triable issue of fact on the issue of pretext.ⁿ²²

In Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp.,ⁿ²³ the plaintiff made out a prima facie case by showing that he was 60 years old; his most recent performance review was not outstanding, but indicated that he was meeting the requirements of the job; he was discharged; and he was replaced by a substantially younger employee (43 years old) with equal or inferior qualifications. The employer in turn articulated a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for terminating him, i.e., based on loss of profits over the preceding several years, it had a lack of confidence that he could make the hard decisions necessary to turn around his division. However, the plaintiff failed to raise a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the employer's articulated reason was pretextual.ⁿ²⁴ When there is direct evidence of discriminatory motivation based on age, any burden-shifting analysis using the McDonnell Douglas test is unnecessary.ⁿ²⁵ In Hammond v. County of Los Angeles,ⁿ²⁶ plaintiff established a triable issue of fact as to age discrimination with direct evidence of discriminatory motivation based on plaintiff's age. Plaintiff testified that her supervisor requested that she "demote," wanted younger instructors in the classroom, and hired younger instructors to teach classes formerly taught by plaintiff. This testimony raised a triable issue of fact as to whether there was an adverse employment action that was motivated, at least in part, by plaintiff's age. Plaintiff associated these comments directly with the reduction of her teaching assignments. The employer did not defend the reduction in plaintiff's teaching assignments by showing an age-neutral motive for that action, such as poor performance. Instead, the employer maintained that plaintiff's teaching assignments were not substantially reduced, but there was evidence from the employer's own records contradicting its assertion.

Unlike under Title VII, under the ADEA a plaintiff cannot prove age discrimination by showing that age was a motivating factor for a discriminatory employment practice, even though other factors also motivated the practice. Thus, the burden of persuasion never shifts to the party defending an alleged mixed-motives discrimination claim brought under the ADEA, because there can be no mixed-motives claims under the ADEA. Congress amended Title VII by explicitly authorizing discrimination claims in which an improper consideration was "a motivating factor" for an adverse employment decision.^{n26.1} However, when it amended Title VII, Congress did not likewise amend the ADEA, even though it contemporaneously amended the ADEA in several other ways.^{n26.2} Further, the text of the ADEA does not authorize a mixed-motives age discrimination claim. To establish a disparate-treatment claim under the plain language of the ADEA, a plaintiff has the burden of proving that age was the "but-for" cause of the employer's adverse decision. Hence, the burden of persuasion necessary to establish employer liability is the same in alleged mixed-motives cases as in any other ADEA disparate-treatment action. The burden of persuasion does not shift to the employer to show that it would have taken the action regardless of age, even when a plaintiff has produced some evidence that age was one motivating factor in that decision.^{n26.3}

Adopting the disparate impact theory of proof for cases under the ADEA, the United States Supreme Court in *Smith v. City of Jackson*ⁿ²⁷ concluded that plaintiffs with ADEA claims can, under certain circumstances, prevail without showing that the employer adopted a challenged rule or practice with a discriminatory intent.ⁿ²⁸ The scope of disparate-impact liability under ADEA is narrower than under Title VII. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Antonio,ⁿ²⁹ which narrowly construed the employer's exposure to liability by requiring plaintiffs to demonstrate a close nexus between a specific practice and an alleged statistical disparity, and which Congress legislatively overruled with the Civil Rights Act of 1991 with respect to Title VII,ⁿ³⁰ remains the operative legal standard for ADEA disparate impact claims.ⁿ³¹ Further, employers have a defense under the ADEA which they do not have under Title VII, which prohibits challenges to employer rules based on "reasonable factors other than age." An employer's policy or practice thus need not be a business necessity to survive scrutiny under the ADEA; it need only be a reasonable judgment aimed at a purpose other than age.ⁿ³² In Smith, the Court concluded that the plaintiffs had not met and could not meet their burden of showing an actionable adverse impact. They had not identified any specific text, requirement or practice by the employer having an adverse impact on older workers. Further, it was clear from the record that the employer's action was based on reasonable factors other than age, including reliance on seniority and rank.ⁿ³³

■ PRACTICE TIP:

The Smith case may not have a large impact in California. Effective January 1, 2003, the Fair Employment & Housing Act (FEHA) was amended to prohibit age discrimination in employment without distinguishing age from other bases of discrimination.ⁿ³⁴ Thus, in California, older workers could already prove a violation of FEHA by proving age-discriminatory acts having a disparate impact, in the same way as workers alleging any other prohibited form of employment discrimination. Unlike the federal ADEA and Title VII, the scope of protection for age discrimination under California law is equal to that available for any other prohibited form of discrimination under the FEHA.

In age discrimination actions, the McDonnell Douglas test is inapplicable when the plaintiff presents direct evidence of discrimination.ⁿ³⁵ Direct evidence is evidence which, if believed, proves the fact of discriminatory animus without inference or presumption. Comments demonstrating discriminatory animus may be found to be direct evidence if there is evidence of a causal relationship between the comments and the adverse job action at issue.ⁿ³⁶ For example, in DeJung v. Superior Court,ⁿ³⁷ the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the employer. If a jury believed that the presiding judge and chair of the court's executive committee, who was involved in the hiring process for a full-time court commissioner made comments regarding wanting to hire someone younger than plaintiff, which were attributed to him by plaintiff and a witness, his statements would plainly have qualified as direct evidence of discriminatory animus. But proof of discriminatory animus does not end the analysis of a discrimination claim. There also must be evidence of a causal relationship between the animus and the adverse employment action. In DeJung, plaintiff was not required to demonstrate that every individual who participated in the failure to hire him shared discriminatory animus in order to defeat the summary judgment motion. Showing that a significant participant in an employment decision exhibited discriminatory animus in connection with that decision was enough to raise an inference that the employment decision itself was discriminatory, even absent evidence that others in the process harbored such animus.

Age discrimination laws generally protect older individuals from discrimination in favor of younger individuals.ⁿ³⁸ On the other hand, the ADEA does not prohibit an employer from discriminating in favor of a 50 year old at the expense of a 30 year old because the latter is expressly not covered by the ADEA.ⁿ³⁹ The same is true even if the younger employee is also over age 40.ⁿ⁴⁰ By comparison, such "reverse" discrimination in the context of race would be prohibited by Title VII because "its terms are not limited to discrimination against members of any particular race."ⁿ⁴¹ Age discrimination is not disproved merely because the favored employee is himself or herself age 40 or older. In O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp.,ⁿ⁴² a fired worker of 56 years of age challenged his employer for firing him and replacing him with a 40-year-old worker. The employer sought shelter in the ADEA on the ground that plaintiff's replacement was also protected. The Court held this was illogical, reasoning that the statutory language means only that those who can sue must be within the covered class of 40 or older. The Court went on to observe that it is irrelevant that one person in the protected class has lost out to another, if he or she lost out because of age; and there is no greater inference of age discrimination if a worker is replaced by a 39 year old rather than by a 40 year old. The Court found a substantial age difference to be a more reliable indicator of discrimination than a technical application of the statute.ⁿ⁴³ EEOC regulations also prohibit age discrimination even if the favored employee is age 40 or older.ⁿ⁴⁴

In Mangold v. California Public Utilities Comm'n,ⁿ⁴⁵ workers under 40 years old were promoted over older workers on the basis of allegedly subjective interview tests based in part on experience unique to the younger workers. The older workers also claimed that the employer gave high-profile job tasks exclusively to the younger workers. The Ninth Circuit held that plaintiffs were not precluded from trying to prove both disparate treatment and disparate impact under the ADEA and FEHA.ⁿ⁴⁶

While discrimination on the basis of pension status can sometimes be unlawful under the ADEA, in particular when pension status serves as a proxy for age discrimination, the ADEA does not necessarily prohibit an employer from firing an individual for the purpose of preventing a pension from vesting or for some other reason which may be correlated with age but is based on years of service as distinct from age.ⁿ⁴⁷ According to the U.S. Supreme Court, when an employer's decision is wholly motivated by factors other than age, such as the prevention of pension-vesting, the problem of inaccurate and stigmatizing stereotypes of older workers disappears.ⁿ⁴⁸

Following Supreme Court precedent, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that an employer may refuse to hire an individual because he or she is "overqualified" when that term is defined objectively, and not used as a proxy for age. In E.E.O.C. v. Insurance Co. of North America,ⁿ⁴⁹ the court affirmed summary judgment for an employer who had rejected an applicant as "overqualified" because the employer had demonstrated that the reasons it perceived overqualification to be a problem were objective and not age-related.ⁿ⁵⁰

A discharge is not on the ground of age within the meaning of FEHA's prohibition of age discrimination unless age is a motivating factor in the decision; and an employer is entitled to judgment as a matter of law if the record conclusively reveals another, nondiscriminatory reason for the employer's decision.ⁿ⁵¹

General types of activity covered by age discrimination claims include the duration of employment; performance reviews and promotion; physical ability to perform the job; elimination of the position by reduction in force or merger of the company; replacement with a younger worker; seniority, retirement benefits, and severance plans.ⁿ⁵²

Evidence justifying the employment termination which the employer acquires after the employee's discharge will not defeat a claim for age discrimination or justify the employer's impermissible discriminatory conduct. An after-acquired fact will not defeat the discrimination claim, but rather merely applies to determination of the appropriate remedy.ⁿ⁵³

For discussion of age discrimination issues relating to retirement plans, see § 41.67. For discussion of age discrimination issues relating to employment interviews, see § 41.44[2][a]. For discussion of age discrimination issues involving seniority systems, see § 41.68[3]. For discussion of age as a bona fide occupational qualification, see § 41.94[2]. For discussion of other defenses relating to charges of age discrimination, see § 41.104.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Age Discrimination
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Age Discrimination
Coverage & Definitions
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Age Discrimination
Federal & State Interrelationships

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 29 U.S.C. § 623 (ADEA); Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12942 (FEHA).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 630(b), 633a(a) (ADEA); Gov. Code § 12926(d) (FEHA).

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussion in ch. 40, pt. C.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Massachusetts Bd. of Retirement v. Murgia (1976) 427 U.S. 307, 312-313, 96 S. Ct. 2562, 49 L. Ed. 2d 520 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) , reprinted in 5 U.S.C.A § 3301 (West 1977).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Gov. Code § 11135; see also Lab. Code § 1777.6 (prohibition against refusing to accept otherwise qualified employees as apprentices on public works projects based on various protected classifications, including age).

(n9)Footnote 8.1. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.

(n10)Footnote 8.2. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n11)Footnote 8.3. See Herr v. Nestle U.S.A., Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 779, 781, 789-790, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477 .

(n12)Footnote 8.4. Gross v. FBL Fin. Servs. (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2343, 2348, 174 L. Ed. 2d 119 .

(n13)Footnote 9. See 29 U.S.C. § 631(a) (ADEA); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA); see also Gov. Code § 12926(b) (FEHA; "age" refers to chronological age of any individual who has reached his or her 40th birthday).

(n14)Footnote 10. See Gen. Dynamics Land Sys. v. Cline (2004) 124 S. Ct. 1236, 1240, 1249 (text, structure, purpose, and history of ADEA, along with its relationship to other federal statutes, show that ADEA does not prohibit employer from favoring older employee over younger one); Henn v. National Geographic Soc. (7th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 824, 827 (ADEA).

(n15)Footnote 11. See Hahn v. City of Buffalo (2d Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 12 .

(n16)Footnote 12. See Hahn v. City of Buffalo (2d Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 12, 14 ; see also Doyle v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 786 F.2d 523, 525 .

(n17)Footnote 13. Gov. Code § 12940(a)(5).

(n18)Footnote 14. Esberg v. Union Oil Co. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 262, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203, 47 P.3d 1069 .

(n19)Footnote 15. Esberg v. Union Oil Co. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 262, 264-271, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203, 47 P.3d 1069 ; see Esberg v. Union Oil Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 378, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477 .

(n20)Footnote 16. Esberg v. Union Oil Co. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 262, 267-268, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203, 47 P.3d 1069 .

(n21)Footnote 17. Esberg v. Union Oil Co. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 262, 269, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203, 47 P.3d 1069 .

(n22)Footnote 18. Stats. 2002, Ch. 525 § 4.

(n23)Footnote 19. Kentucky Retirement System v. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (2008) 128 S. Ct. 2361, 2366, 171 L. Ed. 2d 322 ; Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 610, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338 ; Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 740, 745 . See Reeves v. Sanderson Plumbing Prods., Inc. (2000) 530 U.S. 133, 141, 120 S. Ct. 2097, 147 L. Ed. 2d 105 (quoting Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 610, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338).

(n24)Footnote 20. Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 740, 745 ; see McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 . See also DeJung v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 533, 549, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 99 (FEHA; when plaintiff proffers circumstantial evidence, California courts apply McDonnell Douglas three-stage burden-shifting test for trying claims of employment discrimination, including age discrimination, based on theory of disparate treatment). For discussion of the McDonnell Douglas test generally, see § 41.11[1], above.

(n25)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Whitman v. Mineta (9th Cir. 2008) 541 F.3d 929, 932 (claim for employment discrimination based on promotion of younger employee did not set forth prima facie case of age discrimination, where employee failed to demonstrate that he was either qualified or eligible for contested position by failing to show he possessed requisite knowledge and experience to compete for computer specialist position similar to that obtained by younger employee).

(n26)Footnote 22. DeJung v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 533, 553-554, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 99 (FEHA; plaintiff presented ample evidence, both direct and circumstantial, that employer's allegedly legitimate reasons were pretextual, where evidence established existence of a triable issue of fact regarding employer's motivation for not hiring 64-year-old plaintiff, and raised issue of fact regarding whether employer's proffered explanation--that 43-year-old selected was best qualified for position--was pretextual).

(n27)Footnote 23. Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 740 .

(n28)Footnote 24. Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 740, 745-747 (remarks including "old management team," an "old business model," and "deadwood" did not show discriminatory motive). See also Diaz v. Eagle Produce Limited Partnership (9th Cir. 2008) 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 7261, *10-*34 (in ADEA action by farmworkers laid off in seasonal slowdown, one worker failed to create triable issue of fact as to whether his job performance was satisfactory and thus failed to establish prima facie case of age discrimination; three others provided evidence of satisfactory job performance and accumulation of circumstantial evidence that, taken together, could lead reasonable juror to draw inference of age discrimination, employer did not provide facially legitimate explanation for one worker's discharge in stating that discharge was part of reduction in force necessitated by seasonal slowdown in agricultural activity so that summary judgment was inappropriate with regard to him, but employer's explanations for discharges of other two were facially legitimate, and they failed to create genuine issue as to credibility of explanations).

(n29)Footnote 25. Hammond v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1579, 1601 . See also Trop v. Sony Pictures Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1144, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144 .

(n30)Footnote 26. Hammond v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1579, 1601-1602 .

(n31)Footnote 26.1. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2(m) (providing that unlawful employment practice is established when complaining party demonstrates that race, color, religion, sex, or national origin was motivating factor for employment practice, even though other factors also motivated the practice; 2000e-5(g)(2)(B) (restricting remedies available to plaintiffs proving violations of § 2000e-2(m)).

(n32)Footnote 26.2. See Civil Rights Act of 1991, §§ 115, 105 Stat. 1079; § 302, at 1088.

(n33)Footnote 26.3. Gross v. FBL Fin. Servs. (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2343, 2348-2352, 174 L. Ed. 2d 119 .

(n34)Footnote 27. Smith v. City of Jackson (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1536, 161 L. Ed. 2d 410 .

(n35)Footnote 28. Smith v. City of Jackson (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1536, 161 L. Ed. 2d 410, 417-421 .

(n36)Footnote 29. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 109 S. Ct. 2115, 104 L. Ed. 2d 733 .

(n37)Footnote 30. For discussion of the Civil Rights Act of 1991 and the overruling of Wards Cove, see § 40.31[1A].

(n38)Footnote 31. Smith v. City of Jackson (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1536, 161 L. Ed. 2d 410, 421-422 .

(n39)Footnote 32. Smith v. City of Jackson (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1536, 161 L. Ed. 2d 410, 422 .

(n40)Footnote 33. Smith v. City of Jackson (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1536, 161 L. Ed. 2d 410, 422-423 .

(n41)Footnote 34. See Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n42)Footnote 35. DeJung v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 533, 550, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 99 ; Trop v. Sony Pictures Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1144, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144 . See also Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 121, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 .

(n43)Footnote 36. DeJung v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 533, 550, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 99 ; Trop v. Sony Pictures Entertainment, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1146-1149, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144 .

(n44)Footnote 37. DeJung v. Superior Court (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 533, 549-554, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 99 .

(n45)Footnote 38. O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 1309-1310, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433 (ADEA); Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1002-1004, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 (FEHA) .

(n46)Footnote 39. See 29 U.S.C. § 621 (purpose of ADEA); Gov. Code § 12920 (FEHA policy statement).

(n47)Footnote 40. Gen. Dynamics Land Sys., Inc. v. Cline (2004) 124 S. Ct. 1236 .

(n48)Footnote 41. See McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 279-280, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 (white employees charged with misappropriating property dismissed, but similarly charged African-American employee not dismissed).

(n49)Footnote 42. O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 1309-1310, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433 .

(n50)Footnote 43. O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 1309-1310, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433 ; Hersant v. Department of Social Servs. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1002-1003, 1006, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 (replacement employee, although over 40, was seven years younger than plaintiff, a differential that could reasonably be described as significant).

(n51)Footnote 44. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.2(a).

(n52)Footnote 45. Mangold v. California Pub. Utils. Comm'n (9th Cir. 1995) 67 F.3d 1470 .

(n53)Footnote 46. Mangold v. California Pub. Utils. Comm'n (9th Cir. 1995) 67 F.3d 1470, 1476 ; see E.E.O.C. v. Local 350, Plumbers and Pipefitters (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 641, 648 fn.2 (disparate impact has been interpreted as applicable to age discrimination); Palmer v. United States (9th Cir. 1986) 794 F.2d 534, 536 (plaintiff alleging age discrimination may proceed under either of two theories: disparate treatment or disparate impact); Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338 (sets forth parameters of disparate treatment in age discrimination context).

(n54)Footnote 47. Kentucky Retirement System v. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (2008) 128 S. Ct. 2361, 2367, 171 L. Ed. 2d 322 ; Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 347-348 .

(n55)Footnote 48. Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 347-348 . See also Kentucky Retirement System v. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (2008) 128 S. Ct. 2361, 2367-2371, 171 L. Ed. 2d 322 (retirement plan that lawfully made age, in part, a condition of pension eligibility and treated workers differently in light of their pension status did not violate ADEA, where differences in treatment were not actually motivated by age).

(n56)Footnote 49. E.E.O.C. v Insurance Co. of North America (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 1418 .

(n57)Footnote 50. E.E.O.C. v Insurance Co. of North America (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 1418, 1420-1421 .

(n58)Footnote 51. West v. Bechtel Corp. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 966, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647, 656-657 (where principal is foreign sovereign able to compel employee's discharge and is not bound by antidiscrimination laws in its dealings with employee, employer as sovereign's agent is not liable for sovereign's discriminatory intent; no evidence that employer itself was motivated to terminate employment because of age); see Caldwell v. Paramount Unified School Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 198, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 ; BAJI Nos. 12.01, 12.01.1.

(n59)Footnote 52. The employer must prove that the employee cannot perform the job, that such performance would endanger the employee and others, and that accommodation would cause undue hardship for the employer. see discussion of Substantive Defenses, Part F.

(n60)Footnote 53. O'Day v. McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 756, 759 (employer cannot avoid liability under the ADEA by using after acquired evidence to provide legitimate reason for discharge; evidence only affects remedy, such as back pay; proving that same decision was justified is not same as proving that same decision would have been made); see also Caldwell v. Paramount Unified Sch. Dist. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 189, 199-202, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 448 .

45 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART B. PROHIBITED BASES OF DISCRIMINATION

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.32

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.32 Disability and Medical Condition Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

The federal Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA)ⁿ¹ and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)ⁿ² are the principal statutes that prohibit discrimination against individuals with disabilities. The federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973,ⁿ³ which applies only to federal contractorsⁿ⁴ and recipients of federal funds,ⁿ⁵ also prohibits disability discrimination. Federal contractors are also subject to the Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974 (VEVRAA),ⁿ⁶ which protects disabled veterans.ⁿ⁷ However, Title VII furnishes no protection from discrimination against disabled individuals. For a general discussion relating to the scope and application of these federal equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40, Part C.

The FEHA also prohibits employment discrimination based on medical condition.ⁿ⁸ In addition, specific California statutes prohibit discrimination against the disabled by state-funded programs or activities,ⁿ⁹ and public works projects.ⁿ¹⁰ The Cartwright Act (California antitrust law) also proscribes discrimination on the basis of disability and medical condition.^{n10.1} For discussion regarding the scope and application of these California equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40, Part B.

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Americans With Disabilities Act

The ADA prohibits employment discrimination by a covered entity against a "qualified individual on the basis of disability".ⁿ¹

The ADA proscribes discrimination in job application procedures, the hiring, advancement, or discharge of employees, employee compensation, job training, and other terms, conditions, and privileges of employment.ⁿ¹² Unlawful "discrimination" includes, among other things, limiting, segregating, or classifying a job applicant or employee in a way that adversely affects the opportunities or status of the applicant or employee because of his or her disability.ⁿ¹³ This includes an employer's participation in a contractual or other arrangement or relationship (including a relationship with a labor union) that has the effect of subjecting a qualified applicant or employee with a disability to prohibited discrimination.^{n13.1} However, employers may prefer some physical attributes over others, such as height or medical conditions that do not rise to the level of a substantial impairment; accordingly, they may establish physical criteria for certain jobs.^{n13.2}

A "qualified individual" is an individual who, with or without reasonable accommodation,ⁿ¹⁴ can perform the essential functions of the employment position that the individual holds or desires.^{n14.1} The plaintiff bears the burden of proving that he or she is "qualified."ⁿ¹⁵ Essential functions in this context are defined as the fundamental job duties of the employment position the individual with a disability holds or desires. They do not include the marginal functions of the position. Functions are considered essential for the following nonexclusive reasons: (1) the position exists for the purpose of performing that function; (2) the number of available employees who share that function is limited; and (3) the function is highly specialized.^{n15.1}

To establish a prima facie case of discrimination under the ADA, a plaintiff must demonstrate each of the following:^{n15.2}

1. The plaintiff is disabled within the meaning of the ADA;
2. The plaintiff is a qualified individual able to perform the essential functions of the job; and
3. The plaintiff's employer terminated or refused to rehire him or her because of the disability.

Qualification for a position is a two-step inquiry. The court first examines whether the individual satisfies the "requisite skill, experience, education and other job-related requirements" of the position. The court then considers whether the individual "can perform the essential functions of such position" with or without a reasonable accommodation.^{n15.3}

A plaintiff bears the burden of demonstrating that he or she can perform the essential functions of the job with or without reasonable accommodation.^{n15.4} However, an employer who disputes the plaintiff's claim that plaintiff can perform the essential functions has the burden of producing evidence establishing those functions.^{n15.5} In cases alleging individual or pattern-and-practice disparate treatment, a burden-shifting protocol is employed, i.e., the plaintiff must make out a prima facie case of discrimination, the employer must present evidence of a legitimate business purpose for the challenged action, and the plaintiff is given the opportunity to show that the employer's proffered business justification is a pretext for discrimination.^{n15.6} However, in a case involving an employer's facially discriminatory policy, the burden-shifting protocol is unnecessary, because the employer has already admitted that it discriminated on a proscribed basis.^{n15.7}

Evidence of whether a particular function is essential includes the following nonexclusive considerations:^{n15.8}

- The employer's judgment regarding which functions are essential.^{n15.9}
- Written job descriptions prepared before advertising or interviewing applicants for the job.^{n15.10}
- The amount of time spent performing the function.
- The consequences of not requiring the incumbent to perform the function.
- The terms of a collective bargaining agreement.
- The work experience of past incumbents in similar jobs.

- The current work experience of incumbents in similar jobs.

A plaintiff who is totally disabled and unable to perform the essential functions of the job is not a "qualified individual with a disability."^{15.11} Thus, a plaintiff who applies for state disability benefits or workers' compensation benefits based on his or her own sworn statements and/or physician certification establishing total disability may be precluded from asserting that he or she is a qualified individual with a disability under the ADA for purposes of establishing a claim of discrimination or failure to accommodate.^{15.12} However, the EEOC has stated that representations about the ability to work made in the course of applying for disability benefits do not necessarily bar an ADA claim, because the standards for determining whether a person is disabled for purposes of obtaining such benefits may be fundamentally different from ADA standards for determining whether someone is a "qualified individual with a disability."^{15.13} Under the ADA Amendments Act of 2008,^{15.14} the ADA now specifically provides that nothing in the ADA alters the standards for determining eligibility for benefits under state workers' compensation laws or under state and federal disability benefit programs.^{15.15}

Discrimination under the ADA includes the employer's use of qualification standards, employment tests or other selection criteria that screen out or tend to screen out an individual with a disability or a class of individuals with disabilities, unless the standard, test or other selection criteria, as used by the employer, is shown to be job-related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity.^{15.16} However, an employer may not use qualification standards, employment tests, or other selection criteria based on an individual's uncorrected vision unless the standard, test, or other selection criteria, as used by the employer, is shown to be job-related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity.^{15.17} EEOC regulations define "qualifications standards" as "the personal and professional attributes including the skill, experience, education, physical, medical, safety and other requirements established by a covered entity as requirements that an individual must meet in order to be eligible for the position held or desired."^{15.18} When an employer asserts a blanket safety-based qualification standard beyond the essential job function, which is not mandated by law and which screens out or tends to screen out an individual with a disability, the employer, not the employee, bears the burden of showing the higher qualification standard is job-related and consistent with business necessity, and that performance cannot be achieved through reasonable accommodation.^{15.19} When a plaintiff challenges a categorical qualification standard, the plaintiff does not have the burden of establishing that that qualification standard excludes qualified individuals with disabilities. Rather, to establish statutory standing, the plaintiff has the burden of establishing that he or she meets other qualifications, unrelated to the challenged standard. In addition, the plaintiff has the burden to prove that the challenged qualification standard screens out or tends to screen out an individual with a disability or a class of individuals with disabilities.¹⁶ The burden then shifts to the employer to establish the business necessity defense.^{16.1}

In the ADA Amendments Act of 2008,¹⁷ Congress made findings regarding the purpose of the ADA and how that purpose has not been fulfilled based on the interpretation of various facets of the ADA by the United States Supreme Court (regarding who is a qualified individual under the ADA):¹⁸

- (1) In enacting the ADA, Congress intended that it provide a clear and comprehensive national mandate for the elimination of discrimination against individuals with disabilities and provide broad coverage.
- (2) In enacting the ADA, Congress recognized that physical and mental disabilities in no way diminish a person's right to fully participate in all aspects of society, but that people with physical or mental disabilities are frequently precluded from doing so because of prejudice, antiquated attitudes, or the failure to remove societal and institutional barriers.
- (3) While Congress expected that the definition of disability under the ADA would be interpreted consistently with how courts had applied the definition of a handicapped individual under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, that expectation has not been fulfilled.

- (4) The holdings of the Supreme Court in *Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc.*ⁿ¹⁹ and its companion casesⁿ²⁰ have narrowed the broad scope of protection intended to be afforded by the ADA, thus eliminating protection for many individuals whom Congress intended to protect.
- (5) The holding of the Supreme Court in Toyota Motor Manufacturing, Kentucky, Inc. v. Williams,ⁿ²¹ further narrowed the broad scope of protection intended to be afforded by the ADA.
- (6) As a result of these Supreme Court cases, lower courts have incorrectly found in individual cases that people with a range of substantially limiting impairments are not people with disabilities.
- (7) In particular, the Supreme Court, in the case of Toyota Motor Manufacturing, Kentucky, Inc. v. Williams, interpreted the term "substantially limits" to require a greater degree of limitation than was intended by Congress.
- (8) The current EEOC ADA regulations defining the term "substantially limits" as "significantly restricted" are inconsistent with congressional intent, by expressing too high a standard.

Thus, the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, effective January 1, 2009, was enacted to do all of the followingⁿ²²:

- (1) Carry out the ADA's objectives of providing "a clear and comprehensive national mandate for the elimination of discrimination" and "clear, strong, consistent, enforceable standards addressing discrimination" by reinstating a broad scope of protection to be available under the ADA.
- (2) Reject the requirement enunciated by the Supreme Court in Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc. and its companion cases that whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity is to be determined with reference to the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures.
- (3) Reject the Supreme Court's reasoning in Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc. with regard to coverage under the third prong, i.e., the "regarded as having a disability" prong of the definition of disability, and to reinstate the reasoning of the Supreme Court in School Board of Nassau County v. Arline,ⁿ²³ which set forth a broad view of the third prong of the definition of handicap under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.
- (4) Reject the standards enunciated by the Supreme Court in Toyota Motor Manufacturing, Kentucky, Inc. v. Williams, that the terms "substantially" and "major" in the definition of disability under the ADA "need to be interpreted strictly to create a demanding standard for qualifying as disabled," and that to be substantially limited in performing a major life activity under the ADA, "an individual must have an impairment that prevents or severely restricts the individual from doing activities that are of central importance to most people's daily lives."
- (5) Convey congressional intent that the standard created by the Supreme Court in the case of Toyota Motor Manufacturing, Kentucky, Inc. v. Williams for "substantially limits," and applied by lower courts in numerous decisions, has created an inappropriately high level of limitation necessary to obtain coverage under the ADA, to convey that it is the intent of Congress that the primary object of attention in cases brought under the ADA should be whether entities covered under the ADA have complied with their obligations, and to convey that the question of whether an individual's impairment is a disability under the ADA should not demand extensive analysis.
- (6) Express Congress' expectation that the EEOC will revise the portion of its current regulations that defines the term "substantially limits" as "significantly restricted" to be consistent with the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, including the amendments made by the Act.

It is unclear whether the ADAAA, which became effective January 1, 2009, applies retroactively.^{n23.1}

In Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District,^{n23.2} although the Ninth Circuit found that it did not need to consider whether to apply the Americans With Disabilities Act Amendments Act of 2008 retroactively, because plaintiff's evidence was sufficient to withstand summary judgment based on the pre-amended ADA, the court nevertheless briefly discussed the ADAAA because it shed light on Congress's original intent when it enacted the ADA.^{n23.3} The court found that the ADAAA explicitly rejected several Supreme Court decisions that defined "disability" more narrowly than many of the ADA's original Congressional proponents had intended.^{n23.4} Under the ADAAA, beginning in January 2009, "disability" was to be broadly construed and coverage to apply to the maximum extent permitted by the ADA and the ADAAA.^{n23.5} The ADAAA explained that while, in enacting the ADA, Congress expected that the definition of disability under the ADA would be interpreted consistently with how courts had applied the definition of a handicapped individual under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, that expectation was not fulfilled. Further, the holdings of the Supreme Court in Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc.,^{n23.6} and its companion cases narrowed the broad scope of protection intended to be afforded by the ADA, eliminating protection for many individuals whom Congress intended to protect.^{n23.7}

A "disability" under the ADA is defined as any of the following:ⁿ²⁴

- (1) A physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of an individual's major life activities.
- (2) A record of such an impairment.
- (3) Being regarded as having such an impairment.

This definition of disability in the ADA must be construed in favor of broad coverage of individuals under the ADA, to the maximum extent permitted by the terms of the ADA.ⁿ²⁵

"Physical or mental impairment" means any physiological disorder or condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss affecting one or more of the following body systems: neurological, musculoskeletal, special sense organs, respiratory (including speech organs), cardiovascular, reproductive, digestive, genito-urinary, hemic and lymphatic, skin, and endocrine.ⁿ²⁶ It also includes any mental or psychological disorder, such as mental retardation, organic brain syndrome, emotional or mental illness, and specific learning disabilities.ⁿ²⁷ Examples of emotional or mental illnesses include major depression, bipolar disorder, anxiety disorders, schizophrenia, and personality disorders.ⁿ²⁸ However, personality traits or behaviors, such as irritability, chronic lateness, and poor judgment are not, in themselves, mental impairments, although they may be linked to mental impairments.ⁿ²⁹

In the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, Congress provided definitions for "major life activities" and other terms that were previously not defined in the Act. Under the ADA, effective January 1, 2009, "major life activities" include, but are not limited to, caring for oneself, performing manual tasks, seeing, hearing, eating, sleeping, walking, standing, lifting, bending, speaking, breathing, learning, reading, concentrating, thinking, communicating, and working.ⁿ³⁰ For these purposes, a major life activity also includes the operation of a major bodily function, including but not limited to, functions of the immune system, normal cell growth, digestive, bowel, bladder, neurological, brain, respiratory, circulatory, endocrine, and reproductive functions.ⁿ³¹

In a case brought under the public accommodation section of the ADAⁿ³² prior to the enactment of the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, the Supreme Court held that reproduction is also a "major life activity."ⁿ³³ The Ninth

Circuit also found in decisions before the ADA Amendments of 2008 that sleeping, engaging in sexual relations and interacting with others were major life activities within the scope of the ADA,ⁿ³⁴ and that broadly speaking, eating is a major life activity within the scope of the ADA.ⁿ³⁵ However, eating specific types of foods, or eating specific amounts of food, might or might not be a major life activity. In Fraser v. Goodale,ⁿ³⁶ decided before the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, the Ninth Circuit found that the type of eating a brittle diabetic alleged was a major life activity and fell within activities that are of central importance to most people's daily lives. The plaintiff had alleged that not only must she not eat certain foods, but also she must carefully assess her blood sugar before putting anything into her mouth. Thus, she argued that the physical activity of eating in general was impaired, and the court agreed that it was a major life activity under the ADA.ⁿ³⁷

In a case decided before the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, the Supreme Court held that HIV infection, from the moment of infection, is a significant impairment under the ADA.ⁿ³⁸ However, temporary, nonchronic impairments of short duration with little or no long-term or permanent impact are usually not found to be disabilities under the ADA.ⁿ³⁹ Thus, in a case decided before the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, the Ninth Circuit held that a temporary psychological impairment related to an employee's cancer did not qualify as a disability under the ADA.ⁿ⁴⁰

The term "substantially limits" in the definition of disability must be interpreted consistently with the findings and purposes of the ADA Amendments Act of 2008.ⁿ⁴¹ An impairment that substantially limits one major life activity need not limit other major life activities in order to be considered a disability.ⁿ⁴² An impairment that is episodic or in remission is a disability if it would substantially limit a major life activity when active.ⁿ⁴³

Under EEOC regulations promulgated before the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, an impairment "substantially" limited a disabled person's ability to work if it significantly restricted his or her ability to perform either a class of jobs or a broad range of jobs in various classes, as compared to the average person having comparable training, skills, and abilities.ⁿ⁴⁴ The inability to perform a single, particular job did not constitute a substantial limitation in this context.ⁿ⁴⁵ However, Congress has found that the current EEOC ADA regulations defining the term "substantially limits" as "significantly restricted" are inconsistent with congressional intent, by expressing too high a standard,ⁿ⁴⁶ and has expressed its expectation that the EEOC will revise that portion of its current regulations that defines the term "substantially limits" as "significantly restricted" to be consistent with the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, including the amendments made by the Act.ⁿ⁴⁷ In a case decided before the ADA Amendments Act of 2008 took effect, the Ninth Circuit held that under the regulations, the employee's testimony alone regarding the significance of the impairment is sufficient to create a genuine issue of material fact at the summary judgment stage, and plaintiff need not present comparative or medical evidence to establish a genuine issue of material fact regarding impairment of a major life activity.ⁿ⁴⁸

The regulations also provide that whether someone is substantially limited in a major life activity is to be examined using such factors as:ⁿ⁴⁹

- The nature and severity of the impairment.
- The duration or expected duration of the impairment.
- The permanent or long-term impact, or the expected permanent or long-term impact of, or resulting from, the impairment.

Congress did not address this aspect of the regulations in the ADA Amendments Act of 2008.

Under the ADA as amended by the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, the determination of whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity must be made without regard to the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures such as the following:ⁿ⁵⁰

- Medication.
- Medical supplies, equipment, or appliances.
- Low-vision devices, which do not include ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses.ⁿ⁵¹
- Prosthetics including limbs and devices, hearing aids and cochlear implants or other implantable hearing devices.
- Mobility devices.
- Oxygen therapy equipment and supplies.
- The use of assistive technology.
- Reasonable accommodations or auxiliary aids or services.ⁿ⁵²
- Learned behavioral or adaptive neurological modifications.

The ameliorative effects of the mitigating measures of ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses will be considered in determining whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity.ⁿ⁵³ The term "ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses" means lenses that are intended to fully correct visual acuity or eliminate refractive error.ⁿ⁵⁴

An individual has a record of impairment if he or she has a history of, or has been misclassified as having, a mental or physical impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities.ⁿ⁵⁵

An individual meets the requirement of "being regarded as having such an impairment"ⁿ⁵⁶ if the individual establishes that he or she has been subjected to an action prohibited under the ADA because of an actual or perceived physical or mental impairment, whether or not the impairment limits or is perceived to limit a major life activity.ⁿ⁵⁷ However, this does not apply to impairments that are transitory and minor. A transitory impairment is an impairment with an actual or expected duration of 6 months or less.ⁿ⁵⁸ An individual is regarded as having an impairment if he or she either has no impairment; has an impairment that does not substantially limit major life activities, but is treated by an employer as having a substantially limiting impairment; or has an impairment that substantially limits major life activities only as the result of the attitudes of others.ⁿ⁵⁹

Ninth Circuit precedent does not require comparative or medical evidence to establish a genuine issue of material fact regarding the impairment of a major life activity at the summary judgment stage. Rather, precedent supports the principle that a plaintiff's testimony may suffice to establish a genuine issue of material fact.ⁿ⁶⁰

Actionable disability discrimination under the ADA need not necessarily be directed at a disabled individual personally; thus, an employer may not exclude or deny equal job benefits to another person because he or she associates or has a relationship with a disabled person protected by the ADA.ⁿ⁶¹

Once plaintiff has presented a prima facie case of disability discrimination under the ADA, the employer is afforded the opportunity to demonstrate a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for the adverse employment action taken.^{n61.1} Should the employer succeed, the employee is then given the opportunity to show by specific, substantial evidence that the employer's explanation was a pretext by demonstrating that the proffered reason was not the true reason for the employment decision, and persuading the court that the employee has been the victim of intentional discrimination. The employee may do this either directly by persuading the court that a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the employer or indirectly by showing that the employer's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence.^{n61.2}

[b] Sections 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act

Section 503 prohibits discrimination by federal contractors against individuals with disabilities, and requires the contractors to take affirmative action to employ "qualified individuals with disabilities." It applies to contractors in any contract with a federal department or agency in excess of $10,000 for the procurement of personal property and nonpersonal services (including construction).ⁿ⁶² Section 504 prohibits discrimination against "otherwise qualified individuals" with disabilities by programs or activities that are conducted by federal agencies, or that receive federal funds.ⁿ⁶³

An "individual with disabilities" refers to a person who (1) has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the person's major life activities, (2) has a record of the impairment, and (3) is regarded as having such an impairment.ⁿ⁶⁴ A "physical or mental impairment" is defined by federal regulation as (1) any physiological disorder or condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss affecting one or more of the following body systems: neurological; musculoskeletal; special sense organs; respiratory, including speech organs; cardiovascular; reproductive; digestive; genitourinary; hemic and lymphatic; and endocrine; or (2) any mental or psychological disorder, such as mental retardation, organic brain syndrome, emotional or mental illness, and specific learning disabilities. "Physical or mental impairment" includes, but is not limited to, such diseases and conditions as orthopedic,ⁿ⁶⁵ visual, speech, and hearing impairments, cerebral palsy, epilepsy,ⁿ⁶⁶ muscular dystrophy, multiple sclerosis, cancer, heart disease,ⁿ⁶⁷ diabetes,ⁿ⁶⁸ mental retardation, emotional illness, and drug addiction and alcoholism.ⁿ⁶⁹ Other disorders not specifically enumerated, such as dyslexia,ⁿ⁷⁰ and even unusual sensitivity to tobacco smoke,ⁿ⁷¹ have also been recognized as "disabilities" for federal equal employment opportunity purposes.

A person is "substantially limited" if he or she is likely to experience difficulty in securing, retaining, or advancing in employment because of a disability.ⁿ⁷² "Major life activities" are functions such as caring for one's self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning, and working.ⁿ⁷³ There is no authority describing air travel as a major life activity under the Rehabilitation Act. There is authority denying a plaintiff relief under the Americans With Disabilities Act on grounds that travel is not a major life activity.^{n73.1} Even if the court were to recognize travel as a major life activity under the Rehabilitation Act, the employee would have to show that he or she is either unable to travel, or that the condition, manner, or duration under which he or she can travel is significantly restricted as compared to that of an average person.^{n73.2} However, Sections 503 and 504 do not encompass characteristics that simply make an individual incapable of performing specific tasksⁿ⁷⁴ or temporary conditions that have no permanent effect on a person's health.ⁿ⁷⁵

To have a record of an impairment that substantially limits a major life activity means to have a history of or to have been misclassified as having a mental or physical impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities.^{n75.1}

A person is regarded as being disabled if (1) a covered entity mistakenly believes a person has a physical impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities, or (2) a covered entity mistakenly believes that an actual, non-limiting impairment substantially limits one or more major life activities.^{n75.2}

The general definition of an "individual with a disability" includes an individual who has a currently contagious disease or infection unless that disease or infection makes the person a direct threat to the health or safety of other individuals, or renders the person unable to perform the duties of the job.ⁿ⁷⁶ For further discussion of contagious diseases as disabilities, see [3][b], below.

A "qualified handicapped individual" refers to a person who is able to perform a particular job, with reasonable accommodation to his or her disability.ⁿ⁷⁷

An "otherwise qualified individual with handicaps," a term unique to Section 504, has been construed by the United States Supreme Court to mean one who is able to meet all of a program's requirements in spite of his or her disability.ⁿ⁷⁸

[c] Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

The FEHA prohibits employment discrimination against individuals with physical disabilities, mental disabilities, or medical conditions, as specified.ⁿ⁷⁹ The FEHA provides protections against disability discrimination independent from those in the ADA.^{n79.1} Although the ADA provides a floor of protection, California law has always, even before passage of the ADA, afforded additional protections.^{n79.2} California law contains broad definitions of "physical disability," "mental disability," and "medical condition," and the Legislature intends that the definitions of physical and mental disability be construed so that job applicants and employees are protected from discrimination due to actual or perceived physical or mental impairment that is disabling, potentially disabling, or perceived to be disabling or potentially disabling.^{n79.3}

The FEHA defines "physical disability" as including, but not limited to, all of the following:ⁿ⁸⁰

1. Having any physiological disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss that does both of the following: (a) affects one or more of the following body systems: neurological, immunological, musculoskeletal, special sense organs, respiratory, including speech organs, cardiovascular, reproductive, digestive, genitourinary, hemic and lymphatic, skin, and endocrine; and (b) limits a major life activity;
2. Any other health impairment not described in Paragraph (1) that requires special education or related services;
3. Having a record or history of a disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, anatomical loss, or health impairment described in Paragraph (1) or (2);
4. Being regarded or treated by the employer or other covered entity as having, or having had, any physical condition that makes achievement of a major life activity difficult;^{n80.1} or
5. Being regarded or treated by the employer or other covered entity covered as having, or having had, a disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, anatomical loss, or health impairment that has no present disabling effect but may become a physical disability as described in paragraph (1) or (2).

"Physical disability" does not include sexual behavior disorders, compulsive gambling, kleptomania, pyromania, or psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from the current unlawful use of controlled substances or other drugs.^{n80.2}

The FEHA defines "mental disability" as any mental or psychological disorder, such as mental retardation, organic brain syndrome, emotional or mental illness, and specific learning disabilities that limit a major life activity.ⁿ⁸¹ The "regarded as" having a disability language in the FEHA applies only to those suffering certain specified physical disabilities or to those who have a condition with no present disabling effect but which may become a physical disability, and thus does not apply to mental disabilities.ⁿ⁸² California courts have split over whether a mental disability for FEHA purposes requires that the mental disability substantially limit a major life activity, as required by the ADA.ⁿ⁸³

Effective January 1, 2001, the Legislature added Gov. Code § 12926.1(c), which provides that the Legislature has determined that the definitions of "physical disability" and "mental disability" under California law require a "limitation" upon a major life activity, but not a "substantial limitation" as required by the ADA, which is intended to result in broader coverage under California law than under federal law.ⁿ⁸⁴

The California Supreme Court has concluded that the Legislature intended not to make a retroactive change, but only to clarify the degree of limitation required to be physically disabled under the FEHA. When the Legislature amended the FEHA in 1992, it defined physical disability as a physiological condition that "limits" major life activities. In 2000, the Legislature retained the "limits" language and clarified in express terms that a physical disability under the FEHA does not require the federal test's substantial limitation of a major life activity. According to the Court, before and after 2000, the FEHA's test was "limits," not "substantially limits".ⁿ⁸⁵ The Court found it unnecessary to decide whether the 2001 statute should be applied retroactively to cases predating its passage, since the same definition of physical disability would pertain in either case.^{n85.1}

Under the new statute the following definitions for both mental and physical disabilities apply: "Limits" are to be determined without regard to mitigating measures such as medications, assistive devices, prosthetics, or reasonable accommodations, unless the mitigating measure itself limits a major life activity.ⁿ⁸⁶ The term "major life activities" is to be broadly construed and includes physical, mental, and social activities and working.ⁿ⁸⁷ A physiological disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss limits a major life activity if it makes the achievement of the major life activity difficult.ⁿ⁸⁸ Pain alone does not always constitute or establish a disability.^{n88.1}

The FEHA list of "disabilities" is not restrictive; "physical disability" includes all physical conditions.ⁿ⁸⁹ⁿ⁹⁰ Under the FEHA, physical handicap is that which makes achievement "unusually difficult."ⁿ⁹¹ Disability discrimination is established by showing that an employment practice denies, in whole or in part, an employment benefit to an individual because he or she is an individual with a disability."ⁿ⁹²

Thus, any condition of the body, major or minor, that has a disabling effect is a "physical disability" under the FEHA.ⁿ⁹³ For example, one court of appeal has held that employees who were hypersensitive to tobacco smoke were "physically handicapped" because they suffered from respiratory disorders, and exposure to tobacco smoke substantially limited their ability to breathe. The court was mindful that tobacco smoke may be merely an "environmental limitation" to people who do not suffer severe respiratory disorders, but declared that someone who does suffer from such disorders and whose ability to breathe is severely limited by tobacco smoke is "physically disabled" within the meaning of the FEHA.ⁿ⁹⁴

However, according to the California Supreme Court, a qualifying physical disability under the FEHA, whether or not the cause of action arose before or after the 1992 amendments to Government Code Section 12926, must be caused by an actual or perceived physiological disorder affecting one or more of the basic bodily systems and limiting a major life activity.ⁿ⁹⁵ Thus, in Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc.,ⁿ⁹⁶ the Court found that a 300-pound woman denied a position at a health food store collective ostensibly because of her weight could not bring an action based on physical disability discrimination, because she had not shown that her obesity was caused by a systemic physical condition, and in fact had alleged that despite her weight, she was healthy and fit.

The FEHA prohibits discrimination not only against presently disabled individuals, but also against those with physical conditions that may disable them in the future.ⁿ⁹⁷ The California Supreme Court has applied this principle to high blood pressure.ⁿ⁹⁸ Similarly, a court of appeal has held that a person who contracts AIDS is protected by the FEHA, even if he or she is not presently disabled.ⁿ⁹⁹ Evidence that an employee had nondisabling symptoms during employment does not support an inference that the employer discriminated against the employee because of a potential disability; something more is needed. For example, an applicant for employment was unable to prove disability discrimination based on the employer's refusal to hire him due to its alleged belief that the applicant's high blood pressure exposed the applicant to a greater than normal risk of disability or death.^{n99.1}

In addition, the FEHA specifies that when the ADA definition of "disability" will provide greater protection to disabled individuals than that provided by the FEHA, then that broader protection is deemed incorporated by reference into the FEHA and prevails over any conflicting provisions of the definitions in Government Code Section 12926(i) and (k).ⁿ¹⁰⁰ The FEHA does not deem the unlawful use of controlled substances or other drugs in and of itself to constitute a physical or mental disability pursuant to the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁰¹ⁿ¹⁰² Under the ADA, homosexuality and bisexuality are not considered disabilities.ⁿ¹⁰³ Also excluded from the ADA definition of disability are (1) transvestism and other specified sexual "behavior disorders," (2) compulsive gambling, (3) kleptomania, (4) pyromania, and (5) psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from current illegal use of drugs.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

Because health insurance distinctions that apply equally to all cannot be discriminatory, a distinction that has a greater adverse impact on disabled individuals who require a particular form of treatment but not other disabled persons does not discriminate on the basis of disability within the meaning of the ADA or the FEHA. Thus, for example, an employer who provided healthcare insurance coverage for infertility, but not for individuals who experienced types of infertility that were treatable only through IVF, a particularly expensive form of treatment, did not discriminate on the basis of disability.^{n104.1}

Like the ADA, the first essential element under a disability discrimination claim under the FEHA is either that the plaintiff is disabled or is regarded as disabled.ⁿ¹⁰⁵ Plaintiff has the burden of proving the disability or perception of disability.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ Thus, for example, a trial court properly precluded a former employee from claiming that he had a qualifying actual physical disability, based on his clear, unequivocal, uncontroverted testimony that he did not have a disability. The employee's testimony had the conclusive effect of a judicial admission that his physical condition did not render difficult the achievement of any major life activity. The fact that his injury was considered "permanent and stationary" for workers' compensation purposes did not require that the issue of "actual" disability go to the jury.^{n106.1} However, the trial court, based on the employer's factual admissions, was obligated to determine that the employer had regarded him as disabled as a matter of law.^{n106.2} But an employer regarding an employee as disabled is not enough to give rise to a FEHA claim; an employer must make any employment decision based on the perceived disability.^{n106.3}

An employer does not have to accept an employee's subjective belief that the employee is disabled. The employer may rely on medical information in that respect.^{n106.4}

Plaintiff also has the burden of proving that the employer was aware of plaintiff's disability or medical condition at the time it took the challenged employment action.ⁿ¹⁰⁷ An employer knows an employee has a disability when the employee tells the employer about his condition, or when the employer otherwise becomes aware of the condition, such as through a third party or by observation. The employer need only know the underlying facts, not the legal significance of those facts.^{n107.1} An employee's leave of absence to undergo treatment or a doctor's recommendation that the employee be granted leave is a request for an accommodation that shows the employer's knowledge. Thus, for example, a former employee met the burden of showing that the employer was aware of his medical condition at the time it terminated his employment. The employee showed that a work status report from his chiropractor, which the employer received prior to the termination, advised the employer that the employee was unable to perform his regular job duties and specifically recommended a leave of absence.^{n107.2}

Under the FEHA, as under the ADA, a plaintiff must show that he or she is a qualified individual under the FEHA. Thus, plaintiff must show that he or she can perform the essential functions of the job with or without reasonable accommodation.^{n107.3} When an employee seeks accommodation by being reassigned to a vacant position in the company, the employee satisfies the "qualified individual with a disability" requirement by showing he or she can perform the essential functions of the vacant position with or without accommodation. The position must exist and be vacant, and the employer need not promote the disabled employee.^{n107.4}

The FEHA also prohibits an employer from failing to reasonably accommodate the known disability of an applicant or employee.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ The elements of a failure to accommodate claim are similar to those of a discrimination claim under

Gov. Code § 12940(a), except that the plaintiff proves that he or she is a qualified individual by establishing that he or she can perform the essential functions of the position to which reassignment is sought, rather than those of the existing position. The plaintiff also need not show that his or her disability resulted in an adverse employment action because the failure to accommodate is itself a violation of the statute.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ An employer cannot prevail on summary judgment on a claim of failure to reasonably accommodate unless the employer establishes one of the following through undisputed facts:ⁿ¹¹⁰

1. Reasonable accommodation was offered and refused.
2. There was no vacant position within the employer's organization for which the disabled employee was qualified and which the disabled employee was capable of performing with or without accommodation.
3. The employer did everything in its power to find a reasonable accommodation, but the informal, interactive process broke down because the employee failed to engage in discussions in good faith.

However, an employer need not accommodate the individual if it can demonstrate that the accommodation would produce an undue hardship on the operation of its business.ⁿ¹¹¹ In addition, an employer is excused from refusing to hire or discharging a disabled employee if the employee, because of his or her disability, is unable to perform his or her essential duties, even with reasonable accommodation, or if the employee is unable to perform those duties without endangering his or her own health or safety or that of others.ⁿ¹¹² For further discussion of undue hardship, see § 41.52[4][a] and of reasonable accommodation, see § 41.51. For further discussion of employee's inability to perform job or danger to health and safety, see § 41.97.

In contrast to federal law, the FEHA also prohibits discrimination based on "medical condition."ⁿ¹¹³ "Medical condition" is defined to include (1) genetic characteristics and (2) any health impairment related to or associated with a diagnosis of cancer when competent medical evidence demonstrates that the cancer victim has been rehabilitated or cured.ⁿ¹¹⁴

To be actionable under FEHA, an employment action taken on the basis of an employee's disability or medical condition must be adverse. Thus, for example, denying a fire captain his desired assignment to platoon duty and limiting him to special duty assignments after he lost his leg in a work-related accident, which offered him positions with comparable pay and promotion opportunities, was not an adverse employment action under FEHA's disability discrimination prohibition.ⁿ¹¹⁵

Proof in a FEHA action follows the same structure as other employment discrimination cases: (1) the employee presents a prima facie case; (2) if the employee successfully presents a prima facie case, the employer is given the opportunity to present a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the action taken; and (3) if the employer successfully presents a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the discharge, the employee is given the opportunity to present evidence showing that the employer's articulated reason for the employment action was a pretext for discrimination.ⁿ¹¹⁶ⁿ¹¹⁷⁻¹²¹

[3] Issues Relating to Specific "Disabilities"

[a] Alcoholism and Drug Abuse

Neither the ADA nor the Rehabilitation Act expressly define alcoholism or drug addiction as covered "disabilities" (although a Justice Department regulation implementing Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act does).ⁿ¹²² Those statutes do, however, imply that drug addiction is a covered disability since they protect abusers who are being or have been rehabilitated, and who no longer use illegal drugs.ⁿ¹²³ By contrast, an individual who is currently engaging in the illegal use of drugs is not "disabled" within the meaning of either statute,ⁿ¹²⁴ and psychoactive substance use disorders resulting from current illegal drug use are not "disabilities" under either Act.ⁿ¹²⁵ For example, in Collings v. Longview Fibre Company,ⁿ¹²⁶ a Ninth Circuit panel held that employees who claimed they were discharged because of their alleged drug addiction disability were actually fired for their drug-related misconduct at the workplace, rather than because of any disability. The court also held that the employees were not covered under the ADA because of the exception for currently engaging in illegal drug use. The court explained that the term is not intended to be limited to the use of drugs on the day of the adverse employment action or immediately preceding it, but rather to the use of drugs that has occurred recently enough to indicate that the employee was actively engaging in such conduct.ⁿ¹²⁷ In Brown v. Lucky Stores, Inc.,ⁿ¹²⁸ the Ninth Circuit found that the plaintiff did not present any evidence that she was terminated because of her status as an alcoholic, as is required to prove an ADA claim. Rather, the evidence showed that the employer terminated her pursuant to its general policy that three consecutive unexcused absences from work warrant termination. The court also held that the plaintiff was not entitled to the "safe harbor" protection of the ADA, which protects employees who have successfully completed a rehabilitation program or have otherwise been successfully rehabilitated and are no longer engaging in the illegal use of drugs,ⁿ¹²⁹ even though she had participated in a rehabilitation program. Mere participation in a rehabilitation program is not enough to trigger the "safe harbor" protections. Refraining from illegal use of drugs also is essential, and plaintiff's continuing use of drugs and alcohol was clearly an ongoing problem, as demonstrated by her incarceration for driving while intoxicated and possession of methamphetamine. Because she had not refrained from the use of drugs and alcohol for a sufficient length of time, she was not entitled to the "safe harbor" protections.

In Raytheon Co. v. Hernandez,ⁿ¹³⁰ the United States Supreme Court reversed the Ninth Circuit, holding that the Ninth Circuit improperly determined that the employer's unwritten policy not to rehire employees who left the company for violating personal conduct rules had a disparate impact on recovering drug addicts, when the proper issue was whether the employer engaged in disparate treatment in refusing to rehire the employee because of his disability.

The Ninth Circuit held that the policy contravened the ADA, at least as applied to employees lawfully forced to resign for illegal drug use but who have since been rehabilitated. The employee was forced to resign because he tested positive for and admitted cocaine use and his workplace behavior violated company rules. He later applied to be rehired, with references as to his rehabilitation from substance abuse. His application was rejected under the company policy against rehiring employees terminated for workplace misconduct. The employee who rejected his application testified that she did not know he was a former drug addict when she made the decision and did not see anything that would constitute a record of addiction.

The Supreme Court vacated the Ninth Circuit's opinion because it found that the Ninth Circuit, while ostensibly evaluating whether the employer had proffered a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for failing to rehire the former employee, sufficient to rebut his prima facie showing of disparate treatment, held that a neutral no-rehire policy could never suffice when the employee was terminated for illegal drug use, because that policy has a disparate impact on recovering drug addicts. Thus, the Ninth Circuit erred by conflating the analytical framework for disparate-impact and disparate-treatment claims. Had the Ninth Circuit correctly applied the disparate-treatment framework, it would have been obliged to conclude that a neutral no-rehire policy is, by definition, a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason under the ADA. The only remaining question would be whether the employee could produce sufficient evidence from which a jury could conclude that the employer's stated reason for rejecting him was a pretext for discrimination under the ADA. On remand, the Ninth Circuit held that viewing the record in the light most favorable to the employee, it gave rise to a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the decision not to re-hire him was based on his status as an alcoholic, and that a reasonable juror could find that, despite the testimony of the employee who rejected him to the contrary, she was aware of the fact that the employee had been a substance-abuser and based her decision not to rehire him on that ground. Further, a finder of fact could reasonably infer that his history of addiction, not an oral policy, actually motivated the decision not to re-hire him.ⁿ¹³¹

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Collings v. Longview Fibre Company ⁿ¹³² answers the question whether the Americans with Disabilities Act prohibits the termination of employees who previously used, possessed or sold drugs on company property, but who are "drug-free" at the time they are terminated.

The facts may be briefly stated. Longview retained an undercover investigator to investigate rumors that its manufacturing plant employees engaged in drug activities on the job. The investigator worked undercover for six months, and reported on the employees' drug activities. The Company thereafter interviewed and took statements from eighteen of its employees, most of whom admitted that they or other employees had used, possessed, or sold drugs on the job. As a result of this investigation, the Company terminated seventeen of the eighteen employees it interviewed for violation of its strictly-enforced drug policy.

Eight of these terminated employees sued Longview for, among other things, violation of Title I of the ADA. Seven of these employees claimed that, while they had drug abuse problems in the past, they either had or would soon complete rehabilitation programs, and that they were "drug-free" at the time of their discharges. The eighth employee denied drug use and claimed that he was erroneously perceived as engaging in drug use. Accordingly, all of the employees claimed that they were "qualified individuals with disabilities" under the ADA, and that Longview violated the Act by terminating their employment.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals rejected the employees' claim for three basic reasons. First, the Ninth Circuit distinguished between terminating employees because of misconduct, and terminating of employees because of their disabilities. The Court reasoned that, while the latter is prohibited by the ADA, the former is not. In particular, it explained that "[a]lcoholics and drug addicts are not exempt from reasonable rules of conduct, such as prohibitions against the possession or use of alcohol or drugs in the workplace," and that "employers must be allowed to terminate their employees on account of misconduct irrespective of whether the employee is [disabled]." The Court further explained that Longview believed its employees had engaged in drug-related misconduct, and did not terminate their employment because of their purported disabilities. Accordingly, the employees could not make out a violation of the ADA.

Second, the Court rejected the notion that employees can invoke the ADA's protection merely by claiming to be "drug-free" on the day of their termination. The ADA protects only "qualified individuals with disabilities." According to the Court, this term can include "individuals who have successfully completed or are participating in a supervised drug rehabilitation program and are no longer using illegal drugs, as well as individuals who are erroneously regarded as using drugs when in fact they are not." The Court further recognized, however, that the ADA exempts from coverage individuals who are "currently engaging in the illegal use of drugs when the employer acts on the basis of such use." In this case, the Court found that Longview's employees were "currently engaging" in the use of illegal drugs even though they claimed to be "drug-free" when they were terminated. The Court cited to the EEOC's regulations interpreting Title I of the ADA, and explained that " 'currently engaging' is not intended to be limited to the use of drugs on the day, or within a matter of days or weeks before, the employment action in question. Rather, the provision is intended to apply to the illegal use of drugs that has occurred recently enough to indicate that the individual is actively engaged in such conduct Therefore, the fact that [the employees] may have been drug-free on the day of their discharge is not dispositive. Their own admissions of drug involvement during the weeks and months prior to their discharge indicated that they were recently involved in drug-related misconduct." (Emphasis added.)

Third, the Court held that the ADA did not prohibit Longview from terminating an employee who denied engaging in drug-related activities. It explained that the Company terminated its employees because it concluded that its employees had violated a "justified occupational standard" prohibiting alcohol- and drug-related misconduct. The court reasoned that termination of an employee "on the basis of those isolated, specific incidents is not the equivalent of perceiving that [the employee] suffered from a disability and was fired solely because of that perceived condition." Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Similarly, alcoholism is not a "disability" under the Rehabilitation Act if the current use of alcohol prevents an alcoholic from performing his or her job duties or threatens the property or safety of others.ⁿ¹³³

Under the ADA and the Rehabilitation Act, a "drug" is a controlled substance, as defined in the Controlled Substances Act.ⁿ¹³⁴ An "illegal use of drugs" is the use of drugs that are unlawful under that statute. It does not include the use of a drug taken under supervision by a licensed health care professional, or other uses authorized by the Controlled Substances Act or other federal law.ⁿ¹³⁵

Alcoholism and narcotics addiction are not "mental disabilities" or "physical disabilities" under the FEHA.ⁿ¹³⁶ However, provisions of the California Labor Codeⁿ¹³⁷ require all California employers with 25 or more employees to reasonably accommodate any employee who wishes to enter and participate in a drug or alcohol rehabilitation program if it is not "an undue hardship" to do so.ⁿ¹³⁸ The Labor Code does not prohibit an employer from refusing to hire, or from discharging, an employee who is unable to perform his or her duties, or cannot perform them without endangering the health or safety of the employer or others;ⁿ¹³⁹ nor does it require an employer to provide time off with pay, unless the employee chooses to use accrued sick leave.ⁿ¹⁴⁰ For further discussion of the Labor Code provisions regarding alcohol and drug rehabilitation, see Chapter 50, Part D.

[b] Contagious Diseases

In general, contagious diseases constitute "disabilities" under federal and state law. The ADA does not expressly so provide, but in School Board of Nassau County v. Arline,ⁿ¹⁴¹ the United States Supreme Court determined that an employee suffering from tuberculosis was a disabled person under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act because she had a "physical impairment" that was a "physiological disorder or condition ... affecting [her] ... respiratory [system]."ⁿ¹⁴² The Court also explained that since the impairment was serious enough to require hospitalization, it was more than sufficient to establish that one or more of the employee's major life activities were substantially limited.ⁿ¹⁴³ The hospitalization also established a record of impairment, as required by Section 504.ⁿ¹⁴⁴ Presumably, cases will construe the ADA similarly since the ADA expressly provides that it does not apply a lesser standard than the Rehabilitation Act or the regulations promulgated thereunder.ⁿ¹⁴⁵ However, the ADA does provide that employers may deny jobs to food handlers with specified infectious and communicable diseases if reasonable accommodation is not possible.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ For further discussion, see § 41.97.

Although Arline held that a contagious disease can satisfy the definition of "handicap" under Section 504, the case was remanded for a determination of whether the plaintiff met the "otherwise qualified" requirement of Section 504. In particular, the Court held that, on remand, the trial court must determine, based on medical evidence about the nature, severity, and duration of the risk of contagion, the following questions: (1) whether the plaintiff would infect others with her disease, and (2) whether the employer could reasonably accommodate her.ⁿ¹⁴⁷

The Court specifically declined to answer the question of whether a person with AIDS "could be considered, solely on the basis of contagiousness, a person with a disability as defined by [Section 504]."ⁿ¹⁴⁸ However, in 1988, subsequent to Arline, Congress amended the Rehabilitation Act to provide that the term "individual with a disability" does not include an individual who has a currently contagious disease or infection if, because of such disease or infection, the individual (1) would constitute a direct threat to the health or safety of other individuals, or (2) is unable to perform the duties of the job.ⁿ¹⁴⁹

[c] HIV and AIDS Status

In Chalk v. U.S. Dist. Court Cent. Dist. of California,ⁿ¹⁵⁰ a teacher suffering from AIDS was relieved of his teaching duties and given an administrative position with no reduction of salary or benefits. Alleging that the school district had violated Section 504, the teacher sought to enjoin the district from preventing his return to teaching.ⁿ¹⁵¹ In determining whether a preliminary injunction should issue, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals had to evaluate, among other things, whether there was a probability of success on the merits. Relying on Arline, the court preliminarily concluded that AIDS is a contagious disease protected by Section 504.ⁿ¹⁵² and held that the teacher had demonstrated a strong probability of success on the merits.ⁿ¹⁵³ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that HIV infection and AIDS are disabilities within the meaning of the Rehabilitation Act,ⁿ¹⁵⁴ but held that denial of certain positions, such as food handling, did not violate the Rehabilitation Act.ⁿ¹⁵⁵ Also, whether a particular requested accommodation is a reasonable one, can be a question of fact.ⁿ¹⁵⁶

In Bragdon v. Abbott, a case brought under the public accommodation section of the ADA,ⁿ¹⁵⁷ the United States Supreme Court held that HIV-infected persons, even if asymptomatic, are significantly impaired in a major life activity.ⁿ¹⁵⁸ Although the plaintiff in Bragdon claimed an impairment of only one major life activity (reproduction), the Court noted that the pervasive course of HIV disease has an impact on many sorts of major life activities.ⁿ¹⁵⁹

Since the FEHA specifies that it includes protection for individuals having a disease that affects their immunological system,ⁿ¹⁶⁰ individuals who have AIDS or who are HIV-positive are protected under the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁶¹ Prior to the amendment to the FEHA making that specific inclusion, one California court of appeal had held that AIDS is a protected handicap under the FEHA, and found that there was no evidence to support an employer's assertion that the employee who had contracted AIDS posed a danger to the health or safety of other employees.ⁿ¹⁶² Additionally, under Government Code Section 12965, any city, county, or district attorney with an enforcement unit established by local ordinance on or before March 1, 1991, for the purpose of prosecuting AIDS/HIV discrimination claims may bring a civil action under the FEHA against an employer on behalf of any person claiming to be aggrieved due to AIDS/HIV discrimination.ⁿ¹⁶³

The three-stage burden-shifting test established by the United States Supreme Court in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green ^{n163.1} for trying claims of discrimination based on a theory of disparate treatment applies to discrimination claims made under the FEHA,^{n163.2} and specifically to individual claims of disparate treatment disability discrimination under FEHA based on AIDS or HIV-positive status.^{n163.3} The plaintiff has the initial burden of establishing a prima facie case of discrimination. To meet this burden, the plaintiff must, at a minimum, show the employer took actions from which, if unexplained, it can be inferred that it is more likely than not that such actions were based on a prohibited discriminatory criterion. A prima facie case generally means the plaintiff must provide evidence of each of the following:^{n163.4}

- 1) Plaintiff was a member of a protected class.
- 2) Plaintiff was qualified for the position he or she sought or was performing competently in the position held.
- 3) Plaintiff suffered an adverse employment action, such as termination, demotion, or denial of an available job.
- 4) Some other circumstance suggests a discriminatory motive.

If the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case, a presumption of discrimination arises, and the burden shifts to the employer to rebut the presumption by producing admissible evidence sufficient to raise a genuine issue of material fact the employer took its actions for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason.^{n163.5} If the employer meets that burden, the presumption of discrimination disappears, and the plaintiff must challenge the employer's proffered reasons as pretexts for discrimination or offer other evidence of a discriminatory motive.^{n163.6} A defendant employer's motion for summary judgment slightly modifies the order of these McDonnell Douglas showings. If the motion for summary judgment relies in whole or in part on a showing of nondiscriminatory reasons for the discharge, the employer satisfies its burden as moving party if it presents evidence of nondiscriminatory reasons that would permit a trier of fact to find, more likely than not, that they were the basis for the termination.^{n163.7} To defeat the motion, the employee must adduce or point to evidence raising a triable issue, that would permit a trier of fact to find by a preponderance that intentional discrimination occurred.^{n163.8} For example, in Scotch v. Art Institute of California, ^{n163.9} the employer met its initial burden of presenting evidence of a nondiscriminatory reason for placing an instructor who was HIV positive on a part-time status that would have permitted a trier of fact to find, more likely than not, the stated reasons were the basis for placing him on part-time status. However, the instructor failed to present evidence showing he suffered a physical disability within the meaning of the FEHA, he was otherwise qualified for his job, and he suffered an adverse employment action because of the physical disability. He did establish that he was HIV positive and therefore had a physical disability under the FEHA and that he suffered an adverse employment decision in the decision to place him on part-time status. However, he failed to present evidence creating triable issues as to whether he was otherwise qualified for the job and whether he suffered an adverse employment action because of the physical disability, i.e., whether the employer's stated reason for reducing his course assignments, i.e., that he did not have a master's degree, was a pretext, because he failed to show a causal link between his revelation he was HIV positive and the decision to implement the master's degree requirement.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Although the clarification of the Rehabilitation Act's applicability to persons with contagious diseases came in the form of a statutory amendment, it qualifies rather than supplants the general definition of "individual with a disability." Moreover, its formulation is very similar to the Arline standard. The United States Department of Justice has concluded in a memorandum that the new statutory formulation leads to results that are "substantively identical" to the standard set forth in Arline, ⁿ¹⁶⁴ which represents a dramatic about-face from the Justice Department's previous position on discrimination against individuals with contagious diseases like AIDS. The Justice Department's memorandum concludes that an HIV carrier who is not currently impaired may be protected if his or her ability to work is substantially limited by the negative reactions of others. The author of the memorandum stated at a news conference, "We believe that Arline means you cannot use contagion as a way of removing a person from a job. The whole point of the Act is to make sure that people are considered on their qualities on a person-by-person basis. ..." ⁿ¹⁶⁵ Commentary by Erica B. Grubb.

[d] Homosexuality and Bisexuality, Sexual Practices, and Compulsive Behavior Disorders

Homosexuality and bisexuality are not "impairments" and therefore are not "disabilities" under the ADA or the Rehabilitation Act.ⁿ¹⁶⁶

The term "disability" under the ADA and Rehabilitation Act also does not include any of the following:ⁿ¹⁶⁷

1. Transvestism,ⁿ¹⁶⁸ transsexualism, pedophilia, exhibitionism, voyeurism, gender identity disorders not resulting from physical impairments, or other sexual behavior disorders; or
2. Compulsive gambling, kleptomania, or pyromania.

The FEHA also excludes the conditions listed above from disability discrimination coverage.ⁿ¹⁶⁹ However, the FEHA also bars discrimination and harassment based on sexual orientation, which is defined to include heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality, as an unlawful practice.ⁿ¹⁷⁰

[e] Obesity

As noted in § 41.32[2][c], obesity is not a protected physical disability under the FEHA unless it can be shown that the condition is caused by an actual or perceived physiological disorder affecting one or more of the basic bodily systems and limiting a major life activity.ⁿ¹⁷¹ The Court made a distinction between obesity caused by a specific medical condition beyond the individual's control, which is a protected disability under the court's holding, and obesity as a condition of choice, i.e., the voluntary action or inaction of the individual, which is not a covered disability.ⁿ¹⁷²

Similarly, with regard to the category of perceived disability, i.e., where an employer regards an individual as disabled because of overweight, the California Supreme Court decision in Cassista requires that the individual must also be regarded as having an underlying physiological disorder within the meaning of the FEHA, even if it is not in fact disabling.ⁿ¹⁷³

[f] Uncorrected and Monocular Vision

Under the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, effective January 1, 2009,ⁿ¹⁷⁴ Congress clarified that an employer may not use qualification standards, employment tests, or other selection criteria based on an individual's uncorrected vision unless the standard, test, or other selection criteria, as used by the covered entity, is shown to be job-related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity.ⁿ¹⁷⁵ⁿ¹⁷⁶

In a case decided prior to the ADA Amendments Act of 2008, the Ninth Circuit found that for an individual with monocular vision to show that the impairment is a substantial limitation on the major life activity of seeing, the impairment must prevent or severely restrict use of the individual's eyesight compared with the way unimpaired individuals normally use their eyesight in daily life.ⁿ¹⁷⁷ The same standard applies to whether an individual is "regarded as" having an impairment that substantially limits the major life activity of seeing, i.e., the employer must regard the vision impairment as substantially limiting the overall ability to see for daily living.ⁿ¹⁷⁸

Under the FEHA, monocular vision is a physical disability.ⁿ¹⁷⁹ Monocularity qualifies as a physiological disease, disorder, condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss that affects one of the body systems listed in the first prong of FEHA's definition of physical disability.ⁿ¹⁸⁰ In EEOC v. United Parcel Service, Inc., the Ninth Circuit found that UPS employees with monocular vision were limited in the major life activity of seeing and in the major life activity of working and thus were individuals with a disability under the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁸¹ However, the court also found that UPS satisfied the safety-of-others defense under the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁸²

[g] Diabetes

Under the ADA, diabetes is a "physical impairment" because it affects the digestive, hemic and endocrine systems, and eating is a "major life activity."ⁿ¹⁸³ Once an impairment is found, the issue is whether the individual's diabetes substantially limits the individual's activity of eating, which is an individualized inquiry.ⁿ¹⁸⁴

For example, in Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District,ⁿ¹⁸⁵ the district court erred in concluding that plaintiff's diabetes did not substantially limit his activity of eating. Plaintiff was an insulin-dependent type 2 diabetic. To determine whether he was substantially limited in his eating, the appellate court compared the condition, manner or duration under which plaintiff could eat as compared to the condition, manner or duration under which the average person in the general population could eat.ⁿ¹⁸⁶ The fact that plaintiff simply differed from the average person in how he performed a major life activity was "patently insufficient" for a substantial limitation.ⁿ¹⁸⁷ Rather, in deciding whether the impairment was substantially limiting, the court considered the nature and severity of the plaintiff's impairment, the duration or expected duration of the impairment, and the permanent or long term impact of the impairment.ⁿ¹⁸⁸ The court considered not only whether the symptoms of plaintiff's diabetes substantially limited one of his major life activities, but also whether his efforts to mitigate the disease constituted a substantial limitation, considering the effectiveness, side effects and burdens of his mitigating measures.ⁿ¹⁸⁹

The court concluded that plaintiff raised a genuine issue of material fact as to whether his diabetes substantially limited his life activity of eating. The record was replete with statements by plaintiff and his doctors that to manage his disease plaintiff was required to strictly monitor what and when he ate. Plaintiff stated that these restrictions constrain him every day, whether it was a workday, a weekend or a holiday. He could not eat large meals or skip meals, and had to eat a snack every few hours. He had to schedule each day's blood tests, medications and food intake. He sometimes became weak and dizzy without warning, and only when he ate something did the sensations quickly subside. If he failed to follow his diet regimen for more than a meal or two, his blood sugar rose to a level that aggravated his disease. Plaintiff and his wife no longer scheduled frequent trips during vacation time, because it was increasingly difficult for him to follow his diet during travel. His dietary regimen was consistent with that recommended by the American Diabetes Association for type 2 diabetics, who must carefully plan their meals because it is important for them to eat at the same time every day and ensure that they have the same proportion of fats, proteins and carbohydrates. The complications of type 2 diabetes require immediate care and, if left untreated, can cause seizures and coma; they include high blood sugar (hyperglycemia), low blood sugar (hypoglycemia), increased ketones (which cause loss of appetite, nausea, vomiting, fever and stomach pain), heart and blood vessel disease, nerve damage, kidney damage, eye damage, foot damage, skin and mouth conditions, osteoporosis and Alzheimer's disease.ⁿ¹⁹⁰ For people like plaintiff, who had to treat their diabetes with insulin, the failure to take insulin will result in severe problems and eventually death.ⁿ¹⁹¹ Further, insulin injections themselves can be dangerous. For plaintiff, it was difficult to determine how much insulin to take, as the necessary amount varied depending on the food and activity level. Generally, food raises blood glucose levels while exercise and insulin reduce them. But other factors play a role, such as mental stress, illness and injury. To obtain the appropriate balance, plaintiff had to test his blood glucose levels through a finger stick test numerous times a day, and adjust insulin, food and activity level according to the results. If daily insulin injections alone more or less stabilized his blood sugar levels, such that any limitation imposed on his diet would have been minor, then his major life activity of eating might not have been substantially limited.ⁿ¹⁹² However, plaintiff alleged substantial limitations on his eating in spite of his medicine and insulin. He had to snack regularly, plan his daily schedule around his diet, avoid skipping meals and eat immediately when he felt dizzy or light-headed. The general population does not have to snack on something every few hours to regulate sugar intake; moreover, the general population is not medically required to plan daily schedules around a dietary regimen. Straying from a diet for more than one or two meals is not a cause for medical concern for most people, and skipping a meal, or eating a large one, does not expose them to the risk of fainting. For plaintiff, the effort required to control his diet was itself substantially limiting. Thus, plaintiff raised a genuine issue of material fact as to whether he was significantly restricted as to the condition, manner or duration in which he could eat, compared to the general population, and a genuine issue of fact existed as to whether he had a disability.

Although the court found it unnecessary to determine if the ADAAA applied retroactively, because the plaintiff presented sufficient evidence under the pre-ADAAA ADA to withstand summary judgment, the court opined that the ADAAA clarified Congress's intent with respect to the term "disability" in three major ways that could affect whether ADA protections are extended to persons with diabetes:ⁿ¹⁹³

- The ADAAA makes clear that eating is a major life activity under the ADA.ⁿ¹⁹⁴
- The ADAAA states that the standard articulated in Toyota,ⁿ¹⁹⁵ that "substantially limits" meant "prevents or severely restricts" created an inappropriately high level of limitation necessary to obtain coverage under the ADA. In this respect, Congress decided that the pre-ADAAA EEOC regulations, which defined the term "substantially limits" as "significantly restricted," required a greater degree of limitation than Congress intended in passing the ADA in 1990, and instructed the EEOC to revise its definition.ⁿ¹⁹⁶
- The ADAAA rejects the requirement enunciated in Sutton ⁿ¹⁹⁷ that whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity is to be determined with reference to mitigating measures.ⁿ¹⁹⁸ The ADAAA makes explicit that the "substantially limits" inquiry must be made without regard to the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures such as medication, medical supplies, equipment, or appliances; use of assistive technology; reasonable accommodations or auxiliary aids or services; or learned behavioral or adaptive neurological modifications.ⁿ¹⁹⁹ Impairments are to be evaluated in their unmitigated state, so that, for example, diabetes will be assessed in terms of its limitations on major life activities when the diabetic does not take insulin injections or medicine and does not require behavioral adaptations such as a strict diet.ⁿ²⁰⁰

The American Diabetes Association has heralded the ADAAA as making clear that Congress intends for people with conditions such as diabetes to be covered by the law and protected from discrimination on the basis of their diabetes.ⁿ²⁰¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Age Discrimination
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Age Discrimination
Federal & State Interrelationships

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 U.S.C. § 793 (Section 503).

(n5)Footnote 5. See 29 U.S.C. § 794 (Section 504).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 38 U.S.C. § 4211 et seq.

(n7)Footnote 7. See 38 U.S.C. § 4212.

(n8)Footnote 8. Gov. Code § 12940(a); see Gov. Code § 12926(h) ("medical condition" defined).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Gov. Code § 11135.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code § 1735.

(n11)Footnote 10.1. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721. For discussion of the Cartwright Act, see § 40.14[4].

(n12)Footnote 11. See 42 U.S.C. § 12112; 29 C.F.R. § 1630.4; see also Ventura County Ry. Co. v. Hadley Auto Transport (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 878, 881, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362 (party entitled to sue is person injured, and not person causing injury; thus, railroad whose train disabled driver in collision could not recover payments to driver from driver's employer, under ADA; Congress did not intend to give tortfeasor substantial rights to mitigate damages).

(n13)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a).

(n14)Footnote 13. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(1).

(n15)Footnote 13.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(2); see Cripe v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 877, 892 (city's contract with police union, which had effect of subjecting plaintiff officers with injuries to discrimination by imposing impermissible qualification standards that screened out disabled officers, could not survive under ADA because no exception applied).

(n16)Footnote 13.2. Sutton v. United Air Lines (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 490-493, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450

, overruled by statute on other grounds [see P.L. 110-325, §§ 1, 2]; see § 41.42[2][m.1].

(n17)Footnote 14. See § 41.51 of the text; Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1135-1136 (if leave of absence would reasonably accommodate disability and permit returning employee to perform essential functions of job, employee is otherwise qualified under ADA).

(n18)Footnote 14.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8); see Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 863-864 (employee presented sufficient evidence to withstand employer's motion for summary judgment, where diabetes did not prevent plaintiff from performing bulk of his job, which was mostly office work; although it did prevent him from participating in out-of-town and overnight field assignments to repair outages, parties disputed whether field assignments were essential function of his job, and employer's own medical staff stated he was physically able to perform essential functions of his job with accommodations as outlined); Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1087-1090 (although employee failed to show he was qualified for position without reasonable accommodation, because there was no evidence that his epileptic seizures were under control at time of his termination, there was genuine issue of material fact as to whether he was qualified with reasonable accommodation, where employee requested accommodation through temporary change in duties, reassignment to new position or use of accumulated sick leave or medical leave without pay); Kaplan v. City of North Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1226, 1231 (because deputy marshal after injury needed accommodation to perform essential job functions at time of termination, court was required to determine whether he was entitled to reasonable accommodation to help him perform essential functions of peace officer position); Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1111 ("qualified individual with a disability" includes individuals who could perform essential functions of reassignment position, with or without reasonable accommodation, even if they cannot perform essential functions of their current positions); Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1246-1247 (error to base total disability determination on condition during medical leave without considering reasonableness of extended leave as accommodation); see also Braunling v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 220 F.3d 1154, 1157-1158 (plaintiff, not qualified for job as senior underwriting supervisor, failed to demonstrate that her reduced performance was attributable to defendant's failure to transfer her away from her supervisor, which was her suggested accommodation).

(n19)Footnote 15. Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1087; Hutton v. Elf Atochem North America, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 273 F.3d 884, 892.

(n20)Footnote 15.1. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(n)(1), (2).

(n21)Footnote 15.2. Hernandez v. Hughes Missile Sys. Co. (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 1030, 1033; Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1246. See also Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 988-996 (because district court did not analyze whether named plaintiff and class members were qualified individuals capable of performing essential function of safely driving package car in framework of employer's use of federal qualification standard (nor did it directly undertake qualified individual inquiry), Ninth Circuit remanded for employees to prove they are qualified and for analysis of reasonable accommodation).

(n22)Footnote 15.3. Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 990. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(m); 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8). See also Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1135; EEOC v. Convergys Customer Management Group, Inc. (8th Cir. 2007) 491 F.3d 790, 794-95; Branham v. Snow (7th Cir. 2004) 392 F.3d 896, 904.

(n23)Footnote 15.4. Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 990; Kennedy v. Applause, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 90 F.3d 1477, 1481.

(n24)Footnote 15.5. Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 990. See 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8) (directing fact finders to consider, among other things, employer's judgment as to what functions of job are essential and job descriptions prepared before advertising or interviewing applicants; 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(n)(3)(iii), (iv), (vi), (vii) (directing fact finders to consider amount of time spent on job performing function, consequences of not requiring applicant or employee to perform function, and work experience of current and former employees). See also EEOC v. Wal-Mart (8th Cir. 2007) 477 F.3d 561, 568 .

(n25)Footnote 15.6. See, e.g., McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 800-03, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (individual disparate-treatment case); Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 334-36, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (pattern-or-practice disparate-treatment case).

(n26)Footnote 15.7. Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 988 (burden-shifting protocol was unnecessary, where hearing standard at issue was facially discriminatory qualification standard because it focused directly on individual's disabling or potentially disabling condition and fact that employer made employment decision based on disability in form of hearing impairment was not in dispute); McGregor v. AMTRAK (9th Cir. 1999) 187 F.3d 1113, 1116 policy requiring employees to be 100% healed or fully healed after injury was facially discriminatory and constituted per se violation of ADA). See Monette v. Elec. Data Sys. Corp. (6th Cir. 1996) 90 F.3d 1173, 1182-83 (noting that when a defendant admits to taking account of disability status, McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting framework is unnecessary). For discussion of the McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting framework generally, see § 41.11, above.

(n27)Footnote 15.8. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(n)(3). See Cripe v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 877, 887-889 (factual dispute existed regarding whether ability to make forcible arrest is essential job function of specialized-assignment positions that police officers with injuries sought opportunity to fill, notwithstanding job descriptions defendant police department prepared); Kees v. Wallenstein (9th Cir. 1998) 161 F.3d 1196, 1199 (considering 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(n) factors, inmate contact is essential job function of correctional officer position).

(n28)Footnote 15.9. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8); Cripe v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 877, 887 .

(n29)Footnote 15.10. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8); see Cripe v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 877, 887 (job description not conclusive; employer may not turn every condition of employment it elects to adopt into essential job function merely by including it in job description); Echazabal v. Chevron USA, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 226 F.3d 1063, 1071 (same).

(n30)Footnote 15.11. See Kennedy v. Applause, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 90 F.3d 1477, 1481 .

(n31)Footnote 15.12. See Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1246 (court erred in holding that applying for SDI benefits precluded claim that plaintiff was qualified individual with a disability within meaning of ADA; leave from which employee makes SDI application may itself be reasonable accommodation that cannot be terminated without proper justification); Johnson v. State of Oregon (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1361, 1367-1368 (rejecting per se rule barring claimants from pursuing ADA claims after seeking or obtaining disability benefits); Kennedy v. Applause, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 90 F.3d 1477, 1481 . See also § 41.51[2][a][v].

(n32)Footnote 15.13. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902 (Enforcement Guidance on the Effect of Representations Made in Applications for Benefits on the Determination of Whether a Person is a "Qualified Individual with a Disability" Under the Americans with Disabilities Act).

(n33)Footnote 15.14. P.L. 110-325 § 6.

(n34)Footnote 15.15. 42 U.S.C. § 12201(e).

(n35)Footnote 15.16. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(6). For discussion of job-relatedness and business necessity, see § 41.95.

(n36)Footnote 15.17. 42 U.S.C. § 12113(c). See Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 862-863 (district court erred in granting summary judgment in favor of employer by concluding that plaintiff was not qualified for his position because he did not obtain required certification; certification test screened out plaintiff due to his high blood pressure, which was complication of his diabetes, but genuine issue of fact existed as to whether employer could have provided reasonable accommodations to enable plaintiff to complete test; employer also failed to show necessity of particular breathilator test and failed to show certification test was related to plaintiff's job).

(n37)Footnote 15.18. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(q).

(n38)Footnote 15.19. Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 974, 992-993. See 42 U.S.C. § 12113(a).

(n39)Footnote 16. See 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(6).

(n40)Footnote 16.1. For discussion of the business necessity defense under ADA, see § 41.95, below.

(n41)Footnote 17. See P.L. 110-325.

(n42)Footnote 18. P.L. 1103-25 § 2(a).

(n43)Footnote 19. Sutton v. United Air Lines (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450 .

(n44)Footnote 20. See Albertson's, Inc. v. Kirkingburg (1999) 527 U.S. 555, 119 S. Ct. 2162, 144 L. Ed. 2d 518 ; Murphy v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1999) 527 U.S. 516, 119 S. Ct. 2133, 144 L. Ed. 2d 484 .

(n45)Footnote 21. Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams (2002) 534 U.S. 184, 122 S. Ct. 681, 692, 151 L. Ed. 2d 615 .

(n46)Footnote 22. P.L. 1103-25 § 2(b).

(n47)Footnote 23. School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307 .

(n48)Footnote 23.1. See Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 853, 860-861 (although ADAAA, if applicable, would have provided additional support for plaintiff's claims, even under pre-ADAAA case law, plaintiff provided sufficient evidence that he was "qualified individual" with "disability" under ADA to survive summary judgment, so Ninth Circuit did not need to decide whether ADAAA applied retroactively).

(n49)Footnote 23.2. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 861-862 .

(n50)Footnote 23.3. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 860-861 .

(n51)Footnote 23.4. See H.R. Rep. No. 110-730, at 5 (2008) (H. Comm. on Educ. & Labor).

(n52)Footnote 23.5. 122 Stat. at 3553.

(n53)Footnote 23.6. Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450 .

(n54)Footnote 23.7. 122 Stat. at 3553.

(n55)Footnote 24. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(1). See also Deppe v. United Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 217 F.3d 1262, 1266 (triable issue existed as to whether defendant viewed plaintiff as suffering from medical condition that substantially limited his ability to work); Holihan v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 87 F.3d 362, 366-367 (triable issue existed as to whether employer viewed plaintiff as suffering from mental condition that substantially limited his ability to work).

(n56)Footnote 25. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(A).

(n57)Footnote 26. See 45 C.F.R. § 84.3(j)(2)(i) ("physical impairment" is any physiological condition affecting neurological, musculoskeletal, respiratory, cardiovascular, reproductive, digestive, genitourinary, hemic and lymphatic, skin, endocrine, or special sense organs). See, e.g., Fraser v. Goodale (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1032, 1038 (diabetes is physical impairment under ADA because it is physical condition affecting digestive, hemic, and endocrine systems); 24 C.F.R. § 9.103; 28 C.F.R. §§ 41.31(b)(1), 35.104; 29 C.F.R. § 34.2 (EEOC regulations specifically including diabetes in definition of physical impairment).

(n58)Footnote 27. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(h); see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902.2; EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902 (Enforcement Guidance on the Americans with Disabilities Act and Psychiatric Disabilities). See Josephs v. Pac. Bell (9th Cir. 2005) 432 F.3d 1006, 1015-1017 (employee asserted that employer violated ADA by regarding former employee as suffering from mental illness that might result in future acts of violence; while California court's determination of legal insanity did not necessarily mean that employee suffered from mental impairment covered by ADA, jury had ample evidence to support its finding that employer regarded employee as having mental impairment covered by ADA and employer viewed employee as having mental disability that substantially limited him in major life activity of working).

(n59)Footnote 28. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902(Enforcement Guidance on the Americans with Disabilities Act and Psychiatric Disabilities).

(n60)Footnote 29. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902; EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902.2 (Enforcement Guidance on the Americans with Disabilities Act and Psychiatric Disabilities).

(n61)Footnote 30. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(2)(A). See also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(i); EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902.3 (Enforcement Guidance on the Americans with Disabilities Act and Psychiatric Disabilities); Head v. Glacier Northwest, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 1053, 1061-1062 (holding reading to be major life activity prior to enactment of ADA Amendments Act of 2008).

(n62)Footnote 31. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(2)(B).

(n63)Footnote 32. 42 U.S.C. § 302.

(n64)Footnote 33. Bragdon v. Abbott (1998) 524 U.S. 624, 118 S. Ct. 2196, 141 L. Ed. 2d 540 .

(n65)Footnote 34. See McAlindin v. County of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 1226, 1234-1235 , as amended, (2000) 201 F.3d 1211 .

(n66)Footnote 35. Fraser v. Goodale (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1032, 1039-1040 . See also Lawson v. CSX Transp., Inc. (7th Cir. 2001) 245 F.3d 916, 924 (diabetes); Forest City Daly Hous., Inc. v. Town of N. Hempstead (2d Cir. 1999) 175 F.3d 144, 151 (dicta in case involving assisted living facility); Land v. Baptist Med. Ctr. (8th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 423, 424 (peanut allergy).

(n67)Footnote 36. Fraser v. Goodale (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1032 .

(n68)Footnote 37. Fraser v. Goodale (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1032, 1039-1040 . See also Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 858 (under ADA, diabetes is "physical impairment" because it affects digestive, hemic and endocrine systems, and eating is "major life activity"). For discussion of diabetes as a specific disability, see § 41.32[3][g], below.

(n69)Footnote 38. Bragdon v. Abbott (1998) 524 U.S. 624, 118 S. Ct. 2196, 141 L. Ed. 2d 540 (asymptomatic HIV-infected persons covered under ADA).

(n70)Footnote 39. See 29 C.F.R. Pt. 1630 App., 1630.2(j); see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902.4; EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902 (Enforcement Guidance on the Americans with Disabilities Act and Psychiatric Disabilities).

(n71)Footnote 40. Sanders v. Saw Arneson Prods., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 91 F.3d 1351, 1354 .

(n72)Footnote 41. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(B). See P.L. 110-325 § 2 (findings and purposes of ADA Amendments Act of 2008).

(n73)Footnote 42. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(C).

(n74)Footnote 43. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(D).

(n75)Footnote 44. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(j)(1).

(n76)Footnote 45. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(j)(3)(i).

(n77)Footnote 46. P.L. 110-325 § 1(8).

(n78)Footnote 47. P.L. 110-325 § 2(6).

(n79)Footnote 48. Gribben v. United Parcel Service (9th Cir. 2008) 528 F.3d 1166, 1170-1171 (sufficient evidence in record at summary judgment proceeding established genuine issue of material fact as to whether employee's impairment was substantial and limited his ability to perform regular daily activities including breathing, thinking and physical activities in temperatures of 90 degrees or more); Head v. Glacier Nw., Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 1053, 1058 .

(n80)Footnote 49. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(j)(2).

(n81)Footnote 50. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)(i).

(n82)Footnote 51. See 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)(iii) ("low-vision devices" means devices that magnify, enhance, or otherwise augment a visual image).

(n83)Footnote 52. See 42 U.S.C. § 12103(1) (defining "auxiliary aids or services").

(n84)Footnote 53. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)(ii).

(n85)Footnote 54. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(4)(E)(iii).

(n86)Footnote 55. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(k).

(n87)Footnote 56. See 42 U.S.C. § 12102(1)(C).

(n88)Footnote 57. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(3)(A).

(n89)Footnote 58. 42 U.S.C. § 12102(3)(B).

(n90)Footnote 59. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(l); see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902.8; Johnson v. Paradise Valley Unified School District (9th Cir. 2001) 251 F.3d 1222, 1230 (trial court abused discretion in granting employer judgment as matter of law and alternatively granting new trial on former employee's "regarded as" disabled claim, because jury's verdict in employee's favor was not against weight of evidence).

(n91)Footnote 60. Head v. Glacier Northwest, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 413 F.3d 1053, 1058-1062 (plaintiff, through his own statements, alleged sufficient evidence to demonstrate genuine issue of material fact regarding substantial impairment in major life activities of sleeping, interacting with others, thinking, and reading). See also McAlindin v. County of San Diego (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 1226, 1235-1236 ; Fraser v. Goodale (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1032, 1041-1042 , cert. denied, 541 U.S. 937, 124 S. Ct. 1663, 158 L. Ed. 2d 358 (2004) .

(n92)Footnote 61. See 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(4).

(n93)Footnote 61.1. See Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1083-1085 (in action by employee suffering from epilepsy against employer under ADA based on termination of employment, there was genuine issue of material fact as to whether employer demonstrated legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for termination).

(n94)Footnote 61.2. Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1085-1086 (summary judgment record was replete with evidence suggesting that employee's "misconduct" was pretext for discrimination on basis of disability); Snead v. Metropolitan Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. (9th Cir.) 237 F.3d 1080, 1087 , cert. denied, 534 U.S. 888, 122 S. Ct. 201, 151 L. Ed. 2d 142 (2001) .

(n95)Footnote 62. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(a); see § 41.02[4].

(n96)Footnote 63. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a), (b) (emphasis added); see also § 41.02[4]. Section 504 applies to an entire institution or entity receiving federal funds, not just the particular program or activity that receives them. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(b). For discussion of Sections 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act generally, including employers and employees covered and exempted, see § 40.23.

(n97)Footnote 64. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.31(a) (Section 504 implementing regulation); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2 (Section 503 implementing regulation); see 29 U.S.C. §§ 793(a) (Section 503; incorporating 29 U.S.C. § 794(a) (Section 504 definition by reference); see also 28 C.F.R. § 41.31(b)(3) (Section 504 implementing regulation; "has record of impairment" defined).

(n98)Footnote 65. See Daubert v. United States Postal Serv. (10th Cir. 1984) 733 F.2d 1367, 1370-1372 (Section 504).

(n99)Footnote 66. See Reynolds v. Brock (9th Cir. 1987) 815 F.2d 571, 573 (Section 504).

(n100)Footnote 67. See Treadwell v. Alexander (11th Cir. 1983) 707 F.2d 473, 475 (Section 504).

(n101)Footnote 68. See Bentivegna v. United States Dep't of Labor (9th Cir. 1982) 694 F.2d 619, 621 (Section 504).

(n102)Footnote 69. 28 C.F.R. § 41.31(b)(1) (Section 504 implementing regulation). See Coons v. Sec'y of the United States Dep't of the Treasury (9th Cir. 2004) 383 F.3d 879, 885 (physician's letter stating that employee suffered from physical and mental impairments including abdominal distress affecting his digestive system, palpitations, heart pounding, and chest pain affecting his cardiovascular system, and depression and panic disorder as emotional or mental illnesses created genuine issue of material fact regarding whether employee had impairment under Rehabilitation Act).

(n103)Footnote 70. See Stutts v. Freeman (11th Cir. 1983) 694 F.2d 666, 668 (Section 504).

(n104)Footnote 71. Vickers v. Veterans Administration (W.D. Wash. 1982) 549 F. Supp. 85, 86-87 (Section 504).

(n105)Footnote 72. 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2 (Section 503 implementing regulation).

(n106)Footnote 73. 28 C.F.R. § 41.31(b)(2) (Section 504 implementing regulation).

(n107)Footnote 73.1. Coons v. Sec'y of the United States Dep't of the Treasury (9th Cir. 2004) 383 F.3d 879, 885. See Reeves v. Johnson Controls, World Servs., Inc. (2d Cir. 1998) 140 F.3d 144, 152-153 (everyday mobility, defined by plaintiff as, among other things, going to unfamiliar places that would involve staying overnight, was not major life activity). For discussion of the Americans With Disabilities Act generally, see [a], above.

(n108)Footnote 73.2. Coons v. Sec'y of the United States Dep't of the Treasury (9th Cir. 2004) 383 F.3d 879, 885 (summary judgment for employer appropriate where employee did not argue that he could not travel because of his impairments, but only that he could not travel extensively, and where employee did not present evidence that condition, manner, or duration under which he can travel was restricted in any way other than not to travel extensively).

(n109)Footnote 74. See, e.g., Jasany v. United States Postal Serv. (6th Cir. 1985) 755 F.2d 1244, 1248-1250 (Section 504; strabismus ("crossed eyes") that prevented mail clerk from operating mail sorter, although "physical impairment," did not "substantially limit" major life activity).

(n110)Footnote 75. See Stevens v. Stubbs (N.D. Ga. 1983) 576 F. Supp. 1409, 1414-1415 ("undisclosed transitory illness" requiring employee to take periods of sick leave).

(n111)Footnote 75.1. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(k); see also 42 U.S.C. § 12102(1)(B). See Coons v. Sec'y of the United States Dep't of the Treasury (9th Cir. 2004) 383 F.3d 879, 886 (employee did not provide evidence of history of impairment substantially limiting major life activity, where his only evidence was letter from his doctor which stated employee suffered from various physical and mental impairments and received treatment for some impairments, but there was no allegation that any treated impairments substantially limited any major life activity).

(n112)Footnote 75.2. Coons v. Sec'y of the United States Dep't of the Treasury (9th Cir. 2004) 383 F.3d 879, 886 (employee presented no evidence that employer regarded him as having physical impairment limiting any major life activities, where employee pointed only to letter from his supervisor suggesting only that if employee was disabled as he claimed to be, he could be able to obtain disability benefits, but did not state supervisor considered employee to be eligible for benefits or disabled in any way). See also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(l)(1).

(n113)Footnote 76. See 41 C.F.R. 60-741.3(c); see also School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 280-286, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307 (fact that individual has contagious disease does not in itself prevent him or her from being considered "handicapped" for purposes of Section 504; contagious nature of disease is relevant to determination of whether individual is "otherwise qualified").

(n114)Footnote 77. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.32(Section 504 implementing regulation); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2(t) (Section 503 implementing regulation); see also discussion in ch. 40, pt. C.

(n115)Footnote 78. See Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 406, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980; see also Thornhill v. Marsh (9th Cir. 1989) 866 F.2d 1182, 1183-1184.

(n116)Footnote 79. Gov. Code § 12940(a); see Gov. Code § 12926(h) ("medical condition" defined), (i) ("mental disability" defined), (k) ("physical disability" defined). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of an action under FEHA for disparate treatment disability discrimination, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2540 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of CACI jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim of disparate treatment disability discrimination, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2508 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of CACI special verdict forms, see § 61.06.

(n117)Footnote 79.1. See Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 361-362, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 (although federal regulation may be useful to guide construction of FEHA if state statute or interpretive state regulation is modeled on ADA, interpretive statement of EEOC based on ADA statutes that differ in important material respects from applicable FEHA statute does not apply).

(n118)Footnote 79.2. Gov. Code § 12926.1(a), (d)(1).

(n119)Footnote 79.3. Gov. Code § 12926.1(b); see also Gov. Code § 12926.1(d)(3) (notwithstanding any interpretation of law in Cassista v. Community Foods (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143 , Legislature intends to provide protection when individual is erroneously or mistakenly believed to have any physical or mental condition limiting a major life activity).

(n120)Footnote 80. Gov. Code § 12926(k). See Gov. Code § 12926.1(c) (physical disabilities include, but are not limited to, chronic or episodic conditions such as HIV/AIDS, hepatitis, epilepsy, seizure disorder, diabetes, multiple sclerosis and heart disease).

(n121)Footnote 80.1. But see Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 260, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 (employer merely regarding employee as disabled without more does not give rise to ADA claim; employer must make employment decision based on disability).

(n122)Footnote 80.2. Gov. Code § 12926(k)(6).

(n123)Footnote 81. Gov. Code § 12926(i). See Gov. Code § 12926.1(c) ("mental disabilities" include, but are not limited to, chronic or episodic conditions such as clinical depression and bipolar disorder); Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 258-259, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 (post-traumatic stress disorder can meet statutory definition of mental disability under FEHA).

(n124)Footnote 82. Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 259, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 , disapproved to extent case holds or suggests federal law's substantial limitation test applies to claims of physical disability brought under FEHA in Colmenares v. Braemar Country Club (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1019, 1031 .

(n125)Footnote 83. Compare Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 257, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 (mental disability need only limit, not substantially limit, major life activity); Pensinger v. Bowsmith (1988) 60 Cal. App. 4th 709, 719-720, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 (plain language of statute does not require impairment of major life activity) with Muller v. Automobile Club of S. Cal. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 431, 442-443, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 (legislature intended to conform California's employment discrimination laws to ADA and uniformly define mental disability as impairment that substantially limits major life activity), disapproved to extent case holds or suggests federal law's substantial limitation test applies to claims of physical disability brought under FEHA in Colmenares v. Braemar Country Club (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1019, 1031 .

(n126)Footnote 84. See also Gov. Code § 12926.1(d)(2) (notwithstanding any interpretation of law in Cassista v. Community Foods (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143 , Legislature intends to require "limitation" rather than "substantial limitation" of major life activity").

(n127)Footnote 85. Colmenares v. Braemar Country Club (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1019, 1029-1031, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 662, 63 P.3d 220 .

(n128)Footnote 85.1. Colmenares v. Braemar Country Club (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1019, 1028, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 662, 63 P.3d 220 .

(n129)Footnote 86. Gov. Code § 12926(k)(1)(B)(i); see also Gov. Code § 12926.1(c) (under California law, whether condition limits major life activity must be determined without respect to any mitigating measures, unless mitigating measure itself limits a major life activity, regardless of ADA).

(n130)Footnote 87. Gov. Code § 12926(k)(1)(B)(iii); see also Gov. Code § 12926.1(c) ("working" is major life activity regardless of whether actual or perceived working limitation implicates particular employment or class or broad range of employments).

(n131)Footnote 88. Gov. Code § 12926(k)(1)(B)(ii). See, e.g., Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 345-349, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 (FEHA claim alleging disability discrimination failed as matter of law on ground that employee's symptoms did not make it difficult for him to achieve life activity of working, where symptoms did not make performance of his job duties difficult as compared to his unimpaired state or to normal or average baseline).

(n132)Footnote 88.1. Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 348, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 .

(n133)Footnote 89. American Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 603, 607, 186 Cal. Rptr. 345, 651 P.2d 1151 ; see, e.g., Nicolini v. County of Tuolumne (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 619, 633-636, 235 Cal. Rptr. 559 (migraine headaches).

(n134)Footnote 90. [Reserved]

(n135)Footnote 91. Angell v. Peterson Tractor, Inc. (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 981, 987, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 77 Cal. Rptr 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n136)Footnote 92. 2 Cal. Code Regs. § 7293.7; see also Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1520 .

(n137)Footnote 93. See e.g., Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 350, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 (complaint alleging that severe polio made plaintiff unable to walk long distances, although job duties required her to transport herself long distances within work site and to travel to and from work site, rendered her substantially impaired in necessary work-site mobility and sufficiently pleaded physiological condition affecting musculoskeletal system which limited plaintiff's major life activity within the meaning of Gov. Code § 12926(k)); see also American Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 603, 607, 186 Cal. Rptr. 345, 651 P.2d 1151 (quoting Webster's New Internat. Dict., p. 1027 (3d ed. 1961) "handicap" is "disadvantage that makes achievement unusually difficult").

(n138)Footnote 94. County of Fresno v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1549-1550, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557 (hypersensitivity to smoke is disability under FEHA, applying American National Ins. Co. and 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.6(a)-(f)).

(n139)Footnote 95. Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1061, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143 (obesity found not to meet definition of "physical disability").

(n140)Footnote 96. Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1061, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143 .

(n141)Footnote 97. See Gov. Code § 12926(k)(4); American Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 603, 607, 186 Cal. Rptr. 345, 651 P.2d 1151 ; DFEH v. Ca. State University--Sacramento (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-08, p. 17; DFEH v. Aluminum Precision Prods., Inc. (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-05, p. 5; see also Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1520 .

(n142)Footnote 98. See American Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 603, 607, 186 Cal. Rptr. 345, 651 P.2d 1151 .

(n143)Footnote 99. Raytheon Co. v. California Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d

1242, 1249, 261 Cal. Rptr. 197 (stating concern for sufficient time to have elapsed to ascertain if an impairment; one year's diagnosis of HIV insufficient to show impairment so as to come under statute); see also Doe v. Kohn Nast and Graf PC (E.D. Pa. 1994) 862 F. Supp. 1310 . For further discussion of AIDS as a "physical handicap," see [3][c], below.

(n144)Footnote 99.1. Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 350-351, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 (employee failed to prove disability discrimination, where there was no evidence employer thought employee's pain or numbness created greater than normal risk of injury, disability, or death, or that employer had doubts about employee's future health). See MacPhail v. Court of Appeal (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 454, 456-457 & n.3, 217 Cal. Rptr. 36, 703 P.2d 374 (applicant could pursue disability discrimination claim where employer refused to hire him, believing that applicant's spinal anomaly presented higher than average risk of back injury); American Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Commn. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 603, 610, 186 Cal. Rptr. 345, 651 P.2d 1151 .

(n145)Footnote 100. Gov. Code § 12926(l).

(n146)Footnote 101. Gov. Code § 12926(i), (k); see [3][a], below.

(n147)Footnote 102. [Reserved]

(n148)Footnote 103. 42 U.S.C. § 12212(a). Nevertheless, the FEHA separately defines discrimination based on sexual orientation, which is defined to include heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality, as an unlawful practice (Gov. Code § 12926(j), (q)).

(n149)Footnote 104. 42 U.S.C. § 12212(b); see [3][d], below.

(n150)Footnote 104.1. Knight v. Hayward Unif. Sch. Dist. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 121, 130-134, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287

(n151)Footnote 105. Diffey v. Riverside County Sheriff's Dept. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1035, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 353 , citing BAJI 12.12.

(n152)Footnote 106. Diffey v. Riverside County Sheriff's Dept. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1031, 1035, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 353 (record contained no evidence that potential employer regarded color blindness of candidate for position of deputy sheriff as disability rather than valid job requirement).

(n153)Footnote 106.1. Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 46-48, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 .

(n154)Footnote 106.2. Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 48-50, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 (error caused submission of issue to jury, which was compounded when court modified Judicial Council Jury Instruction (CACI) No. 2540 and verdict form in confusing and erroneous way).

(n155)Footnote 106.3. Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 260, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 . See Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 54-62, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 (employer's failure to explore and offer reasonable accommodation to employee it regarded as disabled).

(n156)Footnote 106.4. Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 347, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 .

(n157)Footnote 107. See, e.g., Avila v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1237, 1246-1252, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 440 (plaintiff could not prove discriminatory intent under FEHA based on disability, because he could not show that employees who made decision to discharge him knew of his disability).

(n158)Footnote 107.1. Schmidt v. Safeway Inc. (D. Or. 1994) 864 F. Supp. 991, 997 ; Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 887, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729 .

(n159)Footnote 107.2. Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 886-887, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729.

(n160)Footnote 107.3. Green v. State of California (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 254, 260-267, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 165 P.3d 118. See also CACI No. 2540 (Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, including capacity to perform essential duties of job as one element of proof for disability discrimination claim under Gov. Code § 12940(a)).

(n161)Footnote 107.4. Nadaf-Rahrov v. Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 971, 965, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 (employee raised triable issue of fact that she was unlawfully discharged because of her disability, where she presented evidence that employer could have but did not provide her with reasonable accommodation, i.e., reassignment to vacant position, that would have allowed her to continue working with company).

(n162)Footnote 108. Gov. Code § 12940(m); see Wilson v. County of Orange (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1192-1195, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 439 (substantial evidence supported jury's conclusion that employer provided plaintiff reasonable accommodation for her medical condition and engaged in good faith interactive process to arrive at accommodation, where employer engaged in process aimed at trying to accommodate plaintiff and plaintiff got exactly what she wanted, albeit after series of temporary accommodations); Pensinger v. Bowsmith (1988) 60 Cal. App. 4th 709, 722-723, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 (employer must have actual knowledge of disability; employer's knowledge of employee's difficulty in reading and writing insufficient when employee diagnosed with learning disorder 18 months after termination).

(n163)Footnote 109. Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 256, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55.

(n164)Footnote 110. Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 263, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55; for discussion of the interactive process under the ADA, see § 41.51[2][a][iii].

(n165)Footnote 111. Gov. Code § 12940(m).

(n166)Footnote 112. Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1); Haggard v. Kimberly Quality Care, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 508, 515, 524-525, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 (disability law does not shield employee from termination for cause).

(n167)Footnote 113. See Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n168)Footnote 114. Gov. Code § 12926(h) (defining "medical condition" and "genetic characteristics" under FEHA).

(n169)Footnote 115. Malais v. Los Angeles City Fire Dept. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 350, 355-358, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 444.

(n170)Footnote 116. See, e.g., Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 344-355, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 (although employee failed to present prima facie case of disability discrimination, assuming he had established prima facie case, employer made strong showing of legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for his discharge, i.e. that management lost confidence in him, which, given nature of employer's business, was legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for discharge; and employee's attempt to demonstrate pretext failed, because although he was terminated soon after disclosing his "physical disability," timing, by itself, failed to raise dispute as to company's true motivation given that employer raised questions about employee's performance before he disclosed his symptoms and subsequent termination was based on those performance issues). For discussion of the McDonnell Douglas framework for proof in disparate treatment employment discrimination actions generally, see § 41.11, above.

(n171)Footnote 117-121. [Reserved]

(n172)Footnote 122. See 29 U.S.C. § 794 (Section 504); 28 C.F.R. § 41.31(b)(1) (defining alcoholism and drug addiction as "physical or mental impairments"); but cf. Traynor v. Turnage (1988) 485 U.S. 535, 108 S. Ct. 1372, 99 L. Ed. 2d 618 (upholding VA regulation relating to extension of educational benefits, which defined alcoholism as "willful misconduct" for purpose of denying such extensions; rejecting arguments that regulation conflicted with Section 504).

(n173)Footnote 123. See 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C) (Rehabilitation Act); 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(b), 12211(b) (ADA); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(b) (ADA implementing regulation); See also ch. 40, pt. C.

(n174)Footnote 124. See 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C) (Rehabilitation Act); 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(a), 12211(a) (ADA); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(a) (ADA implementing regulation); see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902.6.

(n175)Footnote 125. See 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C); 42 U.S.C. § 12212(b); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(d)(3); EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902.6.

(n176)Footnote 126. Collings v. Longview Fibre Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 828, 832-833, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1048 (1996).

(n177)Footnote 127. See Collings v. Longview Fibre Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 828, 832-833, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1048 (1996) (citing regulatory definition under 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3 App).

(n178)Footnote 128. Brown v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 246 F.3d 1182.

(n179)Footnote 129. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(b)(1).

(n180)Footnote 130. Raytheon Co. v. Hernandez (2003) 540 U.S. 44, 124 S. Ct. 513, 157 L. Ed. 2d 357.

(n181)Footnote 131. Hernandez v. Hughes Missile Systems Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 362 F.3d 564, 568-570.

(n182)Footnote 132. Collings v. Longview Fibre Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 828, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1048 (1996).

(n183)Footnote 133. See 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C); see Gonzalez v. State Personnel Bd. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 422, 434-436, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 282 (alcoholic employee is not entitled to protection under the Rehabilitation Act when he engages in egregious misconduct).

(n184)Footnote 134. See 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C) (Rehabilitation Act); 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111(6), 12211(d); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(a)(1) (ADA); see 21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq. (Controlled Substances Act).

(n185)Footnote 135. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111(6), 12211(d); (ADA 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(a)(2)); see 21 U.S.C. § 812 (schedules of controlled substances).

(n186)Footnote 136. See Gov. Code § 12926(i), (k) (mental or physical disability does not include unlawful use of controlled substances or other drugs in and of itself); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.6(a)(4).

(n187)Footnote 137. See Lab. Code §§ 1025-1028.

(n188)Footnote 138. Lab. Code § 1025.

(n189)Footnote 139. Lab. Code § 1025.

(n190)Footnote 140. Lab. Code § 1027.

(n191)Footnote 141. School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307.

(n192)Footnote 142. See School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 281, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307 ; 28 C.F.R. § 41.31(b)(1) (Section 504 implementing regulation); see also [2][b], above.

(n193)Footnote 143. See School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 281, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307 ; 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(B).

(n194)Footnote 144. See School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 281, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307 ; 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(B).

(n195)Footnote 145. See 42 U.S.C. § 12201(a); See also ch. 40, pt. C.

(n196)Footnote 146. See 42 U.S.C. § 12113(e).

(n197)Footnote 147. School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 287-289, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307 .

(n198)Footnote 148. School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 282 n.7, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307 .

(n199)Footnote 149. 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C).

(n200)Footnote 150. Chalk v. U.S. Dist. Court Cent. Dist. of Cal. (9th Cir. 1988) 840 F.2d 701 .

(n201)Footnote 151. See Chalk v. U.S. Dist. Court Cent. Dist. of Cal. (9th Cir. 1988) 840 F.2d 701, 703 .

(n202)Footnote 152. See Chalk v. U.S. Dist. Court Cent. Dist. of Cal. (9th Cir. 1988) 840 F.2d 701, 704 .

(n203)Footnote 153. See Chalk v. U.S. Dist. Court Cent. Dist. of Cal. (9th Cir. 1988) 840 F.2d 701, 709 .

(n204)Footnote 154. Gates v. Rowland (9th Cir. 1994) 39 F.3d 1439 .

(n205)Footnote 155. Gates v. Rowland (9th Cir. 1994) 39 F.3d 1439, 1446 .

(n206)Footnote 156. See Buckingham v. United States (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 735, 739-741 (requested transfer in order to have access to better medical treatment, notwithstanding memorandum of understanding governing transfers).

(n207)Footnote 157. 42 U.S.C. § 12182.

(n208)Footnote 158. Bragdon v. Abbott (1998) 524 U.S. 624, 630-643, 118 S. Ct. 2196, 141 L. Ed. 2d 540 .

(n209)Footnote 159. Bragdon v. Abbott (1998) 524 U.S. 624, 630-643, 118 S. Ct. 2196, 141 L. Ed. 2d 540 .

(n210)Footnote 160. See Gov. Code § 12926(k)(1)(A).

(n211)Footnote 161. See also Gov. Code § 12926.1(c) ("physical disabilities" as defined under FEHA include HIV/AIDS).

(n212)Footnote 162. See Raytheon Co. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1250, 1252, 261 Cal. Rptr. 197 ; Chalk v. U.S. Dist. Court Cent. Dist. of California (9th Cir. 1988) 840 F.2d 701, 710-711 (HIV positive teacher cannot be refused the right to return to his classroom) ; Citizens for Uniform Laws v. County of Contra Costa (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1468, 1475, 285 Cal. Rptr. 456 (upholding coverage of AIDS under FEHA).

(n213)Footnote 163. Gov. Code § 12965(b).

(n214)Footnote 163.1. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 . For discussion of the McDonnell Douglas test, see § 41.11[1], above.

(n215)Footnote 163.2. See Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 334, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 .

(n216)Footnote 163.3. See Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1004, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 .

(n217)Footnote 163.4. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1004, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 .

(n218)Footnote 163.5. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1004, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 .

(n219)Footnote 163.6. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1004, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 .

(n220)Footnote 163.7. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1005, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 .

(n221)Footnote 163.8. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1005, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 .

(n222)Footnote 163.9. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1005-1009, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 .

(n223)Footnote 164. See U.S. Dep't of Justice Memorandum on Application of Rehabilitation Act's Section 504 to HIV-Infected Persons, Daily Lab. Rep. (BNA) 195:D-1 (Oct. 7, 1988).

(n224)Footnote 165. See 1988 Daily Lab. Rep. (BNA) 195:A-10 (Oct. 7, 1988).

(n225)Footnote 166. 42 U.S.C. § 12212(a); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(e) (ADA); 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(E) (Rehabilitation Act).

(n226)Footnote 167. 42 U.S.C. § 12212(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(d) (ADA); 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(F) (Rehabilitation Act).

(n227)Footnote 168. See also 42 U.S.C. § 12209 ("disabled" or "disability" does not apply to individual solely because that individual is transvestite).

(n228)Footnote 169. See Gov. Code § 12926(i), (k).

(n229)Footnote 170. Gov. Code §§ 12926(j), (q), 12940(a).

(n230)Footnote 171. Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1061, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143 (obesity found not to meet definition of "physical disability").

(n231)Footnote 172. Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1064-1065, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143 (obesity found not to meet definition of "physical disability").

(n232)Footnote 173. Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1065-1066, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143 (obesity found not to meet definition of "physical disability").

(n233)Footnote 174. See P.L. 110-325.

(n234)Footnote 175. 42 U.S.C. § 12113(c), effective January 1, 2009.

(n235)Footnote 176. [Reserved]

(n236)Footnote 177. EEOC v. UPS (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 794, 801-803 (two monocular individuals who, despite not having fully compensated for loss of near-field vision, did not have impairment substantially limiting major life activity of seeing; impairment did not prevent normal eyesight as used in daily life, such as driving (including for employer), reading, using tools, and playing sports).

(n237)Footnote 178. EEOC v. UPS (9th Cir. 2002) 306 F.3d 794, 803-806 .

(n238)Footnote 179. EEOC v. UPS (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 1060, 1068-1074 .

(n239)Footnote 180. EEOC v. UPS (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 1060, 1069 n.5 ; see Govt. Code § 12926(k)(1)(A).

(n240)Footnote 181. EEOC v. UPS (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 1060, 1070-1074 .

(n241)Footnote 182. EEOC v. UPS (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 1060, 1074-1077 . For discussion of the safety-of-others defense under the FEHA, see § 41.97, below.

(n242)Footnote 183. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 858 ; Fraser v. Goodale (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1032, 1038-40 .

(n243)Footnote 184. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 858 .

(n244)Footnote 185. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 858-862 .

(n245)Footnote 186. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 858 . See also Fraser v. Goodale (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1032, 1040 .

(n246)Footnote 187. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 858 , quoting Fraser v. Goodale (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1032, 1040 .

(n247)Footnote 188. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 858 . See also Fraser v. Goodale (9th Cir. 2003) 342 F.3d 1032, 1038 .

(n248)Footnote 189. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 859 .

(n249)Footnote 190. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 859 n.6 . See American Diabetes Association website, www.diabetes.org.

(n250)Footnote 191. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 860 . See American Diabetes Association Position Statement: Insulin Administration, Diabetes Care 27:S106-107 (2004).

(n251)Footnote 192. See, e.g., Ingles v. Neiman Marcus Group, 974 F. Supp. 996, 1001-1002 (S.D. Tex. 1997) (diabetic plaintiff who was merely required to maintain normal, good, healthy diet was not substantially limited; plaintiff's condition was substantially controlled with oral medication, and he did not have to take insulin).

(n252)Footnote 193. Rohr v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2009) 555 F.3d 850, 861-862 .

(n253)Footnote 194. 122 Stat. at 3555.

(n254)Footnote 195. Toyota Motor Mfg., Ky., Inc. v. Williams (2002) 534 U.S. 184, 122 S. Ct. 681, 151 L. Ed. 2d 615 .

(n255)Footnote 196. 122 Stat. at 3554.

(n256)Footnote 197. Sutton v. United Air Lines (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450 .

(n257)Footnote 198. 122 Stat. at 3554.

(n258)Footnote 199. 122 Stat. at 3556.

(n259)Footnote 200. See H.R. Rep. No. 110-730, at 8.

(n260)Footnote 201. American Diabetes Association, Americans with Disabilities Act Amendments Act and Diabetes, www.diabetes.org/advocacy-and-legalresources/discrimination/employment/americans-withdisabilities-act-amendments-act-and-diabetes.jsp#5.

46 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART B. PROHIBITED BASES OF DISCRIMINATION

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.33

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.33 National Origin Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

Title VII is the main source of federal protection against national origin discrimination in employment,ⁿ¹ but such discrimination is also prohibited by Executive Order No. 11246 (E.O. 11246) (federal contractors),ⁿ² Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VI),ⁿ³ the still-operative discrimination provisions of the former Revenue Sharing Act (state and local governments sharing federal income tax funds),ⁿ⁴ and possibly Title 42 United States Code Section 1981 (Section 1981).ⁿ⁵ Also, if there is "state action," the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution prohibits national origin discrimination,ⁿ⁶ as do the provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1871, codified in Title 42 United States Code Section 1983.

The FEHA is the primary California statute prohibiting national origin discrimination,ⁿ⁷ but the California Constitution,ⁿ⁸ the California public works laws,ⁿ⁹ and the Cartwright Act (California antitrust law)ⁿ¹⁰ also proscribe such discrimination.ⁿ¹¹ Furthermore, Government Code Section 11135 (state-funded programs or activities) prohibits discrimination based on national origin.

For a general discussion of the scope and application of these and other equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40.

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Generally

Under Title VII, the terms "national origin" or "ancestry" refer to the country where a person was born, or, more broadly, the country from which that person's ancestors came,ⁿ¹² including countries that no longer exist.ⁿ¹³ EEOC Guidelines define "national origin discrimination" as including, but not limited to, the denial of equal employment opportunity because of an individual's, or his or her ancestors' place of origin.ⁿ¹⁴ National origin is not limited by existing political divisions or the current political status of the nation in question. Discrimination relating to an individual's ancestors' place of origin violates Title VII, including discrimination based on tribal membership.¹⁵

To prevail on a claim of disparate treatment based on national origin, the plaintiff must show:¹⁶

1. He or she belonged to a protected class;
2. He or she was qualified for the job;
3. He or she was subjected to an adverse employment action;^{16.1} and
4. Similarly situated employees not in the protected class received more favorable treatment.

EEOC guidelines also provide that "national origin discrimination" includes but is not limited to the denial of an equal employment opportunity because an individual has the physical, cultural, or linguistic characteristics of a national origin group.¹⁷ Thus, the EEOC has extended protection beyond individuals who come from a particular place of origin. The EEOC investigates unlawful employment practices grounded in national origin considerations such as the following:¹⁸

1. Marriage to, or association with, persons of a national origin group;
2. Membership in, or association with, an organization identified with, or seeking to promote, the interests of national origin groups;
3. Attendance or participation in schools, churches, temples, or mosques generally used by persons of a national origin group; and
4. Association of an individual's name, or a spouse's name, with a national origin group.

Under the FEHA, the elements of a claim for national origin discrimination in violation of Government Code section 12940(a) are:^{18.1}

- The employee's membership in a classification protected by the statute, i.e., national origin.
- Discriminatory animus on the part of the employer toward members of that classification.
- An action by the employer adverse to the employee's interests.
- A causal link between the discriminatory animus and the adverse action.
- Damage to the employee.
- A causal link between the adverse action and the damage.

In Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc., ^{18.2} an employee of Syrian heritage, who was a naturalized citizen, presented a prima facie case of national origin discrimination under the FEHA sufficient to withstand summary judgment. He presented evidence that a manager referred to "all those fucking rag heads," whom he pledged to "get rid of," and that another manager alluded to "busting up" and "getting rid of" the "Syrian regime" and the "Arab regime." There was also ample evidence to support the inference that the employer's articulated reason for terminating the employee's employment, i.e., that he was stealing from the employer, was false. The employer never rested on a single coherent explanation for its firing of employee, and several, if not all, of its explanations were questionable. In its official form memorializing the discharge, the precise nature of the asserted misconduct and the policy it supposedly violated remained in serious doubt, and to the extent it could be identified, appeared heavily controverted.^{n18.3} Finally, the employer's claim that the employee was fired by management officers, not by supervisors who could have been found to have acted out of impermissible motives, did not support the grant of summary judgment. The reasonable inference from the evidence was that the supervisors consulted with upper management to be sure it was comfortable with their decision to fire him, and the supervisor could have been understood to believe that when he met with the employee, he was vested with authority not to fire him if the supervisor so decided.^{n18.4}

In Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc., ^{n18.5} summary adjudication was improperly granted to the employer on the employee's claim of national origin and ethnicity discrimination in the employer's failure to accommodate her disability while accommodating the disabilities of other employees not of the same protected class. The employee made a prima facie case, because it was undisputed that the employee was Middle Eastern (Iranian) and her termination was an adverse employment action. She presented evidence that two other employees with disabilities were accommodated by reassignment to other positions and the employer did not dispute her characterization of them as non-Middle Eastern. The employer provided a nondiscriminatory reason for the termination, but did not address the alleged disparate treatment of the employee and the non-Middle Eastern employees. The court assumed for purposes of argument that the employer satisfied its burden to produce evidence of a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for the termination, and then found that the employee successfully rebutted that showing with evidence of the employer's discriminatory treatment of other Middle Eastern employees by submitting two sworn declarations by employees describing such treatment. Although the link between those employees' experiences and the termination was tenuous, very little evidence of discriminatory intent was necessary to defeat summary judgment.

One California court of appeal has held that an employee who was not personally discriminated against because of his national origin but who was retaliated against for objecting to instituting policies that discriminated against other employees on the basis of national origin had properly alleged a cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy action pursuant to Rojo v. Kliner ⁿ¹⁹ and the California Constitution,ⁿ²⁰ which provides that a person may not be disqualified from pursuing employment because of several enumerated factors, including national origin.ⁿ²¹ For discussion of actions for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, see Chapter 60.

[b] Ancestry or Ethnic Discrimination as "Racial" Discrimination Under Section 1981

Title 42, United States Code Section 1981 (Section 1981) provides that "[a]ll persons within the jurisdiction of the United States shall have the same right in every State and Territory to make and enforce contracts, to sue, be parties, give evidence, and to the full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons and property as is enjoyed by white citizens, and shall be subject to like punishment, pains, penalties, taxes, licenses, and extractions of every kind, and to no other"ⁿ²² Although Section 1981 does not cover sex or religious discrimination,ⁿ²³ some courts have allowed Section 1981 "national origin" claims for discrimination against Hispanics.ⁿ²⁴ The success of such claims, however, appears to depend on how the issue is framed in the pleadings.

In one case a Mexican-American employee claimed that he was discharged for alleged theft, while "Anglo employees" who admitted thefts were subject only to suspension.ⁿ²⁵ Noting that Section 1981 does not mention race, national origin, or alienage, the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the employee stated a Section 1981 claim because the employee alleged that his "group"--Mexican Americans--did not receive the same rights and benefits that were accorded to white citizens--"Anglos."ⁿ²⁶ The court explained that prejudice is usage or image based on all the mistaken concepts of "race,"ⁿ²⁷ and if "white citizens" means a race, then persons who are discriminated against because they are perceived to be different from "white citizens" are within the scope of Section 1981.ⁿ²⁸

In Gonzalez v. Stanford Applied Engineering, ⁿ²⁹ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals allowed a Section 1981 claim by a Mexican-American based on an affidavit that plaintiff's discrimination claim was "based on national origin which includes the fact that my skin is brown."ⁿ³⁰ The court held that the employee's affidavit thus sufficiently claimed race discrimination.ⁿ³¹ It noted that a substantial portion of the Mexican population is a mixture of the Caucasian (Spanish) and native American races, and concluded that prejudice towards Mexican-Americans having a skin color not characteristically Caucasian must be tantamount to racial prejudice under Section 1981.ⁿ³²

The United States Supreme Court has suggested that "ethnic or ancestry" discrimination claims may be pleaded under Section 1981 in some circumstances. In Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji,ⁿ³³ the Court construed Section 1981 to protect "identifiable classes of persons who are subject to intentional discrimination solely because of their ancestry or ethnic characteristics."ⁿ³⁴ The Court rejected an employer's contention that the plaintiff, a United States citizen born in Iraq, was a Caucasian who could not allege race discrimination under Section 1981.ⁿ³⁵ The Court explained that the concept of "race" is different today from what it was when Section 1981 was enacted, and that all those who might be deemed Caucasian today were not thought to be Caucasian in the late 1800's.ⁿ³⁶ Relying on dictionary and encyclopedic sources, the Court concluded that Arabs, northern Europeans, and certain other ethnic groups are not to be considered a single race for the purposes of Section 1981.ⁿ³⁷

The Court concluded that although Section 1981, "at a minimum," reaches discrimination on the basis of genetically belonging to an ethnically and physiognomically distinctive subgrouping of homo sapiens, a distinctive physiognomy (i.e., physical characteristic) is not essential.ⁿ³⁸ The Court added, however, that the plaintiff would have to prove that he was subjected to intentional discrimination because he was born an Arab, rather than solely because of his place or nation of birth, or his religion.ⁿ³⁹ Also, in his concurring opinion, Justice Brennan pointed out that the line between discrimination based on "ancestry or ethnic characteristics" and discrimination based on "place or nation of origin" is "not a bright one."ⁿ⁴⁰ Justice Brennan noted that often the two are identical as a factual matter, and that "national origin" claims are treated as "ancestry or ethnicity" claims in some circumstances.ⁿ⁴¹ Justice Brennan accordingly read the majority decision in Al Khazraji to mean that discrimination based on birthplace alone is insufficient to state a claim under Section 1981.ⁿ⁴²

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Because Section 1981 cases are often brought in conjunction with Title VII claims, it is prudent to file Title VII administrative charges on the basis of race and national origin for Hispanic and other complainants who may seek to file an ancestry-related race claim under Section 1981. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[c] Citizenship, Lawful Permanent Residency, and Work Authorization Requirements Distinguished

In Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co.,ⁿ⁴³ the United States Supreme Court held that "nothing in [Title VII] makes it illegal to discriminate on the basis of citizenship or alienage."ⁿ⁴⁴ The Court concluded that Congress did not intend the term "national origin" to embrace citizenship requirements for employment.ⁿ⁴⁵ Thus, an employer who requires employees to be United States citizens, or refuses to hire noncitizens, does not violate Title VII.ⁿ⁴⁶ However, employers may not discriminate against aliens because of race, color, national origin, religion, or sex,ⁿ⁴⁷ and an employer may not use a citizenship requirement as a pretext for "national origin" discrimination.ⁿ⁴⁸

Nevertheless, it is permissible to deny employment opportunities to illegal aliens or aliens who are not authorized to work in the United States. In fact, the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA)ⁿ⁴⁹ makes it unlawful for employers to knowingly hire, recruit, or refer for a fee, unauthorized aliens, or to continue to employ a person who is or becomes an unauthorized alien.ⁿ⁵⁰ "Unauthorized aliens" are aliens who, with respect to employment at a particular time, are not at that time either (1) lawfully admitted for permanent residence, or (2) authorized to be so employed by the Immigration and Nationality Actⁿ⁵¹ or by the United States Attorney General.ⁿ⁵²

However, if an alien is not "unauthorized," an employer may not discriminate based on that individual's national origin.ⁿ⁵³ Furthermore, an employer may not discriminate because of the citizenship status of an alien who is a United States citizen or national, lawful permanent resident, temporary resident, refugee, or has been granted asylum.ⁿ⁵⁴ An employer may, however, prefer to hire, recruit, or refer an individual who is a United States citizen or national over another individual who is an alien if the two individuals are equally qualified.ⁿ⁵⁵

Congress enacted the IRCA's anti-discrimination provisions because it was concerned that the statute's sanctions provisions would cause extensive employment discrimination against Hispanic Americans and other minorities.ⁿ⁵⁶ The IRCA anti-discrimination provisions "dovetail" with, rather than supplant, Title VII, particularly since Title VII does not cover alienage or citizenship status.ⁿ⁵⁷ In fact, the IRCA expressly provides that its anti-discrimination provisions do not apply to national origin discrimination that is also covered by Title VII.ⁿ⁵⁸

For a general discussion of the scope and application of the IRCA's anti-discrimination provisions, see Chapter 40, Part C. For a comprehensive discussion of those provisions and the procedures for enforcing them, see Gordon and Mailman, Immigration Law and Procedure, Chapter 7.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The interplay between IRCA and Title VII is complicated, but the Department of Justice, which enforces IRCA, and the EEOC, which enforces Title VII, have attempted to clarify and coordinate their enforcement policies.ⁿ⁵⁹ The EEOC has clearly warned employers not to rely on IRCA to discriminate against "foreign looking" applicants, and has construed IRCA to be consistent with Title VII's national origin guidelines.ⁿ⁶⁰ Thus, if an employer's citizenship requirement has the purpose or effect of discriminating on the basis of national origin, it will be unlawful under both equal employment opportunity law and the immigration law. Commentary by Erica B. Grubb.

The United States Supreme Court held in Hoffman Plastic Compounds v. NLRB ^{n60.1} that the National Labor Relations Board could not award back pay in an unfair labor practice case where the employer terminated an undocumented alien for supporting a union-organizing campaign. Noting Hoffman, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that while under Title VII an employer may not discriminate against an undocumented alien, it is unclear whether Hoffman precludes an award of back pay. Nevertheless, the Ninth Circuit upheld a lower court's refusal to allow discovery of plaintiffs' work status in a Title VII case, holding that it was not relevant to plaintiffs' claims of job discrimination.^{n60.2}

In California, all protections, rights, and remedies available under state law (except any reinstatement remedy prohibited by federal law) are available to all individuals who have applied for employment, or who are now or previously have been employed, in this state. The protections apply regardless of the applicants'/employees' immigration status.ⁿ⁶¹ For purposes of enforcing state labor and employment laws, a person's immigration status is irrelevant to the issue of liability. In proceedings or discovery undertaken to enforce state laws, no inquiry is permitted into a person's immigration status, except when the person seeking to make the inquiry has shown by clear and convincing evidence the inquiry is necessary to comply with federal immigration law.ⁿ⁶²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationNational Origin DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationNational Origin DiscriminationCoverage & Definitions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2.

(n2)Footnote 2. Exec. Order No. 11246, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965), reprinted in 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e (West 1981).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq.

(n4)Footnote 4. See former 31 U.S.C. § 6701 et seq.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582; 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982; see also [2][b], below.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Hernandez v. Texas (1954) 347 U.S. 475, 479, 74 S. Ct. 667 (exclusion of otherwise eligible persons from jury service solely because of their ancestry or national origin).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Gov. Code § 12940.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 8.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code §§ 1735, 1777.6.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.

(n11)Footnote 11. However, the Unruh Civil Rights Act, Calif. Civil Code § 51 might not apply. See Mathis v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 75 F.3d 498, 505 (jurisdiction of Unruh Act limited to establishments generally open to the public and do not cover a utility).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 88, 89, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287 ("national origin" and "ancestry" synonymous).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Pejic v. Hughes Helicopters, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 840 F.2d 667, 673.

(n14)Footnote 14. 29 C.F.R. § 1606.1.

(n15)Footnote 15. Dawavendewa v. Salt River Project Agric. Improvement and Power Dist. (9th Cir. 1998) 154 F.3d 1117, 1120-1124 (Indian Preferences Exemption does not permit employment preferences based on tribal affiliation).

(n16)Footnote 16. Kang v. U. Lim America, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 296 F.3d 810, 818-819. For discussion of disparate treatment generally, see 41.10 et seq.

(n17)Footnote 16.1. If the claim is retaliation rather than direct discrimination, the adverse action need not be workplace-related or employment-related, only adverse. See Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway Co. v. White (2006) 126 S. Ct. 2405, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345 (scope of anti-retaliation provision of Title VII extends beyond workplace-related or employment-related retaliatory acts and harm, so employee need only allege and prove "adverse action" rather than "adverse employment action" under Title VII's anti-retaliation provision), discussed at § 41.130[1A], below.

(n18)Footnote 17. 29 C.F.R. § 1606.1; see Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1195 (summary judgment record contained evidence that plaintiff's accent did not impair her performance as teacher and therefore was not job-related; evidence included recommendations by graduate school instructors, requests for her as substitute by other teachers employed by district, and district's own continued employment of her as substitute, so it would be reasonable for finder of fact to infer district used her accent as pretext to deny her full-time position because of national origin); but see Fragante v. City and County of Honolulu (9th Cir. 1989) 888 F.2d 591, 596, cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1081 (1990) (adverse employment decision may be predicated on individual's accent when accent interferes materially with job performance).

(n19)Footnote 18. See 29 C.F.R. § 1606.1.

(n20)Footnote 18.1. Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 713, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 . See also Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 991, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 (in national origin and ethnicity discrimination action, plaintiff has initial burden to show membership in protected class, plaintiff suffered adverse employment action, and similarly-situated persons who were not members of protected class did not suffer same adverse employment action; burden shifts to employer to provide legitimate nondiscriminatory reason why employee was treated differently; once employer provides reason, employee must show nondiscriminatory reason put forth by employer was mere pretext and true reason for adverse employment action was discriminatory intent).

(n21)Footnote 18.2. Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 714-715, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 .

(n22)Footnote 18.3. Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 715-723, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 .

(n23)Footnote 18.4. Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 723-727, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 .

(n24)Footnote 18.5. Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 991-993, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 .

(n25)Footnote 19. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 90, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n26)Footnote 20. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 8.

(n27)Footnote 21. Blom v. N.G.K. Spark Plugs (U.S.A.), Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 382, 386-388, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 139 .

(n28)Footnote 22. See Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 as affording federal remedy against discrimination in private employment); see 42 U.S.C. § 1981(a); See also § 40.10[2][e].

(n29)Footnote 23. See Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 167, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 as not addressed to sex or religious discrimination).

(n30)Footnote 24. See Manzanares v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (10th Cir. [Colo.] 1979) 593 F.2d 968, 970-972 ; Ortiz v. Bank of America (E.D. Cal. 1982) 547 F. Supp. 550, 568 .

(n31)Footnote 25. See Manzanares v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (10th Cir. [Colo.] 1979) 593 F.2d 968, 969 .

(n32)Footnote 26. See Manzanares v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (10th Cir. [Colo.] 1979) 593 F.2d 968, 970.

(n33)Footnote 27. See Manzanares v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (10th Cir. [Colo.] 1979) 593 F.2d 968, 971.

(n34)Footnote 28. See Manzanares v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (10th Cir. [Colo.] 1979) 593 F.2d 968, 971.

(n35)Footnote 29. Gonzalez v. Stanford Applied Eng'g (9th Cir. 1979) 597 F.2d 1298 .

(n36)Footnote 30. See Gonzalez v. Stanford Applied Eng'g (9th Cir. 1979) 597 F.2d 1298, 1300 (emphasis added).

(n37)Footnote 31. See Gonzalez v. Stanford Applied Eng'g (9th Cir. 1979) 597 F.2d 1298, 1300 .

(n38)Footnote 32. See Gonzalez v. Stanford Applied Eng'g (9th Cir. 1979) 597 F.2d 1298, 1300 .

(n39)Footnote 33. Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 .

(n40)Footnote 34. Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582, 592 (emphasis added).

(n41)Footnote 35. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 610, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582, 589 .

(n42)Footnote 36. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 610-611, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582, 590 .

(n43)Footnote 37. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 611, 612, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582, 590-591 .

(n44)Footnote 38. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582, 592 .

(n45)Footnote 39. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582, 592 .

(n46)Footnote 40. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 614, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582, 592 (Brennan, J., concurring).

(n47)Footnote 41. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 614, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 , (Brennan, J., concurring; relying on Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 88, 89, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287); 29 C.F.R. § 1606.1.

(n48)Footnote 42. Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 614, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 , (Brennan, J., concurring).

(n49)Footnote 43. See Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287 .

(n50)Footnote 44. Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 95, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287 ; see also Mahdavi v. Fair Employment Practice Comm'n (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 326, 336-337 , 136 Cal. Rptr. 421.

(n51)Footnote 45. See Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 89-90, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287 .

(n52)Footnote 46. See Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 92-96, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287 .

(n53)Footnote 47. Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 95, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287 . See Equal Employment Opportunity Comm'n v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1516 n.10 (assuming without deciding that undocumented alien workers are entitled to Title VII protections).

(n54)Footnote 48. See Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 92, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1606.5; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7289.5(f).

(n55)Footnote 49. Pub. L. No. 99-603.

(n56)Footnote 50. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(a).

(n57)Footnote 51. 8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.

(n58)Footnote 52. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(h)(3).

(n59)Footnote 53. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(1)(A).

(n60)Footnote 54. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(1)(B), (3)(B); U.S. v. Todd Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 164, 165 (Congress was concerned about discrimination against documented aliens and "foreign looking and sounding" U.S. citizens); see Robison Fruit Ranch, Inc. v. United States (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 798, 800-802 (construing IRCA before 1996 amendments adding express discrimination requirement, court concluded that 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(6)'s document abuse prohibition required finding of discrimination; requesting specific documents permitted when those documents are routinely produced during employment process).

(n61)Footnote 55. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(4).

(n62)Footnote 56. See H.R. Rep. No. 682, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 68 (1986); see also United States v. Todd Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 900 F.2d 164, 167. In fact, a 1990 Comptroller General's report found that the IRCA does cause widespread discrimination. see U.S. General Accounting Office (now the U.S. Government Accountability Office), Pub. No. GAO 166D-90-62, Immigration Reform, Employers Sanctions and the Question of Discrimination (March 1990). As a result, the Immigration Act of 1990 added civil penalty and retaliation provisions to the IRCA. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(5) (prohibiting retaliation), (g)(2)(B)(iv) (civil penalties); Pub. L. No. 101-649 (Immigration Act of 1990).

(n63)Footnote 57. See H.R. Rep. No. 682, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 68 (1986).

(n64)Footnote 58. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(2)(B), (b)(2).

(n65)Footnote 59. See EEOC Policy Statement on Relationship of Title VII of 1964 Civil Rights Act and 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act, 1987 Daily Lab. Rep. (BNA) 39:D-1 (March 2, 1987).

(n66)Footnote 60. See EEOC Policy Statement on Relationship of Title VII of 1964 Civil Rights Act and 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act, 1987 Daily Lab. Rep. (BNA) 39:D-1 (March 2, 1987).

(n67)Footnote 60.1. (2000) 535 U.S. 137, 122 S. Ct. 1275, 152 L. Ed. 2d 271.

(n68)Footnote 60.2. Rivera v. NIBCO, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 364 F.3d 1057, cert. denied, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 2264 (Mar. 7, 2005).

(n69)Footnote 61. Civ. Code § 3339(a); Gov. Code § 7285(a); Health & Safety Code § 24000(a); Lab. Code § 1171.5(a).

(n70)Footnote 62. Civ. Code § 3339(b); Gov. Code § 7285(b); Health & Safety Code § 24000(b); Lab. Code § 1171.5(b).

47 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART B. PROHIBITED BASES OF DISCRIMINATION

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.34

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.34 Race and Color Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

Title VII and the FEHA prohibit employment discrimination based on race or color.ⁿ¹ Other federal and California laws proscribing race discrimination in employment include Title 42 United States Code Section 1981,ⁿ² and Title 42 United States Code Section 1983 (applying to public employers),ⁿ³ Executive Order No. 11246 (federal contractors),ⁿ⁴ Title VI,ⁿ⁵ the still-operative antidiscrimination provisions of the former Revenue Sharing Act (state and local governments sharing federal income tax funds),ⁿ⁶ the California Constitution,ⁿ⁷ and possibly the Cartwright Act (California antitrust law).ⁿ⁸ Government Code Section 11135 (state-funded programs or activities) prohibits discrimination based on race. For discussion relating to the scope and application of equal employment opportunity laws in general, see Chapter 40.

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Race Discrimination

There is no definition of "race" in either Title VII or the FEHA, and there are few cases construing the term for equal employment opportunity purposes.ⁿ⁹ One commentator has suggested that because the language of Title VII broadly covers "color," "national origin," and "religion," as well as "race," everyone is likely to fall within at least one category, and thus the definition of "race" has generated no problems relating to scope of protection.ⁿ¹⁰

The United States Supreme Court has addressed the meaning of "race" in the context of Title 42 United States Code Section 1981.ⁿ¹¹ In Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji,ⁿ¹² the Court explained that the understanding of "race" now differs from when Section 1981 was enacted.ⁿ¹³ The Court noted that the common popular understanding of three major human races--Caucasoid, Mongoloid, and Negroid--has been criticized as arbitrary.ⁿ¹⁴ Relying on legislative history and diverse dictionary and encyclopedic sources, the Court concluded that "racial discrimination" involves identifiable classes of persons subject to discrimination solely because of their ancestry or ethnic characteristics.ⁿ¹⁵ A California court of appeal, following the Supreme Court's reasoning in Al-Khazraji, has also held that an allegation that a person was subject to discrimination based on membership in a group perceived to be distinct from whites, and not based on birthplace only, is sufficient to raise a claim for racial discrimination under the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁶

Protection against race discrimination is not limited to minority groups. Title VII prohibits discriminatory preference "for any group, minority or majority,"ⁿ¹⁷ and thus bars race discrimination against white persons as well as African-American persons.ⁿ¹⁸ White persons are also protected under Section 1981.ⁿ¹⁹

Federal and state laws also prohibit discriminatory employment practices based on an individual's association with people of a particular race.ⁿ²⁰ As one court explained, a plaintiff need not specifically allege that he or she has been discriminated against because of his or her own race.ⁿ²¹ If a white plaintiff alleges that he or she suffered discrimination because he or she, as a white person, associated with an African-American person, the plaintiff's race was as much a factor in the discriminatory practice as that of his or her friend.ⁿ²² Thus, when a plaintiff claims discrimination based on an interracial marriage or association, he or she alleges, by definition, that he or she has been discriminated against because of his or her race.ⁿ²³

According to one California court, an employee required to work in a racist work environment who does not personally experience discrimination may nevertheless have a claim for constructive wrongful termination in violation of public policy.ⁿ²⁴

The Ninth Circuit has held that "race-labelling," i.e., the use of derogatory terms to indicate minorities or things relating to minorities in the workplace, may have an adverse impact on minorities or may create a hostile work environment if the labelling is sufficiently severe as to alter the terms and conditions of employment.ⁿ²⁵

In El-Hakem v. BJY, Inc.,^{n25.1} the Ninth Circuit held that § 1981 can be violated by the use of a name that is not a racial epithet, because names are often a proxy for race and ethnicity. The employer addressed an employee of Arabic heritage with a non-Arabic name, to which the employee objected repeatedly. The court found the conduct frequent or pervasive enough to create a hostile work environment, and the discriminatory intent was clear from the record.

[b] "Color" Discrimination

Although "color" is a discrete prohibited basis of discrimination under both Title VII and the FEHA,ⁿ²⁶ it is rarely treated separately from "race." In one case, however, the EEOC did find unlawful discrimination based on "color" when an employer gave preference to a "light-complexioned" black applicant with "Caucasian features" over another black applicant who had a "dark complexion" and "Negroid features."ⁿ²⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Racial Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Racial Discrimination Coverage & Definitions Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Racial Discrimination Employment Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; Gov. Code § 12940.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Runyon v. McCrary (1976) 427 U.S. 160, 168, 174-175, 96 S. Ct. 2586, 49 L. Ed. 2d 415 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Scott v. University of Delaware (D. Del. 1974) 385 F. Supp. 937, 945 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Exec. Order No. 11246, 30 Fed. Reg. 12, 319 (1965) , reprinted in 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e (West 1981).

(n5)Footnote 5. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d.

(n6)Footnote 6. See former 31 U.S.C. §§ 6701-6724.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 8.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., United States v. Flagler County Sch. Dist. (5th Cir. 1972) 457 F.2d 1402, 1403 (rejecting argument by school superintendent that desegregation order was vague and uncertain because it contained no definition of the term "Negro"; holding that since school district had no difficulty identifying Negroes for segregation purposes, they can be identified with similar ease for desegregation purposes).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Larson, Employment Discrimination, ch. 49 (Matthew Bender).

(n11)Footnote 11. For discussion relating to the substantive provisions of 42 U.S.C. § 1981, see § 41.02[5].

(n12)Footnote 12. Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 610, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 610 n.4, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 612-613, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582 (groups such as Arabs, Jews, and Germans are not to be considered single race).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Sandhu v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 846, 858, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617 (East Indian plaintiff) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (emphasis added).

(n18)Footnote 18. See McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 280, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 ; Aragon v. Republic Silver State Disposal, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 292 F.3d 654, 659 ; Hicks v. ABT Assoc., Inc. (3rd Cir. 1978) 572 F.2d 960, 967 ; Detroit Police Officers Ass'n. v. Young (DC Mich. 1978) 446 F. Supp. 979, 1004 , rev'd on other grounds, 608 F.2d 671 (1979) .

(n19)Footnote 19. See McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 286-287, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Parr v. Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Co. (11th Cir. 1986) 791 F.2d 888, 891 (Title VII) ; see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.9 (FEHA interpretative regulation).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Parr v. Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Co. (11th Cir. 1986) 791 F.2d 888, 892 . But compare Cato v. US (9th Cir. 1995) 70 F.3d 1103, 1109 (general enslavement of black race of African-American descent and subsequent discrimination did not give specific plaintiff standing; a generalized, class-based grievance affords no basis for a claim; particular conduct aimed at a particular person is necessary to proceed).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Parr v. Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Co. (11th Cir. 1986) 791 F.2d 888, 891 .

(n23)Footnote 23. See Parr v. Woodmen of the World Life Ins. Co. (11th Cir. 1986) 791 F.2d 888, 892 .

(n24)Footnote 24. Carmichael v. Alfano Temporary Personnel (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1126, 1132, 285 Cal. Rptr. 143 (tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on sex and race discrimination); Strother v. Southern Cal. Permanente Med. Group (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 859, 865-866 (employment discrimination on the basis of race violates public policy, citing Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 69, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 (discussion of public policy as to other bases of discrimination)); Badih v. Myers (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1293-1295, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 ; See also ch. 40, pt. A, and ch. 60, pt. A.

(n25)Footnote 25. Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1485, 1503-1504 (Title VII) ; see also Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295, 297 (Title VII; standard for hostile work environment in sexual harassment cases).

(n26)Footnote 25.1. El-Hakem v. BJY, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 415 F.3d 1068, 1073-1074 .

(n27)Footnote 26. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA).

(n28)Footnote 27. See EEOC Dec. No. 72-0454 (1971).

48 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART B. PROHIBITED BASES OF DISCRIMINATION

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.35

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.35 Religious Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

Both Title VII and the FEHA prohibit employment discrimination based on religion.ⁿ¹ In Rains v. Criterion Systems, Inc.,ⁿ² the Ninth Circuit held that a Title VII religious claim can be raised as part of a state claim, without transforming the case into a federal question necessitating federal jurisdiction. In Rains, Title VII was mentioned, but the complainant had not filed a Title VII claim. The court reasoned that Title VII does not completely preempt a state law claim; rather, it preempts only inconsistent state law.ⁿ³

Religious discrimination is also unlawful under Title 42, United States Code Section 1983 (applicable to public employers), Executive Order No. 11246 (federal contractors),ⁿ⁴ the California Constitution,ⁿ⁵ Government Code Section 11135 (state-funded programs or activities), the California public works laws,ⁿ⁶ and possibly the Cartwright Act (California antitrust law).ⁿ⁷ However, 42 U.S.C. § Section 1981 does not apply to claims of religious discrimination.^{n7.1}

For a discussion of an employer's duty to make reasonable accommodations, see § 41.52. For general discussion of the scope and application of these and other equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40.

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Generally

It is unlawful to discriminate on the basis of religion in hiring, firing, compensation, and the terms, conditions, and privileges of employment.ⁿ⁸ In addition, both Title VII and the FEHA impose an affirmative duty on the employer to accommodate an individual's religious beliefs or observances.ⁿ⁹ For full discussion relating to employer accommodation of religious beliefs and observances, see § 41.52.

Under Title VII, the term "religion" includes all aspects of religious observance and practice, as well as belief.ⁿ¹⁰ Most cases do not involve the question of whether a practice or belief is religious or not.ⁿ¹¹ However, in those rare cases in which the issue does arise, the EEOC interprets "religious practices" as including moral or ethical beliefs about what is right and wrong that are sincerely held with the strength of traditional religious views.ⁿ¹² Even if no religious group espouses such beliefs, or the religious group to which the individual professes to belong does not accept those beliefs, the belief may still be a religious belief of the employee or prospective employee.ⁿ¹³

The EEOC definition expressly relies on the "religious belief" standard developed in Welsh v. United States,ⁿ¹⁴ and United States v. Seeger,ⁿ¹⁵ in which the United States Supreme Court determined whether an individual's beliefs were "religious" for conscientious objector purposes under the Universal Military and Training Service Act.ⁿ¹⁶ In Seeger, the Court defined "religious belief" as "a sincere and meaningful belief that occupies in the life of its possessor a place parallel to that filled by the God of those admittedly qualifying for the [conscientious objector] exemption."ⁿ¹⁷ At least one court has held that Title VII protects atheistic beliefs.ⁿ¹⁸

Title VII requires "sincerity" of religious beliefs, and although that question is often not at issue,ⁿ¹⁹ an analysis of "sincerity" is sometimes necessary.ⁿ²⁰ The Second Circuit Court of Appeals has found such an analysis necessary to differentiate between beliefs held as a matter of conscience and those that are motivated by deception and fraud.ⁿ²¹ The court articulated several factors that indicate insincerity. For example, an adherent may act in a manner inconsistent with his or her belief, or he or she may materially gain by fraudulently hiding secular interests behind a veil of religious doctrine. The court also suggested that the size and history of a religion is relevant to the determination.ⁿ²²

Courts use a two-part analysis in analyzing Title VII religious discrimination cases.ⁿ²³ First, an employee alleging religious discrimination under Title VII must establish a prima facie case by proving that (1) he or she had a bona fide religious belief, the practice of which conflicted with an employment duty; (2) the employee informed his or her employer of the belief and conflict; and (3) the employer threatened the employee with, or subjected him or her to, discriminatory treatment, such as discharge, because of his or her inability to fulfill the job requirements.ⁿ²⁴ After the prima facie case is established, the burden shifts to the employer to show that it negotiated with the employee in an effort reasonably to accommodate the employee's religious beliefs. If the negotiations do not produce a proposal by the employer that would eliminate the conflict, the employer must either accept the employee's proposal or demonstrate that it would cause undue hardship if it were to do so.ⁿ²⁵

A. Prima Facie Case. The employee must establish that:

1. He or she has a bona fide religious belief, the practice of which conflicts with an employment duty;
2. He or she has informed the employer of the belief and conflict;
3. The employer has threatened or subjected him or her to discriminatory treatment ... because of his or her inability to fulfill the requirements of the job.

B. Reasonable Accommodation and Undue Hardship. If the employee establishes a prima facie case:

1. The employer must establish that it has negotiated with the employee in an effort reasonably to accommodate the employee's religious beliefs;
2. Where the negotiations do not produce a proposal by the employer that would eliminate the religious conflict, the employer must either:
 - a. Accept the employee's proposal; or
 - b. Demonstrate that it would cause undue hardship.

- i. Undue hardship on the employer:
 - a) Involves hardship on the conduct of the business; and
 - b) Occurs when an accommodation would result in more than a de minimis cost to the employer.
 - ii. Undue hardship on coworkers:
 - a) Involves hardship to the rights of other employees; and
 - b) Occurs when an accommodation would result in a significant, discriminatory impact upon those rights. ("Discriminatory" is defined as "preferential" to the plaintiff.)
3. Only if the employer can show that no accommodation would be possible (meaning "feasible") without undue hardship is it excused from taking the necessary steps to accommodate the employee's religious beliefs.
- a. Hypothetical hardship is not sufficient.
 - b. Actual hardship established through the implementation of alternative accommodations is preferable. (The employer is on stronger ground when it has attempted various methods of accommodation and can show hardships that actually have resulted.)
 - c. Feasible accommodations that would not cause undue hardship (absent preferential treatment of the plaintiff under a collective bargaining agreement or policy that permits employees to avoid working on days that the accommodation would require) include:
 - i. Schedule changes, voluntary shift trades, or a combination of both; and
 - ii. Temporary accommodation and transfer.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The Opuku Boateng case²⁶ referenced in the text is significant for a number of reasons, but two stand out.

First, the opinion describes its analysis of Title VII discrimination claims as falling into two parts, but the evaluation process actually set forth is far more complicated. According to the panel, a case of religious discrimination triggers at least a dozen separate inquiries:

A. Prima Facie Case. The employee must establish that:

- 1. He or she has a bona fide religious belief, the practice of which conflicts with an employment duty;
- 2. He or she has informed the employer of the belief and conflict;
- 3. The employer has threatened or subjected him or her to discriminatory treatment ... because of his or her inability to fulfill the requirements of the job.

B. Reasonable Accommodation and Undue Hardship. If the employee establishes a prima facie case:

1. The employer must establish that it has negotiated with the employee in an effort reasonably to accommodate the employee's religious beliefs;
2. Where the negotiations do not produce a proposal by the employer that would eliminate the religious conflict, the employer must either:
 - a. Accept the employee's proposal; or
 - b. Demonstrate that it would cause undue hardship.
 - i. Undue hardship on the employer:
 - a) Involves hardship on the conduct of the business; and
 - b) Occurs when an accommodation would result in more than a de minimis cost to the employer.
 - ii. Undue hardship on coworkers:
 - a) Involves hardship to the rights of other employees; and
 - b) Occurs when an accommodation would result in a significant, discriminatory impact upon those rights. ("Discriminatory" is defined as "preferential" to the plaintiff.)
3. Only if the employer can show that no accommodation would be possible (meaning "feasible") without undue hardship is it excused from taking the necessary steps to accommodate the employee's religious beliefs.
 - a. Hypothetical hardship is not sufficient.
 - b. Actual hardship established through the implementation of alternative accommodations is preferable. (The employer is on stronger ground when it has attempted various methods of accommodation and can show hardships that actually have resulted.)
 - c. Feasible accommodations that would not cause undue hardship (absent preferential treatment of the plaintiff under a collective bargaining agreement or policy that permits employees to avoid working on days that the accommodation would require) include:
 - i. Schedule changes, voluntary shift trades, or a combination of both; and
 - ii. Temporary accommodation and transfer.

Second, the Ninth Circuit all but eliminated the use of employee polls to determine whether coworkers would find a proposed accommodation unacceptable. The panel acknowledged that a poll could be admitted over a hearsay objection, so long as "it is material and more probative on the issue than other evidence, and it has guarantees of trustworthiness." By itself, this is welcome news, because employers have wondered what standards the Ninth Circuit would apply to the admissibility of polls in civil rights litigation. However, a poll which reveals coworker unhappiness with a proposed accommodation is of no import, unless that unhappiness can be linked to the loss of some right and consequent preferential treatment of the plaintiff. In short, the "morale" defense would appear to be dead. If the employer can achieve an accommodation without preferential treatment of the plaintiff and without more than de minimis cost, the reactions of other employees to the accommodation are immaterial. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

The FEHA provides that "religious belief or observance" includes, but is not limited to, observance such as a Sabbath or other religious holy day or days, and reasonable time necessary for travel before and after a religious observance.ⁿ²⁷ "Religious creed," as it is used in the FEHA, includes any traditionally recognized religion, as well as beliefs, observances, or practices that an individual sincerely holds, and that occupy in his or her life a place of importance parallel to that of traditionally recognized religions.ⁿ²⁸ A belief in a supreme being is not required.ⁿ²⁹ However, to secure FEHA protection, the beliefs, observances, or practices must occupy a place of importance in the person's life parallel to that of traditionally recognized religions. The test is objective.^{n29.1} The following are guidelines for determining what constitutes a religion by considering whether beliefs, observances, or practices parallel those of traditionally recognized religions:^{n29.2}

- A religion addresses fundamental and ultimate questions having to do with deep and imponderable matters.
- A religion is comprehensive in nature; it consists of a belief-system as opposed to an isolated teaching.
- A religion often can be recognized by the presence of certain formal and external signs.

The elements of a religious creed discrimination claim are the following:^{n29.3}

- The plaintiff had a bona fide religious belief.
- The employer was aware of that belief.
- The belief conflicted with an employment requirement.

Once the employee establishes a prima facie case with sufficient evidence, the burden shifts to the employer to establish that it initiated good faith efforts to accommodate or that no accommodation was possible without producing undue hardship.^{n29.4}

[b] Issues Relating to Particular Observances, Practices, and Beliefs

One appellate court has construed the Title VII definition of "religion" discussed in [a], above, to encompass all forms and aspects of religion, however eccentric, except those that cannot be, in practice and with honest effort, reconciled with a businesslike operation.^{n29.5} Specific protected practices include wearing beards,ⁿ³⁰ nonpayment of union dues,ⁿ³¹ refusal to distribute draft registration materials,ⁿ³² participation in a spouse's religious conversion ceremony,ⁿ³³ use of the drug peyote,ⁿ³⁴ and attendance at a religious convention.^{n34.1}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Most religious discrimination cases depend heavily on the particular facts of the alleged discrimination and turn on three issues: (1) whether the employee has a sincere belief; (2) whether the employer has taken reasonable steps to accommodate that belief; and (3) whether accommodation would constitute an undue hardship on the conduct of the employer's business. On the latter points, the Supreme Court has narrowly construed the employer's duty to accommodate to such an extent that costs that are more than "de minimis" automatically constitute undue hardship.ⁿ³⁵ The Supreme Court also has ruled that when an employer and an employee each propose a form of reasonable accommodation, the employer does not have to accept the employee's proposal, even when it would not cause undue hardship to the employer's business.ⁿ³⁶ Thus, despite the broad scope of the ban against religious discrimination and the apparent deference to eccentric individual beliefs, the case law in fact acknowledges and protects management prerogatives.ⁿ³⁷ Commentary by Erica B. Grubb.

In Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co.,^{n37.1} an employee who characterized himself as a "devout Christian," posted on his work cubicle passages from the Bible relating to homosexuality in response to the employer's displaying of "diversity posters," including posters showing the photograph of a gay employee, a description of the gay employee's personal interests, and the slogan "Diversity is Our Strength." The employee admitted that he posted the passages to be "hurtful" so that his gay and lesbian co-workers would read the passages, repent, and be saved. The employer ordered the employee to remove the Bible passages under its harassment policy. The employee offered to take down the passages if the employer removed the posters, which the employer did not accept. The employer terminated him for insubordination when he then refused to remove the scriptural passages. The Ninth Circuit concluded that the trial court properly granted the employer's summary judgment motion in the employee's Title VII and state law action based on religious discrimination, because the employee's evidence did not meet the threshold for defeating summary judgment in disparate treatment cases. Viewing the record in the light most favorable to the employee, it was evident that he was not discharged because of his religious beliefs, but because he violated the company's harassment policy by attempting to generate a hostile and intolerant work environment and because he was insubordinate in repeatedly disregarding the company's instructions to remove the demeaning and degrading postings from his cubicle. The court found that company managers did not harass the employee to convince him to change his religious beliefs, but, rather, acknowledged the sincerity of his beliefs and insisted that he need not change them and explained the diversity program to him and asked him to treat his co-workers with respect and not violate the company's harassment policy, which was uniformly applied to all employees. The disciplinary proceedings and subsequent termination did not constitute disparate treatment as compared to the employees who hung the diversity posters and were communicating the employer's views as they were directed to do by management. Nor was there disparate treatment as compared to employees who posted religious and secular messages and symbols in their work spaces, or as compared to a network group of homosexual employees the employee permitted to organize in the workplace and advertise in the company's email and its newsletter. The terminated employee failed to present any evidence that either of these groups intended to be hurtful to or critical of any other employees or otherwise to violate the company's harassment policy.

Similarly, in Bodett v. CoxCom, Inc.,^{n37.2} the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the former employer on the employee's claim of religious discrimination based on disparate treatment. The employment was terminated based on statements made by the employee, an evangelical Christian, to a supervisee about the supervisee's homosexuality. Using the McDonnell Douglas analysis or framework, the court found that although the employee showed membership in a protected class, that she was performing in a satisfactory manner, and that she suffered an adverse employment action, she did not show through comparators that any similarly situated individual outside her protected category was treated more favorably or other circumstances surrounding her termination that demonstrated a bias or animus against her religion giving rise to an inference of discrimination, and therefore failed to make a prima facie case. However, the court assumed the employee had made a prima facie case, and concluded that based on the employee's admissions of having made the statements, the employer showed a legitimate non-discriminatory reason for terminating her, i.e., that the employee had violated the employer's anti-harassment policy. Because the employee was unable to counter the employer's production with persuasive evidence that the employer did not honestly believe its proffered reasons for termination, the employee failed to demonstrate a triable issue of fact with regard to pretext.

In Tiano v. Dillard Dep't Stores, Inc.,ⁿ³⁸ the employee filed a Title VII religious discrimination action alleging that the former employer failed to reasonably accommodate the employee's religious beliefs when the employer terminated her for going on a pilgrimage during its busy holiday season. Although as a general rule employees do not have an inflexible duty to reschedule their religious ceremonies, when an employee maintains that religious beliefs require attendance at a particular pilgrimage, the employee must prove that a temporal mandate is part of the bona fide religious belief. To hold the contrary would require the employer to accommodate the employee's personal time preferences, and Title VII does not protect secular preferences.ⁿ³⁹ The Ninth Circuit concluded that the employee's testimony that she was called by God to attend a particular scheduled pilgrimage to Medjugorje, without more, was insufficient to establish a prima facie case of religious discrimination and did not reach the issues of reasonable accommodation and undue hardship.ⁿ⁴⁰

■ COMMENTARY:

Tiano concerns a narrow fact pattern, but it is a helpful precedent. The first prong of a prima facie case of religious discrimination requires that a plaintiff prove that he or she had a bona fide religious belief, "the practice of which conflicted with an employment duty." In most cases, the phrase in quotes is not an issue, because the religious practice at issue typically includes a "temporal" element--e.g., the need to observe a particular religious event on a particular day or series of days. In Tiano, however, the plaintiff wanted to go on a pilgrimage which she could have undertaken at any time. There was no religious mandate that it occur on the days that she elected to absent herself from the workplace. Therefore, she failed to meet her prima facie burden and was appropriately terminated. Employers should be careful how they use the Tiano decision, but they are free to inquire as to the factors that make a particular absence for a religious purpose essential on the day or days that the employee has requested.
Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

On the other hand, in Cal. Fair Employment & Housing Comm. v. Gemini Aluminum Corp.,^{n40.1} an employee made out a prima facie case by alleging that he sought to attend a specific religious convention and the employer made no attempt to accommodate him. To the extent the dates were in conflict with the employer's needs, rescheduling would have been an appropriate subject to raise in an attempt by the employer to accommodate the belief or observance. But the employer's outright denial precluded any attempt at accommodation. Substantial evidence also supported the FEHC's finding that the employer was aware of the employee's belief and its conflict with an employment requirement. Notice to the employer does not require a complex explanation. The employee needs only to cite a religious connection. Since a prima facie case was established, the burden shifted to the employer to establish it initiated good faith efforts to accommodate or no accommodation was possible without producing undue hardship. The employer did not assert hardship, and the employer failed to initiate an effort to accommodate the employee's religious belief.

An individual's religious beliefs must be accommodated even where it means making an exception to a rule which is reasonably applied to other individuals with different beliefs.^{n40.2}

Although "religion" does not require formal organization or "written form,"ⁿ⁴¹ some extreme personal beliefs or tenets may not be protected by equal employment opportunity law. For example, one court rejected an employee's claim that he suffered discrimination based on his "personal religious creed" that a cat food contributed to his well-being and work performance.ⁿ⁴² The court relied in part on United States v. Seeger,ⁿ⁴³ discussed in [a], above, which construed the term "religious training and belief" as it is used in the Universal Military and Training Service Act as excluding a merely personal moral code that is "in no way related to a Supreme Being."ⁿ⁴⁴ It thus held that the employee's "personal religious creed" was "a mere personal preference and, therefore ... beyond the parameters of the concept of religion as protected ... by [Title VII]."ⁿ⁴⁵

Some asserted religious beliefs have been held to be actually political or social in nature and thus not protected. For example, one court refused to extend Title VII protection to an employee alleging religious discrimination based on his membership in the Ku Klux Klan.ⁿ⁴⁶ The court explained that the ideology of the organization "takes on ... a narrow, temporal and political character inconsistent with the meaning of 'religion' as used in [Title VII]."ⁿ⁴⁷

In Friedman v. So. Cal. Permanente Medical Group,^{n47.1} the court of appeal found that plaintiff's veganism was not a religious creed within the meaning of the FEHA, but rather was a personal philosophy and a way of life.^{n47.2} The court based its holding on the following:^{n47.3}

- There was no allegation or judicially noticeable evidence plaintiff's belief system addressed fundamental or ultimate questions. Rather, plaintiff alleged a moral and ethical creed limited to the single subject of highly valuing animal life and ordering one's life based on that perspective.

- While plaintiff's belief system governed his behavior in wide-ranging respects, including the food he eats, the clothes he wears, and the products he uses, it was not sufficiently comprehensive in nature.

- Though not determinative, no formal or external signs of a religion were present. There were no teachers or leaders; services or ceremonies; structure or organization; orders of worship or articles of faith; or holidays.

[c] Notice to Employer of Conflict

One Ninth Circuit opinion has discussed the requirement that the employee give notice to the employer concerning the employee's religious conflict with his or her employment.ⁿ⁴⁸ In Heller v. EBB Auto Co.,ⁿ⁴⁹ a Ninth Circuit panel observed that a sensible approach would require that the employee give only enough information about his or her religious needs to permit the employer to understand the existence of a conflict between the employee's religious practices and the employer's job requirements. According to the court, any greater notice requirement would permit an employer to delve into the religious practices of an employee in order to determine whether religion mandated the employee's adherence. The court found that neither courts nor employers may make such an inquiry.ⁿ⁵⁰

[d] Exemption for Religious Educational Institutions

Under certain circumstances, religious educational institutions may be exempt from the prohibition against religious discrimination under Title VII. There are three exemptions available to religious educational institutions. One exemption provides that the equal employment provisions of Title VII do not apply to employment by a "religious ... educational institution" of individuals of a particular religion to carry on its activities.ⁿ⁵¹ To meet the requirements of this exemption, the religious characteristics of the school must be weighed against its secular characteristics to show that the school is primarily religious rather than secular, and not merely affiliated with a religious organization.ⁿ⁵² In one case, for example, the Ninth Circuit examined a school's ownership and affiliation, purpose, faculty, student body, student activities, and curriculum and determined that the general picture of the school reflected a primarily secular, rather than primarily religious, orientation and thus did not fall within the exemption under Title 42, United States Code, Section 2000e-1.ⁿ⁵³

Title VII also provides a religious curriculum exemption for religious schools, which provides that "it shall not be an unlawful employment practice for a school ... to hire and employ employees of a particular religion ... if the curriculum of such school ... is directed toward the propagation of a particular religion."ⁿ⁵⁴ Although the statute does not define the terms "curriculum" or "propagate," the Ninth Circuit has defined "propagate" to mean the spreading or instilling of particular religious values, and "curriculum" to mean coursework and required school activities.ⁿ⁵⁵ Applying these definitions in one case, the Ninth Circuit made a fact-based inquiry into the extent to which a school's curriculum reflected an effort to spread and inculcate particular religious beliefs. The court characterized the school's curriculum as being more an effort to teach comparative religion and good moral values as part of a general tradition than an effort to propagate its religious tenets, and thus concluded that the curriculum exemption did not apply.ⁿ⁵⁶

In addition to the two specific exemptions discussed above, Title VII provides that it is not an unlawful employment practice for an employer to hire and employ an individual on the basis of his or her religion in those instances in which religion is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the particular business.ⁿ⁵⁷ For discussion of the BFOQ defense with regard to religion, see § 41.94[1][b].

[e] Exemption for Nonprofit Religious Corporations

The FEHA generally exempts nonprofit religious entities from its ban on work-related discrimination by excluding from the definition of employer "a religious association or corporation not organized for profit."ⁿ⁵⁸ Specifically, nonprofit religious entities are not subject to the FEHA's ban against discrimination based on religious creed.ⁿ⁵⁹ Before recent FEHA amendments that expanded coverage to nonprofit religious corporations and associations in certain circumstances,ⁿ⁶⁰ nonprofit religious organizations were exempt from the anti-discrimination provisions of the FEHA regardless of the nature of the alleged discrimination.ⁿ⁶¹

[f] Reverse Religious Discrimination

An employee may allege a violation of Title VII's prohibition of religious discrimination by alleging that the employee was discriminated against because he or she is not a member of a particular religion. For example, in Noyes v. Kelly Services,ⁿ⁶² an employee alleged that a supervisory employee favored and promoted members of the same religion to which the supervisory employee belonged, and that the employee was passed over for promotion because she did not adhere to that religion. The Ninth Circuit found that the McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting regime applied to her claim, and that the employee made out a prima facie case of reverse religious discrimination.ⁿ⁶³ The court then found that the employer articulated a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for not promoting her.ⁿ⁶⁴ However, the court found that the employee met her burden, for summary judgment purposes, of showing that the employer's reasons were a pretext for discrimination.ⁿ⁶⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Religious Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Religious Discrimination Coverage & Definitions General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Religious Discrimination Employment Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a)-(d), (j), (l) (FEHA).

(n2)Footnote 2. Rains v. Criterion Sys., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 339 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Rains v. Criterion Sys., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 339, 345 (citing California Federal S. & L. v. Guerra (1987) 479 US 272).

(n4)Footnote 4. Exec. Order No. 11246, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 8. See also Rains v. Criterion Sys., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 339, 346 (referring to California Constitutional basis for decision).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code §§ 1735, 1777.6.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.

(n8)Footnote 7.1. Noyes v. Kelly Services (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1163, 1167 n.3 ; Shah v. Mt. Zion Hospital & Medical Center (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 268, 272 & n.4.

(n9)Footnote 8. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA); see § 40.10[2][b].

(n10)Footnote 9. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(l) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(l) (FEHA); see [e], below.

(n11)Footnote 10. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j).

(n12)Footnote 11. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.1.

(n13)Footnote 12. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.1.

(n14)Footnote 13. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.1; see also Frazee v. Employment Security Dep't (1989) 489 U.S. 829, 834-835, 109 S. Ct. 1514, 103 L. Ed. 2d 914 (denial of unemployment benefits because refusal to work on Sunday was not based on tenets of particular religious organization violated Establishment Clause of First Amendment to United States Constitution).

(n15)Footnote 14. Welsh v. United States (1970) 398 U.S. 333, 90 S. Ct. 1792, 26 L. Ed. 2d 308 .

(n16)Footnote 15. United States v. Seeger (1965) 380 U.S. 163, 85 S. Ct. 850, 13 L. Ed. 2d 733 .

(n17)Footnote 16. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.1; see also 50 U.S.C. § 456(j) (exempting conscientious objectors from combatant training and service); but see Yott v. North Am. Rockwell Corp. (9th Cir. 1974) 501 F.2d 398, 400 (refusing to hold that conscientious objector cases are similar, since no law requires plaintiff to work for employer that discharged plaintiff).

(n18)Footnote 17. See United States v. Seeger (1965) 380 U.S. 163, 176, 85 S. Ct. 850, 13 L. Ed. 2d 733 .

(n19)Footnote 18. See Young v. Southwestern Savings and Loan Ass'n (5th Cir. 1975) 509 F.2d 140, 144 ; see also E.E.O.C. v. Townley Eng'g & Mfg. Co. (D. Ariz. 1987) 675 F. Supp. 566, 568 , aff'd in part, 859 F.2d 610 (9th Cir. 1988) (employer must accommodate employee's religious beliefs or lack thereof).

(n20)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Dewey v. Reynolds Metals Co. (6th Cir. [Mich.] 1970) 429 F.2d 324, 335 , aff'd, 402 U.S. 689 (1971) (parties stipulated regarding sincerity); Ali v. Southeast Neighborhood House (D.D.C. 1981) 519 F. Supp. 489, 490 (sincerity was undisputed).

(n21)Footnote 20. See Philbrook v. Ansonia Bd. of Educ. (2d Cir. [Conn.] 1985) 757 F.2d 476, 481-482 , aff'd, 479 U.S. 60 (1986) .

(n22)Footnote 21. See Philbrook v. Ansonia Bd. of Educ. (2d Cir. [Conn.] 1985) 757 F.2d 476, 482 , aff'd, 479 U.S. 60 (1986) .

(n23)Footnote 22. See Philbrook v. Ansonia Bd. of Educ. (2d Cir. [Conn.] 1985) 757 F.2d 476, 482 , aff'd, 479 U.S. 60 (1986) ; Roby v. United States Dep't of Navy (9th Cir. 1996) 76 F.3d 1052, 1055, 1056-1057 (service member who pled conscientious objector status could not be discharged on that basis having enlisted voluntarily; also, Navy rules and decisions supersede Title VII).

(n24)Footnote 23. See Opuku-Boateng v. California (9th Cir. 1996) 95 F.3d 1461, 1467 .

(n25)Footnote 24. Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1438 .

(n26)Footnote 25. See Opuku-Boateng v. California (9th Cir. 1996) 95 F.3d 1461, 1467 ; E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1512 .

(n27)Footnote 26. Opuku-Boateng v. California (9th Cir. 1996) 95 F.3d 1461 .

(n28)Footnote 27. Gov. Code § 12940(l).

(n29)Footnote 28. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.1; see Friedman v. So. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 39, 67, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 (significant difference between EEOC's administrative construction of "religion" and definition of "religious creed" in section 7293.1; section 7293.1 mandates less expansive construction of "religion." EEOC definition includes "moral or ethical beliefs as to what is right and wrong which are sincerely held with the strength of traditional religious views;" regulation 7293.1 defines "religious creed" as "beliefs, observances, or practices individual sincerely holds and which occupy in his or her life place of importance parallel to that of traditionally recognized religions").

(n30)Footnote 29. Friedman v. So. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 39, 49, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 .

(n31)Footnote 29.1. Friedman v. So. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 39, 64, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 .

(n32)Footnote 29.2. Friedman v. So. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 39, 67, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 .

(n33)Footnote 29.3. California Fair Employment & Housing Com. v. Gemini Aluminum Corp. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1004, 1011, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906 ; Friedman v. So. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 39, 45, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 ; Soldinger v. Northwest Airlines, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 345, 370, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 .

(n34)Footnote 29.4. California Fair Employment & Housing Com. v. Gemini Aluminum Corp. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1004, 1011, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906 ; Soldinger v. Northwest Airlines, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 345, 370, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 .

(n35)Footnote 29.5. Cooper v. General Dynamics, Convair, Etc. (5th Cir. 1976) 533 F.2d 163, 168-169 .

(n36)Footnote 30. See Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 .

(n37)Footnote 31. See Intern. Ass'n of Machinists v. Boeing Co. (9th Cir. [Wash.] 1987) 833 F.2d 165, 168 ; McDaniel v. Essex International, Inc. (6th Cir. [Mich.] 1982) 696 F.2d 34 , 38; Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair, Etc. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401-402 ; Cooper v. General Dynamics, Convair, Etc. (5th Cir. 1976) 533 F.2d 163, 165-169 ; see also 29 U.S.C. § 169(National Labor Relations Act; employees with traditional religious beliefs against joining unions not required to join as condition of employment, but collective bargaining agreement may require payment of equivalent of union dues and initiation fees to nonprofit organization).

(n38)Footnote 32. See American Postal Workers Union v. Postmaster General (9th Cir. 1986) 781 F.2d 772, 776 .

(n39)Footnote 33. Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1438-1439 .

(n40)Footnote 34. See Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (D.N.M. 1986) 651 F. Supp. 483 , rev'd on other grounds, 892 F.2d 1481 (10th Cir. 1989) .

(n41)Footnote 34.1. California Fair Employment & Housing Com. v. Gemini Aluminum Corp. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1004, 1011, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906 .

(n42)Footnote 35. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 84, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 .

(n43)Footnote 36. See Ansonia Board of Education v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 68-69, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 .

(n44)Footnote 37. For further discussion of the duty to accommodate religious beliefs, see § 41.52.

(n45)Footnote 37.1. Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 602-605 .

(n46)Footnote 37.2. Bodett v. CoxCom, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 366 F.3d 736, 742-746 .

(n47)Footnote 38. Tiano v. Dillard Dep't Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 139 F.3d 679 .

(n48)Footnote 39. Tiano v. Dillard Dep't Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 139 F.3d 679, 682 (employer had vacation policy barring leave between October and December, its busy holiday season).

(n49)Footnote 40. Tiano v. Dillard Dep't Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 139 F.3d 679, 681-682 (whether or not plaintiff established prima facie case is reviewed de novo; underlying facts are reviewed for clear error; district court's finding of temporal mandate was clearly erroneous).

(n50)Footnote 40.1. California Fair Employment & Housing Com. v. Gemini Aluminum Corp. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1004, 10111016, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906 .

(n51)Footnote 40.2. California Fair Employment & Housing Com. v. Gemini Aluminum Corp. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1004, 1017, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 906 . See also Best v. California Apprenticeship Council (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 626, 636, 207 Cal. Rptr. 863 ; Soldinger v. Northwest Airlines, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 345, 373, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 (California's anti-discrimination statutes demonstrate California's intent not to allow its laws to be circumvented by private contracts).

(n52)Footnote 41. See Brown v. Dade Christian Schools, Inc. (5th Cir. 1977) 556 F.2d 310 .

(n53)Footnote 42. See Brown v. Pena (S.D. Fla. 1977) 441 F. Supp. 1382, 1384-1385 .

(n54)Footnote 43. United States v. Seeger (1965) 380 U.S. 163, 85 S. Ct. 850, 13 L. Ed. 2d 733 .

(n55)Footnote 44. See Brown v. Pena (S.D. Fla. 1977) 441 F. Supp. 1382, 1384-1385 , aff'd, 589 F.2d 1113 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n56)Footnote 45. See Brown v. Pena (S.D. Fla. 1977) 441 F. Supp. 1382, 1385 , aff'd, 589 F.2d 1113 (5th Cir. 1979) .

(n57)Footnote 46. See Bellamy v. Mason's Stores, Inc. (E.D. Va. 1973) 368 F. Supp. 1025, 1026 , aff'd, 508 F.2d 504 (1974) .

(n58)Footnote 47. Bellamy v. Mason's Stores, Inc. (E.D. Va. 1973) 368 F. Supp. 1025, 1026 , aff'd, 508 F.2d 504 (1974) ; see also Brown v. Dade Christian Schools, Inc. (5th Cir. 1977) 556 F.2d 310, 311-312 , (42 U.S.C. § 1981; private school's discriminatory policy based on members' sincere religious belief that racial socialization would lead to interracial marriage is social policy rather than free exercise of "religion," and therefore not protected by U.S. Const., amend. I).

(n59)Footnote 47.1. Friedman v. So. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 39, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 .

(n60)Footnote 47.2. Friedman v. So. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 39, 43-69, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 .

(n61)Footnote 47.3. Friedman v. So. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 39, 68-69, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 .

(n62)Footnote 48. See Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1439 .

(n63)Footnote 49. Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1439 .

(n64)Footnote 50. Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1439 .

(n65)Footnote 51. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-1; See also ch. 40, pt. C.

(n66)Footnote 52. See EEOC v. Kamehameha Sch./Bishop Estate (9th Cir. 1993) 990 F.2d 458, 460 ; E.E.O.C. v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 613 .

(n67)Footnote 53. EEOC v. Kamehameha Sch./Bishop Estate (9th Cir. 1993) 990 F.2d 458, 460-464 .

(n68)Footnote 54. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e)(2).

(n69)Footnote 55. EEOC v. Kamehameha Sch./Bishop Estate (9th Cir. 1993) 990 F.2d 458, 464 .

(n70)Footnote 56. EEOC v. Kamehameha Sch./Bishop Estate (9th Cir. 1993) 990 F.2d 458, 464-465 .

(n71)Footnote 57. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e).

(n72)Footnote 58. Gov. Code § 12926(d); but see Gov. Code § 12926.2, discussed at § 40.10[3], making FEHA applicable to certain religious corporations or associations that operate health care facilities open to adherents of other religions and to certain nonprofit public benefit religious corporations operating educational institutions; Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(B), prohibiting harassment by religious corporations and associations covered by Gov. Code § 12926.2.

(n73)Footnote 59. See Gov. Code § 12926(d); see also McKeon v. Mercury Healthcare Sacramento (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 321, 325, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319, 965 P.2d 1189 (religious entity exemption includes religious entities organized under Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law). For further discussion of employers and employees covered by FEHA, see § 40.10[4].

(n74)Footnote 60. See Gov. Code § 12926.2(c), discussed at § 40.10[3].

(n75)Footnote 61. See Kelly v. Methodist Hospital of Southern California (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1108, 1116-1117, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514, 997 P.2d 1169 ; see Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 227-230, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 .

(n76)Footnote 62. Noyes v. Kelly Services (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1163 .

(n77)Footnote 63. Noyes v. Kelly Services (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1163, 1168-1169 .

(n78)Footnote 64. Noyes v. Kelly Services (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1163, 1169 .

(n79)Footnote 65. Noyes v. Kelly Services (9th Cir. 2007) 488 F.3d 1163, 1169-1173 (once district court concluded that employee raised triable question that promotion decision was not consistent with employer's stated reasons, question of whether real reason for promotion decision was unlawful discrimination should have gone to jury).

49 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART B. PROHIBITED BASES OF DISCRIMINATION

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.36

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.36 Sex Discrimination

[1] Governing Law

Title VII and the FEHA prohibit sex discrimination in employment.ⁿ¹ Other laws prohibiting sex discrimination include the federal Equal Pay Act,ⁿ² Title 42 United States Code, Section 1983 (applicable to public employers), Executive Order 11246 (federal contractors),ⁿ³ Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (federally assisted education programs),ⁿ⁴ the still-operative antidiscrimination provisions of the former Revenue Sharing Act (state and local governments sharing federal income tax funds),ⁿ⁵ the California Equal Pay Act,ⁿ⁶ Government Code Section 11135 (state-funded programs or activities),ⁿ⁷ the Cartwright Act (California antitrust law),ⁿ⁸ the California public works laws,ⁿ⁹ and the California Constitution (applicable to public employers).ⁿ¹⁰ Sex discrimination involving "state action" may also be actionable under the due process and equal protection provisions of the Fifth Amendment and Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.ⁿ¹¹

In Badih v. Myers,ⁿ¹² the court held that an employee can bring a tort action for wrongful termination in violation of the public policy against sex discrimination articulated in the California Constitution, art. I, § 8.

Title VII may or may not bar other causes of action. In Brock v. U.S.,ⁿ¹³ the court held that Title VII does not bar a tort claim under the Federal Tort Claims Act (FTCA) based on a supervisor's rape of an employee, since the act was a highly personal violation involving more than sex discrimination; however Title VII did bar a tort claim under the FTCA based on retaliation against the employee by her coworker, because that was only a form of employment discrimination.

For a general discussion relating to the scope and application of these and other equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40.

[2] Scope of Protection

[a] Generally

[i] Discrimination Based Solely on Sex

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has stated that the manifest purpose of Title VII with respect to "sex discrimination" is to ensure that men and women are treated equally.ⁿ¹⁴ "Sex discrimination" is a distinction based on gender,ⁿ¹⁵ and male as well as female employees are protected.ⁿ¹⁶ Title VII also prohibits employment decisions that reflect gender-based stereotyping.ⁿ¹⁷ Thus, in Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins,ⁿ¹⁸ involving an employer who delayed a female employee's promotion based in part on evaluation comments describing her as "macho," and advising her to "take a course in charm school,"ⁿ¹⁹ the United States Supreme Court declared that "we are beyond the day when an employer could evaluate employees by assuming or insisting that they matched the stereotype associated with their group."ⁿ²⁰ The Court observed that in prohibiting sex discrimination, "Congress intended to strike at the entire spectrum of disparate treatment of men and women resulting from sex stereotypes."ⁿ²¹ In Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc.,ⁿ²² following Price Waterhouse, the Ninth Circuit found that a man can ground a claim of gender discrimination on evidence that other men discriminated against him because he did not meet stereotyped expectations of masculinity.ⁿ²³

Congress partially overruled Price Waterhouse by enacting the Civil Rights Act of 1991.ⁿ²⁴ The act allows the employer to limit the employee's remedy, rather than defeat liability outright, by showing that it would have reached the same decision absent the discriminatory purpose.ⁿ²⁵ Congress implicitly approved Price Waterhouse in part by leaving the opinion undisturbed to the extent it held the employer to a preponderance of the evidence standard.ⁿ²⁶ Taken together, Price Waterhouse and the Civil Rights Act of 1991 stand for the proposition that an employer may limit the employee's remedy if it shows by a preponderance of evidence it would have made the same decision in the absence of an illegal motive.

Like all claims of disparate treatment brought under Title VII, the three-part McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting test applies to claims of sex discrimination.ⁿ²⁷ Thus, a plaintiff alleging disparate treatment based on sex must first establish a prima facie case of discrimination. The specific showing the plaintiff must make is as follows:ⁿ²⁸

- Plaintiff belongs to a protected class.
- Plaintiff was qualified for the position.
- Plaintiff was subject to an adverse employment action.
- Similarly situated individuals outside plaintiff's protected class were treated more favorably.ⁿ²⁹

Subjective criteria should not be considered in determining whether a plaintiff is "qualified" for purposes of establishing a prima facie case of sex discrimination under McDonnell Douglas. The qualifications most appropriately considered at the first step of the McDonnell Douglas analysis are those to which objective criteria can be applied.ⁿ³⁰

Under McDonnell Douglas, once the plaintiff presents a prima facie case, the burden shifts to the employer to articulate a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for its actions.ⁿ³¹

If the employer meets its burden of articulating a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for its actions, plaintiff then has the burden of showing that the employer's articulated reasons were a pretext for discrimination, either directly by persuading the court that a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the employer or indirectly by showing that the employer's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence.ⁿ³² At the summary judgment stage, the plaintiff must demonstrate only that there is a genuine dispute of material fact regarding pretext. The amount of evidence required to do so is minimal. A disparate treatment plaintiff can survive summary judgment without producing any evidence of discrimination beyond that constituting the prima facie case, if that evidence raises a genuine issue of material fact regarding the truth of the employer's proffered reasons.ⁿ³³

The FEHA defines "sex" as including, but not limited to, pregnancy, childbirth, or medical conditions related to pregnancy or childbirth and a person's gender, as defined in Pen. Code § 422.56.ⁿ³⁴ Nothing in the FEHA relating to gender-based discrimination affects the ability of an employer to require an employee to adhere to reasonable workplace appearance, grooming, and dress standards not precluded by other provisions of state or federal law, provided that an employer must allow an employee to appear or dress consistently with the employee's gender identity.ⁿ³⁵

Sex discrimination claims may also be supported by evidence of sexual harassment, if the harassment is based on hostility towards women and the evidence of harassment is used to establish that such hostility was a basis for the discriminatory acts.ⁿ³⁶

For discussion of sex discrimination issues relating to compensation, see § 41.56. For discussion of sex discrimination issues relating to retirement plans and other fringe benefits, see §§ 41.61[3] and 41.67[3]. For discussion of the prohibition against sexual harassment, see § 41.81.

[ii] Discrimination Based on "Sex Plus"

Title VII also prohibits employment discrimination based on sex plus another characteristic such as family responsibilities.ⁿ³⁷ For example, in Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp.,ⁿ³⁸ an employer declined to hire women with pre-school-age children, although it did hire men with pre-school-age children.ⁿ³⁹ The plaintiff filed a Title VII action alleging sex discrimination, and the trial court granted summary judgment for the employer, in part because 70 to 75 percent of the applicants, and 75 to 80 percent of those hired, were women.ⁿ⁴⁰ However, the United States Supreme Court held that Title VII prohibited one hiring policy for women and another for men in cases in which both have pre-school-age children.ⁿ⁴¹

[iii] Discrimination Based on Sex-Related Traits

As discussed previously,ⁿ⁴² under the "disparate impact" theory of employment discrimination, an employer may in some instances violate Title VII or the FEHA by adopting facially neutral employment practices and criteria that in fact fall more harshly on one sex than another.ⁿ⁴³ Thus, unlawful sex discrimination may result from employment policies that make distinctions based on traits exclusively or predominantly possessed by one sex. For example, minimum height and weight requirements that reflect predominantly male characteristics may constitute sex discrimination,ⁿ⁴⁴ as may physical agility tests that are not job-related.ⁿ⁴⁵

[b] Marital Status

Although no federal statute prohibits discrimination based on marital status, EEOC guidelines prohibit rules that forbid or restrict the employment of married women that are not applicable to married men.ⁿ⁴⁶ Even if such a rule is not directed against all females, but only against married females, so long as sex is a factor in the application of such a rule, it constitutes "sex discrimination."ⁿ⁴⁷

Marital status is one of the protected classifications expressly enumerated in the FEHA.ⁿ⁴⁸ FEHC regulations define "marital status" as "an individual's state of marriage, non-marriage, divorce or dissolution, separation, widowhood, annulment, or other marital state."ⁿ⁴⁹ These cases involve working for the same employer, usually in the same department, where there is a reporting or task conflict of interest and possible effect on other workers.

In Chen v. County of Orange,ⁿ⁵⁰ the court considered what types of conduct constitute marital status discrimination. Conduct that treats unmarried people differently than married people, such as the refusal to rent to unmarried couples, a refusal to hire unwed mothers because they are unwed, a refusal to hire single people because they are single, or the granting of maternity leave to married teachers only, constitutes marital status discrimination.ⁿ⁵¹ On the other hand, courts have disagreed in the general area of antinepotism rules, i.e., what an employer can or should do when co-workers are married to one another. n52 "Conduit" cases, i.e., those in which the plaintiff is the object of adverse action because of something about his or her spouse independent of whether the spouse works for the same employer, can be divided into two categories: (1) those in which the animus directed against the plaintiff's spouse is itself unlawful,n53 and (2) those in which the animus is not unlawful, which have universally rejected marital status discrimination claims.n54

In Chen, n55 the marital discrimination claim fell into the political animus category. There was no hint that the employer took any adverse employment action because of her spouse's race. The employer's action was the result of plaintiff's relationship (whether married or not) with a particular man who was allegedly on the "outs" with the then-management. The court declined to formulate generalized rules about whether California's marital status discrimination statute should be construed broadly--as distinct from crediting its plain meaning--or whether the statute might implicate the identity of one's spouse. The court held only that in the context presented in Chen, i.e., political repercussions from a relationship within the office, the statute is not implicated even if broadly construed. The court then held that a regulation providing that marital status discrimination can be established by showing denial of an employment benefit by reason of the employment (or lack of employment) of the applicant's or employee's spouse,n56 did not support an identity theory of marital status discrimination; and even if it did so, the nature of the identity targeted by the regulation does not encompass political disfavor.n57 Finally, the court noted in passing that there is a wholly different theory in the political animus area that lies beyond the fringe of marital status discrimination and implicates the First Amendment. That is, where actions against spouses are directed at a particular person because of some attribute of that person that is political, freedom of association may be infringed.n58

Employment discrimination based on marital status may also violate the equal protection clause of the California Constitution if there is "state action."n59 The Cartwright Act (California antitrust law) also proscribes discrimination on the basis of marital status.n60

[c] Pregnancy

"Sex discrimination" under Title VII, as amended by the Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA),n61 "includes discrimination because of or on the basis of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions."n62 Accordingly, employers must treat women affected by those conditions "the same for all employment-related purposes ... as other persons not so affected but similar in their ability or inability to work"n63

Also, if "state action" is involved, pregnancy discrimination may violate the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.n64 Thus, school board rules requiring pregnant female teachers to take maternity leave were held to be unconstitutional because they created a conclusive presumption that every pregnant teacher was physically incapable of continuing her duties.n65

The FEHA defines the term "sex" as including pregnancy, childbirth, or medical conditions related to pregnancy or childbirth.n66 In addition, FEHC regulations expressly provide that such discrimination constitutes "sex discrimination" under the FEHA.n67

An employee who claims pregnancy discrimination must first make a prima facie case, consisting of evidence that she was within the class protected from discrimination and was performing her job competently, but was terminated, plus some other circumstance suggesting discriminatory motive.n68 This raises a presumption of discrimination, shifting to the employer the burden of producing evidence to establish a genuine issue that the termination was made for a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason.n69 If the employer does so, the presumption disappears, but the employee, who retains the overall burden of persuasion, may then seek to show discriminatory motive, by evidence that the employer's proffered reason was false and a pretext, and any other evidence of discriminatory motive.n70 However, an employer's motion for summary judgment slightly modifies the order of these showings. If the motion for summary judgment relies in whole or in part on a showing of nondiscriminatory reasons for a discharge, the employer satisfies its burden as moving party if it presents evidence of nondiscriminatory reasons that would permit a trier of fact to find, more likely than not, that they were the basis for the termination.ⁿ⁷¹ To defeat the motion, the employee must adduce or point to evidence raising a triable issue, which would permit a trier of fact to find by a preponderance that intentional discrimination occurred.ⁿ⁷²

Pregnancy discrimination is also a form of sex discrimination under California Constitution, article I, § 8.ⁿ⁷³ In addition to the FEHA's general prohibition against sex discrimination,ⁿ⁷⁴ the statute provides special protections for employees with those conditions.ⁿ⁷⁵ However, this provision of the FEHA, often referred to as the California Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA),ⁿ⁷⁶ does not apply to all medical conditions involving a woman's reproductive organs.ⁿ⁷⁷ Specifically the California PDA does not apply to hysterectomies that are not directly related to pregnancy or childbirth.ⁿ⁷⁸

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The decision in Williams ⁿ⁷⁹ now provides California precedent for a proposition that was clear under federal common law interpretations of Title VII. Both Title VII and Government Code Section 12945 pertain to discrimination based upon pregnancy, childbirth, and medical conditions that are related to pregnancy and to childbirth. Facially, neither statute squarely addresses medical conditions that pertain generally to a woman's reproductive system. While federal courts have limited the application of Title VII to employment discrimination linked directly to pregnancy, the termination of a pregnancy, or to childbirth, California lacked precedent. The conformity now bars a California plaintiff from arguing that she may bring a FEHA claim simply because she has suffered an adverse employment action related to a reproductive medical condition generally. There must be a causal relationship between an adverse action and a protected status. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

The former version of Government Code Section 12945 provided that except for the FEHA requirement that employers allow reasonable pregnancy leave,ⁿ⁸⁰ and that they reasonably accommodate pregnant employees by temporarily transferring them to less strenuous or hazardous positions when so requested,ⁿ⁸¹ the FEHA pregnancy discrimination provision was not applicable to employers who were subject to Title VII.ⁿ⁸² Government Code Section 12945 now provides that it cannot be construed to affect any other provision of law relating to sex discrimination or pregnancy, or in any way to diminish the coverage of pregnancy, childbirth, or medical conditions related to pregnancy or childbirth under any other provisions of the FEHA, including Government Code Section 12940(a).ⁿ⁸³ However, the former rule did not give Title VII employers license to offer pregnant employees less disability leave than it offers all other similarly situated temporarily disabled employees. Such a policy would constitute sex discrimination under Government Code Section 12940(a), which does apply to Title VII employers.ⁿ⁸⁴ In Spaziano v. Lucky Stores, Inc., the plaintiff sued her former employer for discrimination under the FEHA because, under the collective bargaining agreement, the employer did not provide as much leave to pregnant employees as it did to occupationally-disabled employees. The collective bargaining agreement, however, provided pregnant employees with more leave than required by the FEHA. The court held that a company leave policy giving less disability leave to all workers disabled from nonindustrial causes, including pregnancy, than it gives to workers disabled from industrial causes, does not discriminate under the FEHA. Rather, such a two-tiered policy only incidentally affects pregnant employees as part of the larger group of individuals who have suffered nonwork-related injuries.ⁿ⁸⁵

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The decision in Spaziano ⁿ⁸⁶ turns on a single determination--that the distinction between an industrial injury and a nonindustrial injury has nothing to do with sex or pregnancy. Therefore, an employer may provide more leave time for employees disabled by industrial injuries than by nonindustrial injuries (including pregnancy) without violating the FEHA. The conclusion is not surprising. Nonetheless, the panel could have given an expansive reading to the concept of "similarly situated employees" and held that all employees disabled by any injury were entitled to the same leave. Indeed, under federal law, there is a circuit split. In Urbano v. Continental Airlines, Inc.,ⁿ⁸⁷ the court held that treating a pregnant employee no differently than employees disabled by nonindustrial injuries was not unlawful under Title VII, even though the plaintiff received less favorable treatment (with respect to light duty assignments) than employees disabled by industrial injuries. In Ensley-Gaines v. Runyon ⁿ⁸⁸ the court held, under similar facts, that pregnant workers must receive the same benefits "as other persons not so affected but similar in their ability or inability to work," and that industrially injured employees were similar to employees disabled by pregnancy in their "ability or inability to work."ⁿ⁸⁹ Thus, practitioners should be careful to check the status of federal case law before citing federal precedent as consistent or inconsistent with California law on this issue. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Formerly, federal courts disagreed whether under Title VII, a "fetal protection" policy prohibiting the employment of fertile (as opposed to pregnant) women in jobs that expose them to toxic materials, thereby allegedly endangering their unborn children, is facially discriminatory.ⁿ⁹⁰ The United States Supreme Court settled the issue in Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls, ⁿ⁹¹ holding that such a policy is sex discrimination forbidden under Title VII, unless the employer can establish that sex is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ). The Court relied in part on the PDA, explaining that because the policy in Johnson Controls excluded women "capable of bearing children," the employer "classifie[d] on the basis of potential for pregnancy." The Court concluded that thus, under the PDA, such a classification constitutes explicit sex discrimination for Title VII purposes.ⁿ⁹²

A California court of appeal has held that the same "fetal protection" policy analyzed in Johnson Controls is unlawful "sex discrimination" under the FEHA,ⁿ⁹³ and is not protected by the BFOQ defense.ⁿ⁹⁴

In addition, the FEHA prohibits requiring an employee to be sterilized as a condition of employment.ⁿ⁹⁵ Also, it has been held that a "fetal protection" policy is a "plain invitation" to sterilization, even if the employer counsels against such action.ⁿ⁹⁶

Harassment based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions also constitutes sexual harassment, which is prohibited pursuant to Government Code Section 12940(j)(1).ⁿ⁹⁷ For further discussion of sexual harassment, see § 41.81.

For further discussion of "fetal protection" policies, see § 41.60. For discussion of the BFOQ and "business necessity" defenses, see §§ 41.94 and 41.95. For discussion of the legal effect of pregnancy and pregnancy discrimination on retirement or pension plans and benefits, see § 41.67[3].

[d] Sexual Orientation

Under Title VII "sex discrimination" does not include discrimination based on sexual orientation.ⁿ⁹⁸ In Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co., ⁿ⁹⁹ an employee challenged her termination on the grounds that it was impermissibly based on her sex transformation.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals determined that the Title VII sex discrimination provisions were intended to place women on equal footing with men,ⁿ¹⁰¹ and noted that efforts to amend the Civil Rights Act to prohibit "sexual preference" discrimination had been unsuccessful.ⁿ¹⁰² It thus refused to expand the application of Title VII in the absence of Congressional mandate.ⁿ¹⁰³ In DeSantis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co., Inc., ⁿ¹⁰⁴ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals relied on Holloway to hold that the Title VII sex discrimination prohibition did not encompass homosexuality.ⁿ¹⁰⁵

The FEHA expressly prohibits discrimination and harassment based on sexual orientation, which is defined to include heterosexuality, homosexuality, and bisexuality.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ The California Supreme Court had previously reached a result similar to the Ninth Circuit's Title VII holding in Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co., ⁿ¹⁰⁷ in response to an argument that discrimination against homosexuals was "sex discrimination" within the meaning of the former California Fair Employment Practices Act (FEPA),ⁿ¹⁰⁸ the FEHA's predecessor.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ Relying on Title VII and federal cases holding that the "sex discrimination" prohibition of Title VII does not encompass discrimination based on sexual orientation or homosexuality.ⁿ¹¹⁰ The Court declared that the California Legislature, in proscribing "sex discrimination," did not contemplate discrimination against homosexuals.ⁿ¹¹¹

California courts have held that sexual conduct by a person of the same gender as the victim may constitute sexual harassment within the meaning of the FEHA.ⁿ¹¹²

Sexual orientation discrimination is prohibited by Gov. Code § 11135, which prohibits discrimination in state-funded programs and activities.ⁿ¹¹³ The Cartwright Act (California antitrust law) also proscribes discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation.ⁿ¹¹⁴ Sexual orientation discrimination may also be prohibited by the California Constitution if discrimination is the result of "state action."ⁿ¹¹⁵ California Constitution, article I, § 7(a) provides that "[a] person may not be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law[,] or denied equal protection of the laws." In Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co.,ⁿ¹¹⁶ plaintiffs alleged that a public utility employer practiced employment discrimination against homosexuals in the hiring, firing, and promotion of employees, and therefore violated the equal protection guarantee of the California Constitution by arbitrarily denying qualified homosexuals employment opportunities afforded other individuals, and in addition violated a specific Labor Code.ⁿ¹¹⁷ The California Supreme Court observed that the state may not exclude homosexuals as a class from employment opportunities without a showing that an individual's homosexuality renders him or her unfit for the job from which he or she has been excluded.ⁿ¹¹⁸ Employment discrimination based on sexual orientation and involving "state action" may also be prohibited by the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Gender & Sex Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Gender & Sex Discrimination Coverage & Definitions General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Gender & Sex Discrimination Employment Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)-(d) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a)-(d), (j) (FEHA).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Exec. Order No. 11246, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 20 U.S.C. § 1681.

(n5)Footnote 5. See former 31 U.S.C. § 6716(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code § 1197.5.

(n7)Footnote 7. Gov. Code § 11135(a). See also Gov. Code § 11135(e), defining "sex" for these purposes as defined in Gov. Code § 12926(p).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code §§ 1735, 1777.6.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 8.

(n11)Footnote 11. See, e.g., Forrester v. White (1988) 484 U.S. 219, 220-221, 108 S. Ct. 538, 98 L. Ed. 2d 555 (U.S. Const., amend. XIV; equal protection); Davis v. Passman (1979) 442 U.S. 228, 235-236, 99 S. Ct. 2264, 60 L.

Ed. 2d 846 (U.S. Const., amend. V; due process).

(n12)Footnote 12. Badih v. Myers (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1293-1295, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 ; see also Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 230-233, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Brock v. U.S. (9th Cir. 1995) 64 F.3d 1421 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co. (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 659, 663 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See De Cintio v. Westchester County Medical Center (2d Cir. 1986) 807 F.2d 304, 306-307 (Title VII/Equal Pay Act of 1963); De Santis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 327, 329330 (Title VII); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.7(a) (FEHC regulations construing "sex discrimination" prohibited by FEHA; "sex" as meaning applicant's or employee's gender).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 682, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 250-251, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 ; Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 874 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 .

(n19)Footnote 19. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 235, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 .

(n20)Footnote 20. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 251, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268, 288 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 251, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268, 288 .

(n22)Footnote 22. Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864 .

(n23)Footnote 23. Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 874-875 (verbal abuse directed at man reflecting belief that he did not act as man should act, attacking him for having feminine mannerisms, deriding him for not having sexual intercourse with waitress-friend, referring to him as "she" or "her," and vulgar name-calling cast in female terms was verbal abuse because of sex).

(n24)Footnote 24. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1981 et seq.

(n25)Footnote 25. 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2(m), 2000e-5(g)(2)(B).

(n26)Footnote 26. See H.R. Reg. No. 102-40(2), 102 Cong., 2d Sess. 45, n.39 (1991).

(n27)Footnote 27. Nicholson v. Hyannis Air Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 1116, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20020, *11 . For discussion of McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting and proof requirements generally, see § 41.11[1], above.

(n28)Footnote 28. Nicholson v. Hyannis Air Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 1116, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20020, *11 ; Chuang v. Univ. of Cal. Davis Bd. of Trustees (9th Cir. 2000) 225 F.3d 1115, 1123 . For discussion of prima facie case generally, see § 41.11[1][b], above.

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g., Nicholson v. Hyannis Air Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 1116, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20020, *17-*21 (female pilot presented sufficient evidence that similarly situated male pilots who were given retraining, which she did not receive, were treated more favorably, where plaintiff showed they were similarly situated, despite differences in nature of alleged skill deficiencies, because both types of skills involved deficiencies that could be addressed through retraining, as employer's own practices demonstrated, and deficiencies in both posed real risk of safety if unaddressed; and where, construing evidence in plaintiff's favor, there was qualitative difference in treatment of plaintiff and male pilots).

(n30)Footnote 30. See, e.g., Nicholson v. Hyannis Air Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 1116, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20020, *11-*17 (female pilot presented sufficient evidence that she was qualified to fly particular type of plane and particular route, where her cooperation and communication skills, which led to her removal, were subjective qualification that could not be considered in evaluating her qualifications at first step of McDonnell Douglas analysis); Lynn v. Regents of Univ. of Cal., 656 F.2d 1337, 1345 n.8 (9th Cir. 1981) (in action by university professor alleging sex discrimination in denial of tenure, for purposes of prima facie case, professor's qualifications had to be determined by objectively measurable criteria such as level of education, years of teaching experience, in general and at particular institution, and publication of scholarly materials, rather than subjective criterion of allegedly deficient scholarship).

(n31)Footnote 31. Nicholson v. Hyannis Air Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 1116, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20020, *21-*22 (employer met its burden of articulating legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for removing female pilot from flying specific type of airplanes and specific route by presenting substantial evidence of deficiencies in her cooperation and communication skills, including testimony of her co-pilots and supervisors, their letters to disciplinary panel, and original and revised action forms). For discussion of the employer's burden under McDonnell Douglas generally, see § 41.11[1][c], above.

(n32)Footnote 32. Nicholson v. Hyannis Air Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 1116, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20020, *22. For discussion of the employee's burden under McDonnell Douglas at the pretext stage generally, see § 41.11[1][d], above.

(n33)Footnote 33. Nicholson v. Hyannis Air Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 580 F.3d 1116, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20020, *22-*27 (female pilot met her minimal burden of showing pretext sufficient to survive summary judgment, where irregularities in employer's disciplinary proceedings provided some evidence it had discriminatory motive, where employer's knowledge of rumors about sexual relationships of plaintiff and co-workers provided additional evidence that employer wanted to remove her as object of sexual competition discord from pilot group; and where evidence introduced by plaintiff to establish her prima facie case also provided evidence of pretext, because employer's failure to treat plaintiff in same manner it treated similarly deficient male pilots provided some evidence that employer disciplined her because of her sex and not because of her alleged deficiencies).

(n34)Footnote 34. Gov. Code § 12926(p). For purposes of the FEHA, the reference in the Pen. Code § 422.56 definition to the "victim" means the employee or applicant and the reference to the "defendant" means the employer or other covered entity or person subject to applicable prohibitions under the FEHA. Gov. Code § 12926(p).

(n35)Footnote 35. Gov. Code § 12949.

(n36)Footnote 36. See E.E.O.C. v. Farmer Bros. Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 31 F.3d 891, 897-898 ; see also Heyne v. Caruso (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1475, 1482 (proof of employer's or supervisor's sexually harassing behavior toward other women employees can be introduced to prove employer's motive for disparate treatment discrimination); Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 876-878 ; Steiner v. Showboat Operating Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 25 F.3d 1459, 1463-1464 , cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1082 (1995) ; E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1514-1516 .

(n37)Footnote 37. See Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 544, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n38)Footnote 38. Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n39)Footnote 39. See Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 543, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n40)Footnote 40. See Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 543, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n41)Footnote 41. See Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 544, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n42)Footnote 42. See discussion in §§ 41.20 and 41.21.

(n43)Footnote 43. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) .

(n44)Footnote 44. See, e.g., Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 331, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 (Title VII; requirement of minimum height of 5 feet 2 inches and minimum weight of 120 pounds for prison guards has discriminatory impact on women guards because requirement excludes 41 percent of women but only one percent of men); See also § 41.32[2][i].

(n45)Footnote 45. See Berkman v. New York (E.D.N.Y. 1982) 536 F. Supp. 177 (physical agility tests for firefighters), aff'd 705 F.2d 584 (2d Cir. 1983) .

(n46)Footnote 46. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.4(a).

(n47)Footnote 47. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.4(b).

(n48)Footnote 48. See Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n49)Footnote 49. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.1(a); see DFEH v. Community Hospital of San Gabriel (1986) FEHC Dec. 86-08.

(n50)Footnote 50. Chen v. County of Orange (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 926, 930-948, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 .

(n51)Footnote 51. Chen v. County of Orange (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 926, 930-948, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 ; see Smith v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 1143, 1155, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700, 913 P.2d 909 ; Cybyse v. Independent School District No. 196 (Minn. 1984) 347 N.W.2d 256, 261, fn. 4 ; State Division of Human Rights v. Village of Spencerport (N.Y. App. Div. 1980) 78 A.D.2d 50, 434 N.Y.S.2d 52, 52-54, 1980 N.Y. App. Div. LEXIS 13406 . See Hope Int'l University v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 719, 742-743, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 643 (university's admission that one reason professor's contract was not renewed was school could not have two married professors making up entire graduate department, was antinepotism rule, and there was nothing about two professors working in same department which so overarchingly implicated problems of supervision, safety, security or morale that court could say summary judgment for university on claim of marital status discrimination under FEHA was appropriate; however, there was no marital discrimination claim to degree professors claimed they were discharged because of unreasonable perception of having affair prior to their marriage, where there was no evidence university cared whether its professors were married, single, or divorced, as long as they were not perceived by its students to be committing adultery or fornication).

(n52)Footnote 52. See Ross v. Stouffer Hotel Company (Hawaii 1994) 76 Haw. 454, 879 P.2d 1037, 1041 ; Kraft, Inc. v. State (Minn. 1979) 284 N.W.2d 386 ; Thompson v. Board of Trustees, School District No. 12 (Mont. 1981) 192 Mont. 266, 627 P.2d 1229 ; Washington Water Power Co. v. State Human Rights Comm'n (Wash. 1978) 91 Wash. 2d 62, 586 P.2d 1149 (all striking down antinepotism policies on ground they penalized status of marriage); but see Muller v. BP Exploration (Alaska) Inc. (Alaska 1996) 923 P.2d 783 ; Boaden v. Department of Law Enforcement (Ill. 1996)

171 Ill. 2d 230, 215 Ill. Dec. 664, 664 N.E.2d 61 ; Miller v. C.A. Muer Corporation (Mich. 1984) 420 Mich. 355, 362 N.W.2d 650 ; In re Manhattan Pizza Hut, Inc. v. New York State Human Rights Appeal Board (N.Y. 1980) 51 N.Y.2d 506, 434 N.Y.S.2d 961, 415 N.E.2d 950 ; Townshend v. Board of Education (W. Va. 1990) 183 W. Va. 418, 396 S.E.2d 185 (upholding varieties of antinepotism rules because marital status is independent of identity of one's spouse).

(n53)Footnote 53. See, e.g., Bryant v. Automatic Data Processing (Mich. App. 1986) 151 Mich. App. 424, 390 N.W.2d 732 (white woman married to black man was denied permanent position as secretary for corporation because she was white woman married to black man).

(n54)Footnote 54. See, e.g., State Division of Human Rights v. Village of Spencerport (N.Y. App. Div. 1980) 78 A.D.2d 50, 434 N.Y.S.2d 52, 54 (part-time secretary to town mayor, married to unpopular tax assessor who had been fired because he had raised assessments on remodeled properties, did not have marital status discrimination because discharge was political retaliation, and absent some other reason to make political retaliation unlawful, discharging her for unpopularity of her husband did not contravene marital status discrimination statutes); Bammert v. Labor and Industry Review Commission (Wis. App. 1999) 606 N.W.2d 620 (store employee fired when her husband, police sergeant, participated in arrest of her employer's wife did not have marital status discrimination claim because underlying purpose of outlawing marital status discrimination is to prevent discrimination against classes of people and not to protect status of being married to particular person); Donato v. AT & T (Fla. 2000) 767 So. 2d 1146, 1147-1148 (employee of large company fired when his wife, former employee of same company, sued company for sex discrimination did not have marital status discrimination claim because no protection of specific identity or actions of individual's spouse).

(n55)Footnote 55. Chen v. County of Orange (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 926, 944, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 .

(n56)Footnote 56. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.2(c).

(n57)Footnote 57. Chen v. County of Orange (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 926, 947, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 .

(n58)Footnote 58. Chen v. County of Orange (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 926, 947-948, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 786 ; see Adler v. Pataki (2d. Cir. 1999) 185 F.3d 35 (firing high-ranking state in-house counsel because his wife sued state Attorney General's office claiming she was fired because she was Republican burdened plaintiff's First Amendment right of intimate association); Adkins v. Board of Education of Magoffin County (6th Cir. 1993) 982 F.2d 952 (claim by high school secretary, whose husband was the school principal, that superintendent both fired her for refusing to snitch on a teacher whom the superintendent wanted fired and demoted her husband demoted to health teacher was of infringement of constitutional right of privacy and association).

(n59)Footnote 59. See Hinman v. Department of Personnel Admin. (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 516, 526, 213 Cal. Rptr. 410 (denial of dental benefits to unmarried partners of state employees not unconstitutional); Cal. Const., art. I, § 7(a).

(n60)Footnote 60. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721. For discussion of the Cartwright Act, see § 40.14[4].

(n61)Footnote 61. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k).

(n62)Footnote 62. See Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 684, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 (PDA makes clear that, for Title VII purposes, pregnancy discrimination is, on its face, sex discrimination); 29 C.F.R. § 1604.10(a) (sex discrimination guideline; pregnancy discrimination is prima facie violation of Title VII). See also Palmer v. Pioneer Inn Associates, Ltd. (9th Cir. 2003) 338 F.3d 981, 984-985 (plaintiff presented sufficient direct evidence to survive summary judgment on all three of her claims of employment discrimination based on pregnancy by testifying that her supervisor told her his supervisor overturned hiring her because she was pregnant, and was not going to allow her to work because she was pregnant; direct evidence was sufficient to raise a material question of disputed fact as to whether employer discriminated against her).

(n63)Footnote 63. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k); see E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1511-1512 (pregnancy discrimination as defined by PDA violates letter and spirit of Title VII even if there is no "tangible loss" of an "economic nature").

(n64)Footnote 64. See Cleveland Bd. of Educ. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 643, 646-647, 94 S. Ct. 791, 39 L. Ed. 2d 52 .

(n65)Footnote 65. See Cleveland Bd. of Educ. v. LaFleur (1974) 414 U.S. 632, 643, 644, 646-647, 94 S. Ct. 791, 39 L. Ed. 2d 52 .

(n66)Footnote 66. Gov. Code § 12926(p).

(n67)Footnote 67. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.2(b), (c), (d); see DFEH v. J.E. Robinson, D.D.S. (1989) FEHC Dec. No. 89-02, pp. 9-10.

(n68)Footnote 68. Kelly v. Stamps.com Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1088, 1097, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240 . See Guz v. Bechtel National Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 354-355, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 ; Johnson v. United Cerebral Palsy/Spastic Children's Foundation of Los Angeles and Ventura Counties (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 740, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 198, 2009 Cal. App. LEXIS 648, *30 (in action for alleged pregnancy discrimination, former employee presented evidence of prima facie case that she was fired for impermissible reason, where she was pregnant and thus member of protected class, she was performing her job competently, she suffered adverse employment action in termination of her employment, and evidence suggested discriminatory motive for adverse employment action because supervisor's supervisor indicated at her deposition that pregnant employee posed safety concerns to herself and her clients). For discussion of proof under a disparate treatment theory generally, see § 41.11.

(n69)Footnote 69. Kelly v. Stamps.com Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1088, 1097, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240 . See Guz v. Bechtel National Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 355-356, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 ; Johnson v. United Cerebral Palsy/Spastic Children's Foundation of Los Angeles and Ventura Counties (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 740, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 198, 2009 Cal. App. LEXIS 648, *29-*30 (in action for alleged pregnancy discrimination, employer presented evidence that although plaintiff claimed in her time/billing records to have worked at client's home for four or four and one-half hours one afternoon/evening, caregiver who worked 5:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. shift at home on that day told supervisor that plaintiff was not at home during that shift, supporting nondiscriminatory reason given by employer for firing plaintiff, i.e., that plaintiff had falsified time records, which, on its face was sufficient to support summary judgment in favor of employer).

(n70)Footnote 70. Kelly v. Stamps.com Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1088, 1097, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240 . See Guz v. Bechtel National Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 356, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 ; Sasco Electric v. Fair Employment & Housing Commission (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 532, 542-543, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 482 (substantial evidences support FEHC's finding of causal connection between former employee's pregnancy and employer's decision to end her employment, where supervisor specifically told employee she would not have lost her job if she had not been pregnant and admitted he chose to lay her off in part because he was concerned about her being cavalier about working on yacht too long when she was pregnant, he told his wife that employee's pregnancy was one reason he let her go, and he and his wife told fellow employee they let her go because Mexico trip was unsafe for a pregnant woman; and where substantial evidence supported FEHC's finding that employer's reason for laying her off instead of male co-worker was that she could not dock yacht and he could was pretextual, including substantial evidence she could have docked yacht had she been required to do so and supervisor's failure to even attempt to recall her when he needed contract deckhand for Mexico trip or replacement deckhand); Johnson v. United Cerebral Palsy/Spastic Children's Foundation of Los Angeles and Ventura Counties (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 740, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 198, 2009 Cal. App. LEXIS 648, *30-*60 (although several matters by themselves did not constitute substantial evidence that employer's stated reason for firing former employee was pretextual or that employer acted with a discriminatory animus when it fired her, those matters taken together did constitute sufficient evidence to demonstrate triable issue of fact with respect to employee's contention that her pregnancy was true cause of decision to fire her; "me too" declarations from other former pregnant employees, which plaintiff included in her opposition to employer's motion for summary judgment, constituted substantial evidence sufficient to raise triable issue of material fact as to why employer fired her).

(n71)Footnote 71. Kelly v. Stamps.com Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1088, 1097-1098, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240. See Aguilar v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 826, 850-851, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841, 24 P.3d 493; Guz v. Bechtel National Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 357, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089.

(n72)Footnote 72. Kelly v. Stamps.com Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1088, 1098-1102, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240 (employer's articulation of legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for termination of pregnant employee because of economically induced restructuring and reduction in force was sufficient to shift to employee burden of showing triable issue of its falsity, with respect to her, and ultimately of discriminatory motive instead; employee presented triable issue that reasons employer gave for her termination were false, and tendered evidence of pregnancy-discriminatory motive on employer's part). See Aguilar v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 826, 850-851, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841, 24 P.3d 493; Guz v. Bechtel National Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 357, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089.

(n73)Footnote 73. Badih v. Myers (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1295, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229.

(n74)Footnote 74. Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n75)Footnote 75. Gov. Code § 12945; see Carr v. Barnabey's Hotel Corp. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 14, 17, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 127.

(n76)Footnote 76. Gov. Code § 12945(a) is modeled after the federal Pregnancy Discrimination Act. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k). Federal courts have generally limited the federal PDA to employment discrimination based on pregnancy, the termination of a pregnancy, or childbirth. See Williams v. MacFrugal's Bargains Close-Outs, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 479, 483, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 98.

(n77)Footnote 77. Williams v. MacFrugal's Bargains Close-Outs, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 479, 482, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 98 (PDA is remedial statute to be liberally construed).

(n78)Footnote 78. Williams v. MacFrugal's Bargains Close-Outs, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 479, 481-485, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 98 (diagnostic hysterectomy is not covered by PDA because it is not medical condition directly related to pregnancy; court implied that result might differ if hysterectomy was performed because it related to miscarriage or other pregnancy-related problem).

(n79)Footnote 79. Williams v. MacFrugal's Bargains Close-Outs, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 479, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 98.

(n80)Footnote 80. See former Gov. Code § 12945(b)(2); now see Gov. Code § 12945(a). For complete discussion of pregnancy leave, see Ch. 8.

(n81)Footnote 81. See former Gov. Code § 12945(c), (e); now see Gov. Code § 12945(b)(3). For complete discussion of pregnancy leave, see Ch. 8.

(n82)Footnote 82. Former Gov. Code § 12945(e). See also Spaziano v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 106, 111, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378. For complete discussion relating to scope and application of Title VII, see Ch. 40, Pt. C.

(n83)Footnote 83. Gov. Code § 12945(c).

(n84)Footnote 84. Spaziano v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 106, 111-112, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 (noting federal circuit split on whether employees disabled by pregnancy may be treated differently than other disabled employees).

(n85)Footnote 85. Spaziano v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 106, 111-112, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 (court also rejected argument that policy was discriminatory because pregnancy could never qualify as industrial injury; employee would be entitled to longer leave under two-tier policy if pregnancy-related disability arose out of course of employment and qualified the employee to receive workers' compensation benefits).

(n86)Footnote 86. Spaziano v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 106, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 .

(n87)Footnote 87. Urbano v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (5th Cir. 1998) 138 F. 3d 204, 206 .

(n88)Footnote 88. Ensley-Gaines v. Runyon (6th Cir. 1996) 100 F. 3d 1220 .

(n89)Footnote 89. Ensley-Gaines v. Runyon (6th Cir. 1996) 100 F. 3d 1220, 1223-1224 .

(n90)Footnote 90. Cf. International Union, UAW v. Johnson Controls (7th Cir. 1989) 886 F.2d 871, 884-901 , rev'd sub nom. Auto. Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 197-198, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158 ("fetal protection" policy was facially neutral and therefore subject to "business necessity" defense); Hayes v. Shelby Memorial Hosp. (11th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1543 (analyzing policy under disparate treatment and disparate impact theory); Wright v. Olin Corp. (4th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1172 (analyzing policy under disparate impact theory subject to business necessity defense) with Grant v. General Motors Corp. (6th Cir. 1990) 908 F.2d 1303 ("fetal protection" policies amount to overt discrimination that may be justified only by BFOQ).

(n91)Footnote 91. Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 201, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158, 174 .

(n92)Footnote 92. Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158, 173 ; see also Armstrong v. Flowers Hosp. Inc. (11th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1308, 1314-1315 (hospital not required by the federal Pregnancy Disability Act to accommodate nurse requesting shift change to avoid an AIDS patient; plaintiff had not proven disparate impact on pregnant women, that refusing to treat a patient was inappropriate grounds for termination of a nurse, or that treating AIDS patient constituted adverse impact on a nurse).

(n93)Footnote 93. Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 533-539, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 (policy that had effect of denying production work to all women of child bearing capacity violated Gov. Code § 12940); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.0(c) (unlawful to refuse to hire female because she is of childbearing age).

(n94)Footnote 94. Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 542-546, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 .

(n95)Footnote 95. Gov. Code § 12945.5.

(n96)Footnote 96. Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 533-539, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 .

(n97)Footnote 97. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(C).

(n98)Footnote 98. See De Santis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 327, 329-330 (Title VII; homosexuality); Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co. (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 659, 662 (Title VII; sex change).

(n99)Footnote 99. Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co. (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 659 .

(n100)Footnote 100. See Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co. (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 659, 661 .

(n101)Footnote 101. See Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co. (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 659, 662-663 (declaring that manifest purpose of Title VII prohibition against sex discrimination in employment is to ensure that men and women are treated equally); cf. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.6(b) (purpose of FEHA was to correct inequities between treatment of male and female employees).

(n102)Footnote 102. See Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co. (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 659, 662 .

(n103)Footnote 103. See Holloway v. Arthur Andersen & Co. (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 659, 662-663 .

(n104)Footnote 104. DeSantis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 327 .

(n105)Footnote 105. See DeSantis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 327, 329-330 .

(n106)Footnote 106. Gov. Code §§ 12926(q), 12940(a), (j). Under California law, the FEHA occupies the field of employment discrimination and preempts local ordinances prohibiting sexual orientation discrimination in employment. Delaney v. Superior Fast Freight (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 590, 596-598, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 ; see Gov. Code § 12993(c); See also ch. 40, pt. A.

(n107)Footnote 107. Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 156 Cal. Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592 .

(n108)Footnote 108. See former Lab. Code § 1410 et seq.

(n109)Footnote 109. See Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 490, 156 Cal. Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592 .

(n110)Footnote 110. See, e.g., Voyles v. Ralph K. Davies Med. Ctr. (N.D. Ga. 1975) 403 F. Supp. 456, 457 , aff'd, 570 F.2d 354 (9th Cir. 1978) ; Smith v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (5th Cir. 1978) 569 F.2d 325 .

(n111)Footnote 111. See Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 490-491, 156 Cal. Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592 ; see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.7(a) ("sex" under FEHA means applicant's or employee's gender).

(n112)Footnote 112. See Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 603, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 ; Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1416, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 .

(n113)Footnote 113. Gov. Code § 11135(a). See Gov. Code § 11135(e), defining "sexual orientation" for these purposes as defined in Gov. Code § 12926(q).

(n114)Footnote 114. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16721. For discussion of the Cartwright Act, see § 40.14[4].

(n115)Footnote 115. See Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 467-469, 156 Cal. Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592 (finding California public utility more akin to governmental entity than to purely private employer).

(n116)Footnote 116. Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 156 Cal. Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592 .

(n117)Footnote 117. See Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 464, 467 referring to Labor Code § 1102 which prohibits discrimination in employment or opportunity for employment based on sexual orientation; Leibert v. Transworld Sys., Inc. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1693, 1702-1704, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 (violations of Lab. Code §§ 1101, 1102, and 1102.1 constitute fundamental public policy basis for wrongful termination on ground of sexual orientation); see also Murray v. Oceanside Unified School District (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1358, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 28 (Lab. Code § 1102.1 prohibited harassment as well as discrimination because harassment constituted different treatment in aspect of employment).

(n118)Footnote 118. See Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 467, 156 Cal. Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592 . The Labor Code provisions, not FEHA, were held a basis for state statutory redress for sexual orientation discrimination.

50 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART B. PROHIBITED BASES OF DISCRIMINATION

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.37

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.37 Genetic Information Discrimination

Under the Genetic Information Nondiscrimination Act of 2008 (GINA),ⁿ¹ which became effective November 21, 2009, it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to do either of the following with regard to genetic information:ⁿ²

- Fail or refuse to hire, or to discharge, any employee, or otherwise to discriminate against any employee with respect to the compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment of the employee, because of genetic information with respect to the employee.
- Limit, segregate, or classify the employees of the employer in any way that would deprive or tend to deprive any employee of employment opportunities or otherwise adversely affect the status of the employee as an employee, because of genetic information with respect to the employee.

It is also an unlawful employment practice for an employer to request, require, or purchase genetic information with respect to an employee or a family member of the employee except in the following circumstances.ⁿ³ In the following cases, the information may not be used in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-1(a) or treated or disclosed in a manner that violates 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-5.ⁿ⁴

- The employer inadvertently requests or requires family medical history of the employee or family member of the employee.
- The employer offers health or genetic services and individually identifiable genetic information provided in connection with those services is not disclosed to the employer except in aggregate terms that do not disclose the identity of specific employees.
- The employer requests or requires family medical history from the employee to comply with the certification provisions of the Family and Medical Leave Actⁿ⁵ or certification requirements under state family and medical leave laws.n6

- The employer purchases commercially and publicly available documents, including newspapers, magazines, periodicals, and books, but not including medical databases or court records, that include family medical history.
- The information is to be used for genetic monitoring of the biological effects of toxic substances in the workplace, but only under specified conditions, including that the genetic monitoring is required by federal or state law.
- The employer conducts DNA analysis for law enforcement purposes as a forensic laboratory or for purposes of human remains identification and requests or requires genetic information of the employer's employees, but only to the extent that genetic information is used for analysis of DNA identification markers for quality control to detect sample contamination.

Similar prohibitions apply to employment agencies,n7 labor organizations.n8 and training programs.n9

Under the GINA, genetic information includes genetic information of a fetus carried by a covered pregnant woman and genetic information of an embryo legally held by a covered individual or family member.n10

If an employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee possesses genetic information about an employee or member, it must maintain the information on separate forms and in separate medical files and treat it as a confidential medical record of the employee or member. An employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee will be considered to be in compliance with the maintenance of information requirements with respect to genetic information it maintains and treats as a confidential medical record under the Americans With Disabilities Act.n11

An employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee may not disclose genetic information concerning an employee or member except under the following circumstances:n12

- To the employee or member of a labor organization, or family member if the family member is receiving the genetic services, at the written request of the employee or member of the organization.
- To an occupational or other health researcher if the research is conducted in compliance with specified regulations and protections.n13
- In response to a court order, except as specified.
- To government officials investigating compliance with the GINA if the information is relevant to the investigation.
- To the extent the disclosure is made in connection with the employee's compliance with the certification provisions of the Family and Medical Leave Actn14 or certification requirements under state family and medical leave laws.n15
- To a federal, state, or local public health agency only with regard to specific information concerning a contagious disease that presents an imminent hazard of death or life-threatening illness, and the employee whose family members are the subject of a disclosure is notified of the disclosure.

The GINA does not prohibit an entity covered under regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under the Social Security Actⁿ¹⁶ and the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Actⁿ¹⁷ from any use or disclosure of health information authorized for the under those regulations or affect the authority of the Secretary to modify the regulations.ⁿ¹⁸

It is not a violation of GINA for an employer, employment agency, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee to use, acquire, or disclosure of medical information that is not genetic information about a manifested disease, disorder, or pathological condition of an employee or member, including a manifested disease, disorder, or pathological condition that has or may have a genetic basis.ⁿ¹⁹

For employees covered by Title VII, the powers, procedures, and remedies provided in the Civil Rights Act of 1964ⁿ²⁰ to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the Attorney General, or any person, alleging a violation of title VII are the powers, procedures, and remedies the GINA provides to the Commission, the Attorney General, or any person, respectively, alleging an unlawful employment practice in violation of the GINA.ⁿ²¹ Awards of costs and attorney's fees are governed by 42 U.S.C. § 1988.ⁿ²² Damages are governed by 42 U.S.C. § 1981a, including the limitations in 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(3).ⁿ²³ There are similar provisions for employees covered by the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991,ⁿ²⁴ the Congressional Accountability Act of 1995,ⁿ²⁵ other specified federal employees,ⁿ²⁶ and employees covered by section 717 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.ⁿ²⁷

The GINA also protects against retaliation against an individual because the individual opposes any act or practice made unlawful by the GINA or because the individual made a charge, testified, assisted, or participated in any manner in an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under the GINA. The remedies and procedures otherwise provided for under the GINA are available to aggrieved individuals with respect to retaliation.ⁿ²⁸

Notwithstanding any other provision of the GINA, "disparate impact," as used in Title VIIⁿ²⁹ on the basis of genetic information does not establish a cause of action under the GINA.ⁿ³⁰ However, starting in May 2014, the Genetic Nondiscrimination Study Commission will review the developing science of genetics and to make recommendations to Congress regarding whether to provide a disparate impact cause of action under the GINA.ⁿ³¹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. 2000ff et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-1(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-1(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-1(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. See 29 U.S.C. § 2613, discussed at § 8.26.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Gov. Code § 12945.2(j), (k), discussed at § 8.26.

(n7)Footnote 7. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-2.

(n8)Footnote 8. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-3.

(n9)Footnote 9. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-3.

(n10)Footnote 10. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-8(b).

(n11)Footnote 11. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-5(a). See 42 U.S.C. 12112(d)(3)(B), discussed at § 41.46[1][a], below.

(n12)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-5(b).

- (n13)Footnote 13. See 45 C.F.R. Part 46.
- (n14)Footnote 14. See 29 U.S.C. 2613, discussed at § 8.26.
- (n15)Footnote 15. See Gov. Code § 12945.2(j), (k), discussed at § 8.26.
- (n16)Footnote 16. See 42 U.S.C. § 1320d et seq.
- (n17)Footnote 17. See 42 U.S.C. § 1320d-2 note.
- (n18)Footnote 18. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-5(c).
- (n19)Footnote 19. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-9.
- (n20)Footnote 20. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-4 et seq.
- (n21)Footnote 21. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-6(a)(1).
- (n22)Footnote 22. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-6(a)(2).
- (n23)Footnote 23. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-6(a)(3).
- (n24)Footnote 24. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-6(b); see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16b, 16c.
- (n25)Footnote 25. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-6(c); see 2 U.S.C. § 1301 et seq.
- (n26)Footnote 26. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-6(d); see 3 U.S.C. § 401 et seq.
- (n27)Footnote 27. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-6(e); see 42 U.S.C. 2000e-16.
- (n28)Footnote 28. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-6(f).
- (n29)Footnote 29. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k).
- (n30)Footnote 30. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-7(a).
- (n31)Footnote 31. 42 U.S.C. § 2000ff-7(b)-(f).

51 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART B. PROHIBITED BASES OF DISCRIMINATION

2-41 California Employment Law §§ 41.38 through 41.39

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 41.38[Reserved]

52 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART C. PREEMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.40

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.40 Introduction

Equal employment opportunity law requires employers to select or reject prospective employees in a nondiscriminatory manner. Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII),ⁿ¹ the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA),ⁿ² and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)ⁿ³ expressly provide that it is an unlawful employment practice to fail or refuse to hire or employ any individual based on membership in a protected classification.ⁿ⁴ Similarly, the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA)ⁿ⁵ prohibits disability discrimination with respect to job application procedures and hiring.ⁿ⁶ This part discusses limitations imposed by equal employment opportunity laws with respect to selection procedures and criteria. It also details potential liability for discrimination in preemployment advertisement and recruitment, applications and interviews, and preemployment testing.ⁿ⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Rights Law Contractual Relations & Housing Fair Housing Rights General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Age Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 General Overview Labor & Employment Law Preemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (Title VII; race, color, religion, sex, national origin); 29 U.S.C. § 631(a) (ADEA; age over 40 years); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA; race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical or mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, age over 40 years).

(n5)Footnote 5. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.

(n6)Footnote 6. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. For a discussion of the various classifications protected from employment discrimination, see Part B (§§ 41.30-41.36); for a complete discussion relating to the scope of application of the various equal employment opportunity laws, see ch. 40.

53 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART C. PREEMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.41

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.41 Employee Selection Procedures

The EEOC Uniform Guidelines on Employee Selection Proceduresⁿ¹ define an employee selection procedure as any measure, combination of measures, or procedure used as a basis for any employment decision, including hiring.ⁿ² Selection procedures include the full range of assessment techniques from traditional paper-and-pencil tests, training programs, probationary periods, and physical, educational, and work experience requirements through informal or casual interviews and unscored application forms.ⁿ³

Under the EEOC guidelines, the use of any selection procedure which has an adverse impact on the hiring of members of any protected group is discriminatory, unless (1) the procedure was validated in accordance with the guidelines;ⁿ⁴ (2) an employer chooses a lawful, job-related alternative;ⁿ⁵ or (3) validity studies cannot or need not be performed, and the employer uses a procedure that is as job-related as possible and that minimizes adverse impact.ⁿ⁶ California Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC) regulations expressly adopt the EEOC guidelinesⁿ⁷ and further prohibit any selection policy or practice which has an adverse impact on employment opportunities of individuals protected by the FEHA unless the policy or practice is job-related.ⁿ⁸ A policy or practice is "job-related" under the FEHC regulations if it is "sufficiently related to an essential function of the job in question to warrant its use."ⁿ⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Preemployment Practices
Labor & Employment Law
U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission
Enforcement
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 C.F.R. pt. 1607; for a discussion relating to the general scope and application of the EEOC guidelines, see ch. 40, pt. C.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.2(B).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.16(Q).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.3(A).

(n5)Footnote 5. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.3(A), 1607.6(A) (use of selection procedures that have not been validated; use of alternative to eliminate adverse impact).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.3(A), 1607.6(B) (use of selection procedures that have not been validated; when informal or unscored procedures are used).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(a); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7287.3(a) (prohibiting discrimination in recruitment, except when utilized for affirmative action purposes); 7287.3(b) (limiting pre-employment inquiries); 7287.3(c)(1), (2), and (3) (prohibiting employers and other entities from discriminating when they provide, accept, and consider employment applications; prohibiting requirements that applicants provide photographs; and forbidding the coding or separation of application forms); and 7287.3(d) (requiring personal interviews to be free of discrimination, and subjecting entire interview process to review for adverse impact).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(e). For additional discussion of "job-relatedness," see §§ 41.24[4] and 41.95.

54 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART C. PREEMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.42

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.42 Employee Selection Criteria

[1] Generally

Employers use the selection procedures mentioned in §§ 41.41-41.42 to measure applicants' qualifications against established criteria. Employers have the right to establish selection criteria to ensure that prospective employees meet certain job qualifications,ⁿ¹ and have discretion to choose among equally qualified candidates. However, employers may not base hiring decisions on unlawful criteria.ⁿ² Thus, criteria and standards that are components of the selection process may not operate as "built-in headwinds" for protected class members, and may not be unrelated to actual job capability.ⁿ³

Employee selection criteria may be either "objective,"ⁿ⁴ such as test scores or height and weight requirements, or "subjective,"ⁿ⁵ such as "attitude" or supervisory ability, which cannot be measured or quantified, but are instead judged by an employer's impression. Particular "objective" and "subjective" employee selection criteria, are detailed in [2] and [3], below. For a discussion of the application of "disparate impact" analysis to "objective" versus "subjective" criteria, see §§ 41.20-41.21.

[2] Objective Criteria

[a] Generally

"Objective" selection criteria are specific, clearly delineated, quantitative, objectively verified, and mechanically applied.ⁿ⁶ In the vast majority of cases, such criteria are facially neutral in that they apply equally to all applicants. However, if such criteria have a "disparate impact" on a protected group (that is, they fall more harshly on one group of applicants than on another),ⁿ⁷ they are unlawful unless the employer has a valid defense, such as "business necessity."ⁿ⁸

The subsections below set forth examples of common objective criteria which have been subject to judicial scrutiny.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Note that objective criteria may be subjectively evaluated, in which case their discretionary character makes them essentially subjective criteria. Also, objective criteria may be combined with subjective criteria as well as other objective criteria since few employment decisions are made on the basis of one criterion alone. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[b] Arrest and Criminal Record

Disqualification for employment based on past criminal behavior can violate Title VII when the disqualifying criterion has a disproportionate impact on a protected class and has a tenuous or insubstantial relation to job qualifications.ⁿ⁹ The Ninth Circuit has held that facially neutral employment questionnaires that require each applicant to reveal his or her arrest record may violate Title VII if they operate to bar employment of black applicants in a greater proportion than white applicants.ⁿ¹⁰ Similarly, with respect to criminal convictions, the FEHC has determined that, in order for a conviction to be disqualifying, there must be a direct relationship between the offense committed and the responsibilities of the employment sought.ⁿ¹¹ In making its determination, the FEHC relied on the reasoning of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals in Green v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Company.ⁿ¹² In that case, the Eighth Circuit stated that it could not "conceive of any business necessity that would automatically place every individual convicted of any offense, except a minor traffic offense, in the permanent ranks of the unemployed." The court added that "this is particularly true for blacks who have suffered and still suffer from the burdens of discrimination in our society."ⁿ¹³ Further, the FEHC, in promulgating its regulations, has recognized the discriminatory effect of disqualification based on criminal and arrest records.ⁿ¹⁴ However, an employer has the right to consider criminal convictions as they relate to the nature of a job.ⁿ¹⁵

The California Labor Code further prohibits public and private employers from using, as a factor in determining any condition of employment including hiring, (1) any record of arrest or detention that did not result in conviction, or (2) any record regarding a referral to and participation in any pretrial or posttrial diversion program.ⁿ¹⁶ For discussion concerning impermissible inquiries in employment applications and preemployment interviews relating to arrest and conviction records, see § 41.44[2][c].

[c] Citizenship Requirements

Federal immigration law prohibits discrimination against an applicant who is legally permitted to work in the United States because of the applicant's national origin or citizenship status.ⁿ¹⁷ However, employers have the right to prefer equally qualified citizens over non-citizensⁿ¹⁸ and may require a certain citizenship status as a condition of employment in order to comply with law, regulation or executive order, government contract or when the Attorney General has determined that the required citizenship status is essential to do business with an agency or department of a Federal, State, or local government.ⁿ¹⁹

Citizenship requirements which have the purpose or effect of discriminating on the basis of national origin, also may violate Title VII.ⁿ²⁰

FEHC regulations also provide that citizenship requirements which have the purpose or effect of discriminating on the basis of national origin or ancestry are unlawful unless pursuant to a permissible defense.ⁿ²¹

[d] Client Preferences

Hiring decisions based on client preferences are generally disallowed if they are discriminatory. The EEOC employee selection guidelines prohibit the discriminatory refusal to hire an individual because of the preferences of coworkers, the employer, clients or customers except where it is necessary "for the purpose of authenticity or genuineness ... e.g., an actor or actress."ⁿ²² Similarly, federal courts have found that claims that customers prefer male employees because of cultural biasesⁿ²³ or stereotypical expectationsⁿ²⁴ do not justify discrimination based on sex.ⁿ²⁵ The FEHA regulations state that a hiring decision based on customer preference for employees of one sex is a "situation which will not justify the application of [a] BFOQ defense."ⁿ²⁶ A California court of appeal expressly followed these regulations in striking down the refusal of a private men's club to hire women, based on its members' expressed preferences.ⁿ²⁷ While the court of appeal recognized that client privacy rights might be a BFOQ, it did not find that club members' privacy rights encompassed a "legally protectable right to use unenclosed bathroom or shower facilities" when enclosed facilities were available.ⁿ²⁸

[e] Credit History and Other Financial Condition

Selection criteria based on the financial circumstances of applicants may have an adverse impact on individuals protected by Title VII and the FEHA.ⁿ²⁹ Hence, selection practices such as checking credit references and reports,ⁿ³⁰ screening for wage garnishments,ⁿ³¹ and bankruptcy.ⁿ³²ⁿ³³

In addition to equal employment considerations, Bankruptcy Code Section 532 prohibits discrimination in employment decisions based solely on an individual's bankruptcy history, insolvency, or association with individuals who have filed for bankruptcy or are insolvent.ⁿ³⁴ The burden of demonstrating that the adverse employment decision was solely because of the bankruptcy falls on the employee.ⁿ³⁵ In addition to equal employment opportunity considerations, federal and California privacy laws restrict an employer's inquiry into an employee's financial condition. For discussion, see Chapter 50.

[f] Drug and Alcohol Use

Individuals who (1) are rehabilitated drug users; (2) are currently participating in a supervised drug rehabilitation program and are no longer using drugs; or (3) are erroneously believed to be illegal drug users, are protected by the ADA against discriminatory hiring practices.ⁿ³⁶ Further, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 also protects former drug users.ⁿ³⁷ Because neither the ADA nor the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 protects employees or applicants who are currently engaging in the illegal use of drugs, however, employers may base hiring decisions on such useⁿ³⁸ and may adopt or administer reasonable hiring policies or procedures, including but not limited to drug testing,ⁿ³⁹ designed to ensure that such individuals do not use illegal drugs.ⁿ⁴⁰ Alcoholism is also protected as a disability. However, employers may prohibit the use and abuse of alcohol in the workplace.ⁿ⁴¹ Employers may hold an alcoholic applicant to the same qualification standard as other applicants.ⁿ⁴² Nor does the Rehabilitation Act immunize an alcoholic from termination based on drunken misconduct.ⁿ⁴³ The provisions of the FEHA mirror the ADA with regard to alcoholics and recovered drug addicts and also expressly exclude the unlawful current use of controlled substances or other drugs from the definitions of mental and physical disability.ⁿ⁴⁴ Casual past drug use is insufficient to qualify as a disability entitled to protection under these disability laws.ⁿ⁴⁵ Accordingly, employers would be able to base employment decisions on disclosures of past use. However, employers may not base employment decisions on disclosures of arrests or convictions.ⁿ⁴⁶ It has been argued that consideration of past drug use is unlawful under Title VII because of its disparate impact on certain minority applicants.ⁿ⁴⁷ Despite this argument, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a hiring requirement that police applicants not have "recent or excessive marijuana usage," holding that job-relatedness had been established, "[p]articularly in light of the responsibility and discretion in the position of police officer, as well as the compelling interest in enforcing existent criminal laws ...".ⁿ⁴⁸

However, in 1991, Title VII by the Civil Rights Act of 1991ⁿ⁴⁹ was amended to provide that, notwithstanding any other provision of Title VII, a rule barring the employment of an individual who currently and knowingly uses or possesses a controlled substance, as defined in Schedules I and II of the Controlled Substances Act,ⁿ⁵⁰ other than the use or possession of a drug taken under the supervision of a licensed health care professional, or any other use or possession authorized by the Controlled Substances Act or any other provision of federal law, shall be considered an unlawful employment practice under Title VII only if the rule is adopted or applied with an intent to discriminate because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.ⁿ⁵¹

For discussion of other legal principles that may affect an employer's use of drug testing, see Chapter 50. For a discussion relating to drug addiction as a disability protected by federal equal employment opportunity law, see § 41.32[3][a].

[g] Education

Educational criteria, such as high school diploma requirements, are unlawful if they disproportionately exclude members of a protected classification unless the criteria "bear a demonstrable relationship to successful performance of the jobs for which [they are] used."ⁿ⁵² For example, in Griggs v. Duke Power Co.,ⁿ⁵³ the United States Supreme Court invalidated an employer's high school diploma and minimum intelligence test score criteria that virtually excluded black employees from all but the lowest-paying jobs. The employer argued that the diploma criterion "generally would improve the overall quality of the workforce."ⁿ⁵⁴ However, because of a significant disparity in the proportion of black versus white high school graduates in the state population,ⁿ⁵⁵ the requirement operated to disqualify black applicants at a substantially higher rate than white applicants.ⁿ⁵⁶ The Court held that the requirement did not bear a demonstrable relationship to successful job performance because employees without diplomas who were hired before the requirement was adopted continued to perform satisfactorily.ⁿ⁵⁷ Thus, the facts of the case demonstrated the inadequacy of using diplomas or degrees as fixed measures of capability.ⁿ⁵⁸ The Court declared that "[d]iplomas ... are useful servants, but Congress has mandated the common sense proposition that they are not to become the masters of reality."ⁿ⁵⁹

Courts have invalidated educational requirements in cases involving skilled and unskilled laborers; blue-collar positions such as work on an assembly-line; and transportation, maintenance, clerical, and skilled craft and trade jobs.ⁿ⁶⁰ By contrast, courts have upheld educational requirements for jobs involving professional positions or an unusual degree of risk or public responsibility, such as police officer,ⁿ⁶¹ correction officer,ⁿ⁶² flight officer,ⁿ⁶³ and certain "white-collar" supervisory positions.ⁿ⁶⁴

The EEOC guidelines point out that educational requirements which deny employment to an applicant because of his or her foreign education or which require a foreign education or training may be discriminatory on the basis of national origin.ⁿ⁶⁵

[h] English Fluency

The EEOC employee selection guidelinesⁿ⁶⁶ establish that denying employment opportunities because of an individual's foreign accent or inability to communicate well in English may constitute national origin discrimination in some instances.ⁿ⁶⁷ English fluency requirements are not unlawful, however, if they have no disparate impact.ⁿ⁶⁸ Even if fluency requirements have an adverse impact, they are not unlawful if they are job-related and satisfy the business necessity test discussed in § 41.21[4].ⁿ⁶⁹

English fluency requirements should be distinguished from "English-only" rules that forbid incumbent employees from speaking any language other than English. Both the EEOC and FEHC presume that English-only rules will have an adverse impact on protected groups,ⁿ⁷⁰ and therefore are prohibited unless justified by business necessity.ⁿ⁷¹ However, the Ninth Circuit has declined to adopt the EEOC guidelines, opining that absent proof, English only rules do not have an adverse impact on protected groups.ⁿ⁷² Such rules are discussed in detail in § 41.59.

[i] Experience

[i] Generally

Experience requirements may have a disparate impact on protected classifications. For example, one court found that a requirement for truck-driving experience had a disparate impact on female applicants because females were grossly under represented in the trucking industry when the requirement was implemented.ⁿ⁷³ Another court held that a plaintiff challenging a requirement for flight officer experience established a prima facie case of disparate impact merely by showing that an airline employed a "minuscule number of black flight officers."ⁿ⁷⁴

Generally, it is more likely that a minimum experience requirement will be upheld if the job requires a high degree of skill, or if there is a safety risk in hiring an unqualified applicant.ⁿ⁷⁵ Even if experience requirements have an adverse impact, they are lawful if business necessity or job-relatedness is shown.ⁿ⁷⁶ As with education requirements discussed in [f], above, the business necessity defense entails consideration of the demands of the particular job.ⁿ⁷⁷

Under the EEOC employee selection guidelines, job-relatedness means that the content of the experience requirement must be representative of important aspects of performance on the job for which applicants are to be evaluated.ⁿ⁷⁸ To satisfy this test of job-relatedness, there should be a positive relationship between the content of the experience and the content of the job for which the experience is required. The critical consideration is the resemblance between the specific behaviors, products, knowledge, skills, or abilities in the experience and the specific behaviors, products, knowledge, skills, or abilities required on the job, whether or not there is a close resemblance between the experience as a whole and the job as a whole.ⁿ⁷⁹

For a discussion relating to validity studies as they relate to preemployment testing, see § 41.45[2]. For a general discussion of business necessity as a defense, see § 41.95.

[ii] FEHA Regulations

Under FEHC regulations, employers may prefer employees who have superior qualifications and training.ⁿ⁸⁰ However, employers who consider prior work experience in the selection of an employee must also consider prior unpaid or volunteer work experience.ⁿ⁸¹

[iii] Maximum Experience Qualifications

It has been argued that maximum experience requirements adversely affect older workers and hence violate the ADEA.ⁿ⁸² However, the Ninth Circuit allows employers to use "overqualification" as a basis for rejection of applicants as long as that term is defined objectively and the basis for rejection is not a pretext for age discrimination.ⁿ⁸³ One California district court found that a school district with strict financial constraints could reject more qualified applicants because the experience level of those teachers would mandate they receive a salary that was not within budget.ⁿ⁸⁴

[j] Family or Marital Status and Responsibilities

Discrimination based on marital status is prohibited by the FEHA.ⁿ⁸⁵ This prohibition also forbids discrimination because an applicant is living with a member of the opposite sex without being married to that person.ⁿ⁸⁶ Under Title VII, hiring decisions based on marital status may constitute unlawful discrimination if a protected group is adversely affected.ⁿ⁸⁷ Furthermore, selection criteria based on real or perceived family responsibilities may also unlawfully discriminate on the basis of sex.ⁿ⁸⁸ Thus, in Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp.,ⁿ⁸⁹ the United States Supreme Court held that Title VII invalidated a hiring policy in which an employer did not accept applications from women with pre-school-age children, while it did accept applications from men with pre-school-age children.ⁿ⁹⁰ The Court suggested, however, that the existence of conflicting family obligations, if demonstrably more relevant to job performance for a woman than for a man, could arguably be a basis for a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) defense.ⁿ⁹¹

Pursuant to the ADA regulations, an employer may not discriminate against a qualified applicant because of that applicant's familial relationship with an individual with a disability.ⁿ⁹² Thus an employer may not discriminate because it believes that existence of family member with a disability will affect employment of applicant.ⁿ⁹³

Both the FEHA and Title VII prohibit employers from making hiring decisions based on the pregnancy of the applicant.ⁿ⁹⁴ The Supreme Court has extended this prohibition to employment decisions based on a woman's fertility.ⁿ⁹⁵ The Court struck down a policy which prohibited pregnant or fertile women from being placed in jobs which exposed them to lead.ⁿ⁹⁶ The California Court of Appeal came to the same conclusion in a similar challenge to the same employer's policy under the FEHA.ⁿ⁹⁷ The California Court of Appeals based its decision, in part, on an FEHC regulation, which provides that is unlawful to refuse to hire a female because she is of childbearing age.ⁿ⁹⁸ For a discussion relating to discrimination based on sex plus another characteristic, such as family responsibilities, see § 41.36[2][a][ii].

[k] Height and Weight Restrictions

Height and weight restrictions which are imposed only on one sex are violative of Title VII.ⁿ⁹⁹ However, even height and weight restrictions which are applied uniformly often have an adverse impact on a protected group and must therefore satisfy the business necessity test discussed in § 41.21[4].ⁿ¹⁰⁰ For example, in Dothard v. Rawlinson,ⁿ¹⁰¹ the United States Supreme Court found a prima facie case of sex discrimination in a statutory height and weight restriction relating to prison guards that would exclude over 41 percent of the nation's female population while excluding less than one percent of the male population.ⁿ¹⁰² The burden then shifted to the employer to show that the restrictions were necessary for safe and efficient job performance,ⁿ¹⁰³ but the employer merely asserted that strength is essential to performance and that the height and weight restrictions were related to strength.ⁿ¹⁰⁴ The employer produced no evidence correlating the restrictions with the strength required for good job performance.ⁿ¹⁰⁵ Accordingly, the Court invalidated the height and weight requirements, noting that the employer's purpose could be achieved by adopting and validating a test that measured strength directly.ⁿ¹⁰⁶

In Blake v. City of Los Angeles,ⁿ¹⁰⁷ a minimum height restriction for police officers excluded 87 percent of all women, but only 20 percent of all men.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals found a prima facie case of disproportionate impact against women,ⁿ¹⁰⁹ and held that the employer failed to demonstrate that the height restriction satisfied the "business necessity" standards articulated in Dothard and other applicable sources.ⁿ¹¹⁰ For a detailed discussion relating to "business necessity" standards, see §§ 41.21[4] and 41.95

In Frank v. United Airlines, Inc.,^{n110.1} the defendant's weight maximums for its female flight attendants generally corresponded to the medium frame category of MetLife's Height and Weight Tables. By contrast, the maximums for the male flight attendants generally corresponded to MetLife's large frame category.^{n110.2} Because of this programmatic difference in the treatment of women and men, the Ninth Circuit concluded that the defendant's weight policy between 1980 and 1994 was facially discriminatory.^{n110.3}

Although most height and weight restriction cases involve sex discrimination, such requirements may also disproportionately exclude applicants based on national origin.ⁿ¹¹¹ Thus, in Davis v. County of Los Angeles,ⁿ¹¹² the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals determined that a minimum height restriction for firefighters had a discriminatory impact on Mexican-American applicants because 41 percent of the applicants were excluded by the restriction.ⁿ¹¹³ The court invalidated the restriction because the fire department failed to demonstrate that it was manifestly related to employment.ⁿ¹¹⁴ A federal District Court in California held that a similar height restriction discriminated against Asians and Latins.ⁿ¹¹⁵

FEHC regulations interpreting the FEHA prohibit the use of discriminatory height and weight restrictions unless pursuant to permissible defense,ⁿ¹¹⁶ and they specifically bar the use of height or weight standards that discriminate against one sex or the other.ⁿ¹¹⁷ Furthermore, the use of separate height and/or separate weight standards for males and females also may be unlawful.ⁿ¹¹⁸ Thus, under the FEHA, "[e]mployee height and weight limitations may be prescribed by an employer where there is a rational basis for such limitations, as shown by supportive analytical factual data rather than stereotypical generalizations."n119

[l] "No-Spouse" Rules

Employment policies which prohibit the hiring of spouses, so called "no spouse" rules, violate Title VII when they have an adverse impact on one sex, unless they are job related.n120 For example, one employer's rule against hiring an applicant when the applicant's spouse was already employed in the same plant had a substantial discriminatory impact on women because 71 of the last 74 people disqualified under the rule were women.n121 However, the court found the rule to be job-related because it improved the work environment, and because it did not penalize women on the basis of their environmental or genetic background.n122

Although the FEHA expressly prohibits discrimination on the basis of marital status,n123 it does not proscribe all "no-spouse" rules. Nothing in the FEHA relating to marital status discrimination affects the right of an employer to reasonably regulate, for reasons of supervision, safety, security, or morale, the working of spouses in the same department, division, or facility, consistent with rules and regulations adopted by the FEHC.n124 FEHC regulations provide that an employer may refuse, for business reasons of supervision, safety, security, or morale, to place (1) one spouse under the direct supervision of the other spouse, or (2) both spouses in the same department, division, or facility if the work involves potential conflicts of interest or other hazards greater for married couples than for other persons.n125 However, the employer must demonstrate that the hazards are specific to the particular spouses and circumstances involved.n126 The simple fact that the spouses will be working together or the possibility that one will be promoted over the other is not enough to justify the marital status discrimination.n127 For a discussion regarding "no-spouse" rules as they relate to current employees, see § 41.65.

[m] Personal Appearance

[i] Grooming and General Appearance

Hiring decisions which are based on an applicant's personal appearance can be based on either immutable characteristics, those that the applicant cannot change, or on characteristics that he or she can change. Employers are given more latitude with respect to setting rules and standards regarding characteristics which are not immutable, even if those requirements are applied differently to men and women.n128

However, some characteristics such as facial hair, which would appear to be changeable by an applicant may become immutable because of their close association with a protected class. For instance, compliance with no beard policies has been shown to exclude African-Americans from employment because of a painful skin condition that affects them in high percentages and can only be alleviated by growing a beard.n129 Such policies are subject to a business necessity defense. Hence, where a no-beard policy was based on safety reasons, specifically that the presence of a beard prevented compliance with OSHA requirements for a tight seal gas mask, it was upheld despite being discriminatory.n130

[ii] Characteristics Resulting From Physiological Disorder

The ADA does not prohibit discrimination on the basis of physical characteristics, as opposed to physical impairments. It is important to distinguish between conditions that are impairments and physical, psychological, environmental, cultural and economic characteristics that are not impairments. The definition of the term "impairment" does not include physical characteristics such as eye color, hair color, left-handedness, or height, weight or muscle tone that are within "normal" range and are not the result of physiological disorder.n131 The California Supreme Court adopted this distinction in a case brought under the FEHA when an applicant claimed she was discriminated against because of her weight.n132 In that case, the employer was found to have based its decision not to hire plaintiff on the fact that she was significantly overweight and she claimed discrimination based on disability or perceived disability within the meaning of the FEHA.n133 The Court rejected her claim based on her failure to show that her obesity resulted from a physical condition affecting one or more bodily systems.ⁿ¹³⁴ However, this decision does not preclude an individual from making a case of disability discrimination under the FEHA, if he or she can provide evidence of a "physiological, systemic basis for the condition."ⁿ¹³⁵ Accordingly, it would appear that an employer could not discriminate, for example, against an obese person, whose obesity was caused by diabetes, or an emaciated person whose weight loss was caused by cancer or AIDS.ⁿ¹³⁶ And where such condition exists, at least one court has rejected the employer's argument that plaintiff's voluntary conduct which may have contributed to the condition does not preclude protection under the ADA.ⁿ¹³⁷ The FEHA regulations defer to employers on matters of physical appearance, grooming and dress standards except when the employer's standards discriminate against a protected class and significantly burdens the individual in his or her employment.ⁿ¹³⁸ However, the FEHA regulations specifically prohibit employers from requiring that applicants submit photographs with their applications, unless pursuant to a permissible defense.ⁿ¹³⁹

[iii] Height and Weight Restrictions

For a discussion of height and weight requirements see [k], above.

[m.1] Physical Limitations

Although the ADA prohibits discrimination against qualified individuals who are able to perform the essential functions of the position, with or without reasonable accommodation,^{n139.1} the Supreme Court has held that employers may, in some circumstances, prefer certain physical characteristics for certain positions. For example, in Sutton v. United Air Lines,^{n139.2} the employer required that applicants for its global pilot position have uncorrected visual acuity of 20/100 or better. Because their corrected vision was 20/20 or better, plaintiffs alleged that this policy caused the employer to mistakenly regard them as substantially limited in the life activity of working. However, the Court held that because the employer only excluded plaintiffs from eligibility for a single position, and not a broad class of jobs, the physical preferences were permissible under the ADA.^{n139.3}

[n] Veteran Status

Hiring preferences for veterans have a disparate impact on women because of the overwhelming preponderance of men in the armed forces.ⁿ¹⁴⁰ Nonetheless Title VII expressly sanctions statutory veteran preferences.ⁿ¹⁴¹ Title VII does not, however, sanction nonstatutory preferences adopted voluntarily by private employers.ⁿ¹⁴² In one case involving a private employer in the State of Washington, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that Title VII did not allow the employer to apply a veterans' preference even though the employer was encouraged by a federal agency to adopt it.ⁿ¹⁴³ The court stated that such encouragement did not convert the preference into an act of Congress.ⁿ¹⁴⁴

California has enacted several veterans' preference statutes. For example, the FEHA provides that its provisions do not affect an employer's right to use veteran status as a factor in employee selection, or to give special consideration to Vietnam era veterans.ⁿ¹⁴⁵

One such statute was challenged as discriminatory in federal district court, which found that, absent discriminatory intent by the legislature, it was not invalid.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ The courts have not yet addressed the question whether employers may consider selection criteria based on military discharges. However, the EEOC, relying on Gregory v. Litton Systems, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁴⁷ which invalidated the use of arrest records in hiring decisions because of the disproportionate impact on a particular race,ⁿ¹⁴⁸ held that an honorable discharge requirement violates Title VII if it has a disparate impact on minority applicants and cannot be justified by business necessity.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ Military discharges are either administratively issued (i.e. honorable, general, and undesirable discharges) or imposed by sentence of a court martial (i.e., bad conduct and dishonorable discharges). Honorable, general, and undesirable discharges, which do not involve an adjudication, should be analogized to an arrest for Title VII purposes. Dishonorable discharges, which are adjudicated, should accordingly be analogized to a conviction.ⁿ¹⁵⁰ For a discussion relating to the consideration of arrest and conviction records, see [b], above.

[3] Subjective Criteria

"Subjective" employee selection criteria lack the "well-defined" characteristics of specific objective criteria like those discussed in [2], above.ⁿ¹⁵¹ They are not "precise and formal,"ⁿ¹⁵² and are often characterized by a "lack of objective job qualifications" for particular job classifications.ⁿ¹⁵³ For example, subjective selection decisions may be based on such criteria as personality attributes,ⁿ¹⁵⁴ stable employment history, interview success, professional reputation, and the ability to "get along with people."ⁿ¹⁵⁵ A supervisor's subjective opinion as to which applicants are "the best for the job" may also be at least a partial basis of selection decisions.ⁿ¹⁵⁶

The use of subjective criteria is not per se illegal.ⁿ¹⁵⁷ Such criteria may be essential, particularly in "upper-level" or "white-collar" positions that may require "different variables an employer [may] reasonable consider."ⁿ¹⁵⁸ Indeed, many jobs may require personal qualities that are not amenable to standardized testing or other objective criteria.ⁿ¹⁵⁹ However, subjective criteria may raise claims of "disparate treatment" since they may be "ready mechanisms for discrimination ... because they mask the influence of impermissible ... bias in making hiring decisions."ⁿ¹⁶⁰ Moreover, to the extent that subjective criteria reflect "subconscious stereotypes and prejudices," and thus have "precisely the same effects as a system pervaded by impermissible intentional discrimination," they may be unlawful under the "disparate impact" theory of liability.ⁿ¹⁶¹ For a detailed discussion relating to the "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" theories of liability, see §§ 41.10, 41.11, 41.20, and 41.21.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Few employers have ever attempted to validate subjective criteria. Therefore, it is premature to assert that such criteria cannot ever be validated. In many cases, subjective procedures, if scored, may be susceptible to standard validation techniques. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment Law
Preemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 430, 434, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158, (Congress did not intend Title VII to guarantee job to every person regardless of qualifications; Title VII expressly protects employer's right to insist that any prospective employee must meet applicable job requirements); Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 259, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII was not intended to diminish traditional management prerogatives); and Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1050-1051, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (subject to Title VII, 42 U.S.C. § 1981, ADEA, FEHA, and other statutory restrictions, private employer has considerable discretion in setting job-related standards).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 259, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207; see also, 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(6) (ADA; prohibiting use of standards, tests, or other selection criteria that screen out disabled persons, unless standards, tests or criteria are shown to be job-related and consistent with business necessity).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 432, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405-1406 (Title VII); Zahorik v. Cornell University (2d Cir. 1984) 729 F.2d 85, 95 (Title VII).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479, ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439, rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405-1406 (Title VII) ; Zahorik v. Cornell University (2d Cir. 1984) 729 F.2d 85, 95 (Title VII) ; see also discussion in §§ 41.20-41.21.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 335 n.15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (Title VII) ; Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 430-433, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 ; cf. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.3A (use of any selection procedure that has adverse impact on hiring of members of any race, sex, or ethnic group as considered to be discriminatory).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 . For a detailed discussion relating to the "disparate impact" theory of liability, see §§ 41.20-41.21. For a detailed discussion relating to substantive equal employment opportunity defenses generally, see Part F (§§ 41.90-41.111).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Green v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Company (8th Cir. 1975) 523 F.2d 1290, 1296-1297.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Gregory v. Litton Systems, Inc. (9th Cir. 1972) 472 F.2d 631, 632 , aff'd as mod. (9th Cir. 1972) 472 F.2d 631 (relying on statistics showing that blacks were arrested with greater frequency than whites).

(n11)Footnote 11. See DFEH v. Housing Authorities of City and County of Fresno (1979) FEHC Dec No. 80-20, p.14 (commission found discrimination where convictions considered were over ten years old and there was no direct relationship between offenses committed and position sought by applicant).

(n12)Footnote 12. Green v Missouri Pacific Railroad Company (8th Cir. 1975) 523 F.2d 1290.

(n13)Footnote 13. Green v. Missouri Pacific Railroad Company (8th Cir. 1975) 523 F.2d 1290, 1298 (Title VII).

(n14)Footnote 14. See, 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(d)(1) (prohibition on inquiry into criminal records including arrest or detention which does not result in conviction, expunged convictions and certain misdemeanor convictions).

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Carter v. Gallagher (8th Cir. 1971) 452 F.2d 315, 326 , cert. denied, 406 U.S. 950 (1972) (rule giving fair consideration to bearing of conviction on applicant's fitness for fire fighter job appropriate); see also Hetherington v. State Personnel Bd. (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 582, 594, 147 Cal. Rptr. 300 (standards sustained when employer shows that criminal conduct bears relationship to duties of particular occupation).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Lab. Code § 432.7(a). Employers may use such information relating to applicants for, or persons already employed in, peace officer, Justice Department, or other criminal agency positions. See Lab. Code § 432.7(e). This provision is further discussed in Chapter 50.

(n17)Footnote 17. See Immigration Act of 1990, 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(1)(A) (national origin) and 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(1)(B) (citizenship status of "protected" individuals, e.g., aliens admitted for permanent residence or granted refugee or asylum status); see 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(3). For a complete analysis of the requirements placed on employers to verify all employees' legal permission to work in the United States and the prohibition of discrimination arising out employer verification requirements, see 1 Gordon, Mailman and Yale-Loehr, Immigration Law and Procedure, ch. 7 (Matthew Bender).

(n18)Footnote 18. 8 U.S.C. section 1324b(a)(4).

(n19)Footnote 19. 8 U.S.C. section 1324b(a)(2)(C).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Espinoza v. Farah Mfg. Co. (1973) 414 U.S. 86, 96, 94 S. Ct. 334, 38 L. Ed. 2d 287 ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII). See also EEOC Guidelines, 29 C.F.R. § 1606.5. For a detailed discussion of the interaction of the anti-discrimination provisions of the Immigration Act of 1990 and Title VII see 1 Gordon, Mailman and Yale-Loehr, Immigration Law and Procedure, ch. 7 (Matthew Bender).

(n21)Footnote 21. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7289.5(f).

(n22)Footnote 22. See 29 U.S.C. § 1604.2(a)(1)(iii) (general prohibition on sex discrimination due to preferences); and 29 U.S.C. § 1604.2(a)(2) (genuineness is a BFOQ).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Fernandez v. Wynn Oil Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 653 F.2d 1273, 1277 (court rejected employer's claim that maleness was a BFOQ for doing business in South America because of cultural biases); see also Lam v. University of Hawaii (9th Cir. 1994) 40 F.3d 1551, 1560, fn.13 (remark by employer that job should be given to man because of Japanese cultural prejudices found to be evidence of discrimination, since existence of third party preferences does not justify discriminatory hiring practices).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Gerdorn v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 609 (rejecting possibility of customer preference for female attendants as BFOQ).

(n25)Footnote 25. Compare Ward v. Westland Plastics, Inc. (9th Cir., 1980) 651 F.2d 1266, 1267 (employer's acquiescence to request by female client that women employees not attend luncheon because she wished to be the only woman in attendance was not a violation of Title VII because it was an isolated last minute request and acquiescence was "required to achieve a legitimate business goal").

(n26)Footnote 26. See 2 Cal Code Reg. § 7290.8.

(N27)Footnote 27. See Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 21, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 .

(n28)Footnote 28. See Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 23, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 . But cf. County of Alameda v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 499, 505-506, 200 Cal. Rptr. 381 (under facts presented, privacy of prisoners was a BFOQ for hiring only male cooks).

(n29)Footnote 29. See Johnson v. Pike Corporation of America (C.D. Cal. 1971) 332 F. Supp. 490, 494 (court recognized that minority groups' representation in the lower end of the economic scale was disproportionate, that they were more frequently in debt and more likely to be subject to "questionable credit practices").

(n30)Footnote 30. See EEOC Decision No. 72-1176 (February 28, 1972) (bank violated Title VII by basing hiring decision on credit references since policy had disproportionate impact on minority group members who were three times as likely to fall below poverty level).

(n31)Footnote 31. See Keenan v. American Cast Iron Pipe Co. (11th Cir. 1983) 707 F.2d 1274, 1276 (Title VII; trial court committed reversible error in refusing to consider entire garnishment policy for purpose of prima facie case); Johnson v. Pike Corp. of Am. (C.D. Cal. 1971) 332 F. Supp. 490, 494 (Title VII; employer rule authorizing discharge of employees whose wages are garnished discriminated against minority group members).

(n32)Footnote 32. See Bell v. Citizens Fidelity Bank & Trust Co. (6th Cir. 1980) 636 F.2d 1119 (remanding to determine whether bank's practice of discharging employees who file for bankruptcy had discriminatory impact on blacks); but cf. Marshall v District of Columbia (D.C. Cir. 1975) 559 F.2d 726, 727 (regulation barring hiring of bankrupts as police officers not racially motivated).

(n33)Footnote 33. [Reserved]

(n34)Footnote 34. See 11 U.S.C. § 525(b).

(n35)Footnote 35. See Laracuenta v Chase Manhattan Bank (1st Cir. 1989) 891 F.2d 17, 21-24 (court, relying greatly on the "solely because" language of the statute, found that bankruptcy status was not the sole motive behind employee's firing).

(n36)Footnote 36. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(b)(ADA).

(n37)Footnote 37. See 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C)(ii) (Rehabilitation Act); see also Davis v. Bucher (E.D. Pa. 1978) 451 F. Supp. 791 (employer policy against hiring former drug users was a violation of the Rehabilitation Act).

(n38)Footnote 38. See 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C)(i) (Rehabilitation Act); 42 U.S.C. § 12114(a) (ADA); See also ch. 40, pt. C.

(n39)Footnote 39. See § 41.46[2].

(n40)Footnote 40. See 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C)(ii) (Rehabilitation Act); 42 U.S.C. § 12114(b) (ADA); See also ch. 40, pt. C.

(n41)Footnote 41. See 42 U.S.C. § 12114(c)(1)(ADA); see also 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C)(v) (Rehabilitation Act).

(n42)Footnote 42. See 42 U.S.C. § 12114(c)(4)(ADA); see also 29 U.S.C. § 705(20)(C)(v) (Rehabilitation Act); see also Crewe v U.S. Office of Personnel Management (8th Cir. 1987) 834 F.2d 140, 143 (OPM rejection of alcoholic applicant with history of failed rehabilitation attempts was not a violation of the Rehabilitation Act because applicant did not demonstrate availability of reasonable accommodation).

(n43)Footnote 43. See Newland v. Dalton (9th Cir. 1996) 81 F.3d 904, 906 (civilian Navy employee who fired assault rifle inside bar during drunken rampage was terminated for misconduct, not in retribution for alcoholism).

(n44)Footnote 44. See Gov. Code § 12926(i) (definition of mental disability) and Gov. Code § 12926(k) (definition of physical disability).

(n45)Footnote 45. See Hartman v City of Petaluma (N.D. Cal. 1994) 841 F. Supp. 946, 949 (no ADA violation found for failure to hire individual who admitted to prior casual use); see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902 (application of the definition of "disability").

(n46)Footnote 46. See Labor Code § 432.8(employers are prohibited from considering misdemeanor marijuana arrests or convictions in making hiring decisions).

(n47)Footnote 47. See New York Transit Auth. v Beazer (1979) 440 U.S. 568, 99 S.Ct 1355, 59 L. Ed. 2d 587 (plaintiffs argued but failed to show adverse impact of Transit Authority's policy prohibiting hire of methadone users and failed to overcome job relatedness of policy).

(n48)Footnote 48. Davis v. City of Dallas (5th Cir. 1985) 777 F.2d 205, 223-225, cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1116 (1986).

(n49)Footnote 49. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 105(a).

(n50)Footnote 50. See 21 U.S.C. § 802(6) (controlled substances do not include alcoholic beverages or tobacco).

(n51)Footnote 51. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(3). There are no cases which discuss the effect of this amendment on claims of discriminatory hiring practices.

(n52)Footnote 52. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158.

(n53)Footnote 53. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158.

(n54)Footnote 54. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158.

(n55)Footnote 55. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 430 n.6, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158

(relying on 1960 North Carolina census showing 34% of white males were high school graduates, as opposed to 12% of black males).

(n56)Footnote 56. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 426, 430, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n57)Footnote 57. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 427, 431, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n58)Footnote 58. See Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 433, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n59)Footnote 59. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 433, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n60)Footnote 60. See, e.g., Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 (Title VII; labor) ; Carpenter v. Stephen F. Austin State University (5th Cir. 1983) 706 F.2d 608 (Title VII; service/maintenance and clerical); Donnell v. General Motors Corp. (8th Cir. 1978) 576 F.2d 1292 (Title VII; skilled trade).

(n61)Footnote 61. See Davis v. Dallas (5th Cir. 1985) 777 F.2d 205, 211 , cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1116 (1986) (Title VII); see also Aguilera v. Cook County Police & Corrections Merit Bd. (7th Cir. 1985) 760 F.2d 844, 848 , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 907 (1985) (Title VII; suggesting that there is presumption in civil rights cases that high school education is appropriate requirement for police officers); Castro v. Beecher (1st Cir. 1972) 459 F.2d 725, 735 (Title VII).

(n62)Footnote 62. Aguilera v. Cook Cty. Police and Corr. Merit Bd. (7th Cir. 1985) 760 F.2d 844, 848 , cert. denied, 474 U.S. 907 (Title VII) .

(n63)Footnote 63. See Spurlock v. United Airlines, Inc. (10th Cir. 1972) 475 F.2d 216, 219 (Title VII).

(n64)Footnote 64. See Hawkins v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (8th Cir. 1983) 697 F.2d 810, 815-816 (Title VII; position of "trade returns supervisor" at brewery).

(n65)Footnote 65. 29 C.F.R. § 1606.6(b)(2).

(n66)Footnote 66. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1606.1-1606.8.

(n67)Footnote 67. See 29 C.F.R. § 1606.6(b)(1). See also Odima v. Westin Tucson Hotel (9th Cir. 1995) 53 F.3d 1484, 1491 (rejection of Nigerian applicant because of "heavy accent" was pretext for race and nationality discrimination). For general discussion of national origin discrimination, see § 41.33.

(n68)Footnote 68. See Garcia v. Rush-Presbyterian, Etc. (7th Cir. 1981) 660 F.2d 1217, 1222 (Title VII; English fluency requirement had no adverse impact because plaintiffs made no showing that Latinos were excluded from workforce at greater rate than persons of other national origins); Vasquez v. McAllen Bag & Supply Co. (5th Cir. 1981) 660 F.2d 686, 688 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n69)Footnote 69. See Garcia v. Rush-Presbyterian, Etc. (7th Cir. 1981) 660 F.2d 1217, 1222 (Title VII); Vasquez v. McAllen Bag & Supply Co. (5th Cir. 1981) 660 F.2d 686, 688 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n70)Footnote 70. See 29 C.F.R. § 1606.7(a)

(n71)Footnote 71. See 29 C.F.R. § 1606.7(b); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7289.5(d).

(n72)Footnote 72. See Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480 1488 (remanded case for determination of whether one or more employees with limited proficiency in English were adversely impacted).

(n73)Footnote 73. See Chrisner v. Complete Auto Trans., Inc. (6th Cir. 1981) 645 F.2d 1251, 1258 (Title VII).

(n74)Footnote 74. Spurlock v. United Airlines, Inc. (10th Cir. 1972) 475 F.2d 216, 218 (Title VII).

(n75)Footnote 75. See Chrisner v. Complete Auto Trans., Inc. (6th Cir. 1981) 645 F.2d 1251, 1262 (Title VII); Spurlock v. United Airlines, Inc. (10th Cir. 1972) 475 F.2d 216, 219 (Title VII).

(n76)Footnote 76. See Spurlock v. United Airlines, Inc. (10th Cir. 1972) 475 F.2d 216, 218 (Title VII).

(n77)Footnote 77. Chrisner v. Complete Auto Trans., Inc. (6th Cir. 1981) 645 F.2d 1251, 1258 (Title VII).

(n78)Footnote 78. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5B.

(n79)Footnote 79. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14C(6).

(n80)Footnote 80. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.7 (prohibition set out in section regarding affording applicants over 40 equal opportunities).

(n81)Footnote 81. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.0(d) (subsection concerning equal opportunities for women).

(n82)Footnote 82. See Geller v. Markham (2d Cir. 1980) 635 F.2d 1027, 1030, 1034, cert. denied, 451 U.S. 945 (1981).

(n83)Footnote 83. See E.E.O.C. v Insurance Co. of North America (9th Cir. 1995) 49 F.3d 1418 (employer could legitimately prefer less experienced candidates, because of concern that more qualified candidate would spend too much time on file); see also Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 325, n. 15, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (facially neutral policy is discriminatory if not justified by business necessity).

(n84)Footnote 84. See United States EEOC v. Newport Mesa Unified Sch. Dist. (C.D.Cal 1995) 893 F. Supp. 927 (policy of preferring less years of experience not a violation of ADEA when financial constraints were the reason for policy). But cf. Geller v. Markham (2d Cir. 1980) 635 F.2d 1027, 1033, cert. denied, 451 U.S. 945 (1981) (The court concluded that the plaintiff, a 55-year-old applicant with considerable teaching experience, had established disparate impact by proving that she was subjected to a facially neutral policy that disproportionately disadvantaged her as a member of a protected class and rejected the school board's cost justification under governing EEOC regulations) and 29 C.F.R. § 1625.7(f).

(n85)Footnote 85. Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA; marital status is protected classification). See also discussion of "no-spouse rules" in section [I].

(n86)Footnote 86. See DFEH v. Boy Scouts of America (1981) FEHC 81-15 see also Smith v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 1143, 1160, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700, 913 P.2d 909 (affirming protected status of unmarried cohabiting couple under FEHA [housing case]).

(n87)Footnote 87. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.4(a) (rule that forbids or restricts employment of married women and that is not applicable to married men constitutes sex discrimination under Title VII).

(n88)Footnote 88. See Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 544, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613.

(n89)Footnote 89. Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613.

(n90)Footnote 90. See Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 544, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n91)Footnote 91. See Phillips v. Martin Marietta Corp. (1971) 400 U.S. 542, 544, 91 S. Ct. 496, 27 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n92)Footnote 92. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.8 and illustrative example in 29 C.F.R. App. § 1630.8.

(n93)Footnote 93. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.8 and illustrative example in 29 C.F.R. App. § 1630.8.

(n94)Footnote 94. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k) (Title VII: discrimination based on pregnancy is a form of sex discrimination); Gov. Code § 12945(FEHA; employment discrimination based on pregnancy is prohibited) and 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.2(b), (c), (d) (pregnancy discrimination constitutes sex discrimination under FEHA); see also discussion in § 41.36[2][c].

(n95)Footnote 95. See Int'l Union, United Auto., etc. v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n96)Footnote 96. See Int'l Union, United Auto., etc. v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187 ; 111 S.Ct 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158

(n97)Footnote 97. See Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158

(n98)Footnote 98. See Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 (basing its holding on 2 Cal Code Reg. § 7291.0(c)).

(n99)Footnote 99. See Gerom v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 609 (weight restriction on females only, imposed because of competitive strategy of employer to have more attractive flight attendants, was violation of Title VII).

(n100)Footnote 100. Cf. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.4C (height and weight restrictions must be individually evaluated by user if court decisions and administrative interpretations hold them to be not job-related in same or similar circumstances).

(n101)Footnote 101. Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 .

(n102)Footnote 102. See Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 329-331, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 ; see also Hardy v. Stumpf (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 958, 964, 112 Cal. Rptr. 739 (U.S. Const., Amend. XIV; Cal. Const., Art. I, §§ 11, 21; Cal. Const., Art. XX; height and weight requirement for police officers are discriminatory classification if statistics show that standards imposed in fact exclude virtually all women).

(n103)Footnote 103. Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 ; for a discussion relating to this standard, see § 41.21[4].

(n104)Footnote 104. See Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 331, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 .

(n105)Footnote 105. See Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 331, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 .

(n106)Footnote 106. See Dothard v. Rawlinson (1977) 433 U.S. 321, 332, 97 S. Ct. 2720, 53 L. Ed. 2d 786 .

(n107)Footnote 107. Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367 (Title VII).

(n108)Footnote 108. See Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1374 (Title VII).

(n109)Footnote 109. See Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1375 (Title VII).

(n110)Footnote 110. See Blake v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 1367, 1378-1382 (Title VII); see also Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 247 fn. 13, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (U.S. Const., Amend. XIV); Albamarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 431, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 (Title VII) ; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.5-1607.15 (EEOC employee selection guidelines relating to minimum standards for professional validation studies).

(n111)Footnote 110.1. Frank v. United Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 216 F.3d 845 .

(n112)Footnote 110.2. Frank v. United Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 216 F.3d 845, 854 .

(n113)Footnote 110.3. Frank v. United Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 216 F.3d 845, 854 .

(n114)Footnote 111. Cf. 29 C.F.R. § 1606.6(a)(2) (because height and weight requirements tend to exclude certain individuals on national origin basis, employers are expected to evaluate procedures for adverse impact).

(n115)Footnote 112. Davis v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 1334 , vacated and remanded on other grounds, 440 U.S. 625 (1979) (Title VII).

(n116)Footnote 113. See Davis v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 1334, 1341 , vacated and remanded on other grounds, 440 U.S. 625 (1979) (Title VII).

(n117)Footnote 114. See Davis v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 1334, 1342 , vacated and remanded on other grounds, 440 U.S. 625 (1979) (Title VII); see also Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 666-668 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (Title VII; evidence inadequate to prove that minimum height restriction which eliminated 41 percent of Mexican-American males and 74 percent of Mexican-American females was manifestly related to employment by sheriff's department).

(n118)Footnote 115. See Officers for Justice v. Civil Serv. Com'n, San Fran. (N.D. Cal. 1975) 395 F. Supp. 378, 380-381 .

(n119)Footnote 116. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7287.4(d)(2), (3).

(n120)Footnote 117. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.0(b)(1).

(n121)Footnote 118. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.0(b)(1).

(n122)Footnote 119. McMillen v. Civil Service Com. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 125, 130, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 548 .

(n123)Footnote 120. See Yuhas v. Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. (7th Cir. 1977) 562 F.2d 496, 498 , cert. denied, 435 U.S. 934 (1978) ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1604.4(a); see discussion in § 41.36[2][b].

(n124)Footnote 121. See Yuhas v. Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. (7th Cir. 1977) 562 F.2d 496, 498 , cert. denied, 435 U.S. 934 (1978) .

(n125)Footnote 122. See Yuhas v. Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. (7th Cir. 1977) 562 F.2d 496, 500 , cert. denied, 435 U.S. 934 (1978) .

(n126)Footnote 123. See Gov. Code § 12940(a); see also discussion in § 41.36[2][b].

(n127)Footnote 124. See Gov. Code § 12940(a)(3); see also DFEH Insurance America Sales Agency (1988) FEHC

Dec. No. 88-07, pp. 5-6(emphasizing that assumptions authorized by Gov. C. § 12940(a)(3) are strictly limited to "same department defense").

(n128)Footnote 125. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.5(a).

(n129)Footnote 126. See DFEH v. City of Simi Valley (1983) FEHC Dec. No. 83-21, p. 19.

(n130)Footnote 127. See DFEH v. Insurance America Sales Agency (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-07 (Commission found incentive for spouses in the same department to pool sales to achieve volume bonuses was sufficient to justify rule).

(n131)Footnote 128. See Baker v. California Land Title Company (9th Cir. 1974) 507 F.2d 895, 898, cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1046 (1975) (hair length standards for men only upheld); see also DiSantis v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1979) 608 F.2d 327, 332 (prohibition on the wearing of earrings by men not discriminatory).

(n132)Footnote 129. See Richardson v. Quik Trip Corp. (S.D. Iowa 1984) 591 F. Supp. 1151, 1155 (Court relied on scientific studies indicating that between 45 to 83 percent of all black males who shave may be excluded from employment because of a skin condition which makes compliance with a no-beard rule insufferable, while less than one percent of white males are so hindered); see also EEOC v. Trailways, Inc. (D. Colo. 1981) 530 F. Supp. 54, 59; but see Equal Employment Opportunity v. Greyhound Lines (3d Cir. 1980) 635 F.2d 188, 192, 193 (no-beard policy does not violate Title VII without proof that it has disproportionate impact on employer's workforce).

(n133)Footnote 130. See Fitzpatrick v. City of Atlanta (11th Cir. 1993) 2 F.3d 1112 (claim that no-beard policy discriminated against African Americans on the basis of race under Title VII and disability under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 was defeated based on business necessity of safety and plaintiffs' failure to demonstrate availability of reasonable accommodation); see also Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382 (no-beard policy discriminated against Sikh Muslims based on religious tenet that forbade cutting hair, but court ruled in favor of company which had offered reasonable accommodation).

(n134)Footnote 131. See 29 C.F.R. 1630 App. § 1630.2(h); see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902.2.

(n135)Footnote 132. See Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1064, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143

(n136)Footnote 133. See Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143

(n137)Footnote 134. See Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1066, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143. While this case was pending, the City of Santa Cruz enacted a statute barring "physical characteristics" discrimination. See Santa Cruz Ordinance 92-11 (April 28, 1992).

(n138)Footnote 135. See Cassista v. Community Foods, Inc. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1050, 1065, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 287, 856 P.2d 1143.

(n139)Footnote 136. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902 (definition of the term "disability").

(n140)Footnote 137. See Cook v. Department of Mental Health, Retardation, & Hosps. (1993) 10 F.3d 17, 24 (employer assumed obese applicant incapable of performing work, thus bringing applicant within purview of ADA because "regarded as" disabled).

(n141)Footnote 138. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6.

(n142)Footnote 139. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(c)(2).

(n143)Footnote 139.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(8)-(9).

(n144)Footnote 139.2. Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450 , overruled by statute on other grounds [see P.L. 110-325, §§ 1, 2].

(n145)Footnote 139.3. Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450 , overruled by statute on other grounds [see P.L. 110-325, §§ 1, 2].

(n146)Footnote 140. See, e.g., Personnel Administrator of Mass. v. Feeney (1979) 442 U.S. 256, 270, 99 S. Ct. 2282, 60 L. Ed. 2d 870 (U.S. Const., Amend. XIV; 98 percent of veterans in Massachusetts were male while only 1.8 percent were female); Brown v. Puget Sound Elec. App. & Train. Trust (9th Cir. 1984) 732 F.2d 726, 731 , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1108 (Title VII; 21.5 percent of all males and only 0.4 percent of all females in area covered by apprenticeship program were veterans).

(n147)Footnote 141. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-11.

(n148)Footnote 142. Brown v. Puget Sound Elec. App. & Train. Trust (9th Cir. 1984) 732 F.2d 726, 730 , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1108 .

(n149)Footnote 143. See Brown v. Puget Sound Elec. App. & Train. Trust (9th Cir. 1984) 732 F.2d 726, 730 , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1108 (Title VII) .

(n150)Footnote 144. See Brown v. Puget Sound Elec. App. & Train. Trust (9th Cir. 1984) 732 F.2d 726, 731 , cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1108 (Title VII) .

(n151)Footnote 145. Gov. Code § 12940(a)(4); see also Gov. Code § 7280.3 (state will reimburse employers for one-half of the wages paid to previously unemployed Vietnam War veterans for the first eighteen months of employment); Lab. Code § 3076.5(veterans are given ten points credit in apprenticeship selection process).

(n152)Footnote 146. See Bannerman v. Department of Youth Authority (C.D. Cal 1977) 436 F. Supp 1273, 1280 (Court relied on standards for finding discrimination (i.e. examination of legislative intent) expressed in Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 , to find no discrimination in veteran preference statute).

(n153)Footnote 147. Gregory v. Litton Systems, Inc. (9th Cir. 1972) 472 F.2d 631 .

(n154)Footnote 148. See Gregory v. Litton Systems, Inc. (9th Cir. 1972) 472 F.2d 631, 632 .

(n155)Footnote 149. See EEOC Dec. No. 74-25.

(n156)Footnote 150. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (2d ed. 1983) Ch. 5, "Nonscored Objective Criteria."

(n157)Footnote 151. See Heagney v. University of Washington (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 1157, 1163 (Title VII).

(n158)Footnote 152. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 982, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 .

(n159)Footnote 153. See Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479 , ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII).

(n160)Footnote 154. See Nanty v. Barrows Co. (9th Cir. 1981) 660 F.2d 1327, 1334 (applicants could be required to be neat, articulate, and personable).

(n161)Footnote 155. See Frausto v. Legal Aid Soc. of San Diego, Inc. (9th Cir. 1977) 563 F.2d 1324, 1328 .

(n162)Footnote 156. See Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1479 , ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII).

(n163)Footnote 157. Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1481 , ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII); Heagney v. University of Washington (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 1157, 1163 (Title VII).

(n164)Footnote 158. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (2d ed. 1983) Ch. 6, "Subjective Criteria"; see also Rogers v. International Paper Co. (8th Cir. [Ark.] 1975) 510 F.2d 1340, 1345 , vacated and remanded on other grounds 423 U.S. 809 (1975) (Title VII; decisions about hiring and promotion in supervisory and managerial jobs as not realistically made using objective standards alone).

(n165)Footnote 159. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 990-991, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 .

(n166)Footnote 160. See Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 445-446 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII).

(n167)Footnote 161. See Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S.977, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 ; see also Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477, 1482 , ret'd to panel, 827 F.2d 439 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII).

55 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART C. PREEMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.43

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.43 Advertising and Other Recruiting Methods

[1] Advertising

[a] Gender

Title VII, the ADEA, and the FEHA proscribe employment advertisements that indicate any preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on a protected classification, except when the classification is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ).ⁿ¹ According to the EEOC guidelines on sex discrimination, it is a violation of Title VII for a help-wanted advertisement to indicate a preference, limitation, specification, or discrimination based on sex unless sex is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) for the particular job involved.ⁿ² Similarly, FEHC regulations provide that it is unlawful for any publication or other media to separate listings of job openings into "male" and "female" classifications,ⁿ³ that it is unlawful to advertise or publicize an employment benefit in any way which discourages or is designed to discourage disabled applicants,ⁿ⁴ and that employers may not express a preference in any advertising medium for applicants under 40 or a limitation against age 40 or older.ⁿ⁵ Discriminatory advertising is not limited to segregated formats. Terms and phrases within individual advertisements may also violate Title VII or other equal employment opportunity laws. For example, sexually referent terms, such as stewardess, hostess, fireman, which imply that the employee will be of a particular sex, may form the basis of a discrimination claim. The 1990 EEOC Policy Guide on Sex-Referent Language in Job Advertisementsⁿ⁶ states that "the use of sex-referent language ... is suspect but not a per se violation of Title VII."ⁿ⁷ Therefore, according to this guide, there is no violation of Title VII where sex-referent language is used in conjunction with language clearly indicating that sex-based preference is not intended.ⁿ⁸ However, simply stating that the employer is an "Equal Opportunity Employer" in conjunction with sex-referent language is not sufficient to overcome this suspicion.ⁿ⁹ In Hailes v. United Air Lines,ⁿ¹⁰ the court concluded that the advertisement violated Title VII because the employer used the term "stewardesses" as well as an unlawful format.ⁿ¹¹ The Hailes court further explained that Title VII prohibits the types of advertisement that, by their expression of preference for one sex, effectively inhibit members of the opposite sex from seeking employment.ⁿ¹² The court suggested that "the very appearance at an employer's offices of one who ... read [a] discriminatory ad but nevertheless continued to seek the job, would demonstrate that the reader was not deterred by [the] unlawful practice and therefore not aggrieved."ⁿ¹³ Although the court rejected the employer's contention that a plaintiff cannot be aggrieved by an advertisement unless he or she actually applies, it did, however, refuse to rule that a mere casual reader may sue. The court declared that a person must show (1) he or she has a real, present interest in the type of employment advertised, and (2) he or she was effectively deterred from applying for the employment.ⁿ¹⁴ In Hailes, the male plaintiff established such deterrence by showing that he had previously responded to a similar "Help wanted--Female" advertisement, and had been refused because of his sex.ⁿ¹⁵ The court concluded that the plaintiff in the instant case reasonably believed that any job application would have been futile.ⁿ¹⁶

[b] Age

Advertisements expressing a preference for applicants of a certain age may violate the ADEA. The federal regulations interpreting the ADEA state that when help-wanted notices or advertisements contain terms and phrases such as "age 25 to 35," "college student," "recent college graduate," "boy," "girl," or other terms of a similar nature, the term or phrase deters the employment of older persons and is a violation of the ADEA, unless an exception applies.ⁿ¹⁷

Further, the EEOC has issued a guide for employers with respect to job advertising under the ADEA.ⁿ¹⁸ In this guide, the EEOC discusses language which was found violative by the Fourth Circuit in *Hodgson v. Approved Personnel Service, Inc.*ⁿ¹⁹ and provides examples of other phrases which may constitute age discrimination.ⁿ²⁰ For example, the phrase "applicant must be young, energetic" discriminates against older workersⁿ²¹ and the phrase "retired persons preferred" discriminates against persons over forty who are not yet of retirement age.ⁿ²² However, simply encouraging persons of a protected age to apply in an age neutral advertisement would not be a violation.ⁿ²³

[c] Liability of Advertising Media

In Brush v. San Francisco Newspaper Printing Company,ⁿ²⁴ the United States District Court for the Northern District of California concluded that since newspapers do not regularly undertake to procure employees or employment as their profession or business, they are not liable as employment agencies under Title VII for listing employment advertisements under separate "Men" and "Women" headings.ⁿ²⁵

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Shortly after the Brush litigation concluded, the newspaper industry virtually abandoned sex-segregated classified advertising, thereby eliminating this issue from the equal employment opportunity arena.
Commentary by Erica B. Grubb.

[2] Channeling

"Channeling" is the use of separate hiring channels for different job categories,ⁿ²⁶ and it may be discriminatory if it has the purpose or effect of excluding protected categories of individuals. For example, in Domingo v. New England Fish Co.,ⁿ²⁷ an Alaskan employer recruited most of its unskilled employees from a Filipino-dominated union and from Alaskan native villages. Employees for administrative and skilled positions were recruited from out-of-state by "word of mouth."ⁿ²⁸ The superintendents, foremen, and captains who did the recruiting for the (higher-paying) administrative and skilled jobs were predominantly white, and they hired predominantly white employees.ⁿ²⁹ The Ninth Circuit found that such practices could have a discriminatory impact.ⁿ³⁰ The court has also inferred intentional discrimination from the use of racial labels for certain job categories,ⁿ³¹ combined with specific acts of discrimination.ⁿ³²

[3] Nepotism

Nepotism is the practice of giving preference to relatives,ⁿ³³ and may be discriminatory if protected classification members are adversely affected. In particular, nepotistic practices that freeze the discriminatory status quo are unlawful.ⁿ³⁴ For example, in Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc., evidence showed that of 349 nepotistic hires, 332 were white and 17 were minorities.ⁿ³⁵ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the qualifications of the relatives hired under the policy did not refute a prima facie case of disparate impact because the employer must prove that the nepotistic policy itself is justified by business necessity.ⁿ³⁶ An interest in protecting and providing for family members does not meet that burden because "nepotistic concerns cannot supersede the nation's paramount goal of equal economic opportunity for all."ⁿ³⁷

[4] Referrals

[a] Fair Employment and Housing Act

The FEHA does not expressly prohibit discriminatory referrals, although it does generally prohibit unlawful discrimination by labor unions,ⁿ³⁸ and prohibits discriminatory advertising by employment agencies.ⁿ³⁹ Further, discriminatory referrals at the behest of an employer would be prohibited under the aiding and abetting language of the FEHA.ⁿ⁴⁰

Employers may, however, participate in established recruitment programs with high schools, colleges, universities, and trade schools or use temporary hiring programs directed at youth even though these programs provide disproportionately few applicants over forty as long as the employers using these programs do not rely on them, exclusively, for their source of applicants.ⁿ⁴¹

[b] Federal Prohibitions: Title VII, ADA, and ADEA

Title VII and the ADEA, however, expressly provide that it is unlawful for employment agencies and labor unions to fail or refuse to refer any individual for employment because of the individual's membership in a protected classification.ⁿ⁴² In theory, therefore, employment referral systems that effectively deprive qualified protected individuals of equal employment opportunities are unlawful unless they satisfy the business necessity test discussed in § 41.21[4]. However, if such a referral system is part of a bona fide seniority system, it is lawful under Title VII even if it has the effect of locking minorities into inferior job categories which they occupy as a result of earlier discriminatory practices.ⁿ⁴³ Because many formal referral systems are part of collectively bargained seniority systems, they will be unlawful only if implemented or maintained for the purpose of discriminating, not merely if they have an adverse impact.

The ADA also prohibits discriminatory referrals, and defines employment agencies and labor unions as "covered entities" subject to the ADA's general proscription against disability discrimination.ⁿ⁴⁴ Furthermore, an employer unlawfully discriminates if it participates in a contractual or other arrangement or relationship that has the effect of subjecting a qualified disabled applicant or employee to unlawful disability discrimination. The ADA expressly states that such a relationship includes one with an employment or referral agency, or a labor union.ⁿ⁴⁵

[5] Word of Mouth

"Word-of-mouth" recruiting occurs when incumbent employees inform their friends and relatives about job vacancies,ⁿ⁴⁶ and if it has an adverse impact on a protected group, it will be unlawful unless it satisfies the business necessity test discussed in § 41.21[4].ⁿ⁴⁷ For example, in United States v. Georgia Power Company,ⁿ⁴⁸ only 7.2 percent of a company's labor force was black, although blacks constituted a much larger percentage of the available labor force.ⁿ⁴⁹ The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals declared that since most of the company's incumbent employees were white, word-of-mouth hiring tended to isolate blacks from the "web of information" that flowed around opportunities at the company.ⁿ⁵⁰ The court found no business necessity for the employer's reliance on word-of-mouth recruiting, and required the employer to take "affirmative steps reasonably calculated to encourage black employment[,] and to break through the ... circumscribed web of information."ⁿ⁵¹ However, the Seventh Circuit found word of mouth recruitment which was "passive" and resulted in continuation of a Korean workforce was not evidence of discriminatory intent in a disparate treatment context.ⁿ⁵²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
 Discrimination
 Age Discrimination
 General Overview
 Labor & Employment Law
 Discrimination
 Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964
 General Overview
 Labor & Employment Law
 Preemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(b) (Title VII); 29 U.S.C. § 623(e) (ADEA); Gov. Code § 12940(d) (FEHA).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.5; see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.2(a)(1) (labels such as "Men's jobs" and "Women's jobs" as tending to deny employment opportunities unnecessarily to one sex or other), 1625.4(a)(violation of ADEA for help wanted notices or advertisements to contain age-related labels).

(n3)Footnote 3. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. 2 Cal Code Reg. § 7294.0(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.4(a)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 632 (policy guide on sex-referent language in employment opportunity advertising and recruitment).

(n7)Footnote 7. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 632 (policy guide on sex-referent language in employment opportunity advertising and recruitment).

(n8)Footnote 8. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 632 (policy guide on sex-referent language in employment opportunity advertising and recruitment).

(n9)Footnote 9. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 632 (policy guide on sex-referent language in employment opportunity advertising and recruitment).

(n10)Footnote 10. Hailes v. United Air Lines (5th Cir. 1972) 464 F.2d 1006 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Hailes v. United Air Lines (5th Cir. 1972) 464 F.2d 1006, 1009 . See also Banks v. Heun-Norwood (8th Cir. 1977) 566 F.2d 1073, 1074-1076 (the phrase "young man with a college degree" in an advertisement violated Title VII).

(n12)Footnote 12. Hailes v. United Air Lines (5th Cir. 1972) 464 F.2d 1006, 1008 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Hailes v. United Air Lines (5th Cir. 1972) 464 F.2d 1006, 1008 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Hailes v. United Air Lines (5th Cir. 1972) 464 F.2d 1006, 1008 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Hailes v. United Air Lines (5th Cir. 1972) 464 F.2d 1006, 1008 .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Hailes v. United Air Lines (5th Cir. 1972) 464 F.2d 1006, 1008 .

(n17)Footnote 17. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.4(a).

(n18)Footnote 18. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 801, P 6522 (job advertising and pre-employment inquiries under the Age Discrimination In Employment Act (ADEA)).

(n19)Footnote 19. See, Hodgson v. Approved Personnel Service, Inc. (4th Cir. 1975) 529 F.2d 760), 766; see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 801, P 6522 (job advertising and pre-employment inquiries under the Age Discrimination In Employment Act (ADEA)).

(n20)Footnote 20. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 801, P 6522 (job advertising and pre-employment inquiries under the Age Discrimination In Employment Act (ADEA)).

(n21)Footnote 21. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 801, P 6522 (job advertising and pre-employment inquiries under the Age Discrimination In Employment Act (ADEA)).

(n22)Footnote 22. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 801, P 6522 (job advertising and pre-employment inquiries under the Age Discrimination In Employment Act (ADEA)).

(n23)Footnote 23. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 801, P 6522 (job advertising and pre-employment inquiries under the Age Discrimination In Employment Act (ADEA)).

(n24)Footnote 24. Brush v. San Francisco Newspaper Printing Company (N.D. Cal. 1970) 315 F. Supp. 577, aff'd, 469 F.2d 89 (9th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 410 U.S. 943.

(n25)Footnote 25. See Brush v. San Francisco Newspaper Printing Company (N.D. Cal. 1970) 315 F. Supp. 577, 580-582, aff'd, 469 F.2d 89 (9th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 410 U.S. 943; see 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(c) ("employment agency" defined), 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(b) (Title VII applies to employment agencies).

(n26)Footnote 26. See Domingo v. New England Fish Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 727 F.2d 1429, 1435 (Title VII).

(n27)Footnote 27. Domingo v. New England Fish Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 727 F.2d 1429 (Title VII).

(n28)Footnote 28. See Domingo v. New England Fish Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 727 F.2d 1429, 1436 (Title VII).

(n29)Footnote 29. Domingo v. New England Fish Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 727 F.2d 1429, 1436 (Title VII); see also Antonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 446, rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII).

(n30)Footnote 30. Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 446, rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII). but see Antonio v. Wards Cove Packing Company, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 275 F.3d 797, 801-802 (trial court properly concluded separate hiring channels did not have discriminatory impact because plaintiffs had no evidence that any lack of information was caused by their hire from a primarily nonwhite union).

(n31)Footnote 31. See, e.g., Antonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 447, rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII). (Title VII; "Filipinos" as working with the "Iron Chink" before retiring to the "Flip bunkhouse"). but see Antonio v. Wards Cove Packing Company, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 275 F.3d 797, 802 (trial court properly concluded race labeling did not cause significant discriminatory impact; although references to "Filipino," "Alaska Native," and "Eskimo," were frequent, inappropriate, and offensive, class members themselves made such references, and no class member testified that he was offended, that it interfered with his work performance, or that he was ridiculed, insulted, or physically threatened or humiliated by comments or deterred from applying for an at-issue job).

(n32)Footnote 32. See Domingo v. New England Fish Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 727 F.2d 1429, 1436 (Title VII).

(n33)Footnote 33. Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 445, rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII).

(n34)Footnote 34. Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303, cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984) (Title VII); Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 445, rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII; nepotism necessarily has an adverse impact on nonwhites when those hiring are white).

(n35)Footnote 35. See Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 445 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII).

(n36)Footnote 36. See Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 445 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII).

(n37)Footnote 37. Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 445 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (Title VII); Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303 , cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984) .

(n38)Footnote 38. See Gov. Code § 12940(b); see generally ch. 40, pt. B.

(n39)Footnote 39. See Gov. Code § 12940(d); see also discussion in [1][a], above.

(n40)Footnote 40. See Gov. Code § 12940(i). (it is illegal for "any person to aid, abet, incite, compel, or coerce the doing of any of the acts forbidden under this part, or attempt to do so"). See, e.g., Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 339, 389, 390, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29 (complaints of age discrimination under FEHA by television screenwriters against talent agencies clearly alleged agencies knew employers were engaged in systemic age discrimination and gave substantial assistance or encouragement to employers by virtue of their own referral practices, screening out older writers in favor of younger ones).

(n41)Footnote 41. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.4(a)(1)

(n42)Footnote 42. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(b), (c)(2) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(b), (c)(2) (Title VII).

(n43)Footnote 43. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h) protects bona fide seniority system even if it has effect of locking minorities into inferior categories).

(n44)Footnote 44. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111(2), 12112(a); see generally ch. 40, pt. C.

(n45)Footnote 45. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(2).

(n46)Footnote 46. See Larson, Employment Discrimination, ch. 16, § 82.10.

(n47)Footnote 47. See, e.g., Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 439, 447 , rev'd on other grounds, 490 U.S. 642 (1989) (courts have long recognized that word-of-mouth recruiting is discriminatory because of its tendency to perpetuate all-white composition of work force).

(n48)Footnote 48. United States v. Georgia Power Company (5th Cir. 1973) 474 F.2d 906 (Title VII).

(n49)Footnote 49. See United States v. Georgia Power Company (5th Cir. 1973) 474 F.2d 906, 925 (Title VII).

(n50)Footnote 50. See United States v. Georgia Power Company (5th Cir. 1973) 474 F.2d 906, 925 (Title VII).

(n51)Footnote 51. See United States v. Georgia Power Company (5th Cir. 1973) 474 F.2d 906, 925-926 (Title VII; suggesting employment advertisements in newspapers and periodicals accessible to black communities, and public notice that employer is equal opportunity employer).

(n52)Footnote 52. See EEOC v. Consolidated Service (7th Cir. 1993) 989 F.2d 233, 236 (since word of mouth advertising was the most efficient method of hiring (and since it was adopted because it was the most efficient), resulting homogenous workforce the same national origin as employer was not evidence of intentional discrimination).

56 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART C. PREEMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.44

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.44 Preemployment Inquiries in Employment Applications and Interviews

[1] Generally

Preemployment inquiries that attempt to identify protected characteristics such as race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, political affiliation, disability, national origin, and age have strong potential for discrimination. No express provision in any federal equal employment opportunity law expressly prohibits such inquiries, but the FEHA prohibits any non-job-related inquiry, either verbal or through use of an application form, which expresses, directly or indirectly, any limitation, specification, or discrimination as to race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation, or any intent to make any such limitation, specification, or discrimination.ⁿ¹ Furthermore, both federal and state regulations place express limitations on such inquiries as they relate to specific protected classifications.ⁿ²

Preemployment inquiries generally arise in employment applicationsⁿ³ and preemployment interviews.ⁿ⁴ FEHC regulations provide that when employers or other entities covered by the FEHA provide, accept, and consider application forms in the normal course of business, they may not discriminate on a basis enumerated in the FEHA.ⁿ⁵ Application forms may not require photographs,ⁿ⁶ and may not be separated, coded, or otherwise treated so as to identify individuals on a basis enumerated in the FEHA, unless pursuant to a permissible defense or for record keeping or statistical purposes.ⁿ⁷ Personal interviews also must be free from discrimination,ⁿ⁸ and the entire interview process is subject to review for adverse impact on individuals protected by the FEHA.ⁿ⁹

Inquiries relating to facially neutral criteria such as education, experience, height, weight, veteran status and military discharge, and financial status, are not impermissible per se. As discussed in § 41.42[2], such criteria are limited by the "disparate impact" theory of liability and the "job-relatedness" requirement. However, because some common inquiries (such as "date of birth") elicit information directly related to protected classifications, they are very closely scrutinized by state and federal regulatory agencies. EEOC and FEHC regulations, as well as regulations promulgated by various other administrative agencies, expressly govern the use of several common preemployment inquiries, and the following sections discuss issues relating to those inquiries.

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Employers should analyze selection devices such as applications and interview procedures to eliminate unnecessary inquiries that may expose the employer to liability. Inquiries necessary for purposes other than selection may be made after an individual is hired. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[2] Issues Relating to Specific Inquiries[a] Age

EEOC regulations interpreting the ADEA state that a request for information such as "Date of Birth" or "Age" on an employment application form does not, in itself, violate the ADEA.¹⁰ However, a request that an applicant state his or her age may tend to deter older applicants or otherwise indicate discrimination based on age, and therefore the EEOC will closely scrutinize any application with such a request to assure that it serves a permissible purpose.¹¹ The regulations provide that the employer should inform the applicant that the purpose of the inquiry is not one proscribed by the ADEA.¹² Thus, the application form may contain language to the following effect: "The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 prohibits discrimination on the basis of age with respect to individuals who are at least 40 years of age."¹³ However, such assurances may be made to the applicant by other means.¹⁴

FEHC regulations provide that preemployment inquiries that would result in the direct or indirect identification of persons on the basis of age are unlawful.¹⁵ However, such inquiries are not unlawful when made for the purpose of applicable reporting requirements or to maintain applicant flow data, provided that the inquiries are made in a manner consistent with FEHC requirements for personnel record keeping.¹⁶ For a discussion relating to employer posting and recordkeeping requirements, see Part H (§§ 41.140-41.141).

■ AUTHOR'S COMMENT:

Age information appears in a variety of documentation involved in the hiring process. For instance, age must be disclosed on benefits forms and I-9 verification forms. To avoid claims of discrimination, this information should only be sought after an offer is made and should be maintained separately from the employee's personnel file. Commentary by Lori A.M. Middlehurst

[b] Citizenship

All employers must inquire regarding the legal right of applicants to work in the United States.¹⁷ This is true, whether the applicant is a U.S. citizen or a foreigner. In conjunction with this required inquiry, the employer must complete, within three days of hiring, an I-9 form, certifying that the employer has been presented with documentation verifying the identity of the applicant and employment eligibility.¹⁸ While completion of the I-9 form is mandatory, it need not be completed prior to interviewing the candidate. Employers may not discriminate against applicants based on the information contained therein, nor may they require any particular type of documentation, as long as the documents required are on the approved list provided by the INS on the reverse of the I-9 form.¹⁹ Sections 41.33 and 41.42 discuss national origin and citizenship discrimination.

■ AUTHOR'S COMMENT:

Since the employer has three days to complete the form, the employer can avoid potential discrimination claims by eliminating the inquiry regarding right to work from the application and interview process. Rather, the employer should inform all applicants that all offers of employment are contingent on presentation of proof of legal right to work, and fill out the I-9 form after the offer has been made. Commentary by Lori A.M. Middlehurst

[c] Criminal Records

California law generally prohibits public and private employers from asking employment applicants, verbally or in writing, to disclose (1) information concerning an arrest or detention which did not result in conviction, or (2) information concerning a referral to and participation in any pretrial or posttrial diversion program.ⁿ²⁰ For a general discussion relating to statutory limitations on employers with respect to collecting arrest records, see Chapter 50, Part B.

There is no express provision in the FEHA relating to consideration of criminal records, but FEHC regulations declare that except as otherwise provided by law,ⁿ²¹ it is unlawful for an employer or other entity covered by the FEHA to inquire or seek information regarding any applicant concerning the following:ⁿ²²

1. Any arrest or detention that did not result in conviction;
2. Any conviction for which the record has been judicially ordered sealed, expunged, or statutorily eradicated;ⁿ²³
3. Any misdemeanor conviction for which probation has been successfully completed or otherwise discharged and the case has been judicially dismissed;ⁿ²⁴ or
4. Any arrest for which a pretrial diversion program has been successfully completed.ⁿ²⁵

No federal statute precludes consideration of criminal records, but inquiries relating to arrests not leading to conviction may violate Title VII if such inquiries have a disparate impact on members of a protected classification.ⁿ²⁶ Moreover, although inquiries relating to convictions are permissible under Title VII, sweeping disqualifications based solely on information elicited by such inquiries may be unlawful.ⁿ²⁷

[d] Marital Status

FEHC regulations provide that it is unlawful to ask an applicant to disclose his or her marital status as a part of a preemployment inquiry unless pursuant to a permissible defense.ⁿ²⁸ Inquiries requesting maiden names are impermissible.ⁿ²⁹ However, employers may ask whether applicants have ever used another name if such an inquiry is for business reasons other than ascertainment of marital status. For example, an employer may ask for other names to enable it to check an applicant's past work record.ⁿ³⁰ It is also lawful to ask an applicant to state whether he or she has a spouse who is presently employed by the employer, but this information may not be used as a basis for an employment decision, except as discussed in § 41.42[2][j].ⁿ³¹

[e] Membership in Organizations and Participation in Activities

Inquiries regarding an applicant's membership in organizations and non-work activities can lead to claims of discrimination. While nothing in Title VII or the FEHA specifically prohibits such inquiries, membership in certain groups can disclose protected status.ⁿ³² On the other hand, the regulations adopted by the FEHC, specifically require employers to consider volunteer work.ⁿ³³

The ADA extends its prohibition on discrimination to individuals who are regarded as disabled, or associated with disabled persons.ⁿ³⁴ Accordingly, inquiry into such associations such as cancer-survivors groups or AIDS support groups, might disclose protected status. The FEHA prohibits discrimination against individuals because of their sexual orientation.^{n34.1} Accordingly, inquiry into membership in groups affiliated with gays or lesbians could disclose protected status. Labor Code section 1101 guarantees employees' rights to political freedom. Employers shall not "make, adopt, or enforce any rule, regulation or policy... controlling or directing, or tending to control or direct the political activities or affiliations of employees." While this statute does not refer to applicants, inquiry into political activity in the interview phase, could be construed as tending to control or direct the employee's political affiliation in the future.

[f] Physical or Mental Condition or Disability

The ADA proscription against disability discrimination expressly applies to preemployment medical inquiries.ⁿ³⁵ Thus, an employer may not ask a job applicant whether he or she is an individual with a disability or inquire as to the nature or severity of the applicant's disability.ⁿ³⁶ An employer may, however, inquire into the ability of an applicant to perform job-related functions.ⁿ³⁷ The interpretive guidelines to the ADA explain that an employer may inquire regarding an applicant's ability to perform both essential and marginal functions of the job, but may not refuse to hire an applicant because disability prevents the applicant from performing marginal functions.ⁿ³⁸ The employer may not inquire regarding the nature or severity of a known disability but may ask the applicant to describe or demonstrate how he or she would do the job functions with or without reasonable accommodation.ⁿ³⁹ However, if a known disability will not interfere with or prevent performance of a job related function, the employer may only require the applicant to demonstrate or describe how he or she would do the function if the employer requires all applicants to do so.ⁿ⁴⁰ Nevertheless, the Supreme Court has held that an employer may refuse to employ an otherwise qualified individual who fails to meet physical standards set by regulatory agencies, such as the Department of Transportation.^{n40.1}

The EEOC provides employers with further guidance in a recent publication entitled "Enforcement Guidance on Pre-Employment Inquiries under the ADA."ⁿ⁴¹ This publication sets forth particular questions which may or may not be asked at the pre-employment stage. The EEOC explains its prohibition on disability-related questions as a prohibition on questions which are "likely to elicit information about a disability."ⁿ⁴² Therefore, it is not violative of the ADA for an employer to ask about

1. The applicant's ability to meet attendance requirements;
2. Certifications and licenses;
3. Arrest or conviction records;
4. Current illegal drug use;
5. Prior illegal drug use (except to the extent the answer elicited would show prior drug addiction);
6. Drinking habits (except if likely to elicit information regarding alcoholism); and
7. Whether the applicant would self-identify as a person with a disability for the purposes of the employer's affirmative action program (but the questionnaire must state that its use is solely for affirmative action efforts, and assure the applicant that the response will be kept confidential and distinct from information on the application form).ⁿ⁴³

An employer may not inquire into the following:

1. The applicant's need for a reasonable accommodation to do the job (except if the disability is obvious or disclosed by the applicant);
2. The applicant's ability to perform major life activities (except where required for a particular job function);
3. The applicant's worker's compensation history; and
4. The applicant's legal drug use (except in the context of a positive drug screen, to validate or provide an explanation for the results).ⁿ⁴⁴

Likewise, Department of Justice coordinating regulations for Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Section 504)ⁿ⁴⁵ prohibit employers who receive federal funds from making preemployment inquiries as to whether an applicant is a disabled person or as to the nature or severity of a disability.ⁿ⁴⁶ An employer recipient may, however, make preemployment inquiry into an applicant's ability to perform job-related functions.ⁿ⁴⁷ Furthermore, if the employer recipient is taking (1) remedial action to overcome the effects of past discrimination;ⁿ⁴⁸ (2) voluntary action to overcome the effects of conditions that resulted in limited participation in its federally assisted program or activity;ⁿ⁴⁹ or (3) affirmative action pursuant to Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act,ⁿ⁵⁰ the recipient may invite employment applicants to indicate whether and to what extent they are disabled, provided:

1. The recipient states clearly on any written questionnaire used for that purpose, or makes clear orally if no written questionnaire is used, that the information is intended for use solely in connection with its remedial action obligations or its voluntary efforts; and
2. The recipient states clearly that the information is voluntary, that it will be kept confidential, that refusal to provide it will not subject the applicant or employee to any adverse treatment, and that it will be used only in accordance with the regulations.ⁿ⁵¹

For a discussion relating to the scope and application of federal equal employment opportunity laws and regulations governing disability discrimination, see Chapter 40, Part C and § 41.32.

According to the FEHC, it is unlawful to ask general questions on physical condition in an application form or preemployment questionnaire, or in the course of the selection process.ⁿ⁵² Examples of prohibited inquiries are:

1. "Do you have any particular disabilities?"ⁿ⁵³
2. "Have you ever been treated for any of the following diseases or conditions?"ⁿ⁵⁴
3. "Are you now receiving or have you ever received Workers Compensation?"ⁿ⁵⁵

It is lawful to inquire about an applicant's medical history if, and only if, the inquiry is directly related and pertinent to the position in question, or is directly related to a determination of whether the applicant would endanger his or her health and safety or the health or safety of others.ⁿ⁵⁶ It is also lawful under the ADA for an employer to ask a former employee with a known disability to provide a medical release before re-employment.^{n56.1} In Harris, prior to hiring an employee who earlier had requested an accommodation for, and later left employment because of, carpal tunnel syndrome, asking for a medical release was not an illegal pre-offer medical inquiry.^{n56.2}

[g] Pregnancy and Family Responsibilities

Under FEHC regulations, an employer may not ask questions regarding childbearing, pregnancy, birth control, or familial responsibilities unless they relate to specific and relevant working conditions of the job in question.ⁿ⁵⁷

Under the ADA, inquiries regarding the need to care for family members with a disability would also be prohibited.ⁿ⁵⁸

[h] Religion

According to the EEOC guidelines relating to religious discrimination,ⁿ⁵⁹ preselection inquiries that determine an applicant's availability may have an exclusionary effect on the employment opportunities of persons with certain religious practices.ⁿ⁶⁰ Therefore, the use of such inquiries will violate Title VII unless the employer can show that the inquiry (1) did not have an exclusionary effect on the employees or prospective employees needing accommodation for the same religious practices; and (2) was otherwise justified by business necessity.ⁿ⁶¹

Employers who believe they have a legitimate interest in knowing the availability of their applicants prior to selection must consider procedures that serve this interest and that would have a lesser exclusionary effect on persons whose religious practices need accommodation. For example, the employer may state the normal work hours for the job and, after making it clear to the applicant that he or she is not required to indicate the need for any absences for religious practices during the scheduled work hours, ask the applicant whether he or she is otherwise able to work those hours. Then, after a position is offered, but before the applicant is hired, the employer may inquire into the need for a religious accommodation and may determine, according to the principles of the EEOC guidelines,ⁿ⁶² whether an accommodation is possible.ⁿ⁶³

The EEOC will infer that the need for an accommodation discriminatorily influenced a decision to reject an applicant when: (1) prior to an offer of employment, the employer makes an inquiry into an applicant's availability without having a business necessity justification; and (2) after the employer has determined the applicant's need for an accommodation, the employer rejects a qualified applicant. The burden is then on the employer to demonstrate that factors other than the need for accommodation were the reason for rejecting the qualified applicant, or that a reasonable accommodation without undue hardship was not possible.ⁿ⁶⁴

For a discussion relating to the duty to accommodate religious practices under Title VII, generally, see § 41.52[2].

FEHC regulations provide that preemployment inquiries regarding an applicant's availability to work on weekends or evenings may not be used as a pretext for ascertaining his or her religious creed, nor may such inquiry be used to avoid the requirement of reasonable accommodation.ⁿ⁶⁵ However, inquiries as to the availability for work on weekends or evenings are permissible when reasonably related to the normal business requirements of the job.ⁿ⁶⁶

In Sutton v. Providence St. Joseph Medical Center,ⁿ⁶⁷ plaintiff, citing religious beliefs, would not provide his social security number on preemployment forms, and defendant refused to hire him. The court found that the employer was not liable for discrimination on the basis of religion under Title VII because accommodating plaintiff's religious beliefs would have required the employer to violate federal law.ⁿ⁶⁸

[i] Sex

The EEOC guidelines on sex discrimination provide that a preemployment inquiry may ask "Male ... , Female ... "; or "Mr. Mrs. Miss," provided that the inquiry is made in good faith for a nondiscriminatory purpose.ⁿ⁶⁹ The guidelines also state that any inquiry in connection with prospective employment that expresses, directly or indirectly, any limitation, specification, or discrimination based on sex is unlawful unless based on a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ).ⁿ⁷⁰

FEHC regulations prohibit inquiries about gender on an application form or preemployment questionnaire unless pursuant to a permissible defense or for record keeping purposes.ⁿ⁷¹ However, after an individual is hired, the employer may record the employee's sex for nondiscriminatory personnel purposes.ⁿ⁷²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment Law
Preemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Gov. Code § 12940(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(b)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in [2], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5 (According to the EEOC regulations, the term "employment applications" refers to all written inquiries about employment, or promotion including, but not limited to, resumes or other summaries of the applicant's background. It relates not only to written preemployment inquiries, but to inquiries by employees concerning terms, conditions, or privileges of employment.)

(n4)Footnote 4. See Odima v. Westin Tucson Hotel (9th Cir. 1995) 53 F.3d 1484, 1494 (Title VII; remarks made to applicant in the course of interview process, regarding his national origin and race, were properly considered by the lower court and contributed to finding of race and national origin discrimination).

(n5)Footnote 5. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(c)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(c)(2).

(n7)Footnote 7. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(c)(3).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(d).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(d).

(n10)Footnote 10. 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5.

(n11)Footnote 11. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5.

(n12)Footnote 12. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5.

(n13)Footnote 13. 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5.

(n14)Footnote 14. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.5.

(n15)Footnote 15. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.5(a) (incorporating by reference 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(b), which generally prohibits preemployment inquiries that discriminate on a basis enumerated in the FEHA).

(n16)Footnote 16. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.5(a); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.0 (record keeping).

(n17)Footnote 17. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a).

(n18)Footnote 18. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a); 8 C.F.R. § 274a.2.

(n19)Footnote 19. See 8 C.F.R. § 1324b(a)(6).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Lab. Code § 432.7(a). However, health facilities may ask (1) applicants for positions with regular access to patients to disclose an arrest for a sex offense for which registration as a sex offender may be required under Penal Code § 290, and (2) applicants for positions with access to drugs and medication to disclose an arrest for any drug-related offense under any statute specified in Health & Safety Code § 11590.

(n21)Footnote 21. See, e.g., 12 U.S.C. § 1829 (FDIC insured bank not permitted to employ person convicted of offense involving dishonesty or breach of trust); Lab. Code § 432.7(e) (Lab. Code § 432.7 does not apply to persons already employed or seeking employment as peace officers or for positions in Department of Justice or other criminal agencies).

(n22)Footnote 22. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(d)(1).

(n23)Footnote 23. See e.g., Penal Code §§ 851.7, 1203.45 (sealing of minor's misdemeanor record); Welf. & Inst. Code § 389 (sealing of minor's dependency record).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Penal Code § 1203.4.

(n25)Footnote 25. See Penal Code §§ 1000.4, 1001.5.

(n26)Footnote 26. See Gregory v. Litton Systems, Inc. (9th Cir. 1972) 472 F.2d 631, 632 ; See also § 41.42[2][b].

(n27)Footnote 27. See Green v. Missouri P. R. Co. (8th Cir. 1975) 523 F.2d 1290, 1296-1297 ; See also § 41.42[2][b].

(n28)Footnote 28. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.4(a).

(n29)Footnote 29. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.4(a).

(n30)Footnote 30. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.4(b).

(n31)Footnote 31. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.4(c).

(n32)Footnote 32. See DFEH v. Nursefinders of Oakland, Inc. (1985) FEHC 83-14, p. 30 (knowledge of applicant's race could be inferred from resume that detailed volunteer award from "Negro Business and Professional Women's Association").

(n33)Footnote 33. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.0(d).

(n34)Footnote 34. See 42 U.S.C. § 12102(1)(C) (disability definition includes being regarded as disabled) and 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(4) (may not discriminate against individuals because of association with a person with a know disability).

(n35)Footnote 34.1. Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n36)Footnote 35. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.13(a).

(n37)Footnote 36. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(2)(A); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.13(a).

(n38)Footnote 37. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(2)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(a).

(n39)Footnote 38. 29 C.F.R. App. § 1630.13(a).

(n40)Footnote 39. 29 C.F.R. App. § 1630.14(a).

(n41)Footnote 40. 29 C.F.R. App. § 1630.14(a).

(n42)Footnote 40.1. Albertson's, Inc. v. Kirkingburg (1999) 527 U.S. 555, 119 S. Ct. 2162, 144 L. Ed. 2d 518, 537 , overruled by statute on other grounds [see P.L. 110-325, §§ 1, 2].

(n43)Footnote 41. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6903 (guidance on preemployment inquiries and medical examinations).

(n44)Footnote 42. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6903 (guidance on preemployment inquiries and medical examinations).

(n45)Footnote 43. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6903 (guidance on preemployment inquiries and medical examinations).

(n46)Footnote 44. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6903 (guidance on preemployment inquiries and medical examinations).

(n47)Footnote 45. See 29 U.S.C. § 794.

(n48)Footnote 46. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.55.

(n49)Footnote 47. 28 C.F.R. § 42.513(a). 28 C.F.R. § 42.501 et seq. is promulgated by the Department of Justice to implement Section 504 with respect to employers receiving funds from the Department of Justice. See 28 C.F.R. §§ 42.501, 42.502. By contrast, 28 C.F.R. § 41.1 et seq. is promulgated by the Department of Justice to implement Section 504 with respect to any federal department or agency empowered to extend federal financial assistance. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.2. The requirements of 28 C.F.R. § 42.513 were incorporated into 28 C.F.R. § 41.55 by reference. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.55.

(n50)Footnote 48. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.505(a).

(n51)Footnote 49. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.505(b).

(n52)Footnote 50. See 29 U.S.C. § 793.

(n53)Footnote 51. See 28 C.F.R. § 42.513(b).

(n54)Footnote 52. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(2).

(n55)Footnote 53. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(2)(A).

(n56)Footnote 54. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(2)(B).

(n57)Footnote 55. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(2)(C).

(n58)Footnote 56. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(3); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.3(b)(1).

(n59)Footnote 56.1. Harris v. Harris & Hart, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 206 F.3d 838, 844-845 .

(n60)Footnote 56.2. Harris v. Harris & Hart, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 206 F.3d 838, 844-845 .

(n61)Footnote 57. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(b)(3).

(n62)Footnote 58. See 29 C.F.R. App. § 1630.8.

(n63)Footnote 59. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1605.1-1605.3.

(n64)Footnote 60. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.3(b)(2).

(n65)Footnote 61. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.3(b)(2).

(n66)Footnote 62. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2; see § 41.52[2][b].

(n67)Footnote 63. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.3(b)(2).

(n68)Footnote 64. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.3(b).

(n69)Footnote 65. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.4.

(n70)Footnote 66. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.4.

(n71)Footnote 67. Sutton v. Providence St. Joseph Medical Center (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 826 .

(n72)Footnote 68. See Sutton v. Providence St. Joseph Medical Center (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 826, 831, 844 (employer also found not to have violated plaintiff's rights under Religious Freedom Restoration Act (42 U.S.C. § 2000bb et seq.), Privacy Act (5 U.S.C. § 552a), the Paperwork Reduction Act (44 U.S.C. § 3512) and First Amendment).

(n73)Footnote 69. 29 C.F.R. § 1604.7.

(n74)Footnote 70. 29 C.F.R. § 1604.7.

(n75)Footnote 71. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(b)(2).

(n76)Footnote 72. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.9(b)(2).

57 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART C. PREEMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.45

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.45 Preemployment Testing

[1] Generally

[a] Title VII, the ADA, and the FEHA

It is not an unlawful employment practice under Title VII for an employer to give and to act on the results of any professionally developed ability test, provided that neither the test, its administration, nor action on the results, is designed, intended, or used to discriminate because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.ⁿ¹ In Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody, ⁿ² the United States Supreme Court reiterated the rule articulated in Griggs v. Duke Power Co., ⁿ³ that Title VII forbids the use of employment tests that are discriminatory in effect unless the employer shows that any given requirement has a manifest relationship to the employment in question.ⁿ⁴

Any race-based action regarding tests, including discarding promotional test results that appear to discriminate against racial minorities, is impermissible under Title VII unless the employer can demonstrate a strong basis in evidence that, had it not taken the action, it would have been liable under the disparate-impact statute.^{n4.1}

The EEOC considers employee selection procedures, including employment tests,ⁿ⁵ to be discriminatory if they have an adverse impact on protected individuals unless the procedures are validated in accordance with the EEOC employee selection guidelines,ⁿ⁶ or unless the guidelines on nonvalidated selection procedures are followed.ⁿ⁷ For a discussion of the various techniques used to determine adverse impact, including the "four-fifths rule" set forth in the guidelines,ⁿ⁸ see § 41.21[3].

The EEOC guidelines suggest that if two or more tests or selection procedures serve the user's legitimate interest in efficient and trustworthy workmanship, and have substantially equal validity for a given purpose, the user should use the test or other selection procedure that has the lesser adverse impact. Accordingly, part of any validity study should be an investigation of suitable alternative tests or other selection procedures, and suitable alternative methods of using the tests or selection procedures that have as little adverse impact as possible. If an employer has made a reasonable effort to become aware of the alternative tests or procedures, and has demonstrated validity, the employer may continue using the test or other selection procedure until such time as it should reasonably be reviewed for currency. Whenever the employer becomes aware of evidence of an alternative test or selection procedure with less adverse impact, and there is substantial evidence of its validity for the same job in similar circumstances, the employer should investigate it to determine the appropriateness of using or validating it in accordance with the guidelines.ⁿ⁹

The FEHC has adopted the EEOC guidelines,ⁿ¹⁰ and accordingly any preemployment test that does not comply with the guidelines may also be unlawful under the FEHA. Furthermore, FEHC regulations expressly provide that any test or selection procedure that has an adverse impact on employment opportunities of individuals who are protected by the FEHA is unlawful unless the policy or practice is job-related.ⁿ¹¹ A policy is "job-related" if it is "sufficiently related to an essential function of the job in question to warrant its use."ⁿ¹²

The ADA prohibits an employer from using qualification standards, employment tests, or other selection criteria that screen out or tend to screen out an individual with a disability or a class of individuals with disabilities, unless the employer shows that the test, as used by the employer, is job-related for the position in question and is consistent with business necessity.ⁿ¹³ Qualification standards include the skill, experience, education, and physical, medical, and safety requirements established by an employer as eligibility criteria for a position.ⁿ¹⁴ Accordingly, the employer must select and administer employment tests in the most effective manner to ensure that, when the test is administered to a job applicant or employee who has a disability that impairs sensory, manual, or speaking skills, the test's results accurately reflect the skills, aptitude, or whatever other factor of the applicant or employee that the test purports to measure, rather than reflecting the impaired sensory, manual, or speaking skills of the employee or applicant (except when those skills are the factors that the test purports to measure).ⁿ¹⁵

[b] Other Sources of Protection

Discriminatory preemployment tests are also unlawful under other equal employment opportunity sources. For example, the Department of Justice coordinating regulations for Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Section 504)ⁿ¹⁶ provide that employers who receive federal funds may not use tests that discriminate against disabled persons, and must ensure that employment tests are adapted for use by persons who have disabilities that impair sensory, manual, or speaking skills.ⁿ¹⁷ The Office of Federal Contract Compliance (OFCCP) has adopted Uniform Guidelines on Employee Selection Proceduresⁿ¹⁸ under Executive Order 11246, which prohibits unlawful employment discrimination by federal contractors and contractors performing under federally assisted construction contracts,ⁿ¹⁹ that are virtually identical to the EEOC guidelines discussed in [a], above, and [2][b], below.

For a discussion relating to the scope and application of these and other federal equal employment opportunity sources, see Chapter 40, Part C.

[2] Validity Studies

[a] General Principles

The Albemarle/Griggs rule discussed in [1], above, requires an employer to show that a challenged test is job-related.ⁿ²⁰ This process is generally referred to as "validation."ⁿ²¹ In Craig v. County of Los Angeles,ⁿ²² the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals explained that validation involves three distinct steps: (1) the employer must first specify the particular trait or characteristic that the test or other selection device is being used to identify; (2) the employer must then determine that that particular trait or characteristic is an important element of work behavior; and (3) the employer must demonstrate, by "professionally acceptable methods," that the test or other selection device is "predictive of or significantly correlated" with the element of work behavior identified.ⁿ²³

Although formal "validation studies" showing job-relatedness are not always required (or even possible),ⁿ²⁴ they are the most effective means of satisfying the heavy burden of demonstrating job-relatedness.ⁿ²⁵ A number of validation techniques are professionally acceptable.ⁿ²⁶ The American Psychological Association (APA) in its Standards for Educational and Psychological Tests and Manuals (1966) accepts three basic methods of validation: (1) "empirical" or "criterion" validity; (2) "construct" validity; and (3) "content" validity.ⁿ²⁷ These techniques have been adopted by the EEOC in its guidelines.ⁿ²⁸

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The literature discussing validation and testing could fill a small library, and any employer who seeks to validate a test or selection device will have to consult with an industrial psychologist or other expert in validation techniques. However, although the concepts are esoteric and complex, it is possible to describe them in fairly simple language.ⁿ²⁹

"Validity" is the extent to which a test accurately measures what it is used to measure; "validation" refers to the techniques for ascertaining that extent.ⁿ³⁰ A test is never wholly valid or invalid, and a test that is valid for one use may be invalid for another.

Tests have three basic uses. The first is to determine the test-taker's present knowledge of the specific skill contained in the test.ⁿ³¹ For example, an employer might give a math test to measure a prospective bank teller's knowledge of addition and subtraction.

The second type of test use is to predict the test-taker's future performance, or estimate his or her present knowledge of some skill that differs from the test's content.ⁿ³² For example, an employer might give a driving test to predict a prospective school bus driver's future performance and safety on the job, or to estimate his or her present ability to handle such tasks.

The third type of test use is to measure some hypothetical "construct," like mathematical aptitude or the ability to grasp the structure of language.ⁿ³³ This type of test includes so called "integrity" testing, used by some employers to measure an applicant's honesty, is this type of test.ⁿ³⁴

Three general types of test validation also exist, which correspond roughly to the three types of test uses.

"Content validation" applies to the first type of test use. The technique seeks to determine (objectively) whether the content of the test accurately measures the broader subject matter that the test is supposed to measure. In the employment context, the test itself must closely approximate the tasks to be performed on the job.ⁿ³⁵ For example, a math test is likely to have content validity for a bookkeeping job, but not for a secretarial job; a typing test is likely to have content validity for a secretarial job, but not for a bookkeeping job.

"Criterion validation" applies to the second type of test use, which typifies most employment testing. This technique correlates the test score with some other objective measure (criterion) of job performance. In the employment context, the employer must identify some measurable criterion that it considers a predictor of job performance, such as units produced per hour, and there must be a significant positive correlation between success on the test and success on that criterion of job performance.ⁿ³⁶

"Construct validation" applies to the third type of test use. This technique correlates a test score with some other identified trait, like leadership or the aptitude for languages, which is a theoretical "construct" rather than an objective criterion of job performance.ⁿ³⁷

Aside from this primer, and the basic legal principles set forth in the text, further detailed discussion of validation is beyond the scope of this treatise. Any employer who wants to rely on an employment test should ideally consult an industrial psychologist--or question the test-designer--in depth before beginning to rely upon the test. Any employer who finds itself embroiled in a validation dispute in the context of an employment discrimination case should find an industrial psychologist/expert witness immediately. Commentary by Erica B. Grubb.

Although the validity of a test or selection procedure will usually depend on positive correlation with actual job performance, validity may be measured by correlation with performance in job training. In Washington v. Davis,ⁿ³⁸ black police applicants challenged a test to measure verbal and communicative skills under the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution, Title 42 United States Code, section 1981, and a District of Columbia statute. The applicants contended that the test bore no relationship to job performance and excluded a disproportionately high number of black applicants.ⁿ³⁹ The district court found that the test related to the requirements of a police recruit training program, and that the lack of correlation with actual job performance did not invalidate the test.ⁿ⁴⁰ The United States Supreme Court stated that "training program validation may itself be sufficient to validate a [test] which impacts heavily on a protected group."ⁿ⁴¹ The Court conceded "[t]he advisability of the police recruit training course informing the recruit about his [or her] upcoming job, acquainting him [or her] with its demands, and attempting to impart a modicum of required skills ...".ⁿ⁴² The Court concluded that some minimum verbal and communicative skill was very useful, if not essential, to satisfactory progress in training.ⁿ⁴³

In Craig v. County of Los Angeles,ⁿ⁴⁴ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals expressed concern that the Washington v. Davis Court upheld a test that was validated without reference to job performance, and held that the skill, characteristic, or ability that a test purports to measure must be important to the requirements of the job.ⁿ⁴⁵ The Craig court avoided a potential conflict with Washington v. Davis by noting that the United States Supreme Court "not unjustifiably assumed that [verbal and communicative skills] were relevant to actual job performance."ⁿ⁴⁶ Thus, the court in Craig declared that an employer may show the requisite relationship by demonstrating that the test correlates significantly with important elements of training performance and that those elements of training performance are important to actual job performance.ⁿ⁴⁷

[b] EEOC Guidelines

As discussed in Chapter 40, Part C, the EEOC promulgated its guidelines on employee selection procedures to provide a framework for determining the proper use of employee selection procedures,ⁿ⁴⁸ including testing.ⁿ⁴⁹ Compliance with the EEOC guidelines is not absolutely necessary, but satisfactory validation may be more difficult when the guidelines have not been followed.ⁿ⁵⁰ In any event, the guidelines do not require a user to conduct validity studies of tests or other selection procedures when no adverse impact results.ⁿ⁵¹

The EEOC guidelines provide that test users may rely on (1) criterion-related validity studies, (2) content validity studies, or (3) construct validity studies, in accordance with technical standards set forth by the guidelines.ⁿ⁵² Validity studies in general should be based on a review of information about the job for which a test or other selection procedure is to be used. The review should generally include a job analysis. However, if a criterion-related study is used, certain criteria may be used without a full job analysis if the user can show the importance of the criteria to the particular employment context.ⁿ⁵³ Any method of job analysis may be used if it provides the information required for the specific validation strategy used.ⁿ⁵⁴

Evidence that may be sufficient to support the use of a test or other selection procedure on a pass/fail (screening) basis may be insufficient to support the use of the test or other selection procedure on a ranking basis. Thus, if a user decides to use a test or other selection procedure on a ranking basis, and that method has a greater adverse impact than pass/fail use, the user should have sufficient evidence of validity to support the use on a ranking basis.ⁿ⁵⁵

If cutoff scores are used, they should be reasonable and consistent with normal expectations of proficiency within the work force.ⁿ⁵⁶ If applicants are ranked on the basis of properly validated selection procedures, but only the highest-scoring applicants are likely to be selected, the degree of adverse impact should be considered.ⁿ⁵⁷

If job progression is relatively automatic, validation studies may consider that the applicants are being evaluated for a job or jobs at the higher level. However, when job progression is not so automatic, or the time span is such that higher level jobs or employees' potential may be expected to change significantly, validation studies should consider that applicants are being evaluated for a job at or near the entry level. A "reasonable period of time" varies for different jobs and employment situations, but will seldom be more than five years. Use of selection procedures to evaluate applicants for a higher level job would not be appropriate under the following circumstances:ⁿ⁵⁸

1. If the majority of those remaining employed do not progress to the higher level job;
2. If there is a reason to doubt that the higher level job will continue to require essentially similar skills during the progression period; or
3. If the selection procedures measure knowledge, skills, or abilities required for advancement that would be expected to develop principally from the training or experience of the job.

Employers may continue to use a test or other selection procedure that is not currently validated if: (1) the user has substantial evidence of validity available, and (2) the user has in progress, when technically feasible, a study that is designed to produce the additional evidence required by the guidelines within a reasonable time. If such a study is not technically feasible, the user should follow the provision in the guidelines relating to situations in which validity studies cannot be performed.ⁿ⁵⁹

If a test or selection procedure is validated in accordance with the EEOC guidelines for a job or group of jobs, additional studies need not be performed until such time as the validity study is subject to review.ⁿ⁶⁰

[c] Use of Nonvalidated Tests

There are circumstances in which a user cannot or need not use the EEOC validation techniques. For example, an employer may use informal or unscored procedures, or validation techniques may not be technically feasible.ⁿ⁶¹ Such nonvalidated tests or other selection procedures must, however, be as job-related as possible and should minimize or eliminate adverse impact.ⁿ⁶²

When an informal or unscored test or selection procedure has an adverse impact, the employer must either justify its continued use, or attempt to eliminate the adverse impact by modifying the test or procedure to one that is a formal, scored, or quantified measure or combination of measures that can then be validated in accordance with the EEOC guidelines.ⁿ⁶³ If a formal and scored test or procedure has an adverse impact, the employer should follow EEOC validation techniques if technically feasible. When the user cannot or need not follow the EEOC validation techniques, the user should either modify the test or procedure to eliminate adverse impact or otherwise justify continued use of the test or procedure.ⁿ⁶⁴

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Scoring an unscored selection procedure permits the procedure to be validated in most cases. In the rare case in which a procedure cannot be validated under any circumstances, the procedure can still be analyzed under the pattern or practice "disparate treatment" theory of liability discussed in §§ 41.11 and 41.21. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[d] Use of Other Validity Studies

In general, validity studies are unique to the particular test in the context of the particular job for which the test is used. However, under certain circumstances, validity studies conducted by other users or conducted by test publishers or distributors, and described in test manuals may support an employer's reliance on a test.ⁿ⁶⁵

For example, criterion-related validity studies conducted by one test user, or described in test manuals and professional literature are acceptable when the following requirements are met:ⁿ⁶⁶

1. Evidence from the available studies meeting EEOC technical standards clearly demonstrates that the test or selection procedure is valid;ⁿ⁶⁷
2. The incumbents in the user's job and the incumbents in the job or group of jobs on which the validity study was conducted perform substantially the same major work behavior, as shown by the appropriate job analysis both on the job or group of jobs on which the validity study was performed and on the job for which the test or selection procedure is to be used; and
3. The studies include a study of test fairness for each race, sex, and ethnic group that constitutes a significant factor in the borrowing user's relevant labor market for the job or jobs in question.

If the studies under consideration satisfy 1 and 2, above, but do not contain an investigation of test fairness as required by 3, above, and the "borrowing" user cannot conduct an internal study of fairness, the borrowing user may continue to rely on the test until studies conducted elsewhere (which meet the requirements of the EEOC guidelines) show test unfairness, or until it becomes technically feasible to conduct and act on an internal study of test fairness.

If a validity study covers more than one unit within an organization but satisfies the EEOC technical standards requirements,ⁿ⁶⁸ evidence of validity specific to each unit will not be required unless certain variables exist that are likely to affect validity significantly.ⁿ⁶⁹ In the latter circumstance, the user must conduct an internal validity study or comply with the procedures for the use of nonvalidated tests as discussed in [c], above. ⁿ⁷⁰

[3] Discriminatory Adjustment of Test Scores

Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991,ⁿ⁷¹ prohibits an employer or other covered entity, in connection with the selection or referral of applicants or candidates for employment or promotion, from adjusting the scores of, using different cutoff scores for, or otherwise altering the results of, employment-related tests on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.ⁿ⁷²

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Employers that use tests scored by independent testing entities are best advised to contact such entities, ask whether their test scores are adjusted in any way on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin, and request a response in writing. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Preemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h).

(n2)Footnote 2. Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431-432, 436, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 425, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280 ; see Griggs v. Duke Power Co. (1971) 401 U.S. 424, 431-432, 436, 91 S. Ct. 849, 28 L. Ed. 2d 158 . For a discussion of the "manifest relationship" standard, see § 41.21[4].

(n5)Footnote 4.1. Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2658, 2672-2681, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490 (because city could not meet this threshold standard, discarding tests violated Title VII). For discussion of the disparate impact theory, see § 41.20, above.

(n6)Footnote 5. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.2(B) (EEOC employee selection guidelines as applying to tests and other selection procedures).

(n7)Footnote 6. See [2][b], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.6A; see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1605.3(a) (EEOC guidelines relating to religious discrimination; scheduling tests or other selection procedures), 1606.6 (EEOC guidelines relating to national origin discrimination; selection procedures). For a discussion relating to nonvalidated selection procedures, see [2][c], below.

(n9)Footnote 8. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.4D.

(n10)Footnote 9. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.3B.

(n11)Footnote 10. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(a).

(n12)Footnote 11. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(a). See also Harris v. Civil Service Com. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1368 (commission has no legal duty to adopt, use, or validate tests when undisputed evidence showed dramatic disparate impact (almost one-half) far below invalidity threshold of four-fifths rule); DFEH v. City and County of San Francisco (1982) FHEC 82-11, pp. 49-53 (Commission rejected written promotional exam since it was shown to discriminate against African-Americans, because disproportionately low number of African-Americans passed exam and it was not shown to be job-related).

(n13)Footnote 12. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(e). For a discussion relating to "job-relatedness," see §§ 41.21[4] and 41.95.

(n14)Footnote 13. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(6); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.10. For detailed discussions of "job-relatedness" and "business necessity," see §§ 41.21[4] and 41.95.

(n15)Footnote 14. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(q).

(n16)Footnote 15. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(7); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.11.

(n17)Footnote 16. See 29 U.S.C. § 794.

(n18)Footnote 17. 28 C.F.R. § 41.54.

(n19)Footnote 18. See 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-3.1-60-3.18.

(n20)Footnote 19. Exec. Order No. 11246, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) .

(n21)Footnote 20. See Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 662 .

(n22)Footnote 21. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 662 (Title VII).

(n23)Footnote 22. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659 (Title VII).

(n24)Footnote 23. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659 (Title VII).

(n25)Footnote 24. See Watson v. Fort Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 998, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827; see, e.g., New York City Transit Authority v. Beazer (1979) 440 U.S. 568, 587 n.31, 99 S. Ct. 1355, 59 L. Ed. 2d 587 (Title VII) (recognized legitimate employment goals of safety and efficiency as sufficient showing); see also Harris v. Civil Service Com. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1356 (court cannot compel validation study through administrative mandate for benefit of one protected group when agency has properly exercised discretion to cancel employment test shown to have disparate impact on another protected group).

(n26)Footnote 25. See (Title VII).

(n27)Footnote 26. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 664 .

(n28)Footnote 27. Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 247 n.13, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (U.S. Const., Amend. V; 42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n29)Footnote 28. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.5, 1607.14.

(n30)Footnote 29. Nontechnical descriptions of the basic validation techniques may be found in the APA's Standards for Educational and Psychological Tests and Manuals (1966). A later (1974) version of the same standards, on which the EEOC Guidelines rely, is highly technical. In addition, the EEOC has published a series of questions and answers, which are intended to "clarify and provide a common interpretation of the Uniform Guidelines." see 44 Fed. Reg. 11996 (March 2, 1979) .

(n31)Footnote 30. Cf. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 662 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 ("validation" is process by which employer shows that test is job-related).

(n32)Footnote 31. See Larson, Employment Discrimination, Ch. 15, "Testing," § 77.10.

(n33)Footnote 32. See Larson, Employment Discrimination, Ch. 15, "Testing," § 77.10.

(n34)Footnote 33. See Larson, Employment Discrimination, Ch. 15, "Testing," § 77.10 ("construct" validation measures intangible qualities).

(n35)Footnote 34. See U.S. Congress, Office of Technology Assessment, "The Use of Integrity Tests for Pre-Employment Screening," OTA-SET-442 (Washington, DC: U.S. Government Printing Office, September 1990) (the Office undertook this analysis due to estimates that 5000 to 6000 employers were using such tests in an attempt to measure honesty of Applicants so to reduce loss from theft).

(n36)Footnote 35. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5B; see also Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 247 fn. 13, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (U.S. Const., Amend. V; 42 U.S.C. § 1981; "content validity" demonstrated by tests whose content closely approximates tasks to be performed on job by applicant).

(n37)Footnote 36. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5B; see also Albemarle Paper Co. v. Moody (1975) 422 U.S. 405, 431, 95 S. Ct. 2362, 45 L. Ed. 2d 280; Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 247 fn. 13, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (U.S. Const., Amend. V; 42 U.S.C. § 1981; "empirical" or "criterion" validity as demonstrated by identifying criteria that indicate successful job performance and then correlating test scores and criteria so identified); Guardians Ass'n of New York City v. Civil Serv. (2d Cir. 1980) 630 F.2d 79, 92 fn. 11 (Title VII; same).

(n38)Footnote 37. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5C; Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 247 fn. 13, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (U.S. Const., Amend. V; 42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n39)Footnote 38. Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 .

(n40)Footnote 39. See Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 233-235, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 .

(n41)Footnote 40. See Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 235-236, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 .

(n42)Footnote 41. Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 250-251, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 .

(n43)Footnote 42. Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 250, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 (emphasis added).

(n44)Footnote 43. Washington v. Davis (1976) 426 U.S. 229, 250, 96 S. Ct. 2040, 48 L. Ed. 2d 597 .

(n45)Footnote 44. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (Title VII) .

(n46)Footnote 45. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 663 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (Title VII) .

(n47)Footnote 46. Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 663 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (Title VII) .

(n48)Footnote 47. See Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 663 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (Title VII) .

(n49)Footnote 48. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.1B.

(n50)Footnote 49. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.16Q.

(n51)Footnote 50. See Craig v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 659, 664 , cert. denied, 450 U.S. 919 (Title VII) ; see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(a) (FEHA implementing regulation, adopting EEOC guidelines).

(n52)Footnote 51. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.1B; see discussion in [a], above.

(n53)Footnote 52. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5A; see 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14 (technical standards for validity studies); see also discussion in [a], above.

(n54)Footnote 53. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1607.14A, 1607.14B(3).

(n55)Footnote 54. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14A.

(n56)Footnote 55. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5G; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1607.3B (validity study as including investigation of suitable alternative selection procedures and suitable alternative methods of using test or procedure which have as little adverse impact as possible).

(n57)Footnote 56. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5H; see Guardians Ass'n of New York City v. Civil Serv. (2d Cir. 1980) 630 F.2d 79, 105 (Title VII; cutoff scores must be related to job performance).

(n58)Footnote 57. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5H.

(n59)Footnote 58. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5I.

(n60)Footnote 59. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5J; see 29 C.F.R. § 1607.6B (when validity studies cannot or need not be performed). If the study does not demonstrate validity, 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5J does not provide a defense, nor does it relieve the user of any obligations under federal law. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5J.

(n61)Footnote 60. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.5K; see discussion in [a], above.

(n62)Footnote 61. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.16U ("technical feasibility" defined).

(n63)Footnote 62. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.6B.

(n64)Footnote 63. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.6B(1).

(n65)Footnote 64. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.6B(2).

(n66)Footnote 65. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.7A.

(n67)Footnote 66. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.7B.

(n68)Footnote 67. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14B; see also discussion in [b], above.

(n69)Footnote 68. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.14B.

(n70)Footnote 69. 29 C.F.R. § 1607.7C.

(n71)Footnote 70. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.7D.

(n72)Footnote 71. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 106.

(n73)Footnote 72. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(l).

58 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART C. PREEMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.46

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.46 Preemployment Medical Examinations

[1] Tests for Functional Limitations

Requirements that applicants submit to a medical or physical examination as a condition of employment are most likely to affect those who are disabled or over the age of 40. Because age, disability, and disability discrimination are prohibited by federal and state equal employment opportunity laws, these requirements may be unlawful if they have a discriminatory adverse impact.ⁿ¹ The FEHA also prohibits medical or psychological examinations or inquiries except to determine whether the applicant or employee can perform job-related functions.ⁿ² For a general discussion relating to the scope and application of state and federal equal employment opportunity laws relating to age and disability discrimination, see Chapter 40, Parts B and C.

[a] Federal Law

The ADA forbids medical examinations prior to the time an offer of employment is made.ⁿ³ The EEOC's Enforcement Guidance on Pre-Employment Inquiries under the ADAⁿ⁴ defines medical tests as "a procedure or test that seeks information about an individual's physical or mental impairments or health."ⁿ⁵ To determine if a test is medical, the EEOC suggests asking the following:

1. Is it administered by a health care professional or under the direction of a health care professional?
2. Are the results interpreted by a health care professional or under the direction of a health care professional?
3. Is it designed to reveal a mental or physical impairment?
4. Is the employer trying to determine the applicant's mental or physical impairment?
5. Is it invasive (for example does it involve drawing blood, urine or breath)?

6. Does it measure an applicant's performance of a task or does it measure a physiological response to a task?

7. Is it normally given in a medical setting?

8. Is medical equipment used?ⁿ⁶

Therefore, under the ADA, employers may: give physical agility or fitness tests, provided the ability to do the test and not the physiological response to the test is being measured; require a physical clearance prior to giving a test and ask the applicant to assume liability for any injuries incurred during the test; give psychological, polygraph, or vision exams, provided these are not medical, do not elicit medical information and do not require medical information for administration.ⁿ⁷ After an employment offer is made and prior to commencement of employment, an employer may condition an employment offer on the results of a test, if the employer subjects all entering employees to the exam and if it collects and maintains the exam information separately, treats it confidentially, and uses it only in accordance with the ADA.ⁿ⁸ The employer may make an appropriate exception to confidentiality to (1) inform supervisors of any necessary restrictions or accommodations, (2) inform first aid and safety personnel if a disability might require emergency treatment, and (3) comply with government investigations of compliance with the ADA.ⁿ⁹ According to EEOC regulations, preemployment medical examinations that meet these criteria need not be job-related and consistent with business necessity.ⁿ¹⁰ However, if certain criteria are used to screen out a disabled employee as a result of an examination or inquiry, those exclusionary criteria must be job-related and consistent with business necessity, and the employee's inability to perform essential job functions must be incurable by the employer's reasonable accommodation.ⁿ¹¹

A test to determine the illegal use of drugs is not considered a medical examination under the ADA, and is therefore not subject to the foregoing rules.ⁿ¹² However, there is not similar exclusion for testing for the presence of alcohol.ⁿ¹³ For further discussion of preemployment drug testing, see [2], below, and ch. 50, pt. D.

Federal regulations promulgated by the Department of Labor, Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (OFCCP) to implement Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973ⁿ¹⁴ require federal contractors to ensure that all physical or mental job qualification requirements that tend to screen out qualified disabled individualsⁿ¹⁵ are job-related or needed for the safe performance of the job.ⁿ¹⁶ Contractors may conduct comprehensive medical examinations prior to employment provided that the results of the examination are used only in accordance with OFCCP requirements. Thus, whenever a contractor conducts such an examination, any information received must be kept confidential, except that:ⁿ¹⁷

1. Supervisors and managers may be informed regarding restrictions on the work or duties of disabled individuals and regarding accommodations;
2. First aid and safety personnel may be informed, when and to the extent Appropriate, if the condition might require emergency treatment; and
3. Government officials investigating compliance with Section 503 must be informed.

In addition, regulations promulgated by the Department of Justice, which coordinates implementation of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act,ⁿ¹⁸ provide that employers who receive federal funds may not conduct preemployment medical examinations as to whether an applicant is disabled, or as to the nature or severity of a disability, except when the employer is correcting past discrimination, taking steps to increase the participation of disabled individuals, or taking affirmative action.ⁿ¹⁹

[b] California Law

Except as expressly permitted by the FEHA, an employer or employment agency may not require a job applicant or employee to take a medical or psychological examination, or respond to a medical or psychological inquiry; nor may the employer or agency inquire whether an applicant has a mental or physical disability or medical condition, or inquire regarding the nature or severity of a physical or mental disability or medical condition.ⁿ²⁰ However, an employer or employment agency may do the following:

1. Inquire into an applicant's ability to perform job-related functions and respond to an applicant's request for reasonable accommodation;ⁿ²¹
2. Require a medical or psychological examination or make a medical or psychological inquiry of an applicant after making an employment offer but before employment duties commence, provided the examination or inquiry is job-related and consistent with business necessity and that all entering employees in the same job classification are subject to the same examination or inquiry;ⁿ²²
3. Require any examinations or inquiries it can show to be job-related and consistent with business necessity, and conduct voluntary medical examinations, including voluntary medical histories, which are part of an employee health program available to employees at the work site.ⁿ²³

In addition, FEHC regulations relating to specific prohibited bases of discrimination contain detailed provisions governing medical examinations. FEHC regulations relating to physical disability discrimination allow an employer to condition an offer of employment on the results of a preemployment medical examination in order to determine fitness for the job in question, if the following conditions are satisfied:ⁿ²⁴

1. All entering employees in similar positions are subjected to such an examination;
2. If the results of such an examination would result in disqualification, an applicant or employee may submit independent medical opinions for consideration before final determination on disqualification is made;ⁿ²⁵
3. The results are maintained on separate forms and afforded confidentiality as medical records, except that (a) supervisors and managers may be informed of restrictions on the work or duties of physically disabled individuals and necessary accommodations; and (b) first aid and safety personnel may be informed, when appropriate, that the condition may require emergency treatment.

At least one California court has construed medical examinations permissible under FEHC regulations to include preemployment drug tests, which it held an employer could reasonably determine are directly related to job fitness.ⁿ²⁶

FEHC regulations relating to age discrimination provide that it is not a violation of the regulations for an employer to require an applicant who is over 40 years old to undergo physical or medical examinations to determine whether or not the applicant meets the job-related physical or medical standards for the position sought, so long as such examinations are uniformly and equally required of all applicants for the position, regardless of their age.ⁿ²⁷ However, a requirement that an applicant over age 40 meet physical or medical examination standards that are higher than those standards applied to applicants for the same job who are below the age of 40 constitutes age discrimination under the FEHA.ⁿ²⁸

For a discussion relating to potential constitutional and privacy issues raised by medical or physical examination requirements, see Chapter 50, Part D.

[2] Drug Tests

Drug tests usually do not present discrimination issues, except to the extent that they, like all employment tests, must be applied uniformly.ⁿ²⁹ Consequently, most equal employment opportunity laws do not specifically address drug testing. The ADA expressly takes a neutral stance on the blanket testing of job applicants: it provides that it may not be construed to encourage, prohibit, or authorize drug testing or making employment decisions based on the results of drug tests.ⁿ³⁰ Although it takes a similar position with respect to Department of Transportation applicants, the ADA recognizes that employers regulated by the department may lawfully test applicants for safety-sensitive duties.ⁿ³¹

Preemployment testing has, however, raised constitutional privacy issues. In Loder v. City of Glendale,ⁿ³² the California Supreme Court considered a city-imposed, employment-related drug testing program under which all individuals who were conditionally offered new positions with the city (both newly hired persons and current city employees approved for promotion to a new position) were required to undergo urinalysis testing for a variety of illegal drugs and alcohol as part of a preplacement medical examination that the city traditionally conducted before hiring or promotion. The drug testing requirement applied to all of the city's employment positions, and was imposed without regard to whether the city had any basis for suspecting that a particular applicant for employment or promotion is currently abusing drugs or alcohol. The Loder Court concluded that, as to applicants for employment, the drug testing program did not violate California's Confidentiality of Medical Information Act,ⁿ³³ the ADA, the FEHA, or any other California statute.ⁿ³⁴ The Loder Court further held that a drug screening program, administered in reasonable fashion as part of lawful preemployment medical examination required of every job applicant, is constitutionally permissible under the Fourth Amendment of the United States Constitution. However, the Court held that the program violates the Fourth Amendment of the United States Constitution, insofar as it imposes the drug testing requirement on every current employee who applies for and is offered a promotion, without regard to the nature of the position sought.ⁿ³⁵ Finally, the Loder court concluded that the drug screening program, as applied to job applicants, did not violate Article I, Section 1 of the California Constitution, which creates a right to privacy, testing applicants who were forewarned of the testing and gave their consent, and when the testing was part of a complete physical examination with safeguards that assured control of the sample and reliability of the test results.ⁿ³⁶

For further discussion of potential constitutional and privacy issues raised by drug testing, see Chapter 50, Part D.

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Current illegal drug use is not a "disability" protected by applicable equal employment opportunity laws.ⁿ³⁷ Furthermore, Title VII provides that notwithstanding any other provision of Title VII, a rule barring the employment of an individual who currently and knowingly uses or possesses illegal drugs is considered an unlawful employment practice under Title VII only if the rule is adopted or applied with an intent to discriminate because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.ⁿ³⁸ Commentary by David M. Youngsmith and Steven J. Revell.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Healthcare Law
Business Administration & Organization
General Overview
Labor & Employment
Law
Discrimination
Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964
General Overview
Labor & Employment
Law
Preemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 U.S.C. § 631(a) (ADEA; age), 29 U.S.C. § 793 (§ 503 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973; disability), 29 U.S.C. § 794 (§ 504 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973; same); 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq. (ADA; disability); Gov. Code §§ 12940(a) (FEHA; disability, medical condition, age); see also discussion in § 41.21[3].

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12940(e), (f); see discussion in [b], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6903 (guidance on preemployment inquiries and medical examinations).

(n5)Footnote 5. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6903 (guidance on preemployment inquiries and medical examinations).

(n6)Footnote 6. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) §§ 902, 6903 (guidance on preemployment inquiries and medical examinations).

(n7)Footnote 7. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6903 (guidance on preemployment inquiries and medical examinations). But cf., Privacy concerns and other federal and state laws may also limit testing. For instance, Labor Code § 432.2 and 29 U.S.C. § 2001-2009 place restrictions on the use of polygraphs. See also chapter 50 regarding employee privacy rights.

(n8)Footnote 8. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(3); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(3)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(b)(1)(i)-(iii).

(n10)Footnote 10. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(b)(3); see 42 U.S.C. § 12113(a) (defense that allegedly discriminatory conduct is job-related and consistent with business necessity). For discussion of this defense, see § 41.95[2]. For discussion of medical examinations of current employees, see § 41.63.

(n11)Footnote 11. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(b)(3).

(n12)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(d)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(c).

(n13)Footnote 13. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6903 (guidance on preemployment inquiries and medical examinations).

(n14)Footnote 14. See 29 U.S.C. § 793.

(n15)Footnote 15. See 41 C.F.R. §§ 60-741.2(n)-(u), 60-741.3.

(n16)Footnote 16. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.21.

(n17)Footnote 17. See 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.23(d)(1).

(n18)Footnote 18. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a); Exec. Order No. 12250; see also discussion in ch. 40, pt. C.

(n19)Footnote 19. See 28 C.F.R. §§ 41.55, 42.513.

(n20)Footnote 20. Gov. Code § 12940(e)(1), (f)(1).

(n21)Footnote 21. Gov. Code § 12940(e)(2).

(n22)Footnote 22. Gov. Code § 12940(e)(3).

(n23)Footnote 23. Gov. Code § 12940(f)(2).

(n24)Footnote 24. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(d).

(n25)Footnote 25. But see DFEH v. General Dynamics, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. 90-08, p. 12 (employer has no independent duty to notify applicant that he or she has right to submit independent medical opinion prior to final decision on disqualification).

(n26)Footnote 26. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1053, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n27)Footnote 27. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.6(a).

(n28)Footnote 28. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.6(c).

(n29)Footnote 29. See Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1053 & n.13, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (construing 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(3), (d); drug testing is a permissible inquiry relating to applicant's present physical condition or medical history, as long as all applicants in similar positions are subject to same exam).

(n30)Footnote 30. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(d)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 51630.16(c)(1). The ADA does expressly allow drug testing of current employees who are former drug abusers. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(b); see also discussion in § 41.55[2].

(n31)Footnote 31. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(e); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(Cc(2) and discussion in § 41.55[2].

(n32)Footnote 32. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n33)Footnote 33. Civ. Code, § 56 et seq.

(n34)Footnote 34. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 860-864, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n35)Footnote 35. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 864-888, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 (reasonableness of testing current employees for promotion turns on nature and duties of position in question).

(n36)Footnote 36. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 887-898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 ; see Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 20, 34-39, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 (in-depth analysis of scope and proper application of state constitutional privacy clause).

(n37)Footnote 37. See 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(C)(i) (Rehabilitation Act); 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(a), 12211(a) (ADA); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.6(a)(4) (FEHC regulation implementing FEHA; "disability" does not include alcoholism or narcotics addiction); see also discussion in § 41.42[f].

(n38)Footnote 38. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(3).

59 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART C. PREEMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.47

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.47 Affirmative Action

Affirmative action refers to actions undertaken by employers to overcome the effects of past discrimination and under representation of minority groups and women. Affirmative action plans may be implemented by employers because they are ordered to do so by court order, because they are mandated by state or federal contract or because they have been implemented voluntarily. This section focuses on voluntary affirmative action plans. For a detailed discussion of affirmative action see chapter 44.

Neither Title VII nor the FEHA require employers to take affirmative action to hire individuals who are members of protected classifications.ⁿ¹

Similarly, neither the ADA nor section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 require or even consider affirmative action.

However, the EEOC encourages employers to adopt voluntary affirmative action plans to remedy past inequities,ⁿ² and the EEOC has promulgated guidelines governing such the adoption of such plans.ⁿ³ FEHC regulations also provide that voluntary affirmative action is an effective means of eliminating employment discrimination, and the regulations expressly adopt the EEOC guidelines.ⁿ⁴

An employer may consider an applicant's membership in a protected class "pursuant to an affirmative action plan that presents a moderate, flexible, case-by-case approach to effecting a gradual improvement in the representation of minorities and women." Therefore, in Johnson v. Transportation Agency, Santa Clara,ⁿ⁵ the Supreme Court determined that where an employer uses sex as a factor in making hiring decisions, there is no violation of Title VII, so long as the employer's affirmative action plan does not "unnecessarily trammel" the rights of other employees or create an absolute bar to their advancement.ⁿ⁶ Further, the Ninth Circuit recently determined that hiring decisions in an institutional setting which are consistent with a well established plan are not discriminatory, even if the decision maker did not actually rely on the affirmative action plan.ⁿ⁷ Other federal equal employment opportunity laws, such as Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973,ⁿ⁸ the Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974,ⁿ⁹ and Executive Order 11246,ⁿ¹⁰ expressly require certain employers which contract with the federal government to adopt affirmative action plans.ⁿ¹¹

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Enhanced recruiting of minorities or women through is a relatively noncontroversial means to achieve affirmative action hiring. Such efforts are often appropriate to broaden the pool of applicants beyond the traditional sources utilized by an employer who is underutilizing minorities or women. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawAffirmative ActionGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawAffirmative ActionComplianceLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationPublic ContractsAffirmative Action

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Cf. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(j) (Title VII; employer not required to grant preferential treatment to protected classification members); see also Washington v. Elec. Joint Apprenticeship & Tr. Com. (7th Cir. 1988) 845 F.2d 710, 713 , (Title VII; noncompliance with affirmative action plan is not racial discrimination).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 C.F.R. § 1608.1(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1608.1-1608.12.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.8.

(n5)Footnote 5. Johnson v. Transportation Agency, Santa Clara County (1986) 480 U.S. 616, 642, 107 S. Ct. 1442, 94 L. Ed. 2d 615 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Johnson v. Transportation Agency, Santa Clara County (1986) 480 U.S. 616, 630, 107 S. Ct. 1442, 94 L. Ed. 2d 615 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Gilligan v. Dept. of Labor (9th Cir. 1996) 81 F.3d 835, 839 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(a); see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.1.

(n9)Footnote 9. See 38 U.S.C. § 4212(a); see also 41 C.F.R. § 60-250.1.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Exec. Order No. 11246, § 202, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965).

(n11)Footnote 11. But see Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Peña (1995) 515 U.S. 200, 115 S. Ct. 2097, 2112-13, 132 L. Ed. 2d 158 (federal affirmative action programs are unconstitutional unless demonstrated to be both necessary to remedy identified past discrimination and narrowly tailored to achieve that goal). The Adarand decision may result in changes to existing affirmative action guidelines. For a full discussion of affirmative action, see ch. 44.

60 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART C. PREEMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

2-41 California Employment Law §§ 41.48 through 41.49

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 41.48[Reserved]

61 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.50

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.50 Equal Opportunity Employment Practices and Violations,
Generally

Title VII, the FEHA, the ADEA, and the ADA provide that it is unlawful to discharge an employee, or to discriminate against an employee with respect to "compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment," because of that person's membership in a protected classification.ⁿ¹ Neither federal nor state equal employment opportunity law contains a precise definition of that broadly inclusive term, but FEHC regulations interpreting the FEHA specify fringe benefits, including healthcare insurance,^{n1.1} harassment, physical appearance, grooming, dress standards, reasonable discipline, and seniority as matters involving "terms, conditions, and privileges of employment."ⁿ² Under the FEHA, courts are required to consider collectively all alleged discriminatory acts.^{n2.1}

Opportunities for work and promotion and layoff policies have been considered to be among the "terms, conditions, and privileges of employment" by one court considering the issue under Title VII.ⁿ³ As a harbinger of recognition of "hostile environment" cases,ⁿ⁴ the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals declared that "terms, conditions, and privileges of employment" is an expansive concept that also sweeps within its protective ambit the practice of creating a working environment heavily charged with unlawful discrimination.ⁿ⁵

The ADEA provides that the phrase "compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment" as used in the ADEA encompasses all employee benefits, including benefits provided pursuant to a bona fide employee benefit plan.ⁿ⁶ This part discusses both the effect of these prohibitions on incumbent employeesⁿ⁷ and the employer's duty to accommodate employees' disabilities and religious beliefs.ⁿ⁸ For a discussion of the various classifications protected from employment discrimination, see Part B (§§ 41.30-41.36). For a discussion of impermissible harassment, see Part E (§§ 41.80-41.82). For a complete discussion relating to the scope of application of the various state and federal equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment
 LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentStatutory ApplicationAmericans With Disabilities ActLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1) (ADEA; age); 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2(a)(1) (Title VII; race, color, religion, sex, national origin), 12112(a) (ADA; disability); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA; race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical and mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Knight v. Hayward Unif. Sch. Dist. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 121, 128, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 287 .

(n3)Footnote 2. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7278.6.

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Horsford v. Board of Trustees of California State Univ. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 359, 373-374 (taken together, actions taken against each plaintiff clearly were substantial and detrimental).

(n5)Footnote 3. See United Trans. U. Loc. No. 974 v. Norfolk & W. Ry. (4th Cir. 1975) 532 F.2d 336, 340 , cert. denied, 425 U.S. 934 (1976).

(n6)Footnote 4. See Part E, below.

(n7)Footnote 5. Rogers v. Equal Employment Opportunity Com'n (5th Cir. 1971) 454 F.2d 234, 238 , (Title VII).

(n8)Footnote 6. 29 U.S.C. § 630(1).

(n9)Footnote 7. See Part B, § 41.44[2], for a discussion of these prohibitions on applicants.

(n10)Footnote 8. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 793(a) (Section 503 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973), 794(Section 504 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973); 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e(j) (Title VII), 12112(b)(5) (ADA); Gov. Code § 12940(l), (m) (FEHA); see also 28 C.F.R. § 41.53 (Section 504 coordinating regulation); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.6(d) (Section 503 implementing regulation); Gov. Code § 12926(n) (definition of "reasonable accommodation" under FEHA).

62 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.51

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.51 Accommodation of Disabilities

[1] Generally

Disabled individuals, like members of any other disfavored classification, may be subject to discrimination resulting from both bias (intentional discrimination) and facially neutral employment standards.ⁿ¹ These barriers may be analyzed respectively under the "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" theories of liability discussed in §§ 41.10-41.11 and §§ 41.20-41.21, respectively.

There are, however, two additional barriers unique to disabled individuals that must also be considered in disability discrimination cases. These are: (1) surmountable impairment barriers; and (2) insurmountable impairment barriers.ⁿ² "Surmountable impairment barriers" can be fully overcome by reasonable accommodation of an individual's disability,ⁿ³ and as discussed in [2]-[5], below, an employer must reasonably accommodate a qualified disabled individual by removing such barriers if the employer can do so without undue hardship.ⁿ⁴ "Insurmountable impairment barriers" prevent a disabled individual from fulfilling the essential requirements of the job,ⁿ⁵ even with reasonable accommodation. By definition and regulation, such an individual is not "qualified" for the job,ⁿ⁶ and is not protected by equal employment opportunity laws proscribing disability discrimination.

[2] Duty to Accommodate Under Federal Law

[a] Americans With Disabilities Act

[i] Statutory and Regulatory Provisions

The ADA provides that unlawful "discrimination" includes (1) failing to make reasonable accommodations to the known physical or mental limitations of an otherwise qualified employee or applicant with a disability,ⁿ⁷ unless the employer can demonstrate that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of its business, or (2) denying employment opportunities to such a person because of the need to provide such reasonable accommodations.^{n7.1} The ADA does not preempt state or local laws that provide greater or equal protection for the rights of individuals with disabilities under the ADA.ⁿ⁸ On the other hand, an employer need not provide a reasonable accommodation or a reasonable modification to policies, practices, or procedures to an individual who meets the definition of disability under the ADA solely as being regarded as disabled.^{n8.1}

The employee has the burden of showing the existence of a reasonable accommodation that would have enabled the employee to perform the essential functions of an available job.^{n8.2} To avoid summary judgment, however, the employee need only show that an accommodation seems reasonable on its face.ⁿ⁹

The fact that an accommodation would provide a preference, i.e., that it would permit a disabled worker to violate a rule others must obey, does not, in and of itself, automatically show that the accommodation is not reasonable.^{n9.1} On the other hand, reasonable is not synonymous with effective; a demand for an effective accommodation could prove unreasonable because of its impact on fellow employees rather than on business operations, e.g., because it will lead to dismissals, relocations, or modification of employee benefits to which an employer, looking at the matter from the perspective of the business itself, may be relatively indifferent.^{n9.2} A plaintiff/employee need only show that an accommodation seems reasonable on its face, i.e., ordinarily or in the run of cases.^{n9.3}

EEOC regulations specify the following categories of "reasonable accommodation" as follows:ⁿ¹⁰

1. Modifications or adjustments to a job application process that enable a qualified applicant with a disability to be considered for the position such qualified applicant desires; or
2. Modifications or adjustments to the work environment, or to the manner or circumstances under which the position held or desired is customarily performed, that enable a qualified individual with a disability to perform the essential functions of that position; or
3. Modifications or adjustments that enable a covered entity's employee with a disability to enjoy equal benefits and privileges of employment as are enjoyed by its other similarly situated employees without disabilities.

A "reasonable accommodation" may include but is not limited to (1) making existing facilities used by employees readily accessible to and usable by individuals with disabilities; and (2) job restructuring, part-time or modified work schedules, reassignment to a vacant position, acquisition or modification of equipment or devices, appropriate adjustment or modifications of examinations, training materials, or policies, provision of qualified readers or interpreters, and other similar accommodations.ⁿ¹¹ However, reassignment may not be used to segregate employees with disabilities by forcing reassignments to undesirable positions or designated offices or facilities.^{n11.1} In considering reassignment as reasonable accommodation, an employer must consider contemporaneously available positions and those that will become available within a reasonable period.^{n11.2}

The ADA does not require an employer to exempt an employee from performing essential functions or to reallocate essential functions to other employees.^{n11.3}

Reasonable accommodation may also include the use of accumulated sick leave or unpaid medical leave if it does not pose an undue hardship on the employer.^{n11.4}

Additionally, the EEOC has specified selected types of reasonable accommodation that may be effective for individuals with psychiatric disabilities, including:ⁿ¹²

1. Permitting the use of accrued paid leave or providing additional unpaid leave (including leaves of absence, occasional leave, or part-time scheduling) for treatment or recovery related to a disability;ⁿ¹³

2. For individuals who have disability-related limitations in concentration, physical changes to the workplace, such as room dividers, partitions, or other soundproofing or visual barriers between work spaces, moving an individual away from noisy machinery, reducing other workplace noise, permitting an individual to wear headphones to block out noisy distractions, or permitting access to a tape recorder for reviewing events such as training sessions or meetings;
3. Modifying workplace policies, such as allowing a disabled individual who has difficulty concentrating to take detailed notes during client presentations, even though company policy discourages note-taking during such sessions;
4. Adjusting supervisory methods, such as by communicating assignments, instructions or training in a medium that is most effective for a particular individual, arranging for additional training or modified training materials, or modifying the level of supervision or structure; or
5. Providing a temporary job coach to assist in training a person with a disability.

An employer is not excused from these accommodation requirements because of any failure to receive technical assistance authorized by the ADA.ⁿ¹⁴

A qualified individual with a disability is not required to accept any accommodation, aid, service, opportunity, or benefit, but an individual who rejects any of these items that is necessary for the performance of the essential functions of the position, is not considered a qualified individual with a disability under the ADA.ⁿ¹⁵

For a detailed discussion of the scope and meaning of the terms "disabled" and "qualified" under the ADA, see Part B, § 41.32. For a discussion of undue hardship, see [4], below. For a general discussion relating to the scope and application of the ADA, see Chapter 40, Part C and § 41.32.

[ii] Accommodation of Known Disabilities

An employer's duty to make reasonable accommodations does not arise if the employer is unaware of the limitation of the "otherwise qualified."ⁿ¹⁶ Thus, an employer is not expected to "read [the employee's] mind and know he secretly wanted a particular accommodation."ⁿ¹⁷ On the other hand, the employer's duty to provide reasonable accommodation arises when it learns of the underlying facts, and "[t]he employee need not mention the ADA or even the term 'accommodation.'" ⁿ¹⁸

In Summers v. A. Teichert & Son, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁹ the plaintiff truck driver returned to work, after being unable to work for more than a year following a work-related accident, and informed the employer that he could perform any job other than construction work and off-road driving. The plaintiff worked sporadically until reinjuring his back; he informed the dispatcher specifically that he could not drive a water truck. Following this incident, the plaintiff was not called into work or told of available work; the plaintiff did not tell the employer that he was able to work, or go to the yard seeking work. The employer mailed the plaintiff a disability form but never heard from the plaintiff. On these facts, the Ninth Circuit granted summary judgment to the employer, holding that the plaintiff failed to raise a triable issue of fact as to whether his lack of work resulted from the employer's failure to reasonably accommodate the plaintiff's purported disability: the plaintiff did not ask to drive a different vehicle, and did not contact the employer at all; the employer did not require the plaintiff to drive a water truck to continue employment, and no evidence suggested that the employer refused to permit the plaintiff to drive any vehicle that he was physically able to drive. Further, no evidence suggested that the employer treated the plaintiff any differently than other similarly situated drivers.ⁿ²⁰

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The Summers case is an important ADA case because it effectively holds that proof of "equal treatment" can suffice as proof of reasonable accommodation. During a sixteen-month period, plaintiff, a truck driver, received no work from Teichert. The facts demonstrated, however, that drivers holding plaintiff's status under the Teamsters agreement typically received their work assignments through personal initiative--appearing at the work site and requesting driving opportunities. Plaintiff, however, made no call or visit to the job site during the time frame in question. Thus, plaintiff could identify no disparity in his treatment by comparison to the treatment of similarly-situated employees. His only empirical evidence consisted of proof that those other similarly-situated drivers worked more hours during the disputed time frame. The Ninth Circuit, however, correctly pointed out that any disparity in hours was directly related to a disparity in attempts to seek work--plaintiff had sought none. In short, the duty to reasonably accommodate is not always a duty to offer different or special work opportunities. It may, as in Summers, entail only a duty to treat an employee no differently than his or her peers. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

However, the United States Supreme Court has held that an employer need not accommodate an employee's request for a particular job, if he or she is generally qualified to perform the essential functions of a broader category of similar positions.ⁿ²¹

In Kaplan v. City of North Las Vegas, ^{n21.1} the Ninth Circuit considered, for the first time, whether a person regarded by the employer as having a disability is entitled to accommodation under the ADA and concluded that "regarded as" disabled plaintiffs are not entitled to reasonable accommodations.^{n21.2}

[iii] Determining Reasonable Accommodations

The Ninth Circuit requires employers and employees, when necessary, to engage in an interactive process to identify and implement appropriate reasonable accommodations.ⁿ²² The employer's obligation to engage in the interactive process extends beyond a first attempt at accommodation and continues when the employee asks for a different accommodation or the employer is aware that the initial accommodation is failing and further accommodation is needed.ⁿ²³ The interactive process is triggered either by a request for accommodation by the disabled employeeⁿ²⁴ or the employer's recognition of the need for an accommodation. The employee should inform the employer of the need for an adjustment due to a medical condition using "plain English," and need not mention the ADA or use the phrase "reasonable accommodation."ⁿ²⁵ In some circumstances, the employee need not even request accommodation; the employer should initiate the process without being asked if each of the following is true:ⁿ²⁶

1. The employer knows the employee has a disability.
2. experiencing problems at the workplace because of the disability.
3. The employer knows or has reason to know that the disability prevents the employee from requesting a reasonable accommodation.

Employers should follow the following four informal steps when engaging in the interactive process:^{n26.1}

1. Identify barriers to equal opportunity caused by the disability, including identifying and distinguishing between essential and nonessential job tasks and aspects of the work environment of the relevant position(s).
2. Identify possible accommodations.
3. Assess the reasonableness of each accommodation in terms of effectiveness and equal opportunity.

4. Implement the accommodation which is most appropriate for the employee and the employer and which does not impose an undue hardship on the employer's operation, or permit the employee to provide his or her own accommodation if it does not impose an undue hardship.

The expressed choice of the employee must be given primary consideration unless there is another effective accommodation that would provide a meaningful equal employment opportunity.n26.2

The interactive process requires communication and good-faith exploration of possible accommodations between employers and employees. Both sides must communicate directly and exchange essential information, and neither side can delay or obstruct the process.n26.3

1. Meet personally with the affected employee.
2. Request medical information about the condition and its functional limitations.
3. Ask the employee what accommodations he or she is seeking.
4. Record in writing the steps taken to evaluate the employee's request.
5. Offer and discuss available alternatives when the request is unduly burdensome.

■ PRACTICE TIP:

To demonstrate good faith, employers can point to cooperative behavior promoting identification of an appropriate accommodation. Employers should do the following:n26.4

1. Meet personally with the affected employee.
2. Request medical information about the condition and its functional limitations.
3. Ask the employee what accommodations he or she is seeking.
4. Record in writing the steps taken to evaluate the employee's request.
5. Offer and discuss available alternatives when the request is unduly burdensome.

Employers must analyze job functions to establish the essential and nonessential job tasks. To identify barriers to job performance, employers must consult and cooperate with disabled employees so both parties discover the precise limitations and most effective types of accommodations. Evaluation of proposed accommodations requires further dialogue and assessment of the effectiveness of each accommodation to enable the employee to successfully perform the job.n26.5

Employers who fail to engage in the interactive process in good faith are liable for the remedies imposed by the ADA, including injunctive relief to insure compliance with the good faith requirement and to require reasonable accommodation, when a reasonable accommodation would otherwise have been possible, i.e., when the jury can reasonably conclude that the employee would have been able to perform the job with accommodations.n26.6 An employer cannot prevail at summary judgment if there is a genuine dispute as to whether the employer engaged in good faith in the process, even if the employer shows that no reasonable accommodation would have been available.n26.7

An employer may decide not to participate in the interactive process because the employer believes that no reasonable accommodation is possible. The employer then bears the burden of persuasion as to whether this should be excused by proving the negative, i.e., that no reasonable accommodation was available, throughout any ensuing litigation.^{n26.8}

The determination of whether a proposed accommodation is reasonable, including whether it imposes an undue hardship on the employer, requires a fact-specific, individualized inquiry.ⁿ²⁷ A policy requiring that an employee be "100 percent healed" (or "fully healed") before returning to work is a per se violation of the ADA because it permits employers to substitute a determination of whether an employee is 100 percent healed for the required individual assessment of an employee's ability to perform the essential functions of a job, with or without accommodation.ⁿ²⁸ In the summary judgment context, courts should weigh the risks and alternatives, including potential hardships to the employer, to determine whether a genuine issue of material fact exists as to the reasonableness of the accommodation.ⁿ²⁹

The EEOC's Interpretive Guidance to Title I of the ADA delineates a four step procedure for the employer to determine a reasonable accommodation once a qualified individual with a disability has requested a reasonable accommodation:

1. Analyze the particular job involved and determine its purpose and essential functions;
2. Consult with the individual to ascertain the precise job-related limitations imposed by the disability and how those limitations could be overcome with a reasonable accommodation;
3. In consultation with the individual, identify potential accommodations and assess the effectiveness of each;
4. Consider the preference of the individual and select and implement the accommodation most appropriate for both the employee and the employer.ⁿ³⁰

Thus, the accommodation must relate to essential, not marginal, job functions.ⁿ³¹ However, reasonable accommodation does not require that an employer eliminate or reassign essential job functions.ⁿ³²

Absent contrary medical evidence, a court will give great weight to the opinions of employee's treating physician.ⁿ³³ If the employer has already changed the employee's position to one of light duty, the accommodation must relate to the employee's current position and not the position he or she held prior to the light duty assignment.ⁿ³⁴

[iv] Illustrative Particular Accommodations

Courts generally regard employees' requests to use earned leave time as reasonable accommodations.ⁿ³⁵ However, reasonable accommodation does not require the employer to grant indefinite leave.ⁿ³⁶ The reasonableness of employee requests to work at home is usually a question of the impact on essential job functions.ⁿ³⁷

Unpaid medical leave, including an extended medical leave or an extension of an existing leave period, may also be a reasonable accommodation if it does not pose an undue hardship on the employer.ⁿ³⁸ The ADA does not require the employee to show that a leave of absence is certain or even likely to be successful to prove it is a reasonable accommodation.^{n38.1} However, the requirement to grant a leave when there are plausible reasons to believe it would accommodate an employee's disability cannot be repeatedly invoked, permitting an unqualified employee to avoid termination by requesting a leave of absence each time the employee is about to be fired. The fact that a prior leave was granted and was unsuccessful may be a relevant consideration in determining whether additional leave would be a reasonable accommodation.^{n38.2}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Beware of terminating employees who are on disability leave. Be especially concerned when the employer has a defined period of disability leave and the employee has not yet reached the maximum permitted absence. In Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc.,^{n38.3} Wal-Mart had a one-year disability leave policy but terminated the plaintiff in the eighth month of her absence. Although the opinion deals with issues of judicial estoppel (declining to find a bar in the earlier submission of an SDI application) and direct threat to others (finding no substantial evidence to support the employer's affirmative defense), the most important comments pertain to the issue of reasonable accommodation. The circuit panel concluded that a leave of absence can be a form of reasonable accommodation. Thus, the plaintiff was entitled to proceed to trial to prove that her leave was the reasonable accommodation that Wal-Mart was required to provide for her disability and that the company had no reasonable basis for refusing to continue that accommodation. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

For example, in Hanson v. Lucky Stores,ⁿ³⁹ the trial court granted summary judgment in the plaintiff's FEHA wrongful termination case because the plaintiff failed to show that the employer's reasons for discharge were untrue or pretextual. The plaintiff was injured on the job and, although the collective bargaining agreement provided for nine months, was granted a total of sixteen months of leave to recover. The plaintiff remained medically unable to perform his former job on a full time basis. The employer offered an alternative, part-time position (with a commensurate decrease in pay and benefits), which the employee rejected. The employee requested several accommodations, including a hand brace, shift change, ergonomic knives, and changing the employee's hand dominance. The appellate court affirmed, holding that a finite leave can be a reasonable accommodation under the FEHA, provided that it is likely that the employee will be able to perform his or her duties after the leave. The employer also offered another reasonable accommodation, a part-time job in the only other position for which the employee was qualified. The court concluded that the employer's accommodations were reasonable and effective, and that the employee's requested accommodations were not reasonable and their effectiveness not supported by the evidence. The employer satisfied its obligation to accommodate and was not required to select either the best accommodation or the one suggested by the employee.ⁿ⁴⁰

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The Hanson ⁿ⁴¹ case squares federal and state disability law in several significant respects. First, how much leave must an employer grant an employee under FEHA in order to improve his or her medical condition? Hanson provides a partial answer. "As long as a reasonable accommodation available to the employer could have plausibly enabled a handicapped employee to adequately perform his job, an employer is liable for failing to attempt that accommodation"ⁿ⁴² However, "[r]easonable accommodation does not require the employer to wait indefinitely for an employee's medical condition to be corrected."ⁿ⁴³ Thus, Hanson holds that "a finite leave can be a reasonable accommodation under FEHA, provided it is likely that at the end of the leave, the employee would be able to perform his or her duties." If that likelihood does not exist, the leave is not required.

Second, how much of an effort must an employer undertake to find and make known to an employee the existence of other job opportunities? Hanson answers by indicating that "an employer who knows of the disability of an employee has an affirmative duty to make known to the employee other suitable job opportunities with the employer and to determine whether the employee is interested in, and qualified for, those positions, if the employer can do so without undue hardship."ⁿ⁴⁴ However, "[t]he employer is not obligated to choose the best accommodation or the accommodation the employee seeks."ⁿ⁴⁵ Rather, "the employer providing the accommodation has the ultimate discretion to choose between effective accommodations, and may choose the less expensive accommodation or the accommodation that is easier for it to provide."ⁿ⁴⁶ Furthermore, "[t]he ADA and its regulations do not... create an independent liability for the employer for failing to engage in ritualized discussions with the employee to find a reasonable accommodation."ⁿ⁴⁷ In the words of the Hanson panel, "[w]e see no reason why this employer should be subjected to liability for failing to engage in the interactive process where the employee was reasonably accommodated." Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Working at home can be a reasonable accommodation when the essential functions of the position can be performed at home, and a work-at-home arrangement would not cause undue hardship for the employer.^{n47.1} A work-at-home accommodation may not be denied due to a disciplinary record based on tardiness and absenteeism that may have been due to the disability sought to be accommodated.ⁿ⁴⁸

The ADA does not require employers to violate the seniority rights of other employees under a collective bargaining agreement (CBA) to accommodate a disabled employee.^{n48.1}

Indeed, an employee's proposed accommodation is per se unreasonable if it so conflicts with a bona fide seniority system established under a CBA.ⁿ⁴⁹ A "bona fide seniority system" is one that is created for legitimate purposes rather than for discrimination.ⁿ⁵⁰ Where the conflict is not direct or pertains to the seniority rights of the plaintiff alone, the per se rule does not apply.ⁿ⁵¹

The court must determine whether the requested accommodation actually conflicts with the provisions of an existing collective bargaining agreement. For example, in Morton v. United Parcel Service, Inc.,ⁿ⁵² a severely hearing impaired United Parcel Service (UPS) employee applied for a position as a "package car driver." Most drivers had fixed routes, which were assigned pursuant to a seniority-based bidding process under the terms of UPS's collective bargaining agreement with the Teamsters Union. Further, federal Department of Transportation certification was required for drivers of vehicles weighing over 10,000 pounds. However, UPS had a policy of hiring only drivers certified by the federal Department of Transportation, even for its vehicles for which DOT certification was not required. The employee's hearing impairment precluded her from securing a DOT certification. She then requested that UPS hire her only to drive swing routes, rather than fixed routes, in vehicles for which a DOT certification was not required. The Ninth Circuit held that the district court erred in finding that her request implicated the seniority provisions of the collective bargaining agreement. The collective bargaining agreement required UPS to make any new full-time route available via the seniority-based bidding process, but did not limit UPS's authority with respect to assigning vehicles. Because swing drivers had no entitlement to choose among swing driving assignments according to seniority, an accommodation by structuring swing-driving assignments to ensure she could drive a non-DOT vehicle would not violate the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁵³

When there is a potential conflict between the interests of a disabled worker who seeks assignment to a particular position as a reasonable accommodation, and the interests of other workers with superior rights to bid for the job under an employer's seniority system, i.e., a system unilaterally imposed by management, the seniority system will prevail in most cases.ⁿ⁵⁴ The ADA does not require proof on a case-by-case basis that a seniority system should prevail, because it would not be reasonable in the run of cases that the assignment to a disabled worker trump the rules of a seniority system.ⁿ⁵⁵ Ordinarily, if the employer presents evidence that a requested accommodation conflicts with the rules of a seniority system, it thereby shows that the accommodation is not reasonable. Such a showing will entitle an employer to summary judgment, unless the plaintiff presents evidence of special circumstances that make a seniority rule exception "reasonable" in the particular case.ⁿ⁵⁶ The plaintiff bears the burden of showing special circumstances that make an exception from the seniority system reasonable in the particular case. The plaintiff must explain why an exception to the employer's seniority policy in the particular case can constitute a reasonable accommodation, even though in the ordinary run of cases it would not. The plaintiff might show, for example, that the employer, having retained the right to change the seniority system unilaterally, exercises that right fairly frequently, reducing employee expectations that the system will be followed, so that one more departure to accommodate an individual with a disability will not be likely to make a difference. Or the plaintiff might show that the system already contains exceptions, so that, in the circumstances, one further exception is unlikely to matter.ⁿ⁵⁷ Such a showing by the plaintiff will defeat the employer's demand for summary judgment.ⁿ⁵⁸

[v] Judicial Estoppel in Federal Courts

The doctrine of judicial estoppel prohibits litigants from taking incompatible positions in separate actions involving the same opponent.ⁿ⁵⁹ When an ADA suit is filed in federal court, federal law, including the application of the doctrine of judicial estoppel, applies. Under federal law, no per se rule based on the doctrine of judicial estoppel bars ADA claims after a claimant has applied for and received disability benefits.ⁿ⁶⁰

In Cleveland v. Policy Management Systems, Inc. ⁿ⁶¹ plaintiff suffered a stroke that damaged her concentration, memory, and language skills. She applied for SSDI, stating that she was "disabled" and "unable to work." When her condition improved, she returned to work. The Social Security Administration learned of her return to work after three months and denied her SSDI application. Three days later, she was fired. She then asked the SSA to reconsider her application for benefits. She stated that she continued to be disabled, that she had returned to work for three months, but could no longer do her job because of her condition. Her request for reconsideration was denied, but one year later the SSA awarded her SSDI benefits retroactive to the day of her stroke.

The week before her SSDI award, Cleveland brought a lawsuit against her employer under the ADA, claiming that it had terminated her employment without reasonably accommodating her disability. The district court granted the employer's motion for summary judgment without evaluating plaintiff's reasonable accommodation claim on the merits. The court found that Cleveland was estopped from proving that she could perform her job because she had applied for and received SSDI benefits. The Fifth Circuit affirmed.

Finding no inherent conflict in plaintiff's application for disability benefits and the ADA action, the Supreme Court vacated the judgment and remanded for further proceedings consistent with its opinion. The Court opined that despite the appearance of conflict between applying for disability benefits at the same time as the employee brings an ADA action, the two can coexist without conflict. The Court pointed out that the definitions of a "qualified individual" under the ADA and an individual qualified to receive disability benefits are sufficiently distinct.ⁿ⁶² A "qualified individual" under the ADA includes a disabled person who can perform the essential functions of his or her job with reasonable accommodation, whereas a determination of whether a person is qualified to receive SSDI benefits does not take into account reasonable accommodation. Thus, a person who can show that he or she could perform his or her job with reasonable accommodation for purposes of the ADA could also show, for purposes of a SSDI application, that he or she could not perform the job without such accommodation.ⁿ⁶³

However, the Court conceded that at times an earlier SSDI claim could genuinely conflict with an ADA claim. For that reason, the Court insisted that an ADA plaintiff must explain the apparent contradiction between the two claims.ⁿ⁶⁴

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Cleveland addresses a major issue under the ADA--and, by extension, under the FEHA.ⁿ⁶⁵ The issue is whether a plaintiff who claims total disability under the SSDI system is judicially estopped from pursuing an ADA claim. The Court holds that, under such circumstances, an employer is not entitled to a complete bar to the ADA claim nor to an evidentiary presumption that the plaintiff must overcome to proceed. Nonetheless, the Court concluded that the plaintiff must be able to explain any factual contradictions that arise in the comparison of his or her SSDI application documents and his or her ADA complaint in order to survive summary judgment. According to the Court, "an ADA plaintiff cannot simply ignore the apparent contradiction that arises out of an earlier SSDI total disability claim. He or she must proffer a sufficient explanation." He or she must explain the contradiction or attempt to resolve the disparity.

The practical implications of Cleveland are twofold. First, the doctrine of judicial estoppel provides no automatic legal bar to an ADA claim following an application for total disability benefits. Second, the doctrine of judicial estoppel will bar an ADA claim following an application for total disability benefits if the plaintiff cannot meet his or her burden of proof to explain the inconsistencies in his or her claims for relief in two separate forums. In short, the Supreme Court took the middle course by not granting either employees or employers an automatic win. California courts, which have developed their own independent common law for the judicial estoppel doctrine, are likely to follow suit. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

In Johnson v. State of Oregon,ⁿ⁶⁶ an earlier Ninth Circuit case, the employer terminated the plaintiff after concluding that the requested accommodations to facilitate working with carpal tunnel syndrome were unreasonable. The plaintiff's subsequent application for social security benefits was denied for lack of disability, but the plaintiff was eligible for and received long-term disability payments. The plaintiff then filed an ADA claim against the former employer in federal court seeking, among other things, reinstatement with accommodation for her disability. The Ninth Circuit joined the majority of other circuits in rejecting the per se application of the judicial estoppel doctrine in cases in which the ADA claim follows a claim for disability benefits: neither the application for nor the receipt of disability benefits automatically bars a claimant from establishing that he or she is a qualified person with a disability under the ADA. First, due to differing definitions of disability used by various agencies for different purposes, an individual might qualify for disability benefits and meet the ADA definition of a qualified person with a disability because that person can work with reasonable accommodation. For example, the ADA requires a highly fact-specific analysis of whether a particular disabled person can perform a certain job with or without accommodation. In contrast, the Social Security Act determines whether an individual is disabled and unable to work through a generalized assessment but does not consider an individual's ability to work with accommodation. Second, a per se rule would contravene the purposes of the ADA by forcing plaintiffs to choose between enforcing their rights under the ADA and seeking immediate subsistence benefits, both of which should be independent rights.ⁿ⁶⁷ Finally, the court noted that because judicial estoppel is an equitable doctrine, invoked at the court's discretion and driven by the specific facts of the case, a per se rule barring claimants from pursuing ADA claims after seeking or obtaining disability benefits would run counter to the doctrine itself.ⁿ⁶⁸

Nonetheless, a plaintiff's prior representations on benefits applications are relevant to and constitute useful evidence in evaluating ADA claims. In clear-cut cases, representations on applications may warrant judicial estoppel of ADA claims, such as when a party's position is "tantamount to a knowing misrepresentation to or even fraud on the court." However, if incompatible positions are not based on chicanery, but rather on inadvertence or mistake, judicial estoppel does not apply.ⁿ⁶⁹ For example, an individual's statement that he or she is "unable to work" when requesting disability benefits may be more readily construed as an assertion that the disabled employee is eligible for disability benefits than as an "unconditional representation" that the individual is completely disabled for all work-related purposes. As such, the prior statement on the disability application does not automatically bar an ADA suit under the doctrine of judicial estoppel.ⁿ⁷⁰

In Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Health Services,ⁿ⁷¹ the employer concluded that the employee could not perform her job and placed her on unpaid leave. The employee sought and received state disability insurance benefits until the state concluded that her disability had abated. Ultimately, she filed suit under the ADA claiming that she was able to perform her job. Rejecting the district court's conclusion that the employee was judicially estopped from asserting the ADA claim because of representations made while applying for state disability, the Ninth Circuit concluded that (1) the employee had not denied any previous representations, (2) the court was not misled, and (3) therefore the Johnson requisites for judicial estoppel were not met.ⁿ⁷² The employee was also subject to different definitions of disability for the purposes of state disability benefits and the ADA. However, because the employee did not meet her burden of showing a reasonable accommodation that would permit her to perform her job, the district court did not err in disregarding the fact that the state's definition of disability, unlike the ADA's, takes no account of accommodation.ⁿ⁷³ The Ninth Circuit concluded that, although the doctrine of judicial estoppel imposed no bar to the plaintiff's ADA claim, she was not entitled to receive disability benefits and simultaneously recover back pay for the period of claimed ADA disability.ⁿ⁷⁴

[vi] Judicial Estoppel in State Courts

The doctrine of judicial estoppel (sometimes referred to as the doctrine of preclusion of inconsistent opinions) prevents a party from asserting a position in a legal proceeding that is contrary to a position previously taken in the same or an earlier proceeding. The doctrine serves a clear purpose in protecting the integrity of the judicial process; judicial estoppel is especially appropriate when a party takes inconsistent positions in separate proceedings.ⁿ⁷⁵ The doctrine of judicial estoppel has had particular significance in cases involving the Americans with Disabilities Actⁿ⁷⁶ because, absent its application, some claimants would successfully recover workers' compensation benefits based on total disability and then bring separate civil lawsuits against their employers for discrimination for failure to make reasonable accommodation.ⁿ⁷⁷

Although recognized in California, courts had not previously established a clear set of principles for applying the doctrine.ⁿ⁷⁸ In Jackson v. County of Los Angeles, the court enunciated principles for the proper application of the doctrine: (1) the same party has taken two positions; (2) the positions were taken in judicial or quasi-judicial administrative proceedings; (3) the party was successful in asserting the first position (that is, the tribunal adopted the position or accepted it as true); (4) the two positions are totally inconsistent; and (5) the first position was not taken as a result of ignorance, fraud, or mistake.ⁿ⁷⁹

The distinction between judicial estoppel and collateral estoppel is clear. Judicial estoppel prevents a party from taking inconsistent positions whether or not they have been the subject of a final judgment. Judicial estoppel deprives a party only of the right to assert a particular position and is designed to maintain the purity and integrity of the judicial process. In contrast, collateral estoppel concerns the conservation of judicial resources and bars a party from relitigating an issue of ultimate fact that a court has already adjudicated; it deals with the finality of judgment on factual matters that were fully considered and decided.ⁿ⁸⁰

Judicial estoppel is also distinct from the doctrine of equitable estoppel. A party may invoke equitable estoppel to prevent the opposition from changing positions if (1) the party was an adverse party in the prior proceeding; (2) the party detrimentally relied on the opponent's prior inconsistent position; (3) the party would be prejudiced if a court permitted the opponent to change positions. Thus, equitable estoppel requires privity, reliance, and prejudice because the doctrine focuses on the relationship between the parties in a specific case. Conversely, judicial estoppel focuses on the relationship between the litigant and the judicial system and is designed to protect the integrity of the judicial system; none of the elements of equitable estoppel is or should be required under the judicial estoppel doctrine.ⁿ⁸¹

California judicial estoppel applies in California courts. Because of the interest in judicial integrity that underlies the doctrine of judicial estoppel, it is the interests of the second court that are uniquely implicated and threatened by the incompatible position. Thus, when the issue arises in California courts, California principles of judicial estoppel apply, even when the claim is under federal law.ⁿ⁸²

In Jackson v. County of Los Angeles, the court had to determine whether a plaintiff, a former policeman, could proceed with an ADA claim after receiving total disability based on the work restriction of a stress-free work environment. Looking to federal precedent for guidance, the court concluded that the stipulations in the workers' compensation proceeding precluded a viable ADA action.ⁿ⁸³ The Jackson court acknowledged that the term "disability," as used in determining income eligibility under workers' compensation programs, is not necessarily used in the same manner in the ADA; despite this distinction, findings in administrative proceedings may judicially estop an employee from pursuing an ADA claim.ⁿ⁸⁴ Thus, finding the requirements of judicial estoppel met, the court concluded that as a matter of law, the plaintiff could not establish that he was a qualified individual with a disability. The two positions were totally inconsistent in that the plaintiff could not have a stress-free work environment and perform the essential functions of a police officer.ⁿ⁸⁵ The court distinguished Prilliman, an FEHA case, because the two positions taken in Jackson were totally inconsistent, whereas the positions in Prilliman were not clearly inconsistent.ⁿ⁸⁶

In Drain v. Betz Labs., Inc.,ⁿ⁸⁷ the plaintiff applied for long-term disability benefits stating that he was unable to perform all of his duties and submitted a physician's report stating that he was disabled from "any occupation." The employer then terminated the plaintiff pursuant to company policy, because the plaintiff could not return to work after a six-month disability leave. The plaintiff thereafter filed a claim for racial harassment and wrongful termination. The Court of Appeals analyzed the claim, although plead as racial discrimination, as analogous to an ADA claim because the employee sought relief for the employer's failure to accommodate his disability as the employer had done with white employees. In this instance, the court gave great weight to the employee's prior assertion of total disability and barred the suit for racial harassment and wrongful termination under the judicial estoppel doctrine.ⁿ⁸⁸ The Drain court distinguished Prilliman ⁿ⁸⁹ and Bell, ⁿ⁹⁰ FEHA cases, because unlike those cases, the Drain plaintiff sought and obtained recovery based on a total inability to perform any of his job functions or any other occupation.ⁿ⁹¹

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Because the critical factor in determining whether the doctrine of judicial estoppel applies to a particular case relates directly to the nature of statements made in other proceedings, plaintiff's counsel should always carefully examine the contents of any written assertions made by a potential client (or his or her physician) in benefit applications.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Practitioners should note that the law regarding the judicial estoppel doctrine is not developing entirely symmetrically under state and federal law. Care should be exercised when citing to federal precedent in a state court action and vice versa. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[b] Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act

Section 503 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Section 503) requires federal contractors to "take affirmative action to employ and advance ... qualified individuals with disabilities ...".ⁿ⁹² According to Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (OFCCP) implementing regulations construing the Section 503 affirmative action obligation, federal contractors are required, among other things, to reasonably accommodate an employee's physical and mental limitations, unless the contractor can demonstrate that such an accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the contractor's business. In determining the extent of a contractor's accommodation obligations, the following factors, among others, may be considered: (1) business necessity; and (2) financial cost and expenses. For a discussion relating to the scope and application of Section 503, see Chapter 40, Part C and § 41.32[2][b].

[c] Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act

[i] Generally

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Section 504), which prohibits discrimination against any "otherwise qualified individual with disabilities" by employers who receive federal funds,ⁿ⁹³ does not contain an express affirmative action requirement. According to the United States Supreme Court, Section 504 only requires "the absence of discrimination."ⁿ⁹⁴ Nevertheless, if an individual cannot perform the job in question because of his or her disability, the individual's employer must reasonably accommodate the individual's limitations to enable him or her to perform the job, as long as the accommodation does not impose an undue hardship on the employer.ⁿ⁹⁵ For a discussion relating to the scope and application of Section 504, see Chapter 40, Part C and § 41.32[2][b].

Many of the regulations promulgated by individual agencies to implement Section 504 define "reasonable accommodation."ⁿ⁹⁶ Thus, the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) implementing regulations provide that "reasonable accommodation" may include (1) making facilities readily accessible to and usable by disabled persons; and (2) job restructuring, part-time or modified work schedules, acquisition or modification of equipment or devices, the provision of readers or interpreters, and other similar actions.ⁿ⁹⁷ Appendix A to the HHS regulations explains that job restructuring may entail shifting nonessential duties to other employees. In other cases, reasonable accommodation may include physical modifications or relocation of particular offices or jobs so that they are in facilities that are accessible to and usable by disabled persons.ⁿ⁹⁸

[ii] Affirmative Action Not Required

Although Section 504 coordinating and implementing regulations mandate an "affirmative duty" to attempt reasonable accommodation,ⁿ⁹⁹ courts have held that recipients are not required to undertake "affirmative action" to accommodate disabled individuals. In Southeastern Community College v. Davis,ⁿ¹⁰⁰ the United States Supreme Court held that neither the language, purpose, nor history of Section 504 reveals an intent to impose an affirmative action obligation.ⁿ¹⁰¹ The Davis respondent was a disabled student who was denied entry into the nursing program at a state community college that received federal funds from the former Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW).ⁿ¹⁰² Relying on an HEW Section 504 implementing regulation that required recipients to modify academic requirements to accommodate disabled students,ⁿ¹⁰³ the respondent argued that Section 504 compelled the college to undertake affirmative action to accommodate her.ⁿ¹⁰⁴ However, the Court declared that "[t]he language and structure of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 reflect a recognition by Congress of the distinction between the evenhanded treatment of qualified handicapped persons and affirmative efforts to overcome the disabilities caused by handicaps." Thus, it observed that Sections 501 (employment by federal government)ⁿ¹⁰⁵ and 503 expressly require affirmative action, but Section 504 does not.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ The Court added that a comparison of Sections 501, 503, and 504 demonstrated that "Congress understood accommodation of the needs of handicapped individuals may require affirmative action and knew how to provide for it in those instances where it wished to do so."ⁿ¹⁰⁷

[iii] Reasonable Accommodation Is Minimum Requirement

At first glance, the Davis holding might be construed as precluding a Section 504 reasonable accommodation requirement. However, according to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in Students of Cal. School for the Blind v. Honig,ⁿ¹⁰⁸ Davis did not so hold.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ The Supreme Court's concern in Davis was that curricular changes necessary to accommodate the respondent would have involved a "fundamental alteration in the nature of [the nursing program that was] far more than the 'modification' the [HEW] regulation requir[ed]."ⁿ¹¹⁰ The Supreme Court explained that "[i]f [the HEW] regulations were to require substantial adjustments in existing programs beyond those necessary to eliminate discrimination against otherwise qualified individuals ... they would constitute an unauthorized extension of the obligations imposed" by Section 504.ⁿ¹¹¹ The Honig court interpreted the foregoing language as requiring, at a minimum, reasonable accommodation.ⁿ¹¹²

The Ninth Circuit's decision in Honig appears to be supported by the later Supreme Court decision in Alexander v. Choate,ⁿ¹¹³ a nonemployment Section 504 case, in which the United States Supreme Court explained that under Davis a recipient of federal funds need not be required to make "fundamental" or "substantial" modifications to accommodate the disabled, but may be required to make "reasonable" ones.ⁿ¹¹⁴ The Court added in a footnote that it is clear from the context of Davis that the "affirmative action" proscribed in that case referred to those changes, adjustments, or modifications to existing programs that would be substantial, or that would constitute fundamental alterations in the nature of a program, "rather than to those changes that would be reasonable accommodations."ⁿ¹¹⁵

In a case involving an action under both Sections 501 and 504 against the Post Office for refusal to transfer the employee to an area where he could obtain better medical treatment for AIDS, the Ninth Circuit found that the duty to accommodate may require the employer to transfer the disabled employee to a location where the employee can obtain better medical treatment for his or her disability.ⁿ¹¹⁶ The court also stated that even if a disabled employee can perform all job functions, the employer may be required to reasonably accommodate the employee to allow him or her to enjoy the privileges and benefits of employment equal to those enjoyed by nondisabled employees or to pursue therapy or treatment for the disability.ⁿ¹¹⁷ According to the court, this may require employers to alter existing policies or procedures to accommodate the needs of disabled employees in ways that the employer would not do for nondisabled employees, but only if such accommodation is reasonable and does not otherwise result in undue hardship for the employer.ⁿ¹¹⁸

[3] Duty to Accommodate Under the FEHA

[a] Reasonable Accommodation Required

The FEHA requires employers to reasonably accommodate the known physical or mental disabilities of any applicant or employee unless the employer can demonstrate that such an accommodation would result in undue hardship to the operation of the business.ⁿ¹¹⁹ The FEHA requires an employer to accommodate only a known physical disability.^{n119.1} The employee bears the burden of giving the employer notice of his or her disability.^{n119.2}

"Reasonable accommodation" is defined in the FEHA and its implementing regulations only by way of example.^{n119.3} This definition is virtually identical to the ADA's statutory definition of "reasonable accommodation, which is also by way of example.^{n119.4} The FEHA defines "reasonable accommodation" as either of the following:^{n119.4.1}

- Making existing facilities used by employees readily accessible to, and usable by, individuals with disabilities.
- Job restructuring, part-time or modified work schedules, reassignment to a vacant position, acquisition or modification of equipment or devices, adjustment or modifications of examination, training materials or policies, the provision of qualified readers or interpreters, and other similar accommodations for individuals with disabilities.

For example, an employer is obligated to reassign a disabled employee to another position within the company only if there is an existing, vacant position for which the employee is qualified.^{n119.4.2} The employer is not required to create a new position to accommodate a disabled employee.^{n119.4.3}

The elements of a failure to accommodate claim are the following:^{n119.4.4}

- Plaintiff has a disability under the FEHA.
- Plaintiff is qualified to perform the essential functions of the position.
- The employer failed to reasonably accommodate plaintiff's disability.^{n119.4.5}

However, unlike the ADA, the FEHA in its accommodation provision does not contain language requiring that an employee be a "qualified individual with a disability" able to perform the essential functions of the job.^{n119.5} The FEHA accommodation requirement applies to "an applicant or employee."^{n119.6} California courts of appeal disagree as to whether the FEHA requires reasonable accommodation without the employee being a qualified individual with a disability who is able to perform the essential functions of the job. In Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc.,^{n119.7} the court disagreed with the earlier decision in Bagatti v. Dept. of Rehabilitation,ⁿ¹²⁰ in which the court had relied on the differences in statutory language between the FEHA and the ADA to conclude that the FEHA does not require that reasonable accommodation for disability be made only where the person is a qualified individual able to perform the essential functions of the job. In Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank,^{n120.1} the court had held that a plaintiff suing for failure to accommodate under former Government Code section 12940(k), which was the predecessor to the current section 12940(m), must establish he or she is a qualified individual able to perform the essential functions of the job. In Nadaf-Rahrov, the court concluded that "reasonable accommodation" in the FEHA means a modification or adjustment to the workplace that enables the employee to perform the essential functions of the job held or desired. Similarly, an employer's duty to engage in an interactive process to identify a reasonable accommodation extends only to accommodations that would enable the employee to perform the essential functions of the position. Thus, an employer is liable under section 12940(m) for failing to accommodate an employee only if the work environment could have been modified or adjusted in a manner that would have enabled the employee to perform the essential functions of the job. The burden of proving ability to perform the essential functions of a job with accommodation is on the plaintiff.^{n120.2}

The FEHA does not require an employer to accommodate an employee by allowing the use of illegal drugs, including medical marijuana. Although the use of medical marijuana is legal under California law under the Compassionate Use Act of 1996,^{n120.3} no state law could completely legalize marijuana for medical purposes because the drug remains illegal under federal law^{n120.4}, even for medical users.^{n120.5} California's voters merely exempted medical users and their primary caregivers from criminal liability under two specifically designated state statutes. Nothing in the text or history of the Compassionate Use Act suggested the voters intended the measure to address the respective rights and obligations of employers and employees. The Compassionate Use Act does not create a broad right to use marijuana without hindrance or inconvenience, enforceable against private parties such as employers. Further, legislation enacted after the Compassionate Use Act, which provides that nothing in the Compassionate Use Act requires accommodation of any medical use of marijuana on the property or premises of any place of employment or during the hours of employment,ⁿ¹²¹ negates any expectation that the immunity to criminal liability for possessing marijuana granted in the Compassionate Use Act gives medical users a civilly enforceable right to possess the drug at work or in custody.^{n121.1}

A single failure to accommodate, even in the context of a larger pattern of successful accommodation, can serve as the basis for finding a failure to accommodate.^{n121.1.1}

The employer cannot prevail on summary judgment on a claim of failure to reasonably accommodate unless it establishes one of the following through undisputed facts:^{n121.2}

- Reasonable accommodation was offered and refused.
- There simply was no vacant position within the employer's organization for which the disabled employee was qualified and which the disabled employee was capable of performing with or without accommodation.
- The employer did everything in its power to find a reasonable accommodation, but the informal interactive process broke down because the employee failed to engage in discussions in good faith.

The FEHA does not link the failure to make reasonable accommodation to discrimination in the terms and conditions of employment, as does the ADA. Thus, the FEHA does not limit the right to assert the duty of reasonable accommodation to instances in which an adverse employment action is taken against the employee.ⁿ¹²² Thus, under the express provisions of the FEHA, the employer's failure to reasonably accommodate a disabled individual is a violation of the statute in and of itself.^{n122.1}

A claim of failure to accommodate is independent of a cause of action for failure to engage in an interactive dialogue;^{n122.2} however, each necessarily implicates the other.^{n122.3} For example, the purpose of the interactive process is to determine what accommodation is required. Once a reasonable accommodation has been granted as a result of that process, the employer has a duty to provide that reasonable accommodation.^{n122.4} Further, after a reasonable accommodation has been granted, the interactive process does not continue to apply in a failure to accommodate context.^{n122.5}

An employer who reassigns an employee to a temporary light-duty position to accommodate the employee's injury does not have an affirmative obligation under the FEHA to make that temporary light-duty assignment available indefinitely once the employee's temporary disability becomes permanent. The duty to provide reasonable accommodation for a disabled employee does not obligate the employer to convert a temporary light-duty position into a permanent one when doing so would, in effect, create a new position.ⁿ¹²³

Holding a job open for a disabled employee who needs time to recuperate or heal is a form of reasonable accommodation and may be all that is required when it appears likely that the employee will be able to return to an existing position at some time in the foreseeable future.^{123.1} However, engaging in the interactive process may require the employer to do more than simply hold the employee's job open.^{123.2}

"Undue hardship" means an action that requires significant difficulty or expense when considered in light of the following factors:¹²⁴

- The nature and cost of the accommodation required;
- The overall financial resources of the facilities involved in providing the reasonable accommodations, the number of persons employed at the facility, and the effect on expenses and resources or other impact of these accommodations on the operation of the facility;
- The overall financial resources of the covered entity, the overall size of the business of a covered entity with respect to the number of employees, and the number, type, and location of its facilities;
- The type of operations, including the composition, structure, and functions of the workforce of the entity;
- The geographic separateness, administrative, or fiscal relationship of the facility or facilities.

A plaintiff need not initially plead or produce evidence showing that the accommodation would not impose an undue hardship on the employer. The burden is on the employer to make a showing of undue hardship.¹²⁵

According to the court of appeal in County of Fresno v. Fair Employment & Housing Com.,¹²⁶ which held that hypersensitivity to tobacco smoke is a "physical handicap" (as defined under the FEHA prior to its 1992 amendments to the definitions of "physical handicap" and "reasonable accommodation"), an employee establishes a prima facie case of failure to accommodate by proving both that he or she is disabled under the FEHA¹²⁷ and that the employer has failed to accommodate the disability. That accomplished, the burden then shifts to the employer to produce evidence demonstrating it has not discriminated, such as establishing that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on its operations.^{127.1} If the employer so rebuts the prima facie case, the employee must have a fair opportunity to prove the reason given for failing to accommodate is, in fact, a pretext for prohibited disability discrimination.¹²⁸

In County of Fresno, the FEHC argued that even if an employer takes appropriate accommodation measures, they are "reasonable" only if they (1) are successful, (2) are individually tailored to meet the needs of the disabled employee, and (3) preserve the disabled employee's employment status.¹²⁹ The Fresno court did not expressly pass on that proposition, but it did hold that the FEHC did not abuse its discretion in finding a failure to reasonably accommodate because all the measures the employer took either were unsuccessful, or were not taken specifically to accommodate the affected employees, or violated the FEHA by depriving the affected employees of employment privileges.¹³⁰ Those measures included air filtration machines, separating the affected employees from smokers, pressuring smokers not to smoke in the employees' presence, offering the employees alternate positions, "permitting" one of them to take medical leave, creating a task force and subcommittee to study smoking on the job and to make recommendations, and implementing a county-wide ordinance prohibiting smoking except in designated places.¹³¹

An employer or other entity covered by the FEHA may not deny an employment benefit because of the prospective need to make reasonable accommodation to a disabled individual.

[b] Affirmative Action Required

[i] Employer's Obligations

An employer who knows of an employee's disability has an affirmative duty to inform that employee of other suitable job opportunities with the employer and to determine whether the employee is interested in and qualified for those positions. These affirmative duties arise only when:^{n131.1}

- The employer can satisfy these duties without undue hardship;^{n131.2}
- The employer provides similar assistance to other disabled or nondisabled employees; or
- The employer has a policy of offering such assistance or benefit to any other employees.

The FEHA requires an employer to engage in a timely, good faith, interactive process with the employee to determine effective reasonable accommodations, if any, in response to a request for reasonable accommodation by a disabled employee.^{n131.3} The employer must engage in this interactive process with an employee who is not actually disabled if the employer regards the employee as disabled.ⁿ¹³²

It is the employee's burden to initiate the process, unless the disability and resulting limitations are obvious.^{n132.0.1} No magic words are necessary; the obligation arises once the employer becomes aware of the need to consider an accommodation. Each party must participate in good faith, undertake reasonable efforts to communicate the party's concerns, and make available to the other information that is available or more accessible to one party.^{n132.1} Once the interactive process is initiated, the employer's obligation to engage in the process in good faith is continuous.^{n132.1.1}

An employer must explore various accommodations even if the employee has not requested any. An employer who rejects the employee's proposed accommodations and offers no effective alternative fails to engage in good faith in the mandatory interactive process.^{n132.2}

Government Code section 12940(n) imposes liability only if a reasonable accommodation was possible. Thus, a reasonable accommodation must have been available before an employer can be held liable for failing to engage in the good faith interactive process. The simple failure to engage in a good faith interactive process alone does not give rise to liability.^{n132.3} The burden of proving the availability of a reasonable accommodation rests on the employee.^{n132.4}

The fact that an employer took some steps to work with an employee to identify reasonable accommodations does not absolve the employer of liability under section 12940(n). If the employer is responsible for a later breakdown in the process, it may be held liable.^{n132.5}

Although an employer's good faith during the interactive process may support an inference that its decision not to provide accommodations was also made in good faith, the fact that the employer may ultimately be found not to be liable for failure to accommodate an disabled employee does not automatically mean the employer engaged in the interactive process in good faith.^{n132.6}

An employee may file a civil action based on the employer's failure to engage in the interactive process.^{n132.7} The employer's failure to engage in a good faith interactive process to determine an effective accommodation, once one is requested, is a violation of the FEHA in and of itself.ⁿ¹³³ Liability hinges on the objective circumstances surrounding the parties' breakdown in communication, and responsibility for the breakdown lies with the party who fails to participate in good faith.^{n133.1} While a claim of failure to accommodate is independent of a cause of action for failure to engage in an interactive dialogue, each necessarily implicates the other.^{n133.2}

Ordinarily, a disabled employee may not require an employer to communicate directly with the employee's attorney, because the interactive process contemplates that the employee and employer will communicate directly with each other to exchange information about job skills and job openings.^{n133.3} In Claudio v. Regents of the University of California

.n133.4 however, the employer itself created unusual circumstances because of which the Court of Appeal could not say that it was unreasonable for the employee to request that the employer to communicate with his attorney. The employee, who worked at a veterinary school, contracted leptospirosis, a disease humans can contract from animals, and became physically disabled. After the employee went on medical leave, stopped working and moved to another state, the employer informed him on four occasions that he had been fired, which created the unusual circumstance of allowing the employee to request that the employer communicate with the employee's attorney rather than directly with the employee. The court also found that the employer's employment specialist did not act reasonably in unilaterally determining she did not have to communicate with the employee's attorney simply because the attorney worked for a firm that specialized in workers' compensation law. Thus, the court concluded that a triable issue of fact existed with respect to whether the employer violated its duty to engage in the interactive process required by the FEHA.n133.5

[ii] Employee Not Required to Request Accommodation

The employer's affirmative duty to investigate whether or not the employer can reasonably accommodate a disabled employee is not dependent on the disabled employee's prior request for some specific accommodation.n134 In Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc., n135 two pilots diagnosed with AIDS were grounded for medical disability based on FAA regulations. At that time, one pilot had serious medical problems; the other was functioning well when grounded and for more than a year afterwards. Neither pilot requested an alternative job position with the airline, and both applied for and received disability benefits. The trial court found that the airline had no duty of reasonable accommodation under FEHA, since the pilots had not requested any such accommodation. The Court of Appeal affirmed the judgment in favor of the airline and against the more severely disabled pilot, concluding that summary judgment was properly granted because the airline had no duty to reasonably accommodate the employee who would have been incapable of performing any alternative job position. However, the court reversed the judgment against the second pilot and directed the trial court on remand to deny the motion for summary judgment as to that plaintiff. As to the second pilot, who was functioning well within normal limits as to intellectual ability and motor skills more than a year after being grounded, a triable issue of fact existed as to whether the airline fulfilled its duty of providing reasonable accommodation. The court concluded that the pilot's failure to request a specific accommodation was irrelevant to a determination of reasonable accommodation under FEHA.n136

On the other hand, it is an employee's responsibility to understand his or her own physical or mental condition well enough to present the employer at the earliest opportunity with a concise list of restrictions that must be met to accommodate the employee.n136.1

[c] Disability Coverage Does Not Preempt Claim

The fact that a disabled employee receives a disability benefit from the employer and government social security benefits does not dispose of the issue whether or not the employer violated FEHA by failing to make known other suitable job opportunities.n137 In Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc., n138 the employee received benefits because he had been permanently grounded. Inasmuch as his position in the subsequent FEHA lawsuit was not clearly inconsistent with the position taken when applying for disability benefits, the principles of judicial estoppel did not apply. In response to the employer's effort to apply federal estoppel principles, the Prilliman court concluded that state law on judicial estoppel applies when the case is filed in state court, and further noted that judicial estoppel is not uniformly defined or applied by the federal courts.n139 For further discussion of judicial estoppel, see [e], below.

[d] Workers' Compensation Preemption

Whether an employee whose disability is caused by a work-related injury is entitled to the remedies provided under the FEHA is an unsettled question. Although Lab. Code § 132a purports to provide the exclusive, albeit limited, remedy for discrimination based upon a work related injury, the FEHA n140 specifies, "Nothing contained in this part shall be deemed to repeal ... any other law of this state relating to discrimination because of ... physical disability, mental disability ... unless those provisions provide less protection to the enumerated classes of persons covered under this part."

In Wood v. County of Alameda,ⁿ¹⁴¹ the court held that the exclusive remedy provisions of the state Workers Compensation Act (Lab. Code § 3200 et seq.) must be denied effect to the extent they are incompatible with or conflict with the remedial provisions of the ADA.ⁿ¹⁴²

California state courts held that Labor Code Section 132a preempts actions for discrimination based on work-related injuries.ⁿ¹⁴³ This view was supported by the Ninth Circuit in *Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp.*ⁿ¹⁴⁴ However, in City of Moorpark v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹⁴⁵ the California Supreme Court held that Labor Code Section 132a did not provide an exclusive remedy and did not preclude an employee from pursuing FEHA claims in court.ⁿ¹⁴⁶

[e] Judicial Estoppel

The doctrine of judicial estoppel precludes litigants from asserting a position in a legal proceeding that is contrary to a position previously taken in the same or an earlier proceeding.ⁿ¹⁴⁷ Judicial estoppel will be invoked when (1) the same party has taken two positions; (2) the positions were taken in judicial or quasi-judicial administrative proceedings; (3) the party was successful in asserting the first position (that is, the tribunal adopted the position or accepted it as true); (4) the two positions are totally inconsistent; and (5) the first position was not taken as a result of ignorance, fraud, or mistake.ⁿ¹⁴⁸

In the context of the FEHA, the scope and application of the doctrine of judicial estoppel is governed by California law.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ Judicial estoppel is not an invariable per se rule precluding a subsequent FEHA suit because of the plaintiff's previous application for disability benefits. Rather, judicial estoppel is an issue of fact, to be decided according to the particular evidence and circumstances of each case.ⁿ¹⁵⁰

Judicial estoppel is invoked only after a very high and rigorous threshold is cleared.ⁿ¹⁵¹ Under California law, judicial estoppel will be applied against a party only when that party has taken positions or made statements that are "totally inconsistent,"ⁿ¹⁵² or so irreconcilable that one position necessarily excludes the other.ⁿ¹⁵³

In Bell v. Wells Fargo Bank, the court had to determine whether the plaintiff could proceed with an FEHA claim after receiving state and federal disability benefits, or whether the suit was barred by judicial estoppel because of certain statements made in the application for disability benefits. The plaintiff, a former bank examiner diagnosed with HIV, had to quit and go on disability when the employer eliminated a one-day-per-week telecommuting accommodation. The employee brought suit alleging employment discrimination under the FEHA. The employer argued that statements made in connection with the plaintiff's disability applications, to the effect that sickness rendered him unable to perform his "regular and customary work," judicially estopped the plaintiff from taking an allegedly inconsistent position in the FEHA suit. However, the court noted that the meaning of these statements could not be determined without knowing what the plaintiff meant by regular and customary work, i.e., the job before or after the employer changed the accommodation. Under the facts of the case, the plaintiff clearly viewed himself as disabled and incapable of performing customary duties solely because the employer disturbed the status quo. The statements made by the plaintiff at different times about the nature and extent of the disability were reconcilable; statements in the disability application were not inherently and totally inconsistent with the litigation position that the plaintiff could have continued working had the accommodation remained in place. Thus, the positions taken by the plaintiff were not mutually exclusive and did not necessarily exclude the subsequent litigation posture.ⁿ¹⁵⁴

For further discussion of judicial estoppel, including distinctions between judicial and collateral or equitable estoppel, see § 41.51[2][a][v][B].

[4] Undue Hardship

[a] Federal Law

As discussed in [2], above, employers need not reasonably accommodate disabled individuals if the accommodation would impose undue hardship.ⁿ¹⁵⁵ The question of undue hardship arises only when an accommodation is necessary to enable a disabled person to perform a job's essential functions and the proposed accommodation is reasonable. In those cases, the next question is whether that accommodation would create an undue hardship for the employer. The question does not arise if the plaintiffs do not seek an accommodation, reasonable or otherwise.ⁿ¹⁵⁶ Undue hardship analysis is thus a fact-intensive inquiry, which is rarely suitable for resolution on summary judgment.ⁿ¹⁵⁷

The burden of showing undue hardship is on the employer.ⁿ¹⁵⁸ Once the employer presents credible evidence that indicates accommodation would not reasonably be possible, the plaintiff has the burden of coming forward with evidence concerning his or her individual capabilities and suggestions for accommodations to rebut the employer's evidence.ⁿ¹⁵⁹

The ADA defines "undue hardship" as an action requiring significant difficulty or expense, when considered in light of the following factors:

1. The nature and cost of the accommodation needed,ⁿ¹⁶⁰ taking into consideration the availability of tax credits and deductions, and outside funding;ⁿ¹⁶¹
2. The overall financial resources of the facility or facilities involved in providing reasonable accommodation; the number of persons employed at the facility; the effect on expenses and resources, or the impact otherwise of the accommodation on the operation of the facility;ⁿ¹⁶²
3. The overall financial resources of the employer; the overall size of the employer's business with respect to the number of its employees; the number, type, and location of its facilities;ⁿ¹⁶³
4. The type of operation or operations of the employer, including the composition, structure, and functions of the employer's workforce; the geographic separateness, administrative, or fiscal relationship of the facility or facilities in question to the employer;ⁿ¹⁶⁴ and
5. The impact of the accommodation on the operation of the facility, including the impact on the ability of other employees to perform their duties and the impact on the facility's ability to conduct business.ⁿ¹⁶⁵

In practice, the application of these factors appears to be easier to recite than to apply. For example, in theory, costs may only be considered an undue hardship at the level of substantial risk or disruption. However, one court has applied a balancing method and rejected an employee's request for lowering a kitchen sink at the cost of $160 as an undue hardship.ⁿ¹⁶⁶

Courts have also differed on whether requiring the employer to provide assistance constitutes an undue hardship.ⁿ¹⁶⁷ with the inquiry generally focusing on whether the assistance is required for essential or marginal job duties.

Many of the implementing regulations promulgated by the individual funding agencies governed by Section 504 enumerate some factors that may be considered in determining whether an accommodation would impose undue hardship under the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. For example, Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and Department of Justice implementing regulations provide that the factors include:ⁿ¹⁶⁸

1. The overall size of the recipient's program with respect to number of employees, number and type of facilities, and size of budget;

2. The type of the recipient's operation, including the composition and structure of the recipient's workforce; and

3. The nature and cost of the accommodation needed.

According to Appendix A to the HHS regulations, the weight given to each of the foregoing factors will vary depending on the facts of a particular situation. For example, a small day-care center may not be required to expend more than a nominal sum, such as that necessary to equip a telephone for use by a secretary with impaired hearing, but a large school district may be required to make available a teacher's aid to a blind applicant for a teaching job. Further, it may be considered reasonable to require a state welfare agency to accommodate a deaf employee by providing an interpreter, while it would constitute an undue hardship to impose that requirement on a provider of foster home care services.¹⁶⁹

[b] Fair Employment and Housing Act

The FEHA also excuses employers from reasonable accommodation if accommodation imposes an undue hardship.¹⁷⁰ The burden is on the employer to produce evidence of undue hardship.¹⁷¹

The FEHA defines "undue hardship" to mean an action requiring significant difficulty or expense, when considered in light of all of the following factors:¹⁷²

1. The nature and cost of the accommodation needed;
2. The overall financial resources of the facilities involved in the provision of the reasonable accommodations, the number of persons employed at the facility, and the effect on expenses and resources or the impact otherwise of these accommodations on the operation of the facility;
3. The overall financial resources of the covered entity, the overall size of the business or a covered entity with respect to the number of employees, and the number, type, and location of its facilities;
4. The type of operations, including the composition, structure, and functions of the workforce of the entity; and
5. The geographic separateness, administrative, or fiscal relationship of the facility or facilities.

In addition, employers are not liable for refusing to hire or for discharging an employee with a physical or mental disability or medical condition if the employee is unable to perform his or her "essential functions" with reasonable accommodations or cannot perform them without endangering the health or safety of him or herself or others even with reasonable accommodation.¹⁷³ For discussion of employee's inability to perform job or danger to health or safety as a defense to a claim of disability discrimination, see § 41.97.

[5] Temporary Disability Due to Pregnancy

[a] Duty to Reasonably Accommodate Employee by Transferring to Less Strenuous Duties

The FEHA provides that employers who have a policy, practice, or collective bargaining agreement authorizing or requiring the transfer of temporarily disabled employees to less strenuous or hazardous positions are required¹⁷⁴ to also transfer temporarily disabled pregnant employees to less strenuous or hazardous positions for the duration of the disability if the employee so requests.¹⁷⁵ It also provides that if the employer does not have such a policy, practice, or collective bargaining agreement provision, it is required to transfer a pregnant employee to a less strenuous or hazardous position for the duration of her pregnancy if she so requests, with the advice of her physician, and the transfer can be reasonably accommodated.ⁿ¹⁷⁶ Further, employers may not refuse to provide reasonable accommodation for an employee for conditions related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions, if requested by the employee with the advice of her health care provider.ⁿ¹⁷⁷

[b] Transfer Excused Under Certain Circumstances

Employers are not required to meet the transfer requirements of Government Code Section 12945(b)(3), discussed in [a], above, by creating additional employment that would not otherwise have been created, nor by discharging any employee, transferring any employee with more seniority, or promoting any employee who is not qualified to perform the job.ⁿ¹⁷⁸

In Armstrong v. Flowers Hosp., Inc.,ⁿ¹⁷⁹ an employer did not have to accommodate a pregnant nurse by transferring her from a work assignment caring for an AIDS patient. The court found no evidence that plaintiff was at greater risk than a non-pregnant person performing the same duties. Hence, her request for transfer did not fall within the pregnancy-related reasons for change to a less strenuous position for the duration of pregnancy.ⁿ¹⁸⁰

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Disability Discrimination
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
Disability Discrimination
Coverage & Definitions
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Prewitt v. United States Postal Serv. (5th Cir. 1981) 662 F.2d 292, 305 n.19 (construing Section 501 of Rehabilitation act of 1973, governing employment of handicapped individuals in federal government); Nelson v. Thornburgh (E.D. Pa. 1983) 567 F. Supp. 369, 378, aff'd without op., 732 F.2d 146 (3d Cir. 1984).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Prewitt v. United States Postal Serv. (5th Cir. 1981) 662 F.2d 292, 305 n.19 (construing Section 501 of Rehabilitation act of 1973, governing employment of handicapped individuals in federal government); Nelson v. Thornburgh (E.D. Pa. 1983) 567 F. Supp. 369, 378, aff'd without opinion.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Nelson v. Thornburgh (E.D. Pa. 1983) 567 F. Supp. 369, 378, aff'd without op., 732 F.2d 146 (3d Cir. 1984).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 793(a) (Section 503 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973), 794(a) (Section 504 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973); 28 C.F.R. § 41.53 (Section 504 coordinating regulation); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.6(d) (Section 503 implementing regulation); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9 (FEHC regulation implementing FEHA). For a discussion relating to "undue hardship" generally, see [4], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Nelson v. Thornburgh (E.D. Pa. 1983) 567 F. Supp. 369, 378, aff'd without op., 732 F.2d 146 (3d Cir. 1984).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 28 C.F.R. § 41.32 (Section 504 implementing regulation); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.2 (Section 503 implementing regulation); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(m); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.8(b) (FEHA interpretative regulation; demonstration that handicapped individual cannot perform essential functions of job, after reasonable accommodation made, as permissible defense); see discussion in ch. 40, pt. C.

(n7)Footnote 7. See § 41.32[2][a].

(n8)Footnote 7.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(5); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.9(a), (b).

(n9)Footnote 8. See 42 U.S.C. § 12201(b); for further discussion of accommodations required under the FEHA, see [3], below.

(n10)Footnote 8.1. 42 U.S.C. § 12201(h). For the definition of disability, see 42 U.S.C. § 12102(1).

(n11)Footnote 8.2. Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1088 ; see Zukle v. Regents of University of California (9th Cir. 1999) 166 F.3d 1041, 1046.

(n12)Footnote 9. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 401-402, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589 ; Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1088 .

(n13)Footnote 9.1. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 600-601 .

(n14)Footnote 9.2. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 601-602 .

(n15)Footnote 9.3. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 602-603, 19-20 .

(n16)Footnote 10. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(o)(1); see Burstein, What is "Reasonable Accommodation" Under the Americans With Disabilities Act? 38(5) Prac. Law. 63 (1992).

(n17)Footnote 11. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(9); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(o)(2); see Willis v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 236 F.3d 1160, 1165 , amended on denial of rehearing en banc 244 F.3d 675 (reassignment to vacant position as reasonable accommodation under ADA requires that an existing position be vacant; employers need not create new position or bump employee to create vacancy); see also [iv], below.

(n18)Footnote 11.1. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(o); see Cripe v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 877, 893-894 (assigning injured police officers who were unable to perform beat-patrol job to undesirable jobs and degrading conditions, to which able-bodied officers are not subjected, and who were denied rights afforded their able-bodied co-workers, including right to wear police uniform, did not comply with ADA's mandate).

(n19)Footnote 11.2. Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1089-1090 .

(n20)Footnote 11.3. See 29 C.F.R. Part 1630, App. (employer may restructure job by reallocating or redistributing nonessential, marginal job functions); Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1088-1090 (employer was not required to restructure position by exempting employee suffering from epilepsy from essential duty of operating heavy machinery, so that employee failed to show job restructuring was available option).

(n21)Footnote 11.4. Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1090 (genuine issue of material fact as to whether employee suffering from epilepsy could reasonably have been accommodated by his request for accumulated sick leave or unpaid medical leave sufficient to permit transition to new medication); Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1246 .

(n22)Footnote 12. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902(Enforcement Guidance on the Americans with Disabilities Act and Psychiatric Disabilities).

(n23)Footnote 13. See Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1247 (extended medical leave for pregnancy complications may be reasonable accommodation).

(n24)Footnote 14. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.9(c).

(n25)Footnote 15. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.9(d).

(n26)Footnote 16. See 29 C.F.R., Pt. 1630, App. § 1630.9; see also Brundage v. Hahn (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 228, 236-237, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 (employee who was absent from job for six weeks and never informed employer of mental disability until after termination was terminated for abandonment and not discrimination based on disability); but see Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 361, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 (disagreeing with Jensen to extent court adopted interpretive EEOC statement to define reasonable accommodation under FEHA).

(n27)Footnote 17. Schmidt v. Safeway, Inc. (D. Or. 1994) 864 F. Supp. 991, 997 .

(n28)Footnote 18. Schmidt v. Safeway, Inc. (D. Or. 1994) 864 F. Supp. 991, 997 ; see EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902(Enforcement Guidance on the Americans with Disabilities Act and Psychiatric Disabilities). But cf. Hedberg v. Indiana Bell Tel. Co., Inc. (7th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 928, 932-934 (employer must know of disability, and knowledge of disability cannot be inferred from knowledge of symptoms caused by disability, such as tardiness and apparent laziness); Hamm v. Runyon (7th Cir. 1995) 51 F.3d 721, 725 (tardiness not an obvious symptom of arthritis).

(n29)Footnote 19. Summers v. A. Teichert & Son, Inc. (1997) 127 F.3d 1150 .

(n30)Footnote 20. Summers v. A. Teichert & Son, Inc. (1997) 127 F.3d 1150, 1153-1154 (disparity in work hours related to disparity in attempts to secure work; attorney fee award to prevailing party only when losing party's action is frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation).

(n31)Footnote 21. Albertson's, Inc. v. Kirkingburg (1999) 527 U.S. 555, 119 S. Ct. 2162, 144 L. Ed. 2d 518, 527 , overruled by statute on other grounds [see P.L. 110-325, §§ 1, 2] (plaintiff generally employable as a mechanic notwithstanding limitation imposed by driving particular type of vehicle on interstate highway); Sutton v. United Air Lines (1999) 527 U.S. 471, 119 S. Ct. 2139, 144 L. Ed. 2d 450, 469 , overruled by statute on other grounds [see P.L. 110-325, §§ 1, 2] (plaintiffs not protected by ADA if precluded from working as global airline pilots since they were employable as pilots on other routes); see Real v. City of Compton (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1418-1421, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 (because evidence showed only that employer believed former police officer was not able to be patrol officer, rather than incapable of performing broad class of jobs, plaintiff was not perceived as substantially limited in a major life activity). For further discussion of determining whether plaintiff is "a qualified individual with a disability," see § 41.32[2][a].

(n32)Footnote 21.1. Kaplan v. City of North Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1226 .

(n33)Footnote 21.2. Kaplan v. City of North Las Vegas (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1226, 1231-1232 (because deputy marshal was not actually disabled, but was regarded as disabled based on misdiagnosis, employer did not have duty to accommodate him). See Weber v. Strippit, Inc. (8th Cir. 1999) 186 F.3d 907, 916-17 ("regarded as" disabled plaintiffs are not entitled to reasonable accommodation); Workman v. Frito-Lay, Inc. (6th Cir. 1999) 165 F.3d 460, 467 (same); Newberry v. E. Texas State Univ. (5th Cir. 1998) 161 F.3d 276, 280 (same); Deane v. Pocono Med. Ctr. (3d Cir. 1998) 142 F.3d 138, 148 n.12 (en banc) (declining to rule on issue but noting argument that employers are not required to provide reasonable accommodation for perceived disabilities has "considerable force"). but see Katz v. City Metal Co., Inc. (1st Cir. 1996) 87 F.3d 26, 33 (allowing "regarded as" plaintiff to proceed, concluding that whether plaintiff could have performed his job with reasonable accommodation was jury issue and assuming that "regarded as" plaintiffs are entitled to reasonable accommodation without providing analysis); Jacques v. DiMarzio, Inc. (E.D.N.Y. 2002) 200 F. Supp. 2d 151, 163 (recognizing that Second Circuit Court of Appeals has yet to decide issue, but concluding employers have duty to accommodate in "regarded as" cases).

(n34)Footnote 22. Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1111-1114 , citing S. Rep No. 101-116, at 34 (1989), 29 C.F.R. Pt. 1630, App. § 1630.9 EEOC Enforcement Guidance: Reasonable Accommodation and Undue Hardship Under the Americans with Disabilities Act, EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH), § 902, No. 915.002 (March 1, 1999), at 5440; see also Zivkovic v. So. Cal. Edison Co. (9th Cir. 2002) 302 F.3d 1080, 1088-1090 (district court's failure to determine whether employer engaged in interactive process in light of contravening evidence from applicant precluded appellate court from reviewing court's legal conclusions on issue and required remand); Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1137-1139 (employer's rejection of employee's work-at-home request and its failure to explore with employee possibility of other accommodations once it was aware that flexible start time was not working as accommodation constituted violation of its duty regarding mandatory interactive process). Effective January 1, 2001, the California Legislature affirmed the importance of the interactive process in determining a reasonable accommodation as articulated by the EEOC in its interpretive guidance of the ADA. Gov. Code § 12926.1(e).

(n35)Footnote 23. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1138 .

(n36)Footnote 24. See Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1138-1139 (medical transcriptionist requested work-at-home arrangement as accommodation).

(n37)Footnote 25. Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1112 , citing EEOC Enforcement Guidance: Reasonable Accommodation and Undue Hardship Under the Americans with Disabilities Act, EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH), § 902, No. 915.002 (March 1, 1999), at 5459; see Brown v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 246 F.3d 1182, 1188 (employer had no affirmative obligation to provide accommodation because record did not show employee was unable to request accommodation or that employer knew or had reason to know employee had disability preventing her from making request).

(n38)Footnote 26. Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1112 , citing EEOC Enforcement Guidance: Reasonable Accommodation and Undue Hardship Under the Americans with Disabilities Act, EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH), § 902, No. 915.002 (March 1, 1999), at 5459.

(n39)Footnote 26.1. Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1114 , citing S. Rep. No. 101-116, at 35 (1989); H. R. Rep. No. 101-485, pt. 2, at 66 (1990).

(n40)Footnote 26.2. Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1114 , citing S. Rep. No. 101-116, at 35 (1989); H. R. Rep. No. 101-485, pt. 2, at 66 (1990).

(n41)Footnote 26.3. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1137 ; Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1114-1115 See, e.g., Allen v. Pacific Bell (9th Cir. 2003) 348 F.3d 1113, 1114-1115 (because employee was requested to submit additional medical evidence to modify his doctor's prior report, but failed to do so, employer did not have duty under ADA or California law to engage in further interactive processes with respect to Services Technician position in absence of such information; employee lost rights to additional accommodation by failing to take keyboard test to qualify for positions to which he matched in job search process thus failing to cooperate in job-search process).

(n42)Footnote 26.4. Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1115 , citing Taylor v. Phoenixville School Dist. (3d Cir. 1999) 184 F.3d 296, 317 .

(n43)Footnote 26.5. Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1115 .

(n44)Footnote 26.6. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1137-1139 ; Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1115-1116 & n.7.

(n45)Footnote 26.7. Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1116 (summary judgment for employer not appropriate because employee triggered interactive process obligation by communicating to his employer his desire to accommodation based on his disability and identified possible accommodations, but employer appeared not to have seriously considered employee's suggestions, and employer did not seek to have dialogue with employee, thus failing to engage in interactive process in good faith, and because triable issue of fact existed as to whether reasonable accommodation without undue hardship to employer was possible).

(n46)Footnote 26.8. Morton v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1249, 1256 & n.7, cert. denied, overruled on other grounds in Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 995-998 (given difficulty of proving negative, it is not likely employer will be able to establish on summary judgment absence of material issue of disputed fact as to question of accommodation). See Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1088 (because employer did not engage in interactive process, summary judgment would have been available only if reasonable finder of fact could conclude in any event there would have been no reasonable accommodation available).

(n47)Footnote 27. Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1247 ; Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 744, 748 , amended and superseded on other grounds, 196 F.3d 979 (reasonableness of accommodation depends on circumstances of each case).

(n48)Footnote 28. McGregor v. AMTRAK (9th Cir. 1999) 187 F.3d 1113, 1116 .

(n49)Footnote 29. Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1247 (plaintiff raised genuine issue of material fact as to whether extended medical leave for pregnancy complications was reasonable).

(n50)Footnote 30. See 29 C.F.R., Pt. 1630, App. § 1630.9.

(n51)Footnote 31. See Overton v. Reilly (7th Cir. 1992) 977 F.2d 1190, 1194-1195 (employer need not accommodate severely depressed chemist's request to communicate with public by mail only, because public contact comprised only 5 percent of job duties); see also Brundage v. Hahn (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 228, 239-240, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 (when employee was absent from job for six weeks and never informed employer of mental disability until after termination, reinstatement is not reasonable accommodation; reasonable accommodation does not include excusing failure to control controllable disability or giving employee second chance to control disability in future).

(n52)Footnote 32. Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 744, 751 , amended and superseded on other grounds, 196 F.3d 979 (employer need not create new position to reasonably accommodate disabled employee).

(n53)Footnote 33. See D'Amico v. New York State Bd. of Law Examiners (W.D.N.Y 1993) 813 F. Supp. 217, 223 .

(n54)Footnote 34. See Tuck v. Health Servs. of Tenn. (6th Cir. 1993) 7 F.3d 465, 469 (nurse with lifting and bending restrictions on light duty should not have been terminated unless unable to perform light duty position).

(n55)Footnote 35. See ch. 8 for a complete discussion of the use of leave for employee illness.

(n56)Footnote 36. See Myers v. Hose (4th Cir. 1995) 50 F.3d 278, 283 .

(n57)Footnote 37. See Langon v. Department of Health and Human Servs. (D.C. Cir. 1992) 959 F.2d 1053, 1058 (reasonable accommodation for clerical employee) (Rehabilitation Act); but cf. Vande Zande v. Wisconsin Dep't of Admin. (7th Cir. 1995) 44 F.3d 538, 544-545 (employer not obliged to permit unsupervised work of disabled employee).

(n58)Footnote 38. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1135-1136 ; Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1247 (if medical leave is reasonable accommodation, inability to work during leave period does not render plaintiff unqualified under ADA).

(n59)Footnote 38.1. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1136 .

(n60)Footnote 38.2. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1136 n.13 , citing Kimbrow v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (9th Cir.) 889 F.2d 869 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 814 (1990) .

(n61)Footnote 38.3. Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243 .

(n62)Footnote 39. Hanson v. Lucky Stores (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 215, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487 .

(n63)Footnote 40. Hanson v. Lucky Stores (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 215, 225-229, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487 (plaintiff failed to meet burden of showing that employer's proffered reason for termination was untrue or pretextual).

(n64)Footnote 41. Hanson v. Lucky Stores (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 215, 225-229, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487 .

(n65)Footnote 42. Citing Kimbrow v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 889 F.2d 869, 879 .

(n66)Footnote 43. Citing Gantt v. Wilson Sporting Goods Co. (6th Cir. 1998) 143 F.3d 1042, 1047 .

(n67)Footnote 44. Citing Prilliman v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 950-951 .

(n68)Footnote 45. Citing Soldinger v. Northwest Airlines, Inc. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 345, 370 .

(n69)Footnote 46. Citing Ansonia Board of Education v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 68-69 .

(n70)Footnote 47. Citing Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 744, 752-753 , amended and superseded on other grounds, 196 F.3d 979 .

(n71)Footnote 47.1. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1136 (for medical transcriptionist, physical attendance at office was not essential job duty because employer permitted some of its transcriptionists to work at home), citing EEOC Enforcement Guidance: Reasonable Accommodation and Undue Hardship Under the Americans with Disabilities Act, FEP (BNA) 405:7601, at 7626 (March 1, 1999); see also Langon v. Department of Health and Human Servs. (D.C. Cir. 1992) 959 F.2d 1053, 1060-1061 (employer must consider requested accommodation of working at home); but see Vande Zande v. Wisconsin Dep't of Admin. (7th Cir. 1995) 44 F.3d 538, 544-545 (employer not required to allow disabled workers to work at home except in extraordinary circumstances).

(n72)Footnote 48. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1137 .

(n73)Footnote 48.1. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589 .

(n74)Footnote 49. Willis v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 236 F.3d 1160, 1164-1166 , amended on denial of rehearing en banc, 244 F.3d 675 (Ninth Circuit joins majority in holding that accommodation that requires violation of bona fide seniority system in CBA is per se unreasonable rather than factor to be weighed on case-by-case basis); see Lujan v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n (9th Cir. 1999) 165 F.3d 738, 738-739 (if proposed accommodation interferes with bona fide seniority system, accommodation is unreasonable as matter of law).

(n75)Footnote 50. Willis v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 236 F.3d 1160, 1166-1168 , amended on denial of rehearing en banc, 244 F.3d 675 (plaintiffs' estoppel argument failed due to lack of sufficient evidence that employers' association and union deviated from seniority system).

(n76)Footnote 51. Willis v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 236 F.3d 1160, 1166 , amended on denial of rehearing en banc, 244 F.3d 675 .

(n77)Footnote 52. Morton v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1249, 1253-1254 , cert. denied, overruled on other grounds in Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 995-998 .

(n78)Footnote 53. Morton v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1249, 1253-1254 , cert. denied, overruled on other grounds in Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 995-998 .

(n79)Footnote 54. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 598 .

(n80)Footnote 55. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 603 .

(n81)Footnote 56. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 598, 607 .

(n82)Footnote 57. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 607 .

(n83)Footnote 58. US Airways, Inc. v. Barnett (2002) 535 U.S. 391, 122 S. Ct. 1516, 152 L. Ed. 2d 589, 598 .

(n84)Footnote 59. Rissetto v. Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 343 (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 597, 601, 605-606 (temporary total disability for worker's compensation purposes and age discrimination requiring satisfactory job performance in employment discrimination suit); Johnson v. State of Oregon (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1361, 1368 (rejecting per se rule, which bars claimants from pursuing ADA claims after seeking or obtaining disability benefits; judicial estoppel is equitable doctrine, invoked at the court's discretion and driven by specific facts of case). For further discussion of Rissetto, see § 41.11[1][b].

(n85)Footnote 60. Johnson v. State of Oregon (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1361, 1364, 1366-1368 ; Lujan v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n (9th Cir. 1999) 165 F.3d 738, 740-741 (application for and receipt of disability benefits does not automatically estop claimant from establishing that he or she is qualified individual with disability); Nunes v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 164 F.3d 1243, 1246 (application for SDI benefits does not preclude claim that applicant is qualified individual under ADA).

(n86)Footnote 61. Cleveland v. Policy Management Systems, Inc. (1999) 526 U.S. 795, 119 S. Ct. 1597, 143 L. Ed. 2d 966 .

(n87)Footnote 62. Cleveland v. Policy Management Systems, Inc. (1999) 526 U.S. 795, 119 S. Ct. 1597, 143 L. Ed. 2d 966, 976-977 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 423(a)(1), (d)(2)(A); 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101(a)(7)(8), 12112(a), 12111(8).

(n88)Footnote 63. Cleveland v. Policy Management Systems, Inc. (1999) 526 U.S. 795, 119 S. Ct. 1597, 143 L. Ed. 2d 966, 976-977 .

(n89)Footnote 64. Cleveland v. Policy Management Systems, Inc. (1999) 526 U.S. 795, 119 S. Ct. 1597, 143 L. Ed. 2d 966, 976-977 .

(n90)Footnote 65. Cal. Gov. Code § 12940 et seq.

(n91)Footnote 66. Johnson v. State of Oregon (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1361 .

(n92)Footnote 67. Johnson v. State of Oregon (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1361, 1366-1368 (per se rule would force plaintiffs to abandon their ADA rights for immediate survival); Norris v. Sysco Corp. (9th Cir. 1999) 191 F.3d 1043, 1048-1049 (given likely serious financial constraints faced by ill or injured employee, may be inequitable to force choice between disability benefits and ADA suit that might not be resolved for years).

(n93)Footnote 68. Johnson v. State of Oregon (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1361, 1368 .

(n94)Footnote 69. Johnson v. State of Oregon (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1361, 1369 (judicial estoppel may apply when particular representations are so inconsistent that they amount to an affront to court).

(n95)Footnote 70. Lujan v. Pacific Maritime Ass'n (9th Cir. 1999) 165 F.3d 738, 740-741 .

(n96)Footnote 71. Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Health Services (9th Cir. 1999) 172 F.3d 1176 .

(n97)Footnote 72. Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Health Services (9th Cir.1999) 172 F.3d 1176, 1179-1181 (court noted that plaintiff took inconsistent positions, but so did employer and state; plaintiff's certification of disability is not inconsistent with ability to return to work for ADA purposes); see also Johnson v. State of Oregon (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 1361, 1366-1368 .

(n98)Footnote 73. Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Health Services (9th Cir. 1999) 172 F.3d 1176, 1180 (tangential allusion that employee might function better with different supervisor without identifying vacant position or how transfer would enable performance of essential job functions is insufficient).

(n99)Footnote 74. Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Health Services (9th Cir. 1999) 172 F.3d 1176, 1181 (although plaintiff is not forced to make untenable choice between disability benefits and ADA claim, double recovery is not permitted).

(n100)Footnote 75. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 181, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 (policies behind preclusion of inconsistent opinions are general considerations of orderly administration of justice and regard for dignity of judicial proceedings).

(n101)Footnote 76. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.

(n102)Footnote 77. Drain v. Betz Labs., Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 950, 956, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864 .

(n103)Footnote 78. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 181, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 .

(n104)Footnote 79. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 183, 188 n.11, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 (court took no position on application of judicial estoppel to assertions of law, but noted that the majority of federal decisions apply doctrine to legal assertions); see Coleman v. Southern Pac. Co. (1956) 141 Cal. App. 2d 121, 128, 296 P.2d 386 ; see also Rissetto v. Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 343 (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 597, 604-605 (federal principles of judicial estoppel barred age discrimination claim under FEHA because worker had received workers' compensation benefits for temporary total disability).

(n105)Footnote 80. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 182, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 . For a discussion of collateral estoppel in the context of the law governing the particular action, see generally, ch. 43.

(n106)Footnote 81. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 183, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 .

(n107)Footnote 82. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 184, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 (ADA claim) ; see Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 959-960, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142(California courts may look to federal precedent for guidance) ; see also Rissetto v. Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 343 (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 597, 604-605 (federal principles determine judicial estoppel in federal court).

(n108)Footnote 83. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 184, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 (Stipulations with Request for Award stated that parties mutually agreed that work restriction required environment free from emotional stress and strain and no heavy work); see Dush v. Appleton Elec. Co. (8th Cir. 1997) 124 F.3d 957, 961-965 (although federal decisional law is mixed, court concluded that findings in previous workers' compensation proceeding precluded ADA suit; workers' compensation proceeding found total disability and specifically rejected as a reasonable accommodation light duty on a long term sustained basis; see also Cheatwood v. Roanoke Indus. (N.D. Ala. 1995) 891 F. Supp. 1528, 1538 (workers' compensation action determined that plaintiff was physically unable to perform essential job functions even with accommodation)).

(n109)Footnote 84. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 187, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 ; see EEOC Enforcement Guidance on the Effect of Representations Made in Applications for Benefits on the Determination of Whether a Person Is a "Qualified Individual with a Disability" Under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, in Avoiding Workplace litigation.

(n110)Footnote 85. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 189-191, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 .

(n111)Footnote 86. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 184, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 ; see Prilliman v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 943-944, 963, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 . For further discussion of Prilliman, see [3][b], below.

(n112)Footnote 87. Drain v. Betz Labs., Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 950, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864 .

(n113)Footnote 88. Drain v. Betz Labs., Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 950, 956-960, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864 (lack of factual findings in referee's approval of compromise and release not fatal to judicial estoppel argument).

(n114)Footnote 89. Prilliman v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 .

(n115)Footnote 90. Bell v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. (1997) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1382 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 .

(n116)Footnote 91. Drain v. Betz Labs., Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 950, 959-960, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 864 (unlike Prilliman plaintiff, Drain did not seek disability benefits based on inability to perform specific job function; unlike Bell plaintiff, Drain's disability application was not susceptible of varying interpretations). For further discussion of Prilliman, see [3][b], below; for further discussion of Bell, see [3][e], below.

(n117)Footnote 92. See 29 U.S.C. § 793(a); See also ch. 40, pt. C, and ch. 44, pt. C.

(n118)Footnote 93. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a).

(n119)Footnote 94. See Smith v. Robinson (1984) 468 U.S. 992; Prewitt v. United States Postal Serv. (5th Cir. 1981) 662 F.2d 292, 306 (Section 504 as requiring only nondiscrimination).

(n120)Footnote 95. See School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 287 n.17, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307 ; Lucero v. Hart (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1367, 1372 ; see also 28 C.F.R. § 41.53 (Department of Justice coordinating regulation); 45 C.F.R. § 84.3(l) (Department of Health and Human Services regulation). For a discussion of "undue hardship," see [4], below.

(n121)Footnote 96. Although the Department of Justice regulations in 28 C.F.R. § 41.1 et seq. coordinate implementation of Section 504, each federal agency providing federal financial assistance promulgates its own regulations to administer Section 504. See 29 U.S.C. § 794(a); See also ch. 40, pt. C.

(n122)Footnote 97. See 45 C.F.R. § 84.12(b).

(n123)Footnote 98. Appendix to 45 C.F.R. pt. 84.

(n124)Footnote 99. See Reynolds v. Brock (9th Cir. 1987) 815 F.2d 571, 575 .

(n125)Footnote 100. Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980 .

(n126)Footnote 101. Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 411, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980 .

(n127)Footnote 102. See Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 400-402, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980 .

(n128)Footnote 103. See 45 C.F.R. § 84.44(a). The HEW has been replaced by the Department of Health and Human Services, which has adopted implementing regulations that are identical to the former HEW regulations. See 45 C.F.R. §§ 84.1-84.55.

(n129)Footnote 104. See Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 407-408, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980 .

(n130)Footnote 105. 29 U.S.C. § 791.

(n131)Footnote 106. See Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 410, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980 .

(n132)Footnote 107. Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 411, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980 .

(n133)Footnote 108. See Students of Cal. Sch. for the Blind v. Honig (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 538 .

(n134)Footnote 109. See Students of Cal. Sch. for the Blind v. Honig (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 538, 546 .

(n135)Footnote 110. See Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 409-410, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980 ; see also 45 C.F.R. § 84.44(a).

(n136)Footnote 111. See Southeastern Community College v. Davis (1979) 442 U.S. 397, 410, 99 S. Ct. 2361, 60 L. Ed. 2d 980 (emphasis added); see also Students of Cal. School for the Blind v. Honig (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 538, 546-547 .

(n137)Footnote 112. See Students of Cal. Sch. for the Blind v. Honig (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 538, 547 ; see also School Bd. of Nassau County v. Arline (1987) 480 U.S. 273, 107 S. Ct. 1123, 94 L. Ed. 2d 307, 321 n.17 (court as required to consider whether any "reasonable accommodation" would enable handicapped person to perform essential functions of job).

(n138)Footnote 113. Alexander v. Choate (1985) 469 U.S. 287, 105 S. Ct. 712, 83 L. Ed. 2d 661 .

(n139)Footnote 114. Alexander v. Choate (1985) 469 U.S. 287, 300, 105 S. Ct. 712, 83 L. Ed. 2d 661 .

(n140)Footnote 115. See Alexander v. Choate (1985) 469 U.S. 287, 300 n.20, 105 S. Ct. 712, 83 L. Ed. 2d 661 .

(n141)Footnote 116. See Buckingham v. United States (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 735, 740 .

(n142)Footnote 117. See Buckingham v. United States (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 735, 740 .

(n143)Footnote 118. See Buckingham v. United States (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 735, 740-741 .

(n144)Footnote 119. See Gov. Code § 12940(m). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim of the employer's failure to reasonably accommodate a disability under FEHA, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2541 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction defining "reasonable accommodation," see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2542 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of CACI jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for reasonable accommodation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2509 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n145)Footnote 119.1. Gov. Code § 12940(m). See also 2 Cal. Code Regs. § 7293.9.

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.51

(n146)Footnote 119.2. Avila v. Continental Airlines (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1237, 1252-1253, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 440 (trial court properly granted employer summary judgment on claim that employer refused to accommodate plaintiff's disability, where plaintiff did not make employer aware of his disability or physical limitations it caused, such that employer was on notice that plaintiff required accommodation).

(n147)Footnote 119.3. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1010, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 ; Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 973, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 ; Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 354-356, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 . See Gov. Code § 12926(n); 2 Cal. Code Regs. § 7293.9(a).

(n148)Footnote 119.4. Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 973, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 . See 42 U.S.C. § 12111(9); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(o)(2). For discussion of the employer's duty to accommodate under the ADA, see discussion in [2][a][ii], above.

(n149)Footnote 119.4.1. Gov. Code § 12926(n); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9. See Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 947-948, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 (reasonable accommodation is interpreted flexibly). See also Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 361-362, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 (plaintiff adequately pled request for accommodation of her disability by pleading that severe polio had made her disabled and unable to walk long distances or to transport herself from her car to her work station, and that she requested that her employer provide motorized transportation from parked car to work station, motorized transportation within work site, and hand railings or chairs along hallways of job site); Spitzer v. Good Guys, Inc. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1376, 1386-1389, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236 (triable issues of fact existed as to whether defendant fulfilled its duty to reasonably accommodate plaintiff); Schmidt v. Safeway, Inc. (D. Ore. 1994) 864 F. Supp. 991, 997 (reasonableness of accommodation is ordinarily issue for jury).

(n150)Footnote 119.4.2. Watkins v. Ameripride Services (9th Cir. 2004) 375 F.3d 821, 828 ; Hanson v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 215, 227, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 487 .

(n151)Footnote 119.4.3. Watkins v. Ameripride Services (9th Cir. 2004) 375 F.3d 821, 828 (employer that allowed employee to do special deliveries at his former rate of pay for two months, left his former job open for one year to allow employee to reclaim position after surgery, and offered employee job that he could perform despite his disability, which he declined, satisfied its obligation to reasonably accommodate disability).

(n152)Footnote 119.4.4. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1010, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 ; Wilson v. County of Orange (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1192, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 439 .

(n153)Footnote 119.4.5. See Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1009-1012, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 (employee's proposed accommodation of giving him priority in assignment of course sections to enable him to maintain his full-time employment status and keep his medical benefits was not reasonable, where it was not modification or adjustment to workplace necessary to enable him to perform essential functions of his position; accommodation offered by employer of time to complete master's degree program and replacement of time spent working on a master's degree for professional development requirements did not guarantee employee immediate full-time employment, but was modification or adjustment to workplace that would have enabled him to perform essential functions of job held or desired).

(n154)Footnote 119.5. 42 U.S.C. § 12111.

(n155)Footnote 119.6. Gov. Code § 12940(m).

(n156)Footnote 119.7. Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 973-980, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 .

(n157)Footnote 120. Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 360-361 & fn. 4, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 .

(n158)Footnote 120.1. Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 256, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 . See also Brundage v. Hahn (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 228, 235, 239, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830 (construing former § 12940(k) in light of EEOC interpretive guidance, which implies employee must be able to perform essential functions of job to be entitled to accommodation).

(n159)Footnote 120.2. Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 977-980, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 (on employer's motion for summary adjudication, plaintiff presented triable issue of fact about whether she was able to perform essential functions of available vacant position with employer with or without accommodation, so that there was triable issue about whether employer failed to reasonably accommodate her by reassigning her to such position).

(n160)Footnote 120.3. Health & Saf. Code § 11362.5.

(n161)Footnote 120.4. 21 U.S.C. §§ 812, 844(a).

(n162)Footnote 120.5. See Gonzales v. Raich (2005) 545 U.S. 1, 26-29, 125 S. Ct. 2195, 162 L. Ed. 2d 1 ; United States v. Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative (2001) 532 U.S. 483, 491-495, 121 S. Ct. 1711, 149 L. Ed. 2d 722 .

(n163)Footnote 121. Health & Saf. Code § 11362.785(a).

(n164)Footnote 121.1. Ross v. RagingWire Telecommunications, Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920, 925-931, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 382, 174 P.3d 200 .

(n165)Footnote 121.1.1. See, e.g., A.M. v. Albertson's, LLC (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 455, 464-466 (employer's single failure to make reasonable accommodation even during long period of accommodation had tragic consequences for employee who was not accommodated, and to extent single failure to accommodate could have been trivial within context of a larger pattern of accommodation, jury found it substantial, not trivial).

(n166)Footnote 121.2. King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 442-444, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 (former employee did not sustain his burden of demonstrating genuine issue of material fact as to whether he engaged in interactive process in good faith, given his failure to get additional clarification from his doctor to specifically restrict his hours and to communicate his limitations to his supervisors and to produce clear and unambiguous doctor's orders restricting hours he could work); Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 263, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 .

(n167)Footnote 122. King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 442, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 (employer's failure to provide reasonable accommodation is violation of FEHA, even in absence of adverse employment action); Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 55-61, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 ; Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 361-362, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 ; see Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 260, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 .

(n168)Footnote 122.1. King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 442, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 (employer's failure to provide reasonable accommodation is violation of FEHA even in absence of adverse employment action); Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 54, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 ; Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 256, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 .

(n169)Footnote 122.2. A.M. v. Albertson's, LLC (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 455, 463-464 (failure to accommodate and failure to engage in interactive process are separate, independent claims involving different proof of facts);

Wysinger v. Automobile Club of So. Cal. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 413, 424-426, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 (jury verdicts finding employer not liable for failure to make reasonable accommodation but finding employer liable for failure to engage in interactive process were not inconsistent, because they involved separate causes of action and proof of different facts).

(n170)Footnote 122.3. Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 54, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 . For discussion of duty to engage in interactive dialogue, see [b][i], below.

(n171)Footnote 122.4. A.M. v. Albertson's, LLC (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 455, 464 . See Gov. Code § 12940(m).

(n172)Footnote 122.5. A.M. v. Albertson's, LLC (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 455, 464 .

(n173)Footnote 123. Raine v. City of Burbank (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1215, 1222-1228, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 899 (employer that had reassigned patrol officer to temporary light-duty position at front desk after he tore his meniscus while on duty was not obligated to maintain officer in that position after being advised by officer's personal physician that disability was permanent and he would never be able to perform essential functions of patrol officer, where there was no vacant position to accommodate officer and accommodation actually sought would have required creation of new sworn-officer position).

(n174)Footnote 123.1. Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 224, 244, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837 ; Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 263, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 .

(n175)Footnote 123.2. See Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 224, 247-49, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837 (employer refused to discuss interactive process with former employee's attorney; ordinarily, an employee cannot require the interactive process to proceed through his or her attorney, but the facts here permit it). For discussion of interactive process, see [b][I], below.

(n176)Footnote 124. Gov. Code § 12926(s); Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 947-948, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 ; see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9(b).

(n177)Footnote 125. Bagatti v. Department of Rehabilitation (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 344, 361-362, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 ; County of Fresno v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1553, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557 .

(n178)Footnote 126. County of Fresno v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1550, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557 .

(n179)Footnote 127. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7293.6(i), 7293.7; See also § 41.12[2][c].

(n180)Footnote 127.1. County of Fresno v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1553, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557 .

(n181)Footnote 128. County of Fresno v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1553, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557 (applying evidentiary framework in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668).

(n182)Footnote 129. See County of Fresno v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1551, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557 .

(n183)Footnote 130. See County of Fresno v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1555-1556, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557 .

(n184)Footnote 131. See County of Fresno v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1541, 1555-1556, 277 Cal. Rptr. 557 .

(n185)Footnote 131.1. Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 950-951, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 (because FEHA and its interpretative regulations were modeled on Federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and ADA, decisions interpreting those laws may be useful in deciding cases under FEHA).

(n186)Footnote 131.2. See [a], above.

(n187)Footnote 131.3. Gov. Code § 12940(n).

(n188)Footnote 132. Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 61-63, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 .

(n189)Footnote 132.0.1. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1013, 1014, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 (evidence was sufficient to show employee initiated interactive process, where, although it was disputed whether employee told employer's director of human resources his condition did not affect his job performance or ability to perform his job, employee presented undisputed evidence he told human resources director he needed to avoid stress and she told his supervisors that he had health condition).

(n190)Footnote 132.1. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1014-1015, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 (employer failed to engage in interactive process, where, although employee expressed satisfaction with employer's response and did not request any further accommodation, reasonable jury could have found employer should have initiated second meeting with employee before deciding to reduce number of course sections assigned to him and effectively changing his employment status to part time, and that employer, rather than employee, had burden of initiating second meeting because employer uniquely had knowledge that would affect his employment status); Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 62 n.22, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 .

(n191)Footnote 132.1.1. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1013, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 .

(n192)Footnote 132.2. Wysinger v. Automobile Club of So. Cal. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 413, 426, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 (jury properly found employer liable for failure to engage in interactive process in good faith, where employee testified that employer did not offer any specific accommodation even after his doctor wrote to company on his behalf).

(n193)Footnote 132.3. Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 980-984, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 . But see Wysinger v. Automobile Club of Southern California (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 413, 425, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 (FEHA, unlike ADA, imposes liability on employers for failing to engage in interactive process regardless of whether reasonable accommodation was possible); Claudio v. Regents of University of California (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 224, 245, 248, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837 (holding that since triable issue existed concerning employer's failure to participate in interactive process, judgment could not be affirmed on the ground that no alternative jobs were available).

(n194)Footnote 132.4. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1015-1019, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 (after complete discovery in litigation process, employee could not show that reasonable accommodation directed to limitations created by his disability was available during time period interactive process should have occurred); Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 984-989, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190 (reasonable jury could find that employer caused breakdown in interactive process by refusing to provide information about available positions that might have assisted employee in preparing list of her work-related medical restrictions, and that employer's demand for medical release before it would reengage in interactive process was unreasonable, because medical doctor might not want to release severely disabled patient for unspecified work without knowing exact demands of job patient would be expected to do; jury could also find it was unreasonable for employer to determine unilaterally that employee was unable to perform any available vacant position in company with or without accommodation and that her condition was not going to improve in near future; jury could also find that employer's decision to terminate employee without advance warning or further discussion was unreasonable and caused breakdown in interactive process).

(n195)Footnote 132.5. Nadaf-Rahrov v. The Neiman Marcus Group, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 952, 987, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190. See Spitzer v. Good Guys, Inc. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1376, 1388, 1390, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236 (where triable issue existed whether employer knew initial accommodation was ineffective, employer could be liable for failing to provide further accommodation); Fjellestad v. Pizza Hut of America, Inc. (8th Cir. 1999) 188 F.3d 944, 952-953 & n. 6 (there was factual dispute about whether employer engaged in good faith interactive process even though employer provided some accommodations).

(n196)Footnote 132.6. See Wysinger v. Automobile Club of So. Cal. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 413, 426, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 (jury verdict finding employer not liable for failure to accommodate disabled employee did not mean jurors found employer acted in good faith on interactive process claim, where jury could find employer liable for failure to engage in interactive process in good faith because employer obstructed process to determine reasonable accommodation).

(n197)Footnote 132.7. Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 224, 243, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837; see Gov. Code § 12965. See also Wysinger v. Automobile Club of So. Cal. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 413, 424-426, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 (failure to engage in interactive process is separate FEHA violation independent of employer's failure to provide reasonable disability accommodation, which is also FEHA violation).

(n198)Footnote 133. Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 54, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874; Claudio v. Regents of University of California (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 224, 243 [35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837].

(n199)Footnote 133.1. Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 62 n.22, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874.

(n200)Footnote 133.2. Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 54, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874.

(n201)Footnote 133.3. Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 224, 247, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837.

(n202)Footnote 133.4. Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 224, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837.

(n203)Footnote 133.5. Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 224, 244-249, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837.

(n204)Footnote 134. Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 954, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 (employer does not satisfy reasonable accommodation requirements by offering employee insured disability leave).

(n205)Footnote 135. Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142.

(n206)Footnote 136. Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 954, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142. But see Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 54, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 (two principles underlie cause of action for failure to provide a reasonable accommodation: (1) employee must request accommodation [citing Prilliman]; (2) parties must engage in interactive process regarding requested accommodation and, if process fails, responsibility for failure rests with party who failed to participate in good faith; for discussion of interactive process, see [b][i], above).

(n207)Footnote 136.1. Claudio v. Regents of the University of California (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 224, 244, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837; Jensen v. Wells Fargo Bank (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 245, 266, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55.

(n208)Footnote 137. Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 956-958, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 ; see [b], above.

(n209)Footnote 138. Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 .

(n210)Footnote 139. Prilliman v. United Airlines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 956-962, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 ; but see Rissetto v. Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 343 (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 597, 604-605 (federal principles of judicial estoppel barred subsequent age discrimination claim under FEHA because worker had received workers' compensation benefits for temporary total disability and took inconsistent positions).

(n211)Footnote 140. See Gov. Code § 12993(a).

(n212)Footnote 141. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659 .

(n213)Footnote 142. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 664-665 .

(n214)Footnote 143. See Langridge v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 664, 667, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 .

(n215)Footnote 144. Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1528-1530 (the Legislature could have, but failed to have, included explicit statements exempting FEHA claims from workers compensation exclusivity provisions).

(n216)Footnote 145. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n217)Footnote 146. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1154, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 ; see discussion in § 43.01[14][c.1].

(n218)Footnote 147. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 181, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 (establishing principles for proper application of judicial estoppel in ADA context); see Bell v. Wells Fargo Bank (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 1387-1388, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 .

(n219)Footnote 148. Jackson v. County of Los Angeles (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 171, 183, 188 n. 11, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 96 . see § 41.51[2][a][v][B].

(n220)Footnote 149. Bell v. Wells Fargo Bank (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 1385, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 ; Prilliman v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 956-960, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 .

(n221)Footnote 150. Bell v. Wells Fargo Bank (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 1387-1388, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 .

(n222)Footnote 151. Bell v. Wells Fargo Bank (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 1387, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 .

(n223)Footnote 152. Bell v. Wells Fargo Bank (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 1387, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 (citing Jackson).

(n224)Footnote 153. Prilliman v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 935, 960, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 142 .

(n225)Footnote 154. Bell v. Wells Fargo Bank (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 1387-1388, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 354 ; see Swanks v. Washington Metro. Area Transit Auth. (D.C. Cir. 1997) 116 F.3d 582, 584-586 (in the ADA context, disability determinations take account of reasonable accommodation although Social Security Act does not).

(n226)Footnote 155. See 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(5); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.15(d) (ADA); 28 C.F.R. § 41.53 (coordinating regulation for Section 504 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741 (implementing regulation for Section 503 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973).

(n227)Footnote 156. Cripe v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 2001) 261 F.3d 877, 885 .

(n228)Footnote 157. Morton v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1249, 1256-1257 , cert. denied, overruled on other grounds in Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 995-998 .

(n229)Footnote 158. Morton v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1249, 1257 , cert. denied, overruled on other grounds in Bates v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 974, 995-998 Barnett v. U.S. Air, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 228 F.3d 1105, 1113 ; see also Nelson v. Thornburgh (E.D. Pa. 1983) 567 F. Supp. 369, 379 , aff'd, 732 F.2d 146 (3d Cir. 1984) ; Prewitt v. United States Postal Serv. (5th Cir. 1981) 662 F.2d 292, 308 (construing Section 501 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973, governing employment of handicapped individuals in federal government).

(n230)Footnote 159. Prewitt v. United States Postal Serv. (5th Cir. 1981) 662 F.2d 292, 308 (construing Section 501 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973, governing employment of handicapped individuals in federal government).

(n231)Footnote 160. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(10)(B)(i).

(n232)Footnote 161. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(p)(i).

(N233)Footnote 162. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(10)(B)(ii); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(p)(2)(ii).

(n234)Footnote 163. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(10)(B)(iii); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(p)(2)(iii).

(n235)Footnote 164. 42 U.S.C. § 12111(10)(B)(iv); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(p)(2)(iv).

(n236)Footnote 165. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(p)(2)(v).

(n237)Footnote 166. See Vande Zande v. Wisconsin Dep't of Admin. (7th Cir. 1995) 44 F.3d 538, 546 .

(n238)Footnote 167. Cf. Ricks v. Xerox Corp. (D. Kan. 1995) 877 F. Supp. 1468, 1477 , aff'd, 96 F.3d 1453 (10th Cir. 1996) (employer not required to hire a full-time helper) and Hogue v. MQS Inspection, Inc. (D. Colo. 1995) 875 F. Supp 714, 721-722 (not undue hardship to provide helper or to reassign marginal job duties of supervisor whose leg and ankle injuries precluded on-site inspections).

(n239)Footnote 168. 28 C.F.R. § 42.511(c); 45 C.F.R. § 84.12(c).

(n240)Footnote 169. Appendix A to 45 C.F.R. pt. 84.

(n241)Footnote 170. Gov. Code § 12940(m); see Gov. Code § 12926(s) (definition of "undue hardship"). For the standard jury instruction for the affirmative defense that proposed accommodations would cause the employer undue hardship, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2545 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of CACI jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for the affirmative defense of undue hardship, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2510 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n242)Footnote 171. See Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 860 F.2d 1514, 1519 (construing 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9).

(n243)Footnote 172. Gov. Code § 12926(s).

(n244)Footnote 173. See Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1), (2); see also Gov. Code § 12926(f) (definition of "essential" functions). See Sharpe v. American Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1045 , where plaintiff, an epileptic, asserted he could not handle a job transfer to a more stressful position. The employer initially transferred him and he had some seizures. The company assisted him to seek other employment within the company, considered him for positions for which he was not the most qualified candidate, and ultimately offered him his old position back, accommodations by taking affirmative steps to secure employment for him. Under the State of Washington law, interpreted in accordance with Title VII accommodation standards, the employer did not fail to reasonably accommodate.

(n245)Footnote 174. [Reserved]

(n246)Footnote 175. See Gov. Code § 12945(b)(2); for a discussion of leaves of absence for pregnancy disability, see ch. 8.

(n247)Footnote 176. See Gov. Code § 12945(b)(3). Prior to the 1992 amendment to Gov. Code § 12945 (see Stats. 1992, ch. 907 (effective January 1, 1993)), employers subject to Title VII, i.e., those employing 15 or more employees, were not required to reasonably accommodate temporarily disabled pregnant employees by transferring them to less strenuous or hazardous positions, whereas smaller employers of 5 to 15 employees who were subject to the FEHA but not Title VII were required to do so. See DFEH v. Save Mart (1992) FEHC Dec. No. 92-01, p. 7. Thus, application of Gov. Code § 12945(b)(3) to employers subject to both the FEHA and Title VII rectifies that anomaly.

(n248)Footnote 177. Gov. Code § 12945(b)(1).

(n249)Footnote 178. See Gov. Code § 12945(b)(3).

(n250)Footnote 179. Armstrong v. Flowers Hosp., Inc. (11th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1308 .

(n251)Footnote 180. See Armstrong v. Flowers Hosp., Inc. (11th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1308, 1314-1317 .

63 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.52

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.52 Accommodation of Religious Beliefs and Practices

[1] Generally

As discussed in § 41.35, Title VII and the FEHA protect employees and applicants from discharge, failure or refusal to hire, and other adverse discriminatory actions because of their religious beliefs.ⁿ¹ In addition, however, Title VII and the FEHA require an employer to accommodate an individual's religious beliefs and practices, unless such accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the employer.ⁿ² Thus, an employer must provide a means through which an employee may eliminate his or her religious conflict while preserving his or her employment status.ⁿ³ The term "religion" may include moral or ethical beliefs concerning right and wrong which are sincerely held with the strength of traditional religious view.ⁿ⁴ A plaintiff who fails to raise a reasonable inference of disparate treatment on account of religion^{n4.1} may nonetheless show that the employer violated its affirmative duty under Title VII to reasonably accommodate employees' religious beliefs.^{n4.2}

A plaintiff may establish a prima facie case of failure to accommodate by pleading and proving that (1) he or she has a bona fide religious belief;ⁿ⁵ (2) he or she informed the employer of the belief and that it conflicted with his or her employment responsibilities; and (3) an adverse employment action^{n5.1} (such as discharge) was taken against plaintiff because of plaintiff's observance of that belief.ⁿ⁶ The burden then shifts to the employer to show that it made good faith efforts to accommodate the employee's religious beliefs.ⁿ⁷ The employer meets its obligation when it reasonably accommodates the employee's belief,ⁿ⁸ but if the employer's efforts are unsuccessful, the employer must also demonstrate that it was unable to reasonably accommodate without undue hardship.ⁿ⁹

[2] Duty to Accommodate Under Title VII

[a] Scope of Duty

An accommodation obligation was added to Title VII when that statute was amended by the Employment Opportunity Act of 1972ⁿ¹⁰ to define the term "religion," as it is used in Title VII, to include all aspects of religious observance and practice, as well as belief, unless an employer demonstrates that he or she is unable to reasonably accommodate to an employee's or prospective employee's religious observance or practice without undue hardship.ⁿ¹¹

The EEOC guidelines on religious discrimination provide that under the foregoing definition, failure to reasonably accommodate is an unlawful employment practice, unless accommodation imposes undue hardship.ⁿ¹² Generally, an undue hardship is posed by an accommodation that would entail "more than a de minimis cost and have an effect on the conduct of the business."ⁿ¹³

The obligation arises after an employee or prospective employee notifies an employer or labor organization of his or her need for religious accommodation. Refusal to accommodate is justified only when the employer or labor organization can demonstrate that an undue hardship would in fact result from each available alternative method of accommodation.ⁿ¹⁴ However, once an employer has provided a reasonable system for accommodation, it need not show that each alternative accommodation would result in undue hardship.ⁿ¹⁵

The burden is on the employer to undertake initial steps toward accommodation.ⁿ¹⁶ Furthermore, the employer must attempt accommodation before taking any adverse action against an employee.ⁿ¹⁷ An aggrieved employee is under no burden to propose specific means of accommodation,ⁿ¹⁸ but the employee does have a duty to cooperate with the measures suggested by his or her employer,ⁿ¹⁹ even if the accommodation is not the least costly alternative for the employee.ⁿ²⁰ The employee's concomitant duty to cooperate arises only after the employer has made its suggestions of possible accommodations.ⁿ²¹ If the employer does not make an effort to accommodate the employee prior to taking adverse action against the employee, the employee's duty of cooperation does not arise.ⁿ²²

Generally, if both the employee and the employer propose a reasonable accommodation, the employer is not required to accept the employee's proposal.ⁿ²³ However, if the employer's proposal does not eliminate the employee's religious conflict, or if the employer does not make any proposal, the employer must either accept the employee's proposal or demonstrate that the proposal would constitute an undue hardship.ⁿ²⁴ In one case,ⁿ²⁵ the plaintiff suggested both a different scheduling arrangement or voluntary trading of shifts with other employees to avoid working on his Sabbath. The Ninth Circuit held the employer liable on the grounds that it failed to prove that the plaintiff's suggestions were infeasible or would overburden the other employees and it did not even attempt the suggested accommodations on a trial basis.

When there is more than one method of accommodation available that would not cause undue hardship, the EEOC will determine whether the accommodation offered is reasonable by examining the following:ⁿ²⁶

1. The alternatives for accommodation considered by the employer; and
2. The alternatives for accommodation, if any, actually offered to the individual requiring accommodation.

Some alternatives for accommodating religious practices might disadvantage the individual with respect to his or her employment opportunities, such as compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment. Therefore, EEOC guidelines provide that when there is more than one means of accommodation that would not cause undue hardship, the employer must offer the alternative that least disadvantages the individual with respect to his or her employment opportunities.^{n26.1} However, the Supreme Court has held that this requirement is "inconsistent with the plain meaning of [Title VII]" to the extent that it requires an employer to accept any alternative favored by the employee, short of undue hardship.ⁿ²⁷

[b] Work Schedule Conflicts

According to the EEOC, employees and prospective employees most frequently request an accommodation because their religious practices conflict with their work schedules.ⁿ²⁸ Thus, the guidelines provide the following illustrations of accommodation alternatives that should be considered by employers: (1) voluntary substitutes and "swaps";ⁿ²⁹ (2) flexible scheduling;ⁿ³⁰ and (3) lateral transfer and change of job assignments.ⁿ³¹

In many instances courts have found an accommodation of permission to use paid or unpaid leave to be sufficient.ⁿ³²

[c] Union Membership Conflicts

The National Labor Relations Act (NLRA) sanctions "security agreements" under which a collective bargaining agreement between an employer and a union requires every employee to pay union dues regardless of whether he or she actually joins the union, and failure to pay dues may result in discharge.ⁿ³³ The EEOC guidelines provide that when an employee's religious practices do not permit compliance with such agreements, the labor organization should accommodate the employee by not requiring the employee to join the organization, and by permitting him or her to donate a sum equivalent to dues to a charitable organization.ⁿ³⁴ In Yott v. North American Rockwell Corp.,ⁿ³⁵ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that an employer and a union made a good faith effort to accommodate such an employee's beliefs when they offered to permit the employee to substitute payment to a charity, including his own church, for payment of union dues.ⁿ³⁶ In another case, the Ninth Circuit concluded that an employer and union had failed to reasonably accommodate an employee's religious beliefs when the employer and union attempted to require the employee to pay the equivalent amount to a union fund for charitable purposes, rather than permit the employee to pay the equivalent amount to a charity of his own choice.ⁿ³⁷

Title VII is not preempted by applicable collective bargaining agreements. In Felt v. Atchinson, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railway Co.,ⁿ³⁸ the court held that a religious scheduling accommodation was not a minor matter to be arbitrated under the collective bargaining agreement. The Felt court stated that absent plaintiff's knowing agreement to forego Title VII's comprehensive statutory rights and remedies, he or she cannot be compelled to arbitrate Title VII claims under a collective bargaining agreement which states only that its work rules will comply with federal laws and without regard to religion.ⁿ³⁹

[d] Personal Appearance Conflicts

In some cases, employer rules regarding personal appearance may collide with an employee's religious beliefs or practices. For example, in Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc.,ⁿ⁴⁰ an employee whose duties involved potential exposure to toxic gas was suspended from his job without pay because he would not comply with a safety policy prohibiting beards that prevented an air-tight face seal while using respirators.ⁿ⁴¹ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the employee established a prima facie case of religious discrimination by proving that he had a bona fide belief that shaving his beard would be contrary to the Sikh religion, that he informed his employer of his belief, and that the employer thereafter removed him from his machinist job.ⁿ⁴² The court concluded, however, that the employer attempted good faith reasonable accommodation because it suspended the employee without pay (while other employees who refused to shave were discharged), actively sought an alternative job for the employee by offering him four different positions, and promised to restore the employee to his machinist job if a respirator were developed that he could safely use.ⁿ⁴³

[3] Duty to Accommodate Under the FEHA

It is an unlawful employment practice under the FEHA for an employer to refuse to hire or employ a person; refuse to select a person for a training program leading to employment; bar or discharge a person from employment or from a training program leading to employment; or discriminate against a person in compensation, or in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment because of a conflict between the person's religious belief or observance and any employment requirement, unless the employer demonstrates that it has explored any reasonable alternative means of accommodating the religious belief or observance, but is unable to reasonably accommodate the religious belief or observance without undue hardship on the conduct of the employer's business.ⁿ⁴⁴

Reasonable alternatives include the possibilities of excusing the person from those duties which conflict with his or her religious belief or observance, or permitting those duties to be performed either at another time or by another person.ⁿ⁴⁵ FEHC regulations provide that reasonable accommodation may include, but is not limited to, job restructuring, job reassignment, modification of work practices, or allowing time off in an amount equal to the amount of nonregularly scheduled time that the employee has worked in order to avoid a conflict with his or her religious observances.ⁿ⁴⁶ FEHC regulations also set forth the following specific rules regarding religious accommodation:ⁿ⁴⁷

1. Scheduled times for interviews, examinations, and other functions related to employment opportunities must reasonably accommodate religious practices.
2. Dress standards or requirements for personal appearance must be flexible enough to take into account religious practices.
3. An employer or union may not require union membership from any employee whose religious creed prohibits such membership. An employee's religious creed must be reasonably accommodated with respect to union dues.

[4] Undue Hardship

[a] Title VII

Once it is established that an employer has failed to accommodate religious beliefs, the employer may avoid liability under Title VII only by establishing that he or she was unable to reasonably accommodate without undue hardship to the conduct of his or her business.ⁿ⁴⁸ The burden of proving undue hardship is on the employer.ⁿ⁴⁹

"Undue hardship" contemplates "a gain-seeking employer exclusively concerned with preserving and promoting its economic efficiency."ⁿ⁵⁰ There must be proof of actual imposition on co-workers or disruption of the work routine; merely conceivable or hypothetical hardships are insufficient.ⁿ⁵¹ Thus, in one case the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the alleged "spiritual hardship" an employer would suffer by excusing an employee from attending mandatory religious services did not rise to the required level of hardship because the employer could not link the alleged "spiritual hardship" to an adverse impact on the conduct of the employer's business.ⁿ⁵² Another court has held that the risks of increased liability created by hiring an applicant who used peyote for religious purposes only a few times a year were too speculative to qualify as an undue hardship, particularly since requiring the applicant to take a day off after each peyote ceremony would virtually eliminate the risk that the drug's influence would cause an accident.ⁿ⁵³ If an accommodation would require the employer to violate federal law, such an accommodation presents an undue hardship.^{n53.1}

In Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison,ⁿ⁵⁴ a plaintiff employee whose religion prohibited working Saturdays argued that an employer would suffer no undue hardship if the employer accommodated his religious beliefs by replacing him with supervisors, qualified personnel from other departments, or other available employees through the payment of premium wages for overtime compensation.ⁿ⁵⁵ However, the United States Supreme Court explained that the foregoing alternatives would involve costs to the employer, either in the form of lost efficiency in other jobs or higher wages, and declared that accommodation requiring the employer to bear more than a de minimus cost constituted an undue hardship.ⁿ⁵⁶

According to the EEOC, it will determine what constitutes "more than a de minimus cost" with due regard to the identifiable cost in relation to the size and operating cost of an employer, and the number of individuals who would in fact require a particular accommodation.ⁿ⁵⁷ The EEOC interprets Hardison to mean that costs similar to the regular payment of premium wages to substitutes would constitute undue hardship. However, the EEOC presumes that the infrequent payment of premium wages for a substitute, or the payment of premium wages while a more permanent accommodation is being sought, is a cost that an employer can be required to bear as a means of providing a reasonable accommodation. The EEOC also presumes that, generally, the payment of administrative costs necessary for providing accommodation will not constitute more than a de minimus cost. Administrative costs, for example, include those costs involved in rearranging schedules and recording substitutions for payroll purposes.ⁿ⁵⁸

Accommodation of an employee's religious practices constitutes undue hardship if it requires a variance from a bona fide seniority system and if the variance would deny another employee his or her job or shift preference guaranteed by that system.ⁿ⁵⁹

The plaintiff in Hardison was subject to a seniority system contained in a collective-bargaining agreement and implemented by a union steward through a system of bidding for particular shift assignments as they became available.ⁿ⁶⁰ The plaintiff argued that the Title VII accommodation obligation takes precedence, but the Court disagreed, stating that although neither a collective bargaining agreement nor a seniority system may be employed to violate Title VII, the duty to accommodate does not require an employer to act inconsistently with an otherwise valid agreement.ⁿ⁶¹ The Court explained that if the seniority system were circumvented by relieving the plaintiff of Saturday work and ordering a senior employee to replace him, the employer would have denied the senior employee his or her shift preference, and would also have deprived the senior employee of his or her contractual rights under the collective-bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁶² Using a "reverse discrimination" rationale, the Court also explained that because no other employee volunteered to relieve the plaintiff on Saturdays, the employer would have had to deprive another employee of his or her shift preference at least in part because he or she did not adhere to a religion that observed the Saturday Sabbath. The Court declared that Title VII does not contemplate such unequal treatment.ⁿ⁶³

The EEOC guidelines provide that arrangements for voluntary substitutes and swaps do not constitute an undue hardship to the extent the arrangements do not violate a bona fide seniority system. Furthermore, employers and unions may include arrangements for voluntary substitutes and swaps as part of a collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁶⁴

Accommodation of an employee's religious practices constitutes undue hardship for the employer if it would inhibit the employer's efforts to attract and retain a qualified, diverse workforce, which the company reasonably views as vital to its commercial success, or if accommodation would result in discrimination against the accommodated employee's co-workers or deprive them of contractual or other statutory rights. Title VII also does not require an employer to accommodate an employee's desire to impose his or her religious beliefs on his or her coworkers.^{n64.1} On the other hand, accommodating an employee's religious beliefs does not create undue hardship for an employer merely because an employee's co-workers find his or her conduct irritating or unwelcome.^{n64.2}

[b] Fair Employment and Housing Act

Employers may also be excused from the FEHA duty of religious accommodation if accommodation imposes an undue hardship.ⁿ⁶⁵ FEHC regulations provide that in determining whether a particular accommodation would impose an undue hardship on an employer's operation, the factors that may be considered include, but are not limited to:ⁿ⁶⁶

1. The size of the relevant establishment or facility with respect to the number of employees, the size of budget, and other such matters;
2. The overall size of the employer with respect to the number of employees, number and type of facilities, and size of budget;
3. The nature of the establishment's or facility's operation, including the composition and structure of the workforce or membership;

4. The nature of the employer's operation, including the composition and structure of the workforce;
5. The nature and cost of the accommodation involved;
6. Reasonable notice to the employer of the need for accommodation; and
7. Any available reasonable alternative means of accommodation.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Accommodation Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Racial Discrimination Coverage & Definitions Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Religious Discrimination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a)-(d), (j) (FEHA).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(l) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(j) (FEHA); see also [2] through [4], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. Hudson v. Western Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 851 F.2d 261, 266 (Title VII); see also Ansonia Bd. of Educ. v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 68-69, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 (employer must provide reasonable religious accommodation unless it would cause employer undue hardship, but employer is not required to provide accommodation of employee's choice).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Frazer v. Illinois Dep't of Employment Sec. (1989) 489 U.S. 829, 834, 109 S. Ct. 1514, 103 L. Ed. 2d 914

(n5)Footnote 4.1. See § 41.35.

(n6)Footnote 4.2. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 ; Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 606 ; Chalmers v. Tulon Co. of Richmond (4th Cir. 1996) 101 F.3d 1012, 1017-1018 .

(n7)Footnote 5. For a discussion relating to the "sincerity" of religious beliefs for equal employment opportunity purposes, see § 41.35.

(n8)Footnote 5.1. If the claim is retaliation rather than direct discrimination, the adverse action need not be workplace-related or employment-related, only adverse. See Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway Co. v. White (2006) 548 U.S. 53, 126 S. Ct. 2405, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345 (scope of anti-retaliation provision of Title VII extends beyond workplace-related or employment-related retaliatory acts and harm, so employee need only allege and prove "adverse action" rather than "adverse employment action" under Title VII's anti-retaliation provision), discussed at § 41.130[1A], below.

(n9)Footnote 6. See Bodett v. CoxCom, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 366 F.3d 736, 743 (Title VII) ; Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 606 (Title VII); EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1512 ; Proctor v. Consol. Freightways Corp. of Delaware (9th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 1472, 1475 (Title VII); see also Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 (Title VII); Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair, Etc. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 (Title VII).

(n10)Footnote 7. See Bodett v. CoxCom, Inc. (9th Cir. 2004) 366 F.3d 736, 744-745 (Title VII) ; EEOC v.

Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1512 ; Proctor v. Consol. Freightways Corp. of Delaware (9th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 1472, 1475 (Title VII); Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 (Title VII); Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair, Etc. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 (Title VII).

(n11)Footnote 8. See Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 606 (Title VII; burden shifts to employer to show it initiated good faith efforts to reasonably accommodate employee's religious practices); Ansonia Bd. of Educ. v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 68-69, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305, 315 (employer as not required to show that employee's alternative accommodations would result in undue hardship).

(n12)Footnote 9. Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 606 (Title VII); Proctor v. Consol. Freightways Corp. of Delaware (9th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 1472, 1475 (Title VII); Brener v. Diagnostic Center Hosp. (5th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 141, 144 (Title VII); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j); see also Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 (Title VII); Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair, Etc. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 (Title VII). For a discussion relating to "undue hardship" generally, see [4], below.

(n13)Footnote 10. See Pub. L. No. 92-261.

(n14)Footnote 11. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j); see Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (10th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1481, 1487 (construing 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j) to define religion as any practice, belief, or observance which employer can reasonably accommodate without undue hardship).

(n15)Footnote 12. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(b); see also Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 74, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 (intent and effect of Title VII definition is to make it unlawful practice for employer not to make reasonable accommodations in absence of undue hardship). For a discussion of "undue hardship," see [4], below.

(n16)Footnote 13. See Opuku-Boateng v. California (9th Cir. 1996) 95 F.3d 1461, 1468 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1228 (1997) ; Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 74, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 ; for a complete discussion of undue hardship in making an accommodation, see [4], below.

(n17)Footnote 14. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(c)(1); Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1440 ; Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (10th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1481, 1489-1490 (employer may prevail without making efforts to accommodate if it shows no accommodation could have been made without undue hardship). One commentator suggests that the phrase "each available alternative method" in 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(c)(1) means alternatives either suggested by the plaintiff or patently obvious.

(n18)Footnote 15. See Ansonia Bd. of Educ. v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 68, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 ; Hudson v. Western Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 851 F.2d 261, 266 .

(n19)Footnote 16. See Opuku-Boateng v. California (9th Cir. 1996) 95 F.3d 1461, 1468 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1228 (1997) ; Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1440 ; EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1512 ; EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 615 ; Proctor v. Consol. Freightways Corp. of Delaware (9th Cir. 1986) 795 F.2d 1472, 1475 .

(n20)Footnote 17. See Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1440 ; Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (10th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1481, 1487-1488 (settlement offers made by employer during administrative proceedings were not reasonable accommodation that cured discriminatory conduct).

(n21)Footnote 18. See Brener v. Diagnostic Center Hosp. (5th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 141, 145 ; cf. Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair, Etc. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 (employer as not permitted to excuse failure to accommodate by pointing to deficiencies in plaintiff's suggested accommodation).

(n22)Footnote 19. Brener v. Diagnostic Center Hosp. (5th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 141, 145 ; Yott v. North American Rockwell Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 904, 908 ; Sharpe v. American Tel. & Tel. Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1045 ; but see Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (10th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1481, 1488-1489 (since duty to cooperate is triggered by employer's initial efforts to accommodate, there was no duty to cooperate with settlement offers that did not constitute accommodation attempts); Smith v. Pyro Min. Co. (6th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 1081, 1085, 1086-1088 (employee not required to cooperate with accommodation attempt that required him to seek his own replacement for working on Sunday, when employee sincerely believed working on Sunday was morally wrong and that inducing another to work was sin).

(n23)Footnote 20. See Pinsker v. Joint Dist. Number 28J (10th Cir. 1984) 735 F.2d 388, 390-391 .

(n24)Footnote 21. Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433, 1440-1441 .

(n25)Footnote 22. Heller v. EBB Auto Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 8 F.3d 1433 .

(n26)Footnote 23. See Ansonia Bd. of Educ. v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 68, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 .

(n27)Footnote 24. See Opuku-Boateng v. California (9th Cir. 1996) 95 F.3d 1461, 1467 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1228 (1997) ; EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 615 ; see EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1512 .

(n28)Footnote 25. See Opuku-Boateng v. California (9th Cir. 1996) 95 F.3d 1461, 1467 , cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1228 (1997) .

(n29)Footnote 26. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(c)(2); for a discussion relating to "undue hardship" generally, see [4], below.

(n30)Footnote 26.1. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(c)(2).

(n31)Footnote 27. Ansonia Board of Education v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 69 n.6, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 .

(n32)Footnote 28. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(d)(1); see also Hudson v. Western Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 851 F.2d 261, 266 (discussing EEOC guidelines). See EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504 (Seventh Day Adventists were not permitted to take Saturdays off; at minimum, employer was required to negotiate with employee to attempt to accommodate religious belief and practice).

(n33)Footnote 29. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(d)(1)(i).

(n34)Footnote 30. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(d)(1)(ii).

(n35)Footnote 31. See 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(d)(1)(iii).

(n36)Footnote 32. See Ansonia Board of Education v. Philbrook (1986) 479 U.S. 60, 65, 107 S. Ct. 367, 93 L. Ed. 2d 305 ; Pinsker v. Joint Dist. Number 28J (10th Cir. 1984) 735 F.2d 388, 391 .

(n37)Footnote 33. See N.L.R.B. v. Hershey Foods Corporation (9th Cir. 1975) 513 F.2d 1083, 1085-1086 ; 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(3).

(n38)Footnote 34. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(d)(2).

(n39)Footnote 35. Yott v. North American Rockwell Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 904 , cert. denied, 445 U.S.

928 (1980) .

(n40)Footnote 36. See Yott v. North American Rockwell Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 904, 907 , cert. denied, 445 U.S. 928 (1980) .

(n41)Footnote 37. See Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair, Etc. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 .

(n42)Footnote 38. Felt v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1416 .

(n43)Footnote 39. See Felt v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1416, 1420 (Seventh Day Adventist required to work Saturdays).

(n44)Footnote 40. Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382 .

(n45)Footnote 41. See Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 .

(n46)Footnote 42. Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 .

(n47)Footnote 43. Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 .

(n48)Footnote 44. Gov. Code § 12940(l); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.3 (FEHA interpretative regulation); cf. Best v. California Apprenticeship Council (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 626, 634, 207 Cal. Rptr. 863 (decided prior to enactment of Gov. Code § 12940(l); construing Gov. Code § 12940(c), which prohibits discrimination in training selection based on, among other things, religious creed, as requiring religious accommodation). For discussion relating to "undue hardship," see [4], below.

For the standard jury instruction on the essential elements of a claim of the employer's failure to accommodate in a cause of action for religious creed discrimination, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2560(Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for the failure to accommodate, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2511(Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n49)Footnote 45. See Gov. Code § 12940(l).

(n50)Footnote 46. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.3(a); see Cook v. Lindsay Olive Growers (9th Cir. 1990) 911 F.2d 233, 241 (allowing lateral transfers or changes of job assignments constitutes reasonable accommodation under FEHA).

(n51)Footnote 47. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.3(c).

(n52)Footnote 48. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(j).

(n53)Footnote 49. See Bhatia v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 734 F.2d 1382, 1383 ; Brener v. Diagnostic Center Hospital (5th Cir. 1982) 671 F.2d 141, 144 ; Anderson v General Dynamics Convair, Etc. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 401 ; see also discussion in [1] and [3], above.

(n54)Footnote 50. EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 616 .

(n55)Footnote 51. See EEOC v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 615 .

(n56)Footnote 52. See E.E.O.C. v. Townley Engineering & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 610, 615-616 .

(n57)Footnote 53. See Toledo v. Nobel-Sysco, Inc. (10th Cir. 1989) 892 F.2d 1481, 1492 .

(n58)Footnote 53.1. See Sutton v. Providence St. Joseph Medical Center (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 826, 831 (as condition of employment, employer could require provision of social security number by prospective employee without liability for discrimination on basis of religion, even though such provision violated prospective employees' religious beliefs).

(n59)Footnote 54. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 .

(n60)Footnote 55. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 84, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 .

(n61)Footnote 56. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 84, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(e)(1); but see Anderson v. General Dynamics Convair, Etc. (9th Cir. 1978) 589 F.2d 397, 402 (undue hardship as meaning something greater than hardship).

(n62)Footnote 57. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(e) (emphasis in original).

(n63)Footnote 58. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(e)(1).

(n64)Footnote 59. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(e)(2).

(n65)Footnote 60. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 67, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 .

(n66)Footnote 61. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 79, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 .

(n67)Footnote 62. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 80, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 .

(n68)Footnote 63. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Hardison (1977) 432 U.S. 63, 81, 97 S. Ct. 2264, 53 L. Ed. 2d 113 .

(n69)Footnote 64. 29 C.F.R. § 1605.2(e)(2).

(n70)Footnote 64.1. Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 607 (employee's two options for proposed accommodation, i.e., that he be allowed to post anti-gay messages and company's "gay" posters promoting diversity remain, or that company remove posters and he would then remove anti-gay messages, would have imposed undue hardship on employer; first accommodation would have compelled company to permit employee to post messages intended to demean and harass his co-workers, and second accommodation would have forced company to exclude sexual orientation from its workplace diversity program).

(n71)Footnote 64.2. Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 607 .

(n72)Footnote 65. See Gov. Code § 12940(l); see also discussion in [1] and [3], above. For the standard jury instruction for the affirmative defense to a claim of religious discrimination under FEHA that the employer's failure to accommodate was justified because of undue hardship, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2561 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for the affirmative defense of undue hardship, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2512(Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n73)Footnote 66. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.3(b).

64 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.53

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.53 Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Rules and Tests

[1] Adverse Employment Decisions Based on Drug and Alcohol Use

Because employment discrimination based upon drug addiction is apparently protected by both the ADA and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, provided a former abuser is being or has been rehabilitated and no longer uses illegal drugs,ⁿ¹ employer practices or rules that discriminate based on past addiction may be unlawful. However employment rules prohibiting current drug or alcohol are permissible so long as they are uniformly applied, since current alcoholism and drug addiction are not protected by either the ADA or the Rehabilitation Act.ⁿ² In fact, the ADA expressly provides that employers may prohibit the illegal use of drugs and alcohol in the workplace and may require employees to conform with the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988,ⁿ³ which sets forth drug-free workplace requirements for federal contractors and recipients of federal funds. The ADA permits employers to hold employees who are alcoholics or users of illegal drugs to the same work standards as other employees, even if unsatisfactory performance is related to drug use or alcoholism.ⁿ⁴ It also authorizes the departments of Defense and Transportation and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to require employees in industries regulated by those departments to comply with existing federal regulations that establish standards regarding alcohol and drug use.ⁿ⁵

In Collings v. Longview Fibre Co.,ⁿ⁶ the Ninth Circuit held that an employer may discharge employees who violate company rules either by buying, selling, or using marijuana at the workplace, or by returning to work under its influence. Rejecting the employees' claim that the ADA prevented their discharge, the court stated, "The term 'qualified individual with a disability' does not include any employee or applicant who is currently engaging in the illegal use of drugs, when the covered entity acts on the basis of such use."ⁿ⁷

An employee may also be terminated for misconduct occurring as the result of alcohol use. Under the Rehabilitation Act, one can be fired for misconduct while being intoxicated on duty, rather than for an alcoholism handicap.ⁿ⁸ In Newland v. Dalton,ⁿ⁹ a civilian Navy employee, an alcoholic, was terminated for having fired an assault rifle in a bar during his off hours. The court held the employee was properly terminated for misconduct and not because of his alcoholism.

[2] Drug Testing

The ADA also allows employers to adopt reasonable policies, including drug testing, to determine whether an employee is participating in or has successfully completed a drug rehabilitation program and whether or not the employee is currently engaging in drug use.ⁿ¹⁰ With respect to blanket drug testing, however, the ADA is neutral, stating that it does not encourage, prohibit, or authorize such testing or making employment decisions based on the results of such tests.ⁿ¹¹ The ADA takes a similar position on the testing of transportation employees, declaring that the ADA may not be construed to encourage, prohibit, restrict, or authorize the otherwise lawful exercise by entities subject to the Department of Transportation's jurisdiction to (1) test their employees in positions involving safety-sensitive duties for the illegal use of drugs and for on-duty impairment by alcohol; and (2) remove employees who test positive for illegal use of drugs and on-duty impairment by alcohol from safety-sensitive duties.ⁿ¹²

Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991,ⁿ¹³ provides that, notwithstanding any other provision of Title VII, a rule barring the employment of an individual who currently and knowingly uses or possesses a controlled substance, as defined in Schedules I and II of the Controlled Substances Act,ⁿ¹⁴ other than the use or possession of a drug taken under the supervision of a licensed health care professional, or any other use or possession authorized by the Controlled Substances Act or any other provision of federal law, shall be considered an unlawful employment practice under Title VII only if the rule is adopted or applied with an intent to discriminate because of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.ⁿ¹⁵

For discussion of potential constitutional and privacy issues raised by drug testing, see Chapter 50, Part D. For a discussion of preemployment drug testing, see § 41.46[2]. For further discussion relating to the status of drug abuse in the equal employment opportunity context, see §§ 41.32[3][a] and 41.53.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationRehabilitation Act

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 706(8)(C)(ii), 794 (Rehabilitation Act); 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(b), 12211(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(b) (ADA); see also discussion in § 41.32.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 U.S.C. § 706(8)(C)(i), (v) (Rehabilitation Act); 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(a), 12211(a); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(b)(1)(ADA).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 12114(c)(3); 41 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.; 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(c)(4); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(b)(4).

(n5)Footnote 5. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(c)(5), (e); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(b)(5), (6).

(n6)Footnote 6. Collings v. Longview Fibre Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 828 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Collings v. Longview Fibre Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 828, 831-833 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Little v. FBI (4th Cir. 1993) 1 F.3d 255, 259 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Newland v. Dalton (9th Cir. 1996) 81 F.3d 904, 906 .

(n10)Footnote 10. 42 U.S.C. §§ 12114(b), 12211(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.3(c).

(n11)Footnote 11. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(d)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(c)(1); see 42 U.S.C. § 12211(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 12114(e); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(c)(2); accord, Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives' Ass'n (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 633, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 (private railroads may constitutionally test, in conformity with 49 C.F.R. §§ 219.201, 209.203(a), 219.301(b), (c) (federal safety regulations), employees who are involved in major accidents and who are "reasonably suspected" of being under influence of alcohol); see also Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 678-679, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 (United States Customs Service may constitutionally test employees who carry firearms or seek transfer or promotion to drug enforcement jobs).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 105(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. See 21 U.S.C. § 802(6).

(n15)Footnote 15. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(3).

65 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.54

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.54 Appearance, Grooming, and Dress Standards

As discussed in detail in § 41.42[2][m], grooming and appearance rules are frequently upheld as lawful under Title VII.ⁿ¹ However, grooming and appearance rules that are based on immutable characteristics related to an employee's sex, race, color, religion, or national origin may be unlawful.

In Gerdomb v. Continental Airlines, Inc.,ⁿ² the plaintiff, a "flight hostess," was suspended and eventually terminated because her weight exceeded the maximum permitted by her employer.ⁿ³ When the plaintiff was employed, the flight hostess position was filled exclusively by women, and no similar weight program was enforced for the "director of passenger service" (DPS) position, an exclusively male position that supervised and assisted flight hostesses.ⁿ⁴ Preliminarily, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals rejected the employer's argument that the weight restrictions were simply a "grooming" requirement outside the purview of Title VII.ⁿ⁵ The court noted that permissible grooming rules are those that do not significantly deprive either sex of employment opportunities, and which are even-handedly applied to employees of both sexes.ⁿ⁶ The court observed that, on the other hand, Title VII is held to be violated when special appearance rules are imposed on members of only one sex.ⁿ⁷

After concluding that the employer could not avoid Title VII scrutiny, the Gerdomb court applied the "disparate treatment" theory of liability.ⁿ⁸ Noting that the weight program was designed to apply only to females, and thus was facially discriminatory, the court concluded that a prima facie case of discrimination was established.ⁿ⁹ The employer attempted to justify the weight program by contending that thin female hostesses were central to its business image.ⁿ¹⁰ However, the court rejected that justification, holding that the employer could not state a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason to rebut the plaintiff's prima facie case because its justification was not neutral--it was discriminatory on its face.ⁿ¹¹ The court explained that the justification merely declared the employer's determination to impose the weight requirement on employees because they are females. It added that because the employer did not argue that only thin females could perform the job, it did not have a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) defense.ⁿ¹²

In Frank v. United Airlines, Inc.,ⁿ¹³ the Ninth Circuit held that if an employment policy regarding appearance standards imposes unequal burdens on men and women, it will be considered disparate treatment that must be justified as a BFOQ to be enforceable.ⁿ¹⁴ The defendant chose weight maximums for its female flight attendants that generally corresponded to the medium frame category of MetLife's Height and Weight Tables. By contrast, the maximums for the male flight attendants generally corresponded to MetLife's large frame category. This discrepancy was held to be discriminatory.ⁿ¹⁵

Although an employer's appearance standards, including makeup requirements, may be the subject of a Title VII claim for sexual stereotyping, grooming standards that appropriately differentiate between the genders are not facially discriminatory.^{n15.1}

FEHC regulations provide that it is lawful for an employer or other entity covered by the FEHA to impose on an employee physical appearance, grooming, or dress standards. However, if such a standard discriminates on a basis enumerated in the FEHA,ⁿ¹⁶ and if it also significantly burdens the individual in his or her employment, it is unlawful.ⁿ¹⁷

Government Code Section 12947.5 makes it an unlawful employment practice under the FEHA for an employer to prohibit an employee from wearing pants on account of the sex of the employee.ⁿ¹⁸ However, employers may require employees in a particular occupation to wear a uniform or a costume while the employee is portraying a specific character or dramatic role.ⁿ¹⁹ Furthermore, the FEHC may exempt an employer from the requirements of Government Code Section 12947.5 for good cause shown.ⁿ²⁰ The FEHC is required to adopt standards and procedures for granting such exemptions.ⁿ²¹

For a further discussion of appearance, grooming and dress standards, see § 41.42[2][m].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Willingham v. Macon Telegraph Publishing Co. (5th Cir. 1975) 507 F.2d 1084, 1091, 1092 ; see also Baker v. California Land Title Company (9th Cir. 1974) 507 F.2d 895, 897 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Gerdorn v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Gerdorn v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 603 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Gerdorn v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 604, 605 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Gerdorn v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 605 , cert. dismissed, 460 U.S. 1074 (1983) ; see Baker v. California Land Title Company (9th Cir. 1974) 507 F.2d 895, 898 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Gerdorn v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 606 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Gerdorn v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 606 ; see also Carrol v. Talman Federal S. & L. Ass'n of Chicago (7th Cir. 1979) 604 F.2d 1028, 1032-1033 ; Allen v. Lovejoy (6th Cir. 1977) 553 F.2d 522, 524 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Gerdorn v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 608 ; see also McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802-804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Gerdorn v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 608 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Gerdom v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 605, 609 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Gerdom v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 605, 609 .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Gerdom v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 692 F.2d 602, 605, 609 . For a discussion relating to the BFOQ defense, see § 41.94.

(n13)Footnote 13. Frank v. United Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 216 F.3d 845 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Frank v. United Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 216 F.3d 845, 854-855 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Frank v. United Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 216 F.3d 845, 854 .

(n16)Footnote 15.1. Jespersen v. Harrah's Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2006) 444 F.3d 1104, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 9307, *10-*25 (en banc) (policy requiring female bartenders to wear makeup did not itself establish prima facie case of discriminatory intent that had to be justified as bona fide occupational qualification, where requirement was part of appearance policy that applied to both male and female bartenders, and, while policy contained sex-differentiated requirements, none on its face placed greater burden on one gender than other).

(n17)Footnote 16. See Gov. Code § 12940(a) (race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, or sexual orientation). For a discussion relating to specific prohibited bases for discrimination, see pt. B (§§ 41.30-41.36).

(n18)Footnote 17. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(c).

(n19)Footnote 18. Gov. Code § 12947.5(a).

(n20)Footnote 19. Gov. Code § 12947.5(b),(c).

(n21)Footnote 20. Gov. Code § 12947.5(d).

(n22)Footnote 21. Gov. Code § 12947.5(d).

66 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.55

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.55 Bankruptcy and Garnishment Rules

Although it has never been expressly decided, adverse employment practices based on an employee's bankruptcy may be unlawful under equal employment opportunity law if those practices have an adverse impact on protected classification members.ⁿ¹ Furthermore, federal bankruptcy law prohibits employment discrimination by private employers on the basis of bankruptcy.ⁿ²

With respect to garnishment, Johnson v. Pike Corporation of America,ⁿ³ a leading case decided by the district court for the Central District of California, held that a rule authorizing the discharge of employees whose wages were garnished discriminated against minority employees because the rule subjected a disproportionate percentage of those employees to discharge.ⁿ⁴ The Johnson rationale may also apply to disciplinary actions short of discharge, such as reprimands.ⁿ⁵

One case implied that considerable inconvenience and expense to the employer, bad community relations, and evidence of irresponsibility are factors that may justify a discriminatory garnishment rule.ⁿ⁶ Another court suggested that the contention that a garnishment rule is permissible because it "fosters employee productivity" should be proven.ⁿ⁷

Apart from equal employment opportunity laws, both federal and state consumer protection laws prohibit an employer from discharging an employee because of garnishment of wages relating to a single indebtedness.ⁿ⁸ For discussion of these provisions, see Chapter 4, Part B, and Chapter 60.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Bankruptcy LawGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsEnforcement &
ExecutionGarnishmentsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment
LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Bell v. Citizens Fidelity Bank & Trust (6th Cir. 1980) 636 F.2d 1119 (decided under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1982; remanding to determine whether bank's practice of discharging employees who file for bankruptcy had discriminatory impact on African-Americans). but see In Re Russell (9th Cir. 1996) 76 F.3d 242, 245 (individual Black debtors were collaterally estopped from challenging validity of bank loans on ground of race discrimination because discrimination defense should have been raised in state court in response to bank's action on the loans).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 11 U.S.C. § 525(b); See also ch. 60. but see In re Majewski (9th Cir. 2002) 310 F.3d 653, 654 (statute does not protect persons who have not yet filed for bankruptcy, so no protection for debtor who was fired after announcing he would file, but had not yet filed).

(n3)Footnote 3. Johnson v. Pike Corp. of Am. (C.D. Cal. 1971) 332 F. Supp. 490 (Title VII) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Johnson v. Pike Corp. of Am. (C.D. Cal. 1971) 332 F. Supp. 490, 494 (Title VII) ; see also Wallace v. Debron Corp. (8th Cir. 1974) 494 F.2d 674, 675 (Title VII) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Keenan v. American Cast Iron Pipe Co. (11th Cir. 1983) 707 F.2d 1274, 1276 (Title VII; remanded for determination in regard to whether employer policy actually had discriminatory effect).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Friend v. Leidinger (4th Cir. 1978) 588 F.2d 61, 64 (Title VII) .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Wallace v. Debron Corp. (8th Cir. 1974) 494 F.2d 674, 677 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See 15 U.S.C. § 1674; Lab. Code § 2929.

67 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.56

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.56 Compensation

[1] Generally

The federal Equal Pay Act of 1963 (EPA)ⁿ¹ and the California Equal Pay Actⁿ² are the primary sources of protection against sex discrimination with respect to compensation. However, discrimination in compensation because of sex, as well as other protected characteristics, is also prohibited by several other state and federal equal employment opportunity sources, including Title VII and the FEHA.ⁿ³ For a detailed discussion relating to the scope and coverage of these statutes, see Chapter 40.

[2] Federal Equal Pay Act of 1963

[a] Scope of Protection

The EPA provides that no employer having employees subject to any provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA)ⁿ⁴ may discriminate, within any establishment in which those employees are employed, between employees on the basis of sex by paying wages to employees in that establishment at a rate less than the rate at which the employer pays wages to employees of the opposite sex in the establishment for equal work on jobs that require equal skill, effort, and responsibility, and that are performed under similar working conditions, except when payment is made pursuant to (1) a seniority system; (2) a merit system; (3) a system that measures earnings by quantity or quality of production; or (4) a differential based on any other factor other than sex.ⁿ⁵ The foregoing exceptions are discussed in [4], below. For a discussion relating to the scope and application of the EPA generally, see Chapter 40, Part C.

The EPA requires equal pay for equal work.ⁿ⁶ The EPA applies if an employer knowingly allows an employee to perform the equal work at a lesser wage than is paid to employees of the opposite sex, even if the employer does not formally assign such work to that employee.ⁿ⁷

The EEOC has adopted regulations interpreting the EPA,ⁿ⁸ and courts have held that these guidelines, like the EEOC selection procedure guidelines,ⁿ⁹ are entitled to great deference.ⁿ¹⁰ According to the EEOC guidelines, the term

"wages" under the EPA includes all payments made to (or on behalf of) an employee for remuneration for employment.ⁿ¹¹ It includes all forms of compensation irrespective of the time of payment, whether paid periodically or deferred until a later date, and whether called wages, salary, profit sharing, expense account, monthly minimum, bonus, uniform cleaning allowance, hotel accommodations, use of company car, gasoline allowance, or some other name.ⁿ¹² "Fringe benefits" are also deemed to be remuneration for employment.ⁿ¹³

The EEOC regulations define a wage "rate" as the standard or measure by which an employee's wage is determined.ⁿ¹⁴ The term is considered to encompass all rates of wages whether calculated on time, commission, piece, job incentive, profit sharing, bonus, or other basis. The term also includes the rate at which overtime compensation or other special remuneration is paid as well as the rate at which straight time compensation for ordinary work is paid. It further includes the rate at which a draw, advance, or guarantee is paid against a commission settlement.ⁿ¹⁵ When a higher wage rate is paid to one gender than the other for the performance of equal work, the higher rate serves as a wage standard.ⁿ¹⁶

Under the EPA, an employer who is paying an unlawful wage rate differential may not, in order to comply with the EPA, reduce the wage rate of any employee.ⁿ¹⁷ Thus, when a prohibited sex-based wage differential has been proved, an employer can come into compliance only by raising the wage rate of the lower-paid sex. Moreover, an employer may not attempt to cure a violation of the EPA by hiring or transferring employees to perform the previously lower-paid job at the lower rate. Similarly, the departure of the higher-paid sex from positions in which a violation occurred, leaving only members of the lower-paid sex being paid equally among themselves, does not cure an EPA violation.ⁿ¹⁸

It has been held that application of the EPA to a religious organization or institution does not violate the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment to the United States Constitution, particularly when application does not interfere with the organization's or institution's beliefs.ⁿ¹⁹ In a 1990 policy guideline, the EEOC concluded that under the EPA a religious organization or institution may not pay women less than men even if such a policy is pursuant to its religious beliefs.ⁿ²⁰

[b] "Equal Work"

[i] Burden of Proof

In a case brought under the EPA, the burden of proof shifts between the plaintiff-employee and the defendant-employer.ⁿ²¹ A plaintiff in an EPA case need not prove discriminatory intent.ⁿ²² The plaintiff only has the burden of proving, by a preponderance of the evidence,ⁿ²³ that he or she did not receive equal pay for equal work.ⁿ²⁴ A plaintiff does not have to show that his or her job is equal to all, or even most, comparable jobs. All that is required is a showing that the work performed by plaintiff is equal to that performed by some members of the opposite sex in comparable jobs, but that plaintiff is not compensated equally.ⁿ²⁵ Thus, one court held that plaintiff sewing machine operators carried their burden of proof by establishing that their jobs were substantially similar to the jobs of some higher-paid bookbinder machine operators.ⁿ²⁶

Once the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case, the burden shifts to the defendant to establish that the pay discrepancy is based on a factor other than sex.ⁿ²⁷ After the employer meets that burden, an employee may nevertheless prevail by showing that the employer's proffered nondiscriminatory reason is a pretext for discrimination.ⁿ²⁸

[ii] Substantial Identity Standard

The equal work standard does not require jobs to be identical, only that they be substantially equal.ⁿ²⁹

The Ninth Circuit uses a two-step "substantially equal" analysis: first, the plaintiff must establish that the jobs being compared have a common core of tasks, that is, whether a significant portion of the two jobs is identical; second, the court must then determine whether any additional tasks, "incumbent on one job but not the other, make the two jobs 'substantially different.' "n30 Actual job performance and content--not job titles, classifications, or descriptions--is determinative as to whether jobs are substantially equal.n31 The Ninth Circuit has also held that job skills may be analyzed with regard to factors such as differences in supply and demand, job responsibilities, working conditions, performance, experience, and the marketplace value of the skills of a particular individual.n32 Furthermore, it is the overall job, not its individual segments, that must form the basis of comparison, and, because job duties vary so widely, each suit must be determined on a case-by-case basis.n33 This inquiry is limited to a comparison of the jobs in question, and does not involve a comparison of the individuals who hold those jobs.n34

The EEOC regulations provide that in determining whether employees are performing equal work within the meaning of the EPA, it is necessary to consider the degree of any difference in the jobs under comparison in terms of skill, effort, and responsibility.n35 Insubstantial or minor differences in the degree or amount of skill, effort, or responsibility required for job performance do not render the equal pay standard inapplicable.n36 On the other hand, substantial differences, such as those customarily associated with differences in wage levels when the jobs are performed by persons of one sex only, will ordinarily demonstrate an inequality between the jobs justifying differences in pay. The EEOC also publishes notices on sex discrimination regarding specific types of jobs that may provide additional guidance.n37

However, differences in skill, effort, or responsibility that might be sufficient to justify a finding that two jobs are not equal within the meaning of the EPA if the greater skill, effort, or responsibility has been required of the higher-paid sex, do not justify such a finding when the greater skill, effort, or responsibility is required of the lower-paid sex.n38 For example, when employees of opposite sexes are employed in jobs in which the duties they are required to perform and the working conditions are substantially the same, except that an employee of one sex is required to perform some duty or duties involving a higher skill that an employee of the other sex is not required to perform, the fact that the duties are different in this respect is insufficient to remove the jobs from the application of the equal pay standard if it also appears that the employer is paying a lower wage rate to the employee performing the additional duties notwithstanding the additional skill that they involve.n39

The EEOC regulations contain several examples of differences in job duties that the EEOC considers to be insufficient to show that the jobs do not involve equal work within the meaning of the EPA. For example, the amounts of time that employees spend in the performance of different duties is not determinative. Also, the performance of jobs on different machines or equipment do not make jobs unequal,n40 and if the difference in skill or effort required for the operation of such equipment is inconsequential, payment of a higher wage rate to one sex because of the difference in machines or equipment would constitute a prohibited wage differential. Similarly, jobs performed in different departments or locations are not necessarily unequal.n41

[c] Jobs Requiring Equal Skill, Effort, and Responsibility

[i] "Equal Skill" Defined

Under the EEOC regulations, if the amount or degree of skill required for job performance is substantially greater than that required to perform another job, the equal pay standard cannot apply even though the jobs may be equal in all other respects. Skill includes consideration of such factors as experience, training, education, and ability.n42 However, it must be measured in terms of the performance requirements of the job.n43 In other words, it is the skill required by the comparative jobs that is determinative, not the skill possessed by employees engaged in those jobs.n44 For example, in Hein v. Oregon College of Educ., n45 the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that a district court erred when it found that a female teacher and a male teacher performed substantially equal jobs because the plaintiff's skills were equal to or greater than those of the male teacher.n46 The court stated that a prima facie case is not made by showing that employees of the opposite sex possess equivalent skills. It explained that the EPA explicitly applies to jobs that require equal skills, not to employees that possess equal skills.n47

If an employee must have essentially the same skill in order to perform either of two jobs, the jobs will qualify under the EPA as jobs requiring equal skill, even though the employee in one of the jobs may not exercise the required skill as frequently or during as much of his or her working time as the employee in the other job. However, possession of a skill not needed to meet the requirements of a job cannot be considered in making a determination regarding equality of skill. The efficiency of the employee's performance in the job is also not in itself an appropriate factor to consider in evaluating skill.ⁿ⁴⁸

[ii] "Equal Effort" Defined

The EEOC regulations provide that if substantial differences exist in the amount or degree of effort required to be expended in the performance of jobs, the equal pay standard cannot apply even though the jobs may be equal in all other respects. Effort is concerned with the measurement of the physical or mental exertion needed for the performance of a job. Job factors that cause mental fatigue and stress, as well as those that alleviate fatigue, must be considered in determining the effort required by the job.ⁿ⁴⁹ For example, in Gunther v. County of Washington,ⁿ⁵⁰ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a district court's finding that the jobs of jail matron and correction officer were not substantially equal because clerical work required by matrons, together with the difference between the two jobs in prisoner-guard ratio, made the jobs qualitatively different.ⁿ⁵¹ The court observed that although both jobs entailed guarding prisoners, correction officers guarded many more prisoners than matrons.ⁿ⁵² Furthermore, because the jail matrons had fewer prisoners to guard, they performed clerical work for as much as 50 percent of their time, and such work entailed substantially less effort and responsibility than guarding prisoners.ⁿ⁵³

"Effort" encompasses the total requirements of a job.ⁿ⁵⁴ Thus, according to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals, so long as the ultimate degree of exertion remains comparable, the mere fact that two jobs call for effort different in kind will not render them unequal so as to justify wage differentials.ⁿ⁵⁵ For example, in a job with both male and female employees, an employer may not pay a higher wage rate to a male employee who occasionally lifts heavy items, but not to a female employee who expends an equal degree of effort occasionally performing tasks requiring greater dexterity. The difference in the kind of effort required of the employees does not make their effort unequal in any respect that would justify a wage differential, when such differences are not ordinarily considered as a factor in setting wage levels.ⁿ⁵⁶

Effort expended in additional tasks assigned to employees of a particular sex is also not necessarily sufficient to justify a pay differential.ⁿ⁵⁷ The Second Circuit Court of Appeals explains that such additional effort is insufficient under the EPA if the effort does not consume a significant total amount of all the employees' time; or if employees of the opposite sex also perform duties that require additional effort; or if third persons who perform the additional tasks as their primary job are paid less than the employees in question.ⁿ⁵⁸

A wage rate differential based on differences in the degree or amount of effort required for performance of jobs must be applied uniformly to men and women. For example, if all women and some men performing a particular type of job never perform heavy lifting, but some men do, payment of a higher wage rate to all of the men would constitute a prohibited wage rate differential if the equal pay provisions otherwise apply.ⁿ⁵⁹

[iii] "Equal Responsibility" Defined

The EEOC regulations define responsibility as being concerned with the degree of accountability required in the performance of a job, with emphasis on the importance of the job obligation.ⁿ⁶⁰ Differences in the degree of responsibility required in the performance of otherwise equal jobs cover a wide variety of situations. Accordingly, the EEOC regulations provide several illustrations that may suggest the nature and degree of differences in responsibility that will constitute unequal work.ⁿ⁶¹ For example, an employee in a group performing jobs equal in other respects may sometimes be required to assume supervisory duties for reasons such as the absence of the regular supervisor. Payment of a higher wage rate to that employee would not violate the EPA if it is based on the additional responsibility, and if there are no sexual distinctions in paying the higher rate.ⁿ⁶²

Minor differences in responsibility do not make the equal pay standard inapplicable.ⁿ⁶³ In E.E.O.C. v. Maricopa Cty. Community College Dist.,ⁿ⁶⁴ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with a district court finding that a female plaintiff, a student loan clerk, performed work substantially equal to work performed by higher-paid male financial aid assistants at other colleges.ⁿ⁶⁵ The plaintiff's employer contended that because the plaintiff did not have the general authority to make financial aid awards, she did not have the same responsibility as the financial assistants, and thus her work was not substantially similar to their work.ⁿ⁶⁶ The court rejected the employer's contention, stating that although it was clear that the plaintiff lacked certain authority, the stipulated facts never established that the male financial assistants had any greater responsibility. The court refused to find that the district court erred in failing to infer greater responsibility, and added that even if there were additional responsibility, it could not conclude that it was anything more than minimal.ⁿ⁶⁷

In a later case, the Ninth Circuit held that greater responsibility, and thus the need for greater pay, may be shown by a greater ability to generate revenue for the employer. In that case, the court found that a university men's basketball coach had greater responsibility than the women's basketball coach because the men's team generated 90 times the revenue of the women's team, demonstrating the greater pressure on the men's coach to win and to promote the team.ⁿ⁶⁸

[d] Jobs Performed Under Similar Working Conditions

The EEOC regulations provide that in determining whether jobs are performed under similar working conditions, a practical judgment is required in light of whether the differences in working conditions are the kind customarily taken into consideration in setting wage levels. The mere fact that jobs are in different departments of an establishment will not necessarily mean that the jobs are performed under dissimilar working conditions.ⁿ⁶⁹

The term "similar working conditions" encompasses the following two subfactors: (1) "surroundings," which measure the elements, such as toxic chemicals or fumes,ⁿ⁷⁰ regularly encountered by a worker, and their intensity and frequency; and (2) "hazards," which take into account the physical hazards regularly encountered,ⁿ⁷¹ their frequency and the severity of injury they can cause.ⁿ⁷² The phrase "working conditions" does not encompass shift differentials.ⁿ⁷³

According to the EEOC regulations, employees performing jobs requiring equal skill, effort, and responsibility are likely to be performing them under similar working conditions. However, if working conditions for a job are substantially different from those required for the performance of other jobs, the equal pay principle does not apply. On the other hand, slight or inconsequential differences in working conditions that are not usually taken into consideration by employers or in collective bargaining in setting wage rates would not justify a differential in pay.ⁿ⁷⁴

[e] Male Comparators

To establish a prima facie case of wage discrimination, a plaintiff must show not only that she was paid lower wages than a male comparator for equal work, but that she selected the proper comparator. A plaintiff cannot make a comparison of one classification composed of males and females with another classification of employees also composed of males and females.^{n74.1}

[3] California Equal Pay Act

The California Equal Pay Act specifies that no employer may pay any individual in the employer's employ at wage rates less than the rates paid to employees of the opposite sex in the same establishment for equal work on jobs the performance of which requires equal skill, effort, and responsibility, and which are performed under similar working conditions, except when the payment is made pursuant to a seniority system, a merit system, a system that measures earnings by quantity or quality of production, or a differential based on any bona fide factor other than sex.ⁿ⁷⁵ The California Equal Pay Act, which codifies the principle that an employee is entitled to equal pay for equal work without regard to gender,ⁿ⁷⁶ is substantively almost identical to the federal EPA, discussed in [2], above.^{n76.1} However, unlike the EPA, no administrative regulations have been issued to interpret the California Equal Pay Act.

There is little case authority construing California's Equal Pay Act.^{n76.2} However, since California courts often rely on federal law to interpret analogous state law,^{n76.3} federal cases construing the EPA may be used to construe the California Equal Pay Act.ⁿ⁷⁷

The three-stage burden-shifting test used to establish sex discrimination under the federal Equal Pay Act applies to the trial of an action under section 1197.5.^{n77.1} The burden-shifting test requires that the plaintiff show that the employer pays workers of one sex more than workers of the opposite sex for equal work.^{n77.2} The employer then has the burden of showing that one of the exceptions listed in section 1197.5 is applicable.^{n77.3} The employee may show that the employer's stated reasons are pretextual.^{n77.4} Thus, in Green v. Par Pools, Inc.,^{n77.5} the plaintiff, who alleged unequal pay solely under the California Equal Pay Act, alleged a prima facie case under section 1197.5 by showing that a newly hired male was paid $ 900 a week while she was only paid $ 500 a week, that her replacement was paid slightly more than $ 600 per week, and that their jobs were identical.^{n77.6} However, the employer established an affirmative defense of the statutory catchall exception for a pay differential based on any bona fide factor other than sex,^{n77.7} based the newly hired male's more extensive prior work experience.^{n77.8} The plaintiff then had an opportunity to demonstrate that the employer's stated reasons were pretextual but she failed to do so, which entitled the trial court to reject her Equal Pay Act claims.^{n77.9} For a discussion relating to the scope and application of the California Equal Pay Act generally, see Chapter 40, Part B.

[4] Equal Pay Act Exceptions

[a] Generally

Both the federal EPAⁿ⁷⁸ and the California Equal Pay Actⁿ⁷⁹ establish four exceptions--three specific and one a catchall provision--by which different payment to employees of opposite sexes may be made pursuant to (1) seniority systems; (2) merit systems; (3) systems that measure earnings by quantity or quality of production; and (4) differentials based on any other factor other than sex.ⁿ⁸⁰ Once a plaintiff has carried his or her burden of showing that employees of one sex are paid more than employees of the opposite sex for equal work,ⁿ⁸¹ the burden shifts to the employer to show, by a preponderance of the evidence,ⁿ⁸² that the differential is justified under one of the exceptions.ⁿ⁸³ Thus, the EPA exceptions are affirmative defenses.ⁿ⁸⁴

[b] Seniority Systems, Merit Systems, and Systems Measuring Earnings by Quantity or Quality of Production

As noted above, employers may pay employees of one sex at wage rates different from those paid to employees of the opposite sex if the differential is based on a bona fide seniority or merit system.ⁿ⁸⁵ Thus, for example, the seniority exception permits a male employee with 20 years seniority to receive a higher wage than a female with two years seniority.ⁿ⁸⁶ Under the merit exception, employees rendering outstanding service, measured in comparison with other employees performing the same job, may also receive higher wages.ⁿ⁸⁷

The EPA apparently does not require "formal" seniority or merit systems,ⁿ⁸⁸ but any such system must be administered systematically and objectively.ⁿ⁸⁹ For example, a merit system may be established by showing "an organized and structured procedure whereby employees are evaluated systematically according to predetermined criteria."ⁿ⁹⁰ There should also be a showing of a "means or order ... of advancement or reward for merit."ⁿ⁹¹ Systems based on subjective criteria, such as "gut feelings," are insufficient.ⁿ⁹²

According to one commentator, under the exception for systems measuring earnings by quantity or quality of production,ⁿ⁹³ an employer must show the existence of a bona fide incentive system based on either the amount of work produced or the quality of the work produced. The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals has explained that the "quantity" test refers to equal dollar per unit compensation rates. Thus, there is no discrimination if two employees receive the same pay rate, but one receives more total compensation because he or she produces more.ⁿ⁹⁴

[c] Differentials Based on Any Factor Other Than Sex

The "factor other than sex" exceptionⁿ⁹⁵ is intended to be a broad general exception. A primary purpose of this and the exceptions discussed in [b], above, is to permit employers to utilize bona fide gender-neutral job evaluation and classification systems.ⁿ⁹⁶ Thus, compensation systems that determine salaries on the basis of job duties and responsibilities, educational attainments, and experience, which are related to the responsibilities and duties that employees must perform in their jobs, are permissible.ⁿ⁹⁷ Salary differentials that result from applying these objective criteria do not violate the EPA.ⁿ⁹⁸ Furthermore, proper job reclassification within the framework of a permissible wage classification system also qualify under the "factor other than sex" exception.ⁿ⁹⁹

There is some dispute as to the scope of the "factor other than sex" exception. Some courts have held that the exception is limited to factors traditionally included in job-evaluation schemes.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that although a concern about job-evaluation systems served as the impetus for the exception, its broad language indicates that it is not limited to that concern.ⁿ¹⁰¹ Under the Ninth Circuit view, any acceptable nonpretextual business reason for a compensation differential is permissible, even if it results in a wage differential between male and female employees.ⁿ¹⁰² Another court has held that the "factor other than sex" exception need not be related to the requirements of the particular position in question, or that it be business-related. Instead, the question is simply whether the factor is discriminatorily applied or causes a discriminatory effect. The factor must also be bona fide in that it is used and applied in good faith.ⁿ¹⁰³

Economic benefits to an employer have been found to be a legitimate business reason justifying a wage differential for equal work.ⁿ¹⁰⁴ In Hodgson v. Robert Hall Clothes, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁰⁵ sales personnel employed in the men's department of a retail clothing store (who were exclusively men) were paid more than sales personnel employed in the women's department (who were exclusively women). The men's department showed a larger dollar volume in gross sales, and a greater gross profit, because the merchandise in the men's department was of higher price and better quality than the merchandise in the women's department.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ The Third Circuit Court of Appeals found that the wage differential was permissible because the commodities the saleswomen sold could not bear the same selling costs as the commodities sold in the men's department.ⁿ¹⁰⁷ In another case, however, the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals held that an employer could not avail itself of the Robert Hall "economic benefit" rule when its women employees provided more profit than their male counterparts, and there was no difference in the product sold by male and female employees.ⁿ¹⁰⁸

Temporary assignments based on "anticipatory need and interim use,"ⁿ¹⁰⁹ bona fide training programs,ⁿ¹¹⁰ shift differentials,ⁿ¹¹¹ traditional industry practice,ⁿ¹¹² wartime veteran status,ⁿ¹¹³ and prior salaryⁿ¹¹⁴ are other examples that may be included in the factors other than sex exception. Wage differentials based on claimed differences between the average cost of employing workers of one sex and the average cost of employing workers of the opposite sex do not, however, qualify under the "factor other than sex" exception.ⁿ¹¹⁵ Also, differentials based on collective bargaining agreements are not permissible.ⁿ¹¹⁶ According to an EEOC policy guideline, wage differentials based on religious beliefs are not protected by the "factor other than sex" exception.ⁿ¹¹⁷

[5] Title VII

[a] Scope of Protection

As mentioned in § 41.50, unlawful discrimination with respect to compensation is also prohibited by Title VII.ⁿ¹¹⁸ Thus, employers may not create job classifications whereby different wages are paid to one group solely because of considerations of religion, race, color, national origin, or sex.ⁿ¹¹⁹

In Title VII cases in which a plaintiff claims that he or she was denied equal pay for equal work because of his or her sex, the EPA and Title VII are construed harmoniously, and the same "substantial identity" standard is applied in determining whether the work is "equal."ⁿ¹²⁰ For discussion of "substantial identity" standard under the EPA, see [2][b][ii], above.

A few reported Title VII cases involve plaintiffs who claimed they were compensated discriminatorily although they did not claim that they were denied equal pay for equal work.ⁿ¹²¹ For example, in one case an employer paid the same wages to any male that worked within a job classification predominantly filled by females, but the employer allegedly used a system that set wage rates lower for any classification that was predominantly female.ⁿ¹²²

In County of Washington v. Gunther,ⁿ¹²³ the United States Supreme Court held that the prohibition of sex-based wage discrimination in Title VII is not restricted to claims of equal pay for equal work.ⁿ¹²⁴ The Court rejected the employer's argument that claims not arising from "equal work" are precluded because the Bennett Amendment to Title VII, which allows employers to differentiate on the basis of sex in determining the payment of wages or compensation if the differentiation is authorized by the EPA,ⁿ¹²⁵ restricts Title VII sex-based discrimination claims to those that could also be brought under the EPA.ⁿ¹²⁶ The Court held that the language of the Bennett Amendment suggests an intention to incorporate only the EPA affirmative defenses (i.e., seniority systems, merit systems, systems that measure earnings by quantity or quality of production, differentials based on any other factor other than sex) into Title VII.ⁿ¹²⁷

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that the Title VII proscription against wage discrimination based on sex does not violate the Free Exercise or Free Establishment Clauses of the First Amendment to the United States Constitution when applied to religious organizations or institutions, particularly when such application has no significant impact on the exercise of religious beliefs.ⁿ¹²⁸ In a 1990 policy guideline, the EEOC concluded that under Title VII, a religious organization or institution may not pay women less than men even if such a policy is pursuant to its religious beliefs.ⁿ¹²⁹

[b] Proof

There is some confusion as to the proper analysis for Title VII sex-based wage discrimination claims. The United States Supreme Court in Gunther reserved judgment on the issue,ⁿ¹³⁰ and subsequent cases have come to their own conclusions. For example, in Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co.,ⁿ¹³¹ an "equal pay for equal work" case, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals rejected an employer's contention that standard Title VII rules govern the allocation of evidentiary burdens in such cases.ⁿ¹³² The employer argued that under the reasoning of Texas Dept. of Community Affairs v. Burdine,ⁿ¹³³ a Title VII plaintiff alleging sex discrimination bears the burden of persuasion at all times as to all issues, and thus has the burden of showing that wage differentials do not result from a "factor other than sex."ⁿ¹³⁴ Relying on Gunther,ⁿ¹³⁵ the court in Kouba explained that very different principles govern the structure, including burdens of proof, of "standard" Title VII litigation and the structure of Title VII litigation implicating the "factor other than sex" exception to a wage discrimination claim.ⁿ¹³⁶ The court thus held that under both Title VII and the EPA, the employer bears the burden of showing that a wage differential resulted from a "factor other than sex."ⁿ¹³⁷

By contrast, the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals has rejected the Kouba analysis, holding that the plaintiff in Title VII sex-based wage discrimination actions bears the same burden as in "standard" Title VII actions; that is, the plaintiff bears the ultimate burden of persuasion at all times.ⁿ¹³⁸ The court explained that the impact of the Bennett Amendment to Title VII,ⁿ¹³⁹ which incorporates the federal Equal Pay Act's (EPA) affirmative defenses,ⁿ¹⁴⁰ likely is limited to Title VII actions in which an employer asserts a legitimate and nondiscriminatory reason that happens to also cause a disparate impact, in which case the amendment would simply preclude liability.ⁿ¹⁴¹ Distinguishing Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins,ⁿ¹⁴² a "standard" Title VII sex discrimination case which holds that the burden of proof shifts to the employer when it has been established that sex was a motivating factor in a challenged action, the court noted that an EPA prima facie case does not implicate sex to the same degree as a Title VII "mixed motive" or BFOQ case, so there is no justification to shift the burden to the employer in Title VII sex-based wage discrimination cases.ⁿ¹⁴³ Thus, the court declared that although the Bennett Amendment incorporated the EPA's defenses into Title VII, it did not incorporate its burden of proof scheme. Title VII does not share the EPA's unique history; therefore, although the EPA's defenses must be treated similarly in substantive terms under both Title VII and the EPA, they may be treated differently for burden of proof purposes.ⁿ¹⁴⁴

[6] Comparable Worth

In light of the holding in County of Washington v. Gunther,ⁿ¹⁴⁵ that Title VII sex-based wage discrimination claims are not restricted to those that can also be brought under the EPA (that is, claims of a denial of equal pay for equal work),ⁿ¹⁴⁶ plaintiffs otherwise unable to show that compared jobs are "substantially equal" under the EPAⁿ¹⁴⁷ may attempt to establish Title VII liability using a "comparable worth" theory.ⁿ¹⁴⁸ That theory postulates that sex-based wage discrimination exists if employees in job classifications occupied primarily by one sex are paid less than employees in job classifications filled primarily by the other sex, if the jobs are of "equal value" to the employer, although otherwise dissimilar.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ The feasibility of comparable worth as an approach to employee compensation is a matter of debate.ⁿ¹⁵⁰

In Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash.,ⁿ¹⁵¹ the State of Washington required state employee salaries to reflect prevailing market rates. However, relying on the results of a study finding a twenty-percent wage disparity between state jobs held mostly by women and state jobs of comparable worth held mostly by men, the state enacted legislation providing for a comparable worth compensation scheme to take effect over a ten-year period.ⁿ¹⁵² Plaintiff union, representing a class of state employees, alleged sex-based wage discrimination based, in essence, on the state's failure to immediately adopt and implement a comparable worth compensation program.ⁿ¹⁵³ However, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that initial reliance on a free market system in which employees in male-dominated jobs are compensated at a higher rate than employees in dissimilar female-oriented jobs is not in and of itself a violation of Title VII, notwithstanding a study that deems the positions to be of comparable worth.ⁿ¹⁵⁴

The Ninth Circuit in Am. Fed. first concluded that the case did not involve an employment practice that may be analyzed under the disparate impact model of proof, because the state's decision to base compensation on prevailing market rates involved the assessment of a number of complex factors not easily ascertainable and too multifaceted to be appropriate for such analysis.ⁿ¹⁵⁵ The court then held that there was no liability under the disparate treatment theory of liability, because payment of wages according to prevailing market rates does not by itself support an inference of intentional discrimination, even if the market reflects a historical pattern of lower wages to positions staffed predominantly by members of a protected class.ⁿ¹⁵⁶ The court explained that the state did not create the market disparity, and although the legislature may have the discretion to enact a comparable worth plan, Title VII does not obligate it to eliminate an economic inequality it did not create.ⁿ¹⁵⁷

■ AUTHOR'S COMMENT:

However, the Ninth Circuit granted rehearing en banc. Plaintiffs appealed on the basis that, as one of the largest employers in the state, the State of Washington skewed the prevailing wage rate by its discriminatory practices. Plaintiffs further argued that because there was no free market-place establishment of wages, it was improper to allow the employer to benefit from its own unlawful, discriminatory practices. The case settled prior to the rehearing, thus leaving some question as to the Ninth Circuit's future response to this issue. Commentary by Christine Curtis.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 General Overview Labor & Employment Law Equal Pay General Overview Labor & Employment Law Equal Pay Equal Pay Act General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 206(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 1197.5.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940(a) (FEHA); see also 29 U.S.C. §§ 623(a)(1) (ADEA), 793, 794 (Sections 503 and 504 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973); Exec. Order No. 11246, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 201-219. For discussion of coverage of the FLSA, see Chapters 1, 2, and 3.

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1309 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981) ; see also Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 195, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 (EPA as requiring that "equal work will be rewarded by equal wages") .

(n7)Footnote 7. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.13(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1620.1-1620.34.

(n9)Footnote 9. See §§ 41.41, 41.45[2][b]; see also Chapter 40, Part C.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Hein v. Oregon College of Educ. (9th Cir. [Or.] 1983) 718 F.2d 910, 914 (quoting former 29 C.F.R. § 800.125, Interpretative Bulletin of Department of Labor; now see 29 C.F.R. § 1620.15(a)).

(n11)Footnote 11. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.10.

(n12)Footnote 12. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.10.

(n13)Footnote 13. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.10; see, e.g., Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1079, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 (retirement benefits, and employer contributions that maintain them, as form of compensation); Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 712 n.23, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 (same).

(n14)Footnote 14. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.12(a).

(n15)Footnote 15. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.12(a).

(n16)Footnote 16. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.12(b).

(n17)Footnote 17. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1).

(n18)Footnote 18. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.25.

(n19)Footnote 19. See EEOC v. Fremont Christian School (9th Cir. 1986) 781 F.2d 1362, 1368 .

(n20)Footnote 20. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 605, P 2166.

(n21)Footnote 21. Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 1069, 1073-1075 , cert. denied,

145 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1999) .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Maxwell v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. [Ariz.] 1986) 803 F.2d 444, 446 .

(n23)Footnote 23. Grove v. Frostburg Nat. Bank (D. Md. 1982) 549 F. Supp. 922, 933 .

(n24)Footnote 24. See Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 195, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 ; Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1309 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981) .

(n25)Footnote 25. See Thompson v. Sawyer (D.C. Cir. 1982) 678 F.2d 257, 275 ; see also Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 1069, 1074 , cert. denied, 145 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1999) (prima facie case is limited to comparing jobs in question).

(n26)Footnote 26. See Thompson v. Sawyer (D.C. Cir. 1982) 678 F.2d 257, 275-276 .

(n27)Footnote 27. Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 1069, 1074, 1076-1077 , cert. denied, 145 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1999) (determination that employer based pay differential on factor other than sex resolved FEHA, Title IX, and California constitutional claims based on same facts); see [4], below.

(n28)Footnote 28. Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 1069, 1074 , cert. denied, 145 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1999) .

(n29)Footnote 29. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.13(a); see also Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 1069, 1074 , cert. denied, 145 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1999) ; Shultz v. Wheaton Glass Comp. (3d Cir. 1970) 421 F.2d 259, 265 (EPA; Title VII) .

(n30)Footnote 30. Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 1069, 1074 , cert. denied, 145 L. Ed. 2d 413 (Ninth Circuit joins Fourth and Seventh Circuits in adopting this approach in EPA cases; affirming summary judgment on non-gender factor, court did not decide second, disputed issue).

(n31)Footnote 31. See Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1309 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981) (EPA); see also 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1), discussed in [a], above. See also Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1208 .

(n32)Footnote 32. Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1994) 13 F.3d 1313, 1321-1322 .

(n33)Footnote 33. Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1309 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981) (EPA).

(n34)Footnote 34. Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 1069, 1074 , cert. denied, 145 L. Ed. 2d 413 .

(n35)Footnote 35. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.14(c); see also Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1309 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981) (skill, efforts, and responsibility required in performance of jobs as required to be substantially equal); 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1).

(n36)Footnote 36. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.14(a); see Hein v. Oregon College of Educ. (9th Cir. [Or.] 1983) 718 F.2d 910, 914.

(n37)Footnote 37. See, e.g., EEOC Notice No. 915.002 (compensation of sports coaches in educational institutions).

(n38)Footnote 38. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.14(a).

(n39)Footnote 39. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.14(b).

(n40)Footnote 40. See Thompson v. Sawyer (D.C. Cir. 1982) 678 F.2d 257, 273 .

(n41)Footnote 41. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.14(c). See Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1209 ("itinerant work" required to be performed by male employees outside office was virtually same as work performed by males and females inside office; travel did not override conclusion that work was substantially identical).

(n42)Footnote 42. See Spaulding v. University of Washington (9th Cir. [Wash.] 1984) 740 F.2d 686, 698 , overruled on other grounds, Antonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 810 F.2d 1477 (Title VII, EPA) quoting former 29 C.F.R. § 800.125, Interpretative Bulletin of Department of Labor; now see 29 C.F.R. § 1620.15(a)), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1036 (1984) .

(n43)Footnote 43. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.15(a).

(n44)Footnote 44. See Hein v. Oregon College of Educ. (9th Cir. [Or.] 1983) 718 F.2d 910, 914

(n45)Footnote 45. See Hein v. Oregon College of Educ. (9th Cir. [Or.] 1983) 718 F.2d 910.

(n46)Footnote 46. See Hein v. Oregon College of Educ. (9th Cir. [Or.] 1983) 718 F.2d 910, 914.

(n47)Footnote 47. See Hein v. Oregon College of Educ. (9th Cir. [Or.] 1983) 718 F.2d 910, 914 ; 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1) (equal wages for "equal work on jobs that require equal skill, effort, and responsibility" [emphasis added]).

(n48)Footnote 48. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.15(a); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.15(b) (illustration of "equal skill" principle).

(n49)Footnote 49. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.16(a).

(n50)Footnote 50. Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981).

(n51)Footnote 51. See Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981).

(n52)Footnote 52. See Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1309-1310 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981).

(n53)Footnote 53. See Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1310 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981).

(n54)Footnote 54. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.16(a).

(n55)Footnote 55. Usery v. Columbia University (2d Cir. 1977) 568 F.2d 953, 959 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.16(a).

(n56)Footnote 56. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.16(b); see also Thompson v. Sawyer (D.C. Cir. 1982) 678 F.2d 257, 275 .

(n57)Footnote 57. See Usery v. Columbia University (2d Cir. 1977) 568 F.2d 953, 959 .

(n58)Footnote 58. Usery v. Columbia University (2d Cir. 1977) 568 F.2d 953, 959 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.20.

(n59)Footnote 59. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.16(b).

(n60)Footnote 60. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.17(a); see Hein v. Oregon College of Educ. (9th Cir. [Or.] 1983) 718 F.2d 910, 915 (construing former 29 C.F.R. § 800.129, Interpretative Bulletin of Department of Labor; now see 29 C.F.R. § 1620.17(a)).

(n61)Footnote 61. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.17(a).

(n62)Footnote 62. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.17(b)(1). The EEOC regulations contain several other examples illustrating that considerable additional responsibility may justify higher wage rates, but minor additional responsibilities may not. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.17(b)(2), (3).

(n63)Footnote 63. EEOC v. Maricopa Cty. Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 510, 514 (EPA; relying on a former 29 C.F.R. § 800.122, Department of Labor Interpretative Bulletin; now see 29 C.F.R. § 1620.17(b)(2), (3)).

(n64)Footnote 64. E.E.O.C. v. Maricopa Cty. Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 510 (EPA).

(n65)Footnote 65. See E.E.O.C. v. Maricopa Cty. Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 510 (EPA).

(n66)Footnote 66. See E.E.O.C. v. Maricopa Cty. Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 510, 514 (EPA).

(n67)Footnote 67. See E.E.O.C. v. Maricopa Cty. Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 510 (EPA) . See also Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1209 (to argue that any difference in supervisory responsibility renders job unequal is manifestly incorrect as matter of law).

(n68)Footnote 68. Stanley v. University of Southern California (9th Cir. 1994) 13 F.3d 1313, 1322-1323 .

(n69)Footnote 69. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.18(a).

(n70)Footnote 70. See also Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 195, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 (wet, heat, cold, dust, grease, noises, etc.).

(n71)Footnote 71. See Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 195, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 (bruises, cuts, heavy lifting, fumes, slippery floors, machines, chemicals, gases, bodily injuries, etc.).

(n72)Footnote 72. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.18(a); see also Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 202, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 .

(n73)Footnote 73. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.18(a); see Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 202, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 .

(n74)Footnote 74. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.18(b).

(n75)Footnote 74.1. Hall v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 318, 324-325, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 (because undisputed evidence established that, at any given time, plaintiff's employer and county counsel both employed substantial number of women and within employer, women were paid same as men, there was no basis for use of male county counsel lawyer as comparator and EPA claim failed as matter of law); Arthur v. College of St. Benedict (D. Minn. 2001) 174 F. Supp. 2d 968, 976 . See Hofmister v. Mississippi State Dep't. of Health (S.D. Miss. 1999) 53 F. Supp. 2d 884, 891 (legislative history of EPA shows that differences in pay between groups or categories of employees that contain both men and women within each group or category are not covered by EPA).

(n76)Footnote 75. Lab. Code § 1197.5(a).

(n77)Footnote 76. See Jones v. Tracy School Dist. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 99, 104, 165 Cal. Rptr. 100, 611 P.2d 441 .

(n78)Footnote 76.1. Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 623, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 .

(n79)Footnote 76.2. See Jones v. Tracy School Dist. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 99, 165 Cal. Rptr. 100, 611 P.2d 441 ; Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 ; Bass v. Great Western Sav. & Loan Assn. (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 770, 130 Cal. Rptr. 123 .

(n80)Footnote 76.3. See Jones v. Tracy School Dist. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 99, 106, 165 Cal. Rptr. 100, 611 P.2d 441 (comparing FLSA statute of limitations to California Equal Pay Act provision); Hall v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 318, 326 n.6, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 (because FEHA has federal counterpart in Title VII of federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.] and antidiscrimination objectives and public policy purpose of two laws are same, California's courts routinely rely on federal decisions to interpret analogous parts of FEHA); Mixon v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1306, 1316, 237 Cal. Rptr. 884 (applying legal analysis of Title VII developed by federal cases to FEHA).

(n81)Footnote 77. Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 623, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 .

(n82)Footnote 77.1. See Hall v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 318, 326-327, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 (to establish prima facie case of disparate treatment under California Equal Pay Act, plaintiff was required to show membership in protected class, qualification for position at issue, adverse employment action, and at least inference of intentional discrimination from facts showing that employer chose particular policy because of its effect on members of protected class (not just that employer was aware that given policy would lead to adverse consequences for given group); to establish prima facie case of disparate impact, plaintiff was required to show that, regardless of employer's motive, facially neutral practice or policy bearing no relationship to job requirements had disproportionate adverse effect on members of protected class).

(n83)Footnote 77.2. See Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 196, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 . See also Hall v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 318, 327, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 (plaintiff did not establish prima facie case of disparate treatment or disparate impact under California Equal Pay Act, where she did not present any evidence to show that county created organization of independent contractors because of its effect on female lawyers or even that county was aware that use of independent contractors would lead to adverse consequences for female lawyers, or any evidence that creation of organization had disproportionate adverse effect on women).

(n84)Footnote 77.3. For exceptions listed in Lab. Code § 1197.5, see § 41.56[4], below. See Hall v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 318, 327, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 (assuming for sake of argument that plaintiff made required showing, it was met with county's undisputed evidence of legitimate and gender-neutral business reason for formation of organization of independent contractors, i.e., cost savings).

(n85)Footnote 77.4. Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 626, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 . See Hall v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 318, 327, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 (there was no evidence of pretext, where, although plaintiff's expert opined (based on statistical analysis) that disparity in hiring between women into organization of independent contractors versus county counsel was so significant it could only be explained by external factors (i.e., bias), there was no evidence that organization's lawyers--male or female--were precluded from applying to county counsel for posted positions; it was undisputed that female lawyers did not face any barriers in applying for positions with county counsel, and there was no evidence to suggest organization's contract or compensation decisions were result of gender bias).

(n86)Footnote 77.5. Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 .

(n87)Footnote 77.6. Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 628-629, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 .

(n88)Footnote 77.7. Lab. Code § 1197.5(a); see § 41.56[4][c], below.

(n89)Footnote 77.8. Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 629-632, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 .

(n90)Footnote 77.9. Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 632, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 .

(n91)Footnote 78. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d); see also discussion in [2], above.

(n92)Footnote 79. See Lab. Code § 1197.5.

(n93)Footnote 80. See Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 196, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 (EPA) ; 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1); Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 623, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 ; Lab. Code § 1197.5(a).

(n94)Footnote 81. See discussion in [2][b], above.

(n95)Footnote 82. Grove v. Frostburg Nat. Bank (D. Md. 1982) 549 F. Supp. 922, 933 .

(n96)Footnote 83. Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 196, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 (EPA) . Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1211 .

(n97)Footnote 84. See Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1211 .

(n98)Footnote 85. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d); Lab. Code § 1197.5(a).

(n99)Footnote 86. See Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 204, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 ; see also Brennan v. Victoria Bank and Trust Company (5th Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 896, 901 (standard annual longevity raise caused disparate wages among those with differing lengths of service).

(n100)Footnote 87. See Brennan v. Victoria Bank and Trust Company (5th Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 896, 901 .

(n101)Footnote 88. See E.E.O.C. v. Whittin Mach. Works, Inc. (4th Cir. 1983) 699 F.2d 688, 688-689 ; cf. Brennan v. Victoria Bank and Trust Company (5th Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 896, 901 ; Hodgson v. Brookhaven General Hospital (5th Cir. 1970) 436 F.2d 719, 726 .

(n102)Footnote 89. Brennan v. Victoria Bank and Trust Company (5th Cir. 1974) 493 F.2d 896, 901 ; Hodgson v. Brookhaven General Hospital (5th Cir. 1970) 436 F.2d 719, 726 .

(n103)Footnote 90. Maxwell v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. [Ariz.] 1986) 803 F.2d 444, 447 ; see also Grove v. Frostburg Nat. Bank (D. Md. 1982) 549 F. Supp. 922, 934 .

(n104)Footnote 91. See Maxwell v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. [Ariz.] 1986) 803 F.2d 444, 447 ; Morgado v. Birmingham-Jefferson Cty. Civ. Defense (11th Cir. 1983) 706 F.2d 1184, 1188 , cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1045 (1984) .

(n105)Footnote 92. See Grove v. Frostburg Nat. Bank (D. Md. 1982) 549 F. Supp. 922, 934 .

(n106)Footnote 93. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d); Lab. Code § 1197.5(a).

(n107)Footnote 94. Bence v. Detroit Health Corp. (6th Cir. 1983) 712 F.2d 1024, 1029 .

(n108)Footnote 95. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d); Lab. Code § 1197.5(a).

(n109)Footnote 96. See Maxwell v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. [Ariz.] 1986) 803 F.2d 444, 447 ; E.E.O.C. v. Maricopa Cty. Community College Dist. (9th Cir. 1984) 736 F.2d 510, 514 . See also Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir.

1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1211 ("factor other than sex" defense prevents courts and administrative agencies from substituting their judgment for employer's judgment and avoids unnecessary disruption of bona fide job evaluation systems).

(n110)Footnote 97. Strecker v. Grand Forks Cty. Soc. Serv. Bd. (8th Cir. 1980) 640 F.2d 96, 100 ; see Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 1069, 1073-1074 , cert. denied, 145 L. Ed. 2d 413 (1999) (pay differential based on something other than sex when higher paid employee had substantially more and diverse experience).

(n111)Footnote 98. Strecker v. Grand Forks Cty. Soc. Serv. Bd. (8th Cir. 1980) 640 F.2d 96, 101 ; see Stanley v. University of S. California (9th Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 1069, 1073-1074 , cert. denied, 145 L. Ed. 2d 413 . See also Green v. Par Pools, Inc. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 620, 629-632, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 844 (under Lab. Code § 1197.5(a), more extensive prior work experience of male justified higher salary than female's for performing identical job).

(n112)Footnote 99. See Maxwell v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. [Ariz.] 1986) 803 F.2d 444, 447 ; see, e.g., Strecker v. Grand Forks Cty. Soc. Serv. Bd. (8th Cir. 1980) 640 F.2d 96, 103 .

(n113)Footnote 100. See, e.g., Schulte v. Wilson Indus., Inc. (S.D. Tex. 1982) 547 F. Supp. 324, 339 fn. 16 .

(n114)Footnote 101. See Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1982) 691 F.2d 873, 877 ; see also Bence v. Detroit Health Corp. (6th Cir. 1983) 712 F.2d 1024, 1029 (legislative history of EPA as suggesting that Congress intended exception to include factors other than traditional job evaluation criteria).

(n115)Footnote 102. See Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1982) 691 F.2d 873, 876-877 ; cf. Hodgson v. Robert Hall Clothes, Inc. (3d Cir. 1973) 473 F.2d 589, 594 ("legitimate business reason"). cf. E.E.O.C. v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (6th Cir. 1988) 843 F.2d 249, 253 ("legitimate business reason" standard is appropriate benchmark against which to measure "factor other than sex" defense).

(n116)Footnote 103. Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1211 .

(n117)Footnote 104. See Hodgson v. Robert Hall Clothes, Inc. (3d Cir. 1973) 473 F.2d 589, 594-595 . See also Hall v. County of Los Angeles (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 318, 325-326, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 (summary judgment for employer on Equal Pay Act claim was proper where undisputed evidence established that wage disparity between organization formed to provide lawyers when needed as independent contractors and employees of county counsel was based on acceptable business reason; county counsel's use of independent contractors was authorized by county's charter as gender-neutral cost-saving measure, and contract with organization was intended to be an economical and cost effective way to provide supplemental legal services).

(n118)Footnote 105. Hodgson v. Robert Hall Clothes, Inc. (3d Cir. 1973) 473 F.2d 589 .

(n119)Footnote 106. See Hodgson v. Robert Hall Clothes, Inc. (3d Cir. 1973) 473 F.2d 589, 590-591 .

(n120)Footnote 107. Hodgson v. Robert Hall Clothes, Inc. (3d Cir. 1973) 473 F.2d 589, 595 .

(n121)Footnote 108. Bence v. Detroit Health Corp. (6th Cir. 1983) 712 F.2d 1024, 1031 .

(n122)Footnote 109. See Campbell v. Von Hoffman Press, Inc. (W.D. Mo. 1980) 483 F. Supp. 218, 222-224 , aff'd, 632 F.2d 69 (8th Cir. 1980) .

(n123)Footnote 110. See Saltzman v. Fullerton Metals Co. (7th Cir. 1981) 661 F.2d 647, 652 .

(n124)Footnote 111. See Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 204, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 .

(n125)Footnote 112. See Thompson v. Sawyer (D.C. Cir. 1982) 678 F.2d 257, 276-277 (traditional industry practice revealing "continuing fealty to sexual discrimination," however, does not shield employers from EPA violation).

(n126)Footnote 113. See Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1211-1212 (federal EPA challenge to pay differential between male Veteran Service Officer job and female Veteran Service Officer Associate job in state Department of Veterans Affairs).

(n127)Footnote 114. See Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1982) 691 F.2d 873, 878.

(n128)Footnote 115. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.22; see also Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 204, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 .

(n129)Footnote 116. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.23.

(n130)Footnote 117. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 605, P 2166; see E.E.O.C. v. Fremont Christian School (9th Cir. 1986) 781 F.2d 1362, 1367 (health insurance compensation program applying only to male "head of household" was not protected by "factor other than sex" exception). For a general discussion relating to "head of household" rules, see § 41.61[3][c].

(n131)Footnote 118. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1), (h).

(n132)Footnote 119. International U. of Elec. v. Westinghouse Elec. (3d Cir. [N.J.] 1980) 631 F.2d 1094, 1097 , cert. denied, 452 U.S. 967 (1981) .

(n133)Footnote 120. See Di Salvo v. Chamber of Commerce, Etc. (8th Cir. 1978) 568 F.2d 593, 596 ; Orr v. Frank R. MacNeill & Son, Inc. (5th Cir. 1975) 511 F.2d 166, 170-171 ; cf. Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1311 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981) ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.27(a) (in situations in which jurisdictional prerequisites of both EPA and Title VII are satisfied, any violation of EPA is also a violation of Title VII). but see Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1218 (finding of EPA liability, without more, will not lead automatically to liability under Title VII; declining to give deference to 29 C.F.R. § 1620.27(a)).

(n134)Footnote 121. See, e.g., International U. of Elec. v. Westinghouse Elec. (3d Cir. 1980) 631 F.2d 1094, 1096 ; Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. [Or.] 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1311 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981) .

(n135)Footnote 122. See International U. of Elec. v. Westinghouse Elec. (3d Cir. 1980) 631 F.2d 1094, 1096 , cert. denied, 452 U.S. 967 (1981) .

(n136)Footnote 123. County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 .

(n137)Footnote 124. See County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 168, 178-180, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.27(a) (Title VII covers types of wage discrimination not actionable under the EPA; therefore employer practices that are not violations of EPA may nevertheless be violations of Title VII).

(n138)Footnote 125. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h).

(n139)Footnote 126. See County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 168, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 .

(n140)Footnote 127. See County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 168, 171, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1604.8(b) (EEOC sex discrimination guideline; EPA defenses as proper in Title VII sex-based wage discrimination proceedings).

(n141)Footnote 128. See E.E.O.C. v. Pacific Press Pub. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1982) 676 F.2d 1272, 1279, 1281-1282 ; see also E.E.O.C. v. Fremont Christian School (9th Cir. 1986) 781 F.2d 1362, 1368, 1369-1370 .

(n142)Footnote 129. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 605, P 2166.

(n143)Footnote 130. See County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 168, 170-171, 181, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 (acknowledging that incorporation of "factor other than sex" exception could have significant consequences for Title VII litigation).

(n144)Footnote 131. Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1982) 691 F.2d 873.

(n145)Footnote 132. Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1982) 691 F.2d 873, 875.

(n146)Footnote 133. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 .

(n147)Footnote 134. See Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1982) 691 F.2d 873, 875; 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(1) . As discussed in § 41.11, under the "disparate treatment" theory of liability, an employer need only articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the employer's action in order to rebut a presumption of unlawful discrimination. See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253-255, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 ; McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 . However, as discussed in [4] [a], above, the burden under the EPA is on the employer to show that a wage differential is justified under one of the exceptions, including the "factor other than sex" exception. See Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 196, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 .

(n148)Footnote 135. See County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 170-171, 181, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 .

(n149)Footnote 136. See Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1982) 691 F.2d 873, 875.

(n150)Footnote 137. Kouba v. Allstate Ins. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1982) 691 F.2d 873, 875.

(n151)Footnote 138. See Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1212-1218 .

(n152)Footnote 139. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h).

(n153)Footnote 140. See County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 168, 171, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 ; see also discussion in [a], above.

(n154)Footnote 141. See Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1215 .

(n155)Footnote 142. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 258-261, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268, 109 S. Ct. 1775 (concurring opinion); see § 41.11[1][d].

(n156)Footnote 143. See Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1216 .

(n157)Footnote 144. See Fallon v. State of Ill. (7th Cir. 1989) 882 F.2d 1206, 1216 .

(n158)Footnote 145. County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 .

(n159)Footnote 146. See County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 168, 178-180, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 ; see discussion in [5][a], above.

(n160)Footnote 147. See Shultz v. Wheaton Glass Company (3d Cir. [N.J.] 1970) 421 F.2d 259, 265 , cert. denied, 398 U.S. 905 (EPA; Title VII) ; see § 41.56[2].

(n161)Footnote 148. The Gunther Court emphasized, however, that the case before it did not involve "comparable worth." See County of Washington v. Gunther (1981) 452 U.S. 161, 166, 101 S. Ct. 2242, 68 L. Ed. 2d 751 .

(n162)Footnote 149. Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1404 (Title VII).

(n163)Footnote 150. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1408 (Title VII).

(n164)Footnote 151. Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1403 (Title VII).

(n165)Footnote 152. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1403 (Title VII).

(n166)Footnote 153. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1403-1404 (Title VII).

(n167)Footnote 154. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1408 (Title VII) .

(n168)Footnote 155. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1405-1406 (Title VII; disparate impact theory as confined to cases that challenge specific, clearly delineated employment practices applied to single point in job selection process); but see Watson v. Ft. Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 990-991, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII; subjective employment practices as subject to disparate impact theory in appropriate cases); See also § 41.20[3].

(n169)Footnote 156. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1406-1407 ; see discussion in §§ 41.10-41.11.

(n170)Footnote 157. See Am. Fed. of S., C., & Mun. Emp. v. State of Wash. (9th Cir. 1985) 770 F.2d 1401, 1406-1407 .

68 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.57

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.57 Demotion

Cases arising out of failure to promote may involve workplace discontent, such as employer concerns about job performance or loyalty, or unlawful discrimination, such as age, gender, or race.

In Addy v. Bliss & Glennon,ⁿ¹ the plaintiff was not considered for a position she regarded as a promotion. Her supervisor informed her it was not a promotion because the position paid less than the position she held, and furthermore someone else had been hired. Addy, an Asian, then filed an EEOC charge of race and sex discrimination. Sometime later, her flex time schedule was discontinued and Addy filed a second EEOC charge. Thereafter, her work was scrutinized unfavorably; she was offered the choices of termination, demotion with pay cut, or resignation with severance pay. She asserted that those alternatives were retaliation in response to her having filed grievances with the EEOC. Defendant responded with evidence of poor performance. The court upheld summary judgment for the employer because although Addy's complaints to the EEOC were protected activity, she failed to establish a causal connection between her termination and filing the charges.ⁿ²

Although, as a general rule, an at will employee may be demoted, as well as discharged without cause, it is nevertheless impermissible to base such employment decisions on unlawful discrimination.ⁿ³ In Strother v. Southern California Permanente Medical Group,ⁿ⁴ plaintiff remained a partner in her medical group but alleged, among other things, that because of her race and sex she had been denied promotions. The Ninth Circuit held that her claims for denial of promotions did not pass muster under the standard applicable for employment decisions occurring prior to enactment of the Civil Rights Act of 1991,ⁿ⁵ but implied that a different result might obtain for similar claims arising after passage of the act.ⁿ⁶ In Girard v. Rubin,ⁿ⁷ plaintiff did not file demotion charges with the EEOC within the relevant time period because he was unaware that he was no longer being considered. Because the employer (IRS) failed to so inform him, the court found that the statute of limitations to file a grievance with the EEOC had been tolled and that IRS procedure cannot limit the EEOC jurisdiction to enforce the law.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationRacial DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDemotions & Promotions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Addy v. Bliss & Glennon (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 205, 217-218, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Addy v. Bliss & Glennon (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 205, 216-218, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, Sennello v. Reserve Life Ins. Co. (S.D. Fla. 1987) 667 F. Supp. 1498 , aff'd, 872 F.2d 393 (age discrimination suit under FEHA); Horsford v. Board of Trustees of Calif. State Univ. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 359 (FEHA; even though police officer remained on payroll and eventually returned to active status at his original rank and salary, removal from highly desirable position as investigative officer and placement on administrative leave constituted adverse employment actions; because transfer and suspension resulted from racial animus, they were actionable); Stephens v. Coldwell Banker Commercial Group, Inc. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1394, 1399-1401, 245 Cal. Rptr. 606 , disapproved on other grounds, White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 575 n.4, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 (age discrimination suit under FEHA based on indirect evidence of discrimination).

(n4)Footnote 4. Strother v. Southern Cal. Permanente Medical Group (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 859, 875 .

(n5)Footnote 5. 42 U.S.C. 2000e-2(k)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Strother v. Southern Cal. Permanente Medical Group (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 859, 876 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Girard v. Rubin (9th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 1244 .

69 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.58

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.58 Discharge

[1] Federal Law

Title VII and the ADEA are the primary federal equal employment opportunity statutes that proscribe discharges based on membership in a protected classification,ⁿ¹ although there are several other federal sources that provide similar protection.ⁿ²

In O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corporation,ⁿ³ a 56 year old male challenged his discharge alleging it violated the ADEA. His employer defended the employment decision on the ground that the replacement employee was 40 years of age and a member of a protected class. The Supreme Court rejected defendant's defense, noting that the ADEA protects an employee because of his or her age, and not because of having "lost out to another person in the protected class."ⁿ⁴ The Court cautioned against requiring an ADEA plaintiff to prove his or her prima facie case of discriminatory discharge by showing the replacement is not a protected class member. Rather, the Court stated, "[T]he fact that a replacement is substantially younger than the plaintiff is a far more reliable indicator of age discrimination than is the fact that the plaintiff was replaced by someone outside the protected class."ⁿ⁵

In EEOC v. Hacienda Hotel,ⁿ⁶ plaintiffs, hotel maids, sought relief under Title VII because their employer had a policy of terminating pregnant employees. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals agreed, finding the employer's policy violated the Pregnancy Discrimination Act of Title VII.ⁿ⁷

There are several other federal sources that provide similar protection against discharge.ⁿ⁸ For example, under the ADA, a claim of unlawful discharge requires a showing that the employer terminated the employee because of the employee's disability.^{n8.1} Courts recognize a distinction between termination of employment because of misconduct and termination of employment because of a disability.^{n8.2} Generally, however, conduct resulting from a disability is considered to be part of the disability, rather than a separate basis for termination.^{n8.3} The ADA's explicit authorization for discharge on the basis of alcoholism and illegal drug use^{n8.4} is an exception.^{n8.5} The link between the disability and termination is particularly strong when the employer has failed to accommodate a known disability and eventually discharges an employee for performance inadequacies resulting from the disability.ⁿ⁹

[2] California Law

The FEHA also prohibits such unlawfully discriminatory discharges.ⁿ¹⁰ In general, the FEHA does not preempt other state laws, including the state constitution and common law, that prohibit or restrict employment discrimination, unless those provisions provide less protection than that afforded by the FEHA to the enumerated classes of persons covered under the FEHA.ⁿ¹¹ Therefore, relief from a discriminatory discharge may be available under common-law wrongful termination doctrines.ⁿ¹²

The California Supreme Court has held that Labor Code Section 132a does not provide an exclusive remedy and does not preclude an industrially injured employee from pursuing FEHA and common law wrongful discharge remedies based on allegations of disability discrimination. In addition, disability discrimination can form the basis of a common law wrongful discharge claim.ⁿ¹³ However, in Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp.,ⁿ¹⁴ the Ninth Circuit held that the Workers Compensation Act does preempt disability discrimination claims under the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁵ However the court held that Jimeno could proceed under both the Workers Compensation Act and the FEHA because his impairment pre-dated his work injury.ⁿ¹⁶

For a general discussion relating to wrongful discharge actions based on other grounds, see Division VI (Chapters 60-63). For a discussion relating to the scope and application of the foregoing and other federal and California equal employment opportunity laws generally, see Chapter 40, Parts B and C.

[3] Scope of Protection

Although employers may discharge employees for violating work rules,ⁿ¹⁷ punitive action must not differentiate on the basis of any classification protected by equal employment opportunity law.ⁿ¹⁸ Most discrimination cases involving discipline and discharge involve "disparate treatment," and accordingly the McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green ⁿ¹⁹ order and allocation of proof discussed in § 41.11[1] may usually be followed with some modifications.ⁿ²⁰ For example, one court relied on the McDonnell Douglas test to conclude that there was an inference of racial discrimination when a plaintiff established (1) that he was a member of a racial minority; (2) that he was qualified for the job he was performing; (3) that he was satisfying the normal requirements in his work; (4) that he was discharged; and (5) that after his discharge his employer assigned white employees to perform the same work.ⁿ²¹

Some discharge cases involve a reduction in work force due to business conditions.ⁿ²² Depending on the facts, these cases may be analyzed under either, or both, the "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" theories of liability. For example, in one ADEA case, plaintiff employees alleged their employer (1) refused to retain them during a reduction because of their age (disparate treatment), and (2) selected employees to be terminated based on subjective determinations by department heads (disparate impact).ⁿ²³ Some courts have required that one of the elements of prima facie "disparate treatment" in workforce reduction cases is that the plaintiff was replaced by someone who is not a member of the plaintiff's class and who had equal or inferior qualifications.ⁿ²⁴ This rule has now been placed in doubt by the United States Supreme Court, which has held actions for discrimination do not require the replacement worker be someone outside a protected class of employees.ⁿ²⁵ In any case, it has been held that a plaintiff's failure to establish this element "is not necessarily fatal" to his or her claim.ⁿ²⁶ The plaintiff may show instead that the discharge occurred under circumstances giving rise to an inference of discrimination. No such inference may be drawn, however, if the plaintiff's position and duties are completely eliminated. The plaintiff must show that the employer had some "continuing need for [the plaintiff's] skills and services in that his [or her] various duties were still being performed ...".ⁿ²⁷ However, an employee may be able to prevail in an action for age discrimination when an employer claims the termination was justified by a reduction in force if the employee can show that a significant portion of his or her duties was transferred prior to termination under circumstances indicating that age was a determining factor in the termination decision.ⁿ²⁸

If discipline or discharge involves a specific offense, evidence that the employee was otherwise qualified for the job does not create an inference of discrimination,ⁿ²⁹ and therefore a literal application of the McDonnell Douglas elements may not be appropriate. However, as discussed in § 41.11[2][b], the importance of McDonnell Douglas is not in its specification of the discrete elements of proof required, but in its recognition of the general principle that a plaintiff must carry the initial burden of offering evidence adequate to create an inference of illegal discrimination.ⁿ³⁰ Thus, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has developed a rule for cases involving specific offenses, under which a discharged employee who is a member of a protected classification may establish a prima facie case of unlawful discrimination by showing simply that he or she was discharged and that a person who did not belong to the same protected classification was retained under apparently similar circumstances.ⁿ³¹ If such a prima facie case is established, the burden shifts to the employer to demonstrate a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for its action.ⁿ³² If the employer articulates such a reason, the employee must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that an employer's articulated reason for the discharge was a pretext for discrimination.ⁿ³³ However some cases seem to require proof that the plaintiff was discharged and other employees were retained under "similar circumstances" as part of the pretext stage, rather than as part of plaintiff's prima facie case.ⁿ³⁴

[4] Constructive Discharge

In some cases, a plaintiff who in fact resigned, rather than be discharged, may attempt to establish that he or she was "constructively" discharged for purposes of the equal employment opportunity laws.^{n34.1} Some conflict exists in the case law concerning the standard for determining when an employee has been constructively discharged under Title VII and other federal laws. For example, some courts, relying on the doctrine developed in National Labor Relations Act (NLRA) cases,ⁿ³⁵ hold that constructive discharge exists when an employer deliberately renders an employee's working conditions intolerable, thus forcing a resignation.ⁿ³⁶ Other courts, including the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, focus on the reasonableness of the employee's decision to resign, rather than the employer's intent, and hold that the proper determination is whether a reasonable person in the plaintiff's position would have felt that he or she was forced to quit because of intolerable and discriminatory working conditions.ⁿ³⁷ To establish a constructive discharge, a plaintiff must show some aggravating factors, such as a continuous pattern of discriminatory treatment.^{n37.1}

In Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders,^{n37.2} the United States Supreme Court held in the context of a sexual harassment case, that to establish constructive discharge in addition to sexual harassment, the plaintiff must make a further showing, i.e., that the abusive working environment became so intolerable that the resignation qualified as a fitting response. An employer may defend against the claim by showing both (1) that it installed a readily accessible and effective policy for reporting and resolving complaints of sexual harassment, and (2) the plaintiff unreasonably failed to avail herself or himself of that employer-provided preventive or remedial apparatus. The affirmative defense is not available, however, if the plaintiff quits in reasonable response to an employer-sanctioned adverse action officially changing the plaintiff's employment status or situation, such as a humiliating demotion, an extreme cut in pay, or a transfer to a position in which the plaintiff would face unbearable working conditions.^{n37.3}

In Satterwhite v. Smith,ⁿ³⁸ a black plaintiff was consistently refused promotion, thereby preventing him from gaining access to training and advancement opportunities. Moreover, white employees were regularly promoted ahead of the plaintiff, and he was sometimes embarrassed and humiliated when he was required to train recent promotees. The plaintiff was also relegated to performing dull tasks that offered virtually no hope of securing the advancement opportunities that white employees enjoyed.ⁿ³⁹ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals declined to follow the rule, followed by some federal courts,ⁿ⁴⁰ requiring proof of an employer's intention to cause intolerable working conditions. The court explained that the rule focuses on the employer's subjective intent, rather than on the reasonable employee's perspective, and is out of step with both the weight of authority and the law of the Ninth Circuit.ⁿ⁴¹ The court added that the plaintiff faced very poor working conditions. It agreed with the trial court that in light of the facts, as well as the atmosphere of occasional racial insults that all black employees working for the employer suffered, the plaintiff's working conditions were intolerable and discriminatory.ⁿ⁴²

In Schnidrig v. Columbia Machine, Inc.,ⁿ⁴³ plaintiff was hired at age 50 as production manager and promoted to vice president within a year. Ten years later the president resigned and Schnidrig was asked to run the company during the search for a new president. Schnidrig applied, but several members of the board of directors expressed an interest in finding someone 45-50 years of age and agreed to hire from among candidates selected by an outside recruiter the board had retained. Although Schnidrig resubmitted his application, he was not hired. He sued for age discrimination under the ADEA and alleged he had been constructively discharged. Although the Ninth Circuit denied summary judgment to the employer on plaintiff's ADEA claim, it agreed with the trial court that Schnidrig had not been constructively discharged, noting that plaintiff had not been demoted, had received no pay cut, and had neither been disciplined nor forced to resign.ⁿ⁴⁴

Constructive discharge in the equal employment opportunity context often involves discriminatory harassment (i.e., harassment based on national origin, race, sex, etc.). For example, an employee may be forced to resign because of "hostile environment" sexual harassment.ⁿ⁴⁵ In such cases, the EEOC's position, as set forth in a 1990 policy guideline, comports with the Satterwhite v. Smith ⁿ⁴⁶"reasonable employee" standard. However, the EEOC based its position in part on the fact that specific intent is not as likely to be present in "hostile environment" cases.ⁿ⁴⁷ Whether the EEOC will apply the "reasonable employee" standard in other constructive discharge contexts is not clear.

The California Supreme Court has held, in the context of California common-law wrongful termination actions, that a constructive discharge requires that the plaintiff show that a reasonable person faced with alleged intolerable working conditions or employer actions would have had no reasonable alternative except to quit and that the employer had actual, rather than merely constructive, knowledge of the intolerable conditions.ⁿ⁴⁸ The Court also held that a constructive discharge in violation of a fundamental public policy gives rise to a tort action in favor of the terminated employee.ⁿ⁴⁹

As recognized by the court in Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc., the doctrine of constructive discharge evolved to prevent employers from forcing one from a job by making it so unpleasant that the employee leaves, and then claiming that the person voluntarily left and cannot sue for wrongful discharge or other claims involving employer-initiated terminations of employment.ⁿ⁵⁰ For a further discussion of constructive discharge under California wrongful termination law, see Chapter 60.

In FEHA administrative proceedings involving alleged sexual harassment, the FEHC has held that an employee is constructively discharged when an employer, because of an employee's sex, takes actions that make the employee's working conditions so intolerable that the employee is forced to quit. The FEHC has held that the employer must have intended to cause the result. The complainant may prove this intent by demonstrating either a conscious purpose on the part of the employer or that the employer knew or should have known that its actions were likely to cause the employee's departure. To decide whether the employer should have known that the employee was likely to quit, the FEHC will look to whether the employee's working conditions were such that a reasonable person in the employee's circumstances would have quit.ⁿ⁵¹

Whatever rule is relied on, most courts agree that there is a "general reluctance to predicate a finding of constructive discharge [on] the fact of discrimination."ⁿ⁵² There must be "aggravating factors," such as a "continuous pattern of discriminatory treatment."ⁿ⁵³ As an example, Satterwhite suggests that a court may find a constructive discharge when the employer's act of discrimination consisted of continually subjecting its employee to racial insults.ⁿ⁵⁴ In another case, a California court of appeal held that a trier of fact could conclude that a continuous pattern of discriminatory examinations, deprivation of training assignments, denial of opportune assignments, and other similar conduct were aggravating factors to support a claim of constructive discharge.ⁿ⁵⁵

Under California state law, the length of time since the onset of intolerable working conditions is merely one of many factors determining the intolerability of the employment conditions.ⁿ⁵⁶ The California Supreme Court has specifically rejected the suggestion in an earlier court of appeal decision⁵⁷ that the statute of limitations is an outer limit beyond which an employee cannot remain on the job and still claim constructive discharge.⁵⁸

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
 Discrimination
 Age Discrimination
 General Overview
 Labor & Employment
 Law
 Discrimination
 Age Discrimination
 Employment Practices
 Discharges & Failures to Hire
 Labor & Employment
 Law
 Discrimination
 Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964
 General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1); 29 U.S.C. § 623(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See e.g., 29 U.S.C. § 793(a) (Section 503 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973); 29 U.S.C. § 794 (Section 504 of Rehabilitation Act of 1973); 28 C.F.R. § 41.52(c) (Section 504 coordination regulation); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.1 (Section 503 implementing regulation); Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) ; Exec. Order No. 11246, § 202, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); see also 42 U.S.C. § 1981(a), (b) (protecting against racial discrimination in "termination of contracts"; 29 C.F.R. § 1630.4(b) (ADA implementing regulation).

(n3)Footnote 3. O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433 .

(n4)Footnote 4. O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 1310, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433, 438 (Court assumed without deciding application of Title VII McDonnell Douglas evidentiary framework to ADEA cases).

(n5)Footnote 5. O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 US 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 1310, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433, 438-439 .

(n6)Footnote 6. E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504 . See Vigars v. Valley Christian Ctr. of Dublin, Cal. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 805 F. Supp. 802 , where the court held that under the Title VII prohibition against discrimination on the basis of sex, including pregnancy, an employer was precluded from firing a woman because she became pregnant out of wedlock, violating its religious principles.

(n7)Footnote 7. See E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1511-1512 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111-12117 (Americans with Disabilities Act), 29 U.S.C. §§ 793(a) (Section 503 of Rehabilitation act of 1973), 794 (Section 504 of Rehabilitation act of 1973); 28 C.F.R. § 41.52(c) (Section 504 coordination regulation); 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.1 (Section 503 implementing regulation); Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964) ; Exec. Order No. 11246, § 202, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965). See also 42 U.S.C. § 1981(a), (b) (protecting against racial discrimination in "termination of contracts"); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.4(b) (ADA implementing regulation).

(n9)Footnote 8.1. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1139-1140 .

(n10)Footnote 8.2. Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1084 ; Collings v. Longview Fibre Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 828, 832 .

(n11)Footnote 8.3. Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1084 (summary judgment for employer was improper where employer's explanation for discharge as based on employee's "misconduct" because of his epilepsy failed as matter of law to qualify as legitimate, nondiscriminatory explanation for discharge); Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1139-40 .

(n12)Footnote 8.4. See 42 U.S.C. § 12114(c)(4).

(n13)Footnote 8.5. Dark v. Curry County (9th Cir. 2006) 451 F.3d 1078, 1084 ; Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1139 n.18 .

(n14)Footnote 9. Humphrey v. Memorial Hospitals Ass'n (9th Cir. 2001) 239 F.3d 1128, 1139-1140

(n15)Footnote 10. See Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n16)Footnote 11. Gov. Code § 12993(a); Cal. Const., art. I, § 8.

(n17)Footnote 12. See Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 73-82, 89-91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 (sexual harassment is a form of sex discrimination under Cal. Const. art. I, § 8); Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 230-237, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 (Cal. Const., art. I, § 8 and Title VII of Civil Rights of 1964 supported cause of action for wrongful discharge even though employer exempt from FEHA as religious corporation); Badih v. Myers (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 (discharge due to pregnancy supported cause of action under Cal. Const., art. I, § 8 even if defendant exempt employer under FEHA).

(n18)Footnote 13. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 . For further discussion, see § 43.01[14][c.1] and ch. 60.

(n19)Footnote 14. See Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514 .

(n20)Footnote 15. See Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1528-1530 .

(n21)Footnote 16. See Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1532-1533 .

(n22)Footnote 17. See McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 283, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 (42 U.S.C. § 1981; Title VII).

(n23)Footnote 18. See E.E.O.C. v. Brown & Root, Inc. (5th Cir. [Miss.] 1982) 688 F.2d 338, 340 ; Vigars v. Valley Christian Ctr. of Dublin, Cal. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 805 F.Supp. 802, 808 (Title VII claim based on sex discrimination prevailed over the employer's claim that non-pregnant out of wedlock status was a bona fide occupational qualification).

(n24)Footnote 19. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII) .

(n25)Footnote 20. See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 252-256, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 (Title VII) ; McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 281-284, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 (42 U.S.C. § 1981; Title VII).

(n26)Footnote 21. See Flowers v. Crouch-Walker Corp. (7th Cir. 1977) 552 F.2d 1277, 1281, 1282 (Title VII).

(n27)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417 (ADEA); Oxman v. WLS-TV (7th Cir. 1988) 846 F.2d 448 (ADEA); Haydon v. Rand Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 605 F.2d 453 (ADEA; per curium).

(n28)Footnote 23. See (ADEA); see also Watson v. Fort Worth Bank & Trust (1988) 487 U.S. 977, 990-991, 108 S. Ct. 2777, 101 L. Ed. 2d 827 (Title VII; subjective employment practices may be challenged under disparate impact analysis). For full discussions of the "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" theories of liability, see §§ 41.10-41.11 and 41.20-41.21.

(n29)Footnote 24. See Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1421 (ADEA; adapting McDonnell Douglas test).

(n30)Footnote 25. See O'Connor v. Consolidated Coin Caterers Corp. (1996) 517 U.S. 308, 116 S. Ct. 1307, 1310, 134 L. Ed. 2d 433 ; see [1], above for a more complete discussion of O'Connor.

(n31)Footnote 26. See Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1421 (ADEA; failure to prove replacement by younger employee is not necessarily fatal to age discrimination claim); Haydon v. Rand Corp. (9th Cir. 1979) 605 F.2d 453, 454 (ADEA; per curium; same).

(n32)Footnote 27. See Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1421-1422 (ADEA) .

(n33)Footnote 28. Ewing v. Gill Indus., Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 601, 608-613, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 640 (FEHA) .

(n34)Footnote 29. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (2d ed.) Ch. 18, Discharge.

(n35)Footnote 30. See Fong v. American Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 759, 762 (42 U.S.C. § 1981; relying on Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 336, 358, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed 2d 396).

(n36)Footnote 31. See E.E.O.C. v. Brown & Root, Inc. (5th Cir. 1982) 688 F.2d 338, 340 (Title VII); Green v. Armstrong Rubber Co. (5th Cir. 1980) 612 F.2d 967, 968 (42 U.S.C. § 1981; Title VII); see also McDonald v. Santa Fe Trail Transp. Co. (1976) 427 U.S. 273, 275-276, 96 S. Ct. 2574, 49 L. Ed. 2d 493 (42 U.S.C. § 1981; Title VII); Fong v. American Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1980) 626 F.2d 759, 761-762 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n37)Footnote 32. Green v. Armstrong Rubber Co. (5th Cir. 1980) 612 F.2d 967, 968 .

(n38)Footnote 33. cf. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine (1981) 450 U.S. 248, 253, 101 S. Ct. 1089, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207 ; see also Heyne v. Caruso (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1475, 1480 (sexual harassment plaintiff may offer testimony of other employees claiming to have been harassed to establish employer's claimed explanation was pretextual).

(n39)Footnote 34. See, e.g., Talley v. United States Postal Serv. (8th Cir. 1983) 720 F.2d 505, 507 (Title VII; black postal employee who was discharged for losing her mailbox keys held to have failed to establish "pretext for discrimination" because, although she presented evidence that other employees who permanently lost their keys were not discharged, she did not present evidence that she and the other employees were similarly situated).

(n40)Footnote 34.1. See, e.g., Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248-1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; Thompson v. Tracor Flight Systems, Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1167-1168, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95 (substantial evidence supported jury finding of constructive discharge; jury reasonably could have found continuous pattern of conduct, uncorrected by higher management, that resulted in intolerable working conditions); but see Poland v. Chertoff (9th Cir. 2007) 494 F.3d 1174, 1184-1186 (employee's testimony that he decided to take early retirement after transfer, because extended separation from his family was difficult and because his new position was "a career ender" was not enough to establish constructive discharge under case law requiring that employer create working conditions sufficiently extraordinary and egregious to overcome normal motivation of competent, diligent, and reasonable employee to remain on job to earn livelihood); Montero v. AGCO Corp. (9th Cir. 1999) 192 F.3d 856, 861 (employee was not constructively discharged because she resigned months after alleged harassment had ceased, harassing supervisors were disciplined and new manager was hired who would ensure no further harassment); Cooper v. Neiman Marcus Group (1997) 125 F.3d 786, 790-791 (ADA plaintiff who resigned after essentially being told to choose between severance options was not constructively discharged).

(n41)Footnote 35. See, e.g., J.P. Stevens & Co., Inc. v. N.L.R.B. (4th Cir. 1972) 461 F.2d 490, 494 .

(n42)Footnote 36. See Irving v. Dubuque Packing Co. (10th Cir. 1982) 689 F.2d 170, 172 (42 U.S.C. § 1981); Johnson v. Bunny Bread Co. (8th Cir. 1981) 646 F.2d 1250, 1256 (Title VII); Muller v. United States Steel Corp. (10th Cir. 1975) 509 F.2d 923, 929 (Title VII).

(n43)Footnote 37. Bergene v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1136, 1143-1144 (Title VII). See Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1381 (42 U.S.C. § 1981); Nolan v. Cleland (9th Cir. 1982) 686 F.2d 806, 812-813 (Title VII); Held v. Gulf Oil Co. (6th Cir. 1982) 684 F.2d 427, 432 (Title VII); Bourque v. Powell Elec. Mfg. Co. (5th Cir. 1980) 617 F.2d 61, 65 (Title VII); Bodnar v. Synpol, Inc. (5th Cir. 1988) 843 F.2d 190, 192; Watson v. Nationwide Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 360, 361.

(n44)Footnote 37.1. Bergene v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District (9th Cir. 2001) 272 F.3d 1136, 1144 (Title VII) (evidence presented by plaintiff of her isolation as only woman supervisor during her tenure as acting foreman, demeaning and threatening comments made by her supervisor and his supervisor while her earlier pregnancy discrimination complaint was pending, and denial of promotion was sufficient to raise triable issue of fact as to whether reasonable person in plaintiff's position would have felt compelled to quit).

(n45)Footnote 37.2. Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders (2004) 124 S. Ct. 2342, 2351-2357, 159 L. Ed. 2d 204.

(n46)Footnote 37.3. For discussion of the burden of proof in sexual harassment actions generally, see § 41.81[1][b][ii].

(n47)Footnote 38. Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n48)Footnote 39. See Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1381, 1383 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n49)Footnote 40. See Irving v. Dubuque Packing Co. (10th Cir. 1982) 689 F.2d 170, 172 (42 U.S.C. § 1981); Muller v. United States Steel Corp. (10th Cir. 1975) 509 F.2d 923, 929 (Title VII).

(n50)Footnote 41. See Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1382-1383 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n51)Footnote 42. See Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1383 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n52)Footnote 43. Schnidrig v. Columbia Mach., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 1406.

(n53)Footnote 44. See Schnidrig v. Columbia Mach., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 1406, 1411-1412, cert. denied, 117 S. Ct. 295.

(n54)Footnote 45. For a general discussion of discriminatory harassment, including "hostile environment" harassment, see Part E, §§ 41.80-41.82.

(n55)Footnote 46. Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1381.

(n56)Footnote 47. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114.

(n57)Footnote 48. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248-1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022; see Thompson v. Tracor Flight Systems, Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1166, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95 (employer must either intentionally create or knowingly permit intolerable conditions to be held liable); Casenas v. Fujisawa USA, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 101, 113-114, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 827 (as matter of law, no reasonable employee would find allegedly unfair performance evaluation and failure to consider plaintiff for management position so egregious as to constitute constructive discharge); see also Addy v. Bliss & Glennon (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 205, 216-218, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 (demotions, even with reductions in pay, are not by themselves enough to constitute constructive discharge in the absence of evidence that a reasonable person in the employee's position would be compelled to resign).

(n58)Footnote 49. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1252, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 .

(n59)Footnote 50. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1244, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 .

(n60)Footnote 51. DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 9 (complainant's mental and physical health deteriorated so much as result of sexual harassment that she was forced to quit; circumstances such as denigration of complainant in front of customers, false stories about complainant's sex life, and permeation of harassment into complainant's work, home, and social life would have caused reasonable person to quit); DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 17 (employers had actual knowledge, after complainant's strong protest, that transfer to less favorable shift would force her resignation; any reasonable person would have felt compelled to escape persistent crude and invasive touching, gestures, and remarks, futility of efforts to stop them, and fear and trauma of sexual assault and its aftermath); DFEH v. Madera County (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 31 (complainant's mental and physical health deteriorated so much as result of sexual harassment that she was forced to quit; reasonable person would have quit in light of sexual assault, continued approaches after assault, and employer's refusal or failure to stop harassment); See also § 41.81.

(n61)Footnote 52. Clark v. Marsh (D.C. Cir. 1981) 665 F.2d 1168, 1173, 214 U.S. App. D.C. 350 (Title VII; emphasis in original); see Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1382 (42 U.S.C. § 1981); cf. Bourque v. Powell Elec. Mfg. Co. (5th Cir. 1980) 617 F.2d 61, 66 (Title VII; failure to provide equal pay for equal work as sex discrimination under Title VII, but no constructive discharge because plaintiff offered no evidence of other objectionable working conditions); Muller v. United States Steel Corporation (10th Cir. 1975) 509 F.2d 923, 929 (Title VII; failure to promote based on national origin as violation of Title VII, but no constructive discharge because no evidence of deliberate effort to make things difficult for employee).

(n62)Footnote 53. Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1382 (42 U.S.C. § 1981); see Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1110-1111 (constructive discharge after single harassing conduct within limitations period permissible when part of pattern of discriminatory acts; date of resignation triggers limitations period in constructive discharge case); see also Watson v. Nationwide Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 360, 361 (Title VII; "single isolated instance" of employment discrimination is insufficient as matter of law to support finding of constructive discharge); Soules v. Cadam, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 390, 402 , disapproved on other grounds, Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238 (FEHA; same); Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1055, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726 (FEHA; same) ; but see Schafer v. Board of Public Educ. (3d Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 243, 249-250 (district court erred by suggesting that constructive discharge necessarily requires evidence of aggravating circumstances).

(n63)Footnote 54. Satterwhite v. Smith (9th Cir. 1984) 744 F.2d 1380, 1382 n.2 (42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n64)Footnote 55. Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1057, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726 (FEHA)

(n65)Footnote 56. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1254, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (involving common-law wrongful termination action).

(n66)Footnote 57. See Panopulos v. Westinghouse Electric Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 660, 670, 264 Cal. Rptr. 810 .

(n67)Footnote 58. See Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1253-1254, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (involving common-law wrongful termination action); see also Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1058, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726 (FEHA; criticizing Panopulos dicta as arbitrary and illogical).

70 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.58A

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.58A Disciplinary Suspension

A disciplinary suspension, even with pay, may constitute discrimination if motivated by a prohibited animus.ⁿ¹

In Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough, ⁿ¹1 the Ninth Circuit reversed the trial court's grant of summary judgment to a school-district employer on the claim of a teacher of Lebanese national origin that, due to an alleged bomb threat, she was discriminatorily subjected to a disciplinary suspension in her eligibility to be hired either as a substitute or as a full-time teacher. The court applied the McDonnell Douglas test to the claim. Thus, a plaintiff alleging discriminatory subjection to a disciplinary suspension can establish a prima facie case of discrimination by showing that he or she (1) is a member of a protected class, (2) adequately performed her job, and (3) suffered an adverse employment actionⁿ² or was treated differently from others who were similarly situated.ⁿ² The plaintiff made out a prima facie case of discrimination with respect to the district's reaction to the alleged bomb threat by showing that (1) because of her Lebanese national origin, she is a member of a protected group, (2) she performed her job adequately before the alleged bomb threat, and (3) she suffered an adverse employment action when the district issued its disciplinary suspension. Therefore, the burden of production shifted to the district to articulate a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for its actions. The district's assertion that it disciplined her because she made a bomb threat, and that it would have similarly sanctioned any other employee who made such a threat, was sufficient to shift the burden back to the plaintiff to show that the district's proffered reason was pretextual. The plaintiff presented evidence tending to show that the district's bomb-threat explanation was unworthy of credence. She offered proof that she did not threaten to blow up the building and presented evidence that the staff members may have misunderstood what she said because of their preconceptions regarding her religion and national origin, raising a genuine issue of fact as to whether the district's stated reason for disciplining her was pretextual.ⁿ³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationActionable
DiscriminationLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Horsford v. Board of Trustees of Calif. State Univ. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 359, 374 (in factual context of employment as peace officer, racially motivated suspension from duty for lying on police report, even with pay, constituted adverse employment action, where charge could destroy officer's career; reduction in authority and negative performance reviews also constituted adverse employment actions).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185.

(n3)Footnote 1.2. If the claim is retaliation rather than direct discrimination, the adverse action need not be workplace-related or employment-related, only adverse. See Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway Co. v. White (2006) 548 U.S. 53, 126 S. Ct. 2405, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345 (scope of anti-retaliation provision of Title VII extends beyond workplace-related or employment-related retaliatory acts and harm, so employee need only allege and prove "adverse action" rather than "adverse employment action" under Title VII's anti-retaliation provision), discussed at § 41.130[1A], below.

(n4)Footnote 2. Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1195-1196 . see § 41.11[1]; McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 .

(n5)Footnote 3. Raad v. Fairbanks N. Star Borough (9th Cir. 2003) 323 F.3d 1185, 1196 .

71 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.59

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.59 English-Only Rules

[1] EEOC Guidelines

The EEOC guidelines on national origin discrimination¹ provide that a rule requiring employees to speak only English at all times in the workplace is a burdensome term and condition of employment. According to the EEOC, the primary language of an individual is often an essential national origin characteristic.² Thus, the guidelines provide that prohibiting employees from speaking their primary language, or the language they speak most comfortably, at all times in the workplace disadvantages an individual's employment opportunities on the basis of national origin. It may also create an atmosphere of inferiority, isolation, and intimidation based on national origin that could result in a discriminatory working environment. Therefore, the EEOC will presume that an "English-only rule" violates Title VII, and will closely scrutinize it.³

EEOC Guidelines, as well as FEHC regulations, also state that an employer must provide a business justification for a rule requiring that employees speak only in English at certain times.⁴

[1A] FEHA

Under the FEHA,⁵ it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to adopt or enforce a policy that limits or prohibits the use of any language in any workplace, unless both of the following conditions exist:⁶

- (1) The language restriction is justified by a business necessity.
- (2) The employer has notified its employees of the circumstances and the time when the language restriction must be observed and of the consequences of violating the language restriction.

For these purposes, "business necessity" means an overriding legitimate business purpose to the degree that each of the following is true:⁷

- (1) The language restriction is necessary to the safe and efficient operation of the business.
- (2) The language restriction effectively fulfills the business purpose it is supposed to serve.
- (3) There is no alternative practice to the language restriction that would accomplish the business purpose equally well with a lesser discriminatory impact.

[2] Cases Rejecting English-Only Guideline

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has rejected the EEOC English-only rule guideline, finding that nothing in the plain language of Title VII supports the presumption that an employee establishes a prima facie case of disparate impact merely by proving the existence of an English-only policy or the requirement that an employer always provide a business justification for any English-only policy.ⁿ⁸ The Ninth Circuit followed the analysis employed by the Fifth Circuit in a case pre-dating the EEOC guidelines.ⁿ⁹ The Ninth Circuit reasoned that the Guideline improperly presumed that an English-only policy has a disparate impact in the absence of proof.ⁿ¹⁰ In addition, the court noted that Title VII does not simply fail to directly address whether English-only policies should be presumed discriminatory; it makes no mention of such policies at all.ⁿ¹¹ Thus, both the Fifth and Ninth Circuits have held that limited "English-only rules" may be permissible at certain times or under certain conditions.ⁿ¹² In Garcia v. Gloor,ⁿ¹³ an employer (a lumber and hardware store) had a rule that prohibited employees, most of whom were bilingual Hispanics, from speaking Spanish on the job unless they were speaking to Spanish-speaking customers. The rule did not apply to employees who worked in the lumber yard (most of whom could not speak English), nor did it apply during work breaks.ⁿ¹⁴ The plaintiff, a bilingual Hispanic-American who was fired for, among other things, deliberately speaking Spanish on the job in purposeful violation of the rule, argued that the rule had a discriminatory adverse impact because it was likely to be violated only by Hispanic-Americans, who therefore had a higher risk of incurring penalties.ⁿ¹⁵ The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the employer's rule, at least as applied to plaintiff, did not violate Title VII.ⁿ¹⁶ The court reasoned that there is no "disparate impact" if a rule is one that the affected employee can readily observe and nonobservance is a matter of preference.ⁿ¹⁷ The court further explained that the "English-only" rule, as applied by the plaintiff's employer to the plaintiff, did not forbid cultural expression to persons for whom compliance might impose a hardship—it merely prevented some employees, such as the plaintiff, from exercising a preference to converse in Spanish.ⁿ¹⁸ Although noting that language may be an immutable characteristic of national origin to a person who is not bilingual, the court held that Title VII does not support an interpretation that equates the language that a multilingual employee prefers to use with his or her national origin.ⁿ¹⁹

In Jurado v. Eleven-Fifty Corp.,ⁿ²⁰ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals cited Gloor in holding that a Mexican-American/Native-American disc jockey who was fired for refusing to comply with an order to stop speaking Spanish on the air in an English-language broadcast had not established a Title VII violation under the "disparate impact" theory.ⁿ²¹ The court based its decision on the fact that the disc jockey was fluently bilingual and could easily conform with the order.ⁿ²²

In Garcia v. Spun Steak Co.,ⁿ²³ the Ninth Circuit, cited both Gloor and Jurado with approval. In Spun Steak, bilingual employees brought suit against an employer that instituted a limited English-only policy that required employees to speak only English while working on the job. The court rejected the EEOC Guidelines long-standing ruleⁿ²⁴ that an English-only policy automatically creates a prima case of discrimination, which must be met by an employer's business justification for the rule.ⁿ²⁵ The court found that the plaintiffs had not made out a prima facie case that the rule created a hostile or abusive work environment under the facts of the case because the plaintiffs, with the exception of one of them, were bilingual employees who had not shown that the policy adversely affected them. The court also found that an individual has no right to speak a particular language at work, and that the right to converse at work is a privilege, which by definition is not required to be provided by employers. The court acknowledged that the result might have been different if the case had been brought by nonbilingual, Spanish-speaking employees who might have found it difficult or impossible to comply with the rule or if the rule had been enforced in a punitive way.ⁿ²⁶

[3] EEOC Notice

Because it is common for individuals whose primary language is not English to inadvertently change from speaking English to speaking their primary language, an employer who believes it has a business necessity for an "English-only" rule at certain times should inform its employees of the general circumstances when speaking only in English is required, and of the consequences of violating the rule. If an employer fails to effectively notify its employees of the rule and makes an adverse employment decision against an individual because of a violation of the rule, the EEOC will consider the employer's application of the rule as evidence of discrimination based on national origin.ⁿ²⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Actionable Discrimination Labor & Employment Law U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission General Overview Labor & Employment Law U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Enforcement General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1606.1-1606.8.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 C.F.R. § 1606.7(a); but see Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1489 (nothing in plain language of Title VII supports English-only rule Guideline); Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 270 (Title VII does not support an interpretation that equates language an employee prefers to use with his or her national origin).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 C.F.R. § 1606.7(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. 29 C.F.R. § 1606.7(b); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7289.5(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n6)Footnote 6. Gov. Code § 12951(a). For further discussion, see § 40.10[6].

(n7)Footnote 7. Gov. Code § 12951(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1489-1490 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 267 .

(n10)Footnote 10. Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1490 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1490 .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1486-1490 , cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1228 (1994) (Title VII); Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 272 (Title VII).

(n13)Footnote 13. Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264 (Title VII).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 266 (Title VII).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 266, 270 (Title VII).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 268-271, 272 (Title VII).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 270 (Title VII).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 270-271 (Title VII).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Garcia v. Gloor (5th Cir. 1980) 618 F.2d 264, 270, 272 (Title VII).

(n20)Footnote 20. Jurado v. Eleven-Fifty Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 813 F.2d 1406 (Title VII).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Jurado v. Eleven-Fifty Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 813 F.2d 1406, 1408, 1412 (Title VII).

(n22)Footnote 22. Jurado v. Eleven-Fifty Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 813 F.2d 1406, 1408, 1412 (Title VII).

(n23)Footnote 23. Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1487, 1488, 1489 , cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1228 (1994) .

(n24)Footnote 24. See 29 C.F.R. § 1606.7(b), discussed in [a], above.

(n25)Footnote 25. Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1489 , cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1228 (1994) .

(n26)Footnote 26. Garcia v. Spun Steak Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 998 F.2d 1480, 1486-1490 , cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1228 (1994) .

(n27)Footnote 27. 29 C.F.R. § 1606.7(c); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7289.5(d).

72 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.60

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.60 "Fetal Protection" Policies

A "fetal protection" policy is an employer program that excludes fertile female employees from hazardous jobs because of the employer's concern for the health of the unborn children such women may conceive. The United States Supreme Court held in Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls,ⁿ¹ that such a policy is unlawful sex discrimination under Title VII unless the employer can prove that sex is a "bona fide occupational qualification" (BFOQ). The Court rejected the finding by the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals that the policy was facially neutral because it protected the offspring of all employees.ⁿ² The Supreme Court characterized the policy as "obviously" biased, observing that the policy classified on the basis of gender and childbearing capacity, rather than fertility alone. The Court concluded that thus the policy was facially discriminatory because it required only female employees to prove that they were incapable of reproducing.ⁿ³

The Supreme Court also relied in part on the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, which provides that sex discrimination under Title VII includes discrimination "because of or on the basis of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions."ⁿ⁴ The Court reasoned that because the Johnson Controls policy expressly excluded women "capable of bearing children," it explicitly classified based on the potential for pregnancy. "[S]uch a classification", explained the Court, "must be regarded ... in the same light as explicit sex discrimination" under Title VII.ⁿ⁵ A California court of appeal has also held, in Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com.,ⁿ⁶ that the foregoing fetal protection policy was a "facial, blatant, overt gender-based job discrimination violative of [the FEHA], unless warranted by a [bona fide occupational qualification]." The court declined to follow prior federal authority that characterized such policies as facially neutral and thus subject to the business necessity defense,ⁿ⁷ explaining that the FEHA expressly denotes the BFOQ defense as the standard to be applied in overt discrimination cases.ⁿ⁸

For a complete discussion of the BFOQ defense under both Title VII and the FEHA, as well as other equal employment opportunity laws, see § 41.94.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability DiscriminationCoverage & DefinitionsDisabilitiesGeneral
OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationGender & Sex DiscriminationCoverage & DefinitionsPregnancy &
Parental RightsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 200, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See International Union, UAW v. Johnson Controls (7th Cir. 1989) 886 F.2d 871, 884-886 , rev'd, 499 U.S. 187 (1991) . This conclusion was apparently based on the false premise that an employer may rebut the presumption that fetal protection policies are facially discriminatory by proving that a hazard applies only to women, thereby transforming the policy into one that neutrally protects all employees' offspring but adversely affects only women. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 624, P 4319 n.5 (construing Hayes v. Shelby Memorial Hosp. (11th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1543, 1552) .

(n3)Footnote 3. Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 197-199, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n4)Footnote 4. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k); see § 41.16[2][c]. But cf. Armstrong v. Flowers Hosp., Inc. (11th Cir. 1994) 33 F.3d 1308 (Pregnancy Disability Act did not require transfer of pregnant nurse charged with care of AIDS patient).

(n5)Footnote 5. Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls (1991) 499 U.S. 187, 198, 111 S. Ct. 1196, 113 L. Ed. 2d 158 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 539, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See International Union, UAW v. Johnson Controls (7th Cir. 1989) 886 F.2d 871 , rev'd, 499 U.S. 187 (1991) ; Hayes v. Shelby Memorial Hosp. (11th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1543 ; Wright v. Olin Corp. (4th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1172 . The "business necessity" defense is discussed in § 41.73.

(n8)Footnote 8. Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 540, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 ; see Gov. Code § 12940.

73 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.61

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.61 Fringe Benefits

[1] Generally

According to the EEOC, "fringe benefits" include medical, hospital, accident, and life insurance; retirement benefits; profit sharing and bonus plans; leaves of absence; and similar benefits.ⁿ¹ Equal employment opportunity issues relating to fringe benefits are specifically addressed in the context of sex-based distinctions by Title VII and the Equal Pay Act (EPA);ⁿ² in the context of age-based distinctions by the ADEA;ⁿ³ in the context of disability-based distinctions by the ADA;ⁿ⁴ and with respect to sex, sexual orientation, marital status, age, pregnancy and medical condition, and disability-based distinctions by the FEHA.ⁿ⁵

[2] Age Issues

The ADEA contains an exemption from its general nondiscrimination provisions,ⁿ⁶ which states that it is not unlawful for an employer "to observe the terms of a bona fide employee benefit plan ... (i) [when], for each benefit or benefit package, the actual amount of payment made or cost incurred on behalf of an older worker is no less than that made or incurred on behalf of a younger worker ...; or (ii) that is a voluntary early retirement incentive plan consistent with the relevant purpose or purposes of [the ADEA]."ⁿ⁷

Age discrimination mandated by an employee benefit plan is prohibited where it requires or permits involuntary retirement of individuals on the basis of age.ⁿ⁸ However, an employer's early retirement plan which provides greater total benefits to younger employees, but the same monthly benefits, was not violative.ⁿ⁹ Similarly, an airline's imposition of a four week cap on the amount of vacation time employees could accrue was not intentional age discrimination, notwithstanding the fact that this policy more severely affected workers over 40.ⁿ¹⁰

Employers were not required to change existing bona fide retirement or pension programs when FEHA's age discrimination provisions were enacted in 1980.ⁿ¹¹

For a complete discussion of the "bona fide employee benefit plan" exemption under both the ADEA and the FEHA, see § 41.93.

[3] Gender Issues

[a] Generally

Neither Title VII nor the Equal Pay Act (EPA) sanction any sex-based differentials relating to fringe benefits. Unlike statutes proscribing nondiscrimination on the basis of age, Title VII has no "bona fide employee benefit plan" exemption to the general proscription against sex discrimination.ⁿ¹² Under the EPA, fringe benefits, like wages, are considered remuneration for employment,ⁿ¹³ and as discussed in § 41.56[2], the EPA requires equal pay for equal work.ⁿ¹⁴ Moreover, EEOC guidelines and regulations interpreting Title VII and the EPA expressly provide that it is an unlawful employment practice for an employer to discriminate between men and women with regard to fringe benefits.ⁿ¹⁵ If employee health benefits are based on gender, therefore, a prima facie case of Title VII liability is established.ⁿ¹⁶

Furthermore, the EEOC guidelines state that under Title VII, it is not a defense to a charge of sex discrimination in benefits that the cost of those benefits is greater with respect to one sex than another.ⁿ¹⁷ These regulations also provide that an employer may not condition the availability of fringe benefits on an employee's sex or marital status.ⁿ¹⁸ However, the FEHA provisions regarding discrimination on the basis of sex do not affect the operation of the terms or conditions of any bona fide retirement, pension, employee benefit, or insurance plan if the terms and conditions are in accordance with customary and reasonable or sound actuarial underwriting practices.ⁿ¹⁹

[b] Family Benefits

Under EEOC regulations, employers may not provide benefits for the spouses or families of employees of one gender when the same benefits are not provided for the spouses or families of opposite gender employees.ⁿ²⁰ Nor may employers provide maternity benefits to the wives of male employees, but fail to provide such benefits to female employees.ⁿ²¹

Notwithstanding the provisions prohibiting marital status discrimination, the FEHA regulations specifically allow bona fide fringe benefits which provide benefits to spouses or dependents,ⁿ²² and under these plans, employers may limit benefits or decline to provide benefits to non-employees, non-spouses and non-dependents.ⁿ²³

[c] "Head of Household" Rules

Some employers have adopted facially neutral "head of household" rules allowing both sexes to receive dependent coverage if an employee earns more than 50 percent of the combined income of the spouses.ⁿ²⁴ In Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (Wambheim I),ⁿ²⁵ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that a "head of household" rule had a disproportionate impact on female employees, thereby establishing a prima facie case of discrimination under Title VII, because only 37 percent of the female employees covered by a medical plan received dependent coverage, as opposed to 95 percent of the male employees.ⁿ²⁶ Accordingly, the Wambheim I court reversed a summary judgment for the employer and remanded the case for trial.ⁿ²⁷ In a subsequent appeal from a trial judgment for the employer (Wambheim II),ⁿ²⁸ the employer argued that its "head of household" rule was designed to benefit the largest number of employees and those with the greatest need. It explained that dependent children and spouses covered under the rule had the greatest need, and qualifying spouses were less likely to have other medical insurance. The Ninth Circuit in Wambheim II agreed and concluded that the employer thus demonstrated legitimate and overriding business justifications for its "head of household" rule.ⁿ²⁹

E.E.O.C. v. Fremont Christian School ⁿ³⁰ presented a challenge to a religious school's provision of health insurance coverage only to employees who were the "head of the household." Since the school believed that according to Scripture the "head of the household" role could only be performed by the husband, its rule effectively deprived female employees of health insurance benefits.ⁿ³¹ The District Court for the Northern District of California found that there was a prima facie case of "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact."ⁿ³² The school attempted to justify its "head of household" rule by invoking its religious beliefs, but the court, relying on Wambheim I and II, held that such a justification is not equivalent to the business justification necessary to overcome a presumption of discrimination.ⁿ³³

The EEOC guidelines on sex discrimination observe that under "head of household" rules, benefits tend to be available only to male employees and their families. Therefore, because such rules discriminate against female employees, and because the "head of household" status bears no relationship to job performance, the EEOC will find benefits based on such rules to be in prima facie violation of Title VII.ⁿ³⁴ Similarly, EEOC regulations interpreting the EPA provide that a "head of household" defense to an alleged EPA violation will be closely scrutinized.ⁿ³⁵

FEHC regulations provide that insofar as an employment practice discriminates against one sex or on the basis of marital status, an employer or other entity covered by the FEHA may not condition the availability of fringe benefits on whether an employee is a "head of household," "principal wage earner," "secondary wage earner," or of other similar status.ⁿ³⁶

[d] Pregnancy Benefits

Both Title VII and the FEHA prohibit discrimination on the basis of pregnancy.ⁿ³⁷ According to the EEOC regulations, payment under any health or disability insurance or sick leave plan shall be made for disability due to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical condition on the same terms and conditions as for other disabilities.ⁿ³⁸ Thus, it is unlawful to treat pregnancy-related conditions less favorably than other medical conditions for purposes of employment benefits.ⁿ³⁹ In Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC,ⁿ⁴⁰ an employer's health insurance plan provided its female employees with hospitalization benefits for pregnancy-related conditions to the same extent as for other medical conditions. However, the plan provided less favorable pregnancy benefits for spouses of male employees.ⁿ⁴¹ The United States Supreme Court held that the employer's plan was unlawful.ⁿ⁴² The Court explained that the plan provided limited pregnancy-related benefits for employees' wives, and afforded more extensive coverage for employees' spouses for all other medical conditions.ⁿ⁴³ Thus, it reasoned that the husbands of female employees received a specified level of benefits for all conditions, while the wives of male employees received such coverage except for pregnancy-related conditions.ⁿ⁴⁴ The Court concluded that the plan unlawfully gave married male employees a benefit package for their dependents that was less inclusive than the dependency coverage provided to married female employees.ⁿ⁴⁵ Similarly, under the FEHA, with the exception of employers who are not subject to Title VII with fewer than 14 employees, employers who provide benefits for other temporary disabilities must also provide such benefits for pregnancy disability.ⁿ⁴⁶

[e] Retirement and Pension Plans

Both the EEOC and FEHA regulations disallow pension or retirement plans which have different optional or compulsory retirement ages for men and women.ⁿ⁴⁷ These regulations also prohibit the establishment of plans which require differing contributions or which pay out different benefits based on sex.ⁿ⁴⁸ The prohibition on predicated retirement benefits or contributions on a sex-based distinction is supported by the United States Supreme Court.ⁿ⁴⁹

[4] Disability and Medical Condition Issues

The ADA prohibits covered employers from discriminating against employees in the terms or conditions of employment.ⁿ⁵⁰ The regulations promulgated by the EEOC define fringe benefits as a term or condition of employment and include fringe benefits which are not administered by the employer.ⁿ⁵¹ Further, the ADA prohibits employers from contracting with fringe benefits providers if that contract or relationship would subject covered employees to prohibited discrimination.ⁿ⁵² However, under the ADA the terms of a health benefit plan may be based on risk classifications that are consistent with state law, unless they are actually a subterfuge to evade the purposes of

ADA regulations.n53

In order to assist employers in determining which of the health plans provided contain disability based distinctions which are not consistent with the ADA, the EEOC has issued interim guidelines regarding the provision of health benefits.n54 In these guidelines, the Commission defines the term "disability based distinction" in the context of employer provided health insurance.n55 Blanket pre-existing condition clauses, universal limits or exclusions of all experimental drugs or all elective surgery, and coverage limits on medical procedures that are not exclusively, or nearly exclusively, utilized for the treatment of a particular disability are not distinctions based on disability.n56 However, insurance provisions which single out a particular disability (deafness, AIDS, schizophrenia), a discrete group of disabilities (cancers, muscular dystrophies, kidney diseases), or disability in general (non-coverage of all conditions that substantially limit a major life activity) are disability based distinctions forbidden by the law.n57 Unlike age and sex discrimination statutes that specifically exclude bona fide plans which predated the applicable statute, see sections [2] and [3], above, based on the legislative history of the Act, the interim guidelines caution employers that "the ADA does not provide a 'safe harbor' for health insurance plans that were adopted prior to its July 26, 1990 enactment."n58 In contrast, the FEHA does not require employers to change bona fide health insurance plans or benefits based on its prohibitions on disability discrimination.n59 However, an employer may not condition any employment decision regarding a physically handicapped applicant or employee on the waiver of any fringe benefit.n60

For discussion of issues relating to discrimination in compensation generally, see § 41.56. For discussion relating to discrimination regarding the amount of contributions or benefits or eligibility for participation because of sex, see [3], above. For further discussion of the "bona fide employee benefit plan" exemption, see [2], above, and § 41.93.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General OverviewLabor & Employment LawEqual PayGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawU.S. Equal Employment Opportunity CommissionGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawU.S. Equal Employment Opportunity CommissionEnforcementGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(a) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination), 29 C.F.R. § 1620.11(EEOC regulation interpreting federal Equal Pay Act of 1963).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 C.F.R. § 1607.9(b) (Title VII); 29 C.F.R. § 1620.11(b) (EPA regulations).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 29 U.S.C. § 623.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(f).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Gov. Code § 12940(a); see also Gov. Code § 12940(a)(3)(B) (marital status); Gov. Code § 12945(a) (pregnancy); Gov. Code § 12993(b) (sex or medical condition); and see generally Gov. Code § 12940(a) (general prohibition on discrimination against persons protected by the FEHA "in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment").

(n6)Footnote 6. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(a), (b), (c), and (e).

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B). This section was part of the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act (OWBPA), Pub. L. No. 101-433, § 105(a) which applies to employee benefit plans established, modified, or otherwise affected on or after October 16, 1990 (the date the OWBPA was enacted). Plans established before that date are governed by the former ADEA "bona fide employee benefit plan" exemption unless and until they are modified or otherwise affected. The pre-OWBPA exemption provided that it is not unlawful for an employer "to observe the terms of ... any bona fide employee benefit plan ... [that] is not subterfuge to evade the purposes of [the ADEA]." 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2), prior to amendment by Pub. L. No. 101-433. Plans established before 1978 are not subject to challenge based on age discrimination because they pre-date the original law. See Public Employees Retirement System of Ohio v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 106 L. Ed. 2d 134, 109 S.Ct 2854.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Smith v. Alum Rock Union Elementary School District (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1651, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399 (court invalidated state law which limited eligibility for disability to those under age 60 as conflicting with ADEA; claim also stated a cause of action under former Gov. Code § 12941. Now see Gov. Code § 12940(a)(5).)

(n9)Footnote 9. See Dorsch v. L.B. Foster Co. (7th Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1421 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Finnegan v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (7th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 1161 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See former Gov. Code § 12941(a). That provision was repealed effective January 1, 2003. see Stats. 2002, ch. 525, § 2.

(n12)Footnote 12. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(1),(2); for a discussion regarding exceptions to proscriptions against age discrimination in fringe benefits, see [2], above.

(n13)Footnote 13. 29 C.F.R. § 1620.10.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Gunther v. County of Washington (9th Cir. 1979) 623 F.2d 1303, 1309 , aff'd on other grounds, 452 U.S. 161 (1981) ; 29 U.S.C. § 216(d); see also Corning Glass Works v. Brennan (1974) 417 U.S. 188, 195, 94 S. Ct. 2223, 41 L. Ed. 2d 1 .

(n15)Footnote 15. 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(b) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination), 29 C.F.R. § 1620.11(b) (EEOC regulation interpreting EPA).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362, 365 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(b) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination; discrimination between men and women with regard to fringe benefits is unlawful employment practice), 29 C.F.R. § 1620.11(b) (EEOC regulation interpreting EPA; same).

(n17)Footnote 17. 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(e) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination).

(n18)Footnote 18. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7291.1(b)(1), 7292.6(a)(1).

(n19)Footnote 19. Gov. Code § 12993(b).

(n20)Footnote 20. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(d) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination), 29 C.F.R. § 1620.11(d) (EEOC regulation interpreting EPA); see also Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 682-683, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 .

(n21)Footnote 21. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(d) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination).

(n22)Footnote 22. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.6(a)(A).

(n23)Footnote 23. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.6(a)(B).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362, 364 .

(n25)Footnote 25. Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362 .

(n26)Footnote 26. See Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362, 365 . For a detailed discussion relating to prima facie proof of discrimination under the "disparate impact" theory of liability, see § 41.21.

(n27)Footnote 27. See Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1981) 642 F.2d 362, 363, 366 .

(n28)Footnote 28. Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1983) 705 F.2d 1492 .

(n29)Footnote 29. Wambheim v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 83) 705 F.2d 1492, 1495 ; see E.E.O.C. v. J.C. Penney Co., Inc. (6th Cir. 1988) 843 F.2d 249, 253 .

(n30)Footnote 30. E.E.O.C. v. Fremont Christian School (N.D. Cal. 1984) 609 F. Supp. 344 (Title VII; EPA).

(n31)Footnote 31. E.E.O.C. v. Fremont Christian School (N.D. Cal. 1984) 609 F. Supp. 344, 346 (Title VII; EPA).

(n32)Footnote 32. E.E.O.C. v. Fremont Christian School (N.D. Cal. 1984) 609 F. Supp. 344, 350-351 (Title VII; EPA); see discussion in §§ 41.10-41.11 and 41.20-41.21.

(n33)Footnote 33. E.E.O.C. v. Fremont Christian School (N.D. Cal. 1984) 609 F. Supp. 344, 350-351 (Title VII; EPA).

(n34)Footnote 34. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.9(c).

(n35)Footnote 35. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.21.

(n36)Footnote 36. 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7291.1(b)(2), 7292.6(b)(2).

(n37)Footnote 37. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e(k), 2000e-2(a) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12945(FEHA); see also discussion in § 41.36[2][c].

(n38)Footnote 38. See 29 C.F.R. 1604.10(b); see EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 626.8 (pregnancy, disability and sick-leave benefits).

(n39)Footnote 39. Morgan v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 1211, 1213 (Title VII) .

(n40)Footnote 40. Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 .

(n41)Footnote 41. See Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 670, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 .

(n42)Footnote 42. See Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 676, 683-684, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 .

(n43)Footnote 43. See Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 683, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 .

(n44)Footnote 44. See Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 684, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 .

(n45)Footnote 45. See Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 684, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 .

(n46)Footnote 46. See 2 Cal Code Reg. § 7291.5(a)(5) and exception set out in 2 Cal Code Reg. § 7291.5(d) (employers who are not subject to Title VII with fewer than 14 employees need not provide benefits for pregnancy even if they provide benefits for other temporary benefits).

(n47)Footnote 47. See 29 U.S.C. § 1604.9(f) (Title VII) and 2 Cal Code Reg. § 7291.1(4).

(n48)Footnote 48. See 29 U.S.C. § 1604.9(b) (prohibitions on discrimination in fringe benefits generally) and 2 Cal Code Reg. § 7291.1(3).

(n49)Footnote 49. See Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 (Title VII prohibits employers from requiring female employees to make greater contributions in order to receive the same benefits as men) and Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1079, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 (Title VII prohibits employers from offering optional retirement plans which pay women lower benefits than men).

(n50)Footnote 50. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(a).

(n51)Footnote 51. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.4.

(n52)Footnote 52. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(b)(2).

(n53)Footnote 53. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.16(f).

(n54)Footnote 54. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6902 (interim enforcement guidance on application of ADA to disability based distinctions in employer provided health insurance).

(n55)Footnote 55. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6902 (interim enforcement guidance on application of ADA to disability based distinctions in employer provided health insurance).

(n56)Footnote 56. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6902 (interim enforcement guidance on application of ADA to disability based distinctions in employer provided health insurance).

(n57)Footnote 57. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6902 (interim enforcement guidance on application of ADA to disability based distinctions in employer provided health insurance).

(n58)Footnote 58. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902, P 6902 (interim enforcement guidance on application of ADA to disability based distinctions in employer provided health insurance).

(n59)Footnote 59. See Gov. Code § 12993(b).

(n60)Footnote 60. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.2(a).

74 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.62

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.62 Layoffs and Reductions in Force

[1] General Discrimination Issues

Layoffs and reductions in force (RIFs), like any other adverse employment practice, are unlawful if they are based on membership in a classification protected by equal employment opportunity law. Unlawful discrimination may be established under either the "disparate treatment" or "disparate impact" theories of liability.ⁿ¹

[2] Disparate Treatment Cases

In cases alleging age discrimination arising out of RIFs, plaintiffs must satisfy a modified version of the prima facie case requirements of McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green.ⁿ² The analysis is the same in cases alleging race or gender discrimination in a RIF.^{n2.1} When the discharge results from a general RIF, plaintiffs need not show they were replaced; rather, they must show the discharge occurred under circumstances giving rise to an inference of discrimination. They can make this showing through circumstantial, statistical or direct evidence. The inference can be established by a showing that the employer had a continuing need for their skills and services in that their duties were still being performed, or by showing that others not in the protected class were treated more favorably.^{n2.2} Unlike other Title VII cases, however, ADEA plaintiffs need not prove that their protected characteristic (age) was the employer's sole motivating factor for the adverse employment decision.ⁿ³

If the plaintiff establishes a prima facie case, the employer may meet its burden of production by showing a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason. A RIF is a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for laying off an employee.^{n3.1} In Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins,ⁿ⁴ the Supreme Court held that permissible nondiscriminatory reasons can include laying off employees with the most years of service, provided the scheme is tenure based and not age based.^{n4.1} In a "disparate treatment" case, the burden then shifts to the plaintiff to prove the employer's reason is pretextual and that plaintiff has been the victim of willful discrimination.ⁿ⁵ Plaintiff may rely on the same evidence used to establish the prima facie case or present additional evidence.^{n5.1} To survive summary judgment, the burden is plaintiff to produce enough evidence to allow a reasonable factfinder to conclude either the alleged reason for the discharge was false or the true reason for the discharge was a discriminatory one.^{n5.2} Plaintiff must do more than establish a prima facie case and deny the credibility of the defendant's witnesses.^{n5.3} In an ADEA action, to raise a triable issue of fact regarding pretext based solely on statistics, the statistics must show a stark pattern of discrimination unexplainable on grounds other than age.^{n5.4} Thus, a statistical analysis of a RIF taking into account only two variables, i.e., the employee's age at the time of the RIF and whether the employee was terminated, and not making use of job performance as a variable, was insufficient to raise a triable issue of fact regarding pretext.^{n5.5}

In O'Day v. McDonnell Douglas Helicopter,ⁿ⁶ the employer had a general workforce reduction, but plaintiff believed he had been denied a promotion, and then laid off because of his age. During discovery, the employer learned that on the day plaintiff had been denied promotion, he copied "personal" documents from his supervisor's files. Upon learning of this, the employer converted plaintiff's layoff to a termination. In its motion for summary judgment, the employer argued it should be absolved of all liability for alleged age discrimination because of the after-acquired evidence of plaintiff's misconduct. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the trial court's grant of summary judgment, holding that under McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co.,ⁿ⁷ the employer is not immunized from liability for unlawful discrimination by virtue of after-acquired evidence of plaintiff's misconduct. Rather, the misconduct limits the back pay, front pay, and reinstatement remedies otherwise available to plaintiff.ⁿ⁸

[3] Disparate Impact Cases

Plaintiffs have often used statistical evidence to show the RIF had disproportionate impact on a protected classification of employees and thus evinced a discriminatory intent. In Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio,ⁿ⁹ the Supreme Court reversed a Ninth Circuit holding that plaintiffs, who were cannery workers, had made out a prima facie case based solely on a bottom line statistical showing of a high percentage of non-White workers impacted by the employer's action. Although statistics may be strong evidence of discrimination,ⁿ¹⁰ the vitality of establishing age discrimination by use of a disparate impact theory is somewhat in doubt.ⁿ¹¹

For a detailed discussion relating to the "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" theories of liability, see §§ 41.10-41.11 and 41.20-41.21. For further discussion of voluntary and involuntary retirement, see § 41.67[2].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Age Discrimination Employment Practices General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Age Discrimination Employment Practices Reductions in Force Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Treatment General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Treatment Employment Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Whack v. Peabody & Wind Engineering Co. (3d Cir. 1979) 595 F.2d 190, 193-194 (Title VII; "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact"); Lim v. Citizens Sav. and Loan Ass'n (N.D. Cal. 1976) 430 F. Supp. 802, 813-816 (Title VII; "disparate treatment"); see also Gov. Code § 12941, discussed in § 41.104[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. See McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (requiring prima facie case that (1) plaintiff was in protected class, (2) plaintiff was qualified for position, (3) plaintiff suffered adverse employment decision, (4) employer sought to, or did, replace plaintiff with person having similar qualifications); see also Muzquiz v. City of Emeryville (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1106, 1121-1122, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 579 (employee failed to show prima facie age discrimination and failed to prove improper motive for job elimination).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1295 (plaintiffs failed to meet standard under Title VII of showing race or gender discrimination in RIF).

(n4)Footnote 2.2. Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1281 (despite weaknesses in evidence, court assumed without deciding that plaintiffs had established prima facie case under ADEA).

(n5)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Nidds v. Schindler Elevator Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 113 F.3d 912, 917 (failure to prove replacement by younger employee is not necessarily fatal to age discrimination claim where termination results from general reduction in force due to business conditions); Montana v. First Federal S. & L. of Rochester (2d Cir. 1989) 869 F.2d 100, 105 (plaintiff need only prove age "made a difference"); Robinson v. Overseas Military Sales Corp. (2d Cir. 1994) 21 F.3d 502, 508 (plaintiff need only prove age a "determinative factor"); Overgard v. Cambridge Book Co. (7th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 371 ("determining factor").

(n6)Footnote 3.1. Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1282 (employer met burden of production by showing plaintiffs' lack of proper qualifications to be selected for positions remaining after RIF).

(n7)Footnote 4. See Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 346-347 .

(n8)Footnote 4.1. See Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 346-347 ; see also Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1290 ("favoritism" of managers in choosing to retain younger employee over employee in protected class is not prohibited age discrimination; employer may also choose not to demote employee to position for which employee is overqualified without violating ADEA if "overqualification" is not mask for age discrimination).

(n9)Footnote 5. See St. Mary's Honor Center v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 113 S. Ct. 2742, 2747-2748, 125 L. Ed. 2d 407 ; Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1282 ; Wallis v. J.R. Simplot Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 885, 889 ; but cf. Washington v. Garrett (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1421, 1432 .

(n10)Footnote 5.1. Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1282 .

(n11)Footnote 5.2. Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1287 .

(n12)Footnote 5.3. Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1289-1290 .

(n13)Footnote 5.4. Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 740, 748 ; Coleman v. Quaker Oats Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 232 F.3d 1271, 1283 .

(n14)Footnote 5.5. Pottenger v. Potlatch Corp. (9th Cir. 2003) 329 F.3d 740, 748 .

(n15)Footnote 6. O'Day v. McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 756 .

(n16)Footnote 7. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S. Ct. 879, 886-887, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 .

(n17)Footnote 8. See O'Day v. McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 756, 762 .

(n18)Footnote 9. Wards Cove Packing Co. v. Atonio (1989) 490 U.S. 642, 649-650 .

(n19)Footnote 10. See Leftwich v. Harris-Stowe State College (8th Cir. 1983) 702 F.2d 686 (high statistical correlation between age of faculty and tenure).

(n20)Footnote 11. See Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 351-352 (concurring opinion of Justice Kennedy, joined by Justice Rehnquist and Justice Thomas that "[there are] substantial arguments that it is improper to carry over disparate impact analysis from Title VII to the ADEA."); but cf. Mangold v. California Pub. Utils. Comm'n (9th Cir. 1995) 67 F.3d 1470 (instructing jury on the "disparate impact" theory in an age discrimination case and combining the disparate impact and disparate treatment theories in the verdict form was not prejudicial error since the jury found the discrimination had been intentional.)

75 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.63

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.63 Medical Examinations

The ADA provides that employers may require current employees to undergo medical examinations or inquiries (including psychiatric examinations or inquiries), but only for purposes that are job-related and consistent with a business necessity.ⁿ¹ In the examination or inquiry, an employer may ask questions regarding an employee's ability to perform job-related functions.ⁿ² In addition, an employer may conduct voluntary medical examinations, including voluntary medical histories, that are part of an employee health program.ⁿ³

Employees are not required to prove that they are qualified individuals with a disability to challenge the scope of medical examinations under the ADA.ⁿ⁴ The statute,ⁿ⁵ which prohibits a covered entity from inquiring into whether an employee is an individual with a disability unless the "examination or inquiry is shown to be job-related and consistent with business necessity," places the burden on the covered entity to make the requisite showing of job-relatedness.ⁿ⁶

Medical information obtained in either a required or a voluntary medical examination is confidential, subject to certain permitted disclosures to managerial and safety personnel and government officials.ⁿ⁷

Neither the ADA nor the implementing regulations define "medical examination," and case law interpreting this provision is limited. Agency guidance, however, is more detailed.ⁿ⁸ The interpretive appendix to the applicable regulationⁿ⁹ equates "fitness for duty exams" with medical exams allowed under the ADA, but distinguishes "physical agility tests," which may be given at any point in the application or employment process.ⁿ¹⁰ Physical agility tests must be given to all similarly situated applicants or employees regardless of disability. If the test screens out or tends to screen out an individual with a disability, the employer must demonstrate that the test is job-related and consistent with business necessity and that performance cannot be achieved with reasonable accommodation.ⁿ¹¹

EEOC Enforcement Guidance draws a further distinction between medical examinations and physical agility tests. It defines a medical examination as "a procedure or test that seeks information about an individual's physical or mental impairments or health," and provides the following seven factors to be considered in determining whether a test is a medical examination:ⁿ¹²

- (1) Whether the test is administered by a health care professional.
- (2) Whether the test is interpreted by a health care professional.
- (3) Whether the test is designed to reveal an impairment of physical or mental health.
- (4) Whether the test is invasive.
- (5) Whether the test measures an employee's performance of a task or measures his/her physiological responses to performing the task.
- (6) Whether the test normally is given in a medical setting.
- (7) Whether medical equipment is used.

Under the EEOC Enforcement Guidance, in some cases a combination of factors may be relevant to the determination of whether a test is a medical examination. In other cases, one factor may be enough to determine that a test or procedure is medical.

The Enforcement Guidance also provides a list of tests considered medical examinations, including "blood pressure screening and cholesterol testing" and "range-of-motion tests that measure muscle strength and motor function." It further states that certain employer-required tests are generally not medical examinations, including physical agility tests, which measure an employee's ability to perform actual or simulated job tasks, and physical fitness tests, which measure an employee's performance of physical tasks, such as running or lifting, as long as the tests do not include examinations that could be considered medical (e.g., measuring heart rate or blood pressure).

Thus, for example, using the EEOC Enforcement Guidance, the Ninth Circuit found an employer-administered "physical capacity evaluation" ("PCE") to be a medical test under the ADA. The PCE included range of motion and muscle strength tests, and the state-licensed occupational therapist performing the test measured the employee's heart rate and recorded an observation about her breathing after a treadmill test. Each of those tests was within the EEOC's description of tests considered medical examinations. The post-treadmill test heart rate measurement and notation regarding the employee's "increased oxygen" intake and demonstration of "poor aerobic fitness" weighed heavily in favor of considering the PCE a medical exam, particularly because the occupational therapist had already noted that the employee "was able to walk for 20 minutes at 2.8 mph on treadmill without increased antalgic behavior or objective findings of pain complaints noted." If the observations had ended there, it might have been appropriate to characterize the treadmill test as a test that measured the employee's performance of a physical task. But measuring her heart rate and recording observations about her breathing and aerobic fitness were unnecessary to determine whether she could perform the task. Moreover, the EEOC Enforcement Guidance identified this kind of examination measurements as inappropriate to include in a non-medical physical agility or fitness test.¹³ Further, application of the seven-factor test established that the PCE was a medical examination under at least four of the factors: (1) it was performed by a medical professional; (an occupational therapist),¹⁴ (2) a medical professional interpreted it; (3) although it was ostensibly intended to determine whether the employee could return to work, the broad reach of the test was capable of revealing impairments of her physical and mental health, particularly in light of recording subjective reports of current pain level, use of medication and assistive devices, and communication, cognitive ability, attitude, and behavior; and (4) the therapist recorded the employee's heart rate and breathing pattern after the treadmill test and muscle pain and stiffness after the first day of testing, which were measurements of her physiological response to her performance of a task and went beyond collecting information necessary to determine whether she was physically capable of performing the task.¹⁵ Finally, the Ninth Circuit found that the limited case law available also established that the PCE was a medical examination.¹⁶

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disability Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disability Discrimination Employment Practices Examinations & Inquiries Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Treatment General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(4)(A); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(c); EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 902 (Enforcement Guidance on the Americans with Disabilities Act and Psychiatric Disabilities). See also Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514 (plaintiff underwent medical examinations by his, the company's and an outside doctor to determine if his injury was work-related). For discussion of preemployment medical examinations under the ADA, see § 41.46. For general discussion of the defense of business necessity and job-relatedness, see § 41.95.

(n2)Footnote 2. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(4); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(4)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(d); for a discussion of preemployment medical examinations, see § 41.46.

(n4)Footnote 4. Indergard v. Georgia-Pacific Corp. (9th Cir. 2009) 582 F.3d 1049, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 21312, *9 (42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(4)(A) applies to all employees, whether or not they are disabled under ADA); Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Health (9th Cir. 1999) 172 F.3d 1176, 1182 (provisions of 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(2)-(4)--which state types of prohibited exams--refer to employees and job applicants, not qualified individuals with disability).

(n5)Footnote 5. 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(4)(A).

(n6)Footnote 6. Fredenburg v. Contra Costa County Dep't of Health (9th Cir. 1999) 172 F.3d 1176, 1182-1183 (resolution of issue is factual and situational questions best decided by district court in first instance).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(c), (d).

(n8)Footnote 8. Indergard v. Georgia-Pacific Corp. (9th Cir. 2009) 582 F.3d 1049, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 21312, *9-*10. See also Christensen v. Harris County (2000) 529 U.S. 576, 587, 120 S. Ct. 1655, 146 L. Ed. 2d 621 (interpretations in policy statements, agency manuals, and enforcement guidelines are entitled to respect only to extent they have power to persuade); Meritor Sav. Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 65, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 (although agency guidance documents are not controlling upon courts by reason of their authority, they constitute body of experience and informed judgment to which courts and litigants may properly resort for guidance).

(n9)Footnote 9. 29 C.F.R. § 1630.14(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. 29 C.F.R. Pt. 1630, App. § 1630.14(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. 29 C.F.R. Pt. 1630, App. § 1630.14(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. Enforcement Guidance on Disability-Related Inquiries and Medical Examinations, available at <http://www.eeoc.gov/policy/docs/guidance-inquiries.html>.

(n13)Footnote 13. Indergard v. Georgia-Pacific Corp. (9th Cir. 2009) 582 F.3d 1049, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 21312, *13-*14.

(n14)Footnote 14. See also Medlin v. Rome Strip Steel Co. (N.D.N.Y. 2003) 294 F. Supp. 2d 279, 294 (that PCE was administered by business specializing in physical therapy and not medical doctor made it no less "medical" than nurse taking blood pressure or emergency medical technician administering care to patient on way to hospital).

(n15)Footnote 15. Indergard v. Georgia-Pacific Corp. (9th Cir. 2009) 582 F.3d 1049, 2009 US. App. LEXIS 21312, *14-*17 .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Conroy v. New York Dep't of Corr. Serv. (2d Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 88, 92, 95-96 (employer's policy that all employees returning from sick leave provide medical certification including brief general diagnosis sufficiently informative as to allow employer to make determination concerning employee's entitlement to leave was sufficient to trigger protections of ADA under 42 U.S.C. § 12112(d)(4)(A), because general diagnosis could tend to reveal disability); Medlin v. Rome Strip Steel Co. (N.D.N.Y. 2003) 294 F. Supp. 2d 279, 293-294 (because sole purpose of functional capacity evaluation was to determine whether employee could physically return to work without any restrictions and was in essence and in reality fitness for duty exam, it was likely medical examination).

76 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.64

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.64 Nepotism

The principles discussed in § 41.43[3] relating to nepotistic hiring are also applicable to nepotistic practices affecting incumbent employees. The general rule is that such practices are unlawful if they perpetuate a discriminatory status quo.ⁿ¹ In Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co.,ⁿ² shareholder-employees received preferential wages, hours, and job assignments. All shareholder-employees were of Italian ancestry, and every new shareholder-employee had either a relative or close friend who was a shareholder.ⁿ³ Using a "disparate impact" analysis,ⁿ⁴ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that although the preference plan was neutral on its face, it had a discriminatory impact on the employer's nonshareholder minority employees.ⁿ⁵ The employer argued that its "legitimate and overriding business consideration" for the plan was a superior interest in protecting and providing for members of the immediate families of the company's founders. The court countered that Title VII case law was clear that nepotistic concerns cannot supersede the nation's paramount goal of equal economic opportunity for all.ⁿ⁶ The court thus held that to the extent that preferential treatment is tied to stock ownership, the shareholder preference plan violated Title VII.ⁿ⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303 (Title VII).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297 (Title VII).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1300 (Title VII).

(n4)Footnote 4. See §§ 41.20-41.21.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303 (Title VII); see also Robinson v. Lorillard Corp. (4th Cir. 1971) 444 F.2d 791, 798 n.5, cert. dismissed, 404 U.S. 1006 (1971) ; Local 53 of Int. Ass'n of Heat & Frost I. & A. Wkrs. v. Vogler (5th Cir. 1969) 407 F.2d 1047, 1054 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Bonilla v. Oakland Scavenger Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 697 F.2d 1297, 1303-1304 (Title VII).

77 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.65

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.65 No-Spouse Rules

Although the FEHA expressly prohibits discrimination based on marital status,ⁿ¹ "no-spouse" rules prohibiting spouses from working in the same department, division, or facility may be lawful under the FEHA if they are imposed for reasons of supervision, safety, security, or morale.ⁿ² There is no express Title VII provision governing "no-spouse" rules, but presumably such rules are lawful if they are evenly applied. Accordingly, plaintiffs are required to produce sufficient evidence to establish the "disparate impact" of a "no-spouse" rule.ⁿ³

"No-spouse" rules applied to incumbent employees often require employees who marry other employees to transfer to other departments or terminate employment.ⁿ⁴ In Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc.,ⁿ⁵ the employer's "no-spouse" rule allowed employees who married the option of choosing which employee would quit. If neither quit, the employer terminated one of the employees based on seniority.ⁿ⁶ The Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals held that although the plaintiffs showed that female employees were fired in the only two instances that the employer enforced the "no-spouse" rule, the sample was too small to prove a case of disparate impact on female employees under Title VII.ⁿ⁷ The court also rejected the plaintiff's statistical evidence showing that if employees' decisions about which spouse should resign were always based on salary, more women would terminate than men because most women in the sample group were paid less than men. The court observed that the employer's "no-spouse" rule did not require the employees to base their decisions on salary, and that other factors, such as the availability of other jobs, may significantly affect such decisions.ⁿ⁸ The court stated that the evidence would be sufficient to show a disparate impact on women if salary was, in fact, a controlling factor, but the plaintiff presented only assumptions to that effect.ⁿ⁹

The Thomas court also explained that a plaintiff in a "no-spouse" case need not necessarily prove that only one factor, such as money, controls the termination decision in all cases. A plaintiff must, however, prove, by statistical studies, evidence of experience in sufficiently similar circumstances, expert testimony on decision-making in the context of "no-spouse" rules, or other evidence, that the choice made will result in the termination of the woman's employment in significantly more instances.ⁿ¹⁰

For a discussion relating to "no-spouse" rules relating to employee selection practices, see § 41.42[2][1].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate ImpactEmployment PracticesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate ImpactEmployment PracticesSelection ProceduresGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationTitle VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Gov. Code § 12940(a)(3); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7292.5(a). For a discussion relating to this provision as a substantive defense to FEHA liability, see 41.110.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc. (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1509 ; Harper v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (8th Cir. 1975) 525 F.2d 409, 414 . One court has suggested, however, that such rules in practice often result in discrimination against women and are generally unjustified. See Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc. (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1509 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc. (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1508 ; Harper v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (8th Cir. 1975) 525 F.2d 409, 410 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc. (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc. (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1508 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc. (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1508 ; see also Harper v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (8th Cir. 1975) 525 F.2d 409, 412 (evidence of four of five similar applications of "no-spouse" rule held to be inadequate).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc. (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1510 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc. (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1510-1511 ; see also Harper v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (8th Cir. 1975) 525 F.2d 409, 412 (presupposition, without proof, that income will be sole or dominant factor in decision is inadequate, and not accepted as general axiom).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Thomas v. Metroflight, Inc. (10th Cir. 1987) 814 F.2d 1506, 1511 .

78 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.66

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.66 Promotion

Neither Title VII nor the FEHA contain any express provision relating to promotions and transfers. However, Title VII provides that it is an unlawful employment "to limit, segregate, or classify ... employees in any way [that] would deprive any individual of employment opportunities" because of the individual's membership in a protected classification.ⁿ¹ Also, FEHC regulations provide that an employer or other entity covered by the FEHA may not restrict information on promotion and transfer opportunities to certain employees or classes of employees when the restriction has the effect of discriminating on a basis enumerated in the FEHA.ⁿ² Furthermore, an employer who considers bids or other requests for promotion or transfer must do so in a manner that does not discriminate against individuals on a basis enumerated in the FEHA, unless it is pursuant to a permissible defense.ⁿ³ For a discussion of the various classifications protected by Title VII and the FEHA, see Part B (§§ 41.30-41.36).

To make out a prima facie case for discrimination in a failure to promote context, a plaintiff must meet the McDonnell Douglas order of proof and show the following:^{n3.1}

- She or he belongs to a protected class.
- She or he applied for and was qualified for the position that she or he was denied.
- She or he was rejected despite her or his qualifications.
- The employer filled the position with an employee not of plaintiff's class, or continued to consider other applicants whose qualifications were comparable to plaintiff's after rejecting plaintiff.

If established, the prima facie case creates a rebuttable presumption that the employer unlawfully discriminated against the plaintiff. The burden of production shifts to the employer to articulate a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for its action. If the employer meets this burden, the presumption of unlawful discrimination simply drops out of the picture.^{n3.2} The plaintiff then must produce sufficient evidence to raise a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the employer's proffered nondiscriminatory reason is merely a pretext for discrimination. The plaintiff may show pretext either (1) by showing that unlawful discrimination more likely motivated the employer, or (2) by showing that the employer's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence because it is inconsistent or otherwise not believable. Ultimately, the plaintiff's burden is to produce some evidence suggesting that the defendant's failure to promote him or her was due in part or whole to discriminatory intent. A plaintiff with direct--rather than circumstantial--evidence of animus can more easily avoid summary judgment.^{3.3}

Many of the considerations applicable to the initial hiring of employees also apply to the selection of employees for promotion. As in the case of hiring, promotions are often based on scored tests,^{3.4} nonscored objective criteria (such as experience or education), or subjective criteria (such as supervisor recommendations).⁴ Employment practices relating to promotions may be subject to both "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" analysis.⁵ For a discussion relating to preemployment selection practices generally, see Part C (§§ 41.40-41.47). For a general discussion of the "disparate treatment" and "disparate impact" theories of liability, see §§ 41.10-41.11 and 41.20-41.21.

Accommodation of an employee's religious practices constitutes undue hardship for the employer if it would inhibit the employer's efforts to attract and retain a qualified, diverse workforce, which the company reasonably views as vital to its commercial success, or if accommodation would result in discrimination against the accommodated employee's co-workers or deprive them of contractual or other statutory rights. Title VII also does not require an employer to accommodate an employee's desire to impose his or her religious beliefs on his or her coworkers.^{5.1} On the other hand, accommodating an employee's religious beliefs does not create undue hardship for an employer merely because an employee's co-workers find his or her conduct irritating or unwelcome.^{5.2}

In establishing discriminatory failure to promote, a plaintiff need not prove that he or she applied for promotion and was rejected if the employer's promotion policy does not require employee application, or if promotion is initiated by the employer.⁶ For example, in Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp.,⁷ a sex discrimination case involving a qualified female employee who was not promoted for 25 years, an employer's promotion policy involved approaching worthy candidates to ask if they wished promotion.⁸ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the employer's policy constituted a continuing violation of Title VII, assuming that similarly situated males were promoted with more regularity.⁹ On the other hand, in Gilligan v. Dept. of Labor,¹⁰ plaintiff challenged the denial of his promotion on the basis of illegal gender discrimination. The Ninth Circuit held that in an institutional setting an employer may consider gender in a manner which is consistent with an existing moderate and flexible affirmative action plan, even if the hiring decision is not made in direct reliance on the plan. The court held that so long as gender is not the exclusive factor in the employment decision and so long as the affirmative action plan is not an "absolute bar" to the advancement of non-preferred groups, the employment decision is not unlawful.¹¹

A plaintiff is also not required to prove that he or she applied for promotion if application would have been futile.¹² In Gifford v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. Co.,¹³ a female employee alleged that her employer had consistently failed to promote her, despite her qualification for promotion, and that the employee never applied for promotion because of the employer's well-known policy of excluding women.¹⁴ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the employee's allegation that an application would have been futile because of her employer's prior refusal to promote women was sufficient to state a Title VII claim.¹⁵

Discriminatory promotion policies may also result when members of different classes (for example, men and women, whites and minorities) are initially hired in jobs that do not have comparable lines of progression. A federal district court recognized that the key point of discrimination in one such case was the employer's hiring policy, since original assignment in effect determined an employee's future chances of promotion. The court explained that the opportunity for advancement depended on the entry level position to which an employee was assigned.¹⁶ In that case, two entry level positions--"claims adjuster" and "claims representative"--had the same educational and experience requirements.¹⁷ However, all "claims adjusters" were male, and all "claims representatives" were female. The lines of responsibility for both positions were to the "claims supervisor," but promotion to "claims supervisor" was limited to

"claims adjusters." There was no avenue of promotion to "claims supervisor" from the "claims representative" position.ⁿ¹⁸ The court granted summary judgment for plaintiffs, noting that the plaintiff's statistical evidence established a prima facie case of discrimination,ⁿ¹⁹ and that the employer did not meet its burden under McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green ⁿ²⁰ of articulating a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for its policy.ⁿ²¹

Employers may be required to publicize promotion opportunities. For example, in one race discrimination case, an employer's failure to post notice of promotion openings, together with its reliance on supervisor recommendations and other factors, was held to support a finding of discrimination, even though the employer did not consider requests or require applications for promotions.ⁿ²² The court noted that job vacancy exposure was greater among white employees than black employees. Because most of the supervisors were white, "failure to post vacancies could only discourage applications by black employees to a greater degree than it discouraged white employees, who garnered information through the grapevine."ⁿ²³

Failure to promote can also be challenged on the basis of 42 U.S.C. § 1981. Prior to enactment of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, there was a cause of action "only where the [denied] promotion rises to the level of an opportunity for a new and distinct relation between the employee and employer,"ⁿ²⁴ However, since enactment of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 were expanded to provide protection for employees in the "[m]aking, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship." This includes differential or exclusionary treatment.ⁿ²⁵

The Ninth Circuit has stated that an employer's denial of an employee's opportunity to "enter an entirely different career" by virtue of promotion constitutes a refusal to hire, which negates the limitation on backpay in promotion cases.ⁿ²⁶ Thus, the court found that a plaintiff who repeatedly attempted to transfer from the hotel's laundry department to its accounting department was in effect attempting to enter a new career, which had to be considered equivalent to a refusal to hire for purposes of awarding backpay extending beyond the date of his quitting.ⁿ²⁷

Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991,ⁿ²⁸ prohibits an employer or other covered entity, in connection with the selection or referral of applicants or candidates for employment or promotion, from adjusting the scores of, using different cutoff scores for, or otherwise altering the results of, employment-related tests on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.ⁿ²⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate ImpactGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate ImpactEmployment PracticesDemotions & PromotionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate ImpactEmployment PracticesSelection ProceduresGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(c)(2).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Dominguez-Curry v. Nevada Trans. Dept. (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 1027, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 19764, *18-*19 . see McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 .

(n5)Footnote 3.2. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks (1993) 509 U.S. 502, 511, 113 S. Ct. 2742 .

(n6)Footnote 3.3. Dominguez-Curry v. Nevada Trans. Dept. (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 1027, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 19764, *18-*34 (female employee presented sufficient evidence of failure to promote based on gender to survive summary judgment, where it was undisputed that plaintiff established prima facie case of discrimination and defendants' articulated legitimate non-discriminatory reason for their conduct, i.e., man selected was more qualified candidate, and where district court erred in requiring that plaintiff's evidence be both specific and substantial because requirement only applied to circumstantial, not direct, evidence of discriminatory motive and plaintiff offered direct evidence of animus).

(n7)Footnote 3.4. See, e.g., Ricci v. DeStefano (2009) 129 S. Ct. 2658, 174 L. Ed. 2d 490 (promotional examination for firefighters). For discussion of the Ricci case, see § 41.45, above.

(n8)Footnote 4. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (2d ed. 1983) Ch. 17, "Promotion."

(n9)Footnote 5. See, e.g., United States Postal Service Bd. of Governors v. Aikens (1983) 460 U.S. 711, 714-715 (in "disparate treatment" case, plaintiff not required to submit direct evidence of discriminatory intent); McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1121-1122 (Title VII; disparate impact based on race in failure to promote). Stout v. Potter (9th Cir. 2002) 276 F.3d 1118, 1123 (Title VII; disparate impact based on gender in failure to promote); Casillas v. United States Navy (9th Cir. 1984) 735 F.2d 338, 342 (aggrieved employees permitted to use either "disparate treatment" model or "disparate impact" model to challenge failure to promote); Payne v. Travenol Laboratories, Inc. (5th Cir. 1982) 673 F.2d 798, 826 ("disparate impact" of education requirement); Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 613 F.2d 757, 761 ("disparate treatment").

(n10)Footnote 5.1. Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 607 (employee's two options for proposed accommodation, i.e., that he be allowed to post anti-gay messages and company's "gay" posters promoting diversity remain, or that company remove posters and he would then remove anti-gay messages, would have imposed undue hardship on employer; first accommodation would have compelled company to permit employee to post messages intended to demean and harass his co-workers, and second accommodation would have forced company to exclude sexual orientation from its workplace diversity program).

(n11)Footnote 5.2. Peterson v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (9th Cir. 2004) 358 F.3d 599, 607 .

(n12)Footnote 6. See Gifford v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 1149, 1154 ; Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 613 F.2d 757, 761 ; Mangold v. California Public Utilities Com'n. (9th Cir. 1995) 67 F.3d 1470, 1475 (direct evidence of disparate treatment of older workers supported verdict and court need not reach issue of admissibility of disparate impact evidence under the ADEA).

(n13)Footnote 7. Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 613 F.2d 757 .

(n14)Footnote 8. See Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 613 F.2d 757, 759 .

(n15)Footnote 9. See Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 613 F.2d 757, 760 .

(n16)Footnote 10. Gilligan v. Dept. of Labor (9th Cir. 1996) 81 F.3d 835 .

(n17)Footnote 11. See Gilligan v. Dept. of Labor (9th Cir. 1996) 81 F.3d 835 .

(n18)Footnote 12. See Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1221 (objective evidence of futility is not necessary; subjective knowledge of futility is sufficient). See Gifford v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 1149, 1154 ; Reed v. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. (9th Cir. 1980) 613 F.2d 757, 761 .

(n19)Footnote 13. Gifford v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 1149 .

(n20)Footnote 14. See Gifford v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 1149, 1154 ; See also Bouman v. Block (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1211, 1221 (objective evidence of futility, such as posting of "Whites Only" sign, is not necessary; subjective "knowledge" of futility is sufficient).

(n21)Footnote 15. See Gifford v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. Co. (9th Cir. 1982) 685 F.2d 1149, 1154 .

(n22)Footnote 16. See Wetzel v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (W.D. Pa. 1974) 372 F. Supp. 1146, 1149 , aff'd, 508 F.2d 239 (3d. Cir. 1974) , cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011 (1975) .

(n23)Footnote 17. See Wetzel v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (W.D. Pa. 1974) 372 F. Supp. 1146, 1150 , aff'd, 508 F.2d 239 (3d. Cir. 1974) , cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011 (1975) . See Addy v. Bliss & Glennon, (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 205, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 where plaintiff challenged her lack of consideration for what she considered a promotion (a lower paying job leading to the same advancement opportunities as her current job), and the employer was granted a summary judgment based on her failure to establish a prima facie case of failure to promote.

(n24)Footnote 18. See Wetzel v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (W.D. Pa. 1974) 372 F. Supp. 1146, 1149-1150 , aff'd, 508 F.2d 239 (3d. Cir. 1974) , cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011 (1975) .

(n25)Footnote 19. See Wetzel v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (W.D. Pa. 1974) 372 F. Supp. 1146, 1151-1152 , aff'd, 508 F.2d 239 (3d. Cir. 1974) , cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011 (1975) .

(n26)Footnote 20. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 802-804, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 ; see discussion in § 41.11[1][c].

(n27)Footnote 21. Wetzel v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. (W.D. Pa. 1974) 372 F. Supp. 1146, 1152-1155 , aff'd, 508 F.2d 239 (3d. Cir. 1974) , cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011 (1975) .

(n28)Footnote 22. See Payne v. Travenol Laboratories, Inc. (5th Cir. 1982) 673 F.2d 798, 827 .

(n29)Footnote 23. See Payne v. Travenol Laboratories, Inc. (5th Cir. 1982) 673 F.2d 798, 827 .

(n30)Footnote 24. See Patterson v. McLean Credit Union (1989) 491 U.S. 164, 105 L. Ed. 2d 132, 109 S. Ct. 2363.

(n31)Footnote 25. See Strother v. S. Cal. Permanente Medical Group (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 859 .

(n32)Footnote 26. See Odima v. Westin Tucson Hotel (9th Cir. 1995) 53 F.3d 1484, 1494-1495 .

(n33)Footnote 27. See Odima v. Westin Tucson Hotel (9th Cir. 1995) 53 F.3d 1484, 1495-1496 .

(n34)Footnote 28. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 106.

(n35)Footnote 29. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(l).

79 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.67

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.67 Retirement or Pension Plans and Benefits

[1] Generally

For purposes of equal employment opportunity laws, retirement or pension plans are "condition[s] or privilege[s] of employment."ⁿ¹ Retirement or pension benefits, and the contributions that maintain them, are considered "compensation."ⁿ² For a discussion relating to employment discrimination with respect to compensation generally, see § 41.56. For discussion relating to "terms, conditions, or privileges of employment" generally, see §§ 41.57-41.70.

Federal equal employment opportunity law provides no specific definition of a "retirement plan," but FEHC regulations interpreting the FEHA provide that a "retirement or pension program" refers to any written plan, program, or policy of an employer that has been communicated to eligible or affected employees, and that is intended to provide an employee with income on retirement.ⁿ³ Such a program may include pension plans, profit-sharing plans, money-purchase plans, tax-sheltered annuities, employer sponsored Individual Retirement Accounts, employee stock ownership plans, matching thrift plans, stock bonus plans, or other forms of defined benefit or defined contribution plans.ⁿ⁴

Under a defined benefit plan, benefit amounts are determined at the inception of the plan and the necessary amount of money is contributed to fund the benefits. Defined contribution plans require an employer to contribute specified amounts that are then used to purchase whatever retirement benefits the funds, and the earnings on their investment, will buy.ⁿ⁵

[2] Age Discrimination Issues

[a] Mandatory Retirement

[i] ADEA

Although bona fide employee benefit plans are exempt from ADEA coverage under specified circumstances,ⁿ⁶ no such plan may require or permit the involuntary retirement of any person covered by the ADEA, because of the age of that person.ⁿ⁷ However, compulsory retirement is permitted with respect to an employee who (1) has attained the age of 65 years; (2) is employed in a bona fide executive or high policy-making position for the two-year period immediately before retirement;ⁿ⁸ and (3) is entitled to an immediate nonforfeitable annual retirement benefit from a pension, profit-sharing, savings, or deferred compensation plan, or any combination of such plans, that equals, in the aggregate, at least $44,000.ⁿ⁹

[ii] FEHA

Under the FEHA, an employer must permit an employee to continue his or her employment beyond any retirement date contained in any private pension or retirement plan if the employee, within a reasonable time, indicates in writing a desire to continue working beyond the specified retirement date and can demonstrate the ability to continue working.ⁿ¹⁰ The employment must continue as long as the employee demonstrates his or her ability to perform the functions of the job adequately, and the employer is satisfied with the quality of the work performed.ⁿ¹¹

There are also exceptions to the FEHA's general prohibition against mandatory retirement. Thus, institutions of higher educationⁿ¹² may impose a mandatory retirement policy for tenured faculty members who have attained 70 years of age provided that the institution has a policy permitting reemployment of those individuals on a year-to-year basis.ⁿ¹³ Under this provision, the university must rehire those tenured faculty members over age 70 on a yearly basis if they are able to establish their competence.ⁿ¹⁴ Also, compulsory retirement is allowed with respect to (1) physicians who attain 70 years of age, and who are employed by professional medical corporations that have articles or bylaws providing for compulsory retirement; and (2) employees who (a) have attained the age of 65 years, (b) were employed in a bona fide executive or high policy-making position for the two-year period immediately before retirement, and (c) are entitled to an immediate nonforfeitable annual retirement benefit from a pension, profit-sharing, savings, or deferred compensation plan, or any combination of those plans, that equals, in the aggregate, at least $27,000.ⁿ¹⁵

[b] Voluntary Early Retirement

[i] Basic Requirements of OWBPA

The ADEA, as amended by the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990 (OWBPA),ⁿ¹⁶ provides that it is not unlawful for an employer to observe the terms of a bona fide employee benefit plan that is a voluntary early retirement incentive plan consistent with the purposes of the ADEA.ⁿ¹⁷ Furthermore, the OWBPA provides that an individual may waive ADEA rights or claims if the waiver is knowingly and voluntarily made. A waiver of ADEA rights or claims is considered to be knowingly and voluntarily made if:ⁿ¹⁸

1. The waiver is part of an agreement between the individual and the employer that is written in a manner calculated to be understood by the individual, or by the average individual eligible to participate;ⁿ¹⁹
2. The waiver specifically refers to rights or claims arising under the ADEA;
3. The individual does not waive rights or claims that may arise after the date the waiver is executed;
4. The individual waives rights or claims only in exchange for consideration in addition to anything of value to which the individual already is entitled;ⁿ²⁰
5. The individual is advised in writing to consult with an attorney prior to executing the agreement;
6. The individual is given a specified period, as discussed below, within which to consider the agreement;

7. The agreement provides that for a period of at least seven days following the execution of such agreement, the individual may revoke the agreement, and that the agreement will not become effective or enforceable until the revocation period has expired.

Generally, an individual must be given at least 21 days within which to consider a waiver agreement.ⁿ²¹ However, if a waiver is requested in connection with an exit incentive or other employment termination program offered to a group or class of employees, the individual must be given at least 45 days within which to consider the agreement.ⁿ²² Furthermore, at the commencement of the consideration period the employer must inform the individual in writing in a manner calculated to be understood by the average individual eligible to participate, as to:ⁿ²³

1. Any class, unit, or group of individuals covered by the program, any eligibility factors for the program, and any time limits applicable to the program; and
2. The job titles and ages of all individuals eligible or selected for the program, and the ages of all individuals in the same job classification or organizational unit who are not eligible or selected for the program.

There are several areas of uncertainty as to what constitutes a program that requires the information disclosure requirements. One is whether the employer's action is indeed a "group termination program."ⁿ²⁴ Another is whether the disclosure requirements might be required in programs which the employer considers "involuntary" on the ground that the statute specifies programs being "offered" to the employees.ⁿ²⁵ⁿ²⁶

[ii] Disputes About Validity of OWBPA Agreements

If any dispute arises over whether any of the foregoing requirements, conditions, and circumstances have been met, the party asserting the validity of a waiver has the burden of proving that a waiver was knowingly and voluntarily made.ⁿ²⁷ The majority of disputes arise out of common law theories of tender back and ratification. Generally, employers argue that employees who pursue claims under the ADEA and assert the invalidity of the waiver and release provisions of its OWBPA program cannot do so unless they tender back the consideration for the release. Courts have met this argument with differing responses. The Fourth Circuit and Fifth Circuit Courts of Appeals regard OWBPA releases as voidable agreements and require employees seeking to circumvent waivers and releases to tender back consideration.ⁿ²⁸ However the Seventh and Eleventh Circuits have reached the opposite conclusion.ⁿ²⁹

In the 1998 case of Oubre v. Entergy Operations, Inc.,^{n29.1} the United States Supreme Court clarified the effect of a waiver or release of all claims against an employer that does not comply with the statutory requirements of the OWBPA. An employee may not waive an ADEA claim unless the waiver or release satisfies the OWBPA's requirements. The OWBPA governs the effect under federal law of waivers or releases on ADEA claims and incorporates no exceptions or qualifications. Thus, the OWBPA language forecloses defenses based on general contract principles, such as (1) a contracting party can only void a contract if the party first tenders back any benefits received and failure to do so constitutes ratification of the contract; and (2) equitable estoppel bars a party from avoiding the burdens of a voidable contract for as long as the party retains the benefits received under the contract. Therefore, as a statutory matter, a noncomplying release is unenforceable and cannot bar the employee's ADEA claims, regardless of the validity of the release as to other claims. The Court expressly left open the issues of whether the employer has claims for restitution, recoupment, or setoff against the employee.^{n29.2} In a separate concurring opinion, Justices Breyer and O'Connor illustrate that releases that fail to satisfy statutory requirements are voidable rather than void. This distinction is important because a void contract relieves an employer of its duties (such as a reciprocal obligation to provide ongoing health benefits) and offers legal protection, a result unintended by Congress. In contrast, a voidable contract, but not one specifying a tender-back precondition, permits an employer to obtain restitution for the consideration paid to the employee.^{n29.3}

Under its regulations on agreements waiving rights and claims under the ADEA, the EEOC sets forth requirements for the wording of the waivers, as well as the disclosure of specific information to the individual and how it must be presented, including information regarding the ages of all those selected for the termination/retirement.^{n29.4}

[c] Prevention of Pension-Vesting

An employer's decision to terminate an employee because his or her pension is close to vesting may be unlawful under § 510 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA),ⁿ³⁰ but it does not in itself constitute discriminatory treatment on the basis of age in violation of the ADEA.ⁿ³¹ According to the Supreme Court, such a decision is analytically distinct from a violation of the ADEA since it is based on years of service not on the age of the employee.ⁿ³²

However, an employer is subject to liability under the ADEA if age plays a part in the decision to terminate an employee whose pension is about to vest. For example, if an employer targets employees with a particular pension status because they are likely to be older, if the employer's motivation to fire an employee is based both on pension status and on age, or if an employee's pension is about to vest because of his or her age rather than years of service, and the employer fires the employee to prevent vesting, the employer may be liable under the ADEA.ⁿ³³

[3] Sex Discrimination Issues

[a] Contributions and Benefits

Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart ⁿ³⁴ involved an employer-operated pension plan that required female employees to make larger contributions to receive the same monthly pension benefits as male employees (because female employees live, as a class, longer than male employees).ⁿ³⁵ In holding that this plan violated Title VII, the United States Supreme Court reasoned that although it is unquestionably true that women, as a class, do live longer than men, Title VII prohibits discrimination with respect to any individual.ⁿ³⁶ It precludes treatment of individuals as simply components of a racial, religious, sexual, or national class, and even a true generalization about a class is an insufficient reason for disqualifying an individual to whom the generalization does not apply.ⁿ³⁷ The Court stressed, however, that its holding did not imply that it would be unlawful for an employer to set aside equal retirement contributions for each employee and let each retiree purchase the largest benefit that his or her accumulated contributions could command in the open market.ⁿ³⁸ Title VII primarily governs relations between employees and their employer, not between employees and third parties.ⁿ³⁹

The employer in Manhart argued that under the Bennett Amendment to Title VII, which allows a compensation differential based on sex if it is authorized by the EPA,ⁿ⁴⁰ the different contributions exacted from male and female employees were "based on any other factor other than sex" because they were based on longevity.ⁿ⁴¹ The Court explained, however, that life expectancy is based on a number of factors, including sex. It pointed out that there was no evidence the employer took into account any factor other than the employee's sex in calculating the differential.ⁿ⁴²

In Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris, ⁿ⁴³ the Court relied on its Manhart rationale to hold that, under Title VII, an employer may not offer the option of receiving retirement benefits from one of several employer-selected companies that, based on sex-based mortality tables, pay female employees lower monthly benefits than male employees who make the same contributions to a deferred compensation plan.ⁿ⁴⁴ The Court preliminarily held that an individual woman may not be paid lower monthly benefits (annuities) simply because women, as a class, live longer than men.ⁿ⁴⁵ The Court also reasoned that the Norris plan was the equivalent of the Manhart plan because female employees in Norris who wished to obtain annuities equal to those obtained by male employees would also be required to make greater monthly contributions than the males.ⁿ⁴⁶

In Norris, the employer relied on the Manhart caveat discussed above that employers may set aside equal contributions and let the retiree purchase the largest benefit that he or she is able in the open market.ⁿ⁴⁷ The employer contended that the annuities offered by the participating companies reflected what was available in the open market.ⁿ⁴⁸ However, the Court declared that it is no defense that all annuities immediately available in the open market may have been based on sex-segregated tables. Furthermore, it was irrelevant whether any other companies offered annuities on a sex-neutral basis, since the employer did not simply set aside retirement contributions and let employees purchase annuities in the open market.ⁿ⁴⁹ Once the employer selected the companies, it entered into contracts with them governing the terms on which benefits were to be provided. There was thus no serious question that the employer was legally responsible for the discriminatory terms on which the annuities were offered.ⁿ⁵⁰

In AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen,^{n50.1} the United States Supreme Court held that an employer does not necessarily violate the Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA)^{n50.2} when it pays pension benefits calculated in part under an accrual rule, applied only prior to the PDA, that gave less retirement credit for pregnancy leave than for medical leave generally. In Hulteen, the Court found no violation because the benefit calculation rule was part of a bona fide seniority system under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964,^{n50.3} which insulated it from challenge. The employer provided pensions and other benefits based on a seniority system that relied on an employee's term of employment, understood as the period of service at the company minus uncredited leave time. Generally speaking, employees on disability leave received full service credit for the entire periods of absence, but prior to 1979, pregnancy leave was treated differently than disability leave and employees on pregnancy leave were given less service credit. Effective the same date as the PDA in 1979, the employer changed its policy to provide service credit for pregnancy leave on the same basis as leave taken for other temporary disabilities, but did not make any retroactive adjustments to the service credit calculations of women who had been subject to the pre-PDA personnel policies. The Court found that the payment of pension benefits was a function of a seniority system, because calculating benefits under the pension plan depended in part on an employee's term of employment.^{n50.4} Under Title VII, benefit differentials produced by a bona fide seniority-based pension plan are permitted unless they are the result of an intention to discriminate, and employer's system was bona fide as a system with no discriminatory terms.^{n50.5} The pre-1979 differential treatment of pregnancy leave was an element of the seniority system itself, but it did not taint the system under Title VII, because before the passage of the PDA, the Court had held in General Elec. Co. v. Gilbert ^{n50.6} an accrual rule limiting the seniority credit for time taken for pregnancy leave did not unlawfully discriminate on the basis of sex. Thus, as a matter of law, before 1979, an exclusion of pregnancy from a disability-benefits plan providing general coverage was not a gender-based discrimination at all.^{n50.7} The Court also held that the amendment to Title VII adopted in response to Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.,^{n50.8} dealing specifically with discrimination in compensation, did not affect the result, because the employer's pre-PDA decision not to award service credit for pregnancy leave was not discriminatory, so that women who took pre-PDA pregnancy leave were not affected by application of a discriminatory compensation decision or other practice.^{n50.9}

The FEHA provisions regarding discrimination on the basis of sex and medical condition do not affect the operation of the terms or conditions of any bona fide retirement, pension, employee benefit, or insurance plan if the terms and conditions are in accordance with customary and reasonable or actuarially sound underwriting practices.ⁿ⁵¹ However, FEHC regulations interpreting the FEHA provide that an employer covered may not require unequal employee contributions by similarly situated male and female employees to fringe benefit plans. Also, different amounts of basic benefits may not be established under fringe benefit plans for such employees.ⁿ⁵²

[b] Retirement Eligibility

EEOC regulations prohibit pension or retirement plans that, with respect to benefits, establish different optional or compulsory retirement ages based on sex, or that otherwise differentiate in benefits on the basis of sex.ⁿ⁵³ For example, an employer may not maintain a retirement plan that requires female employees to retire at an earlier age than male employees;ⁿ⁵⁴ nor may a plan permit female employees to retire with a full pension at an earlier age and with shorter length of service than male employees.ⁿ⁵⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge
DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge
DiscriminationEmployment PracticesPension BenefitsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate
TreatmentEmployment PracticesAdverse Employment ActionsBenefits

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1079, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 (Title VII) .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1079, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 (Title VII) ; Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 712 n.23, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657(Title VII) .

(n3)Footnote 3. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.1(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7295.1(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law, ch. 12 (BNA 2d ed. 1983).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B); see also discussion in § 41.93[1].

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B); see also Smith v. Alum Rock Union Elementary School Dist. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1651, 1655-1658, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399 (statutory exclusion of employees over age 60 from disability allowance constituted involuntary retirement in violation of ADEA).

(n8)Footnote 8. But see E.E.O.C. v Johnson & Higgins (S.D.N.Y 1995) 68 FEP Cases 1481 (policy requiring employees sitting on board of directors to retire at age 60 or 62 violative of ADEA because required forfeiture of employment, not merely directorship).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 29 U.S.C. § 631(c)(1).

(n10)Footnote 10. Gov. Code § 12942; see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7296.0(a) (mandatory retirement constitutes age discrimination under FEHA); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7296.1(procedures for continuing in employment past normal retirement date).

(n11)Footnote 11. Gov. Code § 12942.

(n12)Footnote 12. See 20 U.S.C. § 1001 ("institute of higher education" defined), incorporated by reference into Gov. Code § 12942(c)(1).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Gov. Code § 12942(c)(1).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Dubins v. Regents of University of California (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 77, 85-86, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Gov. Code § 12942(c); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7296.0(c).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Pub. L. No. 101-433, §§ 101-105.

(n17)Footnote 17. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B)(ii); see Henn v. National Geographic Soc. (7th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 824, 828 , cert. denied, 108 S. Ct. 454 (1988) (incentives to retire early do not constitute age discrimination as long as employee receiving offer may choose to keep working); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1625.9(f) (retirement plan may permit individuals to elect early retirement at specified age at their own option).

(n18)Footnote 18. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Oberg v. Allied Van Lines (7th Cir. 1993) 11 F.3d 679 , cert. denied, 114 S. Ct. 2104 (employees' continued acceptance of benefits did not cure employer's failure to comply with OWBPA); but cf. Blistein v. St. John's College (4th Cir. 1996) 74 F.3d 1459 (only writings were a list of benefits plaintiff was entitled to receive upon resignation and a letter from plaintiff's counsel representing a plan to withdraw EEOC charge; court disregarded failure to comply with OWBPA on ground that retirement agreement was merely voidable, not void and plaintiff had ratified by accepting benefits).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Bowers v. NETI (E.D. Pa. 1988) 690 F. Supp. 349 (where state law holds severance pay is part of employee's wages, consideration for waiver may be absent). But cf. Griffin v. Kraft General Foods, Inc. (11th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 368 (agreement providing enhanced benefits to all employees does not violate ADEA for failure to offer older workers greater consideration than employees outside the class).

(n21)Footnote 21. 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1)(F)(i).

(n22)Footnote 22. 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1)(F)(ii).

(n23)Footnote 23. 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1)(H).

(n24)Footnote 24. See EEOC v. Sara Lee Corp. (W.D. Mich. 1995) 70 FEP 57 (standardized termination package offered 4 employees pursuant to restructuring triggered disclosure under 29 U.S.C. §§ 626(f)(1)(H)(i), (ii)).

(n25)Footnote 25. See Elliott v. United Technologies Corp. (D. Conn. 1995) U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19325 (finding that term "exit incentive or other employment termination program" applies to involuntary terminations).

(n26)Footnote 26. [Reserved]

(n27)Footnote 27. 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(3).

(n28)Footnote 28. See Blistein v. St. John's College (4th Cir. 1996) 74 F.3d 1459 ; Wamsley v. Champlin Refining and Chems., Inc., (5th Cir. 1995) 11 F.3d 534 , cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1037 (1995) .

(n29)Footnote 29. See Oberg v. Allied Van Lines (7th Cir. 1993) 11 F.3d 679 ; Griffin v. Kraft General Foods, Inc. (11th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 368 ; Forbus v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (11th Cir. 1992) 958 F.2d 1036 .

(n30)Footnote 29.1. Oubre v. Entergy Operations, Inc. (1998) 522 U.S. 422, 118 S. Ct. 838, 139 L. Ed. 2d 849 .

(n31)Footnote 29.2. Oubre v. Entergy Operations, Inc. (1998) 522 U.S. 422, 118 S. Ct. 838, 841-843, 139 L. Ed. 2d 849 (employee does not ratify ineffective release, or face estoppel, by retaining benefits of release; retention does not satisfy OWBPA's release requirements).

(n32)Footnote 29.3. Oubre v. Entergy Operations, Inc. (1998) 522 U.S. 422, 118 S. Ct. 838, 843-845, 139 L. Ed. 2d 849 (concurring opinion).

(n33)Footnote 29.4. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.22.

(n34)Footnote 30. See 29 U.S.C. § 1140.

(n35)Footnote 31. Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 347-348

(n36)Footnote 32. Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 347-348

(n37)Footnote 33. Hazen Paper Co. v. Biggins (1993) 507 U.S. 604, 113 S. Ct. 1701, 123 L. Ed. 2d 338, 348-349

(n38)Footnote 34. Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 .

(n39)Footnote 35. See Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 711, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 .

(n40)Footnote 36. See Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 707-708, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 .

(n41)Footnote 37. See Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 708, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 . The Court stated, as an example, that if height is required for a job, a tall woman may not be refused employment merely because, on the average, women are too short. The Court also noted that many women do not live as long as the average man and many men outlive the average woman. Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 707, 708, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 .

(n42)Footnote 38. See Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 718, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 .

(n43)Footnote 39. See Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 718 n.33, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 .

(n44)Footnote 40. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h); see also § 41.56[5][a].

(n45)Footnote 41. See Los Angeles Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 712, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 ; see also 29 U.S.C. § 206(d) (permitting wage differentials based on bona fide factors other than sex).

(n46)Footnote 42. See Los Angeles, Dep't of Water & Power v. Manhart (1978) 435 U.S. 702, 712, 98 S. Ct. 1370, 55 L. Ed. 2d 657 ; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1620.11(b) (EEOC regulation interpreting EPA; differences in application of fringe benefits that are based on sex-based actuarial studies as not justified as "any other factor other than sex").

(n47)Footnote 43. Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 .

(n48)Footnote 44. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1089-1091, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 . Under the Norris plan, participating employees could defer receipt of, and thereby payment of federal income tax on, a portion of their wages until retirement, when they receive the deferred amounts and any earnings on them. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1076, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 .

(n49)Footnote 45. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1081, 1085, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 (classification of employees on basis of sex as no more permissible at pay-out stage of retirement plan than at pay-in stage).

(n50)Footnote 46. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1082, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 .

(n51)Footnote 47. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1086-1087, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 .

(n52)Footnote 48. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1087, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 .

(n53)Footnote 49. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1088, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 .

(n54)Footnote 50. See Arizona Governing Committee v. Norris (1983) 463 U.S. 1073, 1089, 103 S. Ct. 3492, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1236 .

(n55)Footnote 50.1. AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3470, *11-*27 .

(n56)Footnote 50.2. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(k).

(n57)Footnote 50.3. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h). For discussion of bona fide seniority systems under Title VII, see § 41.68[1], below.

(n58)Footnote 50.4. AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3470, *12-*13 .

(n59)Footnote 50.5. AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3470, *14-*17 . See also Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 356, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 (although advantages of seniority system flowed disproportionately to white employees because of employer's prior discrimination in job assignments, seniority system exemplified bona fide system without any discriminatory terms, where system did not have its genesis in discrimination and was maintained free from any illegal purpose).

(n60)Footnote 50.6. General Elec. Co. v. Gilbert (1976) 429 U.S. 125, 97 S. Ct. 401, 50 L. Ed. 2d 343 .

(n61)Footnote 50.7. AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3470, *17-*25 . See General Elec. Co. v. Gilbert (1976) 429 U.S. 125, 136, 97 S. Ct. 401, 50 L. Ed. 2d 343 .

(n62)Footnote 50.8. Ledbetter v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. (2007) 550 U.S. 618, 127 S. Ct. 2162, 167 L. Ed. 2d 982 . For discussion of the Ledbetter case and the Lily Ledbetter Fair Pay Act of 2009, see § 42.62[3][d].

(n63)Footnote 50.9. AT&T Corp. v. Hulteen (2009) 129 S. Ct. 1962, 173 L. Ed. 2d 898, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3470, *25-*27 .

(n64)Footnote 51. Gov. Code § 12993(b).

(n65)Footnote 52. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(b)(3).

(n66)Footnote 53. See 29 C.F.R. § 1620.11(f); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(b)(4) (FEHC regulation interpreting FEHA).

(n67)Footnote 54. See Bartmess v. Drewrys U.S.A., Inc. (7th Cir. 1971) 444 F.2d 1186, 1190 .

(n68)Footnote 55. See Rosen v. Public Service Electric and Gas Company (3d Cir. 1973) 477 F.2d 90, 95 .

80 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.68

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.68 Seniority Systems

[1] Title VII "Bona Fide Seniority System" Exception (Teamsters)

As amended, Title VII permits differences in compensation and terms, conditions, or privileges of employment pursuant to bona fide seniority systems, provided the differentials are not the result of intentional discrimination.ⁿ¹

Formerly, cases had held that facially neutral seniority systems were not "bona fide," and therefore violated Title VII, if they perpetuated past acts of discrimination.ⁿ² An example of a system that may perpetuate past acts of discrimination is a "departmental" seniority system, in which an employee may transfer from one department to another only if the employee forfeits seniority already accrued in the department he or she is leaving. Such systems may be facially neutral in that they are applied to all employees. However, prior to the passage of Title VII, departments were often racially segregated, with wages and benefits in the minority departments inferior to those in the nonminority departments. Since Title VII passed, such segregated departments are unlawful,ⁿ³ and minority employees may no longer be prohibited from transferring from one department to another because of their minority status. However, under a "departmental" seniority system, transferring minority employees often lost their seniority, and in effect were "locked" into inferior positions.ⁿ⁴

In Teamsters v. United States,ⁿ⁵ the United States Supreme Court was presented with the question of whether such a "departmental" seniority system was "bona fide." The Court held that otherwise neutral, legitimate seniority systems are not unlawful, even if they perpetuate past acts of discrimination.ⁿ⁶ The Court relied on legislative history to conclude that the purpose of the "bona fide seniority system" exception was to ensure that application of such a system would not be unlawful.ⁿ⁷ "[T]he congressional judgment was that Title VII should not outlaw the use of existing seniority lists and thereby destroy or water down the vested seniority rights of employees simply because their employer had engaged in discrimination prior to passage of [Title VII]."ⁿ⁸

According to the proviso in the "bona fide seniority system" exception, however, seniority systems that intentionally discriminate are not "bona fide," and are not entitled to protection.ⁿ⁹ Even facially neutral seniority systems that have their "genesis in [unlawful] discrimination," or that were "negotiated and [are] maintained" with an illegal purpose, are unlawful.ⁿ¹⁰ The burden is on the plaintiff to show the existence of discriminatory intent or illegal purpose.ⁿ¹¹ It is not enough to show that a seniority system has a discriminatory impact,ⁿ¹² but discriminatory impact may be an evidentiary consideration in reaching a finding on intent.ⁿ¹³ For example, proof that an employer's work force is racially balanced or that it contains a disproportionately high percentage of minority employees may be relevant to determining whether a seniority system intentionally discriminates.ⁿ¹⁴

In James v. Stockham Valves & Fittings Co.,ⁿ¹⁵ another case involving a "departmental" seniority system, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals relied on Teamsters to declare that the basic issue in such a case is "whether there [is] purposeful discrimination in connection with the establishment or continuation of a seniority system."ⁿ¹⁶ The court explained that the Teamsters Court's analysis suggests that the totality of the circumstances in the development and maintenance of the seniority system is relevant in examining the issue.ⁿ¹⁷ The court thus extracted from Teamsters the following factors for consideration:ⁿ¹⁸

1. Whether the seniority system operates to discourage all employees equally from transferring between seniority units;
2. Whether the seniority units are in the same or separate bargaining units (if the latter, whether that structure is rational and in conformance with industry practice);
3. Whether the seniority system had its genesis in racial discrimination; and
4. Whether the system was negotiated and has been maintained free from any illegal purpose.

For a discussion relating to the burden of proving discriminatory intent for equal employment opportunity purposes generally, see § 41.11. For a detailed discussion about what constitutes a "bona fide" seniority system generally, and using the "bona fide seniority system" exception as a substantive defense, see § 41.109.

[2] EEOC Guidelines

The EEOC guidelines on sex discrimination proscribe various practices that may operate to disguise discriminatory intent. Thus, it is an unlawful employment practice to maintain separate seniority lists based on sex if such a practice adversely affects any employee, unless sex is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) for the job.ⁿ¹⁹ Accordingly, an employment practice is also unlawful if it arbitrarily classifies jobs so that a female scheduled for layoff is prohibited from displacing a less senior male on a "male" seniority list, and vice versa.ⁿ²⁰ Furthermore, a seniority system that distinguishes between "light" or "heavy" jobs constitutes an unlawful employment practice if it operates as a disguised form of classification by sex, or creates unreasonable obstacles to advancement by members of either sex into jobs that members of that sex would reasonably be expected to perform.ⁿ²¹

In Bowe v. Colgate-Palmolive Company,ⁿ²² the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals relied on the foregoing EEOC guideline to determine that a seniority system that was bifurcated into separate eligibility lists for males and females was unlawful when it allowed male employees to bid for jobs plant-wide, but restricted women to jobs that did not require lifting more than 35 pounds.ⁿ²³ The court held that each employee who is able to demonstrate his or her ability to perform more strenuous work on a regular basis must be permitted to bid on and fill any position to which his or her seniority may entitle him or her.ⁿ²⁴

[3] The ADEA "Bona Fide Seniority System" Exception

The ADEA also contains a "bona fide seniority system" exception. Thus, the ADEA provides that it is not unlawful for an employer "to observe the terms of a bona fide seniority system ... which is not intended to evade the purpose of the [ADEA].ⁿ²⁵ However, the ADEA also provides that "no such seniority system... [may] require or permit the involuntary retirement of any individual [covered by the ADEA] because of the age of [that] individual."ⁿ²⁶ For example, in Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston,ⁿ²⁷ a transfer policy adopted by an airline to comply with the ADEA proscription against mandatory retirement allowed 60-year-old airline captains to continue working as flight engineers if the captains were able to successfully bid for such positions as vacancies occurred. When a vacancy occurred, it was filled by the most senior captain with a "standing bid." If no vacancy occurred before a captain's 60th birthday, or if the captain lacked sufficient seniority for a successful bid, that captain was retired.ⁿ²⁸ The United States Supreme Court held that the transfer policy was not a "bona fide seniority system" because it "permitted" involuntary retirement within the meaning of the ADEA.ⁿ²⁹ The Court also noted that under a collective bargaining agreement, captains displaced for any reason other than age, such as medical disability, did not have to resort to the bidding process, but could "bump" less senior flight engineers. The Court concluded, therefore, that the mandatory retirement required by the policy was age-based in violation of the ADEA.ⁿ³⁰

For further discussion of the mandatory retirement proscription in the ADEA, see § 41.67[2][a].

[4] Seniority and Layoffs

Layoffs often occur by reverse order in seniority--last-hired, first-fired. Accordingly, equal employment opportunity problems may arise when employers who have hired a large number of minority or female employees, either voluntarily or through affirmative action plans, subsequently suffer economic downturns. In such a situation, layoffs based on seniority may have an adverse impact on the minority and/or female employees recently hired.ⁿ³¹ These problems were addressed, at least with respect to court-ordered affirmative action, by the United States Supreme Court in Firefighters v. Stotts.ⁿ³² In that case, the Court held that a court cannot override a bona fide seniority system under Title VII unless the system is intentionally discriminatory, or unless the plaintiffs challenging the system were individually victimized by discrimination.ⁿ³³

In Stotts, the plaintiffs, a class of black firefighters, charged that their employer, a city fire department, unlawfully based hiring and promotion decisions on race. The parties thereafter entered into a consent decree to remedy the alleged Title VII violations, but the decree contained no provisions relating to layoff procedures.ⁿ³⁴ The consent decree also contained no provision awarding seniority to the black employees who allegedly had been discriminated against.ⁿ³⁵ When the employer subsequently announced layoffs resulting from a budgetary shortfall, the district court enjoined the employer from relying on its seniority system in effectuating the layoffs, concluding that the layoffs would have a racially discriminatory effect and thus that the seniority system was not bona fide.ⁿ³⁶ As a result of the injunction, a modified layoff plan was presented, approved, and carried out, resulting in the layoffs of some nonminority employees with more seniority than minority employees who were not laid off.ⁿ³⁷ The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the district court's judgment granting the injunction.ⁿ³⁸

In reversing the Sixth Circuit's decision, the Supreme Court held that the employer's seniority system was bona fide, relying on its holding in Teamsters v. United States ⁿ³⁹ that the Title VII "bona fide seniority system" exception permits the routine application of a seniority system absent proof of an intention to discriminate.ⁿ⁴⁰ The Court explained that the layoff proposal in this case was not adopted to intentionally discriminate on the basis of race.ⁿ⁴¹

Although the Sixth Circuit in Stotts had also disagreed with the district court's finding that the employer's seniority system was not bona fide,ⁿ⁴² the appellate court had upheld the injunction on the ground that the district court had merely enforced the terms of the consent decree, as modified by the court.ⁿ⁴³ The Supreme Court, however, held that the injunction did not simply enforce the terms of the consent decree because the decree contained no layoff provisions and did not suggest any intention to depart from the seniority system.ⁿ⁴⁴ The Court further disagreed with the Sixth Circuit's conclusionⁿ⁴⁵ that the district court could override the seniority system by unilaterally "modifying" the consent decree.ⁿ⁴⁶ The Court acknowledged that although the district court could award competitive seniority to individual members of the plaintiff class who could prove that they were actual victims of discrimination, mere membership in a disadvantaged class is insufficient to support such an award.ⁿ⁴⁷ The Court noted that in formulating the consent decree neither the district court nor the parties had identified any specific employees who were victims of discrimination and that no award of competitive seniority had been made to any employees.ⁿ⁴⁸ The Court concluded that the injunction therefore impermissibly imposed on the defendants, as an adjunct of the settlement, an obligation that the district court could not have ordered if the case had gone to trial and if the plaintiffs had proved a pattern or practice of discrimination.ⁿ⁴⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge
DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge
DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDemotions & PromotionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate
ImpactEmployment PracticesDemotions & PromotionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate
TreatmentEmployment PracticesAdverse Employment ActionsDemotions & Promotions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h).

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Local 189, United Papermakers & Paperworkers v. United States (5th Cir. 1969) 416 F.2d 980, 994-996.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(2) (Title VII prohibits employers from limiting, segregating, or classifying employees based on membership in protected classification).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Larson, Employment Discrimination, Ch. 6, "Preemployment and Employment Practices"; see also Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (2d ed. 1983) Ch. 3, "Seniority."

(n5)Footnote 5. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 353-354, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 352, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 353, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 353, 356, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 353, 356, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Black Law Enf. Officers Ass'n v. City of Akron (6th Cir. 1987) 824 F.2d 475, 481 ; see also Lorance v. AT&T Technologies, Inc. (1989) 490 U.S. 900, 909, 109 S. Ct. 2261, 104 L. Ed. 2d 961 (intent as necessary element of Title VII actions challenging seniority systems).

(n12)Footnote 12. See American Tobacco Co. v. Patterson (1982) 456 U.S. 63, 65, 102 S. Ct. 1534, 71 L. Ed. 2d 748 ; see also Lorance v. AT&T Technologies, Inc. (1989) 490 U.S. 900, 909-910, 109 S.Ct. 2261, 104 L. Ed. 2d 961 .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Pullman-Standard v. Swint (1982) 456 U.S. 273, 289, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Pullman-Standard v. Swint (1982) 456 U.S. 273, 289 fn. 18, 102 S. Ct. 1781, 72 L. Ed. 2d 66 ; Furnco Construction Corp. v. Waters (1978) 438 U.S. 567, 580, 98 S. Ct. 2943, 57 L. Ed. 2d 957 .

(n15)Footnote 15. James v. Stockham Valves & Fittings Co. (5th Cir. 1977) 559 F.2d 310 , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1034 (1978) .

(n16)Footnote 16. See James v. Stockham Valves & Fittings Co. (5th Cir. 1977) 559 F.2d 310, 351 , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1034 (1978) .

(n17)Footnote 17. See James v. Stockham Valves & Fittings Co. (5th Cir. 1977) 559 F.2d 310, 352 , cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1034 (1978) .

(n18)Footnote 18. See James v. Stockham Valves & Fittings Co. (5th Cir. 1977) 559 F.2d 310, 352 .

(n19)Footnote 19. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.3(a). For a discussion of the bona fide occupational qualification defense, see § 41.94.

(n20)Footnote 20. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.3(a)(2).

(n21)Footnote 21. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.3(b).

(n22)Footnote 22. Bowe v. Colgate-Palmolive Company (7th Cir. [Ind.] 1969) 416 F.2d 711.

(n23)Footnote 23. See Bowe v. Colgate-Palmolive Company (7th Cir. [Ind.] 1969) 416 F.2d 711, 717-718.

(n24)Footnote 24. See Bowe v. Colgate-Palmolive Company (7th Cir. [Ind.] 1969) 416 F.2d 711, 718.

(n25)Footnote 25. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(A).

(n26)Footnote 26. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(A); see 29 C.F.R. § 1625.9(a)(2) (EEOC regulation interpreting ADEA); see also Western Air Lines, Inc. v. Criswell (1985) 472 U.S. 400, 403, 105 S. Ct. 2743, 86 L. Ed. 2d 321 (ADEA generally prohibits mandatory retirement).

(n27)Footnote 27. Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 .

(n28)Footnote 28. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 120, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 .

(n29)Footnote 29. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 124, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 .

(n30)Footnote 30. See Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston (1985) 469 U.S. 111, 124, 105 S. Ct. 613, 83 L. Ed. 2d 523 .

(n31)Footnote 31. See Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law (2d ed. 1983) Ch. 3, "Seniority."

(n32)Footnote 32. Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n33)Footnote 33. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 577-579, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n34)Footnote 34. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 565, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n35)Footnote 35. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 566, 578, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n36)Footnote 36. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 566-567, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n37)Footnote 37. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 567, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n38)Footnote 38. See Stotts v. Memphis Fire Dep't (6th Cir. 1982) 679 F.2d 541, 567 .

(n39)Footnote 39. Teamsters v. United States (1977) 431 U.S. 324, 352, 97 S. Ct. 1843, 52 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n40)Footnote 40. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 577, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n41)Footnote 41. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 577, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n42)Footnote 42. See Stotts v. Memphis Fire Dep't (6th Cir. 1982) 679 F.2d 541, 551 fn. 6 .

(n43)Footnote 43. See Stotts v. Memphis Fire Dep't (6th Cir. 1982) 679 F.2d 541, 556-564 .

(n44)Footnote 44. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 574, 578, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n45)Footnote 45. See Stotts v. Memphis Fire Dep't (6th Cir. 1982) 679 F.2d 541, 564-567 .

(n46)Footnote 46. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 578-579, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n47)Footnote 47. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 578-579, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n48)Footnote 48. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 579, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

(n49)Footnote 49. See Firefighters v. Stotts (1984) 467 U.S. 561, 579, 104 S. Ct. 2576, 81 L. Ed. 2d 483 .

81 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.69

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.69 Training and Advancement

Title VII provides that it is an unlawful employment practice "for any employer, labor organization, or joint labor-management committee controlling apprenticeship or other training or retraining, including on-the-job training programs[,] to discriminate against any individual" because of his or her membership in a protected classification.ⁿ¹ Thus, an employer may not discriminatorily deny access to training,ⁿ² or discriminatorily fail to train an employee adequately.ⁿ³ In one case involving failure to adequately train, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals stated that in order to establish a prima facie case of discriminatory training, a plaintiff is required to show that he or she was treated differently from other employees, and that the employer was aware of the discrimination and failed to remedy it.ⁿ⁴

Unless excepted because they are based on a reasonable factor other than ageⁿ⁵ or exempted by the EEOC,ⁿ⁶ the ADEA prohibits age limitations in apprenticeship programs.ⁿ⁷

The FEHA prohibits any person from discriminating against any other person in selection or training of that person in any apprenticeship training program or any other training program leading to employment because of the person's membership in a protected classification.ⁿ⁸ FEHC regulations provide that when training that may make an employee eligible for promotion and/or transfer is made available, it must be made available in a manner that does not discriminate against individuals on a basis enumerated in the FEHA.ⁿ⁹

In Esberg v. Union Oil Co.,ⁿ¹⁰ the California Supreme Court upheld the court of appeal finding that the FEHA's prohibition against age discrimination in employment extended to hiring, discharging, suspension, and demotion, but not to the furnishing of employee benefits such as educational assistance.ⁿ¹¹ Effective January 1, 2003, the California Legislature acted to reject the holding in Esberg. The Legislature repealed former Government Code Section 12941 and amended Government Code Section 12940 to include age within the prohibited bases for employment discrimination, without distinguishing age from other types of discrimination. The Legislature expressly stated its intent to construe and clarify the meaning and effect of existing law and to reject the interpretation given to the law in Esberg.ⁿ¹²

For discussion of the validity of job-training requirements as an employee selection criteria, see §§ 41.42 and 41.45[2][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge
DiscriminationEmployment PracticesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge
DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDemotions & PromotionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisability
DiscriminationEmployment PracticesDemotions & PromotionsLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate
ImpactEmployment PracticesDemotions & Promotions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(d). For a discussion of the various classifications protected by Title VII, see Part B (§§ 41.30-41.36).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Thompson v. Sawyer (D.C. Cir. 1982) 678 F.2d 257, 283 ; see also Eldredge v. Carpenters 46 N. Cal. Counties Joint Apprenticeship & Training Comm. (9th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 1334, 1337 (Joint labor-management committee administering carpentry registry apprenticeship program violated Title VII because its system for providing apprentices with first jobs had effect of discriminating on basis of sex).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Shah v. Mt. Zion Hospital & Medical Ctr. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1981) 642 F.2d 268, 271 ; see also Addy v. Bliss & Glennon (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 205, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 (plaintiff failed to prove unfair denial of training opportunities).

(n4)Footnote 4. Shah v. Mt. Zion Hospital & Medical Ctr. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1981) 642 F.2d 268, 271 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 29 C.F.R. § 628.

(n7)Footnote 7. See 29 C.F.R. § 1625.21.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Gov. Code § 12940(c); see also Gov. Code § 12940(l)(discrimination in selection for training based on religion is unlawful unless reasonable accommodation cannot be accomplished). For a discussion of the various classifications protected by the FEHA, see Part B (§§ 41.30-41.36).

(n9)Footnote 9. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.4(c)(2). See Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514 , where plaintiff had a pre-existing condition of physical disability and the employer terminated him as unfit and arranged for vocational rehabilitation training under workers' compensation.

(n10)Footnote 10. Esberg v. Union Oil Co. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 262, 47 P.3d 1069, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203.

(n11)Footnote 11. Esberg v. Union Oil Co. (2002) 28 Cal. 4th 262, 264-271, 47 P.3d 1069, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203 ; see Esberg v. Union Oil Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 378, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Stats. 2002, ch. 525 § 4.

82 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.70

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.70 Transfer

Neither Title VII nor the FEHA contain any express provision relating to promotions and transfers. However Title VII provides that it is an unlawful employment practice "to limit, segregate, or classify ... employees in any way [that] would deprive any individual of employment opportunities" because of the individual's membership in a protected classification.ⁿ¹ Also, FEHC regulations provide that an employer or other entity covered by the FEHA may not restrict information on transfer opportunities to certain employees or classes of employees when the restriction has the effect of discriminating on a basis enumerated in the FEHA.ⁿ²

Discriminatory employment practices relating to transfers may be analyzed similarly to discriminatory promotion policies. Thus, the "disparate treatment" theory of liability may be applied to an alleged discriminatory transfer of, or refusal to transfer, an employee.ⁿ³ Presumably, facially neutral transfer policies may be subject to "disparate impact" analysis.ⁿ⁴

When an employer modifies its workforce for business reasons, it has no obligation to transfer an employee to another position within the company.ⁿ⁵ To the extent that an employer voluntarily assumes such an obligation, the court can draw an inference of discrimination only if the plaintiff can show that others not in the protected class were treated more favorably.ⁿ⁶

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Treatment General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Treatment Employment Practices Adverse Employment Actions Reassignments & Transfers Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)(2).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. 4(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Peters v. Jefferson Chemical Company (5th Cir. 1975) 516 F.2d 447, 449-450 ; Chapman v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1978) 456 F. Supp. 65, 75 ; Odima v. Westin Tucson Hotel (9th Cir. 1995) 53 F.3d 1484, 1494-1495 (claims for denial of transfer would be actionable if it involved an increase in supervisory duties); Horsford v. Board of Trustees of California State Univ. (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 359, 374 (removing police lieutenant from his former position near top of department's chain of command, and then removing him entirely from law enforcement duties and transferring him to head department in which he had no training or expertise adversely changed objective terms and conditions of employment, and when motivated by racial animus constituted actionable adverse employment action).

(n4)Footnote 4. Cf. Peters v. Jefferson Chemical Company (5th Cir. 1975) 516 F.2d 447, 449 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Gibbs v. Consolidated Services (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 794, 800, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 ; see also Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1422 ; Simpson v. Midland-Ross Corp. (6th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 937, 942 n.6 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Gibbs v. Consolidated Services (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 794, 800, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 (plaintiff could not make showing of unlawful age discrimination in failure to offer him transfer to driving position, where only employee offered driving position was over 40); see also Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1422-1423 .

83 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART D. EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES GENERALLY

2-41 California Employment Law §§ 41.71 through 41.79

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 41.71[Reserved]

84 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART E. HARASSMENT

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.80

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.80 Prohibited Bases of Workplace Harassment

[1] California Law

[a] Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)

[i] Definition and Scope of Harassment

The FEHA expressly prohibits harassment of employees, applicants, or persons providing services pursuant to a contract¹ based on race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical or mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, or age over 40 years.² The FEHA provides that "harassment because of sex" includes sexual harassment, gender harassment, and harassment based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.³ According to FEHC regulations interpreting the FEHA, harassment of all kinds includes, but is not limited to:

- (1) Verbal harassment (e.g., epithets, derogatory comments, or slurs relating to a basis enumerated in the FEHA);
- (2) Physical harassment (e.g., assault, impeding or blocking movement, or any interference with normal work or movement when directed at an individual on a basis enumerated in the FEHA);
- (3) Visual forms of harassment (e.g., derogatory posters, cartoons, or drawings pertaining to a basis enumerated in the FEHA); or
- (4) Sexual favors (e.g., unwanted sexual advances that condition an employment benefit on an exchange of sexual favors).⁴

The FEHA imposes an affirmative duty on employers to take all reasonable steps to prevent discrimination and harassment from occurring.⁵ Consistent with the federal authorities discussed in [ii], below, the FEHA provides that loss of tangible benefits is not necessary to establish unlawful harassment.ⁿ⁶ However, no suit may be maintained for violation of this affirmative duty if the plaintiff has not actually suffered any employment discrimination or harassment.ⁿ⁷ For a discussion of FEHA workplace posting requirements, see § 41.140[1][f].

The FEHA addresses discrimination and harassment separately. Discrimination refers to bias in the exercise of official actions on behalf of the employer, and harassment refers to bias that is expressed or communicated through interpersonal relations in the workplace.^{n7.1} Harassment consists of conduct outside the scope of necessary job performance, presumably engaged in for personal gratification, because of meanness or bigotry, or for other personal motives. Commonly necessary personnel management actions do not come within the meaning of harassment. These actions may retrospectively be found discriminatory if based on improper motives, but in that event the remedies provided by the FEHA are those for discrimination, not harassment.^{n7.2} However, although discrimination and harassment are separate wrongs, they are sometimes closely interrelated, and even overlapping, particularly with regard to proof.^{n7.3}

Under the FEHA, harassment focuses on situations in which the social environment of the workplace becomes intolerable because the harassment, whether verbal, physical, or visual, communicates an offensive message to the harassed employee.^{n7.4} Because a harasser need not exercise delegated power on behalf of the employer to communicate an offensive message, it does not matter for purposes of proving harassment whether the harasser is the president of the company or an entry-level clerk, although harassment by a high-level manager of an organization may be more injurious to the victim because of the prestige and authority that the manager enjoys.^{n7.5}

When the harasser is a supervisor, the employer is strictly liable for the supervisor's actions.^{n7.6} When the harasser is a nonsupervisory employee, employer liability turns on a showing of negligence, i.e., the employer knew or should have known of the harassment and failed to take appropriate corrective action.^{n7.7}

The FEHA does not place different degrees of liability for discrimination and harassment. Both are unlawful employment practices,^{n7.8} and in both cases an aggrieved employee can obtain full compensation for any resulting injury.^{n7.9} An employee who is the victim of discrimination based on an official action of the employer also can be the victim of harassment by a supervisor for abusive messages that create a hostile working environment, and under the FEHA the employee would have two separate claims of injury.^{n7.10} For example, in Roby v. McKesson Corp.,^{n7.11} an employee's discrimination claim sought compensation for official employment actions that were motivated by improper bias. The discriminatory actions included the termination of her employment based on her disability, and official employment actions that preceded the termination. Her harassment claim, by contrast, sought compensation for hostile social interactions in the workplace that affected the workplace environment because of the offensive message they conveyed to her. The harassing actions included actions by her supervisor, none of which could fairly be characterized as an official employment action. None involved the supervisor's exercising the authority the employer had delegated to her so as to cause the employer, in its corporate capacity, to take some action with respect to the employee. Rather, the actions were events that were unrelated to the supervisor's managerial role, engaged in for her own purposes.

Some official employment actions done in furtherance of a supervisor's managerial role also can have a secondary effect of communicating a hostile message. This occurs when the actions establish a widespread pattern of bias.^{n7.12} In Roby, some actions the supervisor took were best characterized as official employment actions rather than hostile social interactions in the workplace, but they could have contributed to the hostile message the supervisor was expressing to the employee in other, more explicit ways.^{n7.13}

Acts of discrimination can provide evidentiary support for a harassment claim by establishing discriminatory animus on the part of the manager responsible for the discrimination, thereby permitting the inference that rude comments or behavior by that manager was similarly motivated by discriminatory animus. Thus, discrimination and harassment claims can overlap as an evidentiary matter. The critical inquiry when a court is deciding whether the evidence is sufficient to uphold a verdict finding both discrimination and harassment is whether the evidence indicates violations of both FEHA prohibitions, but nothing prevents a plaintiff from proving the two violations with the same (or overlapping) evidentiary presentations.^{n7.14} In Roby, the Court of Appeal erroneously allocated the employee's evidence between her discrimination claim and her harassment claim, and on that basis found the evidence of harassment insufficient. The evidence was ample to support the jury's harassment verdict, because it was sufficient to allow the jury to conclude that the hostility was pervasive and effectively changed the conditions of her employment. Moreover, the jury could infer, based on the discrimination evidence, that the supervisor's hostility was because of the employee's medical condition.^{n7.15}

[ii] Employers Covered Under FEHA

The FEHA proscription against all forms harassment, unlike its other provisions, applies to any "person regularly employing one or more persons, or regularly receiving the services of one or more persons providing services pursuant to a contract, or any person acting as an agent of an employer, directly or indirectly, the state, or any political or civil subdivision thereof, and cities."ⁿ⁸ However, employers that are nonprofit religious associations or corporations are exempt from the FEHA harassment provisions, except as provided in Gov. Code § 12926.2, discussed at § 40.10[3].ⁿ⁹

[b] Unruh Civil Rights Act

In 1994, the California Legislature amended the Unruh Civil Rights Actⁿ¹⁰ to include a proscription against sexual harassment in business, service and professional relationships.ⁿ¹¹ The statute provides that damages shall be awarded for violations of Civil Code Section 51.9 as provided in Civil Code Section 52.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The reference in Civil Code Section 51.9 to the remedial provisions of Civil Code Section 52 suggests a drafting defect by the California legislature. Section 52 contains a number of subsections which outline the remedies applicable to specific portions of Section 51, but none of those remedial provisions mention Section 51.9. Thus, practitioners must await either a statutory amendment or court decisions which link the prohibitions in Section 51.9 to one or more subsections of Section 52. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[c] Common Law

In Rojo v. Kliger,ⁿ¹² the California Supreme Court held sexual harassment victims need not pursue remedies under the FEHA because art. I, § 8 of the California Constitution states a fundamental public policy against sex discrimination. Accordingly, the court held that plaintiffs could pursue a tort remedy for termination in violation of public policy, noting "the FEHA does not displace any causes of action and remedies that are otherwise available" to plaintiffs who allege discrimination on the basis of sex.ⁿ¹³

[d] Workplace Violence Safety Act

In 1994, the California Legislature enacted the Workplace Violence Safety Act,ⁿ¹⁴ in order to provide employers optional remedies against workplace violence. However, the statute was not intended to obligate employers to seek its remedies.ⁿ¹⁵ The act provides injunctive relief to any employer whose employee has "suffered unlawful violence or a credible threat of violence from any individual, that can reasonably be construed to be carried out or to have been carried out at the workplace."ⁿ¹⁶

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Although the Legislature has stated that no employer is obligated to seek the remedies of the Workplace Violence Safety Act, it remains an open question whether, in an appropriate situation where the employer has notice of the danger, an individual harmed by the employer's failure to seek an injunction would be able to seek damages for negligence. Commentary by Elizabeth W. Mandel.

[2] Federal Law[a] Title VII

Title VII does not explicitly proscribe harassment based on membership in its protected classifications. Nevertheless, cases hold that harassment based on sex, race, national origin, or religion violates Title VII.ⁿ¹⁷ Courts have also recognized that harassment may occur on the basis of gender hostility, although no overt sexual harassment has occurred.ⁿ¹⁸

Although adverse employment decisions and the loss of tangible employment benefits may result from harassment,ⁿ¹⁹ findings of discrimination are most often based on the premise, first articulated in Rogers v. Equal Employment Opportunity Com'n,ⁿ²⁰ that a "working environmen[t] [may be] so heavily polluted with discrimination as to destroy completely the emotional and psychological stability" of the affected employees.ⁿ²¹ Thus, in Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson,ⁿ²² the United States Supreme Court held that such "hostile environment" harassment violates Title VII even in the absence of economic loss.ⁿ²³ Relying on the language of Title VII, Rogers, and the EEOC guidelines on sex discrimination,ⁿ²⁴ the Court in Vinson rejected a contention that Title VII is concerned solely with "tangible loss" of "economic character."ⁿ²⁵

The EEOC has published guidelines discussing sexual harassmentⁿ²⁶ and national origin harassment.ⁿ²⁷ Among other things, the EEOC guidelines on sexual harassment proscribe unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature when:

1. Submission to such conduct is made either explicitly or implicitly a term or condition of an individual's employment;
2. Submission to or rejection of such conduct by an individual is used as the basis for employment decisions affecting such individual; or
3. Such conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual's work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment.ⁿ²⁸

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

Harassment may not only be raised as an independent claim, but also as supporting evidence of discrimination regarding other employment practices. Harassment may be probative of disparate treatment. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

[b] Other Federal Statutes[i] Title IX

The proscription against sex discrimination in Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972ⁿ²⁹ includes employees of all educational institutions which receive federal assistance.ⁿ³⁰ Currently the Office of Civil Rights (OCR) is the agency which enforces Title IX.

In Franklin v. Gwinnett County Public Schools,ⁿ³¹ the United States Supreme Court recognized that with respect to teachers and students, Title IX imposes the same rule against sex discrimination as does Title VII "when a supervisor sexually harasses a subordinate because of the subordinate's sex."ⁿ³² Some courts have held that this rule also applies to employees of covered educational institutions,ⁿ³³ while others have held that Title VII preempts Title IX.ⁿ³⁴

In Jackson v. Birmingham Board of Education,^{n34.1} the United States Supreme Court held that the private right of action implied by Title IX is cognizable when the recipient of federal funds under Title IX retaliates against an individual because the individual complains about sex discrimination.^{n34,2}

[ii] Section 1983

An action for sexual harassment under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 may be available to state and local governmental employees. However, the employer agency may be liable only if the deprivation of civil rights is found to have been in furtherance of the government's policy or custom or that the harassment is an established practice.ⁿ³⁵

[iii] Section 1981

42 U.S.C. § 1981 encompasses a hostile work environment claim. Congress amended § 1981 as part of the 1991 Civil Rights Act. Congress added subsection (b), which defines "make and enforce contracts" as "the making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship." The congressional amendment to § 1981 evinced congressional intent to permit hostile work environment claims under § 1981.ⁿ³⁶ The legal principles guiding a court in a Title VII dispute apply with equal force in a § 1981 action.ⁿ³⁷

To establish the prima facie hostile work environment claim under either Title VII or § 1981, the plaintiff must raise a triable issue of fact as to the whether the following are true:ⁿ³⁸

- (1) The plaintiff was subjected to verbal or physical conduct because of his or her race.
- (2) The conduct was unwelcome.
- (3) The conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of employment and create an abusive work environment.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationActionable DiscriminationLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationDisparate TreatmentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Gov. Code § 12940(j)(5) ("person providing services pursuant to a contract" means a person who has the right to control performance under the contract, discretion as to the manner of performance, is customarily engaged in an independently established business, and has control over the time and place of performance, supplies tools and instrument used in the work, and performs work that requires a particular skill nor ordinarily used in the course of the employer's work).

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(C); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(1); see Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607-608, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA; sexual harassment). See Accardi v. Superior Court Of Simi Valley (Dist. 1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 348, 21 Cal Rptr. 2d 292, where the court noted that the behavior need not involve sexual advances, rather the behavior must be based on the sex of the person which interferes with the person's work performance.

For the standard jury instruction defining "harassing conduct" under FEHA, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2523(Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction defining "hostile work environment," see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2524 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n5)Footnote 5. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1), (k); DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 20 (sexual harassment; employer must have in place, and inform its employees about, adequate procedure for handling harassment complaints as part of its independent obligation to prevent harassment); DFEH v. Madera County (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 29 (same); DFEH v. State University--Hayward (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-18, p. 19 88-18 (same).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Gov. Code § 12940(j); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA; sexual harassment); DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 6 (same); DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 12 (same); DFEH v. Madera County (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 29 (same); DFEH v. State University--Hayward (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-18, pp. 14-15 (same).

(n7)Footnote 7. Trujillo v. North County Transit Dist. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 280, 288-289, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596 (special verdict for damages based on finding of violation of former Gov. Code § 12940(i) is impermissible when jury found that defendants did not discriminate, racially harass, or retaliate against plaintiffs or cause severe emotional distress).

(n8)Footnote 7.1. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *35 .

(n9)Footnote 7.2. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *35-*36 ; Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 645-647 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333 . For discussion of discrimination under the FEHA, see § 41.02[6], above.

(n10)Footnote 7.3. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *36 .

(n11)Footnote 7.4. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *33-*34 .

(n12)Footnote 7.5. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *34-*35 .

(n13)Footnote 7.6. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *35 ; State Dept. of Health Services v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1040-1041, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556 .

(n14)Footnote 7.7. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1). See also Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *35 .

(n15)Footnote 7.8. See Gov. Code § 12940.

(n16)Footnote 7.9. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *36 .

(n17)Footnote 7.10. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *36 .

(n18)Footnote 7.11. Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009

*Cal. LEXIS 12374, *39-47 .

(n19)Footnote 7.12. *Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, 41 ; Miller v. Dept. of Corrections (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 446, 466, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 115 P.3d 77 .

(n20)Footnote 7.13. *Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, 41 .

(n21)Footnote 7.14. *Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *41-42 .

(n22)Footnote 7.15. *Roby v. McKesson Corp. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 686, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 219 P.3d 749, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12374, *42-45 . See Gov. Code § 12940(j)(i).

(n23)Footnote 8. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(A); but cf. Campbell v. Arco Marine (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1850, 1857-1858, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626 (FEHA jurisdiction does not extend to nonresidents when the wrongful conduct occurred outside California).

(n24)Footnote 9. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(B).

(n25)Footnote 10. Civ. Code § 51 et seq.

(n26)Footnote 11. Civ. Code § 51.9(covered relationships include physicians, psychotherapists, and dentist-patient; attorney, marriage, family or child counselor, licensed clinical social worker, master of social work, real estate agent, real estate appraiser, accountant banker, trust officer, financial planner loan officer, collection service, contractor, or escrow loan officer-client; executor, trustee, or administrator-beneficiary; landlord or property manager-tenant; teacher-student; any relationship substantially similar to those enumerated).

(n27)Footnote 12. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n28)Footnote 13. See Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 82, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n29)Footnote 14. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8.

(n30)Footnote 15. See Legislature's historical and statutory notes to Section 1, Stats. 1993-94, 1st Ex. Sess., c. 29 (A.B. 68).

(n31)Footnote 16. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(a).

(n32)Footnote 17. See, e.g., Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 64-67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 (sex discrimination); Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1102-1103 (race discrimination); Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934, 942-943, 948 (sex discrimination); Firefighters Institute, Etc. v. City of St. Louis (8th Cir. 1977) 549 F.2d 506, 514-515 ; Rogers v. EEOC (5th Cir. 1971) 454 F.2d 234 (national origin); Abrams v. Baylor College of Medicine (5th Cir. 1986) 805 F.2d 528 (religion).

(n33)Footnote 18. See Rogers v. EEOC (5th Cir. 1971) 454 F.2d 234 .

(n34)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934, 948-953, 948 .

(n35)Footnote 20. Rogers v. EEOC (5th Cir. 1971) 454 F.2d 234, 238 .

(n36)Footnote 21. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 66, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ;

Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1102-1103 ; Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934, 944-945 ; Firefighters Institute, Etc. v. City of St. Louis (8th Cir. 1977) 549 F.2d 506, 515.

(n37)Footnote 22. Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 .

(n38)Footnote 23. Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 64-67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 .

(n39)Footnote 24. 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a) (EEOC sex discrimination guideline; conduct having purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with individual's work performance or creating intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment as one circumstance of sexual harassment).

(n40)Footnote 25. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 64-65, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 .

(n41)Footnote 26. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11.

(n42)Footnote 27. See 29 C.F.R. § 1606.8.

(n43)Footnote 28. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a).

(n44)Footnote 29. See 20 U.S.C. § 1681.

(n45)Footnote 30. See 20 U.S.C. § 1681(a); North Haven Board of Education v. Bell (1982) 456 U.S. 512, 537 , (upholding HEW regulations).

(n46)Footnote 31. Franklin v. Gwinnett County Public Schools (1992) 503 U.S. 60, 112 S. Ct. 1028, 117 L. Ed. 2d 208 .

(n47)Footnote 32. See Franklin v. Gwinnett County Public Schools (1992) 503 U.S. 60, 75, 112 S. Ct. 1028, 117 L. Ed. 2d 208 .

(n48)Footnote 33. See Henschke v. New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Ctr. (S.D.N.Y. 1993) 821 F. Supp. 166 .

(n49)Footnote 34. See Wedding v. University of Toledo (N.D. Ohio 1994) 862 F. Supp. 201 .

(n50)Footnote 34.1. Jackson v. Birmingham Board of Education (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1497, 161 L. Ed. 2d 361 .

(n51)Footnote 34.2. Jackson v. Birmingham Board of Education (2005) 125 S. Ct. 1497, 1503-1510, 161 L. Ed. 2d 361 (complaint of male girls' basketball coach that Board of Education violated Title IX by retaliating against him for protesting discrimination against girls' basketball team erroneously dismissed).

(n52)Footnote 35. See Leer v. Murphy (9th Cir. 1988) 844 F.2d 628, 632-633 ; Thompson v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 1439, 1443-1444 (custom must be proved by a permanent and well settled practice which although not authorized by written or express municipal policy constitutes usage with the force of law.); Redman v. County of San Diego (9th Cir. 1991) 942 F.2d 1435, 1445 (en banc) (routine failure to follow nondiscrimination policy can itself constitute an actionable custom).

(n53)Footnote 36. See Manatt v. Bank of America NA (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 792, 797 ; see also Whidbee v. Garzarelli Food Specialties, Inc. (2d Cir. 2000) 223 F.3d 62, 68-69 ; Danco, Inc. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (1st Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 8, 13 ; Witt v. Roadway Express (10th Cir. 1998) 136 F.3d 1424, 1431-1432 ; Jackson v. Motel Six Multipurpose, Inc. (11th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 999, 1008 n.17 ; Dennis v. County of Fairfax (4th Cir. 1995) 55 F.3d 151, 155 ; Johnson v. Uncle Ben's, Inc. (5th Cir. 1992) 965 F.2d 1363, 1372 .

(n54)Footnote 37. Manatt v. Bank of America NA (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 792, 797 ; see EEOC v. Inland Marine Indus. (9th Cir. 1984) 729 F.2d 1229, 1233 n.7 (plaintiff must meet same standards in proving § 1981 claim that he or she must meet in establishing claim under Title VI); see also Whidbee v. Garzarelli Food Specialties, Inc. (2d Cir. 2000) 223 F.3d 62, 69 (analogizing § 1981 claim to Title VII claim); Danco, Inc. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (1st Cir. 1999) 178 F.3d 8, 13 (language in § 1981(b) tracks language of Title VII prohibiting discrimination with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment); Jurado v. Eleven-Fifty Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 813 F.2d 1406, 1412 .

(n55)Footnote 38. Manatt v. Bank of America NA (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 792, 798-799 (conduct of Chinese-American employee's coworkers and supervisor, while offensive and inappropriate, did not so pollute workplace that it altered conditions of her employment); Kang v. U. Lim Am., Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 296 F.3d 810, 817 . For discussion of hostile environment generally, see § 41.81[1][b].

85 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART E. HARASSMENT

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.81

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.81 Sexual Harassment

[1] Types of Sexual Harassment

Under the FEHA, sexual harassment is actionable under Government Code Section 12940(j), and as a form of discrimination "because of sex."ⁿ¹ The FEHA defines "harassment because of sex" to include sexual harassment, gender harassment, and harassment based on pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.ⁿ² As discussed in § 41.80[2], Title VII does not expressly proscribe harassment, but the United States Supreme Court has held that sexual harassment is unlawful under Title VII as a form of sex discrimination.ⁿ³

Sexual harassment includes unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other unwelcome verbal, physical, or visual conduct of a sexual nature.ⁿ⁴ In Jacobus v. Krambo Corp.,^{n4.1} a jury found that a male co-worker's acts toward a female co-worker, including discussion of his sex life, sexual bantering, and showing her explicit sexual materials, did not constitute sexual harassment when the female co-worker consented to these exchanges.^{n4.2}

Sexual conduct by a person of the same gender as the victim may constitute sexual harassment.ⁿ⁵

Historically, California and federal courts construing the FEHA and Title VII, respectively, have recognized two distinct categories of sexual harassment: (1) "quid pro quo" sexual harassment, and (2) "hostile work environment" sexual harassment.ⁿ⁶ However, in Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth,^{n6.1} the Supreme Court carefully analyzed these terms and limited their application in the analysis of sexual harassment claims under Title VII. The Court noted that an employer is always liable for a supervisor's harassing conduct in any case involving a tangible action, i.e., a significant change in employment status, such as "hiring, firing, failing to promote, reassignment with significantly different responsibilities, or a decision causing a significant change in benefits."^{n6.2} But the Court found that in cases where no tangible employment action occurs (traditionally "hostile environment" cases), the two terms are of "limited utility" and are only "helpful, perhaps, in making a rough demarcation between cases in which threats are carried out and those where they are not or are absent altogether."^{n6.3} The Court held that the issue of real concern is not the category of harassment, but rather whether an employer is vicariously liable for a supervisor's harassing conduct.^{n6.4} In the absence of a tangible employment action, the employer's vicarious liability under Title VII for a supervisor's harassing conduct will depend upon whether the employer acted reasonably to prevent and correct the conduct and whether the employee unreasonably failed to take advantage of the employer's preventive or corrective opportunities.^{n6.5}

A tangible employment action requires an official act of the enterprise or a company act. In most cases, a tangible employment action inflicts direct economic harm.^{n6.6} A "tangible employment action" occurs when a supervisor abuses his or her authority to act on the employer's behalf by threatening to fire a subordinate if he or she refuses to participate in sexual acts with the supervisor, and then actually fires the employee when she continues to resist the demands.^{n6.7} A "tangible employment action" also occurs when the supervisor threatens the employee with discharge and, to avoid the threatened action, the employee complies with the supervisor's demands.^{n6.8}

The California Supreme Court has not directly addressed this issue since Ellerth ^{n6.9} and Faragher ^{n6.10} were handed down. California courts have held that the FEHA imposes strict liability on employers for the harassment of an employee by an agent or supervisor.^{n6.11}

[a] "Quid Pro Quo" Harassment

[i] Definition

"Quid pro quo" harassment occurs when submission to sexual conduct is made a condition for receiving concrete employment benefits.ⁿ⁷ Such harassment also occurs when submission to or rejection of sexual conduct by an individual is used as the basis for employment decisions affecting the individual.ⁿ⁸

[ii] Proof

In Bundy v. Jackson, ⁿ⁹ the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit considered the appropriate allocation of proof in "quid pro quo" cases. In Bundy, the plaintiff claimed that she was denied promotion in retaliation for her refusal to submit to sexual advances.ⁿ¹⁰ The appellate court explained that the "disparate treatment" test in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, ⁿ¹¹ fails to precisely fit the sexual harassment situation, in which the alleged basis of discrimination is not the employee's gender per se, but the employee's refusal to submit to sexual advances that the employee suffered in large part because of his or her gender.ⁿ¹² The court therefore adjusted the McDonnell Douglas test to state that a prima facie case of illegal denial of promotion in retaliation for a plaintiff's refusal to submit to sexual advances may be established by a showing that (1) the plaintiff was a victim of a pattern or practice of sexual harassment attributable to his or her employer; and (2) the plaintiff applied for and was denied a promotion for which he or she was technically eligible, and for which he or she had a reasonable expectation. The court held that if a prima facie case is established, the employer must then bear the burden of showing, by clear and convincing evidence, that it had legitimate and nondiscriminatory reasons for denying the plaintiff's promotion. If the employer successfully rebuts the prima facie case, the plaintiff must have the opportunity to prove that the employer's purported reasons were pretextual.ⁿ¹³ For a detailed discussion relating to the order and allocation of proof under the "disparate treatment" theory of liability, see § 41.11.

The Bundy court explained that the most important difference between its formula and the McDonnell Douglas formula is that the former does not require the plaintiff to show that other employees who were no better qualified, but who were not similarly disadvantaged, were promoted at the same time the plaintiff was denied promotion. The court stated that it relieved the plaintiff of that requirement because it felt that the plaintiff's burden should be eased when he or she proves not only that he or she is a member of a disadvantaged group, but also that he or she has personally suffered illegal discrimination through the harassment itself.ⁿ¹⁴

The FEHC has held that retaliation for refusing to engage in sexual activities constitutes both unlawful sexual harassment and retaliatory discrimination for opposing unlawful employment practices.ⁿ¹⁵ Under the FEHA, an employee must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that a causal connection exists between the employee's resistance to sexual harassment and an adverse action taken against the employee by his or her employer.^{n15.1} The employee need not show that his or her resistance was the sole or even the principal reason for the adverse action. The FEHA is violated if the action was caused at least in part by a retaliatory motive.ⁿ¹⁶ Close proximity in time between an adverse action and an employee's resistance or opposition to sexual harassment is strong evidence of retaliatory motive.ⁿ¹⁷ Furthermore, a quid pro quo plaintiff can offer the testimony of other non-party employees who also claim to have been harassed by the employer as evidence of the employer's motive in discharging plaintiff.ⁿ¹⁸

The EEOC guidelines provide that if employment opportunities or benefits are granted because of an individual's submission to the employer's sexual advances or requests for sexual favors, the employer may be held liable for unlawful sex discrimination against other persons who were qualified for but denied that employment opportunity or benefit.ⁿ¹⁹

Thus, according to EEOC enforcement policy, if a female employee submits to unwelcome sexual advances in return for an employment benefit, another qualified female employee who was denied the benefit may establish that sex was generally made a condition for receiving the benefit, thereby stating a claim for implicit "quid pro quo" sexual harassment. If, however, a third-party female employee is unable to establish that sex was generally made a condition for the benefit, both male and female employees who were qualified for but were denied the benefit may challenge the favoritism based on the fact that they were injured as a result of the discrimination directed at the coerced female. On the other hand, a harassed employee who submits to the employer's advances and is rewarded with additional economic benefits is not precluded from recovering for quid pro quo harassment.ⁿ²⁰

The Ninth Circuit has stated in Candelore v. Clark County Sanitation Dist. ⁿ²¹ that, to establish a prima facie case of third party quid pro quo harassment, the objecting employee must identify (1) the employment opportunities or benefits actually extended to the less-qualified female coworker who responded to sexual overtures from work supervisors, and (2) the benefits that the objecting employee was entitled to but did not receive because of refusing a supervisor's sexual advances.ⁿ²² However, the concurring opinion in Candelore explained that the Candelore holding was not meant to be at odds with a decision from the Second Circuit, DeCintio v. Westchester County Medical Center,ⁿ²³ which held that a coworker's consensual romantic relationship with a supervisor is not sex discrimination under Title VII.ⁿ²⁴ The concurrence in Candelore noted that it had not reached that issue since the plaintiff had not established a prima facie case by identifying missed benefits because of the coemployee's romantic involvement with the supervisor.ⁿ²⁵

Furthermore, if favoritism based on the granting of sexual favors is widespread in the workplace, male and female employees who object to such conduct may also establish "hostile environment" sexual harassment, as discussed in [b], below, even if the employees who received benefits willingly bestowed sexual favors. However, the EEOC does not consider an isolated instance of favoritism based on a consensual romantic relationship to be a violation of Title VII, because co-employees are equally disadvantaged for reasons other than their gender.ⁿ²⁶

[b] "Hostile Work Environment" Harassment

[i] Definition

Historically, "hostile work environment" sexual harassment has been defined as unwelcome sexual conduct that has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual's work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment.ⁿ²⁷ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, relying on Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson,ⁿ²⁸ has held that a plaintiff may establish a case of such harassment by showing that: (1) he or she was subjected to sexual conduct;ⁿ²⁹ (2) the conduct was unwelcome; and (3) the conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the plaintiff's employment and create an abusive working environment.ⁿ³⁰ California courts construing the FEHA have adopted a similar test.ⁿ³¹

However, the Supreme Court has held that under Title VII the terms "quid pro quo" and "hostile environment" are primarily relevant to sexual harassment litigation "when there is a threshold question whether a plaintiff can prove discrimination" in the absence of a tangible employment action. But if there is no tangible employment decision, to be actionable under Title VII, the offending conduct--including unfulfilled threats--must be "severe or pervasive."^{31.1}

Under both Title VII and the FEHA, the conduct at issue need not be "sexual" in the sense of having anything to do with sexual advances. The conduct may be actionable if it creates a discriminatory and hostile environment based on gender.³² The EEOC also recognizes that conduct not involving sexual activity or language, but involving gender-based acts of physical aggression, intimidation, hostility, or unequal treatment, may also violate Title VII if the conduct is sufficiently severe or pervasive.³³

[ii] Proof

When evaluating a claim of sexual harassment based on an alleged hostile work environment, the court must determine two things:^{33.1}

- Whether the plaintiff has established that she or he was subjected to a hostile work environment; and
- Whether the employer is liable for the harassment that caused the environment.

Both present mixed questions of law and fact that the court reviews de novo.^{33.2} To establish that he or she was subjected to a hostile work environment, a plaintiff must prove the following:^{33.3}

- (1) Subjection to verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature;
- (2) The conduct was unwelcome; and^{33.4}
- (3) The conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of employment and create an abusive working environment.^{33.5}

There is no legal requirement that hostile acts be overtly sex- or gender-specific in content, whether marked by language, by sex or gender stereotypes, or by sexual overtures. Under the "differential effects" standard articulated by the Ninth Circuit, offensive conduct that is not facially sex-specific may violate Title VII if there is sufficient circumstantial evidence of qualitative and quantitative differences in the harassment suffered by female and male employees.^{33.6}

Sexually coarse and vulgar language in some circumstances may not create a hostile work environment when the language does not involve and is not aimed at plaintiff or other women in the workplace.^{33.7}

The United States Supreme Court has held that in a sexual harassment case, to establish constructive discharge in addition to sexual harassment, the plaintiff must make a further showing, i.e., that the abusive working environment became so intolerable that the resignation qualified as a fitting response. An employer may defend against the claim by showing both (1) that it installed a readily accessible and effective policy for reporting and resolving complaints of sexual harassment, and (2) the plaintiff unreasonably failed to avail herself or himself of that employer-provided preventive or remedial apparatus. The affirmative defense is not available, however, if the plaintiff quits in reasonable response to an employer-sanctioned adverse action officially changing the plaintiff's employment status or situation, such as a humiliating demotion, an extreme cut in pay, or a transfer to a position in which the plaintiff would face unbearable working conditions.^{33.8}

A woman may be the victim of sexual harassment if she is forced to work in an atmosphere of hostility or degradation of her gender. If an employer or supervisor engages in conduct which sufficiently offends, humiliates, distresses or intrudes on its victim, so as to disrupt her emotional tranquility in the workplace or affect her ability to perform her job as usual, or otherwise interferes with and undermines her personal sense of well-being, the employer or supervisor engages in harassment based on sex.^{n33.9} In order to state a cause of action for sexual harassment under the FEHA, a plaintiff need not be a direct victim in the sense the harassment was directed at her personally. An employee subjected to a hostile work environment is a victim of sexual harassment even though no offensive remarks or touching were directed to or perpetrated on that employee. One not personally subjected to such remarks or touching must establish that she personally witnessed the harassing conduct and it was in her immediate work environment.^{n33.10}

The critical issue in "hostile work environment" cases is often the severity or pervasiveness of unwelcome sexual conduct.ⁿ³⁴ Conduct is actionable if it is either sufficiently severe or if it is pervasive.^{n34.1} To be actionable, the conduct must be extreme, but there is no requirement that the employee endure sexual harassment until the employee's psychological well being is so spent that he or she requires psychiatric assistance.^{n34.2} For example, in Vinson, allegations of repeated demands for sexual favors, numerous instances of sexual intercourse, public fondling, and forcible rape were held to be plainly sufficient to state a claim for "hostile work environment" sexual harassment.ⁿ³⁵ Repeated acts of staring at a fellow worker may qualify as actionable sexual harassment.^{n35.1} Numerous demeaning comments about women in the workplace, along with other conduct, also may qualify as actionable harassment.^{n35.2}

On the other hand, a mere isolated epithet usually fails to support such a claim.ⁿ³⁶ An isolated incident of harassment by a co-worker will rarely, if ever, give rise to a reasonable fear that sexual harassment has become a permanent feature of the employment relationship. If the employer takes appropriate corrective action, it will not have ratified the conduct.^{n36.1} If a single incident can ever suffice to support a hostile work environment claim, it must be extremely severe.^{n36.2} However, it is possible that a single incident of harassment can support a claim of hostile work environment because the frequency of the discriminatory conduct is only one factor in the analysis.^{n36.3} An isolated incident can amount to a discriminatory change in the terms and conditions of employment when it is extremely serious.^{n36.4} Recognizing that most claims, however, involve conduct that falls somewhere between these two extremes, the Supreme Court explicitly adopted a "middle path" in Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. ⁿ³⁷

In Little v. Windermere Relocation, ^{n37.1} the Ninth Circuit held that rape is among the most severe forms of sexual harassment. A rape by a business associate while on the job irrevocably alters the conditions of the victim's work environment; and it imports a profoundly serious level of abuse into a situation that, by law, must remain free of discrimination based on sex. Thus, being raped is, at a minimum, an act of discrimination based on sex.^{n37.2}

In Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts, ^{n37.3} applying FEHA, the court of appeal found that liability for sexual harassment may not be imposed based on a single incident that does not involve egregious conduct akin to a physical assault or the threat of physical assault. Thus, the display of a piece of student art for 24 hours in a gallery as part of a student exhibit, depicting an employee in a sexual act, did not constitute severe or pervasive harassment because of sex as a matter of law.^{n37.4}

Whether the sexual conduct complained of is sufficiently severe and pervasive to create a hostile work environment must be evaluated by examining the totality of the circumstances.ⁿ³⁸ Thus, rather than viewing incidents of sexual conduct separately and in isolation from one another, the court should inquire into the overall composite effect of all the incidents on the working environment.ⁿ³⁹ Factors to be considered in evaluating the totality of the circumstances include:^{n39.1}

- The nature of the unwelcome sexual acts or words (with physical touching generally considered more offensive than mere words);
- The frequency of the offensive acts or encounters;

- The total number of days over which all the offensive conduct occurred;
- The context in which the sexually harassing conduct occurred.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The decision in Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts n39.2 is important because many sexual harassment cases derive from single incidents of alleged improper conduct. While a single incident of physical touching may constitute harassment, Herberg indicates that such touching must rise to the level of a physical assault or threat of physical assault. In the absence of such proof, sexual harassment is actionable only upon proof of a severe or pervasive pattern of unwelcome behavior. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

In Ellison v. Brady, n40 the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals explained that it is the harasser's conduct that must be severe or pervasive, not the alteration in the employment conditions.ⁿ⁴¹ Thus, "employees need not endure sexual harassment until their psychological well-being is seriously affected to the extent that they suffer anxiety and debilitation."^{n41.1} Title VII protection "comes into play long before the point where victims ... require psychiatric assistance."ⁿ⁴² The U.S. Supreme Court has likewise held that sexual harassment is not limited to cases in which the harasser's conduct causes tangible psychological injury.ⁿ⁴³

The Ninth Circuit in Ellison identified two considerations in determining whether sexual conduct is sufficiently severe and pervasive to violate Title VII. First, the requisite severity or seriousness varies inversely with pervasiveness or frequency. In other words, a single extremely severe act, such as an offensive touching, may be enough, but generally repeated incidents create a stronger claim of hostile environment.ⁿ⁴⁴ Second, courts should focus on the victim's perspective, because to do otherwise (i.e., to analyze conduct from the "reasonable person's" perspective) would run the risk of reinforcing the prevailing level of discrimination. For example, harassers may continue to harass merely because a particular discriminatory practice was common. In this regard, the Ninth Circuit is mindful that men and women often have different perspectives relating to sexual conduct.ⁿ⁴⁵ Thus, a female plaintiff states a prima facie case of hostile environment sexual harassment if she alleges conduct that a reasonable woman would consider sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of employment and create an abusive working environment.ⁿ⁴⁶

When violence or the threat of violence is added to behavior that would otherwise be considered only boorish or overbearing, a trier of fact could determine that the victim's conditions of employment have been drastically changed and she or he was in a hostile work environment.^{n46.1}

In one case, for example, the Ninth Circuit, applying the Ellison standard, rejected the employer's defense that the accused harasser abused both men and women and therefore his actions did not constitute sexual harassment toward the female plaintiff. The court suggested that the defendant's sexual epithets and offensive explicit references to women's bodies could form the basis for an action for sexual harassment by any of the female or male employees so affected.ⁿ⁴⁷

The EEOC has stated in a policy guideline that it will evaluate allegedly harassing conduct under a "reasonable person" standard; that is, no violation of Title VII will be found if the conduct would not substantially affect the work environment of a reasonable person. Appearances to the contrary, however, this standard does not conflict with Ellison's "reasonable victim" standard. The EEOC admonishes that its standard should not be applied in a vacuum, and thus it will consider the context in which alleged harassment occurred. Moreover, the EEOC expressly states that its "reasonable person" standard "should consider the victim's perspective and not stereotyped notions of acceptable behavior."ⁿ⁴⁸

After the plaintiff has shown that a reasonable person in the plaintiff's circumstances would find the workplace hostile, plaintiff must also show that he or she subjectively perceived the environment to be abusive.^{n48.1} Failure to seek mental health treatment is not necessarily an indication that the conduct was welcome, since the scope of Title VII is not limited to conduct that affects a victim's psychological well-being.^{n48.2} Furthermore, the fact that not all of the victim's interactions with the harassers were hostile does not mean none of them was.^{n48.3}

The EEOC will presume that the unwelcome, intentional touching of intimate body areas is sufficiently offensive to alter conditions of a working environment and constitute a Title VII violation. In such a situation, the employer has the burden of showing that unwelcome conduct was not sufficiently severe to create a hostile work environment.ⁿ⁴⁹

If alleged harassment consists of verbal (i.e., non-physical) conduct, the EEOC will ascertain the nature, frequency, context, and intended target of the remarks. Factors considered by the EEOC will include:

1. Whether the alleged harasser singled out the charging party;
2. Whether the charging party participated;
3. The relationship between the charging party and the alleged harasser; and
4. Whether the remarks were hostile and derogatory.

No one factor will be determinative; the EEOC will evaluate the totality of the circumstances. Furthermore, the EEOC believes that a female does not assume the risk of harassment by voluntarily entering a vulgar, abusive, anti-female environment; depending on the totality of the circumstances, such an atmosphere may violate Title VII.ⁿ⁵⁰

According to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in Ellison, the mere presence of an employee who has engaged in particularly severe or pervasive harassment can create a hostile working environment (even after the harassment has stopped). The court examined this issue under the reasonable woman standard discussed above, but concluded that the record before it was too scant to reach any determination.ⁿ⁵¹

In Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc.,^{n51.1} a Title VII case, the Ninth Circuit held that the plaintiff had raised evidence to create a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the alleged hostile work environment continued into the statute of limitations period. Although most of the harassing incidents underlying the claim occurred outside the limitations period, the plaintiff contended that the hostile work environment continued until the day that the plaintiff resigned. The court found that because the claim was premised on a series of closely related similar events within the same general time period and stemmed from the same source, the plaintiff had properly set forth a claim of continuing violation.^{n51.2} The court noted that the United States Supreme Court's recent holding that an analysis of whether workplace behavior is discriminatory and creates a hostile work environment requires careful consideration of social context. The existence of harassment may depend on a "constellation of surrounding circumstances, expectations, and relationships which are not fully captured by a simple recitation of the words used or the physical acts performed."^{n51.3} The Ninth Circuit emphasized that a single event that might otherwise appear innocuous in some circumstances may, in the context of a pattern of discriminatory harassment, take on a completely different character, causing a worker to feel demeaned, humiliated, or intimidated in the context of a barrage of harassing conduct. The plaintiff's evidence regarding persistent harassment, together with the evidence regarding the last confrontation with the supervisor (which occurred within the limitations period and constituted a discrete act of harassment tied to previous acts) precluded summary judgment.^{n51.4}

In Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital,ⁿ⁵² an FEHA case, a California court of appeal held that whether harassment is sufficiently pervasive is determined from the totality of the circumstances. The plaintiff must prove (1) that the defendant's conduct would have interfered with a reasonable employee's work performance and would have seriously affected the psychological well-being of a reasonable employee;ⁿ⁵³ and (2) that the plaintiff was actually offended.ⁿ⁵⁴ Factors that may be considered include (1) the nature of the unwelcome sexual conduct;ⁿ⁵⁵ (2) the frequency of offensive encounters; (3) the total number of days over which all of the offensive conduct occurs; and (4) the context in which the sexually-harassing conduct occurred. Acts of harassment that are sporadic or trivial do not violate the FEHA; rather, the plaintiff must show a concerted pattern of harassment of a repeated, routine, or a generalized nature.ⁿ⁵⁶ The Fisher court stated that a person who is not personally subjected to harassing behavior cannot establish that the work environment is permeated by sexual harassment.^{n56.1} Similarly, in Beyda v. City of Los Angeles,^{n56.2} the court agreed, concluding that a nexus must be established between the allegedly hostile environment and the plaintiff's experience in the workplace. However, the court did not interpret Fisher as limiting the admissibility of evidence of conduct towards other victims in all cases. Rather, this type of evidence is admissible if the plaintiff was a direct victim; further, knowledge of harassment of others may also be relevant.^{n56.3}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The Beyda decision attempts to provide "something for defendants" and "something for plaintiffs," but, in the end, greatly complicates the trials of harassment cases. For the benefit of defendants, the decision states that evidence of harassment of persons other than the plaintiff may not be offered to prove that the alleged harasser engaged in similar conduct against the plaintiff. Thus, "me too" evidence cannot be used to show a character "propensity." For the benefit of plaintiffs, the decision states that evidence of harassment of persons other than the plaintiff may be offered to prove the existence of a hostile working environment if the plaintiff witnessed or had knowledge of the conduct. Thus, "me too" can be used, even if the plaintiff was not physically present at the time of the alleged harassing behavior.

As if this distinction were not troublesome enough to draw in practice, the decision adds that evidence of the harassment of others is subject to the limitations of the hearsay rule. While the hearsay rule is clearly applicable, the opinion goes further and suggests that the best way to present evidence of the harassment of others is through testimony from actual victims of the challenged conduct or by witnesses to the conduct. In short, by flatly declaring the mere "awareness" of "me too" evidence to be relevant and by suggesting the means to present that evidence is through the "me too" victims and witnesses, Beyda literally sanctions the idea of a "trial within a trial within a trial." Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

The showing of a pattern of discrimination constituting hostile work environment sexual harassment may affect the running of the statute of limitations on a discrimination claim. For example, in one FEHA case, the court found that a woman police officer had pled facts sufficient to permit a jury to conclude that she had suffered sexual harassment in an eleven-year campaign of discrimination against her. In so holding, the court concluded that the statute of limitations might not bar the suit even though no overtly discriminatory acts had taken place within the two-year period immediately prior to the filing of the suit.ⁿ⁵⁷ The court invoked the continuing violation theory, finding that the long-standing abusive working environment provided a potential equitable exception to the one-year statute of limitations otherwise applicable.ⁿ⁵⁸ The court stated that the circumstances should be viewed as a whole rather than as solitary events.ⁿ⁵⁹ Thus, the court observed that certain acts which occurred within the limitations period but which contained no sexual content, such as refusing to assign the employee to light duty tasks despite her partial disability, might actually have been done to rid the department of female officers.ⁿ⁶⁰ In short, seemingly nondiscriminatory events, when viewed through the perspective of a pattern of discrimination, might have been used as a pretext to provide a cover of legitimacy to existing hostile environment harassment.ⁿ⁶¹

In cases brought under Title VII, if the employer's conduct is sufficiently severe and pervasive to be actionable, the employer may escape liability by proving an affirmative defense that it exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly any sexually harassing behavior, and that the plaintiff unreasonably failed to take advantage of the employer's preventive or corrective opportunities.^{n61.1}

In California, in a civil action alleging sexual harassment, sexual assault, or sexual battery, the introduction of opinion evidence, reputation evidence, and evidence of specific instances of plaintiff's sexual conduct by the defendant to prove the plaintiff's consent or the absence of injury to the plaintiff is prohibited, unless the injury alleged by the plaintiff is in the nature of loss of consortium.^{n61.2} There is an exception for the admission of evidence of the plaintiff's sexual conduct with the alleged perpetrator,n61.3 and the prohibition does not apply to impeachment evidence offered under Evid. Code § 783.n61.4 If the defendant offers evidence of the plaintiff's sexual conduct in any of these types of cases to attack the plaintiff's credibility, the defendant must follow a procedure that includes a noticed written motion,n61.5 the affidavit of counsel reciting an offer of proof,n61.6 and a foundational hearing to question the plaintiff regarding the offer of proof.n61.7 After the court applies Evid. Code § 352, weighing the prejudicial effect against the probative value of the evidence, it must make an order stating what evidence the defendant may introduce and the nature of the questions permitted.n61.8

In applying Evid. Code § 1106, the court must determine whether the evidence proved consent or absence of injury, was within the meaning of "sexual conduct," and involved a "perpetrator" in an action alleging a hostile work environment.n61.9 "Sexual conduct" for these purposes includes all active or passive behavior (whether statements or actions), that directly or through reasonable inference establishes a plaintiff's willingness to engage in sexual activity.n61.10 Also, for these purposes, "perpetrators" include not only the named defendants, but also the conduct of any other actor the plaintiff seeks to ascribe to the employing entity, regardless of whether it occurred in or outside the workplace.n61.11

[2] Unwelcomeness

Whether sexual conduct is actually unwelcome may also be an issue.n62 One court has defined "unwelcome" conduct as conduct that an employee did not solicit or incite, and that the employee regards as undesirable or offensive.n63 In a 1990 policy guideline, the EEOC explained that if "welcomeness" or witness credibility is at issue, a harassment claim will be strengthened if the charging party made a contemporaneous complaint or protest (i.e., while the harassment is ongoing or shortly after it has ceased). The EEOC added, however, that a complaint or protest is not a necessary element of a harassment claim, given that victims may fear repercussions from their complaints.n64

In one case, the Ninth Circuit rejected an employer's defense that the plaintiff, who allegedly was known for her "salty" and vulgar language, had welcomed the alleged harassment because there was no evidence that the abusive remarks actually were welcome. The court did note, however, that such a defense might be appropriate if the plaintiff's regular use of such language in effect invited coworkers to respond with similar language.n65

Sometimes, an individual will submit to sexual harassment out of fear that he or she will otherwise lose his or her job.n66 Vinson held that the "voluntariness" of such conduct, in the sense that the individual was not forced to participate against his or her will, is not a defense. The correct inquiry is whether an individual, by his or her conduct, indicated that the alleged sexual advances were unwelcome.n67 However, the EEOC guidelines provide that in determining whether alleged conduct constitutes sexual harassment, the EEOC will look at the record as a whole and at the totality of the circumstances, such as the nature of the sexual advances and the context in which the alleged incidents occurred.n68 Thus, although "voluntariness" in the sense of consent is not a defense, a plaintiff's sexually provocative speech or dress is relevant in determining whether he or she found particular sexual advances unwelcome.n69 According to the EEOC, however, occasional use of sexually explicit language does not necessarily negate a claim that sexual conduct was unwelcome. Furthermore, past conduct of the charging party offered to show "welcomeness" must relate to the alleged harasser.n70

The EEOC has also stated that if an employee first willingly participates in sexual conduct, but then ceases the conduct and claims that any continued conduct creates a "hostile work environment," the employee has the burden of showing that the further conduct is unwelcome and work-related. The employee must clearly notify the alleged harasser that the conduct is no longer welcome; failure to do so is evidence, although not dispositive, that the continued conduct is welcome or unrelated to work.n71

In FEHA sexual harassment cases, the Evidence Code and the Administrative Procedure Act (APA) severely limit the admissibility of evidence of specific instances of a complainant's sexual conduct with individuals other than the alleged perpetrator.ⁿ⁷² Thus, the FEHC has rejected the assumption that one can infer automatically from a female employee's voluntary sexual conduct with some persons a similar response to sexual conduct to which she is involuntarily subjected by others.ⁿ⁷³

A plaintiff may have a FEHA "hostile environment" sexual harassment claim even if he or she was not the object of the harassment, as long as the plaintiff establishes that the harassing conduct permeated his or her own direct work environment. Such a plaintiff must establish that he or she personally witnessed harassing conduct, and that it was in his or her immediate work environment.ⁿ⁷⁴ For example, in one case, the court of appeal held that it was not enough for the plaintiff, who was not the direct victim of sexual harassment, to allege that such harassment occurred in the hospital in which she worked; she was required to also allege exactly what occurred in her presence in her work environment, and to describe that work environment.ⁿ⁷⁵

The EEOC has observed that "quid pro quo" and "hostile environment" harassment often occur together. For example, tangible job conditions are affected when a hostile work environment results in constructive discharge. If constructive discharge is proven, the claim also becomes one of "quid pro quo" harassment on the theory that submission to the harassment was an implied term of employment and that the employee was forced to resign because of her refusal to submit. Similarly, a supervisor who makes sexual advances toward an employee may implicitly threaten to adversely affect the employee's job status if he or she does not comply. Thus, "hostile environment" harassment may acquire "quid pro quo" characteristics if the offending supervisor abuses his or her authority over employment decisions to force the victim to endure or participate in sexual conduct. Furthermore, there may be a retaliatory discharge if a harassed employee tells the harasser or the employer that he or she will no longer submit to the harassment, and is then fired for his or her protest.ⁿ⁷⁶ According to the FEHC, such retaliation also constitutes both sexual harassment and retaliatory discharge under the FEHA.ⁿ⁷⁷

For a discussion of constructive discharge in the equal employment opportunity context generally, see § 41.58[4]. For a detailed discussion relating to retaliation for refusing sexual advances, see [1][a], above.

[3] Soured Relationship Cases

In Fuller v. City of Oakland, Cal.,ⁿ⁷⁸ the plaintiff terminated a relationship with a fellow police officer. Thereafter, he harassed her for nearly a year. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the harasser's conduct created a reasonable fear in plaintiff that she would not escape the harassing conduct and that a reasonable woman in such circumstances would believe her working environment to have been altered. The court also held that the employer could not defend itself by asserting that, as a consequence of its internal investigation, the offending behavior had ceased. On the contrary, the employer had conducted a limited investigation which had rejected plaintiff's allegations. Thus, the alleged harasser appeared to have altered his behavior on his own, not due to employer compulsion.ⁿ⁷⁹

[4] Same Sex Harassment

California courts have interpreted the FEHA to approve the viability of same sex harassment claims.^{n79.1} In Mogilefsky v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁸⁰ the court found that the plaintiff had been the victim of both quid pro quo and hostile environment sexual harassment in the form of lewd comments, direct overtures of physical contact, and innuendo suggesting the need to submit to such overtures to retain his employment. In Matthews v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁸¹ the court cited to Mogilefsky without further analysis of the issue. In Valdez v. Clayton Industries, Inc.,^{n81.1} the court, citing Mogilefsky, found that the plaintiff had raised triable issues of fact regarding whether he had suffered actionable harassment in the form of sexual remarks which plaintiff thought were serious requests for sex, which were sometimes made in ways likely to humiliate plaintiff, and which were accompanied by degrading physical gestures. The court rejected the employer's argument that under Oncala v. Sundowner Offshore Services, Inc., discussed below, plaintiff's evidence would not support a claim for sexual harassment under Title VII. It found that the FEHA may go further than Title VII in offering protection against sexual harassment, and that in this case, regardless of how plaintiff would fare under Title VII, he had a tenable harassment claim under the FEHA.^{n81.2} In Sheffield v. Dept. of Social Services,^{n81.3} the court cited Mogilefsky in stating that same sex harassment is considered sexual harassment covered by Gov. Code § 12940 and in finding that a female employee alleged a hostile work environment caused by a female coworker and the employer's liability for its inaction sufficient to withstand the employer's summary judgment motion. One California court has interpreted the FEHA to prohibit the pursuit of a same sex harassment claim.ⁿ⁸²

In 1998, the United States Supreme Court confirmed the viability of same-sex harassment claims under Title VII, holding that workplace harassment can violate Title VII's prohibition against discrimination because of sex when the harasser and the harassed employee are of the same sex.ⁿ⁸³ The Court granted certiorari in *Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services, Inc.*ⁿ⁸⁴ to resolve conflicting opinions between the circuits courts as to the viability of this type of claim,^{n84.1} noting that the confusion had arisen primarily in the context of a hostile environment sexual harassment claims.^{n84.2} The Court found no justification for a categorical rule excluding same-sex harassment from the coverage of Title VII; Title VII's prohibition against discrimination based on sex extends to sexual harassment of any kind that satisfies the statutory requirements. The Court noted that although male-on-male sexual harassment in the workplace is clearly not the principal evil that Congress sought to avoid when Congress enacted Title VII, statutory prohibitions often go further than the principal evil to cover reasonably comparable evils.^{n84.3}

The critical issue in Title VII cases is whether members of one sex are exposed to disadvantageous employment terms or conditions to which members of the other sex are not exposed.^{n84.4} Thus, to support an inference of discrimination based on sex, harassing conduct need not be motivated by sexual desire and a plaintiff need not show that the same-sex harasser is homosexual. However, the plaintiff must always prove that the challenged conduct is not merely tinged with offensive sexual connotations, but actually constitutes discrimination because of sex. For example, a factfinder might reasonably find that a female victim was harassed in such sex-specific and derogatory terms by another woman as to show that the harasser is motivated by general hostility to women in the workplace. A same-sex harassment plaintiff may also offer direct comparative evidence about how the alleged harasser treated members of both sexes in a mixed-sex workplace.^{n84.5}

The protection of Title VII does not reach genuine but innocuous differences in the manner that men and women routinely interact with members of the opposite sex. Title VII bars behavior that is so objectively offensive as to alter the conditions of the victim's employment, but requires neither asexuality nor androgyny in the workplace.^{n84.6} Conduct that is not sufficiently severe or pervasive to create an objectively hostile or abusive work environment (that is, an environment that a reasonable person would find hostile or abusive) is beyond the purview of Title VII.^{n84.7} This principle is crucial, and suffices to ensure that courts and juries do not mistake ordinary socializing in the workplace, such as male-on-male horseplay or intersexual flirtation, for discriminatory conditions of employment.^{n84.8}

The objective severity of the alleged harassment should be judged from the perspective of a reasonable person in the plaintiff's position, in light of all surrounding circumstances. This inquiry in the same-sex harassment context, as in all harassment cases, requires careful consideration of the social context in which the particular conduct occurs and is experienced by the target. The real social impact of workplace behavior often depends on "a constellation of surrounding circumstances, expectations, and relationships" that are not fully captured by a simple recitation of the words used or physical acts performed. Common sense, as well as an appropriate sensitivity to social context, enables courts and juries to distinguish between simple teasing or roughhousing among members of the same sex from conduct that a reasonable person in the plaintiff's position would find severely hostile or abusive.^{n84.9}

In Rene v. MGM Grand Hotel, Inc.,^{n84.10} the Ninth Circuit, en banc, held that an employee who alleged that he was subjected to severe, pervasive, and unwelcome "physical conduct of a sexual nature" in the workplace stated a cause of action under Title VII for discrimination based on sex, even though he also alleged that the motivation for that discrimination was his sexual orientation. A plurality of the court would hold that an employee's sexual orientation is irrelevant for purposes of Title VII, whether the employee is male or female; and it neither provides nor precludes a cause of action for sexual harassment. That the harasser is, or may be, motivated by hostility based on sexual orientation is similarly irrelevant, neither providing nor precluding a cause of action. It is enough that the harasser engaged in severe or pervasive unwelcome physical conduct of a sexual nature.^{n84.11} The plurality took two lessons from the Supreme Court's opinion in Oncale: (1) Title VII forbids severe or pervasive same-sex offensive sexual touching, even when the perpetrator and the victim of an alleged sexual assault are of the same gender;^{n84.12} and (2) offensive sexual touching is actionable discrimination, even in a same-sex workforce.^{n84.13} Concurring judges would have held that the plaintiff had a claim for sexual harassment because he was a victim of gender stereotyping, i.e., he was harassed because he did not conform to the stereotype of how a man should act.^{n84.14}

[5] Sexual Favoritism

In Proksel v. Gattis, ⁿ⁸⁵ the court of appeals rejected a hostile environment claim by female employees who contended that a coworker's romantic involvement with their employer caused the employer to have unwarranted favoritism culminating in plaintiff's termination. The court noted that absent a showing of other conduct that was either discriminatory or harassing, the supervisor's romantic involvement with a paramour did not constitute sexual harassment or discrimination.

In Miller v. Dept. of Corrections, ^{n85.1} the California Supreme Court held that an isolated instance of favoritism on the part of a supervisor toward a female employee with whom the supervisor is conducting a consensual sexual affair ordinarily would not constitute sexual harassment of non-favored employees. However, when the sexual favoritism is sufficiently widespread, it may create an actionable hostile work environment in which the demeaning message is conveyed to female employees that they are viewed by management as "sexual playthings" or that the requirement for women to get ahead in the workplace is engaging in sexual conduct with their supervisors or the management. Applying this standard to the circumstances of the case, the Court concluded that the evidence proffered by plaintiffs, viewed in its entirety, established a prima facie case of sexual harassment under a hostile-work-environment theory. In that case, in which plaintiffs were female employees of the California Department of Corrections, plaintiffs presented evidence that a male warden engaged concurrently in sexual affairs with three subordinate employees. There was evidence that the male warden promised and granted unwarranted and unfair employment benefits to the three subordinate employees. One of the unfair employment benefits granted to one of the women with whom he had a sexual affair was the power to abuse other employees who complained concerning the affairs. Further, there was evidence that advancement for women at one of the prisons was based on sexual favors, not merit. The evidence suggested the male warden viewed female employees as sexual playthings, and his ensuing conduct conveyed this demeaning message in a manner that had an effect on the work force as a whole. There was also evidence that his sexual favoritism caused plaintiffs to be subjected to harassment at the hands of one of the women with whom he was having an affair, whose behavior he refused or failed to control even after it escalated to physical assault. The harassment included loss of work responsibilities, demeaning comments in the presence of other employees, loss of entitlement to a pay enhancement and to disability accommodation, and physical assault and false imprisonment.^{n85.2} The presence of mere office gossip is insufficient to establish the existence of widespread sexual favoritism. However, in Miller, the evidence of favoritism included admissions by the participants concerning the nature of the relationships, boasting by the favored women, eyewitness accounts of incidents of public fondling, repeated promotion despite lack of qualifications, and the male warden's admission he could not control one of the women with whom he was having an affair because of his sexual relationship with her.^{n85.3}

[6] Liability

[a] Employer Direct Liability

[i] Generally

Under both Title VII and the FEHA, employers are liable for the harassing acts of supervisors. Although the Supreme Court in Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson ⁿ⁸⁶ declined to issue a definitive rule on employer liability for the acts of its supervisors, it did note that the definition of "employer" in Title VII includes any "agent" of the employer.ⁿ⁸⁷ The Court therefore concluded that Congress wanted courts to consider agency principles for guidance.ⁿ⁸⁸ The Court also relied on EEOC guidelines on sex discrimination.ⁿ⁸⁹ Those guidelines, as well as the EEOC guidelines on national origin discrimination,ⁿ⁹⁰ provide that an employer is responsible for its own acts and those of its agents and supervisory employees with respect to harassment. The EEOC will examine the circumstances of the particular employment relationship and the job functions performed by the individual in determining whether an individual acts in either a supervisory or agency capacity.ⁿ⁹¹

Under the FEHA, the proscription against harassment expressly applies to any person who directly or indirectly acts as an employer's agent.ⁿ⁹² The proscription also expressly applies to an employee of an entity subject to regulation by Gov. Code § 12940(j); such an employee is personally liable for any harassment he or she perpetrates, regardless of whether the employer or covered entity knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.ⁿ⁹³

An employer is strictly liable under the FEHA for hostile environment sexual harassment by a supervisor.^{n93.1} However, the avoidable consequences doctrine applies to damage claims under the FEHA, and a plaintiff's recoverable damages do not include those damages the plaintiff could have avoided with reasonable effort and without undue risk, expense, or humiliation.^{n93.2}

Under FEHA, an employer may also be responsible for sexual harassment by nonemployees when the employer or its agents or supervisors knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.^{n93.3}

[ii] Federal Law

The EEOC guidelines provide that an employer is liable for the acts of its agents or supervisors regardless of whether the specific acts complained of were authorized or even forbidden by the employer, and regardless of whether the employer knew or should have known of their occurrence.ⁿ⁹⁴ In one sexual harassment case, however, a federal appellate court explained that the standard for determining employer liability depends on the type of harassment that occurs.ⁿ⁹⁵ Thus, when a supervisor requires quid pro quo sexual favors for job benefits, the employer is strictly liable because then the supervisor, by definition, acts as the employer. By contrast, when a supervisor's conduct interferes with an employee's work or creates a "hostile environment," there is no quid pro quo. In such cases, the supervisor does not act as the employer, but acts outside the scope of his or her authority. Employer liability exists, therefore, only if the employer knew or should have known of the harassment and failed to take prompt remedial action.ⁿ⁹⁶ However, according to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, the focus of the court's inquiry is on what management-level employees knew or should have known about the harasser employee's alleged conduct, not on whether the harassing employee acted within the scope of his employment.ⁿ⁹⁷

The EEOC has observed that most commonly an employer acquires actual knowledge of harassment through first-hand observation, by the victim's internal complaint to other supervisors or managers, or by a discrimination charge.ⁿ⁹⁸ Also, one case has held that the pervasiveness of harassment may give rise to an inference of knowledge or constructive knowledge.ⁿ⁹⁹ Thus, the EEOC will deem an employer to know of harassment that is openly practiced in the workplace or well-known among employees.ⁿ¹⁰⁰

If an employer is not put on notice of a supervisor's "hostile environment" harassment, the EEOC may impute employer liability if the supervisor was acting in an "agency capacity"; that is, within the scope of his or her employment.ⁿ¹⁰¹ An employer acts within the scope of his or her employment usually by exercising the powers actually vested in him or her; however, if an employer becomes aware of harassment by a supervisor and does nothing to stop it, the employer, by acquiescing, has brought the supervisor's actions within the scope of employment.ⁿ¹⁰² The EEOC may also impute employer liability if third parties, by virtue of the employer's conduct, reasonably believed that a supervisor was exercising authority that he or she possessed (i.e., "apparent authority").ⁿ¹⁰³ For example, the EEOC has observed that employees may reasonably believe that a supervisor's sexual harassment will be ignored, tolerated, or even condoned by the employer if there is no strong, widely disseminated, and consistently enforced policy against such harassment.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

Other theories the EEOC may use to impute liability to an employer include "agency by estoppel," whereby the employer intentionally or carelessly causes an employee to mistakenly believe the supervisor is acting for the employer, or knows of the misapprehension and fails to correct it; negligent or reckless supervision of the harassing supervisor (if the employer had actual or constructive knowledge of the harassment, but failed to remedy it); assignment of a non-delegable statutory duty (i.e., the Title VII duty to provide employees with a workplace free of sexual harassment) to an employee; or accomplishment of a tort through the existence of an agency relationship.ⁿ¹⁰⁵

An employer must, however, impose sufficient penalties to assure a harassment-free workplace. Liability will attach if no remedy is undertaken or if the remedy attempted is ineffective.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ The effectiveness of a remedy is judged by the twin goals of ending the current harassment and deterring future harassment by the same offender or by others.ⁿ¹⁰⁷ Thus, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that the employer still has an obligation to provide a remedy for harassment even when the harasser has stopped of his own accord.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ In Fuller v. City of Oakland, Cal.,ⁿ¹⁰⁹ during the employer's investigation of the plaintiff's allegations, the alleged harasser had ceased the behavior about which the plaintiff had complained. The employer argued that since the goal of any remedy is to stop harassment, it had no further obligation to provide a remedy. The Ninth Circuit disagreed: "The fact that harassment stops is only a test for measuring the efficacy of a remedy, not a way of excusing the obligation to remedy."ⁿ¹¹⁰ The court further noted that an employer cannot discharge its duty to remedy harassment solely by conducting an investigation.ⁿ¹¹¹ In other cases, the Ninth Circuit has held that a remedy is not reasonable if it requires a victim to work in a less desirable location. Furthermore, "a mere request to refrain from discriminatory conduct" is not sufficient; a remedy must involve some sort of discipline.ⁿ¹¹² For further discussion of the employer's duty to remedy hostile work environment harassment by coemployees, see [b] and [c], below.

[iii] California Law

Under the FEHA, an employer cannot be liable for harassing conduct by a nonsupervisory employee unless the employer (or its agent or a supervisor) knows or should know of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.ⁿ¹¹³ So long as the employer has no reason to know of the harassment, or takes immediate and appropriate corrective action when the harassment is or should be known, there is simply no "unlawful employment practice" that would subject the employer to liability under the FEHA.ⁿ¹¹⁴ The employee, however, will be liable for his or her harassing conduct, regardless of whether his or her employer knew or should have known of the conduct and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.ⁿ¹¹⁵

In cases in which the harasser is a supervisor, some lower courtsⁿ¹¹⁶ and now the California Supreme Court in dictumⁿ¹¹⁷ have indicated that strict liability follows, at least in some circumstances. However, the agent/supervisor must be acting within the scope of his or her agency/employment in order to impose liability on the employer.ⁿ¹¹⁸ Thus, for example, in one case, an employer was found not liable for the off-premises, off-duty sexual harassment of an employee by her supervisor when there was no sufficient nexus between the supervisor's conduct and his employment.ⁿ¹¹⁹ In another case, a court ruled that a supervisor's harassing conduct on the job was within the scope of his employment despite the fact that it violated an official company policy prohibiting sexual harassment.ⁿ¹²⁰

In Chapman v. Enos,^{n120.1} the California Court of Appeal considered the definition of supervisor in terms of a coworker with the ability to direct the work of the plaintiff. The trial court had modified the BAJI instruction to instruct the jury that for a person to be found to be a supervisor because he or she is responsible to direct the work of others, the direction must be more than merely routine or clerical. The direction must require the use of independent judgment, and the person giving the direction must be directly responsible for the performance of his or her department or unit and fully accountable and responsible for the performance and work product of the employees in the department or unit. The Court of Appeal concluded that while full accountability and responsibility are indicia of supervisory power, they are not required elements of the FEHA definition of supervisor.^{n120.2} In Chapman, there was evidence that a deputy district attorney was a supervisor within the meaning of the FEHA so that the county could be held liable for his behavior toward an investigator whose work he directed. Although both senior and chief investigators ultimately supervised the investigator, the deputy district attorney directed her day-to-day duties to conduct investigations and trial preparation, and outlined her role in meetings and trainings. Further, the chief investigator would obtain information from the deputy district attorney to evaluate the investigator. Additionally, the investigator cleared her time off with the deputy district attorney before having it approved by the chief investigator, and she believed the deputy district attorney was her supervisor or boss.^{n120.3} The court then found that the trial court's error in modifying the instruction was prejudicial, because the error centered on the key issue in the case. Without a finding that the deputy district attorney was a supervisor, the jury could not reach the issue of whether his actions constituted sexual harassment.^{n120.4}

Under FEHA, an employer may also be responsible for sexual harassment by nonemployees when the employer or its agents or supervisors knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.^{n120.5}

[b] Employer Vicarious Liability for Supervisor Conduct

In Meritor Sav. v. Vinson,ⁿ¹²¹ the Court agreed with the EEOC's amicus brief which had argued that in "quid pro quo" harassment cases, liability of a supervisor who makes personnel decisions in a discriminatory manner should be imputed to the employer. However, the Court went on to suggest that employers would not be automatically held liable in hostile environment cases.ⁿ¹²² Similarly, in *Nichols v. Frank*ⁿ¹²³ the Ninth Circuit held that (1) an employer is liable for "quid pro quo" harassment by its supervisor, and (2) absent notice, the employer is not liable under Title VII for hostile environment harassment.ⁿ¹²⁴

In *Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth*ⁿ¹²⁵ and Faragher v. City of Boca Raton,ⁿ¹²⁶ the Supreme Court provided detailed guidance on determining an employer's vicarious liability for acts of its supervisors in sexual harassment claims brought under Title VII. The Court held that in cases involving a tangible employment action taken against the victimized employee that is related to harassment or complaints of harassment, the employer is always vicariously liable.ⁿ¹²⁷ But in cases in which no tangible employment decision is taken, an employer may be vicariously liable for the harassing acts of its supervisors if the harassment is pervasive or severe.^{n127.1} The Court explained the origin of this liability derives from the Restatement (Second) of Agency (1957), § 219(2)(d), which states that an employer is liable for the torts of a servant if "the servant ... was aided in accomplishing the tort by the existence of the agency relation."ⁿ¹²⁸ However, the employer will not be vicariously liable for an actionable hostile environment if it can plead and prove a two-part affirmative defense: that it exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly any sexually harassing behavior,^{n128.1} and that the "employee unreasonably failed to take advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunities" the employer provided.ⁿ¹²⁹ Whether the employer has a stated antiharassment policy is relevant to the first part; an employee's failure to use a complaint procedure provided by the employer will normally suffice to satisfy the employer's burden under the second part.ⁿ¹³⁰ This vicarious liability rule focuses on whether the alleged harasser has immediate or successively higher authority over the victim, and not on whether the employer knew or should have known about the harassment.ⁿ¹³¹ This affirmative defense applies only in cases of vicarious liability, in which the harasser is the victim's supervisor. It is not available to the employer when the harasser is the victim's coworker and the victim alleges the employer's negligence, i.e. the employer knew or should have known of the harassment but did not take adequate steps to address it.ⁿ¹³²

The California Supreme Court recognized a similar defense under the FEHA in State Department of Health Services v. Superior Court (McGinnis).ⁿ¹³³ Although the court held that under Title VII the FEHA renders an employer strictly liable for sexual harassment committed by a supervisor,^{n133.1} the employer may reduce damages by raising and proving the defense of "avoidable consequences." Under that defense, a plaintiff victimized by sexual harassment may not recover damages at the point that he or she could have invoked the employer's policies and procedures against harassment and unreasonably failed to do so.

In earlier cases, courts had held that while an employer's liability under the FEHA for an act of sexual harassment committed by a supervisor or agent was broader than the liability created by the common law principle of respondeat superior, respondeat superior principles were relevant in determining liability when sexual harassment occurred away from the workplace and not during work hours.¹³⁴ However, as clarified in Health Services, an employer's FEHA liability for sexual harassment by a supervisor is not constrained by principles of agency law, unless the supervisor is not acting in the capacity of supervisor when the harassment occurs. Such cases will be rare, i.e., when the supervisor's acts of harassment result from a completely private relationship unconnected with the employment and not occurring at the workplace or during normal working hours.¹³⁵

Further, harassment resulting from a relationship that is not completely private is actionable. Thus, for example, a trial court erred in granting an employer summary adjudication of a sexual harassment claim under FEHA, because the harassment did not result from a completely private relationship unconnected with the employment. There was no personal dating relationship between plaintiff and her supervisor at the time of the most significant incidents, which occurred during excursions away from the office, which were connected with the employment and of benefit to the employer's enterprise. Although there was evidence the employer did not approve of the out-of-office excursions, the evidence was conflicting on the point, precluding summary adjudication, and even if the employer did not approve of the practice, it admittedly was aware of the practice, would have benefitted from the practice, and did nothing to stop it.¹³⁶

[c] Employer Liability for Nonsupervisor Conduct

Section 12940(h)(1) of the FEHA states that an employer may be liable for harassment by an employee other than an agent or supervisor if the employer knew or should have known of the conduct and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.¹³⁷

Federal authorities hold that an employer may also be liable in some instances for harassment by nonsupervisory employees. The EEOC guidelines on sex and national origin discrimination provide that with respect to conduct between fellow employees, an employer is responsible for harassment in the workplace when the employer (or its agents or supervisory employees) knows or should have known of the conduct, unless the employer can show that it took immediate and appropriate corrective action.¹³⁸

An employer is not liable for misconduct of which it was unaware. Thus, the employer is responsible only for acts of harassment committed after it has been put on notice.¹³⁹ Notice of sexually harassing conduct triggers the employer's duty to take prompt corrective action reasonably calculated to end the harassment.¹⁴⁰ For example, a temporary agency was not liable for sexual harassment because it acted reasonably with respect to an initial complaint of sexual harassment by a woman the agency placed with a client company. The woman did not complain to the agency about her alleged harassment by a co-worker at the client company for six months. After the agency investigated the complaint and contacted the woman to report the results of the investigation, the woman told the agency things had calmed down and made no further complaints to anyone. The agency was also told by the client company that the situation had been resolved.^{140.1}

The employer has a dual obligation: (1) to take temporary steps to deal with the situation while determining whether the complaint is justified; (2) to take permanent remedial steps upon completion of its investigation.¹⁴¹ The most significant immediate measure an employer can take in response to a complaint of sexual harassment is to launch a prompt investigation to determine whether the complaint is justified. The more egregious the alleged conduct and the more substantial the proof supporting the allegation, the greater must be the employer's effort to minimize further contact between the complainant and the alleged harasser pending the outcome of the investigation.

However, the employer is not required to separate the complainant and the alleged harasser pending the outcome of the investigation. Depending on the circumstances, which can include the employer's legitimate interest in avoiding disruption to its business, the employer may reasonably decide that the employees must continue working together. Nevertheless, the employer must try to eliminate contact between the two employees that is not strictly business-related. If it reasonably concludes that the two employees must continue to have regular business contact during the course of the investigation, the employer must take reasonable steps to expedite the investigation.ⁿ¹⁴²

With regard to permanent steps, an employer does not satisfy its remedial obligation by transferring the victim to a less desirable location.ⁿ¹⁴³ However, after investigation, if the employer decides to separate the complainant and the alleged harasser in the workplace, the employer may properly consider the relative ease of moving them as well as their respective importance to business operations. The employer has wide discretion in choosing how to minimize contact between the two employees, so long as the accuser is not moved to an objectively less desirable position. Whether the position to which the complainant is moved is less desirable is determined by objective factors that include, but are not limited to, the terms of employment. For example, moving the complainant to a position with the same pay and responsibilities, but with a longer commute or an inconvenient work schedule, would be an inappropriate response.ⁿ¹⁴⁴ Not all harassment warrants dismissal; remedies should be "assessed proportionately to the seriousness of the offense."ⁿ¹⁴⁵ Even when it finds harassment has taken place, the employer may satisfy its remedial obligation by actions far short of formal discipline. Counseling or admonishing the offender can constitute an adequate disciplinary response.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ If proof of harassment is weak and disputed, the employer need not take formal disciplinary action simply to prove that it is serious about stopping sexual harassment in the workplace. Admonishing the harasser and separating the complainant and the harasser may be sufficient.ⁿ¹⁴⁷

[d] Employer Liability for Nonemployee Conduct

Under the FEHA, an employer may be responsible for sexual harassment by nonemployees with respect to sexual harassment of employees, applicants, or persons providing services pursuant to a contract in the workplace, when the employer or its agents or supervisors knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action. In reviewing cases involving the acts of nonemployees, the extent of the employer's control and any other legal responsibility the employer may have with respect to the conduct of the nonemployees must be considered.^{n147.1} The 2003 amendment to the FEHA imposing liability on employers for sexual harassment by third-party nonemployees may be properly applied to the actions pending as of the effective date of the amendment, i.e., actions brought before January 1, 2004.^{n147.2}

According to the EEOC, an employer may also be liable under Title VII for the acts of nonemployees who harass employees in the workplace when the employer (or its agents or supervisory employees) knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate action.ⁿ¹⁴⁸ In reviewing cases of harassment by nonemployees, the EEOC will consider the extent of the employer's control, and any other legal responsibility that the employer may have with respect to the conduct of the nonemployee.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ However many federal courts, including the Ninth Circuit, have held that Title VII does not authorize courts to hold harassing supervisors individually liable.ⁿ¹⁵⁰

In Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁵¹ the Ninth Circuit found that an employee presented sufficient evidence to survive the employer's motion for summary judgment under Title VII by showing that the employer ratified her rape by a business client when it failed to take immediate and effective corrective action. Construing the facts in the light most favorable to the employee, the court found the employer's response to the rape equivocal at best. The employee had been informed that she should "do anything" to get the account. She was advised by a coworker not to report the incident to top management because it would damage her career. When she reported the rape to her supervisor, she was not effectively removed from the account; when she finally reported the incident to the president, she was demoted and terminated. Also, the court found no evidence the employer took steps to prevent contact between the employee and the man who had raped her, such as effectively removing the employee from the account or informing the client that it must replace its contact with the employer.

Consistent with the EEOC's interpretation of Title VII, the FEHA provides that an employer is liable for harassment by a third person who is not the employer's agent or supervisor if the employer, or its agent or supervisor, knows or should have known of the harassing conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.ⁿ¹⁵² A plaintiff may prove an employer's knowledge of the harassment and failure to take remedial action by evidence of the perpetrator's harassment of other employees introducing evidence of the perpetrator's harassment of other employee's and the employer's lack of response.ⁿ¹⁵³

[e] Individual Liability

In Carrisales v. Dept. of Corrections, ⁿ¹⁵⁴ the California Supreme Court decided that a nonsupervisory coworker may not be personally liable for harassment under the FEHA. Effective January 1, 2001, however, the legislature amended the FEHA to provide that an employee of an entity subject to proscription against harassment of employees because of sex or other specified reasons is personally liable for any prohibited harassment that is perpetrated by that employee, regardless of whether the employer or covered entity knew or should have known of the conduct and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.ⁿ¹⁵⁵ This amendment does not apply retroactively to impose liability for actions not subject to liability when performed, despite the Legislature's declaration that its provisions were declaratory of existing law.ⁿ¹⁵⁶ⁿ¹⁵⁷⁻¹⁶⁰

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The existence of Carrisales was not well known until the California Supreme Court granted review, but its impact is significant. Many nonsupervisory coworkers no longer will be proper parties in sexual harassment cases. The holding in Carrisales thus has obvious significance for the affected individuals themselves. (Practically speaking, however, liability rarely was imposed on such individuals; they did not present an attractive deep pocket.) Carrisales also is significant for the employing entities. First, the absence of the individual defendant in many cases will result in complete diversity of citizenship, increasing the possibility of removal to federal court. Second, one fewer defendant often means one fewer lawyer, because the employing entity in many cases provides and pays for the individual defendant's separate counsel. Reducing the number of defendants thus will benefit the employer for that reason as well.

Carrisales left open two important questions. One is whether harassing supervisors may be individually liable.ⁿ¹⁶¹ The other is whether individuals may be liable for retaliation. Reno v. Baird ⁿ¹⁶² earlier explained that individuals cannot be liable for discrimination; Carrisales now resolved that nonsupervisory individuals cannot be liable for harassment. Whether the use of the term "person" in Section 12940(h) contemplates individual liability for retaliation remains to be resolved. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Two California appellate divisions have ruled that individual supervisors may be individually liable for sexual harassment as "persons" under the FEHA if they participate personally in the harassment or aid or abet in the harassment by failing to investigate or remedy it.ⁿ¹⁶³ In reaching their decisions, the courts of appeal relied, in part, on the express language of the FEHA, which extends liability to "persons" for sexual harassment and for aiding and abetting acts proscribed by the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁶⁴ The decisions in Page v. Superior Court, ⁿ¹⁶⁵ and Matthews v. Superior Court, ⁿ¹⁶⁶ addressed only the liability of supervisors as "persons."

[7] Preventive and Corrective Actions Regarding Sexual Harassment

[a] Employer's Duty to Prevent

The EEOC guidelines on sex discrimination and the FEHA provide that an employer must take all steps necessary to prevent sexual harassment from occurring.ⁿ¹⁶⁷ The FEHA expressly makes the failure to take these requisite preventative steps an unlawful employment practice.ⁿ¹⁶⁸ However, no suit may be maintained for violation of this rule

if the plaintiffs have not actually suffered any employment discrimination or harassment.ⁿ¹⁶⁹

According to the EEOC, such preventative steps include affirmatively raising the subject, expressing strong disapproval, developing appropriate sanctions, informing employees of their right to raise and how to raise the issue of harassment under Title VII, and developing methods to sensitize all concerned.ⁿ¹⁷⁰ According to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, however, the mere existence of such a policy will not insulate an employer from liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the acts of one of its supervisors.ⁿ¹⁷¹ On the other hand, the EEOC has stated that it generally will find an employer liable for "hostile environment" sexual harassment by a supervisor if the employer fails to establish such a policy.ⁿ¹⁷² Any sexual harassment policy should be specific about the prohibited conduct and avoid being vague or unclear.ⁿ¹⁷³

In Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth,ⁿ¹⁷⁴ and *Faragher v. City of Boca Raton*ⁿ¹⁷⁵ the Supreme Court established that in Title VII sexual harassment cases in which no tangible employment action is taken, an employer may not be held liable if it can establish a two-part affirmative defense: that it exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly the harassing conduct, and that the employee unreasonably failed to utilize the employer's preventive and corrective procedures.ⁿ¹⁷⁶ The Court noted that making employer liability depend in part on the creation of such procedures effects Congress' intention to promote conciliation rather than litigation.ⁿ¹⁷⁷

[b] Employer's Duty to Effectively Respond to Complaints

It is also EEOC policy that an effective preventive program should include a procedure for resolving sexual harassment complaints.ⁿ¹⁷⁸ The FEHC has likewise construed the FEHA as requiring such a procedure.ⁿ¹⁷⁹ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held, however, that a Title VII plaintiff need not exhaust an employer's internal remedies before pursuing a civil action for sexual harassment.ⁿ¹⁸⁰

The EEOC has also declared that if an employer receives a complaint or otherwise learns of alleged sexual harassment, the employer should investigate promptly and thoroughly. The employer should take immediate and appropriate corrective action by doing whatever is necessary to end the harassment, make the victim whole by restoring lost employment benefits or opportunities, and prevent the misconduct from recurring. Disciplinary action against the harasser may be necessary. The employer should make follow-up inquiries to ensure that harassment has not resumed and that the victim has not suffered retaliation. If an employer asserts it has taken remedial action, the EEOC will investigate to determine whether the action was appropriate and effective. If the EEOC so finds, it normally will administratively close the case.ⁿ¹⁸¹

In *Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth*ⁿ¹⁸² and Faragher v. City of Boca Raton,ⁿ¹⁸³ the Supreme Court emphasized that an employer's complaint procedures play a critical role in the employer's defense to harassment complaints.ⁿ¹⁸⁴ In Faragher, the Court particularly noted the ways in which defendant City of Boca Raton's complaint procedure had been inadequate: It had entirely failed to disseminate its sexual harassment policy among the employees in plaintiff's work environment; its officials made no attempt to keep track of the conduct of plaintiff's supervisors; its complaint procedure provided no assurance that harassing supervisors could be bypassed.ⁿ¹⁸⁵

The Ninth Circuit has adopted a similar standard requiring employers who learn of sexual harassment by their employees to take remedial action that is reasonably calculated to end the harassment by imposing sufficient penalties to assure a workplace free from sexual harassment.ⁿ¹⁸⁶ The reasonableness of the remedy depends on its ability to stop harassment by the person who engaged in it and persuade potential harassers to refrain from unlawful conduct.ⁿ¹⁸⁷ If the employer undertakes no remedy, or the remedy does not end the current harassment and deter future harassment, the employer is liable for both past and future harassment.ⁿ¹⁸⁸

In Intlekofer v. Turnage,ⁿ¹⁸⁹ the Ninth Circuit held that the employer had not met that standard when it failed to take more severe disciplinary measures once it learned that the harassing conduct had not stopped. The employer had instituted certain measures designed to stop the harassment, including counseling and separation of the employees. The employer had also addressed the issue with the harassing employee after the incidents were reported, but had never made good on its threat of further disciplining the employee if he did not cease the harassment. The court found that under the Ellison standard, the remedies must be not only reasonably calculated to end the harassment, but also disciplinary in nature.ⁿ¹⁹⁰ Further, more severe disciplinary measures must be taken if the preceding measures have not put a stop to the harassment.ⁿ¹⁹¹ Intlekofer did not state that specific remedial options were required, but rather emphasized that the remedy must be appropriate to the circumstances of the case.ⁿ¹⁹² The court indicated that in the first instance, even an oral rebuke might be sufficient, but emphasized that whenever the measures first taken are found inadequate to prevent further harassment, progressive discipline must be applied until the harassment is stopped.ⁿ¹⁹³ Whether or not the employer labels its actions as "discipline" is not determinative of their adequacy as a remedy.ⁿ¹⁹⁴

In a later case, the Ninth Circuit, applying the Intlekofer standard, found that the employer's remediation of the harassment was not sufficient. The court noted that the employer was slow to react to the plaintiff's claims of harassment and that it did not seriously investigate them nor strongly reprimand the accused harasser until after the plaintiff had filed her administrative claim. In addition, the employer made the plaintiff change her shift to avoid the harassment, rather than changing the accused harasser's shift or firing him.ⁿ¹⁹⁵

In Fuller v. City of Oakland, Cal.,ⁿ¹⁹⁶ the employer failed to reprimand or discipline the alleged harasser, after conducting an investigation that the court found to be flawed. The employer argued that it met its remedial obligation because the harasser, on his own, ceased the harassment. The court rejected the employer's argument, explaining that the fact that the harasser stopped of his own accord did not discharge the employer's obligation to provide a remedy that met the twin goals of stopping the harassment and of deterring the harasser and others in the workplace from engaging in harassment.ⁿ¹⁹⁷ The court found that the employer took no remedial action whatsoever and thus could not shield itself from liability because, fortuitously, the harasser chose to stop the harassment.ⁿ¹⁹⁸

In Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁹⁹ the court found that the employer's action in response to an employee's complaints of harassment by a coworker was inadequate and the employer failed to either remedy the harassment or discipline those responsible. The employee complained to the human resources director, who told the employee to inform the general manager if the offensive conduct recurred. The human resources director also conducted a handful of spot checks in the two weeks after the complaint; this neither remedied the harassment nor deterred future harassment. The employer made no effort to investigate the complaint, did not discuss the allegations with the perpetrators, did not demand that the unwelcome conduct cease, and did not threaten more serious discipline if it continued. The court held that by conditioning its response on the employee's reports of further harassment, the employer placed virtually all of its remedial burden on the victimized employee. The court further found that while the employer's antiharassment policy and company-wide training program were sufficient to show it exercised reasonable care to prevent sexual harassment generally, it did not exercise reasonable care to promptly correct the sexually harassing behavior directed at this employee and therefore could not assert the affirmative defense.ⁿ²⁰⁰

Under the FEHA, the employer is liable for the harassment of an employee, applicant, or person providing services pursuant to a contract by an employee, other than an agent or supervisor, if the employer knew or should have known of the conduct and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.^{n200.1} Once an employer is informed of the sexual harassment, the employer must take adequate remedial measures. The measures need to include immediate corrective action that is reasonably calculated to end the current harassment and deter future harassment. The employer's obligation to take prompt corrective action requires that temporary steps be taken to deal with the situation while the employer determines whether the complaint is justified, and that permanent remedial steps be implemented by the employer to prevent future harassment once the investigation is completed. An employer has wide discretion in choosing how to minimize contact between the two employees, so long as it acts to stop the harassment.^{n200.2}

An employer will not be liable for harassing behavior that takes place outside of work over which it has not control.^{n200.3} When harassment is by a nonsupervisory employee, an employer's liability is predicated not on the conduct itself, but on the employer's response once it learns of the conduct.n200.4

The most significant immediate measure an employer can take in response to a sexual harassment complaint is to launch a prompt investigation to determine whether the complaint is justified.n200.5 However, initiating an investigation cannot be the only step taken. An employer is required to take remedial action designed to stop the harassment, even when a complaint is uncorroborated or the coworker denies the harassment.n200.6

The FEHA also expressly requires employers to take steps to prevent sexual harassment from occurring,n201 and requires employers to provide specified information to employees regarding the illegality of sexual harassment.n202 For discussion of these requirements, see § 41.140[1][g].

[c] Employee's Obligation to Utilize Employer's Preventive and Corrective Opportunities

In Title VII sexual harassment cases in which no tangible employment action is taken against the employee, the employer may raise an affirmative defense to liability or damages by proving that it exercised reasonable care to prevent and promptly correct the harassing behavior and that the plaintiff employee unreasonably failed to take advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer or to avoid harm otherwise.n203 Thus, the Supreme Court has established harassed employees' obligation to utilize complaint procedures. However, it appears that the complaint procedure must be effective in order to trigger this obligation. For example, in Faragher, the court noted fatal weaknesses in the employer's complaint procedure and denied the employer the opportunity to relitigate based on the newly formulated defense.n203.1 The California Supreme Court recognized a similar defense under the FEHA.n204

[d] Employer's Duty to Train

By January 1, 2006, an employern204.1 having 50 or more employees must provide at least two hours of classroom or other effective interactive training and education regarding sexual harassment to all supervisory employees employed as of July 1, 2005, and to all new supervisory employees within six months of their assumption of a supervisory position. An employer who has provided this training and education to a supervisory employee after January 1, 2003, is not required to provide training and education by the January 1, 2006, deadline. After January 1, 2006, each covered employer must provide sexual harassment training and education to each supervisory employee once every two years.n204.2 This required training and education is intended to establish a minimum threshold and should not discourage or relieve an employer from providing for longer, more frequent, or more elaborate training and education regarding workplace harassment or other forms of unlawful discrimination in order to meet its obligations to take all reasonable steps necessary to prevent and correct harassment and discrimination.n204.3

The training and education must include information and practical guidance regarding the federal and state statutory provisions concerning the prohibition against and the prevention and correction of sexual harassment and the remedies available to victims of sexual harassment in employment. The training and education must also include practical examples aimed at instructing supervisors in the prevention of harassment, discrimination, and retaliation. The training and education must be presented by trainers or educators with knowledge and expertise in the prevention of harassment, discrimination, and retaliation.n204.4

If an employer violates the requirements of this section, the Fair Employment and Housing Commission will issue an order requiring the employer to comply with these requirements.n204.5

Notwithstanding Government Code § 12940(j) and (k), a claim that the training and education required by Government Code § 12950.1 did not reach a particular individual or individuals will not in and of itself result in the liability of an employer to any present or former employee or applicant in any action alleging sexual harassment. Conversely, an employer's compliance with Government Code § 12950.1 does not insulate the employer from liability for sexual harassment of any current or former employee or applicant.n204.6

The Fair Employment and Housing Commission has issued regulations on sexual harassment training and education, effective August 17, 2007, interpreting Gov. Code § 12950.1.^{n204.7} The regulations contain definitions,^{n204.8} and regulate training, including the following:

- Frequency of training.^{n204.9}
- Documentation of training.^{n204.10}
- Training at businesses created after January 1, 2006.^{n204.11}
- Training for new supervisors.^{n204.12}
- Duration of training.^{n204.13}

The regulations also define who may be trainers,^{n204.14} proscribe the content of training^{n204.15} and remedies for an employer's failure to comply,^{n204.16} and provide for good faith compliance prior to the effective date of the regulations.^{n204.17}

[8] Remedies

[a] Generally

The remedies available for sexual harassment are fairly comprehensive under both the FEHA and Title VII. California law differs in several respects, including the provision for administrative adjudication of complaints under the FEHA, the ability of courts to award unlimited compensatory and punitive damages, and the individual liability of supervisors for their harassing conduct. For a complete discussion of relief available under the FEHA, see § 43.01[8]; for a complete discussion of relief available under Title VII, see § 43.10[9].

[b] Employer's Liability for Punitive Damages

Although an employer is strictly liable under the FEHA for harassing conduct by supervisory employees and may be liable for harassing conduct by other employees as discussed in [6][c], above, an employer is not subject to punitive damages for such conduct unless the requisites of Civil Code Section 3294(b) are met.ⁿ²⁰⁵ Under Civil Code Section 3294(b), an employer is not liable for punitive damages based on an employee's conduct unless the employer (1) had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with conscious disregard for the rights or safety of others; (2) authorized or ratified the employee's wrongful conduct; or (3) was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice. For a corporate employer, punitive damages may not be imposed unless the advance knowledge and conscious disregard, the authorization or ratification, or the act of oppression, fraud, or malice was committed by an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation.ⁿ²⁰⁶ Thus, in a case involving sexual harassment of an employee by her supervisor, the court upheld a refusal to impose punitive damages on the corporate employer when the jury found that the employer had not ratified the harassing supervisor's conduct and the evidence was insufficient as a matter of law to establish that the supervisor himself was a managing agent of the employer.ⁿ²⁰⁷

In a case involving racial harassment by coworkers, an employer was held liable for punitive damages because it had violated its independent obligation under the FEHA not to discriminate.ⁿ²⁰⁸ The employer violated that obligation by firing the employee after he had complained to management about the harassment and other discriminatory conduct, and sought the help of the employer's industrial relations department and a highly placed corporate manager. According to the court, the evidence thus "more than supported a finding that [the employer] participated in the discriminatory conduct."ⁿ²⁰⁹

For discussion of the general standard for awarding punitive damages under the FEHA, see Chapter 43, Part A. For further discussion of the circumstances under which an employer may be liable for punitive damages based on the conduct of its employees, see Chapter 30.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Gender & Sex Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Gender & Sex Discrimination Coverage & Definitions General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Harassment Sexual Harassment General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Harassment Sexual Harassment Burdens of Proof General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Harassment Sexual Harassment Quid Pro Quo

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-17, p. 12; DFEH v. Madera County (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 19; DFEH v. State University-Hayward (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-18, p. 14; see also Gov. Code § 12940(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7287.6(b), 7291.1(f)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(C).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 64-67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.1(f)(1) (FEHC regulation construing FEHA). The EEOC has stated that a "reasonable person" standard should be applied to the basic determination of whether challenged conduct is of a sexual nature. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114.

(n5)Footnote 4.1. Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 .

(n6)Footnote 4.2. See Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1099, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425, 430-431 .

(n7)Footnote 5. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 77-79, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 ; see Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 160-161, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 ; Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 603, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 ; Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1416, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 ; but see Hart v. National Mortgage & Land Co. (1967) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1420, 235 Cal. Rptr. 68 ; see also [4], below.

(n8)Footnote 6. See Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 875 (Title VII) ; Hicks v. Gates Rubber Co. (10th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 1406, 1413 (Title VII) ; Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 161, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA) ; Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 142, 149, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 ; Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA; relying on Hicks); see also Burlington Industries, Inc., v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 (quid pro quo cases are based on fulfilled threats to retaliate for denial of sexual liberties, as distinct from bothersome attentions or sexual remarks sufficiently severe or pervasive to create a hostile environment).

(n9)Footnote 6.1. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; see also Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 .

(n10)Footnote 6.2. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 652-653 (traditionally known as "quid pro quo").

(n11)Footnote 6.3. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 646-647. See also Swenson v. Potter (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 1184, 1192 (label attached to particular claim has relevance to employer's liability for employee's discriminatory conduct).

(n12)Footnote 6.4. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 641.

(n13)Footnote 6.5. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 655; see also, Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662, 689. For further discussion, see [6][b], below and § 41.92A.

(n14)Footnote 6.6. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 762, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633. see Hardage v. CBS Broadcasting, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 427 F.3d 1177, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 23551, *13 (no tangible employment action where plaintiff never experienced any decrease in compensation, hours, title, duties or benefits; plaintiff could show no triable issue of constructive discharge, where alleged sexual harassment ceased well in advance of plaintiff's resignation, employer proffered legitimate, non-retaliatory reasons for adverse performance memoranda addressed to both plaintiff and coworker, plaintiff was insubordinate and failed to meet sales goals in his last few months, and supervisor's allegedly snide remarks were insufficient as tangible employment action).

(n15)Footnote 6.7. Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1167, citing Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 753-754, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633.

(n16)Footnote 6.8. Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1167-1176 (although plaintiff properly alleged tangible employment action, in response to employer's and supervisor's motions for summary judgment, she failed to present sufficient evidence to raise genuine issue of material fact as to whether supervisor implicitly threatened to discharge her or conditioned her continued employment on her submission to his sexual demands); see also Suders v. Easton (3d Cir. 2003) 325 F.3d 432, 458-459; Jin v. Metro. Life Ins. Co. (2d Cir. 2002) 310 F.3d 84, 93.

(n17)Footnote 6.9. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633.

(n18)Footnote 6.10. Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662.

(n19)Footnote 6.11. Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 416, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457; Fiol v. Doellstedt (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1318, 1328, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308. (But note, in June 1998, the California Supreme Court denied review and depublished Lai v. Prudential Insurance Co. of America, a court of appeal decision holding an employer strictly liable for sexual harassment by a supervisor regardless of whether the conduct was pleaded as quid pro quo or hostile environment harassment.).

(n20)Footnote 7. Burlington Industries, Inc., v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 647; Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 161, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA; hostile environment); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA); accord, 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination). See Nichols v. Frank (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 503, where the court recognized both an objective and a subjective (plaintiff's) point of view as to events and demand for sexual favors as the legal standard for proof of quid pro quo sexual harassment; Heyne v. Caruso (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1475, where the court held that evidence of the defendant's behavior toward others of the same sex as plaintiff could be introduced to prove his intentional discrimination and that his defense to sexual harassment was pretextual.

(n21)Footnote 8. Burlington Industries, Inc., v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 647 ; 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a); see Steele v. Offshore Shipbuilding, Inc. (11th Cir. 1989) 867 F.2d 1311, 1315 (citing 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a)).

(n22)Footnote 9. Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934 .

(n23)Footnote 10. See Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934, 948 .

(n24)Footnote 11. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green (1973) 411 U.S. 792, 93 S. Ct. 1817, 36 L. Ed. 2d 668 (Title VII) .

(n25)Footnote 12. Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934, 951 .

(n26)Footnote 13. See Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934, 953 ; see EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114 (finding that employer's asserted reasons for adverse action are pretextual will usually establish "quid pro quo" harassment and evidence of retaliatory termination; finding violation of 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a) prohibiting discrimination because employee filed a complaint is also appropriate). For a general discussion relating to discriminatory retaliation, see pt. G (§§ 41.130-41.132).

(n27)Footnote 14. See Bundy v. Jackson (D.C. Cir. 1981) 641 F.2d 934, 953 .

(n28)Footnote 15. DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 16; see Gov. Code § 12940(h); see also pt. G, (§§ 41.130-41.132).

(n29)Footnote 15.1. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of quid pro quo sexual harassment under FEHA, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2520 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction defining "supervisor" for use in a quid pro quo sexual harassment case under FEHA, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2525(Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim of quid pro quo sexual harassment, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2505 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms, see § 61.06.

(n30)Footnote 16. DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 16.

(n31)Footnote 17. DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 17.

(n32)Footnote 18. See Heyne v. Caruso (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1475, 1477 (plaintiff claimed to have been fired the day after refusing owner's sexual proposition).

(n33)Footnote 19. 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(g).

(n34)Footnote 20. See Karibian v. Columbia University (2nd Cir. 1994) 14 F.3d 773 .

(n35)Footnote 21. Candelore v. Clark County Sanitation Dist. (9th Cir. 1992) 975 F.2d 588 .

(n36)Footnote 22. See Candelore v. Clark County Sanitation Dist. (9th Cir. 1992) 975 F.2d 588, 590 .

(n37)Footnote 23. DeCintio v. Westchester County Medical Center (2d Cir. 1986) 807 F.2d 304 .

(n38)Footnote 24. See Candelore v. Clark County Sanitation Dist. (9th Cir. 1992) 975 F.2d 588, 591-592 .

(n39)Footnote 25. See Candelore v. Clark County Sanitation Dist. (9th Cir. 1992) 975 F.2d 588, 591-592 .

(n40)Footnote 26. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3113. See Proksel v. Gattis (1996) 41 Cal.

App. 4th 1626, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 322, where the court held that favoritism based on the paramour status of the person favored, while unfair, is not based on the sex of the complaining plaintiff and so is not remedies under sexual harassment.

(n41)Footnote 27. 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination); see Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 (Title VII; quoting 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(a)); Steele v. Offshore Shipbuilding, Inc. (11th Cir. 1989) 867 F.2d 1311, 1315 (Title VII; same); Hicks v. Gates Rubber Co. (10th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 1406, 1413 (Title VII; same); Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 142, 149, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (FEHA); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA; same). See Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 161, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA; sex-based hostile or abusive environmental claims arise when workplace is permeated with discriminatory intimidation, ridicule, and insult that is sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter conditions of victim's employment).

(n42)Footnote 28. Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 64-68, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49.

(n43)Footnote 29. See Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 875 n.5 (Title VII; love letter making several references to sex constitutes verbal conduct of sexual nature).

(n44)Footnote 30. Porter v. Cal. Dept. of Corrections (9th Cir. 2005) 419 F.3d 885, 892 (Title VII); E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1514-1515; see Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 875-876 (Title VII); Jordan v. Clark (9th Cir. 1988) 847 F.2d 1368, 1373.

(n45)Footnote 31. See Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 608, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842; see also DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 6 (preponderance of all evidence must demonstrate that (1) unwelcome sexual conduct or other hostile or unwelcome conduct linked to sex has occurred, (2) conduct led to deprivation of employment benefit or benefits, and (3) employer can be liable for conduct); DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 12 (same); DFEH v. Madera County (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 19 (same); DFEH v. State University-Hayward (1988) FEHC Dec. No. 88-18, p. 14; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(f)(3) (FEHC regulation; "discrimination-free workplace" (i.e., workplace free of harassment) is employment benefit). The Fisher test includes two more elements: membership in a protected group and respondeat superior. The membership requirement seems superfluous since sex discrimination is a distinction based on gender, and males as well as females (and therefore all people) are members of the protected group. See Newport News Shipbldg. & Dry Dock v. EEOC (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 682, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 (Title VII); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7290.7(a) (FEHC regulation); see also discussion in § 41.36[2][a][i]. For a discussion relating to employer liability for the harassing conduct of its supervisory and nonsupervisory employees (respondeat superior), see § 41.81[6].

(n46)Footnote 31.1. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633.

(n47)Footnote 32. See Steiner v. Showboat Operating Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 25 F.3d 1459, 1462; Birschtein v. New United Motor Manufacturing, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1001, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347; Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 347-348, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292; see also Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(C).

(n48)Footnote 33. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3276.

(n49)Footnote 33.1. Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 910, as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 882; Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 161-162, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA); see Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 787-789, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662; Nichols v. Azteca Rest. Enters., Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 871-75.

(n50)Footnote 33.2. Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 910 , as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 882 ; see Nichols v. Azteca Rest. Enters., Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 871, 875 .

(n51)Footnote 33.3. Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 910 , as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 882 ; Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1527 .; Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003)109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 162, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA) .

For the standard jury instructions on the essential factual elements of hostile work environment sexual harassment under FEHA, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2521 (employer or entity defendant); CACI 2522 (individual defendant) (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction defining "hostile work environment," see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2524 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict forms for claims of hostile work environment harassment, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2506(employer or entity defendant); CACI VF- 2507 (individual defendant). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n52)Footnote 33.4. See [2], below.

(n53)Footnote 33.5. Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003)109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 162, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA) , quoting Harris v. Forklift Systems (1993) Inc., 510 U.S. 17, 21-22 (not severe or pervasive enough to create objectively hostile or abusive work environment, which reasonable person would find hostile or abusive, is beyond Title VII's purview if victim does not subjectively perceive environment to be abusive, conduct has not actually altered conditions of victim's employment). See also Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 788, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 2284, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662, 677 (conduct must be extreme to amount to change in terms and conditions of employment).

(n54)Footnote 33.6. EEOC v. Nat'l Educ. Assn. (9th Cir. 2005) 420 F.3d 840, 844-847 (numerous episodes of male supervisor shouting in loud and hostile manner at female employees, with little or no provocation, with hostile physical accompaniment, which shouting was frequent, profane, and often public and intimidated female employees, satisfied differential effects standard, where supervisor's treatment of women differed sufficiently in quality and quantity from his treatment of men to support claim of sex-based discrimination).

(n55)Footnote 33.7. Lyle v. Warner Bros. TV Productions (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 264, 42 Cal. Rptr. 3d 2, 132 P.3d 211, 2006 Cal. LEXIS 4719, *19-*66 (based on totality of undisputed circumstances, particularly fact that television show production was creative workplace focused on generating scripts for adult-oriented comedy show featuring sexual themes, no reasonable trier of fact could have concluded that sexually coarse and vulgar language constituted harassment directed at plaintiff because of her sex within meaning of FEHA; to extent triable issues of fact existed as to whether offensive comments were made about women other than plaintiff because of their sex, no reasonable trier of fact could have concluded comments were severe enough or sufficiently pervasive to create work environment hostile or abusive to plaintiff in violation of FEHA).

(n56)Footnote 33.8. Pennsylvania State Police v. Suders (2004) 124 S. Ct. 2342, 2351-2357, 159 L. Ed. 2d 204 .

(n57)Footnote 33.9. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 608, 622, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n58)Footnote 33.10. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 611, 622, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n59)Footnote 34. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49

(Title VII); Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 (but no opinion whether a single unfulfilled threat constitutes discrimination); Kortan v. California Youth Authority (9th Cir. 2000) 217 F.3d 1104, 1110-1111 (conduct was concentrated on one occasion in wake of dispute about nurse's failure to follow instructions; court concluded no triable issue existed about whether conduct was frequent, severe or abusive enough to interfere unreasonably with plaintiff's employment); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 607, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA). The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has declared that it will review de novo a district court's determination that conduct is not severe or pervasive enough to constitute an abusive environment. However, it will reverse the district court's factual findings only if it finds that they were "clearly erroneous." Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 876 (Title VII); Jordan v. Clark (9th Cir. 1988) 847 F.2d 1368, 1375 & n.7 (Title VII).

(n60)Footnote 34.1. Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49; Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 911, as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958. See Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 162, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA; harassment need not be severe and pervasive; either severe or pervasive will suffice).

(n61)Footnote 34.2. Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 162, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA); Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 878 (Title VII).

(n62)Footnote 35. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 60, 67, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49; Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 911, as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 882; (Title VII; plaintiff tendered sufficient evidence to preclude summary judgment on hostile work environment claim because three separate rapes by corporate client at business meeting with business client were "severe" since, under circumstances, it would have made reasonable woman feel her work environment had been altered, and employer's subsequent actions in not removing her from account and in taking adverse employment action by reducing her pay reinforced rather than remedied harassment).

(n63)Footnote 35.1. Birschtein v. New United Motor Manufacturing, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1001-1002, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347.

(n64)Footnote 35.2. See Dominguez-Curry v. Nevada Trans. Dept. (9th Cir. 2005) 424 F.3d 1027, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 19764, *10-*19 (evidence that supervisor made numerous demeaning comments about women in workplace, exhibited hostility toward women who took maternity leave, and told sexually explicit jokes in office was more than sufficient to create genuine issue of material fact as to whether supervisor's conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to create hostile work environment; district court erroneously disregarded evidence of discriminatory comments supervisor directed to other women).

(n65)Footnote 36. See Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 876, 878 (Title VII).

(n66)Footnote 36.1. Brooks v. City of San Mateo (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 917, 924; cf. Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 911, as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 882; (Title VII; even assuming arguendo three incidents of rape on same evening constituted single incident, employer not only did not remedy, but arguably reinforced harassment by taking adverse employment action against plaintiff).

(n67)Footnote 36.2. Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 142, 150-151, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (FEHA); Brooks v. City of San Mateo (9th Cir. 2000) 229 F.3d 917, 924 (Title VII).

(n68)Footnote 36.3. Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 911, as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 882; (Title VII); see Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 23, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 (noting that no single factor is required).

(n69)Footnote 36.4. Clark County Sch. Dist. v. Breeden (2001) 532 U.S. 268, 121 S. Ct. 1508, 1510, 149 L. Ed. 2d 509 ; Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 911 , as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 882 .

(n70)Footnote 37. Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 21, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 .

(n71)Footnote 37.1. Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 912 , as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 882 ; (Title VII).

(n72)Footnote 37.2. See Brock v. United States (9th Cir. 1995) 64 F.3d 1421, 1423 (9th Cir. 1995) ("Just as every murder is also a battery, every rape committed in the employment setting is also discrimination based on the employee's sex.").

(n73)Footnote 37.3. Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 142, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 .

(n74)Footnote 37.4. Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 142, 150-154, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 .

(n75)Footnote 38. See Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 23, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 ; Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 872 (Title VII) ; Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 876, 878 (Title VII); Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003)109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 162 (FEHA); Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 142, 149-150, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1(FEHA) ; Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 609-610, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA) .

(n76)Footnote 39. King v. Hillen (Fed. Cir. 1994) 21 F.3d 1572, 1580-1581 ; see Davis v. Team Electric Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 520 F.3d 1080, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 6476, *32-*37 (female electrician's allegations of sexually harassing conduct were sufficient to overcome summary judgment on prima facie case, where conduct occurred repeatedly over course of her employment and reasonable woman could have had similar reaction to plaintiff's); Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1109 (alleged occurrence of harassment must be evaluated in light of preceding circumstances and nature of relationship between employee and supervisor; otherwise innocuous event may, in context of pattern of discriminatory harassment, take on different character). See, e.g., Mokler v. County of Orange (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 121, 141-146, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 568 (FEHA; sexual harassment that occurred on three occasions over five-week period and involved no physical threats fell short of establishing pattern of continuous, pervasive harassment necessary to show hostile working environment, where acts demonstrated rude, inappropriate, and offensive behavior, but were not sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter conditions of employment and create abusive working environment); Jones v. Dept. of Corrections (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1376-1379, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 200 (FEHA; based on totality of circumstances, corrections officer failed to present triable issue of material fact from which it reasonably could be inferred she suffered harassment, where absence of nexus between alleged harassment and plaintiff's gender negated claim, and where plaintiff failed to produce evidence that conditions she complained of were sufficiently severe or pervasive to constitute harassment). To view Court of Appeal briefs related to the Jones case that are available on Lexis.com, go to 2006 CA App. Ct. Briefs 48281 .

(n77)Footnote 39.1. Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003)109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 162, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA) ; Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 142, 149-150, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (FEHA) ; Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 609-610, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (FEHA) .

(n78)Footnote 39.2. Herberg v. California Institute of the Arts (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 142, 149-150, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (FEHA) .

(n79)Footnote 40. Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872 .

(n80)Footnote 41. Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 877-878 (Title VII).

(n81)Footnote 41.1. Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003)109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 162, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA) .

(n82)Footnote 42. Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 878 ; see Andrews v. City of Philadelphia (3d Cir. 1990) 895 F.2d 1469, 1485 (offensive conduct need not in each instance detrimentally affect employee to constitute impermissible discrimination).

(n83)Footnote 43. Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295, 302-303 .

(n84)Footnote 44. Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 878 (Title VII); accord, EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, pp. 3273-3275.

(n85)Footnote 45. Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 878-879 (Title VII); Nichols v. Frank (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 503, 511-512 (objective standard considers standpoint of reasonable person with accuser's defining traits, including race, sex, age, disability, and sexual orientation).

(n86)Footnote 46. Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 879 (Title VII); see Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 872-873 (in action by male plaintiff, reasonable man standard used); Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1527 (whether the workplace is objectively hostile must be determined from the perspective of a reasonable person with the same fundamental characteristics as the plaintiff).

(n87)Footnote 46.1. Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003)109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 162, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 ; see Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 608, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n88)Footnote 47. Steiner v. Showboat Operating Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 25 F.3d 1459, 1463-1464 .

(n89)Footnote 48. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3274 (emphasis added; environment replete with sexual slurs, "girlie" picture displays, and other offensive conduct can constitute hostile work environment even if many people deem it to be harmless or insignificant).

(n90)Footnote 48.1. Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 21-22, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 ; Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 873 (plaintiff's complaints to human resources director and general manager and assistant manager about frequent, degrading verbal abuse supported conclusion that conduct was unwelcome and that plaintiff held subjective belief he was being harassed).

(n91)Footnote 48.2. Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 873 .

(n92)Footnote 48.3. Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 873 .

(n93)Footnote 49. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3275.

(n94)Footnote 50. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3275.

(n95)Footnote 51. See Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 883 .

(n96)Footnote 51.1. Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104 .

(n97)Footnote 51.2. Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1107-1109 . For further discussion of the continuing violations theory, see § 42.62[3][d].

(n98)Footnote 51.3. Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1109 , quoting Oncale v.

Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc., 523 U.S. 75, 81-82, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 (1998) .

(n99)Footnote 51.4. Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1109 (alleged occurrence of harassment must be evaluated in light of preceding circumstances and nature of relationship between employee and supervisor); for discussion of statute of limitations issues in Draper, see § 60.07[1][b][v].

(n100)Footnote 52. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n101)Footnote 53. Accord, DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 8 (sex-linked conduct deprives its victims of discrimination-free workplace when conduct creates intimidating, oppressive, hostile, or offensive work environment, or otherwise interferes with victim's emotional well-being or ability to work); DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, pp. 14-15 (same); DFEH v. Madera County (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 20 (same). Fisher defines a "reasonable employee" as one of the same sex as the plaintiff. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 609-610 n.7, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n102)Footnote 54. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 609-610, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n103)Footnote 55. The Fisher court opined that physical touching is generally more offensive than unwelcome verbal abuse. See Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 610, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n104)Footnote 56. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 610, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 ; see DFEH v. Rosenberg (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-09, p. 7 (evidence of repeated and continuous sexual comments and jokes about complainant in complainant's and others' presence, telling complainant to bend over so men could look up her dress, false, crude stories about complainant's sex life, and calling complainant "trashy" in front of customer established ongoing pattern of unwelcome sexual conduct); DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 12 (pattern of unwelcome sexual comments, gestures and touching and, in one case, sexual advances and an assault, constitutes kind of hostile sex-linked conduct that may form basis for FEHA sexual harassment violation).

(n105)Footnote 56.1. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 613, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n106)Footnote 56.2. Beyda v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 511, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 .

(n107)Footnote 56.3. Beyda v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 511, 521, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 (no evidence was excluded as to acts that occurred in plaintiff's presence and her offer of proof did not show that plaintiff knew of them during employment); see Kovatch v. California Cas. Management Co. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1256, 1271, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217 (in constructive discharge/sexual orientation discrimination case, incidents of offensive behavior not shown to be in plaintiff's presence, or learned of by plaintiff before termination, were disregarded in assessing adverse nature of plaintiff's working conditions; but evidence could be used to show anti-gay animus).

(n108)Footnote 57. Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 348-351, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 .

(n109)Footnote 58. Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 348-351, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 ; see Gov. Code § 12965(b).

(n110)Footnote 59. Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 348-351, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 .

(n111)Footnote 60. Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 348-351, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 .

(n112)Footnote 61. Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 348-351, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 .

(n113)Footnote 61.1. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d

633, 655 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662, 689 . For further discussion of employer's affirmative defense, see [6][b], below, and § 41.92A.

(n114)Footnote 61.2. Evid. Code § 1160(a).

(n115)Footnote 61.3. Evid. Code § 1160(b).

(n116)Footnote 61.4. Evid. Code § 1160(d).

(n117)Footnote 61.5. Evid. Code § 783(a).

(n118)Footnote 61.6. Evid. Code § 783(b).

(n119)Footnote 61.7. Evid. Code § 783(c).

(n120)Footnote 61.8. Evid. Code § 783(d).

(n121)Footnote 61.9. Rieger v. Arnold (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 451, 460-468, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295 (there was adequate admissible evidence of plaintiff's conversations with defendant office manager regarding sexual matters and their sexual relationships to prove plaintiff did not find her work environment hostile; inadmissible evidence did not give false impression on issue, nor was tenor of inadmissible evidence more egregious than evidence properly before jury, and it was not reasonably probable plaintiff would have had more favorable result in its absence).

(n122)Footnote 61.10. Rieger v. Arnold (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 451, 461-462, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295 .

(n123)Footnote 61.11. Rieger v. Arnold (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 451, 462-465, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295 .

(n124)Footnote 62. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114.

(n125)Footnote 63. Henson v. City of Dundee (11th Cir. 1982) 682 F.2d 897, 903 .

(n126)Footnote 64. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3270.

(n127)Footnote 65. Steiner v. Showboat Operating Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 25 F.3d 1459, 1464 n.5 .

(n128)Footnote 66. See, e.g., Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 60-61, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 .

(n129)Footnote 67. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 68, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114.

(n130)Footnote 68. 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(b).

(n131)Footnote 69. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 69, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114.

(n132)Footnote 70. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, pp. 3271-3272.

(n133)Footnote 71. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3272.

(n134)Footnote 72. See Evid. Code § 1105; Gov. Code § 11513(c); see also ch. 42, pt. B.

(n135)Footnote 73. DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 14 (sharing sexual jokes with other female employees).

(n136)Footnote 74. See Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 610-611, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n137)Footnote 75. See Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 610-611, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 .

(n138)Footnote 76. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3268.

(n139)Footnote 77. See DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, pp. 15-16 (transfer to less desirable and remunerative shift in retaliation for resistance to sexual demands).

(n140)Footnote 78. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522 .

(n141)Footnote 79. See Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1529 .

(n142)Footnote 79.1. See, e.g., Singleton v. United States Gypsum Co. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1547, 1556-1564, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597 (trial court erred in granting summary judgment for employer on employee's same sex harassment hostile work environment action under FEHA, where employee showed facts to support his claim he was sexually harassed through unwelcome sexual comments by coworkers, he reported harassment to his supervisors, and no action was taken to correct and eliminate harassment); Hope v. California Youth Authority (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 577, 587-596, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 (substantial evidence supported jury's determinations that cook at youth incarceration facility was subjected to harassment because of his sexual orientation; harassment was sufficiently severe or pervasive because evidence supported finding that harassment would have interfered with reasonable employee's work performance and seriously affected psychological well-being of reasonable employee, and cook himself believed work environment was hostile and offensive; cook's superiors either knew or should have known about harassment and its cause; and employer did not take immediate and corrective action to stop harassment).

(n143)Footnote 80. Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1416, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 .

(n144)Footnote 81. Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 603, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 .

(n145)Footnote 81.1. Valdez v. Clayton Industries, Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1162, 1171-1172, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 15 .

(n146)Footnote 81.2. Valdez v. Clayton Industries, Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1162, 1172-1173, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 15 (also finding that although sexual jokes and remarks were common in workplace, reasonable jury could conclude that supervisor's conduct was unwelcome because it targeted plaintiff, who repeatedly complained about it to supervisor and supervisor's supervisor, and plaintiff's adult novelty gifts to supervisor after conduct began and plaintiff unsuccessfully complained were intended solely to halt supervisor's conduct).

(n147)Footnote 81.3. Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 161, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 .

(n148)Footnote 82. Hart v. National Mort. & Land Co. (1967) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1420, 235 Cal. Rptr. 68 ; rejected in Mogilefsky v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1409, 1415-1416, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 , see Valdez v. Clayton Industries, Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1162, 1171-1172, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 15 .

(n149)Footnote 83. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 118 S. Ct. 998, 1001-1002, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 ; see Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. E.E.O.C. (1983) 462 U.S. 669, 682, 103 S. Ct. 2622, 77 L. Ed. 2d 89 (no conclusive presumption that employer will not discriminate against members of own race).

(n150)Footnote 84. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (5th Cir. 1996) 83 F.3d 118 .

(n151)Footnote 84.1. See Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 118 S. Ct. 998, 1001, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 .

(n152)Footnote 84.2. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 79-80, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 (courts have limited difficulty in same-sex cases when employee claims to have been passed over for job or promotion); see Johnson v. Transportation Agency, Santa Clara County (1987) 480 U.S. 616, 624-626, 107 S. Ct. 1442, 94 L. Ed. 2d 615 (Court did not consider fact that supervisor was same sex as plaintiff significant in case claiming sexual bias in promotions).

But see Kelly v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1999) 198 F.3d 779, 784-785 (employer cannot be held liable for same-sex harassment in form of hostile environment prior to time the federal right was established; but federal right to be free from quid pro quo sexual harassment was clear without need for specific holding).

(n153)Footnote 84.3. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 79-80, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 ; see Meritor Sav. Bank, FSB v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 64, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 (Title VII language indicates congressional intent to strike at entire spectrum of disparate treatment of men and women in employment); see also Harris v. Forklift Sys., Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 21, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 (Title VII violated when workplace is permeated with discriminatory intimidation, ridicule, and insult sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter conditions of victim's employment and create abusive working environment).

(n154)Footnote 84.4. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 80, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 (quoting Harris v. Forklift Sys., Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 25, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295).

(n155)Footnote 84.5. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 79, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 .

(n156)Footnote 84.6. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 79, 118 S. Ct. 998, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 .

(n157)Footnote 84.7. Harris v. Forklift Sys., Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 21, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 .

(n158)Footnote 84.8. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 81, 118 S. Ct. 998, 1003, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 .

(n159)Footnote 84.9. Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Servs., Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 75, 81, 118 S. Ct. 998, 1003, 140 L. Ed. 2d 201 .

(n160)Footnote 84.10. Rene v. MGM Grand Hotel (9th Cir. 2002) 305 F.3d 1061 (en banc).

(n161)Footnote 84.11. Rene v. MGM Grand Hotel (9th Cir. 2002) 305 F.3d 1061, 1065-1067 (en banc).

(n162)Footnote 84.12. Rene v. MGM Grand Hotel (9th Cir. 2002) 305 F.3d 1061, 1067 (en banc).

(n163)Footnote 84.13. Rene v. MGM Grand Hotel (9th Cir. 2002) 305 F.3d 1061, 1067 (en banc).

(n164)Footnote 84.14. Rene v. MGM Grand Hotel (9th Cir. 2002) 305 F.3d 1061, 1068 .

(n165)Footnote 85. Proksel v. Gattis (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1626, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 322 .

(n166)Footnote 85.1. Miller v. Department of Corr. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 446, 460-466, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 115 P.3d 77 .

(n167)Footnote 85.2. Miller v. Department of Corr. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 446, 466-468, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 115 P.3d 77 .

(n168)Footnote 85.3. Miller v. Department of Corr. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 446, 471, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797, 115 P.3d 77.

(n169)Footnote 86. Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 72, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49

(n170)Footnote 87. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b).

(n171)Footnote 88. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 72, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; see also Miller v. Bank of America (9th Cir. 1979) 600 F.2d 211, 213 (doctrine of respondeat superior applicable); 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(c) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination; employers liable for sexual harassment by its agents and supervisors).

(n172)Footnote 89. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 71, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.1-1604.11.

(n173)Footnote 90. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1606.1-1606.8; see also discussion in § 41.82[2].

(n174)Footnote 91. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.11(c) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination), 1606.8(c)(EEOC guideline on national origin discrimination).

(n175)Footnote 92. See Gov. Code § 12940(j); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(2) (harassment by employer's agents or supervisors unlawful). See Chapman v. Enos (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 920, 928, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852 (under FEHA, employer is strictly liable for harassing actions of its supervisors and agents).

(n176)Footnote 93. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3).

(n177)Footnote 93.1. State Dept. of Health Services v. Superior Court (McGinnis) (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1039-1042, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556.

(n178)Footnote 93.2. State Dept. of Health Services v. Superior Court (McGinnis) (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1042-1048, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556 For discussion of recoverable compensatory damages under the FEHA, see § 43.01[8][3].

(n179)Footnote 93.3. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1).

(n180)Footnote 94. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.11(c) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination), 1606.8(c)(EEOC guideline on national origin discrimination); Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 72, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49.

(n181)Footnote 95. See Steele v. Offshore Shipbuilding, Inc. (11th Cir. 1989) 867 F.2d 1311, 1316 ; see also Nichols v. Frank (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 503, 508-509 ; see also discussion in [1]. above.

(n182)Footnote 96. See Swenson v. Potter (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 1184, 1191-1192 (Title VII liability is direct, not derivative; employer is responsible for its own actions or omissions, not for co-worker's harassing conduct); Steele v. Offshore Shipbuilding, Inc. (11th Cir. 1989) 867 F.2d 1311, 1316 ; see also discussion in [1], above. Accord, E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1515-1516 (employers are liable for failing to prevent or remedy hostile work environment when management-level employees knew or reasonably should have known of harassing conduct); see also EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3279 (employer is liable when it knew, or on reasonably diligent inquiry should have known, of harassment; relying on Yates v. Avco Corp. (6th Cir. 1987) 819 F.2d 630, 636). The EEOC has stated that if the employer takes immediate and appropriate remedial action to correct harassment and prevent its recurrence, and the EEOC determines that no further action is warranted, normally it will administratively close the case. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3279.

(n183)Footnote 97. Nichols v. Frank (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 503, 508 .

(n184)Footnote 98. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3279; see Henson v. City of Dundee (11th Cir. 1982) 682 F.2d 897, 905 .

(n185)Footnote 99. Henson v. City of Dundee (11th Cir. 1982) 682 F.2d 897, 905 .

(n186)Footnote 100. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3279.

(n187)Footnote 101. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, pp. 3279-3280 (relying on Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 219(1)).

(n188)Footnote 102. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3280.

(n189)Footnote 103. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3280 (relying on Restatement (Second) of Agency, §§ 7, 8, 219(2)(d)). See Trent v. Valley Elec. Ass'n Inc. (9th Cir. 1994) 41 F.3d 524 , where the employer was held liable for the sexually-harassing comments made by a trainer invited into the company to conduct safety instruction which the plaintiff was required to attend. See Steiner v. Showboat Operating Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 25 F.3d 1459 , where the employer was held an employer's failure to control a harassing supervisor, including sexual innuendos.

(n190)Footnote 104. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3280; see discussion in [1], above.

(n191)Footnote 105. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3281-3282 (relying on Restatement (Second) of Agency, §§ 8B, 214, 219, 492).

(n192)Footnote 106. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1528-1529 .

(n193)Footnote 107. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1528 .

(n194)Footnote 108. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1529 .

(n195)Footnote 109. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522 .

(n196)Footnote 110. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1528 (emphasis in original).

(n197)Footnote 111. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1529 .

(n198)Footnote 112. See Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882 (employer failed to chastise, reprimand, discipline, or warn a harassing coworker, but merely asked him to leave plaintiff alone); accord, EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3282 (disciplinary action, ranging from reprimand to discharge, may be necessary).

(n199)Footnote 113. See Carrisales v. Department of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1132, 1136, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083 ; Gov. Code § 12040(h)(1).

(n200)Footnote 114. Carrisales v. Department of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1132, 1136, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083.

(n201)Footnote 115. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3).

(n202)Footnote 116. See Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 417, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 .

(n203)Footnote 117. Carrisales v. Department of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1132, 1136, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083.

(n204)Footnote 118. Capitol City Foods, Inc. v. Superior Court (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1047-1050, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418 .

(n205)Footnote 119. Capitol City Foods, Inc. v. Superior Court (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1047-1050, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418 . See also Farmers Ins. Group v. County of Santa Clara (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 992, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478, 906 P.2d 440 (harassing employee was acting for personal purposes outside the scope of his employment); John R. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 438 .

(n206)Footnote 120. See Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 417, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 . Note that a court has a duty to be impartial and cannot be biased against a plaintiff bringing harassment charges, Catchpole v. Brannon (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 237 .

(n207)Footnote 120.1. Chapman v. Enos (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 920, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852 .

(n208)Footnote 120.2. Chapman v. Enos (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 920, 929-930, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852 .

(n209)Footnote 120.3. Chapman v. Enos (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 920, 930, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852 .

(n210)Footnote 120.4. Chapman v. Enos (2004) 116 Cal. App. 4th 920, 931-932, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 852 .

(n211)Footnote 120.5. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1).

(n212)Footnote 121. Meritor Sav. Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 ; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.1-1604.11.

(n213)Footnote 122. See Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson (1986) 477 U.S. 57, 70-72, 106 S. Ct. 2399, 91 L. Ed. 2d 49 .

(n214)Footnote 123. Nichols v. Frank (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 503 .

(n215)Footnote 124. See Nichols v. Frank (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 503, 508-514 . This "knew or should have known" rule applies to sexual harassment by coworkers but not to harassment by a supervisor. Burrell v. Star Nursery, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 951, 955-956 . For further discussion of nonsupervisor harassment, see [c], below.

(n216)Footnote 125. Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 2270, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 .

(n217)Footnote 126. Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 2292-2293, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 .

(n218)Footnote 127. Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 2270, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; for further discussion of "tangible employment action" see [1], above. See also Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1166-1167 (under Faragher/ Ellerth, when employee has been subjected to unlawful "tangible employment action" by supervisor, employer may be held liable without more); Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 877 (termination of employment did not preclude employer from raising affirmative defense because termination was unrelated to harassment or complaint of harassment, and before termination, employee was not demoted or reassigned and did not receive cut in pay or benefits).

(n219)Footnote 127.1. See, e.g., Davis v. Team Electric Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 520 F.3d 1080, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 6476, *37 (reasonable jury could find employer liable for hostile environment described by female electrician because its supervisors played significant role in creating environment, making it clear to electrician on more than one occasion that women were not welcome at work site).

(n220)Footnote 128. Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 2270, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 2292-2293, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 .

(n221)Footnote 128.1. See, e.g., Davis v. Team Electric Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 520 F.3d 1080, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 6476, *38-*39 (employer failed to show it took steps to prevent sexual harassment in its workplace, where there was no evidence of anti-harassment policy or that it had other preventive measures in place, such as sexual harassment training; employer's only apparent attempt to correct harassment came after female employee contacted state agency following several months of alleged mistreatment by her supervisors, and there was no evidence any supervisors were disciplined for their conduct or even told to behave differently, and employer did not show female employee failed to take advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunities it offered).

(n222)Footnote 129. Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 2270, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 2292-2293, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 . See also Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1167 (when employee has been unlawfully harassed, but there has been no "tangible employment action," employer may avoid liability by proving defense of "reasonable care"). For further discussion of employer's affirmative defense, see § 41.92A.

(n223)Footnote 130. Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 765, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; but see Craig v. M&O Agencies, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 496 F.3d 1047, 1053-1058 (employer's affirmative defense to allegations of sexual harassment by supervisor failed, where employee's minor delay in reporting harassing behavior did not meet stringent standard of Faragher); Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 876 n.10 (although employee's complaints of harassment did not follow formal reporting requirements of employer's antiharassment policy, they were sufficient to place company on notice of harassment).

(n224)Footnote 131. Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 805 ; Burrell v. Star Nursery, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 951, 955-956 .

(n225)Footnote 132. Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 802-804 .

(n226)Footnote 133. State Department of Health Services v. Superior Court (McGinnis) (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556 .

(n227)Footnote 133.1. See also Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1403, 1421, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501 (in order for employer to avoid strict liability for supervisor's actions under FEHA, sexual harassment must result from completely private relationship unconnected with employment; otherwise, employer is strictly liable for supervisor's actions regardless of whether supervisor was acting as employer's agent).

(n228)Footnote 134. Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1038, 1048-1049, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 122 (aspiring actor's complaint adequately alleged viable FEHA claim against casting director's employer for rape at meeting at casting director's home on Sunday); Capitol City Foods, Inc. v. Superior Court (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418 (employer was entitled to summary judgment on FEHA claim where employee claimed her supervisor raped her at his parent's house after she agreed to meet him for date, because regulations promulgated under FEHA indicated that, under theory of respondeat superior, employer is liable for harassment by supervisors committed within scope of employment or relationship with employer).

(n229)Footnote 135. State Department of Health Services v. Superior Court (McGinnis) (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 1041 & n.3, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556 ; Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1403, 1421-1422, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501 .

(n230)Footnote 136. Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1403, 1421-1422, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501 .

(n231)Footnote 137. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1); see Carrisales v. Department of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1132, 1136, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083 and discussion in [b] above; see also Burrell v. Star Nursery, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 951, 955 ("knew or should have known" rule applies to sexual harassment by coworkers but not to harassment by a supervisor). See Sheffield v. Los Angeles County (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 153, 163-164, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 492 (FEHA; trier of fact could determine that employer failed to take reasonable steps to prevent same sex harassment once it knew of coworker's implied threats of violence but failed to act, because victim's immediate supervisor was aware of harassment).

(n232)Footnote 138. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.11(d) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination), 1606.8(d) (EEOC guideline on national origin discrimination); see also Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 803 (42 U.S.C. § 1981 racial harassment; if harasser is co-worker, plaintiff must prove employer knew or should have known of harassment but did not take adequate steps to address it); Burrell v. Star Nursery, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 951, 955 (Title VII sexual harassment; "knew or should have known" rule applies to sexual harassment by coworkers but not to harassment by a supervisor); Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882 (Title VII; sexual harassment); Davis v. Monsanto Chem. Co. (6th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 345, 349 (racial harassment; employer liable for harassment by victim's coemployees if employer knew or should have known of alleged conduct and failed to take prompt remedial action).

(n233)Footnote 139. Swenson v. Potter (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 1184, 1192 & n.6.

(n234)Footnote 140. Swenson v. Potter (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 1184, 1192 (Title VII; sexual harassment); Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882 (Title VII; sexual harassment); see Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 875 (Title VII; employer is liable for hostile work environment created by coworker unless employer takes adequate remedial measures to avoid liability).

(n235)Footnote 140.1. Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1185, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 .

(n236)Footnote 141. Swenson v. Potter (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 1184, 1192 .

(n237)Footnote 142. Swenson v. Potter (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 1184, 1192-1193 & n.8.

(n238)Footnote 143. Swenson v. Potter (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 1184, 1194 ; Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882 .

(n239)Footnote 144. Swenson v. Potter (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 1184, 1194-1195 (absence of evidence that complainant's new position was objectively less desirable rendered untenable jury's finding that Postal Service failed to take appropriate corrective action after learning of her complaint); see EEOC Compl. Man. (CCH) § 615.4(a)(9)(iii) (2000) (employer's action is appropriate if it fully remedies conduct without adversely affecting terms or conditions of charging party's employment in some manner, for example, by requiring charging party to work less desirable hours or in less desirable location).

(n240)Footnote 145. Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882 (Title VII; quoting Dornhecker v. Malibu Grand Prix Corp. (5th Cir. 1987) 828 F.2d 307, 309) .

(n241)Footnote 146. Star v. West (9th Cir. 2001) 237 F.3d 1036, 1039 ; see Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 781-783 (Keep, J., concurring), 786 (Wiggins, J., dissenting) (adequate remedial action could be taken without disciplining harasser, at least as first response). but see Yamaguchi v. U.S. Dep't of the Air Force (9th Cir. 1997) 109 F.3d 1475, 1482-1483 (remedial measures must include some form of disciplinary action).

(n242)Footnote 147. Swenson v. Potter (9th Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 1184, 1194-1198 .

(n243)Footnote 147.1. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1).

(n244)Footnote 147.2. Carter v. Cal. Dept. of Veterans Affairs (2006) 38 Cal. 4th 914, 920-930, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 223, 135 P.3d 637 (Legislature merely clarified existing law when it amended Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1) to refer specifically to acts of nonemployees, and court would not address retroactivity and related due process concerns, where such legislative act had no retrospective effect because true meaning of statute remained the same).

(n245)Footnote 148. See Freitag v. Ayers (9th Cir. 2006) 463 F.3d 838, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 23383, *18-*29 (court would not carve out exception to Title VII under which prison, due to its distinctive character and problems, and in particular inherently hostile environment, was immune from lawsuits (by correctional officers) arising from sexual harassment by inmates, and substantial evidence supported jury's finding that female prison guard was subjected to hostile work environment due to inmate sexual misconduct, and state corrections and rehabilitation department was liable because it failed to take prompt and effective remedial action reasonably calculated to address misconduct); Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 912 (Title VII; in 9th Circuit, employers are liable for harassing conduct by non-employees if employer either ratifies or acquiesces in harassment by not taking immediate and/or corrective actions when it knew or should have known of the conduct), citing Folkerson v. Circus Circus Enters., Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 107 F.3d 754, 756 .

(n246)Footnote 149. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1604.11(e) (EEOC guideline on sex discrimination), 1606.8(e)(EEOC national origin guideline).

(n247)Footnote 150. See Miller v. Maxwell's Int'l, Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 583 .

(n248)Footnote 151. Little v. Windermere Relocation, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 265 F.3d 903, 912-913 , as amended on denial of rehearing and rejection of rehearing en banc, 301 F.3d 958 .

(n249)Footnote 152. See Gov. Code § 12940(j); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.6(b)(3); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 608 n.6, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 ; DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 19 n.5; DFEH v. Madera County (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-03, p. 24.

(n250)Footnote 153. Bihun v. AT&T Information Sys., Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 976, 988-989, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 , disapproved on other grounds, Lakin v. Watkins Associated Indus. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 644, 664 (evidence of sexual harassment of other female employees admitted); see Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1086-1087, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 .

(n251)Footnote 154. Carrisales v. Department of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1132, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083.

(n252)Footnote 155. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(3).

(n253)Footnote 156. McClung v. Employment Devel. Dept. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 467, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 428, 99 P.3d 1015, 2004 Cal. LEXIS 10527, *4-*20 . See Gov. Code § 12940(j)(2).

(n254)Footnote 157-160. [Reserved]

(n255)Footnote 161. Carrisales v. Department of Corrections (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1132, 1138, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804, 988 P.2d 1083 .

(n256)Footnote 162. Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 645, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333 .

(n257)Footnote 163. Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 599-600, 605-606, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 ; Page v. Superior Court (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1206, 1213, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529 .

(n258)Footnote 164. Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 602-605, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 ; Page v. Superior Court (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1206, 1210-1213, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529 ; see also Gov. Code § 12940(i),

(j).

(n259)Footnote 165. Page v. Superior Court (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1206, 1212, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 529 .

(n260)Footnote 166. Matthews v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 598, 605-606, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 .

(n261)Footnote 167. Gov. Code § 12940(k) (FEHA); 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(f) (EEOC guideline).

(n262)Footnote 168. Gov. Code § 12940(k).

(n263)Footnote 169. Trujillo v. North County Transit Dist. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 280, 288-289, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596 (special verdict for damages based on finding of violation of former Gov. Code § 12940(i) is impermissible when jury also found that defendants did not discriminate, racially harass, or retaliate against those plaintiffs or cause severe emotional distress).

(n264)Footnote 170. 29 C.F.R. § 1604.11(f); see EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3282 (effective preventive program should include an explicit policy against sexual harassment that is clearly and regularly communicated to employees and effectively implemented). see Hardage v. CBS Broadcasting, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 427 F.3d 1177, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 23551, *17-24 (employer had anti-harassment policy, with which plaintiff was familiar, and as supervisor, he was responsible for reporting sexual harassment to human resources department and understood that sexual harassment was prohibited).

(n265)Footnote 171. See E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1516 ; Miller v. Bank of America (9th Cir. 1979) 600 F.2d 211, 213 ; see also [6][b], above.

(n266)Footnote 172. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, pp. 3280-3281; see discussion in [6][b], above.

(n267)Footnote 173. See Cohen v. San Bernardino Valley College (9th Cir. 1996) 92 F.3d 968, 971-972 (in case involving public entity, vagueness of sexual harassment policy created First Amendment violation in disciplining of college professor).

(n268)Footnote 174. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 .

(n269)Footnote 175. Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 .

(n270)Footnote 176. Burlington Indus. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 655 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662, 689 .

(n271)Footnote 177. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 654 .

(n272)Footnote 178. See EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3282.

(n273)Footnote 179. See DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 20.

(n274)Footnote 180. E.E.O.C. v. Hacienda Hotel (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 1504, 1516 ; see EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3279. However, failure to use an internal grievance procedure may defeat a claim of constructive discharge resulting from harassment, because a charging party would not be able to show that he or she had no alternative but to resign. If an internal procedure is to be used, the EEOC suggests filing a grievance and an EEOC charge simultaneously, because filing the grievance does not toll the limitations period for filing an EEOC charge. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3279 & nn.26, 37. For a general discussion of constructive discharge in the equal employment opportunity context, see § 41.58[4].

(n275)Footnote 181. EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 615, P 3114, p. 3282; see also DFEH v. Livermore Joe's, Inc. (1990) FEHC Dec. No. 90-07, p. 20 (FEHA; duty to prevent sexual harassment necessarily includes an obligation to respond forcefully and effectively when employer learns of harassment); Flait v. North American Watch Corp. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 467, 476-479, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522 (FEHA; supervisor took appropriate remedial action by confronting officer of company, who was harassing supervisor's subordinate, particularly in light of fact that company had no policy regarding handling of harassment complaints).

(n276)Footnote 182. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 .

(n277)Footnote 183. Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 .

(n278)Footnote 184. See [a], above.

(n279)Footnote 185. Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662, 689 .

(n280)Footnote 186. See Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882 ; see also Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 875 ; Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 777 . See also Hardage v. CBS Broadcasting, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 427 F.3d 1177, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 23551, *18-*21 (employer's response to employee's complaints of sexual harassment was both prompt and reasonable as matter of law, where employee asserted he wanted to handle matter by himself and did not tell human resources employee "gory details" or apprise supervisor of specifics about alleged sexual contact; supervisor's alleged comment was troubling but could not singularly serve to transform employer's response into unreasonable one or erase legal significance of employee's specific request not to investigate his admittedly minimal and vague complaint).

(n281)Footnote 187. Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 875 ; Ellison v. Brady (9th Cir. 1991) 924 F.2d 872, 882 .

(n282)Footnote 188. Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 875-876 ; Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1528-1529 .

(n283)Footnote 189. Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 777 .

(n284)Footnote 190. See Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 778-779 . See also Yamaguchi v. United States Dep't of the Air Force (9th Cir. 1997) 109 F.3d 1475, 1483-1484 (to adjudicate adequacy of military employer's response to sexual harassment, court must determine whether military employer adequately disciplined offending employee; goals of Title VII would be contravened by allowing a military employer to avoid liability by invoking right to unlimited discretion in disciplining soldiers).

(n285)Footnote 191. See Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 778-779 .

(n286)Footnote 192. See Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 779-781 .

(n287)Footnote 193. See Intlekofer v. Turnage (9th Cir. 1992) 973 F.2d 773, 777-781 .

(n288)Footnote 194. Star v. West (9th Cir. 2001) 237 F.3d 1036, 1039 (counseling harassing coworker, after which harassment ended, and moving coworker to different shift was adequate response to complaints of harassment even though they were not labeled as discipline).

(n289)Footnote 195. See Steiner v. Showboat Operating Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 25 F.3d 1459, 1464 .

(n290)Footnote 196. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522 .

(n291)Footnote 197. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1528 .

(n292)Footnote 198. Fuller v. City of Oakland (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1529 .

(n293)Footnote 199. Nichols Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864 .

(n294)Footnote 200. Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 877 ; for employer's affirmative defense, see § 41.92A.

(n295)Footnote 200.1. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1).

(n296)Footnote 200.2. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1630, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 .

(n297)Footnote 200.3. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1631, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 ; Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1403, 1419-1421, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501 (no liability where incidents took place outside workplace and not related to employer's interests).

(n298)Footnote 200.4. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1631, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 ; Myers v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1403, 1419-1421, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 501 .

(n299)Footnote 200.5. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1631, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 .

(n300)Footnote 200.6. Bradley v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1631-1634, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 222 (ample evidence supported jury's finding employer failed to take immediate and appropriate action as required by law, where investigation was factfinding undertaking and not designed to protect employee from harassment, and there was no follow-up, no evaluation of need for protection, and no further investigation). See Hathaway v. Runyon (8th Cir. 1997) 132 F.3d 1214, 1224 ; Fuller v. City of Oakland, Cal. (9th Cir. 1995) 47 F.3d 1522, 1529 .

(n301)Footnote 201. See Gov. Code § 12940(j), (k); see [a], above.

(n302)Footnote 202. See Gov. Code § 12950.

(n303)Footnote 203. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633, 655 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662, 689 ; see Hardage v. CBS Broadcasting, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 427 F.3d 1177, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 23551, *24-*25 (employee unreasonably failed to make use of employer's anti-harassment policies and procedures by specifically requesting company not to make use of its remedial and preventative procedures, where in addition to waiting half a year to make sexual harassment complaint, he specifically asked company not to investigate it); but see Nichols v. Azteca Restaurant Enterprises, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 256 F.3d 864, 876 n.10 (although employee's complaints of harassment to assistant and general managers did not follow formal reporting requirements of employer's antiharassment policy, they were sufficient to place employer on notice of harassment).

(n304)Footnote 203.1. Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 ; see [b], above.

(n305)Footnote 204. State Dep't of Health Servs. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1026, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441, 79 P.3d 556 .

(n306)Footnote 204.1. See Gov. Code § 12950.1(c), defining "employer" for these purposes only as any person regularly employing 50 or more persons or regularly receiving services of 50 or more persons providing services pursuant to contract, or any person acting as agent of employer, directly or indirectly, the state, or any political or civil subdivision of the state, and cities.

(n307)Footnote 204.2. Gov. Code § 12950.1(a).

(n308)Footnote 204.3. Gov. Code § 12950.1(f).

(n309)Footnote 204.4. Gov. Code § 12950.1(a).

(n310)Footnote 204.5. Gov. Code § 12950.1(e).

(n311)Footnote 204.6. Gov. Code § 12950.1(d).

(n312)Footnote 204.7. [Reserved]

(n313)Footnote 204.8. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(a).

(n314)Footnote 204.9. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(b)(1).

(n315)Footnote 204.10. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(b)(2).

(n316)Footnote 204.11. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(b)(3).

(n317)Footnote 204.12. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(b)(4).

(n318)Footnote 204.13. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(b)(6).

(n319)Footnote 204.14. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(a)(9)(A).

(n320)Footnote 204.15. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(c).

(n321)Footnote 204.16. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(d).

(n322)Footnote 204.17. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7288.0(e).

(n323)Footnote 205. See Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 419-420, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457; Roberts v. Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 801, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139.

(n324)Footnote 206. Civ. Code § 3294(b).

(n325)Footnote 207. See Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 421-422 & n.6, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457.

(n326)Footnote 208. Roberts v. Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 800, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139 (action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on racial harassment violating FEHA); see Gov. Code § 12940(h) (unlawful employment practice to retaliate against employee for exercising equal employment opportunity rights). For a general discussion of retaliation, see pt. G (§§ 41.130-41.132). See also ch. 60, pt. A, for a general discussion of the common law tort of wrongful termination in violation of public policy.

(n327)Footnote 209. Roberts v. Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 800-801, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139.

86 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART E. HARASSMENT

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.82

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.82 Other Prohibited Bases of Harassment

[1] Statutes Prohibiting Harassment

The FEHA expressly provides that it is unlawful for "an employer ... or any other person, because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, sexual orientation, or age, to harass an employee or applicant."¹ Thus, California law proscribes harassment of all specified protected classes to the same extent as harassment based on sex.

As discussed in [2], [3], and [4], below, courts have held that Title VII also provides remedies for harassment based upon national origin, race, and religion.

[2] National Origin Harassment

EEOC guidelines provide that harassment on the basis of national origin is a violation of Title VII.² The guidelines declare that an employer has an affirmative duty to maintain a working environment free from harassment on the basis of national origin.³ Thus, the EEOC guidelines provide that ethnic slurs and other verbal or physical conduct relating to an individual's national origin constitute harassment when that conduct (1) has the purpose or effect of creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment; (2) has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual's work performance; or (3) otherwise affects an individual's employment opportunities.⁴

To prevail on a claim of harassment based on national origin, the plaintiff must show the following:⁵

1. The plaintiff was subjected to verbal or physical conduct because of his or her national origin.
2. The conduct was unwelcome.
3. The conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the plaintiff's employment and create an abusive work environment.

Generally, a plaintiff alleging national origin harassment would present facts showing subjection to racial epithets in the workplace. However, in Kang v. U. Lim America, Inc.,ⁿ⁶ the plaintiff's evidence showed that he and other Korean workers suffered unwelcome physical and verbal abuse, as well as discriminatorily long working hours required because their supervisor viewed their national origin as superior. Although the case involved an unusual form of discrimination, plaintiffs' evidence showed a work environment that a reasonable person would find hostile or abusive and was sufficient to survive the employer's motion for summary judgment.ⁿ⁷

In Cariddi v. Kansas City Chiefs Football Club,ⁿ⁸ the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with a trial court finding that although derogatory comments may be so excessive and opprobrious as to constitute an unlawful employment practice under Title VII, derogatory ethnic comments that were part of casual conversation did not rise to the level necessary to constitute a violation of Title VII.ⁿ⁹

In Rogers v. Equal Employment Opportunity Com'n,^{n9.1} a Hispanic employee was permitted to proceed with a national origin Title VII discrimination claim based on her allegation that her employer treated Hispanic customers in a discriminating manner, thereby creating a hostile environment for Hispanic employees. The court noted that "the nuances and subtleties of discriminatory employment practices are no longer confined to bread and butter issues... . One can readily envision working environments so heavily polluted with discrimination as to destroy completely the emotional and psychological stability of minority group workers."ⁿ¹⁰

Under FEHA, it is an unlawful employment practice to harass an employee because of national origin or ancestry.^{n10.1} The law prohibiting harassment is violated when the workplace is permeated with discriminatory intimidation, ridicule and insult that is sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment and create an abusive working environment, assessed from the perspective of a reasonable person belonging to the racial or ethnic group of the plaintiff.ⁿ¹¹ For example, an employee's supervisor asking her to lie about company business, asking her to secretly take a document from the desk of another supervisor, insulting her and using profanity in her presence, coupled with the supervisor's single abusive and hostile ethnic remark, was sufficient to create a triable issue of fact as to whether the employer created a hostile work environment.^{n11.1} Further, the fact that the employer replaced a Filipino employee with a person of Hispanic origin did not vitiate the triable issue of fact as to a hostile work environment because the claim involved discrimination based on Filipino ancestry.^{n11.2}

An employer may be held liable for actionable third-party national origin harassment of its employees by customers or others, where the employer ratifies or condones the conduct by failing to investigate and remedy it after learning of it. This hostile environment theory of employer liability is grounded in negligence and ratification, rather than intentional discrimination.^{n11.3}

[3] Racial Harassment

In Snell v. Suffolk County,ⁿ¹² the Second Circuit Court of Appeals declared that "[i]t is well-established ... that a working environment overrun by racial antagonism constitutes a Title VII violation."ⁿ¹³ The court held, however, that to establish a hostile atmosphere, a plaintiff must prove more than a few isolated incidents of racial enmity. Casual comments, or accidental or sporadic conversation, will not trigger Title VII relief. The alleged harassment must be sufficiently pervasive to create an abusive working environment^{n13.1} and whether racial acrimony is "sufficiently pervasive" is determined from the totality of the circumstances.ⁿ¹⁴ Simply causing an employee offense based on an isolated comment is not sufficient to create actionable harassment under Title VII. However, the harassment need not cause diagnosed psychological injury.^{n14.1}

To prevail on a hostile workplace claim premised on race, a plaintiff must show:^{n14.2}

- He or she was subjected to verbal or physical conduct of a racial^{n14.3} or sexual nature.

- The conduct was unwelcome.
- The conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the plaintiff's employment and create an abusive work environment.

In Snell, the court found that the daily use of racial slurs and the proliferation of racially derogatory literature created a racially hostile environment.ⁿ¹⁵ The court also held that once an employer has knowledge of a racially combative atmosphere in the workplace, it has a duty to take reasonable steps to eliminate it.ⁿ¹⁶ Whether an employer has fulfilled its responsibility must be determined on the facts in each case. Factors that may be considered are the gravity of the harm, the nature of the work environment, and the resources available to the employer.ⁿ¹⁷

A plaintiff must show that the work environment was both subjectively and objectively hostile.^{n17.1} Cases regarding hostile working environments created by gender discrimination can be used in evaluating allegations of racially hostile working environment.^{n17.2} In evaluating the objective hostility of a work environment, the factors to be considered include:^{n17.3}

- The frequency of discriminatory conduct.
- The severity of discriminatory conduct.
- Whether the discriminatory conduct is physically threatening or humiliating or a mere offensive utterance.
- Whether the discriminatory conduct unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance.

The required level of severity or seriousness varies inversely with the pervasiveness or frequency of the conduct.^{n17.4} Allegations of a racially hostile work-place are assessed from the perspective of a reasonable person belonging to the racial or ethnic group of the plaintiff.^{n17.5}

In McGinest v. GTE Service Corp., ^{n17.6} the Ninth Circuit found that considering the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, it was clear that incidents the plaintiff described were sufficient to survive the employer's motion for summary judgment on the claim of a racially hostile work environment. According to the plaintiff, he was involved in a serious automobile accident because, due to his race, both his supervisor and garage personnel were unwilling to ensure that his vehicle received necessary maintenance. He was forced to work in dangerous situations and barraged with insults and abuse by, among others, a supervisor. Over a two-year period, he was prevented from collecting overtime pay that he worked. His ability to perform his job was directly affected by the refusal of his coworkers to work under his direction on occasion. Additionally, he was subjected to extreme racial insults, as well as more subtle taunts, by supervisors and coworkers, which were significant exacerbating factors in evaluating the severity of the racial hostility.^{n17.7} Further, the use of "code words" can violate Title VII, including a reference to the plaintiff as a "drug dealer."^{n17.8}

If racial hostility pervades a workplace, a plaintiff may establish a violation of Title VII, even if the hostility was not directly targeted at the plaintiff.^{n17.9} The fact that an individual consistently abuses all employees alike may provide no defense to an accusation of prohibited harassment.^{n17.10} A white employee may also raise a claim of racially hostile work environment because of his or her association with black employees.^{n17.11}

An employer's liability for harassing conduct is evaluated differently when the harasser is a supervisor as opposed to a coworker. An employer is vicariously liable for a hostile environment created by a supervisor. As in sexual harassment actions, the employer may raise a two-pronged affirmative defense to avoid vicarious liability for a hostile environment created by a supervisor: (1) the employer exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly any invidious harassment, and 2) the plaintiff unreasonably failed to take advantage of any preventative or corrective opportunities provided by the employer or avoid harm otherwise.^{n17.12} An employer is vicariously liable for actions by a supervisor who has immediate or successively higher authority over the employee. The distinction does not depend on job titles or formal structures within the workplace, but rather on whether a supervisor has the authority to demand obedience from an employee.^{n17.13} If the harasser is a coworker, the plaintiff must prove that the employer knew or should have known of the harassment but did not take adequate steps to address it.^{n17.14} The employer may avoid liability for coworker harassment by undertaking remedial measures reasonably calculated to end the harassment. The reasonableness of the remedy depends on its ability to stop harassment by the person who engaged in the harassment and persuade potential harassers to refrain from unlawful conduct. For the remedy to be adequate, the employer must intervene promptly. Remedial measures must include some form of disciplinary action, which must be proportionate to the seriousness of the offense.^{n17.15} Although counseling and a warning may suffice if successful in stopping the harassment, the action should be taken promptly. A delay will not satisfy Title VII's requirement of prompt remedial action.^{n17.16} Further, in order to be adequate, remedial actions must be designed not only to prevent future conduct by the harasser, but also by other potential harassers.^{n17.17}

In Swinton v. Potomac Corp.,ⁿ¹⁸ an African-American employee sued his former employer for racial harassment under 42 U.S.C. 1981. The Ninth Circuit found that there was undisputed testimony detailing racial harassment of the plaintiff by a supervisory employee other than plaintiff's supervisor, evidence of racial comments and acquiescence by co-workers, and undisputed testimony that plaintiff's supervisor witnessed the harassment but did nothing to end it. The court concluded that under the court's instruction to find for plaintiff upon a determination that management knew, through complaints or other circumstances, of the harassing conduct or language by the co-workers and failed to take reasonably prompt, corrective action designed to end the harassment (or that management should have known of the harassment due to the pervasiveness of the conduct or language or other circumstances and failed to take reasonably prompt, corrective action designed to end the harassment), the jury properly awarded plaintiff damages.ⁿ¹⁹

By contrast, the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals has developed its own analysis, identifying two requisite elements for a claim of racially hostile work environment: (1) "repeated slurs," and (2) the employer's tolerance and condonation.ⁿ²⁰ With respect to the first element, "repeated slurs," the court expressly declined to follow other courts and distinguish between "a few isolated incidents of harassment" and a "pattern of harassment."ⁿ²¹ The court declared that an employee need not prove that instances of alleged harassment were related in either time or type. Rather, all the employee need show to satisfy the "repeated slurs" element is that the alleged conduct constituted an unreasonably abusive or offensive work environment or adversely affected the reasonable employee's ability to perform the tasks required by the employer.ⁿ²² Furthermore, in establishing adverse effect on work performance, the employee need not prove that his or her tangible productivity declined as a result of harassment. The employee need only show that the harassment made it more difficult to do the job.ⁿ²³ With respect to the second element, "employer tolerance and condonation," the Sixth Circuit held that the employee must establish that the employer knew or should have known of the alleged conduct and failed to take prompt remedial action.ⁿ²⁴

Harassment will not necessarily be held to violate Title VII when it results from "an atmosphere replete with instances of humiliating acts shared by all." For example, in Vaughn v. Pool Offshore Co.,ⁿ²⁵ an African-American offshore oil platform employee was subjected to raw pranks, crude practical jokes, and verbal abuse, some of it permeated with racial overtones.ⁿ²⁶ The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals held, however, that although the environment on the platform was coarse, rowdy, and generally abusive, the harassment did not result from an environment "polluted with discrimination."ⁿ²⁷ The court explained that relations between the plaintiff and his co-employees, "aside from the crude excesses of platform atmosphere," were friendly and cordial.ⁿ²⁸ The court also noted that the plaintiff used racial slurs along with his co-employees, and that other employees were treated to the same obnoxious treatment.ⁿ²⁹

In addition to constituting unlawful racial harassment, the presence of racially hostile conduct in the workplace may be actionable under a disparate impact theory. In Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. ⁿ³⁰ (Atonio III), the Ninth

Circuit Court of Appeals held that a workplace permeated with racially discriminatory intimidation may have an adverse impact upon racial minorities by serving as a "headwind" to advancement. In that case, the court had found "race labelling" to be pervasive and possibly linked to discrimination in hiring and certain post-hire employment opportunities.ⁿ³¹

In Etter v. Veriflo Corp.,ⁿ³² the court addressed the applicable standard for racial harassment by separately analyzing Title VII and FEHA precedent. With respect to Title VII,ⁿ³³ the court determined that racial harassment is actionable if it is sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment. Federal cases require that certain factors must be shown, such as: (1) the frequency of the discriminatory conduct; (2) its severity; (3) whether it is physically threatening or humiliating, or merely an offensive utterance; and (4) whether it unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance.ⁿ³⁴ The court concluded that the severe or pervasive standard under federal law excludes occasional, isolated, sporadic, or trivial incidents of verbal abuse.ⁿ³⁵ The Etter court then addressed the applicable standard under the FEHA, noting that California courts generally apply the federal threshold standard but that no California court had directly addressed racial harassment under the FEHA.ⁿ³⁶ Concluding that the severe or pervasive standard applied in FEHA racial harassment cases and that occasional, sporadic, or isolated incidents of verbal abuse do not meet this standard, the Etter court held that a jury instruction stating that severe or pervasive conduct requires more than "occasional, isolated, sporadic, or trivial" acts of racial harassment was not erroneous.ⁿ³⁷

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The *Etter*ⁿ³⁸ case is important for at least four reasons. First, Etter clarifies and emphasizes that the word "severe" and the word "pervasive" are joined by the word "or," not the word "and." Thus, the applicable standard is "severe or pervasive." Second, Etter is among the growing number of cases across the country that are applying principles developed in the context of sex harassment to claims of race harassment. This may seem logical, but the trend is significant because it means that sporadic boorish behavior, even if morally offensive, will not meet the legal test for liability. Third, Etter illustrates the proof problems that plaintiffs face in harassment cases. In the crucible of trial, the evidence did not support plaintiff's assertions of daily, severe or pervasive behavior. Once the testimony revealed occasional offensive remarks, only, plaintiff's theory was untenable. Fourth, in a larger context, Etter is another case in the emerging judicial philosophy that a viable EEO lawsuit must involve a "judicially cognizable adverse employment action."^{n38.1} That is, federal and state courts are increasingly willing to conclude that it is not enough to claim that an employer took some action on the basis of an employee's race or sex. The action must be more than de minimis. It must rise to some threshold of adversity to justify a plaintiff's resort to the judicial system. Thus, to use a hypothetical, we may find it reprehensible that an employer would, on the basis of race or sex, move a drinking fountain from one location to another thus creating a "longer walk" for some employees, but such alleged "adverse action" is just too trivial to merit legal redress. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[4] Religion Based Harassment

Although the FEHA proscribes harassment on the basis of religious creed, it should be noted that nonprofit religious associations and corporations are not considered "employer[s]," within the meaning of the harassment subdivision of the FEHA, except as provided in Gov. Code section 12926.2.ⁿ³⁹ Further, the ministerial exception to Title VII is not a per se bar to a minister's claim of sexual harassment.ⁿ⁴⁰ When harassment is the issue, the free exercise rationales supporting the ministerial exception to Title VII are absent. In Bollard,ⁿ⁴¹ not only did defendants, the Jesuits, not offer religious justification for the harassment, they condemned it as inconsistent with their values and beliefs.

In Elvig v. Calvin Presbyterian Church,^{n41.1} the Ninth Circuit found that applying the principles in Bollard requires a nuanced analysis, to avoid trenching on religious freedom without entirely eviscerating Congress's otherwise fully applicable command to protect employees from sex discrimination, even employees of religious organizations.^{n41.2} After extensively reviewing Bollard, the court held that under the ministerial exception, a church's decisions about whom to employ as a minister are protected by the First Amendment. Thus to the extent the plaintiff's sexual harassment and retaliation claims implicated the church's ministerial employment decisions, those claims were foreclosed. However, to the extent the plaintiff stated narrower and thus viable sexual harassment and retaliation claims that did not implicate protected employment decisions, her sexual harassment claim could succeed if she proved she suffered a hostile work environment and if the defendants did not prove that she unreasonably failed to take advantage of available measures to prevent and correct that hostile environment. The retaliation claim could succeed if she proved that she suffered retaliatory harassment in the form of verbal abuse and intimidation because of her complaints to the church and the EEOC. If the church were to be found liable on either of these claims, the plaintiff could recover damages for consequent emotional distress and reputational harm. Within this framework, the Title VII suit could provide the plaintiff with redress for sexual harassment and retaliation without attaching liability to ministerial employment decisions protected by the First Amendment.^{n41.3}

In McKeon v. Mercury Healthcare Sacramento,ⁿ⁴² the California Supreme Court interpreted identical exclusionary language in the definitional statute of the FEHA.ⁿ⁴³ The court concluded that the religious entity exemption is not limited to entities organized under the Nonprofit Religious Corporation Law,ⁿ⁴⁴ but rather includes religious entities that are organized under the Nonprofit Public Benefit Corporation Law.ⁿ⁴⁵

In Weiss v. United States ⁿ⁴⁶ a terminated employee sought recovery under Title VII on the ground that his dismissal for poor work performance was a pretext for discrimination. Among other things, the court held that patterned and discriminatory harassment of plaintiff by his coworker and his supervisor violated plaintiff's right to non-discriminatory terms and conditions of employment.ⁿ⁴⁷

[5] Sexual Orientation Harassment

In Dominguez v. Washington Mutual Bank,ⁿ⁴⁸ the court held that a former employee, who worked at the employer as a temporary employee, presented sufficient evidence of sexual orientation harassment to deny the employer summary judgment under the FEHA. In order to prove discrimination under FEHA, plaintiff was required to show, among other things, that she was subjected to conduct that was so severe or pervasive that it created a hostile work environment. Relevant to the inquiry were the following:ⁿ⁴⁹

- The nature of the unwelcome acts.
- The frequency of the unwelcome acts.
- The total number of days when the conduct occurred.
- The context in which that conduct occurred.

This analysis required the use of common sense and an appropriate sensitivity to social context to determine whether a reasonable person in plaintiff's position would have found the conduct severely hostile or abusive.ⁿ⁵⁰ In Dominguez, the co-worker's offensive remarks were abusive and hostile, and after the remarks stopped, his harassing conduct was replaced by a daily or near daily campaign of interference with plaintiff's work that a trier of fact could have found was motivated by the same discriminatory intent. Further, there was clear evidence that the employer was on notice of the co-worker's conduct. Finally, there were also triable fact issues that the employer's stated reason for firing plaintiff--her habitual tardiness--was a pretext. Although there was evidence of her tardiness, two days before the firing, a supervisor sent her to fill out an application for full-time employment with the employer, which made it reasonable to infer that any and all tardiness from before that date was unimportant to the employer and had no bearing on the decision to fire her two days later.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Harassment General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Harassment National Origin Harassment

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 29 C.F.R. § 1606.8(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 C.F.R. § 1606.8(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 29 C.F.R. § 1606.8(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Kang v. U. Lim America, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 296 F.3d 810, 817.

(n6)Footnote 6. Kang v. U. Lim America, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 296 F.3d 810.

(n7)Footnote 7. Kang v. U. Lim America, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 296 F.3d 810, 817.

(n8)Footnote 8. Cariddi v. Kansas City Chiefs Football Club (8th Cir. 1977) 568 F.2d 87.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Cariddi v. Kansas City Chiefs Football Club (8th Cir. 1977) 568 F.2d 87, 88.

(n10)Footnote 9.1. Rogers v. EEOC (5th Cir. 1971) 454 F.2d 234.

(n11)Footnote 10. See Rogers v. EEOC (5th Cir. 1971) 454 F.2d 234, 238.

(n12)Footnote 10.1. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1). For discussion of harassment under the FEHA generally, see § 41.80[1][a], above.

(n13)Footnote 11. Nazir v. United Airlines, Inc. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 243, 263-264 (summary adjudication of FEHA-based harassment claims was error, where giving credence to plaintiff's evidence, there was certainly triable issue of fact as to harassment).

(n14)Footnote 11.1. Dee v. Vintage Petroleum, Inc. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 30, 35-37, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 (reasonable trier of fact could infer slur was not isolated event because it explained supervisor's motivation for creating abusive working environment).

(n15)Footnote 11.2. Dee v. Vintage Petroleum, Inc. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 30, 37, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923.

(n16)Footnote 11.3. Galdamez v. Potter (9th Cir. 2005) 415 F.3d 1015, 1022 (employee began to receive hostile comments from customers and others based on her race, accent, and national origin almost immediately upon taking job, which continued over course of three years; reasonable jury could have found community's treatment of plaintiff both subjectively and objectively severe or pervasive; evidence supported instruction on employer's potential liability for failing to investigate and remedy harassment).

(n17)Footnote 12. Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094.

(n18)Footnote 13. Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1102; see also McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1112 (courts have long recognized that workplace in which racial hostility is pervasive constitutes form of discrimination), citing Woods v. Graphic Communications (9th Cir. 1991) 925 F.2d 1195, 1200.

(n19)Footnote 13.1. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1112-1113 (harassment must be sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter conditions of victim's employment and create abusive working environment).

(n20)Footnote 14. Vasquez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 642-644 (allegedly harassing incidents, which occurred over course of more than one year and only two of which contained racially related epithets, did not create hostile work environment for Hispanic plaintiff); Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1103 ; see Hicks v. Gates Rubber Co. (10th Cir. 1987) 833 F.2d 1406, 1416-1417 (trial court may aggregate evidence of racial hostility with evidence of sexual hostility to determine whether there is pervasive discriminatory atmosphere sufficient to establish "hostile work environment harassment").

(n21)Footnote 14.1. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1113 .

(n22)Footnote 14.2. Vasquez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 642 .

(n23)Footnote 14.3. See Surrell v. Cal. Water Service Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1097, 1108-1109 (African-American employee's claim of racial harassment failed, where she presented no evidence that supervisor's comments were based on race, because comments were all performance-related; further, alleged comments were not sufficiently severe or pervasive to sustain hostile work environment claim).

(n24)Footnote 15. Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1098, 1103 .

(n25)Footnote 16. Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1104 .

(n26)Footnote 17. Snell v. Suffolk County (2d Cir. 1986) 782 F.2d 1094, 1104 .

(n27)Footnote 17.1. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1113-1118 (subjective hostility was clearly established sufficient to overcome summary judgment through employee's un rebutted testimony and his complaints to supervisor and EEOC).

(n28)Footnote 17.2. Vasquez v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 2003) 349 F.3d 634, 642 ; see McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1112-1118 .

(n29)Footnote 17.3. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1113 .

(n30)Footnote 17.4. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1113 .

(n31)Footnote 17.5. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1115 .

(n32)Footnote 17.6. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103 .

(n33)Footnote 17.7. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1113-1118 (beyond question that use of word "nigger" is highly offensive and demeaning, evoking history of racial violence, brutality, and subordination, and word is perhaps most offensive and inflammatory racial slur in English), citing Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 817 ; Daso v. The Grafton School, Inc. (D. Md. 2002) 181 F. Supp. 2d 485, 493 (D. Md. 2002) (word "nigger" is more than mere offensive utterance; no word in English language is as odious or loaded with as terrible a history); NLRB v. Foundry Div. of Alcon Indus., Inc. (6th Cir. 2001) 260 F.3d 631, 635 n.5 (that word "nigger" is slur is not debatable).

(n34)Footnote 17.8. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1116-1117 . See, e.g., Daniels v. Essex Group, Inc. (7th Cir. 1991) 937 F.2d 1264, 1273 (employer engaged in not subtle attempt to link drugs with plaintiff simply because he was black); Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 799 (reference to "Pontiac" as acronym for "Poor old nigger thinks it's a Cadillac" was racially offensive joke); Jones v. City of Overland Park (D. Kan. 1994) 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15238 (reference to plaintiff as "Aunt Jemima" was one factor in hostile environment).

(n35)Footnote 17.9. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1117 . See, e.g., Woods v. Graphic Communications (9th Cir. 1991) 925 F.2d 1195, 1200 (work environment was racially hostile where plaintiff was surrounded by racial hostility and subjected directly to some of it); Stingley v. Arizona (D. Ariz. 1992) 796 F. Supp. 424, 428-29 (finding racial and sexual harassment based in part on use of racist nicknames and slurs about another worker in presence of plaintiff); Kishaba v. Hilton Hotels Corp. (D. Haw. 1990) 737 F. Supp. 549, 554 (even if plaintiff herself was never object of racial harassment, she might have Title VII claim if she were forced to work in atmosphere in which harassment was pervasive).

(n36)Footnote 17.10. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1117-1118 (coworker's use of racially charged words to goad both black and white employees made conduct more outrageous, not less so).

(n37)Footnote 17.11. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1118 . cf. Taylor v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co. (7th Cir. 1992) 966 F.2d 1188 (affirming Title VII judgment for employee subjected to discrimination because of interracial marriage); Brosmore v. City of Covington (E.D. Ky. 1993) 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20733 (noting significance under Title VII of detriment due to interracial association).

(n38)Footnote 17.12. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1119 & n. 12. For the employer's liability for sexual harassment by a supervisor, see § 41.81[6][b].

(n39)Footnote 17.13. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1119 .

(n40)Footnote 17.14. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1119 . For the employer's liability for sexual harassment by a coworker, see § 41.81[6][c].

(n41)Footnote 17.15. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1119-1120 .

(n42)Footnote 17.16. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1121 (employer failed to issue warning until plaintiff had filed complaint with EEOC after plaintiff informed management of racially hostile events to no avail).

(n43)Footnote 17.17. McGinest v. GTE Service Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 360 F.3d 1103, 1121 (although employer's actions may have been successful in persuading identified harassers to cease their activities, over ten-year period, plaintiff was subjected to inappropriate comments by minimum of six individuals and allegedly physically endangered or financially harmed through actions of several others, and employer took no action to ensure level of harassment did not continue for rest of plaintiff's tenure at company).

(n44)Footnote 18. Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794 .

(n45)Footnote 19. Swinton v. Potomac Corp. (9th Cir. 2001) 270 F.3d 794, 803-804 .

(n46)Footnote 20. Davis v. Monsanto Chem. Co. (6th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 345, 349 .

(n47)Footnote 21. Davis v. Monsanto Chem. Co. (6th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 345, 349 .

(n48)Footnote 22. Davis v. Monsanto Chem. Co. (6th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 345, 349 .

(n49)Footnote 23. Davis v. Monsanto Chem. Co. (6th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 345, 349 .

(n50)Footnote 24. Davis v. Monsanto Chem. Co. (6th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 345, 349 .

(n51)Footnote 25. Vaughn v. Pool Offshore Co. (5th Cir. 1982) 683 F.2d 922 .

(n52)Footnote 26. See Vaughn v. Pool Offshore Co. (5th Cir. 1982) 683 F.2d 922, 923-924 .

(n53)Footnote 27. See Vaughn v. Pool Offshore Co. (5th Cir. 1982) 683 F.2d 922, 924-925 .

(n54)Footnote 28. See Vaughn v. Pool Offshore Co. (5th Cir. 1982) 683 F.2d 922, 924 .

(n55)Footnote 29. Vaughn v. Pool Offshore Co. (5th Cir. 1982) 683 F.2d 922, 924-925 .

(n56)Footnote 30. Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1485 .

(n57)Footnote 31. Atonio v. Wards Cove Packing Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 1485, 1503-1504 (Title VII).

(n58)Footnote 32. Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 457, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 , modified, 68 Cal. App. 4th 130a (1998).

(n59)Footnote 33. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n60)Footnote 34. See Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 457, 462-465, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 ; see, e.g., Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662, 676 (sexual harassment); Harris v. Forklift Systems, Inc. (1993) 510 U.S. 17, 22-23, 114 S. Ct. 367, 126 L. Ed. 2d 295 . (sexual harassment; discriminatory conduct held sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter conditions of victim's employment).

(n61)Footnote 35. See Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 457, 462-465, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 , modified, 68 Cal. App. 4th 130a (1998).

(n62)Footnote 36. Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 457, 462-465, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 (California courts apply Title VII law to FEHA sexual harassment cases); see Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.; see also Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 609-610, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (acts of sexual harassment cannot be occasional, isolated, sporadic, or trivial; plaintiff must show concerted pattern of harassment or repeated, routine or generalized nature).

(n63)Footnote 37. Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 457, 462-465, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 (court rejected plaintiff's contention that instruction conflicts with principle that a single incident of severe harassment may be sufficient).

(n64)Footnote 38. Etter v. Veriflo Corp. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 457, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 33 .

(n65)Footnote 38.1. If the claim is retaliation rather than direct discrimination, the adverse action need not be workplace-related or employment-related, only adverse. See Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway Co. v. White (2006) 548 U.S. 53, 126 S. Ct. 2405, 165 L. Ed. 2d 345 (scope of anti-retaliation provision of Title VII extends beyond workplace-related or employment-related retaliatory acts and harm, so employee need only allege and prove "adverse action" rather than "adverse employment action" under Title VII's anti-retaliation provision), discussed at § 41.130[1A], below.

(n66)Footnote 39. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(B); for discussion of Gov. Code § 12926.2, see § 40.10[3].

(n67)Footnote 40. Bollard v. California Province of Soc. of Jesus (9th Cir. 1999) 196 F.3d 940, 947 .

(n68)Footnote 41. Bollard v. California Province of Soc. of Jesus (9th Cir. 1999) 196 F.3d 940, 947 .

(n69)Footnote 41.1. Elvig v. Calvin Presbyterian Church (9th Cir. 2004) 375 F.3d 951 .

(n70)Footnote 41.2. Elvig v. Calvin Presbyterian Church (9th Cir. 2004) 375 F.3d 951, 956 .

(n71)Footnote 41.3. Elvig v. Calvin Presbyterian Church (9th Cir. 2004) 375 F.3d 951, 959-967 .

(n72)Footnote 42. McKeon v. Mercury Healthcare Sacramento (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 321, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319, 965 P.2d 1189 .

(n73)Footnote 43. See Gov. Code § 12926(d).

(n74)Footnote 44. See Corp. Code § 9110 et seq.

(n75)Footnote 45. McKeon v. Mercury Healthcare Sacramento (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 321, 325, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 319, 965 P.2d 1189 ; see Corp. Code § 5110 et seq.

(n76)Footnote 46. Weiss v. United States (E.D. Va. 1984) 595 F. Supp. 1050 .

(n77)Footnote 47. See Weiss v. United States (E.D. Va. 1984) 595 F. Supp. 1050, 1056 ; see also Young v. Southwestern Sav. and Loan Ass'n (5th Cir. 1975) 509 F.2d 140 ; Compston v. Borden, Inc. (S.D. Ohio 1976) 424 F. Supp. 157 .

(n78)Footnote 48. Dominguez v. Washington Mutual Bank (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 714, 724-727, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 705 .

(n79)Footnote 49. Dominguez v. Washington Mutual Bank (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 714, 725, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 705 .

(n80)Footnote 50. Dominguez v. Washington Mutual Bank (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 714, 725, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 705 ; Beyda v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 511, 519, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 547 .

87 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART E. HARASSMENT

2-41 California Employment Law §§ 41.83 through 41.89

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 41.83[Reserved]

88 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART F. SUBSTANTIVE DEFENSES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.90

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.90 Defenses, Generally

Some of the defenses discussed in this part are established by the express terms of the various equal employment opportunity statutes. For example, Title VII, the ADEA, and the FEHA all provide statutory exceptions for, among other things, a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ),ⁿ¹ and Title VII and the ADEA provide statutory exemptions for bona fide seniority systems.ⁿ² Other defenses, such as the business necessity defense under Title VII, were developed by case law,ⁿ³ although the ADA expressly includes a business necessity defense.ⁿ⁴ In addition, some defenses are applicable only to certain theories of liability. In particular, the BFOQ defense is only applicable to disparate treatment claims not involving race discrimination,ⁿ⁵ while the business necessity defense is only applicable to disparate impact claims.ⁿ⁶

The sections below discuss the major defenses to the various equal employment opportunity laws, as well as the statutory or other legal bases for those defenses.

■ PRACTICE TIP:

In assessing a potential defense, it is necessary to consider whether the case involves disparate treatment, disparate impact, or evidence of both. The employer's burden under the treatment and impact models may differ.ⁿ⁷ Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Disparate Treatment General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(1) (ADEA); 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(e) (Title VII); Gov. Code § 12940 (FEHA); See also § 41.94.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h) (Title VII); 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(A). The United States Supreme Court has declared that it does not regard the Title VII "bona fide seniority system" exemption as a defense, but as a provision that itself delineates which employment practices are illegal and thereby prohibited, and which are not. See Lorraine v. AT&T Technologies, Inc. (1989) 490 U.S. 900, 109 S. Ct. 2261, 104 L. Ed. 2d 961, 973 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Moore v. Hughes Helicopters, Inc. (9th Cir. 1983) 708 F.2d 475, 481 ; Gay v. Waiters' and Dairy Lunchmen's Union (9th Cir. 1982) 694 F.2d 531, 537 ; Contreras v. City of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1981) 656 F.2d 1267, 1275-1280 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See 42 U.S.C. § 12113(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. See E.E.O.C. v. Rath Packing Co. (8th Cir. 1986) 787 F.2d 318, 327 n.10 (Title VII); Harris v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc. (9th Cir. 1980) 649 F.2d 670, 674 (Title VII); Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 540-541, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 (FEHA) . For discussion of the BFOQ defense, see § 41.94.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Pettway v. American Cast Iron Pipe Co. (5th Cir. 1974) 494 F.2d 211, 244 (Title VII); Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Hous. Comm'n (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 517, 541-542, 267 Cal. Rptr. 158 (FEHA) ; see also 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(k)(2) (Title VII; business necessity may not be used as defense against claim of intentional discrimination). For discussion of the business necessity defense, see § 41.95.

(n7)Footnote 7. See §§ 41.10-41.11 and 41.20-41.21.

89 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART F. SUBSTANTIVE DEFENSES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.91

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.91 Affirmative Action or Nondiscrimination Plans

Although Title VII generally prohibits the consideration of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin in making employment decisions,ⁿ¹ voluntary affirmative action plans have been held to be an acceptable means of remedying past discrimination if they do not unnecessarily trammel the rights of nonminority employees and if they are meant to be a temporary measure for the purpose of achieving, rather than maintaining, racial or gender balance.ⁿ² In fact, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that such an affirmative action plan may be a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for considering membership in a protected class when making an employment decision.ⁿ³

Affirmative action or equal opportunity evidence is relevant to and probative of an employer's intent not to discriminate.ⁿ⁴ By contrast, however, evidence that an employer violated its own affirmative action plan may be relevant to the question of an employer's contrary intent.ⁿ⁵ Although self-critical portions of an employer's equal employment opportunity efforts may enjoy a qualified privilege (based on the underlying goal of eliminating employment discrimination), if an employer voluntarily uses evidence of its equal employment opportunity efforts to prove nondiscrimination, it waives the qualified privilege, and a court abuses its discretion by admitting equal opportunity evidence while precluding self-critical material.ⁿ⁶

In addition, it appears that under appropriate circumstances, affirmative action may be available as a remedy for Title VII violations, either by court order,ⁿ⁷ or as part of a consent decree.ⁿ⁸ Certain contractors are also required to meet affirmative action obligations under state⁹ and federal law.ⁿ¹⁰ However in Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Peña,ⁿ¹¹ the Supreme Court held that under the Fifth Amendment due process clause and the Fourteenth Amendment equal protection clause, a standard of strict scrutiny must be applied to all racial classifications imposed by any governmental authority--whether federal, state or local--and race based action must be narrowly tailored to further a compelling interest.ⁿ¹²

For a discussion of preemployment affirmative action issues, see § 41.47. For complete discussion of affirmative action, see Chapter 44.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Affirmative Action General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Public Contracts Affirmative Action

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Steelworkers v. Weber (1979) 443 U.S. 193, 208-209, 99 S. Ct. 2721, 61 L. Ed. 2d 480 . See also Johnson v. Transportation Agency, Santa Clara County (1986) 480 U.S. 616, 637-638, 642, 107 S. Ct. 1442, 94 L. Ed. 2d 615 (consideration of sex of county employee as one factor in promoting her over equally qualified male under voluntary affirmative action plan); Gilligan v. Dept. of Labor (9th Cir. 1996) 81 F.3d 835 (in institutional setting, reliance on affirmative action plan unnecessary if action taken is consistent with plan).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Higgins v. City of Vallejo (9th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 351, 355 ; See also § 41.11[1][c].

(n4)Footnote 4. E.E.O.C. v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 578 (Title VII) . See Gilligan v. Dept. of Labor (9th Cir. 1996) 81 F.3d 835, 839-840 (use of gender as a non-exclusive hiring factor does not necessarily constitute illegal discrimination; affirmative action plans are illegal only if they function as an "absolute bar" to the advancement of non-preferred groups); Johnson v. Transportation Agency, Santa Clara County (1986) 480 U.S. 616, 637-638, 107 S. Ct. 1442, 94 L. Ed. 2d 615 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Gonzales v. Police Dept., City of San Jose, Cal. (9th Cir. 1990) 901 F.2d 758, 761 (Title VII).

(n6)Footnote 6. E.E.O.C. v. General Telephone Co. of Northwest (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 575, 578-579 (Title VII).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Local 28 of Sheet Metal Workers' Int'l Ass'n v. EEOC (1986) 478 U.S. 421, 444-445, 482, 106 S. Ct. 3019, 92 L. Ed. 2d 344 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Firefighters v. Cleveland (1986) 478 U.S. 501, 515-518, 106 S. Ct. 3063, 92 L. Ed. 2d 405 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Gov. Code § 12990.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Exec. Order 11246; 29 U.S.C. § 793(a) (Rehabilitation Act); 38 U.S.C. § 4211 et seq. (disabled and Vietnam veterans).

(n11)Footnote 11. Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Pena (1995) 515 U.S. 200, 115 S. Ct. 2097 , L. Ed. 2d 158.

(n12)Footnote 12. Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Pena (1995) 515 U.S. 200, 115 S. Ct. 2097, 2112-2113, 132 L. Ed. 2d 158 (overruling Metro Broadcasting, Inc. v. FCC (1990) 497 U.S. 547, 110 S. Ct. 2997, 111 L. Ed. 2d 445); see also Richmond v. J.A. Croson Co. (1989) 488 U.S. 469, 109 S. Ct. 706, 102 L. Ed. 2d 854 (Fourteenth Amendment held to require strict scrutiny of all race-based action by state and local governments); Arizona Public Serv. Co. v. Aspaas (9th Cir. 1995) 69 F.3d 1026 (Title VII supersedes Indian nepotism employment practices).

90 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART F. SUBSTANTIVE DEFENSES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.92

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.92 After-Acquired Evidence (Including Application or Resume Fraud)

One issue that has frequently arisen is the extent to which evidence of employee misconduct that would have justified an employer's adverse action, but which was not discovered by the employer until after it took an allegedly discriminatory employment action (so-called "after-acquired evidence"), may act as a defense to a discrimination claim. The most common factual context in which this issue has arisen has involved an employer's discovery, typically after the commencement of litigation of a discrimination claim, that the employee had falsified his or her resume or employment application. Employers have argued in such cases that the plaintiff should not be entitled to recovery because the plaintiff would have been fired (or would have not been hired in the first place) had the employer known of the falsification.ⁿ¹

In McKennon v. Nashville Banner Pub. Co.,^{n1.1} the United States Supreme Court, resolving a conflict among the federal appellate courts, rejected the lower court's holding that after-acquired evidence of employee wrongdoing bars an employee from any relief under the ADEA.ⁿ² The Court noted that the ADEA and Title VII reflect a societal condemnation of invidious bias in employment decisions.ⁿ³ Congress designed the remedial measures in these statutes to serve as a spur or catalyst to cause employers to self-evaluate their employment practices and to endeavor to eliminate, so far as possible, the last vestiges of discrimination. Thus, the statutes serve both a deterrence and compensation purpose. The private litigant who seeks redress for his or her injuries vindicates both of these objectives. The Court held that it would not accord with this scheme if after-acquired evidence of wrongdoing that would have resulted in termination operates, in every instance, to bar all relief for earlier violations of the ADEA.ⁿ⁴ For example, one case an employer interpreted its retirement plan to require that an employee who had reached retirement age but had not yet retired be considered eligible for retirement, with the result that his temporary disability benefits would have completely offset his retirement benefits. The court found this violated Title 29 United States Code Section 623(f)(2) because it coerced the employee into involuntarily retiring on the basis of age in order to retain any benefits.ⁿ⁵

The Court held, however, that the employee's own misconduct, while not completely barring relief, is relevant to the remedies available in a particular case, since the employer's legitimate interests must be taken into account in fashioning an equitable remedy. The Court stated that the proper boundaries of remedial relief in the general class of cases where, after termination, it is discovered that the employee has engaged in wrongdoing must be addressed by the judicial system in the "ordinary course of future decisions." The court thus did not set standards for how the after-acquired evidence is to be treated in every case, rather left it to further decisions. The Court observed, however, that as a general rule, neither reinstatement nor front pay is an appropriate remedy in cases of this type.ⁿ⁶ The Court rejected any absolute rule barring backpay and stated that backpay should generally be calculated from the date of the unlawful discharge to the date that the new information was discovered, although in formulating a remedy the trial court can consider any extraordinary circumstances that affect the legitimate interests of either party.ⁿ⁷

The Court in McKennon further stated that when an employer seeks to rely on after-acquired evidence of wrongdoing to limit relief, it must first establish that the wrongdoing was of such severity that the employee in fact would have been terminated on those grounds alone if the employer had known of it at the time of the discharge.ⁿ⁸

In O'Day v. McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. ⁿ⁹ the Ninth Circuit applied the McKennon standard to a claim brought under the ADEA. The court held that the Civil Rights Act of 1991, together with the portion of Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins,ⁿ¹⁰ which survived the Civil Rights Act of 1991, permits an employer to limit an employee's remedy if it can show by a preponderance of the evidence that it would have made the same decision apart from an illegal motive. The court pointed out that since O'Day had rifled through his supervisor's confidential files and had shared them with others, he had not engaged in protected activity. Thus, although his conduct warranted termination, he would nevertheless be entitled prove his right to recover limited remedies arising out of the alleged discrimination which preceded the ground for termination. The Ninth Circuit also applied this theory in Schnidrig v. Columbia Machine, Inc.,ⁿ¹¹ permitting the use of after-acquired evidence to limit remedies but declining to deny all relief, as inconsistent with the purpose of the ADEA. Summary judgment is denied and the after-acquired evidence can bear on the specific remedy.

The California Court of Appeal, in a case involving common-law wrongful termination and age discrimination claims, has also refused to adopt a blanket rule that after-acquired evidence of falsification of an employment application is a complete defense to a wrongful termination or employment discrimination claim.ⁿ¹² The court reasoned that an automatic forfeiture of all employment rights, regardless of circumstances, was too harsh a penalty in many cases. The court further reasoned that in cases in which an employer has fired a worker in violation of the statutory ban on discrimination, the purpose and effect of the discrimination statutes would be unacceptably undermined by a principle that would allow a fact that played no part in the firing decision to bar any recovery.ⁿ¹³ The court in that case did not discuss the potential effect of such after-acquired evidence on the amount of damages because the issue was not before the court.ⁿ¹⁴

In Camp v. Jeffer, Mengels, Rutler & Marmaro,^{n14.1} the California Court of Appeal held that the plaintiffs' application fraud supported a complete defense to their claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy. The court distinguished Cooper ^{n14.2} on the grounds that the employer in Camp was required by federal law not to employ any convicted felons, and the plaintiffs lied on their resumes that they had not been convicted of felonies when they had. Thus, the court concluded, the plaintiffs' application fraud "went to the heart of their employment relationship with Jeffer Mengels."^{n14.3}

In Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁵ the plaintiff brought suit for, among other charges, sexual harassment and wrongful termination. During discovery, the employer learned that the plaintiff was an illegal alien who used false documents to secure employment on the suggestion of the interviewer. The employer moved for summary judgment under the doctrine of after-acquired evidence, alleging that it would never have hired the plaintiff (and would have immediately terminated employment) had it known of the false documentation. The plaintiff dismissed wrongful termination and related claims, recognizing that they would be barred by the unclean hands doctrine.ⁿ¹⁶ Although the after-acquired evidence would bar the wrongful termination and contract claims if it was proven that the employer would have refused to hire the plaintiff, summary judgment was improper because evidence was presented to show that the employer knew of the falsified documentation but did not take action.ⁿ¹⁷ Moreover, the unclean hands doctrine did not warrant a different result because the doctrine does not apply where Congress authorizes broad equitable relief to serve important national policies; however, the unclean hands doctrine would bar the wrongful discharge and contract claims because the misrepresentation about her illegal alien status went to the heart of the employment relationship and related directly to her wrongful discharge and contractual claims.ⁿ¹⁸ The court concluded that neither the after-acquired evidence doctrine nor the unclean hands doctrine would bar discrimination and tort claims because the plaintiff's discrimination and tort claims arose from acts occurring during her employment and not from her discharge.ⁿ¹⁹

In Thompson v. Tracor Flight Systems, Inc.,ⁿ²⁰ the court considered the issue of after-acquired evidence in the context of an action for constructive discharge in retaliation for asserting the fair employment rights of others in violation of former Gov. Code § 12940(f).ⁿ²¹ The former employee had taken home copies of files and documents at the time of her resignation, which the employer contended would have resulted in her termination had it known what she was doing. The jury found that the former employee had not engaged in wrongdoing which would have given the employer grounds to terminate her had it known of her misconduct at the time it occurred. The court held that substantial evidence permitted a reasonable jury to find that her motivation in taking the documents home constituted poor judgment and not theft and would have subjected her to, at most, lesser measures of discipline. The court also held the trial court did not err in not barring recovery or equitably reducing the damages award under the after-acquired evidence doctrine.

In Finegan v. County of Los Angeles,ⁿ²² a nurse sued his employer for violation of the FEHAⁿ²³ for removing him from his job in 1997 because of his physical disabilities. During trial, the employer presented the testimony of an expert physician, who opined that plaintiff was not able to perform his job during the period 1996 through 1998, based on the expert's examination of plaintiff in 1999 and a review of plaintiff's medical records. In finding the testimony of the expert admissible, the court relied heavily upon the holding in McKennon.ⁿ²⁴ According to the court, McKennon applies when the employer's discriminatory conduct has been established or conceded.ⁿ²⁵ If so, the employer may not avoid liability by pointing to some other reason which would have justified firing the plaintiff-employee, but which was not discovered until later. McKennon does not apply when the employer disputes liability and relies on later-acquired medical evidence to show the plaintiff was not qualified for the job.ⁿ²⁶ Thus, an employer who unlawfully discriminates against an employee may not necessarily rely on after-acquired evidence of previously unknown wrongdoing by the employee to justify its unlawful action. However, if later-acquired medical evidence is offered to support the originally proffered reason and show the plaintiff was not qualified for the job, the evidence is admissible.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Evidence
Procedural Considerations
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Preemployment Practices
Torts
Business Torts
Fraud & Misrepresentation
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. For the standard jury instruction on the affirmative defense of after-acquired evidence justifying employment action taken, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2506 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 .

(n3)Footnote 2. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 356-357, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 .

(n4)Footnote 3. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 357, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 .

(n5)Footnote 4. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Pub. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 358, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d

852 .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Kalvinskas v. Cal. Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1305, 1309 .

(n7)Footnote 6. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 361-362, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 .

(n8)Footnote 7. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 362, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 .

(n9)Footnote 8. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 362-363, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 .

(n10)Footnote 9. O'Day v. McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 79 F.3d 756 .

(n11)Footnote 10. Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins (1989) 490 U.S. 228, 109 S. Ct. 1775, 104 L. Ed. 2d 268 .

(n12)Footnote 11. Schnidrig v. Columbia Machine, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 1406 .

(n13)Footnote 12. Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 617-618, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n14)Footnote 13. Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 618-619, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n15)Footnote 14. See Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 619 n.1, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n16)Footnote 14.1. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 .

(n17)Footnote 14.2. Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n18)Footnote 14.3. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 637 .

(n19)Footnote 15. Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 .

(n20)Footnote 16. Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 839-840, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 .

(n21)Footnote 17. Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 842-843, 846-850, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (courts must be careful in applying after-acquired evidence doctrine to discrimination claims as likely consequence of its widespread use will be underenforcement of antidiscrimination statutes and underdeterrence of discriminatory employment practices).

(n22)Footnote 18. Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 843-845, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (I.R.C.A. (8 U.S.C. § 1324) bars employers from knowingly hiring or continuing employment of unauthorized aliens).

(n23)Footnote 19. Murillo v. Rite Stuff Foods, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 833, 847-849, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (plaintiff's status as undocumented alien does not bar her from protections of employment law).

(n24)Footnote 20. Thompson v. Tracor Flight Systems, Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1172-1174, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 95 .

(n25)Footnote 21. Now see Gov. Code § 12940(h).

(n26)Footnote 22. Finegan v. County of Los Angeles (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 762 .

(n27)Footnote 23. See Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n28)Footnote 24. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ. Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 .

(n29)Footnote 25. Finegan v. County of Los Angeles (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 762 .

(n30)Footnote 26. Finegan v. County of Los Angeles (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8-13, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 762 , citing Mantolete v. Bolger (9th Cir. 1985) 767 F.2d 1416 ; Teahan v. Metro-North Commuter R. Co. (2d Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 50 ; McConathy v. Dr. Pepper/Seven Up Corp. (5th Cir. 1998) 131 F.3d 558 .

91 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART F. SUBSTANTIVE DEFENSES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.92A

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.92A Antiharassment Policy

In Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth ⁿ¹ and Faragher v. City of Boca Raton,ⁿ² the Supreme Court established that in Title VII sexual harassment cases in which no tangible employment action is taken, an employer may be held vicariously liable for an actionable hostile environment created by a supervisor with immediate (or successively higher) authority over the victimized employee. However, in such cases an employer may raise a two-part affirmative defense to liability or damages, subject to proof by a preponderance of the evidence. First, it must prove that "it exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly any sexually harassing behavior." Second, it must prove that "the plaintiff employee unreasonably failed to take advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer or to avoid harm otherwise."ⁿ³ The Court also stated that proof of an antiharassment policy is not required in every case as a matter of law, but the need for such a policy may be addressed in any case litigating the first element of the defense. Similarly, while proof of the second element of the defense is not limited to showing that the employee unreasonably failed to use any complaint procedure, such proof "will normally suffice to satisfy the employer's burden" for that element of the defense.ⁿ⁴

The legal standard for evaluating an employer's efforts to prevent and correct harassment is not whether any additional steps or measures would have been reasonable if employed. The standard is whether the employer's actions as a whole established a reasonable mechanism for prevention and correction.ⁿ⁵ In Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology,ⁿ⁶ the Ninth Circuit found an employer's anti-harassment policy reasonable on its face. The employer promulgated a written policy that defined prohibited behavior, identified contact personnel, and established procedures to investigate and resolve any claims. The employer made the policy available in several publications, at least one of which the plaintiff received when she began working with the supervisor who allegedly harassed her. The employer also conducted periodic training on sexual harassment, which it publicized to staff and faculty by email, including at least one email sent during the period when the plaintiff was allegedly being harassed. The plaintiff testified that she knew about the training and that she knew that her supervisor's behavior constituted sexual harassment.ⁿ⁷

The plaintiff also failed to present evidence to support her charge that even if the policy was facially reasonable, it was unreasonably implemented, and that the employer failed promptly to correct harassment when it occurred. When the employer learned about the plaintiff's allegations for the first time as the result of her filing a claim with the EEOC, it promptly convened an investigatory committee, which impartially interviewed every witness suggested by either the plaintiff or her supervisor. At first, the investigatory committee found insufficient evidence of harassment, but nevertheless recommended that the plaintiff be transferred to work for a female professor in a different department and location and that the supervisor be "reminded" of the harassment policy. Although post-complaint conduct will not exonerate a party at fault, once the employer gained access to physical evidence belying the supervisor's assertion that no sexual contact had occurred, which the plaintiff had declined to provide to the investigating committee, the employer immediately asked the supervisor for his resignation and he promptly resigned. The employer's failure to pursue all possible leads did not undermine the substantial showing that its investigation was, in toto, both prompt and reasonable.ⁿ⁸

With regard to proof of the plaintiff's failure to take advantage of preventive or corrective opportunities provided by the employer or to otherwise avoid harm, the plaintiff sought no relief of any kind from the employer until after a full year of unwelcome sexual activity and almost two years after the first sexual incident. The plaintiff explained her hesitation by asserting that she did not feel comfortable pursuing assistance from the employer's employee relations department because she was dissatisfied with how the department handled her earlier disability discrimination complaint. Even if her hesitation were reasonable, however, she offered no evidence to explain why she did not seek help through any other sources affiliated with the employer, which were all specifically identified by the written policy materials as equipped to offer assistance in cases of sexual harassment.ⁿ⁹

On the other hand, in Taybron v. City & County of San Francisco,ⁿ¹⁰ an action by two female employees of San Francisco's municipal transportation department, the district court's determination that there was no genuine issue of material fact with respect to the employer's remediation of their admitted sexual harassment was error. The plaintiffs' presented evidence of the following in opposition to the employer's motion for summary judgment:

- (1) For an extended period of time their female supervisor harassed one plaintiff and failed to prevent another employee from harassing the second plaintiff, despite their numerous oral complaints.
- (2) The second plaintiff was discouraged from complaining about harassment she faced.
- (3) The first plaintiff's complaints were not taken seriously.
- (4) A manager referred to plaintiffs disparagingly in context of their complaints.
- (5) The same manager threw his keys at the first plaintiff and verbally abused her for complaining.
- (6) The employer's EEO office failed to interview several employees and managers involved in the disputes.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Harassment General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Harassment Racial Harassment Employer Liability General Overview Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Harassment Racial Harassment Employment Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 . See also Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1176-1179 (plaintiff failed to raise genuine issue of material fact as to either reasonableness of employer's preventive and corrective measures or her decision to forego those procedures).

(n4)Footnote 4. Burlington Indus., Inc. v. Ellerth (1998) 524 U.S. 742, 118 S. Ct. 2257, 141 L. Ed. 2d 633 ; Faragher v. City of Boca Raton (1998) 524 U.S. 775, 118 S. Ct. 2275, 141 L. Ed. 2d 662 . For a form of pleading, see § 43.10[13][f].

(n5)Footnote 5. Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1177 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1177 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1177-1178 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158, 1178-1179 .

(n10)Footnote 10. Taybron v. City & County of San Francisco (9th Cir. 2003) 341 F.3d 957, 960 .

92 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART F. SUBSTANTIVE DEFENSES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.93

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.93 Bona Fide Employee Benefit Plans

[1] ADEA

[a] Generally

[i] Benefit Plans Established or Modified On or After October 16, 1990

The ADEA, as amended by Title I of the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990 (OWBPA),ⁿ¹ provides that it is not unlawful for an employer to observe the terms of a bona fide employee benefit plan (1) when, for each benefit or benefit package, the actual amount of payment made or cost incurred on behalf of an older worker is no less than that made or incurred on behalf of a younger worker;ⁿ² or (2) when the plan is a voluntary early retirement incentive plan that is consistent with the purposes of the ADEA.ⁿ³ An employer, employment agency, or labor organization that makes age-based distinctions based on such a plan has the burden of proving that its actions are lawful in any civil enforcement proceeding brought under the ADEA.ⁿ⁴

For example, in one case an employer interpreted its retirement plan to require that an employee who had reached retirement age but had not yet retired be considered eligible for retirement, with the result that his temporary disability benefits would have completely offset his retirement benefits. The court found this violated Title 29 United States Code section 623(f)(2) because it coerced the employee into involuntarily retiring on the basis of age in order to retain any benefits.ⁿ⁵

Title I of the OWBPA applies only to (1) employee benefit plans established or modified on or after October 16, 1990 (the date the OWBPA was enacted), and (2) other conduct occurring more than 180 days after that date.ⁿ⁶ Title I also does not apply to a series of benefit payments made to an individual or the individual's representative that began prior to October 16, 1990, and that continue after that date pursuant to an arrangement that was in effect on that date. However, no substantial modification to such an arrangement may be made after October 16, 1990, if the intent of the modification is to evade the ADEA's purposes.ⁿ⁷ In addition, with respect to benefits provided by a collective bargaining agreement (1) that is in effect as of October 16, 1990; (2) that terminates after that date; (3) that was entered into by a labor organization;ⁿ⁸ and (4) that would be superseded (in whole or in part) by the OWBPA, Title I does not apply until the termination of the collective bargaining agreement or June 1, 1992, whichever occurs first.ⁿ⁹ The OWBPA also contains provisions governing its applicability and effective date with respect to state and other public employees.ⁿ¹⁰

With respect to plans established, modified, or otherwise affected on or after October 16, 1990, the OWBPA expressly overrules Public Employees v. Betts,ⁿ¹¹ discussed in [ii], below, stating that its purpose is "to restore the original congressional intent in passing and amending the [ADEA], which was to prohibit discrimination against older workers in all employee benefits except when age-based reductions in employee benefit plans are justified by significant cost considerations."ⁿ¹² In fact, the OWBPA amends the "bona fide employee benefit plan exemption" to essentially track the language of the EEOC cost-justification rule, which is also discussed in [ii], below.ⁿ¹³

The OWBPA also provides that an employee benefit plan must comply with the ADEA regardless of the date that the plan was adopted.ⁿ¹⁴ This provision apparently overrules the holding in United Airlines, Inc. v. McMann,ⁿ¹⁵ reaffirmed in Betts,ⁿ¹⁶ that a benefit plan drafted and implemented before the ADEA was enacted cannot be subterfuge to evade the purposes of the ADEA.ⁿ¹⁷ Thus, once a plan falls within the purview of the OWBPA (i.e., by a modification or some other act affecting the plan which occurs after October 16, 1990)ⁿ¹⁸ it is covered by the ADEA regardless of when it was established, and the McMann/Betts "subterfuge" analysis no longer applies.

[ii] Benefit Plans Established Before October 16, 1990

As discussed in [i], above, the OWBPA does not apply to employee benefit plans that existed on October 16, 1990, unless and until those plans are modified or affected in some way. Apparently such plans are governed by the pre-OWBPA version of the ADEA, which provided that it was not unlawful for an employer to observe the terms of a bona fide employee benefit plan, such as a retirement, pension, or insurance plan, that was not a subterfuge to evade the purposes of the ADEA.ⁿ¹⁹ In Public Employees v. Betts,ⁿ²⁰ the United States Supreme Court construed the pre-OWBPA "bona fide employee benefit plan" provision as completely exempting employee benefit plans from ADEA coverage unless they were subterfuge for discrimination in other, nonfringe-benefit aspects of the employment relationship. The Court stated that, for example, a plan formulated to retaliate against an employee for opposing a discriminatory employer action was not exempted.ⁿ²¹ Betts also held that the pre-OWBPA exemption is not a defense, but a description of the type of employer conduct prohibited in the benefit plan context. Thus, under Betts, the employee had the burden of proving that the purpose of a discriminatory plan is to discriminate in some nonfringe-benefit aspect of the employment relationship.ⁿ²²

In reaching its holding, Betts rejected the EEOC "cost-justification rule," declaring that because the rule did not appear in the exemption itself, it did not comport with the "plain language" of the ADEA.ⁿ²³ The EEOC "cost-justification rule" states that a plan that prescribes age-based lower benefits for older employees is not a subterfuge to evade the ADEA's purposes if the lower level of benefits is justified by age-related cost considerations.ⁿ²⁴ Under the rule, "benefit levels for older workers may be reduced to the extent necessary to achieve approximate equivalency in cost for older and younger workers." Thus, the rule exempts a plan if the actual amount incurred on behalf of an older worker is equal to that made or incurred on behalf of a younger worker, even though the older worker may, as a result, receive a lesser amount of benefits than the younger worker.ⁿ²⁵

[b] Specified Additional Exemptions

Under the OWBPA, a voluntary early retirement incentive plan consistent with the ADEA's purposes is not unlawful.ⁿ²⁶ In addition, the following federal retirement programs are exempted:ⁿ²⁷

1. Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) employee pension benefit plans that provide for a minimum age eligibility requirement,ⁿ²⁸ and

2. ERISA-defined benefit plans that provide for (a) payments that constitute the subsidized portion of an early retirement benefit, or (b) social security supplements that commence before the age and terminate at the age (specified by the plan) when participants are eligible for Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. § 401 et seq.) benefits, and that do not exceed those benefits.ⁿ²⁹

The OWBPA also provides that a benefit plan does not violate the ADEA solely because, as a result of a contingent event unrelated to age, the value of retiree health benefits received by an individual eligible for an immediate pension, and the value of additional pension benefits that are made available because of the contingent event, are deducted from severance pay made available as a result of the event.ⁿ³⁰ The OWBPA contains provisions for calculating and adjusting the value of benefits an employer is required to provide, depending on whether the employer's obligation to provide benefits is of limited or unlimited duration.ⁿ³¹

The OWBPA also exempts bona fide employee benefit plans under which long-term disability benefits are reduced by pension benefits (other than those attributable to employee contributions) (1) paid to the individual that the individual voluntarily elects to receive; or (2) for which an individual who has attained the later of age 62 or normal retirement age is eligible.ⁿ³²

For further discussion regarding issues arising out of implementing waivers and releases under OWBPA, see § 41.67[2][b].

[2] FEHA

The former FEHA age discrimination exemption providing that it did not require any changes in any bona fide retirement or pension programsⁿ³³ was repealed effective January 1, 2003.ⁿ³⁴ The FEHA "bona fide retirement or pension program" exemption was not construed by any case or FEHC regulation implementing the FEHA.ⁿ³⁵ Although at least one California case has discussed the relationship between the FEHA and pre-OWBPA exemptions,ⁿ³⁶ the FEHA exemption was substantially different from the far more detailed provisions of the federal OWBPA, discussed in [1], above.ⁿ³⁷ Accordingly, it was unclear whether the principles reflected in the OWBPAn³⁸ would have been applied to the FEHA exemption.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawDiscriminationAge DiscriminationDefenses & ExceptionsBona Fide Benefit PlansPensions & Benefits LawEmployee Benefit PlansGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Pub. L. No. 101-433, §§ 101-105.

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B)(i); 29 C.F.R. § 1625.10(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B)(ii).

(n4)Footnote 4. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Kalvinskas v. Cal. Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 1996) 96 F.3d 1305, 1309 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Pub. L. No. 101-433, § 105(a).

- (n7)Footnote 7. See Pub. L. No. 101-433, § 105(e).
- (n8)Footnote 8. See 29 U.S.C. § 206(d)(4) (Fair Labor Standards Act; "labor organization" defined).
- (n9)Footnote 9. Pub. L. No. 101-433, § 105(b).
- (n10)Footnote 10. See Pub. L. No. 101-433, § 105(c).
- (n11)Footnote 11. Public Employees v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 109 S. Ct. 2854, 106 L. Ed. 2d 134 .
- (n12)Footnote 12. See Pub. L. No. 101-433, § 101.
- (n13)Footnote 13. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B) (incorporating 29 C.F.R. § 1625.10 by reference).
- (n14)Footnote 14. 29 U.S.C. § 623(k).
- (n15)Footnote 15. United Airlines, Inc. v. McMann (1977) 434 U.S. 192, 98 S. Ct. 444, 54 L. Ed. 2d 402 .
- (n16)Footnote 16. See Public Employees v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 167-169, 109 S. Ct. 2854, 106 L. Ed. 2d 134 .
- (n17)Footnote 17. United Airlines, Inc. v. McMann (1977) 434 U.S. 192, 203, 98 S. Ct. 444, 54 L. Ed. 2d 402 (overruled in part by Pub. L. No. 95-256, § 2(a), which amended the ADEA to expressly prohibit involuntary early retirement).
- (n18)Footnote 18. See Pub. L. No. 101-433, § 105(a).
- (n19)Footnote 19. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2), prior to amendment by Pub. L. No. 101-433.
- (n20)Footnote 20. Public Employees v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 109 S. Ct. 2854, 106 L. Ed. 2d 134 .
- (n21)Footnote 21. Public Employees v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 176-182, 109 S. Ct. 2854, 106 L. Ed. 2d 134 .
- (n22)Footnote 22. Public Employees v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 181-182, 109 S. Ct. 2854, 106 L. Ed. 2d 134 .
- (n23)Footnote 23. See Public Employees v. Betts (1989) 492 U.S. 158, 170-172, 109 S. Ct. 2854, 106 L. Ed. 2d 134 .
- (n24)Footnote 24. 29 C.F.R. § 1625.10(d).
- (n25)Footnote 25. 29 C.F.R. § 1625.10(a)(1).
- (n26)Footnote 26. 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B)(ii).
- (n27)Footnote 27. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(l)(1).
- (n28)Footnote 28. See 29 U.S.C. § 1002(2) ("employee pension benefit plans" defined).
- (n29)Footnote 29. See 29 U.S.C. § 1002(35) ("defined benefit plans" defined).
- (n30)Footnote 30. 29 U.S.C. § 623(l)(2)(A),(B); see 29 U.S.C. § 623(l)(2)(C) ("severance pay" defined), (D) ("retiree health benefits" defined).
- (n31)Footnote 31. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(l)(2)(E).

(n32)Footnote 32. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(l)(3).

(n33)Footnote 33. See former Gov. Code § 12941(a).

(n34)Footnote 34. Stats. 2002, ch. 525, § 2.

(n35)Footnote 35. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7295.0-7296.4 (age discrimination).

(n36)Footnote 36. See Kubik v. Scripps College (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 544, 552, 173 Cal. Rptr. 539 (former Gov. Code §§ 12941 and 12942 parallel ADEA, and goals of FEHA and ADEA are presumptively same).

(n37)Footnote 37. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(f)(2)(B).

(n38)Footnote 38. See discussion in [1][a], above.

93 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 41 Substantive Requirements Under Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
PART F. SUBSTANTIVE DEFENSES

2-41 California Employment Law § 41.94

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Lori A. M. Middlehurst, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 41.94 Bona Fide Occupational Qualification

[1] Under Title VII

[a] Generally

Title VII provides that it is not an unlawful employment practice for an employer to hire and employ an individual on the basis of his or her religion, sex, or national origin in those instances in which religion, sex, or national origin is a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the particular business or enterprise.ⁿ¹ Race is not a permissible BFOQ because it was specifically excluded from the list of bases enumerated in the statute.ⁿ²

The BFOQ exception is an extremely narrow exception to the prohibition of discrimination under Title VII.ⁿ³ It applies only to "employment practices that purposefully discriminate" (disparate treatment),ⁿ⁴ and only to "hiring and employing," not to other terms and conditions of employment.ⁿ⁵

Since a BFOQ is an affirmative defense, the burden is on the defendant to prove it; the plaintiff is not required to disprove it.ⁿ⁶ The employer has the burden of proving that it had reasonable cause to believe, that is, a factual basis for believing, that all or substantially all of the people excluded from the position (for example, all women) would be unable to perform safely and efficiently the duties of the job involved.ⁿ⁷ With respect to what constitutes a BFOQ, the United States Supreme Court explained in Auto Workers v. Johnson Controls,ⁿ⁸ that the language of the BFOQ defense favors the use of objective, verifiable requirements. The term "occupational" indicates that these requirements must concern job-related skills and aptitudes.ⁿ⁹ A particular qualification must relate to the "essence," or to the "central mission of the employer's business."ⁿ¹⁰

The BFOQ defense should not be confused with the business necessity defense,ⁿ¹¹ which applies only to disparate impact cases.ⁿ¹² However, although these two defenses are separate and distinct,ⁿ¹³ they sometimes overlap in judicial discussions. This is because, as one court has noted, the findings of fact for business necessity are often relevant to BFOQ analysis since the evidence needed to establish the two defenses is often similar.ⁿ¹⁴

For detailed discussions of the standards for establishing business necessity, see §§ 41.21[4] and 41.95[1].

[b] BFOQ as Applied to Religion

Religion is one of the enumerated bases for the BFOQ exception.ⁿ¹⁵ For the BFOQ defense to apply, the use of religion as an occupational qualification must be reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the employer's business or enterprise, but there is no requirement that the sole purpose of the employer be the promotion of religion or that the position be limited to the performance of religious functions.ⁿ¹⁶

An example of a bona fide requirement that an employee belong to a particular religion occurred in one case in which a job required a helicopter pilot to fly over Mecca. Under Saudi Arabian law, only Moslems may enter (or fly over) Mecca, and a non-Moslem who disobeys this law is subject to beheading if caught. The court held that requiring the pilot to convert to Islam as a condition of employment was a BFOQ.ⁿ¹⁷

In another case,ⁿ¹⁸ a medical school excluded Jewish doctors from an assignment to Saudi Arabia. The court addressed the BFOQ defense, although it said that the college had not directly raised it. Analyzing the defense, the court stated that it would be inapplicable under the facts raised in the case since the college had never tried to determine official Saudi policy regarding the Jewish doctors working there, nor whether there would have been difficulty in obtaining visas for them.ⁿ¹⁹

In another case,ⁿ²⁰ the court found that adherence to the Protestant faith was not a bona fide occupational requirement for teaching at a school despite the fact that a will that created and financed the school required that all teachers be Protestant. The court stated that except for the school's religious education teachers, as to whom Protestant affiliation was conceded to be a BFOQ, there was nothing to suggest that adherence to the Protestant faith was essential to the teaching of secular subjects. The court pointed out that a personal preference in a will has no more authority than one expressed by a living employer and could not create a BFOQ where the requirements for one were not met.ⁿ²¹

A defendant may be able to argue that it is entitled to impose a certain code of moral conduct on employees as a BFOQ under the exception allowing religious qualification if necessary. In one case, for example, a Catholic high school successfully asserted the BFOQ defense when it discharged a single teacher who became pregnant, based on the school's religious views and rules concerning premarital sex.ⁿ²²

[c] BFOQ as Applied to Sex

[i] Generally

The BFOQ exception for sex applies when the physical sex features of one sex or the other are necessary for the position (for example, a wet nurse), when the hiring of one sex is necessary for purposes of authenticity (for example, an acting role),ⁿ²³ or when the hiring of one sex or the other is necessary to maintain a general standard of privacy or decency for the job in question (for example, restroom attendants).ⁿ²⁴

The EEOC position, stated in its regulations, is that the BFOQ for sex is not applicable if based on

- (1) assumptions of the comparative employment characteristics of women in general;
- (2) stereotyped characterizations of the sexes, which consider characteristics generally attributed to the group, rather than considering individuals on the basis of their individual capacities; or
- (3) preferences of co-workers, the employer, or customers for a certain sex.ⁿ²⁵

However, not all circuits take the same position as the EEOC with regard to the second factor listed above. Some circuits, such as the Ninth Circuit,ⁿ²⁶ apply this individual standard based on the abilities of the particular person in question, while other circuits apply a standard based on the general abilities of the group.ⁿ²⁷ For discussion, see [iii], below.

[ii] Effect of True Sexual Characteristics

The BFOQ defense includes a "safety exception" that applies if sex or pregnancy actually interferes with an employee's ability to perform the job.ⁿ²⁸ This exception was first articulated in Dothard v. Rawlinson,ⁿ²⁹ a case involving a prison's refusal to hire a woman as a guard, at least partly because of a state regulation that prohibited the hiring of women in contact positions in the state prisons. Mindful that an employer may not refuse to hire an individual because of stereotypical assumptions concerning that person's sex,ⁿ³⁰ the United States Supreme Court nevertheless held that the BFOQ defense applied because the Alabama prison system is particularly hostile and it did not segregate sex offenders from the other prisoners. The Court reasoned that the use of women in guard positions would pose a threat to the security of the prison because of the likelihood of sexual assault on a female guard.ⁿ³¹ The Court pointed out that its decision was not based on a paternal attitude that a woman's safety would be at stake. It explained that normally the decision to take such a risk should be up to the woman; however, the essence of the guard position is to provide security in the prison, and the risk of a female guard becoming a victim of sexual assault could threaten the basic control, protection, and security of the prison.ⁿ³² The Court emphasized that it was the plaintiff's "very womanhood" that would directly undermine her capacity to provide the security that was the essence of the position of guard.ⁿ³³

Some subsequent cases have limited the Dothard holding to its facts, so that unless the situation involves the possibility of physical injury to a female applicant because of extremely dangerous surroundings and consequently the real possibility of a breach of security, the BFOQ will not apply.ⁿ³⁴ⁿ³⁵⁻⁴⁰

[iii] Stereotyped Characterizations

Other types of cases have involved stereotypes of certain traits of one sex or the other, as distinguished from the effect that the fact that the person is a male or female may have on the job in question. For example, a number of cases concerning the BFOQ for sex have involved generalizations concerning physical strength or other physical traits considered to be typical of one sex.ⁿ⁴¹

Differing standards have been formulated for application of the BFOQ for sex based on a trait that is identified with one sex. The Fifth Circuit, in Weeks v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company,ⁿ⁴² upheld the application of the BFOQ exception with regard to the exclusion of women from a position because of a weight lifting requirement, stating that the standard was whether the defendant could prove it had reasonable cause to believe that all or substantially all women would be unable to perform safely and effectively the duties of the job involved. In Rosenfeld v. Southern Pacific Company,ⁿ⁴³ the Ninth Circuit rejected the Weeks standard, stating that the enumeration of that standard was not necessary to the holding in Weeks because the case had already gone to trial and it was only necessary for the court to decide whether the defendant had met its burden of proof for establishing a BFOQ. The standard set forth in Rosenfeld was that the defendant must establish whether or not employees are qualified for a position based on whether they have the individual capacity to perform the job and that employees must be given the opportunity to show that they do have that ability. The court stated that sexual characteristics, rather than characteristics that might, to one degree or another, correlate with a particular sex, must be the basis for the application of the BFOQ exception. This standard is in accord with the EEOC standard for BFOQ based on sex set forth in the regulations.ⁿ⁴⁴

However, a later Ninth Circuit case seems to have backed away from the standard applied in Rosenfeld. In Harriss v. Pan American World Airways, Inc.,ⁿ⁴⁵ the court stated that it joined the Fourth Circuitⁿ⁴⁶ in adopting the standard developed by the Fifth Circuit for application of the BFOQ for sex. The court in Harriss stated that this standard consisted of two parts. The first required a showing that the job qualification is reasonably necessary to the essence of the business.ⁿ⁴⁷ The second consisted of the Weeks requirement that the employer prove it had reasonable cause to believe that all or substantially all women would be unable to safely and efficiently perform the duties of the job.ⁿ⁴⁸ Applying the two-prong test, the court concluded that because of the safety risk involved in allowing pregnant flight attendants to continue flying, the BFOQ exception applied to the airline's policy of requiring pregnant flight attendants to take forced maternity leave.ⁿ⁴⁹ However, one case has suggested that a distinction may be drawn between Harriss and Rosenfeld in that Harriss involved a common carrier, which owes a higher standard of safety to its customers than does an ordinary employer, and thus that a lesser showing may be required to justify employment discrimination by a common carrier.ⁿ⁵⁰

[iv] Customer Preference

One of the leading cases on the subject of customer preference as a basis for the BFOQ exception is *Diaz v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc.*ⁿ⁵¹ In that case, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals held that an airline could not restrict its hiring of flight attendants to women based on the airline's arguments that women had the proper "psychological make-up" for the job and on its customers' preference for women.ⁿ⁵² While recognizing that the public's expectation of finding one sex in a particular role might cause some initial difficulty in allowing the other sex to perform the job, the court nevertheless stated that it would be totally anomalous to allow the preferences and prejudices of customers to determine whether the sex discrimination was valid--especially since Title VII, to a great extent, was meant to overcome such prejudices.ⁿ⁵³ The court added that customer preference could be taken into account only when based on the company's inability to perform the primary function or service it offers.ⁿ⁵⁴ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has also held that customers' stereotypical impressions of male and female roles do not qualify gender as a BFOQ.ⁿ⁵⁵

[v] Nonpregnancy as BFOQ

Title VII, as amended by the Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA),ⁿ⁵⁶ requires "women affected by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions [to] be treated the same for all employment-related purposes ... as other persons not so affected but similar in their ability or inability to work" The United States Supreme Court has construed this provision, together with the BFOQ defense,ⁿ⁵⁷ as well as the PDA's legislative history and the case law,ⁿ⁵⁸ as essentially requiring an employer to treat an employee who is pregnant or capable of becoming pregnant the same as her male counterparts, unless her pregnancy or reproductive potential actually prevents her from performing the duties of her job.ⁿ⁵⁹ In effect, therefore, the PDA "contains a BFOQ standard of its own ..."ⁿ⁶⁰

Some courts, including the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, have used the "safety exception" discussed in [ii], above, to apply the BFOQ defense to employment policies requiring pregnant flight attendants to take maternity leave.ⁿ⁶¹ The rationale is that pregnancy could incapacitate a flight attendant in ways that might threaten the safe operation of the aircraft. Thus, the safety of the passengers, not the safety of the woman, is the proper consideration. The BFOQ defense applies because passenger safety is the "essence" of an airline's business.ⁿ⁶²

Courts have applied the BFOQ defense to other pregnancy scenarios. For example, in Chambers v. Omaha Girls Club, Inc.,ⁿ⁶³ in which an unmarried Girls Club staff member was discharged when she became pregnant, the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the club's "role model rule" banning single parent pregnancies among its staff members qualified as a BFOQ.ⁿ⁶⁴ Although the court acknowledged that it was borrowing from the analytical underpinnings of the business necessity defense, it explained that the facts relevant to establish BFOQ were the same as those that the district court relied on to find business necessity,ⁿ⁶⁵ and that the "manifest relationship" standard associated with business necessity also could apply to a claimed BFOQ. Thus, the court concluded that the "role model rule" was a BFOQ because it had a manifest relationship to the club's fundamental purpose of providing young women with "exposure to the greatest number of available positive options in life."ⁿ⁶⁶ For a discussion of the "manifest relationship" standard as it applies to the business necessity defense, see § 41.21[4].

[d] BFOQ as Applied to National Origin

The EEOC regulations state that the BFOQ for national origin should be strictly construed.ⁿ⁶⁷ Apparently no reported cases have applied the BFOQ for national origin defense.

[2] Under ADEA

BFOQ is also a defense under the ADEA, which provides that it is not unlawful for any employer to take any action otherwise prohibited if age is a bona fide occupational qualification reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the particular business.ⁿ⁶⁸ Like the BFOQ exception under Title VII,ⁿ⁶⁹ the BFOQ exception for age discrimination is meant to be construed extremely narrowly.ⁿ⁷⁰

In Western Air Lines, Inc. v. Criswell,ⁿ⁷¹ the United States Supreme Court set forth the standard for the BFOQ defense in ADEA cases. The Court relied on Usery v. Tamiami Trail Tours, Inc.,ⁿ⁷² which held that an employer must establish that (1) the age qualifications are reasonably necessary to the essence of the business, and (2) the employer had reasonable cause to believe, on a factual basis, that all or substantially all persons over the age qualifications would be unable to perform safely and efficiently the duties of the job involved, or, alternatively, that individual testing of the employees is highly impractical or impossible.ⁿ⁷³

In another leading BFOQ case, Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Thurston,ⁿ⁷⁴ the Supreme Court held that the BFOQ defense did not apply to an airline policy that prevented flight captains who had reached mandatory retirement (age 60) from automatically transferring to the position of flight engineer, a position which did not require retirement at age 60, while allowing other, younger flight captains to automatically transfer to the position of flight engineer. The Court stated that the BFOQ must apply to the particular position in question.ⁿ⁷⁵ In the case before the Court, the discriminatory transfer policy was not permissible under the BFOQ defense because age was not reasonably necessary for the position of flight engineer, even if it were reasonably necessary for the position of flight captain.ⁿ⁷⁶

According to an EEOC policy guideline construing Thurston, the ADEA requires an employer to offer an employee disqualified from a job or position because of an age-based BFOQ the same employment options it offers to other employees disqualified for non age-related reasons. The comparative aspect of the treatment is crucial; thus, if the employer offers no options to employees disqualified for non age-related reasons, it need not offer any options to an employee disqualified because of an age-based BFOQ. Furthermore, the disqualified employee must be qualified for the available option on the same basis as other employees who have been granted job options.ⁿ⁷⁷

[3] Under FEHA

The FEHA provides that a discriminatory employment practice is not unlawful if it is based on a BFOQ.ⁿ⁷⁸ The BFOQ defense under the FEHA applies to discrimination charges based on race, religious creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical or mental disability, medical condition, marital status, sex, age, and sexual orientation.ⁿ⁷⁹ However, the defense is extremely narrowly construed under the FEHA, as it is under Title VII and the ADEA.ⁿ⁸⁰ For example, even if the employer can demonstrate that certain jobs require members of one sex, the employer also has the burden of showing that because of the nature of the operation of the business it could not rearrange the job responsibilities in order to reduce the BFOQ necessity.ⁿ⁸¹

When applied to justify overt disparate treatment, the BFOQ defense has two components:^{n81.1}

- First, the employer must demonstrate that the occupational qualification is reasonably necessary to the normal operation of the particular business.
- Secondly, the employer must show that the categorical exclusion based on protected class characteristic is justified, i.e., that all or substantially all of the persons with the subject class characteristic fail to satisfy the occupational qualification.

Ordinarily, an employer asserts this defense to justify its categorical exclusion of all individuals having a particular class characteristic.

California cases have adopted the federal standard set forth in *Weeks v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company*ⁿ⁸² for application of the BFOQ defense.ⁿ⁸³ The Weeks test requires that an employer prove that it had reasonable cause to believe that all or substantially all of the people excluded from a position would be unable to perform safely and efficiently the duties of the job involved.ⁿ⁸⁴ Thus, in Johnson Controls, Inc. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com.,ⁿ⁸⁵ a California court of appeal held that a "fetal protection" policy that barred fertile women from jobs involving lead exposure was not justified by the BFOQ defense because there was no evidence that such women could not perform the jobs. Furthermore, although some women became pregnant while working at the employer's facility, thus creating the possibility of harm to their offspring, that fact did not establish that "all or substantially all" female workers create such a risk. Thus, the "essence" of the business operation--making automotive batteries--was not undermined.ⁿ⁸⁶ In another case, a court rejected an employer's BFOQ defense because the employer excluded all people with back deficiencies from a position, even if they did not presently experience any disabling problems.ⁿ⁸⁷

In Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com.,ⁿ⁸⁸ a male club excluded women from employment based on privacy and male comradery concerns. The court of appeal held that the BFOQ was inapplicable because customer preference cannot be a basis for the exception and because the privacy concerns did not justify the exclusion in that enclosed shower and bathroom facilities were available for use by male club members.ⁿ⁸⁹

However, in one court of appeal case, the court upheld a city fire department's individually tailored maximum weight requirements on the basis that they were a BFOQ for the position of paramedic.ⁿ⁹⁰ The court stated that the need for medically reasonable body fat and weight limitations for paramedics was supported, not by stereotyped generalizations, but rather by statistical studies establishing that obesity decreases the strength, agility, endurance, and speed of paramedics and increases the risks of job-related injury, heart disease, stroke, and high blood pressure.ⁿ⁹¹

The FEHC regulations interpreting the FEHA state that privacy considerations may justify a BFOQ only under the following circumstances:ⁿ⁹²

1. If the job requires an employee to observe other individuals in a state of nudity or to conduct body searches; and
2. It would be offensive to prevailing social standards to have an individual of the opposite sex present; and
3. It is detrimental to the mental or physical welfare of individuals being observed or searched to have an individual of the opposite sex present.

The regulations also set forth the following situations that will not justify the application of the BFOQ defense:ⁿ⁹³

1. A correlation between individuals of one sex and physical agility or strength;
2. A correlation between individuals of one sex and height;
