(n18)Footnote 16. Moreau v. Air France (9th Cir. 2003) 343 F.3d 1179, 1188-1189 .

(n19)Footnote 17. 29 C.F.R. § 825.105(f); 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(d), (f).

(n20)Footnote 18. 29 C.F.R. § 825.220(b); see also U.S. Dept. of Labor, Wage and Hour Div. Summary of Major Comments on 29 C.F.R. § 825.104.

(n21)Footnote 19. See Nev. Dep't of Human Res. v. Hibbs (2003) 538 U.S. 721 (congressional intent to abrogate state sovereign immunity is sufficiently clear, and Congress validly exercised its power under U.S. Const., Amend. XIV, § 5 when it gave state employees right to sue their employers for violations of 29 U.S.C. § 2612(a)(1)(C)).

(n22)Footnote 20. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(d); Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(2)(A).

(n23)Footnote 21. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(d); Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(2)(B).

(n24)Footnote 22. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(e)(3)(A).

(n25)Footnote 23. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(d).

(n26)Footnote 24. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(d)(1).

(n27)Footnote 25. See 2 Cal. Code Regs. tit. § 7297.10.

(n28)Footnote 26. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.106 (1995).

(n29)Footnote 27. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.106 (1995).

(n30)Footnote 28. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.111 (1995).

(n31)Footnote 29. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.111(a)(3) (1995).

167 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.23

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.23 Eligible Employees

[1] Under FMLA

FMLA covers employees who (1) work for a covered employer; (2) have been employed by the employer for at least twelve months; (3) have been employed by the employer for at least 1,250 hours during the 12-month period preceding the leave; and (4) are employed at a worksite where 50 or more employees are employed by the employer within 75 miles of that worksite.ⁿ¹ The 12-month qualifying period for employment need not be consecutive.ⁿ² However, even though the 12 months of employment need not be consecutive, employment prior to a continuous break in service of seven years or more need not be counted.^{n2.1} On the other hand, employment periods preceding a break in service of more than seven years must be counted in determining whether the employee has been employed by the employer for at least 12 months in the following situations:^{n2.2}

- The employee's break in service is occasioned by the fulfillment of a National Guard or Reserve military service obligation. The time served performing the military service must be also counted in determining whether the employee has been employed for at least 12 months by the employer. However, this does not provide any greater entitlement to the employee than would be available under the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA).^{n2.3}

- A written agreement, including a collective bargaining agreement, exists concerning the employer's intention to rehire the employee after the break in service, such as for purposes of the employee furthering his or her education or for childrearing purposes.

If an employee is maintained on the payroll for any part of a week, including any periods of paid or unpaid leave (sick, vacation) during which other benefits or compensation are provided by the employer, such as workers' compensation, group health plan benefits, etc., the week counts as a week of employment. For purposes of determining whether intermittent/occasional/casual employment qualifies as "at least 12 months," 52 weeks is deemed to be equal to 12 months.^{n2.4} Nothing prevents employers from considering employment prior to a continuous break in service of more than seven years when determining whether an employee has met the 12-month employment requirement. However, if an employer chooses to recognize prior employment, the employer must do so uniformly, with respect to all employees with similar breaks in service.^{n2.5} The FMLA requires covered employers to maintain records for three years.^{n2.6} Employers would have documentation to confirm previous employment for a former employee who at the time of rehiring had a break in service of three years or less. When an employee relies on a period of employment that predates the employer's records, it will be incumbent upon the employee to put forth some proof of the prior employment, consistent with the employee's obligation to establish he or she is an eligible employee.^{n2.7}

The terms "employ" and "employee" have the same meaning as under the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).ⁿ³ Whether an employee has worked the minimum 1,250 hours of service is determined according to the principles established under the FLSA for determining compensable hours of work.ⁿ⁴ The determining factor is the number of hours an employee has worked for the employer within the meaning of the FLSA. The determination is not limited by methods of recordkeeping, or by compensation agreements that do not accurately reflect all of the hours an employee has worked for or been in service to the employer. Any accurate accounting of actual hours worked under FLSA's principles may be used.ⁿ⁵ However, pursuant to USERRA,ⁿ⁶ an employee returning from fulfilling a National Guard or Reserve military obligation must be credited with the hours of service that would have been performed but for the period of military service in determining whether the employee worked the 1,250 hours of service. Accordingly, a person reemployed following military service has the hours that would have been worked for the employer added to any hours actually worked during the previous 12-month period to meet the 1,250-hour requirement. In order to determine the hours that would have been worked during the period of military service, the employee's pre-service work schedule can generally be used for calculations.ⁿ⁷ In the event an employer does not maintain an accurate record of hours worked by an employee, including for employees who are exempt from FLSA's requirement that a record be kept of their hours worked, such as bona fide executive, administrative, and professional employees as defined in FLSA Regulations, the employer has the burden of showing that the employee has not worked the requisite hours. An employer must be able to clearly demonstrate, for example, that full-time teachersⁿ⁸ of an elementary or secondary school system, or institution of higher education, or other educational establishment or institution, who often work outside the classroom or at their homes, did not work 1,250 hours during the previous 12 months in order to claim that the teachers are not eligible for FMLA leave.^{n8.1}

The determination of whether an employee has worked for the employer for at least 1,250 hours in the past 12 months and has been employed by the employer for a total of at least 12 months must be made as of the date the FMLA leave is to start. An employee may be on "non-FMLA leave" at the time he or she meets the eligibility requirements, and in that event, any portion of the leave taken for an FMLA-qualifying reason after the employee meets the eligibility requirement would be "FMLA leave."^{n8.2}

Whether at least 50 employees are employed within 75 miles of the worksite of the employee requesting leave is determined as of the time the employee gives notice of the need for leave. Once an employer determines that the employee is eligible, that eligibility is not affected by any subsequent change in the number of employees employed at or within 75 miles of the worksite with regard to that specific leave request.ⁿ⁹ A worksite can refer to a single location or a group of contiguous locations; and separate buildings not directly connected are a single worksite if they are in reasonable geographic proximity, are used for the same purpose, and share the same staff and equipment.ⁿ¹⁰ For employees who work at no fixed worksite (such as construction workers, travelling salespersons), a "worksite" is the site to which they are assigned as their home base, from which their work is assigned, or to which they report.ⁿ¹¹ The 75-mile distance is measured by surface miles, using surface transportation over public streets, roads, highways, and waterways, by the shortest route from the facility where the employee requesting FMLA leave is employed.ⁿ¹² Absent available surface transportation, the distance is measured by using the most frequently used mode of transportation, for example, airline miles. The determination of how many employees are employed within 75 miles of the employee's worksite is based on the number of employees maintained on the payroll.ⁿ¹³

[2] Under CFRA

CFRA covers full-time or part-time employees working in California who (1) have been employed by the employer for more than twelve months (52 weeks) at any time (i.e., not necessarily consecutive weeks); (2) have been employed by the employer for at least 1,250 hours during the 12-month period preceding the leave; and (3) who are employed at a worksite where 50 or more employees are employed by the employer within 75 miles of that worksite.ⁿ¹⁴ CFRA eligibility requirements therefore follow FMLA requirements for employee eligibility, except that CFRA requires that the employee have worked for the employer for more than twelve months, whereas FMLA only requires that the employee have worked for the employer for at least twelve monthsⁿ¹⁵ (i.e., CFRA requires one more day of employment than FMLA).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence Family & Medical Leave Act General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws Coverage & Definitions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 2611(2); 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(b).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(b)(1).

(n4)Footnote 2.2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(b)(2).

(n5)Footnote 2.3. 38 U.S.C. 4301 et seq.

(n6)Footnote 2.4. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(b)(3).

(n7)Footnote 2.5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(b)(4).

(n8)Footnote 2.6. 29 C.F.R. 825.500(b).

(n9)Footnote 2.7. See Novak v. MetroHealth Medical Center (6th Cir. 2007) 503 F.3d 572, 577 ; Burnett v. LFW, Inc. (7th Cir. 2006) 472 F.3d 471, 477 .

(n10)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 2611(3); see 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.105(a), 825.110(c); see also 29 U.S.C. § 203(e) (definition of "employee" under FLSA). For discussion of who is a covered employee under the FLSA, see ch. 1.

(n11)Footnote 4. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(c)(1).

(n12)Footnote 5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(c)(1).

(n13)Footnote 6. For discussion of USERRA generally, see § 40.24.

(n14)Footnote 7. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(c)(2).

(n15)Footnote 8. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.800 (defining full-time teachers).

(n16)Footnote 8.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(c)(3).

(n17)Footnote 8.2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(d). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(b) for rules governing content of eligibility notice given to employees.

(n18)Footnote 9. 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(f).

(n19)Footnote 10. 29 C.F.R. § 825.111(a)(1).

(n20)Footnote 11. 29 C.F.R. § 825.111(a)(2).

(n21)Footnote 12. 29 C.F.R. § 825.111(b).

(n22)Footnote 13. 29 C.F.R. § 825.111(c).

(n23)Footnote 14. Gov. Code § 12945.2(a), (b); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(e). For the standard jury instruction on the employees eligibility to assert a claim under CFRA, see CACI 2601. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n24)Footnote 15. See discussion in [1], above.

168 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.24

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.24 Duration of Leave

[1] Calculation of 12-Week and 12-Month Periods

[a] Method of Calculation

Both CFRA and FMLA allow an eligible employee to take up to twelve workweeks of leave within any 12-month period.ⁿ¹

Twelve workweeks means the equivalent of twelve of the employee's normally scheduled workweeks.ⁿ² For purposes of determining the amount of leave used by an employee, holidays falling within a week taken of family care leave are counted as part of the leave, but time during which the employer's business activities have ceased (e.g., schools closing for vacation, plant closing for repairs or retooling) are not counted.ⁿ³ The 12-week maximum under CFRA does not include pregnancy disability leave,ⁿ⁴ which is a separate entitlement of up to four months, in addition to CFRA leave.ⁿ⁵

Both CFRA and FMLA provide a choice of the following four methods for measuring the 12-month period from which the employer may choose, so long as the method chosen is uniformly and consistently applied to all employees:ⁿ⁶

- The calendar year.
- Any fixed 12-month "leave year," such as the fiscal year, a year required by state law, or a year starting on an employee's "anniversary" date.
- The 12-month period measured forward from the date on which the employee begins his or her first leave.
- A "rolling" 12-month period measured backward from the date that an employee uses any leave.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

How the 12-month period is calculated has significant ramifications. For instance, if the period is calculated on a fixed 12-month period, such as a calendar or fiscal year, then an employee could be entitled to two 12-week leaves within a short span of time. For example, assume that the 12-month period is calculated on a calendar year basis and that an employee takes 12 weeks of leave from October to December of Year 1. The employee could then be eligible for an additional 12 weeks of leave starting in January of Year 2.ⁿ⁷

The CFRA and FMLA regulations, however, specifically permit employers to prohibit employees from stacking leave as described above, by calculating leaves backward on a rolling basis. The regulations specify that if the 12-month period is "rolling," i.e., measured backward from the date on which the employee uses any leave, then each time an employee takes leave for any purpose, the remaining leave entitlement would be the balance of the 12 weeks that has not been used during the immediately preceding 12 months.ⁿ⁸ Assume that an employee takes 8 weeks of leave from October 1 through December 1 of Year 1. If the employee requests additional leave at any time between October 1 of Year 1 and October 1 of Year 2, the 8 weeks of leave that the employee took beginning on October 1 of Year 1 is counted against the employee's leave entitlement. A leave scheduled to begin in May of Year 2, for example, could not be for more than 4 weeks. But if the employee had used all of his or her 12-week entitlement commencing in October of Year 1, he or she would not be entitled to any further leave until October of Year 2. Assume that an employee has taken 8 weeks of leave beginning in October of Year 1 and 4 weeks of leave beginning in May of Year 2. In October of Year 2, the employee would be eligible to take 8 weeks of leave. In May of Year 3, the employee would be eligible to take 4 weeks of leave.ⁿ⁹ Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

In Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁰ the employer terminated the plaintiff for taking time off that qualified as FMLA leave. The plaintiff characterized the employer's action as retaliation, on the theory that the employer had taken an adverse action (termination) in response to the plaintiff's exercise of a protected right (using leave time). The court, however, found that the employer's actions constituted interference, not retaliation, on the theory that the employer simply denied the exercise of lawful rights. Even though Bachelder drew this distinction to make a point about burdens of proof in interference cases (on the one hand) and retaliation and discrimination cases (on the other hand), the logic of Bachelder extends further. Often, plaintiffs allege that an employer's conduct was retaliation, thereby permitting the addition of individual defendants and avoiding removal to federal court. However, many times the conduct of which a plaintiff complains is nothing more than interference with a protected right, not retaliation. For example, if a plaintiff seeks an accommodation for a disability and is terminated because no such accommodation can be found, the adverse action is not retaliation. It is, at most, discrimination.

Bachelder is powerful authority for ensuring that trial courts are able to discern retaliation from interference. By making that distinction clear, the decision insures that only those individual defendants who truly belong in case will remain. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[b] Notice

The regulations allowing employers to choose among four methods for calculating employees' eligibility for FMLA leaveⁿ¹¹ do not specifically state how an employer must communicate its choice to the employees. However, the regulations do require covered employers who provide written guidance to employees concerning employee benefits or leave rights, such as employee handbook discussions, to incorporate in the handbook information on FMLA rights and responsibilities and the employer's FMLA policies.ⁿ¹² Employers who do not have employee handbooks must provide written guidance to employees concerning all of their rights and obligations under the FMLA.ⁿ¹³ This includes the employer's method of calculating the use of FMLA leave, which necessarily requires the designation of one of the four permissible leave years.ⁿ¹⁴ By failing to provide notice, an employer fails to select a calculation method; in a dispute without a noticed calculation method, the method with the most beneficial outcome for the employee will be used.ⁿ¹⁵

An employer wishing to change to a different method for calculating FMLA leave eligibility must give at least 60 days' notice to all employees. The transition must take place so that employees retain the full benefit of 12 weeks' leave under whichever method affords the greatest benefit to the employee.ⁿ¹⁶ If an employer initially has failed to select a calculation method, the employer may subsequently select a method only by providing all employees 60 days' notice of the method the employer intends to implement. For any leave request made before the employer has selected a calculation method, the employer may properly be held to the rule that the option providing the most beneficial outcome for the employee must be used.ⁿ¹⁷

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

In Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁸ the court held that an employer has an obligation to give employees advance notice of the type of leave year that it has chosen for the calculation of leave entitlement. Many employers provide such advance notice in the form of FMLA leave policies in employee handbooks. It is not sufficient, however, to indicate simply that an employee is entitled to twelve weeks of leave in twelve months. Bachelder requires that employers inform employees of the precise leave year that the employer has chosen for its FMLA leave program (from the present back, from the present forward, the calendar year, or any other twelve-month period). Theoretically, employers who inform employees of their leave rights only through letters issued at the start of the leave meet the advance notice requirement, so long as the letter clearly defines the applicable leave year. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox

[2] Intermittent or Reduced Leave

CFRA and FMLA leave may be taken intermittently or on a "reduced leave schedule" under certain circumstances.ⁿ¹⁹ Intermittent leave is FMLA leave taken in separate blocks of time due to a single qualifying reason.^{n19.1} A "reduced leave schedule" means a leave schedule that reduces an employee's usual number of working hours per workweek or hours per workday.^{n19.2} A reduced leave schedule is a change in the employee's schedule for a period of time, normally from full-time to part-time.ⁿ²⁰ Leave may be taken intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule when medically necessary for treatment of a serious health condition, to care for a member of the Armed Forces,^{n20.1} for recovery from treatment from a serious health condition, or to provide care or psychological comfort to an immediate family member with a serious health condition.ⁿ²¹

An employee's intermittent leave or a reduced leave schedule necessary to care for a family member or covered military servicemember includes not only a situation in which the condition of the family member or covered servicemember itself is intermittent, but also when the employee is only needed intermittently, such as when other care is normally available, or care responsibilities are shared with another member of the family or a third party.ⁿ²²

Under the FMLA, if an employee needs leave intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule for planned medical treatment, the employee must make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment so as not to disrupt unduly the employer's operations.ⁿ²³ On the other hand, unless and until the CFRA is amended to incorporate the new FMLA regulations, California employees can only be required to make an "attempt" (rather than a "reasonable effort") to schedule treatment to avoid unduly disrupting the employer's operations.^{n23.1}

The employer must account for leave on an intermittent or reduced leave schedule basis using an increment no greater than the shortest period of time the employer uses to account for use of other forms of leave, provided that it is not greater than one hour and that an employee's FMLA leave entitlement may not be reduced by more than the amount of leave actually taken. If an employer accounts for use of leave in varying increments at different times of the day or shift, the employer may not account for FMLA leave in a larger increment than the shortest period used to account for other leave during the period in which the FMLA leave is taken. If an employer accounts for other forms of leave use in increments greater than one hour, the employer must account for FMLA leave use in increments no greater than one hour. An employer may account for FMLA leave in shorter increments than used for other forms of leave. For example, an employer that accounts for other forms of leave in one-hour increments may account for FMLA leave in a shorter increment when the employee arrives at work several minutes late, and the employer wants the employee to begin work immediately. Accounting for FMLA leave will not alter the increment considered to be the shortest period used to account for other forms of leave or the use of FMLA leave in other circumstances.ⁿ²⁴ If it is physically impossible for an employee using intermittent leave or working a reduced leave schedule to commence or end work mid-way through a shift, such as when a flight attendant or a railroad conductor is scheduled to work aboard an airplane or train, or a laboratory employee is unable to enter or leave a sealed "clean room" during a certain period of time, the entire period the employee is forced to be absent is designated as FMLA leave and counts against the employee's FMLA entitlement.ⁿ²⁵

Only the amount of leave actually taken may be counted toward the employee's leave entitlement.ⁿ²⁶ The actual workweek is the basis of leave entitlement. Therefore, if an employee who would otherwise work 40 hours a week takes off 8 hours, the employee would use 1/5th of a week of FMLA leave. Similarly, if a full-time employee who would otherwise work 8-hour days works 4-hour days under a reduced leave schedule, the employee would use 1/2 of a week of FMLA leave. When an employee works a part-time schedule or variable hours, the amount of FMLA leave that an employee uses is determined on a pro rata or proportional basis. For example, if an employee would otherwise work 30 hours per week, but works only 20 hours a week under a reduced leave schedule, the employee's ten hours of leave would constitute 1/3 of a week of FMLA leave for each week the employee works the reduced leave schedule. An employer may convert these fractions to their hourly equivalent so long as the conversion equitably reflects the employee's total normally scheduled hours.^{n26.1} If an employer has made a permanent or long-term change in the employee's schedule for reasons other than FMLA, and prior to the notice of need for FMLA leave, the hours worked under the new schedule are to be used for making this calculation.^{n26.2} If an employee's schedule varies from week to week to such an extent that an employer is unable to determine with any certainty how many hours the employee would otherwise have worked but for the taking of FMLA leave, the employer may use a weekly average of the hours scheduled over the 12 months prior to the beginning of the leave period, including any hours for which the employee took leave of any type, for calculating the employee's leave entitlement.^{n26.3} If an employee would normally be required to work overtime, but is unable to do so because of a FMLA-qualifying reason that limits the employee's ability to work overtime, the hours the employee would have been required to work may be counted against the employee's FMLA entitlement. In that case, the employee is using intermittent or reduced schedule leave. For example, if an employee would normally be required to work for 48 hours in a particular week, but due to a serious health condition the employee is unable to work more than 40 hours that week, the employee would utilize eight hours of FMLA-protected leave out of the 48-hour workweek ($8/48 = 1/6$ workweek). Voluntary overtime hours an employee does not work due to a serious health condition may not be counted against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement.^{n26.4}

Leave for the birth, adoption, or foster-care placement of a child of the employee may also be taken intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule under both CFRA and FMLA,ⁿ²⁷ but different rules apply. Under FMLA, the employer's agreement is not required if the intermittent or reduced leave is taken for the serious health condition of the mother in connection with the birth of her child or if the newborn child has a serious health condition. If there is no serious health condition of the mother or child involved, the employer's agreement is required for intermittent or reduced leave for birth, adoption, or foster-care placement.ⁿ²⁸ Under CFRA, the basic minimum duration for leave for birth, adoption, or foster care placement is two weeks; however, employers must grant a request for leave of less than two weeks' duration on any two occasions.ⁿ²⁹ Under both CFRA and FMLA, such leave must be concluded within one year of the birth or placement of the child with the employee.ⁿ³⁰ As noted above, under California law, there is a separate four-month pregnancy disability leave available in addition to either CFRA leave or leave on the same basis as other workers under Title VII.ⁿ³¹

An employer may require an employee who needs intermittent leave or leave on a reduced leave schedule to transfer temporarily to a different job that has the equivalent pay and benefits (though not necessarily equivalent duties) that can better accommodate recurring periods of leave.ⁿ³² The employer may not transfer an employee to an alternative position to discourage the employee from taking leave or to otherwise work a hardship on the employee.ⁿ³³ When there is no longer an employee need for intermittent or reduced schedule leave, the employer must transfer the employee back to his or her original position.ⁿ³⁴

[3] Special Rules Regarding Spouses/Parents Working for Same Employer

Under FMLA, a husband and wife employed by the same employer are limited to a combined total of twelve weeks of leave during any 12-month period (1) for the birth of a son or daughter or to care for the child after birth; (2) for placement of a son or daughter with the employees in connection with adoption or foster care or for care after such placement;^{n34.1} or (3) to care for an employee's parent with a serious health condition.ⁿ³⁵ The Department of Labor has explained that the legislative history of FMLA manifested an intent to eliminate any employer incentive to refuse to hire married couples.ⁿ³⁶ Any portion of FMLA entitlement beyond what is used for the purposes enumerated above is available individually to the husband and wife for leave to be taken for any nonrestricted purposes.ⁿ³⁷ Moreover, the restriction does not apply to leave to care for the serious health condition of an employee's spouse, son, or daughter, or the employee's own serious health condition.

■ ILLUSTRATION

Husband and Wife, both employed by the same employer, each take six weeks' leave to care for their newborn, healthy child. This exhausts their leave entitlement for the year to care for the healthy child. However, each spouse remains eligible for an additional six weeks' leave to care for the child if the child develops a serious health condition.ⁿ³⁸

With regard to the special leave rules for the family members of members of the Armed Forces,^{n38.1} the FMLA provides that, for an employer who employs both spouses, the aggregate number of workweeks of leave to which both spouses may be entitled may be limited to 26 workweeks during a single 12-month period if the leave is for the family member to care for the servicemember who has a serious injury or illness or is a combination of that type of leave and leave (a) to care for a child after birth, (b) for placement of a son or daughter in connection with adoption or foster care or for care after the placement, or (c) to care for a parent with a serious health condition. If the leave taken by the spouses includes leave other than to care for a servicemember with a serious injury or illness, the limitation for leave of that type applies to that leave.^{n38.2}

There is a conflict between CFRA and FMLA because CFRA places a limit of a combined total of 12 workweeks on "parents" (rather than a "husband and wife") working for the same employer in connection with the birth, adoption, or foster care of a child.ⁿ³⁹ The Fair Employment and Housing Commission apparently took the position that placing a restriction solely on husbands and wives would constitute discrimination on the basis of marital status in violation of Government Code Section 12940(a).ⁿ⁴⁰ Thus, parents who are married may have different family care leave rights from unmarried parents under CFRA and FMLA.ⁿ⁴¹

Another conflict between the CFRA and the FMLA relates to leave to care for a parent with a serious health condition. Under the CFRA, employers may only limit parents employed by the same employer to a combined total of 12 workweeks of leave for the birth, adoption, or foster care placement of their child.ⁿ⁴² Under the FMLA, in addition to limiting leave for birth, adoption or foster care placement, employers may limit spouses employed by the same company to 12 workweeks of leave to care for a parent with a serious health condition.ⁿ⁴³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence General Overview Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence Family & Medical Leave Act General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(a)(1); 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.100(a), 825.200(a); Gov. Code § 12945.2(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(h).

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.200(f); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7297.0(q), 7297.3(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.200(f); 2 Cal. Reg. § 7297.3(c)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(3)(C).

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussions in §§ 8.12[1][a], 8.21[1], [2][a].

(n6)Footnote 6. 29 C.F.R. § 825.200(b), (d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(b); Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1126 (FMLA).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.200(c); Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1126 (FMLA).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.200(c); Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1126 (FMLA); see also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 29 C.F.R. 825.200(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1126 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See [a], above.

(n12)Footnote 12. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(a)(1); see Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1127 (employer who has employee handbook is bound by § 825.301(a)(1)).

(n13)Footnote 13. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(a)(2).

(n14)Footnote 14. Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1129 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1129-1130 (statement in employee handbook to effect that employees are entitled to up to twelve calendar weeks of unpaid FMLA leave within any twelve month period lacked sufficient notice that employer used rolling method for calculating leave eligibility because it simply parroted language of Act; inasmuch as employer failed to fulfill obligation to inform employees of choice of rolling method, it failed to select calculation method, and calendar year option--the most beneficial for employee--was used instead).

(n16)Footnote 16. 29 C.F.R. § 825.200(d)(1).

(n17)Footnote 17. 29 C.F.R. § 825.200(e); Bachelder v. Am. W. Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1128 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1126 .

(n19)Footnote 19. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(b); 29 C.F.R. § 825.202(a); Gov. Code § 12945.2(p); 2 Cal. Code Reg. §

7297.3(a).

(n20)Footnote 19.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.202(a).

(n21)Footnote 19.2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.202(a).

(n22)Footnote 20. 29 C.F.R. § 825.202(a).

(n23)Footnote 20.1. See § 8.21[4].

(n24)Footnote 21. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(b)(1); see 29 C.F.R. § 825.202(a), (b) (discussing "medical necessity"); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(e).

(n25)Footnote 22. 29 C.F.R. § 825.124(c).

(n26)Footnote 23. 29 C.F.R. § 825.203.

(n27)Footnote 23.1. See 2 Cal. Code Regs. tit. § 7297.10; 29 C.F.R. § 825.117 (1995).

(n28)Footnote 24. 29 C.F.R. § 825.205(a)(1).

(n29)Footnote 25. 29 C.F.R. § 825.205(a)(2).

(n30)Footnote 26. 29 C.F.R. § 825.205(b)(1). See also 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(c)(2).

(n31)Footnote 26.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.205(b)(1). See also 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.601, 825.602 (special rules for schools).

(n32)Footnote 26.2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.205(b)(2).

(n33)Footnote 26.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.205(b)(3).

(n34)Footnote 26.4. 29 C.F.R. § 825.205(c).

(n35)Footnote 27. 29 C.F.R. § 825.202(c); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(d).

(n36)Footnote 28. 29 C.F.R. § 825.202(c).

(n37)Footnote 29. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(d).

(n38)Footnote 30. 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.120(a)(2), 825.121(a)(2); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(d).

(n39)Footnote 31. Gov. Code § 12945(a); see discussion in § 8.12[1][b].

(n40)Footnote 32. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(b)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 825.204(a), (c); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(e)(1).

(n41)Footnote 33. 29 C.F.R. § 825.204(d).

(n42)Footnote 34. 29 C.F.R. § 825.204(e).

(n43)Footnote 34.1. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(f)(1); 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.120(a)(3), 825.121(a)(3).

(n44)Footnote 35. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(f)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 825.201(b).

(n45)Footnote 36. U.S. Dept. of Labor, Wage and Hour Div. Summary of Major Comments on 29 C.F.R. § 825.202. The Department of Labor is proposing to incorporate 29 C.F.R. § 825.202 into proposed 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.120

, 825.121. For discussion of the new proposed rules, see § 8.21[1].

(n46)Footnote 37. 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.120(a)(3), 825.121(a)(3), 825.201(b).

(n47)Footnote 38. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.120(a)(3), 825.121(a)(3), 825.201(b).

(n48)Footnote 38.1. See § 8.21[4], above.

(n49)Footnote 38.2. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(f)(2).

(n50)Footnote 39. Gov. Code § 12945.2(q) 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.1(c).

(n51)Footnote 40. See discussion of marital status discrimination at § 41.36[2][b].

(n52)Footnote 41. See Gov. Code § 12945.2(q); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.1(c); for further discussion of the interaction between CFRA and FMLA, see § 8.20[1].

(n53)Footnote 42. See 2 Cal. Code Regs. tit. § 7297.1(c).

(n54)Footnote 43. 29 C.F.R. § 825.201(b).

169 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.25

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.25 Notice Requirements

[1] Employer's Notice Requirements

[a] Employer's Notice: Right to Ask for Leave

CFRA and FMLA each require the employer to prominently post a notice providing information regarding an employee's right to take family care leave. The notice must be posted in conspicuous places on the employer's premises where notices to employees and applicants are customarily posted.ⁿ¹ Under the FMLA, covered employers must post this notice even if no employees are eligible for FMLA leave.^{n1.1} Under CFRA, the employer's failure to give or post notice precludes the employer from taking any adverse action against the employee, including denying CFRA leave, for failing to furnish the employer with advance notice of a need to take CFRA leave.^{n1.2} The civil penalty for a willful violation of the posting requirement is $110 for each separate violation under FMLA.ⁿ² CFRA regulations "encourage" employers to give a copy of the notice to each current and new employee and to otherwise disseminate the notice.ⁿ³ The statutory notice, however, may not be sufficient to inform employees of the method that the employer uses to calculate the 12-month period during which the employee can take up to 12 weeks' leave.ⁿ⁴

The Department of Labor and the FEHC have each provided form notices for use by employers,^{n4.1} but the CFRA notice is only a suggested notice, and an employer is free to develop its own notice that accurately reflects its own policy.ⁿ⁵ For CFRA, the text of the minimum notice requirements is provided in the California Code of Regulations.^{n5.1} If an employer's workforce is made up of a significant portion of workers who are literate in a language other than English, the employer must post the notice in a language in which the employees are literate.ⁿ⁶ Under the FMLA, employers furnishing FMLA notices to sensory-impaired individuals must also comply with all applicable requirements under federal or state law.^{n6.1}

If an employer has an employee handbook or other written guidance for employees regarding employee benefits or rights, information concerning CFRA and FMLA entitlement must be included in that handbook or document.ⁿ⁷ Under the FMLA, the employer may provide a copy of the notice by distributing it to each new employee upon hiring.ⁿ⁸ In either case, distribution may be accomplished electronically.ⁿ⁹

Under the FMLA, when an employee requests FMLA leave, or when the employer acquires knowledge that an employee's leave may be for an FMLA-qualifying reason, the employer must notify the employee of the employee's eligibility to take FMLA leave within five business days, absent extenuating circumstances.n9.1 Employee eligibility is determined and notice must be provided at the commencement of the first instance of leave for each FMLA-qualifying reason in the applicable 12-month period.n9.2 The eligibility notice must state whether the employee is eligible for FMLA leave.n9.3 If the employee is not eligible for FMLA leave, the notice must state at least one reason why the employee is not eligible.n9.4 Notification of eligibility may be oral or in writing.n9.5 If the employer is obligated to translate the general notice into one or more other languages, the employer must also translate the eligibility notice.n9.6 If, at the time an employee provides notice of a subsequent need for FMLA leave during the applicable 12-month period due to a different FMLA-qualifying reason, and the employee's eligibility status has not changed, no additional eligibility notice is required. If, however, the employee's eligibility status has changed, the employer must notify the employee of the change in eligibility status within five business days, absent extenuating circumstances.n9.7

[b] Employer's Notice: Rights and Responsibilities

Under the FMLA, employers are also required to provide written notice of rights and responsibilities, detailing the specific expectations and obligations of the employee and explaining any consequences of a failure to meet the obligations.n9.8 If the employer is obligated to translate the general notice into one or more other languages, the employer must also translate this notice.n9.9 The employer must provide this notice to the employee each time the employer provides the eligibility notice.n9.10 If leave has already begun, the notice should be mailed to the employee's address of record. The notice must include the following, as appropriate:n9.11

- That the leave may be designated and counted against the employee's annual FMLA leave entitlement if qualifyingn9.12 and the applicable 12-month period for FMLA entitlement.n9.13
- Any requirements for the employee to furnish certification of a serious health condition, serious injury or illness, or qualifying exigency arising out of active duty or call to active duty status, and the consequences of failing to do so.n9.14
- The employee's right to substitute paid leave, whether the employer will require the substitution of paid leave, the conditions related to any substitution, and the employee's entitlement to take unpaid FMLA leave if the employee does not meet the conditions for paid leave.n9.15
- Any requirement for the employee to make any premium payments to maintain health benefits and the arrangements for making the payments,n9.16 and the possible consequences of failure to make the payments on a timely basis, i.e., the circumstances under which coverage may lapse.
- The employee's status as a "key employee" and the potential consequence that restoration may be denied following FMLA leave, explaining the conditions required for denial.n9.17
- The employee's rights to maintenance of benefits during the FMLA leave and restoration to the same or an equivalent job upon return from FMLA leave.n9.18
- The employee's potential liability for payment of health insurance premiums paid by the employer during the employee's unpaid FMLA leave if the employee fails to return to work after taking FMLA leave.n9.19

If the specific information provided by the notice changes, the employer must provide written notice referencing the prior notice and setting forth any of the information in the notice of rights and responsibilities that has changed within five business days of receipt of the employee's first notice of need for leave subsequent to any change. For example, if the initial leave period was paid leave and the subsequent leave period would be unpaid leave, the employer may need to give notice of the arrangements for making premium payments.n9.20

A prototype notice of rights and responsibilities is contained in 29 C.F.R. Part 825, Appendix D and may be obtained from local offices of the Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division or from the Internet at www.wagehour.dol.gov. Employers may adapt the prototype notice as appropriate to meet the notice requirements. The notice of rights and responsibilities may be distributed electronically so long as it otherwise meets the requirements for the notice.n9.21

The notice of rights and responsibilities may include other information, such as whether the employer will require periodic reports of the employee's status and intent to return to work, but is not required to do so.n9.22 The notice may be accompanied by any required certification form.n9.23 Employers are expected to responsively answer questions from employees concerning their rights and responsibilities under the FMLA.n9.24

[c] Employer's Designation Notice

The employer is responsible in all circumstances for designating leave as FMLA-qualifying, and for giving notice of the designation to the employee.n9.25 When the employer has enough information to determine whether the leave is being taken for an FMLA-qualifying reason, such as after receiving a certification, the employer must notify the employee whether the leave will be designated and will be counted as FMLA leave within five business days, absent extenuating circumstances.n9.26 If the employer has sufficient information to designate the leave as FMLA leave immediately after receiving notice of the employee's need for leave,n9.27 the employer may provide the employee with the designation notice at that time.n9.28

The designation notice must be in writing. A prototype designation notice is contained in 29 C.F.R. Part 825, Appendix E and may be obtained from local offices of the Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division or from the Internet at <http://www.wagehour.dol.gov> .n9.29 If the leave is not designated as FMLA leave because it does not meet the requirements of the Act, the notice to the employee that the leave is not designated as FMLA leave may be in the form of a simple written statement.n9.30

Only one notice of designation is required for each FMLA-qualifying reason per applicable 12-month period, regardless of whether the leave taken due to the qualifying reason will be a continuous block of leave or intermittent or reduced schedule leave. If the employer determines that the leave will not be designated as FMLA-qualifying, for example if the leave is not for a reason covered by FMLA or the FMLA leave entitlement has been exhausted, the employer must notify the employee of that determination. If the employer requires paid leave to be substituted for unpaid FMLA leave, or that paid leave taken under an existing leave plan be counted as FMLA leave, the employer must inform the employee of that designation at the time of designating the FMLA leave.n9.31

If the employer will require the employee to present a fitness-for-duty certification to be restored to employment, the employer must provide notice of that requirement with the designation notice. If the employer will require that the fitness-for-duty certification address the employee's ability to perform the essential functions of the employee's position, the employer must so indicate in the designation notice, and must include a list of the essential functions of the employee's position.n9.32 If the employer handbook or other written documents, if any, describing the employer's leave policies clearly provide that a fitness-for-duty certification will be required in specific circumstances, for example by stating that fitness-for-duty certification will be required in all cases of back injuries for employees in a certain occupation, the employer is not required to provide written notice of the requirement with the designation notice, but must provide oral notice no later than with the designation notice.n9.33

The employer must notify the employee of the amount of leave counted against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement. If the amount of leave needed is known at the time the employer designates the leave as FMLA-qualifying, the employer must notify the employee of the number of hours, days, or weeks that will be counted against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement in the designation notice. If it is not possible to provide the hours, days, or weeks that will be counted against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement, such as in the case of unforeseeable intermittent leave, the employer must provide notice of the amount of leave counted against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement upon the request by the employee, but no more often than once in a 30-day period and only if leave was taken in that period. The notice of the amount of leave counted against the employee's FMLA entitlement may be oral or in writing. If the notice is oral, the employer must confirm it in writing, no later than the following payday, unless the payday is less than one week after the oral notice, in which case the notice must be no later than the subsequent payday. Written notice may be in any form, including a notation on the employee's pay stub.^{n9.34}

If the information provided by the employer to the employee in the designation notice changes, the employer must provide written notice of the change within five business days of receipt of the employee's first notice of need for leave subsequent to any change.^{n9.35}

[d] Employer's Failure to Provide FMLA Notice

The employer's failure to follow notice requirements under the FMLA may constitute an interference with, restraint, or denial of the exercise of an employee's FMLA rights. An employer may be liable for compensation and benefits lost by reason of the violation, for other actual monetary losses sustained as a direct result of the violation, and for appropriate equitable or other relief, including employment, reinstatement, promotion, or any other relief tailored to the harm suffered.^{n9.36}

[2] Employee's Request for Leave

FMLA and CFRA both require that the employee give the employer notice of the need for family care leave.ⁿ¹⁰ The employee must give at least verbal notice sufficient to make the employer aware of the employee's need of leave, and of the anticipated timing and duration of the leave.ⁿ¹¹ Both CFRA and the FMLA require the employee to give the employer at least 30 days' notice for foreseeable events, such as a foreseeable birth or adoption or foster care placement, or foreseeable, planned medical treatment.ⁿ¹² If 30 days' notice is not practicable, notice must be given as soon as practicable.ⁿ¹³ which, under the FMLA means as soon as both possible and practical, taking into account all of the facts and circumstances in the individual case. When an employee becomes aware of a need for FMLA leave less than 30 days in advance, it should be practicable for the employee to provide notice of the need for leave either the same day or the next business day. In all cases, however, the determination of when an employee could practicably provide notice must take into account the individual facts and circumstances.^{n13.1} If the need for the leave is based on foreseeable planned medical treatment, the employee must make a reasonable effort to schedule the treatment so as not to disrupt the employer's operations, subject to the approval of the health care provider involved. An employer may for justifiable cause require an employee to attempt to reschedule treatment, subject to the health care provider's approval of the modification and his or her ability to reschedule.ⁿ¹⁴ If the employee gives less than 30 days' advance notice, the employee must respond to a request from the employer and explain why it was not practicable to give 30 days' notice.^{n14.1}

Under the FMLA, when the approximate timing of the need for leave is not foreseeable, it generally should be practicable for the employee to provide notice of leave within the time prescribed by the employer's usual and customary notice requirements.^{n14.2} Notice may be given by the employee's spokesperson, such as a spouse, adult family member, or other responsible party, if the employee is unable to do so personally. For example, if an employee's child has a severe asthma attack and the employee takes the child to the emergency room, the employee would not be required to leave his or her child in order to report the absence while the child is receiving emergency treatment. However, if the child's asthma attack required only the use of an inhaler at home followed by a period of rest, the employee would be expected to call the employer promptly after ensuring the child has used the inhaler.^{n14.3} The employee must provide sufficient information for the employer to reasonably determine whether the FMLA applies to the leave request, and the anticipated duration of the absence. When an employee seeks leave due to a qualifying reason, for which the employer has previously provided the employee FMLA-protected leave, the employee must specifically reference either the qualifying reason for leave or the need for FMLA leave. Calling in "sick" without providing more information will not be considered sufficient notice to trigger an employer's obligations under the FMLA.ⁿ¹⁴ When the need for leave is not foreseeable, an employee must comply with the employer's usual and customary notice and procedural requirements for requesting leave, absent unusual circumstances. For example, an employer may require employees to call a designated number or a specific individual to request leave. However, if an employee requires emergency medical treatment, he or she would not be required to follow the call-in procedure until his or her condition is stabilized and he or she has access to, and is able to use, a phone. Similarly, in the case of an emergency requiring leave because of an FMLA-qualifying reason, written advance notice pursuant to an employer's internal rules and procedures may not be required when FMLA leave is involved. If an employee does not comply with the employer's usual notice and procedural requirements, and no unusual circumstances justify the failure to comply, the employer may delay or deny FMLA-protected leave.^{n14.5}

The employee need not expressly assert rights under CFRAⁿ¹⁵ or the FMLAⁿ¹⁶ or even mention them, but the employee must state the reason leave is needed (for example, for the birth of a child, or for medical treatment).ⁿ¹⁷ In one case interpreting CFRA, the court of appeal held that the employer did not violate that Act when, although the plaintiff had a serious health condition under CFRA, she failed to give the employer notice of her need for leave under the serious health condition provisions, and instead gave notice of a cold or flu condition.ⁿ¹⁸ The court emphasized that a cold or flu is not a "serious health condition" requiring leave under CFRA because it is not an illness involving either in-patient care or continuing treatment or supervision by a health provider.ⁿ¹⁹ The court rejected plaintiff's contention that her cold or flu symptoms alerted her employer that she had a serious health condition because she was receiving continuing treatment from a health care provider. Rather, the court found that the record suggested that the jury did find that plaintiff had a serious health condition under CFRA definitions, but that the condition was not the cold or flu and that plaintiff had not notified her employer of the serious health condition sufficient to qualify her for leave under the CFRA.ⁿ²⁰

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc., ⁿ²¹ is one of only a handful of California decisions interpreting CFRA,ⁿ²² and it is welcome on two counts. First, CFRA was enacted, in part, to provide leave for an employee's "serious health condition," not leave for everyday injury or illness, such as the common cold or the flu. Nonetheless, before Gibbs, it was possible to read CFRA (and the FMLAⁿ²³) loosely to hold that, if an employee was absent for more than three days with a cold or the flu and visited a doctor twice or visited a doctor once and received a course of antibiotics, he or she qualified for CFRA leave. The practical consequence of this "loose" interpretation was that an employee could take off Friday through Monday, appear on Tuesday with the requisite doctors' notes saying that he or she had been seen for flu or cold symptoms, and secure CFRA protection. These CFRA "holidays" are gone. Gibbs requires that the statute and its regulations be taken "as a whole." According to the appellate panel, "The regulation anticipates that a variety of health matters may involve absence from work and continuing medical treatment but still not properly be accorded FMLA (or CFRA) leave."ⁿ²⁴ In short, serious means serious.

Second, Gibbs makes it clear that an employee does not place an employer on notice of the need for CFRA leave for a serious health condition, unless such leave is expressly requested or unless the employee explains his or her absence in terms that indicate the existence of a serious health condition. The fact that a cold or a flu could constitute a serious health condition under unusual circumstances does not mean that the announcement of cold or flu symptoms qualifies as adequate notice. The decision implies that an employer has no obligation to anticipate "a worst case scenario." Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Once the employee states the reason leave is needed under CFRA or the FMLA, the employer should inquire further if it is necessary to have more information concerning whether CFRA or FMLA is involved, and the employer should obtain the details of the leave, including whether a serious medical condition exists for which certification will be required.ⁿ²⁵ An employee has an obligation to respond to an employer's questions designed to determine whether an absence is potentially FMLA-qualifying. Failure to respond to reasonable employer inquiries regarding the leave request may result in denial of FMLA protection if the employer is unable to determine whether the leave is FMLA-qualifying.^{n25.1}

Under FMLA, if an employee fails to give the requisite notice for foreseeable leave, an employer may waive the notice obligations.ⁿ²⁶ However, absent a reasonable excuse for the employee's delay in requesting leave, the employer may under certain conditions delay the leave.ⁿ²⁷ In all cases, for the onset of an employee's FMLA leave to be delayed due to lack of required notice, it must be clear that the employee had actual notice of the FMLA notice requirements.ⁿ²⁸ When the need for FMLA leave is foreseeable at least 30 days in advance and an employee fails to give timely advance notice with no reasonable excuse, the employer may delay FMLA coverage until 30 days after the date the employee provides notice. The need for leave and the approximate date leave would be taken must have been clearly foreseeable to the employee 30 days in advance of the leave. For example, knowledge that an employee would receive a telephone call about the availability of a child for adoption at some unknown point in the future would not be sufficient to establish the leave was clearly foreseeable 30 days in advance.ⁿ²⁹ When the need for FMLA leave is foreseeable fewer than 30 days in advance and an employee fails to give notice as soon as practicable under the particular facts and circumstances, the extent to which an employer may delay FMLA coverage for leave depends on the facts of the particular case. For example, if an employee reasonably should have given the employer two weeks' notice but instead only provided one week's notice, the employer may delay FMLA-protected leave for one week. Thus, for example, if the employer elects to delay FMLA coverage and the employee nonetheless takes leave one week after providing the notice, i.e., a week before the two-week notice period has been met, the leave will not be FMLA-protected.^{n29.1} When the need for FMLA leave is unforeseeable and an employee fails to give the required notice,^{n29.2} the extent to which an employer may delay FMLA coverage for leave depends on the facts of the particular case. For example, if it would have been practicable for an employee to have given the employer notice of the need for leave very soon after the need arises consistent with the employer's policy, but instead the employee provided notice two days after the leave began, the employer may delay FMLA coverage of the leave by two days.^{n29.3}

Under CFRA, if an employee requests to use his or her paid vacation or other paid time off without reference to a CFRA-qualifying purpose, an employer generally may not ask whether the employee is taking the time off for a CFRA-qualifying purpose.ⁿ³⁰ If, however, the employer refuses the request, and the employee then provides information that the requested time off is for a CFRA-qualifying purpose, the employer may inquire further into the reason for the time off.ⁿ³¹

CFRA regulations require the employer to give employees reasonable advance notice of any notice requirements that it adopts, which may be incorporated in any general notice given pursuant to posting requirements.ⁿ³² The employer's failure to give or post notice regarding CFRA leaves precludes the employer from taking any adverse action against the employee, including denying CFRA leave, for failing to furnish the employer with advance notice of a need to take CFRA leave.ⁿ³³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceFamily & Medical Leave ActGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceFamily & Medical Leave ActPosting & RecordkeepingLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 2619(a); 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(a).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 1.2. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(5).

(n4)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. § 2619(b); 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 3. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(b).

(n6)Footnote 4. Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1127-1130 ; see § 8.24[1][b].

(n7)Footnote 4.1. Prototypes of notice required by FMLA are available from offices of Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division or on the Internet at <http://www.wagehour.dol.gov> . 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(4).

(n8)Footnote 5. 29 C.F.R. pt. 825, Appendix C; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(d).

(n9)Footnote 5.1. Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 879, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729 . See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(d).

(n10)Footnote 6. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(4); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(c).

(n11)Footnote 6.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(4).

(n12)Footnote 7. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(3); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.9(a).

(n13)Footnote 8. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(3).

(n14)Footnote 9. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(3).

(n15)Footnote 9.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(b)(1). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.110 for definition of eligible employee.

(n16)Footnote 9.2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(b)(1); see 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.127(c), 825.200(b).

(n17)Footnote 9.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(b)(2); see 29 C.F.R. § 825.110(a).

(n18)Footnote 9.4. 29 C.F.R. 825.300(b)(2).

(n19)Footnote 9.5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(b)(2). For a form for the notification, see 29 C.F.R. Part 825, Appendix D.

(n20)Footnote 9.6. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(b)(2). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(4).

(n21)Footnote 9.7. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(b)(3).

(n22)Footnote 9.8. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c)(1).

(n23)Footnote 9.9. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c)(1). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(a)(4).

(n24)Footnote 9.10. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c)(1).

(n25)Footnote 9.11. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c)(1).

(n26)Footnote 9.12. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.300(c), 825.301).

(n27)Footnote 9.13. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.127(c), 825.200(b), (f), (g).

(n28)Footnote 9.14. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.305, 825.309, 825.310, 825.313.

(n29)Footnote 9.15. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.207.

(n30)Footnote 9.16. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.210.

(n31)Footnote 9.17. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.218.

(n32)Footnote 9.18. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.214, 825.604.

(n33)Footnote 9.19. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.213.

(n34)Footnote 9.20. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c)(4).

(n35)Footnote 9.21. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c)(6).

(n36)Footnote 9.22. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c)(2).

(n37)Footnote 9.23. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c)(3).

(n38)Footnote 9.24. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c)(5).

(n39)Footnote 9.25. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d)(1). For designation of FMLA leave, see 29 C.F.R. § 825.301, discussed at § 8.27, below.

(n40)Footnote 9.26. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d)(1).

(n41)Footnote 9.27. See [2], below.

(n42)Footnote 9.28. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d)(2).

(n43)Footnote 9.29. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d)(4).

(n44)Footnote 9.30. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d)(4).

(n45)Footnote 9.31. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d)(1).

(n46)Footnote 9.32. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d)(3). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.312.

(n47)Footnote 9.33. 29 C.F.R. 825.300(d)(3).

(n48)Footnote 9.34. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d)(6).

(n49)Footnote 9.35. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d)(5).

(n50)Footnote 9.36. 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(e). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(c).

(n51)Footnote 10. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(e)(1), (2)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 825.302(a); Gov. Code § 12945.2(h),(i); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4. See Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1131 (FMLA; if employee completely fails to give notice that absence is for potentially FMLA-qualifying reason, absence is not protected by Act).

(n52)Footnote 11. 29 C.F.R. § 825.302(c); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(1). For the standard jury instructions of what constitutes reasonable notice by the employee, see CACI 2602. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n53)Footnote 12. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(e)(1), (2)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 825.302(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(2).

(n54)Footnote 13. 29 C.F.R. § 825.302(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(3)

(n55)Footnote 13.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.302(b).

(n56)Footnote 14. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(e)(2)(A); 29 C.F.R. § 825.302(e); Gov. Code § 12945.2(i); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(2).

(n57)Footnote 14.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.302(a).

(n58)Footnote 14.2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.303(a). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.303(c).

(n59)Footnote 14.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.303(a).

(n60)Footnote 14.4. 29 C.F.R. § 825.303(b).

(n61)Footnote 14.5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.303(c).

(n62)Footnote 15. Gov. C. § 12945.2.

(n63)Footnote 16. 29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.

(n64)Footnote 17. 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.302(c), 825.303(b); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(1); Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1130-1131 (FMLA; providing two doctors' notes to employer regarding absences placed employer on notice leave might be covered by FMLA, and employer could have inquired further to determine whether absences were likely to qualify for protection); Stevens v. Cal. Dept. of Corrections (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 285, 289-293, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19 (employee's request for vacation time over Christmas holiday to visit his ailing parents, without any reference to his intent to care for them, affirmatively suggested it was not CFRA-qualifying request, because statutory language of CFRA reveals it is not triggered by mere notice that parent has serious medical condition).

(n65)Footnote 18. Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7-9, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 .

(n66)Footnote 19. Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 ; see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(o); see also 29 C.F.R. § 825.114(c) (specifically excluding cold or flu from definition of FMLA-qualifying illness).

(n67)Footnote 20. Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8-9, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 . Compare Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 881-882, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729 (employee did give employer sufficient notice of CFRA-qualifying leave by providing verbal notice sufficient to make employer aware employee needed leave pursuant to CFRA).

(n68)Footnote 21. Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 .

(n69)Footnote 22. Gov. C. § 12945.2.

(n70)Footnote 23. 29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.

(n71)Footnote 24. Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 .

(n72)Footnote 25. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.302(c); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(1). See Faust v. California

Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 882-884, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729 (employee's refusal to communicate directly with employer's human resources manager was not unreasonable failure to respond to employer's follow-up inquiries regarding his medical condition; evidence showed employee's psychiatrist advised him to stay away from stressful situations and employee's wife responded to manager on her husband's behalf; moreover, nothing precluded manager from contacting employee's workers' compensation attorney, and previous human resources person routinely contacted employees' doctors for clarification; employee's chiropractor's conclusions regarding his inability to perform regular job duties placed employer on notice CFRA leave might be required, and it was obligated to inquire further to determine whether absence was likely to qualify for CFRA protection).

(n73)Footnote 25.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.302(c).

(n74)Footnote 26. 29 C.F.R. § 825.304(e).

(n75)Footnote 27. 29 C.F.R. § 825.304(b)-(d).

(n76)Footnote 28. 29 C.F.R. § 825.304(a). See [1][a], above.

(n77)Footnote 29. 29 C.F.R. § 825.304(b).

(n78)Footnote 29.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.304(c).

(n79)Footnote 29.2. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.303.

(n80)Footnote 29.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.304(d).

(n81)Footnote 30. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(2)(A).

(n82)Footnote 31. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(2)(A)(1).

(n83)Footnote 32. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(5); see [1], above.

(n84)Footnote 33. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(5). See Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 881, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729 (employer's failure to establish it complied with its notice obligations under CFRA precluded it from obtaining summary judgment with respect to claim that employee failed to give notice, where there was no evidence to indicate employer posted or gave employee notice of his right to leave under CFRA, employee gave employer sufficient information to notify employer of need for leave pursuant to CFRA, and employer terminated employee while he was out on medical leave pursuant to health care provider's report).

170 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.26

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.26 Medical Certification

[1] Generally

CFRA and FMLA each permit the employer to require the employee to submit a doctor's certification of the serious health condition of the family member involved and to require such certification for the employee's own serious health condition.ⁿ¹ Optional certification forms are provided by regulations under both CFRAⁿ² and FMLA.ⁿ³

Under FMLA regulations, in most cases, the employer should request that an employee furnish certification at the time the employee gives notice of the need for leave or within five business days thereafter, or, in the case of unforeseen leave, within five business days after the leave commences. The employer may request certification at some later date if the employer later has reason to question the appropriateness of the leave or its duration. The employee must provide the requested certification to the employer within 15 calendar days after the employer's request, unless it is not practicable under the particular circumstances to do so despite the employee's diligent, good faith efforts or the employer provides more than 15 calendar days to return the requested certification.ⁿ⁴

Under FMLA, an employer may also request certification from an employee who fails to return to work because of the continuation, recurrence, or onset of a serious health condition of the employee or family member, thereby precluding the employer from recovering its share of health benefit premiums paid on the employee's behalf during the leave period.ⁿ⁷ On such a request, the employee must provide certification in a timely manner, which must be within 30 days of the date the request is made, or repay 100 percent of the premiums paid by the employer.ⁿ⁸

Under FMLA regulations, the employee must provide a complete and sufficient certification to the employer if required by the employer.^{n8.1} The employer must advise the employee whenever the employer finds a certification incomplete or insufficient, and state in writing what additional information is necessary to make the certification complete and sufficient. A certification is considered incomplete if the employer receives a certification, but one or more of the applicable entries have not been completed. A certification is considered insufficient if the employer receives a complete certification, but the information provided is vague, ambiguous, or non-responsive. The employer must provide the employee with seven calendar days to cure any deficiency, unless that is not practicable under the particular circumstances despite the employee's diligent good faith efforts. If the deficiencies specified by the employer are not cured in the resubmitted certification, the employer may deny the FMLA leave.n8.2 Under the CFRA, which incorporates the 1995 FMLA regulations, an employer is required to advise an employee of an incomplete certification and to provide the employee with a "reasonable opportunity" to cure the deficiency.n8.2.1 A certification that is not returned to the employer is not considered incomplete or insufficient, but constitutes a failure to provide certification.n8.3

At the time the employer requests certification, the employer must also advise the employee of the anticipated consequences of an employee's failure to provide adequate certification. If the employee fails to provide the employer with a complete and sufficient certification, despite the opportunity to cure the certification,n8.4 or fails to provide any certification, the employer may deny the taking of FMLA leave.n8.5 It is the employee's responsibility either to furnish a complete and sufficient certification or to furnish the health care provider providing the certification with any necessary authorization from the employee or the employee's family member in order for the health care provider to release a complete and sufficient certification to the employer to support the employee's FMLA request. This applies any time an employer requests a certification permitted by the regulations, whether it is the initial certification, a recertification,n8.6 a second or third opinion,n8.7 or a fitness for duty certificate,n8.8 including any clarifications necessary to determine if the certifications are authentic and sufficient.n8.9

Under the FMLA, when the employee's need for leave due to the employee's own serious health condition, or the serious health condition of the employee's covered family member, lasts beyond a single leave year,n8.10 the employer may require the employee to provide a new medical certification in each subsequent leave year. The new medical certifications are subject to the regulations for authentication and clarification,n8.11 including second and third opinions.n8.12 Under the CFRA, recertification may be requested upon the expiration of the time period which the health care provider originally estimated that the employee needed to take leave.n8.12.1 Neither the CFRA nor the FMLA regulations of 1995 explicitly provide for annual recertification. The 1995 FMLA regulations provide that "[t]he employer may request certification at some later date if the employer later has reason to question the appropriateness of the leave or its duration."n8.12.2

The CFRA defines the term "health care provider" for purposes of certifying a serious medical condition.n8.13 Under the CFRA, which incorporates the federal definition of that term, a chiropractor is a health care provider limited to treatment consisting of manual manipulation of the spine to correct a subluxation, as demonstrated by x-ray to exist.n8.14

FMLA regulations also cover certification for leave taken by the family of a covered servicemember because of a qualifying exigency,n8.15 and certification for leave taken to care for a covered servicemember (military caregiver leave).n8.16 For discussion of the application of the FMLA to the family of armed forces members generally, see § 8.21[4].

[2] Contents of Certification

Under the FMLA, when leave is taken because of an employee's own serious health condition, or the serious health condition of a family member, an employer may require a medical certification from a health care provider that sets forth the following information:n9

- The name, address, telephone number, and fax number of the health care provider and type of medical practice/specialization.
- The approximate date on which the serious health condition commenced, and its probable duration.

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.26

- A statement or description of appropriate medical facts regarding the patient's health condition for which FMLA leave is requested. The medical facts must be sufficient to support the need for leave. Medical facts may include information on symptoms, diagnosis, hospitalization, doctor visits, whether medication has been prescribed, any referrals for evaluation or treatment such as physical therapy, for example, or any other regimen of continuing treatment.
- If the employee is the patient, information sufficient to establish that the employee cannot perform the essential functions of the employee's job, as well as the nature of any other work restrictions, and the likely duration of that inability.ⁿ¹⁰
- If the patient is a covered family member with a serious health condition, information sufficient to establish that the family member is in need of care,ⁿ¹¹ and an estimate of the frequency and duration of the leave required to care for the family member.
- If an employee requests leave on an intermittent or reduced schedule basis^{n11.1} for planned medical treatment of the employee's or a covered family member's serious health condition, information sufficient to establish the medical necessity for the intermittent or reduced schedule leave and an estimate of the dates and duration of the treatments and any periods of recovery.
- If an employee requests leave on an intermittent or reduced schedule basis for the employee's serious health condition, including pregnancy, which may result in unforeseeable episodes of incapacity, information sufficient to establish the medical necessity for the intermittent or reduced schedule leave and an estimate of the frequency and duration of the episodes of incapacity.
- If an employee requests leave on an intermittent or reduced schedule basis to care for a covered family member with a serious health condition, a statement that the leave is medically necessary to care for the family member,^{n11.2} which can include assisting in the family member's recovery, and an estimate of the frequency and duration of the required leave.

If an employee is on FMLA leave running concurrently with a workers' compensation absence, and the provisions of the workers' compensation statute permit the employer or the employer's representative to request additional information from the employee's workers' compensation health care provider, the FMLA does not prevent the employer from following the workers' compensation provisions, and information received under those provisions may be considered in determining the employee's entitlement to FMLA-protected leave. Similarly, an employer may request additional information in accordance with a paid leave policy or disability plan that requires greater information to qualify for payments or benefits, provided that the employer informs the employee that the additional information only needs to be provided in connection with receipt of those payments or benefits. Any information received pursuant to a policy or plan may be considered in determining the employee's entitlement to FMLA-protected leave. An employee's failure to provide the information required for receipt of those payments or benefits will not affect the employee's entitlement to take unpaid FMLA leave.^{n11.3}

If an employee's serious health condition may also be a disability within the meaning of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA),^{n11.4} the FMLA does not prevent the employer from following the procedures for requesting medical information under the ADA. Any information received pursuant to those procedures may be considered in determining the employee's entitlement to FMLA-protected leave.^{n11.5}

An employee may choose to comply with the certification requirement by providing the employer with an authorization, release, or waiver allowing the employer to communicate directly with the health care provider of the employee or his or her covered family member. However, the employee may not be required to provide an authorization, release, or waiver. In all instances in which certification is requested, it is the employee's responsibility to provide the employer with complete and sufficient certification. Failure to do so may result in the denial of FMLA leave.^{n11.6}

Certification under CFRA is essentially the same,ⁿ¹² except that the health care provider need not identify the serious health condition of the employee's family member.ⁿ¹³ For certification of the employee's own serious health condition under CFRA, the identity of the condition need not be given, but it may be given at the employee's option.ⁿ¹⁴ CFRA regulations state that the employer may not ask the employee to provide additional information beyond that allowed in the regulations and that the employer must comply with all applicable laws regarding confidentiality of medical information.ⁿ¹⁵

The Department of Labor has developed two optional forms (Form WH-380E and Form WH-380F, as revised) for use in obtaining medical certification under the FMLA, including second and third opinions,^{n15.1} from health care providers that meets FMLA's certification requirements.^{n15.2} Optional Form WH-380E is for use when the employee's need for leave is due to the employee's own serious health condition. Optional form WH-380F is for use when the employee needs leave to care for a family member with a serious health condition. These optional forms reflect certification requirements so as to permit the health care provider to furnish appropriate medical information. Form WH-380E and WH-380F, as revised, or another form containing the same basic information, may be used by the employer. However, no information may be required beyond that specified in the regulations.^{n15.3} In all instances, the information on the form must relate only to the serious health condition for which the current need for leave exists.ⁿ¹⁶

The Department of Labor has also revised its FMLA regulations and optional certification form for the purpose of allowing employers to obtain information from a health care provider to verify that an employee in fact has a serious health condition and requires leave, but not to obtain unnecessary information for privacy and confidentiality reasons.ⁿ¹⁷ For example, the revised form requires certification as to which aspect of the definition of serious health condition applies and a statement of the medical facts supporting the definition, but it no longer provides for a diagnosis, and makes clear that all information on the form relates only to the condition for which the employee is taking FMLA leave.ⁿ¹⁸ However, information is still required regarding the regimen of treatment in general terms, since the Department of Labor views that as one of the specific requirements of a serious health condition under Title 29, Code of Federal Regulations, § 825.114(a)(2)(i)(B).ⁿ¹⁹ Thus, although steps have been taken to protect employees' privacy rights under FMLA, CFRA is stricter in terms of providing such protection because it does not permit an employer to require that the medical certification specify the serious health condition that led to the leave request. When both CFRA and FMLA are applicable, CFRA must be applied in this circumstance because it provides more protection to the employee.ⁿ²⁰

[3] Second and Third Opinions

Under both CFRA and FMLA, the employer can challenge the certification if the employer "has reason to doubt the validity of the certification."ⁿ²¹ However, under CFRA, the employer may challenge only the validity of a certification of the employee's own serious health condition,ⁿ²² and not a certification for leave taken for the serious health condition of the employee's child, spouse, or parent.ⁿ²³

Under the FMLA, if an employee submits a complete and sufficient certification signed by the health care provider, the employer may not request additional information from the health care provider. However, the employer may contact the health care provider for purposes of clarification and authentication of the medical certification, whether it is an initial certification or recertification, after the employer has given the employee an opportunity to cure any deficiencies.^{n23.1} To make that contact, the employer must use a health care provider, a human resources professional, a leave administrator, or a management official. Under no circumstances, however, may the employee's direct supervisor contact the employee's health care provider.

Under the CFRA, which incorporates the 1995 FMLA regulations, employers may only contact an employee's health care provider for purposes of clarification or authentication through a health care provider representing the employer and only with the employee's permission.ⁿ²⁴

For purposes of the FMLA regulations, "authentication" means providing the health care provider with a copy of the certification and requesting verification that the information contained on the certification form was completed and/or authorized by the health care provider who signed the document; no additional medical information may be requested. "Clarification" means contacting the health care provider to understand the handwriting on the medical certification or to understand the meaning of a response. Employers may not ask health care providers for additional information beyond that required by the certification form. The requirements of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act ("HIPAA") Privacy Rule,^{n24.1} which governs the privacy of individually-identifiable health information created or held by HIPAA-covered entities, must be satisfied when individually-identifiable health information of an employee is shared with an employer by a HIPAA-covered health care provider. If an employee chooses not to provide the employer with authorization allowing the employer to clarify the certification with the health care provider, and does not otherwise clarify the certification, the employer may deny the taking of FMLA leave if the certification is unclear.^{n24.2} It is the employee's responsibility to provide the employer with a complete and sufficient certification and to clarify the certification if necessary.^{n24.3}

CFRA and FMLA each provide that the employer may require that the employee obtain, at the employer's expense, a second opinion from an employer-approved health care provider regarding any of the information contained in the original certification.ⁿ²⁵ The health care provider selected to provide the second opinion cannot be employed on a regular basis by the employer.ⁿ²⁶ FMLA regulations further provide that the employer may not regularly contract with or otherwise regularly use that health care provider's services unless the employer is located in an area where access to health care is extremely limited.ⁿ²⁷ Similarly, CFRA regulations specify that the health care provider must not be employed on a regular basis by the employer.ⁿ²⁸

Under both CFRA and FMLA, if the second opinion is contrary to the first, the employer may require, again at the employer's expense, that the employee obtain a third medical opinion from a third health care practitioner approved by both employee and employer.ⁿ²⁹ The third opinion is binding on the parties.ⁿ³⁰ However, an employer's failure to have a health care provider jointly chosen by the parties make a binding determination as to the employee's entitlement to medical leave does not bar the employer from later claiming in litigation brought by the employee under CFRA that the employee did not suffer from a serious health condition and was capable of performing the employee's job.^{n30.1}

The employer must provide to the employee on his or her request a copy of any second or third medical opinions without cost to the employee.ⁿ³¹ In addition, FMLA regulations provide that the employer must reimburse the employee or his or her family member for any reasonable out-of-pocket travel expenses incurred in obtaining a second or third medical opinion.ⁿ³² FMLA regulations also provide that the employer may not require the employee or family member to travel outside normal commuting distance to obtain a second or third opinion except in very unusual circumstances.ⁿ³³

Under FMLA, pending receipt of a second or third opinion, the employee is provisionally entitled to FMLA leave benefits, including maintenance of health benefits.ⁿ³⁴ If the certifications do not ultimately establish the employee's entitlement to FMLA leave, the leave will not be designated as FMLA leave and may be treated as paid or unpaid leave under the employer's established leave policies.ⁿ³⁵

[4] Recertification

CFRA allows the employer to require recertification if additional leave is requested by the employee after the expiration of the originally estimated duration of the leave.ⁿ³⁶

Under the FMLA, in general an employer may request recertification no more often than every 30 days and only in connection with an absence by the employee.ⁿ³⁷ However, if the medical certification indicates that the minimum duration of the condition is more than 30 days, the employer must wait until the minimum duration expires before requesting a recertification. For example, if the medical certification states that an employee will be unable to work, whether continuously or on an intermittent basis, for 40 days, the employer must wait 40 days before requesting a recertification. In all cases, an employer may request a recertification of a medical condition every six months in connection with an absence by the employee. Accordingly, even if the medical certification indicates that the employee will need intermittent or reduced schedule leave for a period in excess of six months, such as for a lifetime condition, the employer would be permitted to request recertification every six months in connection with an absence.ⁿ³⁸

However, an employer may request recertification in less than 30 days under the following circumstances:ⁿ³⁹

- The employee requests an extension of leave.
- Circumstances described by the previous certification have changed significantly, such as the duration or frequency of the absence, or the nature or severity of the illness or complications. For example, if a medical certification stated that an employee would need leave for one to two days when the employee suffered a migraine headache and the employee's absences for his or her last two migraines lasted four days each, the increased duration of absence might constitute a significant change in circumstances allowing the employer to request a recertification in less than 30 days. Likewise, if an employee had a pattern of using unscheduled FMLA leave for migraines in conjunction with his or her scheduled days off, the timing of the absences also might constitute a significant change in circumstances sufficient for an employer to request a recertification more frequently than every 30 days.
- The employer receives information casting doubt upon the employee's stated reason for the absence or the continuing validity of the certification. For example, if an employee is on FMLA leave for four weeks due to the employee's knee surgery, including recuperation, and the employee plays in company softball league games during the employee's third week of FMLA leave, that information might be sufficient to cast doubt upon the continuing validity of the certification, allowing the employer to request a recertification in less than 30 days.

The employee must provide the requested recertification to the employer within the timeframe requested by the employer, which must allow at least 15 calendar days after the employer's request, unless it is not practicable under the particular circumstances to do so despite the employee's diligent, good faith efforts.ⁿ⁴⁰ The employer may ask for the same information when obtaining recertification as that permitted for the original certification.ⁿ⁴¹ The employee has the same obligations to participate and cooperate in the recertification process as in the initial certification process, including providing a complete and sufficient certification or adequate authorization to the health care provider.ⁿ⁴² As part of the information allowed to be obtained on recertification for leave taken because of a serious health condition, the employer may provide the health care provider with a record of the employee's absence pattern and ask the health care provider if the serious health condition and need for leave is consistent with that pattern.^{n42.1}

Recertification requested by the employer will be at the employee's expense unless the employer provides otherwise. No second or third opinion on recertification may be required.^{n42.2}

[5] Intent to Return to Work and Return-to-Work Certification

Under the FMLA, an employer may require an employee on FMLA leave to report periodically on the employee's status and intent to return to work. The employer's policy regarding these reports may not be discriminatory and must take into account all of the relevant facts and circumstances related to the individual employee's leave situation.^{n42.3} If an employee gives unequivocal notice of intent not to return to work, the employer's obligations under FMLA to maintain health benefits, subject to COBRA requirements, and to restore the employee cease. However, these obligations continue if an employee indicates the employee may be unable to return to work but expresses a continuing desire to do so.n42.4 If an employee discovers after beginning leave that the circumstances have changed and the amount of leave originally anticipated is no longer necessary, the employee may not be required to take more FMLA leave than necessary to resolve the circumstance that precipitated the need for leave. In that case, and also if it is necessary for an employee to take more leave than originally anticipated, the employer may require that the employee provide the employer reasonable notice, i.e., within two business days, of the changed circumstances when foreseeable. The employer may also obtain information on changed circumstances through requested status reports.n42.5

CFRA and FMLA each provide that as a condition of an employee's return from leave taken because of the employee's own serious health condition, the employer may require that the employee, at his or her own cost,n42.6 obtain certification that the employee is able to resume work. This requirement may only be made if the employer has a uniformly applied practice or policy of requiring such releases from other employees returning to work after illness, injury, or disability.n43

Under FMLA regulations, the employee has the same obligations to participate and cooperate in the fitness-for-duty certification process as in the initial certification process, including providing a complete and sufficient certification or providing sufficient authorization to the health care provider to provide the information directly to the employer.n44 An employer may seek a fitness-for-duty certification only with regard to the particular health condition that caused the employee's need for FMLA leave. The certification from the employee's health care provider must certify that the employee is able to resume work. Additionally, an employer may require that the certification specifically address the employee's ability to perform the essential functions of the employee's job. In order to require this certification, the employer must provide the employee with a list of the essential functions of the employee's job no later than with the designation notice,n45 and must indicate in the designation notice that the certification must address the employee's ability to perform those essential functions.n46 If the employer satisfies these requirements, the employee's health care provider must certify that the employee can perform the identified essential functions of the job. The employer may contact the employee's health care provider for purposes of clarifying and authenticating the fitness-for-duty certification.n47 Clarification may be requested only for the serious health condition for which FMLA leave was taken. The employer may not delay the employee's return to work while contact with the health care provider is being made. No second or third opinions on a fitness-for-duty certification may be required.n48

The employer may delay restoration to employment until the employee submits a required fitness-for-duty certification unless the employer has failed to provide the required designation notice. If the employer provides the required designation notice, an employee who does not provide a fitness-for-duty certification or request additional FMLA leave is no longer entitled to reinstatement under the FMLA.n48.1

An employer is not entitled to a certification of fitness to return to duty for each absence taken on an intermittent or reduced leave schedule.n48.2 However, under the FMLA an employer is entitled to a certification of fitness to return to duty for these absences up to once every 30 days if reasonable safety concerns exist regarding the employee's ability to perform the employee's duties, based on the serious health condition for which the employee took leave. If an employer chooses to require a fitness-for-duty certification under these circumstances, the employer must inform the employee at the same time it issues the designation notice that for each subsequent instance of intermittent or reduced schedule leave, the employee will be required to submit a fitness-for-duty certification unless one has already been submitted within the past 30 days. Alternatively, an employer can set a different interval for requiring a fitness-for-duty certification, as long as it does not exceed once every 30 days and the employer advises the employee of the requirement in advance of the employee taking the intermittent or reduced schedule leave. The employer may not terminate the employment of the employee while awaiting a certification of fitness to return to duty for an intermittent or reduced schedule leave absence. Reasonable safety concerns means a reasonable belief of significant risk of harm to the individual employee or others. In determining whether reasonable safety concerns exist, an employer should consider the nature and severity of the potential harm and the likelihood that potential harm will occur.n48.3

The CFRA is silent with regard to fitness for duty certifications for leave taken on an intermittent basis, therefore, for

California employers the 1995 FMLA regulations govern such that employers are not entitled to fitness for duty certifications for intermittent leave.^{n48.4}

If state or local law or the terms of a collective bargaining agreement govern an employee's return to work, those provisions must be applied.^{n48.5} Requirements under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) apply. After an employee returns from FMLA leave, the ADA requires any medical examination at an employer's expense by the employer's health care provider be job-related and consistent with business necessity. For example, an attorney could not be required to submit to a medical examination or inquiry just because her leg had been amputated. The essential functions of an attorney's job do not require use of both legs; therefore that inquiry would not be job-related. An employer may require a warehouse laborer, whose back impairment affects the ability to lift, to be examined by an orthopedist, but may not require that employee to submit to an HIV test when the test is not related to either the essential functions of the job or to the impairment. If an employee's serious health condition may also be a disability within the meaning of the ADA, the FMLA does not prevent the employer from following the procedures for requesting medical information under the ADA.^{n48.6}

[6] Effect of Failure to Provide Required Certification or Recertification

[a] Foreseeable Leave

Under the FMLA, in the case of foreseeable leave, if an employee fails to provide certification in a timely mannerⁿ⁴⁹ the employer may deny FMLA coverage until the required certification is provided. For example, if an employee has 15 days to provide a certification and does not provide the certification for 45 days without sufficient reason for the delay, the employer can deny FMLA protections for the 30-day period following the expiration of the 15-day time period, if the employee takes leave during that period.ⁿ⁵⁰

[b] Unforeseeable Leave

Under the FMLA, in the case of unforeseeable leave, an employer may deny FMLA coverage for the requested leave if the employee fails to provide a certification within 15 calendar days from receipt of the request for certification, unless not practicable due to extenuating circumstances. For example, in the case of a medical emergency, it may not be practicable for an employee to provide the required certification within 15 calendar days. Absent extenuating circumstances, if the employee fails to timely return the certification, the employer can deny FMLA protections for the leave following the expiration of the 15-day time period until a sufficient certification is provided. If the employee never produces the certification, the leave is not FMLA leave.ⁿ⁵¹

[c] Recertification

An employee must provide recertification within the time requested by the employer, which must allow at least 15 calendar days after the request, or as soon as practicable under the particular facts and circumstances. If an employee fails to provide a recertification within a reasonable time under the particular facts and circumstances, the employer may deny continuation of the FMLA leave protections until the employee produces a sufficient recertification. If the employee never produces the recertification, the leave is not FMLA leave. Recertification does not apply to leave taken for a qualifying exigency or to care for a covered servicemember.ⁿ⁵²

[d] Fitness-for-Duty Certification

When requested by the employer pursuant to a uniformly applied policy for similarly-situated employees, the employee must provide medical certification, at the time the employee seeks reinstatement at the end of FMLA leave taken for the employee's serious health condition, that the employee is fit for duty and able to return to workⁿ⁵³ if the employer has provided the required notice.ⁿ⁵⁴ The employer may delay restoration until the certification is provided. Unless the employee provides either a fitness-for-duty certification or a new medical certification for a serious health condition at the time FMLA leave is concluded, the employee may be terminated.n55

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsCoverage & DefinitionsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 2613(a); 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(a); Gov. Code § 12945.2(j), (k); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b). For discussion of certification for leave related to a qualifying exigency involving a member of the Armed Forces, see § 8.21[4][a], above. For the standard jury instruction on the employers affirmative defense to an action under CFRA that the employee did not provide a health-care providers certification of the need for the leave, see CACI 2610. For the standard jury instruction on the employers affirmative defense to an action under CFRA that the employee did not provide a written statement from a health-care provider that the employee was fit to return to work, see CACI 2611. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n2)Footnote 2. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.11.

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 C.F.R. Part 825, Appendix B (form WH-380).

(n4)Footnote 4. 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(b).

(n5)Footnote 7. 29 C.F.R. § 825.213(a)(3).

(n6)Footnote 8. 29 C.F.R. § 825.213(a)(3).

(n7)Footnote 8.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(c). See also 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.306, 825.309, 825.310. For discussion of the contents of a certification, see [2], below.

(n8)Footnote 8.2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(c). See also 29 C.F.R. § 825.313.

(n9)Footnote 8.2.1. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(d) (1995).

(n10)Footnote 8.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(c). For discussion of the effect of the failure to provide certification, see [6], below.

(n11)Footnote 8.4. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(c).

(n12)Footnote 8.5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(d). See also 29 C.F.R. § 825.313.

(n13)Footnote 8.6. See [4], below.

(n14)Footnote 8.7. See [3], below.

(n15)Footnote 8.8. See [5], below.

(n16)Footnote 8.9. 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(d).

(n17)Footnote 8.10. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.200 for definition of "single leave year."

(n18)Footnote 8.11. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.307.

(n19)Footnote 8.12. 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(e).

(n20)Footnote 8.12.1. See 2 Cal. Code Regs. tit. § 7297.4(b).

(n21)Footnote 8.12.2. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(c) (1995).

(n22)Footnote 8.13. See Gov. Code § 12945.2 (c)(6).

(n23)Footnote 8.14. Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 880 n.12, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.118(b)(1); Gov. Code § 12945.2(c)(6)(B).

(n24)Footnote 8.15. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.309.

(n25)Footnote 8.16. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.310.

(n26)Footnote 9. 29 C.F.R. § 825.306(a). See also 29 U.S.C. § 2613(b)(1)-(4)(A).

(n27)Footnote 10. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.123(b), (c).

(n28)Footnote 11. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.124.

(n29)Footnote 11.1. See § 8.24[2], above.

(n30)Footnote 11.2. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.124, 825.203(b).

(n31)Footnote 11.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.306(c).

(n32)Footnote 11.4. For discussion of the ADA generally, see Chs. 40, 41.

(n33)Footnote 11.5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.306(d).

(n34)Footnote 11.6. 29 C.F.R. § 825.306(e). For discussion of the effect of failure to provide certification, see [6], below.

(n35)Footnote 12. Gov. Code § 12945.2(j), (k); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(a).

(n36)Footnote 13. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(a)(1).

(n37)Footnote 14. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(a)(2).

(n38)Footnote 15. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(2)(A)(1), (2). For discussion of laws relating to confidentiality of medical information, see ch. 50.

(n39)Footnote 15.1. See [3], below.

(n40)Footnote 15.2. See 29 C.F.R. Part 825, Appendix B.

(n41)Footnote 15.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.306(b). See 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.306, 825.307, 825.308.

(n42)Footnote 16. 29 C.F.R. § 825.306(b).

(n43)Footnote 17. See U.S. Dept. of Labor, Wage and Hour Div. Summary of Major Comments on 29 C.F.R. § 825.306; 29 C.F.R. Part 825, Appendix B (form WH-380).

(n44)Footnote 18. See U.S. Dept. of Labor, Wage and Hour Div. Summary of Major Comments on 29 C.F.R. § 825.306.

(n45)Footnote 19. 29 C.F.R. § 825.306; see U.S. Dept. of Labor, Wage and Hour Div. Summary of Major Comments on 29 C.F.R. § 825.306.

(n46)Footnote 20. See 29 U.S.C. § 2651(b); see § 8.20[1].

(n47)Footnote 21. 29 U.S.C. § 2613(c)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(a)(2); Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3)(A); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(2)(A).

(n48)Footnote 22. See Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(2).

(n49)Footnote 23. Gov. Code § 12945.2(j); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(1).

(n50)Footnote 23.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(a). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(c).

(n51)Footnote 24. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(a) (1995).

(n52)Footnote 24.1. See 45 CFR Parts 160, 164.

(n53)Footnote 24.2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(a). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(d).

(n54)Footnote 24.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(a).

(n55)Footnote 25. 29 U.S.C. § 2613(c)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(b); Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3)(A); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(2)(A).

(n56)Footnote 26. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(b)(2); Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3)(A); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(2)(A).

(n57)Footnote 27. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(b)(2).

(n58)Footnote 28. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(2)(A).

(n59)Footnote 29. 29 U.S.C. § 2613(d)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(c); Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3)(C); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(2)(B).

(n60)Footnote 30. 29 U.S.C. § 2613(d)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(c); Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(3)(D); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(2)(C).

(n61)Footnote 30.1. Lonicki v. Sutter Health Central (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 201, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 570, 180 P.3d 321, 2008 Cal. LEXIS 3796, *11-22.

(n62)Footnote 31. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(2)(D).

(n63)Footnote 32. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(e).

(n64)Footnote 33. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(e).

(n65)Footnote 34. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(b)(1).

(n66)Footnote 35. 29 C.F.R. § 825.307(a)(2).

(n67)Footnote 36. Gov. Code § 12945.2(j)(2), (k)(2); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(b)(1), (2).

(n68)Footnote 37. 29 C.F.R. § 825.308(a).

(n69)Footnote 38. 29 C.F.R. § 825.308(b).

(n70)Footnote 39. 29 C.F.R. § 825.308(c).

(n71)Footnote 40. 29 C.F.R. § 825.308(d).

(n72)Footnote 41. 29 C.F.R. § 825.308(e). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.306, discussed in [2], above.

(n73)Footnote 42. 29 C.F.R. § 825.308(e). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(d).

(n74)Footnote 42.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.308(e).

(n75)Footnote 42.2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.308(f).

(n76)Footnote 42.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.311(a).

(n77)Footnote 42.4. 29 C.F.R. § 825.311(b).

(n78)Footnote 42.5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.311(c).

(n79)Footnote 42.6. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(c) (cost of certification is borne by employee, and employee is not entitled to be paid for time or travel costs spent in acquiring certification).

(n80)Footnote 43. 29 U.S.C. § 2614(a)(4); 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(a); Gov. Code § 12945.2(k)(4); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(2)(E); see discussion of restoration or reinstatement to job in § 8.30.

(n81)Footnote 44. 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(a). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.305(d).

(n82)Footnote 45. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d), discussed in § 8.27, below.

(n83)Footnote 46. 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(b). See also 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(d) (designation notice required in 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d) must advise employee if employer will require fitness-for-duty certification to return to work and whether fitness-for-duty certification must address employee's ability to perform essential functions of employee's job.).

(n84)Footnote 47. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.307, discussed in [3], above.

(n85)Footnote 48. 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(b). For discussion of second or third opinions, see [3], above.

(n86)Footnote 48.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(e). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.313(d), discussed in [6], below.

(n87)Footnote 48.2. For discussion of intermittent or reduced leave, see § 8.24[2].

(n88)Footnote 48.3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(f).

(n89)Footnote 48.4. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.310(g) (1995).

(n90)Footnote 48.5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(g).

(n91)Footnote 48.6. 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(g). For discussion of the ADA generally, see Chs. 40, 41.

(n92)Footnote 49. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.305, discussed at § 8.26, above.

(n93)Footnote 50. 29 C.F.R. § 825.313(a).

(n94)Footnote 51. 29 C.F.R. § 825.313(b).

(n95)Footnote 52. 29 C.F.R. § 825.313(c).

(n96)Footnote 53. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.312(a), discussed at § 8.26[5], above.

(n97)Footnote 54. 29 C.F.R. § 825.313(d). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(e).

(n98)Footnote 55. 29 C.F.R. § 825.313(d). See also 29 C.F.R. § 825.213(a)(3).

171 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.27

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.27 Designation of Leave

[1] Designation as Employer's Responsibility

CFRA and FMLA regulations each provide that it is always the employer's responsibility to designate any leave, including paid and unpaid leave, as CFRA or FMLA leave based on information provided by the employee or the employee's spokesperson and to give notice of such a designation to the employee.ⁿ¹ Under the FMLA, if the employer does not have sufficient information about the reason for an employee's use of leave, the employer should inquire further of the employee or the spokesperson to ascertain whether leave is potentially FMLA-qualifying.ⁿ² Once the employer has acquired knowledge that the leave is being taken for an FMLA-qualifying reason, the employer must notify the employee.ⁿ³

An employee giving notice of the need for FMLA or CFRA leave need not expressly assert rights under the FMLA or CFRA,ⁿ⁴ or even mention the FMLA to meet the obligation to provide notice,ⁿ⁵ although the employee needs to state a qualifying reason for the needed leaveⁿ⁶ and otherwise satisfy the notice requirements.ⁿ⁷ If the employee fails to explain the reasons for the leave, the employer may deny the leave.ⁿ⁸ In many cases, in explaining the reasons for a request to use leave, especially when the need for the leave was unexpected or unforeseen, an employee will provide sufficient information for the employer to designate the leave as FMLA leave. An employee using accrued paid leave may in some cases not spontaneously explain the reasons or their plans for using their accrued leave. However, if an employee requesting to use paid leave for an FMLA-qualifying reason does not explain the reason for the leave and the employer denies the employee's request, the employee will need to provide sufficient information to establish an FMLA-qualifying reason for the needed leave, so that the employer is aware that the leave may not be denied and may designate that the paid leave be appropriately counted against (substituted for) the employee's FMLA leave entitlement. Similarly, an employee using accrued paid vacation leave who seeks an extension of unpaid leave for an FMLA-qualifying reason will need to state the reason. If this is due to an event which occurred during the period of paid leave, the employer may count the leave used after the FMLA-qualifying reason against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement.ⁿ⁹

Any dispute between an employer and an employee as to whether leave qualifies as FMLA leave should be resolved through discussions between the employee and the employer. These discussions and the decision must be documented.ⁿ¹⁰

If the employer's failure to timely designate leave causes the employee to suffer harm, it may constitute an interference with, restraint of, or denial of the exercise of the employee's FMLA rights. An employer may be liable for compensation and benefits lost by reason of the violation, for other actual monetary losses sustained as a direct result of the violation, and for appropriate equitable or other relief, including employment, reinstatement, promotion, or any other relief tailored to the harm suffered.ⁿ¹¹ For example, if an employer that was put on notice that an employee needed FMLA leave failed to designate the leave properly, but the employee's own serious health condition prevented the employee from returning to work during that time period regardless of the designation, the employee may not be able to show that the employee suffered harm as a result of the employer's actions. However, if an employee took leave to provide care for a son or daughter with a serious health condition believing it would not count toward the employee's FMLA entitlement, and the employee planned to later use that FMLA leave to provide care for a spouse who would need assistance when recovering from surgery planned for a later date, the employee may be able to show that harm has occurred as a result of the employer's failure to designate properly. The employee might establish this by showing that the employee would have arranged for an alternative caregiver for the seriously-ill son or daughter if the leave had been designated timely.ⁿ¹²

In an unusual case, the FMLA did not apply when the employee conceded that, because she did not have a qualifying health condition, she never requested FMLA leave, nor would she have taken FMLA leave had it been offered. The court held that because she never sought to invoke FMLA rights, she could not argue that her employer interfered with the exercise of her rights when it suggested the FMLA might apply, provided her with information on it, and sought a medical certification of her condition.ⁿ¹³

Mischaracterization of CFRA leave as personal leave can subject the employer to liability as "interference" with the leave. A violation of the CFRA simply requires that the employer deny the employee's entitlement to leave.ⁿ¹⁴

Under CFRA, employer's duty is somewhat complicated by the fact that employers are constrained in their ability to elicit information from employees with regard to paid leave requests. If an employee requests the use of accrued vacation time or other paid accrued time off without reference to a CFRA-qualifying purpose, the employer may not know whether the requested leave does qualify under CFRA. The employer may not ask whether the employee is taking the time off for a CFRA-qualifying purpose.ⁿ¹⁵

If the employer denies the employee's request for a particular type of leave (as a paid leave) and the employee still seeks leave rights, the employee would have to make a more complete disclosure of the reason for the leave, such as information showing his or her right to a leave under CFRA.ⁿ¹⁶ CFRA regulations provide that only if the employee so informs the employer may the employer then inquire further into the reasons for the absences and find out if the leave should actually be designated as CFRA leave.ⁿ¹⁷ⁿ¹⁸⁻²⁰

[2] When Retroactive Designation Is Allowed

CFRA regulations state that an employer may not retroactively designate leave as CFRA leave after the employee has returned to work, except under those same circumstances provided for in the FMLA and its implementing regulations for retroactively counting leave as FMLA leave.ⁿ²¹ Under the FMLA, if the employer does not designate leave as required,ⁿ²² the employer may retroactively designate leave as FMLA leave with appropriate notice to the employee, provided that the employer's failure to timely designate leave does not cause harm or injury to the employee. In all cases in which leave would qualify for FMLA protections, an employer and an employee can mutually agree that leave be retroactively designated as FMLA leave.ⁿ²³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence General Overview Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence Family & Medical Leave Act Coverage & Definitions General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws Coverage & Definitions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(a)(1)(A).

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(a). See Bailey v. Southwest Gas Co. (9th Cir. 2002) 275 F.3d 1181, 1185-1186 (once employee and her physician asserted her medication precluded safely performing her job function of working with natural gas, employer had obligation to explore her status under FMLA and had the right, under company policies to which employee had agreed at start of employment, to obtain more information regarding whether she remained fit for duty).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(a). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(b); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(b); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.4(a)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(b). See 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.302 (notice requirements for foreseeable leave); 825.303 (notice requirements for unforeseeable leave). See also § 8.25[2], discussing the employee's request for leave.

(n8)Footnote 8. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(c).

(n11)Footnote 11. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(3). See 29 U.S.C. § 2617; 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(c).

(n12)Footnote 12. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(e).

(n13)Footnote 13. Bailey v. Southwest Gas Co. (9th Cir. 2002) 275 F.3d 1181, 1186 .

(n14)Footnote 14. 29 C.F.R. § 825.220(a)(1), b). see Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 347 F.3d 1125, 1134-1135 (employer failed in its responsibility to assess employee's entitlement to leave and denied her substantive right under FMLA and CFRA, constituting violation of FMLA and CFRA; further, designation of leave as personal deprived employee of rights under FMLA and CFRA, because by designating leave as personal, she was subject to control and discretion of supervisor in taking leave she had statutory right to take so that employee presented triable issue of fact as to whether her rights were violated by misidentification of leave as personal).

(n15)Footnote 15. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(2)(A).

(n16)Footnote 16. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(2)(A).

(n17)Footnote 17. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(2)(A)(1).

(n18)Footnote 18-20. Reserved

(n19)Footnote 21. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.3(a)(1)(A).

(n20)Footnote 22. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.300.

(n21)Footnote 23. 29 C.F.R. § 825.301(d).

172 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.28

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.28 Pay During Leave

[1] Vacation and Other Accrued Paid Leave

Both FMLA and CFRA generally provide for unpaid leaves,ⁿ¹ but under both laws the employer may require, or the employee may elect, to substitute any accrued paid vacation or other accrued paid time off (other than sick leave) for the otherwise unpaid family care or medical leave.ⁿ² Under the FMLA, "substitute" means that the paid leave provided by the employer, and accrued pursuant to established policies of the employer, will run concurrently with the unpaid FMLA leave. Accordingly, the employee receives pay pursuant to the employer's applicable paid leave policy during the period of otherwise unpaid FMLA leave. An employee's ability to substitute accrued paid leave is determined by the terms and conditions of the employer's normal leave policy. When an employee chooses, or an employer requires, substitution of accrued paid leave, the employer must inform the employee that the employee must satisfy any procedural requirements of the paid leave policy only in connection with the receipt of payment.ⁿ³ If an employee does not comply with the additional requirements in an employer's paid leave policy, the employee is not entitled to substitute accrued paid leave, but the employee remains entitled to take unpaid FMLA leave. Employers may not discriminate against employees on FMLA leave in the administration of their paid leave policies.ⁿ⁴ If neither the employee nor the employer elects to substitute paid leave for unpaid FMLA leave under these conditions and circumstances, the employee remains entitled to all the paid leave earned or accrued under the terms of the employer's plan.ⁿ⁵

Under the FMLA, if an employee uses paid leave under circumstances which do not qualify as FMLA leave, the leave will not count against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement.ⁿ⁶

The Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) permits public employers under prescribed circumstances to substitute compensatory time off accrued at one and one-half hours for each overtime hour worked in lieu of paying cash to an employee when the employee works overtime hours as prescribed by the FLSA. The FLSA also limits the number of hours of compensatory time an employee may accumulate depending upon whether the employee works in fire protection or law enforcement (480 hours) or elsewhere for a public agency (240 hours). In addition, under the FLSA, an employer always has the right to cash out an employee's compensatory time or to require the employee to use the time. Therefore, if an employee requests and is permitted to use accrued compensatory time to receive pay for time taken off for an FMLA reason, or if the employer requires that use pursuant to the FLSA, the time taken may be counted against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement.ⁿ⁷

Under CFRA, employers are prohibited from asking whether the employee is taking paid time off for CFRA purposes.^{n7.1} Thus, if the employee does not make any reference to CFRA, it may be difficult for an employer to know if a request to take vacation or other accrued paid leave is for a CFRA event.

Under both FMLA and CFRA, an employee has the right to substitute paid vacation and personal leave without limitation. Thus, the employer cannot override the employee's election to use such paid leave, nor can it restrict its use by requiring, for example, the use of full days or weeks at a time. Likewise, the employer has the right to require the employee to substitute such paid leave for otherwise unpaid FMLA/CFRA leave (in the absence of other limiting factors like a collective bargaining agreement), and the employee must accept the employer's decision to require it, even if the employee would desire a different result.^{n7.2}

[2] Sick or Medical Leave

CFRA and FMLA also allow the employer to require, or the employee to elect, to use any accrued paid sick/medical leave for the otherwise unpaid medical leave for the employee's own serious health condition.ⁿ⁸ FMLA also provides for the use of sick leave for the care of a family member with a serious health condition.ⁿ⁹ CFRA, however, does not grant the employee this right. Instead, CFRA authorizes use of accrued sick leave for other than the employee's own serious health condition only if mutually agreed upon by the employer and the employee.ⁿ¹⁰ However, Labor Code § 233 provides that an employer who provides sick leave for employees must permit an employee to use sick leave in any calendar year in an amount not less than the amount earned in six months's employment, to attend to the illness of a child, parent, spouse, or domestic partner of the employee.ⁿ¹¹ All conditions and restrictions placed by an employer on the use by an employee of sick leave also apply to the employee's use of sick leave to attend to the illness of a child, parent, spouse, or domestic partner.ⁿ¹² These provisions, however, do not extend the maximum period of leave to which an employee is entitled under the CFRA or FMLA.ⁿ¹³

[3] Overlap With Other Benefit Plans

Leave taken pursuant to a disability leave plan may be considered FMLA leave for a serious health condition and counted in the leave entitlement permitted under FMLA if it meets the criteria.ⁿ¹⁴ In those cases, the employer may designate the leave as FMLA leave and count the leave against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement. Because leave pursuant to a disability benefit plan is not unpaid, the provision for substitution of the employee's accrued paid leave is inapplicable, and neither the employee nor the employer may require the substitution of paid leave. However, employers and employees may agree, when state law permits, to have paid leave supplement the disability plan benefits, such as when a plan provides replacement income for only two-thirds of an employee's salary.ⁿ¹⁵

Under the FMLA, a serious health condition may result from injury to the employee "on or off" the job. If the employer designates the leave as FMLA leave,ⁿ¹⁶ the leave counts against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement. Because a workers' compensation absence is not unpaid, the provision for substitution of the employee's accrued paid leave is not applicable, and neither the employee nor the employer may require the substitution of paid leave. However, employers and employees may agree, when state law permits, to have paid leave supplement workers' compensation benefits, such as when workers' compensation provides replacement income for only two-thirds of an employee's salary. If the health care provider treating the employee for the workers' compensation injury certifies the employee is able to return to a "light duty job," but is unable to return to the same or equivalent job, the employee may decline the employer's offer of a "light duty job." As a result, the employee may lose workers' compensation payments, but is entitled to remain on unpaid FMLA leave until the employee's FMLA leave entitlement is exhausted. As of the date workers' compensation benefits cease, the substitution provision becomes applicable and either the employee may elect or the employer may require the use of accrued paid leave.^{n16.1}

[4] Substitution of Other Time Off

CFRA regulations state that the employer and employee may negotiate for the use of any additional paid or unpaid time off to substitute for CFRA leave.ⁿ¹⁷

[5] Family Temporary Disability Insurance Benefits

Effective January 1, 2004,ⁿ¹⁸ employees eligible to take family-care leave under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA)ⁿ¹⁹ or the California Family Rights Act (CFRA),ⁿ²⁰ to care for a seriously ill child, spouse, parent, or domestic partner, or to bond with a new child, are eligible to receive up to six weeks of wage replacement benefits.ⁿ²¹ This applies to leave taken after July 1, 2004.ⁿ²² For discussion of family temporary disability insurance benefits, see Chapter 80, § 80.13.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceFamily & Medical Leave ActCoverage & DefinitionsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsCoverage & DefinitionsHoliday, Sick & Vacation Pay

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(c); 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(a); Gov. Code § 12945.2(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(d)(2)(A); 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(a); Gov. Code § 12945.2(e); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(a). See 29 C.F.R. § 825.300(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(f).

(n8)Footnote 7.1. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(2)(A); see discussion in §§ 8.25[2], 8.27[1].

(n9)Footnote 7.2. See U.S. Dept. of Labor, Wage and Hour Div. Summary of Major Comments on 29 C.F.R. § 825.207; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(1).

(n10)Footnote 8. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(d)(2)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(c); Gov. Code § 12945.2(e); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(3)(A).

(n11)Footnote 9. 29 U.S.C. § 2612(d)(2)(B).

(n12)Footnote 10. Gov. Code § 12945.2(e); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(3)(B).

(n13)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 233(a); see Lab. Code § 233(b) (definitions).

(n14)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 233(a).

(n15)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 233(a); see Gov. C. § 12945.2; 29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.

(n16)Footnote 14. 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(d). See 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.112-825.115.

(n17)Footnote 15. 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(d).

(n18)Footnote 16. See § 8.27[1], above.

(n19)Footnote 16.1. 29 C.F.R. § 825.207(e). See also 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.210(f), 825.216(d), 825.220(d), 825.307(a), 825.702(d)(1), (2) regarding the relationship between workers' compensation absences and FMLA leave.

(n20)Footnote 17. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(b)(4).

(n21)Footnote 18. See Stats. 2002, Ch. 901, § 7.

(n22)Footnote 19. 29 U.S.C. § 2611 et seq.

(n23)Footnote 20. Gov. Code § 12945.2.

(n24)Footnote 21. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3301(a), (d) (no more than six weeks of benefits can be paid within any 12-month period).

(n25)Footnote 22. Stats. 2002, ch. 901, § 7.

173 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.29

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.29 Maintenance of Employee Status and Benefits

[1] Employee Status and Seniority

During CFRA or FMLA leave, employees retain their employee status. Employees return from leave with the same benefits and seniority they had when the leave commenced, and the taking of leave does not constitute a break in service for purposes of longevity, seniority under any collective bargaining agreement, or any employee benefit plan.ⁿ¹ However, under CFRA, if the employer's policy allows seniority to accrue while employees are out on paid leave, then seniority will accrue during any part of a paid CFRA leave.ⁿ²

[2] Group Health Plans

Under both CFRA and FMLA, the employer is required to maintain health care coverage under any group health plan for the duration of the leave at the same level and under the same terms and conditions as if the employee had continued in employment,ⁿ³ subject to the proviso that if the employee fails to return to work at the end of the leave, the employer may recover from the employee premiums paid for maintaining coverage during the employee's absence.ⁿ⁴ The obligation commences on the date leave first begins under FMLA or both FMLA and CFRAⁿ⁵ and continues for the duration of the leave up to a maximum of 12 workweeks in a 12-month period.ⁿ⁶ If an employee chooses not to retain group health plan coverage during his or her FMLA/CFRA leave, the employee is entitled, on his or her return from leave, to be reinstated to health benefits on the same terms as prior to taking leave.ⁿ⁷ Additionally, under both FMLA and CFRA, if the employee's position would have terminated if the employee were not out on leave (for example, if the employee's position is legitimately eliminated), the employer's obligation to provide group health benefits also ceases.ⁿ⁸

[3] Other Benefits

Under CFRA, the employee is entitled to participate in health plans for any additional period of leave not covered by the group health plans referred to in [2], above, and in any employee benefit plans including life, short-term or long-term disability or accident insurance, pension and retirement plans, and supplemental unemployment benefit plans to the same extent and under the same conditions that would apply to any other non-CFRA leave granted by the employer.ⁿ⁹ If there are no such existing conditions established, the employer must allow the employee to continue to participate in these plans, but the employer can require the employee to pay the premiums at the group rate during unpaid periods of family leave. The employee's election not to pay those premiums to continue the benefits does not constitute a break in service for purposes of longevity, seniority under a collective bargaining agreement, or any employee benefit plan requiring the payment of premiums.ⁿ¹⁰ An employer is not required to make retirement or pension plan payments or to count the leave period for purposes of "time accrued" under such a plan during any unpaid portion of CFRA leave.ⁿ¹¹ However, employees are allowed to continue making contributions in accordance with the terms of those plans.ⁿ¹²

FMLA does not require any other employee benefits except to the extent that such other benefits are provided by the employer's established policy for other forms of leave.ⁿ¹³ However, since employers are required to restore employees to the equivalent of their pre-leave benefits,ⁿ¹⁴ and cannot require the employees to meet any new qualifications (e.g., a physical to qualify for life insurance), some employers may elect to maintain other benefits and pay premiums for their continuation, which may or may not be subject to recovery from the employee on his or her return from leave.ⁿ¹⁵

[4] Repayment of Premiums to Employer

If the employee fails to return to work after the expiration of the period of leave to which he or she is entitled, the employer may recover the premiums paid for maintaining the health coverage, unless the employee's failure to return is because of (1) the continuation, recurrence, or onset of a serious health condition that entitles the employee to leave, or (2) other extenuating circumstances beyond the control of the employee.ⁿ¹⁶ An employee is deemed to have "failed to return from leave" if he or she works fewer than 30 days after returning from leave.ⁿ¹⁷ FMLA allows an employer (1) to deduct these costs from any sums due the employee (for example, unpaid wages, vacation pay, profit-sharing), provided that such deductions do not violate federal or state wage laws, or (2) to initiate a legal action against the employee to recover these costs.ⁿ¹⁸ For discussion of California law governing deductions from employee's paychecks generally, see Chapter 4.

If paid leave has been substituted for FMLA leave by requirement of the employer or election of the employee, the employer may not recover its share of health insurance premiums for any period of FMLA leave covered by paid leave.ⁿ¹⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence General Overview Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence Family & Medical Leave Act Coverage & Definitions General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws Coverage & Definitions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 26 U.S.C. § 2614(a); 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.214, 29 C.F.R. § 825.215(d); Gov. Code § 12945.2(g); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(d); see discussion of reinstatement to equivalent position in § 8.30.

(n2)Footnote 2. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(d)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 2614(c)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 825.209(a), (b); Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(1); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(c)(1).

(n4)Footnote 4. 29 U.S.C. § 2614(c); Bachelder v. America West Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 259 F.3d 1112, 1112 n.7 .

(n5)Footnote 5. This distinction is made because pregnancy disability leave is counted under FMLA but not under CFRA. see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.6; see also discussion in § 8.21[2].

(n6)Footnote 6. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(c)(2).

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 C.F.R. § 825.209(e); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(f).

(n8)Footnote 8. 29 C.F.R. § 825.209(f); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(1)(A).

(n9)Footnote 9. Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(2); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(d).

(n10)Footnote 10. Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(2); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(e)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(2); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(e)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(2); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(e)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. 29 C.F.R. § 825.209(h).

(n14)Footnote 14. 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.214, 825.215(a); see discussion of reinstatement in § 8.30.

(n15)Footnote 15. 29 C.F.R. § 825.213(b), 29 C.F.R. § 825.215(d)(1), (2).

(n16)Footnote 16. 29 U.S.C. § 2614(c)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 825.213(a)(1), (2); Gov. Code § 12945.2(f)(1)(A), (B); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(c)(5)(A), (B).

(n17)Footnote 17. 29 C.F.R. § 825.213(c); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.5(c)(5)(A).

(n18)Footnote 18. 29 C.F.R. § 825.213(f).

(n19)Footnote 19. 29 C.F.R. § 825.213(d).

174 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.30

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.30 Reinstatement to Job

[1] Generally

Under both CFRA and FMLA, an employee is entitled to reinstatement to his or her former job at the end of CFRA/FMLA leave.ⁿ¹ CFRA states that the employee is guaranteed the right to reinstatement in "the same or a comparable position,"ⁿ² and FMLA states that the employee is entitled to be restored to "the position of employment held by the employee when the leave commenced" or "an equivalent position with equivalent benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment."ⁿ³ Although the wording of the two statutes is slightly different, apparently CFRA is meant to model FMLA in this regard, as indicated by the CFRA regulations, which state that "reinstatement" means "restoration" within the meaning of FMLA and its implementing regulations.ⁿ⁴ However, CFRA provides that the right to reinstatement in the same or a comparable position is a "guarantee" made to the employee at the time leave is granted, and refusal to honor the guarantee constitutes an unlawful employment practice.ⁿ⁵ FMLA includes no such "guarantee" language.

[2] Definition of "Equivalent Position"

FMLA regulations state that an "equivalent position" is one that is virtually identical to the employee's former position in terms of pay, benefits, and working conditions, including privileges, perquisites, and status.ⁿ⁶ It must involve the same or substantially similar duties and responsibilities, which must entail substantially equivalent skill, effort, responsibility, and authority.ⁿ⁷ Employees who are no longer qualified for their position because of their inability to meet certain qualifications while they were on leave (for example, renew a license, attend a necessary course) must be given a reasonable opportunity to fulfill those conditions on their return to work.ⁿ⁸ That entitlement is not affected by either the fact that the employee has been replaced during his or her absence or the fact that the position has been restructured to accommodate the absence.ⁿ⁹

FMLA regulations also specify that the employee must be reinstated to the same or a geographically proximate worksite (i.e., one that does not involve a significant increase in commuting time or distance), to the same work shift or an equivalent work schedule, and to the same or an equivalent opportunity for bonuses, profit-sharing, and other similar discretionary and nondiscretionary payments.ⁿ¹⁰

[3] Establishing Refusal to Reinstate

CFRA regulations set forth rules for determining a refusal to reinstate.ⁿ¹¹ When a definite reinstatement date was agreed to at the beginning of the leave, a refusal to reinstate is established if it can be proven by a preponderance of the evidence that the leave was granted by the employer, and the employer failed to reinstate the employee to the same or a comparable position by the date previously agreed upon.ⁿ¹² If the reinstatement date is different from the original agreed-on date, a refusal to reinstate is established if it is proven by a preponderance of the evidence that the employer failed to reinstate the employee to the same or a comparable position within two business days, when feasible, after the employee notified the employer of his or her readiness to return as required by FMLA regulations.ⁿ¹³

[4] Denial of Reinstatement if Employee Would Not Have Remained Continuously Employed

Under both CFRA and FMLA, an employee has no greater right to reinstatement or to other benefits and conditions of employment than if the employee had been continuously employed during the leave period.ⁿ¹⁴ For example, while an employer's duties under the FEHA include extending reasonable accommodations to an employee if reasonable accommodations will enable the employee to perform his or her essential duties,^{n14.1} there is no similar provision in the CFRA requiring an employer to provide reasonable accommodation to an employee returning from CFRA leave.^{n14.2} Under the FMLA, once the 12-week leave period ends, an employee who remains unable to perform an essential function of the position because of a physical or mental condition has no right to restoration to another position under the FMLA.^{n14.3}

In order to justify denial of reinstatement, an employer has the burden of showing that an employee would not otherwise have been employed at the time reinstatement is requested.ⁿ¹⁵ Under FMLA, if a shift was eliminated or overtime was decreased, the employee would not be entitled to return to that shift or the original overtime hours; but if another employee has filled the position of the employee on leave on a certain shift, the employee is entitled to return to the same shift on which he or she was employed before taking FMLA leave.ⁿ¹⁶ Similarly, if a contract ended, the employer would not have to reinstate the employee.ⁿ¹⁷

■ ILLUSTRATION

While on leave, an employee's position is eliminated and the employee is laid off. If the employer can establish that the employee would not otherwise have remained employed at the scheduled end of the leave period, the employer's responsibility to continue leave, to maintain benefits, and to reinstate the employee ceases, provided the employer has no continuing obligations under a collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ¹⁸

[5] Denial of Reinstatement of "Key Employee"

Both CFRA and FMLA exempt certain "key employees" from the employer's obligation to reinstate employees following leave under limited circumstances.ⁿ¹⁹ For purposes of this exemption, a "key employee" is a salaried employee who is among the highest paid ten percent of all the employees employed by the employer within 75 miles of the employee's worksite.ⁿ²⁰ An employer may deny reinstatement to a key employee only under the following circumstances:ⁿ²¹

- The denial of restoration is necessary to prevent "substantial and grievous economic injury" to the operation of the employer, based on whether the restoration, not the leave itself, would cause such injury;
- The employer notifies the employee of its intent to deny restoration as soon as it determines that such injury would occur; and

- If the leave has already commenced, the employee has been given an opportunity to elect to return to work and elects not to do so after receiving such notice.

Although it is generally anticipated that such notice will be given prior to commencement of the leave, if leave has already commenced, the employer must provide the employee a reasonable time to return to work following the prescribed notice.ⁿ²²

FMLA regulations provide guidance regarding the meaning of the term "substantial and grievous economic injury." The regulations provide that an employer may take into account its ability to replace on a temporary basis the employee on FMLA leave. They further state that if permanent replacement is unavoidable, the cost of then reinstating the employee into an equivalent position can be considered in evaluating whether substantial and grievous economic injury will occur from restoration.ⁿ²³ The regulations provide that if the reinstatement of a key employee threatens the economic viability of the firm, it would constitute a "substantial and grievous economic injury."ⁿ²⁴ A lesser injury that causes substantial, long-term economic injury also would be sufficient to meet the standard, but minor inconveniences and costs that the employer would experience in the normal course of doing business would definitely not meet the test.ⁿ²⁵ However, the regulations and the accompanying summary explain that a precise test cannot be set for the level of hardship or injury that must be sustained due to the fact-specific circumstances that must be evaluated on a case-by-case basis. The summary also explains that the "substantial and grievous economic injury" standard is different from, and more stringent than, the "undue hardship" standard required under the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA) to justify a failure to accommodate an employee's disability.ⁿ²⁶

Under FMLA, an employer is required to give a key employee notice of his or her status as a key employee and of the ramifications of a finding that reinstatement of the employee will cause substantial and grievous economic injury.ⁿ²⁷ The employer must also give a key employee notice of its good-faith determination that reinstatement of the employee will cause substantial and grievous economic injury, that the employer cannot deny FMLA leave, and that it intends to deny restoration to employment on completion of the leave. Although it is generally anticipated that such notice will be given prior to commencement of the leave, if leave has already commenced, the employer must provide the employee a reasonable time to return to work.ⁿ²⁸ A key employee is entitled to a continuation of group health insurance benefits unless and until (1) the employee advises the employer that he or she does not desire reinstatement at the end of the leave period, (2) FMLA leave entitlement is exhausted, or (3) reinstatement is actually denied.ⁿ²⁹ If the key employee takes leave after notice has been given, the employee may request reinstatement at the end of the leave period, and the employer must again make a determination of whether there will be substantial and grievous economic injury from reinstatement based on the facts at that time, and, if so, notify the employee in writing of the denial of reinstatement.ⁿ³⁰

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Leaves of Absence
Family & Medical Leave Act
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Leaves of Absence
Family & Medical Leave Act
Coverage & Definitions
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Wage & Hour Laws
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Wage & Hour Laws
Coverage & Definitions
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 U.S.C. § 2614(a)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 825.214(a); Gov. Code § 12945.2(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12945.2(a); see 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(a). For the standard jury instruction of what constitutes a "comparable job under CFRA, see CACI 2603. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 2614(a)(1)(A), (B); see 29 C.F.R. § 825.214(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(n).

(n5)Footnote 5. Gov. Code § 12945.2(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. 29 C.F.R. § 825.215(a); 29 C.F.R. § 825.215(c), (d) (specifics and examples of entitlement to pay, benefits).

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 C.F.R. § 825.215(a); see discussion of maintenance of benefits in § 8.29.

(n8)Footnote 8. 29 C.F.R. § 825.215(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. 29 C.F.R. § 825.214(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. 29 C.F.R. § 825.215(e)(1)-(3).

(n11)Footnote 11. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(b)(1).

(n13)Footnote 13. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(b)(1); former 29 C.F.R. § 825.309(c) [now see 29 C.F.R. § 825.311].

(n14)Footnote 14. 29 C.F.R. § 825.216(a), (b); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(1).

(n15)Footnote 14.1. See Gov. Code § 12940(a)(1), (2). For discussion of an employer's reasonable accommodation obligations under the FEHA, see § 41.51[3] of this text.

(n16)Footnote 14.2. Neisendorf v. Levi Strauss & Co. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 509, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216, 2006 Cal. App. LEXIS 1520, *12*20 (employee had no basis to proceed under CFRA, where employee was not released to return to work without accommodation by end of 12 weeks of CFRA leave, and released only with accommodation at end of 14 weeks, so that employer was not under express statutory duty to reinstate her to former position or equivalent position; unchallenged finding that employer had legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason to discharge employee (which had nothing to do with her CFRA leave) barred employee from articulating cognizable cause of action for jury's consideration based on employer's alleged refusal to honor CFRA's right to reinstatement).

(n17)Footnote 14.3. Neisendorf v. Levi Strauss & Co. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 509, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216, 2006 Cal. App. LEXIS 1520, *12. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.214(b).

(n18)Footnote 15. 29 C.F.R. § 825.216(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(1). See Gambini v. Total Renal Care, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 1087, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 9290, *21-*22 (because of uncontradicted evidence that employer terminated employee for conduct unrelated to FMLA leave, any putative error as to employer's burden of proof as to liability for failure to reinstate her after her period of FMLA leave was harmless). For the standard jury instruction on the employer's affirmative defense that employment would have ceased for other reasons, see CACI 2612. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on the affirmative defense that employment would have ceased for other reasons, see CACI VF-2601. For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n19)Footnote 16. 29 C.F.R. § 825.216(a)(2).

(n20)Footnote 17. 29 C.F.R. § 825.216(b).

(n21)Footnote 18. 29 C.F.R. § 825.216(a)(1); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(1)(A). See, e.g., Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 939-943, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 (grant of family leave did not confer any greater right on plaintiff to escape effects of company-wide workforce reduction than if she had not taken leave, and employer's obligation to reinstate her terminated when her employment was terminated).

(n22)Footnote 19. 29 U.S.C. § 2614(b); 29 C.F.R. § 825.216(c); Gov. Code § 12945.2(r); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(2).

(n23)Footnote 20. 29 U.S.C. § 2614(b)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 825.217(a); Gov. Code § 12945.2(r)(1)(A); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(2)(A), (B).

(n24)Footnote 21. 29 U.S.C. § 2614(b); 29 C.F.R. § 825.216(c), 29 C.F.R. § 825.218(a), 29 C.F.R. § 825.219(a)(b); Gov. Code § 12945.2(r)(1); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(2). For the standard jury instruction on the employers affirmative defense that the employee was a key employee, see CACI 2613. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n25)Footnote 22. Gov. Code § 12945.2(r)(1); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.2(c)(2).

(n26)Footnote 23. 29 C.F.R. § 825.218(b).

(n27)Footnote 24. 29 C.F.R. § 825.218(c).

(n28)Footnote 25. 29 C.F.R. § 825.218(c).

(n29)Footnote 26. 29 C.F.R. § 825.218(c); see U.S. Dept. of Labor, Wage and Hour Div. Summary of Major Comments on 29 C.F.R. § 825.218.; 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq .

(n30)Footnote 27. 29 C.F.R. § 825.219(a).

(n31)Footnote 28. 29 C.F.R. § 825.219(b).

(n32)Footnote 29. 29 C.F.R. § 825.219(c).

(n33)Footnote 30. 29 C.F.R. § 825.219(d).

175 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.31

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.31 Enforcement and Remedies

[1] Under FMLA

Under FMLA, the employee or another person, on behalf of the employee, may file a complaint regarding alleged violations with the U.S. Department of Labor.ⁿ¹ These complaints are to be investigated in the same manner as are complaints under the FLSA.ⁿ² An administrative complaint must be in writing and must be filed within a reasonable time after the employee discovers that his or her FMLA rights have been violated, and in no event more than two years after the violation occurred, or three years in the case of a willful violation.ⁿ³ For discussion of administrative enforcement of the FLSA, see Chapter 5, Part B, Subpart 2.

Either the aggrieved employee or the Secretary of Labor may file a civil action for violation of FMLA against the employer in federal or state court.ⁿ⁴ However, the employee's right to bring an individual action terminates if the Secretary brings an action to recover amounts due to that employee, unless the action is dismissed without prejudice on the Secretary's motion.ⁿ⁵ The statute of limitations for a civil action under FMLA is two years after the date of the last event constituting the alleged violation of FMLA, or three years for willful violations.ⁿ⁶

Under FMLA, the employee may recover wages, salary, employment benefits, or other compensation denied or lost because of the violation, plus interest.ⁿ⁷ If no tangible employment loss has occurred, the employee may recover any actual monetary losses sustained by the employee as a result of the violation, such as the cost of providing care to a family member for up to 12 weeks, or 26 weeks in a case involving leave resulting from the serious injury to or illness of a member of the Armed Forces, plus interest.ⁿ⁸ The employee may also be entitled to an additional amount of liquidated damages equal to the sum of the actual damages plus interest, unless the employer proves to the satisfaction of the court that its actions were taken in good faith and that the employer had reasonable grounds to believe that its actions did not violate FMLA, in which case the court has discretion not to award liquidated damages.ⁿ⁹ FMLA allows a plaintiff to recover damages for absences from work that were caused by an emotional condition that itself resulted from the employer's wrongful denial of FMLA leave.^{n9.1} In an appropriate case, the court may also award equitable relief, such as employment, reinstatement, and promotion.ⁿ¹⁰ A prevailing plaintiff is also entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees, expert witness fees, and other costs.ⁿ¹¹

[2] Under CFRA

CFRA is a part of the FEHA and is therefore enforced by the DFEH and FEHC under the general enforcement provisions of the FEHA.ⁿ¹² However, the remedy for a violation of the requirement of posting notice of CFRA rights is an order that the employer provide such notice.ⁿ¹³

An aggrieved employee may bring a civil action after exhausting the administrative remedy.ⁿ¹⁴ In addition, one federal district court has held that a claim of public policy wrongful termination may be based on a violation of CFRA.ⁿ¹⁵

An action under CFRA may be preempted by federal law if determination of the claim involves the interpretation of a collective bargaining agreement. Thus, in Dept. of Fair Employment & Housing v. Verizon California Inc.,ⁿ¹⁶ a unionized employee's claim under CFRA that she should have been paid for the full twelve weeks of family leave, but where she had not provided verification of injury from a medical specialist as requested by the employer, was preempted by § 301 of the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947.ⁿ¹⁷ The claim was substantially dependent on an interpretation of the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ¹⁸

For discussion of administrative enforcement of the FEHA, see Chapter 42, Part B. For discussion of civil actions under the FEHA, see Chapter 43, Part A.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Leaves of Absence
Family & Medical Leave Act
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Leaves of Absence
Family & Medical Leave Act
Coverage & Definitions
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Wage & Hour Laws
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Wage & Hour Laws
Coverage & Definitions
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(b)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 C.F.R. § 825.401(b), (c).

(n4)Footnote 4. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(a)(2), (b)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(a)(4).

(n6)Footnote 6. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(c)(1), (2); 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(a)(1)(A)(i), (ii); 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(a)(1)(A)(i), (ii); 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(a)(1)(A)(iii); 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(c).

(n10)Footnote 9.1. Farrell v. Tri-County Metropolitan Transportation District (9th Cir. 2008) 530 F.3d 1023, 1024-1025 (jury's verdict properly reflected that employee was not awarded FMLA damages for emotional distress, but rather for days of work that he missed because of stress or other mental problems resulting from wrongful denial of FMLA leave).

(n11)Footnote 10. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(a)(1)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(c).

(n12)Footnote 11. 29 U.S.C. § 2617(a)(3); 29 C.F.R. § 825.400(c).

(n13)Footnote 12. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.8; see generally Gov. Code §§ 12930, 12935, 12960, 12965(a), 12970.

(n14)Footnote 13. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.8.

(n15)Footnote 14. Gov. Code §§ 12960, 12965(b); Baker v. Children's Hospital Medical Center (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1062, 257 Cal. Rptr. 768 . For the standard jury instruction for the essential factual elements of a claim for violation of CFRA, see CACI 2600. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the special verdict form for violation of CFRA rights, see CACI VF-2600. For discussion of CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n16)Footnote 15. See Ely v. Wal-Mart (C.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 1422, 1425, 1426, 1429 . For discussion of liability for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, see ch. 60.

(n17)Footnote 16. Dept. of Fair Employment & Housing v. Verizon California Inc. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 160, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 258 .

(n18)Footnote 17. 29 U.S.C. § 185.

(n19)Footnote 18. Dept. of Fair Employment & Housing v. Verizon California Inc. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 160, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 258, 261-267 . see Gov. Code § 12945.2(e) (specifically referring to "any other paid or unpaid time off negotiated with the employer" to determine employee's right to be paid for family leave time).

176 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.32

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.32 Prohibition Against Discrimination or Retaliation

Under CFRA, it is unlawful to refuse to hire, or to discharge, fine, suspend, expel, or otherwise discriminate against, any individual because of (1) the individual's exercise of the right to CFRA leave, or (2) the individual's giving of information or testimony as to his or her own, or another person's, CFRA leave in any inquiry or proceeding related to family care and medical leave rights.ⁿ¹ The elements of a cause of action for retaliation in violation of CFRA are:ⁿ²

- The defendant was an employer covered by CFRA.
- The plaintiff was an employee eligible to take CFRA leave.
- The plaintiff exercised the right to take leave for a qualifying CFRA purpose.
- The plaintiff suffered an adverse employment action, such as termination, fine, or suspension because of the exercise of the right to CFRA leave.

In Dudley v. Dept. of Transportation,ⁿ³ the plaintiff alleged that, as a consequence of leaves taken to address her health problems, she was criticized, subjected to leave control, and "required to account for each and every day of her illness in a manner which was not required of other employees." She further alleged that, following two leaves of absence she took to control her medical condition, the defendant served her with Notice[s] of Adverse Action, which resulted in a salary reduction and 10-day suspension. The court of appeal found these assertions, if proven, would have been sufficient to allege a cause of action for retaliation under CFRA.

In Faust v. California Portland Cement Co.,^{n3.1} the former employee made out a prima facie case of retaliation under CFRA by presenting evidence that he was entitled to leave under the CFRA, he availed himself of that right, and was terminated for taking the leave to which he was entitled. The burden then shifted to the employer to present evidence to establish a legitimate, nonretaliatory reason for the discharge.^{n3.2} The employer failed to meet that burden. Although it asserted that it legitimately discharged the employee for insubordination for failing to respond to repeated inquiries by its human resources manager regarding his medical condition, the employer's refusal to communicate with any of the employee's representatives, particularly his workers' compensation attorney, undermined the contention that, as a matter of law, it legitimately fired the employee for ignoring the manager's inquiries.

In Avila v. Continental Airlines, Inc.,^{n3.3} plaintiff raised a triable issue of fact as to whether he was discharged in retaliation for taking leave under CFRA. Plaintiff had called in sick and submitted forms showing that he had been hospitalized. The court found that the fact that plaintiff called in sick was, by itself, insufficient to put the employer on notice that he needed CFRA leave for a serious health condition. However, in a case involving a medical emergency, notice on a hospital's preprinted form that an employee was hospitalized and unable to work may be sufficient to inform an employer that the employee might have suffered a serious medical condition under CFRA, and of the timing and duration of the necessary leave. Further, the absence itself under those circumstances suggests the necessity of a leave, at least as to those absent days. Thus, a reasonable trier of fact could conclude that plaintiff provided sufficient notice to put the employer on notice that plaintiff needed CFRA-qualifying leave. Because plaintiff's need for leave was unforeseeable due to an emergency medical condition, and because plaintiff testified that he both called in sick during his absence and submitted the forms to the employer upon returning to work, a reasonable trier of fact could also conclude that plaintiff requested leave "as soon as practicable."^{n3.4} Further, there was proof of a causal connection between plaintiff's protected status or conduct and his termination, even though the employees who fired him did not know about his illnesses or hospitalization. The employer did not dispute that the employees who fired plaintiff knew of his absences and discharged him in reliance on those absences.

In Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc.,ⁿ⁴ the court found that terminating the employment of an employee on family leave under CFRA pursuant to a company-wide workforce reduction did not violate CFRA. The employee claimed that she was subject to the workforce reduction in retaliation for taking family leave. The court held that although Gov. Code § 12945.2(a) requires an employer to provide a guarantee of employment in the same or comparable position on termination of family leave, Cal. Code Reg., title 2, § 7297.2(c) clarifies that the guarantee of reinstatement to the same or comparable position does not preclude an employer from terminating the employee's employment as part of a workforce reduction. Thus, the grant of family leave did not confer any greater right on the plaintiff to avoid a company-wide workforce reduction than she would have possessed had she not taken the leave. The employer's obligation to reinstate her terminated when her employment was terminated.ⁿ⁵

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Employers should note that the rules regarding reinstatement under CFRA are different than the rules regarding reinstatement under the California Pregnancy Disability Act ("PDA"). As the text passage states, both the regulations and the case law under CFRA permit an employer to terminate an employee on CFRA leave as part of a workforce reduction. By contrast, the PDA requires an employer to proceed in two steps, which may result in termination--but not necessarily.

First, the employer must return the employee to her same position, unless it "proves, by a preponderance of the evidence" that "the employee would not otherwise have been employed in her same position at the time reinstatement is requested for legitimate business reasons unrelated to the employee taking a pregnancy disability leave or transfer (such as a layoff pursuant to a plant closure)."

Second, the employer must return the employee to a comparable position, unless it "proves, by a preponderance of the evidence" that "there is no comparable position available. A position is 'available' if there is a position open on the employee's scheduled date of reinstatement or within 10 working days thereafter for which the employee is qualified, or to which the employee is entitled by company policy, contract, or collective bargaining agreement." See Cal. Code Reg. § 7291.9. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

A similar prohibition exists under FMLA.ⁿ⁶ However, the regulation covering protection of FMLA rights also includes prohibitions against interfering with employee rights under FMLA by manipulations intended to avoid FMLA responsibilities, including (1) employer manipulation of the number of employees at a worksite for purposes of affecting the 50-employee threshold for employee eligibility, (2) employer changes to the essential functions of the job to preclude the taking of leave, and (3) reduction of available work hours to avoid employee eligibility.ⁿ⁷

However, termination of employment does not violate family leave rights under either CFRA or FMLA, whether or not the employee was on leave at the time and whether or not the employer failed properly to advise the employee about family leave rights. The critical issue is whether the employer maintained a good-faith, reasonable belief that the discharged employee had abused the leave. An honest mistake may excuse an employee's trivial misuse of family leave. But, in one case, the court found that even if the employee was mistaken about when he should return to work, the employer's justifiable conclusion that he had misused leave in other ways and was untruthful allowed the employer to terminate him anyway.ⁿ⁸

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Discrimination Retaliation General Overview Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence Family & Medical Leave Act General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws Coverage & Definitions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Gov. Code § 12945.2(1); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.7; see Gov. Code § 19702 (similar prohibition applying to employers of state civil service employees).

(n2)Footnote 2. Dudley v. Dept. of Transportation (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 255, 261, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739 (plaintiff's complaint under FEHA, barred by res judicata judgment on ADA claim, could be amended to state facts sufficient to constitute cause of action for retaliation in violation of CFRA). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim of retaliation under CFRA, see CACI 2620. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the special verdict form for CFRA rights retaliation, see CACI VF-2602. For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n3)Footnote 3. Dudley v. Dept. of Transportation (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 255, 264-265, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 739 .

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 885, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729 .

(n5)Footnote 3.2. See Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal.4th 1028, 1042, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436, 116 P.3d 1123 .

(n6)Footnote 3.3. Avila v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1237, 1253-1261, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 440 .

(n7)Footnote 3.4. See 2 Cal. Code Regs. § 7297.4(a)(3).

(n8)Footnote 4. Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 .

(n9)Footnote 5. Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 939-943, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 .

(n10)Footnote 6. 29 U.S.C. § 2615; 29 C.F.R. § 825.220.

(n11)Footnote 7. 29 C.F.R. § 825.220(b).

(n12)Footnote 8. McDanel v. Eastern Municipal Water District Board (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 702, 707-708, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 267 .

177 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS
CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence
Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.33

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.33 Interaction of Family Leave and Pregnancy Disability Leave Laws

Under FMLA, any period of incapacity or treatment due to pregnancy, including prenatal care, is a "serious health condition,"ⁿ¹ and therefore leave taken for that purpose must be counted as part of the 12-week total entitlement under FMLA.^{n1.1}

The right to take leave under CFRA is separate and distinct from the right to take pregnancy disability leave under Government Code Section 12945(a).ⁿ² An employee's own disability due to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions is not included as a "serious health condition" under CFRA.ⁿ³ Thus, at the end of an employee's four-month pregnancy disability leave under Government Code Section 12945(a), the employee may take CFRA leave of up to twelve workweeks for reason of the birth of her child, if the child has been born by that date.ⁿ⁴ There is no requirement that either the employee or child have a serious health condition or that the employee continue to be disabled by her pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical condition in order to take CFRA leave for the birth of the child.ⁿ⁵ CFRA regulations also provide that an employer may (but is not required to) allow an employee to use CFRA leave prior to the birth of the child if the employee has used four months of pregnancy disability leave prior to the birth and the employee's health care provider determines that a continuation of the leave is medically necessary.ⁿ⁶ Doing so would not require the employer to provide more than the amount of CFRA leave to which the employee was otherwise entitled.ⁿ⁷

Under CFRA, the maximum possible combined leave entitlement for both pregnancy disability leave and CFRA leave for the birth of the child is four months and twelve workweeks.ⁿ⁸ That assumes that the employee is disabled by pregnancy, childbirth, or a related medical condition for four months and then requests and is eligible for a full 12-week CFRA leave for the reason of the birth of her child.ⁿ⁹

However, when a plaintiff alleges that he or she was terminated for unlawful reasons, courts will not accept a reduction in force as the conclusory explanation for the employee's termination. Thus, for example, in Liu v. Amway Corp.,^{n9.1} the Ninth Circuit found that under both the FMLA and CFRA, there was a triable issue of fact as to whether the employer impermissibly used an employee's leave as a factor in the decision to terminate her employment in a company-wide reduction in force.^{n9.2}

For purposes of determining whether an employee who has taken a pregnancy disability leave (which is also a FMLA leave)ⁿ¹⁰ and who then wants to take a CFRA leave for the birth of her child has met the CFRA employee eligibility requirements, the 12-month period during which the employee must have worked 1,250 hours is the period immediately preceding the employee's first day of FMLA leave based on her pregnancy, not the first day of the subsequent CFRA leave for reason of the birth of her child.ⁿ¹¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence Family & Medical Leave Act General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws Coverage & Definitions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 29 C.F.R. § 825.114(a)(2)(ii).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. But see Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 347 F.3d 1125, 1132 (after FEHA pregnancy leave, employee was entitled to additional leave to care for her baby or herself or a close relative with serious illness under FMLA).

(n3)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12945.2(o); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.6(a); see discussion of pregnancy disability leave in § 8.12.

(n4)Footnote 3. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.6(b).

(n5)Footnote 4. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.6(c). see Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 347 F.3d 1125, 1132 (employee was entitled to unpaid leave under CFRA after her FEHA pregnancy disability leave expired).

(n6)Footnote 5. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.6(c).

(n7)Footnote 6. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.6(c)(1).

(n8)Footnote 7. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.6(c)(1).

(n9)Footnote 8. Gov. Code § 12945.2(s); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.6(d).

(n10)Footnote 9. Gov. Code § 12945.2(s); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.6(d).

(n11)Footnote 9.1. Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 347 F.3d 1125 .

(n12)Footnote 9.2. Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 347 F.3d 1125, 1135-1137 (employee presented evidence from which jury could conclude that supervisor took fact she took leave into account in giving her low score on her evaluation and recommending her for termination, because evidence that subjective evaluation served as central, if not sole, factor in termination was significant, 19% drop in overall score from former evaluation could also create inference of impermissible motivation, and proximity in time between leave and termination provided supporting evidence of connection between events).

(n13)Footnote 10. See discussions in §§ 8.12[1][b], 8.21.

(n14)Footnote 11. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7297.0(e)(2).

178 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part C. FAMILY CARE AND MEDICAL LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law §§ 8.34 through 8.39

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 8.34[Reserved]

179 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part D. MILITARY LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.40

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.40 Federal Law

Under federal law, a person who leaves a position with an employer to enter into uniformed service is considered as having been on a leave of absence during the period of military training and service, and has the right to be restored or reemployed without loss of seniority and with the benefits offered to other employees on leaves of absence.ⁿ¹ For further discussion of veterans' reemployment rights under federal law, see Chapter 40, Part C.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceMilitary LeaveLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally 38 U.S.C. § 4301 et seq.

180 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part D. MILITARY LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.41

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.41 California Law

No employer may discharge any employee because of the employee's performance of any ordered military training or duty or because the employee is an officer, warrant officer, or enlisted person of the state military forces.ⁿ¹ Employers are also prohibited from (1) hindering or preventing a person from performing any military service or from attending any military encampment or place of drill or instruction; (2) prejudicing or harming a person in any manner in his or her employment, position, or status because of his or her performance of military service or duty or attendance at military encampments or places of drill or instruction; and (3) dissuading, preventing, or stopping any person from enlisting or accepting a warrant or commission in the California National Guard or Naval Militia by threat or injury to the person with respect to his or her employment, position, status, trade, or business because of enlistment or acceptance of a warrant or commission.ⁿ²

Persons who violate these provisions are subject to criminal penalties as well as civil liability for actual damages and attorney's fees incurred by the injured party.ⁿ³ The remedies under this provision are not exclusive.ⁿ⁴

Every officer and enlisted member of the California National Guard who, in order to undertake active military duty in the service of the state when the Governor has issued a proclamation of a state of insurrectionⁿ⁵ or a proclamation of a state of extreme emergency, or when the California National Guard is on active duty,ⁿ⁶ or a service member called to active service or duty,ⁿ⁷ has left a position, other than a temporary position, in private employment, receives a certificate of satisfactory service in the California National Guard or its equivalent, is still qualified to perform the duties of that position, and makes application within 40 days after release from service is considered as on leave of absence during that period and must be restored by the former employer to the former position or to a position of similar seniority, status, and pay without loss of retirement or other benefits, unless the employer's circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable to do so. Further, the employee may not be discharged from the position without cause within one year after being restored to the position.ⁿ⁸ Every officer and enlisted member who has left a part-time position in private employment for purposes of service, receives a certificate of satisfactory service in the California National Guard or its equivalent, is still qualified to perform the duties of that position, and makes application within five days after release from service is considered as on leave of absence during that period and must be restored by the former employer to the former position, or to a position of similar seniority, status, and pay, if any exist, and may not be discharged from the position without cause within one year after being restored to the position.ⁿ⁹ If any employer fails or refuses to comply with these provisions, the superior court of the county in which the employer maintains a place of business may, upon the filing of a motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading by the person entitled to the benefits of these provisions, specifically require the employer to comply and compensate the person for any loss of wages or benefits suffered by reason of the employer's unlawful action. The court must order a speedy hearing and advance it on the calendar. Upon application to the district attorney of the county in which the employer maintains a place of business by any person claiming to be entitled to these benefits, the district attorney, if reasonably satisfied that the person is entitled to these benefits, will appear and act as attorney for the person in the amicable adjustment of the claim or in the filing and prosecution of any motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading to specifically require the employer to comply. No fees or court costs are required to be paid by the person applying for these benefits.ⁿ¹⁰ Upon application to the city prosecutor of the city in which the employer maintains a place of business by any person claiming to be entitled to these benefits, the city prosecutor, if reasonably satisfied that the person is entitled to these benefits, may appear and act as attorney for the person in the amicable adjustment of the claim or in the filing of any motion, petition, or other appropriate pleading and the prosecution thereof to specifically require the employer to comply, and no fees or court costs are required to be paid by the person applying for these benefits.^{n10.1}

The Military and Veterans Code provisions granting employment related benefits during temporary military leaves of absenceⁿ¹¹ are not applicable to employees who are residents of California and working in California but who are members of the militia of another state and who seek leaves of absence for service in the militia of another state.ⁿ¹²

California law also allows spouses of members of the armed services up to 10 days of unpaid leave during a period that the spouse (who is the member of the armed forces) is on leave from deployment during a period of military conflict.ⁿ¹³ To be eligible, the employee spouse must satisfy all of the following requirements:ⁿ¹⁴

- ☐ Be the spouse of a qualified member of the armed forces.ⁿ¹⁵
- ☐ Perform service for hire for an employer an average of 20 or more hours per week, and is not an independent contractor.
- ☐ Provide the qualified employer with notice, within two business days of receiving official notice that the qualified member will be on leave from deployment, of the employee's intention to take the leave.
- ☐ Submit written documentation to the employer certifying that the qualified member will be on leave from deployment during the time the leave is requested.

The leave requirement only applies to employers, including governmental employers, that employ 25 or more employees.ⁿ¹⁶

An employer may not retaliate against an employee for requesting or taking the leave.ⁿ¹⁷ This leave does not affect or prevent an employer from allowing a qualified employee to take a leave the employee is otherwise entitled to take.ⁿ¹⁸ This leave also does not affect a qualified employee's rights with respect to any other employee benefit provided for in other laws.ⁿ¹⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceMilitary
LeaveLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Mil. & Vet. Code § 394(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. Mil. & Vet. Code § 394(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Mil. & Vet. Code § 394(g).

(n4)Footnote 4. Mil. & Vet. Code § 394(h).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Mil. & Vet. Code § 143.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Mil. & Vet. Code § 146.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Mil. & Vet. Code § 400 et seq.

(n8)Footnote 8. Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.06(a).

(N9)Footnote 9. Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.06(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.06(c).

(n11)Footnote 10.1. Mil. & Vet. Cod § 395.06(d).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 389-395.8; see also 38 U.S.C. § 4303(16) (federal Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act [38 U.S.C. § 4301 et seq.] applies only to periods of federal military service).

(n13)Footnote 12. 02 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 213 (2003) .

(n14)Footnote 13. Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.10(a). See Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.10(b)(1) (defining "period of military conflict"); (b)(5) (defining "qualified leave period").

(n15)Footnote 14. Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.10(b)(2).

(n16)Footnote 15. See Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.10(b)(4) (defining "qualified member").

(n17)Footnote 16. Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.10(b)(3).

(n18)Footnote 17. Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.10(c).

(n19)Footnote 18. Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.10(d).

(n20)Footnote 19. Mil. & Vet. Code § 395.10(e).

181 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part D. MILITARY LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law §§ 8.42 through 8.49

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 8.42[Reserved]

182 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part E. SICK LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.50

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.50 Sick Leave Use for Immediate Family

An employer that provides accrued sick leave for employees must allow an employee to use a portion of that sick leave to attend to an illness of his or her child, parent, spouse, or domestic partner.ⁿ¹ The employee is entitled to use not less than the amount he or she would accrue in a six-month period in any calendar year.ⁿ² "Sick leave" means accrued increments of compensated leave provided as a benefit for use by an employee during absence from work for any of the following reasons:ⁿ³

- The employee is physically or mentally unable to perform his or her duties due to illness, injury, or a medical condition.
- The absence is for the purpose of obtaining professional diagnosis or treatment for a medical condition.
- The absence is for other medical reasons, such as pregnancy or obtaining a physical examination.

"Sick leave" does not include benefits provided under an employee welfare benefit plan subject to ERISA and does not include any insurance benefit, workers' compensation benefit, unemployment compensation, disability benefit, or benefit not payable from the employer's general assets.ⁿ⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsCoverage & DefinitionsHoliday, Sick & Vacation Pay

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 233(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 233(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 233(b)(4).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 233(b).

183 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part E. SICK LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.51

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.51 Cause of Action for Violation

An employer cannot deny an employee the right to use sick leave and cannot discharge, threaten to discharge, demote, suspend, or in any manner discriminate against an employee for using, or attempting to exercise the right to use, sick leave to attend to an illness of a child, parent, spouse, or domestic partner of the employee.ⁿ¹ An employer absence-control policy that counts sick leave taken pursuant to Lab. Code § 233 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, or suspension is a per se violation of Lab. Code § 233. An employee working under such a policy is entitled to appropriate legal and equitable relief pursuant to Lab. Code § 233.ⁿ²

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Labor Code § 233 refers to an employer's obligation to permit an employee to use his or her "accrued and available" sick leave to care for an ill family member. It is arguable, therefore, that, if an employer has a policy under which employees accrue sick leave, it is permissible to count as an "occurrence" under an attendance program any sick leave taken that is not yet accrued and available, even if additional sick leave will be accrued and available at some future time during the year. Before taking this step, however, it is advisable to consult with counsel. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

If an employer denies an employee the right to use his or her sick leave as prescribed in Labor Code section 233(a), the employee is entitled to reinstatement and actual damages or one day's pay, whichever is greater.ⁿ³ If he or she prevails, the employee may be awarded reasonable attorney's fees.ⁿ⁴ The rights and remedies specified in Labor Code Section 233 are cumulative, nonexclusive, and in addition to any other rights or remedies afforded by contract or other provisions of law.ⁿ⁵

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

*Labor Code Section 233*ⁿ⁶ has created a great deal of confusion with respect to the conditions that trigger its applicability. On its face, the section applies only to sick leave benefits that accrue. Consider, therefore, three different--but very common--types of sick leave policies. First, the statute clearly covers sick leave that accumulates at a prescribed rate--for example, 10/12ths of one day for each full month worked, for a total of 10 days per year. Second, less obviously covered (but likely to be treated as within the ambit of the Statute by the California Labor Commissioner), is sick leave that is granted as a lump sum at the start of each year--for example, 10 days each January 1. Third, likely uncovered are sick leave benefits that do not accrue and are available in any amount for certain types of employees. For example, an employer may provide unlimited sick leave to its exempt employees. The Labor Commissioner has not yet issued published guidance on this sick leave variation. As a hedge against the possibility that the Labor Commissioner might apply Labor Code Section 233 to this form of policy, an employer may wish to create a separate family sick leave benefit and prescribe an associated number of days. To ensure the reasonableness of the number of days selected, the employer may wish to calculate the average number of sick leave days used by its employees each year and divide by two. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence General Overview Labor & Employment Law Leaves of Absence Family & Medical Leave Act General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 233(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 244.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 233(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 233(e).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 233(f).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 233.

184 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part E. SICK LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.52

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.52 Local Laws Requiring Paid Sick Leave

San Francisco requires employers to provide paid sick leave to employees (including part-time employees, temporary workers and participants in Welfare-to-Work Programs) who are employed within the geographical limits of the City and County of San Francisco.ⁿ¹ The ordinance does not apply to employees covered by a collective bargaining agreement expressly waiving the requirements in clear and unambiguous terms.ⁿ² If an employer has a paid-time-off policy that already provides employees with an amount of paid leave that meets the requirements of the ordinance, the employer is not required to provide additional paid sick leave.ⁿ³

Employers must provide one hour of paid sick leave for every 30 hours worked.ⁿ⁴ The ordinance limits the accrual of paid leave to a maximum of 40 hours for small businessesⁿ⁵ and 72 hours of paid leave for larger employers.ⁿ⁶ However, employers are free to provide more generous leave policies.ⁿ⁷ Accrued unused paid leave carries over from year to year up to the maximum leave limits.ⁿ⁸ Employees may take paid sick leave for their own illness or to provide care for a sick child, parent, sibling, grandparent, grandchild, spouse, domestic partner, or "designated person."ⁿ⁹ Employers must permit employees to use any or all accrued paid sick leave for kin care.ⁿ¹⁰ An employer is not required to provide financial reimbursement for unused accrued paid sick leave to an employee upon the employee's separation from employment.ⁿ¹¹

An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking sick leave, that the employee find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is on paid sick leave.ⁿ¹² An employer may, however, require employees to give reasonable notification of an absence from work for which paid sick leave is or will be used.ⁿ¹³ An employer may take only reasonable measures to verify or document that an employee's use of paid sick leave is lawful.ⁿ¹⁴

Employers must post a notice published by the Office of Labor Standards Enforcement informing employees of their rights under the ordinance. The notice must be in English, Spanish, Chinese, and any language spoken by at least five percent of the employees at the workplace.ⁿ¹⁵ Additionally, employers must maintain records regarding paid sick leave for a period of four years, and make the records available to the OLSE for the purpose of monitoring compliance. If there is a dispute regarding an employee's entitlement and the employer fails to maintain appropriate records, it will be presumed that the employer has violated the sick leave ordinance absent clear and convincing evidence otherwise.ⁿ¹⁶

Los Angeles also has adopted mandatory sick leave as part of its ordinance governing living wages paid by private employers with contracts to provide services to the city. In Los Angeles, private employers who have contracts to provide services to the city must provide employees with 12 compensated days off per year for sick leave, vacation or personal necessity at the employee's request and, if that time is exhausted, an additional 10 days per year of uncompensated time for sick leave for the illness of the employee or a member of his or her immediate family.ⁿ¹⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.2(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.9.

(n3)Footnote 3. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.3(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.3(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.2(c) (defining "small business" as employer employing fewer than 10 employees).

(n6)Footnote 6. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.3(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.11.

(n8)Footnote 8. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.3(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.4(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.4(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.3(e).

(n12)Footnote 12. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.4(b).

(n13)Footnote 13. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.4(c).

(n14)Footnote 14. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.4(d).

(n15)Footnote 15. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.5.

(n16)Footnote 16. San Francisco Admin. Code § 12W.6.

(n17)Footnote 17. L.A. Admin. Code § 10.37.2(b).

185 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part E. SICK LEAVE

1-8 California Employment Law §§ 8.53 through 8.59

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 8.53[Reserved]

186 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part F. BIBLIOGRAPHY

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.60

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.60 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 112, Civil Rights (Matthew Bender).

Commerce Clearing House, Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993: Law and Explanation (1993).

Irvin, Family and Medical Leaves: The New Federal Statute and State Laws (1993).

Koppman, Time Off For Parents: The Benefits, Costs, and Options of Parental Leave (1987).

Lamont, Family and Medical Leave Act: The DOL Regulations (1993).

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Pt. V, Family and Medical Leave (Matthew Bender).

Saxe, Family and Medical Leave: A Practical Guide for Employers (Rev. ed. 1995).

Simmons, Family and Medical Leave Manual for California Employers (4th ed. 1995).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceFamily & Medical Leave ActGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral Overview

187 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

CHAPTER 8 Leaves of Absence

Part F. BIBLIOGRAPHY

1-8 California Employment Law § 8.61

AUTHOR: By Christine Curtis, J.D., Judy B. Freeman J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D., and Elizabeth W. Mandel, J.D.

§ 8.61 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

Bertrand, Audero, Carter, Schisler & Seifert, U.S. Department of Labor Issues New FMLA Regulations Effective January 16, 2009, 2008 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 417 (November/December 2008).

Richardson, Family Responsibilities Discrimination: The Next Wave or Just More of the Same?, 2008 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 61 (February 2008).

Tanenbaum & Henderson, Mandatory Paid Sick Leave for San Francisco Employees, 2007 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 37 (March 2007).

Paul & Cullen, DLSE Proposes Meal and Rest Period Regulations, 2005 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 16 (January 2005).

Shartin, Resolving Recurring Leave Law Issues, 2005 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 209 (June 2005).

Bayer, et al., The Family and Medical Leave Act: The Final Regulations, 28 Urban Lawyer et al. 93 (Winter 1996).

Brown & Shallow, Some FMLA Basics, 42(5) Prac. Law. 23 (1996).

Gaeta, Kolkhorst v. Tilghman: An Employee's Right to Military Leave Under the Veterans' Reemployment Rights Act, 41 Cath. U. L. Rev. 259 (Fall 1991).

McDermott, The Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, 44 Labor L. Journal 673 (Nov. 1993).

Rigler, Analysis and Understanding of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, 45 Case West. L. Rev. 45 (Winter 1995).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawLeaves of AbsenceFamily & Medical Leave ActGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment
LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral Overview

188 of 188 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION I WAGE AND HOUR LAWS

Chapters 9 -- 19 RESERVED

1-9 - 19 California Employment Law Chapters 9 -- 19

RESERVED

Chapters 9 -- 19 RESERVED

1 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

1-20 California Employment Law 20.syn

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.syn Synopsis to Chapter 20: Liability for Work-Related Injuries

§ 20.01 Purposes and Application of Workers' Compensation System

§ 20.02 Privatized Workers' Compensation System Under Collective Bargaining Agreements in Construction Industry

§ 20.03 Insurance Requirements for Employers

[1] Employers' Responsibilities

[2] Notification of Benefits

§ 20.04 Medical Provider Networks

§§ 20.05 through 20.09 [Reserved]

§ 20.10 Scope of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine

[1] Injuries to Employee

[2] Applicability of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine to Injuries Suffered by Third Persons

§ 20.11 When Exclusive Remedy Defense Is Inapplicable

§ 20.12 Exceptions to Exclusive Remedy Doctrine

[1] Statutory Exceptions

[a] Generally

[b] Physical Assault by Employer

[c] Aggravation of Injury Caused by Employer's Fraudulent Concealment

[d] Dual Capacity Doctrine

[i] Current Statutory Exception When Employer Is Manufacturer of Product Causing Injury

[ii] Comparison With Prior Judicial Doctrine

[e] Power Press Injury

[2] Wrongful Termination and Related Intentional Torts

[a] Generally

[b] Effect of Compensability of Alleged Emotional Distress

[c] Exception for Conduct Outside the "Compensation Bargain"

[d] Statutory Protections Against Wrongful Termination and Discipline

[e] Retaliation for Filing Workers' Compensation Claim

[f] Insurer's Duty to Defend

[3] Spoliation of Evidence

§ 20.13 Preemption of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine by Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA)

§ 20.14 Burden of Proof

§§ 20.15 through 20.19 [Reserved]

§ 20.20 Existence of Employer-Employee Relationship

[1] Generally

[2] Existence of Relationship

[a] Employer Defined

[b] Employee Defined

[c] Determination of Employer-Employee Relationship

[d] Joint, Concurrent, and Special Employment

[3] Independent Contractors

[a] Effect of Independent Contractor Status

[b] Burden of Proof and Presumptions

[i] In Workers' Compensation Proceeding

[ii] In Civil Damages Action

[c] Factors Used in Determination of Independent Contractor Status

[d] Examples of Status as Independent Contractor or Employee

§ 20.21 Types of Injuries Within Coverage of Workers' Compensation

[1] Compensable Injuries Generally

[2] Mental or Psychiatric Disorders

[3] Injury to Reputation Not Covered

§ 20.22 Requirement That Injury Arise Out of and in Course of Employment

[1] Generally

[2] Injury Arising Out of Employment

[3] Injury Occurring in Course of Employment

[4] Going and Coming Rule

[a] General Rule

[b] Exceptions

[5] Time and Place of Injury

[a] Generally

[b] Commercial Traveler Rule

[c] Personal Comfort Doctrine

[d] Bunkhouse Rule

[e] Collecting Paycheck

[6] Work-Related Social Activities

§ 20.23 Other Conditions of Compensation

[1] Intoxicated Employee

[2] Physical Aggression by Employee

[3] Self-Inflicted Injury or Death

[4] Felonious Act by Employee

[5] Employee Killed or Injured by Third Party

§ 20.24 Claim for Compensation Filed After Notice of Termination

§§ 20.25 through 20.29 [Reserved]

§ 20.30 Procedure for Obtaining Benefits

[1] Notice of Injury

[2] Adjustment of Claim

[a] Employer's Duty to Provide Claim Form, Notice of Eligibility, and Other Information

[b] Contents of Claim Form and Notice of Eligibility

[c] Filing of Claim Form

[d] Employer's Response to Claim

[3] Adjudication by Workers' Compensation Appeals Board

[a] Need for Adjudication by Board

[b] Application for Adjudication by Board

[c] Answer

[d] Hearing and Award

[e] Reconsideration by Workers' Compensation Appeals Board

[4] Judicial Review

§ 20.31 Penalty for Unjustified Delay in Payment of Benefits

[1] Generally

[2] Employer's Inadvertent Failure to Pay

[3] Employer's Intentional Refusal to Pay

[4] Exemptions From Penalty

§ 20.32 Increased Benefits for Discrimination Against Claimants

[1] General Rule

[2] Business Realities Test

[3] Causation

§ 20.33 Fraud Concerning Workers' Compensation Claims

[1] Prohibition

[2] Enforcement and Penalty for Violation

§§ 20.34 through 20.39 [Reserved]

§ 20.40 Suits Against Uninsured Employers

[1] Two Available Remedies

[a] Civil Action

[b] FORM--Complaint Against Employer Who Has Failed to Secure Compensation for Injured Employee

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[c] Application to Workers' Compensation Appeals Board

[2] Prohibition Against Double Recovery

[3] Res Judicata Effect of Award

§ 20.41 Suits Against Insured Employers

[1] Dual Remedies

[2] FORM--Complaint by Employee for Aggravation of Work-Related Injury Against Employer for Fraudulent Concealment

[a] Comment

[b] Form

[3] FORM--Complaint for Damages for Willful Physical Assault by Employer

[a] Comment

[b] Form

[4] FORM--Affirmative Defense to Complaint Based on Exclusive Remedy Doctrine

[a] Comment

[b] Form

[5] Determining Forum With Jurisdiction

[6] FORM--Affirmative Defense Based on Lack of Jurisdiction Due to Pending Administrative Proceeding

[a] Comment

[b] Form

[7] Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel

[8] Statute of Limitations

§ 20.42 Suits Against Employer's Insurer

[1] General Rule

[2] Recovery for Extreme and Outrageous Conduct

[3] FORM--Complaint Against Employer's Insurer for Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

[a] Comment

[b] Form

§ 20.43 Suits Against Coemployees

[1] General Applicability of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine

[a] In General

[b] Special Employment

[2] Injuries Caused by Acts Outside Coemployee's Scope of Employment

§ 20.44 Suits Against Third Parties

[1] Generally

[2] Employees of Independent Contractor; Peculiar Risk Doctrine; Nondelegable Duty Doctrine

[3] Effect of Employer's Fault on Employee's Recovery From Third-Party Tortfeasor

[a] Joint and Several Liability and Effect of Proposition 51

[b] Offset of Workers' Compensation Benefits Against Employee's Recovery

[c] No Deduction for Benefits Paid Unless Employer Found to Be Negligent

[d] Joinder of Employer in Proceeding to Determine Offset

[4] Indemnification of Third Party by Employer

§§ 20.45 through 20.49 [Reserved]

§ 20.50 Employer's Right of Subrogation

[1] When Employer Has Not Been Negligent

[2] When Employer Has Been Negligent

[a] Case Law Before Adoption of Comparative Fault

[b] Effect of Comparative Negligence

[c] Reimbursement of Workers' Compensation Benefits Previously Paid

[3] Reserved

[4] Employer's Right to Reimbursement or Credit Against Liability for Future Workers' Compensation Benefits

[a] Generally

[b] Effect of Employer's Negligence

[5] Limitation on Employer's Right to Reimbursement or Credit When Third-Party Tortfeasor Is Medical Practitioner

[6] Methods of Obtaining Reimbursement Independent Action, Intervention, or Lien

[7] FORM--Independent Action or Complaint in Intervention by Employer's Insurer in Employee's Suit Against Third Party

[a] Comment

[i] Use of Form

[ii] Filing and Statute of Limitations

[iii] Allegations

[b] Form

[8] FORM--Notice of Motion for Lien on Employee's Recovery Against Third Party

[a] Comment

[b] Form

[9] FORM--Declaration in Support of Motion for Order Allowing Lien Against Employee's Recovery from Third Party

[a] Comment

[b] Form

§ 20.51 Recovery by Relatives and Heirs of Employee

[1] Rights of Heirs and Relatives to Disability and Death Benefits

[a] Right to Disability Benefits Accrued and Unpaid

[b] Death Benefits

[2] Effect of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine on Tort Actions by Employee's Relatives and Heirs

§§ 20.52 through 20.59 [Reserved]

§ 20.60 Legal Texts

§ 20.61 Encyclopedias

§ 20.62 Law Reviews and Periodicals

By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., n Edward Baskauskas, J.D. n

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

(n2)Footnote . Edward Baskauskas is a member of the California Bar and an adjunct professor of law at Golden Gate University.

2 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

1-20 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

Scope

By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., n Edward Baskauskas, J.D. n SCOPE*

This chapter discusses liability for work-related injuries and illnesses in the context of California workers' compensation law. Part A contains an overview of the workers' compensation system and includes a discussion of the requirements for workers' compensation insurance and of the exclusive remedy doctrine, a summary of the procedure for obtaining workers' compensation benefits, and a discussion of additional penalties that may be imposed for unjustified delay in benefit payments or for actions against an employee because he or she has applied for or intends to apply for workers' compensation benefits. Part B discusses and provides forms for use in suits involving coemployees or third parties. Additionally, Part B covers the issues of the employer's right to reimbursement from third-party tortfeasors for workers' compensation benefits paid to employees and provides forms for the employer to obtain reimbursement by means of an independent action, intervention in the employee's suit, or a lien on the employee's recovery. Also discussed is the employer's right to assert the employee's recovery from a third party as a credit against its liability for future workers' compensation benefits.

For more detailed coverage of the procedure for obtaining workers' compensation benefits before the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Chapter 25, Part A (Matthew Bender). For coverage of the defense of workers' compensation claims, see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Chapter 25, Part B (Matthew Bender).

Chapter 21 discusses regulation of occupational safety and health under federal and California law.

FOOTNOTES:

(n3)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

(n4)Footnote . Edward Baskauskas is a member of the California Bar and an adjunct professor of law at Golden Gate University.

3 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 1. Overview of Workers' Compensation System

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.01

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.01 Purposes and Application of Workers' Compensation System

The California Workers' Compensation Actⁿ¹ is a statutory scheme designed to afford workers a determination of their claims for work-related injury without regard to common-law questions of liability, negligence, or fault on the part of the employer.ⁿ² Workers' compensation is designed to provide that industry bear the burden of industrial accidents while protecting workers from the special risks of employment.ⁿ³ Liability under the Workers' Compensation Act is based not on any act or omission of the employer, but on the fact that the injury arises out of and in the course of the employment.ⁿ⁴ The workers' compensation system has been described as a socially enforced bargain that compels an employee to give up his or her rights to sue in the courts for full compensation for damages caused by certain job-related torts in exchange for certain, but limited, awards in all cases of job-related injury regardless of tort defenses that would otherwise have been available to the employer.ⁿ⁵ The Workers' Compensation Act, insofar as it deprives a claimant of an action at law, has been held not to violate due process or equal protection.ⁿ⁶

If the so-called "conditions of compensation" exist, the workers' compensation system provides the exclusive remedy against an employer for injury or death, including any right or liability that is incidental to the injury or death.ⁿ⁷ The system also normally provides the exclusive method for enforcement against the employer or an insurer of any adjudged liability.ⁿ⁸

The provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act are to be liberally construed in favor of awarding worker's compensation in both civil actions and in workers' compensation actions which seek to obtain compensation benefits and to avoid civil litigation.ⁿ⁹

Generally speaking, the Workers' Compensation Act applies in cases in which the employee sustains a work-related injury or dies as a result of work-related causes.ⁿ¹⁰ For the sake of convenience, this chapter broadly uses the term "injury" to cover injury, disease, and death.

The right to workers' compensation benefits is entirely statutory and is not derived from the common law.ⁿ¹¹ Under the plenary power that the California Constitution has granted to the Legislature to create and enforce a complete system of workers' compensation,ⁿ¹² the Legislature has created a statutory scheme requiring all employers to secure the payment of workers' compensation to injured employees, either by obtaining insurance coverage of their liability or by obtaining a certificate of consent to self-insure issued by the Director of Industrial Relations.ⁿ¹³

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

Although the rights to workers' compensation benefits may derive from statutes, case law is determinative of disputes which arise in many situations. Counsel are cautioned that knowledge of both is essential to doing an adequate job as an employer, claim examiner, or defense attorney without knowing both. Commentary by John W. Miller.

In certain limited circumstances, an employer in the construction, or other industries may, pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement with its employees, "opt out" of portions of the workers' compensation system.ⁿ¹⁴

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

Costs of defending claims are increasing according to the California Workers' Compensation Institute. Since the abolishment of "minimum rates" in insurance pricing, rate wars have been raging between carriers. Because market influences have caused premiums to be low, carriers are looking at methods of decreasing expenses, since the income side of business has actually decreased. Using methods such as overworked hearing representatives and house-counsel, and flat rate billing by defense attorneys, results are poor. This, in turn, pits employers against carriers in many instances. As carriers try to balance their profit against the rights of their insureds, in increasing numbers they are losing or settling actions by employers against them. Because they are paying out claims by their insureds while waiting for the premiums to rise, the industry is going to be looking for other means to decrease the costs. Arbitration, while expensive, may be more cost effective in the overall scheme of claim handling, because the arbitrator will not have multiple cases set and continuances will not be necessary, as frequently happens at the Appeals Board. If this works for the construction industry, as it seems to be, we may see other industries obtaining exemption legislation and union cooperation to use the streamlined arbitration process. Commentary by John W. Miller.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws Common Law

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 3201 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Portillo v. G. T. Price Products, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 285, 287, 182 Cal. Rptr. 291 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Laeng v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 771, 782, 100 Cal. Rptr. 377, 494 P.2d 1 ; California Comp. Ins. Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 797, 805, 277 P.2d 442 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Shields v. County of San Diego (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 103, 112, 202 Cal. Rptr. 30 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 223, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; Van Horn v. Industrial Accident Commission (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 457, 467, 33 Cal. Rptr. 169 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Nelson v. Metalclad Insulation Corp. (1975) 44 Cal. App. 3d 474, 477-478, 118 Cal. Rptr. 725 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code §§ 3600(a), 3602(a), 5300(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code § 5300(b); Santiago v. Employee Benefits Services (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 898, 901, 214 Cal. Rptr. 679 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 3202; see Argonaut Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 320, 323-324, 210 Cal. Rptr. 417 ; Dixon v. Ford Motor Co. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 499, 506, 125 Cal. Rptr. 872 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code §§ 3208, 3600; see also discussion in § 20.05[1].

(n11)Footnote 11. DuBois v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 388, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4.

(n13)Footnote 13. DuBois v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 388, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978 . For discussion of the insurance requirements generally, see § 20.03.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Lab. Code §§ 3201.5, 3201.7. For discussion, see § 20.02.

4 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 1. Overview of Workers' Compensation System

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.02

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.02 Privatized Workers' Compensation System Under Collective Bargaining Agreements in Construction Industry

The Department of Industrial Relations and the courts of this state must recognize as valid and binding any provision of a collective bargaining agreement between a private employer or groups of employers engaged in construction, construction maintenance, and related activities,ⁿ¹ or other industries,ⁿ² and a recognized or certified exclusive bargaining representative that establishes any of the following:ⁿ³

1. An alternative dispute resolution system governing disputes between employees and employers or their insurers that supplements or replaces all or part of those dispute resolution processes contained in the Workers' Compensation Act, including, but not limited to, mediation and arbitration;^{n3.1}
2. The use of an agreed list of providers of medical treatment that may be the exclusive source of all medical treatment provided under the Workers' Compensation Act;
3. The use of an agreed, limited list of qualified medical evaluators that may be the exclusive source of qualified and agreed medical evaluators under the Workers' Compensation Act;
4. Joint labor-management safety committees;
5. A light-duty, modified job, or return-to-work program; or
6. A vocational rehabilitation or retraining program utilizing an agreed list of providers of rehabilitation services that may be the exclusive source of providers of rehabilitation services under the Workers' Compensation Act.

A collective bargaining agreement in construction industries may not diminish an employee's entitlement to compensation payments for total or partial disability, temporary disability, vocational rehabilitation, or medical treatment fully paid by the employer as otherwise provided by the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ⁴ Any agreement that violates this provision is null and void.ⁿ⁵ However, the parties may negotiate any aspect of the delivery of medical benefits and the delivery of disability compensation to employees of the employer or group of employers that are eligible for group health benefits and nonoccupational disability benefits through their employer.^{n5.1}

Employers and labor representatives meeting the eligibility requirements of Labor Code § 3201.5 will be issued a letter advising each employer and labor representative that, based on the review of all documents and materials submitted as required by the administrative director, each has met the eligibility requirements of section 3201.5.^{n5.2} No employer or collective bargaining representative may establish or continue such a program until it has met specific statutory requirements.ⁿ⁶

In industries other than construction and construction-related activities meeting specific statutory requirements including eligibility of employees for group health and nonoccupational disability benefits,^{n6.1} a collective bargaining agreement may not diminish the entitlement of an employee to compensation payments for total or partial disability, temporary disability, vocational rehabilitation, or medical treatment fully paid by the employer as otherwise provided in the Workers' Compensation Act. An agreement also may not deny any employee the right to representation by counsel at all stages during the alternative dispute resolution process. The portion of any agreement that violates these provisions will be declared null and void.^{n6.2} The parties may negotiate any aspect of the delivery of medical benefits and the delivery of disability compensation to employees of the employer or group of employers that are eligible for group health benefits and nonoccupational disability benefits through their employer.^{n6.3}

A recognized or certified exclusive bargaining representative in an industry not covered by Lab. Code § 3201.5 may file a petition with the administrative director seeking permission to negotiate with an employer or group of employers to enter into a labor-management agreement pursuant to Lab. Code § 3201.7. On receipt of the petition, the administrative director must promptly verify the petitioner's status as the exclusive bargaining representative. If the petition satisfies the statutory requirements, the administrative director will issue a letter advising each employer and labor representative of their eligibility to enter into negotiations, for a period not to exceed one year, for the purpose of reaching agreement on a labor-management agreement pursuant to § 3201.7. The parties may jointly request an additional one-year period to negotiate an agreement.^{n6.4} No employer or collective bargaining representative may establish or continue such a program until it has met specific statutory requirements.^{n6.5}

The Administrative Director has the power to determine whether construction industry employers and unions are eligible to enter into collective bargaining agreements under Labor Code Section 3201.5.ⁿ⁷ Regulations set forth specific procedures the Administrative Director must follow to determine eligibility, as well as procedures to follow after eligibility has been determined.ⁿ⁸

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Coverage General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 3201.5(a); see Lab. Code § 3201.5(c) (employers who may participate).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 3201.7(a); see Lab. Code § 3201.7(c) (employers who may participate).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code §§ 3201.5(a), 3201.7(a).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Any system of arbitration must provide that the decision of the arbiter or board of arbitration is subject to review by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board in the same manner as provided for reconsideration of a final order, decision, or award made and filed by a workers' compensation administrative law judge pursuant to the procedures in Lab. Code § 5900 et seq., and the court of appeals pursuant to the procedures in Lab. Code § 5950 et seq., governing orders, decisions, or awards of the appeals board. The findings of fact, award, order, or decision of the arbitrator must have the same force and effect as an award, order, or decision of a workers' compensation administrative law judge. Any provision for arbitration established pursuant to Lab. Code § 3201.5 is not subject to Lab. Code §§ 5270, 5270.5, 5271, 5272, 5273, 5275, 5277. Lab. Code §§ 3201.5(a)(1), 3201.7(a)(3)(A).

(n5)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 3201.5(b)(1); see Costa v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1177, 1185 (alternative dispute resolution plan in collective bargaining agreement requiring claimant to go through three procedural levels before reaching Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, although public adjudicatory system required only one procedural level, did not violate state constitution by creating incumbrance to workers' compensation system when nothing in constitution mandated establishment of expedited proceeding or limited number of procedural levels to be used; given informality and short time limits provided for two levels, there was no reason why disputes should not be resolved quickly and less expensively than under public system).

(n6)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 3201.5(b)(1).

(n7)Footnote 5.1. Lab. Code § 3201.5(b)(2).

(n8)Footnote 5.2. Lab. Code § 3201.5(d).

(n9)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code § 3201.5(f), (g).

(n10)Footnote 6.1. See Lab. Code § 3201.7(c) (employers to whom these provisions apply).

(n11)Footnote 6.2. Lab. Code § 3201.7(b)(1).

(n12)Footnote 6.3. Lab. Code § 3201.7(b)(2).

(n13)Footnote 6.4. Lab. Code § 3201.7(d).

(n14)Footnote 6.5. See Lab. Code § 3201.7(e), (f).

(n15)Footnote 7. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10200-10204.

(n16)Footnote 8. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 10200-10204.

5 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 1. Overview of Workers' Compensation System

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.03

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.03 Insurance Requirements for Employers

[1] Employers' Responsibilities

Every private employer in California must either carry compensation insurance or obtain a certificate of self-insurance.ⁿ¹ Insurance may be obtained privately or through the state's own insurance fund, the State Compensation Insurance Fund (SCIF).ⁿ² The insurer must be authorized to write workers' compensation insurance in California.^{n2.1}

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

You can be of great assistance to your employer clients regarding their workers' compensation insurance if you just remember that, according to the California Workers' Compensation Institute, there are over 300 carriers licensed to write workers' compensation insurance in California. With the advent of "open rating" and the repeal of the "minimum rates" guarantees for insurance companies, the marketplace really controls pricing. The more carriers your client can approach, probably through many agents, the better price and benefits they will obtain. Commentary by John W. Miller.

Failure to comply with the requirement to secure payment of compensation through insurance or self-insurance is a misdemeanor punishable by either or both imprisonment and a fine.ⁿ³ Effective March 1, 2005, on a first conviction, the person may be charged the costs of investigation at the court's discretion. On a subsequent conviction, the person must be charged the costs of investigation in addition to any other penalties.^{n3.1} The employer may also be subject to civil suit by an injured employeeⁿ⁴ and to a claim filed by the injured employee with the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board.ⁿ⁵ Additionally, the Director of Industrial Relations may issue a work stoppage order, which will be in effect until the employer complies with the requirement to secure payment of compensation.ⁿ⁶ Failure to comply with such a stop order may subject the employer to a fine and imprisonment.ⁿ⁷

When an insurer fails to give timely notice of nonrenewal of a workers' compensation insurance policy, the policy must be continued for a period of 60 days after the insurer gives the notice.^{n7.1} If notice of nonrenewal is not given, the policy continues in effect as a matter of law. Thus, an employer could not be penalized for being uninsured at the time the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement did an inspection and issued a "stop order-penalty assessment."^{n7.2} The insurer failed to give notice of nonrenewal of the policy, and administrative error prevented the insurer from timely entering the policy renewal information into its system.^{n7.3}

An employer can secure the payment of compensation on employees provided to the employer through an agreement with another employer, by entering into a valid and enforceable agreement with the other employer under which the other employer agrees to obtain, and does obtain, workers' compensation coverage for those employees.ⁿ⁸ In such cases, both employers will be considered to have secured the payment of compensation. Employers who comply with this rule will not be subject to civil, criminal, or other penalties for failure to provide workers' compensation coverage or tort liability in the event an employee is injured, but may, in the absence of compliance, be subject to all three.ⁿ⁹

The Department of Industrial Relations (DIR) establishes procedures to be followed by employers wishing to operate as self-insureds.ⁿ¹⁰ Any employer may opt for self-insurance by applying for a certificate of consent to self-insure from the DIR and by demonstrating the ability to pay compensation to employees should it become necessary.ⁿ¹¹ The application may be made either as an individual employer or as one employer in a group of employers.ⁿ¹² This requires the posting of a security deposit in the amount of $220,000 or 125 percent of the employer's liability for the payment of compensation, whichever is greater.ⁿ¹³ Various auditing and reporting requirements guarantee the employer's continued ability to self-insure.ⁿ¹⁴

Employers who choose not to be self-insured may obtain insurance from a number of private carriers or from the SCIF, a division of the DIR.ⁿ¹⁵ The SCIF was created in 1913 to guarantee the existence of reliable and equitably priced workers' compensation insurance in California. Public agencies throughout the state must maintain insurance through the SCIF unless it rejects their applications. The SCIF is a nonprofit organization whose operation is strictly governed by statute.ⁿ¹⁶

The purpose of the SCIF is to ensure that affordable compensation coverage will be available to all employers. Pursuant to the provisions of the Insurance Code governing the SCIF,ⁿ¹⁷ the SCIF is granted greater freedom in conducting its affairs than that granted to most other state agencies so that it may compete with private insurers.ⁿ¹⁸ By virtue of Insurance Code Section 11873, the SCIF is not entitled to the protection from liability for punitive damages provided by Government Code Section 818 to most public entities.ⁿ¹⁹ In addition, the SCIF is not entitled to governmental immunity from tort claims.ⁿ²⁰ Thus, an employer insured with the SCIF is not precluded from bringing suit against the SCIF for tortious breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and for negligence, based on the SCIF's delay in processing claims and its overestimation of reserves for claims that adversely affect the insured employer's premiums and policy dividends.ⁿ²¹ The California Tort Claims Act is not applicable to the SCIF by virtue of Insurance Code Section 11873, which excludes the SCIF from the immunities of the act and places it in the same position as other workers' compensation insurers.ⁿ²²

The Uninsured Employers Fund was created by the Legislature in 1971 to provide a source of funds for injured employees whose employers have failed or refused either to obtain workers' compensation insurance coverage or to qualify as self-insurers.ⁿ²³ The Fund is financed from various penalties that may be assessed against uninsured employers, as well as from state tax revenues.ⁿ²⁴ The Fund's liability for payment of an award of workers' compensation benefits is derivative rather than vicarious. The employer is primarily responsible for payment of the award even in a case in which the Fund has participated, and is ultimately required to pay the award. The Fund is not liable to pay any amount in excess of, or different from, the amount awarded against the uninsured employer.ⁿ²⁵

[2] Notification of Benefits

An employer must, on request from the DIR, furnish a written statement showing the name of its insurer or the manner in which it has secured payment of compensation benefits.ⁿ²⁶ The failure of the employer for a period of 10 days to furnish the requested written statement constitutes prima facie evidence that it has failed to obtain insurance or to obtain a certificate of consent to self-insure from the DIR.ⁿ²⁷

In general, every employer subject to workers' compensation laws must post and keep posted a notice in a conspicuous location frequented by employees, and where it may be easily read by the employees during workday hours, stating the employer's current compensation insurance carrier or a statement to the effect that the employer is self-insured, identifying the person responsible for claims adjustment.ⁿ²⁸ The form and content of the notice are prescribed by the administrative director of the Division of Workers' Compensation,ⁿ²⁹ who must make it available to self-insured employers and insurers. Insurers must provide the notice to each of their policyholders, with advice concerning the requirements of this section and the penalties for a failure to post this notice.ⁿ³⁰ The notice must advise employees that all injuries should be reported to their employer. It must be easily understood, and must be posted in both English and Spanish where there are Spanish-speaking employees.ⁿ³¹ The notice must include the following information:ⁿ³²

1. How to get emergency medical treatment, if needed;
2. The kinds of events, injuries, and illnesses covered by workers' compensation;
3. The injured employee's right to receive medical care;
4. The rights of the employee to select and change the treating physician pursuant to the provisions of Labor Code Section 4600;
5. The rights of the employee to receive temporary disability indemnity, permanent disability indemnity, vocational rehabilitation services, and death benefits, as appropriate;
6. To whom injuries should be reported;
7. The existence of time limits for the employer to be notified of an occupational injury;
8. The protections against discrimination provided pursuant to Labor Code Section 132a; and
9. The location and telephone number of the nearest information and assistance officer.

The notice must also contain the following information:ⁿ³³

1. Generally, how to obtain appropriate medical care for a job injury;
2. The role and function of the primary treating physician; and
3. A form the employee may use as an optional method for notifying the employer of the name of the employee's "personal physician," as defined by Labor Code Section 4600, or "personal chiropractor," as defined by Labor Code Section 4601.

Additionally, every employer must give each new employee, either at the time the employee is hired or by the end of the first pay period, written notice of these rights.ⁿ³⁴ The employer's failure to meet the notice requirements constitutes a misdemeanor, is prima facie evidence of noninsurance, and automatically entitles the employee to be treated by his or her physician for any injury that occurs during the failure.ⁿ³⁵

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

However, the statute's use of the phrase "personal physician," indicates this option may be limited to workers who have designated a "personal physician" prior to the injury under Labor Code section 4600.

Commentary by Robert Levin.

One exception to these notice requirements is made with respect to persons who are employed by the owner or occupant of a residential dwelling and whose duties are incidental to the ownership, maintenance, or use of the dwelling (including the care and supervision of children), or whose duties are personal and not carried out in the course of the trade, business, profession, or occupation of the owner or occupant.ⁿ³⁶

Every employer must file a complete report of every occupational injury or occupational illnessⁿ³⁷ to each employee that results in lost time beyond the date of the injury or illness, or which requires medical treatment beyond first aid. Each report of occupational injury or occupational illness must indicate the Social Security number of the injured employee.ⁿ³⁸ An insured employer must file the report with the insurer on a form prescribed by the Administrative Director of the Division of Workers' Compensation for that purpose within five days after the employer obtains knowledge of the injury or illness that has, or is alleged to have, arisen out of and in the course of employment.ⁿ³⁹ A self-insured employer, the state of California, or the insurer of an insured employer must file the report in the electronic form prescribed for that purpose by the Administrative Director pursuant to Labor Code section 138.6 within the time prescribed by the Administrative Director.ⁿ⁴⁰

If the employee subsequently dies as a result of the reported injury or illness, the employer must file an amended report indicating the death with the Department of Industrial Relations, through its Division of Workers' Compensation or, if an insured employer, with the insurer, within five days after the employer is notified or learns of the death. A copy of any amended reports received by the insurer must be filed with the Division of Workers' Compensation in electronic form as prescribed by the Administrative Director.ⁿ⁴¹

In every case involving a serious injury or illness, or death, in addition to the report described above, the employer must immediately make a report to the Division of

Occupational Safety and Health by telephone or telegraph. An employer who violates this requirement may be assessed a civil penalty of not less than five thousand dollars.^{n41.1} However, nothing in Labor Code section 6409.1(b) may be construed to increase the maximum civil penalty that may be imposed for a violation of Labor Code section 6409.1.^{n41.2}

For further discussion of reporting requirements regarding occupational injuries or illnesses, see Chapter 21.

When an injury causes (or is claimed to cause) temporary or permanent disability, the employer must comply with detailed notice requirements set forth in Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 9812(a), (e)-(g) regarding the employee's right to disability benefits. The employer must also comply with specified notice requirements (1) when the employer denies liability for all compensation benefits,ⁿ⁴² (2) when the employer delays determining its liability for an injury,ⁿ⁴³ (3) when the employer terminates payment of benefits,ⁿ⁴⁴ (4) when the employer resumes payment of benefits after terminating payment,ⁿ⁴⁵ or (5) when the employer changes the benefit rate or schedule for a class of benefits.ⁿ⁴⁶ The regulations also contain specific notice requirements pertaining to vocational rehabilitation benefitsⁿ⁴⁷ and death benefits.ⁿ⁴⁸

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDIBenefit DeterminationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 3700; see also Lab. Code § 90.3(a) (state policy to vigorously enforce laws requiring employers to secure payment of compensation required by § 3700 and to protect employers who comply with law from those who attempt to gain competitive advantage at expense of their workers by failing to secure payment of compensation), (b) (program targeting employers in industries with highest incidence of unlawfully uninsured employers).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 3211.

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Lab. Code § 3700; Starving Students, Inc. v. Dept. of Industrial Relations (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1357, 1361, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 583 .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 3700.5(a), (b).

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Lab. Code § 3700.5(c). The costs of investigation are to be paid only after the payment of any benefits owed to injured workers, any reimbursement owed to the Director of Industrial Relations for benefits provided to the injured worker pursuant to Lab. Code § 3717, and any other penalty assessments that may be owed. Lab. Code § 3700.5(c).

(n6)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 3706. For discussion, see § 20.40[1][a].

(n7)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 3715(a). For discussion, see § 20.40[1][c].

(n8)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 3710.1. See Leo's Associates, Inc. v. Dept. of Industrial Relations (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 628, 631, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 594 (stop work order and penalty assessment pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 3710.1, 3722 for failure to provide proof of workers' compensation insurance were proper despite subsequent reinstatement of insurance, because retroactive reinstatement of lapsed policy did not satisfy requirement that workers' compensation insurance be in effect on day of inspection, and did not preclude statutory penalty assessment).

(n9)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code § 3710.2. The penalty provisions of Lab. Code § 3710.2 and their procedural prerequisites have been upheld against constitutional challenge based on arguments that such provisions violate the separation of powers doctrine, due process, and the principle of check. Bradshaw v. Park (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1274-1279, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 872 .

(n10)Footnote 7.1. Ins. Code § 11664(d).

(n11)Footnote 7.2. See Lab. Code §§ 3710.1, 3722.

(n12)Footnote 7.3. Catalina Car Wash, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 162, 167-170, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118 .

(n13)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code § 3602(d).

(n14)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code § 3602(d).

(n15)Footnote 10. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 15200 et seq.

(n16)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 3700(b).

(n17)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 3700(b).

(n18)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 3701.

(n19)Footnote 14. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 15250 et seq.

(n20)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 3700(a); see Lab. Code § 56. See also American Manufacturers Mut. Ins. Co. v. Sullivan (1999) 526 U.S. 40, 43, 119 S. Ct. 977, 982, 143 L. Ed. 2d 130 (private insurers providing workers' compensation coverage under state laws are not "state actors" under Fourteenth Amendment; thus, a private insurer's decision under Pennsylvania's workers' compensation system to withhold payment and seek "utilization review" by private utilization review organization of reasonableness and necessity of particular medical treatment for employee's work-related injury, without predeprivation notice and opportunity to be heard, did not satisfy state-action requirement for finding deprivation of due process under Fourteenth Amendment).

(n21)Footnote 16. See Ins. Code § 11770 et seq.

(n22)Footnote 17. Ins. Code § 11770 et seq.

(n23)Footnote 18. Courtesy Ambulance Serv. v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1511-1513, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161 .

(n24)Footnote 19. Courtesy Ambulance Serv. v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1513-1519, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161 .

(n25)Footnote 20. Security Officers Serv., Inc. v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 887, 892-893, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 653 .

(n26)Footnote 21. Security Officers Serv., Inc. v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 887, 899-900, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 653 .

(n27)Footnote 22. Maxon Industries, Inc. v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1387, 1390-1395, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 730 .

(n28)Footnote 23. DuBois v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 388-389, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978 ; see Lab. Code §§ 3710-3732.

(n29)Footnote 24. DuBois v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 396, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978 .

(n30)Footnote 25. DuBois v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 396, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978 .

(n31)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 3711.

(n32)Footnote 27. Lab. Code § 3711; see Lab. Code § 3700(a), (b).

(n33)Footnote 28. Lab. Code § 3550(a).

(n34)Footnote 29. Lab. Code § 3550(d).

(n35)Footnote 30. Lab. Code §§ 3550(f), 3551(c).

(n36)Footnote 31. Lab. Code §§ 3550(d), 3551(b).

(n37)Footnote 32. Lab. Code § 3550(d).

(n38)Footnote 33. Lab. Code § 3551(b).

(n39)Footnote 34. Lab. Code § 3551(a).

(n40)Footnote 35. Lab. Code § 3550(b), (e).

(n41)Footnote 36. See Lab. Code §§ 3550(c), 3351(d); see also Lab. Code § 3352(h) (certain persons employed as provided in Lab. Code § 3351(d) are excluded from coverage of workers' compensation).

(n42)Footnote 37. See Lab. Code § 6409 for definitions.

(n43)Footnote 38. Lab. Code § 6409.1(a).

(n44)Footnote 39. Lab. Code § 6409.1(a). See also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14001.

(n45)Footnote 40. Lab. Code § 6409.1(a).

(n46)Footnote 41. Lab. Code § 6409.1(a).

(n47)Footnote 41.1. Lab. Code § 6409.1(b).

(n48)Footnote 41.2. Lab. Code § 6409.1(b). See Lab. Code § 6427 et seq.

(n49)Footnote 42. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9812(i).

(n50)Footnote 43. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9812(j).

(n51)Footnote 44. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9812(d).

(n52)Footnote 45. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9812(b).

(n53)Footnote 46. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9812(c).

(n54)Footnote 47. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9813.

(n55)Footnote 48. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9812(h).

6 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 1. Overview of Workers' Compensation System

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.04

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.04 Medical Provider Networks

On or after January 1, 2005, an insurer or employern¹ may establish or modify a medical provider network for the provision of medical treatment to injured employees, which must include physicians primarily engaged in the treatment of occupational injuries and physicians primarily engaged in the treatment of nonoccupational injuries.n² An insurer or employer offering a medical provider network using economic profiling must file with the administrative director a description of any policies and procedures related to economic profiling utilized by the insurer or employer.n³ An insurer or employer arranging for care for injured employees through a medical provider network must file a written continuity of care policy with the administrative director.n⁴

When the injured employee notifies the employer of the injury or files a claim for workers' compensation with the employer, the employer must arrange an initial medical evaluation and begin treatment as required by Lab. Code § 4600.n⁵ The employer must notify the employee of his or her right to be treated by a physician of his or her choice after the first visit from the medical provider network and the method by which the employee may access the list of participating providers.n⁶ If an injured employee disputes either the diagnosis or the treatment prescribed by the treating physician, the employee may seek the opinion of another physician in the medical provider network. If the injured employee disputes the diagnosis or treatment prescribed by the second physician, the employee may seek the opinion of a third physician in the medical provider network.n⁷

The injured employee's selection of a treating physician and any subsequent physicians must be based on the physician's specialty or recognized expertise in treating the particular injury or condition in question.n⁸ Treatment by a specialist who is not a member of the medical provider network may be permitted on a case-by-case basis if the medical provider network does not contain a physician who can provide the approved treatment and the treatment is approved by the employer or the insurer.n⁹ If after the third physician's opinion the treatment or diagnostic service remains disputed, the injured employee may request independent medical review regarding the disputed treatment or diagnostic service.n¹⁰ If the independent medical reviewer finds that the disputed treatment or diagnostic service is consistent with Lab. Code § 5307.27 or the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Medicine Practice

Guidelines, the injured employee may seek the disputed treatment or diagnostic service from a physician of his or her choice from within or outside the medical provider network. Treatment outside the medical provider network must be provided consistent with Lab. Code § 5307.27 or the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine's Occupational Practice Guidelines. The employer is liable for the cost of any approved medical treatment in accordance with Lab. Code §§ 5307.1 or 5307.11.n11

The Workers' Compensation Appeals Board cannot order additional examinations, and no other reports will be admissible to resolve any controversy arising out of the provisions governing medical provider networks.n12

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDICoverageGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. For these purposes, an "employer" is defined as a self-insured employer, a joint powers authority, or the state. Lab. Code § 4616.5.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 4616(a). A health care organization certified pursuant to Lab. Code § 4600.5 will be deemed approved if it meets the percentage required for physicians primarily engaged in nonoccupational medicine and all the other requirements for medical provider networks. A health care service plan licensed pursuant to Health & Saf. Code § 1340 et seq. will be deemed approved for purposes of this article if it has a reasonable number of physicians with competency in occupational medicine. A group disability insurance policy as defined in Ins. Code § 106(b) that covers hospital, surgical, and medical care expenses will be deemed approved if it has a reasonable number of physicians with competency in occupational medicine. A group disability insurance policy must not include Medicare supplement, vision-only, dental-only, Champus-supplement insurance, hospital indemnity, accident-only, and specified disease insurance that pays benefits on a fixed benefit, cash-payment-only basis. Any Taft-Hartley health and welfare fund will be deemed approved if it has a reasonable number of physicians with competency in occupational medicine. Lab. Code § 4616.7.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 4616.1(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 4616.2(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 4616.3(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 4616.3(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 4616.3(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 4616.3(d)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 4616.3(d)(2).

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 4616.4(b). For the procedure for an independent medical review, see Lab. Code § 4616.4(c)-(h).

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 4616.4(i).

(n12)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 4616.6.

7 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 1. Overview of Workers' Compensation System

1-20 California Employment Law §§ 20.05 through 20.09

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 20.05[Reserved]

8 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 2. Exclusive Remedy Doctrine in Employee Injury Cases

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.10

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.10 Scope of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine

[1] Injuries to Employee

When the conditions of compensation exist (that is, when an employee is entitled to receive workers' compensation benefits),ⁿ¹ workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for injuries incurred by an employee arising out of and in the course of his or her employment.ⁿ² The exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law thus provide tort immunity for employers and coemployees of an injured worker. Authority for the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, as applied to employers for injuries to their employees, is found in two sections of the Labor Code.ⁿ³ Labor Code Section 3600 provides that compensation under the Workers' Compensation Act, except as specifically provided for in Labor Code Section 3602,ⁿ⁴ Section 3706,ⁿ⁵ and Section 4558,ⁿ⁶ is in lieu of any other liability of an employer for injuries arising out of and in the course of the employment in those cases in which the conditions of compensation exist. The import of Section 3600 regarding the exclusive remedy doctrine is duplicated by Labor Code Section 3602, which provides that, excepting specified situations, when the conditions of compensation found in Section 3600 exist, the right to recover under workers' compensation law is the exclusive remedy for the injured employee, or his or her dependents, against the employer.

A two-step analysis normally is required to determine whether a claim is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (WCAB):^{n6.1}

- The court must initially determine whether the alleged injury falls within the scope of the exclusive remedy provisions.^{n6.2} The first step normally entails simply determining whether the plaintiff is seeking to recover for "industrial personal injury or death," i.e., for personal injury or death sustained in and arising out of the course and scope of employment.^{n6.3}
- If the plaintiff's claim comes within the conditions of compensation, the second step is to determine whether the acts or motives giving rise to the injury constitute a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain.^{n6.4} The motive element of a cause of action excepts that cause of action from exclusivity only if it violates a fundamental public policy of the state.^{n6.5}

The exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act apply when the employer is a licensed farm labor contractor, registered pursuant to the California Farm Labor Contractor Act (FLCA).ⁿ⁷ The fact that an aggrieved farm laborer may have a private right of action against a contractor under the FLCA, does not take the contractor out of the exclusivity provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act when the worker is injured in the course and scope of employment.ⁿ⁸

As a general rule, suits against coemployees are barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law in the same manner as suits against employers.ⁿ⁹ A suit by an injured person against a coemployee may be maintained, however, if one of the exceptions in Labor Code Section 3601 is satisfied.ⁿ¹⁰ In such a suit, the employer of the parties is normally not vicariously liable for the tortious acts of the coemployee.ⁿ¹¹ However, when a complaint alleges that an employer has ratified a tortious act of an employee, the employer may be liable as a joint tortfeasor.ⁿ¹²

When an employee is injured by an uninsured motorist while the employee is acting within the course and scope of his or her employment, the employee may make a claim under the uninsured motorist coverage provision of the employee's automobile insurance policy as well as filing a workers' compensation claim against his or her employer.ⁿ¹³ However, an insurer has no duty to pay its insured benefits under an uninsured motorist provision until the insured's workers' compensation claim is resolved.ⁿ¹⁴ A worker's exclusive remedy lay in workers' compensation for a claim that the employer negligently failed to discover, diagnose or inform the worker of a significant hearing abnormality, which was a symptom of a growing brain tumor. The employer undertook testing of its employees to detect hearing abnormalities due to noise exposure. The employee claimed that the employer's negligence caused a delay in treatment of a preexisting condition which resulted in permanent disability and injury. But for his employment, the employee had no basis for any claim against the employer under any legal theory, mandating the conclusion that the exclusive remedy lay in workers' compensation.^{n14.1}

One court of appeal has held that the exclusivity doctrine bars an action against an employer for negligent or reckless failure to provide adequate security on the employer's premises, despite knowledge of the potential danger, when such failure allegedly resulted in an assault and kidnapping against two employees perpetrated by third parties who were not employees.ⁿ¹⁵

Another court of appeal has held that an employee's death caused by unsafe working conditions was compensable solely under workers' compensation, even if the employer recklessly or deliberately failed to correct known safety violations.ⁿ¹⁶ Another court found that an employee's injuries resulting from the employer's conduct were compensable solely under the workers' compensation bargain, even though the employer had deceived and defrauded him by not revealing that a chemical solution was unsafe to use, by assuring him that it was safe to use, failing to provide adequate gloves, clothing, and other protective gear, failing to provide training in using and handling the solution, removing warning labels from containers, and violating government safety regulations regarding use of the solution and warnings to employees about its toxic chemical properties.^{n16.1}

The exclusivity rule also barred a tort action against the State by a park ranger, who was injured as a result of the State's failure to complete repairs on a house in which he and his wife were living. As an inducement to accept a new ranger position, the State offered the ranger and his wife, as an employment benefit, residence in a home that the State owned, for which they paid monthly rent. Under the bunkhouse rule,^{n16.2} the ranger's exclusive remedy was in the workers' compensation system, because he was injured in the course of employment. Residence in the house was part of his compensation package, and he resided in the house out of work necessity and used a portion of the house as his office. The injury arose out of employment, even though the ranger was injured on his personal day off, while engaged in an activity having nothing to do with his employment as a park ranger. The injury occurred while the ranger resided on his employer's premises while engaged in an activity incidental to his employment.ⁿ¹⁷

When workers' compensation provides the exclusive remedy for an employment-related injury, and the employee sues the employer under other theories, such as unlawful discrimination or employment-related torts, the trial court may have to determine whether to admit evidence of the injury. To make that determination, the trial court should apply the traditional tort "substantial factor" test to assess whether the unlawful or discriminatory act was a substantial factor in causing the employment-related injury. Thus, for example, in Huffman v. Interstate Brands Corp.,ⁿ¹⁷ the employer demoted a long-time employee, who then suffered a knee injury in the course of employment. The employee sued the employer for wrongful demotion and age discrimination. The trial court admitted evidence of the employee's knee injury and subsequent surgery under a "but for" standard, i.e., but for the demotion or unlawful act, the employee would not have suffered emotional distress arising from his subsequent industrial injury. The subsequent workplace injury followed an allegedly unlawful demotion that was concededly outside the compensation bargain and not itself subject to the Workers' Compensation Act exclusive remedy provisions. However, the "but for" test applied by the trial court was an unwarranted expansion of the exemption to the Workers' Compensation Act's exclusive remedy provisions. The better approach to determine whether the exclusivity provisions apply to a subsequent injury following an unlawful act, such as a discriminatory demotion, is to determine whether the discriminatory conduct was a substantial factor in the subsequent industrial injury. In this case, applying the substantial factor test, the appellate court concluded that the alleged unlawful demotion was not a substantial factor in the subsequent knee injury. Had the employee alleged a disability discrimination or failure to accommodate claim, his emotional distress damages arising from his knee injury would have been exempt from the exclusive remedy provisions. The unlawful demotion to a position in which the employer knew the employee could not perform because of a physical disability would be a substantial factor in subsequent workplace injury sustained by that employee while attempting to perform his or her job duties. However, the employee here claimed that he had been demoted because of his age and replaced by a younger man. The injury the employee sustained was because of the physical requirements of the job, not because he was unlawfully replaced as a district manager by a younger man. There was no evidence the knee problems were related to the employee's age. Further, the age discrimination complaint was filed with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing long before he suffered his knee injury.

[2] Applicability of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine to Injuries Suffered by Third Persons

If an injury to a non-employee derives from an injury the employee sustained in the course of employment, the exclusivity of the workers' compensation remedy bars the third person from bringing a separate civil action against the employer. This "derivative-injury" rule is based on the language of Labor Code Section 3600, which provides that when the conditions of compensation exist, the employer's liability to pay workers' compensation is "in lieu of any other liability whatsoever to any person."ⁿ¹⁸

An employee seeking to state a cause of action against an employer under section 3602(b)(2) must plead in general terms facts that, if found true by the trier of fact, establish the existence of three essential elements:ⁿ¹⁹

1. The employer knew that the plaintiff had suffered a work-related injury.
2. The employer concealed that knowledge from the plaintiff.
3. The injury was aggravated as a result of such concealment.

In determining whether the allegations in a complaint are legally sufficient under § 3602(b)(2), the trial court must liberally construe the pleading with a view to achieving substantial justice between the parties.ⁿ²⁰

For example, workers' compensation proceedings are the exclusive remedy for the following kinds of non-employee claims that are collateral to or derivative of employee's injuries:

- A claim by nondependent parents of an employee based on the employee's wrongful death.ⁿ²¹
- A claim by the spouse of an injured employee for loss of services or loss of consortium.ⁿ²²
- A claim by an employee's spouse for emotional distress suffered in witnessing the employee's injuries.ⁿ²³

A professional who renders services to an injured employee is barred by the derivative injury rule from filing a civil action for payment, because the professional's work is compensable through the workers' compensation system. For example, a psychologist retained as an expert by the attorneys representing workers in both their workers' compensation claims and in a civil suit against a third party, whose bills were partly paid through the workers' compensation system, could not seek payment for the rest in a separate civil suit, because his work was compensable through the workers' compensation system.^{n23.1}

However, if the third person's injury is not legally dependent on the employee's injury, then it is not a "derivative injury." In such a case, the third party may bring a separate civil action against the employer.ⁿ²⁴ For example, a plaintiff who was injured in utero when the plaintiff's mother inhaled toxic fumes at her place of employment may sue the mother's employer if the plaintiff's injury resulted from the plaintiff's own exposure to the toxic substance. The fact that the mother was also injured does not bar the plaintiff's action unless the plaintiff's injury is necessarily dependent on the existence of the mother's injury.ⁿ²⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsExclusivityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See §§ 20.20-20.23.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602. For the standard jury instruction on the employer's affirmative defense that the employee's injury was covered by workers' compensation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI No. 2800 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 3602 (providing for three exceptions discussed in § 20.06[1][a]-[d]).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code § 3706 (providing for exception for uninsured employer discussed in § 20.20[1]).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code § 4558 (providing exception for certain power press injuries discussed in § 20.12[1][e]).

(n7)Footnote 6.1. Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 185-186, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 .

(n8)Footnote 6.2. Charles J. Vacanti, M.D., Inc. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 811, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234 .

(n9)Footnote 6.3. Charles J. Vacanti, M.D., Inc. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 812-814, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234 ; Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 752-753, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828

P.2d 1195; Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054. See Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 187, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 (unlike damage to one's reputation caused by defamation, nature of harm from breach of right to privacy constitutes personal injury, bringing claim within conditions of compensation and satisfying first step of exclusivity analysis).

(n10)Footnote 6.4. Charles J. Vacanti, M.D., Inc. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 819-820, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234; Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054. See Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 187-188, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 (invasion of privacy claim avoids exclusivity provisions of Workers' Compensation Act because it does not stem from risk reasonably encompassed within compensation bargain).

(n11)Footnote 6.5. Charles J. Vacanti, M.D., Inc. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 800, 823, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 562, 14 P.3d 234; see Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 188, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 (employer's violation of employee's privacy by intentional disclosure of reprimand to coemployees with no need to know violated right conferred by California Constitution and was contrary to fundamental public policy).

(n12)Footnote 7. Ruiz v. Cabrera (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1200-1203, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320.

(n13)Footnote 8. Ruiz v. Cabrera (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1198, 1200-1203, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320.

(n14)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 360I; see discussion in § 20.43[1].

(n15)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 360I(c). For discussion of suits against coemployees, see § 20.43.

(n16)Footnote 11. See Lab. Code § 360I(c); Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487-1489, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (only "positive misconduct" by employer, not by employee, can be basis for employer liability for assault and battery).

(n17)Footnote 12. Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'g (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 228, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696; accord, Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1489-1491, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359.

(n18)Footnote 13. Rangel v. Interinsurance Exch. (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 1, 8, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 783, 842 P.2d 82.

(n19)Footnote 14. Rangel v. Interinsurance Exch. (1992) 4 Cal. 4th 1, 17, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 783, 842 P.2d 82.

(n20)Footnote 14.1. Weber v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 801, 806-809, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412. See Wickham v. North American Rockwell Corp. (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 467, 87 Cal. Rptr. 563 (workers' compensation was exclusive remedy for employee's claim that employer's physician failed to diagnose active tuberculosis and progressive inflammation of plaintiff's lung).

(n21)Footnote 15. Arendell v. Auto Parts Club, Inc. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1265, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83.

(n22)Footnote 16. Vuillemainroy v. American Rock & Asphalt, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1280, 1285; see § 20.12[2][c].

(n23)Footnote 16.1. Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 719-723, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195.

(n24)Footnote 16.2. See § 20.22[5][d], below.

(n25)Footnote 17. Vaught v. State of California (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1544-1549, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605.

(n26)Footnote 17.1. See, e.g., Huffman v. Interstate Brands Corp. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 679, 692-700, 17

Cal. Rptr. 3d 397 .

(n27)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 3600; see Snyder v. Michael's Stores, Inc. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 991, 996-997, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476, 945 P.2d 781 ; Williams v. Schwartz (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 628, 634, 131 Cal. Rptr. 200 .

(n28)Footnote 19. Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal.3d 306, 312, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 ; see Palestini v. General Dynamics Corp. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 89-98, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741 (complaint stated facts sufficient to constitute cause of action for fraudulent concealment resulting in aggravation of alleged work-related injuries within meaning of § 3602(b)(2) by alleging defendants knew physical problems were caused by carcinogenic chemicals and that injuries as reported to defendants and well known to them were aggravated by continued exposure to carcinogenic chemicals).

(n29)Footnote 20. Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal.3d 306, 312, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 ; Palestini v. General Dynamics Corp. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 89-90 .

(n30)Footnote 21. Treat v. Los Angeles Gas & Elec. Corp. (1927) 82 Cal. App. 610, 615-616, 256 P. 447 .

(n31)Footnote 22. Colombo v. State of California (1991) 3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 599, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 ; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; Gillespie v. Northridge Hosp. Found. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 867, 868-870, 98 Cal. Rptr. 134 .

(n32)Footnote 23. Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 .

(n33)Footnote 23.1. Perrillo v. Picco & Presley (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 914, 928-937, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29 .

(n34)Footnote 24. Snyder v. Michael's Stores, Inc. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 991, 998-999, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476, 945 P.2d 781 .

(n35)Footnote 25. Snyder v. Michael's Stores, Inc. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 991, 998-1002, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476, 945 P.2d 781 (disapproving Bell v. Macy's California (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1442, 261 Cal. Rptr. 447 , which had held as matter of law that all fetal injuries are derivative of mother's injuries).

9 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 2. Exclusive Remedy Doctrine in Employee Injury Cases

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.11

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.11 When Exclusive Remedy Defense Is Inapplicable

An employee or his or her dependents may wish to avoid the application of the Workers' Compensation Act in order to bring a tort action. In a tort suit by an employee or the employee's dependents against the employer, the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code may be avoided by showing one of the following:

1. The employer of the injured worker was uninsured.n1
2. The injury was of a type outside the application of the Act.n2
3. The employee was not acting within the course of employment at the time of the injury.n3
4. The employee was not performing service growing out of and incidental to his or her employment at the time of the injury.n4
5. The injury meets the requirements of an exception to the exclusive remedy doctrine.n5

In addition, when an injury was caused at least in part by a third person, a civil suit against that person is not barred by the exclusive remedy provision of the workers' compensation system.n6

The exclusivity doctrine of the workers' compensation law also does not bar a statutory employment discrimination action by an employee who alleges that he or she suffered physical, mental, or emotional injury resulting from racial, religious, sex, age, or other discrimination by the employer in violation of the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA).n7 In City of Moorpark v. Superior Court,n8 the California Supreme Court addressed the relationship between Labor Code section 132a, which prohibits employers from discriminating against employees "injured in the course and scope of their employment,"n9 and the FEHA and other common law remedies for disability discrimination. Disapproving a line of court of appeal decisions holding otherwise, the Court concluded that the FEHA and other common law remedies are available to an employee subject to discrimination on the basis of a work-related disability.ⁿ¹⁰ However, the Court noted that standards for establishing disability discrimination under the FEHA and under Labor Code Section 132a might well be different and that, to the extent the remedies overlap, equitable principles precluded double recovery for employees.ⁿ¹¹

In general, the exclusive remedy rule does not preclude an employee from suing his or her employer for damages for breach of an employment contract.ⁿ¹² Similarly, the rule does not preclude an employee from maintaining a contractual cause of action against the employer for breach of an implied promise not to discharge him or her without good cause.ⁿ¹³ However, when the employee prevails on a cause of action for breach of contract, the employer has the right to set off from any contract damages the amount of any compensation paid to the employee representing lost wages.ⁿ¹⁴

The exclusivity doctrine does not bar claims against an employer for unlawful discrimination under FEHA. Exclusivity also does not bar emotional distress claims founded on discrimination.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Coverage General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws
Exclusivity General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 3706, discussed in § 20.40[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1), discussed in § 20.21.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 3600(a)(2), discussed in § 20.22.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 3600(a)(2), discussed in § 20.22.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602, discussed in § 20.12.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code § 3852, discussed in § 20.24.

(n7)Footnote 7. Goldman v. Wilsey Foods, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1095-1096, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294 (religious discrimination); Meninga v. Raley's, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 79, 91, 264 Cal. Rptr. 319 (sex discrimination); Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 622, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (race discrimination); Watson v. Department of Rehabilitation (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1285-1287, 261 Cal. Rptr. 204 (race and age discrimination); see Gov. Code § 12900 et seq. (FEHA). See also Rissetto v. Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 343 (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 597, 606 (in FEHA age discrimination case, plaintiff estopped from claiming she could perform her work adequately because plaintiff had obtained favorable settlement in workers' compensation claimed based on contrary assertion that she could not perform her work). For discussion of the FEHA, see chs. 40-43.

(n8)Footnote 8. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752.

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 132a.

(n10)Footnote 10. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 448, 959 P.2d 752; Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1485-1492, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (applying Moorpark's holding that Lab. Code § 132a is not exclusive remedy for work-related injury discrimination and allowing claims against two coemployees for disability discrimination in violation of FEHA and for emotional distress).

(n11)Footnote 11. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Pichon v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 500-501, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Panopulos v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 660, 667-668, 264 Cal. Rptr. 810 , disapproved on other grounds, Turner v. Anheuser Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1254 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Panopulos v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 660, 667-668, 264 Cal. Rptr. 810 , disapproved on other grounds, Turner v. Anheuser Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1254 ; Pichon v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 500-501, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677 .

10 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 2. Exclusive Remedy Doctrine in Employee Injury Cases

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.12

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.12 Exceptions to Exclusive Remedy Doctrine

[1] Statutory Exceptions

[a] Generally

Even when an injury is otherwise compensable under the workers' compensation law, the employee may in certain limited instances be entitled to bring a tort action against the employer either in lieu of or in addition to the workers' compensation remedy.ⁿ¹ The Legislature has enacted some express exceptions to the exclusive remedy doctrine, which are discussed in [b]-[e], below.ⁿ² In these circumstances, an employee or his or her dependents can bring an action at law against the employer, as if the workers' compensation remedy did not apply.ⁿ³

There is no exception to the workers' compensation exclusivity rule for a claim of emotional distress based on conduct that violates the Fair Employment and Housing Act as discriminatory, even if the discriminatory conduct may be characterized as intentional, unfair or outrageous.^{n3.1}

[b] Physical Assault by Employer

An employee, or his or her dependents in the event of the employee's death, may bring an action at law for damages against the employer when the employee's injury or death is caused by a willful physical assault by the employer.ⁿ⁴ To come within this exception to the exclusivity rule, the employee must show that the employer used force or violence. The employer's use of deceit does not constitute or substitute for the use of force or violence.^{n4.1} Under another similarly worded provision of the Labor Code, providing that liability may attach to an employee for "a willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression" on another employee,ⁿ⁵ a court of appeal has held that the harm to a plaintiff need not be physical in order for the exception to apply.ⁿ⁶ Under the common legal meaning of the term "assault," physical contact is not necessary to complete an act of assault.ⁿ⁷ A later case interpreting the current statutory language reached the same conclusion and found sufficient evidence to support a jury finding of "willful physical assault" when the employee's supervisor had waived a pistol at the employee and threatened to "blow his ... head off."ⁿ⁸ Nonetheless,

"willful" assaults include only those common-law batteries that are specifically intended to injure. Thus, the plaintiff must show that the defendant specifically intended to injure him or her.ⁿ⁹

However, this specific exception to workers' compensation exclusivity when an employer commits a willful physical assault on an employee^{n9.1} does not authorize a private action against an employer based on another employee's willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression.^{n9.2} In Fretland v. County of Humboldt,^{n9.3} the court of appeal rejected plaintiff's argument that employer liability in these circumstances is based on the doctrine of respondeat superior.^{n9.4} The court concluded that only "positive misconduct" by the employer can be the basis for an employer's liability for assault and battery, and the imposition of respondeat superior liability in these circumstances would directly violate Labor Code Section 3601(b).^{n9.5} The court acknowledged, however, that if the employer had joined in the assault, or ratified it, the employer could be jointly liable with the coemployee.^{n9.6}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The holding in Fretland ^{n9.7} is important for reasons beyond its relevance to worker's compensation law. In equal employment opportunity lawsuits under the Fair Employment and Housing Act, it is unfortunate, but not uncommon, for employees to become involved in altercations that are alleged to be motivated by race or gender. Occasionally, the protected employee who is involved in the altercation seeks to hold the employer liable on the ground that it should have known that the altercation was possible and taken corrective measures to avoid the conflict. If there is no evidence that the employer should have known that an altercation was brewing, and if there is no evidence after the altercation that the employer ratified the conduct of the aggressor, Fretland bars employer liability for the injuries sustained in the altercation. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox

For a form of complaint for use in a tort action against an employer for injuries caused by a willful physical assault by the employer, see § 20.41[3].

[c] Aggravation of Injury Caused by Employer's Fraudulent Concealment

An employee, or his or her dependents in the event of the employee's death, may bring an action at law for damages against the employer when the employee's injury is aggravated by the employer's fraudulent concealment of the injury and its connection with the employment. In such a case, the employer's liability is limited to those damages proximately caused by the aggravation.ⁿ¹⁰ However, punitive damages are also available in such a case.ⁿ¹¹ The burden of proof of apportioning damages between those caused by the initial injury and those caused by the aggravation of the injury is on the employer.ⁿ¹² This statutory provision codifies the rule of Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court.ⁿ¹³

"Fraudulent concealment" under Labor Code Section 3602(b)(2) may consist of a failure to disclose facts when there is a duty to do so, as well as an affirmative misrepresentation.ⁿ¹⁴ For example, a cause of action under Labor Code Section 3602(b)(2) occurs when an employer knows that an employee has contracted a disease from employment and conceals that knowledge from the employee, thereby aggravating the illness.ⁿ¹⁵ However, actual knowledge of the industrial injury on the part of the employer is required to establish a cause of action under Labor Code Section 3602(b)(2).ⁿ¹⁶

An employee seeking to state a cause of action against an employer under section 3602(b)(2) must plead in general terms facts that, if found true by the trier of fact, establish the existence of three essential elements:^{n16.1}

1. The employer knew that the plaintiff had suffered a work-related injury.
2. The employer concealed that knowledge from the plaintiff.
3. The injury was aggravated as a result of such concealment.

In determining whether the allegations in a complaint are legally sufficient under § 3602(b)(2), the trial court must liberally construe the pleading with a view to achieving substantial justice between the parties.ⁿ¹⁶²

In one case, the employer established by uncontroverted evidence that the employee had known for years about possible health problems arising from exposure to asbestos and other chemicals used in the course of his work; and there was nothing in the record to suggest that the employer withheld any information relevant to the employee's condition from the employee. The court held that the employee was not entitled, as a matter of law, to bring a civil action against the employer pursuant to Labor Code Section 3602(b)(2).ⁿ¹⁷

In another case, the court held that the federal Labor Management Relations Act did not preempt a former employee's claim under Labor Code Section 3602(b)(2) that the employer fraudulently concealed the fact that her illness was caused by exposure to toxic chemicals in the workplace. Section 301 of that actⁿ¹⁸ may preempt a state claim if the application of the law is substantially dependent on an analysis of a collective bargaining agreement or if the claim is founded directly on rights created by such an agreement. However, in this case, the court found that the Section 3602(b)(2) claim was not preempted because it involved neither a strictly factual inquiry into the employer's knowledge and actions, nor interpretation of the collective bargaining agreement, nor a claim founded on rights created by that agreement.ⁿ¹⁹ For additional discussion of federal labor law preemption of wrongful termination and related claims, see Chapter 60.

For a form of complaint by an employee against an employer for damages for fraudulent concealment, see § 20.41[2].

[d] Dual Capacity Doctrine

[i] Current Statutory Exception When Employer Is Manufacturer of Product Causing Injury

An employee, or his or her dependents in the event of the employee's death, may bring an action at law for damages against the employer when the employee's injury or death is proximately caused by a defective product manufactured by the employer and sold, leased, or otherwise transferred for valuable consideration to an independent third person, and that product is thereafter provided for an employee's use by a third person.ⁿ²⁰ As discussed in [ii], below, this rule, which is codified in Labor Code Section 3602(b)(3), is considerably more narrow than the judicially created doctrine it replaced.ⁿ²¹

[ii] Comparison With Prior Judicial Doctrine

Under the former judicially created dual capacity doctrine, an employer was liable in tort for injuries that arose out of and in the course of employment if the employer was deemed to have committed the tortious act not in the capacity of an employer, but in the "dual capacity" of a third person, thus rendering the employer liable under Labor Code Section 3852. For example, in Duprey v. Shane,ⁿ²² an employee injured in the course of employment was negligently treated by her employer, a physician. The California Supreme Court held that the employer had a dual legal personality, and while he could not be liable in tort as the plaintiff's employer, he was liable in his other capacity as a physician.ⁿ²³ The dual capacity doctrine applied not only to cases in which the employer took on the dual capacity of physician, but also to cases in which the employer was liable in a dual capacity as manufacturer of a defective product.ⁿ²⁴

In 1982, the Legislature amended Labor Code Section 3602 to specifically limit the dual capacity doctrineⁿ²⁵ to state that the fact that either the employee or the employer also occupied another or dual capacity prior to, or at the time of, the employee's industrial injury does not in itself permit the employee or his or her dependents to bring an action at law for damages against the employer.ⁿ²⁶

Because the language of Labor Code Section 3602(a) prohibits actions at law for damages when a dual capacity relationship exists "prior to or at the time of the employee's industrial injury," the dual capacity doctrine may still be available if the employer does not occupy a dual capacity until after the employee suffers a compensable injury.ⁿ²⁷

[e] Power Press Injury

An employee, or his or her dependents in the event of the employee's death, may bring an action at law for damages against the employer when the employee's injury or death is proximately caused by the employer's knowing removal of, or failure to install, a point-of-operation guard on a power press, and this removal or failure to install is specifically authorized by the employer under conditions known by the employer to create a probability of serious injury or death.ⁿ²⁸ Liability does not arise, however, unless the plaintiff proves that the manufacturer designed, installed, required, or otherwise provided by specification for attachment of a guard and this was communicated to the employer.ⁿ²⁹

The term "power press," as used in Labor Code Section 4558, means any material-forming machine that utilizes a die designed for use in the manufacture of other products.^{n29.1} Because Labor Code Section 4558 does not define the term "die," the courts have interpreted the term.^{n29.2} A "die" is a device that imparts form to material by impact or pressure against the material and imparts some version of its own shape to the material.^{n29.3} As a matter of law, a circular saw blade, as used in a hand-held saw, is not a die.^{n29.4} A linear cutting blade also is not a "die" because it moves along the surface of the material, cutting out any shape desired.^{n29.5} A saw blade is not a "die" because it did not determine the shape of the product formed by the machine.ⁿ³⁰ On the other hand, a jury had to decide whether the blades, one movable and one fixed, of a hydraulic metal cutting or shearing device were a "die." At the operator's command, hydraulic movement lowers the upper movable blade, which cuts through sheets of metal or stock resting on the bottom fixed blade. Because the blades were square and nearly parallel and the machine employed hydraulic pressure, a fact finder could conclude that the blades cut primarily by impact or pressure against the material, leaving an impression of the blades in the stock, namely, a straight line. Alternatively, a reasonable fact finder could determine that the machine did not use a die because it cut along the stock, given that the blades were not precisely parallel.^{n30.1} A printing press is not a machine that forms materials to be used in the manufacture of other products.ⁿ³¹

The term "guard," as used in Labor Code Section 4558, includes the myriad types of apparatuses available to keep workers' hands outside the point of operation, and is not a term of art.ⁿ³² A point of operation guard is "removed" for purposes of Labor Code Section 4558 when it is rendered dysfunctional or unavailable for use by the operator for the particular task assigned.ⁿ³³

One court has said that the Legislature used the word "known" in Labor Code Section 4558 to mean actual awareness. Nothing in that section suggests that courts may impute knowledge to or impose constructive knowledge on the employer regarding the danger to employees.ⁿ³⁴ Thus, the court held that Section 4558 does not encompass situations in which the employer does not know of any danger at the time the employer replaces a guard initially installed by the manufacturer, and is subsequently negligent in failing to maintain the replacement guard, because the statute requires that the employer know of the potential danger in removing or replacing the guard at the time the employer actually removes or replaces it.ⁿ³⁵ Section 4558 does not apply to an employer's mere act of removing the manufacturer's guard and replacing it with a new guard, without regard to the employer's state of mind in doing so.ⁿ³⁶

The meaning of "specifically authorized" as defined in Labor Code section 4558 is a question of statutory construction.^{n36.1} The statutory definition of "specifically authorized" unambiguously requires an "affirmative instruction" by the employer.^{n36.2} The ordinary meaning of the words "affirmative instruction" in the context of section 4558 is an express directive statement, rather than an implied statement or tacit acquiescence.^{n36.3}

An employer who designs, manufactures, and installs its own power presses is considered to be a "manufacturer" for purposes of Labor Code Section 4558. In an action against an employer-manufacturer of a power press for failure to install a point-of-operation guard, the injured employee was required to prove that the employer's design of the press provided for a guard that was later removed or never installed. Alternatively, the employee was required to prove that a guard was necessary to protect against a known risk of serious injury, but was deliberately omitted by the employer from the design fabrication or assembly of the machine. An employer may be liable even if the design of the press did not provide for attachment of a guard, as long as a guard was required to protect against a known risk of serious injury and the press was capable of functioning with the required guard.ⁿ³⁷

An employee who brings a civil action pursuant to Labor Code Section 4558 may not also allege other causes of action such as negligence and strict liability that require lesser standards of proof.ⁿ³⁸

[2] Wrongful Termination and Related Intentional Torts

[a] Generally

As discussed in [1][b] and [c], above, the Workers' Compensation Act provides express exceptions to the exclusive remedy doctrine for certain types of intentional torts, such as a willful physical assault by the employer or fraudulent concealment of a prior work-related injury or its relationship to the employment.ⁿ³⁹ Whether the exclusive remedy doctrine bars civil tort actions for emotional distress damages arising from wrongful termination or other intentional misconduct that does not fall within one of the express statutory exceptions has been the subject of considerable conflict in the case law.

Before 1987, a number of court of appeal decisions reached seemingly conflicting results regarding the issue of whether an action against an employer for intentional infliction of emotional distress was barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁴⁰ In Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection District,ⁿ⁴¹ a case that involved allegations of intentional infliction of emotional distress causing disability to the employee, the California Supreme Court stated that previous appellate decisions permitting recovery in tort for intentional misconduct causing disability have involved employer conduct with a "questionable" relationship to the employment, an injury that did not occur while the employee was performing services incidental to the employment and that would not be viewed as a risk of the employment, or conduct in which the employer or insurer stepped out of their proper roles.ⁿ⁴² The Court in Cole held that if the misconduct attributed to the employer involves actions that are a normal part of the employment relationship, such as demotions, promotions, criticism of work practices, and frictions in negotiations about grievances, workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy.ⁿ⁴³ Characterization of the employer's conduct as outrageous, unfair, or intended to cause mental disability is not sufficient to avoid the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code.ⁿ⁴⁴ In such cases, the employee's remedy is to seek increased compensation for "serious and willful misconduct" under Labor Code Section 4553.ⁿ⁴⁵

Subsequently, in Shoemaker v. Myers,ⁿ⁴⁶ the Court reaffirmed its holding in Cole and held that termination of employment, and the events leading up to termination, are also a "normal part of the employment relationship" for purposes of the exclusive remedy doctrine.ⁿ⁴⁷ Thus, for example, the exclusive remedy doctrine applies with respect to an alleged wrongful termination of employment even if part of the employer's wrongful conduct occurred after the employee's final official day on the payroll and even if the employer's conduct was motivated by its desire to extract a waiver from the employee of his or her right to sue for wrongful termination.ⁿ⁴⁸ Except as discussed in [b] through [d], below, the exclusive remedy doctrine bars most civil actions seeking damages for mental and physical injuries and resulting disability arising out of allegedly wrongful termination or discipline.

Despite the difficulty in avoiding the exclusivity doctrine in order to state a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress, a civil action may lie if the underlying employer conduct violates public policy. Relying on the California Supreme Court's opinion in Gantt v. Sentry Insurance,ⁿ⁴⁹ the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held in *Maynard v. City of San Jose*ⁿ⁵⁰ that claims under California law for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress are not preempted by the California workers' compensation statute when the claims implicate fundamental public policy considerations.ⁿ⁵¹ In that case, the court allowed the claims because they were based on personnel moves allegedly made in retaliation for plaintiff's having reported perceived discrimination in a hiring decision and perceived irregularities in the purchase of communications equipment. While offering limited discussion of the issue, the court noted that California statutes explicitly prohibit retaliation against employees for opposing or participating in the investigation of discriminatory practices and for disclosing to the government violations of state or federal statutes or regulations.ⁿ⁵²

Also relying on Gantt v. Sentry Insurance,ⁿ⁵³ the court of appeal held in *Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists*ⁿ⁵⁴ that workers' compensation does not prevent an employee from recovering for infliction of emotional distress if he or she has a tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy or in violation of an express statute. The court reasoned that in these contexts, emotional distress damages are simply a component of compensatory damages.ⁿ⁵⁵

Another court of appeal held that to the extent that a plaintiff's emotional distress claim is premised on the employer's intentional violation of a fundamental public policy, the misconduct lies outside the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code, and the plaintiff may state a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress.ⁿ⁵⁶ Relying upon the reasoning in Gant v. Sentry Ins.,ⁿ⁵⁷ the court concluded that an employer's decision to discharge an employee resulting from an animus that violates fundamental policy is misconduct that cannot be considered a normal part of the employment relationship.ⁿ⁵⁸

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The holding in Cabesuela^{n58.1} does not stand for the proposition that claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress must survive demurrers or motions for summary judgment whenever a plaintiff also has plead a public policy claim. First, if the public policy claim already permits the recovery of emotional distress damages, the separate claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress is cumulative. This commentator has found the California judiciary increasingly willing to strike redundant causes of action. Therefore, if the public policy claim survives demurrer or summary judgment, the intentional infliction claim should be struck, because it adds nothing and potentially confuses the jury. Second, if the public policy claim does not permit the recovery of emotional distress damages, the separate claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress may be premised upon the same facts as the public policy claim. Therefore, if the public policy claim does not survive demurrer or summary judgment for lack of a sufficient factual predicate, the intentional infliction claim also should fail for the same reason. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

However, in Miklosy v. Regents of University of California,^{n58.2} the California Supreme Court held that the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine barred intentional infliction of emotional distress claims of former employees of the University of California, who attempted to bring an action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on termination in retaliation for whistleblowing. In Miklosy, the Court held that the employees could not assert common-law tort claims for termination in violation of public policy, because Government Code section 815 precluded those actions against public entities.^{n58.3} The Court noted that Shoemaker v. Myers^{n58.4} was of particular relevance, because it involved termination of a whistleblower employee. In Shoemaker, the Court had found that to the extent plaintiff purported to allege a distinct cause of action for infliction of emotional distress, not dependent on the violation of an express statute or violation of fundamental public policy, but rather directed at the intentional, malicious aspects of defendants' conduct, plaintiff's claim was precluded by the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine, because the kinds of conduct at issue, e.g., discipline or criticism, were a normal part of the employment relationship.^{n58.5} This holding was reaffirmed in Livitsanos v. Superior Court,^{n58.6} which also involved a terminated employee. The Miklosy Court found that none of the exceptions stated in Livitsanos were applicable. For example, the exception for conduct that "contravenes fundamental public policy," which was aimed at permitting a Tameny action to proceed despite the workers' compensation exclusive remedy rule, did not apply, because plaintiffs' Tameny action was barred by Gov. Code § 815. The Court also reaffirmed its conclusion in Shoemaker, rejecting application of the exception for conduct exceeding the risks inherent in the employment relationship.^{n58.7}

In Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson, n58.8 the court held that an employee's civil action based on her employer's intentional disclosure of a reprimand to coworkers with no need to know was a violation of her constitutional right to privacy in violation of public policy, and was not precluded by the exclusivity provision of the Workers' Compensation Act.n59

[b] Effect of Compensability of Alleged Emotional Distress

In Livitsanos v. Superior Court, n60 the California Supreme Court specifically addressed the issue of whether or not an employee's claim against an employer for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress, unaccompanied by any physical disability, was within the workers' compensation exclusive remedy rule. As noted in [a], above, a number of decisions of the courts of appeal, most notably Renteria v. County of Orange, n61 had held that absent allegations of physical injury, a claim of emotional distress is outside the workers' compensation scheme; therefore it could be the subject of a civil tort action by the employee against the employer. The Supreme Court in Livitsanos rejected this distinction, holding that even when no physical injury or disability is alleged, a claim for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress is within the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, so long as the basic conditions of compensation are otherwise satisfied and the employer's conduct neither contravenes a fundamental public policy nor exceeds the risks inherent in the employment relationship.n62

The Livitsanos Court observed that in order for an emotional injury to be compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act, the injury must result in an industrial disability or a need for medical treatment.n63 Thus, the Court acknowledged, it is theoretically possible for an employee to incur a work-related emotional injury that results in no compensable industrial disability. The Court concluded that, nevertheless, the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act are not abrogated by the fact that in a limited number of cases an employee might be left without a remedy either in tort or in workers' compensation.n64

[c] Exception for Conduct Outside the "Compensation Bargain"

In Shoemaker v. Myers, n65 the California Supreme Court observed that the legal theory supporting the exclusive remedy doctrine is a presumed "compensation bargain," pursuant to which the employer assumes liability for work-related injury or death without regard to fault in exchange for limitations on the amount of that liability. The employee is afforded relatively swift and certain payments to cure or relieve the effects of work-related injury without having to prove fault, but, in exchange gives up the wider range of damages potentially available in tort. The function of the exclusive remedy rule is to give efficacy to this theoretical "compensation bargain."n66 Accordingly, the Court stated, the exclusive remedy doctrine does not apply when "the injury is the result of [employer] conduct, whether in the form of discharge or otherwise, not seen as reasonably coming within the compensation bargain."n67 In such cases, a separate civil action may be brought against the employer.n68

The Court in Shoemaker did not further elaborate on the type of conduct that may be found to be outside the "compensation bargain." The Court expressly left open the question of whether a common-law tort action alleging wrongful termination in violation of public policy lies outside the compensation bargain so as to avoid the exclusive remedy doctrine.n69 However, the Court did hold, as further discussed in [d], below, that the Legislature's enactment of express statutory protection for governmental whistleblowers, including a civil remedy for damages,n70 constituted a statutory exception to the exclusive remedy doctrine, and the Court added that "such conduct [i.e., violation of the statute] lies well outside the compensation bargain."n71

Subsequently, in Gantt v. Sentry Insurance, n72 the California Supreme Court specifically held that a cause of action for tortious discharge in violation of public policy is not preempted by workers' compensation law.n73 In Gantt, the Supreme Court determined that an employee who was terminated in retaliation for supporting a coworker's claim of sexual harassment was entitled to state a cause of action for tortious discharge against public policy, and that the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act do not bar such an action. In this case, the public policy involved was the statutory prohibition set forth in Government Code Section 12975 against any obstruction of a Department of Fair Employment and Housing investigation of sexual harassment or other employment discrimination. The Court noted that when an employer's decision to discharge an employee results from an animus that violates the fundamental policy of the state proscribing any interference in the official investigation of sexual harassment, this misconduct cannot, under any reasonable viewpoint, be considered either a normal part of the employment relationship or a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain.ⁿ⁷⁴

In Fermino v. Fedco, Inc.,ⁿ⁷⁵ the Court held that false imprisonment committed by an employer against an employee is always "outside the compensation bargain" and that an action for false imprisonment is therefore not barred by the exclusive remedy principle.ⁿ⁷⁶ The Court noted that an employer has a privilege to reasonably detain an employee suspected of theft, in which case there is no false imprisonment.ⁿ⁷⁷ However, once it is determined that a false imprisonment has taken place, such an action cannot be said to be a "normal part of the employment relationship."ⁿ⁷⁸ In determining that false imprisonment falls outside the compensation bargain, the Court observed that, unlike the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress involved in Cole, the tort of false imprisonment involves criminal conduct against the employee's person, not permissible conduct that only becomes intentionally tortious in light of the employer's supposed malicious state of mind.ⁿ⁷⁹ The Court suggested, in dictum, that those classes of intentional employer crimes against employee's persons by means of violence and coercion, such as those set forth in Title 8 of the Penal Code,ⁿ⁸⁰ violate the employee's reasonable expectations and transgress the limits of the compensation bargain, but that "regulatory crimes," such as violations of health and safety laws, would not fall outside the normal course of employment.ⁿ⁸¹

In Miklosy v. Regents of University of California,^{n81.1} the Court held that the workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine barred intentional infliction of emotional distress claims of former employees of the University of California, who attempted to bring an action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on termination in retaliation for whistleblowing. The Court reaffirmed its conclusion in Shoemaker v. Myers and rejected application of the exception for conduct exceeding the risks inherent in the employment relationship.^{n81.2}

Accordingly, one court of appeal held that an employee's death caused by unsafe working conditions was compensable solely under workers' compensation, even if the employer recklessly or deliberately failed to correct known safety violations.ⁿ⁸² The court relied on the dictum in Fermino, specifically excluding from the scope of its exception for conduct outside the compensation bargain regulatory crimes based on violations of health and safety standards.ⁿ⁸³ The court stated that plaintiff's use of the label "manslaughter" did not avoid the application of the workers' compensation exclusivity provisions because defendant's actions involved the creation of unsafe working conditions; this has consistently been held to be limited to workers' compensation remedies.ⁿ⁸⁴

Another court found that an employee's injuries resulting from the employer's conduct were compensable solely under the workers' compensation bargain, even though the employer had deceived and defrauded him by not revealing that a chemical solution was unsafe to use, by assuring him that it was safe to use, failing to provide adequate gloves, clothing, and other protective gear, failing to provide training in using and handling the solution, removing warning labels from containers, and violating government safety regulations regarding use of the solution and warnings to employees about its toxic chemical properties.^{n84.1} Another court of appeal, in applying the Supreme Court's analysis from Fermino, has noted that there is no "beyond the compensation bargain" exception for employer behavior that is merely negligent or reckless.ⁿ⁸⁵

In Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc.,^{n85.1} the court held that a former employee's emotional distress damages awarded in connection with his allegations of fraud relating to the termination of his employment were not barred by the workers' compensation exclusivity rule. The court reasoned that the former employer's misrepresentations made to induce the former employee to become an employee, were not a normal part of the employment relationship or a risk reasonably encompassed within the compensation bargain. Citing Shoemaker ^{n85.2} the court held that the former employer stepped out of its proper role as an employer. Specifically, the court concluded that the conduct alleged, i.e., misrepresentations related to the financial stability of a company, the company's future plans to relocate its operations, and the job applicant's promotion in the corporate ranks, were all designed to induce employment. They were neither a normal part of the employment relationship nor matters expected to occur with substantial frequency in the working environment.^{85,3}

[d] Statutory Protections Against Wrongful Termination and Discipline

As discussed in Chapter 60, numerous statutes provide express statutory restrictions on the employer's right to terminate and discipline employees, and many of these statutes provide statutory remedies for their violation. The Supreme Court's holding in Cole specifically did not address whether the exclusive remedy provision of the workers' compensation law bars causes of action created by statute.⁸⁶ However, it appears that in many cases, conduct that violates an express statutory provision may be deemed to be outside the "compensation bargain,"⁸⁷ so as to avoid the bar of the exclusive remedy doctrine.

In Shoemaker v. Myers,⁸⁸ the California Supreme Court held that former Government Code Section 19683,⁸⁹ which protected state employees from retaliation for reporting violations of state law to appropriate authorities and provided a civil damages remedy for employees injured by a violation of the statute, constituted a specific statutory exception to the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law.⁹⁰ The Court noted that the Legislature, in enacting the whistleblower statute, clearly intended to afford an additional remedy to those already granted under other provisions of law. Furthermore, the Court observed that the evils addressed by the whistleblower statute are different from those addressed by workers' compensation law and that the Legislature could not have intended that objectives of the whistleblower statute to be defeated by the exclusive remedy bar of the Workers' Compensation Act.⁹¹

Several court of appeal decisions have found that the exclusive remedy provisions do not bar a civil action for damages for most forms of prohibited employment discrimination under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA).⁹² The courts have reasoned that prohibited discrimination is not considered a normal incident of employment under Cole, because such discrimination is contrary to California law and public policy.⁹³

In City of Moorpark v. Superior Court ⁹⁴ the California Supreme Court held that the exclusive remedy doctrine does not bar California employees from bringing a FEHA action if the alleged discrimination is a result of a work-related disability.⁹⁵

Similar federal remedies may not be restricted by the exclusivity provision of the California workers' compensation statute. For example, the United States District Court, Northern District of California, has held that the exclusive remedy provision of the California Workers' Compensation Act is preempted by the federal Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).⁹⁶

[e] Retaliation for Filing Workers' Compensation Claim

Labor Code Section 132a provides for increased benefits, reinstatement, and backpay for an employee who is fired or otherwise discriminated against for filing a workers' compensation claim or for engaging in other specified, protected conduct under the workers' compensation law. Labor Code Section 132a does not provide an exclusive remedy for employees alleging that they were subject to discrimination based on a work related disability.⁹⁷ For further discussion of Section 132a, see § 20.32.

[f] Insurer's Duty to Defend

The scope of a workers' compensation insurer's duty to defend an employer against an employee's civil action is largely a matter of contract interpretation. In one case, the California Supreme Court held that when the "Workers'

Compensation Insurance" portion of a policy is not ambiguous and does not provide coverage for an employee's civil damages action alleging race discrimination and wrongful termination in violation of public policy, the insurer has no duty to defend the employer against such an action.ⁿ⁹⁸ The Court held that, under Division 4 of the Workers' Compensation and Insurance section of the Labor Code, the term "compensation" is defined by Labor Code Section 3207 as including every benefit or payment conferred by Division 4, including vocational rehabilitation, while the term "damages" is defined by Labor Code Section 3209 as "the recovery allowed in an action at law as contrasted with compensation." The Court thus concluded that, given the statutory definition of "compensation," which expressly includes the payment of benefits, and the corresponding definition of "damages," which expressly excludes compensation, the language in the "Workers' Compensation Liability" portion of the policy at issue was susceptible of no other objective construction than providing coverage solely for workers' compensation benefits, or claims, proceedings, or suits for such benefits, and not for civil suits for damages.ⁿ⁹⁹ In addition, the Court held that the civil action involved no potential for damages within the coverage of the policy because the superior court has no jurisdiction to award workers' compensation benefits; an award of such benefits is exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board.ⁿ¹⁰⁰

Even if the language in a particular workers' compensation policy may be interpreted as requiring the insurer to defend civil actions, Insurance Code Section 533, which prohibits liability coverage for an insured's "wilful acts," may relieve the insurer of any obligation to defend such actions. In one case, for example, the court held that an insurer had no duty to defend an employer in a case in which the employer intentionally interfered with an employee's protected labor union rights and had discriminated against the employee on the basis of her age, gender, and ethnicity.ⁿ¹⁰¹

For additional discussion of a liability or workers' compensation insurer's potential duty to defend an insured employer against employment discrimination and related wrongful termination actions, see Chapter 43, Part C.

[3] Spoliation of Evidence

An employee is permitted, as a matter of law, to pursue a tort action against his or her employer for negligent spoliation of evidence needed for the employee's third-party action.ⁿ¹⁰² In Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹⁰³ an employee and his wife brought an action against the employer for negligent spoliation of evidence, alleging that the employer lost parts of a truck after having agreed to preserve the parts for the employee's use in his third-party action against the manufacturer of the truck. The court of appeal held that the employee's tort action was not barred by the exclusive remedy doctrine, reasoning that spoliation of evidence does not constitute an injury to the person, but rather to property interests. Thus, the conditions necessary to invoke the exclusivity provisions of workers' compensation were absent.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

The court of appeal in Gomez v. Acquistapace ⁿ¹⁰⁵ relied, in part, on the reasoning set forth in Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court to similarly conclude that the exclusive remedy rule does not bar an employee's tort claim against an employer for spoliation of evidence. In Gomez, an employee choked to death when his clothing became tangled in an allegedly defective machine. Several days after the accident, the employer destroyed the machine. The employee's widow sued her husband's employer for negligent and intentional spoliation of evidence, claiming that destruction of the machine prevented her from recovering damages in a third-party action against the machine's manufacturer. The trial court held that the widow's negligent spoliation action was barred by the exclusive remedy rule and that her intentional spoliation claim was barred because she had failed to show that the employer acted with the intent to prejudice her chances of prevailing in the third-party action. Reversing the trial court's ruling, the court of appeal explained that the exclusive remedy rule did not apply to the negligent spoliation claim because the claim involved damage to property interests, not to the person. Such damage is not an "injury" within the meaning of Labor Code Sections 3208 and 3600.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ The court of appeal also discussed the Supreme Court's opinion in Fermino v. Fedco, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁰⁷ noting that the employer's conduct in this case was not a normal incident of employment because the average employee would not expect an employer to destroy evidence relating to an industrial injury. Moreover, the court pointed out, there is a fundamental public policy in California against the spoliation of evidence. Allowing an employee's civil action for spoliation supports this public policy while preserving the equally important public policy favoring the exclusivity rule.¹⁰⁸ With regard to intentional spoliation, the court of appeal opined that the trial court improperly read the definition of the "intent" element too narrowly, making it tantamount to a "specific intent" crime in criminal law. The court concluded that the "intent" element is satisfied when the employer destroys an object that may constitute evidence in a lawsuit, either with the purpose of harming the lawsuit or when harm to the lawsuit is substantially certain to follow.¹⁰⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Coverage General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws Exclusivity General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws Exclusivity Exceptions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. For discussion of whether the employee must "elect" one remedy or the other, see § 20.41[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code §§ 3602(b), 4558(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code §§ 3602(b), 4558(b).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Jones v. Dept. of Corrections (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1382, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 200. For discussion of the FEHA and discrimination generally, see Chs. 40, 41.

(n5)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim of willful assault by the employer, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2801 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on the employer's willful physical assault, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2800. (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n6)Footnote 4.1. Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 727-728, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195.

(n7)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1). For discussion of a coemployees' liability, see § 20.43 infra.

(n8)Footnote 6. See Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'g (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 225, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696.

(n9)Footnote 7. See Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57 (pointing gun at person may constitute assault). For discussion of assault generally, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, ch. 41 (Matthew Bender).

(n10)Footnote 8. See Herrick v. Quality Hotels, Inns & Resorts, Inc. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1608, 1617, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203.

(n11)Footnote 9. See Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405 (construing Lab. Code § 3601(a)).

(n12)Footnote 9.1. Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1).

(n13)Footnote 9.2. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1486-1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359; see Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) (authorizing suit for assault against coemployee, but not against employer); Lab. Code § 3601(b) (prohibiting imposition of civil liability on employer for one employee's assault and battery against coemployee); cf. Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) (addressing assault on employee by employer, not by coemployee).

(n14)Footnote 9.3. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 .

(n15)Footnote 9.4. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 .

(n16)Footnote 9.5. Fretland v. County of Humboldt (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 ; accord, Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'r (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 226, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 .

(n17)Footnote 9.6. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487-1488 ; see, e.g., Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'r (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 228, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 .

(n18)Footnote 9.7. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478 .

(n19)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2); see also Transport Indem. Co. v. Aerojet Gen. Corp. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 1184, 1186-1191, 249 Cal. Rptr. 463 (employer's aggravation of injuries by fraudulent concealment is not necessarily a willful act within meaning of Ins. Code § 533, and does not necessarily release insurer from duty to defend or indemnify employer in civil action by employee for aggravation of injury caused by employer's fraudulent concealment of nature and extent of work-induced injuries). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim of the employer's fraudulent concealment of injury, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2802 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on fraudulent concealment of injury, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2801 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n20)Footnote 11. See McDonald v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 297, 301, 225 Cal. Rptr. 394 ; see Civ. Code § 3294.

(n21)Footnote 12. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2).

(n22)Footnote 13. Johns-Manville Prods. Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 478-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 .

(n23)Footnote 14. See Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 309-311, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 .

(n24)Footnote 15. See Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 309-311, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 .

(n25)Footnote 16. See Hughes Aircraft Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1797, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 ; Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 312, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 ; Santiago v. Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1334, 274 Cal. Rptr. 576 . See Jensen v. Amgen, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1325-1328, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899 (summary judgment properly granted to employer when employer did not conceal existence of injury because employee knew of her symptoms before anyone at employer).

(n26)Footnote 16.1. Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 312, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 ; see Palestini v. General Dynamics Corp. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 89-98, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741 (complaint stated facts sufficient to constitute cause of action for fraudulent concealment resulting in aggravation of alleged work-related injuries within meaning of § 3602(b)(2) by alleging defendants knew physical problems were caused by carcinogenic chemicals and that injuries as reported to defendants and well known to them were aggravated by continued exposure to carcinogenic chemicals).

(n27)Footnote 16.2. Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 312, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 ; Palestini v. General Dynamics Corp. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 80, 89-90 .

(n28)Footnote 17. Davis v. Lockheed Corp. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 519, 522-523, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233 .

(n29)Footnote 18. See 29 U.S.C. § 185(a).

(n30)Footnote 19. Lopez v. Continental Can Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1992) 961 F.2d 147, 148-149 .

(n31)Footnote 20. Lab. Code § 3602(b)(3). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim under Lab. Code § 3602(b)(3) that the employee was harmed by a defective product manufactured by the employer, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2803 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on the employer's defective product, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2802 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n32)Footnote 21. Compare Lab. Code Section 3602(b)(3) with Douglas v. E. and J. Gallo Winery (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 103, 107, 137 Cal. Rptr. 797 ; see Behrens v. Fayette Mfg. Co. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 1567, 1572-1575, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 264 (statutory exception did not apply when employee came into contact with allegedly defective product as primary objective of her job and not as consumer, and she was not provided with product for her use but rather because her job required her to perform tasks on product).

(n33)Footnote 22. Duprey v. Shane (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 781, 249 P.2d 8 .

(n34)Footnote 23. Duprey v. Shane (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 781, 793-794, 249 P.2d 8 .

(n35)Footnote 24. See D'Angona v. County of Los Angeles (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 661, 665-666, 166 Cal. Rptr. 177, 613 P.2d 238 ; Douglas v. E. and J. Gallo Winery (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 103, 107, 137 Cal. Rptr. 797 .

(n36)Footnote 25. See Jones v. Kaiser Indus. Corp. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 552, 560-561, 237 Cal. Rptr. 568, 737 P.2d 771 ; see also Perry v. Heavenly Valley (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 495, 500-505, 209 Cal. Rptr. 771 (Lab. Code § 3602 amendment limiting dual capacity doctrine is not retroactive).

(n37)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 3602(a).

(n38)Footnote 27. See, e.g., Weinstein v. St. Mary's Med. Ctr. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1223, 1233-1236, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 461 (employee may sue hospital employer for premises liability after slip-and-fall reinjury aggravated previous on-the-job injury because dual capacity arose after initial injury, and employee was not acting within course and scope of employment at time of reinjury); Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1292-1293, 286 Cal. Rptr. 855 (injured employee permitted to maintain action against employer for negligent spoliation of evidence that employer had agreed to preserve for employee's use in his third-party action because employer's alleged dual capacity arose after employee injury, i.e., when evidence was lost); Sturtevant v. County of Monterey (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 758, 766-768 (medical center employee permitted to maintain action against center, for medical malpractice based on medical care provided after employee's admission to center subsequent to injury). cf. Lake v. Lakewood Chiropractic Ctr. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 47, 52-53, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358 (distinguishing Sturtevant and holding that when employee's injury was caused by free chiropractic adjustment provided by employer as a benefit of employment, employer's dual capacity arose prior to and at the time of her injury; therefore employee's tort action for medical malpractice was barred by exclusive remedy doctrine).

(n39)Footnote 28. See Lab. Code § 4558(b); see Lab. Code § 4558(a) (providing definitions applicable to this rule); see also Watters Assoc. v. Superior Court (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1322, 1325, 267 Cal. Rptr. 696 (temporary machine operator trainee injured by an unguarded power press may not maintain cause of action against employment agency that placed him in job, having failed to allege employment agency removed or authorized removal of guard; Lab. Code § 4558 is applicable only to employers who directly authorize removal of a guard and a general agency allegation is insufficient to support a cause of action).

For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim of the employer's removal or noninstallation of power press guards, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2804 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on the employer's removal or noninstallation of power press guards, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2803 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n40)Footnote 29. See Lab. Code § 4558(c); see Aguilera v. Henry Soss & Co. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1724, 1731, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477 (power press exception inapplicable when employee failed to provide evidence that employer was aware machine was missing safety device); Bryer v. Santa Cruz Pasta Factory (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1711, 1714-1715, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 (power press exception inapplicable absent evidence manufacturer informed employer of need for point of operation guard); Jones v. Keppeler (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 705, 710-713, 279 Cal. Rptr. 168 (employer held not liable under Lab. Code § 4558 when information about guard was provided by previous owner of machine and by manufacturer of control system added as modification to machine, but not provided by original manufacturer); Swanson v. Matthews Prods., Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 901, 906-907, 221 Cal. Rptr. 84; see also Uriarte v. United States Pipe and Foundry Co. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 780, 791, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 332 (summary judgment set aside when employee subsequently discovered evidence indicating guard was available for machine that injured him).

(n41)Footnote 29.1. Lab. Code § 4558(a)(4); see McCoy v. Zahniser Graphics, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 107, 111, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 (printing press not machine that forms materials to be used in manufacture of other products).

(n42)Footnote 29.2. Islas v. D & G Manufacturing Co., Inc. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559.

(n43)Footnote 29.3. See Rosales v. Depuy Ace Medical Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 279, 284-286, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 465, 991 P.2d 1256.

(n44)Footnote 29.4. Ceja v. J. R. Wood, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1372, 1376-1377, 242 Cal. Rptr. 531.

(n45)Footnote 29.5. See Rosales v. Depuy Ace Medical Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 279, 285, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 465, 991 P.2d 1256; see also Graham v. Hopkins (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1487-1490, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 82 (saw blade not "die" because it did not determine shape of product formed by machine; employee not denied equal protection because Legislature distinguished between type of machine he was operating and power presses as dangerous machines).

(n46)Footnote 30. See Graham v. Hopkins (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1487-1490, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 82 (also rejecting employee's contention that he was denied equal protection because there was no reason for Legislature to have distinguished between type of machine he was operating and power presses as dangerous machines).

(n47)Footnote 30.1. Islas v. D & G Manufacturing Co., Inc. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 571, 579-580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559.

(n48)Footnote 31. See McCoy v. Zahniser Graphics, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 107, 111, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871.

(n49)Footnote 32. See Bingham v. CTS Corp. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 56, 65, 282 Cal. Rptr. 161.

(n50)Footnote 33. See Bingham v. CTS Corp. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 56, 68, 282 Cal. Rptr. 161.

(n51)Footnote 34. See Saldana v. Globe-Weis Sys. Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1516-1517, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385.

(n52)Footnote 35. See Saldana v. Globe-Weis Sys. Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1519, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385 .

(n53)Footnote 36. See Saldana v. Globe-Weis Sys. Co. (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1505, 1519-1520, 285 Cal. Rptr. 385 .

(n54)Footnote 36.1. Mora v. Hollywood Bed & Spring (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 1068, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 640 .

(n55)Footnote 36.2. Lab. Code § 4558(a)(6).

(n56)Footnote 36.3. Mora v. Hollywood Bed & Spring (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 1068-1071, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 640 (injured worker cited no evidence that employer expressly directed failure to install or removal of point of operation guard, so summary judgment was proper). Cf. Flowmaster, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 1032, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666 (when employer is also power press manufacturer, "specifically authorized" is not limited to "affirmative instruction," but can include other willful acts on part of employer despite actual knowledge of probability of serious harm).

(n57)Footnote 37. Flowmaster, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 1031, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 666 .

(n58)Footnote 38. See Award Metals, Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1128, 1131, 279 Cal. Rptr. 459 .

(n59)Footnote 39. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1), (2).

(n60)Footnote 40. Compare Renteria v. County of Orange (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 833, 838-842, 147 Cal. Rptr. 447 (allowing civil action when worker had no workers' compensation remedy because emotional distress was unaccompanied by physical injury) with Ankeny v. Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 531, 533-536, 151 Cal. Rptr. 828 (prohibiting civil action when workers' compensation benefits were available because emotional distress was accompanied by physical injury) and Gates v. Trans Video Corp. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 196, 204-206, 155 Cal. Rptr. 486 (same).

(n61)Footnote 41. Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 .

(n62)Footnote 42. Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; see, e.g., Johns-Manville Prods. Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 477, 477-478, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 ; Unruh v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 630, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063 ; Magliulo v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 760, 779, 121 Cal. Rptr. 621 ; Ramey v. Gen. Petroleum Corp. (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 386, 402, 343 P.2d 787 .

(n63)Footnote 43. Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 .

(n64)Footnote 44. Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; see Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 25, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .

(n65)Footnote 45. Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; Johns-Manville Prods. Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 472, 474, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 .

(n66)Footnote 46. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .

(n67)Footnote 47. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 17-20, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; see also Miklosy v. Regents of University of California (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 876, 902-903, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 188 P.3d 629 (reaffirming Shoemaker in holding that alleged infliction of severe emotional distress occurred as part of termination of employment, at worksite, in normal course of employer-employee relationship, so that workers' compensation was plaintiffs' exclusive remedy for any injury that may have resulted); Jenkins v. Family Health Program (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 440, 448-450, 262 Cal. Rptr. 798; Pichon v. Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 496, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677 (same).

(n68)Footnote 48. Horn v. Bradco Int'l, Ltd. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 653, 662-664, 283 Cal. Rptr. 721; see Kacludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866, 871 (generalized statements by supervisor concerning intent to assist employee in finding replacement employment were not sufficient to take case out of ambit of workers' compensation; holding otherwise would exempt all cases of physical or emotional injury resulting from termination from the workers' compensation system simply by claiming that employer led employee to believe he would not be fired).

(n69)Footnote 49. See Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680, overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, fn.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 24, 960 P.2d 1046; see discussion in [c], below.

(n70)Footnote 50. Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396.

(n71)Footnote 51. Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1405-1406.

(n72)Footnote 52. Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1405-1406; see Gov. Code § 12940(h); Lab. Code § 1102.5.

(n73)Footnote 53. See Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1099, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680, overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, fn.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 24, 960 P.2d 1046.

(n74)Footnote 54. See Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29.

(n75)Footnote 55. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 577, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 (workers' compensation does not preempt emotional distress action against employer in context of tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy or in violation of express statute).

(n76)Footnote 56. Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 112-113, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60.

(n77)Footnote 57. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1100, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680, overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'r Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046.

(n78)Footnote 58. Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 112-113, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60.

(n79)Footnote 58.1. Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60.

(n80)Footnote 58.2. Miklosy v. Regents of University of California (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 876, 902-903, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 188 P.3d 629.

(n81)Footnote 58.3. See discussion in § 60.04[5].

- (n82)Footnote 58.4. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .
- (n83)Footnote 58.5. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 25, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .
- (n84)Footnote 58.6. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 .
- (n85)Footnote 58.7. Miklosy v. Regents of University of California (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 876, 902-903, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 188 P.3d 629 . See Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 25, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .
- (n86)Footnote 58.8. Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 .
- (n87)Footnote 59. Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 184-192, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 .
- (n88)Footnote 60. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 .
- (n89)Footnote 61. Renteria v. County of Orange (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 833, 147 Cal. Rptr. 447 .
- (n90)Footnote 62. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 ; see, e.g., Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9-10, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 (plaintiff's emotional distress action was preempted by workers' compensation law because workers' compensation is exclusive remedy for intentional infliction of emotional distress by employer's work-related conduct when that conduct does not contravene public policy); see also Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1492-1493, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (plaintiff's claims for emotional distress for alleged work-related injury discrimination were not barred by the worker's compensation exclusive remedy provisions because "work-related injury discrimination" is not normal risk of compensation bargain); Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 577, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 (workers' compensation does not preempt emotional distress action against employer in context of tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy or in violation of express statute); Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1405-1406 (claims under California law for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress as not preempted by California workers' compensation statute when claims implicate fundamental public policy considerations).
- (n91)Footnote 63. See Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 753, 754, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 .
- (n92)Footnote 64. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 .
- (n93)Footnote 65. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .
- (n94)Footnote 66. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 15-16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .
- (n95)Footnote 67. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 20, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .
- (n96)Footnote 68. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 20, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .
- (n97)Footnote 69. See Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 23, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .
- (n98)Footnote 70. See former Gov. Code § 19683.
- (n99)Footnote 71. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 23, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .
- (n100)Footnote 72. Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, fn.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 24, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n101)Footnote 73. Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, fn.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 24, 960 P.2d 1046 . For discussion of tort actions for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, see ch. 60.

(n102)Footnote 74. Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, fn.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 24, 960 P.2d 1046 . Relying on Gantt, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held in Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1405-1406 , that claims under California law for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress are not preempted by the California workers' compensation statute when the claims implicate fundamental public policy considerations, although the federal court did not address the issue in terms of whether the conduct was "outside the compensation bargain." Also applying the Supreme Court's analysis in Gantt, the court in Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 577, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 held that workers' compensation does not preempt an emotional distress action against the employer in the context of a tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy or in violation of an express statute, but, similarly, did not address the issue in terms of whether the conduct was "outside the compensation bargain."

(n103)Footnote 75. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

(n104)Footnote 76. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

(n105)Footnote 77. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 ; see also Penal Code § 490.5(f) (merchant's or librarian's privilege to detain a person for a reasonable time to investigate a potential theft). For discussion of the elements and defenses to false imprisonment claims in the employment context, see ch. 63.

(n106)Footnote 78. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

(n107)Footnote 79. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

(n108)Footnote 80. Penal Code § 187 et seq.

(n109)Footnote 81. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

(n110)Footnote 81.1. Miklosy v. Regents of University of California (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 876, 902-903, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 188 P.3d 629 .

(n111)Footnote 81.2. Miklosy v. Regents of University of California (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 876, 902-903, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 188 P.3d 629 . See Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 25, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .

(n112)Footnote 82. Vuillemainroy v. American Rock & Asphalt, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1280, 1285 (workers' compensation exclusivity provisions bar civil action for wrongful death of employee caused by employer's criminal negligence).

(n113)Footnote 83. Vuillemainroy v. American Rock & Asphalt, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1280, 1285 .

(n114)Footnote 84. Vuillemainroy v. American Rock & Asphalt, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1280, 1286 (collecting cases).

(n115)Footnote 84.1. Gunnell v. Metrocolor Laboratories, Inc. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 710, 719-723, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 195 , citing Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612

P.2d 948 .

(n116)Footnote 85. Arendell v. Auto Parts Club, Inc. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1265, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83 (exclusivity doctrine as barring action against employer for negligent or reckless failure to provide adequate security on employer's premises, despite knowledge of potential danger).

(n117)Footnote 85.1. Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 .

(n118)Footnote 85.2. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .

(n119)Footnote 85.3. Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 970-973, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 .

(n120)Footnote 86. Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; see Jones v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 794, 804, 807-808, 244 Cal. Rptr. 37 .

(n121)Footnote 87. See discussion in [c], above.

(n122)Footnote 88. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .

(n123)Footnote 89. Now see Gov. Code § 8547 et seq. (California Whistleblower Protection Act).

(n124)Footnote 90. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 23, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .

(n125)Footnote 91. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 22, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 . In Shoemaker v. Myers (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1419-1425, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203 , the court of appeal, on remand, held that the employee had stated a cause of action for wrongful discharge against the employer because the employee alleged he was terminated in retaliation for exercising his right to counsel under the Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights Act (Gov. Code § 3300 et seq.), and that the workers' compensation law did not preempt such claims. In that case, however, the court also held that the retaliation cause of action was subject to the immunity provided to public employees and employers by Gov. Code § 821.6, but that the employee's "whistleblower" claim was not subject to this immunity.

(n126)Footnote 92. See Goldman v. Wilsey Foods, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1095-1096, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294 (religious discrimination); Meninga v. Raley's, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 79, 91, 264 Cal. Rptr. 319 (sex discrimination); Watson v. Department of Rehabilitation (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1286-1287, 261 Cal. Rptr. 204 (age and race discrimination); Jones v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 794, 804, 807-808, 244 Cal. Rptr. 37 (race discrimination); see also Flait v. North American Watch Corp. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 467, 475-478, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522 (retaliation for efforts to prevent sexual harassment); Rissetto v. Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 343 (9th Cir. 1996) 94 F.3d 597, 606 (in FEHA age discrimination case, plaintiff estopped from claiming she could perform her work adequately because plaintiff had obtained favorable settlement in workers' compensation claimed based on contrary assertion that she could not perform her work).

(n127)Footnote 93. Watson v. Department of Rehabilitation (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1286-1287, 261 Cal. Rptr. 204 .

(n128)Footnote 94. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n129)Footnote 95. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1148, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 448, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n130)Footnote 96. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 665 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 12101

et seq. (ADA); see also discussion in § 20.13.

(n131)Footnote 97. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1161, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 448, 959 P.2d 752 (FEHA and other common law remedies available).

(n132)Footnote 98. See La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indemnity Co. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 27, 46, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100, 884 P.2d 1048 (issue of whether the insurer had a duty to defend the employer under the employer's liability portion of the insurance policy court of appeal decision not reached because limited to the issue of whether the insurer had a duty to defend under the workers' compensation liability portion of the policy); see also Michaelian v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1093, 1105-1106, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 133 (insurer had no duty to indemnify or defend employer against sexual harassment claim when neither workers' compensation policy nor general liability policy provided coverage for such claim); General Star Indemnity Co. v. Schools Excess Liability Fund (N.D. Cal. 1995) 888 F. Supp. 1022, 1026-1027 (insurers had no duty to defend or indemnify insured employer under workers' compensation or employer's liability portions of their policies when insured's claim was based on discrimination and intentional conduct excluded from coverage under policy); cf. Transamerica Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1705, 1715, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 259 (no duty to defend because policy clearly stated that insured had no coverage under employer's liability portion of policy when underlying claim was covered by workers' compensation policy).

(n133)Footnote 99. See La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indemnity Co. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 27, 36, 42, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100, 884 P.2d 1048 . The Court disapproved Wong v. State Compensation Insurance Fund (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 686, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , to the extent it is inconsistent with La Jolla. See La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indemnity Co. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 27, 46 n.4, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100, 884 P.2d 1048 .

(n134)Footnote 100. See La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indemnity Co. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 27, 43, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100, 884 P.2d 1048 .

(n135)Footnote 101. See B & E Convalescent Center v. State Compensation Ins. Fund (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 78, 86-87 n.8, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 894 .

(n136)Footnote 102. See Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1292, 286 Cal. Rptr. 855 .

(n137)Footnote 103. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 286 Cal. Rptr. 855 .

(n138)Footnote 104. See Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Superior Court (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1285-1287, 286 Cal. Rptr. 855 .

(n139)Footnote 105. Gomez v. Acquistapace (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 740, 751-752, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 821 .

(n140)Footnote 106. See Gomez v. Acquistapace (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 740, 749, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 821 .

(n141)Footnote 107. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

(n142)Footnote 108. See Gomez v. Acquistapace (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 740, 751, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 821 .

(n143)Footnote 109. See Gomez v. Acquistapace (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 740, 747, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 821 .

11 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
 CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries
 Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION
 Subpart 2. Exclusive Remedy Doctrine in Employee Injury Cases

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.13

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.13 Preemption of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine by Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA)

A case of first impression from the United States District Court, Northern District of California, has held that the exclusive remedy provision of the California Workers' Compensation Act is preempted by the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA).ⁿ¹ In Wood v. County of Alameda,ⁿ² the plaintiff suffered an on-the-job injury, became disabled, and received workers' compensation benefits under California law. When plaintiff was cleared by her doctor to return to work, she was not returned to her former position or a comparable position with her employer. Plaintiff brought suit, alleging that the defendant employer's actions constituted a denial of "reasonable accommodation" to a "qualified individual with a disability" in violation of the ADA. The defendant argued that plaintiff was barred from bringing the ADA claim on the ground that the California Workers' Compensation Act provided the sole remedy for such claims.ⁿ³

The District Court disagreed with the defendant and held that the exclusive remedy provision of the California act was preempted by the ADA. Relying on the United States Supreme Court's analysis in Adams Fruit Co. v. Barrett,ⁿ⁴ the court held first that the language of the ADA that it does not "limit or invalidate" certain state lawsⁿ⁵ means that the ADA does not excuse defendants from fulfilling their parallel obligations under other compatible state laws, and does not mean that the federal statute should defer to state remedies.ⁿ⁶ The court further held that, under the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution, which preempts state law to the extent it conflicts with federal law or when the state law is an obstacle to the accomplishment of the full purposes and objectives of Congress, giving effect to the exclusive remedy provision in the state statute in a manner that limits the availability of federal remedies under the ADA would clearly stand as an obstacle to Congress' stated purposes in enacting the ADA. These stated purposes include providing a national mandate for the elimination of discrimination against the disabled, establishing strong and consistent standards addressing such discrimination, and ensuring that the federal government plays a central role in remedying this type of discrimination.ⁿ⁷

The District Court limited its holding in Wood, however, concluding that only the exclusive remedy doctrine, and not the substantive protections, of the California Workers' Compensation Act is preempted by the ADA.^{n7.1} As stated by the court, Congress intended plaintiffs to have the benefit of both federal and state causes of action to the extent that the two are compatible. When, as here, they are not wholly compatible, preemption principles clearly require that those parts and only those parts of the state law that hinder the accomplishment of federal objectives be denied effect.ⁿ⁸

For further discussion of the ADA, see Chapters 40-43 of this publication, as well as Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Chs. 10 and 35 (Matthew Bender), and Americans with Disabilities Act: employee rights and employer obligations, Chapters 6 and 8 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Rights Law
Protection of Disabled Persons
Americans With Disabilities Act
General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI
Remedies Under Other Laws
Americans With Disabilities Act

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 665 ; see 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq. (ADA).

(n2)Footnote 2. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 660-661 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Adams Fruit Co. v. Barrett (1990) 494 U.S. 638, 642, 110 S. Ct. 1384, 108 L. Ed. 2d 585 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See 42 U.S.C. § 12201(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 662-664 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 664-665 .

(n8)Footnote 7.1. See also 42 U.S.C. § 12201(e), added to Americans With Disabilities Act effective January 1, 2009 (nothing in ADA alters standards for determining eligibility for benefits under state worker's compensation laws or under state and federal disability benefit programs).

(n9)Footnote 8. Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 665-666 .

12 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
 CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries
 Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION
 Subpart 2. Exclusive Remedy Doctrine in Employee Injury Cases

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.14

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.14 Burden of Proof

As a general rule, a defendant has the burden of pleading and proving as an affirmative defense that the Workers' Compensation Act is a bar to an employee's civil action.ⁿ¹ Failure to plead the exclusive remedy provision as an affirmative defense results in a waiver of that defense.ⁿ² However, when the complaint affirmatively alleges facts indicating coverage by the workers' compensation laws, if it fails to allege additional facts negating application of the exclusive remedy provision, no civil action will lie and the complaint is subject to demurrer.ⁿ³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

EvidenceProcedural ConsiderationsBurdens of ProofGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsExclusivityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Popejoy v. Hannon (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 159, 173-174, 231 P.2d 484 ; Green v. City of Oceanside (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 212, 224, 239 Cal. Rptr. 470 ; Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 225, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Green v. City of Oceanside (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 212, 224, 239 Cal. Rptr. 470 ; see also Lucich v. City of Oakland (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 494, 498, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 450 (defendant's failure to raise defense of workers' compensation exclusivity at or before trial precluded defendant from raising issue on appeal).

(n3)Footnote 3. Colombo v. State of California (1991) 3 Cal. App. 4th 594, 599, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 ; Halliman v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 46, 50, 209 Cal. Rptr. 175 ; Dorado v. Knudsen Corp. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 605, 610-611, 163 Cal. Rptr. 477 ; see also Young v. Libbey-Owens Ford Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1039-1040, 214 Cal. Rptr. 400 (summary judgment in employer's favor proper when complaint affirmatively indicates employee's coverage by workers' compensation and does not state facts negating application of exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation system).

13 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 2. Exclusive Remedy Doctrine in Employee Injury Cases

1-20 California Employment Law §§ 20.15 through 20.19

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 20.15[Reserved]

14 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 3. Conditions of Workers' Compensation

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.20

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.20 Existence of Employer-Employee Relationship

[1] Generally

An employer is required to provide workers' compensation benefits, and is consequently shielded from tort liability to an injured worker under the exclusive remedy doctrine, only in cases in which the injured party is an employee, as defined in the Labor Code, and the injury arises out of and in the course of his or her employment and is proximately caused by the employment.ⁿ¹ In the absence of such an employment relationship, workers' compensation benefits need not be provided,ⁿ² and normal tort liability applies.ⁿ³ The existence of an employment relationship within the scope of workers' compensation principles is a question of law when the facts of employment are not in dispute.ⁿ⁴

A person rendering service for another, other than as an independent contractor, is presumed to be an employee unless the Labor Code expressly excludes that type of employment.ⁿ⁵ This presumption has been held to shift the burden of proof to the party attempting to establish that the injured worker was not an employee.ⁿ⁶

Because the relevant condition of compensation is that "at the time of the injury, both the employer and the employee are subject to the compensation provisions" of workers' compensation law,^{n6.1} proof of insurance coverage is not required.^{n6.2} Rather, workers' compensation insurance coverage is presumed when a plaintiff alleges facts establishing an employment relationship and work-related injury.^{n6.3}

[2] Existence of Relationship

[a] Employer Defined

For the purposes of workers' compensation law, the term "employer" means (1) the state of California and every state agency; (2) each county, city, district, and all public and quasi-public corporations and public agencies therein; (3) every person, including any public service corporation, which has a natural person in service; and (4) the legal representative of a deceased employer.ⁿ⁷

The federal government and federal agencies are generally outside the scope of California workers' compensation. Federal employees are generally covered by the Federal Employees' Compensation Act.ⁿ⁸

An employment agency may not be an employer for workers' compensation insurance purposes. For example, when an employment agency that supplied domestic workers to patients complied with Civ. Code § 1812.5095 (governing when an employment agency is or is not the employer of a domestic worker for whom it procures, offers, refers, provides or attempts to provide work), it was exempt from state law requirements of maintaining workers' compensation insurance for domestic workers it referred to patients.^{n8.1}

[b] Employee Defined

For the purposes of workers' compensation law, the term "employee" means every person in the service of an employer under any appointment or contract of hire or apprenticeship, express or implied, oral or written, whether or not the employment is otherwise lawful.ⁿ⁹ The term "employees" includes the following:

1. Aliens and minors;ⁿ¹⁰
2. Elected and appointed paid public officials;ⁿ¹¹
3. Paid corporate officers and directors (with some exceptions);ⁿ¹²
4. Certain household laborers;ⁿ¹³
5. Prison inmates engaged in assigned work;ⁿ¹⁴
6. Certain paid members of a partnership or limited liability company;ⁿ¹⁵
7. Persons whose employment training is arranged by the State Department of Rehabilitation;ⁿ¹⁶
8. Certain persons providing in-home domestic services to elderly or disabled persons under Article 7 of the Welfare and Institutions Code;ⁿ¹⁷
9. Certain authors under contract to publishers;ⁿ¹⁸ and
10. Members of the California National Guard and the state militia who are injured, disabled, or killed on active service in the line of duty.ⁿ¹⁹

The term "employee" excludes the following:

1. Household workers employed by a parent, spouse, or child, or working less than a specified number of hours, depending on the type of injury;ⁿ²⁰
2. Persons performing services in return for aid or sustenance only, received from a religious, charitable, or relief organization;ⁿ²¹
3. Certain deputy officials;ⁿ²²
4. Certain volunteer helpers at camps run by nonprofit organizations;ⁿ²³

5. Certain voluntary ski patrol members and other employees of ski lift operators;n24
6. Student athletes and other sports participants, other than regular employees, who receive no compensation other than certain specified expenses, and certain persons officiating at sporting events;n25
7. Volunteers serving public agencies or private nonprofit agencies for no remuneration other than certain specified expenses;n26
8. Certain law enforcement officers who are regularly employed by a law enforcement agency in an adjoining state and who are deputized to work in California;n27
9. Certain law enforcement officers from adjoining states who are acting as peace officers in California pursuant to Penal Code Section 830.32(specifying conditions when such officer may act as peace officer in California);n28
10. Certain workers who would otherwise be covered but for the preemptive effect of superseding federal compensation schemes;n29 and
11. Owner-builders participating in mutual self-help housing programs sponsored by nonprofit corporations.n29.1

An employee of a partnership is considered an employee of each partner.n30

An independent contractor is not an employee.n31

A university student injured during the field portion of a class in animal husbandry is not an "employee" at the time of injury and not entitled to workers' compensation benefits.n31.1

One court has held that jurors are employees within the meaning of the Workers' Compensation Act, reasoning that, although a county does not exercise control over jury deliberations, it does control every other aspect of a juror's work environment, and benefits from the services provided by jurors. Thus, the county has the responsibility to insure against injuries that a juror may sustain while the juror is providing services to the county.n32

Federal law providing separate and distinct workers' compensation benefits preempts California workers' compensation law, so that certain classes of employees who are within the application of federal employment laws are not subject to California's workers' compensation rules.n33 Employees of the federal government are governed by the Federal Employees' Compensation Act.n34 Employees engaged in interstate commerce by rail are provided a remedy by the Federal Employers' Liability Act.n35 Employees engaged in work of a maritime character on navigable waters are subject to federal admiralty lawn36 and may be governed by either the Jones Actn37 or the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act.n38 However, maritime workers employed on the waterfront, in the so-called "twilight zone," where the distinction between federal and state law is unclear, must have their rights determined on a case-by-case basis.n39 Injuries to migrant farmworkers employed by agricultural employers are governed by the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act.n40

[c] Determination of Employer-Employee Relationship

Generally, subsisting employment is needed before it may be found that an injury arose out of and in the course of employment.n41 However, an "employment relationship" sufficient to bring workers' compensation law into play cannot always be determined by the common-law rules governing contracts and, in some instances, must be resolved by reference to the history and fundamental purposes underlying the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ⁴² For example, a person who participates in a "tryout" for employment is not an employee within the strict contractual sense of the word. However, such a person is properly compensable under workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁴³

Employment may extend beyond the point in time at which the contract of employment has technically been severed. A court of appeal has held that a person who was discharged and then sustained an injury while leaving the jobsite was still an employee for the purposes of workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁴⁴

A contract of employment, while normally present in an employment relationship, is not necessary to an employer-employee relationship.ⁿ⁴⁵ An indigent person who is required to work in order to receive welfare benefits is an employee within the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ⁴⁶

All reasonable doubts whether an injury arose out of employment and occurred during the course of employment are resolved against the right of the employee to bring a civil action and in favor of the applicability of the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ⁴⁷ For further discussion, see § 20.22.

[d] Joint, Concurrent, and Special Employment

An employee may have more than one employer for the purposes of workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁴⁸ Concurrent employment exists when an employee holds two or more jobs that are totally unrelated. In such a case, the provisions of workers' compensation law apply to the employment situation at which the employee is rendering service at the time of the injury, and the other employer is treated as an unrelated third party.ⁿ⁴⁹ Joint employment exists when employers are engaged in a joint enterprise in which they unite to employ workers over whom they each have the right of control. In cases of joint employment, the provisions of workers' compensation law apply simultaneously to each of the employers.ⁿ⁵⁰

In certain cases, a worker who is clearly an employee of one employer will perform services for another employer. In such a situation, under the doctrine of "special employment," the employee, if injured during employment, may be considered an employee of both employers for the purposes of workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁵¹ If one employer (the general employer) sends an employee to work for another party (the special employer) and both have the right to control the activities of the employee, the employee becomes a special employee of the special employer.ⁿ⁵² Of prime importance in determining whether a special employment relationship exists is the right of the party in the position of the special employer to exercise control over the manner in which the employee performs the details of his or her work.ⁿ⁵³ The power to discharge or remove the employee is evidence of a special employment relationship; and the payment of wages, while relevant, is not determinative.ⁿ⁵⁴

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

Employers' counsel should bear in mind that Insurance Code Section 11663 provides that the insurer of the liability of the general employer is liable for all workers' compensation benefits payable for an industrial injury to an employee arising out of and in the course of the general and special employment unless the special employer had the employee on his or her payroll at the time of the injury. In that case the insurer of the special employer is solely liable. Commentary by John W. Miller.

In Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc.,ⁿ⁵⁵ the court articulated several factors relevant to determining whether an employee is the borrowed employee of another, including: (1) whether the borrowing employer's control over the employee and the work the employee is performing extends beyond mere suggestion of details or cooperation; (2) whether the employee is performing the special employer's work; (3) whether there was an agreement, understanding, or meeting of the minds between the original and special employer; (4) whether the employee acquiesced in the new work situation; (5) whether the original employer terminated his or her relationship with the employee; (6) whether the special employer furnished the tools and place for performance; (7) whether the new employment was over a considerable length of time; (8) whether the borrowing employer had the right to fire the employee; and (9) whether the borrowing employer had the obligation to pay the employee).ⁿ⁵⁶ The existence of a special employment relationship may be negated by evidence that (1) the employee is not paid and cannot be discharged by the borrowing employer, (2) the employee is a skilled worker with substantial control over operational details of his or her employment duties, (3) the employee is not engaged in the borrowing employer's usual business, (4) the period of employment is short, or (5) the employee uses tools furnished by his or her general employer.ⁿ⁵⁷

Most cases determine whether a worker is a special employee by reference to the above-noted factors without reference to the specific activity the employee was engaged in at the time of the injury. In one case, the court of appeal rejected defendant's argument that the determinative question is the right to control the employee and that other factors discussed above, such as exercise of control, are mere evidentiary indicia on the issue of right to control.ⁿ⁵⁸ The court stated that each of the factors listed by the California Supreme Court in Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. ⁿ⁵⁹ has legal and factual significance and makes sense only if right to control is not the exclusive and determinative question.ⁿ⁶⁰ Thus, the court upheld a determination that an employee was not a special employee despite the employer's naked right to control the employee, because other factors, including the fact that there was no actual control of the employee, indicated otherwise.ⁿ⁶¹

If a special employment relationship exists and the special employee is injured while rendering services to the special employer, workers' compensation provides the exclusive remedy against the special employer in the same manner as if the worker were injured while rendering service to a general employer.ⁿ⁶² In such cases, the injured worker is normally entitled to recover benefits from, and is barred from maintaining an action for damages against, either employer.ⁿ⁶³ However, an employer can secure the payment of compensation on employees provided to another employer through a valid and enforceable agreement with the other employer under which the other employer agrees to obtain, and does obtain, workers' compensation coverage for those employees.ⁿ⁶⁴

When the tortious act of a special employee injures another of the special employer's workers, workers' compensation law does not bar a tort action against the general employer of the tortfeasor based on a theory of respondeat superior.ⁿ⁶⁵ The general employer is liable if, at the time of the injury, it retained total or partial concurrent control over the tortfeasor's work.ⁿ⁶⁶ The special employee tortfeasor is, however, protected by the exclusive remedy provisions of Labor Code Section 3601.ⁿ⁶⁷

[3] Independent Contractors

[a] Effect of Independent Contractor Status

An independent contractor is not an employee.ⁿ⁶⁸ An independent contractor is thus not entitled to benefits under the Workers' Compensation Act and is not barred from bringing a tort suit against his or her hirer by the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code.ⁿ⁶⁹ For these purposes, an independent contractor is a person who renders service for a specified recompense for a specified result, under the control of the principal as to the result of the work only and not as to the means by which the result is accomplished.^{n69.1}

[b] Burden of Proof and Presumptions

[i] In Workers' Compensation Proceeding

In a proceeding to recover workers' compensation benefits, when there is proof that an injured person claiming to be an employee was actually performing services for the alleged employer at the time of the injury, the employer has the burden of proving the affirmative defense that the injured person was an independent contractor or was otherwise excluded from the protection of the workers' compensation laws.ⁿ⁷⁰ Additionally, Labor Code Section 3202 provides for liberal construction of the Workers' Compensation Act for the purpose of extending the benefits of the act for the protection of persons injured in the course of their employment.

Labor Code Section 3357 provides a statutory presumption that any person rendering service for another, "other than as an independent contractor," or unless expressly excluded by statute, is presumed to be an employee.ⁿ⁷¹ One court has held that the "presumption" set forth in Labor Code Section 3357 is not in itself sufficient to support a finding that an individual is an employee, since it is dependent on a finding that the individual is not an independent contractor.ⁿ⁷² Nevertheless, the provisions of Labor Code Section 5705(a) appear to create such a presumption by placing on the employer the burden of proving that an injured person rendering services for the employer is in fact an independent contractor.ⁿ⁷³

If a person performs services for which a license is required under Business and Professions Code Section 7000 et seq. (building contractors), or a person performs services for a person who is required to obtain such a license, there is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that such a person is an employee rather than an independent contractor.ⁿ⁷⁴ Furthermore, a contractor who is required to have a license, but does not, may not be considered an independent contractor for the purposes of determining whether the provisions of workers' compensation apply to him or her if he or she is injured.ⁿ⁷⁵ The presumptions regarding unlicensed contractors supplement rather than override the statutory definitions of employee and independent contractor. Therefore, although an unlicensed contractor who performs work for which a license is required cannot be deemed an independent contractor, he or she may not be an employee either, if any of the statutory exclusions to workers' compensation coverage are applicable.ⁿ⁷⁶

In a complex case, the Court of Appeal had occasion to sort out a variety of employment relationships to determine who was responsible for workers' compensation for an injured employee.^{n76.1} A condominium homeowners association hired a property manager to manage the property as its agent. The association members then agreed to install new rain gutters on part of the condominium building. The property manager hired an unlicensed contractor, whose employee was injured on the first day of work. The court found first that the unlicensed contractor was a dual employer of the injured worker and liable for workers' compensation. It was undisputed that the contractor hired the worker to perform service.^{n76.2} By rendering service, the worker was presumed to be the contractor's employee.^{n76.3} The worker rendered the service as an employee, not as an independent contractor, because the contractor was in the business of rain gutter installation, contracted with the property manager, paid wages and controlled the worker's work and hours.^{n76.4} The court also found that the property manager was a liable employer under Lab. Code § 2750.5, because the property manager hired the unlicensed contractor.^{n76.5} Further, the property manager was the association's agent under a written agreement and the Davis-Stirling Common Interest Development Act,^{n76.6} but as the agent of the association or individual owners, it did not have the same rights or legal status as its principal under Civ. Code § 2330 and was not an owner and exempt employer under Lab. Code §§ 3351(d) and 3352(h).^{n76.7} The court found that the condominium owners association was liable as a principal, and was not an owner and exempt employer under Lab. Code §§ 3351(d) and 3352(h), because the duties of the unlicensed contractor and his injured worker were not personal and were in the trade or business of the association, contrary to Lab. Code § 3351(d).^{n76.8} However, the individual condominium owners were not liable for workers' compensation as either an employer under Lab. Code § 2750.5 or under Lab. Code § 3351(d), because the injured worker did not work sufficient hours under section 3352(h). Employer liability for workers' compensation would not be imputed to the owners as principals because of the statutory immunity provided under the Labor Code. Nor were the owners liable as an employer for workers' compensation solely for being a member of the association, since generally a member of an unincorporated association does not incur liability for acts of the association or acts of its members which the member did not authorize or perform.^{n76.9}

For purposes of the workers' compensation law, there is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that a licensed physician or surgeon who enters into a contract for the performance of health care services on behalf of a licensed primary care health clinic is an independent contractor rather than an employee.ⁿ⁷⁷

[ii] In Civil Damages Action

In a civil action for damages, the contentions of the parties with respect to employee status are generally the opposite of those made in a workers' compensation proceeding. The injured person generally will contend that he or she was not an employee (or that the exclusive remedy doctrine⁷⁸ otherwise does not apply to him or her), while the defendant employer generally will argue the contrary. In such cases, the defendant bears the burden of pleading and proving, as an affirmative defense, that the plaintiff is an employee and that the Workers' Compensation Act is a bar to the civil action.⁷⁹

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

In close factual cases employers' counsel might want to consider whether workers' compensation benefits, in total, would be less expensive (or otherwise more desirable) than a civil action. This is because counsel may, to some extent, be able to determine which action will apply. Since the WCAB, by virtue of Labor Code Section 3202, is liberal in determining benefits, counsel may be able to obtain a determination with a finding of employee, rather than independent contractor. This can be secured fairly swiftly and may then act as res judicata on that issue in any civil proceeding. Commentary by John W. Miller.

[c] Factors Used in Determination of Independent Contractor Status

The Labor Code defines an "independent contractor" as any person who renders service for a specified recompense for a specified result, under the control of his or her principal regarding only the result of his or her work and not regarding the means by which the result is accomplished.⁸⁰ Proof of independent contractor status includes satisfactory proof of the following:⁸¹

- The individual has the right to control and discretion in the manner of performance of the contract for services in that the result of the work and not the means by which it is accomplished is the primary factor bargained for.⁸²
- The individual is customarily engaged in an independently established business.⁸³
- The individual's independent contractor status is bona fide and not a subterfuge.⁸⁴

A bona fide independent contractor status is further evidenced by the presence of the following cumulative factors:⁸⁵

- Substantial investment other than personal services in the business.
- Holding out that one is in business for oneself.
- Bargaining for a contract to complete a specific project for compensation by project rather than by time.
- Control over the time and place the work is performed.
- Supplying the tools or instrumentalities used in the work other than tools and instrumentalities normally and customarily provided by employees.
- Hiring employees.
- Performing work that is not ordinarily in the course of the principal's business.⁸⁶
- Performing work that requires a particular skill.⁸⁷⁸⁸

- Holding a license pursuant to the Business and Professions Code.
- The parties' intention that the work relationship be that of independent contractor or that the relationship is not severable or terminable at will by the principal, but gives rise to an action for breach of contract.

Among these factors, the most important is the right to control the manner and means of accomplishing the result desired.ⁿ⁸⁹ If the employer has the authority to exercise control in this regard, whether or not that right is in fact exercised with respect to all details, an employer-employee relationship exists.ⁿ⁹⁰ For example, the person who hires a taxi exercises a certain amount of control over the driver and clearly controls the destination but is not the driver's employer.ⁿ⁹¹ Thus, one who contracts with another is entitled to retain certain measures of control over the results to be obtained without becoming an employer of that person.ⁿ⁹² One way to determine whether the right to control exists is to ascertain whether the worker must obey the instructions of the hirer.ⁿ⁹³ A business entity may not, however, avoid its statutory obligations under the workers' compensation law by carving up its production process into minute steps, then asserting that it lacks "control" over the exact means by which one such step is performed by the responsible workers.ⁿ⁹⁴ A worker's adherence to a federally dictated work protocol does not by itself establish his or her status as an employee rather than an independent contractor.^{n94.1}

A form contract stating that person doing the work has the right to control the manner and means of performance does not necessarily mean that the person is an independent contractor. For example, in Antelope Valley Press v. Poizner,^{n94.2} a form contract between a newspaper publisher and individuals who delivered the newspapers, known as carriers, stated that each carrier had the right to control the manner and means of delivery of the publisher's publications and the right to determine the equipment and supplies needed to perform delivery services. However, there was substantial evidence this was not actually the case. The pages of the form contract also were filled with manner and means provisions regarding the task of delivering the publications, as well as detailed negative consequences to the carriers if they did not comply with those manner and means directives. These provisions enabled the publisher to maintain significant supervision over the carriers. Further, the publisher had control over the price paid by customers to the publisher, which included both the cost of the newspaper and the delivery service. Under several provisions of the contract, the carriers were responsible for procuring new subscribers, and a decrease in subscribers on a carrier's route of more than two per cent gave the publisher the right to terminate the contract. However, there was no indication that persons working in the publisher's circulation department and having procurement of new subscribers as one of their tasks were not considered employees by the publisher. Under the contract, the carriers could choose the sequence of their delivery, the vehicle they used to make deliveries, whether and when to take breaks, and the clothes they wore during their deliveries; however, those choices were, in reality, a function of the weather, the size and density of their routes, and whether they could afford to have a vehicle for deliveries separate and apart from a vehicle for their own personal use.

While the right of control is the principal test of an employment relationship, other factors will be considered by the courts.ⁿ⁹⁵ Courts have also relied on factors similar to those listed in Labor Code Section 2750.5, set forth above, as well factors such as the following:ⁿ⁹⁶

- The kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the principal or by a specialist without supervision.
- The length of time for which the services are to be performed.
- The method of payment, whether by time or by the job.

Generally, the individual factors cannot be applied mechanically as separate tests; they are intertwined and their weight often depends on particular combinations.ⁿ⁹⁷

The determination of the status of a worker should also be made with reference to the history and fundamental purposes of workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁹⁸ In Johnson v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ⁹⁹ the court held that it was proper to consider the following public policy factors in determining whether a worker is an employee or an independent contractor: (1) the purpose of the workers' compensation statutes and the intention of the Legislature, (2) the persons sought to be protected, (3) whether the worker is within the class of persons sought to be protected, (4) statutory exclusions, and (5) the relative bargaining positions of the parties, mentally, economically, and educationally. The court then held that the injured worker, a cleaning woman who was hired under an informal arrangement by an apartment manager to clean a vacant apartment for $16, was an employee. The court based its decision largely on the premise that the workers' compensation system was designed to protect persons in the class of the injured apartment cleaner who are in need of the protection of workers' compensation law. This analysis was followed in a case in which a beauty operator and manager of a shop was held to be an independent contractor rather than an employee. The court stated that a person who performs services for the public and engages in retail sales in specialized shops operated by others is within the class of persons the legislative scheme was meant to protect, no statutory exclusions applied, and such a person has little or no bargaining position.ⁿ¹⁰⁰

In S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations,ⁿ¹⁰¹ the Supreme Court held that migrant harvesters of the grower's cucumber crop were employees and not independent contractors, even though the written contract between the harvesters and the grower expressly provided that the harvesters were independent contractors, not employees, and were not covered by workers' compensation. The grower had claimed that the workers were not employees because it had control only over the result and not over the means by which the result was accomplished. In reaching its conclusion that the workers were employees, the Court said the "control-of-work details" test for determining whether a person rendering service to another is an "employee" or an excluded "independent contractor" must be applied with deference to the purposes of the protective legislation. The nature of the work, and the overall arrangement between the parties, must be examined to determine whether they come within the "history and fundamental purposes" of the workers' compensation law.ⁿ¹⁰²

One of the factors set out in Labor Code Section 2750.5 to show independent contractor status is that the person performing a service holds a license under the Business and Professions Code.ⁿ¹⁰³ Thus, a building contractor must, as a general rule, have a licenseⁿ¹⁰⁴ in order to be considered an independent contractor,ⁿ¹⁰⁵ and an unlicensed contractor injured during employment will be deemed to be an employee within the meaning of the workers' compensation system regardless of whether or not the contractor otherwise satisfies the requirements of independent contractor status.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ Further, an employee of an independent contractor who is required to hold a license but who is unlicensed at the time of injury is treated as an employee of the hirer, rather than as an employee of the unlicensed contractor.^{n106.1}

In cases in which a contractor has represented to a principal that he or she is licensed, the contractor may be estopped from asserting employee status.ⁿ¹⁰⁷ But this does not apply to the employee of the unlicensed contractor because estoppel is an equitable doctrine and will not be applied against one who is blameless.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ Thus, for example, if a subcontractor is unlicensed, workers' compensation liability for the subcontractor's employees will be imposed on the general contractor as a matter of law.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ In addition, the employee of an unlicensed subcontractor will be presumed to be an employee of the general contractor without regard to the fact that the unlicensed subcontractor was independently insured for workers' compensation.ⁿ¹¹⁰

[d] Examples of Status as Independent Contractor or Employee

Courts have found employer-employee relationships in the following cases:

- A golf course was the employer of caddies paid and directed by individual golfers.ⁿ¹¹¹

- A hospital was the employer of a student nurse working for school credit and not a salary.n112
- A jockey hired to ride one race was an employee.n113
- A booking agent was the employer of a high-wire performer.n114
- A movie stuntman hired to perform a rodeo stunt during a three-day engagement was an employee.n115
- A cosmetologist working at a beauty shop was an employee.n116
- A newspaper carrier hired to deliver newspapers, despite a signed agreement stating the carrier was an independent contractor.n117
- A taxicab driver was an employee of a taxicab company notwithstanding an agreement between the driver and the company purporting to establish a lessor-lessee relationship.n118

Courts have found hirer-independent contractor relationships in the following cases:

- A contract hauler engaged to haul crops.n119
- A route salesman acting without supervision.n120
- An unsupervised painter paid on a per diem basis.n121
- A carpenter hired by a homeowner to assist in completion of a house.n122
- A self-employed gardener.n123
- Truck drivers (hired by a trucking broker) who had complete control over their working conditions, could terminate their contracts or be terminated at will, were engaged in a distinct occupation and had their own trade association, could work for other businesses, made capital investments in providing their own trucks, were compensated by the job and could refuse any assignment without retribution, and expressly and voluntarily agreed to independent contractor status.n124

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
 Workers' Compensation & SSDICoverageEmployment RelationshipsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code §§ 3351-3352, 3600(a)(1)-(3); see also discussion in § 20.05.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 3602(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Baugh v. Rogers (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 200, 206, 148 P.2d 633 ; In-Home Supportive Services v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 729, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 3357.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Johnson v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 318, 321, 115 Cal. Rptr. 871 .

(n7)Footnote 6.1. See Lab. Code § 3600(a)(1).

(n8)Footnote 6.2. Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 11-12, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 .

(n9)Footnote 6.3. Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 11-12, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 ; see § 20.03[1], discussing compensation insurance requirements for employers.

(n10)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 3300.

(n11)Footnote 8. 5 U.S.C. § 8101 et seq.; see 5 U.S.C. § 8101(1) (defining "employee" for purposes of Federal Employees' Compensation Act), discussed in [b], below.

(n12)Footnote 8.1. An Independent Home Support Service, Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1418, 1424-1439, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562 .

(n13)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 3351.

(n14)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 3351(a).

See Farmer Brothers Coffee v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 533, 537-544, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 23 (applicant need not be lawfully documented alien to be employee entitled to workers' compensation benefits; Lab. Code §§ 1171.5, 3351 were not pre-empted by employment provisions of Internal Revenue Code [8 U.S.C. § 1324a]).

But see Del Taco v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1437, 1442, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 825 (injured employee is not entitled to vocational rehabilitation services where employee is unable to return to work solely because of immigration status).

(n15)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 3351(b).

(n16)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 3351(c).

(n17)Footnote 13. See Lab. Code §§ 3351(d), 3352(a), (h), 3354-3356. See Cal. State. Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1043-1048, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743 (unlicensed painter hired to paint homeowners' living and dining rooms and kitchen was not their employee for workers' compensation purposes, where painter had not worked at least 52 hours and earned at least $100 during 90 days preceding date of injury, so that he was excluded from coverage under Lab. Code § 3352(h)).

(n18)Footnote 14. Lab. Code §§ 3351(e), 3370; see Arriaga v. County of Alameda (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 1055, 1066-1067, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116, 892 P.2d 150 (person convicted of crime who is not incarcerated but who undertakes community service for county in lieu of paying fine is "employee" as matter of law for purposes of exclusive remedy doctrine of workers' compensation law). But see California Dept. of Corrections v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1720, 1723-1727, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 348 (state prisoner earning only sentencing credits and no wages at time of his injury while employed as sorter/steam cleaner in prison laundry was not entitled to temporary disability indemnity).

(n19)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 3351(f); see Guzman v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 158 Cal. App. 3d 190, 194-196, 204 Cal. Rptr. 527 (under Lab. Code § 3360, workers associating under partnership whose principal purpose is to perform labor for third party are employees of that party regardless of whether partnership is employee or independent contractor).

(n20)Footnote 16. Lab. Code § 3351.5.

(n21)Footnote 17. Lab. Code § 3351.5.

(N22)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 3351.5.

(n23)Footnote 19. Mil. & Vet. Code §§ 340-340.2.

(n24)Footnote 20. Lab. Code § 3352(a), (h); see Zaragoza v. Ibarra (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1016-1022, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 264 (where no facts suggested that homeowner's garage conversion was part of her occupation, trade, profession or business, she was true owner, so Labor Code § 3352(h) applied because Labor Code § 3351(d) applied, and there was no workers' compensation exclusivity to preclude employee of unlicensed contractor injured working on garage for less than 52 hours from suing homeowner in negligence); Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 234-237, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581 (although under Lab. Code § 2750.5, unlicensed contractor's employee would be employee of contractor's hirer, Lab. Code §§ 3351(d), 3352(h) applied so that contractor's employee, who worked less than 52 hours for hirer, was excluded from being hirer's employee because § 2750.5 supplements definitions of employees and independent contractor in the workers' compensation statutory scheme and does not purport to override those definitions); Johnson v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 318, 322, 115 Cal. Rptr. 871 (under language of pre-1977 version of Lab. Code § 3352 domestic workers in business premises are not excluded employees regardless of total hours worked).

(n25)Footnote 21. Lab. Code § 3352(b).

(n26)Footnote 22. See Lab. Code § 3352(c).

(n27)Footnote 23. Lab. Code § 3352(d).

(n28)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 3352(e), (f).

(n29)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 3352(g), (j), (k), (n); Graczyk v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1007-1009, 229 Cal. Rptr. 494 (retroactively applying Lab. Code § 3352(k) to exclude student athlete from employee status for purposes of workers' compensation benefits).

(n30)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 3352(i); see Lab. Code § 3363.5.

(n31)Footnote 27. Lab. Code § 3352(l).

(n32)Footnote 28. Lab. Code § 3352(m).

(n33)Footnote 29. Lab. Code § 3203.

(n34)Footnote 29.1. Lab. Code § 3352(o). "Owner-builder" is defined in Health & Safety Code § 50692(a). "Mutual self-help housing program" is defined in Health & Safety Code § 50087.

(n35)Footnote 30. Reed v. Industrial Accident Commission (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 191, 193, 73 P.2d 1212 .

(n36)Footnote 31. Automatic Canteen Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 372, 47 Cal. Rptr. 848 . For discussion of independent contractors, see [3], below.

(n37)Footnote 31.1. Land v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 491, 494-497, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 432 . See JKH Enterprises, Inc. v. Dep't of Indus. Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1062-1065 (substantial evidence supported finding that 15 of 16 drivers who accomplished actual delivery services for courier service were properly classified as employees for workers' compensation purposes--rather than independent contractors).

(n38)Footnote 32. Waggener v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1078, 1083, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 141 .

(n39)Footnote 33. See 5 U.S.C. § 8101(1)(A) (defining "employee" for purposes of Federal Employees' Compensation Act); Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Vol. 2, Ch. 21, § 21.01[1]; see also Lab. Code § 3203 (providing that workers' compensation law does not extend to employers or employees who are so engaged in interstate commerce as not to be subject to the laws of California).

(n40)Footnote 34. 5 U.S.C. § 8101 et seq.

(n41)Footnote 35. 45 U.S.C. § 51 et seq.

(n42)Footnote 36. See Dean v. United States (9th Cir. 1969) 418 F.2d 1236, 1237-1238 .

(n43)Footnote 37. See 46 U.S.C. § 688.

(n44)Footnote 38. 33 U.S.C. § 901 et seq.

(n45)Footnote 39. Duong v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 980, 981-984, 215 Cal. Rptr. 609 (land-based shipyard worker injured when repairing vessel that was docked on navigable waters subject to California's workers' compensation laws as well as the federal Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, 33 U.S.C. § 901 et seq.). See Robert E. Blake, Inc. v. Excel Envtl. (9th Cir. 1997) 104 F.3d 1158, 1160-1163 (state law governed indemnity claim by mothballed-ship contractor against subcontractor for injuries sustained by subcontractor's employee when ship was out of service at time general contractor and subcontractor formed contract).

(n46)Footnote 40. 29 U.S.C. § 1801 et seq.; see Adams Fruit Co. v. Barrett (1990) 494 U.S. 638, 646-649, 110 S. Ct. 1384, 108 L. Ed. 2d 585, 597-598 (exclusivity provisions of state workers' compensation laws do not preclude remedy under Act).

(n47)Footnote 41. Mitchell v. Hizer (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 499, 503, 140 Cal. Rptr. 790 .

(n48)Footnote 42. Laeng v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 771, 774, 100 Cal. Rptr. 377, 494 P.2d 1 .

(n49)Footnote 43. Laeng v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 771, 776-778, 100 Cal. Rptr. 377, 494 P.2d 1 (plaintiff injured while participating in physical agility test as part of pre-employment procedure).

(n50)Footnote 44. Gates v. Trans Video Corp. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 196, 202, 155 Cal. Rptr. 486 .

(n51)Footnote 45. County of Los Angeles v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 391, 398-399, 179 Cal. Rptr. 214, 637 P.2d 681 (overruling prior case law).

(n52)Footnote 46. County of Los Angeles v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1981) 30 Cal. 3d 391, 404-405, 179 Cal. Rptr. 214, 637 P.2d 681 .

(n53)Footnote 47. Eckis v. Sea World Corp. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 1, 7, 134 Cal. Rptr. 183 ; Transactron, Inc. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 233, 236, 137 Cal. Rptr. 142 .

(n54)Footnote 48. National Auto. Casualty & Insurance Co. v. Industrial Accident Commmission (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 769, 774-775, 182 P.2d 634 (distinguishing joint employment from concurrent employment); see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, vol. 1, ch. 3, §§ 3.140-3.142 (Matthew Bender).

(n55)Footnote 49. Hiner v. Olson (1937) 23 Cal. App. 2d 227, 230, 72 P.2d 890, 73 P.2d 945 ; National Auto. Casualty & Insurance Co. v. Industrial Accident Commmission (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 769, 774-775, 182 P.2d 634 .

(n56)Footnote 50. In-Home Supportive Services v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 732, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697 ; Horney v. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 923, 927-928, 190 Cal. Rptr. 18 ; see Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1670, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 (no joint enterprise existed between injured employee's employer and various other companies when other companies had no control over production or sale of employer's goods, did not share profits with employer, and had no ownership interest in employer's assets); National Auto. Casualty & Insurance Co. v. Industrial Accident Commmission (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 769, 774-775, 182 P.2d 634 (worker is joint employee when both employers, although not in joint enterprise, share cost of services and exercise joint control over employee).

(n57)Footnote 51. McFarland v. Voorheis-Trindle Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 698, 705, 343 P.2d 923 , discussed below; see Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1247-1249, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718 ; Santa Cruz Poultry, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 578, 239 Cal. Rptr. 578

(n58)Footnote 52. Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 494-495, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 ; see Johnson v. Berkofsky-Barret Productions, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1067, 1070 n.3, 260 Cal. Rptr. 67 ; Von Beltz v. Stuntman, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1467, 1486, 255 Cal. Rptr. 755 ; Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, vol. 1, ch. 3, § 3.142 (Matthew Bender).

(n59)Footnote 53. McFarland v. Voorheis-Trindle Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 698, 705, 343 P.2d 923 ; Johnson v. Berkofsky-Barret Productions, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1067, 1072 n.4, 260 Cal. Rptr. 67 ; Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1250, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718 .

(n60)Footnote 54. Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 177, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811 ; see Martin v. Phillips Petroleum Co. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 916, 922-923, 117 Cal. Rptr. 269 (applying a number of factors in concluding that injured worker was special employee notwithstanding contract between general and special employers that expressly purported to avoid this result).

(n61)Footnote 55. Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1250, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718 .

(n62)Footnote 56. Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1250, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718 .

(n63)Footnote 57. Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 492, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 ; Johnson v. Berkofsky-Barret Productions, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1067, 1072-1073, 260 Cal. Rptr. 67 ; Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1250, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718 .

(n64)Footnote 58. Barajas v. USA Petroleum Corp. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 974, 984, 229 Cal. Rptr. 513 .

(n65)Footnote 59. Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 177, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811 .

(n66)Footnote 60. Barajas v. USA Petroleum Corp. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 974, 984, 229 Cal. Rptr. 513 .

(n67)Footnote 61. Barajas v. USA Petroleum Corp. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 974, 984, 229 Cal. Rptr. 513 .

(n68)Footnote 62. McFarland v. Voorheis-Trindle Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 698, 702, 343 P.2d 923 ; Wedeck v. Unocal Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 848, 858-860, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 (under Riley, employer of temporary employee is special employer because, among other reasons, employee was expected to follow company's particularized procedures and exercise skills under company's systems and procedures; McFarland distinguished because employee lacked unlimited discretion to achieve result); Enslow v. United States (C.D. Cal. 1992) 811 F. Supp. 503, 506 (firefighter employed by California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection killed fighting forest fire while under contract to U.S. Interior Department was "special employee" of U.S. Government which was immune from wrongful death suit under Federal Tort Claims Act, but subject to payment of compensation under California's workers' compensation law).

(n69)Footnote 63. McFarland v. Voorheis-Trindle Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 698, 702, 343 P.2d 923 ; see also Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1248, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718 .

(n70)Footnote 64. Lab. Code § 3602(d).

(n71)Footnote 65. Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 490, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 .

(n72)Footnote 66. Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 490, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 .

(n73)Footnote 67. Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 495, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 . For discussion of suits against coemployees generally, see § 20.43.

(n74)Footnote 68. Automatic Canteen Co. v. State Bd. of Equalization (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 372, 47 Cal. Rptr. 848 .

(n75)Footnote 69. Lab. Code § 3600; Baugh v. Rogers (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 200, 206-207, 148 P.2d 633 (barring plaintiff's tort action on ground she was an employee rather than an independent contractor); Antelope Valley Press v. Poizner (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 839, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 887, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 657 , * (persons who made deliveries of newspapers for newspaper publisher were employees, not independent contractors); cf. Holmes v. Roth (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 931, 936-937, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 315 (doorman was employee of condominium homeowners' association but not of individual homeowners, who had no ability to control or discharge him or otherwise exercise the control of an employer over an employee; thus, he was not barred from bringing a civil action against negligent homeowner).

(n76)Footnote 69.1. Lab. Code § 3353.

(n77)Footnote 70. Lab. Code § 5705(a); Schaller v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 46, 51, 77 P.2d 836 ; Johnson v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 318, 321, 115 Cal. Rptr. 871 .

(n78)Footnote 71. Lab. Code § 3357.

(n79)Footnote 72. See Mission Ins. Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 211, 226, 176 Cal. Rptr. 439 .

(n80)Footnote 73. The court in Mission Insurance Co. did not discuss Lab. Code § 5705(a), apparently because it had concluded that the employer had established as a matter of law that the injured person was an independent contractor.

(n81)Footnote 74. Lab. Code § 2750.5; Mission Ins. Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 211, 217, 176 Cal. Rptr. 439 . The presumption of employee status based on a lack of permit or license only applies when there is a statutory provision creating such a presumption. See State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Brown (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 188, 203, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 98 (no presumption of employee status for truck drivers merely because insured provided no evidence drivers had PUC or Cal-Trans permits).

(n82)Footnote 75. Lab. Code § 2750.5; State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 12-15, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 .

(n83)Footnote 76. Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 234-237, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581 ; Furtado v. Schrieffer (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1608, 280 Cal. Rptr. 16 ; see Lab. Code § 3352 (exclusions to workers' compensation law).

(n84)Footnote 76.1. Heiman v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 724, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 56, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 525, *13-*41 .

(n85)Footnote 76.2. See Lab. Code §§ 3351, 3300.

(n86)Footnote 76.3. See Lab. Code § 3357.

(n87)Footnote 76.4. Heiman v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 724, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 56, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 525, *17-*20 . See S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-355, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n88)Footnote 76.5. Heiman v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 724, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 56, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 525, *22-*24 .

(n89)Footnote 76.6. Heiman v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 724, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 56, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 525, *24-*29 .

(n90)Footnote 76.7. Heiman v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 724, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 56, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 525, *29-*31 .

(n91)Footnote 76.8. Heiman v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 724, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 56, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 525, *31-*39 .

(n92)Footnote 76.9. Heiman v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 724, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 56, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 525, *40-*41 .

(n93)Footnote 77. See Lab. Code § 2750.6.

(n94)Footnote 78. Lab. Code §§ 3601, 3602.

(n95)Footnote 79. See Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'g (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 224, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; See also § 20.14.

(n96)Footnote 80. Lab. Code § 3353.

(n97)Footnote 81. Lab. Code § 2750.5. See S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 351 n.5, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 (noting that standards set forth for contractor's licensees in Lab. Code § 2750.5 are also helpful means of identifying employee-contractor distinction in workers' compensation cases other than those involving contractors licensed under Contractors' State License Law (Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.); Foss v. Anthony Industries (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 794, 797-799, 189 Cal. Rptr. 31 (suggesting that factors listed in Lab. Code § 2750.5 are those traditionally used and apply in tort actions as well as workers' compensation cases).

(n98)Footnote 82. Lab. Code § 2750.5(a). See Antelope Valley Press v. Poizner (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 839, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 887, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 657, *26-*30 .

(n99)Footnote 83. Lab. Code § 2750.5(b).

(n100)Footnote 84. Lab. Code § 2750.5(c).

(n101)Footnote 85. Lab. Code § 2750.5(c).

(n102)Footnote 86. See S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 351, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 (citing Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 330).

(n103)Footnote 87. See S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 351, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 (citing Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 330).

(n104)Footnote 88. [Reserved]

(n105)Footnote 89. Truesdale v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 608, 614, 235 Cal. Rptr. 754 (citing Tieberg v. Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 946, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975).

(n106)Footnote 90. Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686 (overruled on other grounds in People v. Sims (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 468, 479 n.8, 186 Cal. Rptr. 77, 651 P.2d 321).

(n107)Footnote 91. See Western Indemnity Co. v. Pillsbury (1916) 172 Cal. 807, 811, 159 P. 721 .

(n108)Footnote 92. Mountain Meadow Creameries v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 123, 129, 76 P.2d 724 ; see Mission Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 211, 223-224, 176 Cal. Rptr. 439 .

(n109)Footnote 93. Press Publishing Co. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1922) 190 Cal. 114, 121, 210 P. 820 .

(n110)Footnote 94. S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 357, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n111)Footnote 94.1. Southwest Research Institute v. Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 705, 709-710, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769 .

(n112)Footnote 94.2. Antelope Valley Press v. Poizner (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 839, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 887, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 657, *28-*30 .

(n113)Footnote 95. S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n114)Footnote 96. S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 (citing Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 330, and stating that factors set forth in Lab. Code § 2750.5 are helpful even in cases not involving unlicensed contractors).

(n115)Footnote 97. S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 351, 354, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n116)Footnote 98. In-Home Supportive Services v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 720, 728, 199 Cal. Rptr. 697 ; S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 351, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n117)Footnote 99. Johnson v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 318, 322, 115 Cal. Rptr. 871 .

(n118)Footnote 100. Truesdale v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617, 235 Cal. Rptr. 754 .

(n119)Footnote 101. S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256

Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n120)Footnote 102. S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 354-355, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 ; Rinaldi v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 756, 760-765, 278 Cal. Rptr. 105 (crew supervisor who agreed with almond grower to harvest and prune grower's trees was not an independent contractor because grower had power of control over performance of work; injured agricultural worker was therefore employee of grower for purposes of workers' compensation).

(n121)Footnote 103. Lab. Code § 2750.5(c).

(n122)Footnote 104. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq.

(n123)Footnote 105. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 15, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 .

(n124)Footnote 106. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 12-15, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 . See also Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 233, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581 (conclusive presumption that person who employs unlicensed contractor is employer).

(n125)Footnote 106.1. Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 233, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581 (hirer of contractor for job requiring license is statutory employer of unlicensed contractor and of workers employed by unlicensed contractor); Zellers v. Playa Pacifica, Ltd. (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 129, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 919 (court noted that purpose of rule is to ensure that all employees receive compensation for injuries occurring on job; plaintiff's remedies against hirer limited to exclusive workers' compensation remedy).

(n126)Footnote 107. Fillmore v. Irvine (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 649, 656, 194 Cal. Rptr. 319 (person performing work on construction job for which license is required without holding valid license, person is by definition employee not independent contractor); but see State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 16, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 (mere failure of contractor to disclose to prospective employer that he or she is unlicensed is not sufficient basis for finding of estoppel).

(n127)Footnote 108. Nick Hagopian Drywall v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772, 251 Cal. Rptr. 455 .

(n128)Footnote 109. Nick Hagopian Drywall v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 767, 772, 251 Cal. Rptr. 455 .

(n129)Footnote 110. Neighbours v. Buzz Oates Enterprises (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 325, 327-330, 333-334, 265 Cal. Rptr. 788 .

(n130)Footnote 111. Claremont Country Club v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1917) 174 Cal. 395, 397-398, 163 P.209 ; Ware v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1999) 78 Cal. App. 4th 508, 514-515, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 744 (although members paid caddies, club provided them as integral part of its business and therefore employment was presumed).

(n131)Footnote 112. Anaheim General Hospital v. Workmen's Comp. App. Bd. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 468, 472-474, 83 Cal. Rptr. 495 .

(n132)Footnote 113. Drillon v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 346, 350-353, 110 P.2d 64 .

(n133)Footnote 114. Schaller v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 46, 51, 77 P.2d 836 .

(n134)Footnote 115. Durae v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 691, 699-700, 23 Cal. Rptr. 902 .

(n135)Footnote 116. See Truesdale v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617, 235 Cal. Rptr. 754 .

(n136)Footnote 117. Antelope Valley Press v. Poizner (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 839, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 887, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 657, *24-*37 ; Gonzalez v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1584, 1594, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308 .

(n137)Footnote 118. Yellow Cab Cooperative, Inc. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1288, 1297-1300, 277 Cal. Rptr. 434 .

(n138)Footnote 119. Clarke v. Hernandez (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 414, 423-424, 179 P.2d 834 .

(n139)Footnote 120. Bates v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1958) 156 Cal. App. 2d 713, 719-720, 320 P.2d 167 .

(n140)Footnote 121. Los Flores S. District v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 180, 184-185, 56 P.2d 581 .

(n141)Footnote 122. Germann v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 776, 786-787, 176 Cal. Rptr. 868 .

(n142)Footnote 123. Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 837-838, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 (independent contractor as matter of law, where he was engaged to produce result and means by which result was to be produced were not discussed and were not part of any agreement, work was performed in course of his independently established business in which he customarily engaged, he supplied equipment and was not hired by day or hour, work was not ordinarily done in course of clients' business, gardener had substantial investment in his business, and gardener had employees who assisted him).

(n143)Footnote 124. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Brown (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 188, 203, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 98 .

15 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 3. Conditions of Workers' Compensation

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.21

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.21 Types of Injuries Within Coverage of Workers' Compensation

[1] Compensable Injuries Generally

"Injury" within the meaning of workers' compensation law includes any injury or disease arising out of the employment, including injuries to artificial members, dentures, hearing aids, eyeglasses, and medical braces (if the injury to those devices is incident to an injury causing disability).ⁿ¹ The injury may be either "specific," occurring as the result of one incident or exposure, or may be "cumulative," occurring as repetitive mentally or physically traumatic activities extending over time.ⁿ²

Both the original injury and any aggravation, including negligent medical treatment of the injury, are compensable under workers' compensation law; thus, recovery of workers' compensation benefits is generally the exclusive remedy against the employer for both the original injury and the aggravation.ⁿ³ In such a case, however, the employee may sue any third party who is responsible for the aggravation.ⁿ⁴ Also, as discussed in § 20.12[1][c], the employee may sue the employer in tort if the aggravation results from the employer's fraudulent concealment of the injury and its connection with the employment.ⁿ⁵

In any given case, there can be more than one injury, either specific or cumulative, or a combination of both, arising from the same event or from separate events. The number and nature of the injuries sustained are questions of fact for the workers' compensation judge or the Appeals Board, to be determined by the events leading to the injury, the employee's medical history, and the medical testimony received.ⁿ⁶

[2] Mental or Psychiatric Disorders

Disability from a mental or nervous condition proximately caused by the employment is also compensable.ⁿ⁷ To be compensable, the psychiatric injury must have arisen out of the employment, occurred in the course of employment, and been proximately caused by the employment.ⁿ⁸ Compensable psychoneurotic injuries may also result from a physical injury.ⁿ⁹ Employees can also recover for psychoneurotic injuries that are the result of the cumulative effect of daily stress and strain.ⁿ¹⁰

To establish that a psychiatric injury is compensable, an employee must demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that actual events of employment were predominant as to all combined causes of the psychiatric injury.ⁿ¹¹ "Predominant as to all causes" means that the work-related cause is more than 50 percent of all the causal factors.ⁿ¹² A psychiatric injury satisfies the standard for compensability set forth in section 3208.3 only if it is proven that events of employment were predominant as to all causes combined of the psychiatric disability taken as a whole.^{n12.1} Substantial medical evidence must be adduced to support the award.ⁿ¹³ In 1989, the Legislature enacted Labor Code Section 3208.3. As originally enacted, section 3208.3 required the employee to demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that actual events of employment were responsible for at least 10 percent of the total causation from all sources contributing to the psychiatric injury.ⁿ¹⁴ In 1993, however, the Legislature amended section 3208.3(b) to require that to establish that a psychiatric injury is compensable, the employee must show by a preponderance of the evidence that actual events of employment were predominant as to all combined causes of the psychiatric injury.ⁿ¹⁵ This compensability threshold applies to any claim for psychiatric injury, whether or not it is related to a compensable physical injury.^{n15.1} One court has held that "predominant as to all causes" means that the work-related cause is more than 50 percent of all the causal factors.ⁿ¹⁶ Another court has held that the statutory predominant-cause requirement for psychiatric injury^{n16.1} (compared to the lower threshold applied to physical injuries which aggravate preexisting conditions) does not offend a claimant's substantive due process rights.ⁿ¹⁷

Employee stress resulting from fluctuations in the value of an employer's stock or from uncertainty about an employer's future in the face of a downturn in the employer's business is not a compensable event of employment under Labor Code Section 3208.3.^{n17.1}

Under this statute, a psychiatric injury is compensable if it is a mental disorder that causes disability or need for medical treatment, and is diagnosed either pursuant to procedures promulgated by the Industrial Medical Council pursuant to Labor Code Section 139.2(j)(4), or, until those procedures are promulgated, is diagnosed using the terminology and criteria of the American Psychiatric Association's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, Third Edition Revised, or the terminology and diagnostic criteria of other psychiatric diagnostic manuals generally approved and accepted nationally by practitioners in the field of psychiatric medicine.ⁿ¹⁸

An employee whose injuries result from being a victim of a violent act or from direct exposure to a significant violent act must demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that actual events of employment were a substantial cause of the injury.ⁿ¹⁹ "Substantial cause" means at least 35 to 40 percent of the causation from all sources combined.^{n19.1}

An employee who claims a psychiatric injury based on the harassment or persecution of coworkers must establish objective evidence of harassment, persecution, or other such basis for the alleged psychiatric injury. Disdainful reactions of a supervisor and coworkers to an employee's mistreatment of them do not constitute "actual events of employment"^{n19.2} for which the employee can obtain workers' compensation benefits for the psychological stress the employee experiences (because of those disdainful reactions to the employee's own inappropriate conduct). For example, a claimant's subjective misperception as harassment of the disdainful reaction of her coworkers to the claimant's mistreatment of them by being rude, inflexible, easily upset, and demeaning toward other employees did not entitle her to workers' compensation benefits for psychiatric injury.ⁿ²⁰

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

The role of counsel to the employer cannot be overemphasized. Cumulative trauma psychiatric claims are difficult to defend. Psychiatrists, judges, and attorneys wrestle with what is a 'substantial cause,' 'preponderance of the evidence,' and what is '35% to 40%' relative to all sources of stress combined. It is important, then, that the employer work closely with its claims examiner to determine what, if any, other causes of psychiatric stress affected the employee; and this starts with information the employer either knows, or has in its files, or is known to the employee's co-workers. Commentary by John W. Miller.

Further, notwithstanding any other provision of the workers' compensation law, compensation will not be paid for a psychiatric injury related to a claim against an employer unless the employee has been employed by that employer for at least six months.^{n20.1} "Employment" means the performance of actual service for the employer.^{n20.2} The six months of employment need not be continuous.ⁿ²¹ The six-month rule does not apply, however, if the psychiatric injury is caused by a sudden and extraordinary employment condition.ⁿ²² The sudden and extraordinary employment condition is limited to the type of events that would naturally be expected to cause psychic disturbances even in a diligent and honest employee.^{n22.1} The sudden and extraordinary condition could certainly include occurrences such as gas main explosions or workplace violence. However, the Legislature intended to except from the six-month limitation psychiatric injuries caused by a sudden and extraordinary employment condition, and not by a regular or routine employment event.^{n22.2} Labor Code Section 3208.3 does not authorize an employee or the dependents of an employee to bring an action at law or equity for damages against an employer for a psychiatric injury, when those rights would not exist pursuant to the exclusive remedy doctrineⁿ²³ in the absence of the amendment of Section 3208.3 by Statutes of 1991, Chapter 115.ⁿ²⁴

If the claim for compensation is filed after notice of termination of employment or layoff, including voluntary layoff, and the claim is for an injury occurring prior to the time of the notice and on or after July 16, 1993, no compensation is payable unless the employee demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that actual events of employment were predominant as to all causes combined of the psychiatric injury and that one or more of the following conditions exist:ⁿ²⁵

1. Sudden and extraordinary events of employment were the cause of the injury.
2. The employer has notice of the psychiatric injuryⁿ²⁶ prior to the notice of termination or layoff.
3. The employee's medical records existing prior to notice of termination or layoff contain evidence of treatment of the psychiatric injury.
4. A finding of sexual or racial harassment has been made by any trier of fact, whether contractual, administrative, regulatory, or judicial.
5. Evidence exists that the date of injuryⁿ²⁷ is subsequent to the date of the notice of termination or layoff, but prior to the effective date of the termination or layoff.

A notice of termination or layoff that is not followed within 60 days by termination or layoff is not subject to these provisions, and these provisions do not apply until the employee receives a later notice of termination or layoff.ⁿ²⁸ The issuance of frequent notices of termination or layoff to an employee is considered a bad faith personnel action and makes these provisions inapplicable to the employee.ⁿ²⁹

No compensation is payable for a psychiatric injury that was substantially caused by a lawful, nondiscriminatory, good faith personnel action.ⁿ³⁰ The burden of proof rests with the party asserting the issue.ⁿ³¹

When a psychiatric injury claim is filed against an employer, and an application for adjudication of claim is filed by an employer or employee, the Division of Workers' Compensation must provide the employer with information concerning psychiatric injury prevention programs.ⁿ³²

An employee who is an inmate, or the family of the inmate on his or her behalf, is not entitled to compensation for a psychiatric injury sustained while the inmate was incarcerated.ⁿ³³

The California Supreme Court has held that compensable injuries may be physical, emotional, or both, so long as they are disabling.ⁿ³⁴ For further discussion, see § 20.12[2].

[3] Injury to Reputation Not Covered

In Howland v. Balma,ⁿ³⁵ the court of appeal held that an action for libel or slander is outside the application of the workers' compensation system. In so holding, the court reasoned that the conditions of workers' compensation attach only when a personal injury arises out of and in the course of employment.ⁿ³⁶ The court then held that personal injury includes physical and mental suffering but does not include such injuries as damage to reputation. In support of its holding, the court quoted with approval the statement, "If the essence of the tort, in law, is non-physical, and if the injuries are of the usual nonphysical sort, with physical injury being at most added to the list of injuries as a makeweight, the [tort] suit should not be barred. But if the essence of the action is recovery for physical injury or death, the action should be barred even if it can be cast in the form of a normally non-physical tort."ⁿ³⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDICompensabilityGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDICompensabilityInjuriesGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDICoverageGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 3208.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 3208.1; Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 236, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26 (employee who suffers from cumulative injury may invoke rights and benefits provided under workers' compensation laws if cumulative effects of repetitive events result in compensable injury, i.e., one resulting in lost wages or need for medical treatment); see Beckstead v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 787, 791, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 254 (WCAB abuses its discretion by refusing to consider cumulative trauma injury when employee, unrepresented by counsel, alleged specific rather than cumulative injury and misdated date of injury, and employers indisputably knew that employee suffered from cumulative injury caused by repetitive writing and completing orders).

(n3)Footnote 3. D'Angona v. County of Los Angeles (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 661, 664, 166 Cal. Rptr. 177, 613 P.2d 238; Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602(a). See also Alander v. Vaca Valley Hospital (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1298, 1304, 1307, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 40 (hospital employee who sustained nerve injury while undergoing treatment by hospital-employer for prior industrial injury, pursuant to hospital's protocol, was barred by exclusive remedy rule from pursuing tort action against employer).

(n4)Footnote 4. D'Angona v. County of Los Angeles (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 661, 664, 166 Cal. Rptr. 177, 613 P.2d 238 (case decided prior to amendment to Lab. Code § 3602, when suits were permitted against employer under dual-capacity doctrine).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. Western Growers Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 234-235, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 72, 75, 192 Cal. Rptr. 643; Baker v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 852, 861, 96 Cal. Rptr. 279. For full discussion of recovery of workers' compensation benefits for mental and nervous disorders generally, see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Vol. 1, Ch. 4.

(n8)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Atascadero Unified School District v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2002)

98 Cal. App. 4th 880, 883-885, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 (psychiatric injury from workplace gossip about employee's extramarital affair with another employee is not compensable because injury did not arise out of employment); Rodriguez v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1747, 1760, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 93 (psychiatric injury arising from employee's reaction to employer's discontinuation of vocational rehabilitation benefits is not a compensable consequence of employment); Cooper v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48-49, 218 Cal. Rptr. 783 (incorrect diagnosis and treatment for asbestos disease caused by exposure at work was held to be precipitating cause of applicant's psychiatric disorder).

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Zurich Insurance Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 848, 853, 109 Cal. Rptr. 211, 512 P.2d 843 (employee's back injuries initiated later psychoneurotic condition).

(n10)Footnote 10. Baker v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 852, 862, 96 Cal. Rptr. 279 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 3208.3(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Department of Corrections v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Garcia) (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 810, 815-816, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 716 . It seems unlikely that after Garcia an employee could establish that a psychiatric injury is compensable based on an honest misperception of job harassment, as in Albertson's, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 308, 313-317, 182 Cal. Rptr. 304 (court upheld WCAB determination that worker had sustained cumulative psychic injury because of worker's honest misperception of job harassment, which interacted with a preexisting psychiatric condition, thereby causing job stress).

(n13)Footnote 12.1. Sonoma State Univ. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (Hunton) (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 500, 503-506 (WCAB erred in concluding that although only 35 percent of applicant's permanent disability was work-related, she satisfied requirement of § 3208.3 because 100 percent of her adjustment disorder was industrially caused).

(n14)Footnote 13. Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 72, 76, 192 Cal. Rptr. 643 .

(n15)Footnote 14. Former Lab. Code § 3208.3(b).

(n16)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)(1).

(n17)Footnote 15.1. Lockheed Martin v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1237, 1240, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 865 .

(n18)Footnote 16. See Department of Corrections v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Garcia) (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 810, 815-816, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 716 .

(n19)Footnote 16.1. See Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)

(n20)Footnote 17. Sakotas v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 262, 271-273, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 153 .

(n21)Footnote 17.1. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1180-1184, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467 (three of four factors relied on by WCAB to find injuries compensable were invalid: generalized anxiety about employer's downsizing, losses in employer's stock prices in which employee was invested, and employee's concern over employer's future and his retirement funds; however, WCAB could reasonably conclude that employee's confrontations with angry, threatening or deceitful customers packed in large numbers in confining small office caused him specific and identifiable work-related stress).

(n22)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 3208.3(a).

(n23)Footnote 19. Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)(2).

(n24)Footnote 19.1. Lab. Code § 3208.3(b)(3).

(n25)Footnote 19.2. See Lab. Code § 3208.3(h).

(n26)Footnote 20. Verga v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 174, 178, 184-188, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 871.

(n27)Footnote 20.1. See Wal-Mart Stores v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1438-1443, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 822 (employee who files workers' compensation claim seeking benefits for injury to psyche derived from effects of admittedly routine physical injury cannot recover unless employee has worked for employer for at least six months).

(n28)Footnote 20.2. Wal-Mart Stores v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1442, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 822 ("employment" does not include time until employee received workers' compensation claim form or time on disability leave).

(n29)Footnote 21. Lab. Code § 3208.3(d); Hansen v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1184, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30 (six-month employment requirement does not violate equal protection or due process).

(n30)Footnote 22. Lab. Code § 3208.3(d).

(n31)Footnote 22.1. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1441 n. 9, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 822; Matea v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1448, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 314.

(n32)Footnote 22.2. Matea v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1445-1450, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 314 (worker carried his burden of showing by preponderance of evidence in light of entire record that he suffered compensable psychiatric injury as result of admitted leg injury during first six months of his employment resulting from rack of lumber falling on his left leg, where all lumber in rack falling into aisle and onto employee's leg causing injury to employee was uncommon, unusual, and totally unexpected event or occurrence).

(n33)Footnote 23. Lab. Code § 3602.

(n34)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 3208.3(d).

(n35)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 3208.3(e).

(n36)Footnote 26. See Lab. Code § 5400 et seq.

(n37)Footnote 27. See Lab. Code §§ 5411, 5412.

(n38)Footnote 28. Lab. Code § 3208.3(g).

(n39)Footnote 29. Lab. Code § 3208.3(g).

(n40)Footnote 30. Lab. Code § 3208.3(h); see, e.g., Northrop Grumman Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1021, 1033-1035, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 285, 2002 Cal. App. LEXIS 5011 (workers' compensation judge's finding that accusation and investigation for allegedly racially discriminatory conduct resulting in psychiatric injury was not lawful, nondiscriminatory, good-faith personnel action within meaning of Lab. Code § 3208.3(h) and was not supported by substantial evidence; investigation was mandated by law, and employer, faced with accusation by coworker that supervisor engaged in racial discrimination against subordinate, had legal obligation to investigate claim); Bray v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 530, 539-540, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 580 (employee not entitled to workers' compensation benefits for post-termination psychiatric injury due solely to his termination from employment and not to any pre-termination event).

(n41)Footnote 31. Lab. Code § 3208.3(h).

(n42)Footnote 32. Lab. Code § 3208.3(i).

(n43)Footnote 33. Lab. Code § 3208.3(j).

(n44)Footnote 34. See Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 753, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 .

(n45)Footnote 35. Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 904-905, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286 .

(n46)Footnote 36. Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 904-905, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286 .

(n47)Footnote 37. Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 905, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286 (quoting from Larson's Workers' Compensation Law (Matthew Bender)); see also Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 (citing Howland with apparent approval).

16 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 3. Conditions of Workers' Compensation

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.22

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.22 Requirement That Injury Arise Out of and in Course of Employment

[1] Generally

For workers' compensation to apply, an injury to a worker must (1) arise out of employment, and (2) arise in the course of employment.ⁿ¹ In addition, two of the conditions of compensation are that (1) at the time of the injury, the employee must be performing a service growing out of and incidental to his or her employment and be acting within the course of his or her employment,ⁿ² and (2) the injury must be proximately caused by the employment.ⁿ³ These criteria overlap a great deal. For example, the California Supreme Court, in discussing the meaning of the requirement that the injury "arise out of the employment," stated that this means that the injury must occur by reason of a condition or incident of the employment, which the Court explained means that the injury and employment must be linked in a causal fashion.ⁿ⁴ The Court further explained that the proximate cause requirement is not separate from the proximate cause requirement related to the injury arising out of the employment, but merely elaborates on it.ⁿ⁵ The Court stated that the requirement that the injury occur "in the course of the employment" refers to the time, place, and circumstances under which the injury occurs.ⁿ⁶ Many cases, in determining whether an injury is sufficiently connected with employment to be compensable under workers' compensation law, do not attempt to apply all of the statutory requirements noted above.ⁿ⁷

The determination whether an injury arises out of and in the course of the employment is normally an issue of fact.ⁿ⁸ However, when there is no real dispute about the facts, the issue becomes one of law,^{n8.1} so that a purported finding of fact is not binding on an appellate court,ⁿ⁹ nor need the court give deference to the finding of fact.^{n9.1}

[2] Injury Arising Out of Employment

This section discusses the workers' compensation law requirement that an injury arise out of employment and be proximately caused by the employment.ⁿ¹⁰ The term "arises out of employment" refers to the origin or cause of the injury.ⁿ¹¹ More particularly, it means "flowing from employment," so that an injury arises from employment if it occurs by reason of a condition or incident of the employment.ⁿ¹² Thus, the term "arise out of employment" generally refers to causal connection between the employment and the injury.ⁿ¹³

In order to meet the requirement that an injury arise out of employment, the employment must be a positive factor in influencing the course of the disease or accident producing the injury.ⁿ¹⁴ However, the employment need not be the sole cause of the injury.ⁿ¹⁵ The causal relation is sufficient as long as the employment is a contributing cause of the injury.ⁿ¹⁶ Thus, an injury or disease may be deemed to have been proximately caused by employment even though the personality of the employee was a major contributing factor.ⁿ¹⁷

Proximate causation in the context of workers' compensation law is broader than proximate causation as used in tort law.ⁿ¹⁸ Proximate cause is found, for example, if employment contributes to the cause of the injury because of "special exposure."ⁿ¹⁹

The place of injury and whether the employee is clearly within the course of employment may affect the issue of causation. A Supreme Court case has held that causation sufficient to bring an injury within the Workers' Compensation Act exists if employment brought the injured employee within the range of danger by requiring his or her presence on the premises of the employer at the time the peril struck.ⁿ²⁰ In California Compensation & Fire Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ²¹ the Supreme Court stated that when an injury occurs on the employer's premises while the employee is in the course of his or her employment, the injury also arises out of the employment unless the connection is so remote from the employment that it is not an incident of it.

In Transactron, Inc. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ²² an employee was killed at work after her boyfriend followed her into the workplace, learned from a coemployee that the employee was in the restroom, proceeded to the restroom, and shot her. In denying workers' compensation coverage, the court held that the nature of the decedent's duties played no part in the assailant's intent to assault her and that the nature of her duties was not the proximate cause of her injury, for it merely provided a stage for the event. In Murphy v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ²³ a case in which the employee was shot at work by her husband, the court found that her employment contributed to the injury in that the employer knew of the husband's plan to attack his wife at work and failed to warn the wife, and the wife's employment was a source of the husband's dissatisfaction with his wife. In a similar case, California Compensation & Fire Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ²⁴ a woman's ex-husband devised an elaborate scheme to murder her by pretending to purchase a custom tablepad from his ex-wife's employer, because he knew his ex-wife would be sent out to his new apartment to take the necessary measurements. When she arrived at the apartment, the ex-husband murdered the woman and committed suicide. The Supreme Court held that the nature of the woman's work was a factor in her ex-husband's scheme and that, at the very least, it facilitated the assault and was a contributory cause of her death.ⁿ²⁵ In all three of these cases, the court suggested that the causation element was satisfied if there was some aspect of the employment that raised the level of the risk of harm to the employee. However, if a causal relationship between the employment and the injury exists, but it is remote, the injury is deemed outside the scope of workers' compensation.ⁿ²⁶ This reasoning is consistent with older case law that suggested that workers' compensation does not apply unless the employee was subjected to a special risk, due to the employment, which is beyond that suffered by the community at large.ⁿ²⁷

Effective January 1, 1998, every employer who is subject to the workers' compensation provisions of the Labor Code must give any employee who is a victim of a crime that occurred in the place of employment written notice of eligibility for workers' compensation for injuries, including psychiatric injuries, resulting from the crime.^{n27.1} The employer must provide this notice, either personally or by first-class mail, within one working day of the crime, or within one working day of the date the employer reasonably should have known of the crime.^{n27.2}

In Western Airlines v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ²⁸ the court of appeal stated that there are three types of risks that can give rise to liability of an employer for an employee's injuries. The three risks are industrial risk, personal risk, and neutral risk. The analysis of these types of risks is often used in cases involving an assault by a third person on an employee. Whether a risk is personal depends on whether the risk was related solely to the employee's person and was without any connection to the employer's business.ⁿ²⁹ An industrial risk is one that is related to the employment. If the risk is neither personal in this sense nor related to the employment, then the risk is considered neutral. Neutral risks include unknown risks.ⁿ³⁰ Thus, for example, in Western Airlines, during a layover, a flight attendant had met and gone out with a man who subsequently raped her. The court held that absent evidence that the man had intended to rape a flight attendant or harm a Western Airlines employee, his motive was strictly personal for purposes of workers' compensation law; therefore, the injury did not arise out of the employment.ⁿ³¹

[3] Injury Occurring in Course of Employment

"Course of employment" generally refers to the time, place, and circumstances of the injury.ⁿ³² For an injury to occur within the course of employment, the employee must be acting within the scope of his or her authority or assignment, at a time within the period of assignment, and at a place where he or she may reasonably be for that purpose.ⁿ³³

Although Labor Code Section 3600 expressly requires as a condition of compensation that at the time of the injury the employee must be performing a service growing out of and incidental to his or her employment, case law holds that recovery of compensation is not conditional on the employee's rendering service to the employer at the time of the injury.ⁿ³⁴ If the injury to an employee results from a danger to which the employee is exposed as a part of the particular employment, the employee will be deemed within the course of employment.ⁿ³⁵ Thus, courts often phrase the issue as whether at the time of the injury the employee was involved in an activity that was an incident of employment.ⁿ³⁶ For example, a person attending night school at the encouragement of his or her employer has been held to be within the course of employment.ⁿ³⁷ Other courts phrase the issue as whether or not an act or activity is within the reasonable contemplation of employment.ⁿ³⁸

The status of an employee acting in the course of employment is not destroyed by the fact that he or she may be pursuing a dual purpose. If the employee is carrying out some duty or right in connection with employment, the fact that he or she combines it with a personal object does not take the employee outside the course of employment.ⁿ³⁹ The combination of a personal act performed outside of regular working hours and the performance of acts in furtherance of the employer's business does not defeat a finding that the employee was acting in the course of his or her employment.^{n39.1}

An employer may limit the scope of an employee's duties so that if he or she attempts to perform tasks that have been prohibited by the employer it will take the employee outside the scope of employment.ⁿ⁴⁰ Cases have distinguished between an unauthorized departure from the course of employment and the performance of a duty in the course of employment in an unauthorized manner.ⁿ⁴¹ An employee who is injured while performing his or her assigned duties in an unauthorized or prohibited manner does not step outside the scope of employment.ⁿ⁴²

Criminal conduct will not take an employee outside the course of employment if the employee is engaged at the time in performing a task for the employer.ⁿ⁴³ For example, in one case,ⁿ⁴⁴ a delivery man ran a red light while driving on company business. He was then pursued by police, an accident occurred, and the employee was injured. The employee was awarded compensation. The court distinguished between an unauthorized departure from the course of employment and the performance of duties in an unauthorized manner. The court observed that an employee's personal purpose at the time of injury is irrelevant so long as he or she is engaged generally in performing a task for the employer.ⁿ⁴⁵ However, if an employee engages in criminal conduct on the job without directly or indirectly serving the employer, even if only partially, the employee will be deemed to be acting outside the course of employment.ⁿ⁴⁶ An employee brought a claim for workers' compensation benefits for stress relating to accusations by the employer that he had forged customers' signatures on contracts. The court held that the key issue was whether or not the employee had actually committed the forgeries. If he had not, the psychiatric condition of the employee would have resulted from his legitimate work conduct, and the injury would have occurred within the course of employment. If he had committed the forgeries, he would not have been directly or indirectly serving his employer, and accordingly, the injury he sustained would not have been a consequence of his employment but incidental to his criminal conduct.ⁿ⁴⁷

The issue of whether an employee is within the course of employment often requires the application of the going and coming rule, which is discussed in [4], below.

[4] Going and Coming Rule

[a] General Rule

The course of employment normally commences when the employee arrives on the premises of the employer for the purposes of immediately commencing work and terminates when the employee ceases work and leaves the premises.ⁿ⁴⁸ One guide to interpreting the course of employment is the "going and coming rule," which precludes application of the Workers' Compensation Act to injuries suffered during the course of a local commute to a fixed place of business at fixed hours, in the absence of exceptional circumstances.ⁿ⁴⁹

As a general rule, the "course of employment" does not begin until an employee enters the employer's premises. Prior to entry, the rule normally precludes recovery of workers' compensation benefits; after entry, the injury is generally presumed compensable as arising in the course of employment.ⁿ⁵⁰ However, if the employee has arrived at work but is barred from entry, the going and coming rule does not apply; that is, the employee is deemed to have arrived at work and commenced the "course of employment."ⁿ⁵¹

For purposes of applying the going and coming rule, the employer's premises include the parking lot as well as plant or office space; and once the employee has reached the premises, employment is not interrupted by crossing public property while traveling from one part of the premises to another.ⁿ⁵² The scope of an employer's premises may depend on the nature of the job. For example, in the case of delivery personnel or traveling salespersons, it may include the whole of the delivery route or sales territory.ⁿ⁵³

[b] Exceptions

An employee will be deemed outside the course of employment if injured outside the boundaries of the employer's premises, unless one of the exceptions to the going and coming rule is satisfied.ⁿ⁵⁴ Under the "special risk" exception to the going and coming rule, if an employee, prior to entry on the work premises, suffers an injury from a special risk causally related to employment, the injury is compensable under workers' compensation law. The fact that an injury occurs in a public area and the danger is one to which the public at large is exposed does not preclude a finding of a causal relationship between the accident and employment if the danger is one to which the employee, by reason of and in connection with his or her employment, is subjected peculiarly or to an abnormal degree.ⁿ⁵⁵ In other words, the special-risk exception applies if (1) but for the employment the employee would not have been at the location where the injury occurred, and (2) the risk is either distinctive in nature or quantitatively greater than risks common to the public.ⁿ⁵⁶

The "special mission" exception to the going and coming rule provides that an injury suffered by an employee during his or her regular commute is compensable if the employee was also performing a special mission for the employer. The employee's conduct is special if it is "extraordinary in relation to routine duties, not outside the scope of employment."ⁿ⁵⁷ A special mission may occur when an employee makes a regular trip to work at a special timeⁿ⁵⁸ or makes an extra trip to work in addition to his or her ordinary commute.ⁿ⁵⁹ Although special missions are normally requested by the employer,ⁿ⁶⁰ it has been held that when an employee engages in a mission or errand that incidentally or indirectly contributes to the service and benefit of the employer, the special-mission exception to the going and coming rule still applies.ⁿ⁶¹ Automobile accidents that occur while the employee is commuting to work are normally outside the scope of employment. However, if it is an express or implied condition of employment that the employee bring a car to work for use on the job and the employee is involved in an accident while driving his or her car to work, then the accident occurred within the course of employment and the going and coming rule does not apply.ⁿ⁶² Furthermore, when an employer has come to expect that an employee will bring a vehicle to work for use on the job and reimburses the employee for mileage, the employee's commute to work in the vehicle is within the course of employment.ⁿ⁶³

Although traveling between home and work is generally covered by the going and coming rule, if the employee's home becomes a second business-situs, injuries incurred while traveling between home and work are within the course of employment.ⁿ⁶⁴ However, the "home as a second job site" exception to the going and coming rule does not apply unless the employer requires that work be done at home as a condition of employment.ⁿ⁶⁵ It does not apply when the work is done at home merely for the convenience of the employee.ⁿ⁶⁶ Thus, white-collar professionals such as teachers, who often take work home rather than staying late at their offices, are outside the "home as a second job site" exception to the going and coming rule.ⁿ⁶⁷

An injury to an employee after the employee has concluded a business trip and continues on with personal travel does not come within "special mission" exception to the going and coming rule.^{n67.1}

[5] Time and Place of Injury

[a] Generally

As a general rule, an off-premises injury is within the course of employment if sustained while the employee is conducting those activities expressly or impliedly authorized by the employment contract.ⁿ⁶⁸ If the employee is combining his or her own business with that of the employer, or attending to both at substantially the same time, no inquiry will be made about which business he or she was actually engaged in at the time of the injury, unless it clearly appears that the employee could not have been directly or indirectly serving the employer.ⁿ⁶⁹ If the employment contract contemplates that the employee work solely on the premises of the employer, an injury elsewhere is ordinarily outside the coverage of workers' compensation unless a special connection with employment is shown.ⁿ⁷⁰ When an employment contract contemplates the rendition of service off the premises of the employer, workers' compensation coverage depends on whether the employee, at the time of the injury, is engaged in an anticipated activity within the period of his or her employment at a place he or she may reasonably be for that purpose.ⁿ⁷¹ If the employee's duties require the use of the streets or highways, for example, an injury sustained in connection with such use is compensable.ⁿ⁷²

An injury on the premises of the employer may be within the course of employment if, although it occurs before work has commenced or after work hours, the margin of time is a reasonable one and the employee is on the premises for a purpose contemplated by the employment or required by the employer.ⁿ⁷³

[b] Commercial Traveler Rule

Under the "commercial traveler" rule, an employee is regarded as acting within the course of employment during the entire period of travel on the employer's business, and his or her acts in traveling and procuring food and shelter are deemed incidents of employment.ⁿ⁷⁴ The rule does not embrace all the activities of a commercial traveler. Injuries sustained while pursuing purely personal activities are not covered.ⁿ⁷⁵ Nor does the "commercial traveler" rule apply to injuries incurred during business travel if the injuries arise from treatment for a preexisting, nonoccupational medical condition.^{n75.1} Nevertheless, the scope of the commercial traveler rule is broad and protects the employee continuously except during a distinct departure on a personal errand.ⁿ⁷⁶

[c] Personal Comfort Doctrine

Under the personal comfort doctrine, acts that are necessary to the employee's convenience, life, and comfort while at work, although strictly personal to the employee, are incidental to the employee's services; and an injury sustained in the performance of such acts is within the coverage of workers' compensation.ⁿ⁷⁷ Thus, injuries during work intermissions such as breaks or certain meal periods occurring on or near the employer's premises may be deemed to be in the course of employment.ⁿ⁷⁸ However, if the employer has specifically prohibited the activity, the employee's injury while performing the act will not come within the personal comfort doctrine.^{n78.1} In Mission Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ⁷⁹ however, it was held that an employee who was injured off the employer's premises during lunch hour was not within the course of employment when she was not compensated during lunch hour, reimbursed for her expenses, or acting at the request of the employer. The rule now appears to be established that an employee injured off the employer's premises during a scheduled meal break for which he or she does not receive compensation is outside the course of employment.ⁿ⁸⁰

A court of appeal has held that a salaried employee was within the course of employment when she was injured during an "authorized but unscheduled" meal break.ⁿ⁸¹

The personal comfort doctrine is not strictly limited to injuries suffered on the employer's premises, and whether it applies depends on whether the acts of the employee are helpful to the employer and aid in efficient job performance. For example, a worker who arrived at work early and who was injured while putting some oil in his car while waiting for work premises to open was held to be within the personal convenience doctrine.ⁿ⁸²

The limit of the doctrine is reached when the acts of the employee are found to be departures effecting a temporary abandonment of employment.ⁿ⁸³ If an act is outside the reasonable contemplation of employment, it is outside the course of the employment.ⁿ⁸⁴

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

As telecommuting increases, employers should consider the additional risks assumed when employees work from their homes. That will put the home as the place of employment and, when an injury happens at home, disputes will arise under the personal comfort doctrine. Commentary by John W. Miller.

[d] Bunkhouse Rule

The "bunkhouse rule" is merely an extension of the rule that when an employee is injured on the employer's premises as contemplated by the employment contract, he or she is entitled to workers' compensation benefits for injuries received during reasonable and foreseeable use of the premises.ⁿ⁸⁵ The bunkhouse rule applies when an employment contract contemplates, or work necessity requires that, the employee live or board on the premises of the employer.ⁿ⁸⁶ One court has stated that injuries to employees in a "bunkhouse" are not per se compensable by workers' compensation. There must be some other employment connection or contribution before a bunkhouse injury is within the scope of workers' compensation coverage.ⁿ⁸⁷ If a third party assaults and injures an employee while the employee is in the bunkhouse, and the third party acted out of purely personal motives, such as racism, the injury is not covered by workers' compensation. If, however, the employee can show that there was some employment connection or contribution, then the injury is compensable.ⁿ⁸⁸ The "bunkhouse rule" may be inapplicable to a person living in employer-furnished quarters, if the person is expressly excluded from the definition of the term "employee" by statute. For example, the bunkhouse rule was inapplicable to an injured worker who worked as a cook at a ski resort and resided in apartments owned by her employer. Since the worker was injured while skiing on her day off, she was expressly precluded from recovering workers' compensation benefits under Labor Code Section 3352(f).ⁿ⁸⁹

[e] Collecting Paycheck

An injury to an employee that occurs while the employee is on the premises of the employer for the purpose of picking up a paycheck is within the coverage of workers' compensation if it occurs during working hours or shortly thereafter but not when the employee has returned to work several hours after normal working hours solely for the purpose of picking up a paycheck.ⁿ⁹⁰ Although injuries sustained by an employee as he or she proceeds to a place specified by the employer for collecting a paycheck are normally within the coverage of the workers' compensation system, an employee is not acting within the course of employment when picking up a paycheck at a time and place specified by the employee for his or her own convenience.ⁿ⁹¹

[6] Work-Related Social Activities

Under Labor Code Section 3600(a)(9), injuries arising out of voluntary participation in an off-duty recreational, social, or athletic activity not constituting part of the employee's work-related duties are outside the application of the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ⁹² However, if the participation by the employee is expressly or impliedly required by the employer or is a "reasonable expectancy" of employment, then it is within the scope of workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁹³ The "reasonable expectancy" requirement of Labor Code Section 3600(a)(9) is identical to the "arising out of" and "in the course of" requirements of Labor Code Section 3600(a), (a)(2)-(3).^{n93.1} The courts have established a two-prong test for determining whether an injury meets the requirements of Labor Code Section 3600(a)(9). The employee must show (1) that he or she subjectively believed his or her participation in the activity was expected by the employer, and (2) that such a belief was objectively reasonable.ⁿ⁹⁴ General assertions that the employer expects an employee to stay in good physical condition and that the employer benefits from the employee's doing so are not sufficient for worker's compensation coverage.ⁿ⁹⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI
Compensability Course of Employment
General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI
Compensability Injuries
General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI
Coverage
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 3600(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(3).

(n4)Footnote 4. Maher v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 729, 733-734, 190 Cal. Rptr. 904, 661 P.2d 1058 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Maher v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 729, 733-734 n.3, 190 Cal. Rptr. 904, 661 P.2d 1058 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Maher v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 729, 733, 190 Cal. Rptr. 904, 661 P.2d 1058 . For a comprehensive treatment of the history as well as the current status of the rules regarding the issue of whether an injury arises out of and in the course of employment, see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Vol. 1, Ch. 4.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Vol. 1, Ch. 4, § 4.05[1].

(n8)Footnote 8. Industrial Indemnity Exchange v. Industrial Accident Commission (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 130, 136, 156 P.2d 926 .

(n9)Footnote 8.1. Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 353, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503 ; Ezzy v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 252, 259, 194 Cal. Rptr. 90 .

(n10)Footnote 9. Ezzy v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 252, 259, 194 Cal. Rptr. 90 .

(n11)Footnote 9.1. Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 353, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503 .

(n12)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code § 3600; see also discussion in [1], above, concerning the relationship between the "arising out of employment" requirement and the requirement of proximate causation.

(n13)Footnote 11. Cooper v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48-49, 218 Cal. Rptr. 783 (psychiatric injury resulting from misdiagnosis of asbestos disease arose out of employment, because but for exposure to asbestos at work, worker would not have been referred to medical examination); Argonaut Insurance Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 669, 677-678, 55 Cal. Rptr. 810 .

(n14)Footnote 12. Employers Mutual Liability Insurance Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 676, 679, 263 P.2d 4 .

(n15)Footnote 13. Rogers v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1200, 218 Cal. Rptr. 662 . See Cal. State. Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1043-1048, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743 (unlicensed painter hired to paint homeowners' living and dining rooms and kitchen was not their employee for workers' compensation purposes, where painter had not worked at least 52 hours and earned at least $ 100 during 90 days preceding date of injury, so that he was excluded from coverage under Lab. Code § 3352(h)).

(n16)Footnote 14. Bingham v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 842, 848, 68 Cal. Rptr. 410 .

(n17)Footnote 15. Guerra v Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 195, 199-200, 214 Cal. Rptr. 58 .

(n18)Footnote 16. Guerra v Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 195, 199-200, 214 Cal. Rptr. 58 (self-inflicted burn injuries found to be proximately caused by employment, when depression resulting from prior work-related back injury was contributing factor in causing worker to inflict injuries on self); State Comp. Insurance Fund v. Industrial Accident Commission (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 10, 17-20, 1 Cal. Rptr. 73 (when worker had sustained injury to eye in industrial accident, subsequent injury to hand while using a power saw at home was proximately caused by employment because injury to eye contributed to second injury).

(n19)Footnote 17. Bingham v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 842, 848-849, 68 Cal. Rptr. 410 .

(n20)Footnote 18. State Compensation Insurance Fund v. Industrial Accident Commission (1959) 176 Cal. App. 2d 10, 17-18, 1 Cal. Rptr. 73 ; Cooper v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48-49, 218 Cal. Rptr. 783 ; Rodgers v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 567, 574-575, 214 Cal. Rptr. 303 (employment as proximate cause of injury if causal connection exists between employment and injury). See also Bailey v. Filco, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1552, 1562, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333 (workers' compensation cases not controlling precedent when liability is predicated upon respondeat superior principles).

(n21)Footnote 19. Warner v. Industrial Accident Commission (1935) 10 Cal. App. 2d 375, 376, 51 P.2d 897 ; General Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 595, 600-601, 128 Cal. Rptr. 417, 546 P.2d 1361 .

(n22)Footnote 20. Madin v. Industrial Accident Commission (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 90, 94, 292 P.2d 892 .

(n23)Footnote 21. California Compensation & Fire Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 157, 160, 65 Cal. Rptr. 155, 436 P.2d 67 .

(n24)Footnote 22. Transactron, Inc. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 233, 239, 137 Cal. Rptr. 142 .

(n25)Footnote 23. Murphy v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 996, 1000-1002, 150 Cal. Rptr. 561 .

(n26)Footnote 24. California Compensation & Fire Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 157, 160, 65 Cal. Rptr. 155, 436 P.2d 67 .

(n27)Footnote 25. California Compensation & Fire Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 157, 160, 65 Cal. Rptr. 155, 436 P.2d 67 .

(n28)Footnote 26. See California Compensation & Fire Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 157, 160-161, 65 Cal. Rptr. 155, 436 P.2d 67 .

(n29)Footnote 27. See Warner v. Industrial Accident Commission (1935) 10 Cal. App. 2d 375, 376, 51 P.2d 897 (holding that injury resulting from bad weather may be compensable if employee incurred additional exposure to bad weather as result of employment); see also discussion of the "special risk" exception to the "going and coming rule," discussed in [4], below.

(n30)Footnote 27.1. Lab. Code § 3553.

(n31)Footnote 27.2. Lab. Code § 3553.

(n32)Footnote 28. Western Airlines v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 366, 369, 202 Cal. Rptr. 74 .

(n33)Footnote 29. Western Airlines v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 366, 370, 202 Cal. Rptr. 74 .

(n34)Footnote 30. Western Airlines v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 366, 370, 202 Cal. Rptr. 74 .

(n35)Footnote 31. Western Airlines v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 366, 370, 202 Cal. Rptr. 74 .

(n36)Footnote 32. Maher v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 729, 733, 190 Cal. Rptr. 904, 661 P.2d 1058 .

(n37)Footnote 33. Robbins v. Yellow Cab Co. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 811, 813, 193 P.2d 956 ; see Maher v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 729, 733-734, 190 Cal. Rptr. 904, 661 P.2d 1058 (causal connection between employment and injury required, but connection need not be sole cause as long as it is contributory cause; employee acts in course of employment when employee takes reasonable actions which the contract expressly or impliedly permits); see also Mason v. Lake Dolores Group (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 822, 832-835, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 914 (negligence action against employer by employee injured in unauthorized use of employer's water slide was not barred by workers' compensation exclusivity rule, because use of water slide was not reasonably contemplated by nor causally connected to his employment or his employment duties, he was not performing service growing out of and incidental to his employment at time he was injured, and he was not doing any reasonable things his employment contract expressly or impliedly permitted him to do); Ralphs Grocery Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 647, 652, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 161 (1997) (injury resulting from employer's back-to-work telephone call to employee at employee's home is not in course and scope of employment).

(n38)Footnote 34. Heaton v. Kerlan (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 716, 720, 166 P.2d 857 (injury that flows from prior employment-related injury within the course of employment despite fact that employee was not performing service at time of aggravation); Bethlehem Steel Co. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 382, 388-389, 161 P.2d 59 .

(n39)Footnote 35. California Casualty Indem. Exchange v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 461, 465-466, 132 P.2d 815 (employee injured on way to work in company-owned auto was within course of employment).

(n40)Footnote 36. Mitchell v. Hizer (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 499, 507-508, 140 Cal. Rptr. 790 .

(n41)Footnote 37. Dimmig v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 860, 868-869, 101 Cal. Rptr. 105, 495 P.2d 433 .

(n42)Footnote 38. See Employers' Liability Assurance Corp. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 567, 573, 99 P.2d 1089 ; Satchell v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 473, 477, 210 P.2d 867 (employee who drank poison thinking it was whiskey held within course of employment in situation where employer hadn't prevented employee's drinking at work though aware of it).

(n43)Footnote 39. Mitchell v. Hizer (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 499, 507, 140 Cal. Rptr. 790 .

(n44)Footnote 39.1. Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 354, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503 (fabric store employee who came to store on day off to sign condolence card and contribute money, who was injured assisting fellow employees by holding up falling shelf, was injured in course and scope of employment because she acted in furtherance of employer's business, did no more than reasonable employer would expect of responsible employee, and engaged in activity incidental to her employment, i.e., protecting employer's assets); see Laing v. Occidental Life Ins. Co. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 811, 816-817, 53 Cal. Rptr. 681 (in determining whether plant manager who undertook assistance with repairs on plant premises was injured in course of employment, fact he was on his way to baseball game and had not planned to work on day of injury was immaterial, because he acted in capacity as employee for benefit of employer); J.J. Newberry Co. v. Continental Cas. Co. (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 728, 729, 731-732, 40 Cal. Rptr. 509 (store manager was injured in scope of his employment and in custodial capacity when he returned to store after hours to make personal phone call in violation of orders, investigated light in stockroom, and suffered attack by burglars); Scott v. Pacific Coast Borax Co. (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 173, 176, 179-182, 294 P.2d 1039 (gas station employee who returned to work after hours for personal reasons and was injured assisting coworker fix gas pump sustained injuries in course of employment).

(n45)Footnote 40. San Francisco & S. R. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1927) 201 Cal. 597, 599-600, 258 P. 86 ; Auto Lite Battery Corp. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 629, 631, 176 P.2d 62 .

(n46)Footnote 41. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 241, 245, 169 Cal. Rptr. 285 .

(n47)Footnote 42. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 241, 245, 169 Cal. Rptr. 285 ; Williams v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 937, 940-942, 116 Cal. Rptr. 607 ; Auto Lite Battery Corp. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 629, 631-632, 176 P.2d 62 .

(n48)Footnote 43. See Westbrooks v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 249, 253, 252 Cal. Rptr. 26 (bus driver convicted of reckless driving while on assigned run for employer did not take him outside course of employment so as to deprive him of workers' compensation benefits for emotional injury sustained in near-accident resulting from reckless driving); Williams v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 937, 940-942, 116 Cal. Rptr. 607 (employee on delivery mission injured after high-speed chase in which he was attempting to outrun police was within course of employment).

(n49)Footnote 44. Williams v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 937, 940-942, 116 Cal. Rptr. 607 .

(n50)Footnote 45. Williams v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Board (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 937, 942, 116 Cal. Rptr. 607 .

(n51)Footnote 46. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 241, 246-247, 169 Cal. Rptr. 285 .

(n52)Footnote 47. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 241, 246-247, 169 Cal. Rptr. 285 .

(n53)Footnote 48. General Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 595, 600-601, 128 Cal. Rptr. 417, 546 P.2d 1361 ; California Casualty Indemnity Exchange v. Industrial Accident Commission (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 751, 754, 135 P.2d 158 ; Judson Mfg. Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission (1919) 181 Cal. 300, 302, 184 P. 1 ; but see State Department of Institutions v. Industrial Accident Commission (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 439, 441-442, 116 P.2d 79 (suggesting that employee remaining indefinitely on work premises after hours may be outside course of employment).

(n54)Footnote 49. Hinojosa v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 150, 158-159, 104 Cal. Rptr. 456, 501 P.2d 1176 ; cf. Church v. Arko (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 291, 299-300, 142 Cal. Rptr. 92 (criticizing use of respondeat superior tort cases and workers' compensation cases interchangeably in deciding going and coming issues) and Bailey v. Filco, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1552, 1562, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333 (workers' compensation cases not controlling precedent when liability is predicated upon respondeat superior principles) with Harris v. Trojan Fireworks Co. (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 157, 162-163, 174 Cal. Rptr. 452 (approving use of workers' compensation cases and tort cases interchangeably); see also Santa Rosa Junior College v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 345, 352, 220 Cal. Rptr. 94, 708 P.2d 673 (noting difficulties in applying going and coming rule); Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 922, 927, 232 Cal. Rptr. 257 ; see also Lab. Code § 3600.8 (applying "going and coming" rule to employees who participate in alternative commute programs).

(n55)Footnote 50. See, e.g., Pacific Indemnity Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 329, 336, 170 P.2d 18 .

(n56)Footnote 51. Price v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 559, 568-569, 209 Cal. Rptr. 674, 693 P.2d 254 .

(n57)Footnote 52. Lewis v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 559, 563, 125 Cal. Rptr. 353, 542 P.2d 225 .

(n58)Footnote 53. Makins v. Industrial Accident Commission (1926) 198 Cal. 698, 704, 247 P. 202 .

(n59)Footnote 54. General Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 595, 598, 128 Cal. Rptr. 417, 546 P.2d 1361 ; Freire v. Matson Navigation Co. (1941) 19 Cal. 2d 8, 11-13, 118 P.2d 809 (although means of access to employment not on premises of employer, employee injured because of special risk created by using such access is within course of employment).

(n60)Footnote 55. General Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 595, 600-601, 128 Cal. Rptr. 417, 546 P.2d 1361 ; Lefebvre v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 745, 749, 165 Cal. Rptr. 246 .

(n61)Footnote 56. Parks v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 585, 590, 190 Cal. Rptr.

158, 660 P.2d 382 (schoolteacher who was assaulted in her car just outside school premises while stalled in traffic blocked by school children was within special-risk exception); see also Johnson v. Stratlaw, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1156, 1162-1164, 274 Cal. Rptr. 363 (special risk exception applicable when minor employee died in automobile accident on way home from work after being required to work beyond statutorily prescribed hours for minors).

(n62)Footnote 57. General Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 595, 601, 128 Cal. Rptr. 417, 546 P.2d 1361 .

(n63)Footnote 58. Schreifer v. Industrial Accident Commission (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 289, 295, 38 Cal. Rptr. 352, 391 P.2d 832 ; L.A. Jewish Community Council v. Industrial Accident Commission (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 65, 69, 209 P.2d 991 .

(n64)Footnote 59. State Compensation Insurance Fund v. Industrial Accident Commission (1928) 89 Cal. App. 197, 199-200, 264 P.514 .

(n65)Footnote 60. See General Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 595, 601, 128 Cal. Rptr. 417, 546 P.2d 1361 .

(n66)Footnote 61. Shell Oil Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 426, 428, 18 Cal. Rptr. 540 . See City of Los Angeles v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 78, 84-86, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343 (workers' compensation judge erred in finding employee-accountant was in course of employment while away at convention for CPAs, where: employer did not require accountants to have CPA licenses and did not consider CPA license necessary to job; no points were gained toward hiring or promotion if accountant had CPA license; employer offered what it considered necessary training for its accountants; while some training offered by employer may have been credited toward CPA license, employer did not offer sufficient classes for CPA licensure; employer only motivated or encouraged CPA licensure as personal achievement by bonus salary, not as incentive to improve accountant's ability to do job; and employer derived no benefit from CPA license).

(n67)Footnote 62. County of Tulare v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1247, 1250-1254, 216 Cal. Rptr. 885 .

(n68)Footnote 63. County of Tulare v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1247, 1250-1253, 216 Cal. Rptr. 885 .

(n69)Footnote 64. Wilson v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 181, 184, 127 Cal. Rptr. 313, 545 P.2d 225 .

(n70)Footnote 65. Santa Rosa Junior College v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 345, 355-357, 220 Cal. Rptr. 94, 708 P.2d 673 .

(n71)Footnote 66. Santa Rosa Junior College v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 345, 355-357, 220 Cal. Rptr. 94, 708 P.2d 673 .

(n72)Footnote 67. Santa Rosa Junior College v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 345, 355-357, 220 Cal. Rptr. 94, 708 P.2d 673 .

(n73)Footnote 67.1. See Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1316, 1321-1330, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 587 (injury in Italy to employee of recreational vehicle manufacturer was not compensable despite employee's and wife's continuing interest and vigilance with respect to recreational vehicle designs and elements that might be of use to employer; injury resulted from automobile accident that occurred after employee had finished business travel in Germany and Italy for employer and was traveling in Italy back to Germany with his wife; there was no evidence employer expected or required employee to continue photographing recreational vehicles during personal travel, and fact that employer was aware of his plans and facilitated his travel arrangements was immaterial in absence of evidence that it did so because it expected employee to function as employee during personal portion of his trip or that it exercised any control over his route; although there was substantial evidence rental car involved in accident in Italy did have to be returned in Germany, where business trip began, and this was arrangement made by employer, there was no evidence arrangement was for particular benefit of employer).

(n74)Footnote 68. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. v. Industrial Accident Commission (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 756, 760, 172 P.2d 1 .

(n75)Footnote 69. Lockheed Aircraft Corp. v. Industrial Accident Commission (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 756, 758-759, 172 P.2d 1 .

(n76)Footnote 70. Fireman's Fund Indem. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 529, 531-532, 247 P.2d 707 ; Price v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 559, 567-571, 209 Cal. Rptr. 674, 693 P.2d 254 (applying number of theories in holding that employee hurt outside of employer's premises was entitled to workers' compensation); Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 528, 535-538, 163 Cal. Rptr. 750 (workers' compensation covers employee off-premises during "special errand" performed at specific request of employer).

(n77)Footnote 71. Reinert v. Industrial Accident Commission (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 349, 355-357, 294 P.2d 713 .

(n78)Footnote 72. Makins v. Industrial Accident Commission (1926) 198 Cal. 698, 703-704, 247 P.202 .

(n79)Footnote 73. Fireman's Fund Indemnity Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 335, 338, 143 P.2d 104 ; Gardner v. Industrial Accident Commission (1946) 73 Cal. App. 2d 361, 366, 166 P.2d 362 ; Griffin v. Industrial Accident Commission (1937) 19 Cal. App. 2d 727, 733, 66 P.2d 176 ; see discussion in [4], above.

(n80)Footnote 74. Dalgleish v. Holt (1952) 108 Cal. App. 2d 561, 566, 237 P.2d 553 . See City of Los Angeles v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 78, 83-84, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343 (workers' compensation judge erred in finding employee-accountant was in course of employment while away at convention for CPAs, by giving undue weight to fact that employer encouraged taking CPA courses by paying bonus, where employer did not require employee or any accountants to have CPA license, traveling to attend the convention for CPA credit was not expressly or impliedly authorized by employment contract, employer did not reimburse for CPA coursework but did reimburse for continuing education of other professionals in its employ, and employer did not benefit from CPA licensure and provided training necessary for its accountants).

(n81)Footnote 75. Dalgleish v. Holt (1952) 108 Cal. App. 2d 561, 566, 237 P.2d 553 .

(n82)Footnote 75.1. LaTourette v. W.C.A.B. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 644, 655-657, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 217, 951 P.2d 1184 (fatal bacterial infection developed during treatment for cardiac arrest occurring while on business trip did not arise out of employment).

(n83)Footnote 76. IBM Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 279, 282-283, 142 Cal. Rptr. 543 (holding that under required liberal construction of commercial traveler rule, employee injured while returning to temporary assignment base from visit to relatives was covered by commercial traveler rule).

(n84)Footnote 77. Leffert v. Industrial Accident Commission (1934) 219 Cal. 710, 714, 28 P.2d 911 ; State Comp. Insurance Fund v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 925, 927-928, 64 Cal. Rptr. 323, 434 P.2d 619 (employee injured while swimming in nearby canal off employer's premises during work break held to be acting within course of employment); Gutierrez v. Petoseed Co., Inc. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 766, 768-769, 163 Cal. Rptr. 313 (employee on lunch break on employer's premises); Lizama v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 363, 369-370, 115 Cal. Rptr. 267 (employee injured on employer's premises while using employer's tools for personal benefit after working hours held to be within course of employment); Toohy v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 98, 102, 107 Cal. Rptr. 773 (employee injured when hit by car during beer break off employer's premises held to be within course of employment).

(n85)Footnote 78. Gutierrez v. Petoseed Co., Inc. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 766, 768-769, 163 Cal. Rptr. 313 .

(n86)Footnote 78.1. See Mason v. Lake Dolores Group (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 822, 838-839, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 914 (employee's negligence action against employer for injury after park hours while using employer's water slide was not barred by workers' compensation exclusivity doctrine under personal comfort doctrine, because substantial evidence showed employer did not condone employee's use of slide but had expressly prohibited all its employees from using slides after park hours; it could not be inferred that use of slide was beneficial to employer or reasonably contemplated by employment, and jury could have reasonably concluded that use of slide was solely for employee's own personal benefit).

(n87)Footnote 79. Mission Insurance Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 50, 57, 148 Cal. Rptr. 292 .

(n88)Footnote 80. See Hinkle v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 587, 590-592, 221 Cal. Rptr. 40 ; County of Los Angeles v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 418, 421-423, 193 Cal. Rptr. 374 ; Rankin v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 857, 860-861, 95 Cal. Rptr. 275 (employee who intended to and was authorized to work on lunch hour could receive compensation when injured on way to obtain food to eat while working).

(n89)Footnote 81. Duncan v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 117, 120-121, 197 Cal. Rptr. 474 ; Wood Pontiac Cadillac v. Superior Court (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 810, 812-814, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 924 (employee injured in traffic accident during authorized lunch break was barred from suing employer in tort by virtue of exclusive remedy rule, when she was paid on commission basis and continued to accrue commissions during her authorized lunch break); McFadden v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 279, 281-283, 249 Cal. Rptr. 778 (following Duncan and holding that outside salaried salesman was entitled to compensation benefits for injuries sustained when car in which he was riding was struck by uninsured motorist while he was returning to employer's office from off-premises lunch break with his supervisor and a coemployee at which business had been discussed because (1) on numerous occasions salesman had lunch at which business was discussed with his coemployees; (2) his supervisor frequently joined them for lunch; (3) he was authorized to take unscheduled lunch breaks; (4) he was salaried; and (5) his employer had never notified him that his salary did not cover his meal periods and was not apportioned over entire workday).

(n90)Footnote 82. Price v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 559, 568-569, 209 Cal. Rptr. 674, 693 P.2d 254 .

(n91)Footnote 83. Duncan v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 117, 120-121, 197 Cal. Rptr. 474 .

(n92)Footnote 84. City of Los Angeles v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 78, 87, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343 (workers' compensation judge erred in finding employee-accountant was in course of employment while away at convention for CPAs, where employer did not require or recommend obtaining CPA license, did not reimburse for classes taken to obtain license, and offered necessary training for its accountants; and where less than 13 percent of accountants maintained CPA licenses so that CPA license was not contemplated by contract of employment, did not benefit employer by making employee perform his assigned tasks more effectively, and was appropriately labeled personal achievement bonus); Employers' Liability Assurance Corp. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 567, 573, 99 P.2d 1089 ; Pacific Indemnity Co. v. Industrial Accident Commission (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 499, 503-504, 81 P.2d 572 (attending union meeting outside course of employment); State Department of Institutions v. Industrial Accident Commission (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 439, 441-442, 116 P.2d 79 (employee returning to work from parking lot after hours as outside course of employment).

(n93)Footnote 85. Argonaut Insurance Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 669, 677-678, 55 Cal. Rptr. 810.

(n94)Footnote 86. Rosen v. Industrial Accident Commission (1966) 239 Cal. App. 2d 748, 750-754, 49 Cal. Rptr. 706; Aubin v. Kaiser Steel Corp. (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 658, 661-663, 8 Cal. Rptr. 497.

(n95)Footnote 87. State Compensation Insurance Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 643, 655, 184 Cal. Rptr. 111.

(n96)Footnote 88. State Compensation Insurance Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 643, 655, 184 Cal. Rptr. 111. See Vaught v. State of California (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1544-1549, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605 (exclusivity rule barred tort action against State by park ranger, who was injured as result of state's failure to complete repairs on house in which he and his wife were living, which was offered to ranger and his wife as inducement to accept new position; he was injured in course of employment, because residence in house was part of his compensation package, he resided in the house out of work necessity, and he used portion of house as his office; injury arose out of employment, even though he was injured on his personal day off, while engaged in activity having nothing to do with his employment as park ranger, because injury occurred while he resided on his employer's premises while engaged in activity incidental to his employment).

(n97)Footnote 89. Northstar at Tahoe v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1481, 1485, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475.

(n98)Footnote 90. Robbins v. Yellow Cab Co. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 811, 814, 193 P.2d 956; Bethlehem Steel Co. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 382, 388-389, 161 P.2d 59.

(n99)Footnote 91. Hinkle v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 587, 592, 221 Cal. Rptr. 40, disapproved on other grounds, Camper v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 679, 690 (injury sustained while employee returned from collecting paycheck at post office during lunch break not compensable).

(n100)Footnote 92. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9).

(n101)Footnote 93. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9); see also Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 356, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503; Ezzy v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 252, 258-259, 194 Cal. Rptr. 90. For a full discussion, see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Vol. 1, Ch. 4, § 4.25.

(n102)Footnote 93.1. Mason v. Lake Dolores Group (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 822, 835-838, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 914 (employee's negligence action against employer came within Lab. Code § 3600(a)(9) because, regardless of whether employee was off-duty when he was injured, his use of employer's water slide was not reasonable expectancy of his employment or activity expressly or impliedly required by his employment, since employer had expressly prohibited use of water slide at the time employee was injured).

(n103)Footnote 94. Wright v. Beverly Fabrics, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 346, 356-357, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 503 (both elements satisfied); Wilson v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 902, 907, 909, 239 Cal. Rptr. 719 (holding both requirements satisfied in case before the court); Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 922, 930-932, 232 Cal. Rptr. 257; Meyer v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1036, 1042-1043, 204 Cal. Rptr. 74; Ezzy v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 252, 258-259, 194 Cal. Rptr. 90; Kidwell v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1130, 1139, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 540 (highway patrol officer's belief that practicing long jump while at home was reasonable expectancy of her employment was reasonable as matter of law, since long jump was required element of annual physical fitness test administered by employer).

(n104)Footnote 95. City of Stockton v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1518-1527, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 474 (police officer who injured his leg while off duty, playing in pickup game of basketball at private facility, was not entitled to workers' compensation benefits, where evidence did not establish that officer believed that his employer expected him to participate in game of pickup basketball; rather, evidence showed only his belief that it was good idea for police officer to stay in good physical condition and his leap to conclusion that any physical activity in which officer chose to engage must have been covered by workers' compensation; and where even if there was evidence officer subjectively believed his employer expected him to play in pickup game of basketball, belief would not have been objectively reasonable).

17 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 3. Conditions of Workers' Compensation

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.23

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.23 Other Conditions of Compensation

[1] Intoxicated Employee

If an injury to an employee is caused by his or her intoxication by alcohol or by unlawful use of a controlled substance as defined in Health and Safety Code Section 11007, the conditions of workers' compensation are not satisfied,ⁿ¹ but the employee may pursue a tort action against his or her employer if one is available.ⁿ² Of course, recovery in tort may be limited by the fault attributable to the employee's intoxication under comparative fault principles.ⁿ³ If the employer served the alcohol, the employer's liability would also be limited by Civil Code Section 1714(b), (c) (consumption rather than furnishing of alcoholic beverages is the proximate cause of resulting injuries; social host not liable for furnishing alcoholic beverages) and Business and Professions Code Section 25602(b) (alcoholic beverage licensee not civilly liable for serving alcohol to intoxicated person), unless the employee is a minor who was obviously intoxicated.ⁿ⁴

[2] Physical Aggression by Employee

If an employee suffers an injury that arises out of an altercation in which the employee is the initial physical aggressor, the conditions of workers' compensation are not satisfied, but the employee remains free to pursue a tort action against his or her employer if one is available.ⁿ⁵

[3] Self-Inflicted Injury or Death

Intentionally self-inflicted injury or death takes an action outside the scope of workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁶ However, if the employee causes the self-injury by having acted rashly or impulsively, or even negligently or recklessly while in the course and scope of employment, the injury falls within the scope of workers' compensation.ⁿ⁷ Ordinarily, such conduct will preclude a tort recovery as well. In a rare case, however, a party may allege that a person's suicide is compensable in a wrongful death action if it resulted from the intentional infliction of emotional distress. In such a case, it should be noted that suicide may not be deemed self-inflicted if it results from an uncontrollable mental condition.ⁿ⁸

[4] Felonious Act by Employee

When the injury to the employee is caused by the commission of a felonious act by the injured employee, for which he or she has been convicted, workers' compensation benefits are not available.ⁿ⁹ As in the case of an injury arising from an altercation in which the injured employee is the initial physical aggressor,ⁿ¹⁰ it appears that the employee would be free to pursue a tort action against his or her employer.

[5] Employee Killed or Injured by Third Party

A workers' compensation claim may be filed if an employee is injured or killed by a third party in the course of employment. In such instances, no personal relationship or personal connection will be deemed to exist between the employee and the third party based only on a determination that the third party injured or killed the employee solely because of the third party's personal beliefs relating to his or her perception of the employee's protected characteristic.ⁿ¹¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI
Compensability
Course of Employment
General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI
Compensability
Injuries
General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI
Coverage
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 3602(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226. For discussion of comparative negligence generally, see Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 4 (Matthew Bender).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 25602.1 (alcoholic beverage licensee's liability for service to obviously intoxicated minor).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code §§ 3600(a)(7), 3602(c); Martinez v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1976) 15 Cal. 3d 982, 988, 127 Cal. Rptr. 150, 544 P.2d 1350 (one who first engages in physical conduct that reasonable person would perceive to be real, present, and apparent threat of physical harm is initial physical aggressor).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(5), (6).

(n7)Footnote 7. Smith v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 530, 539, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 186 (carelessness or contributory negligence of the injured does not break the causative connection unless such intervening conduct is the sole and exclusive cause of the injury).

(n8)Footnote 8. Argonaut Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 320, 325, 210 Cal. Rptr. 417.

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(8); see Westbrook v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 249, 253 n.4, 252 Cal. Rptr. 26.

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(7). For discussion, see [2], above.

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code 3600(c).

18 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 3. Conditions of Workers' Compensation

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.24

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.24 Claim for Compensation Filed After Notice of Termination

Except in the case of psychiatric injuries,ⁿ¹ if the claim for compensation is filed after notice of termination or layoff, including voluntary layoff, but not including voluntary resignations,ⁿ² and the claim is for an injury occurring prior to the time of notice of termination or layoff, no compensation is payable unless the employee demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that one or more of the following conditions apply:ⁿ³

1. The employer has notice of the injuryⁿ⁴ prior to the notice of termination or layoff.
2. The employee's medical records, existing prior to the notice of termination or layoff, contain evidence of the injury.
3. The date of injury, as specified in Labor Code Section 5411 (applicable in all cases except occupational disease or cumulative injury cases), is subsequent to the date of the notice of termination or layoff, but prior to the effective date of the termination or layoff.
4. The date of injury, as specified in Labor Code Section 5412 (applicable in occupational disease or cumulative injury cases), is subsequent to the date of the notice of termination or layoff.

A notice of termination or layoff that is not followed within 60 days by termination or layoff is not subject to the provisions described above, and these provisions do not apply until the employee receives a later notice of termination or layoff.ⁿ⁵ The issuance of frequent notices of termination or layoff to an employee is considered a bad faith personnel action and makes the provisions described in this section inapplicable to the employee.ⁿ⁶

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations Discipline, Layoff & Termination Workers' Compensation & SSDI Compensability General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Coverage General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 3208.3(e); § 20.05[1][b].

(n2)Footnote 2. CJS Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 294, 297-298, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 109 (holding Lab. Code § 3600(a)(10) does not apply to employees who resign voluntarily, explaining that specific applications of statute--termination or layoff--involve only employer-initiated separations and distinguishing "voluntary layoff," an involuntary reduction in force, from voluntary resignation, an employee-initiated action, but expressing no opinion on application of statute to constructive firings).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 3600(a)(10).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 5400 et seq.

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(10).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 3600(a)(10).

19 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 3. Conditions of Workers' Compensation

1-20 California Employment Law §§ 20.25 through 20.29

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 20.25[Reserved]

20 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 4. Claims and Enforcement

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.30

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.30 Procedure for Obtaining Benefits

[1] Notice of Injury

The first step in obtaining workers' compensation benefits is to provide the employer with written notice of the injury. The employee, or someone on the employee's behalf, must sign the notice. If the injury caused the death of the employee, the notice must be signed by or on behalf of a dependent of the employee. The notice must be served on the employer within 30 days after the date of the injury.ⁿ¹

Generally, the employee (or the dependents of a deceased employee) cannot maintain a claim for benefits unless notice of the injury has been timely served on the employer.ⁿ² However, the failure to give notice will not bar the claim if the employer was not in fact misled or prejudiced by the failure.ⁿ³ For example, if the employer obtains, from any source, sufficient knowledge of the injury or claimed injury to afford an opportunity to investigate the facts, that knowledge is the equivalent of service of written notice. For this purpose, knowledge obtained by the employer's managing agent, superintendent, foreperson, or other person in authority is imputed to the employer.ⁿ⁴

[2] Adjustment of Claim

[a] Employer's Duty to Provide Claim Form, Notice of Eligibility, and Other Information

Within one working day of receiving notice or knowledge of an injury that results in lost time beyond the employee's work shift at the time of injury or that results in medical treatment beyond first aid [see [1], above], the employer must provide the employee (or the dependents of a deceased employee) with a claim form and a notice of potential eligibility for benefits.^{n4.1} The claim form and notice of eligibility must be delivered to the employee personally or by first-class mail.ⁿ⁵

For this purpose, "first aid" is any one-time treatment, and any follow up visit for the purpose of observation, of minor scratches, cuts, burns, splinters, or other minor industrial injury. "Minor industrial injury" does not include serious exposure to a hazardous substance.n6

[b] Contents of Claim Form and Notice of Eligibility

The claim form must request all of the following information:n7

- The injured employee's name and address;
- The injured employee's social security number,
- The time and address where the injury occurred; and
- The nature of and part of the body affected by the injury.

The claim form must also prominently display the following statement:n8"Any person who makes or causes to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent material statement or material representation for the purpose of obtaining or denying workers' compensation benefits or payments is guilty of a felony."

Claim forms are available at district offices of the Employment Development Department and the Division of Workers' Compensation. However, use of the official forms is not mandatory. The employer may obtain forms from any other source.n9

Insofar as practicable, the notice of potential eligibility for benefits and the claim form should be a single document and instruct the injured employee to fully read the notice of potential eligibility. The notice must be easily understandable and available in both English and Spanish. The notice must include all of the following:n10

1. The procedure to be used to commence proceedings for the collection of compensation;
2. A description of the different types of workers' compensation benefits;
3. What happens to the claim form after it is filed;
4. The names of parties from whom the employee can obtain medical care for the injury;
5. The role and function of the primary treating physician;
6. The rights of an employee to select and change the treating physician pursuant to Labor Code Sections 3550(e), 4600;
7. Information on how an employee may get medical care while the claim is pending;
8. The protections against discrimination provided pursuant to Labor Code Section 132a; and
9. The following written statements:
 - A. You have a right to disagree with decisions affecting your claim;
 - B. You can obtain free information from an information and assistance officer of the state Division of Workers' Compensation, or you can hear recorded information and a list of local offices by calling (applicable information and assistance telephone number(s));

C. You can consult an attorney. Most attorneys offer one free consultation. If you decide to hire an attorney, his or her fee will be taken out of some of your benefits. For names of workers' compensation attorneys, call the State Bar of California at (telephone number of the State Bar of California's legal specialization program, or its equivalent).

Additional notice requirements are contained in the California Code of Regulations:¹¹ Under the regulations, within five working days of notice or knowledge of any injury, the employer must advise the employee of the compensation to which he or she may be entitled and the rights, benefits, and obligations under the workers' compensation law.¹² This advice must be in writing, in non-technical terms, available in both English and Spanish, and must include all of the following:¹³

- An explanation of an injured employee's rights to medical care and to select or change the treating physician;¹⁴
- An explanation of an injured employee's right to indemnity payments for disability or death, including information on the amount and frequency of those payments;
- An explanation of the nature and availability of vocation rehabilitation services;
- An explanation of the employee's protections against discrimination because of a work injury;
- An explanation of the procedures for claiming compensation, time limits for filing a claim, and methods to resolve disputes, including the employee's right to consult an Information and Assistance Officer or an attorney; and
- Where further information may be obtained, including an explanation of services available from an Information and Assistance Officer.

[c] Filing of Claim Form

The employee or his or her agent (or a deceased employee's dependent or the dependent's agent) must complete the claim form and file it with the employer. A claim form ordinarily is deemed filed when it is personally delivered to the employer or received by the employer by first-class or certified mail.¹⁵

The employer must provide a dated copy of the completed claim form to the employer's insurer and to the employee, dependent, or agent who filed the claim form.¹⁶

The claim form must be filed with the employer before the employee's entitlement to late payment supplements under Labor Code 4650(d), or before the employee's request for a medical evaluation under Labor Code Section 4060, 4061, or 4062.¹⁷ The period within which proceedings may be commenced for the collection of the benefits is one year from any of the following:¹⁸

1. The date of injury;
2. The expiration of any period covered by payment under Labor Code Section 4650 et seq.; or
3. The last date on which any benefits provided for by Labor Code Section 4600 et seq. were furnished.

However, if the employer fails to comply with regulations requiring employers to notify employees of procedures for making a workers' compensation claim, including the time limits for filing a claim,ⁿ¹⁹ the statute of limitations is tolled until the employee has that notice.ⁿ²⁰ For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 1994, filing the claim form with the employer tolls the time limitations for proceedings for the collection of the benefitsⁿ²¹ until the claim is denied by the employer or the injury becomes presumptively compensable by virtue of the employer's failure to deny liability.ⁿ²² For purposes of this tolling provision, a claim form is deemed filed when it is personally delivered to the employer or mailed to the employer by first-class or certified mail.ⁿ²³

[d] Employer's Response to Claim

If the employer does not reject liability within 90 days after the claim form is filed, the injury is presumed to be compensable.ⁿ²⁴ This presumption effectively shifts the burden of proof on the issue of compensability to the employer.ⁿ²⁵

The employer or its insurer is put to the burden of promptly investigating the claim and determining whether to contest liability only when the employee has filed the claim form. The investigation must be completed within 90 days of the claim form being filed.^{n25.1} An employer's breach of the duty to provide a claim form upon learning of an injury^{n25.2} does not trigger the 90-day period.^{n25.3}

An employer generally will be estopped to deny the 90-day period began running before the filing of a claim form only if each of the following is true:^{n25.4}

- (1) The employer, knowing the employee had suffered or was asserting an industrial injury, refused to provide a claim form, or misrepresented the availability of or the need for the employee to file a claim form.
- (2) The employee was actually misled into believing that no claim form was available or necessary and failed to file one for that reason.
- (3) Because of this reliance, the employee suffered some loss of benefits or setback as to the claim.

The employee need not show that the employer or the employer's agents consciously or deliberately set out to prevent or delay the employee's filing a claim.^{n25.5}

The presumption of compensability is rebuttable only by evidence discovered subsequent to the 90-day period.ⁿ²⁶ For this purpose, evidence that could have been discovered in the exercise of reasonable diligence during the 90-day period is treated as if it had been discovered during that period. Therefore, such evidence is ordinarily unavailable to rebut the presumption of compensability.ⁿ²⁷ This is true even if the employer paid benefits on the claim before denying liability subsequent to the 90-day rejection period.ⁿ²⁸

To reject liability within the 90-day period, the employer need not actually notify the employee of the rejection within that time period, so long as the claim itself was rejected within the 90 days.ⁿ²⁹

Within one working day after an employee files a claim form, the employer must authorize the provision of all treatment for the alleged injury and continue to provide the treatment until the date that liability for the claim is accepted or rejected. Until the date the claim is accepted or rejected, liability for medical treatment is limited to $10,000.^{n29.1} The provision of treatment does not give rise to a presumption of liability on the employer's part.^{n29.2}

[3] Adjudication by Workers' Compensation Appeals Board

[a] Need for Adjudication by Board

In a typical case, the employer's liability to provide benefits is clear, benefits are provided to the employee, and a formal adjudication by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board is not necessary. Board adjudication is usually necessary only if there is a dispute about the employer's liability or about the amount and nature of the benefits to which the employee is entitled.

Board proceedings are administrative hearings, usually held before workers' compensation judges, and are governed by the Labor Code³⁰ and administrative regulations.³¹ The person seeking adjudication by the Board is referred to as the "applicant," and the adverse party is the "defendant."³²

For detailed coverage of all aspects of Board proceedings, see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Chapters 24 and 25 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Application for Adjudication by Board

To commence a proceeding before the Board to collect workers' compensation benefits, the employee (or the dependent of a deceased employee) must file an application for adjudication.³³ Although the written notice of injury and claim forms filed with the employer are prerequisites to commencing a Board proceeding, the application for adjudication is the pleading that establishes the jurisdiction of the Board and commences the proceeding.³⁴

The application must be in writing and must conform to forms prescribed by the Appeals Board in its rules of practice and procedure. The application must simply but clearly and completely delineate all relevant matters of agreement and all issues of disagreement within the jurisdiction of the Board. The application must also provide any additional information that the Board properly determine necessary to expedite its hearing and determination of the claim.³⁵

The application for adjudication may be filed in any of the following locations:³⁶

- In the county where the injured employee or dependent of a deceased employee resides on the date of filing.
- In the county where the injury allegedly occurred, or, in cumulative trauma and industrial disease claims, where the last alleged injurious exposure occurred.
- In the county where the employee's attorney maintains his or her principal place of business, if the employee is represented by an attorney.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

If there is no local office in any of these counties, the application may be filed in the nearest office to satisfy the above requirements. If the application is filed in an office solely because it is in the county of the employee's attorney's principal place of business, the defendant may object within 30 days of notice of this selection and request that venue be lodged in another appropriate office. Commentary by Robert Levin.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYERS' PERSPECTIVE:

While it is usually the employee who files the Application For Adjudication of Claim, there is a line on the form for other parties to use when filing the application. Those other parties might be a doctor supplying treatment, a group medical provider or even the employer or carrier. The line is called: "APPLICANT, IF OTHER THAN INJURED EMPLOYEE." Commentary by John W. Miller.

Along with the application, the applicant and his or her attorney must sign and file a statement that they have not violated Labor Code Section 139.3(pertaining to improper medical referrals) and have not offered, delivered, received, or accepted any consideration as compensation or inducement for any referred examination or evaluation. The signatures on the statement must be made under penalty of perjury.n37

If the applicant is represented by an attorney or other representative, the Board will provide the attorney or representative with a conformed copy of the application, showing the date of filing and the case number. The applicant's attorney or representative must forthwith serve a copy of the conformed application on all other parties to the claim.n38

If the applicant is unrepresented, a copy of the conformed application will be served on all adverse parties by the Appeals Board.n39

[c] Answer

If the defendant disputes the claim, the defendant must file and serve an answer within 10 days after the application is served.n40

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

As a matter of practice, generally the time limit for filing an answer is not enforced as long as all parties and counsel are aware of the issues. In many instances, the issues are first put on a form or pleading at the time of the mandatory settlement conference, or first hearing. Commentary by John W. Miller.

The answer, like the application, must be in writing and must conform to forms prescribed by the Appeals Board in its rules of practice and procedure. The answer must simply but clearly and completely delineate all relevant matters of agreement and all issues of disagreement within the jurisdiction of the Board. The answer must also provide any additional information that the Board properly determines necessary to expedite its hearing and determination of the claim.n41

Along with the answer, the defendant and the defendant's attorney must sign and file a statement that they have not violated Labor Code Section 139.3and have not offered, delivered, received, or accepted any consideration as compensation or inducement for any referred examination or evaluation. The signatures on the statement must be made under penalty of perjury.n42

If the defendant fails to appear or answer, no default will be taken, but the Board will conduct a hearing as it deems proper.n43

[d] Hearing and Award

Unless the claim is settled by the parties,n44 a workers' compensation judge will conduct a hearingn45 and render an award.n46 The hearing will ordinarily take place within 75 days after a party has filed a declaration of readiness to proceed.n47 Findings and an award will be filed and served on the parties within 30 days after the case is submitted.n48 The findings and award must include a summary of evidence that itself includes a comprehensive and unbiased summary of each witness's testimony to be reviewable by the Board.n48.1 Within 60 days after the filing of the judge's findings and award, the Appeals Board may confirm, adopt, modify or set aside the findings or award. If it sets aside the judge's decision, the Board may, with or without further proceedings, and with or without notice, enter its order, findings, decision, or award based on the record in the case.n49

The award may fix and determine the total amount of compensation to be paid and specify the manner of payment, or it may fix and determine the weekly disability payment to be made and order payment during the continuance of disability.n50 If it is established that the applicant has suffered a compensable injury, but it is not proved that any disability has resulted, the judge may award a nominal disability indemnity if it appears that disability is likely to result

at a future time.ⁿ⁵¹

The Appeals Board has continuing jurisdiction over its awards. At any time, on notice and hearing, the Board may rescind, alter, or amend an award for good cause. This power includes the right to review, grant or regrant, diminish, increase, or terminate, within the limits prescribed by law, any compensation awarded, on the grounds that the disability of the person in whose favor the award was made has either recurred, increased, diminished, or terminated.ⁿ⁵² However, Lab. Code § 5804 sets an outer limit of five years for both the employer to challenge an award and for a claimant to reopen it.ⁿ⁵³

[e] Reconsideration by Workers' Compensation Appeals Board

Any person aggrieved directly or indirectly by any final order, decision, or award made and filed by the Appeals Board or a workers' compensation judge under any provision of the Workers' Compensation Act may petition the Appeals Board for reconsideration concerning to any matters determined or covered by the final order, decision, or award, and specified in the petition for reconsideration. The petition must be made within the time and in the manner specified in *Labor Code Section 5900 et seq.*ⁿ⁵⁴

A petition for reconsideration may be made within 20 days after the service of such an order, decision, or award, only if one of the following grounds exists:ⁿ⁵⁵

- That by the order, decision, or award made and filed by the Appeals Board or the workers' compensation judge, the Appeals Board acted without or in excess of its powers.
- That the order, decision, or award was procured by fraud.
- That the evidence does not justify the findings of fact.
- That the petitioner has discovered new evidence material to him or her which he or she could not with reasonable diligence have discovered and produced at the hearing.
- That the findings of fact do not support the order, decision, or award.

Additionally, at any time within 60 days after the filing of an order, decision, or award made by a workers' compensation judge and the accompanying report, the Appeals Board may, on its own motion, grant reconsideration.ⁿ⁵⁶

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Evidentiary procedure under the Workers' Compensation Act is less formal than in civil trials. Labor Code Section 5709, for example, provides that no informality of procedure or use of evidence inadmissible under common law or statutory rules of evidence shall invalidate any decision. However, because compensation litigation involves adversary proceedings, the basic principles of due process of the law must be meticulously followed, and there must be consistency regarding the record, the findings and the decision.ⁿ⁵⁷ Thus, in County of Sacramento v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ⁵⁸ the court of appeal concluded that a stipulation reached after a mandatory settlement conference regarding the scope of the issues presented for determination at trial was binding, absent good cause to set it aside, even though it was demonstrably unfavorable to the applicant. Good cause, not poor outcome, is the standard for determining whether to disregard a stipulation. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

When the workers' compensation judge amends an award before a petition for reconsideration is filed, the time for seeking reconsideration runs from the date of the original order when the amendment is clerical in nature. When the amendment effects a substantial or material change in the award or involves the exercise of a judicial function or judicial discretion, the time runs from the date of the amended order.^{n58.1}

[4] Judicial Review

The California Constitution provides that all workers' compensation decisions are subject to review by the California appellate courts and authorizes the Legislature to fix and control the manner of such review.ⁿ⁵⁹ The Legislature has provided that any person affected by an order, decision, or award of the Appeals Board may, within the specified time limit, apply to the Supreme Court or to the court of appeal for the appellate district in which he or she resides for a writ of review, for the purpose of inquiring into and determining the lawfulness of the original or reconsidered order, decision, or award.ⁿ⁶⁰ The application must be made within 45 days after a petition for reconsideration is denied or, if a petition is granted or reconsideration is had on the appeal board's own motion, within 45 days after the filing of the order, decision, or award following reconsideration.ⁿ⁶¹ In some instances, petitions under Lab. Code § 5950 are appropriate to challenge interim WCAB orders.ⁿ⁶² This 45-day time limitation is jurisdictional and is not extended by 5 days pursuant to the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 1013(a) when notice of the Appeals Board's decision on reconsideration is served on the parties by mail.ⁿ⁶³

In considering a petition for a writ of review, the appellate court's authority is limited to determining whether the evidence, viewed in light of the entire record, supports the Appeals Board's decision. The appellate court may not reweigh the evidence or decide disputed questions of fact. However, the court is not bound to accept the Appeals Board's factual findings if these findings are unreasonable, illogical, improbable, or inequitable when viewed in light of the overall statutory compensation scheme. Moreover, the court is entitled to decide questions of statutory interpretation.ⁿ⁶⁴

Although the writ of review is the only procedure available for securing review, reversal, correction, or annulment of Appeals Board orders, decisions, or awards made and entered under the Workers' Compensation Act,ⁿ⁶⁵ other appellate procedures may be used for other purposes. For example, the workers' compensation law expressly provides that a writ of mandate shall lie from the Supreme Court or district courts of appeal "in all proper cases."ⁿ⁶⁶ A writ of mandate may be used to compel the performance of an act that the law specially enjoins.ⁿ⁶⁷ Although rarely used, a writ of mandate may be used, for example, to control abuse of the discretionary powers of an administrative agency such as the Appeals Board.ⁿ⁶⁸ However, if the Appeals Board fails to act in connection with a final decision, a writ of review is available and mandamus would not be necessary.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Benefit Determinations General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 5400; Lab. Code §§ 5411, 5412 (date of injury defined).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 5400.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 5403; see Honeywell v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24, 33, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 179, 105 P.3d 544 (employee bears initial burden of notifying employer of injury, unless notice is unnecessary because employer already knows of injury or claimed injury from other sources); Beckstead v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 787, 791, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 254 (inadequate notice by employee who, unrepresented by counsel, alleged specific rather than cumulative injury and misdated date of injury does not bar action when employers indisputably knew that employee suffered from cumulative injury and could show no prejudice).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 5402(a).

(n5)Footnote 4.1. See Honeywell v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24, 33, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 179, 105 P.3d 544 (once worker gives employer notice of injury, employer bears burden of informing worker of possible compensation rights and providing claim form, but it is up to employee whether and when to initiate claim for compensation by filing prescribed form with employer).

(n6)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 5401(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 5401(a); see Lab. Code § 6302(i) ("serious exposure" defined).

(n8)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 5401(a).

(n9)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 5401.7.

(n10)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 5401(a).

(n11)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 5401(b).

(n12)Footnote 11. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9882.

(n13)Footnote 12. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9882(a).

(n14)Footnote 13. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9882(b).

(n15)Footnote 14. But see Tenet/Centinela Hospital Medical Center v. Rushing (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1041, 1048, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 858 (under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9785, injured worker could not unilaterally change primary treating physician after doctor declared injury permanent and stationary, released her to return to work, and prescribed no further doctor-related treatment and visits).

(n16)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 5401(c), (d).

(n17)Footnote 16. Lab. Code § 5401(c).

(n18)Footnote 17. Lab. Code § 5401(d).

(n19)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 5405; see Lab. Code § 5412 (defining date of injury).

(n20)Footnote 19. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 9882; [b], above.

(n21)Footnote 20. California Ins. Guarantee Assn. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 853, 859-864, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 868 (statutory period was tolled by employer's failure to advise injured employee of his rights under workers' compensation law, and insurer failed to show that it carried its burden to prove worker had actual knowledge of his rights more than one year before he filed claim for benefits); Galloway v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 880, 887-888, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 374 (claimant was prejudiced by failure to receive required notice of potential benefits and time limits in which to file claim and, thus, statute of limitations was tolled until claimant became aware of time limits).

(n22)Footnote 21. See Lab. Code §§ 5405, 5406.

(n23)Footnote 22. Lab. Code § 5401(d); see Lab. Code § 5402 (presumption of compensability if employer fails to deny liability within 90 days of filing).

(n24)Footnote 23. Lab. Code § 5401(d).

(n25)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 5402(b).

(n26)Footnote 25. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 675, 683, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660.

(n27)Footnote 25.1. Honeywell v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24, 33, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 179, 105 P.3d 544.

(n28)Footnote 25.2. Lab. Code § 5401(a). For discussion of the employer's obligation to provide the claim form, see [a], above.

(n29)Footnote 25.3. Honeywell v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24, 35, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 179, 105 P.3d 544.

(n30)Footnote 25.4. Honeywell v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24, 37, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 179, 105 P.3d 544.

(n31)Footnote 25.5. Honeywell v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 24, 37, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 179, 105 P.3d 544.

(n32)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 5402(b).

(n33)Footnote 27. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 675, 684, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660; but see James v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1053, 1056-1057, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392 (failure to reject liability within 90 days does not prevent employer from asserting, under Lab. Code § 3208.3(d), that psychiatric injury is not compensable during first six months of employment).

(n34)Footnote 28. Williams v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1265-1266, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 798 (employer paid benefits for over three years before denying liability based on information available during 90-day rejection period; employer argued that application of section 5402 penalized it for paying immediate benefits; court held application of section 5402 penalized employer for not conducting investigation within 90-day period).

(n35)Footnote 29. Rodriguez v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1433, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 713 (noting that failure to provide timely notice may hamper efforts to prove that timely rejection was indeed made).

(n36)Footnote 29.1. Lab. Code § 5402(c).

(n37)Footnote 29.2. Lab. Code § 5402(d).

(n38)Footnote 30. Lab. Code § 5300 et seq. See Lab. Code § 5310 (workers' compensation judges have "the powers, jurisdiction, and authority granted by law, by the order of appointment, and by the rules of the [Workers' Compensation Appeals Board].") See also Allison v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 654, 664, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 915 (workers' compensation judges have authority to decide discovery disputes and, thus, to compel answers to deposition questions).

(n39)Footnote 31. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10300 et seq.

(n40)Footnote 32. Lab. Code § 5503.

(n41)Footnote 33. Lab. Code § 5500; Lab. Code § 5501 (application may be filed by any party in interest, his or her attorney, or other representative authorized in writing).

(n42)Footnote 34. Lab. Code § 5500 (no application required if claim form was filed for injury occurring during on or after January 1, 1990, and before January 1, 1994).

(n43)Footnote 35. Lab. Code § 5500.

(n44)Footnote 36. Lab. Code § 5501.5(a).

(n45)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 4906(g).

(n46)Footnote 38. Lab. Code § 5501.

(n47)Footnote 39. Lab. Code § 5501.

(n48)Footnote 40. Lab. Code §§ 5500, 5505.

(n49)Footnote 41. Lab. Code § 5500.

(n50)Footnote 42. Lab. Code § 4906(g).

(n51)Footnote 43. Lab. Code § 5506.

(n52)Footnote 44. See Lab. Code § 5502(e) (mandatory settlement conference).

(n53)Footnote 45. See Lab. Code §§ 5502, 5504, 5700 et seq.

(n54)Footnote 46. See Lab. Code § 5800 et seq.

(n55)Footnote 47. Lab. Code § 5502(e).

(n56)Footnote 48. Lab. Code §§ 5313, 5800.5.

(n57)Footnote 48.1. See Sharareh v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 189, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 147, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 1726, *4-*12 (certified for partial publication); because Lab. Code § 5313 and 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 10566 unambiguously require WCJs to prepare findings and an order with a summary of evidence, and an arbitrator acting as WCJ assumes all responsibilities and duties of WCJ under Lab. Code § 5272, Board correctly held that arbitrator erred in failing to prepare summary of evidence.

(n58)Footnote 49. Lab. Code § 5315.

(n59)Footnote 50. Lab. Code § 5801.

(n60)Footnote 51. Lab. Code § 5802.

(n61)Footnote 52. Lab. Code § 5803; see Barnes v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 679, 687-690, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 638, 2 P.3d 1180 (continuing jurisdiction includes employer's right to challenge whether particular treatment is justified under award for industrial injury).

(n62)Footnote 53. See Barnes v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 679, 687-690, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 638, 2 P.3d 1180 .

(n63)Footnote 54. Lab. Code § 5900(a).

(n64)Footnote 55. Lab. Code § 5903.

(n65)Footnote 56. Lab. Code § 5900.

(n66)Footnote 57. See, e.g., Rucker v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 151, 157-158, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 852 (workers' compensation judge violated injured employee's due process rights by unilaterally enlarging the findings after motion for reconsideration, without affording opportunity to present evidence on additional findings).

(n67)Footnote 58. County of Sacramento v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 1114, 1121, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 290.

(n68)Footnote 58.1. Nestle Ice Cream Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1104, 1108-1111, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340 (where workers' compensation judge's amendment correcting names of parties in text and increasing rate of disability and vocational rehabilitation allowance effected substantial and material change in award and amounted to judicial act, rather than mere correction of clerical error, employer's petition for reconsideration filed 20 days after amended award was filed and served was timely).

(n69)Footnote 59. Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4.

(n70)Footnote 60. Lab. Code §§ 5810, 5950.

(n71)Footnote 61. Lab. Code § 5950.

(n72)Footnote 62. See Maranian v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1079-1081, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 418 (statutory scheme and its objectives better served by permitting interim appeals of WCAB decisions resolving issues crucial to the employee's right to receive benefits).

(n73)Footnote 63. Malloy v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1658, 1660-1662, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 820; Southwest Airlines v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1421, 1423-1431, 286 Cal. Rptr. 347.

(n74)Footnote 64. Western Growers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 227, 233, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26.

(n75)Footnote 65. See Lab. Code §§ 5810, 5950, 5955.

(n76)Footnote 66. Lab. Code § 5955.

(n77)Footnote 67. Code Civ. Proc. § 1085.

(n78)Footnote 68. See Fidelity & Casualty Co. of New York v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 1009, 163 Cal. Rptr. 339.

21 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 4. Claims and Enforcement

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.31

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.31 Penalty for Unjustified Delay in Payment of Benefits

[1] Generally

Labor Code Section 5814, which provides for a penalty for the employer's unjustified delay in the payment of benefits, has been applied to virtually all types of workers' compensation benefits, including temporary and permanent disability indemnity.ⁿ¹ Until June 1, 2004, Labor Code Section 5814 provided that when payment of compensation was unreasonably delayed or refused, either before or after the issuance of an award, the full amount of the order, decision, or award was to be increased by ten percent. The section also provided that the delay or refusal constituted good cause under Lab. Code § 5803 to rescind, alter, or amend the order, decision, or award for the purpose of making the increase provided for under section 5814. The section further provided that the question of delay and the reasonableness of the cause of the delay must be determined by the appeals board in accordance with the facts.ⁿ² Whether a delay is unreasonable is usually a question of fact, and a court must give deference to the appeals board's finding on the issue.ⁿ³ However, a court is not bound to accept the board's factual findings if they are unreasonable and do not withstand scrutiny in the light of the entire record. Nor is a court required to accept the board's factual findings if it determines that an inequitable result would occur when the entire record is examined for fairness, reasonableness, and proportionality in the overall scheme of the workers' compensation law and the purposes the law seeks to accomplish.^{n3.1}

Operative June 1, 2004, and applicable to all injuries without regard to whether the injury occurred before, on, or after June 1, 2004,^{n3.2} Labor Code Section 5814 provides that when payment of compensation has been unreasonably delayed or refused, either before or after the issuance of an award, the amount of the payment unreasonably delayed or refused will be increased up to 25 percent or $10,000, whichever is less.ⁿ⁴ The appeals board must use its discretion to accomplish a fair balance and substantial justice between the parties.^{n4.1} The payment of an increased award pursuant to these provisions must be reduced by any amount paid under Lab. Code § 4650(d) on the same unreasonably delayed or refused benefit payment.^{n4.2} If the employer discovers a potential violation before an employee claiming a penalty, the employer may pay a self-imposed penalty in the amount of 10 percent of the amount of the payment unreasonably delayed or refused, along with the amount of the payment delayed or refused, within 90 days of the date of the discovery. This self-imposed penalty is in lieu of the 25 percent or $10,000 penalty.^{n4.3} Upon the approval of a compromise and release, findings and awards, or stipulations and orders by the appeals board, it must be conclusively presumed that accrued claims for penalty have been resolved, regardless of whether a petition for penalty has been filed, unless the claim for penalty is expressly excluded by the terms of the order or award.^{n4.4} Upon the submission of any issue for determination at a regular trial hearing, it must be conclusively presumed that an accrued claim for penalty in connection with the benefit at issue was resolved, regardless of whether a petition for penalty has been filed, unless the issue of penalty is also submitted or is expressly excluded in the statement of issues being submitted.^{n4.5}

As a direct comparison, under former section 5814, increases in compensation were based on unreasonable delay in any part of the specie of benefit awarded, and computed at the rate of 10 percent of the specie of benefit awarded. New section 5814 provides that increases are based on the actual amount of the unreasonably delayed compensation, and are computed at the rate of up to 25 percent of that compensation, with a maximum of $10,000.^{n4.6}

Former section 5814 became inoperative and unenforceable on June 1, 2004. New section 5814 became applicable to all injuries in then-pending cases. Although the bill which codified new section 5814 provided that the legislation applied prospectively to pending cases, new section 5814(h), which provides that new section 5814 applies to all injuries without regard to whether the injury occurred before, on, or after the operative date of new section 5814, was an exception to the bill's general rule of prospective application.^{n4.7}

The burden is on the employer to establish that a delay is reasonable.ⁿ⁵ Assessment of a penalty under section 5814 is mandatory if there is a finding of unreasonable delay.ⁿ⁶ However, no unreasonable delay in the provision of medical treatment may be found when the employer has authorized treatment in a timely manner and the only dispute concerns payment of a billing submitted by a physician or medical provider as provided in Labor Code § 4603.2.ⁿ⁷ The purpose of Labor Code Section 5814 is to encourage employers to make prompt payments by making delay costly.ⁿ⁸ It is designed to safeguard employees' rights, not employers' rights.ⁿ⁹

The penalty must be applied to the full amount of the award for the class of compensation for which the payment was unreasonably delayed or refused, without deduction or credit for any timely preaward payments made by the employer.ⁿ¹⁰ Section 5814 makes no provision for any deductions or credits for payments made by the employer, including a deduction or credit for the employer's timely preaward payments.ⁿ¹¹ Moreover, the penalty for unreasonable delay pursuant to Labor Code § 5814 should be assessed against all compensable medical benefits, including those paid prior to and in anticipation of an award, despite any settlement discharging claims.ⁿ¹² Multiple penalties were permitted under former Labor Code Section 5814 for delay or non-payment of benefits only when the unreasonable delay or refusal of those benefits was attributable to separate and distinct acts by an employer, and the employee gave the employer prior notice of his or her intention to seek separate penalties for each act.ⁿ¹³ The California Supreme Court held, however, that an employer's unreasonable termination of pre-award temporary disability benefits did not become a separate and distinct act supporting an additional penalty each time a benefits check should have been paid subsequent to the termination, despite the fact that the employee gave the employer prior notice of her intent to seek multiple penalties.ⁿ¹⁴ The Supreme Court reasoned that until the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board made an award or another legally significant event occurred that established the employer's liability, the employer acted under a good faith belief that its conduct was justified. Thus, since the termination of pre-award temporary disability payments resulted from a single unreasonable act by the employer before an award was made, and no legally significant event establishing the employer's liability followed that act, Labor Code Section 5814 authorized only one penalty.ⁿ¹⁵

Under new section 5814, compensation based on an agreed medical examiner opinion and a stipulation to benefits may result in multiple increases in compensation if compensation after both events is unreasonably delayed.^{n15.1}

Labor Code Section 5814 is both a remedial and a penalty statute. The purpose of the remedial aspect is to facilitate the injured employee's return to work as quickly as possible. The purpose of the penalty aspect is to compel the employer to comply with the law fully and promptly.ⁿ¹⁶ Accordingly, when penalties are assessed in the workers' compensation setting, the California Supreme Court has cautioned that the appeals board "should proceed with a view toward achieving a fair balance between the right of the employee to prompt payment of compensation benefits, and the avoidance of the imposition upon the employer or [insurance] carrier of harsh and unreasonable penalties."¹⁷

In determining whether an employer's delay in payment is unreasonable under Labor Code Section 5814, the Court has distinguished between cases involving the employer's intentional refusal to pay (see [3], below) and those involving an inadvertent failure to pay (see [2], below).

Nothing in Section 5814 can be construed to create a civil cause of action.^{17.1} Further, notwithstanding any other provision of law, no action may be brought to recover penalties under Section 5814 more than two years from the date the payment of compensation was due.^{17.2}

[2] Employer's Inadvertent Failure to Pay

In State Compensation Insurance Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,¹⁸ the Supreme Court held that "a reasonably short delay, attributable to human error cannot, standing alone, be considered unreasonable."¹⁹ In that case, a clerical error recording the employer's change of address for that of the employee led to a one-week delay in the employee's benefit check for her temporary disability payment.²⁰

The Court pointed out that its scope of review is limited to whether the board's decision "was unreasonable" and supported by "substantial evidence," while keeping "an eye on whether the Board's decision represents a fair balance between the interests of the employee and employer."²¹ With those standards in mind, the Court opined that if a reasonably short delay attributable to human error could be considered unreasonable, it would defeat the distinction between the penalty provided for in Labor Code Section 5814, which requires a heightened showing of unreasonableness, and the penalty provided for in Section 4650, which does not require such a showing and which has a lesser monetary sanction.²² The Court cited with approval a court of appeal case which held that a short delay caused by the realities of business cannot alone be considered unreasonable and that a different conclusion would convert the Section 5814 penalty into a strict liability penalty, which would be contrary to the Legislature's intentions.²³ The Court noted that the length of the delay, the size of the late payment, and whether the employer or insurer is adequately staffed for the anticipated work load were all factors for consideration.²⁴

The Court distinguished cases²⁵ that involved the employer's intentional refusal to pay, as opposed to an inadvertent failure to pay.²⁶ The Court, therefore, disregarded language in an earlier case to the effect that the only satisfactory excuse for delay in payment of benefits is genuine doubt from a legal or medical standpoint,²⁷ and held that that opinion was not intended to address the universe of potential factual circumstances which could give rise to a delay in payment, but only the discrete situation in which an employer intentionally refuses to pay.²⁸ Nevertheless, although a delay may be explainable, it is not necessarily reasonable.²⁹

Whether a given delay is unreasonable does not depend solely on the number of days the employer withheld payment, but rather on the totality of the circumstances. The reason for the employer's action or inaction plays an important role. Thus, in County of Sacramento v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd.,³⁰ the court applied the fair balance test and found that the appeals board erred in assessing a Section 5814 penalty for an eight-day delay in paying death benefits resulting from a clerical error. In County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,³¹ applying the fair balance test, the court reviewed the totality of circumstances and determined that a three-week delay in mailing a check for medical benefits was not unreasonable. Even though the employer could not explain the delay, uncontradicted evidence in the record gave rise to the inference that the delay was inadvertent. Specifically, the employer took prompt corrective action as soon as it became aware that the check was not mailed to the employee. There was no history of improper processing of benefit payments or evidence of institutional neglect, such as repeated mistakes or inadequate personnel or training. The parties' agreement did not contain a timetable for payment; and the record indicated the checks were not mailed to the employee on any particular date, but rather from four to five weeks after each quarter ended. The employee also contributed to the delay by failing to notify his employer that the check had not arrived within the usual four to five weeks. Imposing a ten percent penalty would have resulted in a windfall to the employee, grossly disproportionate to the inadvertent delay, and would have upset the balance of fairness. Finally, the court applied the 60-day time limit in Labor Code Section 4603.2.ⁿ³²

[3] Employer's Intentional Refusal to Pay

In cases involving an intentional refusal to pay, the only satisfactory excuse for delay in payment of disability benefits, whether before or after an award, is genuine medical or legal doubt regarding liability for benefits.ⁿ³³ Although Labor Code Section 5814 is denominated a penalty, it is to be interpreted liberally; thus, the employer has the burden of presenting substantial evidence on which such a finding of doubt may be based.ⁿ³⁴ Genuine doubt has been found when, for example, the employer refuses to pay the remainder of the benefits owed because it is entitled to a credit against such remainder.ⁿ³⁵

The fact that an employer is able to generate some conflicting medical evidence is not in itself sufficient to justify withholding of payments.ⁿ³⁶ The fact that an employer has waited until the expiration of the appeal period before making benefit payments is also not a sufficient justification for delay to avoid the penalty under Section 5814.ⁿ³⁷ Another case has held that an employer could not have reasonably entertained a genuine doubt regarding its obligation to allow an applicant to change her choice of treating physicians when several denial of writ cases and standard California texts on workers' compensation discussed an employee's right to select a treating physician.ⁿ³⁸

[4] Exemptions From Penalty

The Uninsured Employers Fund, also called the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund (UEBTF), is exempt from payment of the ten percent penalty under Labor Code Section 5814 by virtue of Labor Code Section 3716.2, which provides that the Fund is not liable for any penalties, including penalties for its own unreasonable delay in paying benefits to an injured employee with whom it has stipulated to pay benefits.ⁿ³⁹ The limitation of liability specified by section 3716.2 also precludes the imposition of a sanction against the UEBTF that otherwise could be imposed under Labor Code section 5813 against a party, the party's attorney, or both, to pay any reasonable expenses, including attorney fees and costs, incurred by another party as a result of bad-faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or solely intended to cause unnecessary delay and to pay, as "additional sanctions," an amount not exceeding $ 2,500 to the General Fund of the State Treasury.ⁿ⁴⁰

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Moulton v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 837, 842, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 175 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Former Lab. Code § 5814.

(n3)Footnote 3. County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 869, 874, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 , citing Kampner v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 376, 150 Cal. Rptr. 222 .

(n4)Footnote 3.1. County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 869, 874, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 , citing Chu v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1176, 1182 ;

see also Henry v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 981, 985 .

(n5)Footnote 3.2. See McCarthy v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1230, 1234-1238, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 909 (new section 5814 applied to penalties imposed after June 1, 2004, even though they were imposed before January 1, 2005, which was date on which old § 5814 was repealed, where applicant was still litigating her legal claims when she petitioned WCAB for reconsideration of WCJ's findings in January 2005, and petitioned court of appeal for writ of review from WCAB's denial of her petition; in amendment of § 5814 providing that former § 5814 would become "inoperative" on June 1, 2004, and was "repealed" as of January 1, 2005, Legislature intended "inoperative" to mean "unenforceable" so that (1) in event new § 5814 was determined to be unconstitutional or otherwise unenforceable, former § 5814 could be reinstated without delay occasioned by introduction of new legislation, (2) delay in implementation of new § 5814 allowed injured workers and employers to conclude some matters under former § 5814, and (3) by delaying inoperative status of former § 5814 and operative status of new § 5814, Legislature provided additional period to avoid two-year statute of limitations created by new § 5814(g)), approving WCAB decision in Abney v. Aera Energy, Liberty Mutual Ins. Co. (2004) 69 Cal. Comp. Cases 1552 .

(n6)Footnote 4. See McCarthy v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1230, 1232, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 909 (if former § 5814 applies, applicant's entire award of temporary disability benefits, past, present and future, is increased by 10 percent penalty; under new § 5814(a), penalty is assessed only against amount of payment delayed or refused).

(n7)Footnote 4.1. Lab. Code § 5814(a).

(n8)Footnote 4.2. Lab. Code § 5814(d).

(n9)Footnote 4.3. Lab. Code § 5814(b). See New United Motors Manufacturing, Inc. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1533, 1536-1540, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 200 (WCAB erred in imposing 25% penalty under Lab. Code § 5814(a) on employer who had already paid self-imposed 10% penalty under Lab. Code § 5814(b); application of § 5814(b) is not limited to employer discovering potential violation before employee, but to employer discovering potential violation before employee claims penalty; employer unreasonably delayed payment for only 47 days and then made payments and included 10% self-imposed penalty after receiving notice of interruption in applicant's benefits).

(n10)Footnote 4.4. Lab. Code § 5814(c).

(n11)Footnote 4.5. Lab. Code § 5814(c).

(n12)Footnote 4.6. Green v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1432 n.2, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 .

(n13)Footnote 4.7. Green v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1437-1443, 26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 .

(n14)Footnote 5. County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 869, 874, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 , citing Kerley v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 223, 227, 93 Cal. Rptr. 192, 481 P.2d 200 .

(n15)Footnote 6. County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 869, 874, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 .

(n16)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 5814(e).

(n17)Footnote 8. See Jardine v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8, 209 Cal.

Rptr. 139 .

(n18)Footnote 9. See Moulton v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 837, 841-842, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 175 (penalty for unreasonable delay in paying compensation is designed to help employee obtain promptly the cure or relief to which employee is entitled and to compel employer to provide cure or relief in timely fashion); see also Jardine v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8, 209 Cal. Rptr. 139 .

(n19)Footnote 10. Rhiner v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1213, 1227-1228, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 129, 848 P.2d 244 ; Gallamore v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 815, 826, 153 Cal. Rptr. 590, 591 P.2d 1242 . See Avalon Bay Foods v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1165, 1176-1177, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552, 559, 959 P.2d 1228 (penalty for delay in payment of medical treatment transportation benefits applies to total amount of medical expenses under Lab. Code § 4600, but in this case insurer met 60-day reimbursement requirement so penalty did not apply); Kopitske v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 623, 633, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 216 (penalty for unreasonable delay in payment of injured employee's advance from her permanent disability is assessed against employee's total permanent disability, not against her vocational rehabilitation maintenance allowance, supplemented by the advance from her permanent disability). See also State v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 128, 146, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 606 (10 percent penalty imposed for unreasonable delay in payment of industrial disability leave to which injured state employee was entitled under Gov. Code § 19869 et seq.); Soto v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1356, 1363, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 (penalty for employer's unreasonable delay in payment of interest on amount of stipulated award assessed against total award of benefits per class, including benefits paid prior to unreasonable failure to pay interest).

(n20)Footnote 11. Rhiner v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1213, 1225-1227, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 129, 848 P.2d 244 (employer unreasonably refused to pay $1,000 to $2,000 cost of employee's psychotherapy; penalty was properly assessed against total award of medical benefits estimated in excess of $250,000, which included preaward benefits that the employer had timely paid).

(n21)Footnote 12. Neel v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 847, 852, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 353 .

(n22)Footnote 13. Gallamore v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 815, 824, 153 Cal. Rptr. 590, 591 P.2d 1242 ; Christian v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 505, 516-517, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336, 936 P.2d 115 (reaffirming holding in Gallamore); see California Highway Patrol v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 1201, 1206, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118 (when employer or carrier makes late workers' compensation benefit payment and fails to include interest in payment, only single penalty may be imposed under Lab. Code § 5814); Moulton v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 837, 845, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 175 (employee entitled to two separate § 5814 penalties for separate and distinct acts by employer, assessed against all past, present and future temporary disability payments as increased by penalty for employer's failure to self-assess under Lab. Code § 4650(d): one for unreasonable delay in paying temporary disability benefits by making late and partial payment when full payment ordered, and one for failure to self-assess).

(n23)Footnote 14. Christian v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 505, 516-517, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336, 936 P.2d 115 .

(n24)Footnote 15. Christian v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 505, 516-517, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336, 936 P.2d 115 .

See also Lab. Code § 5814(a), effective June 1, 2004 (in any proceeding under section 5814, appeals board shall use its discretion to accomplish fair balance and substantial justice between parties).

(n25)Footnote 15.1. Green v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 1426, 1443-1445, (n27)Footnote 17. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1215, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 , quoting Gallamore v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 815, 828, 153 Cal. Rptr. 590, 591 P.2d 1242 . See Neel v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 847, 852, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 353 (although ten percent penalty on full class of medical benefits may have appeared harsh when amount delayed was only $78.39, "an unreasonable delay or refusal in payment that is monetarily of little consequence to an employer or carrier may be disastrous to an injured worker struggling to obtain medical treatment and pay basic household expenses," quoting Rhiner v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1213, 1226, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 129, 848 P.2d 244 . See also Lab. Code § 5814(a), effective June 1, 2004 (in any proceeding under section 5814, appeals board shall use its discretion to accomplish fair balance and substantial justice between parties).

26 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 .

(n26)Footnote 16. DuBois v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 396, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978 .

(n28)Footnote 17.1. Lab. Code § 5814(f).

(n29)Footnote 17.2. Lab. Code § 5814(g).

(n30)Footnote 18. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 .

(n31)Footnote 19. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1216, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 (one-week delay in temporary disability payments due to clerical error not "unreasonable").

(n32)Footnote 20. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1211-1212, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 .

(n33)Footnote 21. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1215, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 ; see Lab. Code §§ 5814, 5952 ("The question of delay and the reasonableness of the cause therefor shall be determined by the appeals board in accordance with the facts"); review by appellate court is limited to whether Board's decision "was unreasonable" and is supported by "substantial evidence"; see also [1], above.

(n34)Footnote 22. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1216-1217, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 .

(n35)Footnote 23. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1218-1219, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 , citing Kampner v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 376, 380, 150 Cal. Rptr. 222 (26-day delay in benefits payments, partially as result of mismailing).

(n36)Footnote 24. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1219-1220, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 . See, e.g., County of Sacramento v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 726, 732-733, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780 (eight-day delay in payments due to clerical error does not constitute "unreasonable" delay subject to penalty pursuant to Lab. Code § 5814 when it was due to mere innocent inadvertence).

(n37)Footnote 25. See discussion in [3], below.

(n38)Footnote 26. See County of Sacramento v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th

726, 733, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780 (examining case law and finding no cases in which mere inadvertence alone was held to be sufficient basis for finding delay "unreasonable"; instead, nature of inadvertence must be considered in light of all other relevant factors in determining whether delay was unreasonable).

(n39)Footnote 27. See Kerley v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 223, 230, 93 Cal. Rptr. 192, 481 P.2d 200 and discussion in [3], below.

(n40)Footnote 28. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1220, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 .

(n41)Footnote 29. Waters v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 652, 664-665, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 574 (although adjuster's inundating workload was largely responsible for seven-week delay, it was "institutional neglect," not caused by clerical error or inadvertence, and not contributed to by any action or omission of claimant, who diligently notified insurer of incorrect payments).

(n42)Footnote 30. County of Sacramento v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (Souza) (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 726, 733, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780 .

(n43)Footnote 31. County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 869, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 .

(n44)Footnote 32. County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 869, 876-878, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 246 .

(n45)Footnote 33. Kerley v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 223, 230, 93 Cal. Rptr. 192, 481 P.2d 200 .

(n46)Footnote 34. Kerley v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 223, 227, 230, 93 Cal. Rptr. 192, 481 P.2d 200 ; Johnson v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1985) 163 Cal. App. 3d 770, 774, 210 Cal. Rptr. 28 .

(n47)Footnote 35. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 182 Cal. Rptr. 171 .

(n48)Footnote 36. Jardine v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8-9, 209 Cal. Rptr. 139 .

(n49)Footnote 37. Jensen v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 244, 247-248, 216 Cal. Rptr. 33 (disapproved by State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1209, 1220, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 528, 959 P.2d 1204 to extent that it suggests inadvertent delay is per se unreasonable).

(n50)Footnote 38. Ralphs Grocery Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 820, 832, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 .

(n51)Footnote 39. DuBois v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 382, 398-399, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 523, 853 P.2d 978 ; Duncan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 294, 297, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 664 .

(n52)Footnote 40. Duncan v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 294, 300-304, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 664 .

22 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 4. Claims and Enforcement

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.32

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.32 Increased Benefits for Discrimination Against Claimants

[1] General Rule

Labor Code Section 132a specifically prohibits an employer from discharging or threatening to discharge, or in any other manner discriminating against, any employee because the employee has filed or made known his or her intention to file a claim for compensation with his or her employer or an application for adjudication, or because the employee has received a rating, award, or settlement.ⁿ¹ The California Supreme Court has held that Section 132a expresses a broad policy that employees who have sustained compensable industrial injuries not be discriminated against. Thus, the Court has held that an employer who discriminates against an injured employee may be guilty of a violation of Section 132a even if the employer has not violated any of the statute's specific prohibitions.^{n1.1}

To warrant an award pursuant to section 132a, the employee must establish at least a prima facie case of lost wages and benefits caused by the employer's discriminatory acts.ⁿ² The employee must establish discrimination by a preponderance of the evidence.^{n2.1} An employee's showing that he or she suffered an industrial injury and some detrimental consequences as a result is insufficient to establish a prima facie case of discrimination within the meaning of section 132a. An employee must show not only detriment, but also show that he or she was singled out for disadvantageous treatment because of his or her injury.^{n2.2} By prohibiting "discrimination" in section 132a, the Legislature prohibited the treatment of injured employees differently than other employees who were neither injured nor had filed claims, making them suffer disadvantages not visited on such other employees.^{n2.3} Once the employee presents a prima facie case of discrimination, the burden shifts to the employer to establish an affirmative defense.^{n2.4}

The Workers' Compensation Appeals Board has held en banc that when an injured employee's claim under Lab. Code § 132a is premised on the employer's termination of or refusal to provide group health plan benefits to the employee pursuant to the terms of an Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA)ⁿ³ plan, the claim relates to the ERISA plan and, therefore, is preempted by ERISA.ⁿ⁴

Labor Code Section 132a is not restricted in scope to injuries arising out of employment with the discriminating employer. As long as an employer-employee relationship exists at the time of the discriminatory act, Section 132a is applicable, even if the injury arose while the worker was employed by another employer.ⁿ⁵ Because the statute serves a remedial function by providing some compensation to an employee who suffers discrimination as a result of an industrial injury, it is to be liberally construed, as provided by Labor Code Section 3202.ⁿ⁶

An award of backpay under Lab. Code § 132a based on wrongful denial of reinstatement because of an industrial injury may include prejudgment interest on the lost wages.ⁿ⁷

In practice, the cases brought under Section 132a do not generally involve overt, admittedly intentional discrimination against industrially injured employees,ⁿ⁸ but rather the neutral application of the employer's internal procedures and rules in a manner that adversely affects such employees. For example, in the seminal case in this area, Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board,ⁿ⁹ a worker who lost his seniority and was laid off as a result of a 15-month absence due to a compensable injury was held to be entitled to increased benefits under Section 132a. The employer had a general rule providing that seniority could be revoked in the event of a 12-month absence from work. However, the Court found that the actual practice of the employer and the union had been to extend an employee's seniority in cases of compensable injury. The employer's failure to make even an attempt to do so permitted the employee to be penalized solely because of the time lost from work caused by the injury.ⁿ¹⁰ In a subsequent case, the court found that a city's policy requiring an injured worker to use earned vacation time rather than sick leave to attend medical appointments needed to care for industrial injuries, while workers with non-industrial injuries could use their sick leave for such matters, constituted discrimination under Section 132a, because the city did not establish a reasonable, legitimate business purpose for the discriminatory policy.^{n10.1}

Labor Code Section 132a is not, however, the exclusive remedy for employees discriminated against as a result of work-related injuries. The FEHA and other common law remedies are available to employees subject to discrimination on the basis of work-related disabilities.ⁿ¹¹ However, the standards for establishing disability discrimination under the FEHA and under Labor Code Section 132a might well be different and, to the extent that the remedies overlap, equitable principles preclude double recovery for employees.ⁿ¹²

[2] Business Realities Test

In Smith v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ¹³ the court of appeal stated that Labor Code Section 132a proscribes certain actions triggered by the industrial injury that work to the detriment of the employee, unless they are necessitated by the "realities of doing business." The court based its conclusion on dictum in Judson Steel, which stated that Labor Code Section 132a does not compel an employer to ignore the realities of doing business by reemploying unqualified employees or employees for whom positions are no longer available.ⁿ¹⁴ The court indicated that under a business realities test, the employer must show that the action taken was necessary and that it was directly linked to business realities.ⁿ¹⁵ The court stated that the burden of establishing that this standard was met is on the employer to prove an affirmative defense of business realities.ⁿ¹⁶

In one case, the court held that if the real reason the employer refused to allow the employee to return to work after an industrial injury was that there was no work available that she could perform without the risk of reinjury or further injury, the employer did not violate Section 132a.ⁿ¹⁷ On the other hand, the court said that if the employee could demonstrate that she could have returned to work and performed her job without risk of reinjury or further injury to herself, an inference of discrimination could be made.ⁿ¹⁸

In Barns v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Board,ⁿ¹⁹ the court of appeal held that an employer had failed to justify its refusal to assign an injured employee to light duty and its eventual termination of the employee based on the business realities test. The court found that although business realities may necessitate termination when an employer reasonably believes that an employee is permanently disabled from performing the job, a physician's opinion that the employee's injury was likely to preclude him from resuming his preinjury duties could not give rise to such a reasonable belief when it was evident that the employee was continuing to improve and the injury had not stabilized.ⁿ²⁰ In addition, the court found that the employee's acceptance of rehabilitation benefits did not, by itself, constitute a business reality necessitating termination.ⁿ²¹ Finally, the court held that the combined effect of the physician's report, the employee's acceptance of rehabilitation benefits, the employee's reported interest in starting a new career, and the employer's payment of fringe benefits for the employee as long as he was on the payroll was insufficient to demonstrate a business necessity for the employee's termination.ⁿ²²

It is the employer's knowledge at the time it terminates an employee, not its knowledge at the time it returns the employee to work, that is relevant in determining whether an employer established reasonable business necessity. An employer may be justified in terminating an employee if at the time of termination the employer reasonably believes that returning the employee to his position would endanger the employee or others, even if the employee had previously returned to work.^{n22.1}

[3] Causation

In Judson Steel, the California Supreme Court found a causal link between the employee's industrially caused absences and his discharge because the employer did not follow its standard procedure for safeguarding absent employees' accumulated seniority.ⁿ²³ The employee showed that but for the industrially caused absences, he would not have been laid off; and this was a proper basis for the WCAB to infer discrimination.ⁿ²⁴ A court of appeal has stated that the reverse of this reasoning is also true. The court held that if the employee would have been terminated in any event under the employer's policy, for reasons having nothing to do with an industrial injury, it cannot be said that discrimination by the employer by application of the policy caused the termination, as required under Labor Code Section 132a.ⁿ²⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Discrimination
General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI
Administrative Proceedings
Claims
General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI
Benefit Determinations
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 132a(1). See Dept. of Rehabilitation v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1281, 1299, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665, 70 P.3d 1076 .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Dept. of Rehabilitation v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1281, 1299, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665, 70 P.3d 1076 ; Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 667, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n3)Footnote 2. Dept. of Rehabilitation v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1281, 1298, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665, 70 P.3d 1076 ; Dyer v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1376, 1386, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 30 .

(n4)Footnote 2.1. Dept. of Rehabilitation v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1281, 1298, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665, 70 P.3d 1076 ; Western Electric Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 629, 640, 160 Cal. Rptr. 436 .

(n5)Footnote 2.2. Dept. of Rehabilitation v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1281, 1301, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665, 70 P.3d 1076 ; County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 641, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 2005 Cal. App. LEXIS 1637, *11 .

(n6)Footnote 2.3. Dept. of Rehabilitation v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1281, 1300-1301, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665, 70 P.3d 1076 (because employee did not allege that employer allowed other employees paid time off to seek medical care without resort to sick leave, employee failed to demonstrate he was victim of discrimination within meaning of section 132a).

(n7)Footnote 2.4. Dept. of Rehabilitation v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 1281, 1298, 1301 n.8, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665, 70 P.3d 1076 (because employee failed to establish prima facie case of discrimination, Supreme Court did not address employer's contention that employer had legitimate business reason for requiring employee to use sick leave and vacation time when away from office seeing physician for treatment after industrial injury); Barns v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 524, 531, 266 Cal. Rptr. 503 .

(n8)Footnote 3. See 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq..

(n9)Footnote 4. Navarro v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2002) 67 Cal. Comp. Cas. 1364 .

(n10)Footnote 5. See Fortner v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (1991) 229 Cal. App.3d 542, 549-550, 280 Cal. Rptr. 409 (Lab. Code § 132a applied in case of store employee subject to discipline for wearing open-toed shoes for painful foot condition which arose during employment by employer's predecessor), disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 (Lab. Code § 132a is not exclusive remedy for discrimination based on work-related disability).

(n11)Footnote 6. Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 668, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n12)Footnote 7. Currie v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 1109, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 392, 17 P.3d 749 (applying Civ. Code § 3287(a) and holding that Lab. Code § 132a backpay is not subject to limitation on interest in implicit in Lab. Code § 5800).

(n13)Footnote 8. For an example of a case that does involve facts in which supervisor told employee it was against company policy to rehire anyone with a workers' compensation claim against the employer, see Morehouse v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 323, 326, 201 Cal. Rptr. 154 .

(n14)Footnote 9. Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n15)Footnote 10. See Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 665, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 ; see also Smith v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1109, 199 Cal. Rptr. 881 (case hinged on proper application of two-absence firing rule).

(n16)Footnote 10.1. Andersen v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1369, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 839, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 606, *11-*19 .

(n17)Footnote 11. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1148, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 448, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n18)Footnote 12. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n19)Footnote 13. Smith v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1109-1110, 199

Cal. Rptr. 881 .

(n20)Footnote 14. Smith v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1109, 199 Cal. Rptr. 881 , citing Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 667, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 .

(n21)Footnote 15. See Smith v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1109, 199 Cal. Rptr. 881 .

(n22)Footnote 16. Smith v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1104, 1109, 199 Cal. Rptr. 881 ; see Morehouse v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 323, 329, 201 Cal. Rptr. 154 .

(n23)Footnote 17. *Western Electric Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 629, 644-645, 160 Cal. Rptr. 436 . See, e.g., County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 641, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 2005 Cal. App. LEXIS 1637, *12-16 (county did meet its burden of showing reasonable business necessity).

(n24)Footnote 18. Western Electric Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 629, 644-645, 160 Cal. Rptr. 436 .

(n25)Footnote 19. Barns v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 524, 266 Cal. Rptr. 503 .

(n26)Footnote 20. Barns v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 524, 536, 266 Cal. Rptr. 503 .

(n27)Footnote 21. Barns v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 524, 537, 266 Cal. Rptr. 503 .

(n28)Footnote 22. Barns v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 524, 533, 266 Cal. Rptr. 503 .

(n29)Footnote 22.1. *County of San Luis Obispo v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 641, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 2005 Cal. App. LEXIS 1637, 14 .

(n30)Footnote 23. Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 665, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n31)Footnote 24. Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 665, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 454, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n32)Footnote 25. Leamon v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1409, 1416, 235 Cal. Rptr. 912 .

23 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 4. Claims and Enforcement

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.33

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.33 Fraud Concerning Workers' Compensation Claims

[1] Prohibition

The Legislature has declared that workers' compensation fraud harms employers by contributing to increasingly high costs of workers' compensation insurance and self-insurance, and harms employees by undermining the perceived legitimacy of all workers' compensation claims. The Legislature has also declared its intent to prevent workers' compensation insurance fraud, thereby reducing costs, assisting in restoring confidence and faith in the workers' compensation system, and facilitating expedient and full compensation for employees injured at the workplace.n1

Insurance Code Section 1871.4 prohibits all of the following acts and conduct:n2

1. Making or causing to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent material statement or material representation for the purpose of obtaining or denying any compensation, as defined in Labor Code Section 3207;
2. Presenting or causing to be presented any knowingly false or fraudulent written or oral material statement in support of, or in opposition to, any claim for compensation for the purpose of obtaining or denying any compensation, as defined in Labor Code Section 3207;
3. Knowingly assisting, abetting, soliciting, or conspiring with any person who engages in an unlawful act under Insurance Code Section 1871.4;
4. Making or causing to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent statements with regard to entitlement to benefits with the intent to discourage an injured worker from claiming benefits or pursuing a claim;
5. Making or causing to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent material statement or material representation for the purpose of obtaining or denying any of the benefits or reimbursement or for the purpose of discouraging an employer from claiming any of the benefits or reimbursement provided in the Return-to-Work Program established under Labor Code Section 139.48; and

6. Make or cause to be made any knowingly false or fraudulent material statement or material representation for the purpose of discouraging an employer from claiming any of the benefits or reimbursement provided in the Return-to-Work Program established under Lab. Code § 139.48.n3

For purposes of Insurance Code Section 1871.4, the term "statement" includes but is not limited to any notice, proof of injury, bill for services, payment for services, hospital or doctor records, X-rays, test results, medical-legal expense as defined in Labor Code Section 4620, and other evidence of loss, injury, expense, or payment.n4

It is also illegal for a firm, corporation, partnership, association, or any person acting in his or her individual capacity as a public or private employee, to solicit, accept, or refer any business to or from any individual or entity with the knowledge that, or with reckless disregard for whether, the individual or entity for or from whom the solicitation or referral is made, or the individual or entity who is solicited or referred, intends to violate Penal Code Section 550 (general criminal statute regarding insurance fraud) or Insurance Code Section 1871.4.n5

The administrative director of the Division of Workers' Compensation must annually provide every employer, claims adjuster, third-party administrator, physician, and attorney who participates in the workers' compensation system a notice warning the recipient against committing workers' compensation fraud. The notice must specify the penalties applicable to committing workers' compensation fraud.n6

In Leegin Creative Leather Products, Inc. v. Diaz, n6.1 an employer brought a fraud action against an employee alleging the employee knowingly filed a fraudulent workers' compensation claim and that the employer's damages would be the increased workers' compensation insurance premiums it would be required to pay as a result of the claim. The appellate court upheld the trial court's granting of the employee's special motion to strike the employer's complaint,n6.2 on the ground that the employee had filed her workers' compensation claim in furtherance of her right of petition or free speech under the United States or California Constitution in connection with a public issuen6.3 and that the employer had no probability of prevailing on the merits of its complaint.n6.4 A cause of action for fraud requires the plaintiff to prove each of the following elements:n6.5

- A knowingly false misrepresentation by the defendant;
- Made with the intent to deceive or to induce reliance by the plaintiff;
- Justifiable reliance by the plaintiff;
- Resulting damages.

The employer could not establish either justifiable reliance or resulting damage. Because controlling law, as well as the insurer's policy, required the employer to forward the claim to the insurer, it could not have relied on any misrepresentations made by the employee. Any alleged damage claim was premature because the employee's workers' compensation claim had not yet been adjudicated. If it were found to be false, the employer would not suffer any damages.n6.6 Any expenses incurred by the employer because the employee was no longer working had nothing to do with whether her claim was false. Finally, the court observed that permitting an employer to bring a civil action for fraud against an employee while the workers' compensation proceeding was pending could have a chilling effect on an employee's exercise of the right to file a workers' compensation claim.

[2] Enforcement and Penalty for Violation

Insurance Code Section 1871.4 is enforced by the Department of Insurance's Fraud Division.ⁿ⁷ The exchange of information between insurers and district attorneys, the office of the Attorney General, the Department of Insurance, the Department of Industrial Relations, and licensing agencies is governed by the Workers' Compensation Insurance Fraud Reporting Act.ⁿ⁸

Violation of Insurance Code Section 1871.4 (discussed in [1], above) is punishable by imprisonment in county jail for one year, or in the state prison, for two, three, or five years, or by a fine not exceeding $150,000.00 or double the value of the fraud, whichever is greater, or by both imprisonment and fine.ⁿ⁹ Restitution must also be ordered, including restitution for any medical evaluation or treatment services obtained or provided.ⁿ¹⁰ The court must determine the amount of restitution and the person or persons to whom the restitution must be paid.ⁿ¹¹

Further, a conviction pursuant to Insurance Code Section 1871.4 that materially affects the basis of an order, decision, or award of the Appeals Board is sufficient grounds for a reconsideration of that order, decision, or award.ⁿ¹² Insurance Code Section 1871.4 may not be construed to preclude the applicability of any other provision of criminal law that applies or may apply to any transaction.ⁿ¹³

Finally, any person who is convicted of workers' compensation fraud under Insurance Code Section 1871.4 is ineligible to receive or retain any compensation benefits if that compensation was owed or received as a result of a violation of Section 1871.4 for which the recipient of the compensation was convicted.ⁿ¹⁴ Civil penalties may also be imposed in addition to any other penalties that may be prescribed by law.ⁿ¹⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

TortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDIAdministrative ProceedingsClaimsGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDIBenefit DeterminationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Ins. Code § 1871(d), (e).

(n2)Footnote 2. Ins. Code § 1871.4(a). See, e.g., People v. Webb (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 688, 693-694, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 259 (appellant's false statements about his pain and his need for home-care attendant violated Ins. Code § 1871.4(a)(1), even if court accepted appellant's premise that he did nothing more than state "exaggerated" opinion, as opinion may also support fraud liability when speaker knows facts not warranting that opinion).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 139.48 became operative on July 1, 2004, and remains in effect until January 1, 2010, unless extended. Lab. Code § 139.48(h), (i).

(n4)Footnote 4. Ins. Code § 1871.4(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Penal Code § 549.

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 3822.

(n7)Footnote 6.1. Leegin Creative Leather Products, Inc. v. Diaz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1517 .

(n8)Footnote 6.2. See Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the so-called "anti-SLAPP statute" (strategic lawsuit against public participation).

(n9)Footnote 6.3. Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e).

(n10)Footnote 6.4. Leegin Creative Leather Products, Inc. v. Diaz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1517 .

(n11)Footnote 6.5. Leegin Creative Leather Products, Inc. v. Diaz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1517, 1524 ; Wilkins v. National Broadcasting Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1066, 1081, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 .

(n12)Footnote 6.6. See Lab. Code § 3761(b), (d) (when employer notifies insurer of facts suggesting fraudulent claim and Appeals Board determines employee is not entitled to compensation, insurer must reimburse employer for any premium paid solely due to inclusion of successfully challenged payments in calculation of employer's experience modification).

(n13)Footnote 7. Ins. Code § 1872; see also Ins. Code §§ 1872.3 (powers of Fraud Division), 1872.83(a) (Division required to forward names of fraud suspects licensed under Business and Professions Code to appropriate disciplinary body), 1872.95 (Medical Board, Board of Chiropractic Examiners, and State Bar must designate employees to investigate and report on possible fraudulent activities relating to workers' compensation).

(n14)Footnote 8. See Ins. Code § 1877 et seq.

(n15)Footnote 9. Ins. Code § 1871.4(b); see also Ins. Code § 1871.4(c) (enhancement for prior convictions).

(n16)Footnote 10. Ins. Code § 1871.4(b).

(n17)Footnote 11. Ins. Code § 1871.4(b).

(n18)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 5803.5. See Farmers Ins. Group of Companies/Truck Insurance Exchange v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 684, 689-691, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 353 (after employee's conviction of fraud in receipt of workers' compensation medical benefits by obtaining special footwear, Workers' Compensation Appeals Board had jurisdiction to bar receipt of portion of benefit obtained by fraud, but employer had no right to credit against any type of benefit, including necessary medical benefits outside of reimbursement for special footwear, whether in whole or part).

(n19)Footnote 13. Ins. Code § 1871.4(d).

(n20)Footnote 14. Ins. Code § 1871.5.

(n21)Footnote 15. See Lab. Code § 3820. See People ex rel. Monterey Mushrooms, Inc. v. Thompson (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 24, 29-31, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 677 (exclusive remedy of workers' compensation did not bar action under Ins. Code § 1871.7 for submitting fraudulent workers' compensation claims for compensation, proscribed by Pen. Code § 550, where application of Ins. Code § 1871.7(b) was clearly authorized as intended to cover fraudulent claims for workers' compensation benefits, and where express inclusion of workers' compensation claims in Pen. Code § 550 demonstrated Legislature's intention to allow civil actions under Ins. Code § 1871.7 arising from fraudulent acts made unlawful by Pen. Code § 550, notwithstanding applicability of the Workers' Compensation Act).

24 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part A. WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Subpart 4. Claims and Enforcement

1-20 California Employment Law §§ 20.34 through 20.39

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 20.34[Reserved]

25 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part B. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST EMPLOYERS AND THIRD PARTIES

Subpart 1. Actions by Employee

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.40

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.40 Suits Against Uninsured Employers

[1] Two Available Remedies

[a] Civil Action

When an employer has failed to secure the payment of workers' compensation (that is, to obtain insurance or be self-insured) as required by the Workers' Compensation Act,ⁿ¹ any injured employee or his or her dependents may bring an action at law against the employer for damages as if the Workers' Compensation Act did not apply.ⁿ² In order for Labor Code section 3706 to apply, the injured person must come within the definition of "employee" for workers' compensation purposes,^{n2.1} and the person employing the employee must be uninsured.^{n2.2} Labor Code section 2750.5, while not a part of the workers' compensation law, applies to workers' compensation law and creates a rebuttable presumption that a worker performing services for which a license is required is an employee and not an independent contractor,^{n2.3} and has been interpreted to provide that a person lacking the requisite license may not be an independent contractor.^{n2.4} Thus, for example, an unlicensed roofer who fell while working on his neighbor's house could sue his neighbor under Labor Code section 3706. Although the roofer may not have been his neighbor's employee for workers' compensation purposes because of Labor Code section 3352(h),^{n2.5} section 3352(h) did not ipso facto preclude any employment relationship between the neighbor and the roofer. Rather, because the roofer was concededly unlicensed, Labor Code section 2750.5 applied and created an employment relationship allowing the roofer to maintain an action in tort.^{n2.6}

It is no defense that the employer did not intentionally fail to secure payment.ⁿ³ The fact that an employer pays the employee's medical bills and wages during disability or otherwise compensates the employee does not bar a suit for damages when the employer was not properly secured prior to the injury.ⁿ⁴ Additionally, in a case of dual employment when one employer is insured and one is not, the injured employee (or his or her dependents) may obtain a workers' compensation award jointly and severally against both employers and still maintain an action at law against the uninsured employer.ⁿ⁵ However, the fact that the employer's insurance carrier refuses to pay compensation to an injured employee does not constitute a failure on the part of the employer to secure the payment of compensation unless the injured employee was excluded from the policy.ⁿ⁶

Civil actions against uninsured employers are not only permitted, but the Labor Code contains special provisions that give an injured employee an advantage over the normal tort plaintiff. In a civil action against an uninsured employer, it is presumed that the injury to the employee was a direct result and grew out of the negligence of the employer, and the burden of proof is on the employer to rebut the presumption of negligence.ⁿ⁷ While this presumption may be sufficient to outweigh the evidence adduced to rebut it,ⁿ⁸ when the evidence clearly controverts the presumption, the employer is entitled to prevail.ⁿ⁹ However, an employee seeking damages from an uninsured employer has the same burden of proof as an employee seeking workers' compensation benefits: the employee bears the burden of proving the injury was sustained in the course of employment.^{n9.1}

Additionally, in a civil action against an uninsured employer, it is not a defense for the employer that the employee was guilty of contributory negligence or assumed the risk of the hazard complained of or that the injury was caused by the act of a fellow servant.ⁿ¹⁰ Therefore, comparative negligence is not available to offset the liability of the employer in proportion to the fault of the employee.ⁿ¹¹ Finally, in a civil action against an uninsured employer, the judgment must include reasonable attorney's fees.ⁿ¹² However, the judgment may not be increased, pursuant to Labor Code Section 4554, by ten percent for the employer's failure to insure because that section only provides for an increase in the amount of "compensation" awarded against an uninsured employer.ⁿ¹³

A civil action for negligence by an injured employee against an illegally uninsured employer pursuant to Labor Code § 3706, as a matter of law, is not based on the same cause of action as an application for compensation filed with the Board pursuant to Labor Code §§ 3600 and 3715. Thus, principles of res judicata and collateral estoppel did not bar an injured worker's pursuit of a workers' compensation remedy after the worker settled the civil action and then dismissed it with prejudice. The claims in the workers' compensation proceeding and the civil action asserted two distinct primary rights, i.e., the statutory right to prompt, certain compensation for all work-related injuries regardless of fault, and the common law right to be free of the employer's negligence in maintaining the work environment. Labor Code Sections 3706 and 3715 explicitly permit an injured employee to proceed against an uninsured employer in a workers' compensation proceeding and sue the employer in superior court for personal injury damages. Further, the settlement agreement on which the dismissal of the civil action was based was not submitted to the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board for approval as required by Labor Code § 5001. Absent Board approval, the agreement itself could not validly release or otherwise bar the claim for workers' compensation benefits, regardless of the parties' intent.^{n13.1}

In an action brought under Labor Code section 3706, an employer's liability is determined under rules of pleading and proof which differ significantly from those of a common law personal injury action. Thus, section 3706 creates a statutory cause of action for personal injuries subject to the three-year statute of limitations for an action upon a liability created by statute, other than a penalty or forfeiture.^{n13.2} Further, even if a one-year statute of limitations for a negligence action applies, the time for bringing the action is equitably tolled until there has been a final determination in the workers' compensation proceeding that the employer is uninsured. However, the tolling may end if the employer can show the plaintiff unreasonably delayed a final determination as to whether the employer was insured.^{n13.3}

The employee may also wish to file an application with the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board for compensation from the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund pursuant to Labor Code Section 3716.ⁿ¹⁴

[b] FORM--Complaint Against Employer Who Has Failed to Secure Compensation for Injured Employee

[i] Comment

The form set forth in [ii], below, is for use by an employee to obtain damages from an employer who has failed to secure compensation pursuant to the workers' compensation and insurance laws.ⁿ¹⁵ Such an action can be maintained only if the workers' compensation law is applicable to the employee.ⁿ¹⁶ An action may also be maintained by the dependents of an employee who died from his or her injuries.ⁿ¹⁷ For discussion and forms for use in actions by an employee's dependents, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Volume 6, Ch. 66, "Death and Survival Actions" (Matthew Bender). An action under Labor Code Section 3706 may be brought in addition to a claim brought before the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board.ⁿ¹⁸

In an action under Labor Code Section 3706, the complaint must allege (1) that an employer-employee relationship exists (Paragraphs 2 and 3), and (2) that the employer failed to carry workers' compensation insurance in violation of Labor Code Section 3700 (Paragraph 11).ⁿ¹⁹ In addition, although there is a statutory presumption that the injury to the employee was a direct result of, and grew out of, the negligence of the employer, and the burden of proof is on the employer to rebut this presumption,ⁿ²⁰ the elements of negligence should be alleged because the presumption is a rule of evidence only, and it does not relieve the injured employee of the burden of pleading facts showing a cause of action based on negligence.ⁿ²¹ Therefore, the complaint alleges the following four elements of a cause of action for negligence:ⁿ²² (1) the existence of a duty of care owed by defendant to plaintiff, (2) breach of that duty by defendant, (3) damage to plaintiff, and (4) a causal relationship between the defendant's breach of duty and the damage suffered by plaintiff (Paragraphs 4-10).

[ii] Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES
_____ [name],	)	(BREACH OF STATUTORY OBLIGATION)
Defendant.	)	[Civ. Code § 3333; Lab. Code §§ 3706-3709]
	)
	)

Plaintiff alleges:

1. _____ [Allege capacity and residence of defendant, if venue allegation desired, e.g., Defendant is, and at all times mentioned in this complaint was, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California with its principal place of business in _____ [city], _____ County. (Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued in this complaint as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences alleged in this complaint, and that plaintiff's damages as alleged in this complaint were proximately caused by their conduct.)]

2. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], _____ County, California, plaintiff and defendant entered into _____ [a written or an oral] agreement for the employment of plaintiff by defendant _____ [describe general nature of work, e.g., to perform construction work for defendant's construction company]. The terms of the agreement were _____ [as follows: _____ (set out terms) or as stated in the copy of the employment agreement attached as Exhibit A and made a part of this complaint].

3. Plaintiff subsequently entered into employment pursuant to the above-described agreement.

4. _____ [Allege specific duty of care imposed on employer by statute or regulation, if any.]

5. _____ [Allege facts relating to plaintiff's case showing defendant's duty of care in particular, e.g., At all times mentioned in this complaint, defendant owned, maintained, controlled, operated, and provided a certain _____ (specify, e.g., scaffolding) for use by employees, including plaintiff, in performing work].

6. _____ [Allege defendant's breach of duty of care, e.g., Defendant negligently maintained the _____ (specify, e.g., scaffolding) in a dangerous and unsafe condition, in that _____ (specify)].

7. _____ [Allege plaintiff's injury and causal relationship with defendant's breach of duty of care, e.g., On or about _____ [date], plaintiff was using the _____ (specify, e.g., scaffolding) for its intended purpose, namely _____ (specify), in the course and scope of plaintiff's employment, at _____ (place), and plaintiff was then and there injured, as more particularly alleged below, as a proximate result of _____ (specify, e.g., the scaffolding's breaking and causing plaintiff to fall two stories and strike the ground)].

8. As a proximate result of defendant's negligence, as alleged in this complaint, plaintiff was seriously [and permanently] injured in his/her health, strength, and activity, and sustained injury to his/her body and shock to his/her nervous system and person, all of which injuries have caused, and continue to cause, plaintiff great mental, physical, and nervous pain and suffering. As a result of such injuries, plaintiff has suffered general damages _____ [in an amount according to proof or in the sum of $_____].

9. As a further proximate result of defendant's negligence, as alleged in this complaint, plaintiff has incurred [, and will continue to incur,] medical and related expenses _____ [in an amount according to proof or in the sum of $_____].

10. [As a further proximate result of defendant's negligence, plaintiff was prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupation or profession), and plaintiff lost earnings (in the sum of $_____). Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges, that he/she will be prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupation or profession) for an additional period in the future that he/she cannot now ascertain and will sustain further loss of earnings.]

11. [On [date], in a proceeding entitled _____ (specify), No. _____, the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board made and entered findings and conclusions determining that at the time of the injury suffered by plaintiff as alleged in this complaint, plaintiff and defendant were subject to the workers' compensation insurance and safety laws, and that] [D]efendant failed to secure the payment of compensation in one or more of the ways specified in Labor Code Section 3700.

12. A copy of this complaint _____ [has been or will be] given to the Uninsured Employers Fund by _____ [personal service or certified mail], and proof of such service _____ [is attached or will be filed].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. For damages for pain and suffering [in the sum of $_____];

2. For damages for past [and future] medical expenses [in the sum of $_____];
3. For lost earnings, past and future [in the sum of $_____ or according to proof];
4. For interest on the sum of $_____ from and after, [date of injury];
5. For reasonable attorney's fees;
6. For costs of suit incurred; and
7. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Add verification, if desired
(see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5).]

[c] Application to Workers' Compensation Appeals Board

In addition to bringing a civil action against an uninsured employer, any employee, except certain residential employees,ⁿ²³ may file an application with the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, which determines the application as if the employer were insured.ⁿ²⁴ In the event that the board finds the injury was compensable and the employer fails to pay the compensation required, the employee may receive compensation from the Uninsured Employers Benefits Trust Fund under Labor Code Section 3716. For discussion of procedure, see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Chapter 27, § 27, 10[6][a] (Matthew Bender).

[2] Prohibition Against Double Recovery

Although an injured employee may pursue two courses of action against his or her uninsured employer, double recovery is prohibited. If a judgment is obtained in a civil action, any compensation awarded, paid, or secured by the employer must be credited against the judgment.ⁿ²⁵ After a judgment in a civil action, an employer who has paid the attorney's fees fixed by the court is relieved of the obligation to pay workers' compensation benefits under Labor Code Section 3716.ⁿ²⁶

[3] Res Judicata Effect of Award

Because two separate remedies are authorized when an employee of an uninsured employer is injured within the coverage of workers' compensation,ⁿ²⁷ it should be noted that issues of collateral estoppel and res judicata may be invoked. For example, a decision of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board determining that the employer was insured bars a claim in a later tort action that the employer was not insured.ⁿ²⁸

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
 Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 3700; Muffett v. Royster (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 289, 301, 195 Cal. Rptr. 73 (employer's improperly deducting insurance premiums from employee's pay constitutes failure to secure payment). For discussion of workers' compensation insurance requirements for employers generally, see § 20.02.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 3706.

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Lab. Code §§ 3351 (defining "employee" for purposes of workers' compensation), 3352 (excluding certain persons from § 3351 definitions of "employee," and thus excluding them from workers' compensation coverage), discussed at § 20.20[2][b], above.

(n4)Footnote 2.2. See Lab. Code § 3706.

(n5)Footnote 2.3. See Lab. Code § 2750.5, discussed at § 20.20[3][b][I], above.

(n6)Footnote 2.4. See State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 15, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 ; Cedillo v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 227, 233, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581 (presumption that person who employs unlicensed contractor is employer is conclusive).

(n7)Footnote 2.5. See Lab. Code § 3352(h), excluding from definition of "employee" (for workers' compensation purposes) household workers working less than specified number of hours, depending on type of injury, discussed at § 20.20[2][b], above.

(n8)Footnote 2.6. Mendoza v. Brodeur (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 72, 79-81, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310.

(n9)Footnote 3. Hicks v. Ocean Shore Railroad, Inc. (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 773, 787, 117 P.2d 850.

(n10)Footnote 4. Coffin v. Bloodworth (1938) 28 Cal. App. 2d 522, 524, 82 P.2d 953.

(n11)Footnote 5. Strickland v. Foster (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 114, 118-119, 211 Cal. Rptr. 305. See also Hernandez v. Chavez Roofing, Inc. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1092, 1094-1095, 286 Cal. Rptr. 919 (although injured employee of unlicensed and uninsured subcontractor is covered by general contractor's workers' compensation insurance under Lab. Code § 2750.5, uninsured subcontractor may be liable in tort to injured employee under Lab. Code § 3706). For further discussion of dual employment, see § 20.20[2][d].

(n12)Footnote 6. Pecor v. Norton-Lilly Co. (1931) 111 Cal. App. 241, 243, 295 P. 582.

(n13)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 3708.

(n14)Footnote 8. See Goss v. Fanoie (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 819, 824-825, 251 P.2d 337.

(n15)Footnote 9. See Peters v. California Building-Loan Association (1931) 116 Cal. App. 143, 149-150, 2 P.2d 439.

(n16)Footnote 9.1. Huang v. L.A. Haute (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 284, 286, 289-292, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 619 (trial court had discretion to conclude employee did not meet burden to prove injury arose from employment, impliedly declining to believe her testimony that she was injured during her employment, and instead crediting other evidence inferring her story was not true).

(n17)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 3708 (providing in addition that named defenses may not be restored to employer by contract or regulation).

(n18)Footnote 11. Logan v. Masters (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 145, 147-148, 174 Cal. Rptr. 465 . For discussion of comparative negligence generally, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, vol. 1, ch. 4.

(n19)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 3709.

(n20)Footnote 13. Leung v. Chinese Six Companies (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 801, 806-807, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 593 .

(n21)Footnote 13.1. Le Parc Community Association v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1161, 1168-1175, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 408 . For discussion of Lab. Code § 5001, see § 62.05[5][c].

(n22)Footnote 13.2. Valdez v. Himmelfarb (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1267-1270, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195 . See Code Civ. Proc. § 338(a); Hall v. Copco Pacific, Ltd. (9th Cir. 1955) 224 F.2d 884, 885 (construing predecessor statute to Lab. Code § 3706 and holding that three-year statute of limitations for action upon liability created by statute applied); Lewis v. Hinman-Ball & Bonner (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 710, 714-715, 316 P.2d 673 (statute of limitations upon action under Lab. Code § 3706 appeared to be no more than three years). See also Rideaux v. Torggrimson (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 633, 636, 86 P.2d 826 (Legislature, by enacting predecessor to Lab. Code § 3706, provided statutory cause of action for personal injuries quite different from common law).

(n23)Footnote 13.3. Valdez v. Himmelfarb (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1270-1275, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195 (employer was not prejudiced by employee filing § 3706 action more than one year after learning employers were uninsured and almost two years after date of injury, where employer knew it was uninsured and had even greater incentive to initially gather evidence of fault because it could anticipate having to rebut presumption of negligence in civil action under Lab. Code § 3706). See Elkins v. Derby (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 410, 115 Cal. Rptr. 641, 525 P.2d 81 (one-year period for bringing personal injury action was tolled while plaintiff, acting in good faith, pursued his workers' compensation remedy [not arising under Lab. Code § 3706] against his employer).

(n24)Footnote 14. For discussion, see [c], below.

(n25)Footnote 15. See Lab. Code § 3706. For discussion, see [a], above.

(n26)Footnote 16. See Lab. Code § 3352 (persons excluded from coverage).

(n27)Footnote 17. See Lab. Code § 3706.

(n28)Footnote 18. See Lab. Code § 3715(a).

(n29)Footnote 19. See Coleman v. Silverberg Plumbing Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 74, 79, 69 Cal. Rptr. 158 .

(n30)Footnote 20. See Lab. Code § 3708.

(n31)Footnote 21. See Graybiel v. Consolidated Association, Ltd. (1936) 16 Cal. App. 2d 20, 25-26, 28, 60 P.2d 164 .

(n32)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Miglierini v. Havemann (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 570, 572, 49 Cal. Rptr. 795 .

(n33)Footnote 23. Lab. Code § 3351(d).

(n34)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 3715. See Cal. State. Auto. Ass'n Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1043-1048, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 743 (Lab. Code § 3715 did not apply to impose liability on homeowners for injury to unlicensed painter hired to paint their living and dining rooms and kitchen, where homeowners were not uninsured, but were covered by homeowners' insurance with workers' compensation coverage, and painter was excluded from coverage by Lab. Code 3352(h)).

(n35)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 3709.

(n36)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 3709.5.

(n37)Footnote 27. For discussion, see [1], above.

(n38)Footnote 28. Goodman Bros. v. Superior Court (1942) 51 Cal. App. 2d 297, 301-304, 124 P.2d 644 ; see Rymer v. Hagler (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1171, 1177-1183, 260 Cal. Rptr. 76 .

26 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part B. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST EMPLOYERS AND THIRD PARTIES

Subpart 1. Actions by Employee

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.41

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.41 Suits Against Insured Employers

[1] Dual Remedies

As long as the conditions of compensation exist, an injured employee is entitled to maintain an action for workers' compensation benefits.ⁿ¹ In addition, if an employer is liable in tort under one of the exceptions to the exclusive remedy rule,ⁿ² the employee is entitled to sue the employer in tort as well. Under the language of Labor Code Section 3602(b), if one of the stated exceptions to the exclusive remedy provisions applies, the employee "may bring an action at law for damages against the employer, as if this division did not apply." These exceptions are discussed in § 20.12.

Prior to the 1982 amendments to Labor Code Section 3602, cases that established exceptions to the exclusive remedy doctrine held that the remedies were not mutually exclusive and that an injured worker was not forced to elect which one to pursue.ⁿ³ After the 1982 amendments, one case disallowed a tort action because the employee had accepted compensation under a workers' compensation settlement for mental and physical injuries caused by harassment and abusive behavior of the employee's supervisor.ⁿ⁴ The court stated in dictum that in the case of the exception to the exclusive remedy doctrine permitting an action against an employer who commits a physical assault on the employee,ⁿ⁵ or who ratifies an assault by an employee,ⁿ⁶ the issue of whether the workers' compensation benefits and tort damages are alternative or cumulative forms of relief remains essentially unsettled.ⁿ⁷ That case quoted with approval the language from a 1975 case that stated that until an award of workers' compensation benefits is made or a judgment in the civil action is recovered, the remedies may be treated as cumulative or at least alternative.ⁿ⁸ Another case, which involved an assault on the employee by a co-worker that was ratified by the employer, allowed a tort suit after plaintiff had received a workers' compensation award.ⁿ⁹ No award for intentional infliction of emotional distress was made by the WCAB, and in addition, the court stated that a setoff of the workers' compensation award against the tort award would protect against double recovery.ⁿ¹⁰

When an employee is entitled to sue an employer in tort, the employee must show some negligence on the employer's part in order to prevail.^{n10.1}

[2] FORM--Complaint by Employee for Aggravation of Work-Related Injury Against Employer for Fraudulent Concealment

[a] Comment

The form set forth in [b], below, is a complaint against an employer to recover damages for the aggravation of an injury or disease when the employer fraudulently concealed the injury from the employee.ⁿ¹¹ Such a cause of action is an exception to the exclusive remedy rule.ⁿ¹²

The form sets forth in pertinent part the following allegations: (1) that plaintiff employee was suffering from a work-related disease (Paragraphs 4 and 5), and that defendant employer fraudulently concealed the disease and its connection to the employment from the employee (Paragraphs 6 and 7);ⁿ¹³ (2) that such concealment aggravated the existing disease, causing specified damages to plaintiff employee (Paragraphs 9-11);ⁿ¹⁴ and (3) that defendant employer acted with malice, oppression, or fraud, entitling plaintiff employee to punitive damages (Paragraph 12).ⁿ¹⁵

[b] Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES FOR FRAUDU-
_____ [name],	)	LENT CONCEALMENT OF EMPLOYEE'S IN-Defendant.	)	JURY
	)	[Civ. Code §§ 1710(3); 3333; Lab. Code §
	)	3602(b)(2)]

1. [Capacity, residence of defendant, and optional fictitious name allegation. See Form in § 20.20[1][b][ii], Paragraph 1.]

2. [Employment contract. See Form in § 20.20[1] [b][ii], Paragraph 2.]

3. Plaintiff entered into employment with defendant pursuant to the above-described agreement on or about [date] , and continued to be so employed until [date] .

4. [Allege conditions of employment or occurrence of event that caused plaintiff's initial work-related injury, e.g., At all times mentioned in this complaint, defendant was engaged in the business of milling, manufacturing, and packaging asbestos. Plaintiff's employment contract required that he/she work in proximity to all aspects of defendant's business, and thus during the period of his/her employment, he/she was continuously exposed to asbestos].

5. _____ [Allege initial work-related injury, e.g., As a proximate result of being continuously exposed to asbestos, plaintiff developed pneumoconiosis, lung cancer, and other asbestos-related injuries].

6. _____ [Allege defendant's fraudulent concealment of plaintiff's condition and its cause, e.g., Defendant has known since _____ [date] , that long exposure to asbestos or the ingestion of that substance is dangerous to health, yet concealed this knowledge from plaintiff, advised him/her that it was safe to work in proximity to asbestos, and failed to provide protective devices to prevent plaintiff's exposure to asbestos. By _____ [date] , defendant learned that plaintiff was suffering from a pulmonary disease but failed to inform plaintiff that his/her illness was caused by exposure to asbestos or to take any measures to cure the disease or prevent plaintiff from further exposure to asbestos. Doctors retained by defendant were neither qualified nor supplied with adequate information regarding the risk of asbestos exposure. Defendant failed to advise these doctors of the development of pulmonary disease in plaintiff or of the fact that the disease was the result of the working conditions at plaintiff's place of employment].

7. _____ [Allege any further actions of fraudulent concealment, if appropriate, e.g., In addition to the foregoing acts designed to conceal from the plaintiff the nature and cause of his/her illness, defendant willfully failed to file a First Report of Occupational Injury or Illness with the State of California regarding plaintiff's injury, as required by law. Had this been done, and had the danger from asbestos had been revealed, plaintiff would have been able to take steps to protect himself/herself from additional injuries and illness caused by continuing exposure to asbestos].

8. Each of the acts and omissions described in Paragraphs 6 and 7 was done falsely and fraudulently by defendant, with the intent to induce plaintiff to continue to work in a dangerous environment. Plaintiff was ignorant of the risks involved and would not have continued to work in such an environment if he/she had known the facts.

9. As a proximate result of defendant's acts and omissions alleged in this complaint, plaintiff's condition, namely _____ [describe illness or injury], was seriously [and permanently] aggravated further thereby, injuring plaintiff in his/her health, strength, and activity, and causing further injury to his/her nervous system, all of which injuries have caused, and continue to cause, plaintiff great mental, physical, and nervous pain and suffering. Plaintiff has been damaged thereby [in the sum of $_____].

10. As a further proximate result of defendant's acts and omissions alleged in this complaint, plaintiff has been required to expend money and incur obligations, and will continue to expend money and incur obligations, for medical services, X-rays, drugs, and sundries reasonably required in the treatment and relief of the injuries alleged in this complaint. Plaintiff has been damaged [in the sum of $_____].

11. [As a further proximate result of defendant's negligence and fraud as alleged in this complaint, plaintiff was prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupation or profession), and plaintiff lost earnings (in the sum of $_____). Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges, that he/she will be prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupa tion or profession) for an additional period in the future that he/she cannot now ascertain and will sustain further loss of earnings].

12. [The acts and omissions of defendant mentioned above were carried out with malice, oppression, and fraud, and in conscious disregard of the rights and safety of plaintiff and, therefore, warranting the assessment of punitive damages against defendant _____ (in the sum of $_____ or in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and set an example for others)].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. For damages for pain and suffering [in the sum of $_____];
2. For damages for past and future medical expenses [in the sum of $_____];
3. For lost earnings, past and future [in the sum of $_____ or according to proof];
4. For punitive damages [in the sum of $_____].

5. For interest on the sum of $ _____ from and after _____, [date of injury];
6. For costs of suit incurred; and
7. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

*[Add verification, if desired
(see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5)].*

[3] FORM--Complaint for Damages for Willful Physical Assault by Employer

[a] Comment

The form set forth in [b], below, is a complaint against an employer to recover damages for a willful physical assault by the employer against the employee.ⁿ¹⁶ Such a cause of action is an exception to the exclusive remedy rule.ⁿ¹⁷

The form contains the necessary allegations comprising the elements of a cause of action for assault, including (1) an allegation demonstrating defendant employer's unlawful intent to inflict immediate injury on plaintiff (Paragraph 4); (2) an allegation that defendant had the apparent present ability to carry out that threat (Paragraph 4); (3) an allegation that plaintiff was physically harmed or put in fear of personal harm by the actions of defendant (Paragraph 5);ⁿ¹⁸ (4) an allegation that plaintiff was injured thereby (Paragraph 6);ⁿ¹⁹ and (5) allegations of damages incurred (Paragraphs 6-10).ⁿ²⁰

[b] Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____
[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES FOR WILLFUL
_____ [names],	)	ASSAULT
Defendant.	)	[Civ. Code § 3333; Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1)]
	)
	)

1. [Capacity, residence of defendant, and optional fictitious name allegation. See Form in § 20.20[1][b][ii], Paragraph 1].

2. [Employment contract. See Form in § 20.20[1][b][ii], Paragraph 2].

3. Plaintiff entered into employment with defendant pursuant to the above-described agreement on or about [date] , and continued to be so employed until [date] .

4. On [date] , at [location], defendant willfully assaulted plaintiff by _____ [describe manner of assault].

5. [_____] (State any additional facts showing defendant's apparent ability to carry out the threat and additional facts showing reasons for plaintiff's fears, if a battery did not occur)].

6. By reason of these acts of defendant, plaintiff was _____ [physically harmed or placed in great fear for his/her life and physical well-being].

7. By reason of the wrongful and malicious acts of defendant, and of the fright caused plaintiff, plaintiff has suffered extreme and severe mental anguish and physical pain and has been injured in mind and body as follows:
_____ [describe], all to plaintiff's damage [in the sum of $_____].

8. By reason of the wrongful acts of defendant, plaintiff has been required to expend money and incur obligations, and will continue to expend money and incur obligations, for medical services, X-rays, drugs, and sundries reasonably required in the treatment and relief of the injuries alleged in this complaint. Plaintiff has been damaged [in the sum of $_____].

9. [By reason of the wrongful acts of defendant, plaintiff was also prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupation or profession), and plaintiff lost earnings (in the sum of $_____). Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges, that he/she will be prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupation or profession) for an additional period in the future that he/she cannot now ascertain and will thereby sustain further loss of earnings].

10. [The acts of defendant mentioned above were carried out with malice, oppression, and fraud, _____ (with the intention of harming plaintiff or in conscious disregard of plaintiff's rights and safety), and, therefore, warrant the assessment of punitive damages against defendant (in the sum of $_____ or in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and set an example for others)].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. For damages for pain and suffering [in the sum of $_____];
2. For damages for past and future medical expenses [in the sum of $_____];
3. For lost earnings, past and future [in the sum of $_____ or according to proof];
4. For punitive damages [in the sum of $_____].
5. For interest on the sum of $_____ from and after _____ [date of injury];
6. For costs of suit incurred; and
7. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Add verification of complaint, if desired
(see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5)].

[4] FORM--Affirmative Defense to Complaint Based on Exclusive Remedy Doctrine

[a] Comment

The form set forth in [b], below, is an affirmative defense to be used in the answer to a complaint against an employer in a civil action.ⁿ²¹ The basis of the defense is that the injury or death is exclusively compensable under the workers' compensation law.ⁿ²² If an employee's injury is within the scope of the workers' compensation laws, a court of law lacks authority to render judgment for damages against the employer.ⁿ²³ However, if a civil action is improperly brought, the employer generally has the burden of pleading and proving that the action is barred by workers' compensation law.ⁿ²⁴ If the employer fails to plead the issue, the defense is waivedⁿ²⁵ and the court has subject matter jurisdiction to enter a binding judgment.ⁿ²⁶

This defense is not for use in an answer to a civil complaint for damages for aggravation of a work-related injury, such as the one set forth in [2][b], above,ⁿ²⁷ or when the action falls within any of the other exceptions to the exclusive remedy doctrine.ⁿ²⁸ For discussion of the exclusive remedy doctrine generally, see §§ 20.10-20.12.

If the facts on which this defense is based appear on the face of the complaint, the objection may be made by a demurrer to the complaint.ⁿ²⁹

[b] Form

AS A [_____] (if more than one, specify number, e.g., FIRST)] SEPARATE AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE [if more than one cause of action alleged, state TO THE _____ (specify, e.g., SECOND) CAUSE OF ACTION], DEFENDANT ALLEGES:

At the time and place of plaintiff's alleged injury, plaintiff was an employee of defendant, was performing service growing out of and incidental to his/her employment, was acting within the course of his/her employment, and plaintiff's exclusive remedy is that provided by Workers' Compensation pursuant to Labor Code sections 3201-6208.

[5] Determining Forum With Jurisdiction

In many cases, because it is not clear whether the conditions of compensation apply, or it is not clear whether an exception to the exclusive remedy rule applies, it is not readily apparent which remedy or remedies will be allowed. It then is incumbent on the injured party to determine which remedy to pursue first. The civil courts and the workers' compensation board have concurrent jurisdiction to determine jurisdiction.ⁿ³⁰ Except in situations when the injured worker's remedies are not exclusive,ⁿ³¹ the tribunal assuming jurisdiction retains it to the exclusion of all other tribunals.ⁿ³²

Once the decision regarding which tribunal has jurisdiction over the case has been made, jurisdiction becomes exclusive, and the final determination regarding jurisdiction is res judicata before the other tribunal with regard to the same parties.ⁿ³³ A party may obtain an order preventing the second tribunal from acting pending determination by the first tribunal of the jurisdictional question.ⁿ³⁴

[6] FORM--Affirmative Defense Based on Lack of Jurisdiction Due to Pending Administrative Proceeding

[a] Comment

The form set forth in [b], below, is an affirmative defense that may be used in an employer's answer to an employee's civil action for negligence against the employer. If the employee has already brought an administrative action under the workers' compensation laws, the employer may seek to have the civil action abated in court until the issue of the exclusive jurisdiction of the workers' compensation laws can be decided by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board.ⁿ³⁵ It is also good practice for a party to bring a motion for an order preventing the second tribunal from acting pending determination of the jurisdictional question.ⁿ³⁶

[b] Form

1. The court has no jurisdiction to proceed with plaintiff's action, because on _____ [date], an application for compensation relating to the same subject matter as plaintiff's action, entitled _____ [specify], No. _____, was filed with the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board.

[7] Res Judicata and Collateral Estoppel

General principles of res judicata and collateral estoppel apply to workers' compensation proceedings.ⁿ³⁷ The Supreme Court, in Busick v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ³⁸ held that a proceeding for workers' compensation benefits was barred under principles of res judicata by a prior judgment in favor of the injured worker in a tort action based on the same incident. It has likewise been held that a prior judgment of the workers' compensation board precluded a tort action based on the same incident.ⁿ³⁹ In addition, a compromise settlement approved by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board has the same force and effect as a judgment made after a full hearing and is entitled to full res judicata effect.ⁿ⁴⁰ However, to preclude an action the compromise settlement must necessarily include the determination that all of the claims released are compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act; if it does not do so, res judicata principles do not preclude relitigation of the issue.ⁿ⁴¹ The fact that the release sets forth the nature of the injury suffered does not, by itself, support the conclusion that all claims arising from that injury were covered by the settlement.ⁿ⁴²

These cases should not be construed too broadly. All were decided in the context of a situation in which the court held that the injured person had mutually exclusive remedies either because the injury arose out of the plaintiff's employment, in which case workers' compensation was the exclusive remedy, or because the injury did not arise out of the plaintiff's employment, in which case a tort action was the exclusive remedy.ⁿ⁴³ Thus, Busick should be distinguished from cases such as Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁴⁴ in which the plaintiff was entitled under law to pursue either of two remedies.ⁿ⁴⁵

In cases where exclusive jurisdiction rests in either the civil courts or the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, a decision regarding jurisdiction by one such tribunal is normally binding on all other tribunals.ⁿ⁴⁶ When a judgment is rendered for the defendant because the plaintiff has sought a remedy that is not available to him or her, that judgment does not bar an action in the proper tribunal for a proper remedy.ⁿ⁴⁷

[8] Statute of Limitations

The statute of limitations for bringing a civil personal injury action against an employer is two years from the accrual of the cause of action.ⁿ⁴⁸ The filing of a timely claim for workers' compensation effectively tolls the statute of limitations for the purposes of a later tort claim based on the same facts.ⁿ⁴⁹

However, the filing of a claim for workers' compensation does not toll an action against an employer for aggravation of an injury resulting from the employer's fraudulent concealment of the cause of the injury.ⁿ⁵⁰ Further, an untimely workers' compensation claim will not toll the statute of limitations for the later tort claim based on the same facts.ⁿ⁵¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 3600.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code §§ 3602, 4558 and discussions in § 20.12[1]-[2].

(n3)Footnote 3. See Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 478-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 (suggesting that when plaintiff has received an award of workers' compensation benefits, double recovery may be avoided by allowing for a setoff in a subsequent tort action); see also Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 636-637, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063 (noting that term "election of remedies" has been misused in workers' compensation cases); Magliulo v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 760, 780, 121 Cal. Rptr. 621 (stating that remedies are cumulative or at least alternative in situation where theories of recovery are not mutually exclusive).

(n4)Footnote 4. Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 759, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619; see also discussion in [7], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696.

(n7)Footnote 7. Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 757-758, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619.

(n8)Footnote 8. Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 757-758, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619 (quoting Magliulo v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 760, 121 Cal. Rptr. 621).

(n9)Footnote 9. Young v. Libbey-Owens Ford Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1041-1045, 214 Cal. Rptr. 400.

(n10)Footnote 10. Young v. Libbey-Owens Ford Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1041-1045, 214 Cal. Rptr. 400.

(n11)Footnote 10.1. Zaragoza v. Ibarra (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1012, 1022-1023, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 264 (although Labor Code § 3352(h) operated to allow injured employee of unlicensed contractor to sue homeowner in ordinary negligence as distinct from strict liability, undisputed evidence revealed no negligence on homeowner's part, where employee was sole person who placed, adjusted, and climbed ladder before he fell, and there were no allegations that ladder was defective or that homeowner could have prevented accident).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2); Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 477-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim of the employer's fraudulent concealment of injury, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2802 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on fraudulent concealment of injury, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2801 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n13)Footnote 12. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2); Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 477-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948.

(n14)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2); Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d

465, 469-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 .

(n15)Footnote 14. Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2); Johns-Manville Prod. Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 469-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 .

(n16)Footnote 15. Civ. Code § 3294.

(n17)Footnote 16. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim of willful assault by the employer, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2801 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on the employer's willful physical assault, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2800. (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n18)Footnote 17. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1).

(n19)Footnote 18. See Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 146 P.2d 57 .

(n20)Footnote 19. See Civ. Code § 3281.

(n21)Footnote 20. See Civ. Code §§ 3294 (punitive damages), 3333 (compensatory damages).

(n22)Footnote 21. See Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b).

(n23)Footnote 22. See Lab. Code §§ 3600 (conditions of compensation), 3602(a) (exclusiveness of remedy). For the standard jury instruction on the employer's affirmative defense that the employee's injury was covered by workers' compensation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2800 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n24)Footnote 23. Baugh v. Rogers (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 200, 207, 148 P.2d 633 .

(n25)Footnote 24. Popejoy v. Hannon (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 159, 173-174, 231 P.2d 484 ; Green v. City of Oceanside (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 212, 224, 239 Cal. Rptr. 470 ; Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Engineering (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 225, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; see discussion in § 20.14.

(n26)Footnote 25. See Green v. City of Oceanside (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 212, 224, 239 Cal. Rptr. 470 .

(n27)Footnote 26. See Dorado v. Knudsen Corp. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 605, 610-611, 163 Cal. Rptr. 477 .

(n28)Footnote 27. See Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 478-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 (stating that in such case plaintiff is entitled under law to pursue either of two remedies and that employer is protected from double recovery by use of setoff).

(n29)Footnote 28. See Lab. Code §§ 3602(b), 4558.

(n30)Footnote 29. See Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a).

(n31)Footnote 30. Busick v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 .

(n32)Footnote 31. See Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 478-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 .

(n33)Footnote 32. Busick v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 .

(n34)Footnote 33. Busick v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 ; Scott v. Industrial Accident Commission (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 76, 81, 293 P.2d 18 .

(n35)Footnote 34. Busick v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 ; Taylor v. Superior Court (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 148, 151, 301 P.2d 866 .

(n36)Footnote 35. See Busick v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 ; Taylor v. Superior Court (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 148, 151, 301 P.2d 866 . For discussion of jurisdiction generally, see [5], above.

(n37)Footnote 36. See Busick v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 ; Taylor v. Superior Court (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 148, 151, 301 P.2d 866 .

(n38)Footnote 37. Clemente v. State of California (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 202, 222, 219 Cal. Rptr. 445, 707 P.2d 818 ; Dow Chemical Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 483, 491, 62 Cal. Rptr. 757, 432 P.2d 365 ; see Nash v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1793, 1812, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 (res judicata precludes relitigation of claims that "were litigated, or could have been litigated, in a prior action. ... It does not apply to bar workers' compensation claims involving different injuries." (citations omitted)).

(n39)Footnote 38. Busick v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 .

(n40)Footnote 39. Lake v. Lakewood Chiropractic Center (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 47, 53, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358 (WCAB decision awarding employee benefits for injury caused by free chiropractic adjustment provided by employer as a benefit of employment was entitled to res judicata effect for purposes of determining that injury arose out of and in course of employment and determining that employer's dual capacity arose prior to and at the time of her injury); De Court v. Beckman Instruments, Inc. (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 628, 635-636, 108 Cal. Rptr. 109 (workers' compensation action was not final for purposes of res judicata so as to bar action under Jones Act until expiration of five-year period during which award can be altered under Lab. Code §§ 5803-5805); Sanchez v. City of Santa Ana (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 424, 431-432 (workers' compensation award for emotional injuries bars injured employee's later claim for emotional distress against municipal employer in federal civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983).

(n41)Footnote 40. Hollywood Refrigeration Sales Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 754, 759, 210 Cal. Rptr. 619 .

(n42)Footnote 41. Lopez v. Sikkema (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 31, 40-44, 280 Cal. Rptr. 7 (compromise and release approved by WCAB, which did not clearly determine that all claims were compensable under workers' compensation law, did not preclude tort action based on employer's conduct outside compensation bargain; triable issue of fact remained regarding scope of release.).

(n43)Footnote 42. Lopez v. Sikkema (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 31, 44, 280 Cal. Rptr. 7 (triable issue of fact remained whether settlement was intended to cover claims for civil rights violation and intentional physical injury).

(n44)Footnote 43. Busick v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 973, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 .

(n45)Footnote 44. Johns-Manville Products Corp. v. Superior Court (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 465, 478-479, 165 Cal. Rptr. 858, 612 P.2d 948 ; see also Young v. Libbey-Owens Ford Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1044-1045, 214 Cal. Rptr. 400 (following Johns-Manville).

(n46)Footnote 45. See Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 634, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063 (suggesting that doctrine of res judicata did not bar employee who was awarded workers' compensation benefits from bringing subsequent tort action on ground that parties were not identical); Magliulo v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 760, 780, 121 Cal. Rptr. 621 (at least until an award of workers' compensation benefits is made and satisfied, or until a judgment for civil damages is recovered, tort recovery does not preclude workers' compensation recovery or vice versa).

(n47)Footnote 46. Busick v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 976, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 .

(n48)Footnote 47. Busick v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 967, 974, 104 Cal. Rptr. 42, 500 P.2d 1386 .

(n49)Footnote 48. Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1; Idding v. North Bay Construction Co., Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1111, 1115, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 149 (applying relation back doctrine). For discussion of limitations periods in tort actions generally, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 71, "Commencement, Prosecution, and Dismissal of Tort Actions," Part A (Matthew Bender).

(n50)Footnote 49. Elkins v. Derby (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 410, 420, 115 Cal. Rptr. 641, 525 P.2d 81 .

(n51)Footnote 50. Aerojet General Corp. v. Superior Court (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 950, 955-957, 223 Cal. Rptr. 249 .

(n52)Footnote 51. Aguilera v. Heiman (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 590, 595-602, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 18 (workers' compensation claim timely filed against unlicensed and uninsured employer did not toll statute of limitations in tort claim against property manager and homeowners' association, where injured worker did not join property manager and homeowners' association to workers' compensation claim until after statutory period had expired).

27 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part B. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST EMPLOYERS AND THIRD PARTIES

Subpart 1. Actions by Employee

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.42

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.42 Suits Against Employer's Insurer

[1] General Rule

Labor Code Section 3850 protects insurance carriers from liability as third parties by defining "employer" to include the employer's workers' compensation carrier.ⁿ¹ Thus, the issue of whether an employer's insurance carrier is liable in tort for wrongful acts is to be determined by those rules that apply to employers.

An employee may bring an action against an insurer for aggravation of the employee's injuries in fraudulently concealing from the employee the existence of the injury and its cause; this result obtains because an insurer who acts in this manner has stepped outside the protections of the Labor Code and has acted in a capacity other than an insurer.ⁿ²

An insurance carrier cannot be sued in tort for negligent processing of a third-party claim.ⁿ³ Because the processing of a third-party claim in any industrial injury situation in which a third party is partly responsible is a fairly normal, routine incident for the compensation carrier, the transaction has been held to be work-related and part of the processing of the benefits claim; therefore, it is within the scope of the workers' compensation exclusive remedy.ⁿ⁴ A workers' compensation claimant may not sue the employer's insurance carrier for the insurer's alleged mishandling of its lien on the claimant's settlement with a third party tortfeasor by refusing to accept a reduction in its lien for attorney's fees. Under Lab. Code §§ 3860, 5300, the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board has exclusive jurisdiction over allocation of attorney's fees incurred in reaching a settlement with a third party.^{n4.1}

[2] Recovery for Extreme and Outrageous Conduct

Prior to the amendment of Labor Code Section 3602, which has extended the reach of the exclusive remedy rule, the California Supreme Court held in Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange ⁿ⁵ that when an employer's insurance carrier intentionally commits outrageous and extreme conduct totally unnecessary to and far beyond that of a normal investigation of an employee's claim, such conduct removes the carrier from the protection of the exclusive remedy rule. The continued vitality of Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange was recognized in Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court, n6 in which the Court summarized its holding in Unruh, noted that subsequent court of appeal decisions have limited the liability of insurance carriers under Unruh, and, by way of dictum, confirmed the integrity of the analysis in that case as likewise limited. The Court concluded that a claims administrator, like an insurer, may be liable under Unruh when its actions are sufficiently extreme and outrageous.n7

Under the workers' compensation system, the failure of an employer's insurance carrier to pay benefits promptly in good faith is governed exclusively by the remedial provisions of Labor Code Section 5814, and a tort action against the carrier for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing is, therefore, not permitted.n8 However, if the conduct of an employer's carrier goes beyond mere bad faith and reaches the level of extreme and outrageous conduct that would support an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress, a tort action may be available.n9 Bad-faith failure to pay a claim promptly does not, without more, reach the level necessary to support a tort claim against an employer's insurer.n10 Moreover, investigation of claims is an important function of workers' compensation insurance carriers, and reasonable surveillance techniques by such carriers is justified, even when it appears that surveillance might exacerbate a claimant's psychological or emotional problems.n11 However, when surveillance techniques by an insurance company amount to trespass, they are actionable.n12 Furthermore, an employer's compensation insurer and its independent claims administrators may be held liable to the injured worker, and to his or her spouse for loss of consortium, in a civil action for (1) fraud, if it is shown that the defendants intentionally and fraudulently denied the existence of a worker's compensation policy for the purpose of defeating the legitimate claims of the injured employee; and (2) intentional spoliation of evidence, if it is shown that they subsequently intentionally destroyed the evidence of their fraudulent denial.n13

However, any civil action against an independent claims administrator or adjuster hired by a self-insured employer for damages for unreasonable delay or refusal to pay compensation benefits is barred by the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law.n14

Finally, insurance claim reports prepared for use in workers' compensation proceedings are not consumer reports within the meaning of the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act,n15 and failure to disclose the existence, contents, and use of the report to the worker as required by the act for consumer reportsn16 does not give rise to a civil action in favor of the worker for a violation of the act or invasion of privacy.n17

The essential elements of a prima facie case of intentional infliction of emotional distress are (1) outrageous conduct by the defendant; (2) an intention to cause, or a reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress; (3) the suffering of severe emotional distress by the plaintiff; and (4) actual and proximate causation of the plaintiff's emotional distress by the defendant's outrageous conduct.n18 For full discussion of the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress and defenses thereto, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 44.

[3] FORM--Complaint Against Employer's Insurer for Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

[a] Comment

The form set forth in [b], below is a complaint for damages by the employee against the employer's insurance carrier for intentional infliction of emotional distress based on the insurer's extreme and outrageous behavior toward the employee.n19

The complaint below makes the following allegations, which are essential to the cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress by the insurer: (1) an optional agency allegation (Paragraph 2); (2) allegations reciting the employment relationship between plaintiff and employer, the fact that defendant is the workers' compensation carrier for the employer, and the basis for the initial workers' compensation claim (Paragraphs 3-6); (3) outrageous conduct by the defendant insurer (Paragraph 7); (4) an intention to cause, or a reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress (Paragraph 8); (5) the suffering of severe emotional distress by the plaintiff (Paragraphs 9-11); (6) actual and proximate causation of the plaintiff's emotional distress by the defendant's outrageous conduct (Paragraphs 9-11);n20 and (7) defendant's malicious, oppressive, or fraudulent behavior, which entitles plaintiff to an award of punitive damages (Optional Paragraph 12).n21

For full discussion of the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress and related defenses, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 44 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	_____ COMPLAINT FOR DAM-
_____ [names],	)	AGES
Defendants	)	(Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress)
	)	[Civ. Code §§ 3294, 3333]
	)

1. [Capacity, residence of defendant, and optional fictitious name allegation. See Form in § 20.20[1][b][ii], Paragraph I].

2. [Defendants _____ (names) at all times mentioned in this complaint were the agents and employees of their codefendants _____ (names) and in doing the things as alleged below were acting within the course and scope of such agency and the permission and consent of their codefendants].

3. On or about [date] , at _____ [city], _____ County, California, plaintiff entered into _____ [a written or an oral] agreement for the employment of plaintiff by _____ [defendant] _____ [name of employer] to _____ [describe general nature of work, e.g., perform construction work for _____ [name of employer]'s construction company].

4. Defendant _____ [name] is the workers' compensation insurer for _____ [name of employer].

5. On [date] , plaintiff was injured in the course and scope of his/her employment in the following manner: _____ [describe accident resulting in injury]. As a result of this injury, plaintiff incurred the following [temporary or permanent] injuries [resulting in (temporary or permanent) disability]: _____ [describe].

6. Plaintiff instituted a claim for workers' compensation benefits on [date] , with reference to the injuries set forth above.

7. _____ [Allege defendant's outrageous conduct, e.g., Defendant _____ (name of insurer) initiated an investigation of plaintiff's claim. In the course of the investigation, defendant and its agents maintained surveillance of plaintiff. On or about [date] , at _____ (city), California, _____ (name), an agent of defendant, rushed up to plaintiff in a public place in front of plaintiff and his/her family members and a large crowd of people and started shouting at plaintiff in a rude, violent, and insolent manner, as follows: _____ (specify defendant's statements, e.g., that plaintiff was a liar and a cheat and that plaintiff had falsified his/her claim for workers' compensation benefits)].

8. _____ [Allege intent to cause emotional distress, e.g., Defendant _____ (name)'s conduct was intentional, outrageous, and malicious and done for the purpose of causing plaintiff to suffer humiliation, anguish, and emotional and physical distress. Defendant _____ (name)'s conduct in confirming and ratifying that conduct was done with knowledge that plaintiff's emotional and physical distress would thereby increase, and was done with a wanton and reckless disregard of the consequences to plaintiff].

9. As the proximate result of the acts mentioned above, plaintiff suffered severe humiliation, mental anguish, and emotional and physical distress [which has compounded plaintiff's initial injuries], and plaintiff has been injured in mind [and body] as follows: _____ [describe], all to plaintiff's damage [in the sum of $_____].

10. As a further proximate result of the acts mentioned above, plaintiff was required to and did employ _____ [specify, e.g., physicians, surgeons, and psychotherapists] to examine, treat, and care for him/her and incurred additional medical expenses for hospital bills and other incidental medical expenses [in addition to the expenses and bills plaintiff incurred as a result of his/her initial injury] _____ [in the approximate amount of $_____ or in an amount that has not yet been ascertained]. Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that he/she will incur some additional medical expenses [the exact amount of which is presently unknown].

11. [By reason of the acts mentioned above, plaintiff was further prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupation or profession) for a longer period of time than was caused by plaintiff's initial injury, and plaintiff lost earnings (in the sum of $_____). Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that he/she will be prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupation or profession) for an additional period in the future that he/she cannot now ascertain and will sustain further loss of earnings].

12. [The acts mentioned above of defendants were willful, wanton, malicious, oppressive, and _____ (intended to harm plaintiff or carried out in conscious disregard of plaintiff's rights), justifying the assessment of punitive damages against defendant _____ (in the amount of $_____ or in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and set an example for others)].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment as follows:

1. For general damages [in the sum of $_____];
2. For medical and related expenses [_____ [in the sum of $_____ or according to proof];
3. For lost earnings, past and future [in the sum of $_____ or according to proof];
4. For punitive damages [in the sum of $_____];
5. For costs of suit incurred; and
6. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Add verification, if desired
(see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5).]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 3850(b); see Continental Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 156, 159, 235 Cal. Rptr. 260 ; Chase Chemical Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 229, 238, 205 Cal. Rptr. 469 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Chase Chemical Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 229, 238, 205 Cal. Rptr. 469 ; see Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2). For form of complaint for aggravation of injuries by fraudulent concealment of existence of injury, see § 20.41[2][b].

(n3)Footnote 3. Continental Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 156, 161, 235 Cal. Rptr. 260 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Continental Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 156, 161, 235 Cal. Rptr. 260 .

(n5)Footnote 4.1. Hughes v. Argonaut Ins. Co. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 517, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 877 .

(n6)Footnote 5. Unruh v. Truck Insurance Exchange (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 616, 628-630, 102 Cal. Rptr. 815, 498 P.2d 1063 .

(n7)Footnote 6. Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762 .

(n8)Footnote 7. Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 6-11, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762 ; see also Jablonski v. Royal Globe Insurance Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 379, 385-394, 251 Cal. Rptr. 160 (following Unruh and holding that a compensation insurer and its independent claims administrators would be civilly liable to the injured employee and his spouse if the facts pleaded in the complaint showing extreme and outrageous conduct were to be established at trial).

(n9)Footnote 8. Cervantes v. Great American Insurance Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 763, 768-770, 189 Cal. Rptr. 761 . See also Lab. Code § 5814(f) (nothing in Section 5814 may be construed to create civil cause of action).

(n10)Footnote 9. Cervantes v. Great American Insurance Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 763, 774, 189 Cal. Rptr. 761 .

(n11)Footnote 10. Santiago v. Employee Benefits Services (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 898, 905, 214 Cal. Rptr. 679 (precluding action against self-insured employer's independent adjusting agency); Argonaut Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 320, 324, 210 Cal. Rptr. 417 .

(n12)Footnote 11. Teague v. Home Insurance Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1152-1153, 214 Cal. Rptr. 773 .

(n13)Footnote 12. Teague v. Home Insurance Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1153-1154, 214 Cal. Rptr. 773 .

(n14)Footnote 13. Jablonski v. Royal Globe Insurance Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 379, 382, 388-394, 251 Cal. Rptr. 160 .

(n15)Footnote 14. See Marsh & McLennan, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 1, 4, 10, 259 Cal. Rptr. 733, 774 P.2d 762 (disapproving the contrary holding in Dill v. Claims Admin. Services, Inc. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1184, 1187-1188, 224 Cal. Rptr. 273). See also Mitchell v. Scott Wetzel Services, Inc. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1474, 1480-1481, 278 Cal. Rptr. 474 (action by injured employee against self-insured employer's claims administrator alleging perjury before the WCAB and misrepresentation regarding benefit checks and availability of a rental car was within exclusive jurisdiction of workers' compensation system).

(n16)Footnote 15. See 15 U.S.C. 1681 et seq.; see also discussion in Ch. 50, Pt. B.

(n17)Footnote 16. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681, 1681i, 1681n, 1681p, 1681q.

(n18)Footnote 17. See Kemp v. County of Orange (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1422, 1425-1428, 260 Cal. Rptr. 131 .

(n19)Footnote 18. See Davidson v. City of Westminster (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 197, 209-210, 185 Cal. Rptr. 252, 649 P.2d 894 ; Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 949, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 ; Cervantez v. J.C. Penney Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 579, 587, 156 Cal. Rptr. 198, 595 P.2d 975 .

(n20)Footnote 19. See Cervantes v. Great American Insurance Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 763, 774, 189 Cal. Rptr. 761 .

(n21)Footnote 20. Davidson v. City of Westminster (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 197, 209-210, 185 Cal. Rptr. 252, 649 P.2d 894 ; Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 949, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 ; Cervantez v. J.C. Penney Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 579, 587, 156 Cal. Rptr. 198, 595 P.2d 975 .

(n22)Footnote 21. See Civ. Code § 3294.

28 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part B. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST EMPLOYERS AND THIRD PARTIES

Subpart 1. Actions by Employee

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.43

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.43 Suits Against Coemployees

[1] General Applicability of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine

[a] In General

When the conditions of compensation set forth in Labor Code Section 3600 occur, the right to recover workers' compensation benefits is the sole remedy of an injured employee against a coemployee acting within the scope of his or her employment, except when the injury is caused by the willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression of the coemployee or by the intoxication of the coemployee.ⁿ¹ The requirement that the coemployee's act of aggression be unprovoked is consistent with the bar of compensation in Lab. Code § 3600(a)(7), which bars recovery by an initial aggressor who first introduces physical violence into the confrontation, thus creating the risk of injury.ⁿ² An "unprovoked physical act of aggression" is unprovoked conduct intended to convey an actual, present, and apparent threat of bodily injury.ⁿ³

The harm to a plaintiff need not be physical before the exception becomes operative.ⁿ⁴ In order to come within the exception, however, the plaintiff must show that the coemployee specifically intended to injure him or her.ⁿ⁵ Plaintiffs may rely on circumstantial evidence to prove the intent to injure.ⁿ⁶ The trial court may properly instruct the jury that the plaintiff is required to prove that the coemployee acted with the intent to cause injury in order to establish that the coemployee had committed a "willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression" against the plaintiff under Labor Code Section 3601(a)(1).ⁿ⁷ In Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc.,ⁿ⁸ the California Supreme Court left open the question of whether a coemployee's mere intent to threaten physical injury, such as by pointing a gun in a threatening manner at an employee, causing the employee injury in a dive for safety, would be sufficient to bring the coemployee's conduct within the reach of Labor Code Section 3601(a)(1). "Willful" assaults under Labor Code Section 3601(a)(1) do not include all common-law batteries, but only those that are specifically intended to injure.ⁿ⁹

If the employer condones what courts have described as "horseplay" among its employees, an employee who engages in it is acting within the scope of employment under Labor Code Section 3601(a) and is immune from suit, unless exceptions apply.ⁿ¹⁰

In an appropriate case, an employee may be able to recover on a theory of intentional infliction of emotional distress based on the same facts.ⁿ¹¹ However, it appears that if the coemployee's conduct does not involve "a willful and physical act of aggression," placing it within the statutory exception, the exclusive remedy would bar an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress arising out of conduct that is a normal part of the employment relationship; such conduct includes demotions, promotions, criticism of work practices, or frictions in negotiations involving grievances.ⁿ¹²

Although a tort suit is authorized against an employee who injures another employee through willful and unprovoked physical aggression or intoxication, an employer may not be held vicariously liable for damages resulting from such injuries.ⁿ¹³ However, a cause of action against an employer may lie if the employer ratifies tortious conduct toward the injured employee by a coemployee.ⁿ¹⁴

Furthermore, injunctive relief is available to help prevent potential acts of violence against employees by current or former coemployees. In 1994, the Legislature passed the Workplace Violence Safety Act, which allows an employer to seek a temporary restraining order or injunction on behalf of an employee who has been the victim of workplace violence or any credible threat of workplace violence.ⁿ¹⁵

For the workers' compensation exclusive remedy doctrine to apply to bar a tort action against a purported co-employee, the defendant must be a co-employee. For example, in Moehring v. Thomas,^{n15.1} the plaintiff's decedent and the defendant did business together and were hired by a contractor to maintain fire roads. The plaintiff's decedent was killed by machinery operated by the defendant. The trial court concluded that defendant, who did not have a contractors' license, was an employee as a matter of law pursuant to Labor Code Section 2750.5, which creates a rebuttable presumption that a worker performing services for which a contractors' license is required is an employee rather than an independent contractor. Section 2750.5 further provides that a worker performing any activity for which a license is required must hold a valid contractors' license as a condition of having independent contractor status. However, Business and Professions Code Section 7049 exempts from the contractors' license requirement any construction or maintenance work incidental to the clearing of land in rural districts for fire prevention purposes. Undisputed evidence established that the work performed by defendant was for fire prevention purposes in a rural district. Thus, according to the court of appeal, there was a question of fact under Section 2750.5 whether defendant was an employee or an independent contractor, and the trial court erred when it entered summary judgment in defendant's favor on the ground that he was a fellow employee as a matter of law and that workers' compensation was, therefore, the exclusive remedy.

[b] Special Employment

When an employer lends an employee to another employer and relinquishes to the borrowing employer some right of control over the employee's activities, a "special employment relationship" arises between the borrowing employer and the employee.^{n15.2} Once a special employment relationship is identified, two consequences ensue:^{n15.3}

- The special employer's liability for workers' compensation coverage to the employee.
- The special employer's and its other employees' immunity from a common law tort action flowing from the exclusivity of the compensation remedy embodied in Labor Code section 3601.

In determining whether a special employment relationship exists, the primary consideration is whether the special employer has the right to control and direct the activities of the alleged employee or the manner and method in which the work is performed, whether or not the employer exercises that control.^{n15.4} The decision turns on the following factors:^{n15.5}

- Whether the borrowing employer's control over the employee and the work the employee is performing extends beyond mere suggestion of details or cooperation.
- Whether the employee is performing the borrowing employer's work.
- Whether there was an agreement, understanding, or meeting of the minds between the original and borrowing employer.
- Whether the employee acquiesced in the new work situation.
- Whether the original employer terminated its relationship with the employee.
- Whether the borrowing employer furnished the tools and place for performance.
- Whether the new employment was over a considerable length of time.
- Whether the borrowing employer had the right to fire the employee.
- Whether the borrowing employer had the obligation to pay the employee.

Circumstances tending to negate the existence of a special employment relationship include the following:^{15.6}

- The employee is not paid by and cannot be discharged by the borrowing employer.
- The employee is a skilled worker with substantial control over operational details.
- The employee is not engaged in the borrowing employer's usual business.
- The employee is employed for only a brief period of time.
- The employee uses using tools and equipment furnished by the lending employer.

Although the terms of a contract may specify that a special employer retains the right to control the details of an individual's work or purports to establish an employment relationship, the terminology used in an agreement is not conclusive, even in the absence of fraud or mistake. There still must be evidence to support the inference to be drawn from the contract terms.^{15.7}

Whether a special employment relationship exists generally is a question of fact.^{15.8} However, if neither the facts nor inferences are in conflict, the question is one of law that may be decided on summary judgment.^{15.9}

For example, in a tort action involving the entertainment industry, the workers' compensation exclusive remedy doctrine applied to bar the action by the injured employee, who was a stuntman, and his wife. The employee and his wife sued three individuals and their solely-owned corporations. The corporations were "loan-out" corporations, and the use of loan-out corporations was a common practice in the entertainment industry. When the individuals were hired by the producer to work on the production, they informed the producer they each had a loan-out corporation. Three-way contracts were entered into in which the loan-out corporations agreed to furnish the services of their owners and sole employees to the producer; the producer agreed to pay the loan-out corporations for the owners/employees' services; and the owners/employees agreed to the arrangement. The loan-out corporations themselves did not participate in any way in the production after the loan-out agreements were signed, except to receive payment for their owners/employees' services.^{15.10} In granting summary judgment to the individual defendants and their corporations, the trial court found, and the Court of Appeal affirmed, that they were special employees of the production company of which the stuntman was also an employee. The employment agreements between the production company and each of the individual defendants expressly identified the individual defendants as "special employees," subject to both the benefits and limitations of the workers' compensation laws. Further, the evidence supported the production company's ultimate authority to control and direct each of the individual defendants' activities. Although the individual defendants received their paychecks from their respective loan-out corporations rather than from the production company, the undisputed evidence established the relationships with their loan-out corporations were administrative only, and existed solely for payment purposes. Although the length of their respective employments was relatively short, it was also standard practice in the entertainment industry to employ the person solely for the length of time his or her services were needed for the specific production.^{15.11} The undisputed evidence established that ultimate authority over the production, both substantive and aesthetic, belonged not to the individual defendants, but to the production company. Further, no reasonable inference could be drawn that each of the corporate defendants, i.e., the loan-out companies, was engaged in a "project of mutual interest" with the production company, such that no transfer of control over the borrowed employee's activities occurred. Finally, the plaintiffs did not present any evidence from which a jury could infer the corporate defendants retained some control over their respective employees so that they could remain vicariously liable notwithstanding their employees' special employment relationship with the production company.^{15.12}

[2] Injuries Caused by Acts Outside Coemployee's Scope of Employment

The exclusive remedy provisions of Labor Code Section 3601 apply only to tortious conduct of a coemployee that is within the scope of the tortfeasor's employment.¹⁶ Employees are thus not accorded as broad an exemption from civil liability as employers, because the phrase "scope of employment" expresses a more restrictive concept than the phrase "arising out of and in the course of employment."¹⁷ In Saala v. McFarland,¹⁸ the Supreme Court held that a worker who was struck by a car driven by a coemployee in the employer's parking lot after their shift had ended was entitled to pursue a civil action against the coemployee although the injured worker had already received workers' compensation benefits. It has been held that "scope of employment" for the purposes of workers' compensation law should be construed in at least as restrictive a manner as it is under the doctrine of respondeat superior.¹⁹ In addition, one court of appeal has held that plaintiff's claims for work-related disability discrimination under the FEHA and for emotional distress were not barred by the worker's compensation exclusive remedy provisions because "work-related injury discrimination" is not a normal risk of the compensation bargain.²⁰

Labor Code Section 3602, as amended in 1982, which sharply limited the application of the dual capacity doctrine with respect to employers,²¹ does not protect coemployees from civil liability. However, coemployees do enjoy the immunity created by Labor Code Section 3601, which expressly immunizes them for acts within the scope of their employment.²² The California Supreme Court has held that the 1982 amendment of Section 3601 confirms that there can be no judicially created exceptions to the immunity from civil liability granted to coemployees.²³ Thus, a physician who was employed by a professional football team to provide treatment to players injured in the course of their employment was held to be protected from a malpractice suit by the statutory immunity of Section 3601, because the physician was acting within the scope of his employment when he diagnosed and treated the plaintiff whose injury was proximately caused by his employment by the team.²⁴ However, if a coemployee provides medical services other than those contemplated by the employee's employment and in so doing is not acting for the employer, he or she no longer enjoys the immunity from suit provided by Section 3601 for acts that are in the scope of employment.²⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws Exclusivity General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 3601(a).

For the standard jury instruction for the coemployee's affirmative defense that the injury is covered by workers' compensation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2810 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim that the coemployee's assault was a willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2811. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim that of a coemployee's willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2804. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim that the injury was caused by the coemployee's intoxication, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2812. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim of injury caused by coemployee's intoxication, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2805. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n2)Footnote 2. Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1004-1005, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57; for Lab. Code § 3600(a)(7), see § 20.23[2]. See, e.g., Jones v. Dept. of Corrections (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1367, 1383-1384, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 200 (former corrections officer's assault and battery claim against fellow officer were barred by workers' compensation exclusivity rule, because circumstances surrounding and injury resulting from altercation over wheelbarrow were not of sufficient gravity to come within exception).

(n3)Footnote 3. Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1005, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57.

(n4)Footnote 4. Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'g (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 225, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696, disapproved on other grounds, Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 718, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559.

(n5)Footnote 5. Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1001-1010, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57 (by adding "willful," Legislature underscored need for intent to inflict injury or harm), approving Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1826-1829, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405.

(n6)Footnote 6. Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1009, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57.

(n7)Footnote 7. Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1001-1010, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57.

(n8)Footnote 8. Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1006 n.6, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Soares v. City of Oakland (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1822, 1825-1831, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 405.

(n10)Footnote 10. Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1006-1007, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57; Oliva v. Heath (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 926, 933; but see Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 286, 294, 158 P.2d 9 (nonparticipating employee's injury from coemployee's horseplay is compensable).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1484-1493, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (allowing FEHA and common law remedies for "work-related injury discrimination"); Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'g (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 230-231, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 (allowing civil actions for assault, false imprisonment, and intentional infliction of emotional distress).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743, discussed in § 20.12[3].

(n13)Footnote 13. See Lab. Code § 3601(b); Torres v. Parkhouse Tire Service, Inc. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 995, 1002, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564, 30 P.3d 57; Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1486-1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (prohibiting imposition of civil liability on employer for employee's assault and battery against coemployee, rejecting plaintiff's argument that employer liability in these circumstances is based on doctrine of respondeat superior); cf. Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) (authorizing suit for assault against coemployee, but not against employer); Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) (addressing assault on employee by employer, not by coemployee).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (acknowledging that if employer ratifies or joins in assault by one employee against coemployee, employer could be jointly liable with coemployee); Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'g (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 228, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 (action against employer for assault, false imprisonment, and intentional infliction of emotional distress not barred by Lab. Code § 3601 when employer failed to criticize or take any action against coemployee after learning of his tortious conduct); Meyer v. Graphic Arts Int'l Union (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 176, 178-179, 151 Cal. Rptr. 597 (separate cause of action against employer exists when employer allegedly acted through agent in assaulting and raping plaintiff); cf. Halliman v. Los Angeles Unified Sch. Dist. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 46, 50-52, 209 Cal. Rptr. 175 (school district not liable at common law for injuries suffered by teacher when student with history of assaultive behavior attacked him); Roberts v. Pup'N' Taco Driveup (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 278, 282-284, 206 Cal. Rptr. 533 (workers' compensation exclusive remedy when employer's conduct with regard to coemployee's tortious act was negligent rather than intentionally tortious).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8; See also § 21.71.

(n16)Footnote 15.1. Moehring v. Thomas (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1515, 1521-1524, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 118.

(n17)Footnote 15.2. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 889, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313. See also Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 492, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355.

(n18)Footnote 15.3. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 889, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313; Santa Cruz Poultry, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 575, 578, 239 Cal. Rptr. 578. See also Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 175, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811.

(n19)Footnote 15.4. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 888-889, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313. See also S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399; Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 175, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811.

(n20)Footnote 15.5. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 889, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313. See also Riley v. Southwest Marine, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1242, 1250, 250 Cal. Rptr. 718.

(n21)Footnote 15.6. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 889, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313. See also Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 492, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355.

(n22)Footnote 15.7. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 889, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313.

(n23)Footnote 15.8. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 889, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313. See also Kowalski v. Shell Oil Co. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 168, 175, 151 Cal. Rptr. 671, 588 P.2d 811.

(n24)Footnote 15.9. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 889, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313; Wedek v. Unocal Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 848, 857, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501; Johnson v. Berkofsky-Barret Productions, Inc. (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1067, 1071, 260 Cal. Rptr. 67.

(n25)Footnote 15.10. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 885-887, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313 .

(n26)Footnote 15.11. Compare Von Beltz v. Stuntman, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1467, 255 Cal. Rptr. 755 (in action involving stuntwoman and question of special employment, there was conflicting evidence for jury to resolve).

(n27)Footnote 15.12. Caso v. Nimrod Productions, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 881, 890-895, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313 .

(n28)Footnote 16. See Lagies v. Copley (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 958, 969-970, 168 Cal. Rptr. 368 , disapproved on other grounds, Brown v. Kelly Broadcasting Co. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 711, 738 (in action for intentional infliction of emotional distress based on coemployees' treatment of plaintiff in job context, court found that plaintiff's complaint, which alleged that defendant's actions were committed outside scope of employment, stated valid cause of action).

(n29)Footnote 17. Brittell v. Young (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 400, 403, 153 Cal. Rptr. 387 .

(n30)Footnote 18. Saala v. McFarland (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 124, 45 Cal. Rptr. 144, 403 P.2d 400 .

(n31)Footnote 19. Saala v. McFarland (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 124, 130, 45 Cal. Rptr. 144, 403 P.2d 400 ; Brittell v. Young (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 400, 403, 153 Cal. Rptr. 387 . For discussion of respondeat superior generally, see ch. 30.

(n32)Footnote 20. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1492-1493, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 .

(n33)Footnote 21. See discussion in § 20.12[1][d], [2][a], [b].

(n34)Footnote 22. Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 737-738, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1 ; see also Oliva v. Heath (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 926, 933-934, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613 (pranks and practical jokes condoned by employer are within coemployee's scope of employment under Lab. Code § 3601, making coemployee immune from negligence liability).

(n35)Footnote 23. Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 728-739, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1 .

(n36)Footnote 24. Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 737-738, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1 .

(n37)Footnote 25. Hendy v. Losse (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 723, 741, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543, 819 P.2d 1 (disapproving the holding to the contrary in Hoffman v. Rogers (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 655, 99 Cal. Rptr. 455).

29 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part B. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST EMPLOYERS AND THIRD PARTIES

Subpart 1. Actions by Employee

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.44

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.44 Suits Against Third Parties

[1] Generally

Workers' compensation law does not affect an employee's right of action in tort against third parties. An injured employee within the scope of the workers' compensation system maintains all rights of action against third parties.ⁿ¹ Although Labor Code § 3852 purports to preserve tort actions against any person other than the employer, it is clear that certain tort actions against coemployees are barred by the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ² In addition, Labor Code § 3850(b) qualifies Labor Code § 3852 by defining "employer" to include "insurer"; hence, the insurer, except to the extent that it engages in intentionally tortious conduct towards the employee, retains immunity from lawsuit as the alter ego of the employer.ⁿ³ An election of remedies is not required, and an injured employee may pursue both a workers' compensation claim against his or her employer and a tort action against a third party.ⁿ⁴ Actions against third-party tortfeasors are preserved, since the compensation system was not designed to extend immunity to strangers.ⁿ⁵ An employee's right of action against a third person is not barred by the fact that the employer of the injured employee was also at fault in causing the harm, or by the fact that the employee has recovered workers' compensation benefits for injuries arising out of the third party's tortious act.ⁿ⁶ For discussion of the effect of the employer's fault on the employee's recovery from a third party, see [4], below.

Both an employee and an employer may pursue an action against a third party.^{n6.1} When attorneys separately representing an employer and an employee each actively prosecute an action against a third party, the fee of the employee's attorney must come out of the employee's share of any recovery, either by judgment or by settlement. If the employee's share of the recovery is zero, the employee's attorney fees may not be paid from the amount recovered by judgment or settlement.^{n6.2}

Suits against third parties are available in a number of factual situations when a worker is injured on the jobsite. For example, if an employee has been injured on the job by a defective product manufactured by a party other than the employer, the employee may be able to recover from that party under a products liability theory. Note that if the employer manufactured the product, workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy except in certain limited situations.ⁿ⁷ For discussion of products liability generally, see Cotchett and Cartwright, California Products Liability Actions (rev. ed.) (Matthew Bender).

In Miller v. King,ⁿ⁸ plaintiff slipped and fell at a restaurant where she was employed as a waitress. The restaurant was owned by a corporation, from which plaintiff received workers' compensation benefits. Plaintiff brought a third-party premises liability suit against the owners of the property where the restaurant was located, who also were majority shareowners in the corporation that owned the restaurant. The trial court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment on the ground that the action was barred by the exclusive remedy doctrine of workers' compensation, but the court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal noted that Labor Code Section 3602(a) makes workers' compensation an employee's exclusive remedy against his or her employer, even if the employer occupies another or dual capacity with respect to the employee.ⁿ⁹ The dual capacity provision ordinarily bars a premises liability action if the property on which the accident occurred is owned by the employer. However, the court held that the statute did not apply to the defendant property owners because plaintiff was not employed by them; she was employed by the corporation. The fact that the defendants owned stock in the corporation did not make them plaintiff's employers, since a corporation is an entity with a legal existence separate from that of its shareholders.ⁿ¹⁰

The relationship between a third-party owner and a corporate employer may shield that third party from tort liability under the appropriate circumstances, however. The court of appeal in *Doney v. TRW, Inc.*ⁿ¹¹ held that a parent corporation could not be liable in tort under theories of alter ego and vicarious liability for the actions of a subsidiary corporation when suit in tort against the subsidiary corporation is precluded by the exclusivity doctrine of the workers' compensation law. In Doney, the heirs of decedent employees of the subsidiary corporation had brought suit for negligence and premises liability against the parent and subsidiary corporations, but summary judgment was entered for the subsidiary employer based on the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation law.ⁿ¹² The court of appeal, relying on the reasoning of the California Supreme Court in Privette v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹³ concluded that allowing vicarious liability of a parent corporation under a theory of alter ego would result in greater liability for a non-negligent person (the parent corporation) than for a negligent person (the subsidiary employer), would give an unwarranted windfall to employees who work for corporations by exempting them from the limits of the workers' compensation law, and would, due to the unavailability of equitable indemnity, place an "onerous" burden on a party who is without fault for the injury.ⁿ¹⁴

Similarly, relying on the reasoning set forth in Privette, the court of appeal in *Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corporation*ⁿ¹⁵ held that an injured employee cannot pursue a personal injury action against a non-negligent member of a joint venture or enterprise when another member of the joint venture negligently injures the employee and provides workers' compensation coverage. In so holding, the court reasoned that a joint venture sued for the negligence of one venturer is entitled to indemnity from the negligent venturer. The workers' compensation exclusive remedy doctrine would operate to prevent the joint venture from seeking such indemnity, and make unavailable a remedy to which the joint venture is legally entitled. Moreover, the court noted that the public policy regarding workers' compensation coverage favors uniform compensation for all injured employees, regardless of the structure or organization of the business that hires the particular employee.ⁿ¹⁶

In Waste Management, Inc. v. Superior Court,^{n16.1} the court held that the survivors of an employee killed by one of the employer's trucks while working as a mechanic could not state a cause of action against the employer's parent company based on allegations the parent controlled the budget of its subsidiary and prevented the subsidiary from replacing or repairing dangerous and improperly maintained trash trucks, including the one that killed the employee. A parent corporation is not liable for injuries of a subsidiary's employee in the absence of evidence establishing a duty owed by the parent corporation to the employee. The parent may owe a duty arising out of obligations independent of the parent-subsidiary relationship, but the survivors failed to allege any independent tort committed by the parent, because there were no allegations the parent assumed a duty to ensure the safety of the subsidiary's employees, or that the parent owned, operated, manufactured, sold or serviced the truck that killed the employee. Negligently controlling or intentionally mismanaging a subsidiary's budget does not create a duty on the part of the parent corporation to ensure safety or prevent injuries to the subsidiary's employees. Alleging that the parent instructed the subsidiary not to repair or replace the trucks and affirmatively prevented the subsidiary from doing so by withholding funds did not allege a cause of action because the survivors did not plead that the parent exercised control of the subsidiary to a degree exceeding the control normally exercised by a parent corporation. On the other hand, if the parent completely and absolutely controlled the subsidiary, rendering the subsidiary incapable of repairing or replacing its own trucks, the corporations would be a single, indistinguishable economic entity, and the parent would be an employer entitled to the protection of the workers' compensation exclusive remedy.

For discussion of indemnity of third-party tortfeasors by negligent employers, see [4], below. For discussion of the employer's right to reimbursement of workers' compensation benefits paid against third-party tortfeasors, see § 20.50.

[2] Employees of Independent Contractor; Peculiar Risk Doctrine; Nondelegable Duty Doctrine

Employees of an independent contractor are not normally considered employees of the other party to the contract.ⁿ¹⁷ Thus, under the rule that an injured employee may sue any third person in tort, when an employee of an independent contractor is injured in the course of employment, the employee is entitled to sue the person who contracted with his or her employer for any wrongful acts committed by that person.ⁿ¹⁸

Generally, the hirer of an independent contractor is not vicariously liable to third parties for the torts of the contractor or that of the contractor's employees.ⁿ¹⁹ Thus, absent an exception to this rule, the independent contractor's employees may not sue the hirer of the contractor unless the hirer himself or herself was negligent or committed some other tortious act. One exception to the usual rule of nonliability for torts of independent contractors is the "peculiar risk doctrine." Under that doctrine, one who hires an independent contractor to do work that the hirer should recognize is likely to create a peculiar risk of physical harm to others unless special precautions are taken is vicariously liable to persons who are harmed as a result of the contractor's failure to exercise reasonable care to take such precautions.ⁿ²⁰

California courts formerly permitted the employees of an independent contractor to use the peculiar risk exception to hold a non-negligent hirer of an independent contractor liable for the negligence of contractor.ⁿ²¹ In Privette v. Superior Court,ⁿ²² the California Supreme Court overruled these cases and held that employees of an independent contractor hired to do dangerous work may not sue the hirer of their employer under the peculiar risk doctrine.ⁿ²³ The Court noted that when a property owner or other person who hires an independent contractor is held vicariously liable under the peculiar risk doctrine, he or she can normally seek equitable indemnity from the contractor, thus assuring that the ultimate responsibility is borne by the negligent contractor.ⁿ²⁴ But when the person injured is an employee of the contractor, the contractor is usually shielded from liability for indemnity by the workers' compensation law,ⁿ²⁵ thus undercutting part of the rationale for the peculiar risk doctrine.ⁿ²⁶ Furthermore, the Court concluded, the workers' compensation system generally serves the same function as the peculiar risk doctrine in these circumstances by ensuring that employees who are injured on the job will be compensated for that injury and by spreading the risk created by the performance of dangerous work among those who contract for and benefit from such work.ⁿ²⁷ Based on the holding in Privette, one court of appeal has further held that a landowner is not vicariously liable for the negligence of any simultaneously-working independent contractors for an injury caused to any employee of the contractors, even when the injury was caused through the negligence of a contractor who was not the injured employee's employer.ⁿ²⁸ The California Supreme Court's decision in Privette, abrogating the peculiar risk doctrine insofar as it allowed employees of independent contractor's to sue the hirer of the contractor, has been held to apply retroactively.ⁿ²⁹

In Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc.,^{n29.1} the Supreme Court resolved conflicting Court of Appeal decisions regarding the scope of the Privette exception to the doctrine of peculiar risk.^{n29.2} The Court noted that in some cases, an independent contractor's employee had brought tort claims against the employer's hirer based on the hirer's direct liability for failing to provide special precautions in the contract or otherwise for peculiar risks arising from inherently dangerous work; this form of hirer liability is described as direct liability and derives from Section 413 of the Restatement of Torts, Second. In other cases, the hirer does take the precautions but the contractor fails to exercise reasonable care in following the precautions; this hirer liability is called vicarious liability and derives from Section 416 of the Restatement of Torts, Second.^{n29.3} The Toland court found these distinctions to be "misleading" and held that "Privette... bars employees of a hired contractor who are injured by the contractor's negligence from seeking recovery against the hiring person, irrespective of whether recovery is sought under the theory of peculiar risk set forth in section 416 or section 413...".^{n29.4}

In Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy,^{n29.5} the California Supreme Court held that the rationale of Privette and Toland, which involved tort liability under the peculiar risk doctrine, bars an employee of an independent contractor from bringing a negligent hiring action against the hirer of the contractor. In examining Privette, Toland, and the peculiar risk doctrine, the Court found that sound policy considerations supported the rationale that the hirer should not have to pay for injuries caused by the contractor's negligent performance because the workers' compensation system already covers the same injuries.^{n29.6}

In Hooker v. Department of Transportation,^{n29.7} the Court held that a hirer of an independent contractor is not liable to an employee of the contractor merely because the hirer retained control over safety conditions at the worksite; but the hirer is liable to a contractor's employee insofar as the hirer's exercise of retained control affirmatively contributed to the employee's injuries.^{n29.8} Further, in McKown v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc.,^{n29.9} the Court held that a hirer is liable to an employee of an independent contractor insofar as the hirer's provision of unsafe equipment affirmatively contributes to the employee's injury. The Court had previously left these questions open in Camargo.^{n29.10}

In Ruiz v. Herman Weissker, Inc., the court held that the California Supreme Court's analyses in Privette and Hooker barred similar claims against the agent of the hirer of the subcontractor. Thus, a contract administrator for a utility's distribution line construction projects, which, pursuant to its contract with the utility, was responsible for reviewing plans to ensure proper planning and feasibility and for monitoring the construction work for safety and contract compliance, could not be held liable for the electrocution death of an employee of a subcontractor hired by the utility to replace old insulators on two of their transmission lines. Unlike the hirer in Privette, the contract administrator did not have a contractual relationship with the subcontractor and did not pay for the costs of providing the deceased employee's workers' compensation coverage. The contract administrator also did not directly benefit from the work the subcontractor was hired to do. Shifting the risk of injury to the contract administrator would not accomplish assurance of adequate compensation to the victim or provide a mechanism by which the ultimate responsibility for the injury would be borne by the person whose fault caused that injury or, failing that, by the person who benefitted from the work. In carrying out the subcontractor's contract with the utility, the deceased employee was engaged in work posing a special risk of harm, and his injuries arose out of work for which the subcontractor bore primary responsibility.^{n29.11} With regard to premises liability, assuming that the utility had a nondelegable duty to maintain the safety of its electric utility systems for the benefit of the employees of independent contractors hired to work on those systems, there is no authority to establish that the utility's attempt to delegate such a duty to an agent creates liability on the part of the agent.^{n29.12} With regard to liability for control over the work, the subcontractor was responsible for the work and for ensuring that the work was properly and safely performed and that it contractually assumed responsibility for the safety of its employees. Although the utility retained the ability to control safety conditions at the jobsite and hired the contract administrator to monitor those conditions, the contract administrator's failure to exercise control in the face of unsafe work practices by the subcontractor's crew was not actionable. Nor was its failure to institute particular safety measures at the jobsite actionable absent some evidence that either the contract administrator or the utility had agreed to implement such measures.^{n29.13} Finally, the fact that the utility had a duty under the California Code of Regulations and industry standards to have a rescue plan in the event of injury to someone who was working on an electric utility tower did not mean that the contract administrator also owed the deceased employee those duties.^{n29.14}

In Bell v. Greg Agee Construction, Inc.,^{n29.15} an employee of a subcontractor on a construction site sued the general contractor after a wall fell on him. The subcontractor's personnel had failed to properly brace the wall. At the time, the subcontractor was not carrying workers' compensation insurance, and the injured worker sued the general contractor. A court of appeal concluded that Privette applied, and the fact that the injured worker's employer did not have workers' compensation insurance coverage did not affect the liability or lack thereof of the general contractor. The fundamental social policy of providing compensation to an injured employee was achieved by the worker's eligibility to seek compensation from the state's Uninsured Employers Fund, so that there was no justification to impose vicarious liability on the general contractor.

In Grahn v. Tosco Corp.,^{n29.16} a court of appeal concluded that the Supreme Court's decision in Privette does not abrogate California law to the effect that a hirer of an independent contractor may be held liable to the independent contractor's employee (who sustains work-related injuries that are also compensable by workers' compensation) for the hirer's own independent fault; Privette only abrogates a hirer's liability under theories grounded in principles of vicarious liability.^{n29.17} The plaintiff asserted three negligence theories against the work-site owner that hired the independent contractor: (1) the defendant was negligent in hiring the independent contractor to remove asbestos-containing materials without any indication that the contractor was licensed or qualified to engage in that work; (2) the defendant retained control over the details of the work performed by the independent contractor, which created a separate legal duty based on the negligent failure to exercise control or supervision; and (3) the defendant was negligent in the use and maintenance of its premises, which exposed others to an unreasonable risk of harm.^{n29.18} Upholding the first theory, the court held that negligent hiring is a theory of personal rather than vicarious liability, and it noted that California courts have consistently held that the duty of a hirer to employ a competent independent contractor runs to the employees of the negligently hired independent contractor, allowing them to file suit against the hirer for injuries sustained on the job.^{n29.19}

However, in Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy, ^{n29.20} the California Supreme Court expressly disapproved this holding and held that an employee of an independent contractor may not sue the hirer of the contractor for negligent hiring. Next, the court found that substantial evidence existed to support a finding that the hirer defendant retained sufficient control over the safety aspects of the insulation tear-out to impose liability; however, the control instruction was erroneous because it allowed liability based on nothing more than a showing that the defendant retained ultimate control of its own property.^{n29.21} Finally, the court found that when the operative details of the work are not under the hirer's control, and the dangerous condition causing the injury is either created by the contractor or is the object of the contractor's work, the duty to protect the contractor's employees resides with the contractor, not the hirer; and this is true even though the hirer also generally controls the premises. In Grahn, the instruction on this point was erroneous because it improperly imputed liability to the hirer for danger created by the contractor.^{n29.22}

In Tilley v. CZ Master Ass'n., ^{n29.23} a homeowners' association was not liable to a security guard provided to the homeowners' association by his employer for injuries he suffered as a result of an assault. The homeowners' association neither required nor expected its unarmed security personnel to confront potentially violent persons, or otherwise to place themselves in danger, and did nothing to alter the basic scope of its security guards' "observe and report" responsibilities. It thus could not be held liable for the consequences of the security guard's decision to take action beyond the scope of his duties. Moreover, the association owed its security guards no duty to restrict or curtail youth parties within its premises; but even assuming it had such a duty, its failure to take affirmative steps to restrict or control juvenile parties within its property, could not be construed as having affirmatively contributed to the security guard's injuries for purposes of the peculiar risk doctrine.^{n29.24} Even assuming the association were somehow responsible for requiring security guards to confront and attempt to detain violent wrongdoers, that task would be considered a normal part of the job for which the security guard's employer and the security guard was hired. As such, employees of the security guard's employer would have expressly assumed the risk of such a danger, and the association consequently had no duty to protect them from it.^{n29.24}

On the other hand, in Barclay v. Jesse M. Lange Distributor, Inc., ^{n29.25} the court held that an injured employee of a subcontractor showed that the property owner could be liable for breach of its regulatory duty to provide fire extinguishers pursuant to the California Fire Code and reversed the judgment entered in favor of the property owner under Privette. The employee was injured when fuel storage tanks on the property exploded. The property owner had contracted to have the tanks cleaned and removed. The injured employee was employed by a subcontractor hired to assist with the cleaning of the tanks before they were transported. The employee contended the property owner was liable for affirmatively contributing to the injury by its direct negligence in breach of nondelegable duties imposed by the 1998 California Fire Code, applicable to petroleum bulk plant facilities, that suitable portable fire extinguishers be located within specified distances of those portions of the facility where fires are likely to occur.^{n29.26} The court held that neither Privette nor its progeny addressed the theory of liability asserted by the injured employee, which was breach of regulatory duties. The court then held that an owner may be liable if its breach of regulatory duties affirmatively contributed to injury of a contractor's employee, regardless of whether it voluntarily retained control or actively participated in the project. For purposes of imposing liability for affirmatively contributing to a plaintiff's injuries, the affirmative contribution need not be active conduct, but may be in the form of an omission to act.^{n29.27}

Closely related to the "peculiar risk doctrine" is the doctrine of "nondelegable duties." Under this doctrine, when the law imposes a definite affirmative duty on one by reason of his or her relationship with others, whether as an owner or proprietor of land or chattels or in some other capacity, such persons cannot escape liability for failure to perform the imposed duty by delegating it to an independent contractor.ⁿ³⁰

Although courts have allowed employees of an independent contractor to sue the hirer of the contractor under the nondelegable duties theory,ⁿ³¹ the continuing availability of the nondelegable duties exception to employees of an independent contractor seems questionable in light of Privette. The reasons given by the Court in Privette for holding the peculiar risk doctrine inapplicable to actions by the independent contractor's employees against the hirer of the contractor could be argued to be equally applicable to actions alleging breach of a nondelegable duty.

However, the court of appeal in Felmlee v. Falcon Cable TV ⁿ³² stated in dictum that the doctrine of nondelegable duties survives Privette. In Felmlee, a worker who was injured while repairing a cable television line sued the general contractor who hired his employer, an independent contractor, for breach of a nondelegable duty. The worker alleged that the general contractor had a duty to maintain safe working conditions. He further asserted that the doctrine of nondelegable duties was not abrogated by the California Supreme Court's decision in Privette. The court of appeal stated that Privette precludes actions only under the peculiar risk doctrine, but did not discuss, nor purport to abolish, actions under the doctrine of nondelegable duties. The court held, however, that the doctrine of nondelegable duties did not apply in this case because a general contractor has no duty to warn an employee of an independent contractor of obvious dangerous conditions.ⁿ³³

In Kinsman v. Unocal Corp., ^{n33.1} discussing the Privette line of cases, premises liability, and nondelegable duties within the context of premises liability, the California Supreme Court held that a landowner that hires an independent contractor may be liable to the contractor's employee even if the landowner does not retain control over the work if all of the following conditions are present:^{n33.2}

- The landowner knew, or should have known, of a latent or concealed preexisting hazardous condition on its property;
- The contractor did not know and could not have reasonably discovered this hazardous condition; and
- The landowner failed to warn the contractor about this condition.

In Kinsman, the landowner employed an independent contractor to build and dismantle scaffolding used by other trades. The plaintiff was a carpenter employed by the independent contractor, and he was exposed to asbestos in the course of that work, which was a substantial factor contributing to the carpenter's development of mesothelioma. The landowner conceded that it was aware of the hazards of asbestos dust by the time the carpenter was working on the scaffolding on its premises, but claimed that the carpenter was not exposed to asbestos dust in a sufficient concentration to cause him harm. The independent contractor did not provide safety equipment to the carpenter, and there was no specific evidence regarding whether it, or any other contractor working for the landowner, knew or should have known at the time the carpenter worked at the refinery that asbestos posed a safety hazard. After reviewing Privette and the cases following it, the California Supreme Court first opined that a useful way to view those cases was in terms of delegation. In Privette and its progeny, the courts concluded that, principally because of the availability of workers' compensation, the policy reasons for limiting delegation do not apply to the hirer's duty to provide the employees of an independent contractor with a safe working environment. Further, the policy in favor of delegation of responsibility and assignment of liability is so strong in this context that the Court has not allowed it to be circumvented on a negligent hiring theory. Nonetheless, when the hirer does not fully delegate the task of providing a safe working environment, but in some manner actively participates in how the job is done, and that participation affirmatively contributes to the employee's injury, the hirer may be liable in tort to the employee.^{n33.3} The Court then applied those principles to Kinsman, and found first that when there is a known safety hazard on a landowner's premises that can be addressed through reasonable safety precautions on the part of the independent contractor, a corollary of Privette and its progeny is that the hirer generally delegates the responsibility to take such precautions to the contractor, and is not liable to the contractor's employee if the contractor fails to do so.^{n33.4} However, if the hazard is concealed from the contractor, but known to the landowner, the landowner cannot effectively delegate to the contractor responsibility for the safety of its employees if it fails to disclose critical information needed to fulfill that responsibility, and therefore the landowner would be liable to the contractor's employee if the employee's injury is attributable to an undisclosed hazard.^{n33.5} The Court also held that while a landowner's duty generally includes a duty to inspect for concealed hazards, the responsibility for job safety delegated to independent contractors may and generally does include explicitly or implicitly a limited duty to inspect the premises as well. Thus, the principles enunciated in Privette suggest that the landowner would not be liable when the contractor has failed to engage in inspections of the premises implicitly or explicitly delegated to it.^{n33.6} The Court found no reason to distinguish conceptually between premises liability based on a hazardous substance that is concealed because it is invisible to the contractor and known only to the landowner and a hazardous substance that is visible but is known to be hazardous only to the landowner.^{n33.7} The Court also distinguished the holding in Toland regarding fraudulent concealment, because unlike Kinsman, Toland did not involve premises liability for latent hazards, and the court had no occasion to decide the precise conditions under which that liability would attach. In the premises liability situation, landowner liability is measured by a negligence standard, and a landowner would be liable not only when it deliberately withholds information but also when it negligently fails to discover or disclose latent hazards. Therefore, the element of fraudulent intent required in fraudulent concealment cases is not necessary for premises liability in these circumstances.^{n33.8} The Court then reiterated the rule that a landowner that does not retain control is not liable for an injury inflicted by an independent contractor or its employees on the employee of another independent contractor.^{n33.9} Finally, the Court held that the general premises liability instruction given to the jury was error. When the "dangerous or defective condition" can be remedied by taking reasonable safety precautions, the landowner who has delegated job safety to the independent contractor only has a duty to the employee if the condition is concealed. The general premises liability instruction did not make clear that the hazard must have been unknown and not reasonably ascertainable to the independent contractor that employed the carpenter and to other contractors working contemporaneously on the premises. Further, the failure to properly instruct the jury was prejudicial. Although the jury, in finding the landowner negligent under a premises liability theory, implicitly found that the landowner knew or should have known of the hazard of asbestos dust on its property, it made no finding about whether the independent contractor that employed the carpenter, or any other contractor working at the same time, knew or should have known of the hazard, and whether the landowner was or should have been aware that these contractors did not know of the hazard. A finding that these contractors knew that the dust was asbestos and hazardous to an employee, would, under the principles articulated in the Privette line of cases, including the opinion in Kinsman, completely relieve the landowner of liability for any resultant employee injury.^{n33.10}

For additional discussion of the peculiar risk doctrine and nondelegable duties, see Chapter 30.

[3] Effect of Employer's Fault on Employee's Recovery From Third-Party Tortfeasor

[a] Joint and Several Liability and Effect of Proposition 51

When the doctrine of comparative indemnity was adopted in the landmark case of American Motorcycle Association v. Superior Court,ⁿ³⁴ the doctrine of joint and several liability was not abolished.ⁿ³⁵ A third-party tortfeasor was therefore held liable for all of the injured employee's damages,ⁿ³⁶ notwithstanding the fact that Labor Code Section 3864 precluded the third party from seeking indemnification from the concurrently negligent employer.ⁿ³⁷ However, the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986, Proposition 51, made significant changes in the doctrine of joint and several liability. The stated purpose of the initiative was to rectify the perceived injustices of the "deep pocket rule," under which a defendant whose fault was minimal was required to shoulder the entire liability when other more culpable tortfeasors were judgment-proof.ⁿ³⁸ Under present law, in actions for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death based on principles of comparative fault, the liability of each defendant for noneconomic damages is several, only, and not joint.ⁿ³⁹ Each defendant is liable only for the amount of noneconomic damages allocated to that defendant in direct proportion to that defendant's percentage of fault, and judgments for noneconomic damages must be made separately.ⁿ⁴⁰ The California Supreme Court has held that even though an employer who is determined to be partially at fault for an employee's injury could not be a tort or indemnity defendant because of the workers' compensation system, Proposition 51 does not provide an exception for damages attributable to the fault of persons who are immune from civil liability.ⁿ⁴¹ As a result, a third-party defendant's liability for a plaintiff-employee's non-economic damages cannot exceed the third party's proportionate share of fault as compared with all fault responsible for the plaintiff's injuries (including that of the plaintiff's employer), not merely that of the defendants present in the lawsuit.ⁿ⁴²

The passage of Proposition 51 did not change the existing law regarding an intentional tortfeasor's potential liability for the entirety of the plaintiff's damages. Further, an employer may be vicariously liable for all of a plaintiff's noneconomic damages, even if the employer itself is only negligent, if one of its employees is an intentional tortfeasor.^{n42.1}

The rule of joint and several liability also has not been changed regarding compensable economic damages.ⁿ⁴³ Thus, the negligent third party will be liable to the injured employee for the full amount of plaintiff's economic damages, plus a portion of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages corresponding to the third-party defendant's proportionate share of the fault when compared with that of the employer and other tortfeasors who may have been responsible for the injury.ⁿ⁴⁴

"Economic damages" under the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 means objectively verifiable monetary losses, including medical expenses, loss of earnings, burial costs, loss of use of property, costs of repair or replacement, costs of obtaining substitute domestic services, loss of employment, and loss of business or employment opportunities.ⁿ⁴⁵ "Noneconomic damages" under the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 means subjective, nonmonetary losses, including, but not limited to, pain, suffering, inconvenience, mental suffering, emotional stress, loss of society and companionship, loss of consortium, injury to reputation, and humiliation.ⁿ⁴⁶

[b] Offset of Workers' Compensation Benefits Against Employee's Recovery

To prevent double recovery with respect to economic damages, any workers' compensation benefits paid by the negligent employer to the employee are deducted from the employee's recovery against the third party up to the amount of the employer's proportionate share of the damages.ⁿ⁴⁷ The amount of the deduction is limited to workers' compensation benefits paid as of the time of trial; no deduction is permitted for future benefits.ⁿ⁴⁸

The California Supreme Court has stated that a third-party tortfeasor is still entitled under Proposition 51 to a credit for workers' compensation benefits paid by the negligent employer, but the Court has not addressed the question of the proper calculation of the net judgment to be entered against the third party.ⁿ⁴⁹ However, several court of appeal cases have subsequently analyzed the proper allocation of workers' compensation benefits, i.e., whether credit for workers' compensation benefits should be applied exclusively to reduce the balance of economic damages or should instead be allocated between economic and non-economic damages, after the effective date of Proposition 51.

In Torres v. Xomox Corporation,ⁿ⁵⁰ the court of appeal concluded that, under Proposition 51, workers' compensation credit should be apportioned according to the method used in Espinoza v. Machonga ⁿ⁵¹ for allocating the proceeds of a pre-arbitration settlement with one defendant between economic and non-economic damages eventually awarded against the other defendants.ⁿ⁵² Under this approach, workers' compensation benefits are to be allocated between economic and non-economic damages in the same proportions fixed for those damages by the trier of fact. The court of appeal held that the trial court correctly used the jury's finding on percentage of economic damages in calculating credit for workers' compensation benefits.ⁿ⁵³

The Court of Appeal in Scalice v. Performance Cleaning Systems ⁿ⁵⁴ also addressed the issue of the appropriate method of crediting workers' compensation benefits under Proposition 51. It concluded that the court of appeal in Torres properly allocated workers' compensation benefits using the Espinoza approach. In Scalice, the jury returned a verdict finding the employee to be 0 percent negligent, the employer 30 percent negligent, and the third-party defendant 70 percent negligent. In calculating the judgment and allocating credit for workers' compensation benefits, the trial court deducted the entire amount of workers' compensation benefits paid to the employee from that portion of the award allocated to economic damages. The court of appeal, however, determined that the trial court erred in its allocation of the workers' compensation benefits and held that workers' compensation benefits are not merely "economic damages" under Proposition 51, but rather should be viewed as the proceeds of a settlement imposed by the Legislature for claims arising out of and in the course of employment.ⁿ⁵⁵ The court of appeal said that, given the nature of workers' compensation benefits, the correct rule for allocating the credit for these benefits is the same rule used for apportioning settlement proceeds set forth in Espinoza, under which the economic portion of the settlement proceeds bears the same ratio to the total settlement as the trier of fact determines the economic damages bear to the total judgment.ⁿ⁵⁶

■ ILLUSTRATION:

Employee sustains an on-the-job injury as a result of the concurrent negligence of Employer and Third Party. Employee brings an action for damages against Third Party. Employer's workers' compensation carrier has paid $162,008.53 in benefits to Employee before trial. After trial, the jury finds that Employee has sustained a total of $677,000 in damages, with $274,000 (40.473 percent of total damages) allocated to economic damages and $403,000 to non-economic damages. The jury apportions fault as follows: (1) 30 percent to Employer, and (2) 70 percent to Third Party. The court would subtract from Employee's economic damages 40.473 percent of the total workers' compensation damages paid ($65,569.71), leaving Employee with a judgment of $208,430.29 in economic damages. The court would enter a separate judgment against Third Party for $282,100.00, representing Third Party's proportionate share of Employer's non-economic damages.ⁿ⁵⁷

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Often, an employee files both a workers' compensation claim and a court action against the same employer for redress of alleged unlawful conduct. Prior to the passage of the amendment of Internal Revenue Code, section 104(c) in 1996, it was common for employers to resolve all such outstanding claims by allocating a portion of the settlement proceeds to the workers' compensation action and a portion (typically characterized as emotional distress damages in whole or in significant part) to a separate settlement agreement. Since the passage of the amendment to Section 104(c), there is an emerging trend toward the use of workers' compensation compromise and release forms to settle all workers' compensation and non-workers' compensation claims brought by the same employee.

There are two reasons to be cautious about accepting this trend. First, a settlement payment that is disproportionately larger than the reasonable value of the workers' compensation claim may be rejected as a subterfuge to evade Section 104(c) if the settlement comes to the attention of the IRS. Second, the rules discussed in the text regarding offsets of workers' compensation recoveries against employee judgments in subsequent tort litigation suggests that workers' compensation settlements may not be treated as non-economic damages in all instances. Thus, on occasion, when an employer is one of two or more defendants in a tort action and the employer compromises its differences with the employee by paying all settlement proceeds under a workers' compensation compromise and release, there is a chance that the jury in the ongoing court action may award both economic and non-economic damages against the remaining defendants. In that instance, a portion of any payments previously paid to the employee under the Workers' Compensation Actⁿ⁵⁸ is deemed an offset to the economic damage award. Whether the IRS would treat a similar portion of the compromise and release payment by the settling employer as economic damages is an open question that is too significant to dismiss out of hand. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox

The rule prohibiting an employee from receiving a double recovery does not bar the assignment of the employer's workers' compensation lien to the employee who, in asserting the lien in the action against the third party, does so in the capacity of an assignee of the employer or compensation insurer and not as a "plaintiff."ⁿ⁵⁹

[c] No Deduction for Benefits Paid Unless Employer Found to Be Negligent

An employee's recovery against the third party may not be reduced for workers' compensation benefits paid when there has been no finding of negligence on the part of plaintiff's employer.ⁿ⁶⁰ When the employer has not been negligent, the workers' compensation benefits do not constitute an impermissible double recovery, but rather a payment from a source wholly independent of the wrongdoer.ⁿ⁶¹ Furthermore, unless the third party has introduced evidence of negligence on the part of the employer, a dismissal by the employer of its claim for reimbursement of workers' compensation benefits in the third-party action only bars the employer from seeking reimbursement from the third party; such a dismissal does not act as an adjudication of employer negligence so as to authorize reduction of the employee's recovery by the amount of the workers' compensation benefits paid.ⁿ⁶²

[d] Joinder of Employer in Proceeding to Determine Offset

A third-party tortfeasor held liable for an employee's work-related injury is entitled to seek an offset based on the amount of workers' compensation benefits paid to the employee even if the employer has not joined as a party in the employee's action, filed a complaint in intervention, or sought to interpose a lien.ⁿ⁶³ The employer must be given notice of the offset claim, so that it may have an opportunity to litigate the issue of its alleged negligence.ⁿ⁶⁴

The courts of appeal are divided, however, over whether the employer may be compelled to participate as a party in a proceeding to determine the amount of the workers' compensation offset. In *City of Sacramento v. Superior Court*ⁿ⁶⁵ and Del Monte Corp. v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁶⁶ the Courts of Appeal for the Third and First Districts, respectively, held that a third-party tortfeasor may bring an employer who has provided workers' compensation benefits into an action by cross-complaint for declaratory relief for the purpose of facilitating proof of the employer's negligence and the proper amount of any offset against the plaintiff's damages. In a later case, C.J.L. Construction, Inc. v. Universal Plumbing,ⁿ⁶⁷ the Court of Appeal for the Second District reached the opposite conclusion, holding that unless the employer or its workers' compensation carrier intervenes in the employee's action to assert its right to reimbursement of benefits paid, the employer could not be required by means of declaratory relief to participate in the action. The court reasoned that one of the purposes of the workers' compensation law (i.e., to insulate employers from tort liability) would be contravened by permitting a third party to require the employer to incur the expense of participating in a civil action without its consent.ⁿ⁶⁸ The Court of Appeal for the Fourth District has also concluded that an employer cannot be compelled to be joined in the third-party action in order to facilitate determination of the amount of the workers' compensation offset.ⁿ⁶⁹

[4] Indemnification of Third Party by Employer

Under Labor Code Section 3864, if an action by an injured employee results in a judgment against a third-party tortfeasor or a settlement by the tortfeasor, the employer is not liable for reimbursing the tortfeasor or holding the tortfeasor harmless, in the absence of a written agreement to do so executed prior to the injury.ⁿ⁷⁰ The main purpose of this statute is to eliminate an employer's liability under an equitable or implied indemnity theory when the employee is injured within the scope of employment because of the negligence or partial negligence of a third party.ⁿ⁷¹ Thus, under normal circumstances, when the tortious acts of both a third party and an employer combine to injure an employee, in the absence of an agreement otherwise, the third party is not permitted to bring an action for comparative indemnity against the employer. However, when the employer has stepped outside its protected role of employer, such as when the employer fraudulently conceals from an employee the existence of a work-related injury and the injury is thereby aggravated,ⁿ⁷² the employer is not protected by Labor Code Section 3864 from an indemnity action by a third party.ⁿ⁷³

The Legislature enacted Labor Code Section 3864 because the doctrine of implied indemnity imposed a greater burden on the employer than was contemplated under the workers' compensation system.ⁿ⁷⁴ Without this section, the employer's protection of a limit on the economic consequences of claims made under that system could be easily circumvented.ⁿ⁷⁵ A third-party's cross-complaint against an employer for indemnity is subject to demurrer unless it alleges the existence of a written indemnity agreement.ⁿ⁷⁶ Furthermore, a written agreement will not be effective to create an obligation on the part of the employer to indemnify the third-party tortfeasor unless it is signed by all parties before the injury occurs.ⁿ⁷⁷

When an employee has more than one employer, an employer held liable in tort to the employee may be considered a "third party" under Labor Code Section 3864 with respect to the others. For example, the temporary employer of a worker injured because of an unguarded power press may not seek indemnity from the employment agency that placed the worker in the job. If the worker successfully meets the requisites for Labor Code Section 4558 (exception to the exclusivity rule of workers' compensation for power press guard injuries),ⁿ⁷⁸ the employer will be considered a third party liable in tort to the employee, but will be barred by Labor Code Section 3864 from seeking indemnity from the employment agency. If the employee cannot meet the requisites for Labor Code Section 4558, the civil action will be barred, and there will be nothing to support the indemnity action against the agency.ⁿ⁷⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 3852; see, e.g., Nichols v. Keller (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1672, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 601 (injured worker entitled to pursue malpractice claim against his attorneys for failure to advise of possibility of filing third-party action and of applicable statute of limitations).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code § 3601, discussed in § 20.43[1].

(n3)Footnote 3. See Dill v. Claims Admin. Services, Inc. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1184, 1187-1188, 224 Cal. Rptr. 273 (employee's action against self-insured employer's independent claims administrator for its bad faith and intentional failure to pay workers' compensation benefits could proceed as claim against third party under Lab. Code § 5852).

(n4)Footnote 4. Huber v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (1945) 71 Cal. App. 2d 278, 284, 162 P.2d 693.

(n5)Footnote 5. Sanstad v. Industrial Accident Commission (1959) 171 Cal. App. 2d 32, 35, 339 P.2d 943.

(n6)Footnote 6. Finnegan v. Royal Realty Co. (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 409, 434-435, 218 P.2d 17; see also Galvis v.

Petito (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 551, 556-564, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560 (owner of motor vehicle is statutorily liable for injuries to employee caused by negligent operation of vehicle by coemployee, even though coemployee is immune from liability by virtue of Lab. Code § 3601).

(n7)Footnote 6.1. For discussion of employer's subrogation rights against third party, see § 20.50.

(n8)Footnote 6.2. Draper v. Aceto (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 1086, 1089, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 61, 33 P.3d 479 .

(n9)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code § 3602(a), (b)(3), discussed in § 20.12[1][d].

(n10)Footnote 8. Miller v. King (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284 .

(n11)Footnote 9. For discussion of dual capacity doctrine, see § 20.12[1][d].

(n12)Footnote 10. Miller v. King (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1735, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284 .

(n13)Footnote 11. Doney v. TRW, Inc. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292

(n14)Footnote 12. Doney v. TRW, Inc. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 248, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 .

(n15)Footnote 13. See Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 ; see also discussion in [2], below.

(n16)Footnote 14. Doney v. TRW, Inc. (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 245, 251-252, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 .

(n17)Footnote 15. Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1669-1670, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 .

(n18)Footnote 16. Orosco v. Sun-Diamond Corp. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1670, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 .

(n19)Footnote 16.1. Waste Management, Inc. v. Superior Court (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 105, 109-114, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 910 .

(n20)Footnote 17. See State Compensation Ins. F. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1941) 46 Cal. App. 2d 526, 529-530, 116 P.2d 173 but see Diamond Drill Contracting Co. v. Industrial Accident Comm'n (1926) 199 Cal. 694, 697-698, 250 P. 862 (special employment relationship may arise between employees of independent contractor and other party to contract when employees come under control of other party).

(n21)Footnote 18. See Lab. Code § 3852.

(n22)Footnote 19. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 693, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 ; Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 838, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 ; see also Whitford v. Swinerton & Walberg Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1054, 1060, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 688 ; Owens v. Giannetta-Heinrich Construction Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1667-1671, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11 .

(n23)Footnote 20. Aceves v. Regal Pale Brewing Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 502, 509, 156 Cal. Rptr. 41, 595 P.2d 619 ; Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 839, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 .

(n24)Footnote 21. See, e.g., Aceves v. Regal Pale Brewing Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 502, 509, 156 Cal. Rptr. 41, 595 P.2d 619 ; Woolen v. Aerojet General Corp. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 407, 410-411, 20 Cal. Rptr. 12, 369 P.2d 708 .

(n25)Footnote 22. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 .

(n26)Footnote 23. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 702, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 ; see Whitford v. Swinerton & Walberg Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1054, 1060, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 688 ; Owens v. Giannetta-Heinrich Construction Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1667-1671, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11 ; see also Redfeather v. Chevron USA, Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 702, 705-707, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159 (corporation that hired independent contractor to close oil well is not liable to employee for personal injuries under Privette, notwithstanding that independent contractor agreed to indemnify corporation against that liability).

(n27)Footnote 24. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 702, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 .

(n28)Footnote 25. See Lab. Code § 3864; see also [4], below.

(n29)Footnote 26. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 701, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 .

(n30)Footnote 27. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 701, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 ; Andreini v. Superior Court (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1424-1429, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 153 (after exhaustively reviewing Privette factors, court concluded that Privette exception to peculiar risk doctrine does not apply when contractor does not have workers' compensation insurance or is not otherwise self-insured).

(n31)Footnote 28. Smith v. ACandS, Inc. (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 77, 95, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 , disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy, 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 . (independent contractor employee's separate claim for negligent hiring survives legal narrowing of peculiar risk doctrine if properly supported by the evidence).

(n32)Footnote 29. Whitford v. Swinerton & Walberg Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1054, 1060, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 688 ; Redfeather v. Chevron USA, Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 702, 707-708, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159 (under Privette, corporation that hired independent contractor to close oil well is not liable to contractor's employee for personal injuries, notwithstanding independent contractor's agreement to indemnify corporation against that liability).

(n33)Footnote 29.1. Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 955 P.2d 504 .

(n34)Footnote 29.2. Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 265-268, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 955 P.2d 504 .

(n35)Footnote 29.3. Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 262-264, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 955 P.2d 504 .

(n36)Footnote 29.4. Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 267, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 955 P.2d 504 .

(n37)Footnote 29.5. Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 25 P.3d 1096 ; see Restatement Second of Torts § 411.

(n38)Footnote 29.6. Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1241-1245, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 25 P.3d 1096 .

(n39)Footnote 29.7. Hooker v. California Dept. of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 202, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 .

(n40)Footnote 29.8. See also Padilla v. Pomona College (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 661, 668-671, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 869 (college and general contractor were not liable for injuries to employee of subcontractor, where, although ultimately only defendants had ability to physically turn off pipe once accident occurred, this control did not rise to level of control necessary to impose liability, and defendants delegated control of safety measures to plaintiff's employer); Madden v. Summit View, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1275-1281, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 601 (in action by electrician, who was employee of subcontractor, against general contractor based on injuries suffered in fall, trial court properly granted general contractor summary judgment, where general contractor had no control over methods and supplied none of materials that electrician's employer used for its electrical work at site; where electrician produced virtually no evidence that general contractor retained control over general safety conditions site; where there was no evidence general contractor contributed to absence of guardrail along open side of patio, which allegedly caused electrician's injuries, because there was no evidence general contractor or its agents directed that no guardrailing or other protection against falls be placed along raised patio or that it acted in any way to prevent such railing from being installed, and absence of guardrail was open and obvious to all contractors who worked at site; and where there was no evidence general contractor or its agents directed electrician to perform his work in manner that was especially dangerous due to absence of railing); Millard v. Biosources, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1346-1352, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 177 (summary judgment in favor of general contractor in action based on injuries suffered by employee of heating and air conditioning subcontractor was proper, where employee did not submit evidence sufficient to raise triable issue of fact that general contractor affirmatively contributed to his injuries, general contractor did not control means and methods of employee's work, and none of general contractor's personnel were at worksite when employee fell; where employee could not introduce amendment to safety statute to support presumption of negligence under doctrine of negligence per se, because general contractor did not owe employee duty of care and employee did not allege in his complaint that doctrine of negligence per se applied); Lopez v. C.G.M. Development, Inc. (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 430, 437-446, 124 Cal. Rptr. 2d 227 (property owner was entitled to summary judgment in action by contractor's employee for injuries sustained on work site because, although employee can sue contractor in tort based on contractor's failure to have workers' compensation insurance, equity and public policy would not be served by penalizing property owner for contractor's wrongdoing in failing to procure insurance; and even if architectural plans were defective, employee did not offer any evidence owner knew or should have known about defect or prepared the plans with respect to framing of roof on which employee worked and was injured); Ray v. Silverado Constructors (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1125-1129, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 251 (representative of deceased employee of independent contractor who sued owner and general contractor for negligence in failing to close road during high winds blowing weighty construction materials off bridge onto the roadway below, hitting plaintiff's decedent in head and killing him, framed cause of action based on direct liability, not vicarious liability, and it was error to grant summary judgment on basis that Privette/Toland rationale precluded action as matter of law).

(n41)Footnote 29.9. McKown v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 219, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 868, 38 P.3d 1094 .

(n42)Footnote 29.10. McKown v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 219, 222 n.2, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 868, 38 P.3d 1094 .

(n43)Footnote 29.11. Ruiz v. Herman Weissker, Inc. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 59-63, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 641 .

(n44)Footnote 29.12. Ruiz v. Herman Weissker, Inc. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 63-65, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 641 (Lab. Code § 6400 did not establish that contract administrator had nondelegable duty to protect employee from his employer's negligence, Pub. Util. Code §§ 702 and 2106 and PUC General Order 95, rule 31.1 addressed only obligations and liability of utility, and Civ. Code § 2343 only made agent liable for affirmative misfeasance, and did not render agent liable to third parties for failure to perform duties owed to principal).

(n45)Footnote 29.13. Ruiz v. Herman Weissker, Inc. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 65-67, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 641 .

(n46)Footnote 29.14. Ruiz v. Herman Weissker, Inc. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 52, 67, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 641 .

(n47)Footnote 29.15. Bell v. Greg Agee Construction, Inc. (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 453, 466-468, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 33 .

(n48)Footnote 29.16. Grahn v. Tosco Corp. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806 , disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 and Hooker v. Dept. of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 214, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 .

(n49)Footnote 29.17. Grahn v. Tosco Corp. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1379-1380, 1384-1385, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806 , disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 and Hooker v. Dept. of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 214, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 (appellate court reversed because of significant instructional errors, particularly with regard to defining standards applicable to determining when hirer who is also in control of premises where work occurs can be found liable).

(n50)Footnote 29.18. Grahn v. Tosco Corp. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1380-1381, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806 , disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 and Hooker v. Dept. of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 214, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 .

(n51)Footnote 29.19. Grahn v. Tosco Corp. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1390-1392, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806 , disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 . and Hooker v. Dept. of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 214, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 ; see, e.g., Chevron U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 544, 549, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 674 ; Gettemy v. Star House Movers (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 636, 643-644, 37 Cal. Rptr. 441 , disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 .

(n52)Footnote 29.20. Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1243-1245, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 25 P.3d 1096 .

(n53)Footnote 29.21. Grahn v. Tosco Corp. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1393-1394, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806 , disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 and Hooker v. Dept. of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 214, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 . See Holman v. State of Cal. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 317, 336, 124 Cal. Rptr. 773 , disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 .

(n54)Footnote 29.22. Grahn v. Tosco Corp. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1397-1401, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806 , disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy, Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy, 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 and Hooker v. Dept. of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 214, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 ; see Lopez v. University Partners (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1117, 1129 n.7, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (no cause of action for premises liability when dangerous condition that injured plaintiff, independent contractor's employee, did not exist until independent contractor itself created it by negligently performing excavation contract); see also Dauer v. Aerojet General Corp. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 175, 177-182, 36 Cal. Rptr. 356 .

(n55)Footnote 29.23. Tilley v. CZ Master Assn. (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 464 .

(n56)Footnote 29.24. Tilley v. CZ Master Assn. (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 464, 479-489 .

(n57)Footnote 29.24. Tilley v. CZ Master Assn. (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 464, 489-490 .

(n58)Footnote 29.25. Barclay v. Jesse M. Lange Distributor, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 281, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 242 .

(n59)Footnote 29.26. See 24 Cal. Code Regs. § 7904.4.9.2.

(n60)Footnote 29.27. Barclay v. Jesse M. Lange Distributor, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 281, 290-301, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 242 , citing Park v. Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railway Co. (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 595, 133 Cal. Rptr.

2d 757 .

(n61)Footnote 30. Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 251, 253, 255, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 .

(n62)Footnote 31. See, e.g., Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 254, 256, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 .

(n63)Footnote 32. Felmlee v. Falcon Cable TV (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038-1040, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 158 .

(n64)Footnote 33. Felmlee v. Falcon Cable TV (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1040, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 158 .

(n65)Footnote 33.1. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n66)Footnote 33.2. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n67)Footnote 33.3. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n68)Footnote 33.4. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n69)Footnote 33.5. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n70)Footnote 33.6. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n71)Footnote 33.7. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n72)Footnote 33.8. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n73)Footnote 33.9. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n74)Footnote 33.10. Kinsman v. Unocal Corp. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 659 .

(n75)Footnote 34. American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 .

(n76)Footnote 35. See American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 583, 590, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 ; Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; Arbaugh v. Procter & Gamble Mfg. Co. (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 507-508, 145 Cal. Rptr. 608 .

(n77)Footnote 36. See Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; Arbaugh v. Procter & Gamble Mfg. Co. (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 507-508, 145 Cal. Rptr. 608 .

(n78)Footnote 37. Arbaugh v. Procter & Gamble Mfg. Co. (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 507-508, 145 Cal. Rptr. 608 . For discussion of third-party indemnity, see [4], below.

(n79)Footnote 38. See Civ. Code § 1431.1.

(n80)Footnote 39. Civ. Code § 1431.2(a).

(n81)Footnote 40. Civ. Code § 1431.2(a).

(n82)Footnote 41. DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 593, 601, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238, 828 P.2d 140 .

(n83)Footnote 42. DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 593, 604, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238, 828 P.2d 140 .

(n84)Footnote 42.1. Thomas v. Duggins Construction Co. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1110-1113, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66 (trial court properly refused to apportion plaintiffs' noneconomic damages between defendant, which was company that sold scissor lift to their employer, and employer after lift collapsed and injured them, despite finding that defendant and employer were each 40 percent responsible for injuries, while two of defendant's employees were 10 percent responsible each; although defendant's liability in negligence would have otherwise entitled it to apportionment of plaintiffs' noneconomic damages, its vicarious liability for intentional tort by one of its employees was not subject to reduction, even though jury concluded that employee's intentional misconduct constituted only a 10 percent contributing factor to plaintiffs' injuries).

(n85)Footnote 43. See DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 593, 600, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238, 828 P.2d 140 ; Engle v. Endlich (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1160, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145 ; Civ. Code §§ 1431, 1431.2(a).

(n86)Footnote 44. See Engle v. Endlich (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1159-1160, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145 (third-party tortfeasor is liable for all of employee's economic damages including portion that represents extent to which Lab. Code § 3864 insulates negligent employer from comparative responsibility it would otherwise incur, but that with enactment of Proposition 51, third party may no longer be held jointly liable for all of employee's noneconomic damages). See also Poire v. C.J. Peck/Jones Brothers Construction Corp. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 1841, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 631 (non-settling defendant entitled to setoff from plaintiff's award of economic damages in amount of settlements paid prior to trial by other defendants, despite jury's finding that settling defendants had no fault for plaintiff's injuries).

(n87)Footnote 45. Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)(1).

(n88)Footnote 46. Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)(2).

(n89)Footnote 47. See Aceves v. Regal Pale Brewing Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 502, 509, 156 Cal. Rptr. 41, 595 P.2d 619 ; Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; see also Jarvis v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 246, 258, 191 Cal. Rptr. 29 ; Kemerer v. Challenge Milk Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 334, 340, 164 Cal. Rptr. 397 .

(n90)Footnote 48. Curtis v. State of California ex rel. Dept. of Transportation (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 668, 681-682, 683, 180 Cal. Rptr. 843 .

(n91)Footnote 49. DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 593, 604-605 & n.7, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238, 828 P.2d 140 (remanding issue to court of appeal).

(n92)Footnote 50. Torres v. Xomox Corp. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 .

(n93)Footnote 51. See Espinoza v. Machonga (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 268, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498 .

(n94)Footnote 52. See Torres v. Xomox Corp. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1, 37, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 .

(n95)Footnote 53. See Torres v. Xomox Corp. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1, 37, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 .

(n96)Footnote 54. Scalice v. Performance Cleaning Sys. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 221, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 711 .

(n97)Footnote 55. See Scalice v. Performance Cleaning Sys. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 221, 232, 239, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 711 .

(n98)Footnote 56. See Scalice v. Performance Cleaning Sys. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 221, 239, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 711 .

(n99)Footnote 57. See Scalice v. Performance Cleaning Sys. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 221, 238, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 711 ; see also Poire v. C.L. Peck/Jones Bros. Constr. Corp (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 1841, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 631 (non-settling defendant entitled to setoff from plaintiff's award of economic damages in amount of settlements paid prior to trial by other defendants, despite jury's finding that settling defendants had no fault for plaintiff's injuries).

(n100)Footnote 58. Lab. Code § 3201 et seq.

(n101)Footnote 59. Engle v. Endlich (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1164-1165, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145 .

(n102)Footnote 60. See De Cruz v. Reid (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 217, 222-227, 70 Cal. Rptr. 550, 444 P.2d 342 ; Curtis v. State of California ex rel. Dept. of Transportation (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 668, 681-682, 683, 180 Cal. Rptr. 843 .

(n103)Footnote 61. See De Cruz v. Reid (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 217, 226-227, 70 Cal. Rptr. 550, 444 P.2d 342 ; Curtis v. State of California ex rel. Dept. of Transportation (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 668, 683, 180 Cal. Rptr. 843 . For discussion of the effect of payments from collateral sources on plaintiff's recovery in a tort action, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 53 (Matthew Bender).

(n104)Footnote 62. See Curtis v. State of California ex rel. Dept. of Transportation (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 668, 681-682, 683, 180 Cal. Rptr. 843 .

(n105)Footnote 63. Engle v. Endlich (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1161-1162, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145 ; see DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 593, 604 n.6, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238, 828 P.2d 140 .

(n106)Footnote 64. See Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1502, 1508-1509, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301 (finding that plaintiff's counsel had satisfied notice requirement by letter to workers' compensation carrier prior to judicial approval of settlement); Brandon v. Santa Rita Technology, Inc. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 838, 846, 102 Cal. Rptr. 225 .

(n107)Footnote 65. City of Sacramento v. Superior Court (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 398, 405, 23 Cal. Rptr. 43 .

(n108)Footnote 66. Del Monte Corp. v. Superior Court (1982) 127 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1053-1055, 179 Cal. Rptr. 855 .

(n109)Footnote 67. C.J.L. Construction, Inc. v. Universal Plumbing (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 376, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360 .

(n110)Footnote 68. C.J.L. Construction, Inc. v. Universal Plumbing (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 376, 387, 391, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360 .

(n111)Footnote 69. Difko Admin. (US) Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 126, 134-135, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 291 .

(n112)Footnote 70. See Lab. Code § 3864.

(n113)Footnote 71. See Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Morse (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 707, 711, 86 Cal. Rptr. 7 (coemployee protected from indemnity actions in same manner as employer).

(n114)Footnote 72. See Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), discussed in § 20.12[1][b].

(n115)Footnote 73. Chase Chemical Co. v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 229, 238, 205 Cal. Rptr. 469 .

(n116)Footnote 74. Up-Right, Inc. v. Van Erickson (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 579, 582, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 .

(n117)Footnote 75. Up-Right, Inc. v. Van Erickson (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 579, 582, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 .

(n118)Footnote 76. See Up-Right, Inc. v. Van Erickson (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 579, 582-584, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 (also holding that even assuming the allegations of the third-party's cross-complaint were sufficient to show that the employer had engaged in criminal conduct by violating the child labor laws, such criminal conduct did not render workers' compensation inapplicable, and consequently, there was no basis for excusing the third-party from the requirement of a written indemnity agreement under Lab. Code § 3864).

(n119)Footnote 77. Hansen Mechanical, Inc. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 722, 731-732, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 47 ; Nielsen Construction Co. v. International Iron Products (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 863, 869, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 (signature by employer alone not sufficient). See also Robert E. Blake, Inc. v. Excel Environmental (9th Cir. 1997) 104 F.3d 1158, 1162 (general contractor's indemnity claim against subcontractor for injuries to subcontractor's employee barred when indemnification clause never signed by subcontractor, thus rendering it ineffective).

(n120)Footnote 78. See discussion in § 20.12[1][e].

(n121)Footnote 79. Watters Associates v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1341, 1344, 278 Cal. Rptr. 417 .

30 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part B. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST EMPLOYERS AND THIRD PARTIES

Subpart 1. Actions by Employee

1-20 California Employment Law §§ 20.45 through 20.49

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 20.45[Reserved]

31 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part B. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST EMPLOYERS AND THIRD PARTIES

Subpart 2. Actions by Employer and by Third Parties

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.50

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.50 Employer's Right of Subrogation

[1] When Employer Has Not Been Negligent

If an employer has not been negligent, the employer is entitled to complete reimbursement of the amount of compensation benefits paid from a third-party tortfeasor who was at fault in causing the employee's injuries, to the extent of the third party's proportional responsibility for those injuries.ⁿ¹ The injured employee's own negligence may not be imputed to an otherwise nonnegligent employer for the purpose of reducing the amount of the employer's reimbursement.ⁿ² The rationale for not imputing the employee's negligence to the employer is that to do so would result in the third party's liability for the employee's injuries being reduced twice as a result of the employee's negligence--once to reduce the employee's recovery against the third party and again to reduce the employer's reimbursement--contrary to the principles of comparative fault.ⁿ³

The subrogation statutes also allow employers subrogation rights whenever, and to whatever extent, an employee suffers a subsequent tortious injury that increases the employer's liability for compensation, whether or not the subsequent injury is industrial or nonindustrial.ⁿ⁴

[2] When Employer Has Been Negligent

[a] Case Law Before Adoption of Comparative Fault

As the courts have noted,ⁿ⁵ the statutory provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act do not, on their face, impose any substantive limitation on the employer's right to either reimbursement of benefits paid or a credit against future benefits when the employer's negligence was a contributing cause of the employee's injury.ⁿ⁶ Nevertheless, case law has imposed such limitations.ⁿ⁷ Thus, prior to its adoption of comparative negligence, the California Supreme Court had held in Witt v. Jackson ⁿ⁸ that a concurrently negligent employer could not recover reimbursement for compensation payments made to an injured employee, either by asserting a lien against a judgment recovered by the employee or by bringing an action directly against the third-party tortfeasor. However, the Court also held that the amount of workers' compensation benefits received by the employee had to be deducted from the damages recovered by the employee against the third party, to prevent a double recovery.ⁿ⁹ In a subsequent case, Roe v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ¹⁰ the Court followed the rationale of the Witt case and held that (1) a concurrently negligent employer was not entitled to claim the amount of the employee's settlement or judgment against the third-party tortfeasor as a credit against its liability for future workers' compensation benefits,ⁿ¹¹ and (2) the employee was entitled to have the issue of the employer's negligence adjudicated before the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board, if the issue had not already been adjudicated in the third-party action.ⁿ¹² As the Court noted in a later case, the effect of the Witt and Roe decisions was to establish the principle that to the extent allowed by the employer's limited statutory liability, the employer and the third party should share liability as would ordinary concurrent tortfeasors.ⁿ¹³

[b] Effect of Comparative Negligence

In Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ¹⁴ the Supreme Court noted that the development and application of comparative negligence principles had undermined the conceptual basis of the rules set out in the Witt and Roe cases, discussed in [a], above, by altering the liability of ordinary joint tortfeasors.ⁿ¹⁵ Observing that the Court's decision in *American Motorcycle Association v. Superior Court*ⁿ¹⁶ had modified California's common-law equitable indemnity doctrine to permit comparative indemnity between multiple tortfeasors, the Court further stated:

As Witt and Roe interpreted the reimbursement and credit provisions of the Labor Code in light of the advent of contribution, so we must now interpret them to reflect the advent of comparative responsibility among joint tortfeasors. Applying the principle that the employer and third party should, to the extent consistent with the employer's statutory immunity from tort liability, share the burden of the employee's recovery as joint tortfeasors, we conclude that the concurrently negligent employer should receive either credit or reimbursement for the amount by which his compensation liability exceeds his proportional share of the injured employee's recovery.ⁿ¹⁷

[c] Reimbursement of Workers' Compensation Benefits Previously Paid

As noted in [b], above, the "all or nothing" approach taken in Witt v. Jackson,ⁿ¹⁸ which held that a concurrently negligent employer was entirely precluded from recovering reimbursement of workers' compensation benefits, has been abrogated by the adoption of comparative fault principles.ⁿ¹⁹ The courts now hold that the negligent employer is entitled to reimbursement for workers' compensation benefits paid, but only to the extent that such benefits exceed the proportionate share of the employee's total recovery that is attributable to the employer's negligence.ⁿ²⁰

No reported appellate decision has discussed the extent to which the enactment of Proposition 51, discussed in § 20.44[3][a], affects the current rule. It is therefore not clear whether the amount of workers' compensation benefits paid must exceed the employer's proportionate share of the entire amount of plaintiff's damages before reimbursement is permitted, or whether the benefits paid need only exceed the employer's proportionate share of the plaintiff's economic damages.

Assuming that the benefits paid must exceed the plaintiff's total damages, both economic and non-economic, as was the case prior to the enactment of Proposition 51, the following hypothetical illustrates the application of the rule regarding reimbursement of benefits:

■ ILLUSTRATION:

Employer and Third Party are each found by the jury to be 50 percent negligent in causing Employee $340,000 in damages. Prior to trial, Employer had paid Employee $44,836.17 in workers' compensation benefits. Since this is less than 50 percent of Employee's total damages ($170,000), Employer is not entitled to reimbursement for any of the benefits paid.ⁿ²¹

The negligent employer's right to reimbursement for workers' compensation benefits paid is limited to the amount by which those benefits exceed its proportional share of the employee's actual tort damages, notwithstanding the fact that the employee has independently settled the third-party action for an amount less than his or her actual damages.ⁿ²²

■ ILLUSTRATION:

Employee settles his suit against Third Party for $30,000. Employer's suit in intervention against Third Party for reimbursement of $22,538 in workers' compensation benefits paid to Employee proceeds to trial. At trial, the jury determines that Employee's total economic damages would have been $150,000 had the case proceeded to trial and apportions fault as follows: (1) 5 percent to Employee, (2) 15 percent to Third Party, and (3) 80 percent to Employer. Because the amount of benefits paid was less than Employer's proportionate share of damages (80 percent of $150,000 equals $120,000), Employer is not entitled to reimbursement.ⁿ²³

For further discussion of the effect of an employee's settlement with a third-party tortfeasor on the employer's right to reimbursement of workers' compensation benefits paid, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 10 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the employer's right to reimbursement generally, see [4][a], below.

[3] Reserved

[4] Employer's Right to Reimbursement or Credit Against Liability for Future Workers' Compensation Benefits

[a] Generally

The employer may recover worker's compensation benefits it has become obligated to pay or has paid by (1) bringing an action directly against the tortfeasor,^{n23.1} (2) joining as a party plaintiff or intervening in an action brought by the employee,^{n23.2} or (3) allowing the employee to prosecute the action and then applying a first lien against the resulting judgment or settlement.^{n23.3} Prior to the employer's reimbursement, the court is required to determine the parties' entitlement to reasonable attorney's fees and other litigation expenses.^{n23.4} When a third party settlement includes the employer's reimbursable benefits, the employer's right of reimbursement takes first and full priority after the payment of litigation expenses and attorney's fees, when appropriate.^{n23.5} The employer's reimbursement right, however, may be subject to certain exceptions. For example, when a settlement is in satisfaction of both the employee's claims and independent claims, such as claims for loss of consortium brought separately by the plaintiff's spouse, the court must first ascertain the damages to which each plaintiff is entitled and then apportion the settlement.^{n23.6} In addition, in allocating the proceeds of an employee's settlement with a third party tortfeasor under Lab. Code § 3860(e), when both the employer's attorney and the employee's attorney have been active in reaching the settlement, fees awarded to the employer's attorney and the employer's pro rata share of other litigation costs are deducted from the amount paid to the employer out of the settlement proceeds as reimbursement for its worker's compensation expenses.^{n23.7}

The Workers' Compensation Appeals Board is also empowered and required to allow, as a credit to the employer to be applied against its liability for compensation, the amount of any recovery by the employee for his or her injury, either by settlement or after judgment, that has not previously been applied to the payment of expenses or attorneys' fees, pursuant to the provisions of Labor Code Sections 3856, 3858, and 3860, or to reimburse the employer.ⁿ²⁴ The amount of the credit will be calculated by deducting from the employee's gross settlement in the third-party action the legal fees and costs and the actual amount received by the employer in satisfaction of its lien claim.ⁿ²⁵ However a credit will not be allowed for the amount of damages attributable to the employer's negligence,ⁿ²⁶ and the employer's right to a credit in the compensation proceedings is subject to the comparative negligence doctrine, as discussed in [b], below.

[b] Effect of Employer's Negligence

In Associated Construction & Engineering Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board,ⁿ²⁷ discussed in [2][b], above, the California Supreme Court held that when the issue of an employer's concurrent negligence arises in the context of the employer's claim for credit against future compensation benefits based on the employee's settlement with the third party, the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board must determine the appropriate contribution of the employer, since the employee's settlement recovery does not represent a judicial determination of tort damages.ⁿ²⁸ Specifically, the Board must determine (1) the degree of fault of the employer, and (2) the total damages to which the employee is entitled.ⁿ²⁹ (Of course, the Board would not make these determinations if the issues of the employer's negligence and the employee's damages have previously been adjudicated in the employee's tort action against the third party or the employer's action for reimbursement, since the Board would be bound by the court's determinations under the doctrine of collateral estoppel.)ⁿ³⁰ The employer would then be denied credit until the ratio of its contribution to the employee's damages corresponds to its proportional share of fault.ⁿ³¹ The rule that a negligent employer will be permitted a credit only after it has paid benefits equal to its proportional share of the employee's total damages applies regardless of whether the third party's liability is based on negligence or strict liability in tort.ⁿ³²

No reported appellate decision has discussed the extent to which the enactment of Proposition 51, discussed in § 20.44[3][a], affects the above rules. It is therefore not clear whether the amount of workers' compensation benefits paid must equal the employer's proportionate share of the entire amount of employee's damages before the employer may claim a credit against future compensation liability, or whether the benefits paid need only equal the employer's proportionate share of the employee's economic damages.

Assuming that the benefits paid must exceed the plaintiff's total damages, both economic and non-economic, as was the case prior to the enactment of Proposition 51, the following hypothetical illustrates the application of the rule regarding the employer's credit against liability for future benefits:

■ ILLUSTRATION:

Employee receives $20,000 in workers' compensation benefits. Employee then sues Third Party, settles the suit without Employer's consent, and actually receives out of the settlement $25,000. Employee then seeks further workers' compensation benefits. Employer claims a credit in the amount of the $25,000 settlement. If the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board determines that Employer is free of negligence, then Employer is entitled to the full $25,000 credit against future payments. If Employer is found to be 50 percent negligent and the total damages incurred by Employee are $100,000, then Employer would have to contribute an additional $30,000 (to make up the difference between the $20,000 it already paid and $50,000, which is Employer's proportionate share based on its degree of fault) before it could claim any credit against liability for future benefits.ⁿ³³

In Associated Construction,ⁿ³⁴ the Supreme Court did not decide how the employee's negligence, if established, would affect the proportional contribution of the employer.ⁿ³⁵ In Rodgers v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd.,ⁿ³⁶ however, the Court stated that the employee's negligence should not be imputed to the employer in this context, and upheld the WCAB's decision that the employer did not have to pay benefits equal to the proportion of tort damages attributable to the employee's fault before obtaining its statutory credit. The employer had only to pay compensation benefits equal to its own proportional share of the employee's tort damages.ⁿ³⁷

[5] Limitation on Employer's Right to Reimbursement or Credit When Third-Party Tortfeasor Is Medical Practitioner

Civil Code Section 3333.1 abrogates the collateral source rule in medical malpractice actions.ⁿ³⁸ It provides that (1) in an action against a health care provider for personal injuries based on professional negligence, the defendant, if he or she so elects, may introduce evidence of any amount payable as a benefit to the plaintiff as a result of the personal injury pursuant to, among other things, any workers' compensation act;ⁿ³⁹ and (2) no source of collateral benefits introduced pursuant to Civil Code Section 3333.1(a) shall recover any amount against the plaintiff nor shall it be subrogated to the rights of the plaintiff against a defendant health care provider.ⁿ⁴⁰ The employer's right to reimbursement under Labor Code Section 3852 for compensation benefits paid from amounts recovered by the worker in an action against a third-party medical practitioner is therefore barred by Civil Code Section 3333.1.ⁿ⁴¹ Moreover, Civil Code Section 3333.1 overrides the employer's right under Labor Code Sections 3858 and 3861 to a credit of any such recovery against its liability for future workers' compensation benefits when the employee settles, rather than tries, his or her medical malpractice action, and the settlement excludes workers' compensation benefits.ⁿ⁴²

[6] Methods of Obtaining Reimbursement Independent Action, Intervention, or Lien

If a third party is partly or wholly responsible for the injury that is the basis of the employee's workers' compensation claim, the statutes provide three methods by which the employer may seek reimbursement for benefits provided to the injured employee:

1. The employer may bring an action directly against the third party to recover the amount of any benefits that the employee has paid or become obligated to pay.ⁿ⁴³
2. The employer may, at any time before trial on the facts, join as party plaintiff in an action brought by the employee against the third party.ⁿ⁴⁴
3. The employer may, after the employee has recovered a judgment against the third party, apply for a first lien on the amount of the judgment, less expenses and attorney's fees incurred by the employee in prosecuting the action.ⁿ⁴⁵

The employer may not, however, recover from the third-party tortfeasor increased workers' compensation insurance premiums and resulting lost profits.ⁿ⁴⁶

In addition, if the employee has obtained a recovery, by settlement or judgment, against the third party for his or her injury, the employer may receive a credit toward its future liability for compensation equal to the amount of the employee's recovery that has not previously been applied to the payment of litigation expenses or attorney's fees (pursuant to specified sections of the workers' compensation law) nor previously applied to reimbursement of the employer.ⁿ⁴⁷

Final decision of the action to be taken by the employer depends on such factors as the amount of the special damages for medical and other items of expense and liability, the attitude of the respective parties, their willingness to protect the claim for reimbursement of compensation benefits, the probability of securing judgment, and the likelihood of its ultimate satisfaction. Other pertinent considerations include (1) the question of attorney's fees payable to the employee's attorney if the employer proceeds by way of lien,ⁿ⁴⁸ (2) the possibility of the employee's suit being compromised after prolonged negotiation in which the interest of employee and employer will conflict, and (3) the advisability of the subrogee being represented by its own counsel.

When the employer intervenes in the employee's third-party action, the employer's status is akin to that of a subrogee, and thus the employer's right to recover the amount of workers' compensation benefits paid to the employee derives from and does not extend beyond the employee's tort remedy against the third party.ⁿ⁴⁹ Although the employer and employee are entitled to verdicts and judgments setting forth their respective rights, the damages must be segregated between them to prevent a double recovery against the third party.ⁿ⁵⁰ The employer may recover the amount of compensation benefits paid, but the amount of its judgment may not exceed the total amount of tort damages suffered by the employee.ⁿ⁵¹ The employee is entitled to have the jury determine his or her total tort damages, but may only recover a net judgment for the difference, if any, between the total tort damages and the workers' compensation benefits received.ⁿ⁵²

If either the employee or the employer brings an action against a third person, the employee or employer immediately must give to the other a copy of the complaint by personal service or certified mail. Proof of service must be filed in the action.^{n52.1}

No release or settlement of a third-party claim as to either the employee or the employer is valid without the written consent of both. However, an employee may settle and release any claim the employee has against a third party without the consent of the employer. The settlement or release is subject to the employer's right to proceed to recover compensation paid in accordance with Labor Code § 3852.^{n52.2} No release or settlement, with or without suit, is valid or binding as to any party to it without notice to both the employer and the employee, with opportunity for the employer to recover the amount of workers' compensation the employer has paid or become obligated to pay and any special damages to which the employer may be entitled under Labor Code § 3852, and opportunity for the employee to recover all damages the employee has suffered.^{n52.3} An alleged tortfeasor who, prior to settlement with the employer, is or reasonably should be aware of the possibility of the employee's claim for damages, settles with the employer does so at the peril of being sued by the employee, if the employer failed to carry out its statutory notice and consent duties to the employee.^{n52.4}

[7] FORM--Independent Action or Complaint in Intervention by Employer's Insurer in Employee's Suit Against Third Party

[a] Comment

[i] Use of Form

The form set forth in [b], below, is a complaint brought by an employer's workers' compensation carrier against a third party who has injured an employee who was covered by workers' compensation insurance. The form may be used in either an independent action or as a complaint in intervention.ⁿ⁵³ If an independent action is filed, it must be consolidated for trial with the employee's action.ⁿ⁵⁴

[ii] Filing and Statute of Limitations

If an independent action is brought, the action must be filed within the two-year limitation period set forth in Code of Civil Procedure Section 335.1, and the period begins to run on the date of the employee's injury.ⁿ⁵⁵ A complaint in intervention may be brought at any time before trial on the facts.ⁿ⁵⁶ If the employee's action is filed within the two-year time limit,ⁿ⁵⁷ the filing inures to the benefit of the employer and the insurance carrier with regard to the filing of an action in intervention, and the complaint in intervention will also be considered timely filed.ⁿ⁵⁸ In addition to filing the complaint, the employer must give a copy of the complaint to the employee by personal service or certified mail and file proof of such service.ⁿ⁵⁹

Under Labor Code Section 3853, an employer has an unconditional right to intervene in the employee's third-party action at any time before a trial on the facts, and, as a result, when the employer makes a pretrial motion to be joined as a party, the employer has, as a matter of law, satisfied the "upon timely application" requirement of Code of Civil Procedure Section 387, which governs intervention in general.ⁿ⁶⁰ Thus, for example, one appellate court held that the trial court erred in refusing an employer's pretrial request to intervene in an employee's action, even though the employee and the third party had settled, because there still remained for trial the insurance carrier's complaint to recover the amount of compensation benefits it had paid to the employee.ⁿ⁶¹

[iii] Allegations

Whether the employer or insurance carrier are bringing an independent action or a complaint in intervention, they must set forth the elements of a prima facie case.ⁿ⁶² The complaint therefore contains the following allegations that give the parties the right to subrogation:ⁿ⁶³ (1) that the insurance carrier was authorized to carry workers' compensation insurance for the employer, if applicable (Optional Paragraph 1); (2) that the injured employee worked for employer (Paragraph 2); (3) that the employee incurred injuries in the course of his or her employment that were proximately caused by the negligence of the third-party defendant(s) (Paragraphs 5-8); and (4) that because of those injuries caused by third-party defendant(s), employer or insurance carrier has had to pay workers' compensation benefits and other payments to employee in the past (Paragraph 9) and will continue to have to do so in the future (Paragraph 10), for which the insurer or employer should be subrogated.

[b] Form Independent Action or Complaint in Intervention by Employer's Insurer in Employee's Suit Against Third Party

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,

COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	_____ [COMPLAINT FOR DAM-
_____ [name], Defendant[,]	)	AGES or COMPLAINT IN INTERVENTION]
[_____ (name),	)	(Reimbursement of Workers' Compensation Bene-
Intervenor].	)	fits)
	)	[Lab. Code §§ 3852, 3853(; Code Civ. Proc. § 387)]
	)

_____ [Plaintiff or Intervenor] alleges:

1. At all times mentioned in this complaint, _____ [plaintiff or intervenor] was, and now is, _____ [specify form of business organization, e.g., a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of California], authorized to write workers' compensation insurance. At all times relevant to this complaint, _____ (plaintiff or intervenor) insured _____ (name of employer) against liability to its employees for compensation benefits under the Workers' Compensation Act of the State of California].

2. At all times mentioned in this complaint, _____ [name of employer][, _____ (plaintiff or intervenor) in this suit,] was the employer of _____ [name of employee].

[3. Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued in this complaint as DOES I-_____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will amend this complaint to allege their true names and capacities when ascertained. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and therefore alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences alleged in this complaint, and that plaintiff's damages as alleged in this complaint were proximately caused by their conduct.)]

4. _____ [Allege status and identity of any known defendants.]

5. On [date] , while _____ [name of employee] was _____ [description of employee's activities at time of injury, e.g., driving a truck belonging to _____ (name of employer), making a delivery for _____ (name of employer)], he/she sustained injuries that arose out of and occurred in the course of his/her employment.

6. At that time, defendant [s, and each of them] so negligently _____ [describe acts or omissions, e.g., owned, operated, drove, and maintained a certain _____ (describe vehicle)] as to cause

_____ [describe accident, e.g., a collision with the truck driven by _____ (name of employee)].

7. As a proximate result of the negligence of defendant [s, and each of them], _____ [name of employee] sustained severe bodily injuries. [Injuries may be specified.]

8. As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendant[s, and each of them,] _____ [name of employee] has incurred [, and will continue to incur,] medical and related expenses in an amount according to proof.

9. As a further proximate result of the negligence of defendant[s, and each of them,] and of the resulting injuries sustained by _____ [name of employee], _____ [plaintiff or intervenor] has been obligated to pay the following workers' compensation benefits to _____ [name of employee]:

(1) Temporary disability benefits in the amount of $_____;

(2) Permanent disability benefits in the amount of $_____;

(3) Medical benefits in the amount of $_____.

10. _____ [Plaintiff or Intervenor] is informed and believes, and on such information and belief alleges, that it will be required to pay further disability benefits and sums for medical care and treatment for an indefinite time in the future, and _____ [plaintiff or intervenor] prays that when the total amount of such expenditures are ascertained, this complaint [in intervention] may be amended accordingly.

WHEREFORE, _____ [plaintiff or intervenor] prays judgment against defendant [s, and each of them], for the following:

1. Reimbursement of workers' compensation benefits paid to _____ [name of employee] in the amount of $_____;

2. Future disability benefits and costs of medical care and treatment according to proof; and

3. Such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for _____

[Plaintiff or Intervenor]

[Verification, if desired
(see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5).]

[8] FORM--Notice of Motion for Lien on Employee's Recovery Against Third Party

[a] Comment

The form set forth in [b], below, is a notice of motion for an order allowing a lien against a third-party recovery by judgment or settlement. Such a lien for the amount of the expenditure for compensation benefits is authorized by Labor

Code Section 3856 after the payment of expenses and attorney's fees to the employee from the third-party judgment.ⁿ⁶⁴ Apparently, the filing of a lien claim does not preclude intervention in the employee's action against the third party.ⁿ⁶⁵ The declaration in support of the motion, which is set forth in [9] [b], below, should accompany the notice of motion. A party filing a notice of motion must serve and file with it a supporting memorandum.ⁿ⁶⁶ The absence of the memorandum may be construed by the court as an admission that the motion is not meritorious and may cause its denial.ⁿ⁶⁷

An employer's lien for workers' compensation benefits must be satisfied out of the judgment recovered by the employee against the third-party tortfeasor, and not out of the verdict. If the employer elects to abstain from participating in the third-party action and to claim a lien on the judgment, in arriving at a verdict, the jury in that action is not concerned with the rights of the employer. The verdict and the judgment may, therefore, properly refer only to the plaintiff-employee and to the third-party tortfeasor.ⁿ⁶⁸ The amount of the workers' compensation lien is required to be taken in partial satisfaction of the judgment against the third party after it is entered. It is error to offset the amount of the compensation lien against the verdict.ⁿ⁶⁹

An employer's workers' compensation lien claim may not exceed the amount of damages the employee recovers from the third-party tortfeasor. In general, the employer may recover the amount of workers' compensation benefits paid, but the amount of the employer's judgment may not exceed the total amount of tort damages suffered by the employee. The employee is entitled to have the jury determine his or her total tort damages, but may recover only a net judgment for the difference between the tort damages and the workers' compensation benefits received.ⁿ⁷⁰

An employer is not entitled to reimbursement under Labor Code Section 3856(c) if it begins as a party plaintiff, but later chooses to abstain and file for a lien on the judgment prior to trial. Labor Code Section 3865(c) only applies if the action is prosecuted both by the employee and the employer. If the employer remains a formal party to the proceedings, its right to reimbursement must be expressly set forth in both the verdict and in the judgment obtained by the employee against the third party. This is not necessary, however, if its interests are protected by a lien on the judgment.ⁿ⁷¹

If the employer has filed a lien claim on any judgment, recovery, or settlement in the injured employee's third-party action, and subsequently sells the lien to the third party, the workers' compensation benefits paid to the employee represent a lien as to the third party and not a right to reimbursement under Labor Code Section 3856(c). If the third-party tortfeasor purchases the employer's compensation lien, it steps into the shoes of the employer and gains no greater rights than those originally owned by the employer. Until a judgment is entered, the third party merely holds an expectancy, and if the employee fails to obtain a judgment in his or her favor, the lien simply "evaporates."ⁿ⁷²

[b] Form Notice of Motion for Lien on Employee's Recovery Against Third Party

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	NOTICE OF MOTION FOR ORDER ALLOWING
_____ [name(s)],	)	LIEN AGAINST THIRD-PARTY JUDGMENT
Defendant(s).	)	[Lab. Code § 3856(b)]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.50

) Action Filed: _____
) Hearing Judge: _____
) [Trial Date: _____]

To _____ [name of employee] and to _____ [name], his/her attorney of record:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on [date] , at _____ .M., or as soon thereafter as the matter can be heard, in [_____ (Department or Division _____ of] this court, located at _____ [street address], _____ [city], California, lien claimant _____ [name of insurance carrier or self-insured employer] will move this court for an order allowing it a first lien for workers' compensation benefits _____ [paid or which may be paid] to plaintiff _____ [name of employee] against _____ [the proceeds of the settlement entered into between plaintiff _____ (name of employee) and defendant or the amount of _____ (the judgment rendered in this action on [date] , or any judgment that may be rendered in this action) in favor of plaintiff].

The motion will be based on this notice, all the pleadings and other papers and proceedings in this action, on the Memorandum of Points and Authorities, and the _____ [affidavit(s) or declaration(s)] of _____ [name(s)], served and filed with this motion, and on such evidence as may be presented at the hearing of the motion.

Dated: _____ [signature]

Attorney for

_____ [name]

Lien Claimant

[9] FORM--Declaration in Support of Motion for Order Allowing Lien Against Employee's Recovery from Third Party

[a] Comment

The form set forth in [b], below, is a declaration in support of a motion for an order allowing a lien against an employee's recovery from a third party. It should be accompanied by the notice of motion set forth in [8][b], above.

The declaration should set forth the following facts: (1) that the lien claimant is the employer or workers' compensation insurance carrier (Paragraph 2);ⁿ⁷³ (2) that workers' compensation insurance was provided for employees of the employer, and that the employee was injured and brought an action against the third party (Paragraph 3); (3) that the employer or insurance carrier has paid benefits and other payments to the employee for the injuries proximately caused by the third party (Paragraphs 4 and 5).ⁿ⁷⁴

[b] Form Declaration in Support of Motion for Order Allowing Lien Against Employee's Recovery from Third Party

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
 COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	DECLARATION OF _____ [name]
_____ [name],	)	IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ORDER ALLOW-Plaintiff,	)	ING LIEN AGAINST THIRD-PARTY JUDGMENT
vs.	)	[Lab. Code § 3856(b)]
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Filed: _____
	)	Hearing Judge: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

I, _____ [name], declare:

1. I am _____ [identify declarant, e.g., an attorney at law duly admitted to practice before all the courts of California and the attorney of record for the lien claimant, _____ [name of employer or insurance carrier]].

2. At all times mentioned in this declaration, lien claimant _____ [name of employer or insurance carrier] was a _____ [specify capacity, e.g., corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the State of California (as a general workers' compensation insurance company)].

3. _____ [Name of employer] provided a policy of workers' compensation insurance for its employees from _____ [name of carrier] to provide benefits to employees who sustained injuries arising out of and occurring in the course of their employment. On _____, [date of injury], plaintiff _____ [name of employee] was an employee of _____ [name of employer], and he/she sustained injuries that arose out of and occurred in the course of his/her employment. Those injuries are the same ones for which plaintiff _____ [name of employee] seeks damages in the complaint filed in this action.

4. As a proximate result of the injuries sustained by _____ [name of employee], lien claimant, _____ [name of employer or insurance carrier], has been obligated to pay, and has paid, the following benefits to that employee:

(1) Temporary disability benefits in the amount of $ _____;

(2) Permanent disability benefits in the amount of $ _____;

(3) Medical benefits in the amount of $ _____.

5. In addition to the total amount of workers' compensation benefits paid to the employee, lien claimant has sustained the following special damages: _____ [specify any salary, wage, pension, or other amount paid in lieu of compensation benefits].

WHEREFORE, lien claimant prays for the allowance of a first lien in the amount of $ _____ against the balance of a _____ [judgment or settlement] in favor of plaintiff after the court has ordered payment of plaintiff's litigation expenses and attorney's fees.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct. [date and place]

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Lien Claimant

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Third Party Actions Subrogation

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Kemerer v. Challenge Milk Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 334, 338, 164 Cal. Rptr. 397 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Jarvis v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 246, 258, 191 Cal. Rptr. 29 ; Kemerer v. Challenge Milk Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 334, 338, 164 Cal. Rptr. 397 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Kemerer v. Challenge Milk Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 334, 338-339, 164 Cal. Rptr. 397 . Accord, Jarvis v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 246, 258, 191 Cal. Rptr. 29 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Abdala v. Aziz (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 369, 375, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 130 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Roe v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 884, 889-890, 117 Cal. Rptr. 683, 528 P.2d 771 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 3602, 3852, 3853, 3856.

(n7)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 834, 843, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; Roe v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 884, 890, 117 Cal. Rptr. 683, 528 P.2d 771 ; Witt v. Jackson (1961) 57 Cal. 2d 57, 72, 17 Cal. Rptr. 369, 366 P.2d 641 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Witt v. Jackson (1961) 57 Cal. 2d 57, 72, 73, 17 Cal. Rptr. 369, 366 P.2d 641 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Witt v. Jackson (1961) 57 Cal. 2d 57, 73, 17 Cal. Rptr. 369, 366 P.2d 641 .

(n10)Footnote 10. Roe v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 884, 117 Cal. Rptr. 683, 528 P.2d 771 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Roe v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 884, 888-890, 117 Cal. Rptr. 683, 528 P.2d 771 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Roe v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 884, 890-892, 117 Cal. Rptr. 683, 528 P.2d 771 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 841-842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d

829, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n16)Footnote 16. American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 .

(n17)Footnote 17. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; see also Arbaugh v. Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 508-509, 145 Cal. Rptr. 608 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Witt v. Jackson (1961) 57 Cal. 2d 57, 72, 73, 17 Cal. Rptr. 369, 366 P.2d 641 .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 840-842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; Arbaugh v. Procter & Gamble Mfg. Co. (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 508, 145 Cal. Rptr. 608 .

(n20)Footnote 20. Aceves v. Regal Pale Brewing Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 502, 509, 156 Cal. Rptr. 41, 595 P.2d 619 ; Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 842, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 ; Engle v Endlich (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1162-1163, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 145 ; Jarvis v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 246, 257-258, 191 Cal. Rptr. 29 ; Johnson v. Cayman Dev. Co. (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 977, 981-982, 167 Cal. Rptr. 29 ; Kramer v. Cedu Found., Inc. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6-9, 155 Cal. Rptr. 552 ; Arbaugh v. Procter & Gamble Mfg. Co. (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 508, 145 Cal. Rptr. 608 .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Arbaugh v. Procter & Gamble Mfg. Co. (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 509, 145 Cal. Rptr. 608 (decided prior to enactment of Proposition 51); see also Aceves v. Regal Pale Brewing Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 502, 509, 156 Cal. Rptr. 41, 595 P.2d 619 (employer not entitled to reimbursement of $1,679 in workers' compensation benefits paid when its proportionate responsibility for plaintiff's total recovery against third party was $16,605).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Johnson v. Cayman Dev. Co. (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 977, 980, 983-984, 167 Cal. Rptr. 29 .

(n23)Footnote 23. Cf. Johnson v. Cayman Dev. Co. (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 977, 982-984, 167 Cal. Rptr. 29 (decided prior to enactment of Proposition 51).

(n24)Footnote 23.1. Lab. Code § 3852.

(n25)Footnote 23.2. Lab. Code § 3853.

(n26)Footnote 23.3. Lab. Code § 3856(b); Gapusan v. Jay (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 734, 739, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250 .

(n27)Footnote 23.4. Lab. Code § 3860(c)-(f). See Manriquez v. Adams (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 340, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449, 2003 Cal. App. LEXIS 635, *2, *5-*13 (trial court erred in awarding employee attorney fees calculated by reference to settlement fund valued to include full amount of employer's lien, rather than actual benefit received by employer, but appellate court was unable to determine whether trial court also erred in ruling that employee's counsel alone effected settlement and was therefore entitled to attorney fees with respect to both benefit he obtained for his client and benefit conferred on employer).

(n28)Footnote 23.5. Lab. Code § 3860(b); Gapusan v. Jay (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 734, 741-742, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250 (rejecting plaintiff's assertion that "subject to" in Lab. Code § 3860(b) may be interpreted to give court discretion to equitably apportion inadequate settlement funds: "The implicit purpose of section 3860 is to prioritize payments when settlement funds are insufficient to satisfy all claims."

(n29)Footnote 23.6. Gapusan v. Jay (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 734, 743, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250 .

(n30)Footnote 23.7. Summers v. Newman (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1021, 1024, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 303, 978 P.2d 1225 (relying on Quinn v. State of California (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 162, 124 Cal. Rptr. 1, 539 P.2d 761 , construing Lab. Code § 3856 which governs distribution of proceeds of judgment obtained against third party tortfeasor, in resolving ambiguity in Lab. Code § 3860, which does not expressly require or prohibit deduction for employer's share of litigation expenses from employer's reimbursable compensation costs when both employer's and employee's attorneys have helped achieve settlement). but see Luque v. Herrera (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 558, 562, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853 (employee's attorney entitled to attorney fee for obtaining settlement for policy limits in third party tortfeasor suit, even though employer participated in litigation and employer's claim exceeds settlement fund).

(n31)Footnote 24. See Lab. Code § 3861. See also Baur v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1260, 1264-1267, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 493 (applying Labor Code § 3861 credit to settlement or judgment paid by California Insurance Guarantee Association (CIGA) required employee to pay for future medical costs with money received from CIGA for another purpose, but this did not violate governing Insurance Code provisions and was compelled by plain language of § 3861 mandating credit against "any recovery"); State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 579, 585-586, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 794 (workers' compensation attorney's fees are considered "compensation" under Labor Code § 3861 and are subject to statutory credit for third-party recovery).

(n32)Footnote 25. See Herr v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 321, 329, 159 Cal. Rptr. 435 ; see also Griffith v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1260, 1263-1264, 257 Cal. Rptr. 813 (discussing proper manner of raising issue of attorney's fees and costs incurred in third-party action, under Lab. Code § 3860(f), in proceeding before Appeals Board for credit of settlement amount against compensation liability when fees and costs have not previously been set by court or Appeals Board).

(n33)Footnote 26. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 843, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n34)Footnote 27. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n35)Footnote 28. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 843, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n36)Footnote 29. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 843, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n37)Footnote 30. Anderson-Cottonwood Disposal Serv. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 326, 332, 185 Cal. Rptr. 336 .

(n38)Footnote 31. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 843, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n39)Footnote 32. Anderson-Cottonwood Disposal Serv. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 326, 330-331, 185 Cal. Rptr. 336 (relying on Daly v. Gen. Motors Corp. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 725, 144 Cal. Rptr. 380, 575 P.2d 1162). For a discussion of the effect of comparative negligence principles on strict products liability actions, see Cotchett and Cartwright, California Products Liability Actions (rev. ed.), ch. 8 (Matthew Bender).

(n40)Footnote 33. See Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal.

3d 829, 843 n.10, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n41)Footnote 34. Associated Constr. & Eng'g Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 829, 150 Cal. Rptr. 888, 587 P.2d 684 .

(n42)Footnote 35. See Rodgers v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 330, 337, 204 Cal. Rptr. 403, 682 P.2d 1068 .

(n43)Footnote 36. Rodgers v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 330, 204 Cal. Rptr. 403, 682 P.2d 1068 .

(n44)Footnote 37. Rodgers v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 330, 337-338, 204 Cal. Rptr. 403, 682 P.2d 1068 .

(n45)Footnote 38. Graham v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 499, 501, 504, 258 Cal. Rptr. 376 .

(n46)Footnote 39. Civ. Code § 3333.1(a).

(n47)Footnote 40. Civ. Code § 3333.1(b).

(n48)Footnote 41. Graham v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 499, 505-506, 258 Cal. Rptr. 376 (quoting from Miller v. Sciaroni (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 306, 310-312, 218 Cal. Rptr. 219).

(n49)Footnote 42. Graham v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 499, 501, 506-508, 258 Cal. Rptr. 376 .

(n50)Footnote 43. See Lab. Code § 3852. See also Employers Mutal Liability Ins. Co. v. Tutor-Saliva Corp. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 632, 641-642, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 851, 951 P.2d 420 (whether third party is entitled to contractual attorney's fees from insurer when third party defeats claim for reimbursement does not depend on whether employee would have been entitled, but rather on terms of contract between insured employer and third party; thus, subcontractor-employer's insurance carrier was subrogated to subcontractor's contractual liability to pay attorney's fees to general contractor, who moved against insurer for attorney's fees incurred since insurer's filing complaint in intervention under Lab. Code § 3852, 3853). For form of complaint for independent action against third party, see [7][b], below.

(n51)Footnote 44. See Lab. Code § 3853. For form of complaint in intervention against third party, see [7][b], below.

(n52)Footnote 45. See Lab. Code § 3856(b). For form of application for lien on employee's recovery against third party, see [7][b], below. The employee's right to have expenses and attorney's fees paid out of the judgment does not depend on whether such items have been included in the judgment as taxable costs of suit. See Phelps v. Stostad (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 23, 30-34, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360, 939 P.2d 760 (Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.21(a), which denies recovery of costs of suit by employee who rejects arbitration award and elects de novo trial but fails to obtain more favorable award, does not affect allocation of judgment proceeds between employee and employer under Lab. Code § 3856(b).

(n53)Footnote 46. Fischl v. Paller & Goldstein (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1304-1305, 282 Cal. Rptr. 802 .

(n54)Footnote 47. See Lab. Code § 3861. See also State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 579, 585-586, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 794 (workers' compensation attorney's fees are considered "compensation" under Labor Code § 3861 and are subject to a statutory credit for third-party recovery). For discussion, see [4], above.

(n55)Footnote 48. See Lab. Code § 3856(b) (when employer files only lien claim, and not independent action or complaint in intervention, employee's attorney is entitled to fee based on recovery made for employer).

(n56)Footnote 49. Demkowski v. Lee (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1258, 284 Cal. Rptr. 919 .

(n57)Footnote 50. Demkowski v. Lee (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1258, 284 Cal. Rptr. 919 .

(n58)Footnote 51. Demkowski v. Lee (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1258, 284 Cal. Rptr. 919 .

(n59)Footnote 52. Demkowski v. Lee (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1258-1258, 284 Cal. Rptr. 919 (use of special verdict form to segregate types of damage as between employee and employer).

(n60)Footnote 52.1. Lab. Code § 3853. See McKinnon v. Otis Elevator Co. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1125, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 723, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 596, *7-*11 (employer's letter to injured employee asking if employee was pursuing third-party action and stating that it had filed lawsuit did not satisfy notice requirements, where it did not serve, either personally or by certified mail, its subrogation complaint on employee and did not mention that there was subrogation complaint or lawsuit, and where it suggested employee could pursue independent third-party action, but said nothing about mandatory consolidation of action required by Lab. Code § 3853).

(n61)Footnote 52.2. Lab. Code § 3859.

(n62)Footnote 52.3. Lab. Code § 3860(a).

(n63)Footnote 52.4. McKinnon v. Otis Elevator Co. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1125, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 723, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 596, *10-*23 (where employer failed to adequately notify employee of its subrogation complaint against third party, failed to obtain employee's consent to settlement of lawsuit and failed to notify employee of settlement in way that would have allowed employee opportunity to recover all damages she suffered, and third party, prior to settlement, was or reasonably should have been aware of possibility of employee's claim for damages, given that employer's negligence-based subrogation complaint against third party specified all identifying and factual details of employee's accident and injury involving third party's elevator, settlement and dismissal of employer's subrogation lawsuit against third party did not bar employee's lawsuit against third party).

(n64)Footnote 53. See Lab. Code §§ 3852, 3853, which authorize such actions.

(n65)Footnote 54. Lab. Code § 3853.

(n66)Footnote 55. County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 868-869, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638, 568 P.2d 363 .

(n67)Footnote 56. Code Civ. Proc. § 387; Lab. Code § 3853; but see Wagner v. Rios (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 608, 611-612, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 731 (complaint in intervention was properly dismissed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 for delay in prosecution because during four years since complaint was filed insurer only participated in single deposition, exchanged unspecified number of interrogatories, did not participate in settlement discussions or pursue arbitration, consented to drop its case from civil active list, and failed thereafter to file at-issue memorandum or otherwise prosecute its case).

(n68)Footnote 57. See Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1.

(n69)Footnote 58. Harrison v. Englebrick (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 871, 874, 62 Cal. Rptr. 831 .

(n70)Footnote 59. Lab. Code § 3853; see Code Civ. Proc. § 387.

(n71)Footnote 60. Mar v. Sakti Internat. Corp. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 1784-1785, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388 .

(n72)Footnote 61. Mar v. Sakti Internat. Corp. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 1785, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388 .

(n73)Footnote 62. See Polk v. Garcia & Maggini Co. (1934) 137 Cal. App. 406, 408, 30 P.2d 615 .

(n74)Footnote 63. See Lab. Code §§ 3850-3864.

(n75)Footnote 64. See Lab. Code § 3856(b).

(n76)Footnote 65. See Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Vol. 1, § 11.42 (Matthew Bender).

(n77)Footnote 66. See Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a).

(n78)Footnote 67. See Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a).

(n79)Footnote 68. See Manthey v. San Luis Rey Downs Enterprises, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 782, 788-789, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265 .

(n80)Footnote 69. See Manthey v. San Luis Rey Downs Enters., Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 782, 789, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265 .

(n81)Footnote 70. See Crampton v. Takegoshi (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 308, 320, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284 .

(n82)Footnote 71. See Manthey v. San Luis Rey Downs Enterprises, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 782, 787-788, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265 .

(n83)Footnote 72. See Manthey v. San Luis Rey Downs Enterprises, Inc. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 782, 786-787, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265 .

(n84)Footnote 73. Lab. Code § 3856(b); see Lab. Code § 3850(b) ("employer" includes insurer for purposes of subrogation of employer); Tate v. Superior Court (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 238, 244, 28 Cal. Rptr. 548 .

(n85)Footnote 74. Lab. Code §§ 3852, 3856(b).

32 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
 CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries
 Part B. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST EMPLOYERS AND THIRD PARTIES
 Subpart 2. Actions by Employer and by Third Parties

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.51

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.51 Recovery by Relatives and Heirs of Employee

[1] Rights of Heirs and Relatives to Disability and Death Benefits

[a] Right to Disability Benefits Accrued and Unpaid

Because an employee's rights belong to the employee personally, liability for disability indemnity ceases with the injured employee's death except in regard to liability then accrued and unpaid.ⁿ¹ Accordingly, the decedent's relatives and heirs who are not dependents have no claim to compensation except for any accrued but unpaid disability benefits.ⁿ² Such accrued benefits, not including Subsequent Injuries Fund benefits,ⁿ³ are payable first to dependents, or if there are no dependents, to the employee's personal representative, or, if there is no administration, to the heirs or other persons entitled thereto without administration.ⁿ⁴ The mere fact that an award for disability benefits has not been made prior to the employee's death does not prevent recovery by dependents or heirs of benefits that would have accrued and become payable at the date of death; thus, the dependents may themselves seek such an award.ⁿ⁵

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

From the defendant's standpoint, whether discussing accrued benefits after the death of the employee, or death benefits, the employer needs finality of the decision. It is vital to join all potential beneficiaries, children and all others who might be able to receive some of the money, and let the WCAB determine the division. Commentary by John W. Miller.

[b] Death Benefits

When an injury causes death, either with or without disability, the employer is liable for a death benefit and burial expenses, in addition to any other benefits provided by the compensation statute.ⁿ⁶ The burial expenses are payable even if the employee leaves no dependents.ⁿ⁷ However, the employee's death is compensable only if it is proximately caused by an injury arising out of and in the course of employment,ⁿ⁸ but not when it results from an unreasonable refusal of treatment.ⁿ⁹ Moreover, only certain relatives or household members who are able to establish total or partial dependency are entitled to death benefits.ⁿ¹⁰ A mere promise of future support is not a sufficient basis for a dependency finding, unless circumstances indicate a bona fide assumption of responsibility for support without an opportunity to make contributions prior to the injury.ⁿ¹¹ Thus, for example, in a case in which a sister claimed partial dependent benefits because of her brother's promise to help support her, the court held that the uncontradicted evidence showed that the deceased brother had made no contributions to her support, and no past dependency could be established.ⁿ¹²

The amount payable as a death benefit, which depends on the number of dependents and whether they were total or partial dependents, is set forth in Labor Code Section 4702, and the manner of its allocation is governed by Labor Code Section 4703. In addition to payment of the amount specified in Labor Code Section 4702, and notwithstanding the maximum limitations specified in Labor Code Sections 4702 and 4703, in the case of one or more totally dependent minor children, payment of death benefits shall continue until the youngest child attains age 18; payment shall be in the same manner and amount as temporary total disability indemnity which would have been paid to the employee, except that no payment shall be made at a weekly rate of less than $224.ⁿ¹³

Liability for death benefits terminates with the last dependent's death except for benefits accrued and unpaid. Payment of such accrued benefits may be made on the appeals board's order to the dependent's heirs, or if there are none, to the employee's heirs without administration.ⁿ¹⁴

When a fatal industrial injury is suffered by an employee who leaves no person surviving him or her entitled to a dependency death benefit, the employer must pay to the Department of Industrial Relations a sum equal to the total dependency death benefit that would be payable to a surviving dependent spouse with no dependent minor children.ⁿ¹⁵ Payment must be made to the department in a lump sum.ⁿ¹⁶ When the employee leaves surviving a partial dependent or partial dependents, partial benefits are paid to them, but the department is not entitled to any balance.ⁿ¹⁷

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE:

The employer, and insurance carrier, would prefer there be at least a partial dependent than no dependent. A partial dependent receives four times the amount of annual support provided by the deceased injured worker, up to a certain maximum, per Labor Code Section 4702(a)(4)(A).^{n17.1} This is considerably less money than if there are no surviving dependents. With no surviving dependents, the employer has to pay a sum equal to the amount that would be payable to a surviving spouse, with no dependent minor children, in one lump sum (not in periodic payments as would be payable in the case of a partial dependent), to the Department of Industrial Relations.ⁿ¹⁸ Commentary by John W. Miller.

Labor Code Section 4702(a)(6)(B), which provides that when a worker without dependents suffers a fatal injury during the course and scope of employment, the employer must pay $ 250,000 to the deceased worker's estate as a workers' compensation death benefit, is unconstitutional because the constitutional enabling provision^{n18.1} does not identify estates as a class of beneficiaries entitled to workers' compensation death benefits.^{n18.2}

For a detailed discussion of dependency and death benefits, see Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, Volume 1, Ch. 9 (Matthew Bender).

[2] Effect of Exclusive Remedy Doctrine on Tort Actions by Employee's Relatives and Heirs

Wrongful death actions are treated in the same manner as the underlying injury causing death.ⁿ¹⁹ Thus, if a tortious act causing death falls within the exclusive remedy provisions of workers' compensation law, an action for wrongful death will be barred, even if the parties suffering damages as a result of the "wrongful death" are not entitled to benefits under workers' compensation law because they were not dependents of the deceased worker.ⁿ²⁰

Loss of consortium actions against an employer are barred when they are based on an injury to an employee that is within the exclusive coverage of workers' compensation.ⁿ²¹

Similarly, actions by a nonemployee for infliction of emotional distress that are based on a tortious act of an employer towards an employee are not permitted as long as the harm to the employee is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ²²

Also, if an employer's negligent conduct toward a pregnant employee causes an injury to the fetus that is derivative of the employee's injury, workers' compensation may be the exclusive remedy available to the fetus. However, if the fetus suffers a separate injury that is not derivative of the employee's injury, a separate civil suit against the employer is not barred.ⁿ²³ For further discussion of the derivative-injury rule, see § 20.10[2].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Disability & Unemployment Insurance Disability Benefits General Overview Labor & Employment Law Disability & Unemployment Insurance Disability Benefits Claim Procedures Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Benefit Determinations General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 4700.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code § 4700.

(n3)Footnote 3. State of California v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 147, 149-150, 311 P.2d 42 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 4700.

(n5)Footnote 5. Fogarty v. Dep't of Indus. Relations (1928) 206 Cal. 102, 104, 273 P. 791 ; State of California v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 147, 149, 311 P.2d 42 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 4701. See Transbay Container Terminal v. United States Dep't of Labor Benefits Review Bd. (9th Cir. 1998) 141 F.3d 907, 912-913 (employer not entitled to offsetting credit against payments under Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (33 U.S.C. § 903(3)(e) for penalties it paid claimant as compensation for delay in payment of death benefits received under California Workers' Compensation Act when penalties paid were reimbursement for delay, not compensation for death).

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 4701.

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 3600(a). For discussion, see § 20.22.

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 4056.

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 4701; Granell v. Indus. Accident Comm'n (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 209, 211-214, 153 P.2d 358 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1052, 232 Cal. Rptr. 343 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Wings West Airlines v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1047, 1053, 1054, 232 Cal. Rptr. 343 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 4703.5; State Comp. Ins. Fund v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1993) 19

Cal. App. 4th 1645, 1650-1651, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 67 ("totally dependent minor children," as used in Lab. Code § 4703.5, includes all minor dependent members of decedent's household, including grandchildren).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Lab. Code § 4706.

(n15)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 4706.5(a); Atlantic Richfield, Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 715, 726-727, 182 Cal. Rptr. 778, 644 P.2d 1257 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Lab. Code § 4706.5(d).

(n17)Footnote 17. Atlantic Richfield, Co. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 715, 726-727, 182 Cal. Rptr. 778, 644 P.2d 1257 .

(n18)Footnote 17.1. For injuries occurring on or after January 1, 2006, a partial dependent will receive eight times the amount of annual support, up to a specified maximum. Lab. Code § 4702(a)(4)(B).

(n19)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 4706.5

(n20)Footnote 18.1. Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4.

(n21)Footnote 18.2. Six Flags, Inc. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 91, 95-107, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 377 .

(n22)Footnote 19. See Lab. Code §§ 3600-3602.

(n23)Footnote 20. See Soil Eng'g Constr., Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 329, 332-333, 186 Cal. Rptr. 209 ; see also Lab. Code §§ 4700-4709 governing availability of death benefits.

(n24)Footnote 21. Santiago v. Employee Benefits Services (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 898, 906, 214 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; Casaccia v. Green Valley Disposal Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 610, 612, 133 Cal. Rptr. 295 .

(n25)Footnote 22. See Williams v. Schwartz (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 628, 632-634, 131 Cal. Rptr. 200 .

(n26)Footnote 23. See Snyder v. Michael's Stores, Inc. (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 991, 998-1002, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476, 945 P.2d 781 (disapproving Bell v. Macy's California (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1442, 261 Cal. Rptr. 447 , which held as matter of law that all fetal injuries are derivative of mother's injuries).

33 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part B. ACTIONS BY AND AGAINST EMPLOYERS AND THIRD PARTIES

Subpart 2. Actions by Employer and by Third Parties

1-20 California Employment Law §§ 20.52 through 20.59

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 20.52[Reserved]

34 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries
Part C. BIBLIOGRAPHY

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.60

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.60 Legal Texts

Hanna, California Law of Employee Injuries and Workers' Compensation, chs. 2-4, 9, 11, 21 (Matthew Bender).

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Ch. 267, Workers' Compensation (Matthew Bender).

California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 577, Workers' Compensation (Matthew Bender).

California Points and Authorities, Employer and Employee (Matthew Bender).

Witkin, Summary of California Law, vol. 2, Workers' Compensation (9th ed. 1987).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview
Workers' Compensation & SSDI Benefit Determinations General Overview

35 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries

Part C. BIBLIOGRAPHY

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.61

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.61 Encyclopedias

65 Cal. Jur. 3d, Work Injury Compensation, §§ 22-62, 73-128, 165-177, 355-366.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings General Overview Workers' Compensation &
SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Benefit
Determinations General Overview

36 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 20 Liability for Work-Related Injuries
Part C. BIBLIOGRAPHY

1-20 California Employment Law § 20.62

AUTHOR: By Judy B. Freeman, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 20.62 Law Reviews and Periodicals

Tanenbaum, A New Approach for Responding to New Communicable Illnesses in the Workplace, 2005 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 267 (July/August 2005).

Bouret, The California Going and Coming Rule: A Plea for Legislative Clarification, 15 Cal. West. L. Rev. 116 (1979).

Dahl, The Inter-Relationship Between Law and Medicine in Workmen's Compensation: A Comparative Guide for Practitioners, 12 Cal. West. L. Rev. 25 (1975).

Demler, Remedy for Intentional Torts of a Workmen's Compensation Carrier, 1 Pepperdine L. Rev. 54 (1973).

Larson, Nonphysical Torts and Workmen's Compensation, 12 Cal. West. L. Rev. 1 (1975).

Matsumoto, Reforming the Reform: Mental Stress Claims Under California Workers' Compensation System, 27 Loy. L.A.L. Rev. 1327 (1994)

McCarthy, Dealing With Workplace Violence, 41(4) Prac. Law 27 (1995).

Miller & Goldstein, Double, Double, Toil, and Trouble: Dual Capacity and Worker's Compensation in California, 13 U.W.L.A. L. Rev. 111 (1981).

Peach, Limitations on an Employer's Immunity in Special Employment Situations, 15 Cal. West. L. Rev. 477 (1980).

Tomita, The Exclusive Remedy for Workers' Compensation for Intentional Torts of the Employer: Johns-Manville Products v. Superior Court, 18 Cal. West. L. Rev. 27 (1981).

Comment, Comparative Negligence in the Workers' Compensation System, 68 Cal. L. Rev. 895 (1980).

Comment, Determining the Compensability of Mental Disabilities Under Workers' Compensation, 55 So. Cal. L. Rev. 193 (1981).

Comment, Employee or Independent Contractor: The Need for a Reassessment of the Standard Used Under California's Workmen's Compensation, 10 U.S.F. L. Rev. 133 (1975).

Comment, Employer Subrogation: Effect of Injured Employee Negligence in Workers' Compensation/Third Party Actions, 18 San Diego L. Rev. 301 (1981).

Comment, The Employment Relation in Workmen's Compensation and Employer's Liability Legislation, 10 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 161 (1962).

Comment, Indemnity Clauses and Workers' Compensation: A Proposal for Preserving the Employer's Limited Liability, 70 Cal. L. Rev. 1421 (1982).

Comment, The Scope of the Exclusive Remedy Clause in California Worker's Compensation Act: Should It Include Third Party Actions for Loss of Consortium? 10 U.S.F. L. Rev. 252 (1975).

Comment, Workers' Compensation: Meaning of the Phrase "Arising Out of Employment" as Used in the California Labor Code, 8 Hastings L.J. 49 (1956).

Note, Johns-Manville Products Corp v. Superior Court: Intentional Aggravation of Injury as an Exception to Exclusive Workers' Compensation Remedies, 69 Cal. L. Rev. 1230 (1981).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings General Overview
 Workers' Compensation & SSDI Administrative Proceedings Claims General Overview
 Workers' Compensation & SSDI Benefit Determinations General Overview

37 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation

2-21 California Employment Law 21.syn

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.syn Synopsis to Chapter 21: Occupational Safety and Health Regulation

§ 21.01 Federal Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970

- [1] Historical Background
- [2] Purposes, Structure, and Scope of the Act
- [3] Federal OSHA Enforcement Agencies
 - [a] Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA)
 - [b] Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission (OSHRC)
 - [c] National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH)
 - [d] Department of Justice
 - [e] Statistics
- [4] Jurisdiction and Coverage
 - [4A] Federal Preemption in Absence of State Plan
- [5] State Plans

§ 21.02 California Occupational Safety and Health Law

- [1] California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973

- [a] Historical Background

- [b] Purposes of the Act

- [c] Structure of the Act

- [d] Occupational Safety and Health Standards

- [e] Administrative Interpretations

- [f] Policies and Procedures

- [g] Disengagement and Reassertion of Jurisdiction

- [2] Related California Laws

- [a] Occupational Carcinogens Control Act of 1976

- [b] Tom Carrell Memorial Tunnel and Mine Safety Act of 1972

- [c] Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act of 1986 (Proposition 65)

- [d] Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act

- [e] Disciplinary Actions Against Building Contractors

- [f] Occupational Disease and Lead Poisoning Prevention Programs

- [3] Overview of Administrative Enforcement Structure

- [a] Department of Industrial Relations

- [b] Division of Occupational Safety and Health

- [i] General Organization and Structure

- [ii] Bureau of Investigations (BOI)

- [iii] Medical Unit

- [iv] Publications and Films

- [v] Hazard Evaluation System and Information Service

- [vi] Consultation Services

- [c] Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board

- [i] Structure and Functions

- [ii] Standard-Setting

- [iii] OSHA Standards Affecting Building Standards

- [iv] Permanent and Temporary Variances

- [d] Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board

- § 21.03 Jurisdiction and Coverage

- [1] Division Powers and Authority

- [a] Scope of Jurisdiction

- [b] Exceptions

- [c] Concurrent Jurisdiction

- [i] Concurrent Federal-State Jurisdiction

- [ii] Master Agreements Governing California Interagency Enforcement Activity

- [d] Preemption

- [2] Employment Relationship

- [a] Employee

- [b] Employer

- [i] General Definition

- [ii] Special-Employer Doctrine

- [iii] Temporary Labor--The Primary/Secondary-Employer Doctrine

- [iv] Multi-Employer Worksites

- [v] Person Performing Services for Which License is Required (and Employees of That Person)

- [c] Employment

- §§ 21.04 through 21.09 [Reserved]

- § 21.10 General Duties Regarding Employee Safety and Health

- § 21.11 Duty to Furnish Safety Procedures, Safety Equipment, and Protective Devices

- § 21.12 Duty to Implement and Maintain Injury and Illness Prevention Program

- [1] General Requirements

[1A] Workplace Security Component

[2] Grandfather Provision

[3] Substantial Compliance

[4] Readily Understandable Communication System

[5] Recordkeeping Requirements

[a] General Requirements

[b] Employers Exempt From General Recordkeeping Requirements

[6] Enforcement of Program

§ 21.13 Duty to Conduct Self-Inspections, Correct Conditions, and Investigate Injuries and Illnesses

[1] Self-Inspections and Correction of Unsafe Conditions

[2] Investigation of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses

§ 21.14 Duty to Train Employees

§ 21.15 Duty to Monitor for Hazardous Exposures

§ 21.16 Duties Regarding Employee Medical Examinations and Medical Surveillance Programs

§ 21.17 Duty to Inform Employees

[1] Information Concerning Exposure to Hazardous Substances

[a] Notification Requirements

[b] Protection of Trade Secrets From Disclosure

[i] Disclosure to Employees, Employee Representatives, or Health Professionals

[ii] Disclosure to Division

[2] Other Notification Requirements

§ 21.18 Employers' Reporting Duties

[1] Employer Reports to Division of Occupational Safety and Health

[2] Employer Reports to Division of Labor Statistics and Research

[3] Doctor's First Report

[4] Employer's Report of Carcinogen Use

§ 21.19 Recordkeeping Requirements

[1] Log of Work-Related Injuries and Illnesses (Forms 300, 300A, 301)

[i] Employers Required to Report

[ii] What Must Be Recorded

[iii] Required Forms

[iv] When Employer Must Report

[v] Privacy Concerns

[vi] Injuries or Illnesses Which Must Be Recorded

[vii] Annual Requirements

[viii] Retention

[ix] Employees' Rights

[x] Variances from Recordkeeping Rule

[xi] Providing Records to Government Representatives

[2] Supplementary Records

[3] Annual Summary of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses

[4] Retention of Records

[5] Access to Records

[6] Written Injury and Illness Prevention Program

[7] Written Hazard Communication Program

[8] Retention of Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS's)

[9] Retention Period for Employee Exposure and Medical Records

§ 21.20 Duty to Refrain From Employee Retaliation or Discrimination

§ 21.21 Duty to Obtain Necessary Permits for Hazardous Work

§ 21.22 Duty to Post Citations and Other Information Required by Division

§§ 21.23through 21.29 [Reserved]

§ 21.30 Filing Complaints About Hazardous Conditions

§ 21.31 Refusal of Unsafe Work

§ 21.32 Hazard Training

§ 21.33 Information Rights

[1] Information About Presence of or Exposure to Hazardous Substances

[2] Observation of Workplace Monitoring and Receipt of Results from Monitoring

[3] Access to Employer Injury and Illness Log

§ 21.34 Medical Examinations and Records

§ 21.35 Participation in Cal/OSHA Inspections

§ 21.36 Participation in Cal/OSHA Proceedings

[1] Appeal Hearings

[2] Permit Safety Conferences

[3] Variance Hearings

§§ 21.37through 21.39 [Reserved]

§ 21.40 Division Powers and Authority

[1] Scope of Division Powers

[2] Investigation of Occupational Accidents and Fatalities

[a] General Requirements and Procedures

[b] Bureau of Investigations--Criminal Investigations and Referrals

[c] Referrals to State Contractors Licensing Board

[d] Pesticide Exposure Reports

[3] Investigation of Complaints

§ 21.41 Inspections

[1] Overview of Inspection Procedures

[2] Advance Notice of Inspections

[3] Division's Right of Entry and Inspection Warrants

[4] Subpoenas, Depositions, and Statements Under Oath

[5] Order Preserving Evidence

[6] Injury Prevention Program Evaluation

[7] Reinspections

§ 21.42 Citations and Orders

[1] Citations

[a] Issuance

[b] Form and Content

[2] Classification of Violations

[a] Generally

[b] Willful Violation

[c] Repeat Violation

[d] Serious Violation

[e] General Violation

[f] Regulatory Violation

[3] Notice in Lieu of Citation

[4] Types of Orders

[a] Temporary Restraining Orders

[b] Orders Prohibiting Use

[i] Issuance, Posting, and Effect

[ii] Hearing to Contest Validity

[c] Special Orders

[d] Order to Take Special Action

[5] Information Memorandum

[6] Notice of No Violation

§ 21.43 Civil Penalties

[1] Basis and Procedure for Assessing

[1A] Circumstances in Which Penalty Is Not Assessed

[2] Factors Used to Assess Civil Penalties

[a] Overview of Factors

[b] Gravity of Violation

[c] Size of Employer's Business

[d] Employer's Good Faith

[e] History of Previous Violations

[3] Calculating Amount of Civil Penalty

[a] Overview of Penalty Calculations

[b] Nonserious (General) Violations

[c] Serious Violations

[d] Regulatory Violations

[e] Willful Violations

[f] Repeat Violations

[g] Penalties for Failure to Abate Violations

[h] Multiple Violations Arising Out of Single Hazard

[i] Permit Violations

[j] Failure to File Required Reports

[k] Violations Involving Cranes

[4] Civil Penalties Assessed Against Government Employers

[5] Enforcement of Civil Penalties

[6] Notice of Penalty to Contractors' State License Board

§ 21.44 Abatement of Violations and Reinspections

[1] Abatement

[2] Reinspection

§ 21.45 Administrative Appeals

[1] Governing Rules

[2] Who May Appeal

[3] Timeliness of Appeal

[4] Form of Appeal

[5] Issues on Appeal

[6] Effect of Filing Appeal; Stay of Violation Abatement Requirements

[7] Notifying Employees and Labor Organizations of Appeal

[8] Party Status and Intervention

[9] General Rules Regarding Filing, Service, and Format of Documents

[a] Computation of Time Limits

[b] Late Filing of Documents

[c] Service of Documents

[d] Proof of Service

[e] Ex Parte Communications

[f] Pre-hearing Motions

[10] Administrative Law Judge

[a] Appointment and Powers of Administrative Law Judge

[b] Objections to Assigned Administrative Law Judge

[c] Transfer of Proceedings

[11] Merger and Consolidation of Appeals

[12] Withdrawal and Reinstatement of Appeal

[13] Withdrawal of Division Action

[14] Disposition of Appeal by Motion

[15] Discovery

[a] Access to Documents and Evidence and Disclosure of Witnesses

[b] Compelling Discovery

[c] Subpoenas, Subpoenas Duces Tecum, and Depositions

[d] Evidence by Affidavit or Declaration

[16] Contempt

[17] Pre-hearing Conferences and Statements

[18] Hearing

[a] Time and Place of Hearing

[b] Conduct of the Hearing

[c] Representation

[d] Rules of Evidence and Hearsay

[e] Trade Secrets and Confidential Evidence

[f] Exclusion of Witnesses

[g] Official Notice

[h] Interpreters

[i] Effect of Failure to Appear

[j] Reserved

[k] Briefs

[19] Decisions and Proposed Decisions

[20] Reconsideration

[a] Right to Petition for Reconsideration and Time for Filing

[b] Grounds for Reconsideration

[c] Contents, Format, and Service of Petition

[d] Effect of Filing Petition for Reconsideration on Decision or Order

[e] Time for Appeals Board Action on Petition

[f] Answer

[g] Supplemental Petition or Answer; Request for Hearing Record

[h] Appeals Board Powers on Reconsideration

[21] Employer's Recovery of Costs

[a] Right to Recover Costs Generally

[b] Recoverable Costs

[c] When Citation Is Deemed "Withdrawn"

[d] When Employer Is Deemed to Have "Prevailed"

[e] Petition Procedures

[f] Burden of Proof

[g] Action on Petition

[h] Hearing Procedures

[i] Reconsideration

[22] Judicial Review of Appeals Board Decisions

[a] Procedure for Filing Writ of Mandate

[b] No Automatic Stay

[c] Scope of Judicial Review

§ 21.46 Employer Defenses to Citations

[1] Burden of Proof

[2] Employment and Employee Exposure

[3] Service

[4] Statute of Limitations

[5] Particularity and Specificity

[6] Unforeseeable Isolated Employee Act

[7] Independent Employee Action

[8] Vagueness

[9] Advisory Versus Mandatory Standards

[10] Miscellaneous Unsuccessful Defenses

§ 21.47 Permits

[1] General Permits for Work Involving Substantial Risk of Injury

[a] Types of Work Requiring a Permit

[b] Exemptions From Permit Requirements

[c] Permit Applications

[d] Pre-Job Inspections, Hearings, and Safety Conferences

[e] [Reserved]

[f] Permit Posting

[g] Denial or Revocation of the Permit

[i] Division's Authority to Deny or Revoke Permit

[ii] Appeal of Permit Denial or Revocation to Director of Industrial Relations

[h] Permit Fees

[i] Criminal and Civil Penalties and Injunctive Relief for Permit Violations

[2] Registration Requirements for Asbestos-Related Work

[a] Types of Work and Entities Subject to Registration Requirements

[b] Duty to Determine Presence of Asbestos and Related Penalties

[c] Application for Registration and Fees

[d] Posting and Notification of Asbestos-Related Work

[e] Pre-Job Safety Conference

[f] Notice Requirements Regarding Multiple Jobs, Phases of Work, or Locations

[g] Denial or Revocation of Registration

[h] Separate Contract Requirement

§ 21.48 Variances

[1] Temporary Variances

[a] Grounds for Issuance of Temporary Variance and Limitations

[b] Application for Temporary Variance

[c] Hearing on Temporary Variance Application and Appeals to Standards Board

[2] Permanent Variances

[a] Grounds for Issuance of Permanent Variance

[b] Application for Permanent Variance

[c] Referral to Division for Evaluation

[d] Notice and Posting Requirements

[e] [Reserved]

[f] Hearings

[i] Overview of Hearing Procedures

[ii] Time and Place of Hearing

[iii] Hearing Officer and Panel

[iv] Prehearing Requests for Action

[v] Prehearing Conferences and Agreements

[vi] Witnesses and Subpoenas

[vii] Rules of Evidence

[viii] Confidential Evidence

[ix] Representation at Hearing

[x] Conduct of Hearing

[xi] Official and Judicial Notice

[xii] Exclusion of Witnesses During Hearing

[xiii] [Reserved]

[xiv] Continuances

[xv] Failure to Appear

[xvi] Decisions; Actions on Proposed Decisions

[xvii] Rehearing

[g] Modification or Revocation of Variance

§ 21.49 Retaliation Against Employees

[1] Types of Retaliation Prohibited

[a] Safety Complaints and Participation in Cal/OSHA Proceedings

[b] Refusal of Unsafe Work

[2] Remedies for Retaliation

§§ 21.50 through 21.59 [Reserved]

§ 21.60 Overview of Criminal Penalties for Violations of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act

§ 21.61 Willful Violation Causing Employee Death or Permanent or Prolonged Impairment

§ 21.62 Manslaughter

§ 21.63 Negligent, Knowing, or Repeat Violations, and Failures to Abate

§ 21.64 False Statements and Representations

§ 21.65 Failure to Determine Presence of Asbestos-Containing Materials

§ 21.66 Willful Refusal to Rehire, Promote, or Restore Employee After Unlawful Discrimination

§ 21.67 Corporate Criminal Liability Act of 1989

[1] Overview of Prohibited Conduct and Penalties

[2] "Manager" Defined

[3] "Actual Knowledge" Defined

[4] "Serious Concealed Danger" and Related Terms Defined

[5] "Appropriate Government Agency" Defined

[6] Exceptions to Reporting Requirement

[7] Prohibition Against Use of Notification in Criminal Prosecution Against Manager

§ 21.68 Other Criminal Offenses Related to Occupational Safety and Health

§ 21.69 Statutory Civil Actions for "Unfair Competition"

§ 21.70 Effect of Occupational Safety and Health Act and Standards in Civil Personal Injury Litigation

§ 21.71 Injunctive Relief to Prevent Workplace Violence

[1] Basis of Relief

[2] Definitions of "Employer" and "Employee" for Purposes of Relief

[3] Obtaining Temporary Restraining Order

[4] Procedure on Petition for Injunction

[a] Filing of Petition and Service on Defendant

[b] Response by Defendant

[c] Scheduling of Hearing

[d] Conduct of Hearing and Issuance of Injunction

[5] Notification to Law Enforcement Agencies

[6] Penalties for Violation

[7] No Effect on Employer's Duty Regarding Safe Workplace

[8] Prohibition of Firearm Ownership

[9] Subsequent Actions

§§ 21.72 through 21.79 [Reserved]

§ 21.80 Introduction

§ 21.81 Airborne Contaminants

[1] Overview of Regulations

[2] Ceiling Limits

[3] Permissible Exposure Limits

[4] Short-Term Exposure Limits

[5] Methods of Controlling Employee Exposure to Airborne Contaminants

[6] Respiratory Protection Programs

[a] Respiratory Protection In General

[b] Respiratory Protection for M. Tuberculosis

§ 21.81A Workplace Smoking

[1] Statewide Interest in Workplace Smoking

[a] Smoking Prohibited in Covered Places of Employment

[b] Extent of Permissible Local Regulation of Workplace Smoking

[2] Employer's Compliance

[a] Employer Cannot Knowingly or Intentionally Permit Smoking

[b] Reasonable Steps to Prevent Smoking by Nonemployee

[3] Exclusions From "Place of Employment"

[4] Penalties

[5] Complaints to Division of Occupational Safety and Health

§ 21.82 Confined Spaces

§ 21.83 Repetitive Motion Injury

[1] Scope and Application

[2] Program Designed to Minimize RMIs

[3] Satisfaction of Employer's Obligation

§ 21.84 APPENDIX--Topical List of Safety Orders and Related Statutes

[1] Aerial Passenger Tramways

[2] Boilers, Tanks, and Pressure Vessels

[3] Construction

[4] Cranes and Hoisting Equipment

[5] Diving Operations

[6] Electrical Safety

[7] Elevators

[7A] Ergonomics

[8] General Machinery and Equipment

[a] General Machine Safety

[b] Points of Operation and Other Hazardous Parts of Machinery

[9] General Physical Conditions and Structures

[10] General Plant Equipment and Special Operations

[11] General Safe Practices and Personal Protection

[12] Hazardous Materials and Substances

[13] Logging and Sawmill Operations

[14] Mining and Tunneling Operations

[15] Mobile Equipment and Auxiliaries

[16] Petroleum Operations

[17] Railroad Operations

[18] Ship Building, Repairing, and Breaking

[19] Telecommunications Operations

§§ 21.85 through 21.89 [Reserved]

§ 21.90 Legal Texts

§ 21.91 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

*By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D. n

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Ms. Marria is staff counsel for the Director of the California Department of Industrial Relations. Formerly, she was staff counsel at the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board and at the Division of Occupational Safety and Health (Cal/OSHA). While at Cal/OSHA, she represented that agency in administrative proceedings and supervised investigations by the Bureau of Investigations in Southern California.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

38 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation

2-21 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

Scope

By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D. n SCOPE*

This chapter discusses regulation of safety and health in the workplace, with an emphasis on the California Occupational Safety and Health Act. The chapter discusses the interrelationship between federal and state occupational safety and health laws, provides an overview of California's occupational safety and health laws, and discusses general employer duties and employee rights under those laws. The chapter provides detailed treatment of administrative enforcement of California workplace safety laws by the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, including the assessment of civil penalties by the Division, as well as appeal proceedings before the Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board. Procedures for obtaining prejob permits for certain types of hazardous work and for obtaining temporary and permanent variances from occupational safety and health standards are also discussed. Finally, the chapter discusses potential criminal and civil liability for violations of occupational safety and health laws.

For discussion of employer liability for work-related injuries, including an overview of the workers' compensation system, see Chapter 20.

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Ms. Marria is staff counsel for the Director of the California Department of Industrial Relations. Formerly, she was staff counsel at the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board and at the Division of Occupational Safety and Health (Cal/OSHA). While at Cal/OSHA, she represented that agency in administrative proceedings and supervised investigations by the Bureau of Investigations in Southern California.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

39 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part A. OVERVIEW

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.01

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.01 Federal Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970

[1] Historical Background

The Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970¹ created a comprehensive national system of laws and regulations intended to assure safe and healthful working conditions for every working person and to reduce occupational illnesses, injuries, and fatalities.

Prior to its passage, a maze of state and federal laws regulated occupational safety and health. By the end of the nineteenth century, 21 states had some type of legislation governing specific industries or hazards. At the federal level, beginning in 1936, employees of contractors having federal contracts for supplies, materials, or services in excess of a specified amount were protected under the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act.² The federal Coal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1952³ protected certain coal miners. The Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act⁴ was amended in 1958 to allow the Secretary of Labor to develop and enforce safety standards in the longshoring industry. Workers employed on U.S. public works projects were covered pursuant to the Contract Work Hours and Safety Standards Act of 1962.⁵ Employees of federal maintenance and service contractors were protected by the McNamara-O'Hara Service Contract Act.⁶ The National Foundation of the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965 was amended to extend the protections of the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act to persons employed under grants administered by the foundation.⁷ Miners in mineral mines were protected initially by the Metal and Nonmetallic Mine Safety Act⁸ until jurisdiction was shifted with passage of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977.⁹

Federal jurisdiction over occupational safety and health was a volatile issue for many years. Organized labor first called for federal occupational safety and health laws in 1878. Industry-supported private sector organizations such as the National Fire Protection Association, the National Safety Council, and the American Society of Safety Engineers began developing "consensus standards" in an effort to provide some uniformity in standards. But many states failed or refused to adhere to such standards.

During World War II and in the postwar years, federal agencies charged with occupational safety and health enforcement entered into informal agreements with some states to allow the state to carry out federal agency inspection responsibilities. However, complaints from organized labor about lax and inconsistent enforcement and notable discrepancies between state regulations and national consensus standards led the Department of Labor to cancel many of these agreements. Moreover, attempts by the Secretary of Labor to extend and assert federal jurisdiction over occupational safety and health met growing resistance from the states and vigorous opposition from some segments of the business community.

The rising occupational injury and illness rates of the postwar years, and the Farmington Mine disaster of 1968, in which 78 miners in West Virginia were killed, each contributed to changing the political atmosphere sufficiently to permit enactment of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970.

[2] Purposes, Structure, and Scope of the Act

The purposes of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 include the following:

1. Encouraging the efforts of employers and employees to reduce occupational safety and health hazards at places of employment and to develop programs that provide for safe and healthful working conditions;ⁿ¹⁰
2. Building on the advances made through employer and employee initiatives to provide safe and healthful working conditions,ⁿ¹¹ and encouraging joint labor-management efforts to reduce injuries and disease arising out of employment;ⁿ¹²
3. Authorizing the Secretary of Labor to set mandatory standards for all businesses affecting interstate commerce;ⁿ¹³
4. Providing for an effective enforcement program, which includes an express prohibition against giving advance notice of any inspection;ⁿ¹⁴
5. Providing for research in the field of occupational safety and health, including the psychological factors involved;ⁿ¹⁵
6. Providing for medical criteria that will assure insofar as practicable that no employee will suffer diminished health, functional capacity, or life expectancy as a result of work experience;ⁿ¹⁶
7. Exploring ways to discover latent diseases, establishing causal connections between diseases and work conditions, and conducting other research relating to health problems in recognition of the different problems presented by occupational health standards as compared to safety;ⁿ¹⁷
8. Providing for training programs to increase the number and competence of personnel engaged in the field of occupational safety and health;ⁿ¹⁸
9. Encouraging the states to assume the fullest responsibility for the administration and enforcement of state occupational safety and health laws and providing grants to the states to assist the state, among other things, in identifying state needs, in developing plans in accordance with the act, and in improving the administration and enforcement of state plans;ⁿ¹⁹
10. Providing for appropriate reporting procedures that will achieve the objectives of the act and accurately describe the nature of occupational safety and health problems;ⁿ²⁰

11. Recognizing the separate but dependent responsibilities and rights of employers and employees with respect to achieving safe and healthful working conditions;ⁿ²¹ and

12. Creating an independent body, the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, to adjudicate matters arising from enforcement activity under the act.ⁿ²²

The system created by the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 comprises seven major functions:

1. Rulemaking, which includes the development and adoption of new safety and health standards;ⁿ²³
2. Enforcement, which includes conducting inspections and investigations,ⁿ²⁴ securing injunctions in the event of imminent dangers,ⁿ²⁵ issuing citations,ⁿ²⁶ assessing penalties,ⁿ²⁷ verifying employer compliance with reporting and recordkeeping requirements, and granting or denying temporary and permanent variances from safety and health standards;ⁿ²⁸
3. Adjudicating appeals from citations, notices of civil penalty,ⁿ²⁹ and variance decisions;
4. Providing research services through the Department of Health and Human Services;ⁿ³⁰ and the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH);ⁿ³¹
5. Providing educationⁿ³² and training;ⁿ³³
6. Statistical compilation and analysis of occupational injury and illness data;ⁿ³⁴ and
7. Evaluating, certifying, monitoring, and assisting state occupational safety and health programs, i.e., state plans.ⁿ³⁵

[3] Federal OSHA Enforcement Agencies

[a] Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA)

The various duties and responsibilities of the Secretary of Labor under the Occupational Safety and Health Act have been delegated to the Assistant Secretary for Occupational Safety and Health. The Assistant Secretary, who is appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, directs the operations of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).ⁿ³⁶ OSHA enforcement is organized into regional offices, which dispatch compliance safety officers and industrial hygienists to do inspections and house additional staff, including a Regional Attorney, who litigates appeals.

OSHA inspectors, acting on behalf of the Secretary of Labor, are authorized to conduct inspections and investigations,ⁿ³⁷ subpoena witnesses and the production of evidence,ⁿ³⁸ issue written citations,ⁿ³⁹ recommend that a temporary restraining order be obtained to protect employees from the hazard of an imminent danger,ⁿ⁴⁰ specify time for abating hazardsⁿ⁴¹ and assess proposed penalties for violations.ⁿ⁴²

The Secretary may also appoint advisory committees to assist in the development or amendment of occupational safety and health standards;ⁿ⁴³ adopt, modify, or revoke occupational safety or health standards, after complying with specified requirements for public notice and comment;ⁿ⁴⁴ review and grant temporaryⁿ⁴⁵ and permanentⁿ⁴⁶ variances from mandatory standards; adopt emergency standards to protect employees from grave dangers;ⁿ⁴⁷ and prescribe the use of warning labels,ⁿ⁴⁸ suitable personal protective equipment and controls,ⁿ⁴⁹ exposure monitoring, and medical exams.ⁿ⁵⁰

[b] Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission (OSHRC)

The Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission (OSHRC) is responsible for hearing appeals from citations, notices of penalty, and notices of failure to abate issued to employers for violations of standards.ⁿ⁵¹ The OSHRC is composed of three members, appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, who serve six-year terms.ⁿ⁵² The Chairperson, appointed by the President, appoints hearing examiners to conduct administrative appeal hearings.ⁿ⁵³ Proceedings before the OSHRC are conducted in accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedureⁿ⁵⁴ and the OSHRC's rules of procedure.ⁿ⁵⁵ The hearing examiner's decision becomes a final order of the OSHRC within 30 days of the date of issuance, unless a party to the proceeding has properly petitioned for rehearing by the OSHRC or the OSHRC has granted reconsideration on its own motion.ⁿ⁵⁶ Judicial review of an OSHRC decision may be petitioned in the U.S. Court of Appeals within 60 days after the OSHRC's decision is issued. The commencement of proceedings does not automatically stay the OSHRC's order in the matter.ⁿ⁵⁷ The OSHRC's findings of fact, if supported by substantial evidence in the record taken as a whole, are conclusive,ⁿ⁵⁸ although the court may order additional evidence to be taken. The OSHRC's order in a matter becomes final within 60 days of service if no petition for review has been filed and may be enforced, on petition, by order of the Court of Appeals.ⁿ⁵⁹

[c] National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH)

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health was created by the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 as an institute within the Department of Health and Human Services, responsible for performing the research, education, and training functions of the Secretary of Health and Human Services under Sections 669 and 670 of the act.ⁿ⁶⁰ In addition, NIOSH has the express authority to develop and establish recommended occupational safety and health standards.ⁿ⁶¹

The Director of NIOSH, appointed by the Secretary of HHS for a six-year term,ⁿ⁶² is authorized to conduct research and experimental programs to develop criteria for new occupational safety and health standards and to recommend standards on the basis of such research.ⁿ⁶³ The Director must report annually to the Secretary of HHS, the President, and Congress on NIOSH's activities.ⁿ⁶⁴

Within the Institute, an Office of Mine Safety and Health has been established to enhance the development of new mine safety technology and technological applications and to expedite the commercial availability and implementation of technology in mining environments.^{n64.1}

[d] Department of Justice

Cases involving potential specified criminal violations of the actⁿ⁶⁵ are referred to the Department of Justice for prosecution.

[e] Statistics

The Secretary of Labor in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services is required to develop and maintain an effective program for collecting, compiling, and analyzing occupational safety and health statistics.ⁿ⁶⁶ Specifically, the Secretary is required to compile accurate statistics on work injuries and illnesses, including all disabling, serious, or significant injuries and illnesses, whether or not lost time is involved, which may result in first aid but do not require medical treatment or involve loss of consciousness, restriction of work motion, or transfer to another job.ⁿ⁶⁷ In performing these functions, OSHA may grant up to 50 percent of a state's total cost for compiling occupational safety and health statistics.ⁿ⁶⁸ Statistical data used in this activity is compiled from the reports employers are required to file by Section 8(c)ⁿ⁶⁹ of the act.

[4] Jurisdiction and Coverage

The Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 applies to employment within any workplace in a state, on Wake Island, the Outer Continental Shelf Lands, Johnston Island, and the Canal Zone.ⁿ⁷⁰ The term "state" includes the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.ⁿ⁷¹

Employees expressly excluded from coverage under the act include the following:

1. Employees for whom other federal agencies exercise statutory authority to prescribe and enforce occupational safety and health standards.ⁿ⁷² Mere possession by another federal agency of unexercised authority to regulate certain working conditions is insufficient to displace OSHA's jurisdiction. Furthermore, another federal agency's minimal exercise of some authority over certain conditions does not result in complete preemption of OSHA jurisdiction. OSHA is only preempted if the working conditions at issue are the particular ones with respect to which another federal agency has regulated, and if the regulations affect occupational safety or health.^{n72.1}
2. Employees for whom state agencies acting under Section 2021 of Title 42 exercise statutory authority over occupational safety and health standards.ⁿ⁷³
3. Persons who fail to meet the definition of an employee.

Although federal, state, and local governments are expressly excluded from the definition of an employer under the act,ⁿ⁷⁴ the provisions of the act are extended to federal employees by Section 19(a),ⁿ⁷⁵ which requires every federal agency to establish and maintain an effective and comprehensive occupational safety and health program consistent with the standards developed by OSHA. Furthermore, as a condition of obtaining approval of a state occupational safety and health program for private-sector workplaces, a state must demonstrate that public agency employees will be protected by an equally effective and comprehensive state occupational safety and health program.ⁿ⁷⁶ States in which only federal OSHA asserts jurisdiction over private-sector occupational safety and health may seek approval for a state plan covering occupational safety and health for state and local agency employees.ⁿ⁷⁷

[4A] Federal Preemption in Absence of State Plan

OSHA preempts any state regulation of an occupational safety or health issue with respect to which a federal standard has been established, unless a state plan^{n77.1} has been submitted and approved.^{n77.2} By enacting OSHA, Congress sought to promote occupational safety and health, as well as avoid duplicative, and possibly counterproductive, regulation. The scope of this preemption therefore includes nonconflicting state laws designed to promote worker safety, if they interfere with the methods by which the federal statute was designed to reach that goal.^{n77.3}

The issue of preemption can arise even if the state, such as California, has an approved plan. For example, a law enacted outside the scope of Cal/OSHA, designed for some purpose other than the control of worker safety or health, such as pollution control, may be subject to preemption if its practical effect encroaches on the goals of federal OSHA.^{n77.4}

A state law whose declared purpose is different than, or in addition to the promotion of worker safety and health, is a "dual impact" law^{n77.5} in this context, and is not necessarily saved from preemption by virtue of serving multiple objectives. In determining the preemptive effect of OSHA on a dual impact law, courts must evaluate at what point the state regulation sufficiently interferes with federal regulation so as to be deemed preempted.^{n77.6} In the absence of approval of a state plan, OSHA preempts all state law that constitutes, in a direct, clear, and substantial way, regulation of worker health and safety.^{n77.7} On the other hand, state laws of general applicability (e.g., those governing traffic safety or fire safety) that do not conflict with OSHA standards and that regulate the conduct of workers and nonworkers alike would generally not be preempted. If a state wishes to enact a dual impact law that regulates an occupational safety or health issue for which a federal standard is in effect, the state must submit a plan for approval.^{n77.8}

Consequently, for example, a state licensing law governing hazardous waste operations is preempted by OSHA to the extent that it establishes occupational safety and health standards for those who work with hazardous waste.^{n77.9}

[5] State Plans

Any state seeking to assume responsibility for occupational safety and health matters must submit a state plan for developing standards and enforcement procedures.ⁿ⁷⁸ Although one of the stated purposes of the act is to encourage states to assume the fullest responsibility over the administration and enforcement of occupational safety and health,ⁿ⁷⁹ Congress conditioned any withdrawal of federal jurisdiction over occupational safety and health "issues"ⁿ⁸⁰ on the requirement that the state first demonstrate that its proposed state plan standards, program resources, and procedures are "at least as effective as" corresponding federal regulations on such issues.ⁿ⁸¹

Obtaining approval of a state OSHA plan is a multi-stage endeavor. If the written plan submitted conforms to the criteria set out in the act,ⁿ⁸² and the Secretary is satisfied that the state standards will be at least as effective as federal standards, the plan will be approved.ⁿ⁸³

However, even if the plan does not meet all the requirements of Title 29 Code of Federal Regulations Section 1902.3 at the time of submission, the Secretary may grant a provisional approval by finding the state plan to be a "developmental" plan. To find the plan developmental, the Secretary must find a "reasonable expectation" that the state will take specified necessary steps within three years of the date of initial operation to meet the Section 1902.3 criteria.ⁿ⁸⁴ However, before granting final approval, the Secretary must evaluate the state plan operation for at least one year after all developmental steps have been completed.

On proof of completion of all the required steps identified with the developmental plan stage, the Assistant Secretary may certify completion of the developmental steps and publish the certification in the Federal Register.ⁿ⁸⁵ Publication of the notice of certification in the Federal Register automatically initiates the next phase of gaining final plan approval. Throughout the developmental stage, federal OSHA monitors actual state plan performance.ⁿ⁸⁶

The last stage is to obtain an "affirmative section 18(e) determination," or final plan approval. The factors used to reach an affirmative Section 18(e) determination are set forth in Title 29 Code of Federal Regulations Section 1902.37. Once the plan receives final plan approval, federal OSHA formally withdraws from exercising federal jurisdiction over standards, inspections, citations, penalties, appeals, abatement, and imminent dangers within the state.ⁿ⁸⁷ However, even after final plan approval, federal OSHA continues to retain federal jurisdiction in order to monitor state plan operations to ensure that state standards continue to be at least as effective as federal standards and to enforce the anti-discrimination provisions of the federal act.ⁿ⁸⁸

Conversely, federal OSHA may reach a negative determination and continue to retain federal jurisdiction over occupational safety and health if the Assistant Secretary finds that some part or all of the actual state plan operations fail to warrant a Section 18(e) approval. The state may be given a reasonable time to meet the plan criteria.ⁿ⁸⁹ A negative determination may lead to withdrawal of all or part of the plan approval.ⁿ⁹⁰

State plans must file plan supplements with the Secretary of Labor for any plan modification that may have an impact on the effectiveness of the state program.ⁿ⁹¹ A state may request an advisory opinion for a preliminary determination of the impact of a proposed plan change.

The procedures used to monitor state plan activity during the developmental stage and after final Section 18(e) approval are set out in Title 29 United States Code Section 667(f) and Title 29 Code of Federal Regulations Sections 1954.1 through 1954.22.

During the period of concurrent jurisdiction, that is, from the time of initial approval until final approval is actually given, the Assistant Secretary has discretionary authority to exercise federal jurisdiction on occupational safety and health issues contained in the state plan.ⁿ⁹² A state that has met all of the guidelines set out in Title 29 Code of Federal Regulations Section 1954.3(b) is considered "operational." Accordingly, federal enforcement will be reduced to a monitoring function only, and the state will conduct all enforcement activity.ⁿ⁹³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws Occupational Safety & Health Act

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 29 U.S.C. § 651 et seq. Also called the "Williams-Steiger Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970." Pub. L. No. 91-596.

(n2)Footnote 2. 41 U.S.C. § 35 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. Former 30 U.S.C. § 471 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 4. 33 U.S.C. §§ 901, 941.

(n5)Footnote 5. 40 U.S.C. § 327 et seq.

(n6)Footnote 6. 41 U.S.C. § 351 et seq.

(n7)Footnote 7. 20 U.S.C. § 954(a), (n).

(n8)Footnote 8. Former 30 U.S.C. § 721 et seq. (repealed 1977).

(n9)Footnote 9. 30 U.S.C. § 801 et seq. See Stillwater Mining Co. v. Fed. Mine Safety & Health Review Comm'n (9th Cir. 1998) 142 F.3d 1179, 1184 (FMSHA imposes "a kind of strict liability on employers to ensure worker safety," citing cases from other circuits).

(n10)Footnote 10. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(4).

(n12)Footnote 12. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(13).

(n13)Footnote 13. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(3), (9).

(n14)Footnote 14. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(10).

(n15)Footnote 15. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(5).

(n16)Footnote 16. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(7).

(n17)Footnote 17. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(6).

(n18)Footnote 18. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(8).

(n19)Footnote 19. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(11); see also discussion of state plans in [5], below.

(n20)Footnote 20. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(12).

(n21)Footnote 21. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(2).

(n22)Footnote 22. 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(3).

(n23)Footnote 23. 29 U.S.C. § 655; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1911.1 et seq. (standards development); 29 U.S.C. § 656(a), (b); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1912.1 et seq. (establishing advisory committees to assist in standards development).

(n24)Footnote 24. 29 U.S.C. § 657(a)-(f); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1903.1 et seq.

(n25)Footnote 25. 29 U.S.C. § 662.

(n26)Footnote 26. 29 U.S.C. § 658; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1903.1 et seq.

(n27)Footnote 27. 29 U.S.C. §§ 659(a), (b), 666; 29 C.F.R. § 1903.15.

(n28)Footnote 28. 29 U.S.C. § 655(d); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1905.1 et seq.

(n29)Footnote 29. 29 U.S.C. § 661 (Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission (OSHRC) structure and powers); 29 C.F.R. § 2200.1 et seq. (OSHRC rules of procedure); 29 U.S.C. § 659; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1903.17-1903.19 (employer appeals; notice of contest); 29 C.F.R. § 2204 (rules implementing Equal Access to Justice Act).

(n30)Footnote 30. 29 U.S.C. § 669(a); 42 C.F.R. § 85a.1 et seq. (authority of Health and Human Services to conduct inspections); 42 C.F.R. § 85.1 et seq. (Health Hazard Evaluations (HHE's)); 42 C.F.R. § 87.1 et seq. (grant policies and procedures).

(n31)Footnote 31. 29 U.S.C. § 671; 42 C.F.R. §§ 80, 85, 86, 87.

(n32)Footnote 32. 29 U.S.C. §§ 670(a), (c), 669(d).

(n33)Footnote 33. 29 U.S.C. § 670; 29 C.F.R. § 1949 (OSHA Training Institute); 42 C.F.R. §§ 80, 86, 87 (assistance with tuition for training).

(n34)Footnote 34. 29 U.S.C. § 673; 29 C.F.R. § 1904.1.

(n35)Footnote 35. See 29 U.S.C. § 667; 29 C.F.R. § 1902.1 et seq. (procedures for approval, rejection, and certification of state plans); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1952.1 et seq. (list of approved state plans), 1953.1 et seq. (procedures for reviewing changes to approved state plans), 1954.1 et seq. (procedures for monitoring approved state plans), 1955.1 et seq. (procedures for withdrawal of approval of state plans), 1956.1 et seq. (procedures for approval of state plans applying to state and local government employees, where no private-sector state plan exists); 29 U.S.C. § 672 (grants to the states for state plan activity); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1950.1 et seq. (state plan developmental training grants), 1951.1 et seq. (grants for implementing approved state plans); OSHA State Plan Policies and Procedures Manual, issued by OSHA Instruction STP 2.22A, May 14, 1986; see also discussion in [5], below, and in § 21.02[1][g].

(n36)Footnote 36. See 29 U.S.C. § 553.

(n37)Footnote 37. 29 U.S.C. § 657(a).

(n38)Footnote 38. 29 U.S.C. § 657(b).

(n39)Footnote 39. 29 U.S.C. § 658(a).

(n40)Footnote 40. 29 U.S.C. § 662(c).

(n41)Footnote 41. 29 U.S.C. § 658(a).

(n42)Footnote 42. 29 U.S.C. § 666.

(n43)Footnote 43. 29 U.S.C. § 655(b)(1).

(n44)Footnote 44. 29 U.S.C. § 655(b)(2)-(5).

(n45)Footnote 45. 29 U.S.C. § 655(b)(6).

(n46)Footnote 46. 29 U.S.C. § 655(d).

(n47)Footnote 47. 29 U.S.C. § 655(c).

(n48)Footnote 48. 29 U.S.C. § 655(b)(7).

(n49)Footnote 49. 29 U.S.C. § 655(b)(7).

(n50)Footnote 50. 29 U.S.C. § 655(b)(7).

(n51)Footnote 51. 29 U.S.C. § 661.

(n52)Footnote 52. 29 U.S.C. § 661(a), (b).

(n53)Footnote 53. 29 U.S.C. § 661(e), (j).

(n54)Footnote 54. 29 U.S.C. § 661(g).

(n55)Footnote 55. 29 C.F.R. § 2200.1 et seq.

(n56)Footnote 56. 29 U.S.C. § 661(j).

(n57)Footnote 57. 29 U.S.C. § 660(a).

(n58)Footnote 58. 29 U.S.C. § 660(a).

(n59)Footnote 59. 29 U.S.C. § 660(b).

(n60)Footnote 60. See 29 U.S.C. § 671(a).

(n61)Footnote 61. 29 U.S.C. § 671(c)(1).

(n62)Footnote 62. 29 U.S.C. § 671(b).

(n63)Footnote 63. 29 U.S.C. § 671(d).

(n64)Footnote 64. 29 U.S.C. § 671(f).

(n65)Footnote 64.1. See 29 U.S.C. § 671(h).

(n66)Footnote 65. See 29 U.S.C. § 666(e) (willful violation of OSHA standard or order that caused an employee's death), (f) (giving advance notice of an inspection), (g) (knowingly making false statement, representation, or certification in any application, record, report, plan or other document filed or required to be maintained); see also 18 U.S.C. § 1114 (killing a Department of Labor representative in the course of conducting an investigation, inspection, or other law enforcement activity).

(n67)Footnote 66. 29 U.S.C. § 673(a).

(n68)Footnote 67. 29 U.S.C. § 673(a).

(n69)Footnote 68. 29 U.S.C. § 673(c).

(n70)Footnote 69. 29 U.S.C. § 657(c).

(n71)Footnote 70. 29 U.S.C. § 653(a). See Chao v. Mallard Bay Drilling, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 235, 122 S. Ct. 738, 151 L. Ed. 2d 659, 668-669 (oil rig was "workplace" within meaning of Act because vessel was located within Louisiana, and nothing in § 653(a) attaches significance to fact that barge was anchored in navigable waters).

(n72)Footnote 71. 29 U.S.C. § 652(7).

(n73)Footnote 72. 29 U.S.C. § 653(b)(1).

(n74)Footnote 72.1. Chao v. Mallard Bay Drilling, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 235, 122 S. Ct. 738, 151 L. Ed. 2d 659, 666-668 (OSHA's regulations pre-empted with respect to inspected vessels, because Coast Guard has broad statutory authority to regulate occupational health and safety of workers aboard inspected vessels; however, general marine safety regulations do not address occupational safety and health concerns faced by inland drilling operations on uninspected vessels and do not preempt OSHA's authority; although Guard's regulation of specific working conditions on certain types of uninspected vessels would preempt OSHA regulations covering those particular working conditions and vessels, no specific regulations addressing types of risk and vessel at issue in this case were identified).

(n75)Footnote 73. 29 U.S.C. § 653(b)(1).

(n76)Footnote 74. See 29 U.S.C. § 652(5).

(n77)Footnote 75. 29 U.S.C. § 668(a).

(n78)Footnote 76. 29 U.S.C. § 667(c)(6).

(n79)Footnote 77. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1956.1 et seq.

(n80)Footnote 77.1. 29 U.S.C. § 667(b); see discussion in [5], below.

(n81)Footnote 77.2. Gade v. National Solid Wastes (1992) 505 U.S. 88, 95, 112 S. Ct. 2374, 120 L. Ed. 2d 73, 91 .

(n82)Footnote 77.3. Gade v. National Solid Wastes (1992) 505 U.S. 88, 103, 112 S. Ct. 2374, 120 L. Ed. 2d 73, 87 .

(n83)Footnote 77.4. See Gade v. National Solid Wastes (1992) 505 U.S. 88, 105-106, 112 S. Ct. 2374, 120 L. Ed. 2d 73, 87 (Illinois law governing hazardous waste operations preempted).

(n84)Footnote 77.5. See Gade v. National Solid Wastes (1992) 505 U.S. 88, 106, 112 S. Ct. 2374, 120 L. Ed. 2d 73, 88 .

(n85)Footnote 77.6. Gade v. National Solid Wastes (1992) 505 U.S. 88, 106-107, 112 S. Ct. 2374, 120 L. Ed. 2d 73, 89-90 .

(n86)Footnote 77.7. Gade v. National Solid Wastes (1992) 505 U.S. 88, 112 S. Ct. 2374, 120 L. Ed. 2d 73, 90 .

(n87)Footnote 77.8. Gade v. National Solid Wastes (1992) 505 U.S. 88, 108, 112 S. Ct. 2374, 120 L. Ed. 2d 73, 90 .

(n88)Footnote 77.9. Gade v. National Solid Wastes (1992) 505 U.S. 88, 108-109, 112 S. Ct. 2374, 120 L. Ed. 2d 73, 91 (involving Illinois law).

(n89)Footnote 78. 29 U.S.C. § 667(b).

(n90)Footnote 79. See 29 U.S.C. § 651(b)(11).

(n91)Footnote 80. Federal OSHA regulations define "issue" to mean "an industrial, occupational or hazard grouping which is at least as comprehensive as a corresponding grouping contained in (i) one or more sections in subparts B or R of Part 1910 of this chapter [the federal safety orders], or (ii) one or more of the remaining subparts of section 1910." 29 C.F.R. § 1902.2(c)(1).

(n92)Footnote 81. 29 U.S.C. § 667(c).

(n93)Footnote 82. See 29 U.S.C. § 667; see also 29 C.F.R. § 1902.3.

(n94)Footnote 83. 29 C.F.R. § 1902.2(a).

(n95)Footnote 84. 29 C.F.R. § 1902.2(b).

(n96)Footnote 85. 29 C.F.R. § 1902.34.

(n97)Footnote 86. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1954.1-1954.22.

(n98)Footnote 87. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1902.32(c), 1902.42(c).

(n99)Footnote 88. See 29 U.S.C. § 660(c).

(n100)Footnote 89. 29 C.F.R. § 1902.46(d).

(n101)Footnote 90. 29 C.F.R. § 1902.46(c); see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 1902.47 (procedures for reconsideration or revocation of affirmative § 18(e) determination), 1955 (procedures for withdrawal of approval of state plans).

(n102)Footnote 91. 29 C.F.R. § 1953.

(n103)Footnote 92. 29 C.F.R. § 1954.3(a)(1).

(n104)Footnote 93. 29 C.F.R. § 1954.3(b).

40 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part A. OVERVIEW

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.02

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.02 California Occupational Safety and Health Law

[1] California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973

[a] Historical Background

California has a long history of protective occupational safety legislation. In 1911, a voluntary workers' compensation law¹ passed, and the California Constitution was amended to include a section providing for a workers' compensation system.²

The Workmen's Compensation, Insurance and Safety Act of 1913³ expanded worker protections by making the workers' compensation system mandatory and by vesting an Industrial Accident Commission (IAC) with jurisdiction over all places of employment. The IAC had the authority to make and enforce reasonable safety standards and orders and to prescribe the use of reasonable safety devices.⁴ The duties imposed on employers under the act were similar to those that exist under current law.⁵ Employers were required to comply with the standards and orders of the IAC.⁶ The IAC had the authority to summarily investigate places of employment,⁷ to investigate the causes of disabling and fatal occupational injuries,⁸ and to issue orders to take corrective action for unsafe conditions.⁹ Failure to comply with the IAC's orders¹⁰ or hampering an investigation¹¹ was a misdemeanor.

In 1917, major revisions to the law were enacted by the Workmen's Compensation, Insurance and Safety Act of 1917,¹² although most of the safety provisions of the act of 1913 were reenacted. Further, Article XX, Section 21 of the California Constitution was again amended to expressly vest the Legislature with plenary power to create and enforce a "complete system of workmen's compensation," which system included "full provision for securing safety in places of employment" as one of its four essential elements.¹³

The provisions of the 1917 act were codified in Division V ("Safety in Employment") of the California Labor Code, which was enacted in 1937.¹⁴ The IAC administered the Division of Industrial Accidents and Safety, one of five divisions within the Department of Industrial Relations. The Labor Code of 1937 also expanded the IAC's powers by authorizing the IAC to seek injunctive relief from the superior court to prohibit the use or operation of machines or equipment that constituted a serious menace to the lives or safety of workers¹⁵ and by extending its jurisdiction to safety on railroads,¹⁶ buildings,¹⁷ mines,¹⁸ and ships and vessels.¹⁹

The provisions of the Labor Code governing worker safety and workers compensation were reorganized in 1945. Under the act of 1945,²⁰ the Department of Industrial Relations consisted of eight divisions, including a Division of Industrial Accidents, which administered the workers compensation system, and a separate Division of Industrial Safety, which had direct responsibility for administering and enforcing the occupational safety provisions of the Labor Code. The safety orders of the division were codified in Title 8 of the California Administrative Code,²¹ but prior to passage of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, the division's orders were enforced primarily through voluntary compliance. No system of citations and penalties existed.²² Employers were prohibited from discharging workers for refusal to work in a place where a safety order violation constituted a real and apparent hazard.²³

In 1963, the Labor Code was amended to provide that an employer could be sentenced for up to one year in county jail or a fine of up to $5,000 when the death of an employee was due to the employer's gross negligence in failing to provide a safe workplace.²⁴

To preserve state jurisdiction over occupational safety and health issues in California following enactment of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, a state occupational safety and health plan was filed with the Secretary of Labor on September 27, 1972, pursuant to the federal act and related regulations.²⁵ The state also requested a federal grant to fund approximately 50% of the cost of the state program pursuant to the act.²⁶

Several major events helped create the political environment that led to passage of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973. In addition to impetus created by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, two industrial catastrophes in California, the Sylmar Tunnel disaster of June 24, 1971, and the Arroyo Seco Bridge collapse of October 16, 1972, focused legislative and public concern on the adequacy of existing state occupational safety and health laws and procedures.

At the Sylmar Tunnel disaster, 17 men were killed by a gas explosion in an underground tunnel excavation within days of an inspection by the Division of Industrial Safety mining unit. Legislative hearings into the incident revealed serious problems in the management and enforcement procedures of the Division. The legislative investigations led to passage of the Tom Carrell Memorial Tunnel and Mine Safety Act of 1972.²⁷

A second Assembly Select Committee on Industrial Safety convened hearings in January 1972 into the enforcement policies of the Division of Industrial Safety and whether the mandate of the Labor Code sections governing occupational safety and health was being accomplished. The Committee issued preliminary findings in 1972, which enumerated a myriad of problems with administration, enforcement activity, inadequate personnel and program funding in the division.

On October 16, 1972, a freeway bridge under construction at Arroyo Seco in Pasadena collapsed, causing 6 deaths and 31 injuries.

In January 1973, Assembly Bill 150, the California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973, was introduced by Assembly member Fenton, who had participated in both sets of hearings. The bill proposed numerous changes to the law and administrative apparatus governing occupational safety and health, due in part to problems revealed during the legislative hearings of 1972 and 1973.

The Secretary of Labor granted initial approval of California's state plan on May 1, 1973.²⁸

In September 1973, the California Legislature passed, and the governor signed, the California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973, which took effect as emergency legislation on October 1, 1973.

The Secretary of Labor determined, effective September 30, 1975, that the California occupational safety and health program was "operational" and therefore withdrew its jurisdiction over private-sector places of employment.ⁿ²⁹

On August 12, 1977, the Secretary of Labor certified, pursuant to Title 29 Code of Federal Regulations Part 1902.34, that the California program had successfully completed the developmental phase of its state plan certification.ⁿ³⁰

[b] Purposes of the Act

The California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973 was enacted "for the purpose of assuring safe and healthful working conditions for all California working men and women by authorizing the enforcement of effective standards, assisting and encouraging employers to maintain safe and healthful working conditions, and by providing for research, information, education, training, and enforcement in the field of occupational safety and health."ⁿ³¹

The Legislature incorporated the act into Division V of the Labor Code by exercise of unlimited plenary powers granted under the California Constitution to create and enforce a complete system of workers' compensation, which system shall expressly include "full provision for securing safety in places of employment."ⁿ³² Moreover, the provisions of Division 5 of the Labor Code, which includes the California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973, "shall be liberally construed by the courts with the purpose of extending their benefits for the protection of persons injured in the course of their employment."ⁿ³³

[c] Structure of the Act

The California statutory scheme for occupational safety and health is set out in Division 5 of the Labor Code.ⁿ³⁴ Division 5 consists of nine parts, including the California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973 and various safety statutes that preceded its passage.

Part 1 of Division 5ⁿ³⁵ contains nine chapters that govern the jurisdiction, powers, and duties of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, the division's education and research responsibilities, the duties of employers and employees under the act, criminal sanctions under the act, procedures governing the award of temporary variances and permits for ultrahazardous work, and provisions governing appeals from citations and civil penalties imposed by the division.

The remaining eleven parts of Division 5 comprise the statutes applying to safety in specific industries or for specific hazards, including railroads,ⁿ³⁶ buildings,ⁿ³⁷ mining industries,ⁿ³⁸ ships and vessels,ⁿ³⁹ tanks and boilers,ⁿ⁴⁰ volatile flammable liquids,ⁿ⁴¹ refinery and chemical plants,^{n41.1} amusement rides,ⁿ⁴² tunnel and mine safety,ⁿ⁴³ carcinogens,ⁿ⁴⁴ and commercial establishments, including working warehouses.^{n44.1}

[d] Occupational Safety and Health Standards

Administrative regulations that supplement the Cal/OSHA statutory scheme are codified in Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations.

Chapter 3.ⁿ⁴⁵ consists of regulations of the Director of Industrial Relations on matters including definitions under the California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973; advance notice of Cal/OSHA inspections; procedures for issuing Cal/OSHA citations, notices, and orders; procedures for calculating the amount of proposed civil penalties; and guidelines for hazardous substances information and training; as well as Cal/OSHA regulations on the employer's duty to provide information to employees, permit application procedures, registration requirements for work involving asbestos, reporting requirements for occupational safety and health illnesses and injuries, and inspection and licensing fee schedules.

The rules of practice and procedure during appeal hearings before the Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board are found at Chapter 3.3.n46

The rules of procedure for variance hearings held before the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board are contained in Chapter 3.5.n47

Specific occupational safety and health standards, also commonly called safety and health orders, are codified in Chapter 4.n48 The standards are organized into 21 subchapters, by type of hazard or industry. The largest subchapter is the General Industry Safety Orders (GISO). These specific safety standards are detailed, highly technical, and voluminous, and detailed coverage of them is beyond the scope of this chapter. Employers and their counsel should, however, become familiar with any standards that may apply to their particular type of business.

[e] Administrative Interpretations

Currently, there are 12 Administrative Interpretations issued by the Chief of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, which provide Cal/OSHA personnel with guidance on the division's interpretation on specific occupational safety and health hazards or issues.

Administrative Interpretations are part of the division's policy and procedures manual, or may be obtained upon request of the Chief of the Division. Sections of the manual are cited in appropriate places in this chapter.

[f] Policies and Procedures

The Cal/OSHA Policy and Procedures Manual provides compliance personnel, i.e., compliance safety engineers (CSE's) and industrial hygienists (IH's) with detailed instructions on the procedures for carrying out the duties of the division, including conducting inspections, issuing citations and orders, calculating penalties, and other enforcement tasks.

The Policy and Procedures Manual is available for purchase from the Chief of the Division by request. Sections of the manual are cited in appropriate places in this chapter.

[g] Disengagement and Reassertion of Jurisdiction

"Disengagement" was the term used by the governor and the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations to describe the attempt to return jurisdiction for occupational safety and health at private-sector places of employment to the federal government.

On January 8, 1987, Governor George Deukmejian submitted a proposed budget for 1987-1988, which provided no funding for private-sector occupational safety and health enforcement activity by the division. A budget summary comment indicated that the elimination of state funding for the Cal/OSHA program was the result of a decision to return exclusive control over occupational safety and health enforcement in the private sector to federal jurisdiction. The governor then notified the U.S. Secretary of Labor on February 6, 1987, that California sought to withdraw its approved state plan and terminate its federal matching grant, and would cease private-sector OSHA enforcement effective June 30, 1987. In July, the governor used the power of the executive branch to veto any line item in the proposed state budget to reduce the appropriation of funds to the Department of Industrial Relations by $7 million, expressly for the purpose of terminating private-sector OSHA enforcement by the state of California.

The majority of division enforcement personnel transferred to other jobs or were laid off, and over 21 division offices throughout the state were closed.

Because of the announced cessation of any state OSHA enforcement activity in the private sector, the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) assumed provisional concurrent jurisdiction and primary responsibility for private-sector OSHA enforcement in July 1987. During the time federal OSHA was primarily responsible for private-sector enforcement, there were at most seven federal OSHA offices in the state.

In October 1987, the California Court of Appeal for the Third Appellate District held that the governor improperly exercised the line item veto authority, and found the veto to be ineffective.ⁿ⁴⁹ The California Supreme Court granted a petition for review of the decision on January 21, 1988.

A ballot initiative, Proposition 97, sponsored by the California Federation of Labor, was approved by the voters in the November 1988 election. It amended Labor Code Section 50.7 to provide, "The state plan [for occupational safety and health] shall be consistent with the provisions of state law governing occupational safety and health, including, but not limited to, Chapter 6 (commencing with Section 140) and Chapter 6.5 (commencing with Section 148) of Division 1, and Division 5 (commencing with Section 6300), of this [Labor] code." The proposition also directed the Legislature to restore the state funding to the Cal/OSHA program. The California Supreme Court subsequently dismissed the appeal of the court of appeal decision, on the grounds that it was moot because of the passage of Proposition 97.

With the passage of Proposition 97, the federal OSHA executed a memorandum of understanding that provided that effective May 1, 1989, concurrent jurisdiction would continue, but the division would resume responsibility for private-sector accident investigations, response to complaints and follow-up inspections involving serious violations, while the federal OSHA program would conduct targeted inspections in specific industries. Concurrent jurisdiction would continue until the Secretary of Labor determined that the state OSHA program in California was again fully operational.

[2] Related California Laws

[a] Occupational Carcinogens Control Act of 1976

The Occupational Carcinogens Control Act of 1976, originally enacted as part of the Health and Safety Code,ⁿ⁵⁰ regulates the use of carcinogens whenever there is a substantial probability that an employee will be exposed or is actually exposed to a carcinogen in the course of employment.ⁿ⁵¹

The legislative intent of the act is that "the state exercise strong leadership in preventing employees, employers, and other persons from being exposed to carcinogens" and that standards be developed by the California Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board for the use of any substance for which there is a "preponderance of evidence of carcinogenicity," even if no federal occupational safety and health standard regulating such a substance has been developed.ⁿ⁵²

The act applies to the "use" of any "carcinogen" that may result in an employee exposure. "Use" of a carcinogen includes the manufacture, industrial use, or formation of a carcinogen due to a chemical reaction;ⁿ⁵³ and the sale or other transfer,ⁿ⁵⁴ the storage or disposal,ⁿ⁵⁵ the utilization for research,ⁿ⁵⁶ and the transport of any carcinogen.ⁿ⁵⁷

The term "carcinogen" includes specific cancer-causing substances, and compounds, mixtures, or products containing any such substance, enumerated in Labor Code Section 9004(a); asbestos, including chrysotile, amosite, crocidolite, tremolite, anthophyllite, and actinolite;ⁿ⁵⁸ vinyl chloride;ⁿ⁵⁹ and "any other substance for which standards are adopted and in effect due to cancer-causing properties and any compound, mixture, or product containing such a substance, except as specifically exempted from the standards."ⁿ⁶⁰

The provisions of the act apply whenever an employee is "involved in the use of a carcinogen" as part of his or her employment and whenever there is a substantial probability an employee may be exposed as a result of his or her employer's use of a carcinogen.ⁿ⁶¹

The Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board is responsible for adopting standards for carcinogens that are at least as restrictive as the federal requirements for use of carcinogens adopted pursuant to the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970. Within six months of the effective date of any new federal carcinogen standard, or amendment to an existing carcinogen standard, the Standards Board must amend the California carcinogen standards to be at least as restrictive as the federal standard.ⁿ⁶² However, the Standards Board may exempt uses of carcinogens that it determines, by a preponderance of evidence, present no substantial threat to employee health.ⁿ⁶³

The Division of Occupational Safety and Health is responsible for enforcing carcinogen standards;ⁿ⁶⁴ determining the necessity for carcinogen standards and proposing new standards to the Standards Board for adoption;ⁿ⁶⁵ receiving employer reports of carcinogen use or incidents of potentially hazardous employee exposures to carcinogens and forwarding such reports to employee collective bargaining and other representatives;ⁿ⁶⁶ creating an inspection priority system and conducting inspections of workplaces for which occupational uses of a carcinogen have been reported pursuant to Labor Code Section 9030;ⁿ⁶⁷ making every effort to determine the identity of carcinogen users; and notifying, informing, and educating such users, employers, employees and the public, by a variety of mass communication means, about the requirements of the Occupational Carcinogens Control Act of 1976.ⁿ⁶⁸ The act also provides that the Division of Occupational Safety and Health and the California Department of Health Services shall have concurrent jurisdiction with any federal agency to protect affected employees of interstate carriers while working in California.ⁿ⁶⁹

On finding, in the course of an inspection, a carcinogen use that is in violation of any occupational safety or health standard, the division must immediately notify the employer and affected employees.ⁿ⁷⁰ The division inspector must also determine whether the condition constitutes an imminent hazard to employees, and, if necessary, will issue an order prohibiting further exposure to, use of, or entry into the area of use until the condition is made safe and required safeguards or safety devices have been provided to employees.ⁿ⁷¹

Any employer whose operation involves a carcinogen use within the scope of the act must comply with applicable regulations in Article 110 (Regulated Carcinogens) of Chapter 4 of Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations.ⁿ⁷² file a written report with the division about any carcinogen use or "incident which results in the release of a potentially hazardous amount of a carcinogen into any area where employees may be exposed,"ⁿ⁷³ and provide for medical examinations of affected employees as required by any applicable occupational carcinogen standard.ⁿ⁷⁴ The employer must also post a copy of each reported use of a carcinogen or exposure incident in a location that is conspicuous to affected employees.ⁿ⁷⁵

The act provides for a range of civil penalties for violations of the standards and orders governing the use of a carcinogen.ⁿ⁷⁶ Violations of the carcinogen use standards and orders may also result in criminal prosecution.ⁿ⁷⁷

Any employer or employee may request the assistance of the Cal/OSHA Consultation Unit regarding the use of a carcinogen.ⁿ⁷⁸

[b] Tom Carrell Memorial Tunnel and Mine Safety Act of 1972

The Tom Carrell Memorial Tunnel and Mine Safety Act of 1972ⁿ⁷⁹ regulates the occupational safety and health of workers employed at tunnel construction sites and mines. Its provisions are enforced by a separate unit of safety engineers within the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, known as the Mining and Tunneling Unit, who are trained to inspect mine operations and tunnel construction.ⁿ⁸⁰ The division must also make available at least one industrial hygienist and one chemist, as well as the resources of a laboratory for analysis of dust, gas, vapors, soil, or other materials, to assist the Mining and Tunneling Unit in the performance of their duties.ⁿ⁸¹ The division is required to maintain sufficient manpower to conduct four annual inspections of underground mines, one annual inspection of surface mines or quarries, and six annual inspections of tunnels under construction in the state.ⁿ⁸² However, the division's jurisdiction to inspect a mine is held in abeyance as long as the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) actively exercises occupational safety and health jurisdiction at the mine.ⁿ⁸³

"Tunnel" is defined as "an underground passageway, excavated by men and equipment working below the earth's surface, that provides a subterranean route along which men, equipment, or substances can move,"ⁿ⁸⁴ and includes excavation, construction, alteration, repairing, renovating, or demolishing any tunnel.ⁿ⁸⁵ Tunnel work covered under the compressed air safety orders and manhole construction is exempted from coverage under this act.ⁿ⁸⁶ Projects involving substantial modification of any completed tunnel owned or operated by a public utility is covered under the act, whereas work involving the normal operation, maintenance, or repair of such a completed tunnel is exempt from coverage.ⁿ⁸⁷

Safety regulations governing employment during the excavation, construction, alteration, repair, renovation, or demolition of tunnels are codified in the Tunnel Safety Orders.ⁿ⁸⁸

"Mine" is defined as any excavation or opening above or below ground used for removal of ore, minerals, gravel, sand, rock, or other materials intended for manufacturing or sale, and includes quarries and open pit operations, except for gravel pits or other pits where material is removed by a contractor or other person for personal use and not for sale to others.ⁿ⁸⁹ Mines that produce less than $5,000 in ore, minerals, sand, rock, or other materials during the preceding calendar year; mines operated exclusively by persons with a proprietary interest in the mine; and mines in which the only remuneration for those working is a share of the profits of the mine are excluded from coverage under the act.ⁿ⁹⁰

Detailed regulations that govern safety in employment at mining operations are codified in the Mine Safety Orders.ⁿ⁹¹

Before any initial mining operation or construction commences at a mine or tunnel, the project operator must notify the Division of Occupational Safety and Health and the mine or tunnel owner, and a prejob safety conference shall be held with a division representative, the tunnel or mine owner, the project employer, if different, and employees.ⁿ⁹²

Tunnels and mines are classified on the basis of the degree of hazard into one of four types: nongassy (i.e., little likelihood of encountering gas during construction);ⁿ⁹³ potentially gassy (i.e., there exists a possibility gas will be encountered);ⁿ⁹⁴ gassy (i.e., likely that gas will be encountered);ⁿ⁹⁵ and extrahazardous (i.e., where the Division of Occupational Safety and Health finds there is a serious danger to the employees, and gas or vapors exist or where tests show, with normal ventilation, a concentration of hydrocarbon petroleum vapors in excess of 20 percent of the lower explosive limit within 3 inches of the roof, face, floor, or walls of any open workings.ⁿ⁹⁶

The employer must ensure that all personnel at any tunnel or underground mine, whether working above or below ground, are informed of the division's classification for that job and that a notice of the classification and any special orders, rules, or regulations to be used in the construction, remodeling, demolition, or operation of the tunnel or mine are prominently posted at the site.ⁿ⁹⁷

Tunnel and mine classification must, whenever possible, be made prior to any request for bids on public works projects.ⁿ⁹⁸ The division may reclassify mines and tunnels whenever conditions warrant; however, it is not required to reclassify any tunnel or mine that is shut down seasonally and returned to operation within six months of the shutdown date.ⁿ⁹⁹

General safety and health provisions in Chapter 1 of the act, which apply to all tunnel and mine operations within the scope of the act, require the following:

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.02

1. The employer at any tunnel or mine operation must develop an emergency rescue plan, which includes a current map of the tunnel or underground mine, and provide a copy of the plan to every employee at the project, to the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, and to local fire and rescue units;n100
2. The employer must train on-site rescue crews, the size and number of which crews is determined by the number of employees at the mine or tunnel;n101
3. Rescue crews must be familiar with all emergency equipment necessary to rescue or search for employees in the event of an accident or explosion and hold monthly rescue practices while the underground mine or tunnel is under construction or being operated;n102
4. For any tunnel or underground mine that is classified as gassy or extrahazardous, at least one rescue crew must be maintained above ground and within 30 minutes' travel of the site;n103
5. A safety representative, qualified to recognize hazardous conditions and certified by the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, must be designated by the employer for each tunnel or underground mine, and the safety representative must be responsible for directing required safety programs and have the authority to correct unsafe conditions and practices;n104
6. An operating underground-to-surface telephone or other communication system must be provided for any tunnel or underground mine with more than five employees underground at one time;n105 and
7. Access shafts used for normal entrance and exit from any underground mine or tunnel must be constructed of fireproof material or otherwise made fireproof.n106

In addition, before the start of each shift at any tunnel or underground mine classified as potentially gassy, the employer must ensure that tests for gas or vapors are made.n107 Whenever the tests reveal any concentration of gas greater than 10% of the lower explosive limit, the Division of Occupational Safety and Health must be notified immediately.n108

Only those persons who have passed an examination administered by, and who have become certified by, the Division of Occupational Safety and Health may serve as a safety representative or perform the duties of a gas tester in any tunnel or underground mine.n109 The requirements for the certification and licensing of gas testers and safety representatives that are adopted by the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board preempt local government rules, regulations, and laws on certification and licensing.n110

Chapter 2 of the act contains specific procedures and conditions applicable to any tunnel or underground mine classified as gassy or extrahazardous.n111 These statutes require, among other things, preshift and hourly gas or vapor testing,n112 maintenance of a log of testing results,n113 and maintenance of a probe hole whenever work approaches a geological formation in which there is a likelihood of encountering gas or water.n114 The statutes also specify the following: conditions warranting the issuance of a work shutdown order;n115 immediate cessation of work and removal of all employees after any ignition of gas or vapor in a tunnel or underground mine;n116 mandatory removal of all employees whenever the gas level in any tunnel or underground mine reaches 20% of its lower explosive limit;n117 requirements for "kill buttons" for all electrical equipment and for the resumption of work after power has been shut off;n118 requirements for fire extinguishers,n119 ventilation systems,n120 air composition,n121 air sampling;n122 and automatic and continuous gas and vapor testing monitors at any extrahazardous tunnel or underground mine where excavation occurs by mechanical means.n123

Inspectors of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health may set a permissible gas or vapor concentration level below the level specified in existing regulations and orders whenever the inspector considers such action necessary to make the operation safe for employees.n124

Chapter 3 of the act limits the use of explosives at any underground mine or tunnel to persons licensed by the division,ⁿ¹²⁵ and specifies the following: the testing requirements for obtaining the "explosive blaster's license" required by Labor Code Section 7990;ⁿ¹²⁶ the conditions for suspension ofⁿ¹²⁷ and revocation ofⁿ¹²⁸ such a license; and the amount of fees charged for conducting examinations of and certifying gas testers and safety representatives.ⁿ¹²⁹

Violation of any regulation, rule, order, or special order that is a condition of certification is a misdemeanor when the violation causes an employee death or injury.ⁿ¹³⁰

All safety equipment and testing devices required to make employment in tunnels or underground mines safe must be acceptable to the Division of Occupational Safety and Health and either approved by the U.S. Bureau of Mines or acceptable to other authorities recognized by the Division.ⁿ¹³¹ In addition, testing devices must automatically sound an alarm and activate flashing red signals visible to employees underground whenever gas or vapor concentrations exceed permissible levels.ⁿ¹³²

[c] Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act of 1986 (Proposition 65)

The Safe Drinking Water and Toxic Enforcement Act of 1986ⁿ¹³³ was enacted as the result of the passage of a ballot initiative, Proposition 65, approved by the electorate in the November 4, 1986, general election.

The act required the governor, on or before March 1, 1987, to publish a listⁿ¹³⁴ of chemicals known to cause cancer or reproductive toxicity, including at a minimum those substances already included on the Director's List of Hazardous Substances pursuant to Labor Code Section 6382(b)(1) (substances listed by the International Agency for Research on Cancer (IARC) as human or animal carcinogens)ⁿ¹³⁵ and Labor Code Section 6382(d) (any substance within the scope of the federal Hazard Communication Standard).ⁿ¹³⁶ The act also required the governor to publish a separate list of chemicals that "are required by state or federal law to have been tested for potential to cause cancer or reproductive toxicity," but that have not yet been adequately tested.ⁿ¹³⁷ Both lists must be revised and republished annually.ⁿ¹³⁸

Among other things, the act provides that no person shall in the course of doing business "knowingly and intentionally expose any individual to a chemical known to the state to cause cancer or reproductive toxicity without first giving clear and reasonable warning" to the individual.ⁿ¹³⁹

A chemical is "known to the state to cause cancer or reproductive toxicity" if, in the opinion of the state's qualified experts, it is clearly shown, through scientifically valid testing to cause cancer or reproductive toxicity, or if an authoritative body recognized by the state's experts has formally identified it as causing cancer or reproductive toxicity, or if any state or federal agency has formally required the chemical to be labeled or identified as causing cancer or as a reproductive toxin.ⁿ¹⁴⁰

The provisions of Proposition 65 do not apply to persons employing fewer than 10 employees or to any public employer.ⁿ¹⁴¹

Violations of the discharge and warning provisions of the act may be enjoined,ⁿ¹⁴² or result in civil penalties of up to $2,500 per day per violation, in addition to any other penalty established by law.ⁿ¹⁴³ Actions for injunctive relief or to assess civil penalties may be filed by the Attorney General, district attorney, or a city attorney.ⁿ¹⁴⁴ Such actions may also be filed by any person acting in the public interest, if the person has given notice of the alleged violation to prosecutors in whose jurisdiction the violation occurred, and to the alleged violator, and if no prosecutor has commenced and diligently prosecuted an action against the violation within 60 days after the notice was given.ⁿ¹⁴⁵

The governor designated the California Health and Welfare Agency as the lead agency responsible for implementing the provisions of Proposition 65. It adopted regulations to govern the warnings required by the act.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ Section 12601(c) of Title 22 of the California Code of Regulations provides that warnings that "include the methods of transmission and the warning messages" specified in Section 12601(c) for occupational exposures shall be deemed "clear and reasonable." Occupational exposure is defined as "an exposure, in the workplace of the employer causing the exposure, to any employee."ⁿ¹⁴⁷ To calculate the level of a workplace exposure to a carcinogen, the regulations provide that it shall be assumed that "the exposed worker inhales ten cubic meters of workplace air per eight-hour day, forty hours per week, fifty weeks per year over a forty-year period."ⁿ¹⁴⁸

In July 1989, the California Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board refused to adopt regulations in the California State Plan for Occupational Safety and Health that would be consistent with the "clear and reasonable warning" requirement of Health and Safety Code Section 25249.6, on the grounds that Proposition 65 was not a state law governing occupational safety and health and to do so might create undue burdens on interstate commerce. In a mandate proceeding initiated by various labor organizations and environmental groups challenging the board's action, the Court of Appeal for the First Appellate District held that Proposition 65 is a state law governing occupational safety and health and ordered the board to adopt and incorporate into the state Cal/OSHA plan occupational safety and health standards that provide for the protections of Proposition 65 applicable to the workplace. The court also ordered the board to file amendments to the Cal/OSHA plan with the Secretary of Labor for approval, pursuant to Sections 667(b) and 667(c) of Title 29 of the United States Code.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ In reaching its conclusion, the court noted that by incorporating the provisions of Proposition 65 into the state OSHA plan, an additional 66 carcinogens and 18 reproductive toxins would be regulated.ⁿ¹⁵⁰

[d] Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act

The Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act (HSIT) was enacted in 1980, because of the Legislature's findings, among other things, that employers and employees in California have a right and a need to know the properties and potential hazards of substances to which they may be exposed, in order to reduce the incidence and cost of occupational disease.ⁿ¹⁵¹ The Legislature also recognized that employers do not always have available adequate data on the contents and properties of specific hazardous substances in order to provide information and training to employees and provide a safe and healthful workplace.ⁿ¹⁵² In passing the Act, the Legislature declared the intention "to ensure the transmission of necessary information to employees regarding the properties and potential hazards of hazardous substances in the workplace."ⁿ¹⁵³

The provisions of the Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act apply to all employers who use hazardous substances in California, suppliers, i.e., to any person who sells a hazardous substance to an employer in California, and to manufacturers who produce or sell hazardous substances in the state.ⁿ¹⁵⁴

The act applies whenever a hazardous substance, identified on the list of hazardous substances prepared by the Director of Industrial Relations, is present in the workplace in such a manner that employees may be exposed under normal work operations or in a reasonably foreseeable emergency resulting from workplace operations. Such emergencies may include, for example, spills, fires, explosions, equipment failure, container ruptures, or equipment control failures that cause a release of the hazardous substance into the workplace.ⁿ¹⁵⁵ Exposure is defined as "any situation arising from work operation where an employee may ingest, inhale, absorb through the skin or eyes, or otherwise come into contact with a hazardous substance," unless there is "no valid and substantial evidence that any adverse acute or chronic risk to human health may occur" from the nature of the contact.ⁿ¹⁵⁶

The act initially required the Director of Industrial Relations to establish a list of hazardous substances,ⁿ¹⁵⁷ which must be reviewed and revised at least biennially.ⁿ¹⁵⁸ The initial list was approved by the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board and codified at Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 339. Similarly, all subsequent proposed amendments must be reviewed and approved, after opportunity for public comment by affected employers and employees, by the Standards Board.ⁿ¹⁵⁹

The list, commonly known as the Director's List of Hazardous Substances, incorporates substances found to be hazardous by other recognized agencies, including, for example, human and animal carcinogens listed by the International Agency for Research on Cancer, substances designated by the Environmental Protection Agency under the Clean Water Act of 1977ⁿ¹⁶⁰ or the Clean Air Act,ⁿ¹⁶¹ airborne chemical contaminants listed in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5155, substances designated as restricted materials pursuant to Food and Agriculture Code Section 14004.5, substances for which the Division of Occupational Safety and Health has issued an information alert from the repository of data on toxic materials and harmful physical agents,ⁿ¹⁶² and any substance within the scope of the federal Hazard Communication Standard.ⁿ¹⁶³

Inclusion of a substance on the list triggers the requirements of the Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act and the California Hazard Communication Standard, found at Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5194.ⁿ¹⁶⁴ However, omission from the list does not release the employer from any other duty to safeguard employees, or release the manufacturer, producer, or maker of a hazardous substance from any duty that exists under other provisions of law to warn ultimate users.ⁿ¹⁶⁵

The act exempts (1) hazardous substances that are contained in products intended for personal consumption by employees in the workplace, contained in consumer products packaged for distribution to and use by the general public or found outside of the repair work and processing areas of retail food sale and other retail trade establishments;ⁿ¹⁶⁶ (2) impurities that develop as intermediate materials during chemical processing and to which employee exposure is unlikely;ⁿ¹⁶⁷ and (3) hazardous substances used in a laboratory under the direct supervision of a technically qualified individual, as long as the laboratory employer complies with other requirements for labeling and providing employees with information about such substances.ⁿ¹⁶⁸

Manufacturers of hazardous substances are required by the act to prepare and provide a material safety data sheet (MSDS) containing current, accurate, and complete information on each topic required by Labor Code Section 6391, to direct purchasers of the substance.ⁿ¹⁶⁹ The manufacturer has a duty to revise the MSDS on a timely basis, whenever new information is available that would affect the contents of the MSDS and, in any event, annually.ⁿ¹⁷⁰ Whenever new information indicates a significant increased risk or the need for more protective measures than previously disclosed on the MSDS, the manufacturer must provide the new information to all persons who made direct purchases from the manufacturer within the past year.ⁿ¹⁷¹ The manufacturer is also required to provide the Department of Industrial Relations with a copy of the MSDS for each hazardous substance it manufactures.ⁿ¹⁷² Provision of a federal MSDS or equivalent constitutes prima facie proof of compliance with Labor Code section 6390.ⁿ¹⁷³

The manufacturer of a hazardous substance or producer of a mixture containing a hazardous substance is also required to provide a MSDS to the employer, on request.ⁿ¹⁷⁴

The MSDS and other information required by Labor Code Section 6390 may be supplied for the entire product mixture, rather than for each hazardous substance in the mixture, as long as specified conditions are met.ⁿ¹⁷⁵

Provisions governing the protection of trade secrets are set forth in Labor Code Section 6396, in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5194(i), and in Appendix D to Section 5194.

Persons, other than manufacturers, who sell a mixture or hazardous substance must provide direct purchasers, at the time of sale, with a copy of the most recent MSDS or its equivalent.ⁿ¹⁷⁶ Such persons may be relieved of the duty to provide such information if the conditions in Labor Code Section 6397(c) are met.

A manufacturer may be relieved of the duty to provide an MSDS if the manufacturer has a record of having already provided the most recent version of the MSDS to the specific purchaser, if the product is labelled in accordance with the requirements of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA), or if the product was sold at retail and incidentally sold to an employer in the same form, concentration, amount, and mixture as it is sold to consumers, and to the seller's knowledge, will not result in significantly greater employee exposure than consumer exposure.ⁿ¹⁷⁷

The HSIT Act expressly prohibits any person from discharging or in any manner discriminating against any employee because the employee filed a complaint, instituted, caused, or testified at any proceeding related to provisions of the act, or exercised any right provided under the act.ⁿ¹⁷⁸

Under the California Hazard Communication Standard,ⁿ¹⁷⁹ a manufacturer or importer of a hazardous substance must evaluate the hazards of substances produced and imported.ⁿ¹⁸⁰ The employer is not required to independently evaluate the hazards of such substances, unless the employer chooses not to rely on the manufacturer's evaluation.ⁿ¹⁸¹

The employer is required to provide employees with information and training about hazardous substances in the workplace by means of a written hazard communication program, labeling, other warnings, and MSDS's.ⁿ¹⁸²

The requirements for the employer's written hazard communication program are contained in Section 5194(e), labeling and other warning requirements are found in Section 5194(f), and the requirements for MSDS's are in Section 5194(g).ⁿ¹⁸³ Employers can find a hazard communication checklist in the Cal/OSHA Policies and Procedures manual.^{n183.1}

The employer must maintain MSDS's for each hazardous substance at a workplace and make the MSDS's readily accessible to employees during each work shift.ⁿ¹⁸⁴ MSDS's must be made available by the employer, upon request, to employee-designated representatives, the Chief of the Division, NIOSH, and the employee's physician.ⁿ¹⁸⁵ If the information on a MSDS is not complete or current or no MSDS is available when requested, the employer must request such information in writing from the manufacturer or importer of the substance within prescribed time limits.ⁿ¹⁸⁶

The employer must provide employees with information and training about hazardous substances at the time of initial work assignment and whenever a new hazard is introduced into the work area.ⁿ¹⁸⁷ At a minimum, the information and training must include the requirements of Section 5194; the work operations involving hazardous substances; the location and availability of the written hazard communication program; methods used to detect the release of a hazardous substance; the physical and health hazards posed by such substances in the workplace and the protections, procedures, and devices that may be used for protection from such substances; and the detailed provisions of the hazard communication program, including how to read labels and MSDS's and how to obtain and use such information.ⁿ¹⁸⁸

The employer must inform employees of their right to personally receive information about hazardous substances to which they may be exposed, the right for their physician or collective bargaining agent to receive such information, and of the prohibitions against discharge or discriminatory treatment of an employee because the employee exercised rights under the Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act.ⁿ¹⁸⁹ The employer may adopt reasonable procedures for acting on workers' requests for MSDS's, so as to avoid interruption of normal work operations.ⁿ¹⁹⁰

The employer must provide employees with timely notice of any new or revised MSDS's that are received.ⁿ¹⁹¹

[e] Disciplinary Actions Against Building Contractors

Violation of any safety provision contained in Division 5 of the Labor Code or Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations that results in death or serious injury to an employee constitutes cause for disciplinary action against a contractor by the Contractors' State License Board.ⁿ¹⁹²

[f] Occupational Disease and Lead Poisoning Prevention Programs

The State Department of Health Services has been directed to establish and maintain occupational disease and occupational lead poisoning prevention programs.ⁿ¹⁹³ These programs involve research, collection of data, training of employers and employees, and drafting of recommendations for preventing occupational disease and occupational lead poisoning.ⁿ¹⁹⁴ The Department of Health Services is required to coordinate with the Department of Industrial Relations and any other departments or agencies to avoid program and service duplication in these areas.ⁿ¹⁹⁵ The Department of Health Services may adopt regulations to implement the occupational lead poisoning program.ⁿ¹⁹⁶

[3] Overview of Administrative Enforcement Structure

[a] Department of Industrial Relations

The Department of Industrial Relations (DIR) is the designated state agency responsible for administering the California occupational safety and health program.ⁿ¹⁹⁷ The department is headed by the Director of Industrial Relations, a cabinet-level secretary, who is appointed by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, and serves at the pleasure of the governor.ⁿ¹⁹⁸

The Division of Occupational Safety and Healthⁿ¹⁹⁹ is one of six divisions within the DIR.ⁿ²⁰⁰

[b] Division of Occupational Safety and Health

[i] General Organization and Structure

The Division of Occupational Safety and Health (the Division), the successor of the Division of Industrial Safety, is responsible for carrying out the enforcement, education, and research activities of the Cal/OSHA program.ⁿ²⁰¹ The headquarters office of the Division is currently located in San Francisco.

The Division is headed by a chief, who is appointed by the governor and serves at the pleasure of the Director of Industrial Relations.ⁿ²⁰² In addition, two deputy chiefs are appointed by the governor and serve at the pleasure of the Director of Industrial Relations.ⁿ²⁰³ The Deputy Chief of Field Operations supervises the regional, district, and field offices throughout the state, which dispatch Cal/OSHA inspectors. The Deputy Chief of Health and Technical Services supervises the industrial health activities of the program, including the MSDS/Employee Right to Know Unit, the Special Studies Unit, the Calibration Laboratory, the Research and Standards Unit, the Radiation Unit, the Medical Unit,ⁿ²⁰⁴ and the Hazard Evaluation Service and Information System (HESIS). The Division also has a Legal Unit; Bureau of Investigations;ⁿ²⁰⁵ separate sections for Mining and Tunneling, Pressure Vessels, and Elevators; an Aerial Passenger Tramways Unit; an Amusement Ride Unit; an External Education Officer; and various administrative and personnel offices.

Cal/OSHA inspections are conducted by compliance safety engineers (CSE's) or industrial hygienists (IH's).

The state is divided into four regions containing regional and district offices. Cal/OSHA inspectors are supervised by District Managers, who report to a Regional Manager, who in turn reports to the deputy chiefs and the Chief of the Division.

[ii] Bureau of Investigations (BOI)

The Bureau of Investigations (BOI), a unit within the Division, is responsible for directing investigations into industrial accidents in order to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to prosecute an employer criminally or file a civil action under the Business and Professions Code.

The BOI must investigate cases involving a violation of any standard, order, or special order or of Health and Safety Code Section 25910, and in which there is a fatality, catastrophe (serious injury to five or more employees), or a request for prosecution by a Division representative.ⁿ²⁰⁶ These are considered "mandatory" investigations.

The BOI also must review Cal/OSHA inspection reports involving any serious violation,ⁿ²⁰⁷ serious injury to one to four employees, or a serious exposure,ⁿ²⁰⁸ and may investigate cases in which it has reason to believe criminal violations may have occurred.ⁿ²⁰⁹

For each "mandatory" case in which there was a serious injury or death, the Bureau is required to refer the results of its investigation to the appropriate prosecutor, e.g., district attorney, city attorney, or Attorney General, unless it has determined there is insufficient evidence of a violation of the law.ⁿ²¹⁰ If the Bureau determines there is legally insufficient evidence of a violation of the law, it must notify the appropriate prosecuting authority if the prosecuting authority requests notice.^{n210.1} On the request of a county district attorney, the Department may develop a protocol for referring cases that may involve criminal conduct to the appropriate prosecuting authority in lieu of or in cooperation with an investigation by the Bureau. The protocol must provide for the voluntary acceptance of referrals after a review of the case by the prosecuting authority. In cases accepted for investigation by the prosecuting authority, the protocol must provide for cooperation between the prosecuting authority, the Division, and the Bureau. When the prosecuting authority declines a referral, the Bureau must comply with Lab. Code § 6315(a)-(h).ⁿ²¹¹

The Division is required to provide the Bureau with all initial accident reports,ⁿ²¹² inspection reports for any inspection involving a serious violation and a fatality,ⁿ²¹³ the reports the BOI is required to review by Labor Code Section 6315(a),ⁿ²¹⁴ and any other documents the Division possesses that the Bureau requests for its review or investigations.ⁿ²¹⁵

The Bureau's statutory authority includes the right of access to all places of employment necessary to its investigations,ⁿ²¹⁶ the right to collect any evidence or samples deemed necessary to its investigations,ⁿ²¹⁷ all powers given Division inspectors under Labor Code Section 6314,ⁿ²¹⁸ and the right to communicate with prosecutors at any time it deems appropriate.ⁿ²¹⁹ It is the only entity within the Division that is authorized to conduct criminal investigations and to refer the results of such investigations to a prosecutor.ⁿ²²⁰

By February 15 of each year, the BOI must file a report with the Division, to be forwarded to the Director of Industrial Relations, which summarizes its investigatory activities and resources during the prior year and the status and disposition of cases referred for prosecution. The required contents of the Bureau's annual report are set out in Labor Code Section 6315.3.

The Bureau "shall be staffed by as many attorneys and investigators as are necessary to carry out the purposes" of the California Occupational Safety and Health Actⁿ²²¹ and must be supervised by an attorney.ⁿ²²²

[iii] Medical Unit

The Medical Unit in the Division assists the Division with information about the biological, ergonomic, and other health effects of various occupational injuries and exposures. One or more physicians and nurse practitioners are available to consult on workplace inspections, help plan special studies on the effects of a targeted occupational hazard, and provide medical opinion testimony for appeal hearings.

[iv] Publications and Films

In fulfillment of its obligation to provide information regarding occupational safety and health programs, methods, techniques, and devices,ⁿ²²³ the Division provides publications free of charge and has a selection of short 16mm films that may be checked out. Publications generally consist of small pamphlets which contain the actual text of a regulation governing a particular hazard (e.g., noise control, airborne contaminants, respiratory protection programs, trenches and excavations, toxics and carcinogens, employee access to medical records), summarize hazards specific to particular industries or workplaces (e.g., construction safety, electrical safety, farm labor safety) or describe the structure of

Cal/OSHA and related occupational safety and health programs and offices. In the past, the Division has provided multiple copies of such information to the public free of charge on request. Additional fact sheets and information may be available through the Hazard Evaluation System and Information Service (HESIS).ⁿ²²⁴

Films may also be checked out free of charge, although the borrower is responsible for return postage. A list of available films may be requested from the Division's public information office.

[v] Hazard Evaluation System and Information Service

The Hazard Evaluation System and Information Service (HESIS) was created as a joint venture of the California Department of Health Services and Cal/OSHA to provide workers, employers, and medical providers with practical information about health hazards from exposure to chemical and physical agents in the workplace. HESIS provides information by telephone and in free publications. Publications include "Health Hazard Summaries," which include "Fact Sheets" (four- to six-page summaries) on the health effects of and safe ways to use common workplace chemicals, "Hazard Alerts," which summarize the danger posed by new or previously unrecognized hazards and safe work practices for such hazards, and booklets providing a more comprehensive discussion on various topics. These types of publications are written for use by persons without formal scientific or medical training, and in some cases are available in languages other than English. HESIS also provides health professionals with scientific and technical documentation and medical guidelines, including advisory protocols for diagnosing and managing industrial poisonings.

[vi] Consultation Services

The Division is required to provide a full range of occupational safety and health consulting services to any employer or employee group on request.ⁿ²²⁵ Consultation Services is specifically required to assist in the development of the employee injury and illness prevention program required by Labor Code Section 6401.7.ⁿ²²⁶ Consultation Services also must give the highest priority to development of these programs for businesses with fewer than 250 employees in industries identified in the regional plans developed to identify the employers in the most hazardous industries.ⁿ²²⁷ Consultation Services also is required to offer a program for identifying categories of occupational health and safety hazards that cause the greatest number and most preventable injuries and illnesses, and the places of employment where they occur. This program includes a component for reducing work-related repetitive motion injuries.ⁿ²²⁸

Consultation Services has several offices throughout the state and the staff include experienced safety engineers and industrial hygienists. Their services are generally free of charge.

Consultation offers employers the opportunity to have a trained professional conduct an on-site walkaround survey at no cost to the employer. The consultant will identify unsafe and hazardous conditions that are in violation of existing occupational safety and health laws and regulations and make specific recommendations on methods of abatement. Consultation Services will not issue any citations or penalties for such violative conditions. The consultant will provide the employer with a written report of his or her findings and make recommendations on safe guards, practices, procedures, and methods of correcting such conditions and protecting employees. If appropriate, a follow-up visit will be made to assure that the required corrections have been made.

The consultation unit and staff are separate and distinct from the enforcement personnel and operations of the Division. If an employer requests the assistance of Consultation Services pursuant to Labor Code Section 6354, the Division is barred from issuing a citation or initiating a criminal prosecution under Labor Code Section 6423 for a violative condition observed by the consultant.ⁿ²²⁹ However, if the consultant observes a condition that constitutes an imminent hazard or danger, an order prohibiting use will be issued pursuant to Labor Code Section 6325, and the employer will not be liable for prosecution under Labor Code Section 6423, or for civil citations and penalties as a result of the imminent hazard, unless the employer violates the order prohibiting use or otherwise violates the provisions of Labor Code Section 6326.ⁿ²³⁰ If an employer fails or refuses to eliminate or control an unsafe or hazardous condition that constitutes a serious hazard, according to the plan and time limits agreed on by the employer and the consultant, the on-going serious violation would be referred to the enforcement unit for action. Such referrals are rare.

For full discussion of enforcement procedures, see §§ 21.40-21.46.

[c] Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board

[i] Structure and Functions

The Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board, commonly referred to as the "Standards Board," is an independent body within the Department of Industrial Relations that has the exclusive authority to adopt occupational safety and health standards in California;ⁿ²³¹ to grant permanent variances from any such standard, order, or special order;ⁿ²³² and to resolve appeals from temporary variances granted or denied by the Division.ⁿ²³³

The Board consists of seven members, appointed by the governor,ⁿ²³⁴ who serve four-year terms that expire on a staggered basis.ⁿ²³⁵ Two members must be from the field of management, two from labor, one from the field of occupational health, one from the field of occupational safety, and one member from the general public.ⁿ²³⁶ A chairperson is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the governor.ⁿ²³⁷ An affirmative vote by at least four members of the Board is required to adopt, amend, or repeal any occupational safety or health standard or order.ⁿ²³⁸

The Board meets at least monthly, and the meetings are rotated throughout the state at locations selected by the chairperson.ⁿ²³⁹ The Board must provide written notice of and a proposed agenda for all meetings to any person who files a written request for such notice.ⁿ²⁴⁰ All Board meetings are open and public.ⁿ²⁴¹ However, the Board refuses to hear public comment during the business portion of its meetings and meets in camera when necessary to discuss items such as pending litigation. The business portion of the meeting is used to take final action to adopt or amend occupational safety and health orders previously reviewed, to discuss and resolve variance and other petitions, and to discuss other items pertaining to Board functions.

During each of its meetings, the Board must provide time to receive proposals from any interested person for new or revised standards, orders, or other items concerning occupational safety and health. The Board's decision on any such proposal must be reported within six months.ⁿ²⁴²

[ii] Standard-Setting

New occupational safety and health standards are developed by the Standards Board as a result of enactment of new federal standards, public petitions requesting a new standard or amendment to existing standards, and requests and recommendations from other governmental agencies or officials for a new standard or change to existing standards.

The Standards Board must adopt standards that are at least as effective as federal OSHA standards on all issues for which a federal standard has been promulgated under Section 6 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 within six months after the effective date of the federal OSHA standard.ⁿ²⁴³ However, the Board also may adopt standards that are more protective than federal standards and standards regulating hazards not covered by federal OSHA. The Board also must adopt standards that apply to products distributed or used in interstate commerce when required by compelling local conditions, provided that those standards do not unduly burden interstate commerce.ⁿ²⁴⁴

A standard or amendment to a standard that is substantially the same as a federal standard (i.e., identical except for editorial and format differences regarding other states) is not subject to Government Code section 11346 et seq. and *Government Code section 11349 et seq.*ⁿ²⁴⁵ If a federal standard is promulgated and within six months no state standard is adopted that is at least as effective, certain provisions apply, unless the adoption of the state standard is imminent.ⁿ²⁴⁶ Under those provisions, if there is no existing state standard governing the same issue, the federal standard is deemed to be adopted by the Board;ⁿ²⁴⁷ and if a state standard is in effect when a federal standard is promulgated covering the same issue, the Board may adopt the federal standard (or a portion of it), provided that the federal standard is at least as effective as the corresponding state standard.ⁿ²⁴⁸ A standard adopted under these provisions is effective when filed with the Secretary of State, unless otherwise provided, but does not take effect before the corresponding federal standard; and it remains in effect for six months unless readopted for another six months or superseded.ⁿ²⁴⁹

Any new or amended occupational safety or health standard or order adopted pursuant to Labor Code Section 142.3 must (1) prescribe the use of labels or other appropriate warnings needed to apprise workers of all hazards to which they may be exposed, state relevant symptoms and appropriate emergency treatment, and specify proper conditions and precautions for safe use or exposure; (2) where appropriate, prescribe suitable protective equipment and control or technological procedures to be used in connection with such hazards, as well as provide for employee exposure monitoring or measuring at such locations and intervals as are necessary for protection of employees; and (3) where appropriate, prescribe the type and frequency of medical examinations or other tests,ⁿ²⁵⁰ which must be made available by an employer at no cost to employees who are exposed to such hazards, in order to determine whether the health of such employees is adversely affected by such exposures.ⁿ²⁵¹

In adopting, amending, or repealing any occupational safety or health standards or orders, the Board procedures must conform with the notice and rule-making procedures set out in the Administrative Procedures Act,ⁿ²⁵² except as expressly modified by the provisions of the Labor Code governing the Board.ⁿ²⁵³ In some instances, the Board may establish an advisory committee, composed of Board staff, with legal or technical expertise on an issue, and interested members of the public, to review and draft a proposed new standard or amendment to an existing standard. Advisory committee meetings are generally open to the public. Proposals submitted to and discussed by such a committee are viewed as advisory only and are not necessarily incorporated into the final standard submitted for final public comment and Board action. Parties dissatisfied with the proposed standard submitted for adoption may appear at the hearings held for public comment.ⁿ²⁵⁴

Before adopting any proposed standard or regulation, the Board must provide public notice of the proposed standard and the time and place for public comment.ⁿ²⁵⁵ The notice must include a summary of the reasons for the proposed standard; the full text of the proposed standard with references to applicable federal OSHA standards; information regarding how it will affect existing standards; its effect, if any, on the public; the expected cost or savings to the state, local agencies, and school districts; the impact on housing costs, small business, private persons, or entities; its impact on federal funding; and whether it constitutes a "state-mandated cost" requiring state reimbursement to local government;ⁿ²⁵⁶ and other statutorily mandated information.ⁿ²⁵⁷ Comments made at the public hearing on a proposed standard are included in the record of the rule-making proceeding.ⁿ²⁵⁸ The Board may defer adoption in light of the public comment, incorporate changes in light of the public comment (as long as such changes are not so substantive as to require new notice of such amendments),ⁿ²⁵⁹ or decline any amendments and adopt the standard as proposed.

The Board may adopt emergency standards, when necessary.ⁿ²⁶⁰ Emergency regulations, based on any emergency temporary federal OSHA standard published in the Federal Register, are deemed to be effective at least until 120 days after a permanent standard is promulgated by the Secretary of Labor for the federal OSHA program.ⁿ²⁶¹

[iii] OSHA Standards Affecting Building Standards

The Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board, by an affirmative vote of at least four members, may adopt, amend, or repeal occupational safety and health standards and orders. The board is the only agency in California authorized to adopt occupational safety and health standards.ⁿ²⁶² The board must adopt standards at least as effective as the federal standards for all issues for which federal standards have been promulgatedⁿ²⁶³ within six months of the promulgation date of the federal standards.ⁿ²⁶⁴ No standard or amendment to a standard adopted by the board that is substantially the same as a federal standard is subject to Gov. Code § 11346 et seq., governing public participation in rulemaking, or § 11349 et seq., governing review of proposed regulations.ⁿ²⁶⁵ If a federal standard is promulgated and no state standard that is at least as effective as the federal standard is adopted by the board within six months of the date of promulgation of the federal standard, the following apply unless adoption of the state standard is imminent:ⁿ²⁶⁶

1. If there is no existing state standard covering the same issues, the federal standard is deemed to be a standard adopted by the Board and enforceable by the Division pursuant to Lab. Code Section 6317. This standard is not subject to Gov. Code §§ 11346 et seq. or 11349 et seq..
2. If a state standard is in effect at the time a federal standard is promulgated covering the same issue or issues, the Board may adopt the federal standard, or a portion of it, as a standard enforceable by the Division pursuant to Lab. Code § 6317, provided, however, if a federal standard or portion of it is adopted which replaces an existing state standard or portion thereof, the federal standard is as effective as the state standard or portion. No adoption of or amendment to any federal standard, or portion thereof will be subject to Gov. Code §§ 11346 et seq. or 11349 et seq..
3. Any state standard adopted as described above will become effective at the time it is filed with the Secretary of State, unless otherwise provided, but will not take effect before the effective date of the equivalent federal standard and will remain in effect for six months unless readopted by the Board for an additional six months or superseded by a standard adopted by the Board pursuant to Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(2).
4. Any standard adopted as described above must be published in Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations in a manner similar to any other standards adopted pursuant to Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(1), (2).

The State Building Standards Commission must codify and publish in a semiannual supplement to the California Building Standards Code, or in a more frequent supplement if required by federal law, all occupational safety and health standards that would otherwise meet the definition of a building standard described in Health & Safety Code § 18909 adopted by the Board in the State Building Standards Code without reimbursement from the Board. These occupational safety and health standards may also be published by the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board in other provisions in Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations prior to publication in the California Building Standards Code if that other publication includes an appropriate identification of occupational safety and health standards contained in the other publication.ⁿ²⁶⁷

Any occupational safety or health standard or order promulgated under Lab. Code § 142.3 must prescribe the use of labels or other appropriate forms of warning necessary to ensure that employees are apprised of all hazards to which they are exposed, relevant symptoms, appropriate emergency treatment, and proper conditions and precautions for safe use or exposure. Where appropriate, these standards or orders must also prescribe suitable protective equipment and control or technological procedures to be used in connection with these hazards and provide for monitoring or measuring employee exposure at such locations and intervals as may be necessary for the protection of employees.

In addition, where appropriate, the occupational safety or health standard or order must prescribe the type and frequency of medical examinations or other tests which will be made available by the employer, or at his or her cost, to employees exposed to such hazards in order to most effectively determine whether the health of the employee is adversely affected by this exposure.ⁿ²⁶⁸ The results of these examinations or tests will be furnished only to the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, the State Department of Health Services, any other authorized state agency, the employer, the employee, and, at the request of the employee, to his or her physician.ⁿ²⁶⁹

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

There is a potential link between Lab. Code § 142.3 and Lab. Code § 3602(b)(2), which provides a cause of action for fraudulent concealment resulting in the aggravation of alleged work-related injuries. It is important that an employer's safety manager pay close attention to the dangers posed by certain chemicals and adopt procedures for alerting appropriate safety or medical personnel of workplace injuries that may be the result of certain chemical exposures. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[iv] Permanent and Temporary Variances

The Standards Board may grant an employer's request for a permanent variance from an entire or any portion of an occupational safety and health standard, order, or special order after investigation and, if appropriate, a hearing.ⁿ²⁷⁰ On application by an employer, employees, or the Division, or on its own motion, the Board also may modify or revoke a permanent variance.ⁿ²⁷¹

Permanent variances are discussed in more detail in § 21.48[2].

Temporary variances may be granted by the Division of Occupational Safety and Health.ⁿ²⁷² Any employer or other person adversely affected by the granting or denial of a temporary variance by the Division may appeal to the Standards Board within 15 working days from receipt of notice of the variance approval or denial.ⁿ²⁷³ The 15-day period for appeal may be extended by the Board for good cause.ⁿ²⁷⁴ The decision of the Standards Board is binding on the Director of the Department of Industrial Relations and the Division with respect to the parties to the appeal, although the Director may seek judicial review of any such decision even if the Director did not participate in the appeal.ⁿ²⁷⁵ The decision of the Standards Board is final except for rehearing or judicial review.ⁿ²⁷⁶

Temporary variances are discussed more fully in § 21.48 [1].

[d] Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board

The Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board (OSHAB) is an independent body within the Department of Industrial Relations that adjudicates employer appeals from citations issued by the Division for alleged violations of occupational safety and health standards, orders, and special orders.ⁿ²⁷⁷

The OSHAB consists of three members--one from the field of management, one from labor, and one general public member from neither labor nor management--who are appointed by the governor subject to approval of the senate.ⁿ²⁷⁸ OSHAB members serve on a full-time basisⁿ²⁷⁹ for four-year terms and until a successor has been appointed and confirmed.ⁿ²⁸⁰ The Chairperson of the OSHAB is selected by and serves at the pleasure of the governor.ⁿ²⁸¹ The Chairperson may select an Executive Officer to supervise OSHAB staff and to act as a deputy OSHAB member, when necessary.ⁿ²⁸²

All decisions and orders of the OSHAB must be writtenⁿ²⁸³ and are final, unless reconsideration or judicial review is granted.ⁿ²⁸⁴ An employer or employee appeal from a citation, civil penalty, order, or abatement period granted by the Division is first heard and decided by an administrative law judge of the OSHAB.ⁿ²⁸⁵ Any party aggrieved by the decision may petition for reconsideration by the OSHAB. OSHAB decisions after reconsideration require a majority.ⁿ²⁸⁶ The decisions of the OSHAB are binding on the Director of Industrial Relations and the Division with reference to the parties to the appeal, but the Director may seek judicial review even if the Director neither appeared nor participated in the appeal hearing.ⁿ²⁸⁷

The OSHAB, acting as a whole, has adopted and may repeal or amend rules of practice and procedure governing the administrative hearings and reconsideration process of the Board.ⁿ²⁸⁸

Any person affected by an order or decision of the OSHAB may seek judicial review of the OSHAB's decisions and orders by filing a petition for writ of mandate in the superior court of the county in which he or she resides, within 30 days of the OSHAB's denial of a petition for reconsideration or of the OSHAB's decision after reconsideration.ⁿ²⁸⁹

Filing a petition for writ of mandate does not automatically stay or suspend any decision or order of the OSHAB; however, the superior court may order such relief.ⁿ²⁹⁰

The OSHAB may award reasonable costs, including attorney's, consultant's, and witness's fees, not to exceed $5,000 in aggregate, to any employer who appeals a citation issued by the Division for an alleged violation of an occupational safety or health standard, rule, order, or regulation if (1) the employer prevails in the appeal or the citation is withdrawn; and (2) the OSHAB finds that the Division's action or conduct in issuing the citation was arbitrary or capricious.ⁿ²⁹¹

The OSHAB has expressed the view that it is not constrained to follow precedent decisions of the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission, which adjudicates appeals under the federal OSH Act, in view of the sovereignty and preeminence of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act as interpreted by California courts.ⁿ²⁹²

Appeal proceedings are discussed fully in § 21.45.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws General Overview Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws Occupational Safety & Health Act

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Stats. 1911, ch. 399.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Cal. Const., art. XX, § 21.

(n3)Footnote 3. Stats. 1913, ch. 176, § 1.

(n4)Footnote 4. Stats. 1913, ch. 176, §§ 51-72.

(n5)Footnote 5. The act provided, among other things, that "Every employer shall furnish employment which shall be safe for the employees therein ... and shall furnish and use such safety devices and safeguards, and shall adopt and use such practices, means, methods, operations and processes as are reasonably adequate to render such employment ... safe, and shall do every other thing reasonably necessary to protect the life and safety of such employees." Stats. 1913, ch. 176, § 52.

(n6)Footnote 6. Stats. 1913, ch. 176, § 62.

(n7)Footnote 7. Stats. 1913, ch. 176, § 61.

(n8)Footnote 8. Stats. 1913, ch. 176, § 72.

(n9)Footnote 9. Stats. 1913, ch. 176, § 59.

(n10)Footnote 10. Stats. 1913, ch. 176, § 67.

(n11)Footnote 11. Stats. 1913, ch. 176, § 72.

(n12)Footnote 12. Stats. 1917, ch. 586, § 1 et seq.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Hunter, The California Occupational Safety and Health Act: An Overview, 50 L. A. Bar Bull. 304 (1975) (quoting Amendments to Constitution and Proposed Statutes With Argument Respecting the Same to Be Submitted to the Electors of the State of California at the General Election on Tuesday, November 5, 1918, at 56 (1918)).

(n14)Footnote 14. Stats. 1937, ch. 90.

(n15)Footnote 15. Stats. 1937, ch. 90, § 6508.

(n16)Footnote 16. Stats. 1937, ch. 90, §§ 6800-6952.

(n17)Footnote 17. Stats. 1937, ch. 90, §§ 7100-7319.

(n18)Footnote 18. Stats. 1937, ch. 90, §§ 7400-7501.

(n19)Footnote 19. Stats. 1937, ch. 90 §§ 7600, 7601.

(n20)Footnote 20. Stats. 1945, ch. 1431.

(n21)Footnote 21. Later renamed California Code of Regulations.

(n22)Footnote 22. Hunter, The California Occupational Safety and Health Act: An Overview, 50 L.A. Bar Bull. 304 (1975).

(n23)Footnote 23. Stats. 1949, ch. 1060, § 1 (former Lab. Code § 6604).

(n24)Footnote 24. Stats. 1963, ch. 1083, § 1 (former Lab. Code § 6416, repealed by Stats. 1973, ch. 993, § 93). For discussion of criminal sanctions currently applicable, see §§ 21.60-21.68.

(n25)Footnote 25. See 29 U.S.C. § 667(b); 29 C.F.R. § 1902; 38 Fed. Reg. 10717 (1973) .

(n26)Footnote 26. See 29 U.S.C. § 672(d).

(n27)Footnote 27. Lab. Code § 7950 et seq.

(n28)Footnote 28. 38 Fed. Reg. 10719 .

(n29)Footnote 29. 41 Fed. Reg. 1905 (Jan. 13, 1976) .

(n30)Footnote 30. 42 Fed. Reg. 41858 .

(n31)Footnote 31. Lab. Code § 6300.

(n32)Footnote 32. Cal. Const., art. XIV, § 4; see also Lab. Code § 3201.

(n33)Footnote 33. Lab. Code § 3202.

(n34)Footnote 34. Lab. Code § 6300 et seq.

(n35)Footnote 35. Lab. Code §§ 6300-6711.

(n36)Footnote 36. Lab. Code § 6800 et seq.

(n37)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 7100 et seq.

(n38)Footnote 38. Lab. Code § 7400 et seq.

(n39)Footnote 39. Lab. Code § 7600 et seq.

- (n40)Footnote 40. Lab. Code § 7620 et seq.
- (n41)Footnote 41. Lab. Code § 7800 et seq.
- (n42)Footnote 41.1. See Lab. Code § 7850 et seq.
- (n43)Footnote 42. Lab. Code § 7900 et seq.
- (n44)Footnote 43. Lab. Code § 7950 et seq.
- (n45)Footnote 44. Lab. Code § 9000 et seq.; see discussion in [2][a], below.
- (n46)Footnote 44.1. Lab. Code § 9100 et seq.
- (n47)Footnote 45. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330 et seq.
- (n48)Footnote 46. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 345 et seq.
- (n49)Footnote 47. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 401 et seq.
- (n50)Footnote 48. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 450 et seq.
- (n51)Footnote 49. Ixta v. Rinaldi (Cal. Ct. App., Oct. 27, 1987) Case No. C002805.
- (n52)Footnote 50. Former Health & Safety Code § 24200 et seq.
- (n53)Footnote 51. Lab. Code § 9000 et seq.
- (n54)Footnote 52. Lab. Code § 9020(b).
- (n55)Footnote 53. Lab. Code § 9009(a).
- (n56)Footnote 54. Lab. Code § 9009(b).
- (n57)Footnote 55. Lab. Code § 9009(c).
- (n58)Footnote 56. Lab. Code § 9009(d).
- (n59)Footnote 57. Lab. Code § 9009(e).
- (n60)Footnote 58. Lab. Code § 9004(b).
- (n61)Footnote 59. Lab. Code § 9004(c).
- (n62)Footnote 60. Lab. Code § 9004(d).
- (n63)Footnote 61. Lab. Code § 9003.
- (n64)Footnote 62. Lab. Code § 9020(a).
- (n65)Footnote 63. Lab. Code § 9015.
- (n66)Footnote 64. Lab. Code § 9022.
- (n67)Footnote 65. Lab. Code § 9020(b).

(n68)Footnote 66. Lab. Code § 9031.

(n69)Footnote 67. Lab. Code § 9050.

(n70)Footnote 68. Lab. Code § 9032.

(n71)Footnote 69. Lab. Code § 9009.

(n72)Footnote 70. Lab. Code § 9051.

(n73)Footnote 71. Lab. Code §§ 6325, 6325.5 (friable asbestos).

(n74)Footnote 72. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5200 et seq.

(n75)Footnote 73. Lab. Code § 9030.

(n76)Footnote 74. Lab. Code § 9040.

(n77)Footnote 75. Lab. Code § 9031.

(n78)Footnote 76. See Lab. Code § 9060.

(n79)Footnote 77. See Lab. Code § 9060.

(n80)Footnote 78. Lab. Code § 9052.

(n81)Footnote 79. Lab. Code § 7950 et seq.

(n82)Footnote 80. Lab. Code § 7952.

(n83)Footnote 81. Lab. Code § 7954.

(n84)Footnote 82. Lab. Code § 7953.

(n85)Footnote 83. See Troy Gold Industries, Ltd. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 379, 389, 231 Cal. Rptr. 861 .

(n86)Footnote 84. Lab. Code § 7951(b).

(n87)Footnote 85. Lab. Code § 7951(a).

(n88)Footnote 86. Lab. Code § 7951(a).

(n89)Footnote 87. Lab. Code § 8004.

(n90)Footnote 88. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 8400 et seq.

(n91)Footnote 89. Lab. Code § 7951(c).

(n92)Footnote 90. Lab. Code § 7951(c).

(n93)Footnote 91. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 6950 et seq.

(n94)Footnote 92. Lab. Code § 7955.

(n95)Footnote 93. Lab. Code § 7955(a).

(n96)Footnote 94. Lab. Code § 7955(b).

(n97)Footnote 95. Lab. Code § 7955(c).

(n98)Footnote 96. Lab. Code § 7955(d).

(n99)Footnote 97. Lab. Code § 7956.

(n100)Footnote 98. Lab. Code § 7955.

(n101)Footnote 99. Lab. Code § 7955.

(n102)Footnote 100. Lab. Code § 7957.

(n103)Footnote 101. Lab. Code § 7958.

(n104)Footnote 102. Lab. Code § 7959.

(n105)Footnote 103. Lab. Code § 7959.

(n106)Footnote 104. Lab. Code § 7962.

(n107)Footnote 105. Lab. Code § 7963.

(n108)Footnote 106. Lab. Code § 7964.

(n109)Footnote 107. Lab. Code § 7960.

(n110)Footnote 108. Lab. Code § 7960.

(n111)Footnote 109. Lab. Code § 7999.

(n112)Footnote 110. Lab. Code § 8000.

(n113)Footnote 111. Lab. Code §§ 7965-7985.

(n114)Footnote 112. Lab. Code §§ 7965, 7966, 7977.

(n115)Footnote 113. Lab. Code §§ 7966, 7977.

(n116)Footnote 114. Lab. Code §§ 7966, 7977.

(n117)Footnote 115. Lab. Code §§ 7968, 7977.

(n118)Footnote 116. Lab. Code §§ 7971, 7977.

(n119)Footnote 117. Lab. Code §§ 7972, 7977.

(n120)Footnote 118. Lab. Code §§ 7975, 7977.

(n121)Footnote 119. Lab. Code § 7976.

(n122)Footnote 120. Lab. Code §§ 7974, 7983.

(n123)Footnote 121. Lab. Code § 7979.

(n124)Footnote 122. Lab. Code § 7982.

(n125)Footnote 123. Lab. Code § 7984.

(n126)Footnote 124. Lab. Code § 7985.

(n127)Footnote 125. Lab. Code § 7990.

(n128)Footnote 126. Lab. Code §§ 7991, 7992.

(n129)Footnote 127. Lab. Code § 7993.

(n130)Footnote 128. Lab. Code §§ 7994, 7995.

(n131)Footnote 129. Lab. Code § 8001.

(n132)Footnote 130. Lab. Code § 8003.

(n133)Footnote 131. Lab. Code §§ 7996, 7985.

(n134)Footnote 132. Lab. Code § 7985.

(n135)Footnote 133. Health & Safety Code §§ 25249.5-25249.13.

(n136)Footnote 134. Commonly referred to as the "Governor's List."

(n137)Footnote 135. See discussion in [d], below.

(n138)Footnote 136. Health & Safety Code § 25249.8(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 339 (Governor's List); see also 29 C.F.R. § 1910.1200 (federal Hazard Communication Standard).

(n139)Footnote 137. Health & Safety Code § 25249.8(c).

(n140)Footnote 138. Health & Safety Code § 25249.8(a), (c).

(n141)Footnote 139. Health & Safety Code § 25249.6. The warning requirement in Health & Safety Code § 25249.6 does not apply to an exposure for which federal law governs warning in a manner that preempts state authority; an exposure that takes place less than twelve months after the chemical is listed in accordance with the act; or an exposure that is either shown to pose no significant risk, assuming lifetime exposure at that level for known cancer-causing substances, or no observable effect, assuming exposure at 1,000 times that level for known reproductive toxins. See Health & Safety Code § 25249.10.

(n142)Footnote 140. Health & Safety Code § 25249.8(b).

(n143)Footnote 141. Health & Safety Code § 25249.11.

(n144)Footnote 142. Health & Safety Code § 25249.7(a).

(n145)Footnote 143. Health & Safety Code § 25249.7(b).

(n146)Footnote 144. Health & Safety Code § 25249.7(c).

(n147)Footnote 145. See Health & Safety Code § 25249.7(d).

(n148)Footnote 146. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 12601 et seq.

(n149)Footnote 147. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 12601(c).

(n150)Footnote 148. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 12721(d)(3).

(n151)Footnote 149. California Lab. Federation v. Occupational Safety & Health Stds. Bd. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1547, 1559, 271 Cal. Rptr. 310 .

(n152)Footnote 150. See California Lab. Federation v. Occupational Safety & Health Stds. Bd. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1547, 1558, 271 Cal. Rptr. 310 .

(n153)Footnote 151. Lab. Code § 6361(a)(2).

(n154)Footnote 152. Lab. Code § 6361(a)(3).

(n155)Footnote 153. Lab. Code § 6361(b).

(n156)Footnote 154. Lab. Code § 6362.

(n157)Footnote 155. Lab. Code § 6362; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 337.

(n158)Footnote 156. Lab. Code § 6370.

(n159)Footnote 157. Lab. Code § 6380.

(n160)Footnote 158. Lab. Code § 6382.

(n161)Footnote 159. Lab. Code § 6380.5.

(n162)Footnote 160. 33 U.S.C. § 1251 et seq.

(n163)Footnote 161. 42 U.S.C. § 7401 et seq.

(n164)Footnote 162. See Lab. Code § 147.2.

(n165)Footnote 163. Lab. Code § 6382; see 29 C.F.R. § 1910.1200 (federal Hazard Communication Standard).

(n166)Footnote 164. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(b)(2).

(n167)Footnote 165. Lab. Code § 6381.

(n168)Footnote 166. Lab. Code § 6385.

(n169)Footnote 167. Lab. Code § 6384.

(n170)Footnote 168. Lab. Code § 6386.

(n171)Footnote 169. Lab. Code § 6390.

(n172)Footnote 170. Lab. Code § 6390.

(n173)Footnote 171. Lab. Code § 6390.

(n174)Footnote 172. Lab. Code § 6394.

(n175)Footnote 173. See Lab. Code § 6392.

(n176)Footnote 174. Lab. Code § 6399.

(n177)Footnote 175. See Lab. Code § 6395(a).

(n178)Footnote 176. Lab. Code § 6397.

(n179)Footnote 177. Lab. Code § 6393.

(n180)Footnote 178. Lab. Code § 6399.7.

(n181)Footnote 179. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194.

(n182)Footnote 180. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(d)(1).

(n183)Footnote 181. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(d)(1).

(n184)Footnote 182. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(b)(1).

(n185)Footnote 183. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194; see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204 (retention of records).

(n186)Footnote 183.1. See Cal/OSHA Policies & Procedures C-43, Attachment (7/01/95).

(n187)Footnote 184. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(g)(8).

(n188)Footnote 185. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(g)(10).

(n189)Footnote 186. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(g)(11); Lab. Code § 6399.

(n190)Footnote 187. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(h)(1).

(n191)Footnote 188. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(h)(2).

(n192)Footnote 189. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(h)(2)(G).

(n193)Footnote 190. Lab. Code § 6399.

(n194)Footnote 191. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(h)(3).

(n195)Footnote 192. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7109.5; see also Lab. Code § 6652 (Division of Occupational Safety and Health required to provide board with certified copy of notice of civil penalty if contractor-employer fails to pay penalty within 60 days after penalty becomes final).

(n196)Footnote 193. See Health & Safety Code §§ 105175(a), 105185(b).

(n197)Footnote 194. See Health & Safety Code §§ 105175(a), 105185(b).

(n198)Footnote 195. Health & Safety Code §§ 105180, 105185(b).

(n199)Footnote 196. See Health & Safety Code § 105185(c).

(n200)Footnote 197. Lab. Code § 50.7.

(n201)Footnote 198. See Lab. Code § 51.

- (n202)Footnote 199. See discussion in [b], below.
- (n203)Footnote 200. Lab. Code § 56.
- (n204)Footnote 201. Lab. Code § 60.5.
- (n205)Footnote 202. See Lab. Code § 57.
- (n206)Footnote 203. Lab. Code § 57.1(b).
- (n207)Footnote 204. See discussion in [iii], below.
- (n208)Footnote 205. See discussion in [ii], below.
- (n209)Footnote 206. Lab. Code § 6315; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.52.
- (n210)Footnote 207. A serious violation is defined at Lab. Code § 6432 and.
- (n211)Footnote 208. Serious exposure is defined at Lab. Code § 6432.
- (n212)Footnote 209. Lab. Code § 6315.
- (n213)Footnote 210. Lab. Code § 6315(g).
- (n214)Footnote 210.1. Lab. Code § 6315(g).
- (n215)Footnote 211. Lab. Code § 6315(i).
- (n216)Footnote 212. Lab. Code § 6315(b)(1).
- (n217)Footnote 213. Lab. Code § 6315(b)(2).
- (n218)Footnote 214. Lab. Code § 6315(b)(2)
- (n219)Footnote 215. Lab. Code § 6315(b)(3).
- (n220)Footnote 216. Lab. Code § 6315(e).
- (n221)Footnote 217. Lab. Code § 6315(e).
- (n222)Footnote 218. Lab. Code § 6315(e); see discussion in § 21.40[2].
- (n223)Footnote 219. Lab. Code § 6315(h).
- (n224)Footnote 220. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.51.
- (n225)Footnote 221. Lab. Code § 6315(d).
- (n226)Footnote 222. Lab. Code § 6315(c).
- (n227)Footnote 223. See Lab. Code § 6351.
- (n228)Footnote 224. See discussion in [v], below.
- (n229)Footnote 225. Lab. Code § 6354.

(n230)Footnote 226. Lab. Code § 6354(b). For discussion of injury and illness prevention plans, see § 21.12.

(n231)Footnote 227. Lab. Code § 6354(b); see Lab. Code § 6314.1(a),(b) (requiring Division to identify employers in high-hazard industries with highest incidence of preventable occupational injuries and illnesses and workers' compensation losses).

(n232)Footnote 228. Lab. Code § 6354(a).

(n233)Footnote 229. Lab. Code § 6355.

(n234)Footnote 230. Lab. Code § 6355.

(n235)Footnote 231. Lab. Code § 142.3(a); see discussion in [ii], below.

(n236)Footnote 232. Lab. Code § 143; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 401 et seq.; see discussion in § 21.48[2].

(n237)Footnote 233. Lab. Code § 6457; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 401 et seq.; see discussion in § 21.48[1][c].

(n238)Footnote 234. Lab. Code § 140(a).

(n239)Footnote 235. Lab. Code § 141(a).

(n240)Footnote 236. Lab. Code § 140(a).

(n241)Footnote 237. Lab. Code § 140(c).

(n242)Footnote 238. Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(1).

(n243)Footnote 239. Lab. Code § 142.1.

(n244)Footnote 240. Lab. Code § 142.1.

(n245)Footnote 241. Lab. Code § 142.1.

(n246)Footnote 242. Lab. Code § 142.2.

(n247)Footnote 243. 29 U.S.C. § 655; Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(2).

(n248)Footnote 244. Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(2).

(n249)Footnote 245. See Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(4); Gov. Code § 11349 et seq. (review of regulations).

(n250)Footnote 246. See Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(4).

(n251)Footnote 247. See Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(4)(A).

(n252)Footnote 248. See Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(4)(B).

(n253)Footnote 249. See Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(4)(C); Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(2) (adoption of standards applicable to superseding standard).

(n254)Footnote 250. The results of any such exam or test may only be furnished to the Division, the California Department of Health Services, any other authorized state agency, the employer, the employee, and, at the employee's request, to his or her physician. Lab. Code § 142.3(e).

(n255)Footnote 251. Lab. Code § 142.3(d).

(n256)Footnote 252. See Gov. Code § 11346 et seq.

(n257)Footnote 253. Lab. Code § 142.4(a).

(n258)Footnote 254. See Gov. Code §§ 11346.5(a)(16), 11346.8.

(n259)Footnote 255. See Gov. Code §§ 11346.4, 11346.5.

(n260)Footnote 256. See generally Gov. Code § 17500 et seq.

(n261)Footnote 257. See Gov. Code §§ 11346.5(a), 11346.9.

(n262)Footnote 258. See Gov. Code § 11347.3(a)(8).

(n263)Footnote 259. See Gov. Code § 11346.8(c).

(n264)Footnote 260. See Gov. Code § 11346.1.

(n265)Footnote 261. Lab. Code § 142.4.

(n266)Footnote 262. Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(1).

(n267)Footnote 263. See Section 6 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (P.L. 91-596).

(n268)Footnote 264. Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(2).

(n269)Footnote 265. Lab. Code § 142.3(a)(3). For these purposes, "substantially the same" means identical to the federal standard with the exception of editorial and format differences needed to conform to other state laws and standards.

(n270)Footnote 266. Lab. Code 142.3(a)(4).

(n271)Footnote 267. Lab. Code § 142.3(b).

(n272)Footnote 268. Lab. Code § 142.3(c).

(n273)Footnote 269. Lab. Code § 142.3(d).

(n274)Footnote 270. See Lab. Code §§ 143-143.2; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 401 et seq.

(n275)Footnote 271. Lab. Code § 143(d).

(n276)Footnote 272. Lab. Code § 6452; see generally Lab. Code §§ 6450-6457.

(n277)Footnote 273. Lab. Code § 6455.

(n278)Footnote 274. Lab. Code § 6455; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 404.1.

(n279)Footnote 275. Lab. Code § 6456.

(n280)Footnote 276. Lab. Code § 6457.

(n281)Footnote 277. See Lab. Code §§ 148 et seq., 6600 et seq.

(n282)Footnote 278. Lab. Code § 148(a).

(n283)Footnote 279. See Lab. Code § 148(a).

(n284)Footnote 280. Lab. Code § 148.1.

(n285)Footnote 281. Lab. Code § 148(c).

(n286)Footnote 282. See Lab. Code §§ 148.2, 149.

(n287)Footnote 283. Lab. Code § 148.4.

(n288)Footnote 284. Lab. Code §§ 148.5, 6626-6633.

(n289)Footnote 285. See Lab. Code § 6600 et seq.

(n290)Footnote 286. Lab. Code § 148.9.

(n291)Footnote 287. Lab. Code § 148.6.

(n292)Footnote 288. Lab. Code § 148.7; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 345 et seq.

(n293)Footnote 289. Lab. Code § 6627.

(n294)Footnote 290. Lab. Code § 6633.

(n295)Footnote 291. Lab. Code § 149.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 395-397.

(n296)Footnote 292. Kaiser Steel Corporation (Mar. 5, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-1161 (decision after reconsideration).

41 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
 CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
 Part A. OVERVIEW

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.03

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.03 Jurisdiction and Coverage

[1] Division Powers and Authority

[a] Scope of Jurisdiction

The Division of Occupational Safety and Health (the Division) has "power, jurisdiction, and supervision over every employment and place of employment in [California], which is necessary to adequately enforce and administer all laws and lawful standards and orders, or special orders requiring such employment and place of employment to be safe, and requiring the protection of the life, safety, and health of every employee in such employment or place of employment."¹

"Place of employment" is defined as "any place, and the premises appurtenant thereto, where employment is carried on, except a place the health and safety jurisdiction over which is vested by law in, and actively exercised by, any state or federal agency other than the division."² The intent of this definition is to set out a jurisdictional test that focuses on both the authority to regulate and the exercise of that authority.³

The California Supreme Court has interpreted the phrase "vested by law" to refer to agency jurisdiction that is specifically and statutorily mandated to protect the health and safety of workers,⁴ and has held that the phrase "active exercise" of jurisdiction "requires, at the very least, the promulgation of a body of rules directly addressing the health and safety" of workers.⁵

Under the Labor Code, the Division also has express statutory authority to enforce occupational safety and health laws and standards over certain specified hazardous types and places of employment.⁶

[b] Exceptions

While the scope of the Division's authority under the Labor Code is given a broad and liberal interpretation in order to provide for safety of employees⁷ and to minimize any potential gap in coverage,⁸ there are some limitations to the

Division's jurisdiction over workplaces in California. For example, the Division does not have jurisdiction over mines in California as long as the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) actively exercises jurisdiction over employee occupational safety and health at mines.ⁿ⁹

Jurisdiction over private contractors working on federal installations is resolved on a case-by-case basis. Where the federal agency has claimed exclusive federal jurisdiction over private contractors working on federal installations and has challenged state jurisdiction or refused entry to the Division, the Division may, as a matter of policy, recognize federal jurisdiction until the jurisdictional issue is resolved.ⁿ¹⁰

The Division has jurisdiction over railroad employees in offices and shops devoted to the construction, maintenance, or repair of railroad equipment, and all other railroad employees,ⁿ¹¹ as long as no other federal or state agency is actively exercising occupational safety jurisdiction;ⁿ¹² over rail rapid transit systems, electric interurban railroads, or street railroads;ⁿ¹³ and over employees of all other public utilities as defined in the Public Utilities Actⁿ¹⁴ unless the Public Utility Commission finds that Division enforcement actions unduly and prejudicially interfere with the construction or operation of any public utility.ⁿ¹⁵

The Division recognizes exclusive federal jurisdiction over the following places of employment and will refer complaints and accident reports for such places to federal OSHA:ⁿ¹⁶

1. Maritime activities on the navigable waters of the United States,ⁿ¹⁷ including the following:
 - a. Longshore operations on all vessels from the shoreside of the means of access to said vessels;
 - b. Marine vessel construction operations (from the means of access on the shore);
 - c. All afloat marine shipbuilding and repair from the foot of the gangway;
 - d. All shipbuilding and repair in graving docks or dry docks;
 - e. All ship repairing done on marine railways or similar conveyances used to haul vessels out of the water;
 - f. All floating fuel operations;
 - g. All afloat dredging and pile driving and similar operations;
 - h. All diving from vessels afloat on the navigable waters;
 - i. All offshore drilling rigs operating outside the three-mile continental limit;
2. Employment with the U.S. Army National Guard or U.S. Air National Guard; and
3. Employment at the following National Parks and Monuments:
 - a. Cabrillo National Monument;
 - b. Sequoia/Kings Canyon National Park; and
 - c. Yosemite National Park.

The Division also recognizes federal OSHA jurisdiction over the following employees and matters: n18

1. Federal employees;n19
2. Complaints filed pursuant to the following:
 - a. The anti-discrimination provisions of the federal OSH Act;n20
 - b. Section 405 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act;n21
 - c. Section 211 of the Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act;n22 and
 - d. Section 7 of the International Safe Container Act.n23
3. Enforcement of federal OSHA temporary emergency and new permanent standards, until such time as California adopts equivalent standards;
4. Federal OSHA field sanitation standards for farmworkers until California standards are amended;
5. Federal hazardous waste and federal OSHA air contaminant standards that are more stringent than California standards;
6. Manufacture of explosives under contract to the U.S. Department of Defense in accordance with DOD explosives safety requirements and surveillance;n24 and
7. Inspections and investigations conducted in order to monitor the California state OSHA plan, pursuant to the requirements of the federal OSHA.n25

[c] Concurrent Jurisdiction

[i] Concurrent Federal-State Jurisdiction

The Division recognizes concurrent federal and state jurisdiction over occupational safety and health matters involving (1) private contractors on federal installationsn26 and (2) employment at Golden Gate National Recreation Area and Lassen Volcanic National Park.n27

Following the resumption of state jurisdiction over private-sector occupational safety and health, the Division and the federal OSHA administration executed a memorandum of understanding that allows federal OSHA, among other things, to conduct regularly scheduled inspections in selected industries in the private sector.

[ii] Master Agreements Governing California Interagency Enforcement Activity

The Division has executed Master Agreements with the California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA) and the California Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) regarding each agency's enforcement responsibilities.

Under the Master Agreement between the Division and the CDFA, the Division is responsible for enforcement related to pesticide exposures during manufacturing, formulating, storage, and distribution; the CDFA and the local county agricultural commissioner are responsible for investigating pesticide exposures during application and exposures during field re-entry; and fumigation activity is subject to concurrent jurisdiction of all three agencies.ⁿ²⁸ Some pesticide applicators are deemed exempt from Cal/OSHA regulations governing pesticides. The Division also enforces the provisions of Health and Safety Code Section 105200, which requires a treating physician to report any pesticide poisoning incident.

The Master Agreement executed between the Division and the Department of Housing and Community Development sets out procedures for assuring safe and healthful housing for workers living in labor camps. DOSH enforces the requirements of Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3350, which requires every employer who operates a labor camp to obtain and have available a valid housing permit issued by the Department of Housing and Community Development or by any other authorized local governmental body. Under the Master Agreement, the Division refers any observations or complaints about hazardous conditions to the DHCD.

The Division also shares concurrent jurisdiction with various other state agencies even where no master agreement has been executed.ⁿ²⁹

[d] Preemption

Under the federal Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, a state is preempted from regulating occupational safety and health matters covered by federal OSHA standards unless the state has a federally approved state OSHA plan. The California Supreme Court has observed that the state plan scheme embodied in the federal act "merely removes federal preemption so that the state may exercise its own sovereign powers over occupational safety and health."ⁿ³⁰ A state with an approved state plan may establish more stringent standards than those adopted by federal OSHA and may extend the jurisdiction of the state OSHA enforcement agency beyond the scope of jurisdiction held by federal OSHA.ⁿ³¹

The California Supreme Court has held that the Division is not preempted from exercising jurisdiction over occupational safety and health matters involving airline ground maintenance operations.ⁿ³² The OSHAB has ruled that the Division is not preempted from exercising its jurisdiction by federal laws and regulations governing motor-carrier safety,ⁿ³³ or by the Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard No. 207.ⁿ³⁴ Furthermore, the OSHAB has held that the Division's jurisdiction to determine who must pay for required personal protective safety clothing and equipment is not preempted by the National Labor Relations Act.ⁿ³⁵

[2] Employment Relationship

[a] Employee

Employee exposure to a hazardous condition is a threshold issue in the appeal of any citation, order, special order and civil penalty issued by the Division. Even if a hazardous condition exists at a place of employment, failure to establish employee exposure by a preponderance of evidence will result in dismissal of any citation issued.ⁿ³⁶

"Employee" is defined in the California Occupational Safety and Health Act as "every person who is required or directed by any employer, to engage in any employment, or to go to work or be at any time in any place of employment."ⁿ³⁷ Operative January 1, 2004,ⁿ³⁸ "employee" also includes volunteer firefighters, who are covered by Labor Code Section 3200, pursuant to Labor Code Section 3361.ⁿ³⁹ State prisoners engaged in correctional industry are deemed to be employees, except for the purposes of appealing citations, orders, special orders, and penalties.ⁿ⁴⁰

There is a rebuttable presumption that a worker performing work for which a contractor's license is required under Business and Professions Code Section 7000 et seq. or performing services for a person required to obtain such a license is an employee, rather than an independent contractor.ⁿ⁴¹

The OSHAB has held that neither a partner of the cited employern⁴² nor a working employer who is a sole proprietorn⁴³ is an "employee" under the California Occupational Safety and Health Act.

The status of family members performing services for relatives is decided on a case-by-case basis.n⁴⁴

[b] Employer

[i] General Definition

The term "employer" under the act includes (1) the state of California and every state agency; (2) each county, city, and district, and all public and quasi-public corporations and public agencies therein; (3) every person, including any public service corporation, that has any natural person in service; and (4) the legal representative of any deceased employer.n⁴⁵

[ii] Special-Employer Doctrine

By exercising complete control over the work activities of an employee, a third party may create a "special employer" relationship with that person, which imposes the same duties on the special employer as are imposed on a primary or general employer under the Labor Code.n⁴⁶ For example, in Optical Coating Laboratory, Inc., n⁴⁷ a journeyman electrician, employed and continuously paid by Jervan Electric, was "hired out" for four to six months to work at Optical Coating. Although the written contract between Jervan and Optical stated that the electrician was an employee of Jervan, the employee wore a Jervan badge while working for Optical, and Optical could not fire the employee, the OSHAB found that Optical exercised complete control over the journeyman's work activities at Optical and that Optical provided the only meaningful supervision of his work. Accordingly, the OSHAB found Optical to be a special employer, properly cited for a safety order violation, and Jervan to be the general employer. Similarly, an employer who leased a crane from a crane service, which also supplied the crane operator and oiler, was properly cited as a special employer because the crane operator and oiler worked under the leasing employer's direction and control.n⁴⁸

However, the general/special-employer relationship is decided on a case-by-case basis.n⁴⁹ Thus, an entity leasing equipment from another entity will not be deemed a special employer of persons supplied to operate the equipment unless the former entity also maintains direction and control over the operator.n⁵⁰

[iii] Temporary Labor--The Primary/Secondary-Employer Doctrine

A "primary employer" is an employer whose principal business is to supply contract employees to another employer (the "secondary" employer) for a fee. A primary employer is not responsible for a safety violation due to the exposure of a contract employee if (1) the contract employee performs work assignments wholly at the secondary employer's establishment or work sites; (2) while performing assigned work, the contract employee is supervised solely by the secondary employer or the secondary employer's management personnel; (3) the primary employer is barred by contract or by the secondary employer's policy from access to the work sites, except to maintain time records of contract employees or for purposes unrelated to the supervision of work; and (4) the primary employer maintains an accident prevention program and contracts out only employees who have been trained in the work to be performed for the secondary employer and in the hazards peculiar to such work.n⁵¹

However, a primary employer must "determine with particularity the work which a contract employee will be called upon to perform" for a secondary employer, properly train each employee in general safe work practices and hazards unique to each such job assignment, and if personal protective equipment is required to do the work safely, either furnish such protective equipment or ensure that such equipment is in fact provided by the secondary employer at no cost to the contract employee. The primary employer is also responsible for instructing contract employees in the proper use of necessary personal protective equipment, for informing employees of their right to refuse to do work assigned by the secondary employer that the employee reasonably believes to be dangerous until the danger is abated, and for informing employees that a reasonable refusal will not result in sanctions by the primary employer.ⁿ⁵²

[iv] Multi-Employer Worksites

Each employer has a nondelegable duty to protect employees and to provide a safe and healthful place of employment.ⁿ⁵³ Even when a hazard is caused by another employer at a worksite, a citation against an employer will be upheld if employees of the cited employer were exposed to such a hazard.ⁿ⁵⁴ Agreements between employers pertaining to responsibility for safety at a worksite do not alter the duties of an employer under the California Occupational Safety and Health Act.ⁿ⁵⁵

Regulations promulgated under Cal/OSHA provide that on multi-employer worksites, construction and non-construction, citations may be issued only to the following categories of employers when the Division has evidence an employee was exposed to a hazard in violation of any requirement enforceable by the Division:^{n55.1}

- The employer whose employees were exposed to the hazard (the exposing employer);
- The employer who actually created the hazard (the creating employer);
- The employer who was responsible, by contract or through actual practice, for safety and health conditions on the worksite--i.e., the employer who had the authority for ensuring that the hazardous condition is corrected (the controlling employer);
- The employer who had the responsibility for actually correcting the hazard (the correcting employer).

[v] Person Performing Services for Which License is Required (and Employees of That Person)

The Labor Code provides a rebuttable presumption that a person who performs services for which a license is required is an employee rather than an independent contractor.^{n55.2} The effect of that presumption could be to make the hirer of an unlicensed contractor the employer of an employee of the unlicensed contractor for OSHA purposes. In Cortez v. Abich,^{n55.3} which was superseded by grant of review in December of 2009, homeowners hired an unlicensed contractor to remodel their home, including replacing the roof. An employee of the contractor was injured and sued the homeowners. The court found that although the homeowners were not his employer for workers' compensation purposes, the homeowners were the employee's employer with respect to potential tort liability.^{n55.4}

[c] Employment

Employment is defined as "the carrying on of any trade, enterprise, project, industry, business, occupation or work, including all excavation, demolition, and construction work, or any process or operation in any way related thereto, in which any person is engaged or permitted to work for hire except household domestic service."ⁿ⁵⁶ Operative January 1, 2004,ⁿ⁵⁷ "employment" for these purposes also includes volunteer firefighting, when covered by Labor Code Section 3200 et seq., pursuant to Labor Code Section 3361.ⁿ⁵⁸

OSHA statutes do not define "household domestic service," and its legislative history offers no further guidance as to the meaning of that term.ⁿ⁵⁹ The California Supreme Court has held that "household domestic service" likely refers to the performance of tasks in and outside a private residence and implies duties that are personal to the homeowner.ⁿ⁶⁰ A task requiring a license does not always fall outside of OSHA's "household domestic service" exclusion.ⁿ⁶¹ In deciding whether OSHA applies or whether the "household domestic service" exception applies, the focus of the inquiry is on the status of the hirer.ⁿ⁶² Historically, OSHA regulations have been directed at commercial activities.ⁿ⁶³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Administrative Proceedings General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Administrative Proceedings Jurisdiction Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6307.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6303(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. United Airlines, Inc. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 762, 776, 187 Cal. Rptr. 387, 654 P.2d 157 .

(n4)Footnote 4. United Airlines, Inc. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 762, 770-771, 187 Cal. Rptr. 387, 654 P.2d 157 .

(n5)Footnote 5. United Airlines, Inc. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 762, 776, 187 Cal. Rptr. 387, 654 P.2d 157 . In applying these tests, the Court in United Airlines found the Division, not the Federal Aviation Administration, had jurisdiction over airline ground maintenance personnel even though Federal OSHA does not have such jurisdiction and despite FAA regulations that require airline maintenance manuals to address safety in the work performed by flight and ground operations personnel.

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 6702 (mobile internal combustion engines used inside buildings), 7110 (floors and walls of buildings under construction), 7158 (scaffolding work in buildings under construction), 7204 (construction elevators), 7267 (work on structural steel framed buildings), 7332 (window-cleaning safety devices for buildings over three stories).

(n7)Footnote 7. United Airlines, Inc. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 762, 767, 771, 187 Cal. Rptr. 387, 654 P.2d 157 .

(n8)Footnote 8. United Airlines, Inc. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 762, 771, 187 Cal. Rptr. 387, 654 P.2d 157 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Troy Gold Industries, Ltd. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 379, 383, 231 Cal. Rptr. 861 . However, the court in Troy Gold Industries noted that the Division's jurisdiction over mines, pursuant to Lab. Code §§ 6303(a), 7952, 7953, was merely "held in abeyance" until MSHA no longer actively exercises jurisdiction and that pursuant to Lab. Code § 6303(b), the Division retains its jurisdiction over the "employment" of mining. See Troy Gold Industries, Ltd. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 379, 389-390, 231 Cal. Rptr. 861 ; see also Teledyne Tungsten (Nov. 19, 1987) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 84-974, 84-975 (decision after reconsideration).

(n10)Footnote 10. See federal OSHA Instruction STP 2.14 (Oct. 30, 1978), contained in Program Directive 77-6 (Nov. 11, 1977) (state retains jurisdiction for areas occupied by federal facilities when land not ceded to federal government, but when state Legislature has ceded property to federal government, if refused entry by federal agency, state may initiate suit to assert jurisdiction or notify federal OSHA that state OSHA jurisdiction is waived.).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Lab. Code § 6800(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. cf. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Co. (March 17, 1988) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos.

86-1700--86-1703 (decision after reconsideration; Cal/OSHA reporting requirements preempted by Federal Railroad Administration reporting requirements for shop employees); Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Division of Industrial Safety (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 188, 193, 134 Cal. Rptr. 274 (Division without authority to issue order requiring safety training program for nonshop employees); Division of Industrial Safety v. Municipal Court (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 696, 703, 132 Cal. Rptr. 573 (inspection warrant to conduct noise survey of railroad yard properly quashed when yard not operated by shop employees but as part of long-line network).

(n13)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 6800(b).

(n14)Footnote 14. Lab. Code § 6800(c).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Lab. Code §§ 6801, 6802.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-11J.

(n17)Footnote 17. Navigable waters are defined in the Division's manual as those deep and wide enough to afford ship passage to the ocean.

(n18)Footnote 18. See Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-11J.

(n19)Footnote 19. See Lab. Code § 6303(a); 29 U.S.C. § 668(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. See 29 U.S.C. § 660(c).

(n21)Footnote 21. See 49 U.S.C. app. §§ 2301, 2305.

(n22)Footnote 22. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 2641, 2651.

(n23)Footnote 23. See 46 U.S.C. app. §§ 1501, 1506.

(n24)Footnote 24. The Division policy is to apply this exception only to activities otherwise covered by 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5319-5331, but the Division may enforce all other applicable California safety and health standards to operations unrelated to the manufacture of explosives at such manufacturing plants.

(n25)Footnote 25. See 29 U.S.C. § 667(f).

(n26)Footnote 26. See Fred A. Arnold, Inc. (July 26, 1977) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 76-175, 76-176 (decision after reconsideration; employer not exempt from furnishing safe and healthful work at federal military base); General Production Service of California, Inc. (Jan. 28, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 79-153, 79-154 (decision after reconsideration; Division jurisdiction over places of employment at Elk Hills Oil Reserve on federal property); Dalton Construction Co. (June 21, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 83-723 (decision after reconsideration; Division has jurisdiction to inspect private contractors at Hamilton Air Force Base).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-11J.

(n28)Footnote 28. but see Abel Lopez dba King City Labor Supply & Salinar Marketing Cooperative, Inc. (Aug. 28, 1986) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 80-1143, 80-1144, 80-1291, 80-1293 (decision after reconsideration; Division jurisdiction over employees working in or about pesticide-treated fields upheld because of failure of CDFA to exercise enforcement actively).

(n29)Footnote 29. See, e.g., Sequoia Rock Company (April 28, 1983) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 76-1083 (decision after reconsideration; Division has concurrent jurisdiction with California Highway Patrol (CHP) over hazards to employees in motor vehicles that are "places of employment"); Red's Express (Mar. 7, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket No.

81-1256 (decision after reconsideration; employer failed to show active exercise by CHP over truck regulation in Veh. Code § 34500).

(n30)Footnote 30. United Airlines, Inc. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 762, 772, 187 Cal. Rptr. 387, 654 P.2d 157 ; see also 29 U.S.C. §§ 651(b)(11), 667.

(n31)Footnote 31. United Airlines, Inc. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 762, 772-773, 187 Cal. Rptr. 387, 654 P.2d 157 .

(n32)Footnote 32. United Airlines, Inc. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 762, 778, 187 Cal. Rptr. 387, 654 P.2d 157 .

(n33)Footnote 33. Red's Express (Mar. 7, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 81-1256 (decision after reconsideration).

(n34)Footnote 34. Lee Way Motor Freight, Inc. (Jan. 17, 1986) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 82-067 (decision after reconsideration).

(n35)Footnote 35. Kaiser Steel Corporation (Mar. 5, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-1161 (decision after reconsideration).

(n36)Footnote 36. Wickes Forest Industries (Oct. 31, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-1269 (decision after reconsideration); Easyco (Oct. 26, 1984), Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 83-387, 83-388, 83-390 (decision after reconsideration).

(n37)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 6304.1(a). For definition of "employer," see [b], below. For definition of "employment," see [c], below.

(n38)Footnote 38. See Lab. Code § 6304.1(c).

(n39)Footnote 39. Lab. Code § 6304.1(b).

(n40)Footnote 40. See Lab. Code §§ 6304.2, 6304.4.

(n41)Footnote 41. Lab. Code § 2750.5. For further discussion of this statutory presumption, see ch. 20.

(n42)Footnote 42. Larry v. Thompson Co. (Feb. 10, 1975) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 74-276 (decision after reconsideration).

(n43)Footnote 43. Lou Perini Plastering (June 21, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 80-185 (decision after reconsideration).

(n44)Footnote 44. See Rosasco George (Nov. 20, 1978) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 77-814 (decision after reconsideration; no employer-employee relationship found between grandfather and grandson painting house).

(n45)Footnote 45. See Lab. Code § 6304 (incorporating definition of "employer" in Lab. Code § 3300).

(n46)Footnote 46. Optical Coating Laboratory, Inc. (Sept. 28, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 82-1093 (decision after reconsideration).

(n47)Footnote 47. Optical Coating Laboratory, Inc. (Sept. 28, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 82-1093 (decision after reconsideration).

(n48)Footnote 48. C.L. Peck Contractor (Oct. 17, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 80-844 (decision after reconsideration).

(n49)Footnote 49. See Optical Coating Laboratory, Inc. (Sept. 28, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 82-1093 (decision after reconsideration).

(n50)Footnote 50. See M.B.R. Construction, Inc. (Oct. 6, 1987) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 86-1658 (decision after reconsideration); see also Industrial Asphalt (Oct. 17, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-571 (decision after reconsideration; defense of lack of supervisorial control by general employer rejected when evidence established that it was foreseeable that the leased employee would operate a roller compactor on a grade exceeding 15% while under the direction of the employer leasing such services).

(n51)Footnote 51. Petroleum Maintenance Co. (May 1, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 81-594, 81-596, 81-597, 81-598, 81-599 (decision after reconsideration).

(n52)Footnote 52. Petroleum Maintenance Co. (May 1, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 81-594, 81-596, 81-597, 81-598, 81-599 (decision after reconsideration); see also Department of Transportation (Nov. 24, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 81-017, 81-018 (decision after reconsideration); Manpower, Inc. (Jan. 8, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-533 (decision after reconsideration); Cal-Cut Pipe & Supply Co. (Aug. 26, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 76-955 (decision after reconsideration).

(n53)Footnote 53. See Lab. Code § 6400; Cal-Cut Pipe & Supply Co. (Aug. 26, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 76-955 (decision after reconsideration).

(n54)Footnote 54. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (Mar. 31, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 76-360, 76-361 (decision after reconsideration); Superior Roofing Co. (May 29, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 76-1124-76-1126 (decision after reconsideration); J & C Construction Co. (Apr. 7, 1986) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 84-1188 (decision after reconsideration; exposure to uncovered floor opening created by another employer at construction site); Novo-Rados Constructors (Apr. 28, 1983) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 78-135-78-137, 78-265 (decision after reconsideration; properly installed guardrail removed by subcontractor, resulting in exposure of employer's employees); Diablo Valley Paving, Inc. (Feb. 26, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 80-214, 80-215 (decision after reconsideration); McCarthy & Spiessman, Inc. (Sep. 28, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 83-568 (decision after reconsideration; back-up alarm); Department of Transportation (Nov. 24, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 81-017, 81-018 (decision after reconsideration; citation for failure to report use of a carcinogen upheld when employees were exposed to asbestos caused by another employer's salvage activity at worksite).

(n55)Footnote 55. Moran Construction Co. (Jan. 28, 1975) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 74-381 (decision after reconsideration).

(n56)Footnote 55.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336.10. See also Lab. Code § 6400(b).

(n57)Footnote 55.2. Lab. Code § 2750.5.

(n58)Footnote 55.3. Cortez v. Abich (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 261, 265-266, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 830, superseded by grant of review, depublished by, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12822 (2009).

(n59)Footnote 55.4. See also Rosas v. Dishong (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 815, 822-824, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339 (homeowners were not employers for workers' compensation purposes of worker hired to trim tree branch hanging over their house, which required license; but Labor Code § 2750.5 made homeowners his employer as matter of law, because worker had not worked requisite hours required by Labor Code § 3352(h), which was intended to provide potential tort remedy to unlicensed workers not otherwise covered by workers' compensation laws). For discussion of effect of OSHA in civil personal injury litigation, see § 21.70, below.

(n60)Footnote 56. Lab. Code § 6303(b).

(n61)Footnote 57. See Lab. Code § 6303(d).

(n62)Footnote 58. Lab. Code § 6303(c).

(n63)Footnote 59. Cortez v. Abich (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 261, 267, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 830 , superseded by grant of review, depublished by, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12822 (2009).

(n64)Footnote 60. Fernandez v. Lawson (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 31, 37, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422, 71 P.3d 779 .

(n65)Footnote 61. Fernandez v. Lawson (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 31, 38, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422, 71 P.3d 779 (OSHA did not apply to tree trimming work for which homeowner hired unlicensed worker); Cortez v. Abich (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 261, 267-269, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 830 , superseded by grant of review, depublished by, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12822 (2009) (OSHA did not apply to homeowners who hired unlicensed contractor to do home remodel).

(n66)Footnote 62. Cortez v. Abich (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 261, 267, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 830 , superseded by grant of review, depublished by, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12822 (2009).

(n67)Footnote 63. See Rosas v. Dishong (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 815, 826, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339 .

42 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part A. OVERVIEW

2-21 California Employment Law §§ 21.04 through 21.09

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 21.04[Reserved]

43 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.10

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.10 General Duties Regarding Employee Safety and Health

Under the California Occupational Safety and Health Act, the employer has the primary responsibility for worker safety in California.ⁿ¹ The Act provides generally that every employer in California must furnish employment and a place of employment that are safe and healthful for employees at that place of employment.ⁿ² Furthermore, no employer may require or permit any employee to go or be in any employment or place of employment that is not safe and healthful.ⁿ³

Employers are further prohibited from occupying or maintaining any place of employment that is not safe and healthful.ⁿ⁴ The Act also provides that no employer, owner, or lessee of any real property shall construct or cause to be constructed any place of employment that is not safe and healthful.ⁿ⁵

The terms "safe," "safety," and "health," as used in the California Occupational Safety and Health Act, mean "such freedom from danger to the life, safety, or health of employees as the nature of the employment reasonably permits."ⁿ⁶

The employer's duty under the Act to provide employment and a place of employment that is safe and healthful is a non-delegable duty.ⁿ⁷ Thus, an employer's reliance on a union to train dispatched employees is no defense to a citation for a safety violation under the Act.ⁿ⁸

The Act also imposes a duty on both employers and employees to comply with occupational safety and health standards, with Health and Safety Code Section 25910, and with all rules, regulations, and order pursuant to Division 5 of the Labor Code that are applicable to his or her own actions and conduct.ⁿ⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Bendix Forest Products Corp. v. Division of Occupational Saf. & Health (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 465, 470-471, 158 Cal. Rptr. 882, 600 P.2d 1339 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6400.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6402.

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6404.

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6405.

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 6306(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. Guy F. Atkinson Co. (Mar. 31, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 76-360, 76-361 (decision after reconsideration).

(n8)Footnote 8. Crescent Wharf and Warehouse Co. (Dec. 13, 1978) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 78-602, 78-603 (decision after reconsideration).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 6407.

44 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.11

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.11 Duty to Furnish Safety Procedures, Safety Equipment, and Protective Devices

The employer has a duty to furnish necessary safety devices, safeguards, and safe work procedures. Specifically, the Act provides that "[e]very employer shall furnish and use safety devices and safeguards, and shall adopt and use practices, means, methods, operations, and processes which are reasonably adequate to render such employment and place of employment safe and healthful. Every employer shall do every other thing reasonably necessary to protect the life, safety, and health of employees."¹ The Act provides that "safety device" and "safeguard" shall be given "broad interpretation so as to include any practicable method of mitigating or preventing a specific danger, including the danger of exposure to potentially injurious levels of ionizing radiation or potentially injurious quantities of radioactive materials."²

The duty to "furnish" safety devices³ means the employer must provide necessary safety devices and equipment at the employer's expense.⁴ Although the question of whether employees may waive or trade the right to have the employer provide and pay for necessary personal protective safety equipment has been raised by employers in several cases, neither the California Supreme Court nor the OSHAB has decided the issue.⁵

When specific types of personal protective equipment is required, such equipment must be the proper type for the nature of the employee exposure and of such design, strength, and quality as to eliminate, preclude, or mitigate the hazard, and must meet standards that are at least equivalent to the standards recommended by the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) or other standards acceptable to the Division.⁶ The employer also is responsible for assuring that each employee is properly trained and uses such equipment in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions.⁷

Specific types of personal protective equipment required, depending on the nature of the work involved, include head protection,⁸ eye and face protection,⁹ body protection,¹⁰ hand protection,¹¹ foot protection,¹² respirators,¹³ and safety belts and lanyards.¹⁴

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The duty to furnish safety devices frequently enmeshes employers in the related issue of employee refusal to use or wear mandated equipment. For example, an employer having a duty to provide face masks to those who perform certain job duties may encounter an employee whose facial hair prevents a proper seal around the perimeter of the mask. While such an employer legally has the right to require that the employee trim his facial hair or be subject to transfer or termination, the analysis is seldom so simple. If there are other workers in the same job classification, the employer must be careful that its lawful exercise of its right to require the use of safety devices is not mistaken for (1) alleged unlawful race discrimination (e.g., because close cropping of facial hair can cause pseudofolliculitis in black men, a requirement that they shave closely in order to wear a respirator may raise issues of disparate impact under equal employment laws);ⁿ¹⁵ or (2) retaliation for earlier protected conduct by the employee, such as union activity, whistleblowing, or filing a worker's compensation claim.ⁿ¹⁶ In short, employers must carefully analyze all of the circumstances surrounding a refusal or inability to properly wear safety devices before concluding that the employee is subject to discipline. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

A primary employer that leases employees to secondary employers is responsible for establishing, implementing and maintaining an effective injury prevention program for employees leased to a secondary employer.ⁿ¹⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Administrative Proceedings General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Duties & Rights Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6401; see Lab. Code § 6403.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6306(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 6401.

(n4)Footnote 4. Bendix Forest Products Corp. v. Division of Occupational Saf. & Health (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 465, 473, 158 Cal. Rptr. 882, 600 P.2d 1339 (upholding special order requiring employer to pay for and provide gloves or mittens to workers removing lumber from drag chain; see also Oakland Police Officers Association v. City of Oakland (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 96, 100-101, 106 Cal. Rptr. 134 (service revolvers held to be a safety device under Lab. Code § 6401, which city must provide at no cost to city police officers); Southern California Edison (Aug. 26, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 81-663 (decision after reconsideration; requiring employer to provide and pay for hand protection as required by order to take special action, and rejecting employer's contention that union waived employees' rights by withdrawing proposal requiring employer to pay for gloves from collective bargaining demands).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Bendix Forest Products Corp. v. Division of Occupational Saf. & Health (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 465, 472 n.7, 158 Cal. Rptr. 882, 600 P.2d 1339 ; Southern California Edison (Aug. 26, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 81-663 (decision after reconsideration).

(n6)Footnote 6. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3380(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3380(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3381.

(n9)Footnote 9. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3382.

(n10)Footnote 10. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3383.

(n11)Footnote 11. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3384.

(n12)Footnote 12. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3385.

(n13)Footnote 13. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144.

(n14)Footnote 14. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1669, 1670, 3388; see also Lusardi Construction Co. v. California Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 639, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 297 (8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1710, prescribing tie-off requirements for skeleton steel structures, rather than 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1670, prescribing requirements for work that exposes employees to falling in excess of certain distance, is more specific safety order governing carpenter's 24-foot fall from skeleton steel structure while setting wooden trusses).

(n15)Footnote 15. See generally discussion in ch. 41.

(n16)Footnote 16. See generally discussion in chs. 20, 41, 60.

(n17)Footnote 17. Sully-Miller Contracting Co. v. California Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 684, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 742. See also In re Optical Coating Laboratory, Inc., OSHA App. Bd., Sept. 28, 1984, No. 82-R1D5-1093; In re Petroleum Maintenance Company, OSHA App. Bd., May 1, 1985, No. 81-R4D1-594-599; In re Manpower, OSHA App. Bd., May 14, 2001, No. 98-R4D5-4158. For discussion of injury and illness prevention programs, see § 21.12, below.

45 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.12

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.12 Duty to Implement and Maintain Injury and Illness Prevention Program

[1] General Requirements

Every employer is required to establish, implement, and maintain an effective injury and illness prevention program.ⁿ¹ⁿ² The program must be written and include at least the following elements:ⁿ³

1. Identification of the person or persons responsible for implementing the employer's program;
2. A system for identifying and evaluating workplace hazards, including scheduled periodic inspections to identify unsafe conditions and work practices;ⁿ⁴
3. Methods and procedures for correcting unsafe or unhealthy conditions and work practices in a timely manner;ⁿ⁵
4. An occupational safety and health training program designed to instruct employees in general safe and healthy work practices and to provide specific instruction on hazards specific to each employee's job assignment;ⁿ⁶
5. A system for communicating with employees about occupational health and safety matters, including provisions that encourage employees to report hazards without fear of reprisal; and
6. A system for ensuring that employees comply with safe and healthy work practices, which may include disciplinary action.

The employer's injury and illness prevention program must cover all of the employer's employees and all other workers who the employer controls or directs and directly supervises on the job to the extent that these workers are exposed to worksite and job assignment specific hazards.ⁿ⁷ The program must include training applicable to the work for which an employee is leased to a secondary employer, and to the monitoring of the secondary employer to ensure that the safety program is implemented.^{n7.1} The primary employer is also required to instruct its employees to refuse to operate machinery for the secondary employer that does not have required safety equipment.^{n7.2} This provision does not affect the obligations of a contractor or other employer that controls or directs and directly supervises its own employees on the job.ⁿ⁸ If a contractor supplies its employee to a state agency employer on a temporary basis, the state agency may assess a fee on the contractor to reimburse the state agency for the additional costs, if any, of including the contract employee in the state agency's injury prevention program.ⁿ⁹

Pursuant to statutory mandate,ⁿ¹⁰ the Standards Board has adopted regulations setting forth the employer's duties regarding injury prevention programs.ⁿ¹¹ In so doing, the Standards Board amended existing safety orders governing effective injury and illness prevention programs in the various industry groups in Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations to make the provisions of Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3203, a benchmark. Whereas previously there were slight variations in requirements for safety training programs among the various industry groups,ⁿ¹² the specific industry orders now all require compliance with Section 3203 as well as imposing additional requirements specific to a given industry. If an industry work group found in Title 8 has no specific safety order addressing employee safety and training, the requirements of Section 3203 in the General Industry Safety Orders will apply.

Under legislation effective January 1, 1994, certain employers with fewer than 20 employees are not subject to the full recordkeeping requirements.^{n12.1} For discussion of these exemptions, see [5], below.

[1A] Workplace Security Component

On August 15, 1994, the Division of Occupational Safety and Health (DOSH) issued a document entitled Cal/OSHA Guidelines for Workplace Security. On September 4, 1994, the DOSH issued a Model Injury and Illness Prevention Program for Workplace Security, which was supplemented in March 1995. Together, these documents identify the types of workplace security measures that the DOSH will expect employers to undertake, but leave a number of questions open.

With respect to the Guidelines for Workplace Security, the DOSH has classified violent and potentially violent conduct into three types of "violence events." In the first type of violence events, the perpetrator has no legitimate relationship to the workplace and usually enters the workplace to commit a robbery or other violent act. In the second type of violence events, the perpetrator is either a recipient or the object of a service provided by the affected workplace. For example, the perpetrator may be a current or former client, patient, customer, passenger, criminal suspect, or prisoner. In the third type of violence events, the perpetrator has an employment-related involvement with the workplace. For example, the perpetrator could be a current or former employee, a current or former spouse of an employee, or some other person having a dispute with an employee.

The Guidelines further specify that employers must develop a workplace security component to their injury and illness prevention programs that includes the following elements:

- (1) A system for ensuring that employees comply with safe and healthy work practices;
- (2) A system for communicating with employees about workplace security hazards;
- (3) Procedures for identifying workplace security hazards;
- (4) Procedures for investigating injury or illness resulting from workplace violence;
- (5) Practices for correcting unsafe conditions; and

(6) Training and instruction on how to recognize workplace security hazards.

The Guidelines also provide information regarding the recording and reporting of workplace violence, the investigation by the DOSH of complaints about workplace security hazards, and the investigation by DOSH of workplace assaults involving death or serious injury.

The Model Injury and Illness Prevention Program for Workplace Security (Model IIPP) is intended to serve as a template for all employers and all categories of workplace violence events. Because of the wide variation in the types of employers and the categories of workplace violence, however, the Model IIPP may not be adequate for a particular employer "as is," and the DOSH so acknowledges by stating that the model "may not match your establishment's exact needs."^{12.2}

The March 1995 addition to the Model IIPP provides a list of factors that have been shown to contribute to the risk of violence at work. These factors are:

1. Exchange of money on the premises;
2. Employees working alone at night or in the early morning;
3. Availability of valued items such as money and jewelry on the premises;
4. Employment that involves guarding money or valuable property or possessions;
5. Employment which consists of performing public safety functions;
6. Employment which involves working with patients, clients, customers or students known or suspected to have a history of violence;
7. Employees who have a history of assaults or who exhibit belligerent, intimidating or threatening behavior to others.

This document further identifies occupations or workplaces at particular risk to the three major types of violence, but reminds employers that they may be subject to any of the three types of violence.^{12.3}

For discussion of the availability of injunctive relief to prevent workplace violence, see § 21.71.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Despite the desire of Cal/OSHA to assist employers with regard to workplace security issues, a number of questions remain. For example, the Guidelines do not contain criteria for determining whether a particular employer is governed by the rules for Category I, II, or III violence events or the rules for more than one of these categories. Furthermore, the Guidelines encourage, but do not require, employers to report to Cal/OSHA the occurrence of injuries, illnesses, and deaths caused by Penal Code violations. Whether an employer should do so involves difficult judgments that will depend upon the circumstances of each case. In addition, the Model IIPP arguably could be construed as reciting contractual obligations of the employer. Therefore, it is incumbent upon each employer to carefully scrutinize the workplace security components of its own injury and illness prevention plan to make sure that representations in the plan are consistent with (1) the Guidelines; (2) the obligation to develop a workplace security program; and (3) the precise nature of the employer's business. Finally, while the Guidelines and Model IIPP leave many implementation issues to the employer's discretion, employers should be mindful that Cal/OSHA investigators likely will start their analyses of compliance matters with reference to the Guidelines and Model IIPP as written. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox

[2] Grandfather Provision

An employer with a written injury and illness program in place on July 1, 1991, that complies with the pre-January 1, 1991 requirements of Section 3203, is exempt from certain requirements of the amended Section 3203, as discussed more fully below.ⁿ¹³

Prior to its amendment in 1991, Section 3203 required an employer to inaugurate and maintain an "accident prevention program," which included, but was not limited to, a training program that instructed employees on general safe work practices and included specific instructions on hazards unique to each employee's job assignmentⁿ¹⁴ and a practice of conducting scheduled periodic self inspections to identify and correct unsafe conditions and work practices.ⁿ¹⁵

[3] Substantial Compliance

As allowed under Labor Code Section 6401.7,ⁿ¹⁶ the Standards Board's regulation provides for criteria under which an employer may be found in "substantial compliance" with specific portions of its requirements regarding injury prevention programs. For example, as further discussed in [4], below, an employer who elects to use a labor/management health and safety committee as a method for communicating to employees about occupational safety and health matters will be deemed to be in substantial compliance with Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3203(a)(3) (requiring a system for communicating with affected employees about safety and health matters) if the committee meets specified requirements.ⁿ¹⁷ The regulation also suggests other methods of substantial compliance with the communication system requirement.ⁿ¹⁸ In addition, the regulation suggests methods of substantial compliance with the requirement that employers establish a system to ensure employee compliance with safe and healthy work practices.ⁿ¹⁹

[4] Readily Understandable Communication System

The employer injury and illness prevention program must include a system for communicating with employees "in a form readily understandable by all affected employees" on matters relating to occupational safety and health.ⁿ²⁰ Such a communications system must include methods for encouraging employees to inform the employer of worksite hazards "without fear of reprisal."ⁿ²¹ Employers having fewer than ten employees are permitted to comply by orally communicating with and instructing employees on general safe work practices and hazards unique to employees' job assignments.ⁿ²² Substantial compliance by other employers with the communication requirement may be achieved by a combination of alternatives, including meetings, training programs, posting written communications, an anonymous worksite hazard notification system, and labor/management safety and health committees.ⁿ²³

A labor/management safety and health committee will constitute substantial compliance with the communication system requirement in Labor Code Section 6401.7(a)(5) and Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3203(a)(3), if the committee (1) meets regularly, but not less than quarterly; (2) prepares and makes available to affected employees and to the Division, on request, written records of safety and health issues discussed by the committee; (3) reviews results of the periodic scheduled worksite inspections; (4) reviews accident investigations, reports of occupational injury, illness, and hazardous substance exposure incidents, and, where appropriate, submits suggestions to management for prevention of future incidents; (5) reviews investigations of hazardous conditions brought to any committee member's attention and, if necessary, conducts its own inspection and investigation to assist in remedial solutions; (6) makes recommendations to assist in evaluating employee safety suggestions; and (7) when requested by the Division, verifies abatement action taken by an employer in response to a citation.ⁿ²⁴ The safety committee's meeting records must be maintained for at least one year.^{n24.1}

No employee or employee organization shall be liable for any act or omission in connection with a health and safety committee.n25

[5] Recordkeeping Requirements

[a] General Requirements

Except for those employers not subject to the general reporting requirements (see discussion in [b], below), an employer is required to keep appropriate records of the steps taken to implement and maintain the injury and illness program.n26 At a minimum, such records must include records of scheduled periodic inspections, which identify the persons who conducted each inspection, the unsafe conditions and practices found, and the corrective action taken.n27 The employer must maintain these records for one year, except employers with fewer than ten employees may elect to maintain periodic inspection records only until the hazard found is corrected.n28

Employers must also maintain for one year documentation of the safety and health training required by Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3203(a)(7), for each employee, indicating the name or identity of the employee, training dates, types of training, and trainer's name.n29 Training records of workers employed less than one year need not be retained as long as the employer provides such records to the employee on termination of employment.n30 Employers with fewer than ten employees may substantially comply with the training documentation requirement by maintaining a log of instructions provided to the employee regarding hazards unique to that employee's job assignment when he or she is first hired or assigned new duties.n31

[b] Employers Exempt From General Recordkeeping Requirements

The recordkeeping requirements set forth in Labor Code Section 6401.7(d), discussed in [a], above, do not apply with respect to any county, city, city and county, or district, or any public or quasi-public corporation or public agency therein, including any public entity, other than a state agency, that is a member of, or created by, a joint powers agreement.n32

Under legislation effective January 1, 1994, the Board is required to adopt a lesser standard applicable to employers with fewer than 20 employees, which employers are either (1) not on a designated list of high hazard industries, and have a workers' compensation experience modification rate of 1.1 or less, or (2) on a designated list of low hazard industries.n33 This standard is to set forth the employer's duties consistent with the requirements specified in Labor Code Section 6401.7(a)-(c), except that the standard must require written documentation only to the extent of documenting the person or persons responsible for implementing the program,n34 keeping a record of periodic inspections,n35 and keeping a record of employee training.n36 Beyond these specific requirements, the standard will not require the employer to meet the recordkeeping requirements of Labor Code Section 6401.7(d).n37 The Standards Board has not yet adopted such a standard.n37.1

Beginning January 1, 1994, an employer in the construction industry who is required to be licensed under Business and Professions Code Section 7000 et seq. may use records relating to employee training provided to the employer in connection with an occupational safety and health training program approved by the division to comply with the requirements of Labor Code Section 6401.7(a), and is only required to keep records of those steps taken to implement and maintain the program with respect to hazards specific to an employee's job duties.n38

[6] Enforcement of Program

The employer's injury and illness prevention program must include a system for ensuring that employees comply with safe and healthy work practices.n39 Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3203(a)(2), suggests various combinations of education and training, positive incentives, and disciplinary procedures that may constitute substantial compliance with this requirement.n40

Failure to enforce workplace safety and health rules and regulations may preclude an employer from prevailing in the "independent employee act" defense. For discussion, see § 21.46[7].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6401.7(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1509(a), 6507, 6760(a), 8350, 8406.

(n2)Footnote 2. [Reserved]

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6401.7(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See discussion in § 21.13.

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussion in § 21.13.

(n6)Footnote 6. See discussion in § 21.14.

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 6401.7(h).

(n8)Footnote 7.1. Sully-Miller Contracting Co. v. California Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 684, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 742.

(n9)Footnote 7.2. *Sully-Miller Contracting Co. v. California Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Bd. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 684, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 742, 2006 Cal. App. LEXIS 526, 30-31 (asphalt paving contractor, as primary employer, should have instructed roller operator, as its employee leased to paving contractor that was secondary employer, to refuse to operate roller for secondary employer without operable seat belt).

(n10)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 6401.7(h).

(n11)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 6401.7(i).

(n12)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code § 6401.7(e)(1).

(n13)Footnote 11. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203.

(n14)Footnote 12. See, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1509 (construction), 6507-6509 (petroleum-drilling and production), 6760-6762 (petroleum-production and handling), 8350 (shipbuilding), 8406 (tunnels), prior to 1991 amendments.

(n15)Footnote 12.1. See Lab. Code § 6401.7(e)(2)-(4).

(n16)Footnote 12.2. Cal/OSHA has also promulgated "Guidelines for Security and Safety of Health Care and Community Service Workers" to help employers in the health care and community service industries implement an effective workplace security component in their Injury and Illness Prevention Program. This document is available from Cal/OSHA.

(n17)Footnote 12.3. See Cal/OSHA Model Injury & Illness Prevention Program for Workplace Security (March 1995).

(n18)Footnote 13. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(4)(A), (7)(A) (self inspections; employee training and instruction).

(n19)Footnote 14. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(1), prior to 1991 amendment.

(n20)Footnote 15. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3202(a)(2), prior to 1991 amendment.

(n21)Footnote 16. See Lab. Code § 6401.7(e), (f).

(n22)Footnote 17. See Lab. Code § 6401.7(f); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(c).

(n23)Footnote 18. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(3); see also discussion in [4], below.

(n24)Footnote 19. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(2) (methods of substantial compliance include recognition of employees who follow safe and healthy practices, training and retraining programs, and disciplinary actions).

(n25)Footnote 20. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(3); see Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(5).

(n26)Footnote 21. Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(5); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(3).

(n27)Footnote 22. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(3).

(n28)Footnote 23. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3202(a)(3).

(n29)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 6401.7(f); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(c).

(n30)Footnote 24.1. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3202(c)(2).

(n31)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 6401.7(g).

(n32)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 6401.7(d).

(n33)Footnote 27. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)(1).

(n34)Footnote 28. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)(1).

(n35)Footnote 29. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)(2).

(n36)Footnote 30. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)(2).

(n37)Footnote 31. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)(2).

(n38)Footnote 32. Lab. Code § 6401.7(k), 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)(2), Exception No. 3.

(n39)Footnote 33. Lab. Code § 6401.7(e)(2).

(n40)Footnote 34. See Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(1).

(n41)Footnote 35. See Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(2).

(n42)Footnote 36. See Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(4).

(n43)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 6401.7(e)(2); see also Lab. Code § 6401.7(e)(3)-(4) (requiring establishment of lists of high hazard industries and low hazard industries).

(n44)Footnote 37.1. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b)(2), Exception # 3.

(n45)Footnote 38. Lab. Code § 6401.7(d).

(n46)Footnote 39. Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(6); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(2).

(n47)Footnote 40. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(2).

46 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.13

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.13 Duty to Conduct Self-Inspections, Correct Conditions, and Investigate Injuries and Illnesses

[1] Self-Inspections and Correction of Unsafe Conditions

Every employer is required to conduct scheduled periodic work place inspections to identify and evaluate unsafe conditions and work practices,ⁿ¹ and to correct unsafe and unhealthy conditions and work practices "in a timely manner based on the severity of the hazard."ⁿ² Correction of unsafe practices detected during periodic inspections is an integral part of a safety program.ⁿ³

The scheduled periodic inspections must generally be conducted when the employer's injury and illness prevention program is first established;ⁿ⁴ whenever new substances, processes, procedures, or equipment are introduced to the workplace that represent a new occupational safety or health hazard;ⁿ⁵ and whenever the employer is made aware of a new or previously unrecognized hazard.ⁿ⁶

An employer may not shift the burden of inspecting the work place to an insurer.ⁿ⁷

Correction of unsafe or unhealthy conditions, work practices, and work procedures must be made in a "timely manner based on the severity of the hazard"ⁿ⁸ whenever such conditions, practices, or procedures are observed or discovered.ⁿ⁹ The employer's program also must have an "imminent hazard" procedure, i.e. a procedure for removing all personnel, except those necessary to correct an imminent hazard that cannot immediately be abated without endangering employees and/or property.ⁿ¹⁰ Employees assigned to remove an imminent hazard must be provided with necessary safeguards.ⁿ¹¹

[2] Investigation of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses

Whether or not the employer has a labor/management safety and health committee, the injury and illness prevention program must include a procedure for investigating occupational injury and illness at the workplace.ⁿ¹² Compliance with this requirement also may help the employer fulfill other duties and thereby avoid liability for failure to timely report occupational injuries or illnesses to the Divisionⁿ¹³ and failure to inform employees injured in the course of employment of their right to workers compensation benefits.ⁿ¹⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Administrative Proceedings General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Duties & Rights Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(2); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(4).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6401.7(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(6); see Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(3).

(n3)Footnote 3. Contadina Foods, Inc. (Dec. 8, 1976) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 86-894 (decision after reconsideration).

(n4)Footnote 4. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(4)(A). However, employers with a written injury and illness program in place on July 1, 1991, that complies with the pre-July 1, 1991 version of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203 are exempt from this requirement.

(n5)Footnote 5. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(4)(B).

(n6)Footnote 6. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(4)(C).

(n7)Footnote 7. P.E. Dolan Lumber & Hardware Co. (Dec. 30, 1977) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 77-797 (ALJ decision).

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 6401.7(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(6).

(n9)Footnote 9. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(6)(A).

(n10)Footnote 10. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(6)(B).

(n11)Footnote 11. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(6)(B).

(n12)Footnote 12. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(5); see Lab. Code § 6401.7(f).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Lab. Code § 6409.1; Penal Code § 387; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 340.2, 14001; see also discussion in § 21.18[1].

(n14)Footnote 14. See Lab. Code § 5402(a); Rick's Electric, Inc. v. California Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1034-1035, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 847; see also discussion in § 20.30[1]

47 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.14

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.14 Duty to Train Employees

The employer must train all employees in general safe and healthy work practices and must provide specific instruction on hazards specific to each employee's job assignment.ⁿ¹ Such training must be provided in all of the following situations:ⁿ²

1. An illness and injury prevention program is initiated;ⁿ³
2. A new employee is hired;
3. An employee receives a new job assignment for which training has not previously been received;
4. New substances, processes, procedures, or equipment are introduced into the workplace; and
5. The employer receives notification about a new or previously unrecognized hazard.

However, beginning January 1, 1994, an employer in the construction industry who is required to be licensed under Business and Professions Code Section 7000 et seq. may use employee training provided to the employer's employees under a construction industry occupational safety and health training program approved by the division to comply with the requirements of Labor Code Section 6401.7(a) relating to employee training, and shall only be required to provide training on hazards specific to an employee's job duties.^{n3.1}

Supervisors must be trained to familiarize themselves with the safety and health hazards to which employees under their immediate direction and control may be exposed.ⁿ⁴ In the construction industry, the employer also must hold periodic meetings of supervisory personnel to discuss safety problems and job site accidentsⁿ⁵ and "supervisory employees" must conduct "toolbox" or "tailgate" safety meetings with their work crews at least every ten working days to emphasize safety.ⁿ⁶ Training supervisors to recognize safety and health hazards in the workplace may be particularly important in light of the Corporate Criminal Liability Act, which imposes criminal penalties for employers and managers who fail to warn affected employees in writing of "serious concealed dangers," as defined, and to report such dangers to the Division, within a specified period of time.ⁿ⁷ For discussion of the Act, see § 21.67.

In addition, various safety orders include specific training requirements for specific hazards.ⁿ⁸

Prior to its amendment in 1991, Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3203, set forth requirements for accident prevention programs. Pre-1991 OSHAB decisions interpreting this section provided some guidance regarding the training elements of an effective injury prevention program. Those decisions required that the employer's safety training be in sufficient detail for the employee to understand the task to be done and the predictable hazards to be avoided,ⁿ⁹ and the hazard of not following safety procedures.ⁿ¹⁰ If necessary, training must be bilingual in order to ensure that non-English-speaking employees understand.ⁿ¹¹ The OSHAB has rejected asserted defenses that training was unnecessary because the hazard was obvious.ⁿ¹²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(4); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(7).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(7); Lab. Code § 6401.7(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion in § 21.12. Employers having a written injury and illness program in place on July 1, 1991, that complies with the pre-July 1, 1991, version of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203 are exempt. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(7)(A).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Lab. Code § 6401.7(c).

(n5)Footnote 4. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(7)(F).

(n6)Footnote 5. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1509(d).

(n7)Footnote 6. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1509(e).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Penal Code § 387.

(n9)Footnote 8. See, e.g., 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 3220(e) (workplace emergency action plan), 3221(d) (fire prevention program), 5099 (excessive noise and hearing conservation), 5144(c)(1)(H) (respiratory equipment training), 5157(g) (training prior to entry into a "confined space"), 5194(h) (hazard communication program training), 5208(j)(7) (asbestos exposure), 5190(i) (cotton dust), 5209(e)(5) (carcinogens), 5210(j) (vinyl chloride), 5211(t) (coke oven emissions), 5216(l) (lead).

(n10)Footnote 9. Machado Dusters, Inc. (Sep. 17, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 80-499 (ALJ decision).

(n11)Footnote 10. Douglas Aircraft Co. (June 21, 1979) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-1567 (ALJ decision).

(n12)Footnote 11. Office Space, Inc. (May 28, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 80-281, 80-282 (ALJ decision).

(n13)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. (June 20, 1979) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-1551 (ALJ decision).

48 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.15

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.15 Duty to Monitor for Hazardous Exposures

Whenever it is reasonable to expect that employees may be exposed to concentrations of airborne contaminants in excess of levels permitted by Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5155(c), the employer must monitor (or cause to have monitored) the work environment so that exposures to employees can be measured or calculated.ⁿ¹ If exposures to airborne contaminants are found or are expected to exceed allowable levels, the employer must institute measures to control such exposures, including engineering controls (including proper exhaust ventilation systems),ⁿ² administrative controls (such as work process and job assignment procedures that limit or eliminate exposure),ⁿ³ and a respirator protection program as described in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5144.ⁿ⁴

Similarly, an employer must monitor conditions to limit or prevent employee exposure to confined spaces,ⁿ⁵ noise,ⁿ⁶ cotton dust,ⁿ⁷ asbestos,ⁿ⁸ vinyl chloride,ⁿ⁹ lead,ⁿ¹⁰ and coke oven emissions.ⁿ¹¹ Safety orders relating to other specific hazards may contain specific measurement or monitoring requirements.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsCitations & InspectionsLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(e)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5142, 5143.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5140, 5141(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(e)(2); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5141.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5158(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5097(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5190(d).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5208(d).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5210(d).

(n10)Footnote 10. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5216(d).

(n11)Footnote 11. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5211(e).

49 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.16

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.16 Duties Regarding Employee Medical Examinations and Medical Surveillance Programs

Employers are required to provide medical examinations for affected employees at no cost to the employee if the employer uses carcinogens.ⁿ¹

When employees are exposed to certain kinds of hazards, the employer may be required to establish a medical surveillance program, which may include annual medical examinations and periodic medical follow-up, if recommended by the physician, consisting of physical examinations, blood tests, and any other laboratory test the examining physician deems necessary. Medical surveillance programs or medical examinations are required for exposures to various hazardous substances and conditions, including ethylene oxide,ⁿ² ethylene dibromide (EDB),ⁿ³ formaldehyde,ⁿ⁴ DBCP,ⁿ⁵ lead,ⁿ⁶ vinyl chloride,ⁿ⁷ coke oven emissions,ⁿ⁸ carcinogens,ⁿ⁹ asbestos,ⁿ¹⁰ cotton dust,ⁿ¹¹ airborne contaminants,ⁿ¹² and excessive noise.ⁿ¹³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 9040.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5220(i).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5219(m).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5217(l).

(n5)Footnote 5. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5212(m).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5216(j).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5210(k).

(n8)Footnote 8. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5211(s).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code § 9040; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5209(g).

(n10)Footnote 10. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5208(l).

(n11)Footnote 11. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5190(h).

(n12)Footnote 12. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(f).

(n13)Footnote 13. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5097(c).

50 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.17

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.17 Duty to Inform Employees

[1] Information Concerning Exposure to Hazardous Substances

[a] Notification Requirements

Whenever any employee has been or is being exposed to toxic materials or harmful physical agents in concentrations or at levels exceeding prescribed applicable standards, the employer must promptly notify the employee in writing of the fact that the employee has been exposed and of the corrective action being taken by the employer.ⁿ¹ The employer also must furnish any employee exposed to a hazardous substance with the information contained in the Material Safety Data Sheet (MSDS)ⁿ² for the substance, or with equivalent information, either in a written form or through training programs.ⁿ³ Employees must be informed of their rights to obtain MSDS information as provided by the Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act.ⁿ⁴ For discussion of MSDS's and other provisions of the Act, see § 21.02[2][d].

The employer must inform every newly hired employee and every employee exposed to any toxic substance or harmful physical agent, at least annually, about the procedures for obtaining access to employee exposure and medical records within the employer's possession or control.ⁿ⁵ Access must be provided to all employee exposure and medical records, and analyses of such data, for employees exposed to toxic substances or harmful physical agents, whether or not the records are related to a particular occupational safety or health standard. Such records must be provided whether made or maintained in-house or on a contract (fee-for-service) basis.ⁿ⁶

The request for access may be made by an "employee," including any current or former employee, the legal representative of any deceased or legally incapacitated employee, any employee being transferred to work where there will be exposure, or the designated representative of any employee, including any individual or organization to whom the employee has given written authorization to exercise the right of access. Recognized or certified collective bargaining agents are deemed designated representatives, but must have the employee's prior written consent for access to an employee's medical records.ⁿ⁷

Access is defined as the "right and opportunity to examine and copy."ⁿ⁸ Access must be provided in a reasonable time, place, and manner, but in no event later than 15 days after the request unless, after proper notice to the requestor and the Division, an extension of time is granted for good cause by the Chief of the Division.ⁿ⁹ If a copy of a record is requested, the employer must either (1) provide a copy without cost, (2) provide access to photocopying equipment without cost, or (3) loan the record to the requestor for a reasonable time to enable a copy to be made.ⁿ¹⁰ After a copy of a given record has been provided to the employee without cost, the employer may charge a reasonable, non-discriminatory administrative cost, including search and copying expenses but excluding any overhead expenses, for additional copies of the same record.ⁿ¹¹

Relevant employee exposure records that must be provided include (1) records of the requesting employee's past or present exposure to toxic substances or harmful physical agents, (2) in the absence of such directly relevant records, exposure records of other employees with past or present job duties or working conditions related to or similar to those of the employee, and (3) exposure records pertaining to workplaces or working conditions to which the employee is being assigned or transferred.ⁿ¹² The categories of exposure records include environmental (workplace) monitoring or measuring data, biological monitoring data, material safety data sheets, and, in the absence of those records, any other record that would reveal the identity (chemical, common, or trade name) of a toxic substance or harmful physical agent.ⁿ¹³ Specified limitations may be observed while providing access to employee medical recordsⁿ¹⁴ and analyses using employee exposure or medical records.ⁿ¹⁵

[b] Protection of Trade Secrets From Disclosure

[i] Disclosure to Employees, Employee Representatives, or Health Professionals

When a health professional, employee, or designated employee representative requests employee exposure or medical records pursuant to of Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3204, the employer may delete from the records any trade secret data that discloses manufacturing processes or discloses the percentage of a chemical substance in a mixture, as long as the health professional, employee, or designated representative is notified that such information has been deleted.ⁿ¹⁶ Whenever the deletion of trade secret information substantially impairs evaluation of the place where or the time when employee exposure to a toxic substance or harmful physical agent occurred, the employer must provide alternative information that is sufficient to permit the requesting party to identify where and when the exposure occurred.ⁿ¹⁷

The employer may withhold the specific chemical identity, including the chemical name and other specific identification of a toxic substance, from a record subject to disclosure, provided that (1) evidence is included to support the employer's claim that the withheld information is a trade secret; (2) all other available information of the properties and effects of the toxic substance is disclosed; (3) the employer informs the requesting party that the specific chemical identity is being withheld as a trade secret; and (4) the specific chemical identity is made available to health professionals, employees, and designated representatives whenever otherwise required by Section 3204 (e.g., in the case of a medical emergency or sufficient need for disclosure is shown, as discussed below).ⁿ¹⁸

If a treating physician or nurse determines that a medical emergency exists and that the specific chemical identity of a toxic substance is necessary for emergency or first-aid treatment, the employer must immediately disclose the specific chemical identity of a trade secret chemical to the treating physician or nurse, regardless of the existence of any written statement of need or any confidentiality agreement.ⁿ¹⁹ The employer, however, may later require a written statement of need and a confidentiality agreement, as described below, as soon as circumstances permit.ⁿ²⁰

In nonemergency situations, an employer must disclose the identity of a specific chemical substance that may otherwise be withheld as a trade secret to a health professional, employee, or designated employee representative, on request if the request meets the following requirements:ⁿ²¹

1. The request is in writing;
2. The request describes with reasonable detail one or more of the following occupational health needs for the information:
 - a. To assess the hazards of the chemicals to which employees will be exposed;
 - b. To conduct or assess sampling of the workplace atmosphere to determine employee exposure levels;
 - c. To conduct pre-assignment or periodic medical surveillance of exposed employees;
 - d. To provide medical treatment to exposed employees;
 - e. To select or assess appropriate personal protective equipment for exposed employees;
 - f. To design or assess engineering controls or other protective measures for exposed employees; or
 - g. To conduct studies to determine the health effects of exposure;ⁿ²²
3. The request explains in detail why the disclosure of the specific chemical identity is essential and why the disclosure of the following information, in lieu of disclosure of the chemical identity, would not enable the health professional, employee, or designated representative to provide the occupational health services described in Paragraph 2, above:
 - a. The properties and effects of the chemical;
 - b. Measures for controlling worker's exposure to the chemical;
 - c. Methods of monitoring and analyzing worker's exposure to the chemical; and
 - d. Methods of diagnosing and treating harmful exposures to the chemical.
4. The request includes a description of procedures to be used to maintain the confidentiality of any disclosed information; and
5. The health professional, employee, or designated representative agree in a written confidentiality agreementⁿ²³ that the health professional, employee, or designated representative will not use the trade secret information for any purpose other than the health needs asserted and will agree not to release the information under any circumstances other than to the Division, as provided by Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3204(f)(9), except as otherwise authorized by the terms of the agreement or by the employer.

Whenever a health professional, employee, or designated employee representative who has received trade secret information decides that there is a need to disclose such information to the Division, the employer who provided the information must be informed by the health professional, employee, or designated representative prior to or at the same time that the disclosure is made to the Division.ⁿ²⁴

If the employer denies the written request for disclosure of a specific chemical identity, the employer's denial must be in writing and must be provided to the requesting health professional, employee, or designated representative within 30 days after the request.ⁿ²⁵ The denial must include evidence to support the employer's claim that the specific chemical identity is a trade secret, state the specific reasons why the request is being denied, and explain in detail how alternative information may satisfy the specific medical or occupational need without revealing the specific chemical identity.ⁿ²⁶

On the employer's denial, the requesting health professional, employee, or designated representative may refer the request and the employer's written denial of the request to the Division for consideration.ⁿ²⁷ On receipt of such a referral, the Division must consider the evidence and determine whether (1) the employer has supported the claim that the specific chemical identity is a trade secret, (2) the requesting party has supported the claim that there is a medical or occupational health need for the information, and (3) the requesting party has demonstrated adequate means to protect the confidentiality of the chemical identity.ⁿ²⁸ The Division may issue a citation to the employer for failing to disclose the chemical identity if the Division determines that the specific chemical identity requested in a nonemergency situation is not a bona fide trade secret, or that it is a trade secret but that the requesting party has a legitimate medical or occupational need for the information and has executed a written confidentiality agreement with adequate means for complying with the agreement.ⁿ²⁹

The Chief of the Division may issue an order or impose additional limitations or conditions governing disclosure of the requested chemical information in order to assure that the occupational health needs are met without undue risk of harm to the employer, if the employer demonstrates to the Division that the execution of the confidentiality agreement would not provide sufficient protection against the potential harm from unauthorized disclosure of a specific chemical identity trade secret.ⁿ³⁰

[ii] Disclosure to Division

The employer must disclose to the Division any information that Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3204, requires the employer make available, notwithstanding the employer's claim of a trade secret.ⁿ³¹ Any claim of trade secret must be made no later than the time information is provided to the Division in order that the Division may make its determination regarding the trade secret status of the substance and implement any necessary protections.ⁿ³²

Nothing in Section 3204 requires the employer to disclose the process or "percentage of mixture" information that constitutes a trade secret.ⁿ³³

[2] Other Notification Requirements

The employer is also required to post (1) general information regarding employee protections and obligations under the California Occupational Safety and Health Act;ⁿ³⁴ and (2) employer citations.ⁿ³⁵

Employers are required to provide information regarding the employee's right to personally observe, or have a representative observe, monitoring or measuring of employee exposure to hazardous substances.ⁿ³⁶ The employer must notify employees of the time, date, and place of monitoring prior to its commencement, whenever such employee exposure testing is required.ⁿ³⁷

In addition to the above provisions, the California Corporate Criminal Liability Act provides criminal penalties for corporate employers and their managers who fail to warn affected employees in writing within a specified period of time of any "serious concealed danger," as defined in the Act, that may exist in the workplace.ⁿ³⁸ For discussion of the Act, see § 21.67.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6408(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340.2.

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in § 21.02[2][d].

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6398(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194.

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6398(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194.

(n5)Footnote 5. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(g); see Lab. Code § 6408(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(b)(1)-(3).

(n7)Footnote 7. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(c)(3), (4).

(n8)Footnote 8. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(c)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(e)(1)(A).

(n10)Footnote 10. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(e)(1)(C).

(n11)Footnote 11. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(e)(1)(E).

(n12)Footnote 12. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(e)(2)(A).

(n13)Footnote 13. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(c)(5).

(n14)Footnote 14. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(e)(2)(B).

(n15)Footnote 15. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(e)(2)(C).

(n16)Footnote 16. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(1). A "trade secret," in this context, means any confidential formula, pattern, process, device, or information (or compilation of information) that is used in an employer's business and that gives the employer an opportunity to obtain an advantage over competitors who do not know or use it. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(c)(14).

(n17)Footnote 17. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(1).

(n18)Footnote 18. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(2).

(n19)Footnote 19. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(3).

(n20)Footnote 20. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(3).

(n21)Footnote 21. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(4).

(n22)Footnote 22. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(4)(B).

(n23)Footnote 23. Such confidentiality agreements may restrict the use of information to the health purposes listed in the written statement of need and provide for legal remedies for breach of the agreement, including a stipulation for a reasonable "pre-estimate of likely damages." Such agreements may not, however, include any requirement for posting of a penalty bond. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(5). Nothing in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204 precludes either the requesting party or the employer from pursuing any noncontractual remedies allowed by law. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(6).

(n24)Footnote 24. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(7).

(n25)Footnote 25. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(8)(A), (B).

(n26)Footnote 26. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(8)(C)-(E).

(n27)Footnote 27. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(9).

(n28)Footnote 28. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(10).

(n29)Footnote 29. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(11)(A).

(n30)Footnote 30. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(11)(B).

(n31)Footnote 31. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(12).

(n32)Footnote 32. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(12).

(n33)Footnote 33. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(f)(13).

(n34)Footnote 34. See Lab. Code § 6408(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340 (posting of Cal/OSHA notice).

(n35)Footnote 35. Lab. Code § 6408(b); see discussion in §§ 21.22, 21.42[1][b].

(n36)Footnote 36. Lab. Code § 6408(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340.1; see discussion in § 21.33[2].

(n37)Footnote 37. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340.1.

(n38)Footnote 38. See Penal Code § 387.

51 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.18

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.18 Employers' Reporting Duties

[1] Employer Reports to Division of Occupational Safety and Health

Whenever an employee sustains any serious injury or illness or death at a place of employment or in connection with any employment, the employer must report the incident immediately by telephone or telegraph to the nearest office of the Division.ⁿ¹ The report must be made whether or not employment caused the injury, illness, or death. Immediately means as soon as practicable, and no longer than 8 hours, after the employer would have known of the injury, illness, or death through diligent inquiry.ⁿ² If the employer can demonstrate that exigent circumstances exist, this time frame may be extended up to, but not beyond, 24 hours.ⁿ³ Serious injury or illness is defined as any injury or illness occurring in a place of employment or in connection with any employment that requires in-patient hospitalization in excess of 24 hours for other than medical observation or in which an employee suffers the loss of any member of the body or any serious degree of permanent disfigurement. The definition excludes any injury or illness or death caused by the commission of a Penal Code violation (except violation of Penal Code Section 385, concerning unlawful work near high voltage equipment) or an accident on a public street or highway.ⁿ⁴ The information to be reported is set forth in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 342.

Any state, county, or local fire or police agency called to an accident involving an employee who sustained a serious injury or illness or who died must notify the nearest Division office by telephone immediately.ⁿ⁵ Thereafter, the Division must immediately notify the appropriate prosecuting authority of the accident.ⁿ⁶

In addition to the above provisions, the California Corporate Criminal Liability Act provides criminal penalties for corporate employers and their managers who fail to inform the Division in writing within a specified period of time of any "serious concealed danger," as defined in the Act, that may exist in the workplace.ⁿ⁷ For discussion of the Act, see § 21.67.

[2] Employer Reports to Division of Labor Statistics and Research

Every employer must file a written report of every employee occupational injury or illness that results in lost time beyond the date of the injury or illness or that requires medical treatment beyond first aid.ⁿ⁸ For this purpose, "occupational illness" is defined as any abnormal condition or disorder caused by exposure to environmental factors associated with employment, including acute and chronic illnesses or diseases that may be caused by inhalation, absorption, ingestion, or direct contact.ⁿ⁹ Lost time means absence from work for a full day or shift beyond the date of the injury or illness.ⁿ¹⁰ Reportable injuries and illnesses include those which arose, or are alleged to have arisen out of and in the course of employment.ⁿ¹¹ Treatment administered for pesticide poisoning or a condition suspected as pesticide poisoning shall in no case be deemed to be first aid treatment for purposes of the notice requirement.ⁿ¹²

The report must be made within five days after the employer obtains knowledge of the injury or illness.ⁿ¹³ If the employer is insured for workers' compensation, the report must be filed with the employer's insurer within the five-day period,ⁿ¹⁴ and the insurer must forward the report to DLSR immediately on receipt.ⁿ¹⁵ Self-insured employers, the state of California, or the insurers of insured employers must file the report with the DLSR directly within the five-day limit.ⁿ¹⁶ The report must be made on DLSR form 5020 or by means of approved compatible computer media.ⁿ¹⁷

The employer report to the DLSR is not subject to public inspection and may not be made public.ⁿ¹⁸ The report is not admissible as evidence in any adversary proceeding before the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board.ⁿ¹⁹

Reporting requirements for injuries and illnesses sustained by state prisoners are governed by Labor Code Sections 6413 through 6413.2.ⁿ²⁰

[3] Doctor's First Report

Every physician who attends an injured employee must file a complete report of every occupational injury or illness with the employer, or if the employer is insured, with the employer's insurer, within five days of the physician's initial examination. The employer or insurer must then file the completed report with DLSR within five days of receipt of the doctor's report.ⁿ²¹ If any treatment, including first aid, is given for pesticide or suspected pesticide poisoning, the physician must also file the report directly with DLSR within five days after initial treatment.ⁿ²² The physician's report required to be filed with the DLSR in cases involving suspected pesticide poisoning need not include the affidavit otherwise required, and the report must also be filed with the local health officer within 24 hours of the initial examination, by facsimile transmission or other means. If the treatment is for pesticide poisoning or suspected pesticide poisoning, the physician will not be compensated for the initial diagnosis and treatment unless the report is filed with the employer, or if insured, with the employer's insurer, and includes or is accompanied by a signed affidavit certifying that a copy of the report was filed with the local health officer as required by this statute.ⁿ²³ If able to do so, the injured employee is required to complete a portion of the doctor's first report describing how the injury or illness occurred before it is filed with the employer, insurer, or DLSR. However, the inability or failure of the employee to complete the form will not affect the employee's rights under the Labor Code and is no excuse for any delay in filing the form.ⁿ²⁴ The report must be filed on DLSR form 5021 or by compatible approved computer media.ⁿ²⁵

For purposes of the reporting requirement, the term "physician" includes physicians or surgeons holding M.D. or D.O. degrees, psychologists, optometrists, dentists, podiatrists, and chiropractors licensed in California.ⁿ²⁶

[4] Employer's Report of Carcinogen Use

Every employer whose operations involve the use of any carcinogen, including asbestos and vinyl chloride, must file a written report with the Division regarding the use of a carcinogen or any incident resulting in the release of a potentially hazardous amount of a carcinogen into any area where employees may be exposed.ⁿ²⁷ The employer must report the planned use of asbestos or asbestos-containing products prior to commencement of any new operation or process.ⁿ²⁸ The requirements and time for reporting the use or release of other carcinogens is specified in the general order governing carcinogensⁿ²⁹ or in the order in Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations that governs the particular carcinogen in question.ⁿ³⁰

The employer must also post a copy of each such carcinogen use report in the location or locations where the carcinogen is used, which must be conspicuous to employees.ⁿ³¹

The Division must forward a copy of each employer carcinogen use report to any bargaining representative, and other representative known to the Division, of affected employees.ⁿ³²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIRemedies Under Other LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6409.1(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 342(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. 8 Cal. Code Reg § 342(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 342(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(h).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6409.2; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 342(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 6409.2.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Penal Code § 387.

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 6409.1(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14001(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code § 6409.1(a) (incorporating definition of "occupational illness" in Lab. Code § 6409(b)); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14000.

(n10)Footnote 10. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14001(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 6409.1(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 6409.3.

(n13)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 6409.1(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14001(d).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Lab. Code § 6409.1(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14002.

(n16)Footnote 16. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14001(c); see Lab. Code § 6409.1(a).

(n17)Footnote 17. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14001(b); see Lab. Code §§ 6409.1(a), 6410.

(n18)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 6412.

(n19)Footnote 19. Lab. Code § 6412.

(n20)Footnote 20. See also 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14900-14920.

(n21)Footnote 21. Lab. Code § 6409(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14003.

(n22)Footnote 22. Lab. Code § 6409(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14003(b).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Lab. Code § 6409(a).

(n24)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 6409(a).

(n25)Footnote 25. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14003(c); see Lab. Code §§ 6409(a), 6410.

(n26)Footnote 26. See Lab. Code § 6409(a) (incorporating definition of "physician" in Lab. Code § 3209.3).

(n27)Footnote 27. Lab. Code § 9030.

(n28)Footnote 28. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.6.

(n29)Footnote 29. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5203.

(n30)Footnote 30. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5200 et seq.

(n31)Footnote 31. Lab. Code § 9031.

(n32)Footnote 32. Lab. Code § 9031.

52 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.19

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.19 Recordkeeping Requirements

[1] Log of Work-Related Injuries and Illnesses (Forms 300, 300A, 301)

[i] Employers Required to Report

Effective January 1, 2002,ⁿ¹ many California employers covered by Cal/OSHAⁿ² must comply with new recordkeeping regulations for work-related fatalities, injuries and illnesses.ⁿ³ The applicability of the new regulations to any particular employer will depend upon its size and industry type, among other factors.

The partial exemption for size provides that if an employer has had ten or fewer employees at all times during the last calendar year, the employer need not keep Cal/OSHA injury and illness records unless OSHA or the BLS informs the employer in writing to keep records under the provisions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.41 or 14300.42.ⁿ⁴ Conversely, if an employer has had more than ten employees at any time during the last calendar year, the employer must keep Cal/OSHA injury and illness records unless the employer is classified as a partially exempt industry under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.2.ⁿ⁵ The partial exemption for size is based on the number of employees in the entire company.ⁿ⁶ Size is determined by the employer's peak employment during the last calendar year.ⁿ⁷

The partial exemption for industry type provides that a public or private sector employer (all of whose establishments are classified in the retail, service, finance, insurance or real estate industries listed in Table 1 in Appendix A of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq.) need not keep Cal/OSHA injury and illness records required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq. unless the government asks the employer to keep the records under 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.41 or 14300.42.ⁿ⁸ If one or more establishments are classified in a non-exempt industry, the employer must keep Cal/OSHA injury and illness records required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14301 et seq. for all such establishments except those partially exempted because of size under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.1.ⁿ⁹ The partial industry classification exemption applies to individual establishments. If a company has several establishments engaged in different classes of activities, some of the company's establishments may be required to keep records, while others may be exempt.ⁿ¹⁰ An employer with multiple establishments must keep a separate Cal/OSHA Form 300 for each establishment expected to be in operation for one year or longer.ⁿ¹¹ In California, establishments in the motion picture production and allied services are required to record injuries and illnesses, even though federal law does not require these establishments to keep such records.ⁿ¹²

Employers whose employees' occupational injuries and illnesses are required to be recorded under the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977 are not required to comply with the recordkeeping requirements of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq. to the extent compliance would duplicate the information reported, so long as an employer provides access to the records required by 30 C.F.R. § 50.20 et seq. to authorized representatives of the official California mine safety agency.ⁿ¹³

However, all employers must continue to file reports of occupational injuries and illnesses with the Division of Labor Statistics and Research, as required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14000 et seq., and to immediately report to the Division of Occupational Safety and Health any workplace incident that results in serious injury or illness, or death, as required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 342.ⁿ¹⁴

Recording a work-related injury, illness, or fatality does not mean that the employer or employee was at fault, that an employer violated a Cal/OSHA regulation, or that an employee is eligible for workers' compensation or other benefits.ⁿ¹⁵

[ii] What Must Be Recorded

Covered employers must maintain records of all fatalities, injuries, and illnesses that are:ⁿ¹⁶

- Work-related.ⁿ¹⁷
- New cases.ⁿ¹⁸
- Meet one or more of the general recording criteria of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.7 or the application to specific cases set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.8-14300.12.

An employer must consider an injury or illness to meet the general recording criteria and therefore to be recordable, if it results in any of the following:ⁿ¹⁹

- Death.
- Days away from work.
- Restricted work or transfer to another job.
- Medical treatment beyond first aid.
- Loss of consciousness.

An employer must also find a case meets the general recording criteria if it involves a significant injury or illness diagnosed by a physician or other licensed health care professional, even if it does not result in death, days away from work, restricted work or job transfer, medical treatment beyond first aid, or loss of consciousness.ⁿ²⁰ The following all have specific recording requirements:

- Needlestick and other sharps injuries.ⁿ²¹
- Cases involving medical removal under Cal/OSHA standards.ⁿ²²

- Cases involving occupational hearing loss.n23
- Work-related tuberculosis cases.n24
- Cases involving work-related musculoskeletal disorders.n25

[iii] Required Forms

An employer must use the following Cal/OSHA or equivalentn26 forms for recordable injuries and illnesses:n27

- Form 300: Log of Work-Related Injuries and Illnesses.
- Form 300A: Summary of Work-Related Injuries and Illnesses.n28
- Form 301: Injury and Illness Incident Report.

The employer may keep the records on computer if the computer can produce equivalent forms when they are needed, as described under 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.35, 14300.40.n29

Records created by an employer to comply with another government agency's injury and illness recordkeeping requirements are considered to meet OSHA's recordkeeping requirements if OSHA accepts the other agency's records under a memorandum of understanding with that agency, or if the other agency's records contain the same information as 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq. require the employer to record.n30

[iv] When Employer Must Report

An employer must enter each recordable injury or illness on Forms 300 (Rev. 4/2004) and 301 within seven calendar days of receiving information that a recordable injury or illness has occurred.n31

[v] Privacy Concerns

If an employer has a "privacy concern case," as described in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(7), the employer may not enter the employee's name on the Cal/OSHA Form 300. Instead, the employer should enter "privacy case" in the space normally used for the employee's name. This procedure serves to protect the privacy of the injured or ill employee when another employee, a former employee, or an authorized employee representative is provided access to Form 300 (under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.35(b)(2)). The employer, however, must keep a separate, confidential list of the case numbers and employee names for all privacy concern cases to update the cases and provide the information to the government if asked to do so.n32 Only the following qualify as privacy concern cases:n33

- An injury or illness to an intimate body part or the reproductive system.
- An injury or illness resulting from a sexual assault.
- Mental illness.
- HIV infection, hepatitis, or tuberculosis.
- Needlestick injuries and cuts from sharp objects that are contaminated with another person's blood or other potentially infectious material.n34

- Other illnesses if the employee independently and voluntarily requests that his or her name not be entered on the log.

This is a complete list of all injuries and illnesses considered privacy concern cases.ⁿ³⁵

If an employer has a reasonable basis for believing that information describing a privacy concern case may be personally identifiable even though the employee's name is not listed, the employer may use discretion in describing the injury or illness on both forms 300 and 301. The employer must enter enough information to identify the cause of the incident and the general severity of the injury or illness, but need not include details of an intimate or private nature. For example, a sexual assault case could be described as "injury from assault," or an injury to a reproductive organ could be described as "lower abdominal injury."ⁿ³⁶

If an employer decides to voluntarily disclose the forms to persons other than government representatives, employees, former employees or authorized representatives as required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.35, 14300.40, the employer must remove or hide the employees' names and other personally identifying information, unless the disclosure is:ⁿ³⁷

- To an auditor or consultant hired by the employer to evaluate the safety and health program;
- Necessary for processing a claim for workers' compensation or other insurance benefits; or
- To a public health authority or law enforcement agency for uses and disclosures for which consent, an authorization, or opportunity to agree or object is not required under Department of Health and Human Services Standards for Privacy of Individually Identifiable Health Information.ⁿ³⁸

[vi] Injuries or Illnesses Which Must Be Recorded

Covered employers must record on Form 300 recordable injuries and illnesses of all employees on the payroll, whether they are labor, executive, hourly, salaried, part-time, seasonal, or migrant workers. Covered employers also must record the injuries and illnesses of employees not on the payroll if they are supervised on a day-to-day basis,ⁿ³⁹ including employees from a temporary help service, employee leasing service, or personnel supply service,ⁿ⁴⁰ or a contractor's employees supervised by the employer rather than the contractor.ⁿ⁴¹ If the establishment is organized as a sole proprietorship or partnership, the owner or partners are not considered employees for recordkeeping purposes.ⁿ⁴²

[vii] Annual Requirements

At the end of each calendar year, covered employers must do each of the following:ⁿ⁴³

- Review Form 300 to verify that the entries are complete and accurate, and correct any deficiencies identified.
- Create an annual summary of injuries and illnesses recorded on Form 300 using Form 300A.ⁿ⁴⁴
- Certify the annual summary.ⁿ⁴⁵
- Post the annual summary.ⁿ⁴⁶

An employer required to keep Form 200 in 2001, was required to post a 2001 annual summary of Form 200 occupational injuries and illnesses for each establishment.ⁿ⁴⁷

Each year, OSHA or its designee sends injury and illness survey forms to employers in certain industries. Employers that receive survey forms must complete and furnish them to OSHA or OSHA's designee, as stated on the forms, even if they are otherwise exempt from the recording obligations of 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.1-14300.3.ⁿ⁴⁸

[viii] Retention

Covered employers must retain the Cal/OSHA forms for five years following the end of the calendar year to which the records pertain.ⁿ⁴⁹ Covered employers also must update Form 300 during the five-year retention period to include newly discovered recordable injuries or illnesses and to show any changes that have occurred in the classification of previously recorded injuries and illnesses.ⁿ⁵⁰

The employer must save copies of Forms 200ⁿ⁵¹ and supplementary recordsⁿ⁵² for each occupational injury or illness for five years following the year to which they relate and must continue to provide access to the data as though they were Forms 300 and 301. The employer is not required to update old 200 forms and supplementary records.ⁿ⁵³

[ix] Employees' Rights

Employees and their representatives must be involved in the recordkeeping system in the following ways:ⁿ⁵⁴

- The employer must inform each employee of how he or she is to report an injury or illness.
- The employer must provide employees limited access to injury and illness records.

An employer may not discriminate against an employee for reporting a work-related fatality, injury, or illness.ⁿ⁵⁵

[x] Variances from Recordkeeping Rule

A private employer wishing to keep records in a different manner from the manner prescribed by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq. may submit a variance petition to the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Occupational Safety and Health by showing that the employer's recordkeeping system does each of the following:ⁿ⁵⁶

- Collects the same information as required by 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq.
- Meets the purposes of the Cal/OSHA Act.ⁿ⁵⁷
- Does not interfere with the administration of the Act.

[xi] Providing Records to Government Representatives

Generally, when an authorized government representative requests the records the employer keeps under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq., the employer must provide access to the original documents within four business hours as well as, if requested, one set of copies free of charge.ⁿ⁵⁸ Government representatives authorized to receive the records are the following:ⁿ⁵⁹

- A representative of the Chief of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, or of Director of the Department of Health Services.
- A representative of the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Labor conducting an inspection or investigation under OSHA.
- A representative of the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (including the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health - NIOSH) conducting an investigation under OSHA.

An employer that receives a Survey of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses Form from the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), or a BLS designee, must promptly complete and return it following the instructions contained on the survey form, even if the employer is exempt from keeping injury and illness records under one or more of the provisions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.1-14300.3.ⁿ⁶⁰

[2] Supplementary Records

Every employer, except small employers excluded by former Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 14314, was required to maintain supplementary records for each employee occupational injury or illness that occurred at that establishment.ⁿ⁶¹ Supplementary records could consist of DLSR Form 5020 (Employer's Report of Occupational Injury or Illness) or the insurer's equivalent report or an equivalent form such as the Federal OSHA form 101 or an internal report, such as a supervisor's report containing the information required in the OSHA Form 101.ⁿ⁶²

[3] Annual Summary of Occupational Injuries and Illnesses

Under the now-repealed regulations, every employer was required to post an annual summary of occupational injuries and illnesses for each establishment, consisting of a copy of the year's totals from the Cal/OSHA Log 200. The Cal/OSHA Log 200 or Federal OSHA Form 200 must be used to present the summary. If no injuries or illnesses have occurred during the year, zeros must be entered for the totals. The annual summary must be posted in a conspicuous place or where notices to employees are customarily posted. The time for posting and certification requirements for the summary are described in of Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 14305.

OSHA adopted new recordkeeping and posting requirements effective January 1, 2002. However, an employer required to keep Form 200 in 2001, was required to post a 2001 annual summary from Form 200 of occupational injuries and illnesses for each establishment.ⁿ⁶³ For annual requirements under the regulations now in effect, see § 21.19[1][vii], above.

[4] Retention of Records

The Cal/OSHA Log 200, supplementary records, and annual summary discussed in [1]-[3], above, were required to be retained by the employer in each establishment for five years following the end of the year to which they related.ⁿ⁶⁴ OSHA has adopted new recordkeeping and retention requirements effective January 1, 2002. However, employers must save copies of Forms 200 and supplementary records for each occupational injury or illness for five years following the year to which they relate and continue to provide access to the data as though these forms were the 300 and 301 forms.ⁿ⁶⁵ Employers are not required to update old 200 forms and supplementary records.ⁿ⁶⁶

[5] Access to Records

The employer was required to provide the Cal/OSHA Log 200, supplementary records, and annual summary for inspection and copying on request to representatives of the State of California, the Secretary of Labor, and any representative of the Secretary of Health and Human Services to enable such representatives to carry out their respective statutory duties.ⁿ⁶⁷ The employer was also required to provide the Log 200 and summary of recordable occupational injuries and illnesses to any employee, former employee, and any representative of such employees for examination and copying.ⁿ⁶⁸

[6] Written Injury and Illness Prevention Program

The employer must implement and maintain a written injury and illness prevention program as described in Labor Code Section 6401.7(a). The employer is further required to keep appropriate records of the steps taken to implement and maintain the program.ⁿ⁶⁹ For further discussion of recordkeeping requirements regarding injury and illness prevention programs, see § 21.12[5].

[7] Written Hazard Communication Program

Every employer must develop and implement a written hazard communication program which, at a minimum, describes how the employer will comply with the requirements for proper hazardous substance container labelling and hazard warning signs or systems,ⁿ⁷⁰ for obtaining and maintaining material safety data sheets (MSDS's) for all hazardous substances in the workplace,ⁿ⁷¹ and for providing information to employees and conducting employee hazardous substance training.ⁿ⁷² The written program must also include a list of the hazardous substances known to be present in the workplace using an identity that is referenced on the appropriate MSDSⁿ⁷³ and a description of the methods the employer will use to inform employees of the hazards of performing non-routine tasks and of handling the hazard of substances in unlabeled pipes in the work area.ⁿ⁷⁴ The program also must describe the methods the employer will use to inform employers sharing the same work area of hazardous substances and appropriate protective measures.ⁿ⁷⁵ The written hazard communication program must be made available upon request to employees, their designated representatives, NIOSH, and the Chief of the Division within the time limits allowed under Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3204(e).ⁿ⁷⁶

[8] Retention of Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS's)

Every employer is required to keep copies of all required material safety data sheets (MSDS's) for each hazardous substance in the workplace and to ensure that MSDS's are readily accessible during each work shift to employees when they are in their work areas.ⁿ⁷⁷ Employers engaged in construction that have employees who do not primarily report to a single work establishment or who do not report to a fixed work place on a regular basis may comply by making any part of the contents of an MSDS available on request by telephone, radio, or other means in a timely and reasonably manner, and thereafter, if requested, by making the MSDS available as soon as possible.ⁿ⁷⁸

An employer must, within 7 working days of noting any missing information on an MSDS, send written inquiry to the manufacturer or importer of the hazardous substance, requesting a complete MSDS be provided.ⁿ⁷⁹ Within 15 days of receipt of a complete MSDS, the employer must notify the requestor of its availability.ⁿ⁸⁰

[9] Retention Period for Employee Exposure and Medical Records

Unless a specific occupational safety or health standard provides for a different period of time, employers must preserve and retain employee medical records for the duration of employment plus 30 years, although health claim forms and first-aid treatment forms kept separately from the medical records need not be retained.ⁿ⁸¹

Unless otherwise expressly provided, employers must preserve and retain employee exposure records for 30 years, except background data to environmental monitoring (e.g., lab reports and worksheets) may be discarded after 1 year as long as the sampling results, the collection methodology (sampling plan), a description of the analytical and mathematical methods used, and a summary of other background data relevant to interpretation of results are retained for 30 years.ⁿ⁸²

MSDS's must be retained as required by Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5194; however, where MSDS's are destroyed, the employer must keep a record for 30 years of the identity (chemical name) of the substance or agent, where it was used, and when it was used.ⁿ⁸³ Other records regarding the identity of a toxic substance of harmful physical agent need not be kept as long as some record of the identity (chemical name) of the substance or agent, where it was used, and when it was used is retained for at least 30 years.ⁿ⁸⁴

Analyses using employee exposure or medical records must be preserved and maintained for at least 30 years.ⁿ⁸⁵

Chest X-rays must be preserved in their original state, although other records may be retained in any manner that preserves the record in a retrievable state.ⁿ⁸⁶

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Administrative Proceedings General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Duties & Rights Labor & Employment Law Wage & Hour Laws Recordkeeping Requirements Workers' Compensation & SSDI Remedies Under Other Laws General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1.

Note: Effective January 1, 2002, OSHA issued a revised rule to improve the system employers use to track and record workplace injuries and illnesses. California regulations for compliance with the new requirements are the responsibility of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health on behalf of the Division of Labor Statistics and Research. Formal adoption of the new federal occupational injury and illness recordkeeping requirements was expected in mid-January 2002. However, all California employers are required to begin recording injuries and illness according to the provisions of the new federal regulation on 1 January 2002. This section presents the proposed California regulations, as of January 1, 2002, or their effective date, whichever is later. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.48.

(n2)Footnote 2. All employers covered by the California Occupational Safety and Health Act are covered by the provisions of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq. However, because of the partial exemptions provided by Sections 14300.1 and 14300.2, many employers need not keep OSHA injury and illness records unless they are asked in writing to do so by OSHA, the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), or a state agency operating under the authority of OSHA or the BLS. For example, employers with 10 or fewer employees and establishments in certain industry classifications listed in Section 14300.2, Appendix A, are partially exempt from keeping Cal/OSHA injury and illness records. Note 2 to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.

(n3)Footnote 3. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.

(n4)Footnote 4. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.1(a)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14301(a)(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14301(b)(1).

(n7)Footnote 7. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14301(b)(2).

(n8)Footnote 8. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.2(a)(1). This exemption applies only to types of establishments in the retail, service, finance, insurance or real estate industries listed in Table 1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.2(b)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.2(a)(2).

(n10)Footnote 10. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.2(b)(2). The Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) code is determined by using the Standard Industrial Classification Manual, Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget. An employer can contact the nearest office of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health for help in determining the SIC code or view the SIC Manual at www.osha.gov.

(n11)Footnote 11. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.30.

(n12)Footnote 12. Note to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.2.

(n13)Footnote 13. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.47.

(n14)Footnote 14. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300(a)(1), 14300.2(a)(1).

(n15)Footnote 15.

Note 1 to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.

(n16)Footnote 16. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.4(a).

(n17)Footnote 17. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.5. Work-relatedness is presumed for injuries and illnesses resulting from events or exposures occurring in the work environment, unless an exception in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.5(b)(2) specifically applies.

(n18)Footnote 18. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.6.

(n19)Footnote 19. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.7.

(n20)Footnote 20. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.7.

(n21)Footnote 21. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.8.

(n22)Footnote 22. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.9.

(n23)Footnote 23. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.10.

(n24)Footnote 24. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.11.

(n25)Footnote 25. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.12.

(n26)Footnote 26. An equivalent form is one that has the same information, is readable and understandable to a person not familiar with it, and is completed using the same instructions as the Cal/OSHA form it replaces. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(4). Appendices D-F to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq. provide elements for development of equivalent forms consistent with Section 14300.29(b)(4) requirements.

(n27)Footnote 27. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29. see Appendices A-C to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq. for samples of the Cal/OSHA forms.

(n28)Footnote 28. Appendix G to 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300 et seq. is a worksheet to assist in completing the Cal/OSHA Form 300A.

(n29)Footnote 29. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(5).

(n30)Footnote 30. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.3. An employer may contact the nearest office of the Division of Occupational Safety and Health for help in determining whether the records meet these requirements. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.3

(n31)Footnote 31. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(3).

(n32)Footnote 32. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(6).

(n33)Footnote 33. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(7), (8).

(n34)Footnote 34. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.8 for definitions.

(n35)Footnote 35. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(8).

(n36)Footnote 36. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(9).

(n37)Footnote 37. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.29(b)(10).

(n38)Footnote 38. 45 C.F.R. § 164.512.

(n39)Footnote 39. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.31(a).

(n40)Footnote 40. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.31(b)(2).

(n41)Footnote 41. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.31(b)(3).

(n42)Footnote 42. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.31(a).

(n43)Footnote 43. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(a).

(n44)Footnote 44. For instructions on how to complete the annual survey, see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(b)(2).

(n45)Footnote 45. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(b)(3).

(n46)Footnote 46. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.32(b)(5)-(8).

(n47)Footnote 47. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.43(a).

(n48)Footnote 48. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.41.

(n49)Footnote 49. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.33(a).

(n50)Footnote 50. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.33(b)(1).

(n51)Footnote 51. See § 21.19[1][4].

(n52)Footnote 52. See § 21.19[2].

(n53)Footnote 53. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.44.

(n54)Footnote 54. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.35(a).

(n55)Footnote 55. Lab. Code §§ 6310, 6311; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.36.

(n56)Footnote 56. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.38(a). For details of what to include in the petition and procedure for the variance request, see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.38(b).

(n57)Footnote 57. See § 21.02[1][b].

(n58)Footnote 58. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.40(a).

(n59)Footnote 59. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300(b)(1).

(n60)Footnote 60. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.42.

(n61)Footnote 61. Former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14304.

(n62)Footnote 62. Former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14304.

(n63)Footnote 63. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.43(a). For posting requirements for the 2001 summary, see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.43(b).

(n64)Footnote 64. Former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14307.

(n65)Footnote 65. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.44; for forms 300 and 301 generally, see § 21.19[1][iii]; for access requirements, see 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 14300.35, 14300.40.

(n66)Footnote 66. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14300.44.

(n67)Footnote 67. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14308(a).

(n68)Footnote 68. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14308(b).

(n69)Footnote 69. Lab. Code § 6401.7(d); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(b).

(n70)Footnote 70. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(f).

(n71)Footnote 71. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(g).

(n72)Footnote 72. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(e)(1),(h).

(n73)Footnote 73. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(e)(1)(A).

(n74)Footnote 74. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(e)(1)(B).

(n75)Footnote 75. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(e)(2).

(n76)Footnote 76. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(e)(3).

(n77)Footnote 77. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(g)(8).

(n78)Footnote 78. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(g)(8).

(n79)Footnote 79. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(g)(11)(A).

(n80)Footnote 80. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(g)(11)(C).

(n81)Footnote 81. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(d)(1)(A).

(n82)Footnote 82. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(d)(1)(B)(1).

(n83)Footnote 83. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(d)(1)(B)(2).

(n84)Footnote 84. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(d)(1)(B)(3).

(n85)Footnote 85. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(d)(1)(C).

(n86)Footnote 86. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(d)(2).

53 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.20

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.20 Duty to Refrain From Employee Retaliation or Discrimination

An employer is prohibited from retaliating or in any manner discriminating against an employee for filing safety complaints with the employer, the employee's representative, the Division, and certain other governmental agencies, or for participating in certain other activities that are protected under the Cal/OSHA statute.ⁿ¹ An employer is also prohibited from laying off or discharging an employee for refusing to perform work when the performance of such work would violate the Labor Code, or any occupational safety or health standard or order, if the violation would create a real and apparent hazard to the employee or to his or her fellow employees.ⁿ² For full discussion of these prohibitions and of employee remedies for violation of the anti-retaliation provisions, see § 21.49.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment

LawDiscriminationRetaliationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral

OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6310.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6311.

54 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.21

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.21 Duty to Obtain Necessary Permits for Hazardous Work

Any employer engaged in a type of work that by its nature is deemed to involve substantial risk of injury is required to obtain a permit from the Division of Occupational Safety and Health prior to beginning any work, practice, method, operation or process of employment involving such work.ⁿ¹

The types of employment requiring pre-job permits include (1) construction of trenches or excavations that are five feet or deeper and into which a person must descend;ⁿ² (2) construction of any building, structure, falsework, or scaffolding more than three stories high or the equivalent height;ⁿ³ (3) demolition of any building, structure, falsework, or scaffold more than three stories high or the equivalent height;ⁿ⁴ (4) the underground use of diesel engines in work in mines and tunnels;ⁿ⁵ and (5) effective Jan. 1, 2000, motion picture, television, or theater stages or sets, if there has occurred within any one prior calendar year in any combination at separate locations three serious injuries, fatalities, or serious violations related to the construction or demolition of sets more than 36 feet in height for the motion picture, television, and theatrical production industry.ⁿ⁶

In addition, any employer or contractor engaged in asbestos-related work, as defined in Labor Code Section 6501.8, which involves 100 square feet or more of surface area of asbestos-containing material must register with the Division prior to the start of such work.ⁿ⁷ The Division will grant registration after the employer or contractor demonstrates that the conditions, practices, means, methods, operations, or processes used or proposed to be used will provide a safe and healthful place of employment.ⁿ⁸

The requirements for permits and registration for asbestos-related work are discussed in detail in § 21.47[2].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety &

HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code §§ 6500, 6501.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6500(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6500(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6500(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6500(d).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 6500(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 6501.5.

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 6501.5.

55 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.22

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.22 Duty to Post Citations and Other Information Required by Division

There are a number of requirements throughout the Labor Code and Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations for posting information regarding citations, orders, appeals, etc., relating to occupational safety and health matters in order to inform employees. Among these are the requirement that the employer prominently post each citation, special order, or order to take special action issued by the Division for at least 3 working days, or until the unsafe condition is abated, if longer, at or near the place of the violation;ⁿ¹ and the requirement that the employer post the notice prepared by the Division that contains the address and phone number of the nearest Division office and explains the employees' right to report unsafe working conditions and request an inspection by the Division, the right to receive information regarding hazardous substances, the right to refuse to work under conditions that endanger an employee's life or health, and other posting, notice, and general information that the Division deems necessary.ⁿ²

Also, after the Division has verified abatement of a serious violation or order, the employer must post the notice of abatement prepared by the Division for three working days.ⁿ³ In all other cases of abatement of a serious violation, the employer must post the employer's signed statement confirming abatement which was sent to the Division pursuant to Labor Code Section 6320.ⁿ⁴

For discussion of abatement, see § 21.44[1].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsCitations & InspectionsLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6318(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code § 6328.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6318(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6318(b).

56 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part B. EMPLOYERS' DUTIES

2-21 California Employment Law §§ 21.23 through 21.29

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 21.23[Reserved]

57 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part C. EMPLOYEE RIGHTS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.30

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.30 Filing Complaints About Hazardous Conditions

Any employee, either directly or through his or her representative, or other person may make an oral or written complaint to the Division about any condition regarding the employment or place of employment that the employee or person believes to be unsafe, unhealthy, or in violation of California Occupational Safety and Health laws or regulations.ⁿ¹ For discussion of the Division's procedures regarding investigation of complaints and the complainant's rights, see § 21.40[3].

An employer is prohibited from discharging or in any manner discriminating against an employee because he or she has made an oral or written complaint about safety violations to the employer, the employee's representative, the Division, or any other governmental agency with statutory authority for assisting the Division regarding matters relating to employee safety or health.ⁿ² For full discussion of the prohibition against retaliation and remedies for its violation, see § 21.49.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Procedure Pleading & Practice Pleadings Complaints General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Administrative Proceedings General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Duties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6309.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code § 6310(a).

58 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part C. EMPLOYEE RIGHTS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.31

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.31 Refusal of Unsafe Work

Labor Code Section 6311 prohibits an employer from laying off or discharging an employee for refusing to perform work if (1) the performance of such work would violate any provision of the Labor Code, including Labor Code Section 6400,ⁿ¹ or any occupational safety and health standard or order; and (2) the violation would create a real and apparent hazard to the employee or other employees. For further discussion of this prohibition and remedies for its violation, see § 21.49.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6400(a), the general duty clause of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act, provides, "Every employer shall furnish employment and a place of employment that are safe and healthful for the employees therein." For further discussion, see § 21.10.

59 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part C. EMPLOYEE RIGHTS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.32

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.32 Hazard Training

The employer's duty to provide, and the employee's right to receive, training about the hazards connected with assigned work is contained in general injury and illness prevention program laws and regulations, as well as Labor Code sections and regulations governing specific types of hazards. In addition, the employer's general duties to provide a safe and healthful employment and place of employmentⁿ¹ and to provide necessary safety devices, safeguards, and safe work proceduresⁿ² provide another statutory basis for requiring employee hazard training.ⁿ³

Labor Code Section 6401.7 requires all California employers to establish, implement, and maintain an effective employee injury and illness prevention program. More specific requirements for compliance with Labor Code Section 6401.7 are set out in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3203. A major component of injury and illness prevention programs is a training program regarding general safe and healthy work practices and well as specific training on any hazards that are specific to an employee's job assignment.ⁿ⁴ For discussion of injury and illness prevention programs generally, see § 21.12. For discussion of the training elements of such programs, see § 21.14.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6400.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code § 6401.

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion of employer's general duties in §§ 21.10 and 21.11.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 6401.7(a)(4), (c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3203(a)(7).

60 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part C. EMPLOYEE RIGHTS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.33

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.33 Information Rights

[1] Information About Presence of or Exposure to Hazardous Substances

Employers are required to notify each employee who has been or is being exposed to toxic materials or harmful physical agents if the concentration or level of exposure exceeds the levels allowed by any applicable safety or health standard, order, or special order.ⁿ¹ The employer also must inform the employee of any corrective action taken in regard to the hazardous exposure.ⁿ² In addition, the employer must provide employees or their representatives access to accurate records of employee exposures to potentially toxic materials or harmful physical agents.ⁿ³ For further further discussion of rules relating to disclosure of information about exposure to hazardous substances, see § 21.17[1].

Under the Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act,ⁿ⁴ the Director of Industrial Relations is required to establish and maintain a list of hazardous substances that in some forms and concentrations may pose potential acute and chronic health hazards to employees.ⁿ⁵ The Director's list is published in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 339. Employers must comply with certain information and training requirements if a substance on the list is "present" in the workplace.ⁿ⁶ These requirements are set forth in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5194. For further discussion of the requirements of the Act, see § 21.02[2][d].

The Standards Board's regulations also require every employer to develop and maintain a written hazard communication program for employees.ⁿ⁷ For discussion of the requirements of such programs, see § 21.19[7].

[2] Observation of Workplace Monitoring and Receipt of Results from Monitoring

Employees or their representatives must be given the opportunity to observe workplace hazard monitoring or measuring of employee exposure to hazards whenever an employer is required to conduct such monitoring or tests in order to determine employee exposure to hazards.ⁿ⁸ The employer must notify affected employees or their representatives of the time, date, and place of employee monitoring, testing, or measuring prior to the date it occurs.ⁿ⁹

In addition, the employer must provide affected employees or their representatives access to the records and reports of the results of such testing, monitoring, or measuring when carried out in compliance with any standard or regulation adopted by the Standards Board.ⁿ¹⁰

[3] Access to Employer Injury and Illness Log

Under now-repealed regulations, the employer was required to provide access to the employer's log and summary of all recordable occupational injuries and illnesses upon request to any employee, former employee and their representatives for examination and copying at reasonable times and in a reasonable manner.ⁿ¹¹ For further discussion of new requirements for the log and employee access to the log, see § 21.19[1].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDICompensabilityCourse of EmploymentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6408(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340.2.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code § 6408(e); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340.2.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 6408(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6360 et seq.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code §§ 6361(a)(1), 6380.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code § 6398; see also Lab. Code § 6383(a) (defining when hazardous substance is deemed to be present in workplace).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5194(e).

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 6408(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340.1(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340.1(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 340.1(b); Lab. Code § 142.3.

(n11)Footnote 11. Former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 14308(b).

61 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part C. EMPLOYEE RIGHTS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.34

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.34 Medical Examinations and Records

Employers are required to provide medical examinations for affected employees at no cost to the employee if the employer uses carcinogens.ⁿ¹ In the case of employee exposure to specific carcinogens, the employer must establish and maintain a medical surveillance program, as discussed in § 21.16. For discussion of access to employee exposure records, including medical records, see § 21.17[1][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDIBenefit DeterminationsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 9040.

62 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part C. EMPLOYEE RIGHTS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.35

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.35 Participation in Cal/OSHA Inspections

In any investigation or inspection conducted by the Division at a worksite, employees have the right to have a representative authorized by the employees accompany the Cal/OSHA inspector throughout the inspection.ⁿ¹ If no authorized employee representative exists at the place of employment, the Cal/OSHA inspector must consult with a reasonable number of employees about occupational health and safety matters at the work site.ⁿ² Any employee or authorized employee representative has the right to discuss occupational safety and health problems or violations privately with the Cal/OSHA inspector during the course of the investigation or inspection.ⁿ³

The employer must allow any employee or designated employee representative who participates in the walkaround inspection to participate with full pay.ⁿ⁴ Refusal of an employer to pay the employee representatives accompanying a second inspection team on a work site walkaround inspection is discriminatory per se and in violation of Labor Code Section 6310.ⁿ⁵

For full discussion of Cal/OSHA inspection procedures, including employee participation, see § 21.41[1].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsCitations & InspectionsLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCompliance & DefensesLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6314(d).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6314(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6314(d).

(n4)Footnote 4. Division of Labor Standards Enforcement v. Texaco, Inc. (1983) 152 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 6 , 199 Cal. Rptr. 561 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Division of Labor Standards Enforcement v. Texaco, Inc. (1983) 152 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1 . For discussion of prohibition against discrimination and retaliation, see § 21.49.

63 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part C. EMPLOYEE RIGHTS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.36

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.36 Participation in Cal/OSHA Proceedings

[1] Appeal Hearings

Employees and their authorized representatives have the right to appeal the reasonableness of the abatement period allowed by the Division.ⁿ¹ In addition, employees (or their representatives) may apply for party status in any appeal by an employer from a citation or other order, and the OSHAB may grant party status to an employee for good cause shown.ⁿ² For discussion of party status in appeal proceedings, see § 21.45[2],[8].

The employer must notify affected employees and their authorized representatives of any appeal in the manner specified in the OSHAB's regulations.ⁿ³ For discussion of notice requirements pertaining to appeals, see § 21.45[7].

An employer is prohibited from retaliating against an employee for participating in such proceedings.ⁿ⁴ For discussion of this prohibition, see § 21.49.

[2] Permit Safety Conferences

Whenever the employer engages in hazardous work that requires a pre-job permit from the Division,ⁿ⁵ the Division must decide whether a safety conference is necessary prior to approval of the permit.ⁿ⁶ When a safety conference is required, the safety conference must include representatives of employees, as well as the employer and the contractor.ⁿ⁷ For full discussion of requirements and procedures relating to permits, see § 21.47.

[3] Variance Hearings

If an employer applies for a temporary variance from the Division or a permanent variance from the Standards Board, the Division or Standards Board may grant a variance only after employees and their representatives have been given notice of the application and an opportunity to be heard.ⁿ⁸ For full discussion of procedures pertaining to variances, see § 21.48.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Administrative LawJudicial ReviewGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral
OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor
& Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCompliance & Defenses

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361(c); see Lab. Code §§ 6601, 6601.5, 6602.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 353, 356, 356.1, 356.2.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 6310(a)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code § 6500; see also discussion in § 21.47[1][a].

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code § 6502.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code § 6503.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code §§ 143.1, 6450(b).

64 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part C. EMPLOYEE RIGHTS

2-21 California Employment Law §§ 21.37through 21.39

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 21.37[Reserved]

65 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.40

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.40 Division Powers and Authority

[1] Scope of Division Powers

The Division of Occupational Safety and Health (the Division) has statutory authority to administer and enforce occupational safety and health laws, standards, and ordersⁿ¹ in California. Under Labor Code Section 6307, the Division has "the power, jurisdiction, and supervision over every employment and place of employment in this state, which is necessary to adequately enforce and administer all laws and lawful standards and orders, or special orders requiring such employment and place of employment to be safe, and requiring the protection of the life, safety, and health of every employee in such employment or place of employment."

To enforce occupational safety and health standards and orders, the Division has specific statutory authority to do the following:

1. Declare and prescribe safety devices, safeguards, and other means or methods of protection, in order to make employment and places of employment safe, as required by law or by lawful order;ⁿ²
2. Enforce Health and Safety Code Section 25910, as well as standards and orders adopted by the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board, regarding the installation, use, maintenance, and operation of reasonable uniform safety devices, safeguards, and other means or methods of protection, as necessary to carry out laws and lawful standards or special orders relating to protecting the lives and safety of employees;ⁿ³ and
3. "Require the performance of any other act which the protection of the life and safety of the employees in employments and places of employment reasonably demands."ⁿ⁴

The Division's authority under Labor Code Section 6308, when construed in light of other sections, such as Labor Code Section 6306, has been found to be broad,ⁿ⁵ and these sections "make clear that the terms of the legislation are to be given a liberal interpretation for the purpose of achieving a safe working environment."n6

In general, the Division exercises its enforcement powers through accident investigations and workplace inspections.n7 If unsafe or hazardous conditions are found, the Division will issue to the employer a citation and notice of civil penalty,n8 an order prohibiting use,n9 a special order,n10 an order to take special action,n11 or a notice in lieu of citation;n12 initiate injunction proceedings;n13 or revoke or suspend permits issued by the Division.n14

Each of these actions is discussed more fully in § 21.42.

[2] Investigation of Occupational Accidents and Fatalities

[a] General Requirements and Procedures

The Division is required to investigate the causes of any employment accident that is fatal to one or more employees, or causes serious injury or illnessn15 or involves a "serious exposure."n16 However, the Division need not investigate the accident if it determines that such an investigation is unnecessary, and if it summarizes the facts supporting its determination and explains how the determination was made.n17 The Division may not conduct an accident investigation, for example, if it determines that it has no jurisdiction to conduct an investigation, or the cause of the fatality or serious injury, illness, or exposure was natural and not occupational, such as a pre-existing non-occupational medical condition, or if the accident did not involve any violation of any occupational safety or health law, standard, or order.n18

The Division may, in its discretion, investigate the causes of any other industrial accident or occupational illness and must issue any orders necessary to eliminate the causes of the accident or illness and to prevent its reoccurrence.n19 The orders issued by the Division in the course of such an investigation are not admissible as evidence in any action for damages or in any proceeding for compensation, based on or arising out of any injury or death caused by the accident or illness.n20

The Division is notified of occupational accidents, injuries, and illnesses by the reports employers are required to make to the Division within 24 hours of any serious injury, illness, or deathn21 and by reports from the responding state, county, or local police or fire agency.n22

The initial accident report information is compiled on a form called Cal/OSHA Form 4A. Division field offices are required to contact the Bureau of Investigations and the Deputy Chief for Field Operations immediately, day or night, on receipt of a report of an occupational fatality or serious injury or illness, and the Division Regional Manager if such a fatality or serious injury or illness occurs during working hours.n23

After completing an accident investigation, the Division compliance safety engineer or industrial hygienist will complete two forms, Cal/OSHA Form 4 (Accident Investigation Report) and Cal/OSHA Form 1 (Occupational Safety and Health Report), which is used to record the Division's findings from any work site inspection.

[b] Bureau of Investigations--Criminal Investigations and Referrals

Although Division compliance personnel, such as a compliance safety engineer or industrial hygienist, may initially investigate any occupational accident involving a fatality or serious injury, illness, or exposure,n24 the Bureau of Investigations (BOI) within the Division is responsible for directing accident investigations involving violations of occupational safety or health standards, orders, or special orders, or violations of Health and Safety Code Section 25910, in which there is an employee death, serious injury to five or more employees, or a request for prosecution by a Division representative.n25

The primary function of the BOI is to conduct criminal investigations.ⁿ²⁶ It is required to be staffed by "as many attorneys and investigators as are necessary" to carry out its functions.ⁿ²⁷ BOI investigative staff members have a right of access to all places of employment necessary to conduct investigations. They also have the right to "collect any evidence or samples they deem necessary to an investigation" and have all the powers granted the Division under Labor Code Section 6314.ⁿ²⁸ The BOI is expressly responsible by statute for preparing cases for criminal prosecutionⁿ²⁹ and must refer the results of its investigation to the appropriate prosecutor (i.e., city attorney, district attorney, or Attorney General) in any case that involves an employee fatality or serious injury to five or more employees, unless the BOI determines there is insufficient evidence of a violation of the law.ⁿ³⁰

The BOI also must review all inspection reports by Division compliance safety engineers and industrial hygienists that involve a serious violationⁿ³¹ where there have been serious injuries to one to four employees or a serious exposure.ⁿ³² Generally, this is done by reviewing Cal/OSHA Form 4A (Preliminary Report of Industrial Accident) or Cal/OSHA Form 4 (Accident Investigation Report). The BOI may further investigate those cases if it finds that criminal violations may have occurred.ⁿ³³

The BOI is authorized to communicate with a prosecutor any time the BOI deems it appropriate.ⁿ³⁴ Only BOI personnel are authorized to refer cases for criminal prosecution.ⁿ³⁵

For additional discussion of criminal prosecution for violations of Cal/OSHA law, see §§ 21.60-21.68.

[c] Referrals to State Contractors Licensing Board

The Division is required to transmit to the Registrar of Contractors copies of any reports of investigations of employment accidents that resulted in an employee fatality or serious injury, illness, or exposure involving a contractor licensed pursuant to the Contractors License Law.ⁿ³⁶ The Division may also transmit, either at its own discretion or on request by the Registrar of Contractors, investigation reports for any other kinds of industrial accidents.ⁿ³⁷

[d] Pesticide Exposure Reports

On receiving a report of an employee illness or injury involving a pesticide exposure, the Division will determine whether the County Health Department was notified of the incident by the treating doctor.ⁿ³⁸ Medical treatment for pesticide poisoning or a condition suspected to be pesticide poisoning is never considered to be mere first aid, for which no report is necessary.ⁿ³⁹ If the report to the Division, whether by the employer or responding police or fire agencies, was not made within the required 24-hour period, the incident will be assigned to a Division compliance safety engineer or industrial hygienist for investigation.ⁿ⁴⁰ The case will also be investigated if the Division learns that the County Health Department was not properly notified of the pesticide exposure.ⁿ⁴¹ Many pesticide exposure reports are received by the Division after the county agricultural commissioner or Department of Food and Agriculture has already investigated the incident. If the Division discovers that the examining physician failed to report the pesticide exposure to the Division, as required by Labor Code Section 6409(a), the Division will issue a citation and civil penalty to the treating physician.ⁿ⁴²

[3] Investigation of Complaints

The Division has express statutory authority to summarily investigate any employment or place of employment whenever it is informed by any means or has reason to believe that such employment or work site is unsafe or injurious to the welfare of any employee.ⁿ⁴³ In addition, the Division is required to "maintain the capability to receive and act upon complaints at all times."ⁿ⁴⁴

Anyone can file a complaint with the Division alleging an unsafe or hazardous condition to which employees are exposed. However, on receipt of a complaint regarding any unsafe employment or place of employment received from an employee, employee representative, including, but not limited to, an attorney, health or safety professional, union representative, or representative of a government agency, or the employer whose employee is directly involved in an unsafe place of employment, the Division must investigate as soon as possible, and no later than three working days after the complaint is received if the complaint alleges a serious violation, or 14 calendar days if the complaint alleges a non-serious violation.ⁿ⁴⁵ The Division must attempt to determine the period of time in the future that the complainant believes the unsafe working condition may continue to exist, and must allocate inspection resources so as to respond first to those situations in which time is of the essence.^{n45.1} When a complaint charging a serious violation is received from a state or local prosecutor, the Division must summarily investigate the employment or place of employment within 24 hours of receipt of the complaint.^{n45.2} A "serious violation," for this purpose, is defined as a complaint that alleges that "there is a substantial probability that death or serious physical harm could result from a condition which exists, or from one or more practices, means, methods, operations, or processes which have been adopted or are in use in a place of employment."ⁿ⁴⁶

If the Division determines, from the facts stated in a complaint, that it is intended to "willfully harass" an employer or "is without any reasonable basis," it is not required to investigate within the time periods stated above.ⁿ⁴⁷

The name of any person submitting a complaint to the Division must be kept confidential by the Division, unless the complainant requests otherwise.ⁿ⁴⁸

The Division classifies complaints as "formal" and "informal." "Formal" complaints are those received from an employee, employee representative, or employer of an employee directly involved in an unsafe place of employment.ⁿ⁴⁹ All other complaints are considered "informal," including complaints from ex-employees or anonymous complaints.ⁿ⁵⁰ In cases involving "informal" complaints that allege non-serious violations, the Division may decide not to conduct an on-site inspection, but instead notify the employer of the complaint, the alleged violations, the safety or health regulations violated, and the corrective action to be taken.ⁿ⁵¹ The employer is requested to post the Division's letter and all subsequent correspondence on the matter, and is given a specified number of days to notify the Division in writing of the corrective action taken.ⁿ⁵²

The Division is required to keep complete and accurate records of all complaints received, whether oral or written, and if the identity of the complainant is known, the Division must inform the complainant of any action taken on the complaint and the reasons for such action within 14 calendar days of taking an action.ⁿ⁵³ Division records must include the dates on which any action is taken on a complaint, or the reasons for taking no action.ⁿ⁵⁴ The Division must annually compile and release on its Web site data pertaining to complaints received and citations issued.^{n54.1}

The Division must furnish the employee or the representative of employees requesting the review a written statement of the reasons for the Division's final disposition of the case.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsRulemakingWorkers' Compensation & SSDIAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Order is defined at 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(e); see also Lab. Code § 6308.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6308(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6308(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6308(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. Bendix Forest Products Corp. v. Division of Occupational Saf. & Health (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 465, 470, 158 Cal. Rptr. 882, 600 P.2d 1339.

(n6)Footnote 6. Carmona v. Division of Industrial Safety (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 303, 313, 118 Cal. Rptr. 473, 530 P.2d 161.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code §§ 6309, 6313, 6314, 6317, 6320.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code § 6317; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.50.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code §§ 6325, 6327; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.50.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code §§ 6305(b), 6308(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.50.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Lab. Code § 6308(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.50.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Lab. Code § 6317; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332.1.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Lab. Code §§ 6323, 6324, 6510; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.50.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Lab. Code § 6505; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.50.

(n15)Footnote 15. "Serious injury or illness" is defined as "any injury or illness occurring in a place of employment or in connection with any employment which requires in-patient hospitalization for a period in excess of 24 hours for other than medical observation, or in which an employee suffers a loss of any member of the body or suffers any serious degree of permanent disfigurement, but does not include any injury or illness or death caused by the commission of a Penal Code violation, except the violation of Section 385 of the Penal Code, or an accident on a public street or highway." Lab. Code § 6302(h); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(h). Penal Code § 385(b) makes it a misdemeanor to place, operate, erect, or move, either personally or through an employee or agent, any tools, machinery, equipment, materials, buildings, or structures within six feet of a high voltage overhead conductor. Penal Code § 385(c) makes it a misdemeanor to own, operate, or employ any person to operate cranes, derricks, or various other specified machines unless they contain a durable sign warning against operation within six feet of an high voltage line.

(n16)Footnote 16. Lab. Code § 6313(a). "Serious exposure" is defined as "any exposure of an employee to a hazardous substance when the exposure occurs as a result of an incident, accident, emergency, or exposure over time and is in a degree or amount sufficient to create a substantial probability that death or serious physical harm in the future could result from the exposure." Lab. Code § 6302(i).

(n17)Footnote 17. Lab. Code § 6313(a).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-4A.

(n19)Footnote 19. Lab. Code § 6313(b).

(n20)Footnote 20. Lab. Code § 6313(b). A similar limitation under prior employee safety laws was construed to make only specific orders or recommendations made in connection with a specific action inadmissible, not general occupational safety or health standards and orders. See Atherley v. MacDonald, Young & Nelson (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 575, 584, 298 P.2d 700; see also Lab. Code § 6304.5. For further discussion, see § 21.70.

(n21)Footnote 21. See Lab. Code § 6409.1(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 342(a); see also discussion in § 21.18[1].

(n22)Footnote 22. See Lab. Code § 6409.2; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 342(b).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-4A.

(n24)Footnote 24. See generally Lab. Code § 6313; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.50.

(n25)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 6315(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 344.51, 344.52.

(n26)Footnote 26. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.51; see Lab. Code § 6315(a).

(n27)Footnote 27. Lab. Code § 6315(d).

(n28)Footnote 28. Lab. Code § 6315(e).

(n29)Footnote 29. Lab. Code § 6315(a).

(n30)Footnote 30. See Lab. Code § 6315(a), (g).

(n31)Footnote 31. A "serious violation" is deemed to exist if there is a substantial probability that death or physical harm could result from a violation, including, but not limited to, circumstances in which there is a substantial probability that either of the following could result in death or great bodily injury: (1) an exposure exceeding an established permissible exposure limit, or (2) the existence of one or more practices, means, methods, operations, or processes that have been adopted or are in use in the place of employment. Lab. Code § 6432(a). However, a serious violation will not be deemed to exist if the employer can demonstrate that it did not, and could not with the exercise of reasonable discretion, know of the presence of the violation. Lab. Code § 6432(b).

(n32)Footnote 32. Lab. Code § 6315(a).

(n33)Footnote 33. See Lab. Code § 6315(a).

(n34)Footnote 34. Lab. Code § 6315(h).

(n35)Footnote 35. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 344.50, 344.51.

(n36)Footnote 36. Lab. Code § 6313.5; see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq. (contractors' licensing law).

(n37)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 6313.5.

(n38)Footnote 38. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-4A.

(n39)Footnote 39. See Lab. Code § 6409.3.

(n40)Footnote 40. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-4A.

(n41)Footnote 41. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-4A.

(n42)Footnote 42. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-4A.

(n43)Footnote 43. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n44)Footnote 44. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n45)Footnote 45. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n46)Footnote 45.1. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n47)Footnote 45.2. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n48)Footnote 46. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n49)Footnote 47. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n50)Footnote 48. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n51)Footnote 49. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-7.

(n52)Footnote 50. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-7.

(n53)Footnote 51. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-7.

(n54)Footnote 52. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-7.

(n55)Footnote 53. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n56)Footnote 54. Lab. Code § 6309.

(n57)Footnote 54.1. Lab. Code § 6309.

66 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.41

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.41 Inspections

[1] Overview of Inspection Procedures

The Division conducts inspectionsⁿ¹ as a result of reported industrial accidents;ⁿ² complaints of unsafe conditions;ⁿ³ follow-up inspections to verify abatement of serious violations, special orders, or orders to take special action;ⁿ⁴ establishes procedures for ensuring that the highest hazardous employers in the most hazardous industries are inspected on a priority basis;ⁿ⁵ "permit" follow-up inspections;ⁿ⁶ asbestos-related work registration follow-up inspections;ⁿ⁷ carcinogen use follow-up inspections;ⁿ⁸ follow-up inspections on an employer's report of corrective action taken in response to a Division notice of a non-serious complaint;ⁿ⁹ and other scheduled periodic safety and health inspections in various industries, based on selection from the Division's Safety Data Base.ⁿ¹⁰

In addition, the Division may expand the scope of any inspection whenever it determines that a more complete inspection is warranted to carry out its duties under the California Occupational Safety and Health Act.ⁿ¹¹

An inspection normally consists of an opening conference, walkaround inspection, and closing conference. The opening conference is normally held with both management and employee representatives present, and the Division inspector will identify him or herself, explain the nature and scope of the inspection, the confidentiality requirements regarding the complainant, employee rights under the Labor Code, the Cal/OSHA program, the basis for citations and civil penalties, and inspection and walkaround procedures. He or she will also review employer's existing safety and health program and practices, practices and procedures governing material safety data sheets and employee access to such information, and the employer's injury and illness recordkeeping system.ⁿ¹² The employer will also be informed that photographs may be taken in the course of the inspection, and discuss the measures that would be taken to prevent disclosure of any trade secrets or classified information that might be revealed in the course of the inspection.ⁿ¹³ Finally, the inspector will ask whether any conditions on the site require the use of personal protective equipment in the course of the inspection.ⁿ¹⁴ In the case of inspections at multi-employer worksites, the Division will initially attempt to contact the highest-level supervisor on site of the general or controlling employer, as well as provide reasonable time for subcontractors on the site to send representatives to the opening conference, walkaround, and closing conference.n15

In the course of any inspection, the Division inspector has the authority, among other things, to do the following:

1. Obtain any statistics, information, or physical materials in the possession of the employer that are directly related to the purpose of the investigation or inspection;n16
2. Conduct any tests necessary to the investigation or inspection;n17
3. Take photographs, which are considered confidential and not subject to disclosure even under the California Public Records Act;n18
4. Discuss safety and health violations or problems privately with any employee, employer, or employee representative;n19
5. Consult with a reasonable number of employees on health and safety matters;n20 and
6. Issue and post an order to preserve physical materials or an accident site.n21

At the end of the opening conference, the inspector will begin the walkaround inspection. Both a management and an employee representative may accompany the inspector on company time during the walkaround inspection.n22 Refusal of an employer to allow an employee representative to participate in the walkaround on paid time is per se discriminatory in violation of Labor Code Sections 6310(a) and (b).n23

If the Division inspector is unable to complete the inspection in the same day, an exit conference will be held, at which the inspector explains the status of the inspection, the violations observed, and interim corrective measures to be taken to remove those hazards. A second on-site visit to complete the inspection will be held subsequently.

On finishing a worksite inspection, the Division inspector will hold a closing conference. At the closing conference, the inspector will discuss the conditions observed, including any violations; issue any enforcement actions resulting from this inspection and explain the differences among them (i.e., citation, notice in lieu of citation, special order, order to take special action); discuss methods of correcting or abating the violations or hazardous conditions and set abatement dates for completing such corrections; explain that civil penalties may be assessed and the basis for computing such penalties, and inform the employer that additional penalties may be assessed for failure to abate or for repeated or willful future violations; discuss variance procedures; describe Division follow-up procedures; evaluate the employer's safety program; discuss the Labor Code sections that prohibit employee discrimination and discharge;n24 and explain the employer's rights to appeal.n25

The Division inspector will also explain the employer's right to request an informal conference with the Division District Manager within 10 working days of receipt of the enforcement documents.n26 The purpose of the informal conference is to review and clarify any citations or orders issued, the calculation of civil penalties, and the abatement periods. The District Manager may amend the citations, amount of civil penalties, or abatement period to correct errors.n27

The request for an informal conference does not stay or extend the 15-working day period for filing an appeal from a citation or civil penalty with the Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board (OSHAB).n28 If no appeal has been filed at the time the Division issues any amended citation, order or notice of civil penalty, the documents will be forwarded to the employer. If a timely appeal has been filed, however, the Division will forward the amended documents to the OSHAB, explaining the reasons for the amendments and requesting OSHAB approval of the amendments.n29

[2] Advance Notice of Inspections

Any person who gives advance notice of a Cal/OSHA inspection, without authorization from the Chief of the Division or his or her designee, is guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of up to $1000 or by imprisonment for up to six months, or both.ⁿ³⁰

The authorization to give advance notice of a Cal/OSHA inspection or investigation is seldom given. Only the Chief of the Division, or the Chief's designee in his or her absence, may authorize advance notice.ⁿ³¹ Advance notice of an inspection or investigation resulting from an employee complaint is never authorized except in the case of an apparent imminent danger to employees.ⁿ³² In all other cases, advance notice is justified only when it is authorized by the Chief of the Division, or the Chief's designee, on finding that either (1) an apparent imminent danger exists that requires prompt abatement;ⁿ³³ or (2) to conduct an effective inspection, advance notice is required to assure availability of essential personnel or access to the site, equipment or work process.ⁿ³⁴ Advance notice may also be given if, in the judgment of the Chief of the Division or his or her designee, advance notice is advantageous to achieve a thorough inspection.ⁿ³⁵

Advance notice may not exceed 24 hours prior to a scheduled inspection, except in unusual circumstances, where an imminent danger exists or where practical considerations mandate a longer period.ⁿ³⁶

Any employer receiving advance notice of an inspection is required to promptly notify the employee representative, if any, about the advance notice and pending inspection.ⁿ³⁷ The employer is also required to make any arrangements necessary at the work site to allow the inspection to proceed on schedule, as planned.ⁿ³⁸

[3] Division's Right of Entry and Inspection Warrants

The Division inspectors and investigators have the statutory right, on presenting appropriate credential to an employer, of "free access to any place of employment to investigate and inspect during regular working hours, and at other reasonable times when necessary for the protection of safety and health, and within reasonable limits and in a reasonable manner."ⁿ³⁹ If permission to enter and inspect is refused by an employer, the Division may obtain an inspection warrant, pursuant to *Code of Civil Procedure Section 1822.50 et seq.*ⁿ⁴⁰

Code of Civil Procedure Section 1822.52, which sets forth the general standard for determining cause for issuing an administrative "inspection" warrant, provides that cause is deemed to exist if either reasonable legislative or administrative standards for conducting a routine or area inspection are satisfied with respect to the particular place, dwelling, structure, premises, or vehicle, or there is reason to believe that a condition of nonconformity exists with respect to the particular place, dwelling, structure, premises, or vehicle. With respect to Cal/OSHA warrants, Labor Code Section 6314(b) provides that cause for issuing the inspection warrant is deemed to exist (1) if there has been an industrial accident, injury, or illness reported; (2) if the Division has received a complaint that violations of occupational safety and health standards exist at a place of employment; or (3) if the place of employment has been selected by the Division for inspection on the basis of "specific neutral criteria contained in a general administrative plan for the enforcement" of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act.ⁿ⁴¹

The courts have indicated, however, that the above statutory standards of cause, at least insofar as they permit issuance of a warrant without a specific showing that a violation is likely to be found on the particular premises, are unconstitutional. In Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Municipal Court (Salwasser I),ⁿ⁴² the court of appeal held that the standard of cause for "administrative" inspection warrants set forth in Code of Civil Procedure Section 1822.52 does not apply to inspection warrants obtained by the Division.ⁿ⁴³ The court held that because of the potential criminal charges that may result from violation of occupational safety and health standards under the California Occupational Safety and Health Act, federal and California constitutional protections against unreasonable search and seizure and the constitutional right to privacy require the Division to show "probable cause" that safety violations currently exist on the employer's premises to support its request for an inspection warrant.ⁿ⁴⁴ In Salwasser I, a warrant obtained to conduct a routine periodic inspection of the employer's plant, on the basis of the incidence of injuries there reported in the Division's Safety Database, was found to authorize an unreasonable intrusion into the employer's privacy because the affidavit supporting the warrant failed to allege sufficient facts to show probable cause to believe that a safety violation currently existed at the employer's premises.ⁿ⁴⁵

Subsequently, in Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Occupational Saf. & Health Appeals Bd. (Salwasser II),ⁿ⁴⁶ the same court of appeal held that although the Division is required under Salwasser I to make a showing of "probable cause," the Division need not satisfy the probable cause requirements of the Penal Code applicable to criminal proceedings, which require a specific description of the alleged criminal activity and independent corroboration of the complainant's statements.ⁿ⁴⁷ The court in Salwasser II adopted a lesser probable cause test applied by the federal courts in the context of federal OSHA warrants, which requires a showing of specific evidence sufficient to support a reasonable suspicion of a violation.ⁿ⁴⁸ If the warrant application is based on an employee complaint, the Division's affidavit must indicate the substance of the complaint and must provide some basis for believing that the complaint was actually made, that the complainant was sincere in his or her assertion that a violation exists, and that he or she had some plausible basis for entering a complaint.ⁿ⁴⁹

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Many California employers have adopted the policy that they will never permit a Cal-OSHA inspector on their premises without a valid search warrant. Such policies frequently are the result of interpretations of Salwasser II that are legally correct but practically suspect. That is, while employers have the legal right to demand warrants for all inspections, employers should exercise discretion in deciding whether to permit warrantless inspections of a serious or ongoing safety problem. If it is clear that the court will issue the warrant, forcing Cal-OSHA to go to court may only serve to anger the inspector involved. A more cooperative approach may be advisable in some cases. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[4] Subpoenas, Depositions, and Statements Under Oath

In order to carry out its enforcement duties, the Division is statutorily authorized to issue subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum; to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, records, and physical materials; to administer oaths and examine witnesses under oath; to take verification or proof of written materials; and to take affidavits and depositions.ⁿ⁵⁰

[5] Order Preserving Evidence

During any investigation of an industrial accident or occupational illness conducted by the division pursuant to the provisions of Labor Code Section 6313, the chief or his or her authorized representative may issue an order to preserve physical materials or the accident site as they were at the time the accident or illness occurred if, in the opinion of the division, it is necessary to do so in order to determine the cause or causes of the accident or illness, and the evidence is in potential danger of being removed, altered, or tampered with. Under these circumstances, the division's order must be issued in a manner that will avoid, to the extent possible, any interference with normal business operations.ⁿ⁵¹ The Division will prepare a conspicuous notice stating that an order to preserve has been issued. The notice must be posted by the employer in the area or on the article to be preserved.ⁿ⁵²

The scope of an order preserving the site is limited to the immediate area and machines, devices, apparatus, or equipment directly associated with the accident or illness.ⁿ⁵³ The order will remain effective until the Division gains access to the site or until a court orders otherwise.ⁿ⁵⁴

Any person who knowingly violates an order to preserve a site issued by the Division is punishable by a fine of up to $5,000.ⁿ⁵⁵

[6] Injury Prevention Program Evaluation

Every inspection conducted by the Division must include an evaluation of the employer's injury and illness prevention program.ⁿ⁵⁶ The criteria used to evaluate the program will be the substantial compliance criteria developed by the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board, pursuant to the requirements of Labor Code Section 6401.7.ⁿ⁵⁷ The evaluation must include interviews "with a sample of employees," and the members of any employer-employee occupational safety and health committee.ⁿ⁵⁸

If the inspection pertains to work for which a permit is required under Labor Code Section 6500 and for which a permit has been issued pursuant to Labor Code Section 6502, the employee injury and illness prevention program evaluation will be limited to implementation of the plan approved by the Division in issuing the permit.ⁿ⁵⁹

Prior to completing any inspection, the Division is also required to notify the employer of the services available from the Department of Industrial Relations to assist the employer in establishing, maintaining, improving, and evaluating the employer's injury and illness prevention program.ⁿ⁶⁰

Whenever a citation is issued to a self-insured employer for a willful or repeat serious violation of the requirements of Labor Code Section 6401.7 (effective injury and illness prevention program), and the citation becomes final, the Division must notify the Director of Industrial Relations of this fact so that a hearing may be held to determine whether good cause exists to revoke the employer's certificate of consent to self-insure.ⁿ⁶¹

[7] Reinspections

Whenever the Division issues a citation for a serious violation, a special order, or an order to take special action, and at the end of the inspection, the order has not been complied with or the violation has not been abated, the Division must conduct a reinspection as set forth in Labor Code Section 6320. For further discussion of reinspections, see § 21.44[2].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsCitations & Inspections

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. "Inspection" is defined at 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code §§ 6313, 6314.5(b)(2). For discussion, see §§ 21.18[1], 21.40[2].

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code §§ 6309, 6314.5(b)(1); see also discussion in § 21.40[3].

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code §§ 6314.5(b)(5), 6320. For discussion of abatement, see § 21.44. For discussion of reinspections, see [7], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code §§ 6314.1(a), 6314.5(b)(4). For discussion, see § 21.02[2][d].

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code §§ 6314.5(b)(3), 6500 et seq.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code §§ 6314.5(b)(3), 6501.5.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code §§ 6314.5(b)(3), 9030 et seq.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-7.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code §§ 6307, 6314; Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Municipal Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 223, 227, 156 Cal. Rptr. 292 (Division's authority to conduct periodic routine inspections).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Lab. Code § 6314.5(c); but see discussion of inspection warrants in [3], below.

(n12)Footnote 12. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-14.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Lab. Code § 6322 (Division's obligation to maintain confidentiality of trade secrets and other confidential information obtained by Division in course of inspection or investigation). For discussion of provisions relating to preservation of trade secrets during proceedings before the Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board, see § 21.45[18][e].

(n14)Footnote 14. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-14.

(n15)Footnote 15. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-14.

(n16)Footnote 16. Lab. Code § 6314(a).

(n17)Footnote 17. Lab. Code § 6314(a).

(n18)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 6314(a); see also Lab. Code § 6322 (Division's obligation to preserve confidentiality).

(n19)Footnote 19. Lab. Code § 6314(d).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Lab. Code § 6314(d). The Division inspector must do this if there is no authorized employee representative.

(n21)Footnote 21. See Lab. Code § 6314(e).

(n22)Footnote 22. Lab. Code § 6314(d).

(n23)Footnote 23. Division of Labor Standards Enforcement v. Texaco, Inc. (1983) 152 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1 ; see also discussion in § 21.35.

(n24)Footnote 24. See Lab. Code §§ 6310, 6311; see also discussion in § 21.49.

(n25)Footnote 25. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-15.

(n26)Footnote 26. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-20; see Lab. Code § 6308.5.

(n27)Footnote 27. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-20.

(n28)Footnote 28. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-20; see Lab. Code § 6600 (time for appeal); see also discussion in § 21.45[3].

(n29)Footnote 29. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-20.

(n30)Footnote 30. Lab. Code § 6321; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 331.

(n31)Footnote 31. Lab. Code § 6321.

(n32)Footnote 32. Lab. Code § 6321; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 331.1(b).

(n33)Footnote 33. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 331.1(a)(1).

(n34)Footnote 34. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 331.1(a)(2).

(n35)Footnote 35. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 331.1(a)(3).

(n36)Footnote 36. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 331.2.

(n37)Footnote 37. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 331.3.

(n38)Footnote 38. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 331.4.

(n39)Footnote 39. Lab. Code § 6314(a).

(n40)Footnote 40. Lab. Code § 6314(b).

(n41)Footnote 41. Lab. Code § 6314(b).

(n42)Footnote 42. Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Municipal Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 223, 156 Cal. Rptr. 292 .

(n43)Footnote 43. Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Municipal Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 223, 231-232, 156 Cal. Rptr. 292 .

(n44)Footnote 44. Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Municipal Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 223, 231-234, 156 Cal. Rptr. 292 . In reaching its conclusion, the court in Salwasser I discussed and distinguished Marshall v. Barlow's, Inc. (1978) 436 U.S. 307, 320-321, 98 S. Ct. 1816, 56 L. Ed. 2d 305 , and Camara v. Municipal Court (1967) 387 U.S. 523, 538, 87 S. Ct. 1727, 18 L. Ed. 2d 930 , which had held that for the purposes of an administrative search, probable cause justifying the issuance of an inspection warrant may be based either on specific evidence of an existing violation or on a showing that "reasonable legislative or administrative standards for conducting an inspection" were satisfied in regard to a particular establishment.

(n45)Footnote 45. Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Municipal Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 223, 225-226, 234, 156 Cal. Rptr. 292 .

(n46)Footnote 46. Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Occupational Saf. & Health Appeals Bd. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 625, 262 Cal. Rptr. 836 .

(n47)Footnote 47. See Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Occupational Saf. & Health Appeals Bd. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 625, 629-630, 262 Cal. Rptr. 836 .

(n48)Footnote 48. Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Occupational Saf. & Health Appeals Bd. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 625, 630-631, 262 Cal. Rptr. 836 .

(n49)Footnote 49. Salwasser Manufacturing Co. v. Occupational Saf. & Health Appeals Bd. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 625, 631, 262 Cal. Rptr. 836 .

(n50)Footnote 50. Lab. Code § 6314(c).

(n51)Footnote 51. Lab. Code § 6314(e). Before January 1, 1994, an order to preserve the worksite could be issued only if the employer refused entry to the inspector or investigator during the investigation.

(n52)Footnote 52. Lab. Code § 6314(e).

(n53)Footnote 53. Lab. Code § 6314(e).

(n54)Footnote 54. Lab. Code § 6314(e).

(n55)Footnote 55. Lab. Code § 6314(e).

(n56)Footnote 56. Lab. Code § 6314.5(a). For discussion of injury and illness prevention programs, see § 21.12.

(n57)Footnote 57. Lab. Code § 6314.5(a).

(n58)Footnote 58. Lab. Code § 6314.5(a).

(n59)Footnote 59. Lab. Code § 6314.5(a).

(n60)Footnote 60. Lab. Code § 6314.5(a).

(n61)Footnote 61. Lab. Code § 6319(f).

67 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.42

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.42 Citations and Orders

[1] Citations

[a] Issuance

The Division will issue a citation to an employer whenever the Division determines in the course of an inspection or investigation that an employer has violated (1) any standard, rule, order,ⁿ¹ or regulation adopted by the Standards Board pursuant to Chapter 6 of Division 1 of the Labor Code;ⁿ² (2) any standard, rule, order, or regulation established by the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, pursuant to Part 1 of Division 5 of the Labor Code;ⁿ³ or (3) Health and Safety Code Section 25910.ⁿ⁴

Labor Code Section 6317 requires that the Division issue citations to employers with "reasonable promptness." No citation may be issued by the Division more than six months after the occurrence of the violation.ⁿ⁵

Citations may be issued by the Division representative at the time of the inspection and served personally on the employer or employer's representative, or subsequently issued and served by certified mail, return receipt requested.ⁿ⁶ Generally, the citation will be issued with a Cal/OSHA Form 160 (Employer's Report of Corrected Conditions of Alleged General and Regulatory Violations) or, when a serious violation is issued, a Cal/OSHA Form 161 (Signed Statement of Abatement of Alleged Serious Violation).ⁿ⁷ The employer is required to complete the appropriate abatement form, indicating the nature of the abatement taken, and return it to the issuing Division office on or before the date specified on the form. Failure to return the Signed Statement of Abatement of Alleged Serious Violation within 10 working days after the end of the period for abatement for a serious violation may result in additional civil penalties and enforcement action.ⁿ⁸

Notice of a proposed civil penalty for the alleged violation will either be issued and served on the employer concurrently with the citation, or mailed by certified mail within a reasonable time.ⁿ⁹

A copy of any citation issued to a farm labor contractor also will be forwarded by the Division to the Senior Deputy

Labor Commissioner of the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of the Department of Industrial Relations.ⁿ¹⁰

If the Division subsequently decides to amend a citation, an amended Cal/OSHA Form 2A will be issued and served on the employer, with a clear description of the nature of the amendment.ⁿ¹¹ A citation may be amended to correct errors, correct the type of violation designated, or extend the abatement date.ⁿ¹²

Failure by the employer to notify the Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board (OSHAB), within 15 working days of receipt of the citation, of the employer's intention to appeal or contest any part of a citation will cause the citation to become a final order of the OSHAB, not subject to judicial or agency review.ⁿ¹³ For discussion of appeal procedures, see § 21.45.

[b] Form and Content

By statute, citations issued to an employer must be in writing; describe the nature of the violation with particularity; refer to the code section, standard, rule, regulation, or order allegedly violated; and state a reasonable time for abatement (correction) of the alleged violation.ⁿ¹⁴

The citation is written on Cal/OSHA Form 2A. In addition to including the statutorily required information, the citation form identifies the employer, sets forth the employer's address and the location of the worksite inspected, and indicates the number of instances of violations found and the types of violations (i.e., serious, willful, repeat, general, regulatory, etc.).ⁿ¹⁵ The citation form also notifies the employer of the employer's duty to post the citation at or near the location of each alleged violation until it is corrected or for at least 3 working days, whichever is longer;ⁿ¹⁶ that civil penalties may be assessed as a result of the violation;ⁿ¹⁷ that the employer has 15 working days after receipt of the citation to file a notice of intention to appeal with the OSHAB;ⁿ¹⁸ and that failure to abate an unsafe condition within the time allowed for abatement may result in additional civil penalties.ⁿ¹⁹

[2] Classification of Violations

[a] Generally

The Labor Code and California Code of Regulations classify violations of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, and rules, orders, and standards promulgated thereunder, into various categories for purposes of penalty assessmentsⁿ²⁰ and for various other regulatory purposes.ⁿ²¹ The definitions of the different classes of violations are set forth in [b] through [f], below.

[b] Willful Violation

A willful violation is defined as one in which "evidence shows that the employer committed an intentional and knowing, as contrasted with inadvertent, violation, and the employer is conscious of the fact that what he is doing constitutes a violation of a safety law; or, even though the employer was not consciously violating a safety law, he was aware that an unsafe or hazardous condition existed and made no reasonable effort to eliminate the condition."ⁿ²²

[c] Repeat Violation

A repeat violation is defined as one "where the employer has corrected, or indicated correction of an earlier violation, for which a citation was issued, and upon a later inspection is found to have committed the same violation again within a period of three years immediately preceding the latter violation."ⁿ²³ For the purpose of considering whether a violation is a repeat violation, a repeat citation issued to employers having fixed establishments, such as factories, terminals, or stores, is limited to the particular cited establishment. For employers engaged in businesses having no fixed establishments, such as construction, painting, or excavation businesses, a repeat violation is based on prior violations cited within the same region of the Division.ⁿ²⁴

[d] Serious Violation

A serious violation is deemed to exist if "there is a substantial probability that death or serious physical harm could result from a violation, including, but not limited to, circumstances in which there is a substantial probability that either of the following could result in death or great bodily injury: (1) an exposure exceeding an established permissible exposure limit, or (2) the existence of one or more practices, means, methods, operations, or processes that have been adopted or are in use in the place of employment.n25 However, a serious violation will not be deemed to exist if the employer can demonstrate that it did not, and could not with the exercise of reasonable discretion, know of the presence of the violation.n25.1 In this context, "substantial probability" refers not to the probability that an accident or exposure will occur as a result of the violation, but rather to the probability that death or serious physical harm will result if an accident or exposure does occur as a result of the violation.n26

In cases involving carcinogens, a serious violation is a violation of any standard, order, or special order respecting the use of a carcinogen, as defined in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 330(f).n27 However, the violation will not be considered serious if the employer can demonstrate that it did not, and could not with the exercise of reasonable diligence, know of the presence of the violation or can demonstrate that the Division should have determined that the violation was minor and resulted in no substantial health hazard.n28

[e] General Violation

A general violation is one that "is specifically determined not to be of a serious nature, but has a relationship to occupational safety and health of employees."n29

The Division does not have the burden to prove lack of reasonable diligence as an essential element of the Division's prima facie case in order to establish a general violation of Cal/OSHA. When the Division alleges a serious violation, Labor Code § 6432 authorizes the employer to assert reasonable diligence as an affirmative defense. Although no parallel provision addresses employer diligence in the context of a general violation, there is no reason why the Division should have a heavier burden in proving a general violation than proving a serious violation.n29.1

[f] Regulatory Violation

A regulatory violation is other than one defined as serious or general that pertains to permit, posting, recordkeeping, and reporting requirements as established by regulation or statute.n30 For example, failures to obtain a permit, post citations or posters, keep required records, or report industrial accidents are classified as regulatory violations.n31

[3] Notice in Lieu of Citation

A notice in lieu of citation may be issued whenever the Division finds a violation during an investigation or inspection if the following conditions are met:n32

1. The violation either (a) does not have a direct relationship to the health or safety of an employee, or (b) has a direct, but not immediate, relationship to the health or safety of employee, and is of a general or regulatory nature;
2. The employer agrees to abate the violative condition within a reasonable time determined by the Division and agrees not to appeal the notice in lieu of citation; and
3. The number of first instance violations issued to the employer, whether general or regulatory in nature, is less than ten.

No notice in lieu of citation may be issued if the violations are serious, repeated, willful, or arise from a failure to abate.ⁿ³³ A notice in lieu of citation will have the same effect as a citation for the purpose of establishing repeat violations or a failure to abate.ⁿ³⁴

The employer's agreement to abate the condition and not to appeal the notice is evidenced by the employer's signature on the notice itself.ⁿ³⁵

[4] Types of Orders

[a] Temporary Restraining Orders

If the Division finds that the condition of any employment or place of employment, or the operation of any machine, device, apparatus, or equipment, constitutes a serious menace to the lives or safety of persons, the Division may apply to the superior court of the county in which such a place of employment, machine, device, apparatus, or equipment is situated for an injunction restraining the use or operation of the place or equipment until the condition is corrected.ⁿ³⁶

The Division's application will provide prima facie evidence for immediate issuance of such an injunction if it is supported by an affidavit showing the place of employment, machine, device, apparatus, or equipment is being operated in violation of a safety order or standard, or in violation of Health and Safety Code Section 25910, and that such use or operation constitutes a menace to the life or safety of any person employed thereabout.ⁿ³⁷ A copy of the applicable standard or order must be attached to the Division's application.ⁿ³⁸ The Division is not required to post a bond on applying for the injunction.ⁿ³⁹

[b] Orders Prohibiting Use

[i] Issuance, Posting, and Effect

Whenever the Division finds any place of employment, machine, device, apparatus or equipment, or part thereof, is in a dangerous condition, is not properly guarded, or is dangerously placed, such that it constitutes an imminent hazard to employees, the Division may issue an order prohibiting use, which prohibits entry into or use of the area or equipment.ⁿ⁴⁰ The scope of an order prohibiting use is limited to the immediate area of the imminent hazard.ⁿ⁴¹

In addition, if the Division has reasonable cause to believe that any workplace contains friable asbestos, and if there appears to be inadequate protection for employees at that workplace to the hazards of airborne asbestos fibers, the Division may issue an order prohibiting use.ⁿ⁴²

The Division inspector will affix a "yellow tag," usually a orange-yellow diamond-shaped notice, to the hazardous equipment or area, which notifies persons in the vicinity that an order prohibiting use or entry has been issued.ⁿ⁴³ Only a Division representative may remove the "yellow tag," and the tag will be removed only after the Division has determined that the place of employment, machine, device, apparatus, or equipment has been made safe and any required safeguards or safety devices have been provided.ⁿ⁴⁴

Entry into or use of the area or equipment while the "yellow tag" is effective is permitted only with the Division's knowledge and permission and solely for the purpose of eliminating the dangerous condition.ⁿ⁴⁵

Any person who, after the "yellow tag" or other notice of an order prohibiting use is attached, enters the place of employment, or uses or operates the place of employment, machine, device, apparatus, or equipment subject to the order before it has been made safe and before the required safeguards or safety devices have been supplied, or who defaces, destroys, or removes the "yellow tag" or other notice, is guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 or one year in the county jail, or both.ⁿ⁴⁶

[ii] Hearing to Contest Validity

Once a Division representative has issued an order prohibiting use, the employer may contest the order and must be granted a hearing by the Division, on request, to review the validity of the order.ⁿ⁴⁷ This hearing must be held within 24 hours after the employer's request.ⁿ⁴⁸ As with other Division enforcement actions, employees or their designated representatives are entitled to attend the employer's hearing on the order prohibiting use.ⁿ⁴⁹ The employer is responsible for informing employees of the right to participate, although as a courtesy the Division will attempt to contact any known employee representative on-site.ⁿ⁵⁰

The District Manager presides as the hearing officer, and the hearing is recorded either by tape recorder or court reporter.ⁿ⁵¹ The issue at the hearing is the validity of the order prohibiting use.ⁿ⁵² The Division presents evidence to establish the conditions justifying issuance of the order, the order issued, and proof of service of the order on the employer, either by personal service or return receipt requested mail.ⁿ⁵³ The employer is given the opportunity to cross-examine witnesses and call witnesses on the employer's behalf.ⁿ⁵⁴ The presiding hearing officer makes findings on the record as to the validity of the order prohibiting use based on all admissible evidence.ⁿ⁵⁵ Copies of the hearing record are provided to interested parties on request.ⁿ⁵⁶

[c] Special Orders

A special order is an order written by the Chief of the Division, or his or her representative, to correct an unsafe condition, device, or place of employment that poses a threat to the health or safety of an employee and which cannot be made safe under existing standards or orders of the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board.ⁿ⁵⁷ Special orders have the same effect as any other standard or order of the Standards Board, but apply only to the employment or place of employment described in the special order.ⁿ⁵⁸ A special order may be written with an order prohibiting use to address an imminent hazard for which there is no existing standard.ⁿ⁵⁹

A special order is written on Cal/OSHA Form 2B and is generally served on the employer by certified mail, return receipt requested.ⁿ⁶⁰

The employer has 15 working days from the date of receipt of the special order to notify the OSHAB of its intention to appeal any action or provision of the order.ⁿ⁶¹ The Special Order becomes a final order of the OSHAB, not subject to judicial or agency review, if no notice contesting the order is filed with the OSHAB within the 15-day time limit.ⁿ⁶² For discussion of appeal procedures, see § 21.45.

While a special order is like an order to correct rather than a citation for a violation, and therefore does not generally carry a civil penalty,ⁿ⁶³ failure to correct the unsafe condition described in the order within the period stated for abatement will result in the issuance of a citation and civil penalty for violation of the Special Order and failure to abate.ⁿ⁶⁴ The Division conducts follow-up inspections for each special order it issues.ⁿ⁶⁵

[d] Order to Take Special Action

An order to take special action refers to "any order written by the Chief or his or her authorized representative which requires the employer to comply with applicable provisions of Division 5 of the California Labor Code, or with specific standards, orders or regulations of the Standards Board whose enforcement upon the employer are at the discretion of the Division."ⁿ⁶⁶

In general, an order to take special action is issued when an unsafe condition can be made safe under an existing safety standard or regulation, but the standard does not set out the necessary means of compliance or the employer's duty to take such action arises only after the Division orders specific action. For example, requiring an employer to provide and pay for necessary personal protective clothing in a specific type of employment, pursuant to Title 8 California Code of

*Regulations Section 3383*ⁿ⁶⁷ would be a proper subject for an order to take special action. In contrast, a special order is written to correct an unsafe condition that cannot be made safe under existing standards and orders.ⁿ⁶⁸

An order to take special action is written on Cal/OSHA Form 2E and normally is served on the employer by certified mail, return receipt requested. No civil penalty is assessed on issuance of an order to take special action, unless the employer fails to comply with the order within the period specified for compliance. In such cases, the Division will issue a citation for violation of the order to take special action and assess a civil penalty as appropriate.ⁿ⁶⁹

The employer has 15 working days from the date of receipt of the order to take special action to notify the OSHAB of its intention to contest any part of the order,ⁿ⁷⁰ and failure to do so within the allotted time will allow the order to become a final order of the OSHAB, not subject to judicial or agency review.ⁿ⁷¹ For discussion of appeal procedures, see § 21.45.

[5] Information Memorandum

An information memorandum will be issued by a Division inspector to direct the employer's attention to a condition that has the potential of becoming hazardous to the safety and health of employees.ⁿ⁷² An information memorandum is usually issued in the field on Cal/OSHA Form 2D during an inspection or investigation, and carries no civil penalty.ⁿ⁷³ Whether or not to conduct a follow-up inspection is within the Division's discretion.ⁿ⁷⁴

[6] Notice of No Violation

If, after conducting an inspection or investigation, the Division finds no violation, it will issue a notice of no violation to the employer, which must be posted for three working days.ⁿ⁷⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Administrative Proceedings Citations & Inspections

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(e) (definition of "order").

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 140 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6300 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6317.

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6317.

(n6)Footnote 6. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2A; see also Lab. Code §§ 6317, 6319(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. See also Lab. Code § 6320(b) (Division must require employer to submit signed statement under penalty of perjury of abatement of serious violation, if not abated at time of violation).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code § 6320(b); see also discussion in §§ 21.43[3][g], 21.44[1].

(n9)Footnote 9. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 333; see Lab. Code § 6317; see also discussion in § 21.43[1].

(n10)Footnote 10. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2A.

(n11)Footnote 11. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2A.

(n12)Footnote 12. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2A.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Lab. Code §§ 6319(a),(b), 6600, 6601; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 333.

(n14)Footnote 14. Lab. Code § 6317.

(n15)Footnote 15. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332; see also discussion in [2], below.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Lab. Code § 6318(a); see also discussion in § 21.22.

(n17)Footnote 17. See Lab. Code §§ 6317, 6427-6435; see also discussion in § 21.43.

(n18)Footnote 18. See Lab. Code § 6319(a); see also discussion in § 21.45[3].

(n19)Footnote 19. See Lab. Code § 6430; see also discussion in §§ 21.42[3][g], 21.44[1].

(n20)Footnote 20. See discussion in § 21.43.

(n21)Footnote 21. See generally Lab. Code §§ 6427-6432; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 334.

(n22)Footnote 22. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 334(e); Rick's Electric, Inc. v. California Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1034-1035, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 847 .

(n23)Footnote 23. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 334(d).

(n24)Footnote 24. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 334(d).

(n25)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 6432(a).

(n26)Footnote 25.1. Lab. Code § 6432(b).

(n27)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 6432(c).

(n28)Footnote 27. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 334(c)(4). 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(f) defines "carcinogens" as including any of several listed cancer-causing substances for which standards have been adopted, as well as any other, non-listed substance for which standards are adopted and in effect due to cancer-causing properties, and any compound, mixture, or product containing such a substance, except as specifically exempted from such standards.

(n29)Footnote 28. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 334(c)(2).

(n30)Footnote 29. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 334(b).

(n31)Footnote 29.1. Overaa Construction v. California Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Board (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 235, 246-249, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 .

(n32)Footnote 30. 8 Cal. Code Reg § 334(a).

(n33)Footnote 31. 8 Cal. Code Reg § 334(a).

(n34)Footnote 32. Lab. Code § 6317; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332.I.

(n35)Footnote 33. Lab. Code § 6317; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332.1(a).

(n36)Footnote 34. See Lab. Code § 6317.

(n37)Footnote 35. See Lab. Code § 6317; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332.1(b).

(n38)Footnote 36. Lab. Code § 6323.

(n39)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 6324.

(n40)Footnote 38. Lab. Code § 6324.

(n41)Footnote 39. Lab. Code § 6324.

(n42)Footnote 40. See Lab. Code § 6325.

(n43)Footnote 41. See Lab. Code § 6325.

(n44)Footnote 42. Lab. Code § 6325.5.

(n45)Footnote 43. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-8; see Lab. Code § 6325 (Division required to post "conspicuous notice" of order prohibiting use).

(n46)Footnote 44. Lab. Code § 6325.

(n47)Footnote 45. See Lab. Code § 6325.

(n48)Footnote 46. Lab. Code § 6326.

(n49)Footnote 47. Lab. Code § 6327.

(n50)Footnote 48. Lab. Code § 6327.

(n51)Footnote 49. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-8.

(n52)Footnote 50. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-8.

(n53)Footnote 51. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-8.

(n54)Footnote 52. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-8.

(n55)Footnote 53. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-8.

(n56)Footnote 54. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-8.

(n57)Footnote 55. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-8.

(n58)Footnote 56. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-8.

(n59)Footnote 57. Lab. Code § 6305(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332.2.

(n60)Footnote 58. Lab. Code § 6305(b).

(n61)Footnote 59. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2B; see Lab. Code §§ 6305(b), 6308, 6325.

(n62)Footnote 60. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2B.

(n63)Footnote 61. Lab. Code § 6600.5.

(n64)Footnote 62. Lab. Code § 6601.5.

(n65)Footnote 63. cf. Lab. Code § 6317 (Division may impose civil penalty with citation for violation).

(n66)Footnote 64. See Lab. Code §§ 6317, 6430.

(n67)Footnote 65. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2B; see Lab. Code § 6320(a)(1).

(n68)Footnote 66. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(g); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332.3; see also Lab. Code § 6308 (Division's general authority to issue orders relating to employee health and safety).

(n69)Footnote 67. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3383(a) provides that "[b]ody protection may be required for employees whose work exposes parts of their body, not otherwise protected as required by other orders in this article, to hazardous or flying substances or objects."

(n70)Footnote 68. See Lab. Code § 6305; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332.2; see also discussion in [c], above.

(n71)Footnote 69. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2E.

(n72)Footnote 70. Lab. Code § 6600.5.

(n73)Footnote 71. Lab. Code § 6601.5.

(n74)Footnote 72. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2D; see also Lab. Code §§ 6307, 6308 (Division's general authority and jurisdiction over employee health and safety).

(n75)Footnote 73. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2D.

(n76)Footnote 74. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-2D.

(n77)Footnote 75. Lab. Code § 6318(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332.4.

68 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.43

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.43 Civil Penalties

[1] Basis and Procedure for Assessing

The Division is authorized to impose civil penalties against an employer for all violations of any standard, rule, order, or regulation found in the course of an inspection or investigation.ⁿ¹ However, assessment of a penalty may be precluded by statute under some circumstances. For discussion of these circumstances, see [1A], below.

The Division must serve the employer by certified mail with a notice of proposed penalty, either at the time that the citations are served or within reasonable time after the date the violation occurred.ⁿ²

The employer may appeal the amount of proposed civil penalties by filing a notice of intention to contest the penalty with the OSHAB within 15 working days after receipt of the notice of proposed civil penalty.ⁿ³ If the employer fails to file a notice of intention to contest the penalty within that time, the notice of proposed civil penalty will become a final order of the OSHAB, not subject to judicial or agency review.ⁿ⁴ For discussion of appeal procedures, see § 21.45.

[1A] Circumstances in Which Penalty Is Not Assessed

No civil penalty shall be assessed against any new employer in the state for a violation of any standard developed pursuant to Labor Code Section 6401.7(a) for a period of one year after the date the new employer establishes a business in the state, if the employer has made a good faith effort to comply with any standard developed pursuant to Section 6401.7(a).^{n4.1} However, this provision does not apply if the employer is found to have committed a serious, willful, or repeated violation of that standard, or fails to abate the violation and is assessed a penalty pursuant to Labor Code Section 6430.^{n4.2}

An employer who adopts and implements the Model Injury and Illness Prevention Program for Non-High-Hazard Employment, to be prepared by the division,^{n4.3} will not be assessed a civil penalty for the first citation for a violation of the provisions of Labor Code Section 6401.7, issued after the employer's adoption and implementation of the model program.^{n4.4}

[2] Factors Used to Assess Civil Penalties

[a] Overview of Factors

The Labor Code provides a maximum penalty for each of the different types of violationsⁿ⁵ and directs the Division to promulgate regulations governing the determination of the amount of the penalty in particular cases.ⁿ⁶ The Code requires the Division to consider the following four factors in determining the appropriate amount of the penalty in a particular case:ⁿ⁷

1. The size of the business of the employer being charged;
2. The gravity of the violation;
3. The good faith of the employer, including timely abatement; and
4. The employer's history of previous violations.

Pursuant to this directive, the Division has promulgated regulations setting forth precise criteria for evaluating each of these factors in particular cases.ⁿ⁸ These criteria are discussed in [b] through [e], below. For discussion of the precise effect of these factors on the calculation of the penalty, see [3], below.

Based on the evidence in a given case, the Division has the authority to make adjustments to the character of a violation and the corresponding civil penalty.ⁿ⁹ However, whenever a serious injury, illness, exposure, or death is caused by any serious, willful, or repeated violation, or by a failure to correct a serious violation within the specified abatement period, the Division may not reduce the civil penalty for any reason except the size of the business of the employer cited.ⁿ¹⁰

Furthermore, if an employer who was cited for a serious violation fails to return to the Division, within 10 working days of the abatement date, a statement signed under penalty of perjury explaining the abatement measures completed as required by the citation, the Division must revoke any adjustments to the amount of civil penalty based on abatement of the violation.ⁿ¹¹ In addition, the employer will be assessed penalties for failure to abate retroactively to the abatement date, unless the employer provides sufficient evidence to establish that the violation was abated before that date.ⁿ¹² Penalties for failure to abate are calculated on a daily basis, pursuant to Labor Code Section 6430.ⁿ¹³

[b] Gravity of Violation

The Division determines the gravity of a general or serious violationⁿ¹⁴ from its findings and evidence obtained during the inspection or investigation, from its files and records, and other records of governmental agencies pertaining to occupational injury, illness, or disease. The degree of gravity is determined by assessing and evaluating three criteria: severity, extent, and likelihood.ⁿ¹⁵

"Severity" is defined as either the degree of discomfort, temporary disability, and time loss from normal activity (including work) that an employee is likely to suffer, if the violation pertains to employee illness or disease, or if the violation does not pertain to employee illness or disease (i.e., pertains to injury), the type and amount of medical treatment likely to be required or which would be appropriate for the type of injury that would most likely result from the violation.ⁿ¹⁶ Based on these criteria, the Division ranks a particular general violation as having "Low," "Medium," or "High" severity.ⁿ¹⁷ General violations are rated as having High severity if they result in the loss of more than one day from regular work or normal activity, or if they require more than 24 hours of hospitalization.ⁿ¹⁸ The severity of a serious violation is always considered to be High.ⁿ¹⁹

The criteria for determining the "extent" of the violation also depend on whether or not the violation pertains to employee illness or disease. If the violation does pertain to illness or disease, the extent is rated "Low," "Medium," or "High," depending on the number of employees exposed. Extent is rated as Low if 1 to 5 employees are exposed, Medium if 6 to 25 employees are exposed, and High if 26 or more employees are exposed.ⁿ²⁰ If the violation does not pertain to illness or disease, extent is based on the degree to which a safety order is violated and is related to the ratio of the number of violations of a certain order to the number of possibilities for violation on the premises or site. Extent is rated as Low if it involves an isolated violation of the safety standard or less than 15% of the units are in violation, Medium if an occasional violation occurs or 15-50% of the units are in violation, and High if numerous violations of the safety standard occur or more than 50% of the units are in violation.ⁿ²¹

"Likelihood" refers to the probability that injury, illness, or disease will occur as a result of the violation, and is based on (1) the number of employees exposed to the hazard created by the violation, and (2) the extent to which the violation has in the past resulted in injury, illness, or disease to employees of the firm or the industry in general, as shown by experience, available statistics, or records. Depending on these criteria, likelihood is rated as "Low," "Medium," or "High."ⁿ²²

[c] Size of Employer's Business

For purposes of adjusting penalties based on the size of the employer's business,ⁿ²³ the Division divides employers into five size classifications, depending on the number of individuals employed at the time of the inspection or investigation: (1) 10 or fewer employees; (2) 11 to 25 employees; (3) 26 to 60 employees; (4) 61 to 100 employees; (5) more than 100 employees.ⁿ²⁴

[d] Employer's Good Faith

The adjustment for the employer's "good faith"ⁿ²⁵ is based on the quality and extent of the employer's safety program, including the employer's awareness of Cal/OSHA and indications of the employer's desire to comply with the Act as demonstrated by the employer's accomplishments in this regard. An employer's good faith is rated as "Good" if the employer has an effective safety program, "Fair" if the employer has an average safety program, and "Poor" if the employer has no effective safety program.ⁿ²⁶

[e] History of Previous Violations

The employer's history of previous violationsⁿ²⁷ is determined by evaluating the Division's records of the employer's previous violations. The employer's history will be rated as Good if no serious, repeat, or willful violations and less than one general or regulatory violation per 100 employees has occurred at the establishment within the past 3 years; Fair if no serious, repeat, or willful violations and less than 20 general or regulatory violations per 100 employees have occurred at the establishment within the past 3 years; and Poor if one (or more) serious, repeat, or willful violation or more than 20 general or regulatory violations per 100 employees have occurred at the establishment within the past 3 years.ⁿ²⁸

[3] Calculating Amount of Civil Penalty

[a] Overview of Penalty Calculations

The Division has promulgated regulations setting forth a detailed formula for calculating the amount of the civil penalty in a given case. These guidelines are set forth in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 336. Under the Division's guidelines, the base penalty is determined by the type of violation involved (i.e., regulatory, general, or serious).ⁿ²⁹ The base penalty is then generally adjusted based on the Division's evaluation, pursuant to its guidelines,ⁿ³⁰ of the four factors discussed in [2], above,ⁿ³¹ subject to the statutory maximum amounts.ⁿ³² If the violation is a repeat or willful violation, the penalty amount is increased,ⁿ³³ up to the statutory maximum.ⁿ³⁴ Additional penalties are imposed for failure to abate a regulatory, general, or serious violation.ⁿ³⁵

The criteria for calculating different types of penalties are further discussed in [b] through [i], below.

Amounts of civil penalties are rounded down to the next whole dollar during the calculation stages, and final figures are adjusted downward to the next lower five dollar value.^{n35.1}

[b] Nonserious (General) Violations

The statutory maximum proposed penalty for a nonserious or "general" violationⁿ³⁶ is $7,000 per violation.ⁿ³⁷

The base penalty of a general violation is determined by its severity, as determined by the criteria discussed in [2][b], above.ⁿ³⁸ The base penalty is $1,000 if the severity is rated Low, $1,500 if the severity is rated Medium, and $2,000 if the severity is rated High.ⁿ³⁹

This base penalty is then adjusted for "extent" of the violationⁿ⁴⁰ by subtracting 25% of the base penalty if the extent is rated Low, making no adjustment if the extent is rated Medium, or adding 25% of the base penalty if the extent is High.ⁿ⁴¹ Next, the penalty is adjusted for the "likelihood" factor,ⁿ⁴² by further reducing the penalty by 25% if likelihood is rated Low, making no adjustment if likelihood is rated Medium, and adding 25% if likelihood is rated High.ⁿ⁴³ The resulting figure is referred to as the "gravity-based penalty."ⁿ⁴⁴

The Division may make further adjustments to the gravity-based penalty of a general violation based on the size of the employer's business, the employer's good faith, and the employer's history of previous violations, as determined under the criteria discussed in [2][c]-[e], above.ⁿ⁴⁵ⁿ⁴⁶ 40% of the gravity-based penalty is subtracted if the employer has 10 or fewer employees; 30% if the employer has 11-25 employees; 20% if the employer has 26-60 employees; 10% if the employer has 61-100 employees; and no adjustment is made if the employer has over 100 employees.ⁿ⁴⁷ If the Division inspector rates the employer's good faith as Good, 30% of the gravity-based penalty is subtracted; if the employer's good faith is rated as Fair, 15% of the gravity-based penalty is subtracted; and no adjustment is made if the employer's good faith rating is Poor.ⁿ⁴⁸ The Division inspector also evaluates the history of previous violations by the employer, and 10% of the gravity-based penalty is subtracted if the employer's history is Good, 5% is subtracted if the history is Fair, and no adjustment is made if the history is Poor.ⁿ⁴⁹

After making the above calculations, the resulting penalty is called the adjusted penalty.ⁿ⁵⁰ The Division may allow an additional "abatement credit" adjustment. If, at the time a citation was issued, the employer was making a good-faith effort to abate the alleged violation pursuant to a written recommendation of a Cal/OSHA consultant from the Consultation Service, the Division may waive all penalties assessed for a general violation.ⁿ⁵¹

Even if the employer does not qualify for a penalty reduction for good-faith abatement based on the recommendations of a Cal/OSHA consultant, the employer will be given an additional 50% reduction of the adjusted penalty amount for a general violation on the presumption that the employer will correct the cited violations by the abatement date.ⁿ⁵² Failure to abate in accordance with this presumption subjects the employer to further penalties.^{n52.1} With respect to general violations, this abatement credit is not available for repeated or willful violations.^{n52.2} The resulting penalty amount is called the proposed penalty.ⁿ⁵³

■ ILLUSTRATION

Employer is cited for a general violation for one instance of the exposure of 5 employees at a company of 60 employees to a machine that lacks a certain required safety device. No actual injury occurred as a result of the violation. The Division rates the severity of the violation as Medium, since the type of injury that would most likely result from the violation would most likely require medical attention, but not more than 24 hours of hospitalization.ⁿ⁵⁴ The Division further finds that "likelihood" is Moderate, that Employer has an average safety program (and hence a "good faith" rating of Fair),ⁿ⁵⁵ and rates its history of previous violations as Good. The base penalty, based on the severity rating of Medium, would be $1,500.ⁿ⁵⁶ Since the violation was an isolated one, the "extent" rating would be Low,ⁿ⁵⁷ so 25% of the base penalty, or $375, would be subtracted, leaving a penalty of $1,125.ⁿ⁵⁸ Next, the penalty is adjusted for likelihood. Since the violation is rated Medium on this factor, no adjustment is made, and the gravity-based penalty would be $1,125.ⁿ⁵⁹ Next, the gravity-based penalty would be adjusted based on the size of Employer's business. Since Employer has 60 employees, 20% of the gravity-based penalty, or $225, would be subtracted, leaving a balance of $900.ⁿ⁶⁰ Since Employer's "good faith" rating is Fair, an additional 15% of the gravity-based penalty, or $168, would be subtracted, leaving a balance of $732.ⁿ⁶¹ Employer would receive a further reduction of 10% of the gravity-based penalty, or $112, for its previous history rating of Good.ⁿ⁶² Employer's adjusted penalty would therefore be $620. The adjusted penalty will further be reduced by 50%, based on the presumption that the employer will abate the violation by the date set forth in the citation, resulting in a proposed penalty of $310.ⁿ⁶³ (Note that calculations are rounded off, as discussed in [a], above.)ⁿ⁶⁴

[c] Serious Violations

The statutory maximum penalty for a serious violationⁿ⁶⁵ is $25,000 per violation.ⁿ⁶⁶ Because of the extreme gravity of a serious violation, the Division's guidelines for calculating the amount of the penalty start with a base penalty of $5,000.ⁿ⁶⁷ In general, this base amount is adjusted for extent and likelihood,ⁿ⁶⁸ to obtain the "gravity-based" penalty, which is then subject to further adjustments.ⁿ⁶⁹

However, certain violations are subject to penalties with set amounts, specific maximum amounts, or adjustment limitations. An employer who violates any Cal/OSHA standard, order, or special order respecting the use of a carcinogen, which is determined to be a serious violation, will be assessed a total nonadjustable civil penalty of $2,000 for each violation.ⁿ⁷⁰ If the employer commits a serious violation resulting in death or serious injury, illness, or exposure to a hazardous substance,ⁿ⁷¹ the maximum penalty is $7,000, which may not be reduced, except with respect to the factor of business size.ⁿ⁷² Any person owning or having custody, management, or operation of an elevator who operates or permits the operation of the elevator in a condition that is dangerous to life or the safety of any person, or who operates or permits the operation of the elevator in violation of any Order Prohibiting Use issued by the Division, may be assessed a maximum civil penalty of $2,000.ⁿ⁷³ Any employer who commits a serious violationⁿ⁷⁴ of any tower crane standard, order, or special order will be assessed a penalty of $2,000, which is not adjustable.ⁿ⁷⁵

Subject to the exceptions noted above, the base penalty may be adjusted for "extent" and "likelihood" in the same manner as a general violationⁿ⁷⁶ to yield the gravity-based penalty.ⁿ⁷⁷ The gravity-based penalty may then be reduced for the size of the employer's business, the employer's good faith, and the employer's history of previous violations in the same manner as a general violation,ⁿ⁷⁸ except that employers who do not have operative injury prevention programs will receive no adjustment for their good faith or for their history of previous violations.ⁿ⁷⁹ The resulting penalty is the adjusted penalty.ⁿ⁸⁰

If, at the time of citation, an employer was making a good-faith effort to abate the alleged violation pursuant to written recommendations of the Cal/OSHA Consultation Service, all adjustable penalties for serious violations may be reduced by 50%.ⁿ⁸¹ Noncompliance with abatement requirements, in contradiction to an employer's statement of compliance, results in a recomputed penalty, which is not adjustable under Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 336(d) except with respect to the factor of business size.ⁿ⁸²

In addition, an abatement credit of 50% is given on the presumption that the employer will correct the violations by the abatement date, resulting in a "proposed penalty."ⁿ⁸³ Failure to abate in accordance with this presumption subjects the employer to further penalties.ⁿ⁸⁴ This abatement credit is not available for (1) repeated or willful violations; (2) serious violations with "high" ratings for extent and likelihood; (3) serious violations involving the use of a carcinogen; or (4) serious violations causing death, or serious injury, illness, or exposure to hazardous substances.ⁿ⁸⁵

[d] Regulatory Violations

In general, the maximum statutory civil penalty for regulatory violationsⁿ⁸⁶ involving posting, reporting, or recordkeeping requirements is $7,000 per violation.ⁿ⁸⁷ Except as discussed below, a minimum proposed penalty of $500 is assessed against the employer, which may be increased or decreased based on the employer's size, good faith, and history of previous violations,ⁿ⁸⁸ as discussed in [b], above. However, no abatement credit may be given for regulatory violations.ⁿ⁸⁹

If the regulatory violation involves a carcinogen standard, other than failure to report use of a carcinogen, the base penalty is $1000, and no abatement credit may be given.ⁿ⁹⁰ However, the penalty may be adjusted for the employer's size, good faith, and history of previous violations,ⁿ⁹¹ as discussed in [b], above. The minimum proposed civil penalty for failure to report use of a carcinogenⁿ⁹² is $2,500, which may be adjusted for business size, good faith, and history, but is not subject to an abatement credit.ⁿ⁹³

Any employer who violates the permit requirements regarding excavations, trenches, construction, demolition, and underground diesel-engine use,ⁿ⁹⁴ or the registration requirements regarding asbestos-related work,ⁿ⁹⁵ will be assessed a minimum proposed civil penalty of $1,250, which may be adjusted for business size, good faith, and history, but is not subject to abatement credit.ⁿ⁹⁶ The minimum penalty for violation of these requirements is $250.ⁿ⁹⁷

Failure to obtain or post a valid elevator permit carries a penalty of up to $1,000.ⁿ⁹⁸

Any employer who fails to timely report an employee's injury, illness or death in violation of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 342(a) will be assessed a minimum proposed penalty of $5,000.^{n98.1}

[e] Willful Violations

If a violation is characterized as willful, as defined in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 334(e),ⁿ⁹⁹ the penalty is enhanced in an amount based on its initial characterization (i.e., as general, serious, or regulatory).ⁿ¹⁰⁰

For a willful general or willful regulatory violation, the proposed penalty amount is multiplied by five.ⁿ¹⁰¹ For a serious violation that is also willful, the proposed penalty is multiplied by ten.ⁿ¹⁰²

The statutory maximum total penalty for a willful violation is $70,000 per violation; the minimum penalty is $5,000.ⁿ¹⁰³

■ ILLUSTRATION

Assume the same facts as those set forth in [b], above, except that the Division finds that the violation was willful. The proposed penalty of $310 would be multiplied by five, resulting in a penalty of $1,550. However, since this is less than the statutory minimum, the amount of the penalty would be $5,000.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

[f] Repeat Violations

The proposed penalty for a regulatory, general, or serious violation, not involving use of a carcinogen, is doubled for the first repeat violation, quadrupled for the second repeat violation, and increased tenfold for the third repeat violation.ⁿ¹⁰⁵ The statutory maximum penalty is $70,000 for a repeat violation; the minimum penalty is $5,000 for each such violation.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ Moreover, employers who are repeat violators will not receive any adjustment of the penalty based on the employer's good faith or the employer's history of previous violations.ⁿ¹⁰⁷

A repeat regulatory violation concerning reporting requirements for carcinogens carries a penalty of $5,000 for the first repeat violation, $10,000 for the second repeat violation, and $20,000 for the third repeat violation.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ A repeat serious violation concerning use of a carcinogen carries a penalty of $10,000 for the first repeat violation, $20,000 for the second repeat violation, and $40,000 for the third repeat.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ Penalties for repeat regulatory and repeat serious violations involving carcinogens are not subject to adjustment.ⁿ¹¹⁰

With regard to a violation resulting in death, or serious injury, illness, or exposure to a hazardous substance,ⁿ¹¹¹ the computation of the proposed penalty for a repeated violation is not subject to reduction, except for the factor of business size.ⁿ¹¹²

[g] Penalties for Failure to Abate Violations

An employer who fails to correct or abate a violation within the time allowed by the Division for such abatement will be assessed a civil penalty of up to $15,000 for each day during which the violation or failure to abate continues.ⁿ¹¹³

Notwithstanding the above limitation, if the Division finds on reinspection that an employer who submitted a signed statement affirming compliance with the abatement terms pursuant to *Lab. Code § 6320*ⁿ¹¹⁴ has not abated the violation, any adjustment to the civil penalty based on the abatement will be rescinded and the additional civil penalty assessed for failure to abate will not be adjusted for the good faith of the employer or for the employer's history of previous violations.ⁿ¹¹⁵

In addition, regardless of the limitation in Labor Code § 6430(a), any employer who submits a signed statement affirming compliance with the abatement terms pursuant to *Lab. Code § 6320(b)*ⁿ¹¹⁶ and is found by the Division not to have abated the violation, is guilty of a public offense punishable by imprisonment in the county jail for a term not exceeding one year, or by a fine not exceeding $30,000 (or, if the defendant is a corporation or limited liability company, by a fine not exceeding $300,000), or by both the applicable fine and imprisonment.ⁿ¹¹⁷ In determining the amount of the fine, the court will consider "all relevant circumstances," including but not limited to, the nature, circumstance, extent, and gravity of the violation, any prior history of violations, the defendant's ability to pay, and any other matters that the interests of justice require.ⁿ¹¹⁸ Moreover, nothing in Labor Code § 6430 will be construed to prevent prosecution under any other law that may apply.ⁿ¹¹⁹

The amount of the abatement credit will be assessed as part of the failure to abate. For serious violations, this amount cannot exceed the remainder of $7,000 less the initial proposed penalty.ⁿ¹²⁰

In addition, a penalty is assessed based on the initial gravity-based penalty for each calendar day that the violation continues unabated after expiration of the abatement period. The gravity-based penalty is reduced by the reevaluated adjustment factors, subject to limitations regarding a high degree of gravity or employer negligence.ⁿ¹²¹ The adjustment factors of business size, good faith, and history are determined by evaluation of the circumstances at the time of the subsequent inspection when the failure to abate is discovered. The maximum daily additional penalty for failure to abate is $15,000.ⁿ¹²²

Except when the gravity of the violation is high and exposure to employees is continuous, or when the employer has exhibited a high degree of negligence in failing to correct the violation, the daily penalty for failure to abate a regulatory or general violation may be further reduced up to 90 percent for the first 120 days the violation continues, and up to 50 percent thereafter if the violation does not bear a direct relationship on employee health and safety. The daily penalty for a serious violation may be reduced up to 50 percent when gravity is low, and the history and good faith factors are both "good."ⁿ¹²³

In the case of multiple instances of a violation, if on inspection some instances are abated and others are not, the daily penalty is calculated in proportion to the extent that the violation has been abated.ⁿ¹²⁴

If the employer fails to abate a serious violation and the Division has determined that the failure to abate caused death, or serious injury, illness, or exposure to a hazardous substance,n125 the penalty is not adjustable under the provisions related to failure to abate, but the penalty may be adjusted based on the factor of size.n126 If the employer fails to abate a serious violation of a crane standard, order, or special order, and the Division has determined that the failure to abate caused death or serious injury,n127 the penalty, which is not adjustable, is $14,000 for each calendar day.n128

If it is determined after reinspection, that the employer has not complied with the abatement requirements of the Division, and the employer has previously submitted a statement affirming compliance, the recomputed penalty is not adjustable, except based on the factor of business size.n129

[h] Multiple Violations Arising Out of Single Hazard

When the Division issues multiple citations for multiple violations created by a single hazard, the Division has the discretion to depart from the usual criteria to mitigate the cumulative effect of the penalties.n130 The discretion to mitigate is not available if the penalty was assessed for a serious, willful, or repeated violation; or for failure to abate a serious violation determined to have caused death, or serious injury, illness, or exposure to a hazardous substance.n131 It is inapplicable to a regulatory, general, or serious violation if the employer does not have an operative injury prevention program.n132

[i] Permit Violations

An employer in violation of the permit requirements in *Labor Code Section 6500*n133 may be assessed the appropriate civil penalty for a regulatory, general, serious, repeat, willful, or failure-to-abate violation.n134

[j] Failure to File Required Reports

Any employer or physician who fails to comply with the employee illness or injury reporting requirements in Labor Code Sections 6409(a) (doctor's first report), 6409.1 (employer's report), 6409.2 (responding police or fire agency report), 6409.3 (report of treatment for pesticide poisoning), 6410 (form, contents, and detail of required reports) may be assessed a civil penalty of not less than $50 nor more than $200 by the Director of Industrial Relations.n135 The assessments may be contested in the manner provided in Labor Code Section 3725 (procedure for contesting penalties assessed for violation of workers' compensation insurance requirements).n136 Penalties assessed for failure to comply with these reporting requirements are deposited in the General Fund.n137

[k] Violations Involving Cranes

If the employer commits a serious, repeated, or willful repeated violation of a crane standard, order, or special order, and the Division has determined that the violation caused death or serious injury,n138 the penalty is $140,000, which is not adjustable.n139

[4] Civil Penalties Assessed Against Government Employers

Civil or administrative penalties assessed against a school district, community college district, California State University, the University of California, or other specified educational entities must be deposited in the Workplace Health and Safety Revolving Fundn140 and refunded or used to assist schools in establishing effective occupational injury and illness programs.n141

[5] Enforcement of Civil Penalties

After the expiration of the time for appealing the civil penalty,n142 if the employer does not appeal, the Department of Industrial Relations may file with the clerk of the superior court in any county (1) a certified copy of the citation and notice of civil penalty, (2) the Department's certification that the penalty remains unpaid, and (3) the Division's proof of service of the above items on the employer.ⁿ¹⁴³ If the employer has appealed, the Department may, after exhaustion of all review procedures,ⁿ¹⁴⁴ file with the clerk items (1) and (2) above, plus a certified copy of the OSHAB's order, findings, or decision, and proof of service on the employer at the address shown on the OSHAB's official address record.ⁿ¹⁴⁵

Immediately on the Department's filing of a notice of civil penalty and the other items described above, the clerk of the superior court must enter judgment for the State of California against the employer for the amount of the civil penalty, plus interest due for each day from the date of issuance of the notice of civil penalty that the penalty remains unpaid.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ The clerk may not charge a fee for this service.ⁿ¹⁴⁷ The Department must serve the notice of entry of judgment on the employer, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 554.6.ⁿ¹⁴⁸

The judgment entered against the employer bears the same rate of interest and has the same effect as other judgments.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ The judgment is given the same preference as is allowed by Government Code Section 7170 for other judgments rendered for tax claims.ⁿ¹⁵⁰

Notwithstanding Code of Civil Procedure Section 340 (the general limitations period for penalties and forfeitures), an action to collect a Cal/OSHA civil penalty must be commenced no later than three years from the date that the notice of civil penalty becomes final.ⁿ¹⁵¹

[6] Notice of Penalty to Contractors' State License Board

The Division must provide the Contractors' State License Board with a certified copy of the notice of civil penalty if (1) the employer served with a notice of civil penalty is, or is believed to be, a state-licensed building contractor; (2) the notice of civil penalty has become a final order under *Labor Code Section 6601*ⁿ¹⁵² or review procedures have been exhausted;ⁿ¹⁵³ and (3) the employer has failed to pay the civil penalty for a period of 60 days following the employer's receipt of the notice of civil penalty.ⁿ¹⁵⁴ Failure to pay a civil penalty results in automatic suspension of the contractor's license by operation of law.ⁿ¹⁵⁵

When the employer has paid the civil penalty referred to in the certified copy of the notice of civil penalty that was provided to the License Board, including any interest owed on the penalty, the Division must provide the employer with a written confirmation or receipt stating that the employer has paid the amount owed.ⁿ¹⁵⁶ The employer may then seek reinstatement of his or her contractor's license.ⁿ¹⁵⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Procedure Remedies General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Administrative Proceedings General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Civil Liability

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6317.

(n2)Footnote 2. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 333.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code §§ 6319(b), 6600; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 333.

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6601; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 333.

(n5)Footnote 4.1. Lab. Code § 6319.3(a), (b), 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(10).

(n6)Footnote 4.2. Lab. Code § 6319.3(b), 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(e)(11).

(n7)Footnote 4.3. The division was required to prepare the model program pursuant to legislation operative January 1, 1994. Lab. Code § 6401.7(j)(1).

(n8)Footnote 4.4. Lab. Code § 6401.7(j)(1).

(n9)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code §§ 6427-6435; see also discussion in [3], below.

(n10)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code § 6319(c), (d).

(n11)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code § 6319(c).

(n12)Footnote 8. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335.

(n13)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 6319(g).

(n14)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 6319(d).

(n15)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 6320(b).

(n16)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 6320(b).

(n17)Footnote 13. See discussion in [3][g], below.

(n18)Footnote 14. See Lab. Code § 6319(c)(2).

(n19)Footnote 15. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a).

(n20)Footnote 16. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(1).

(n21)Footnote 17. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(1)(A).

(n22)Footnote 18. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(1)(A).

(n23)Footnote 19. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(1)(B).

(n24)Footnote 20. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(2)(i).

(n25)Footnote 21. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(2)(ii).

(n26)Footnote 22. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(3).

(n27)Footnote 23. See Lab. Code § 6319(c)(1).

(n28)Footnote 24. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(b).

(n29)Footnote 25. See Lab. Code § 6319(c)(3).

(n30)Footnote 26. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(c).

(n31)Footnote 27. See Lab. Code § 6319(c)(4).

(n32)Footnote 28. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(d).

- (n33)Footnote 29. See discussion in § 21.42[2].
- (n34)Footnote 30. See Lab. Code § 6319(c), (d); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335.
- (n35)Footnote 31. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)-(e).
- (n36)Footnote 32. See Lab. Code §§ 6427, 6428.
- (n37)Footnote 33. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(g), (h).
- (n38)Footnote 34. See Lab. Code § 6429.
- (n39)Footnote 35. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f); Lab. Code § 6430.
- (n40)Footnote 35.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(j).
- (n41)Footnote 36. For definition, see § 21.42[2][e].
- (n42)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 6427.
- (n43)Footnote 38. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(1)(A).
- (n44)Footnote 39. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(b).
- (n45)Footnote 40. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(2), discussed in [2][b], above.
- (n46)Footnote 41. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(b).
- (n47)Footnote 42. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(3) (likelihood that injury, illness, or disease will occur because of violation).
- (n48)Footnote 43. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(b).
- (n49)Footnote 44. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(b).
- (n50)Footnote 45. See Lab. Code § 6319(c)(1), (3), (4); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 335(b)-(d), 336(d).
- (n51)Footnote 46. [Reserved]
- (n52)Footnote 47. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(1).
- (n53)Footnote 48. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(2).
- (n54)Footnote 49. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(3).
- (n55)Footnote 50. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d).
- (n56)Footnote 51. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(4)(A).
- (n57)Footnote 52. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(e).
- (n58)Footnote 52.1. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f), discussed in [g], below.
- (n59)Footnote 52.2. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(e).

- (n60)Footnote 53. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(e).
- (n61)Footnote 54. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(1)(A).
- (n62)Footnote 55. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(c).
- (n63)Footnote 56. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(b).
- (n64)Footnote 57. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(2).
- (n65)Footnote 58. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(b).
- (n66)Footnote 59. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(b).
- (n67)Footnote 60. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(1).
- (n68)Footnote 61. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(2).
- (n69)Footnote 62. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(3).
- (n70)Footnote 63. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(e).
- (n71)Footnote 64. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(j).
- (n72)Footnote 65. For definition, see § 21.42[2][d].
- (n73)Footnote 66. Lab. Code § 6428.
- (n74)Footnote 67. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(c)(1). The severity factor for a serious violation is always rated High. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 335(a)(1)(B).
- (n75)Footnote 68. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(c)(1), discussed below.
- (n76)Footnote 69. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d), (e), discussed below.
- (n77)Footnote 70. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 316(c)(2); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(5), (e)(3); see also Lab. Code § 9060(b).
- (n78)Footnote 71. See Lab. Code § 6302.
- (n79)Footnote 72. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 316(c)(2); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(1), (7), (e)(4), (f)(3).
- (n80)Footnote 73. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(c)(4).
- (n81)Footnote 74. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 334(c)(1).
- (n82)Footnote 75. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(c)(5).
- (n83)Footnote 76. See discussion in [b], above.
- (n84)Footnote 77. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(c)(1).
- (n85)Footnote 78. See Lab. Code § 6319(c)(1), (3), (4); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(1)-(3), discussed in [b], above.
- (n86)Footnote 79. Lab. Code § 6428; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(8), (limiting adjustment to "size" under these circumstances).

(n87)Footnote 80. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d).

(n88)Footnote 81. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(4)(B).

(n89)Footnote 82. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(9).

(n90)Footnote 83. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(e).

(n91)Footnote 84. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f), discussed in [g], below.

(n92)Footnote 85. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(e); see Lab. Code § 6302 (hazardous substances).

(n93)Footnote 86. For definition, see § 21.42[2][f].

(n94)Footnote 87. Lab. Code § 6431; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(1); but see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(5), regarding elevators, discussed below.

(n95)Footnote 88. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(1), (d)(1)-(3).

(n96)Footnote 89. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(1).

(n97)Footnote 90. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(2).

(n98)Footnote 91. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(2), (d)(1)-(3).

(n99)Footnote 92. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 330(f) (definition).

(n100)Footnote 93. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(3); Lab. Code § 9060(a).

(n101)Footnote 94. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341 et seq.

(n102)Footnote 95. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.6 et seq.

(n103)Footnote 96. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(4).

(n104)Footnote 97. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(6).

(n105)Footnote 98. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(5).

(n106)Footnote 98.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(a)(6).

(n107)Footnote 99. See discussion in § 21.42[2][b].

(n108)Footnote 100. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(h).

(n109)Footnote 101. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(h).

(n110)Footnote 102. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(h).

(n111)Footnote 103. Lab. Code § 6429; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(h).

(n112)Footnote 104. See Lab. Code § 6429; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(h).

(n113)Footnote 105. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(g)(1).

(n114)Footnote 106. Lab. Code § 6429.

(n115)Footnote 107. Lab. Code § 6429(b); see Lab. Code § 6319(c) (adjustments).

(n116)Footnote 108. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(g)(2)(A); see Lab. Code § 9060(c).

(n117)Footnote 109. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(g)(2)(B); see Lab. Code § 9060(d).

(n118)Footnote 110. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(g)(2).

(n119)Footnote 111. See Lab. Code § 6302.

(n120)Footnote 112. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(g)(3); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(1).

(n121)Footnote 113. Lab. Code § 6430(a).

(n122)Footnote 114. See § 21.44[1].

(n123)Footnote 115. Lab. Code § 6430(b); see Lab. Code § 6319(c)(3), (4) (adjustments).

(n124)Footnote 116. See § 21.44[1].

(n125)Footnote 117. Lab. Code § 6430(c).

(n126)Footnote 118. See Lab. Code § 6430(c).

(n127)Footnote 119. Lab. Code § 6430(c).

(n128)Footnote 120. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f).

(n129)Footnote 121. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f)(1) (limitations).

(n130)Footnote 122. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f).

(n131)Footnote 123. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f)(1).

(n132)Footnote 124. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f)(2).

(n133)Footnote 125. See Lab. Code § 6302(i).

(n134)Footnote 126. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f)(3); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(1).

(n135)Footnote 127. See Lab. Code § 6302.

(n136)Footnote 128. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f)(4).

(n137)Footnote 129. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f)(5); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(d)(1).

(n138)Footnote 130. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(k).

(n139)Footnote 131. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(k)(1); see Lab. Code § 6302(k)(1) (regarding hazardous substance).

(n140)Footnote 132. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(k)(1); see Lab. Code § 6401.7 (regarding injury prevention program).

(n141)Footnote 133. See discussion in § 21.47.

(n142)Footnote 134. Lab. Code § 6435(a).

(n143)Footnote 135. Lab. Code § 6413.5.

(n144)Footnote 136. Lab. Code § 6413.5.

(n145)Footnote 137. Lab. Code § 6413.5.

(n146)Footnote 138. See Lab. Code § 6302.

(n147)Footnote 139. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(i).

(n148)Footnote 140. See Lab. Code § 78.

(n149)Footnote 141. See Lab. Code § 6434; see also Lab. Code § 78.

(n150)Footnote 142. See discussion in [1], above, and in § 21.45[3].

(n151)Footnote 143. Lab. Code § 6650(a).

(n152)Footnote 144. See discussion in § 21.45.

(n153)Footnote 145. See Lab. Code § 6650(b).

(n154)Footnote 146. See Lab. Code § 6650(c).

(n155)Footnote 147. See Lab. Code § 6650(f).

(n156)Footnote 148. Lab. Code § 6650(d).

(n157)Footnote 149. Lab. Code § 6650(e).

(n158)Footnote 150. Lab. Code § 6650(e).

(n159)Footnote 151. Lab. Code § 6651(a). By amendment effective January 1, 1994, the three-year limitations period also applies to an action to collect a fee or penalty fee under Lab. Code § 6300 et seq. but see Lab. Code § 6651(b) (amendment applies only to penalty assessments or fees for which the three-year period has not expired on January 1, 1994).

(n160)Footnote 152. See discussion in [1], above, and in § 21.45[3].

(n161)Footnote 153. See discussion in § 21.45.

(n162)Footnote 154. See Lab. Code § 6652(a), (b).

(n163)Footnote 155. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 7090.1.

(n164)Footnote 156. Lab. Code § 6652(c).

(n165)Footnote 157. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 7090.1.

69 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.44

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.44 Abatement of Violations and Reinspections

[1] Abatement

Each citation or notice in lieu of citation issued by the Division specifies a time for abatement (correction) of the violation or hazardous condition described.ⁿ¹ The period for abatement begins running at the time the citation or notice is either personally delivered to the employer, the date the citation or notice is received by certified mail by the employer, or the date the certified mail is returned to the post office for lack of signature by the employer.ⁿ²

Failure to abate a violation within the time allowed will result in the assessment of additional civil penalties for failure to abate,ⁿ³ and any abatement credit given at the time the initial citation and civil penalty was issued, which credit reduced the amount of the proposed penalty,ⁿ⁴ will be rescinded and assessed as part of the additional penalty for failure to abate.ⁿ⁵

If a serious citation was issued and the violation was not corrected at the time of the Division's inspection, the Division will send the employer a Cal/OSHA Form 161, which requires the employer to complete a declaration under penalty of perjury describing the measures taken to abate each serious violation.ⁿ⁶ The declaration must be returned to the Division within 10 working days after the abatement date for the serious citation, or the Division will revoke any abatement credit given in calculating the initial civil penalty and notify the employer that additional civil penalties, retroactive to the original abatement date, will be assessed unless the employer provides proof of abatement prior to the abatement date.ⁿ⁷

If the employer has filed a timely appeal from a citation, order, or notice of civil penalty and the OSHAB has docketed the appeal, the abatement changes and abatement dates are stayed until the appeal is withdrawn or finally resolved by the OSHAB.ⁿ⁸ For the purposes of assessing penalties for failure to abate, the abatement period begins to run on the date that the appeal is withdrawn or the date that a final disposition by the OSHAB is made, if the appeal was initiated by the employer in good faith and not solely for delay or avoidance of a penalty.ⁿ⁹

[2] Reinspection

If the violation was not immediately abated at the time of the Division's initial inspection, the Division is required to reinspect the workplace in all cases involving (1) a serious violation of the requirements for implementing and maintaining an effective illness and injury prevention program, as defined in Labor Code Section 6401.7; (2) a special order or order to take special action, or a serious violation of such an order; (3) a serious repeat or serious willful violation; or (4) a serious violation with an abatement period of less than six days.ⁿ¹⁰ In the above cases, the reinspection must be conducted at the end of the period fixed for compliance with the order or abatement of the violation, or within 30 days thereafter.ⁿ¹¹

The Division is also required to reinspect in at least 20% of all other inspections or investigations that resulted in issuance of a citation for a serious violation and that are not otherwise scheduled for reinspection.ⁿ¹² The cases in which such reinspections are conducted are randomly selected, and the reinspections must be conducted at the end of the period fixed for abatement or within a reasonable time thereafter.ⁿ¹³

If an employer who was issued a citation for a serious violation fails to return the declaration under penalty of perjury of abatement measures takenⁿ¹⁴ to the Division within 10 working days after the end of the abatement period, the Division must reinspect within 45 days following the end of the abatement period, unless the Division has other evidence of abatement of the violation.ⁿ¹⁵ If the Division determines on reinspection that an employer did not abate a violation as falsely claimed in the employer's previously submitted declaration under penalty of perjury, additional civil penalties will be assessed.ⁿ¹⁶

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Administrative Proceedings Citations & Inspections

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6317; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 332(c).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6317.

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion in § 21.43[3][g].

(n4)Footnote 4. See discussion in § 21.43[3][a].

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6430; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 6320(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 6320(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 360.

(n9)Footnote 9. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 360.

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 6320(a)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 6320(a)(1).

(n12)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 6320(a)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 6320(a)(2).

(n14)Footnote 14. See discussion in [1], above.

(n15)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 6320(b).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Lab. Code § 6430(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 336(f)(4).

70 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.45

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.45 Administrative Appeals

[1] Governing Rules

Appeals of citations, orders, proposed penalties, and other actions taken by the Division are heard by the Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board (OSHAB).ⁿ¹ The OSHAB is authorized to promulgate rules of practice and procedure pertaining to appeals of any matter within its jurisdiction.ⁿ² The rules of practice and procedure adopted by the OSHAB must be consistent with the provisions of Government Code Sections 11435.05 et seq., 11507, 11507.6, 11507.7, 11513, 11514, 11515, and 11516.ⁿ³ The OSHAB's rules of practice and procedure are set forth in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 345 et seq. Statutory provisions pertaining to appeals of Division actions are set forth in Labor Code Section 6600 et seq.

[2] Who May Appeal

Any employer served with a citation, notice in lieu of citation, notice of proposed civil penalty, special order or order to take special action ("action order"), or any other person obligated to the employer pursuant to Labor Code Section 6319(b) ("an obligor") may appeal to the OSHAB.ⁿ⁴ An "obligor" is a person other than the employer who is obligated to an employer to repair any machine, device, apparatus, or equipment and to pay any penalties assessed against the employer.ⁿ⁵

An employee or authorized employee representative may appeal only the reasonableness of the period of time fixed by the Division for correction (abatement) of the alleged violation, allowed in a citation, special order, or order to take special action.ⁿ⁶ The employee appeal may be filed either with the Division or with the OSHAB.ⁿ⁷

[3] Timeliness of Appeal

An appeal by an employer must be filed within 15 working daysⁿ⁸ of the employer's receipt of the Division's action.ⁿ⁹

An employee appeal must be filed within 15 working days after the Division's issuance of its action.ⁿ¹⁰

The OSHAB may extend the 15-day period for each type of appeal for good cause shown.ⁿ¹¹

Except as otherwise provided,ⁿ¹¹ 1.1 an appeal is deemed filed on the date that a communication indicating a desire to appeal an action by the Division is delivered to, mailed to, or received by the OSHAB in Sacramento, whichever is earlier.ⁿ¹²

If no appeal is filed with the OSHAB by an employer, obligor, or employee within these time limits, the division's action becomes a final order of the OSHAB, not subject to review by any court or agency.ⁿ¹³

[4] Form of Appeal

Regardless of the type of appeal being filed, the party appealing need only initially indicate a desire to appeal or contest a Division action; no particular format is necessary to commence the appeal.ⁿ¹⁴ However, communications to the Division of Occupational Safety & Health indicating a desire to appeal are not deemed filed with the Appeals Board and do not initiate the appeal,^{n14.1} and if the appeal is not initially filed on the OSHAB's official form, the Board will require the person appealing to file a completed appeal formⁿ¹⁵ within 10 days after the Board acknowledges the party's desire to appeal.ⁿ¹⁶ The forms are furnished by the Board and are available at any office of the Division.ⁿ¹⁷

Failure to file the appropriate appeal form constitutes grounds for dismissal of the appeal.ⁿ¹⁸

[5] Issues on Appeal

The issues on appeal are limited to those arising from the Division's action that is the subject of the docketed appeal, subject to the following limitations:ⁿ¹⁹

- If the action appealed from is a citation, the employer must specify on the appeal form which one or more of the issues it is raising in its appeal;
- The existence of the violation alleged in the underlying citation;
- The classification of the violation;
- The abatement period;
- The reasonableness of the changes required to abate the violation; or
- Only the reasonableness of the proposed penalty.

If the appeal contests only the reasonableness of the proposed penalty, the issues on appeal are limited to the classification of the violation and the reasonableness of the proposed penalty, unless a timely motion under 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 371 (prehearing motions) is granted to amend the appeal to contest the existence of the violation, the abatement period, or the reasonableness of the changes required to abate the violation.ⁿ²⁰ⁿ²¹

An appeal from a repeat violationⁿ²² does not put into issue the prior citation or notice, whether the prior citation or notice was established by a failure to appeal or by entry of a final disposition after appeal.ⁿ²³

If a timely appeal is filed from a notice of failure to correct an alleged violation and of additional civil penalty, the OSHAB must hear and decide the underlying citation or notice, even if no timely appeal was filed from the citation or notice, if the employer files a motion in accordance with Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 371, demonstrating good cause for not having appealed the underlying citation.ⁿ²⁴

[6] Effect of Filing Appeal; Stay of Violation Abatement Requirements

Once proper notice of the intent to appeal has been filed, the OSHAB must provide the opportunity for a hearing and thereafter issue a decision, based on findings of fact, affirming, modifying, or vacating the Division's Action, or directing other relief as appropriate.ⁿ²⁵

All abatement periods and changes required by the Division are stayed on the filing of a docketed appeal with the OSHAB and remain stayed until withdrawal of the appeal or final disposition by the OSHAB.ⁿ²⁶

[7] Notifying Employees and Labor Organizations of Appeal

An employer must notify affected employeesⁿ²⁷ of any docketed appeal by serving or posting a copy of the docketed Notice of Contest (Appeal) form and a Participation Notice.ⁿ²⁸ Appeals from citations issued under Health and Safety Code Section 2950 are excepted from the service and posting requirements.ⁿ²⁹ Proof of such service or posting must be filed by the employer with the issuing office of the Division no later than the second working day following such service or posting.ⁿ³⁰

For discussion of rules regarding service of documents and proof of service generally, see [9][c] and [d], below.

If notice is given by posting, the posting must be maintained until commencement of the hearing or disposition of the proceeding, whichever occurs first.ⁿ³¹

If the affected employees are represented by an "authorized employee representative,"ⁿ³² the employer must serve the copies of the Notice of Contest (Appeal) and Participation Notice on the authorized employee representative.ⁿ³³ If any affected employees are not represented, the employer must post copies of both the Notice of Contest (Appeal) and Participation Notice at or near the alleged violation site, so as to be easily read, or, if posting at such a site is not practicable, in a conspicuous place where the documents will be readily observable by employees, or at a location to which employees report each day, or at a location from which employees operate to carry out their duties.ⁿ³⁴

The contents of the Participation Notice must conform to the provisions of Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 356(c) or (d).

When an employee appeal is filed by an employee, the Appeals Board will forward a copy of the docketed appeal to the employer, who must post a copy of both the docketed appeal and a Participation Notice.ⁿ³⁵ However, if there are other employees represented by an authorized employee representative, on receipt of the docketed appeal, the employee who filed the appeal must serve a copy of the appeal, a Participation Notice, and the Division's statement regarding the reasonableness of the abatement periodⁿ³⁶ on the authorized employee representative.ⁿ³⁷ If an authorized employee representative files an appeal, the representative must file copies on any other authorized employee representatives of affected employees.ⁿ³⁸

[8] Party Status and Intervention

Aside from the party filing the appeal, party status is automatically conferred on the Division, whether or not it appears or participates in a proceeding.ⁿ³⁹ Furthermore, whenever an employee appeals the reasonableness of the abatement period, the cited employer is deemed a party to the proceeding.ⁿ⁴⁰

Affected employees, or their authorized representatives, or obligors who wish to participate as a party in an appeal filed by another person must file a motion for party status prior to the beginning of a hearing, which may be granted on a showing of good cause.ⁿ⁴¹

Parties are entitled to service of all notices and documents, and may participate fully in the proceedings. When a person's motion for party status is granted, each previous party to the proceeding must serve on the new party, within ten days of the order granting party status, copies of all documents previously filed with the OSHAB that have not previously been served on the new party.ⁿ⁴² Service must be in the manner prescribed in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(c), and proof of service meeting the requirements of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(e) must be filed with the OSHAB.^{n42.1}

A person who is not a party may move to participate as an intervenor at any time.ⁿ⁴³ However, this participation is limited to the terms prescribed in the order of the OSHAB.ⁿ⁴⁴ A person granted intervenor status is entitled to service of all documents and notices to which parties are entitled and to participate in hearings and prehearing conferences to the extent consistent with the terms prescribed in the order of the OSHAB granting intervention.^{n44.1} A motion to participate as an intervenor must state the interest of the moving party in the proceeding, how that interest is similar to that of a party, and how participation will assist in the determination of the issues before the OSHAB, and that intervention will not unnecessarily delay the proceeding.ⁿ⁴⁵

[9] General Rules Regarding Filing, Service, and Format of Documents

[a] Computation of Time Limits

In computing the time by which a right may be exercised or an act is to be performed in a proceeding before the OSHAB, the first day is excluded and the last day is counted. If the last day is not a working day, the time is extended to the next working day.ⁿ⁴⁶

Where service of any document is made by mail, and a right may be exercised or act must be done within a given number of days after service by mail, the time to exercise such rights or do such acts is extended 5 days, if the place of address is within California, or 10 days if outside of California but within the United States.ⁿ⁴⁷ However, these extensions following service by mail do not apply to extend the time for filing an Employee Appeal or an employer or obligor Notice of Contest (Appeal),ⁿ⁴⁸ as discussed in [3], above.

[b] Late Filing of Documents

Unless otherwise specified in the Labor Code, the OSHAB (or Administrative Law Judge appointed by the OSHAB) may extend the time for filing any document, or may permit a late filing, on a showing of good cause.ⁿ⁴⁹ A request to file a late appeal must be accompanied by a declaration that any facts in the request are based on the declarant's personal knowledge.

[c] Service of Documents

Unless otherwise required, service of any document in a proceeding before the OSHAB may be made by personal delivery or by depositing the document in any post office, mailbox, mail chute, or like facility regularly maintained by the United States Postal Service, sealed, properly addressed, with first class postage prepaid; by depositing with a carrier guaranteeing overnight delivery; or by facsimile (FAX) machine.ⁿ⁵⁰ Service is complete at the time of personal delivery or mailing.ⁿ⁵¹ Unless otherwise indicated by proof of service, the mailing date is presumed to be the postmark date appearing on the envelope if first-class postage was prepaid and the envelope was properly addressed, or on the date of delivery to a common carrier promising overnight delivery, as shown on the carrier's receipt.ⁿ⁵²

Service to a party or intervenor who has appeared through a representative must be made on the representative.ⁿ⁵³ Service to employees who are represented by an authorized employee representative is made by serving that representative.ⁿ⁵⁴ Notice to employees who are not represented by an authorized employee representative is made by posting the document in the manner described in [7], above.ⁿ⁵⁵

[d] Proof of Service

Proof of service must be filed with the original of the document served.ⁿ⁵⁶ Proof of service may consist of any of the following:ⁿ⁵⁷

- An affidavit or declaration of service by personal delivery, mail, overnight courier or fax.
- A written statement endorsed on the document served and signed by the party making the statement.
- A letter of transmittal.

If service is made by posting the document, proof or certification of such posting must be filed with the issuing office of the Division no later than the second working day following the posting.ⁿ⁵⁸

Proof of service by the OSHAB may be made by an endorsement on the document served, stating the fact of service on the persons listed on the official address record on the date of service. The endorsement must also state whether service was made personally, by mail, overnight courier, or FAX, contain the signature of the person making the service, and set forth the date of service.ⁿ⁵⁹

The OSHAB must maintain in each proceeding an official address record containing the names and addresses of all parties and intervenors and their representatives, agents, or attorneys of record. Documents sent by OSHAB to the official address of record for the employer that are returned or undeliverable may result in dismissal of the appeal if OSHAB is unable to effectively communicate with the employer.ⁿ⁶⁰ Any change or substitution in the name and address of any party or intervenor or its representative must be promptly communicated in writing, and in no case more than 30 days after the change, to OSHAB's Sacramento office. The written communication also must be served on all parties and intervenors. Failure to communicate changes or substitutions promptly in writing by the employer may result in dismissal of the appeal if OSHAB is unable to effectively communicate with the employer.^{n60.1}

[e] Ex Parte Communications

The only communications permitted between a person and the OSHAB members or Administrative Law Judges of the OSHAB regarding a proceeding are:ⁿ⁶¹ (1) written communications, with copies contemporaneously served by the communicator on all parties to a proceeding in accordance with Title 8 California Code of Regulations Sections 355(c) and 355(e);ⁿ⁶² (2) oral communications, with advance notice given by the communicator to all parties to a proceeding and adequate opportunity afforded to all parties to participate in the communication;ⁿ⁶³ (3) oral or written requests for information related solely to the status of a proceeding or the procedures of the OSHAB;ⁿ⁶⁴ (4) oral or written communications agreed to by all parties to a proceeding, made on an ex parte basis;ⁿ⁶⁵ (5) oral or written communications proposing settlement or agreement for disposition of any or all issues in a proceeding;ⁿ⁶⁶ and (6) oral or written communications concerning a proceeding, if made more than 30 days after service by the OSHAB of a final order or decision in that proceeding.ⁿ⁶⁷

[f] Pre-hearing Motions

All motions and requests for action relating to any pending proceeding must be directed to the OSHAB, contain the title and docket or petition number of the proceeding in the caption, and present a clear and plain statement of the relief sought and the grounds for such relief.ⁿ⁶⁸ The motion or request must be signed by the filing party or the party's representative, and a copy must be served on all parties as discussed in [c], above.ⁿ⁶⁹ Proof of service must be filed with the OSHAB.ⁿ⁷⁰

Any party served with a motion or request has 10 working days from the date of service to file an answer. A copy of the answer must be served on all other parties,ⁿ⁷¹ and proof of service must be filed with the OSHAB.ⁿ⁷²

[10] Administrative Law Judge

[a] Appointment and Powers of Administrative Law Judge

Pursuant to its statutory authority,ⁿ⁷³ the OSHAB generally assigns appeals to an administrative law judge (ALJ) for initial hearing, order, and decision.ⁿ⁷⁴

Once appointed to a proceeding, the ALJ has the powers, jurisdiction, and authority granted by law, by the order of appointment, and by the rules of the OSHAB.ⁿ⁷⁵ Specifically, the ALJ has the authority to do all of the following:ⁿ⁷⁶

- Hold hearings and ascertain facts for the information of the Appeals Board.
- Hold prehearing conferences.
- Hold settlement conferences.
- Issue subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum for the attendance of a person and the production of testimony, books, documents, or other things.
- Compel the attendance of a person residing anywhere in the state.
- Certify official acts.
- Regulate the course of a hearing.
- Grant withdrawals, dispositions or amendments.
- Order continuances.
- Approve stipulations voluntarily entered into by the parties.
- Administer oaths and affirmations.
- Rule on objections, privileges, defenses, and the receipt of relevant and material evidence.
- Call and examine a party or witness and introduce into the hearing record documentary or other evidence.
- Request a party at any time to state the respective position or supporting theory concerning any fact or issue in the proceeding.
- Extend the submittal date of any proceeding.
- Hear and determine all issues of fact and law presented.
- Issue interlocutory and final orders, findings, and decisions as may be necessary for the full adjudication of the matter.

- Take other action during the pendency of a proceeding to regulate the course of a prehearing, hearing, or settlement conference, that is deemed appropriate by the Administrative Law Judge to further the purposes of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act.

Final orders, findings, and decisions issued by an ALJ are deemed to be the orders, findings, and decisions of the OSHAB, unless the Board grants reconsideration.ⁿ⁷⁷

[b] Objections to Assigned Administrative Law Judge

The name of the ALJ to be assigned to a given proceeding is available on request at the time the proceeding is noticed for hearing.ⁿ⁷⁸ A party may object to the assigned ALJ on any of the grounds specified in Code of Civil Procedure Section 641.ⁿ⁷⁹ The objecting party must file a motion to disqualify the assigned ALJ, together with a supporting affidavit or declaration, with the ALJ or the OSHAB at least five working days before the scheduled hearing.ⁿ⁸⁰ The OSHAB must rule on a motion to disqualify before the hearing may commence.ⁿ⁸¹

[c] Transfer of Proceedings

If no oral testimony has commenced, the Board may transfer a proceeding to another ALJ for hearing.ⁿ⁸² If an ALJ is unable to complete the hearing process due to death, extended absence, or disqualification, a proceeding may also be reassigned to another ALJ for trial de novo, unless the parties stipulate to waive a trial de novo and to continue proceedings with the newly assigned ALJ.ⁿ⁸³ The OSHAB also has the power to remove a proceeding previously assigned to an ALJ to itself.ⁿ⁸⁴

[11] Merger and Consolidation of Appeals

Any number of separate proceedings involving the same employer may be consolidated for hearing and decision by the OSHAB.ⁿ⁸⁵

Proceedings involving different employers may be consolidated for hearing and decision by the OSHAB, on the motion of any party or on the OSHAB's own motion, if the facts and circumstances of the different cases are similar and if consolidation will result in conservation of time and expense.ⁿ⁸⁶ Any party may object to consolidation in writing within 10 days of the date of service of the order of consolidation.ⁿ⁸⁷ The OSHAB may sever consolidated proceedings for good cause.ⁿ⁸⁸

[12] Withdrawal and Reinstatement of Appeal

Any appeal by an employer, an obligor, or an employee may be withdrawn by written request or by oral motion on the hearing record, at any time before a decision is issued.ⁿ⁸⁹ The OSHAB will grant such a withdrawal by order or decision, which will be served on all parties.ⁿ⁹⁰

An appeal that has been dismissed after a motion to withdraw has been granted will be reinstated by the OSHAB if the employer, obligor, or employee files a written motion stating sufficient facts to show that the withdrawal resulted from misinformation from the Division or the OSHAB, or from fraud or coercion.ⁿ⁹¹ The motion to reinstate the appeal must be filed within 60 days after service of the order of dismissal.ⁿ⁹² In the case of fraud, the date for a motion to reinstate runs from the date the fraud is discovered if the fraud could not have been suspected or discovered with the exercise of reasonable diligence.ⁿ⁹³

[13] Withdrawal of Division Action

The Division may withdraw its action by written motion at any time or by oral motion on the hearing record.ⁿ⁹⁴ If the motion is made prior to the hearing, the Division must serve its motion to withdraw on each party and any authorized employee representative representing an affected employee, if known.ⁿ⁹⁵ On a showing of good cause, the OSHAB must grant the Division's motion to withdraw by issuing an order or decision, which the OSHAB will serve on all parties and which the employer must post for 15 working days at or near the site of the alleged violation or in a conspicuous place where it will be readily observable by employees.ⁿ⁹⁶

[14] Disposition of Appeal by Motion

The OSHAB may, on a showing of good cause, dispose of the issues on appeal by granting a written motion of the parties made at any time or an oral motion of the parties made on the hearing record or in the prehearing conference.ⁿ⁹⁷ The OSHAB's disposition of a matter is accomplished by an order or decision of the OSHAB, served on all parties.ⁿ⁹⁸ The order or decision must be posted by the employer for 15 working days in the manner described in [7], above.ⁿ⁹⁹ⁿ¹⁰⁰⁻¹¹⁰

[15] Discovery

[a] Access to Documents and Evidence and Disclosure of Witnesses

Once a proceeding has been initiated and prior to the hearing, all parties have the right, on written request made to any other party, to inspect and copy any of the following items in the possession or custody or under the control of the other party:

1. Party or witness statements relating to the subject matter of the proceeding;ⁿ¹¹¹
2. All writings or other things that the party then proposes to offer into evidence;ⁿ¹¹²
3. Any other relevant writing or thing that would be admissible into evidence;ⁿ¹¹³ and
4. Division or party inspection and investigative reports pertaining to the subject matter of the proceeding, to the extent that such reports (a) contain names and addresses of witnesses or persons having personal knowledge of the acts, omissions, or events that are the basis of the proceeding; (b) reflect matters perceived by the Division in the course of its investigation, inspection, or survey; or (c) contain or include by attachment any statements or writings described in Paragraphs 1-3, above, or summaries thereof.ⁿ¹¹⁴

"Statements," for purposes of access to documents and evidence, includes written statements by the person that are signed or otherwise authenticated; stenographic, mechanical, electrical, or other recordings or transcripts of oral statements; and written reports or summaries of oral statements.ⁿ¹¹⁵

Notwithstanding the above, the identity of a person who has submitted a complaint regarding an unsafe condition to the Division and who has not authorized disclosure of his or her identity is exempt from disclosure.ⁿ¹¹⁶ Privileged writings and things and attorney work product are also exempt from the above disclosure requirements,ⁿ¹¹⁷ but any party claiming privilege from disclosure must serve the requesting party with a written statement stating those matters claimed to be privileged and the reasons why they are privileged.ⁿ¹¹⁸

Unless other arrangements are made, the party requesting the writings must pay for the copying.ⁿ¹¹⁹

On written request to another party, any party is entitled to obtain, before the hearing, the names and addresses of witnesses to the extent known to the other party, including, but not limited to, those intended to be called at the hearing. Only the identity of the person who submitted a complaint regarding the unsafe condition of an employment or place of employment need not be disclosed, unless that person requests otherwise.ⁿ¹²⁰ A request for a list of witnesses to be called may be satisfied only by the service of a list of witnesses.n120.1

[b] Compelling Discovery

If a party served with a proper request for discovery pursuant to Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 372 (witness disclosure) or 372.1 (access to documents)n121 fails to comply with the request, the requesting party may serve a motion to compel with the Administrative Law Judge of the OSHAB, if the OSHAB is hearing the case.n122 The motion must conform to the requirements of Government Code Section 11507.7 and must state facts showing that the party failed or refused to comply with Section 372 or 372.1, a description of the matters sought to be discovered, the reasons why such matter is discoverable under the OSHAB's rules, that the party has made a reasonable and good faith attempt to contact the respondent for an informal resolution, and the grounds for the opposing party's refusal, so far as known.n123 The motion must be served and filed within 15 days after a party first evidenced a refusal or failure to comply with the discovery request, or within 30 days after request for compliance was made and remained unanswered, or within an approved stipulated time, whichever period is longer.n124n125

The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) or the OSHAB shall hold the hearing on the motion within 15 days, or later upon its own motion for good cause. Respondent shall have the right to serve and file a written answer or response, in compliance with Sections 371(a) and (b), before or at the time of hearing. The hearing may be conducted by telephone or other approved electronic means. With the approval of the ALJ or the OSHAB, the parties may stipulate to waive a hearing, provided the stipulation states a date by which respondent shall file its response and that the order on the motion shall issue within 30 days of the date the motion was filed.n126

Special procedures obtain if the respondent asserts the matter is not discoverable under Section 372.1(a)-(d) or is privileged against disclosure under (f).n127 Absent stipulation to the contrary, the ALJ or the OSHAB shall issue a written order on the motion no later than 15 days after the hearing. The order shall not become effective until 10 days after the order is served except for an order denying the motion in its entirety, which is effective on the date it is served.n128

[c] Subpoenas, Subpoenas Duces Tecum, and Depositions

Prior to commencement of a hearing, the OSHAB will issue a subpoena or subpoena duces tecum to compel attendance of a person or production of a document or other thing at the hearing at the request of any party. After the hearing has commenced, issuance of a subpoena or subpoena duces tecum is discretionary.n129

An application for a subpoena duces tecum must conform to the requirements of Code of Civil Procedure sections 1985-1985.4 (pertaining to subpoenas in civil actions) and must be in the form of an affidavit or declaration under penalty of perjury that (1) shows good cause for production of the document or thing sought; (2) specifies exactly the document or thing sought; (3) explains the materiality of the document or thing sought to the issues in the proceeding; (4) demonstrates that the item sought is within the possession or control of the witness; and (5) indicates whether personal attendance of the witness or custodian of record is required, and, if not, whether compliance with Evidence Code Section 1560 et seq. (custodian's production of business records by mail or personal delivery) is permitted.n130

The OSHAB rules regarding service of subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum and witness fees are explained in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Sections 372.2(b) and (c) and 382. Only witnesses who are residents of California at the time of service must attend.n131 However, if requested by a party, OSHAB shall attempt, when possible, to have a like agency in another state take the deposition of a witness.n131.1 Any party who subpoenas a peace officer, as listed in Government Code Section 68097, must tender $150 with the subpoena for each day the officer is required to remain in attendance. In addition, the party must reimburse to the officer's public entity employer, the full cost of the officer's salary, other compensation, and travel expenses for each day the officer's attendance is required.n132

On timely motion of any party or witness, or on its own motion, after notice to the parties and an opportunity to be heard and upon a showing of good cause, the OSHAB may quash or modify any subpoena or subpoena duces tecum, or direct compliance with it on new terms or conditions.ⁿ¹³³ The OSHAB also may make any other order as is appropriate to protect a party or witness from oppressive or unreasonable demands.ⁿ¹³⁴

The OSHAB or a party to the proceeding may require the deposition of a party or witness to be taken.ⁿ¹³⁵ The OSHAB may issue a subpoena or subpoena duces tecum at the request of any party to require attendance at the deposition.ⁿ¹³⁶ Applications for such subpoenas must conform with Code of Civil Procedure Section 1985.ⁿ¹³⁷ Detailed rules regarding out-of-state depositions, witness fees, mileage, expenses, requirements for notice, and the Board's power to limit the scope of examination or the location of the deposition are set out in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 372.3. Depositions in OSHAB proceedings are noticed, taken, filed, and used in the manner prescribed in the Code of Civil Procedure for depositions in civil actions.ⁿ¹³⁸

Failure or refusal to comply with any subpoena or subpoena duces tecum issued by the OSHAB provides grounds for any party to petition to the OSHAB for judicial enforcement. The petition must be verified and set forth facts showing that proper service and notice was given and that the subpoenaed party failed or refused to comply.ⁿ¹³⁹ The OSHAB will petition the superior court in the county in which the hearing is pending for an order compelling compliance once it determines that judicial enforcement is appropriate.ⁿ¹⁴⁰

For full discussion of rules regarding subpoenas and depositions in civil actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Depositions and Discovery and Subpoena, and DeMeo, California deposition and discovery practice.

[d] Evidence by Affidavit or Declaration

Evidence in the form of a sworn affidavit or declaration may be entered into evidence at a hearing if all parties are given proper advance notice and an opportunity to object. At least ten days prior to a hearing or continued hearing, any party wishing to use such evidence must mail or deliver to opposing parties a copy of the affidavit or declaration that the proponent proposes to introduce into evidence.ⁿ¹⁴¹ A notice form, as specifically prescribed in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 372.4(b), must be attached.ⁿ¹⁴²

Within seven days after the mailing or delivery of such an affidavit or declaration, an opposing party may mail or deliver to the proponent a request to cross-examine the affiant or declarant. If the opposing party fails to do so, the right to cross-examine the affiant or declarant is deemed waived and the affidavit or declaration, on being entered into evidence, will be given the same effect as if the affiant or declarant had testified orally at the hearing.ⁿ¹⁴³ If the opposing party requests and is not afforded an opportunity to cross-examine the affiant or declarant, the affidavit or declaration may be introduced into evidence, but will only be given the same effect as other hearsay evidence.ⁿ¹⁴⁴

[16] Contempt

The superior court for the county in which the OSHAB proceedings are pending has jurisdiction to punish any contempt that may arise from proceedings before the Board.ⁿ¹⁴⁵ The ALJ or OSHAB must certify to the superior court the facts of the conduct alleged to constitute contempt.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ Disobedience or resistance to any lawful order, refusal to respond to a subpoena or subpoena duces tecum, refusal to swear or affirm as a witness, refusal to be examined as a witness, misconduct at or near a hearing so as to obstruct the proceedings may all be punishable as contempt.ⁿ¹⁴⁷

[17] Pre-hearing Conferences and Statements

The OSHAB may notice and order a prehearing conference at any time before a hearing, on the motion of any party or on its own motion, in order to simplify issues, expedite proceedings, and allow affected employees an opportunity to participate meaningfully in the appeal proceedings.ⁿ¹⁴⁸ Each party must be prepared to do each of the following:ⁿ¹⁴⁹

- Discuss the issues.
- Stipulate to any factual or legal issue about which there is no dispute.
- Stipulate to the identification and admissibility of documentary evidence.
- Comply with any request for discovery.ⁿ¹⁵⁰
- Report on discovery status when the administrative law judge has compelled discovery prior to the prehearing.
- Do other things as may aid in the disposition of the proceeding.

Prehearing statements of position or trial briefs may be filed by any party at any time before a hearing on any issue to be decided.ⁿ¹⁵¹

The failure of a party or its representative to prepare for and participate in the pre-hearing conference is grounds for the imposition of sanctions, inferences or other orders, then or during the hearing, as the Appeals Board deems appropriate. These sanctions may include striking or excluding evidence offered by the non-complying party on that dispute, or precluding that party from contesting the position or information on that issue provided by the complying party.^{n151.1}

[18] Hearing

[a] Time and Place of Hearing

The OSHAB sets the time and place of the hearing and notifies the parties. The employer must serve a copy of the notice of hearing on the authorized employee representative, if any, and notify any unrepresented affected employees by posting the notice immediately on receipt from the OSHAB.ⁿ¹⁵²

Neither the Labor Code nor the OSHAB's regulations specify any particular time limit within which the hearing must be held after commencement of the proceedings. The Board's regulations do provide that appeals shall be heard "promptly," and that appeals relating to special orders, orders to take special action, the reasonableness of the abatement period, and expedited proceedings have priority over other proceedings.ⁿ¹⁵³ The OSHAB may order an expedited proceeding on the motion of any party or on its own motion.ⁿ¹⁵⁴ All parties must be notified of such an order and will be expected to do all things necessary to complete the proceeding "in the minimum time consistent with fairness."ⁿ¹⁵⁵ Time limits for filing a motion to compel discovery, or for responsive filings,^{n155.1} may be shortened as necessary to accommodate the expedited date for disposition of the case.^{n155.2}

The OSHAB's regulations provide that the OSHAB "must" set the place of hearing at a location as near as practicable to the place of employment where the violation is alleged to have occurred.ⁿ¹⁵⁶ In one case, a court of appeal held that it was neither a denial of due process nor an abuse of discretion to deny a motion for change of venue and require an employer filing an appeal to present the appeal case at a location that was 64 miles from the employer's place of business, absent a showing that the place of hearing was selected arbitrarily or with an improper motive, and absent proof of any harmful consequences to the employer from holding the hearing away from the city in which the employer's business was located.ⁿ¹⁵⁷

[b] Conduct of the Hearing

Hearings before the OSHAB are informal.ⁿ¹⁵⁸ⁿ¹⁵⁹ Often the only persons attending are the ALJ, who records the proceedings on a tape recorder, the parties and their representatives, the Division representative and inspector or investigator, and any witnesses called by the parties to testify.

The Appeals Board will define the issues, control the manner of taking evidence, and explain the order in which evidence will be received.ⁿ¹⁶⁰ Each party has the right to call and examine witnesses, introduce exhibits, question opposing witnesses on any matter relevant to the issues even if not covered in direct examination, impeach any witness regardless of who called the witness, and rebut opposing evidence.ⁿ¹⁶¹ The OSHAB may also call and examine any party or witness and may, on its own motion, admit any relevant and material evidence.ⁿ¹⁶² A party may be called to testify under cross-examination by any other party even if the party did not first testify on his or her own behalf.ⁿ¹⁶³

[c] Representation

A party may appear in person or through a representative, who is not required to be an attorney at law.ⁿ¹⁶⁴ The representative is deemed to control all matters regarding the interest of the party in the proceeding.ⁿ¹⁶⁵ An employee represented by an authorized employee representative (i.e., a labor organization) may appear through that representative.ⁿ¹⁶⁶

A representative may withdraw from representation by filing a written notice of withdrawal, with proof of service of the notice on all parties, with the OSHAB.ⁿ¹⁶⁷ⁿ¹⁶⁸

[d] Rules of Evidence and Hearsay

Hearings before the OSHAB are not strictly governed by the technical rules of evidence.ⁿ¹⁶⁹ Informality in OSHAB proceedings and the manner of taking evidence will not invalidate the OSHAB's orders, decisions, and findings.ⁿ¹⁷⁰ Any relevant evidence is admissible if it is the sort of evidence on which responsible people would rely in the conduct of serious affairs, regardless of any common law or statutory rule of evidence that might make such evidence inadmissible over objection in civil actions.ⁿ¹⁷¹

Hearsay evidence may be used to supplement or explain other evidence but is not sufficient in itself to support a finding, unless it would be admissible over objection in a civil action.ⁿ¹⁷² The rules of privilege apply to the extent they are otherwise required by statute.ⁿ¹⁷³ Unduly repetitious and irrelevant evidence must be excluded.ⁿ¹⁷⁴ OSHAB may exclude evidence if its probative value is substantially outweighed by undue consumption of time.^{n174.1}

[e] Trade Secrets and Confidential Evidence

All information reported to or obtained by the Division in the course of an inspection, investigation, or proceeding that contains or might reveal a trade secret, as defined in Title 18 United States Code Section 1905, or other information deemed confidential, pursuant to the California Public Records Act,ⁿ¹⁷⁵ is treated as confidential.ⁿ¹⁷⁶ This includes hearing exhibits that might reveal trade secrets or confidential information.ⁿ¹⁷⁷ Photographs taken by the Division in the course of an inspection or investigation will also be considered confidential.ⁿ¹⁷⁸ The Director of the Department of Industrial Relations, the OSHAB, the Standards Board, and the courts are each empowered to issue appropriate orders to protect the confidentiality of trade secrets or other confidential information.ⁿ¹⁷⁹

The OSHAB may exclude any person or witness, except any party, the party's representative, and the Division's inspector, investigator, and representative, from the hearing room during testimony that will reveal the substance of any trade secret or other confidential information.ⁿ¹⁸⁰

[f] Exclusion of Witnesses

On motion by any party, the OSHAB may exclude from the hearing room any witness not under examination at the time of the motion, except for any party, the party's representative, and the Division's representative, inspectors, or investigators.ⁿ¹⁸¹ The Board may also exclude persons from the room when testimony will reveal the substance of a trade secret or other confidential information, as discussed in [e], above.

[g] Official Notice

Official notice may be taken either before or after submission of a matter for decision of any generally accepted technical or scientific matter within the field of occupational safety and health, and of any determination, ruling, order, finding and decision required by law to be made by the OSHAB, the Division, or the Standards Board.ⁿ¹⁸² In addition, the OSHAB must take official notice of matters set forth in *Evidence Code Section 451*ⁿ¹⁸³ and may take official notice of matters set forth in Evidence Code Section 452.ⁿ¹⁸⁴

Each party must be given notice of a request or decision to take official notice and be given reasonable opportunity, on request, to present information relevant to the propriety of taking official notice and the tenor of the matter to be noticed.ⁿ¹⁸⁵

[h] Interpreters

Hearings must be conducted in English.ⁿ¹⁸⁶ However, any party whose English comprehension or speaking ability is not proficient or who requests an interpreter must be provided with an approved interpreter during the hearing. A request for an interpreter must be made no later than 10 working days prior to the date the interpreter is needed.ⁿ¹⁸⁷

The cost of providing an interpreter for a party must be paid by the party requesting the interpreter unless the OSHAB directs otherwise due to financial hardship of the requesting party.ⁿ¹⁸⁸

Any party calling any other witness to testify who is not proficient in English must provide an approved interpreter at the hearing. If the party calling for the witness is unable to provide an interpreter of its own, it may request that OSHAB do so.ⁿ¹⁸⁹ Language assistance includes oral interpretation or written translation of a language other than English into English or of English into another language,ⁿ¹⁹⁰ and provision of sign interpreters for deaf or hard-of-hearing parties or persons.

Approved interpreters include those who have already been tested and approved by the California State Personnel Board and whose proficiency and knowledge of the terminology and procedures used in proceedings before the OSHAB has been determined by the OSHAB to be satisfactory.ⁿ¹⁹¹ The OSHAB may qualify and appoint other interpreters if interpreters on the approved list cannot be present during a hearing or if no interpreter is on an approved list for the particular language required.ⁿ¹⁹²

Before appointment of an interpreter, any party and the OSHAB may conduct a brief examination of the interpreter to determine whether the candidate has the necessary qualifications, understands and can explain the terms and procedures used in OSHAB proceedings in both English and the language to be translated, and has no interest or conflict of interest in the proceeding.ⁿ¹⁹³

Any interpreter appointed must disclose to the OSHAB and to all parties any actual or apparent conflict of interest in the proceeding. A conflict of interest includes any condition which interferes with the objectivity of the interpreter, and may exist if the interpreter is acquainted with or related to a party or witness, or otherwise has an interest in the outcome of the proceeding.ⁿ¹⁹⁴

The OSHAB may disqualify an interpreter if it appears the interpreter cannot understand and interpret the terms and procedures used in the hearing; if the interpreter has engaged in conduct creating the appearance of bias, prejudice, or partiality; or if the interpreter has disclosed privileged or confidential communications.ⁿ¹⁹⁵

[i] Effect of Failure to Appear

If, after service of notice of a hearing, consolidated hearing, or continuance, a party fails to appear at the hearing, either in person or through a representative, the OSHAB may (1) take the proceeding off calendar; (2) after notice, dismiss the proceeding; or (3) receive evidence from any party that appears.ⁿ¹⁹⁶ In cases in which the burden is on the employer to establish the OSHAB action sought, the OSHAB may act without taking evidence if the employer fails to appear.ⁿ¹⁹⁷ The employer is entitled, however, to make a showing by way of mitigation following a failure to appear.ⁿ¹⁹⁸ The OSHAB may reinstate any proceeding on a showing of good cause based on facts sufficient to establish a reasonable basis for the failure to appear.ⁿ¹⁹⁹ⁿ²⁰⁰⁻²⁰³

[j] Reserved[k] Briefs

A motion to submit a written post-hearing brief must be made before the close of a hearing. Approval is discretionary and will be granted only if the ALJ or the OSHAB finds written argument will be productive and will not unreasonably delay disposition of the case.ⁿ²⁰⁴ If approval is granted, the brief must be filed within 15 working days from the date of the hearing, and answers by opposing parties must be filed within 10 working days from service of the brief.ⁿ²⁰⁵ These filing periods may be extended or reduced by the ALJ or the OSHAB for good cause.ⁿ²⁰⁶ Service of the argument and answer on all parties must comply with Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 355(d), and proof of service must be filed with the ALJ or the OSHAB.ⁿ²⁰⁷ An original brief must be filed with the OSHAB in Sacramento, with a copy provided to the ALJ assigned to the hearing.^{n207.1}

[19] Decisions and Proposed Decisions

A proceeding is submitted at the close of the hearing, unless otherwise ordered by the OSHAB.ⁿ²⁰⁸ The ALJ or OSHAB may, however, extend the submission date.ⁿ²⁰⁹ The ALJ or OSHAB (whichever conducted the hearing) must summarize the evidence received and relied upon, make findings on all facts involved in the appeal, and file an order or decision with the reasons or grounds on which the order or decision is made within 30 days after the submission date.ⁿ²¹⁰ In the decision, the ALJ (or Commission) has the authority to affirm a citation for a safety violation but to designate the violation as a de minimis one, i.e., holding that the Act was not violated even if an employer, as a purely technical or literal matter, violated a safety standard.^{n210.1}

Every order or decision must be in writing,ⁿ²¹¹ and must be signed and dated by the ALJ or by the members of the OSHAB who decided the matter.ⁿ²¹² A copy of the order or decision must be served on all parties with a statement informing the parties of the right to petition the OSHAB for reconsideration of the order or decision within 30 days after the date of service of the order or decision.ⁿ²¹³ For discussion of reconsideration, see [20], below.

If an ALJ was assigned to hear a matter and prepare a proposed order or decision, pursuant to Labor Code Section 6604(b), the ALJ will prepare a proposed order or decision for adoption by the OSHAB.ⁿ²¹⁴ The proposed order or decision is a public record.ⁿ²¹⁵ The OSHAB may confirm, adopt, modify, or set aside the proposed order or decision, and may, with or without further proceedings and with or without notice, enter its order, findings, or decision based on the entire record.ⁿ²¹⁶ The OSHAB also may order that additional evidence be taken and may reassign the case to the same or a different ALJ to take such additional evidence, or make take such additional evidence itself.ⁿ²¹⁷ Any action by the OSHAB on such a proposed order or decision must be taken within 30 days after the case is submitted.ⁿ²¹⁸

[20] Reconsideration[a] Right to Petition for Reconsideration and Time for Filing

Any party aggrieved directly or indirectly by a final order or decision of an ALJ or the OSHAB may petition for reconsideration within 30 days after service of the order or decision.ⁿ²¹⁹ The petition must be filed at the OSHAB in Sacramento and is considered filed on the date mailed or delivered to the OSHAB.ⁿ²²⁰ In the alternative, the OSHAB may order reconsideration on its own motion at any time within the 30 days after an order or decision has been filed by an ALJ.ⁿ²²¹

If, during the 30-day period following the filing of an order or decision by an ALJ or by the OSHAB, no petition for reconsideration has been filed with the OSHAB and the OSHAB has failed to order reconsideration on its own motion, the decision or order becomes final and is not subject to agency or judicial review.ⁿ²²²

[b] Grounds for Reconsideration

A petition for reconsideration must be based on one or more of the following grounds:ⁿ²²³

1. That the order or decision issued by the OSHAB or ALJ exceeded the OSHAB's powers;
2. That the order or decision was procured by fraud;
3. That the evidence received does not justify the findings of fact;
4. That the petitioner has discovered new material evidence that the petitioner could not, with reasonable diligence, have discovered and produced at hearing; or
5. That the findings of fact do not support the order or decision.

[c] Contents, Format, and Service of Petition

A petition for reconsideration must be signed by the filing party, or the party's representative, and must be verified, unless the petitioning party is one of the public agencies exempt from verification requirements under Code of Civil Procedure Section 446.ⁿ²²⁴

The petition must state specifically and in full detail the grounds on which the petitioner asserts that the decision or order is unlawful or unjust, and set forth every issue to be considered by the OSHAB.ⁿ²²⁵ The petition must also contain a general statement of the evidence and law the petitioner is relying on in support of the petition.ⁿ²²⁶ A petition for reconsideration that alleges only the statutory grounds for reconsiderationⁿ²²⁷ without specific references to the record and principles of law will be denied as a skeletal petition.ⁿ²²⁸

Only those matters raised in a petition for reconsideration will be considered by the OSHAB, and the petitioner is deemed to have finally waived all objections, irregularities, and illegalities concerning the proceeding except those raised in the petition for reconsideration.ⁿ²²⁹

A copy of the petition must be served on the other parties in the manner provided by Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 355(d).ⁿ²³⁰

[d] Effect of Filing Petition for Reconsideration on Decision or Order

By statute, the filing of a petition for reconsideration suspends the order or decision at issue, as it applies to parties to the petition, for 10 days unless otherwise ordered by the OSHAB.ⁿ²³¹ During the pendency of a reconsideration proceeding, the OSHAB may stay, suspend, or postpone the order or decision pending an order, findings, or decision after reconsideration.ⁿ²³²

[e] Time for Appeals Board Action on Petition

A petition for reconsideration will be deemed denied, thereby commencing the period for judicial review,ⁿ²³³ if the OSHAB takes no action on it within 45 days from the date of filing.ⁿ²³⁴ For good cause shown, the OSHAB may extend, for up to 15 days, the time within which it may act on a petition for reconsideration.ⁿ²³⁵

[f] Answer

Any party may file an answer to a petition for reconsideration or an order of reconsideration within 30 days after service of the petition or order.ⁿ²³⁶ The answer must be signed by the filing party or the party's representative and must be verified, unless filed by an agency that is exempt from verification under Code of Civil Procedure Section 446.ⁿ²³⁷

[g] Supplemental Petition or Answer; Request for Hearing Record

After a petition for reconsideration or an answer to such a petition is timely filed, the OSHAB has the discretion to grant a motion to file supplemental petitions or answers.ⁿ²³⁸ⁿ²³⁹⁻²⁴⁰

Opposing parties have 30 days from the date of service of the supplemental petition to file a supplemental answer.ⁿ²⁴¹

[h] Appeals Board Powers on Reconsideration

On reconsideration, the OSHAB may, with or without further proceedings and with or without notice, affirm, rescind, alter, or amend the order or decision made by the ALJ or by the OSHAB itself, based on the evidence previously submitted in the case, without taking any further evidence.ⁿ²⁴²

Alternatively, the OSHAB may grant reconsideration and order that additional evidence be submitted for consideration or taken at a further hearing.ⁿ²⁴³ If further evidence is taken at a hearing, the 30-day time limit for filing of an order or decision after a case is submittedⁿ²⁴⁴ does not apply.ⁿ²⁴⁵ The issues at the further hearing are limited to those set forth in the OSHAB's order for the hearing.ⁿ²⁴⁶ If additional evidence is taken, after consideration of all the facts, the OSHAB may affirm, alter, rescind, or amend the original order or decision.ⁿ²⁴⁷ An order or decision by the OSHAB after reconsideration has been granted, which affirms, rescinds, alters, or amends the original order or decision will not affect any right or the enforcement of any right arising from or by virtue of the original order or decision unless specifically ordered by the OSHAB.ⁿ²⁴⁸

Any decision by the OSHAB granting or denying reconsideration, or affirming, rescinding, altering, or amending the original findings, order, or decision following reconsideration must be made by the OSHAB, rather than an ALJ, and must be written and signed by a majority of the Board members assigned to the reconsideration.ⁿ²⁴⁹ The decision must state the evidence relied on and specify in detail the reasons for the Board's decision.ⁿ²⁵⁰

The OSHAB's decision is binding on the Director of Industrial Relations and on the Division with respect to the parties involved in the appeal.ⁿ²⁵¹

[21] Employer's Recovery of Costs[a] Right to Recover Costs Generally

The OSHAB may award the employer "reasonable costs" to a maximum of $5,000 in the aggregate if (1) the employer appeals a citation that resulted from an inspection or investigation conducted on or after January 1, 1980, and the citation was issued for a violation of any occupational safety or health standard, rule, order, or regulation, established pursuant to Chapter 6 of Division 1 of the Labor Code;ⁿ²⁵² (2) either the employer prevails in the appeal or the Division withdraws the citation after the employer's appeal has been accepted by the OSHAB;ⁿ²⁵³ and (3) the OSHAB finds that issuance of the citation was the result of arbitrary or capricious action or conduct by the Division.n254

[b] Recoverable Costs

Reasonable costs that may be recovered include costs necessarily incurred by the employer in preparing for and pursuing an appeal of a citation, and may include attorney's fees, consultant's fees, witness' fees and mileage, costs of discovery, costs of depositions, and costs of service of process if such costs were necessary disbursements for preparing and proceeding with a hearing on the citation.n255

[c] When Citation Is Deemed "Withdrawn"

A citation will be deemed withdrawn when the employer has filed an appeal in accordance with the requirements of Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 359, the OSHAB has acknowledged jurisdiction of the appeal, and thereafter the OSHAB grants the Division's motion or petition to withdraw the citation.n256

[d] When Employer Is Deemed to Have "Prevailed"

The employer will be deemed to have prevailed in an appeal when the employer's appeal is upheld on either an item of a citation or a total citation.n257 An employer will not be found to have prevailed in an appeal for the purposes of a petition for costs if the employer appealed the existence of the violation and the OSHAB affirms the violation but amends the classification of the violation or reduces the amount of proposed civil penalty.n258

[e] Petition Procedures

Procedures for recovery of costs are governed by OSHAB regulations adopted pursuant to statutory authority.n259 To initiate the procedure for recovery of costs, an employer must file a verified petition with a supporting memorandum of cost items within 60 days after the filing of the OSHAB's final decision to either grant the employer's appeal or to grant a Division motion or petition to withdraw the citation.n260

A "final decision" for the purposes of a cost petition is defined as a decision or order of an ALJ or of the OSHAB that has not been stayed for from which no petition for reconsideration has been filed or no reconsideration has been granted on the OSHAB's own motion within the time permitted by law.n261 If reconsideration was granted,n262 a decision or order is final 30 days after the decision after reconsideration is issued, unless a writ of mandate has been filed.n263 A decision or order that was the subject of a writ of mandate is final after a judgment has been entered and no appeal is pending in the courts.n264

The petition is deemed filed on the date it is delivered or mailed to the OSHAB in Sacramento.n265

The petition must specifically state the grounds for the petition, and describe in detail the particular items of the citation for which costs are being sought.n266 The petition must be verified in the manner provided for verified pleadings in courts of record.n267

The OSHAB must assign a petition number upon receipt of a petition for costs and serve a copy of the petition on the Division.n268 The Division has 30 days from the date of service of the petition to file a response with the OSHAB.n269

[f] Burden of Proof

The employer has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that issuance of the citation was the result of arbitrary or capricious action or conduct by the Division.n270

The OSHAB has found that employers have failed to establish arbitrary or capricious action by the Division when

citations were ultimately set aside by the court of appeal on jurisdictional grounds,ⁿ²⁷¹ when the employer contended that citations were issued for violations found in a location that was beyond the scope of an inspection warrant,ⁿ²⁷² and when circumstantial evidence existed that established that the petitioner was a special employer of employees exposed to a hazard.ⁿ²⁷³ An OSHAB finding after reconsideration that the employer had no liability under either an employee exposure or access theory is not sufficient in itself to establish arbitrary or capricious conduct by the Division, even where the investigation techniques are shown to be less than complete.ⁿ²⁷⁴

[g] Action on Petition

On review of a petition for costs and any response filed by the Division, the OSHAB must exercise one of the following three options:ⁿ²⁷⁵

1. Summarily dismiss the petition if the OSHAB finds that no grounds are stated for the petition or that the petition lacks sufficient facts to establish arbitrary or capricious action or conduct by the Division;
2. Grant the petition by a cost order and award costs, if the OSHAB finds arbitrary or capricious conduct or action has been established; or
3. Set the matter for a hearingⁿ²⁷⁶ if the OSHAB finds that a factual dispute exists.

[h] Hearing Procedures

If the OSHAB sets the matter for hearing, the parties must be given at least 15 days' notice of the hearing.ⁿ²⁷⁷

The parties must complete discovery and be fully prepared and ready to proceed at the time of the hearing.ⁿ²⁷⁸ Ten days before the scheduled hearing, the employer may file a supplemental memorandum of costs setting out claimed disbursements.ⁿ²⁷⁹ Each party is responsible for requesting and paying for the cost of obtaining any necessary prior hearing record, in advance of the scheduled cost hearing, if the party's proof will require consideration of the prior hearing record.ⁿ²⁸⁰

Cost hearings are conducted in accord with the OSHAB rules for other administrative hearings.ⁿ²⁸¹

The OSHAB's cost decision must be filed in accordance with the provisions of *Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 385*ⁿ²⁸² discussed in [19], above. A copy of the decision with a summary of evidence and reasons for decision must be mailed or served on each party or his or her representative with a statement explaining the right to petition for reconsideration within 30 days after service of the cost decision.ⁿ²⁸³

[i] Reconsideration

The employer may petition for reconsideration from any order denying the petition for costs within 30 days after issuance of the order.ⁿ²⁸⁴ Either the employer or the Division, or both, may petition for reconsideration from any order granting the petition for costs within 30 days after service of the order.ⁿ²⁸⁵

All petitions for reconsideration and answers to such petitions must be filed in accordance with the requirements of the general OSHAB rules of procedure regarding reconsideration.ⁿ²⁸⁶ For discussion of reconsideration procedures, see [20], above.

[22] Judicial Review of Appeals Board Decisions

[a] Procedure for Filing Writ of Mandate

Any person affected by an order or decision of the OSHAB may seek a writ of mandate in the superior court for the county in which he or she resides, in order to challenge the lawfulness of the original order or decision or of any decision or order after reconsideration.ⁿ²⁸⁷ However, the Labor Code requires that the party exhaust the reconsideration remedyⁿ²⁸⁸ prior to seeking judicial review. In other words, judicial review is not available unless (1) the OSHAB granted the party's petition for reconsideration, or ordered reconsideration on its own motion, and issued its own order affirming or setting aside the original order of the Board or ALJ; or (2) the party seeking review petitioned for reconsideration, and reconsideration was denied (or no action was taken by the Board within 45 days from the date of filing and service of the petition, so that the petition is deemed denied).ⁿ²⁸⁹ However, the Director of Industrial Relations has the right to seek judicial review of an OSHAB decision, irrespective of whether or not he or she appeared or participated in the appeal to the Board or its ALJ.ⁿ²⁹⁰

A petition for a writ of mandate must be filed within 30 days after a petition for reconsideration is denied, or, if the petition for reconsideration was granted or the OSHAB granted reconsideration on its own motion, within 30 days after the decision or order after reconsideration has been filed.ⁿ²⁹¹

The writ of mandate must be made returnable at a time and place specified by court order and must direct the OSHAB to certify its record in the case to the court within the time set forth in the order.ⁿ²⁹² Judicial review is based on the record certified to the court by the OSHAB, and no new or additional evidence may be introduced to the court for consideration in its review.ⁿ²⁹³

The general provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to writs of mandaten²⁹⁴ will, to the extent applicable, govern proceedings for a writ of mandate from an OSHAB decision or order.ⁿ²⁹⁵ For a full discussion of mandate proceedings for review of administrative decisions,ⁿ²⁹⁶ see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Public Administrative Law, Part IV. For general discussion of mandate proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Mandate and Prohibition.

A copy of every pleading filed while seeking a writ of mandate must be served on the OSHAB and on every other party who entered an appearance in the action before the OSHAB and whose interest is adverse to the party filing the pleading.ⁿ²⁹⁷

[b] No Automatic Stay

The filing of a petition for writ of mandate does not automatically stay or suspend the operation of any rule, order, or decision of the OSHAB being reviewed.ⁿ²⁹⁸ The reviewing court may, however, stay or suspend the operation of an order or decision, in whole or in part, on any terms the court may order.ⁿ²⁹⁹

[c] Scope of Judicial Review

Judicial review will extend only to the extent necessary to determine, based on the entire record as certified by the OSHAB, whether (1) the OSHAB acted without or in excess of its powers, (2) the order or decision was procured by fraud, (3) the order or decision was unreasonable, (4) the order or decision was not supported by substantial evidence, or (5) the OSHAB's findings of fact support the decision or order being reviewed.ⁿ³⁰⁰ The reviewing court has no jurisdiction to hold a trial de novo, to take additional evidence, or to exercise its independent judgment on the evidence in the record.ⁿ³⁰¹

The findings and conclusions of the OSHAB on questions of fact are conclusive and final and not subject to judicial review.ⁿ³⁰² Questions of fact include ultimate facts and the findings and conclusions of the OSHAB.ⁿ³⁰³

The OSHAB and any party to the proceeding or action before the OSHAB have the right to appear in any proceeding for a writ of mandate.ⁿ³⁰⁴

On hearing the matter, the reviewing court may enter judgment either affirming or annulling the order or decision of the OSHAB, or may remand the matter to the OSHAB for further proceedings.n305

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 148 et seq. (establishment and authority of OSHAB); Lab. Code § 6600 et seq. (OSHAB appeal procedures); see also discussion in § 21.02[3][d].

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 148.7; see Lab. Code § 6603(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6603(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code §§ 6600, 6600.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 361, 361.2.

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6319(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 347(r).

(n6)Footnote 6. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361.1(a); see also Lab. Code § 6602.

(n7)Footnote 7. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361.1(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. "Working day" is defined as any day that is not Saturday, Sunday, or state-recognized holiday pursuant to Gov. Code §§ 6700 and 6701. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 347(z).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code §§ 6600, 6600.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361(a). "Division's action," in this context, refers to any citation, notice, special order, order to take special action, notification of penalty, notification of failure to abate alleged violation and of additional civil penalty, or notification of failure to return a signed statement of abatement issued by the Division pursuant to Lab. Code § 6300 et seq. or Health & Safety Code § 2950, which by statute may be appealed to the OSHAB. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 347(i); see Lab. Code §§ 6600, 6600.5.

(n10)Footnote 10. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361.1(a); see Lab. Code § 6602.

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code §§ 6601, 6601.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 359(b), 361(a), 361.1(a).

(n12)Footnote 11.1. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361(b).

(n13)Footnote 12. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 359(a).

(n14)Footnote 13. Lab. Code §§ 6601, 6601.5.

(n15)Footnote 14. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 359(a).

(n16)Footnote 14.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 359(a).

(n17)Footnote 15. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 359.1(a).

(n18)Footnote 16. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 359.1(b).

(n19)Footnote 17. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 359.1(c).

(n20)Footnote 18. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 359.1(b).

(n21)Footnote 19. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361.3(a); see Lab. Code §§ 6600, 6600.5 (times for appeal; matters reviewable).

(n22)Footnote 20. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361.3(a).

(n23)Footnote 21. [Reserved]

(n24)Footnote 22. See definition in § 21.42[2][c].

(n25)Footnote 23. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361.3(b).

(n26)Footnote 24. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 361.3(c).

(n27)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 6602.

(n28)Footnote 26. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 362.

(n29)Footnote 27. "Affected employee" is defined as any employee of a cited employer who is exposed to the alleged hazard described in the citation as a result of his or her assigned duties. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 347(b).

(n30)Footnote 28. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 356, 356.1.

(n31)Footnote 29. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356.1(d).

(n32)Footnote 30. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356.1(c).

(n33)Footnote 31. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356(a).

(n34)Footnote 32. An authorized employee representative is defined as a labor organization that has a collective bargaining relationship with the cited employer and that represents affected employees, or an employee organization formally acknowledged by a public agency as an employee organization that represents affected public agency employees. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 347(d).

(n35)Footnote 33. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356(b)(1).

(n36)Footnote 34. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356(a).

(n37)Footnote 35. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356.2(a), (b).

(n38)Footnote 36. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 362.

(n39)Footnote 37. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356.2(c).

(n40)Footnote 38. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356.2(d).

(n41)Footnote 39. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354(a).

(n42)Footnote 40. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354(d).

(n43)Footnote 41. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354(b), (e).

(n44)Footnote 42. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354(h).

(n45)Footnote 42.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354(h); see [c], below.

(n46)Footnote 43. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354.1(a).

(n47)Footnote 44. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354.1(a).

(n48)Footnote 44.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354.1(c).

(n49)Footnote 45. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 354.1(b).

(n50)Footnote 46. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 348(a).

(n51)Footnote 47. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 348(c).

(n52)Footnote 48. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 348(c).

(n53)Footnote 49. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 359(b); see also 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 361, 361.1(a).

(n54)Footnote 50. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(d); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(i), (j) (requirements for service by fax).

(n55)Footnote 51. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(e).

(n56)Footnote 52. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 348(b).

(n57)Footnote 53. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(c).

(n58)Footnote 54. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356(b)(1).

(n59)Footnote 55. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356(a).

(n60)Footnote 56. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(f).

(n61)Footnote 57. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(f).

(n62)Footnote 58. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(h).

(n63)Footnote 59. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(g).

(n64)Footnote 60. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(a).

(n65)Footnote 60.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(b).

(n66)Footnote 61. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 352.

(n67)Footnote 62. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 352(b)(1). Note: Former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(c) and (e) have been relettered as 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(d) and (f), respectively. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 352(b)(1) has not yet been amended to reflect that change.

(n68)Footnote 63. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 352(b)(2).

(n69)Footnote 64. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 352(b)(3).

(n70)Footnote 65. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 352(b)(4).

(n71)Footnote 66. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 352(b)(5).

(n72)Footnote 67. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 352(b)(6).

(n73)Footnote 68. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 371(a).

(n74)Footnote 69. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 371(b).

(n75)Footnote 70. 8 Cal. Code Reg. 371(b); see discussion in [d], above.

(n76)Footnote 71. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 352(a).

(n77)Footnote 72. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 371(c).

(n78)Footnote 73. See Lab. Code §§ 6604, 6605.

(n79)Footnote 74. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 375.1(a), (b).

(n80)Footnote 75. Lab. Code § 6605.

(n81)Footnote 76. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 347.1(a).

(n82)Footnote 77. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 350.1(a).

(n83)Footnote 78. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 375.2(a).

(n84)Footnote 79. Lab. Code § 6606; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 375.2(b). Code Civ. Proc. § 641 sets forth grounds for objection to the appointment of a referee in a civil action. The grounds generally relate to lack of qualifications, pre-existing relationship with one of the parties, previous knowledge of or involvement in the case, direct interest in the outcome or subject of the action, preconceived opinion about the merits of the case, or bias for or against a party.

(n85)Footnote 80. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 375.2(b).

(n86)Footnote 81. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 375.2(b); see Lab. Code § 6606.

(n87)Footnote 82. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 375.1(c).

(n88)Footnote 83. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 375.1(c).

(n89)Footnote 84. See Lab. Code § 6605.

(n90)Footnote 85. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 363(a).

(n91)Footnote 86. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 363(b).

(n92)Footnote 87. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 363(b).

(n93)Footnote 88. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 363(c).

(n94)Footnote 89. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364(a).

(n95)Footnote 90. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364(a).

(n96)Footnote 91. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364(b).

(n97)Footnote 92. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364(b).

(n98)Footnote 93. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364(b).

(n99)Footnote 94. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364.1(a).

(n100)Footnote 95. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364.1(b).

(n101)Footnote 96. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364.1(c), (d); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356(a) (posting of notices generally); see also discussion in [7], above.

(n102)Footnote 97. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364.2(a).

(n103)Footnote 98. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364.2(c).

(n104)Footnote 99. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 364.2(d); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356(a).

(n105)Footnote 100-110. [Reserved]

(n106)Footnote 111. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.1(a).

(n107)Footnote 112. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.1(b).

(n108)Footnote 113. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.1(c).

(n109)Footnote 114. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.1(d).

(n110)Footnote 115. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.1(e).

(n111)Footnote 116. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.1(f).

(n112)Footnote 117. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.1(f).

(n113)Footnote 118. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.1(h).

(n114)Footnote 119. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.1(g).

(n115)Footnote 120. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.

(n116)Footnote 120.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.

(n117)Footnote 121. See discussion in [a], above.

(n118)Footnote 122. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.6(a).

(n119)Footnote 123. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.6(a).

(n120)Footnote 124. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.6(b).

(n121)Footnote 125. [Reserved]

(n122)Footnote 126. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.6(c).

(n123)Footnote 127. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.6(d).

(n124)Footnote 128. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.6(e).

(n125)Footnote 129. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.2(a).

(n126)Footnote 130. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.2(a)(2).

(n127)Footnote 131. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.2(d).

(n128)Footnote 131.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.3(c).

(n129)Footnote 132. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 382(b).

(n130)Footnote 133. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.2(e).

(n131)Footnote 134. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.2(f).

(n132)Footnote 135. See Lab. Code § 6613; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.3(a).

(n133)Footnote 136. See Lab. Code § 6613; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.3(a).

(n134)Footnote 137. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.3(a).

(n135)Footnote 138. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.3(e); Lab. Code § 6613; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 2016 et seq. (Code Civ. Proc. § 2016.010 et seq. operative July 1, 2005) (procedures regarding depositions and discovery in civil actions).

(n136)Footnote 139. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.5(a).

(n137)Footnote 140. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.5(b).

(n138)Footnote 141. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.4(a).

(n139)Footnote 142. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.4(a).

(n140)Footnote 143. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.4(a).

(n141)Footnote 144. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.4(a).

(n142)Footnote 145. See Lab. Code § 6603(b); Gov. Code § 11455.20; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 381.

(n143)Footnote 146. See Gov. Code § 11455.20; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 381.

(n144)Footnote 147. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 381.

(n145)Footnote 148. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 374(a).

(n146)Footnote 149. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 374(b).

(n147)Footnote 150. See discussion in [15], above.

(n148)Footnote 151. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 374.1.

(n149)Footnote 151.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 374(c).

(n150)Footnote 152. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 356(a), (b); see discussion in [7], [9][c], [d], above.

(n151)Footnote 153. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376(a), (b).

(n152)Footnote 154. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 373.

(n153)Footnote 155. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 373.

(n154)Footnote 155.1. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 372.6 (proceedings to compel discovery); see also [15][b], above.

(n155)Footnote 155.2. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 373.

(n156)Footnote 156. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376(d).

(n157)Footnote 157. See Keller Industries, Inc. v. Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Bd. (1981) 124 Cal. App. 3d 469, 474-477, 177 Cal. Rptr. 136 .

(n158)Footnote 158. See Lab. Code § 6612.

(n159)Footnote 159. [Reserved]

(n160)Footnote 160. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.1(d).

(n161)Footnote 161. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.1(b).

(n162)Footnote 162. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.1(c).

(n163)Footnote 163. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.1(b).

(n164)Footnote 164. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 378(a).

(n165)Footnote 165. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 378(b).

(n166)Footnote 166. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 378(c).

(n167)Footnote 167. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 378(d).

(n168)Footnote 168. [Reserved]

(n169)Footnote 169. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.2.

(n170)Footnote 170. Lab. Code § 6612.

(n171)Footnote 171. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.2; see Lab. Code § 6612; see also Lab. Code § 6603(a); Gov. Code § 11513(c).

(n172)Footnote 172. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.2; see Gov. Code § 11513(c).

(n173)Footnote 173. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.2; see Gov. Code § 11513(c).

(n174)Footnote 174. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.2; see Gov. Code § 11513(c).

(n175)Footnote 174.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.2.

(n176)Footnote 175. Gov. Code § 6250 et seq.

(n177)Footnote 176. Lab. Code § 6322; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.6(a).

(n178)Footnote 177. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.6(a).

(n179)Footnote 178. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.6(a).

(n180)Footnote 179. Lab. Code § 6322; see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.6(b).

(n181)Footnote 180. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.6(c).

(n182)Footnote 181. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 379.

(n183)Footnote 182. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.3(a).

(n184)Footnote 183. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.3(b).

(n185)Footnote 184. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.3(c).

(n186)Footnote 185. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.3(d).

(n187)Footnote 186. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(a).

(n188)Footnote 187. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(b).

(n189)Footnote 188. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(b).

(n190)Footnote 189. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(c).

(n191)Footnote 190. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(d).

(n192)Footnote 191. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(e).

(n193)Footnote 192. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(f).

(n194)Footnote 193. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(g).

(n195)Footnote 194. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(g).

(n196)Footnote 195. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 376.5(h).

(n197)Footnote 196. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 383(a); see Lab. Code § 6611(a).

(n198)Footnote 197. Lab. Code § 6611(a).

(n199)Footnote 198. Lab. Code § 6611(a).

(n200)Footnote 199. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 383(b); see Lab. Code § 6611(b).

(n201)Footnote 200-203. [Reserved]

(n202)Footnote 204. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 380.

(n203)Footnote 205. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 380.

(n204)Footnote 206. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 380.

(n205)Footnote 207. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 380. For discussion of service and proof of service, see [9][c], [d], above.

Note: Former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(c) was relettered as 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(d). 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 380 has not yet been amended to reflect that change.

(n206)Footnote 207.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 380.

(N207)Footnote 208. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 385(a).

(n208)Footnote 209. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 385(a).

(n209)Footnote 210. Lab. Code § 6608; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 385(a).

(n210)Footnote 210.1. Chao v. Symms Fruit Ranch Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 242 F.3d 894, 898 .

(n211)Footnote 211. See Lab. Code § 148.4.

(n212)Footnote 212. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 385(b).

(n213)Footnote 213. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 385(c); see Lab. Code § 6608.

(n214)Footnote 214. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 384(a).

(n215)Footnote 215. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 384(a).

(n216)Footnote 216. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 384(a); see Lab. Code § 6609.

(n217)Footnote 217. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 384(a).

(n218)Footnote 218. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 384(b).

(n219)Footnote 219. Lab. Code § 6614(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 390(a); see Lab. Code § 6626.

(n220)Footnote 220. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 390(a).

(n221)Footnote 221. Lab. Code § 6614(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 390.2(a); see also Lab. Code § 6626 (OSHAB may reconsider its own decisions on its own motion within same period of time).

(n222)Footnote 222. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 390.3(a); see Lab. Code §§ 6614, 6615.

(n223)Footnote 223. Lab. Code § 6617; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 390.1(a).

(n224)Footnote 224. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 390(c); see Lab. Code § 6616.

(n225)Footnote 225. Lab. Code § 6616; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 391(a).

(n226)Footnote 226. Lab. Code § 6616.

(n227)Footnote 227. See discussion in [b], above.

(n228)Footnote 228. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 391(a).

(n229)Footnote 229. Lab. Code § 6618; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 391(a).

(n230)Footnote 230. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 392; see Lab. Code § 6619. For discussion of service of documents, see [9][c], above. Note: Former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(c) was relettered as 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 355(d). 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 380 has not yet been amended to reflect that change.

(n231)Footnote 231. Lab. Code § 6625.

(n232)Footnote 232. Lab. Code § 6625; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 390.9.

(n233)Footnote 233. See Lab. Code § 6627; see also discussion in [22][a], below.

(n234)Footnote 234. Lab. Code § 6624.

(n235)Footnote 235. Lab. Code § 6624.

(n236)Footnote 236. Lab. Code § 6619; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 390(b), 390.2(b).

(n237)Footnote 237. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 390(c), 390.2(c); see Lab. Code § 6619.

(n238)Footnote 238. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 392.3(a).

(n239)Footnote 239-240. [Reserved]

(n240)Footnote 241. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 392.3(b).

(n241)Footnote 242. See Lab. Code §§ 6620, 6621; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 390.1(b)(1),(c).

(n242)Footnote 243. Lab. Code § 6620; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 390.1(b)(2), 393(g), 394.

(n243)Footnote 244. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 385(a); see also discussion in [19], above.

(N244)Footnote 245. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 394(c).

(n245)Footnote 246. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 394(b).

(n246)Footnote 247. Lab. Code § 6622.

(n247)Footnote 248. Lab. Code § 6622.

(n248)Footnote 249. Lab. Code § 6623; see Lab. Code §§ 148.5, 148.9.

(n249)Footnote 250. Lab. Code § 6623.

(n250)Footnote 251. Lab. Code § 148.6.

(n251)Footnote 252. Lab. Code § 140 et seq.

(n252)Footnote 253. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 396(b) (definition of "citation is withdrawn"); see also discussion in [13], above.

(n253)Footnote 254. Lab. Code § 149.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(a).

(n254)Footnote 255. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 396(e); see Lab. Code § 149.5.

(n255)Footnote 256. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 396(b). For discussion of withdrawal of Division actions, see [13], above.

(n256)Footnote 257. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 396(d).

(n257)Footnote 258. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 396(d).

(n258)Footnote 259. See Lab. Code § 149.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 395-397.

(n259)Footnote 260. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(1).

(n260)Footnote 261. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 396(c).

(n261)Footnote 262. For discussion of reconsideration, see [20], above.

(n262)Footnote 263. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 396(c). For discussion of judicial review by mandate, see [22], below.

(n263)Footnote 264. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 396(c).

(n264)Footnote 265. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(1).

(n265)Footnote 266. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(1).

(n266)Footnote 267. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(1).

(n267)Footnote 268. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(2).

(n268)Footnote 269. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(2).

(n269)Footnote 270. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 396(a), 397(a).

(n270)Footnote 271. See Troy Gold Industries, Ltd. (Dec. 14, 1987) Cal. OSHAB Petition No. P87-001/2/9 (decision after reconsideration).

(n271)Footnote 272. See Bragg Crane Service, Inc. (June 29, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Petition No. P80-001/34/3 (decision after reconsideration).

(n272)Footnote 273. See W.M. Lyles (Oct. 1, 1987) Cal. OSHAB Petition No. P85-009/2/5 (decision after reconsideration).

(n273)Footnote 274. See Rudolph & Sletten, Inc. (Nov. 4, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Petition No. P81-001/1/1 (decision after reconsideration).

(n274)Footnote 275. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(3).

(n275)Footnote 276. See discussion in [h], below.

(n276)Footnote 277. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(3)(C).

(n277)Footnote 278. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(4).

(n278)Footnote 279. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(4).

(n279)Footnote 280. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(4).

(n280)Footnote 281. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(5); see discussion in [18], above.

(n281)Footnote 282. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(6).

(n282)Footnote 283. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(6); see discussion in [i], below.

(n283)Footnote 284. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(3)(A).

(n284)Footnote 285. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(3)(B).

(n285)Footnote 286. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 397(b)(3)(A),(B),(6); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 389 et seq. (rules governing reconsideration).

(n286)Footnote 287. Lab. Code § 6627.

(n287)Footnote 288. See discussion in [20], above.

(n288)Footnote 289. See Lab. Code §§ 6615, 6624, 6627.

(n289)Footnote 290. Lab. Code § 148.6.

(n290)Footnote 291. Lab. Code § 6627.

(n291)Footnote 292. Lab. Code § 6628.

(n292)Footnote 293. Lab. Code § 6628.

(n293)Footnote 294. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1084 et seq.

(n294)Footnote 295. Lab. Code § 6631.

(n295)Footnote 296. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5.

(n296)Footnote 297. Lab. Code § 6631.

(n297)Footnote 298. Lab. Code § 6633.

(n298)Footnote 299. Lab. Code § 6633.

(n299)Footnote 300. Lab. Code § 6629.

(n300)Footnote 301. Lab. Code § 6629.

(n301)Footnote 302. Lab. Code § 6630.

(n302)Footnote 303. Lab. Code § 6630.

(n303)Footnote 304. Lab. Code § 6630.

(n304)Footnote 305. Lab. Code § 6630.

71 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.46

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.46 Employer Defenses to Citations

[1] Burden of Proof

The Division has the burden of proof to establish by a preponderance of evidencen1 employee exposure,n2 each element of the cited safety or health order allegedly violated,n3 that the employer was give proper notice of the citation (i.e., service of the citation and notice of civil penalty),n4 and each element of the characterization (willful, repeat, serious, general, etc.) of the citation,n5 as well as the basis for calculating the amount of civil penalty.n6

[2] Employment and Employee Exposure

Employment and employee exposure are threshold issues in the appeal of any citation and civil penalty. The Division must establish by a preponderance of evidence that an employee of the cited employer was exposed to an unsafe or unhealthy condition in violation of the cited safety order or standard.n7

The Division's failure to establish that an employee of the cited employer was exposed to the hazardous condition will result in dismissal of the citation.n8 Therefore, a citation will be dismissed if the evidence establishes that the only person exposed to the alleged hazard was a sole proprietor, i.e., a working employer,n9 or if the evidence supports finding a familial, such as grandfather-grandson relationship, instead of an employment relationship, when the alleged violation occurred.n10

Assuming that an employer-employee relationship existed, failure to establish that an employee was actually exposed also will result in dismissal of the citation, even if the Division proves that a hazardous condition existed in the workplace.n11 Some evidence must establish that an employee of the cited employer came within the zone of danger while performing work related duties, pursuing personal activities during work, or employing normal means of ingress and egress to the employee's work station.n12

The employer is liable for any violation to which his or her employees are exposed, even if such a violation has been created by a third party.n13

[3] Service

In determining whether personal service of a citation was adequate,ⁿ¹⁴ the issue is whether the form of service is reasonably calculated to bring the citation to the attention of someone in authority for conducting the employer's business affairs.ⁿ¹⁵

[4] Statute of Limitations

A citation must be issued with "reasonable promptness," and no citation or notice may be issued by the Division of Occupational Safety and Health for a given violation after six months since the occurrence of the violation.ⁿ¹⁶

In one case, a court of appeal found a citation issued two months after inspection of an accident site to be timely. The court held that a citation issued within six months after an inspection is deemed to be issued with reasonable promptness, unless the employer can establish prejudice by the delay.ⁿ¹⁷

The Division may amend a citation more than six months after the alleged violation as long as the original and amended citations relate to the same general set of facts and provided that the employer is not prejudiced or misled by the amendment.ⁿ¹⁸ However, if such an amendment is made more than six months after the existence of the alleged violation, and the elements of the violation alleged in the amended citation differ from those set forth in the original citation, the amendment will be barred by the six-month limit in Labor Code Section 6317.ⁿ¹⁹

The statute of limitations for a citation issued for violation of an order to take action runs from the date that the employer failed to comply with the order, not the date of the inspection that resulted in the order.ⁿ²⁰

[5] Particularity and Specificity

Any citation issued by the Division must be written, describe with "particularity" the nature of the violation, and specify the Labor Code section or occupational safety or health standard, rule, regulation, or order allegedly violated.ⁿ²¹ However, even if the Division incorrectly specifies the safety order alleged to have been violated, a citation may be upheld if the citation described employee exposure to a hazard with sufficient "certainty" or "particularity" to enable the employer to prepare a defense.ⁿ²²

If two safety orders, one general and one specific, refer to the same hazardous condition and are inconsistent with each other, the Division must cite the more specific safety order in the citation.ⁿ²³

Special industry safety orders on a specific subject have priority over inconsistent general industry safety orders on the same subject.ⁿ²⁴

[6] Unforeseeable Isolated Employee Act

A citation may be dismissed if the evidence establishes the violation was due to an unforeseeable employee act. However, the employer will not prevail in such a defense if there is any evidence that (1) the employer knew or should have known of the potential danger to employees from the hazardous condition; (2) the employer failed to exercise adequate supervision to assure safety; (3) the employer failed to ensure employee compliance with its safety rules; or (4) the violation was foreseeable.ⁿ²⁵

[7] Independent Employee Action

Closely related to the "unforeseeable employee act" discussed in [6], above, defense is the "independent employee action" defense. A citation will be dismissed if an employer can prove all of the following elements of the independent employee action defense, by a preponderance of the evidence:ⁿ²⁶

1. The exposed employee was experienced in the job being performed;
2. The employer has a well-devised safety program that includes training employees in matters of safety with respect to their particular job assignments;
3. The employer effectively enforces the safety program;
4. The employer has an enforced policy of sanctions against employees who violate the safety program; and
5. The employee caused a safety infraction that he or she knew was contrary to the employer's safety requirements.

However, the independent employee action defense may not be applied to the acts of foremen or supervisors.ⁿ²⁷

[8] Vagueness

A safety or health regulation found to be vague, ambiguous, and overbroad will not be enforceable.ⁿ²⁸

A safety order will not be found void and unenforceable for "uncertainty" if any reasonable and practical construction can be given to the language of the safety order that gives fair warning of the violative conduct or the condition that is prohibited.ⁿ²⁹ Safety orders will generally be construed to give specific meaning to terms that might otherwise be viewed as unconstitutionally vague.ⁿ³⁰ Whether or not a given safety order is unconstitutionally vague will be determined in the context of the particular conduct to which the safety order is being applied.ⁿ³¹

[9] Advisory Versus Mandatory Standards

The use of "may" in a safety order will establish that the requirements of the order are permissive, rather than mandatory.ⁿ³² A permissive safety or health order will not sustain a citation for violation of the order.ⁿ³³

[10] Miscellaneous Unsuccessful Defenses

Industry practice is not a defense to a citation.ⁿ³⁴

An employer's good faith attempt to provide a safe workplace is not a defense to a citation,ⁿ³⁵ although it may support some reduction of the civil penalty.ⁿ³⁶

The added expense of making the workplace safe is no defense to a violation.ⁿ³⁷

The fact that the Division conducted its inspection in an unsafe manner is also no defense to a citation.ⁿ³⁸

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsCitations & InspectionsLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Howard J. White, Inc. (June 16, 1983) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 78-741, 78-742 (decision after reconsideration).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Rossi Construction Co. (May 9, 1986) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 83-568 (decision after reconsideration); Wickes Forest Industries (Oct. 31, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-1269, p. 2 (decision after reconsideration); Easyco (Oct. 26, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 83-387, 83-388, 83-390, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration); McCarthy & Spiessman, Inc. (Sept. 28, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 83-568 (decision after reconsideration).

(n3)Footnote 3. See John J. Lessman and Son, Inc. dba ABC Plumbing, Heating and Cooling (Jan. 9, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-1330, pp. 3-4 (decision after reconsideration); Contri Construction Co. (Mar. 31, 1983) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 76-921 (decision after reconsideration).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Kaweah Construction Co. (Mar. 5, 1987) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 87-9005, 87-9006 (decision after reconsideration); Duran's Body Shop (Oct. 30, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 82-369 (decision after reconsideration); Channel Constructors, Inc. (Sept. 25, 1982) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 77-028, 77-137 (decision after reconsideration); Abbett Electric Corp. (Dec. 30, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-1449, pp. 2-3 (decision after reconsideration); North Bay Construction, Inc. (Dec. 30, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 80-1489, pp. 3-4 (decision after reconsideration).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Gordon H. Ball, Inc. (June 30, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 75-086 (decision after reconsideration); Electric Motor Shop, Inc. (Dec. 15, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 77-571, 77-769--77-771, 77-773 (decision after reconsideration); J.F. Shea Co. (Mar. 27, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 75-1244, 75-1245 (decision after reconsideration); John Jackson Masonry (Sept. 21, 1977) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 76-1211 (decision after reconsideration).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Townsend & Schmidt Masonry (Aug. 26, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-1049 (decision after reconsideration); Limberg Construction (Feb. 21, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-433 (decision after reconsideration).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Wickes Forest Industries (Oct. 31, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-1269, p. 2 (decision after reconsideration); Easyco (Oct. 26, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 83-387, 83-388, 83-390, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration); Rudolph & Sletten, Inc. (Mar. 5, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 80-602 (decision after reconsideration); see also discussion in § 21.03[2].

(n8)Footnote 8. Easyco (Oct. 26, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 83-387, 83-388, 83-390, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lou Perini Plastering (June 21, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 80-185, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration).

(n10)Footnote 10. Rosasco George (Nov. 20, 1978) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 77-814 (decision after reconsideration).

(n11)Footnote 11. Wickes Forest Industries (Oct. 31, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-1269, p. 2 (decision after reconsideration).

(n12)Footnote 12. Golden West Homes (Nov. 19, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-1095, pp. 5-6 (decision after reconsideration); Bethlehem Steel Corp. (May 21, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 76-552, p. 7 (decision after reconsideration); Roof Structures, Inc. (June 30, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 78-478--78-480, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration).

(n13)Footnote 13. Novo-Rados Enterprises (May 29, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 75-1170--75-1173,

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.46

75-1175, p. 10 (decision after reconsideration); Department of Transportation (Nov. 24, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 81-017, 81-018, p. 5 (decision after reconsideration).

(n14)Footnote 14. See § 21.42 [1] for discussion of service requirements.

(n15)Footnote 15. See Abbett Electric Corp. (Dec. 30, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-1449, pp. 2-3 (decision after reconsideration); North Bay Construction, Inc. (Dec. 30, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 80-1489, pp. 3-4 (decision after reconsideration).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Lab. Code § 6317; see also discussion in § 21.42[1][a].

(n17)Footnote 17. Vial v. California Occupational Saf. & Health Appeals Bd. (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 997, 1002, 1005, 142 Cal. Rptr. 549 ; see Novo Rados Enterprises (Feb. 23, 1983) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 76-305, 76-378, 76-379, 76-418, p. 7 (decision after reconsideration); Granite Construction Co. (June 29, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 80-911 (decision after reconsideration; 71-day delay in issuance of citation), pp. 2-3.

(n18)Footnote 18. Western Roofing Service (Apr. 23, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 75-029, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration); see E & G Contractors, Inc. (Mar. 27, 1987) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 81-825--81-827 (decision after reconsideration; Division motion to amend citation to reclassify violation from serious to willful/serious and to increase the proposed penalty from $1,000 to $3,000 two years after violation allegedly occurred held not barred by statute of limitations because no prejudice to employer was shown).

(n19)Footnote 19. Rudolph & Sletten, Inc. (Sept. 28, 1984) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-1578, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration).

(n20)Footnote 20. Southern California Edison (Aug. 26, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 81-663 (decision after reconsideration).

(n21)Footnote 21. Lab. Code § 6317; see also discussion in § 21.42[1][b].

(n22)Footnote 22. Star-Kist, Inc. (Oct. 16, 1987) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 83-782 (decision after reconsideration); Sheedy Drayage (Dec. 24, 1986) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 84-518, pp. 2-4 (decision after reconsideration); John J. Lessman and Son, Inc. dba ABC Plumbing, Heating and Cooling (Jan. 9, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-1330, pp. 3-4 (decision after reconsideration); Certified Grocers of California, Ltd. (Oct. 27, 1982) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-607, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration); see Novo-Rados Constructors, (Apr. 28, 1983) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 78-135--78-137, 78-265, pp. 2-3 (decision after reconsideration; citation of section number without noting source as Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations was adequate where citation described alleged violation well enough for employer to prepare spirited defense).

(n23)Footnote 23. Carver Construction Co. (Mar. 27, 1980) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 77-378, citing Egger & Ghio Company, Inc. (May 1, 1978) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 77-281, pp. 3-4 (decision after reconsideration).

(n24)Footnote 24. C.L. Peck Contractor & Henry C. Beck Co. (Oct. 28, 1976) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 75-508, 75-572, p. 2 (decision after reconsideration; construction industry safety orders versus general industry safety orders).

(n25)Footnote 25. See Gaehwiler v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 1041, 1045, 191 Cal. Rptr. 336 ; see Newbery Electric Corp. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 641, 650, 176 Cal. Rptr. 734 (experienced electrician with supervisory duties and familiarity with employer's enforced safety program electrocuted while installing utility pole less than 10 feet from high-voltage lines despite written instructions to install 15 feet from line); but see Macco Constructors, Inc. (Oct. 2, 1987) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 83-147, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration; defense does not apply to actions of foreman).

(n26)Footnote 26. Mercury Service, Inc. (Oct. 16, 1980) Cal OSHAB Docket No. 77-1133 (decision after reconsideration).

(n27)Footnote 27. Davey Tree Surgery Co. v. Occupational Safety & Health Appeals Bd. (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1232, 1240-1243, 213 Cal. Rptr. 806 ; Western Pipeline (Sept. 28, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 80-1426, p. 2 (decision after reconsideration); Cutter Laboratories (Feb. 24, 1982) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 81-440, p. 2 (decision after reconsideration).

(n28)Footnote 28. Bethlehem Steel Corp. (Jan. 27, 1976) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 75-207 (decision after reconsideration).

(n29)Footnote 29. Ryerson Concrete, Inc. dba Hank's Truck Service (Feb. 26, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 79-1571, pp. 2-3 (decision after reconsideration).

(n30)Footnote 30. Novo-Rados Enterprises (May 29, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 75-1170--75-1173, 75-1175, p. 7 (decision after reconsideration).

(n31)Footnote 31. Southern California Roofing Co. (Oct. 30, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 77-169, 77-170, p. 2 (decision after reconsideration).

(n32)Footnote 32. Kaiser Steel Corporation (June 21, 1982) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 75-548, etc., pp. 20-21 (decision after reconsideration).

(n33)Footnote 33. See San Leandro Boat Works (July, 24, 1978) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 76-1218, p. 2 (decision after reconsideration).

(n34)Footnote 34. Procon, Inc. (Apr. 10, 1985) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 80-101, 80-102, p. 3 (decision after reconsideration); McKee Electric Co. (May 29, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 81-001, p. 2 (denial of petition for reconsideration); Novo-Rados Enterprises (May 29, 1981) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 75-1170, 75-1172, 75-1173, 75-1175, pp. 7-8 n.6 (decision after reconsideration).

(n35)Footnote 35. McGuire & Hester (Sept. 13, 1978) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 77-428, 77-429, pp. 2-3 (decision after reconsideration).

(n36)Footnote 36. See Lab. Code § 6319(c)(3); see also discussion in § 21.43[2][d], [3][b].

(n37)Footnote 37. Virgin Roof Co. (May 8, 1978) Cal. OSHAB Docket No. 78-044, p. 4 (ALJ decision).

(n38)Footnote 38. Stanley F. Yelich, Inc. (Apr. 26, 1979) Cal. OSHAB Docket Nos. 79-160, 79-161, p. 4 (ALJ decision).

72 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.47

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.47 Permits

[1] General Permits for Work Involving Substantial Risk of Injury

[a] Types of Work Requiring a Permit

Prior to the start of work involving certain types or places of employment that are considered, by their nature, to involve a substantial risk of injury, the employer must obtain a permit from the Division.ⁿ¹ The purpose of a permit is to provide notice to the Division that an employer will undertake permit-required activity and to allow the Division an effective means of ensuring that the proposed permit-required activity will be performed safely.^{n1.1} There are two types of permits: project permits and annual permits.^{n1.2} The types and places of employment requiring a pre-job permit are the following:ⁿ²

1. Construction of trenches or excavations that are five feet or deeper and into which a person is required to descend;
2. Construction of any building, structure,ⁿ³ scaffolding, or falsework that is more than three stories high or the equivalent height;ⁿ⁴
3. Demolition of any building or structure, or the dismantling of any scaffolding or falsework, that is more than three stories high or the equivalent height;
4. Underground use of diesel engines in work in mines and tunnels; and
5. Motion picture, television, or theater stages or sets, if there has occurred within any one prior calendar year in any combination at separate locations three serious injuries, fatalities, or serious violations related to the construction or demolition of sets more than 36 feet in height for the motion picture, television, and theatrical production industry (effective January 1, 2000).

A project permit authorizes an employer to conduct permit-required activity at the specific locations named in the permit.n4.1 Work on permit-required activities on a project subject to project permit requirements may not begin until a project permit has been issued for the project.n4.2 Only one project permit is required per project as long as the permit holder continues to act in the role of project administrator,n4.3 even though the project may have more than one employer fitting the description of a project administrator.n4.4 The following types of work activities are subject to the project permit requirement:

- To erect, raise or lower, or dismantle a fixed tower crane.n4.5
- To engage in the underground use of a diesel engine in any mine or tunnel.n4.6
- To conduct the demolition or dismantling of any building or structure more than 36 feet in height.n4.7
- To conduct specific activities on a structure intended to be more than 36 feet high when completed.n4.8

An annual permit allows a qualifying employer to conduct specified permit-required activity at any jobsite for a period of one year.n4.9 To conduct the following activities, the employer must hold an annual or project permit (and may apply for either):

1. Construction of trenches or excavations 5 feet or deeper into which any person is required to descend.n4.10
2. Erection and placement of scaffolding, vertical shoring, or falsework intended to be more than 36 feet high when completed.n4.11

Special registration and permit requirements apply to asbestos-related work,n5 as discussed in [2], below.

[b] Exemptions From Permit Requirements

The permit requirements of Labor Code Section 6500 and Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 341, do not apply to the following:

1. Governmental bodies, including the United States of America, its officers or agencies, State of California, counties, cities, cities and counties, and districts;n6
2. Any public utility that is subject to the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities Commission;n7
3. Construction of trenches or excavations for the purpose of doing emergency repair work to underground facilities;n8
4. Construction or final use of excavations or trenches if no person will be required to descend into the trench or excavation;n9
5. Excavation for the construction of graves, as defined in Health and Safety Code Section 7014;n10 and
6. Excavation for the construction of swimming pools.n11

The construction of motion picture, television, or theater stages and sets does not require a permit unless the conditions specified in Lab. Code § 6500(b) have occurred.^{n11.1} For these purposes, stages and sets include, without limitation, scenery, props, backdrops, flats, greenbeds, and grids.^{n11.2}

[c] Permit Applications

Before commencing any type of work described in [a], above, the employer must apply to the Division for a permit.ⁿ¹² Project and annual permit application forms may be obtained from any Division office.ⁿ¹³ The information required in permit applications is specified in Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations, Section 341.1(b). All applications must contain specified information,ⁿ¹⁴ and be accompanied by the required permit fee.ⁿ¹⁵ Additional information is required with project permit applications,^{n15.1} with applications for permits for underground use of diesel engines in mines and tunnels,^{n15.2} and with applications for the erecting, climbing, and dismantling of fixed tower cranes.^{n15.3}

An annual permit may be issued on the applicant's demonstration that it has an adequate safety program developed for the work activity to be covered by the permit, subject to specified conditions and any additional conditions specified by the Division. The permit expires one year later, and the permit must display the expiration date.^{n15.4} The issuance of annual permits is subject to the following conditions:^{n15.5}

- The work is performed by the entity named in the permit.
- The permit holder notifies the Division district office with jurisdiction over the site of the project at least 24 hours before the activity which is the subject of the notification. Notification must be given by mail, personal delivery, fax transmission or electronic mail, and provide the location of the project and the date and time the work activity is to commence.

An annual permit may be renewed by mail.^{n15.6}

Project permit applications are submitted to the Division district office that has jurisdiction over the site of the project to be covered by the permit.^{n15.7} Annual permit applications are submitted to the Division district office where the employer's California headquarters is located. If the employer has no California headquarters, the application is submitted to the Division's headquarters.^{n15.8} Permit applications for the use of diesel engines in mines and tunnels are submitted to the nearest office of the Division's Mining and Tunneling Unit.^{n15.9}

[d] Pre-Job Inspections, Hearings, and Safety Conferences

Prior to issuing a permit, the Division may conduct any investigation or hearing it deems necessary for purposes of issuing the permit, and may require a pre-job safety conference.ⁿ¹⁶ The pre-job safety conference is held at the Division's offices or at a designated place convenient for the attending parties, and is open to the permit applicant, representatives of the owner, contracting agencies, and employees and their representatives.ⁿ¹⁷ When scheduling a conference, the Division must make a reasonable effort to accommodate the scheduling needs of the applicant, furnish the applicant with a recommended checklist of information and documentation to bring to the safety conference, and clearly inform the applicant which parties are required to attend.ⁿ¹⁸

The permit applicant is responsible for notifying all attending parties of the safety conference a reasonable time before the conference is held, and for providing proof of such notification at the safety conference.ⁿ¹⁹ The purpose of the conference is to discuss the applicant's safety program and the means, methods, devices, processes, practices, conditions or operations the applicant intends to use to provide employment and a place of employment that are safe and healthful.ⁿ²⁰ⁿ²¹⁻²²

[e] [Reserved]

[f] Permit Posting

An employer issued a permit must post a copy of the permit at or near each place of employment. If such posting is impracticable at an excavation site, the permit must be available at all times at the site or, in the case of a mobile unit, at the employer's head office in the district.ⁿ²³

[g] Denial or Revocation of the Permit

[i] Division's Authority to Deny or Revoke Permit

The Division must deny a permit if, based on available facts, it concludes the employer failed to show that conditions, means, practices, methods, operations, or processes used or to be used will provide a safe and healthful place of employment.ⁿ²⁴ The Division may consider the employer's prior occupational safety and health history in making its determination.ⁿ²⁵ The Division must notify the employer immediately in writing of the denial of the permit, specifying the reasons for the denial, and send a copy of the notice to the Director of Industrial Relations.ⁿ²⁶

The Division may also revoke or suspend a permit for good cause and after notice and an opportunity for the employer to be heard.ⁿ²⁷ Notice of revocation or suspension must be in writing and served on the employer at least 24 hours before the hearing.ⁿ²⁸ The notice must be served by personal delivery or certified mail to the employer's address as shown on the permit application form.ⁿ²⁹ The notice must specify the reason for the revocation or suspension.ⁿ³⁰

The hearing on the revocation or suspension is held at the Division district or field office. The district manager or his or her designee presides at the meeting. Affected employees or their representatives are entitled to attend the hearing, and the employer must notify employees or their representatives a reasonable time before the hearing.ⁿ³¹ At the hearing, the Division must establish good cause for revocation or suspension of the permit. Good cause is established if the Division shows that the employer has failed to comply with the requirements for the issuance of the permit, and that continuance of the project under the circumstances would constitute a hazard to employees.ⁿ³²

[ii] Appeal of Permit Denial or Revocation to Director of Industrial Relations

An employer who has been denied a permit or whose permit has been revoked or suspended may appeal the decision to the Director of Industrial Relations.ⁿ³³ Filing such an appeal does not automatically stay a permit revocation or suspension.ⁿ³⁴ However, the employer may apply to the Director for an order staying the revocation or suspension pending the appeal after providing proper notice to the Division and an opportunity for the Division to respond.ⁿ³⁵

The Director will hold a hearing at a designated place within two working days after the employer's appeal.ⁿ³⁶ The hearing is open to employees and their representatives, and the employer is responsible for notifying employees and employee representatives of the time and place for the hearing.ⁿ³⁷ The employer has the burden of proving that it is qualified for the denied permitⁿ³⁸ or that the Division lacked good cause for revoking or suspending the permit.ⁿ³⁹

A decision will be issued by the Director after the hearing, and the decision is final unless rehearing by the Director is sought within 10 days of the Director's decision or further judicial review is granted.ⁿ⁴⁰

[h] Permit Fees

The Division charges a fee for the issuance of a permit to cover the costs involved in investigating and issuing the permit.ⁿ⁴¹ The amount of the fee is specified in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 341.3.

[i] Criminal and Civil Penalties and Injunctive Relief for Permit Violations

Any person, or agent or officer of a person, who violates the permit requirements of the Labor Code is guilty of a misdemeanor.ⁿ⁴² An employer who violates the permit requirements may also be assessed a civil penalty,ⁿ⁴³ as discussed in § 21.43[3][i].

Furthermore, if the Division finds, after an inspection or investigation, that an employer is engaging in work for which a permit is required, but lacks a valid permit, the Division may apply to the superior court for the county in which the work is being done for an injunction restraining that activity.ⁿ⁴⁴ The application, if supported by an affidavit showing that the employer is engaging in an activity that requires a permit, but lacks a permit, provides a prima facie showing warranting immediate issuance of a temporary restraining order, at the court's discretion.ⁿ⁴⁵ The Division is not required to furnish a bond for issuance of such a restraining order.ⁿ⁴⁶

[2] Registration Requirements for Asbestos-Related Work

[A] Types of Work and Entities Subject to Registration Requirements

Any employer or contractor who will be engaged in asbestos-related work that involves 100 square feet or moreⁿ⁴⁷ of surface area of asbestos-containing material must register with the Division before the start of work.ⁿ⁴⁸ For purposes of the registration requirement, "asbestos-related work" is defined as any activity that, by disturbing asbestos-containing construction materials, may release asbestos fibers into the air and that is not related to the manufacture of asbestos, the mining or excavation of asbestos-bearing ore or materials, or the installation or repair of automotive materials containing asbestos.ⁿ⁴⁹ However, "asbestos-related work" does not include the installation, repair, maintenance, or nondestructive removal of asbestos cement pipe used outside of buildings, if the installation, repair, maintenance, or nondestructive removal of asbestos cement pipe does not result in asbestos exposure to employees in excess of the action level determined in accordance with Title 8 California Code of Regulations sections 1529 and 5208, and if the employees and supervisors involved in the operation have received training through a task-specific training program, approved pursuant to Labor Code section 9021.9, with written certification of completion of that training by the training entity responsible for the training.^{n49.1} "Asbestos-containing construction materials" are any manufactured construction materials that contain more than one tenth of one percent asbestos by weight.ⁿ⁵⁰ "Asbestos" means "fibrous forms of various hydrated minerals, including chrysolite (fibrous serpentine), crocidolite (fibrous riebeckite), amosite (fibrous cummingtonite-grunerite), fibrous tremolite, fibrous actinolite, and fibrous anthophyllite."ⁿ⁵¹

In contrast to the permit requirements discussed in [1], above, no entity is exempt from the registration requirement for asbestos-related work, and state and local public entities are required to apply for registration.ⁿ⁵²

[b] Duty to Determine Presence of Asbestos and Related Penalties

The owner of a commercial or industrial building or structure, employer, or contractor who engages in, or contracts for, asbestos-related work must make a good-faith effort to determine if asbestos is present before the work is begun.ⁿ⁵³ The contractor or employer must first inquire of the owner if asbestos is present in any building or structure built before 1978.ⁿ⁵⁴

Any person who owns a commercial or industrial building or structure, any employer who does or contracts for asbestos-related work, any contractor, public agency, or any employee acting for any of the foregoing, who contracts for or begins asbestos-related work in any commercial or industrial building or structure built before 1978 without first determining if asbestos-containing material is present is subject to one of the following penalties:ⁿ⁵⁵

1. For a knowing or negligent violation, a fine of up to $5,000 or imprisonment in the county jail for up to six months, or both;
2. For a willful violation that results in death, serious injury or illness, or serious exposure, a fine of up to $10,000 or imprisonment in the county jail for up to one year, or both;

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.47

3. For a second or subsequent conviction of a willful violation under Paragraph 2, a fine of up to $20,000 or imprisonment in the county jail for up to one year, or both;
4. A civil penalty of up to $2,000 per violation, imposed pursuant to the procedures set forth in Labor Code Sections 6317, 6318, and 6319;n56 and
5. For a willful or repeat violation, a civil penalty of up to $20,000 per violation.

The owner, contractor, employer, public agency, or agent thereof may successfully defend against an action for violation of these Labor Code provisions if he or she establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that he or she made a reasonable effort to determine whether asbestos was present.n57

If the presence of asbestos is not disclosed to the contractor and, after commencing work, the contractor encounters material on the site that he or she reasonably believes to be asbestos or other hazardous substance, and the asbestos or other hazardous substance has not been rendered harmless, the contractor must immediately cease work on the area affected and report the condition to the owner, or the owner's representative or architect, in writing.n58

[c] Application for Registration and Fees

An employer or contractor required to register for asbestos-related work must complete a registration application form and submit it to the Division.n59 Registration application forms may be obtained from the Division's headquarter offices in San Francisco.n60 The application form requires the employer to provide, under penalty of perjury, specified information relating to the employer's compliance with contractor certification, employee health and workers' compensation insurance, and employee training requirements, as well as proof that the employer has knowledge of applicable safety and health standards and will comply with such standards and all other lawful orders of the Division; that the conditions, practices, means, methods, operations, or processes used will provide a safe and healthful place of employment; and that the employer is proficient in and has the necessary equipment to safely perform asbestos-related work.n61 Within 15 business days after receiving an application for registration, the Division must inform the applicant in writing either that the form is complete and accepted for filing or that the form is deficient, in which case the Division must specify what information or documentation is required to complete the application.n62 Within 30 business days after the date of filing of a complete application, the Division must inform the applicant in writing of its decision regarding the application.n63

The applicant must pay an application or renewal fee to the Division before the issuance or renewal of a registration.n64

[d] Posting and Notification of Asbestos-Related Work

The employer must post a sign readable at 20 feet at the location where any asbestos-related work requiring registration is to be done, stating "Danger--Asbestos. Cancer and Lung Hazard. Keep Out."n65 Before the job begins, the employer must provide a copy of the registration to the prime contractor or other employers at the site and post a copy of the registration on site next to the Cal/OSHA poster.n66

[e] Pre-Job Safety Conference

Regardless of the amount of asbestos to be handled, the employer must conduct a safety conference with representatives of the owner or contracting agency, the contractor, the employer, employees, and employee representatives prior to the start of work on any asbestos-handling job that is subject to the registration requirements.n67 The conference must include a discussion of the employer's safety program and the means, methods, devices, processes, practices, conditions, or operations that the employer intends to use to provide a safe and healthful place of employment.n68

[f] Notice Requirements Regarding Multiple Jobs, Phases of Work, or Locations

Whenever the employer will be conducting separate jobs or phases of asbestos-related work requiring registration, or where the work process may differ or is performed at noncontiguous locations, the employer must notify the Division of the following information:ⁿ⁶⁹

1. The address of the job;
2. The precise physical location of the job at that address;
3. The projected starting and completion dates;
4. The name of the certified supervisor who has sufficient experience and authority and who will be responsible for the asbestos-related work activity;
5. The name of a qualified person who will be responsible for conducting air sampling, calibration of air sampling equipment, evaluation of sampling results, and respiratory fit testing and evaluation of such tests; and
6. A description of the type of work to be performed, the work practices that will be used, and the potential for exposure.

The above notification must be made in writing prior to the commencement of work, except that the employer may notify the Division by telephone or orally (with subsequent written confirmation within 24 hours) if the circumstances require immediate abatement action.ⁿ⁷⁰ Changes in the information provided to the Division must be reported to the Division at or before the time of the change, and any change reported orally or by telephone must be confirmed in writing within 24 hours after the change.ⁿ⁷¹

[g] Denial or Revocation of Registration

The Division may deny issuance of, or suspend or revoke, a registration for asbestos-related work on grounds and according to procedures that are virtually identical to those for denying or revoking other permits for hazardous work, as discussed in [1][g], above.ⁿ⁷² As in the case of other permits, a denial, suspension, or revocation of registration for asbestos-related work may be appealed to the Director of Industrial Relations.ⁿ⁷³

[h] Separate Contract Requirement

Apart from the registration requirements, all asbestos-related workⁿ⁷⁴ or hazardous substance removalⁿ⁷⁵ must be performed pursuant to a contract that is separate from that for all other work to be performed, unless the presence of asbestos or hazardous substances has been disclosed in the bid or contract documents.ⁿ⁷⁶

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6500; see Lab. Code § 6501.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(a)(2).

(n3)Footnote 1.2. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(a)(3). For requirements for issuance of project and annual permits, see [c], below.

(n4)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6500

(n5)Footnote 3. A "structure" means any creation by human activity of a piece of work, formation, or series of parts joined together, including but not necessarily limited to billboards, bridges, buildings, chimneys, dams, elevated highways, falsework, outdoor signs, powerhouses, scaffolding, silos, smokestacks, tanks or tank towers, or transmission or communication towers. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(b)(10).

(n6)Footnote 4. [Reserved]

(n7)Footnote 4.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(b)(9).

(n8)Footnote 4.2. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(c)(1)(A).

(n9)Footnote 4.3. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341(b)(8) ("project administrator" defined as person or entity with overall onsite responsibility for planning, quality, management, or completion of project involving erection or demolition of structure, with examples including general contractors, prime contractors, owner/builders, joint ventures, and construction managers); 341.1(f) (issuance of project permits for projects other than erection of tower cranes); 341.1(g) (issuance of project permits for fixed tower cranes).

(n10)Footnote 4.4. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(c)(1)(B).

(n11)Footnote 4.5. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(d)(1).

(n12)Footnote 4.6. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(d)(2). The permit must be obtained prior to placing the engine in the mine or tunnel. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(d)(2).

(n13)Footnote 4.7. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(d)(3) (project administrator must hold project permit; all other employers directly engaging in demolition or dismantling activity must hold annual permit).

(n14)Footnote 4.8. 8 Cal. Code § 341(d)(4) (project administrator must hold project permit; all other employers directly engaging in these activities must hold annual permit).

(n15)Footnote 4.9. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(b)(1).

(n16)Footnote 4.10. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(d)(5)(A) (for these purposes, "descend" means to enter any part of trench or excavation once excavation has attained depth of 5 feet or more).

(n17)Footnote 4.11. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(d)(5)(B).

(n18)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code §§ 6501.5-6501.9, 6503.5, 6505.5, 6509.5.

(n19)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 6508; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(e)(1).

(n20)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 6508; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(e)(2).

(n21)Footnote 8. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(e)(3).

(n22)Footnote 9. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(e)(4).

(n23)Footnote 10. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(e)(5).

(n24)Footnote 11. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(e)(6).

(n25)Footnote 11.1. See [a], above.

(n26)Footnote 11.2. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341(e)(6).

(n27)Footnote 12. See Lab. Code § 6501; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1.

(n28)Footnote 13. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(a). Permit application forms for the underground use of diesel engines are available at all offices of the Division's Mining and Tunneling Unit.

(n29)Footnote 14. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(b)(1).

(n30)Footnote 15. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(b)(1)(E). Permit application fees are specified in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.3.

(n31)Footnote 15.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(b)(2).

(n32)Footnote 15.2. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(c)(1).

(n33)Footnote 15.3. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(c)(2).

(n34)Footnote 15.4. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(h)(1). During the first year following October 29, 2006 (the effective date of 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341 et seq. as amended in 2006), the Division may issue annual permits for longer than one year in order to stagger the expiration dates.

(n35)Footnote 15.5. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(h)(2).

(n36)Footnote 15.6. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(h)(3).

(n37)Footnote 15.7. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(a)(1).

(n38)Footnote 15.8. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(a)(2).

(n39)Footnote 15.9. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(a)(3).

(n40)Footnote 16. Lab. Code § 6502; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(d)(1).

(n41)Footnote 17. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(d)(3).

(n42)Footnote 18. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(d)(2).

(n43)Footnote 19. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(d)(3).

(n44)Footnote 20. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.1(d)(1).

(n45)Footnote 21-22. Reserved.

(n46)Footnote 23. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.4; see Lab. Code §§ 6408(a), 6504.

(n47)Footnote 24. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.2(a); see Lab. Code § 6502.

(n48)Footnote 25. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.2(a).

(n49)Footnote 26. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.2(a).

- (n50)Footnote 27. Lab. Code § 6505; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.5(a).
- (n51)Footnote 28. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.5(b).
- (n52)Footnote 29. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.5(b).
- (n53)Footnote 30. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.5(b).
- (n54)Footnote 31. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.5(c).
- (n55)Footnote 32. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.5(d).
- (n56)Footnote 33. Lab. Code § 6506(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341.2(b), 341.5(d).
- (n57)Footnote 34. Lab. Code § 6506(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.5(d).
- (n58)Footnote 35. Lab. Code § 6506(b); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.5(d).
- (n59)Footnote 36. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341.2(b), 341.5(d).
- (n60)Footnote 37. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341.2(b), 341.5(d).
- (n61)Footnote 38. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.2(b).
- (n62)Footnote 39. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.5(d).
- (n63)Footnote 40. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341.2(c), 341.5(d).
- (n64)Footnote 41. See Lab. Code § 6507; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.3.
- (n65)Footnote 42. Lab. Code § 6509.
- (n66)Footnote 43. See Lab. Code § 6511.
- (n67)Footnote 44. Lab. Code § 6510(a).
- (n68)Footnote 45. Lab. Code § 6510(b).
- (n69)Footnote 46. Lab. Code § 6510(b).
- (n70)Footnote 47. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.6(e) (computation of area).
- (n71)Footnote 48. Lab. Code § 6501.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341.6(a), 341.7(a).
- (n72)Footnote 49. Lab. Code § 6501.8(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.6(b).
- (n73)Footnote 49.1. See Lab. Code § 6501.8(c).
- (n74)Footnote 50. Lab. Code § 6501.8(b); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.6(c).
- (n75)Footnote 51. Lab. Code § 6501.7; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.6(d).
- (n76)Footnote 52. See Lab. Code § 6508.5.
- (n77)Footnote 53. Lab. Code § 6501.9.

(n78)Footnote 54. Lab. Code § 6501.9.

(n79)Footnote 55. Lab. Code § 6505.5(b).

(n80)Footnote 56. For discussion of procedures regarding civil penalties, see § 21.43.

(n81)Footnote 57. Lab. Code § 6505.5(c).

(n82)Footnote 58. Health & Safety Code § 25914.2(c).

(n83)Footnote 59. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.7(a),(b).

(n84)Footnote 60. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.7(a).

(n85)Footnote 61. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.7(b); Lab. Code § 6501.5(a).

(n86)Footnote 62. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.8(a).

(n87)Footnote 63. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.8(b).

(n88)Footnote 64. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.12.

(n89)Footnote 65. Lab. Code § 6501.5(c); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.10(a).

(n90)Footnote 66. Lab. Code § 6501.5(d); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.10(b).

(n91)Footnote 67. Lab. Code § 6503.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.11.

(n92)Footnote 68. Lab. Code § 6503.5; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.11.

(n93)Footnote 69. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.9(a); see Lab. Code § 6501.5(b).

(n94)Footnote 70. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.9(a); see Lab. Code § 6501.5(b).

(n95)Footnote 71. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 341.9(a).

(n96)Footnote 72. See Lab. Code §§ 6501.5, 6505.5(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341.13(a), 341.14.

(n97)Footnote 73. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 341.13(b),(c), 341.14(d).

(n98)Footnote 74. In this context, "asbestos-related work" refers to such work, as defined in Lab. Code § 6501.8 (discussed in [a], above), that involves 100-square feet or more of surface area of asbestos-containing material and is such that it requires that the contractor who performs the work to be certified in accordance with Bus. & Prof. Code § 7058.5. Health & Safety Code § 25914.1(b).

(n99)Footnote 75. See Health & Safety Code § 25914.1(c); Bus. & Prof. Code § 7058.7 (definition of "hazardous substance removal").

(n100)Footnote 76. Health & Safety Code § 25914.2(a),(b).

73 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.48

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.48 Variances

[1] Temporary Variances

[a] Grounds for Issuance of Temporary Variance and Limitations

An employer may apply to the Division for a temporary variance from any occupational safety or health standard or order.ⁿ¹ A temporary variance is an order granting the employer limited authority for a temporary period to protect his or her employees from an occupational safety or health hazard by a method other than that required by an existing occupational safety or health standard or order.ⁿ²

There are two principal types of temporary variances--a temporary variance from compliance with a new standard by the effective date of the standard, as permitted by Labor Code Section 6450, and a temporary "experimental" variance.ⁿ³ The first type of variance may be granted if the employer complies with application requirementsⁿ⁴ and establishes all of the following:ⁿ⁵

1. The employer is unable to comply with a standard by its effective date because of the unavailability of professional or technical personnel or of materials and equipment needed to comply with the standard, or because necessary construction or alteration of facilities cannot be completed by the effective date;
2. The employer is taking all available steps to safeguard its employees against the hazards covered by the standard; and
3. The employer has an effective program for complying with the standard as quickly as possible.

The experimental temporary variance is one that is approved by the Director of Industrial Relations and is designed to demonstrate or validate a new or improved technique for safeguarding worker health or safety.ⁿ⁶

The Division may also grant a temporary variance if the employer has developed a new process or installed new machinery that is in violation of an existing standard and the employer needs additional time to bring the process or equipment into compliance with the applicable standard, or when an employer has purchased a plant or establishment and finds there are conditions that violate existing occupational safety and health standards and that will require additional time to bring the workplace into compliance.ⁿ⁷

No temporary variance may be granted for a hazardous condition that was already the subject of a citation.ⁿ⁸

A temporary variance under Labor Code Section 6450 will be granted only for the time necessary for the employer to comply with the standard, up to a maximum of one year.ⁿ⁹ The temporary variance may be extended twice for up to a six-month period, providing the application for an extension or renewal is filed before the expiration date of the existing variance and all other requirements for a temporary variance have been met.ⁿ¹⁰

A temporary variance issued under Section 6450 must prescribe the practices, means, methods, operations and processes that the employer must adopt and use while the variance is in effect and must state in detail the employer's program for complying with the order.ⁿ¹¹

[b] Application for Temporary Variance

To obtain a temporary variance under Labor Code Section 6450, the employer must file an application with the Division that contains all of the following:ⁿ¹²

1. A specification of the standard or portion thereof from which the employer seeks a variance;
2. A representation by the employer, supported by representations from qualified persons having firsthand knowledge of the facts represented, that the employer is unable to comply with the standard or portion thereof, and a detailed statement of the reasons why;
3. A statement of the steps that the employer has taken and will take to protect employees against the hazard covered by the standard, with specific dates;
4. A statement regarding when the employer expects to be able to comply with the standard and what steps have been and will be taken, on specific dates, to comply with the standard; and
5. A certification that the employer has informed its employees of the application for a variance, as described below.

The employer must inform employees of the application by providing a copy of the application to the employees' authorized representative, and by posting, at the places where employee notices are normally posted, a statement summarizing the application, informing employees of their right to petition the Division for a hearing on the application,ⁿ¹³ and specifying where a copy of the full application may be examined.ⁿ¹⁴ The manner by which employees were notified must be specified in the employer's certification contained in the application.ⁿ¹⁵

The application may be filed with the nearest district office of the Division.ⁿ¹⁶

The Division may issue an interim temporary variance if the application for the temporary variance demonstrates that the workplace will be safe for employees pending a hearing on the application.ⁿ¹⁷

[c] Hearing on Temporary Variance Application and Appeals to Standards Board

The Labor Code indicates that the Division must afford affected employees an opportunity for a hearing before granting a temporary variance.ⁿ¹⁸ However, the Division has not issued any regulations providing for a hearing before a temporary variance is granted.ⁿ¹⁹ However, any employer or other person adversely affected by the granting or denial of a temporary variance may appeal the Division's decision by filing an appeal with the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board (Standards Board) within 15 working days after receipt of the notice granting or denying the temporary variance.ⁿ²⁰ The period for appealing may be extended by the Standards Board for good cause.ⁿ²¹

The appeal must be in writing and contain (1) the appellant's name and address; (2) the address of the place of employment involved; (3) a specific description of the variance involved, the occupational safety or health standard applicable, and the grounds on which the variance was granted or denied; and (4) a statement of facts showing that the appellant is either the employer or another person adversely affected by the grant or denial of the variance.ⁿ²²

Employers who appeal the granting or denial must comply with the notice and posting requirements for notice of hearings on applications for permanent variances.ⁿ²³ Employees or authorized representatives who appeal must notify the employer of the appeal by providing a copy of the appeal to the employer for posting.ⁿ²⁴ An authorized employee representative who appeals the granting or denial of a temporary variance is responsible for serving any other authorized employee representative whose members are affected employees.ⁿ²⁵

Affected employees and/or an authorized employee representative may elect to participate as parties to the appeal at any time prior to commencement of the appeal hearing and, for good cause shown, may be granted party status at a later time.ⁿ²⁶ The Division is deemed a party, entitled to notice and service of all documents, at all variance proceedings regardless of whether or not the Division appears or participates in the hearing.ⁿ²⁷

If the variance appeal fails to state the ground on which it is based, the Standards Board will notify the appellant that the appeal does not comply with the Standards Board's rules and will allow the appellant 15 days to file an amended appeal.ⁿ²⁸ Failure to amend a defective appeal within 15 days to conform with the requirements of Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 412, will result in dismissal of the appeal.ⁿ²⁹

The Standards Board will promptly refer appeals from temporary variances filed with it in proper form to the Division for evaluation.ⁿ³⁰ The Standards Board will schedule hearings on appeals so that the Division's evaluation report will be available for presentation at the hearing.ⁿ³¹

Appeals from temporary variances are given scheduling priority over other variance applications.ⁿ³² The rules of procedure for temporary variance appeal hearings are the same as the rules of procedure for permanent variance hearings.ⁿ³³

The decision of the Standards Board on a temporary variance appeal is required to be in writing and is final, unless the Board grants a request for rehearing,ⁿ³⁴ or judicial review is granted.ⁿ³⁵

[2] Permanent Variances

[a] Grounds for Issuance of Permanent Variance

A permanent variance from any occupational safety and health standard, order, or special order may be granted only by the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board.ⁿ³⁶ The Standards Board may grant a permanent variance on determining, after investigation if appropriate and a hearing, that the employer seeking the variance has demonstrated by a preponderance of the evidence that the conditions, practices, means, methods, operations, or processes used or proposed for use will provide employment and a place of employment that is as safe and healthful to employees as if the employer had complied with the applicable standard or order.ⁿ³⁷ The Standards Board also may grant an "experimental" variance to allow an employer to participate in an experiment approved by the Director of Industrial Relations designed to demonstrate or validate new and improved techniques to safeguard the health or safety of workers.n38

[b] Application for Permanent Variance

Any employern39 desiring a permanent variance must file an application for a variance with the Standards Board.n40 The application must be in writing and be submitted under penalty of perjury.n41 Six copies must be submitted, and the application must include the following:n42

1. The employer's name and address;
2. The address(es) where the variance will be in effect;
3. A description of the conditions, practices, means, methods, operations, or processes used or proposed to be used by the employer to provide health and safety equal or superior to that provided by the regulations;
4. A statement showing how those conditions, practices, means, methods, operations, or processes would provide health and safety equal or superior to that provided by the regulation from which the variance is sought;n43
5. A certification that the employer will comply with the notification and posting requirementsn44 described in [d], below.
6. A specification of the regulation from which the permanent variance is sought, including the appropriate subsections if applicable;
7. A statement regarding whether an appeal has been filed or is pending with the OSHAB relating to the same safety order, including the OSHAB docket number;
8. An estimate of the number of witnesses to be called by the employer at the hearing and the amount of time the employer will require to present its case; and
9. Six copies of any photographs, blueprints, or other illustrative material submitted to document or clarify the application.

The Standards Board will not docket or consider an application that does not comply with the above requirements, but will notify the applicant of the defects and allow 60 days to amend the application.n45 Failure to file an amended application within the 60 day period will be deemed to be an automatic denial (without prejudice) of the application.n46

[c] Referral to Division for Evaluation

The Standards Board will promptly refer applications filed with it in proper form to the Division for evaluation.n47 The Division must issue its evaluation within 60 days.n48 The Standards Board will schedule hearings so that the Division's evaluation report will be available for presentation at the hearing.n49

[d] Notice and Posting Requirements

The notification and posting requirements regarding variance proceedings and temporary variance appealsn50 are satisfied as follows:

(a) Notification to a party who has appeared through a representative must be made through the representative. Notification to an authorized employee representative is in addition to providing notice to the affected employees.ⁿ⁵¹

(b) Unless otherwise ordered, notification may be provided by postage-prepaid first class mail or by personal delivery. Notification is deemed effective at the time of mailing or personal delivery.ⁿ⁵²

(c) Proof of notification or posting by parties may be made by any of the following means:ⁿ⁵³

(1) Affidavit of service;

(2) Written statement endorsed on the document served and signed by the party making the statement; or

(3) Letter of transmittal.

(d) Proof of notification or posting must be submitted to the Board no later than the second working day following the posting or notification.ⁿ⁵⁴

Employers must post a copy of the following documents at the places where notices to employees are usually posted (Conveyance owners, in lieu of posting, must immediately provide copies of these documents to the building maintenance provider and to the maintenance provider for the conveyance):ⁿ⁵⁵

(1) The docketed variance application or temporary variance appeal, or a statement giving a summary of the application or appeal that specifies where a copy may be examined. This posting must occur immediately upon the employer's receipt of the notice indicating that the variance application or appeal has been docketed.

(2) A notice contained in the application, or provided as a separate document but posted simultaneously with the application, informing affected employees of their right to:

(A) party status and to participate in the variance proceedings;

(B) inspect and copy all pleadings at a reasonable time; and

(C) petition the Standards Board for a hearing.

(3) A copy of the notice of hearing, which must be posted immediately on its receipt.

However, if the variance or appeal pertains to an elevator, escalator or other conveyance covered by the elevator safety orders that is in a building under construction or otherwise unoccupied, and neither a maintenance provider for the conveyance nor a building maintenance provider has been retained or designated, the conveyance owner must attest to these facts in its application. If a conveyance maintenance and/or building maintenance provider is retained or designated after the variance or appeal is requested, but before a hearing is held, the conveyance owner must immediately comply with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.3 and inform the Board, in writing, of the actions taken to comply.ⁿ⁵⁶

In addition, employers must provide any authorized employee representative with the following documents immediately upon their receipt:ⁿ⁵⁷

(1) A copy of the docketed variance application or temporary variance appeal;

(2) A copy of the notice set forth in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.3(a)(2), described above;

(3) A copy of the notice of hearing.

When posting is required, the posting must be maintained until the commencement of the hearing or until earlier disposition of the variance request or appeal.ⁿ⁵⁸

[e] [Reserved]

[f] Hearings

[i] Overview of Hearing Procedures

The Standards Board must conduct a hearing on any properly filed application for a permanent variance.ⁿ⁵⁹

Although hearings are conducted in accordance with the Standards Board's rules of procedure,ⁿ⁶⁰ permanent variance application hearings are generally very informal. The key issue to be decided by the Standards Board at such a hearing is whether the employer has established by a preponderance of evidence that the proposed alternate means, method, operation, practice, condition or process will provide employees with a place of employment that is as safe and healthful as that which would exist if the employer complied with the safety regulation, order, or standard from which the variance is sought.ⁿ⁶¹ The employer's proposed alternate method of compliance will be reviewed by both a representative of the Divisionⁿ⁶² and a qualified member of the Standards Board staff.ⁿ⁶³ These personnel from the Division and the Standards Board often attend the variance application hearing and may provide suggestions regarding alterations to an employer's proposal to make it conform to acceptable safety and health standards.

[ii] Time and Place of Hearing

Applications for hearing are scheduled "as soon as practicable" after receipt.ⁿ⁶⁴ The Standards Board may set the time and place of hearing at its principal office or at another location designated by the Board that is more convenient for the applicant.ⁿ⁶⁵ If, however, because of distance involved or other reasons, it is impractical for parties and their witnesses to appear at the same place of hearing, a video conference hearing may be scheduled.ⁿ⁶⁶ⁿ⁶⁷

[iii] Hearing Officer and Panel

The chairperson may appoint a hearing panel consisting of one or more members of the Standards Board to hear the evidence and prepare a proposed decision for adoption by the full Standards Board.ⁿ⁶⁸ However, at the request of any two members of the Board, a variance proceeding may be heard by the full Standards Board.ⁿ⁶⁹ In addition, any party may request that the variance proceeding be heard by the full Standards Board rather than a hearing panel. Any such request must be accompanied by a showing of good cause and may be granted or denied at the discretion of the chairperson.ⁿ⁷⁰

Permanent variance application hearings are presided over by a hearing officer, appointed from the staff of either the Standards Board or the OSHAB.ⁿ⁷¹ The hearing officer presides at the hearing, rules on the admission and exclusion of evidence, and advises the Board or hearing panel on matters of law.ⁿ⁷² The Board or hearing panel exercises all other powers relating to the conduct of the hearing, but may delegate any or all of those powers to the hearing officer.ⁿ⁷³ When the hearing officer alone hears a matter, the hearing officer exercises all powers relating to the conduct of the hearing.^{n73.1}

Any party may request disqualification of a hearing officer or a Standards Board member by filing an affidavit, at least ten working days prior to the scheduled hearing date, stating with particularity the grounds upon which it is claimed that a fair and impartial hearing cannot be accorded.ⁿ⁷⁴ If the request for disqualification relates to a Standards Board member, the other members of the Standards Board will determine the issue of disqualification. If the request concerns the hearing officer, the matter will be determined by the Standards Board.ⁿ⁷⁵ In addition, a hearing officer or Standards Board member must voluntarily disqualify himself or herself whenever he or she cannot afford a fair and impartial hearing.ⁿ⁷⁶

[iv] Prehearing Requests for Action

All requests for action by the Standards Board relating to any proceeding pending before the Board must be made in writing and directed to the hearing officer assigned to the matter, or to the executive officer if a hearing officer has not been assigned. Each written request must contain the variance docket number and indicate the type of relief sought. If a hearing officer has been assigned, the hearing officer may resolve the requests without the Board's involvement.ⁿ⁷⁷

[v] Prehearing Conferences and Agreements

At any time before a hearing, the Standards Board or the hearing officer may, on its own initiative, or at the request of a party, direct the parties or their representatives to exchange information or participate in a pre-hearing conference for the purpose of considering matters intended to simplify the issues or expedite the proceedings. If a hearing officer has been assigned, the hearing officer may resolve the requests without the Board's involvement.ⁿ⁷⁸ The Standards Board or the hearing officer may issue a prehearing order that includes the agreements reached by the parties. The order will be served on all parties and is a part of the record.ⁿ⁷⁹

[vi] Witnesses and Subpoenas

Each party is responsible for arranging for the presence of his or her witnesses.ⁿ⁸⁰ The Board or a hearing officer may issue a subpoena on the Board's or hearing officer's own motion.^{n80.1} A subpoena compelling the attendance of a witness must be issued by the hearing officer on request and a showing of the need for the witness' attendance.ⁿ⁸¹

To compel the production of books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, or other records at the hearing, a party may apply to the hearing officer for a subpoena duces tecum by filing an affidavit with the hearing officer that does each of the following:ⁿ⁸²

- Gives the name and address of the person to be subpoenaed;
- Describes the matters or things desired to be produced;
- Shows their materiality to the issues involved in the proceeding; and
- States that, to the best of the applicant's knowledge, the witness has such matters or things in his/her possession or under his/her control.

If the hearing officer finds the affidavit is complete and supports the application for the subpoena duces tecum, the hearing officer must issue the subpoena.^{n82.1} Each party must arrange for the service of all subpoenas, including subpoenas duces tecum, issued to the party. A copy of the affidavit for subpoenas duces tecum must be served with the subpoena.ⁿ⁸³

Subpoenas not complied with may be enforced by petitioning the Standards Board for judicial enforcement.ⁿ⁸⁴ A petition for judicial enforcement must be verified and state that due notice of the time and place of compliance with the subpoena had been given, and that the subpoenaed individual failed and refused to comply or has refused to answer questions propounded to him or her.ⁿ⁸⁵ If the Standard Board determines that judicial enforcement is appropriate, the Board will petition the superior court in the county in which the hearing is pending for an order compelling compliance with the subpoena.n86

Witnesses subpoenaed to a hearing are entitled to fees and mileage as allowed by Government Code Sections 11450.40 and 68093.n87

[vii] Rules of Evidence

The hearing need not be conducted according to the technical rules of evidence.n88 Any relevant evidence is admissible if it is the sort of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs, regardless of the existence of any common law or statutory rule of evidence that would make such evidence inadmissible over objection in a civil action.n89 Hearsay evidence may be used to supplement or explain other evidence but is not sufficient in itself to support a finding unless it would be admissible over objection in a civil action.n90 Irrelevant and unduly repetitious evidence must be excluded, and the rules of privilege are applicable to the extent that they must, by statute, be recognized at the hearing.n91

[viii] Confidential Evidence

Any exhibit or evidence that might reveal a trade secret as defined in Civil Code section 3426.1 will be considered confidential. The Board must take appropriate action within its control to protect the confidentiality of trade secrets.n92

[ix] Representation at Hearing

Employers must attend the variance hearing, either in person or through a representative. The representative does not need to be an attorney-at-law.n93 Affected employees who are represented by an authorized employee representative may appear through the authorized employee representative.n94

A representative of a party is deemed to control all matters respecting the interest of the party in the proceeding.n95 The Standards Board or hearing officer may refuse to allow any person to represent a party in any hearing when the person engages in unethical conduct or intentionally fails to observe the provisions of the California Code of Regulations, proper instructions or orders of the Standards Board or the rules for conducting hearings.n96

Withdrawal of appearance of a representative may be effected by filing a written notice of withdrawal with the Standards Board.n97

[x] Conduct of Hearing

All testimony must be taken under oath, affirmation, or penalty of perjury.n98 The hearing must be conducted in English, although parties may call witnesses who are not proficient in English as long as the party has arranged for an interpreter acceptable to the Standards Board.n99 A party may provide its own interpreter, if the hearing officer approves the interpreter as proficient in the English language and the language in which the witness will testify.n100 The interpreter may not have any involvement in the issues of the case prior to the hearing.n100.1 The hearing officer may order the costs of the interpreter to be paid by the Standards Board.n101 The hearing officer must approve any person whose name appears on the current list of interpreters published by the State Personnel Board.n102

Each party has the right to do each of the following:n103

- Call and examine parties and witnesses;
- Introduce exhibits;

- Question opposing witnesses and parties on any matter relevant to the issues even though that matter was not covered in the direct examination;
- Impeach any witness regardless of which party first called him/her to testify; and
- Rebut the evidence against him/her.

The Standards Board members and hearing officer may question any party or witness and admit any relevant and material evidence.n104

The hearing officer must control the taking of evidence in the manner best suited to ascertain the facts and safeguard the rights of the parties.n105 The hearing officer must explain the issues and the order of receiving evidence before taking evidence in the hearing.n106

[xi] Official and Judicial Notice

Official notice may be taken, either before or after submission of the case for decision, of any generally accepted technical or scientific matter within the field of occupational safety and health, and of any determinations, rulings, orders, findings, and decisions required by law to be made by the Division, the OSHAB, and the Standards Board.n107 The Standards Board must take judicial notice of matters that must be noticed by a court under Evidence Code Sections 451 and 452.n108

Each party must be given reasonable opportunity to present information relevant to the propriety of taking official notice and of the tenor of the matters to be noticed.n109

[xii] Exclusion of Witnesses During Hearing

On a demonstration of good cause by any party, the Standards Board, in its discretion, may exclude from the hearing room any witnesses not under examination at that time. However, a party to the proceeding and the party's counsel or representative cannot be excluded.n110

[xiii] [Reserved]

[xiv] Continuances

The Standards Board may continue a hearing to another time or place on its own motion or may order further hearing on a matter at any time before issuing its decision. Written notice of the time and place of the continued hearing must be in accordance with 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.2.n111

A party may request a continuance or further hearing. However, the Standards Board's policy disfavors those requests and will grant them only on a clear showing of good cause. The parties are expected to submit for decision all matters in controversy and all necessary evidence at a single hearing.n112

[xv] Failure to Appear

When it appears on record that a party was served with notice of hearing, but the party failed to appear at the hearing, either in person or by representative, the Standards Board may do the following:n113

- Take the proceeding off calendar.

- After notice, dismiss the proceeding.
- Hear the evidence from any party that attends the hearing and, after notice, make such decision as is just and proper.

The Board may reinstate a proceeding at its discretion, if a non-appearing employer submits to the Board, in writing, a reasonable explanation for the employer's failure to appear at the hearing.ⁿ¹¹⁴ The employer must submit the explanation within ten days after the Board's service of the notification of intent to dismiss.ⁿ¹¹⁵

[xvi] Decisions; Actions on Proposed Decisions

A variance hearing may be held before the Standards Board itself, a hearing panel or a hearing officer. If a proceeding is heard before the Board itself or a hearing panel, the hearing officer, if requested, must assist and advise them. When a proceeding is heard before the Board itself, no member of the Board who did not hear the evidence may vote on the decision.ⁿ¹¹⁶

If a proceeding is heard by a hearing panel or a hearing officer, the panel or hearing officer must prepare a proposed decision in such form that the Board may adopt it as the decision in the proceeding. The proposed decision is a public record, and a copy of the proposed decision must be served by the Board on each party.ⁿ¹¹⁷ The Board may adopt the proposed decision or decide the case itself.ⁿ¹¹⁸ If the Board does not adopt the proposed decision, the Board itself may decide the case on the record, with or without taking additional evidence, or refer the case to a hearing panel or hearing officer to take additional evidence.ⁿ¹¹⁹ If the case is assigned to a hearing panel or hearing officer, the panel or officer must prepare a proposed decision based on the additional evidence and the record of the prior hearing. A copy of the proposed decision will be furnished to each party.ⁿ¹²⁰ If the case is heard by the Board itself, and the Board chooses to take additional evidence, the parties must be afforded the opportunity to present oral or written argument before the Board itself.^{n120.1} If additional oral evidence is introduced before the Board itself, no Board member may vote unless the member heard the additional oral evidence.^{n120.2}

The decision must be in writing and contain findings of fact and reasons for the decision, and a copy of the decision must be served or mailed to each party.ⁿ¹²¹ After a decision has been mailed or served, it may only be changed to correct clerical errors, in which case a corrected decision or proposed decision must be prepared and mailed and served on all parties.ⁿ¹²²

[xvii] Rehearing

A petition for rehearing may be filed by any party within 20 days after service of the decision.ⁿ¹²³ Failure to file a petition for re-hearing within twenty days constitutes valid grounds for denying the petition.^{n123.1}

Grounds for rehearing are limited to the following:ⁿ¹²⁴

1. The Standards Board acted without or in excess of its power;
2. The decision is not supported by substantial evidence; or
3. The decision was contrary to law.

The petition for rehearing must state in detail the factual or legal basis for granting the petition.ⁿ¹²⁵ The petition will be denied if it only states the permissible grounds for re-hearing contained in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427, unsupported by specific references to the record and an explanation of the petitioner's position.ⁿ¹²⁶

The Board will serve copies of the petition on all parties and interveners who joined in the proceeding at the time the petition is filed with the Board.ⁿ¹²⁷

If the petition is submitted to the Board in a timely fashion, the Board may do any of the following:ⁿ¹²⁸

- (1) Grant the petition;
- (2) Affirm the Board's initial decision on the variance;
- (3) Take no action on the petition, in which case it is deemed denied 30 days after receipt by the Board; or
- (4) Deny the petition and explain its basis for doing so.

If the Board takes no action, the Board must notify the Employer of the denial after the 30 days have passed.ⁿ¹²⁹ If the re-hearing is granted, the Board may review the petition itself or refer it to a hearing panel or hearing officer.ⁿ¹³⁰ The re-hearing may be based on the existing record, or the Board, hearing panel or hearing officer that hears the matter may request that additional testimony and/or written evidence be submitted.ⁿ¹³¹ If further hearing is ordered, the Board must issue a notice of hearing, and the employer must comply with the notification requirements in 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 411.2(a)(3) and (b)(3).ⁿ¹³² If the decision is to be based on the existing record, the Board may decide the matter without notice and without affording the parties further opportunity to testify or submit information.ⁿ¹³³ A decision after rehearing must be in writing and contain findings of fact and the reasons for the decision.ⁿ¹³⁴

[g] Modification or Revocation of Variance

The Standards Board may modify or revoke a permanent variance at any time on application by an employer, employees, or the Division, or on its own motion, in the manner prescribed for issuance of a permanent variance.ⁿ¹³⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6450(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See generally Lab. Code §§ 6450-6452.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 6452.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 6451; see also discussion in [b], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6450(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 6452.

(n7)Footnote 7. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-18.

(n8)Footnote 8. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-18.

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 6450(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 6450(b).

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 6450(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 6451; see Lab. Code § 6450(a).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Lab. Code § 6450(b); see also discussion in [c], below.

(n14)Footnote 14. Lab. Code § 6451(e).

(n15)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 6451(e).

(n16)Footnote 16. Div. of Occupational Safety & Health, Policy & Procedure Manual, No. C-18.

(n17)Footnote 17. Lab. Code § 6450(b).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Lab. Code §§ 6450(b), 6451(e).

(n19)Footnote 19. The Division has authority under Lab. Code § 6454 to promulgate rules and regulations relating to the granting or denial of temporary variances, but has not done so.

(n20)Footnote 20. Lab. Code § 6455; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 412(a).

(n21)Footnote 21. Lab. Code § 6455.

(n22)Footnote 22. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 412(b).

(n23)Footnote 23. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 411.2, 411.3; see also discussion in [2][d], below.

(n24)Footnote 24. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 412.2(a); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. 411.3, discussed in [2][d], below.

(n25)Footnote 25. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 412.2(b).

(n26)Footnote 26. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 406(a).

(n27)Footnote 27. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 406(b).

(n28)Footnote 28. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 412.1.

(n29)Footnote 29. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 412.1.

(n30)Footnote 30. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 415(a).

(n31)Footnote 31. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 415(b).

(n32)Footnote 32. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 421(a).

(n33)Footnote 33. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 403 et seq.; see also discussion in [2][f], below.

(n34)Footnote 34. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 427-427.4 (procedure for rehearing by Standards Board); see also discussion in [2][f][xvi],[xvii], below.

(n35)Footnote 35. Lab. Code § 6457.

(n36)Footnote 36. See Lab. Code § 143.

(n37)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 143(b).

(n38)Footnote 38. Lab. Code § 143(c).

(n39)Footnote 39. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 403(n) for the definition of employer for these purposes.

(n40)Footnote 40. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411(a); see Lab. Code § 143(a).

(n41)Footnote 41. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411(a).

(n42)Footnote 42. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411(b).

(n43)Footnote 43. See Lab. Code § 143(a),(b).

(n44)Footnote 44. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 411.2, 411.3.

(n45)Footnote 45. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.1.

(n46)Footnote 46. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.1.

(n47)Footnote 47. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 415(a).

(n48)Footnote 48. Lab. Code § 147.

(n49)Footnote 49. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 415(b).

(n50)Footnote 50. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 411.3, 412.2; for temporary variance appeals, see [1][c], above.

(n51)Footnote 51. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.2(a).

(n52)Footnote 52. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.2(b).

(n53)Footnote 53. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.2(c).

(n54)Footnote 54. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.2(d).

(n55)Footnote 55. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.3(a).

(n56)Footnote 56. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.3(a).

(n57)Footnote 57. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.3(b).

(n58)Footnote 58. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 411.3(c).

(n59)Footnote 59. Lab. Code § 143.1.

(n60)Footnote 60. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 421 et seq.; see also Lab. Code § 143.2 (Standards Board's authority to promulgate rules of practice and procedure pertaining to hearings on applications for permanent variances).

(n61)Footnote 61. See Lab. Code § 143(b).

(n62)Footnote 62. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 415(b).

- (n63)Footnote 63. See Lab. Code § 143(b).
- (n64)Footnote 64. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 421(b).
- (n65)Footnote 65. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 421(c).
- (n66)Footnote 66. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 421(d).
- (n67)Footnote 67. [Reserved]
- (n68)Footnote 68. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 417(a).
- (n69)Footnote 69. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 417(b).
- (n70)Footnote 70. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 417.1(a).
- (n71)Footnote 71. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 405, 405.1(a).
- (n72)Footnote 72. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 405.1(b).
- (n73)Footnote 73. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 405.1(b).
- (n74)Footnote 73.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 405.1(b).
- (n75)Footnote 74. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 417.1(b)(1).
- (n76)Footnote 75. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 417.1(b)(3).
- (n77)Footnote 76. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 405.1(c).
- (n78)Footnote 77. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 418.
- (n79)Footnote 78. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 420(a).
- (n80)Footnote 79. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 420(b).
- (n81)Footnote 80. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 422(a).
- (n82)Footnote 80.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 422(b).
- (n83)Footnote 81. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 422(c).
- (n84)Footnote 82. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 422(d).
- (n85)Footnote 82.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 422(e).
- (n86)Footnote 83. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 422(f).
- (n87)Footnote 84. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 425(a).
- (n88)Footnote 85. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 425(a).
- (n89)Footnote 86. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 425(b).
- (n90)Footnote 87. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 425.1.

(n91)Footnote 88. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424; see Lab. Code § 146.

(n92)Footnote 89. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424; see Lab. Code § 146; Gov. Code § 11513(c).

(n93)Footnote 90. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424; see Lab. Code § 146; Gov. Code § 11513(c).

(n94)Footnote 91. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424; see Lab. Code § 146; Gov. Code § 11513(c).

(n95)Footnote 92. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 422.1(a).

(n96)Footnote 93. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.3(a).

(n97)Footnote 94. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.3(c).

(n98)Footnote 95. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.3(b).

(n99)Footnote 96. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.3(e); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 421 et seq. (rules for conduct of hearings).

(n100)Footnote 97. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.3(d).

(n101)Footnote 98. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 423(a).

(n102)Footnote 99. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 423(e).

(n103)Footnote 100. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 423(e).

(n104)Footnote 100.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 423(e).

(n105)Footnote 101. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 423(f).

(n106)Footnote 102. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 423(e).

(n107)Footnote 103. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 422(b).

(n108)Footnote 104. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 423(c).

(n109)Footnote 105. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 423(d).

(n110)Footnote 106. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 423(d).

(n111)Footnote 107. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.1(a).

(n112)Footnote 108. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.1(b).

(n113)Footnote 109. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.1(c).

(n114)Footnote 110. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.4.

(n115)Footnote 111. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.2(a).

(n116)Footnote 112. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 424.2(b).

(n117)Footnote 113. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 425.2(a).

(n118)Footnote 114. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 425.2(b).

- (n119)Footnote 115. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 425.2(b).
- (n120)Footnote 116. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 426(a).
- (n121)Footnote 117. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 426(b).
- (n122)Footnote 118. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 426(b).
- (n123)Footnote 119. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 426(c).
- (n124)Footnote 120. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 426(c)(1).
- (n125)Footnote 120.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 426(c)(2).
- (n126)Footnote 120.2. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 426(c)(2).
- (n127)Footnote 121. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 426.1(a).
- (n128)Footnote 122. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 426.1(c).
- (n129)Footnote 123. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427(a).
- (n130)Footnote 123.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427(b).
- (n131)Footnote 124. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427(a).
- (n132)Footnote 125. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427.1(a).
- (n133)Footnote 126. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427.1(b).
- (n134)Footnote 127. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427.2.
- (n135)Footnote 128. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427.3(a).
- (n136)Footnote 129. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427.3(b).
- (n137)Footnote 130. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427.3(c).
- (n138)Footnote 131. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427.3(d).
- (n139)Footnote 132. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427.3(d)(1).
- (n140)Footnote 133. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 427.3(d)(2).
- (n141)Footnote 134. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 426.1, 427.4.
- (n142)Footnote 135. Lab. Code § 143(d).

74 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.49

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.49 Retaliation Against Employees

[1] Types of Retaliation Prohibited

[a] Safety Complaints and Participation in Cal/OSHA Proceedings

It is unlawful for any person to discharge or in any manner discriminate against any employee because the employee has done any of the following:

1. Made any oral or written complaint to (a) the Division; (b) any other governmental agency with statutory responsibility for, or assisting the Division with reference to, employee safety or health; (c) the employee's employer; or (d) the employee's representative;n1
2. Instituted or caused to be instituted any proceeding relating to the employee's rights under the Occupational Safety and Health Act or the Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act; or testified, or is about to testify, in such a proceeding;n2
3. Exercised any rights on behalf of himself or herself or others under the Occupational Safety and Health Act or the Hazardous Substances Information and Training Act;n3 or
4. Participated in an occupational health and safety committee established pursuant to Labor Code Section 6401.7 (injury and illness prevention programs).n4

Any employee who is discharged, threatened with discharge, demoted, suspended, or in any other manner discriminated against in the terms or conditions of his or her employment by the employer because the employee has made a bona fide complaint to the entities listed above about unsafe working conditions or work practices in his or her employment or place of employment, or because the employee has participated in an employer-employee occupational safety and health committee, is entitled to reinstatement and reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits caused by the acts of the employer.n5 Furthermore, it is a misdemeanor for any employer to willfully refuse to rehire, promote, or otherwise restore such an employee or former employee who has been found to be eligible for rehiring or promotion by a grievance procedure, arbitration, or hearing authorized by law.ⁿ⁶

The above provisions have been construed to mean that an employee is protected against discharge or discrimination for complaining in good faith about working conditions or practices that he or she reasonably believes to be unsafe, whether or not there exists at the time of complaint an OSHA standard or order that is being violated.ⁿ⁷ An employer also may not retaliate against an employee because the employer fears the employee will make a complaint.^{n7.1}

[b] Refusal of Unsafe Work

It also is unlawful to lay off or discharge an employee for refusing to perform work when the performance of such work would violate the Labor Code, or any occupational safety or health standard or order, if the violation would create a real and apparent hazard to the employee or to his or her fellow employees.ⁿ⁸ Any employee laid off, discharged, or otherwise not paid in violation of this prohibition is entitled to bring an action for wages for the time the employee is without work as a result of the layoff or discharge.ⁿ⁹

[2] Remedies for Retaliation

An employee who believes that he or she has been discharged or otherwise discriminated against in violation of the provisions discussed in [1], above, may file a complaint against the Labor Commissioner under the procedures set out in Labor Code Section 98.7.ⁿ¹⁰ For discussion of proceedings before the Labor Commissioner under Labor Code Section 98.7, see Chapter 5, Part A, Subpart 5.

The administrative remedy for retaliation provided by Labor Code Section 6312 has been held not to be exclusive and therefore does not preempt a common-law wrongful discharge action based on the types of retaliation prohibited by the statute.ⁿ¹¹ Further, an arbitration decision under a collective bargaining agreement (CBA) does not have preclusive effect in a civil suit for retaliatory discharge under Labor Code section 6310(b) unless both of the following are true:ⁿ¹²

- The CBA clearly and unmistakably provided for binding arbitration of the employee's statutory claim under the Labor Code.
- The arbitration was conducted in a manner that allowed for a full litigation and fair adjudication of the Labor Code claim.

For discussion of civil actions for wrongful termination, see Chapters 60-61.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
 Discrimination
 Retaliation
 General Overview
 Labor & Employment Law
 Occupational Safety & Health
 General Overview
 Labor & Employment Law
 Occupational Safety & Health
 Administrative Proceedings
 General Overview
 Labor & Employment Law
 Occupational Safety & Health
 Duties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6310(a)(1).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code §§ 6310(a)(2), 6399.7.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code §§ 6310(a)(2), 6399.7.

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6310(a)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6310(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 6310(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 299-300, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 .

(n8)Footnote 7.1. Lujan v. Minagar (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1044-1046, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 861 (employer could not fire employee she feared would make OSHA complaint).

(n9)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 6311.

(n10)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 6311.

(n11)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 6312.

(n12)Footnote 11. See Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 109-110, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 (agreeing with Hentzel that Lab. Code § 6312 does not constitute exclusive remedy for action brought pursuant to Lab. Code § 6310, but rather is merely cumulative, and finding plaintiff could state cause of action for tortious discharge based on violation of Lab. Code § 6310); Jenkins v. Family Health Program (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 440, 449, 262 Cal. Rptr. 798 ; Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 300-304, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 . For further discussion, see § 60.04[2][e].

(n13)Footnote 12. Taylor v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 380, 384-387, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 358 (trial court erroneously granted summary judgment in favor of employer after determining employee's claim under § 6310 was collaterally estopped by labor arbitrator's decision that employee was terminated for good cause, because CBA was never presented to court and there was no evidence it clearly and unmistakably provided for arbitration of employee's statutory claim).

75 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part D. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

2-21 California Employment Law §§ 21.50 through 21.59

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 21.50[Reserved]

76 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
 CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
 Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.60

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.60 Overview of Criminal Penalties for Violations of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act

In addition to the civil penalties discussed in Part D, above, various provisions of the Labor Code and Penal Code provide for criminal prosecution of employers and, in some cases, directors, management officials, and supervisory employees, for violations of occupational safety and health laws and standards. These provisions are discussed in subsequent sections of this part.

Within the Division, the Bureau of Investigations is solely responsible for directing and conducting investigations to determine whether sufficient evidence exists to refer a case to a city attorney, a district attorney, or the Attorney General for criminal prosecution.ⁿ¹ Specifically, the Bureau must investigate any accident involving violations of a standard, order, special order, or Health and Safety Code Section 25910 (relating to asbestos) in which there is a serious injury to five or more employees, a death, or a request for prosecution by a Division representative, to determine whether criminal prosecution is appropriate.ⁿ²

All occupational safety and health standards, orders, rules, regulations, findings, and decisions of the Division are admissible as evidence in any criminal prosecution for violation of the California Occupational Safety and Health Act and are presumed to be reasonable and lawful and "to fix a reasonable and proper standard and requirement of safety," unless prior to the institution of the prosecution for such a violation a proceeding for hearing on a special order are instituted.ⁿ³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCivil LiabilityLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCriminal Penalties

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6315; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.51; see also discussion in § 21.02[3][b][ii].

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6315(a); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 344.51.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6315.5. Lab. Code § 6315.5 also provides an exception to admissibility and presumption of lawfulness if a petition regarding the challenged standard or rule has been filed under Gov. Code § 11426 prior to the institution of the prosecution. However, former Gov. Code § 11426 was repealed by Stats. 1979, ch. 567, § 2, operative July 1, 1980.

77 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.61

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.61 Willful Violation Causing Employee Death or Permanent or Prolonged Impairment

Labor Code Section 6425 provides criminal penalties for any employer, and any employee having direction, management, control, or custody of any employment, place of employment, or of any other employee, who willfullyⁿ¹ violates any occupational safety or health standard, order, or special order, or Health and Safety Code Section 25910 (prohibited acts relating to asbestos), if the violation causes death to any employee, or causes permanent or prolonged impairment to the body of any employee. A person convicted under Labor Code Section 6425 may be punished by a fine, or imprisonment, or both.ⁿ² The court must consider "all relevant circumstances," including but not limited to, the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation, any prior history of violations, the defendant's ability to pay, and any other matters that the interests of justice require in determining the amount of fine to be imposed.ⁿ³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewWorkers' Compensation & SSDICoverageGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6425(e) ("willfully" defined).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lab. Code § 6425(a)-(d).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 6425(d).

78 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.62

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.62 Manslaughter

In addition to prosecution under Labor Code Section 6425, an employer whose safety violations cause the death of an employee may be prosecuted for manslaughter under Penal Code Section 192.ⁿ¹ Penal Code Section 192 defines manslaughter as the unlawful killing of a human being without malice.ⁿ² Manslaughter includes voluntary, involuntary, and vehicular manslaughter.ⁿ³ For further discussion of manslaughter, see Erwin, Millman, Monroe, Sevilla & Tarlow, california criminal defense practice, Chapter 142.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesHomicideInvoluntary ManslaughterGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesHomicideVoluntary ManslaughterGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCriminal Penalties

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6425 (nothing in Lab. Code § 6425 prohibits a prosecution under Penal Code § 192).

(n2)Footnote 2. Penal Code § 192.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Penal Code § 192(a) (voluntary manslaughter defined), (b) (involuntary manslaughter defined), (c) (vehicular manslaughter defined).

79 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.63

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.63 Negligent, Knowing, or Repeat Violations, and Failures to Abate

Labor Code Section 6423 provides that every employer and every officer, management official, or supervisor having direction, management, control, or custody of any employment, place of employment, or of any other employee, who does any of the following is guilty of a misdemeanor:

1. Knowingly or negligently violates any standard, order, or special order, or any provision or part of Division 5 of the Labor Code,ⁿ¹ if the violation is a serious violation as defined in Lab. Code § 6432;ⁿ²
2. Repeatedly violates any standard, order, or special order, or provision or part of Division 5 of the Labor Code, if the repeated violation creates a real and apparent hazard to employees;ⁿ³
3. Knowingly fails to report a death to the Division as required by Lab. Code § 6409.1(b);ⁿ⁴
4. Fails or refuses to comply, after notification and expiration of any abatement period, with any standard, order, special order, or provision or part of Division 5 of the Labor Code, if the failure or refusal creates a real and apparent hazard to employees;ⁿ⁵ or
5. Directly or indirectly, knowingly induces another to commit any of the above acts.ⁿ⁶

Violation of Lab. Code § 6423(a)(1) is punishable by imprisonment in the county jail for a period not to exceed six months, or by a fine not to exceed five thousand dollars or by both imprisonment and fine.ⁿ⁷ Violation of Lab. Code § 6423(a)(3) is punishable by imprisonment in county jail for up to one year, or by a fine not to exceed $15,000, or by both imprisonment and fine. If the violator is a corporation or a limited liability company, the fine may not exceed $150,000.ⁿ⁸ Violation of Lab. Code § 6423(a)(2), (4), or (5) is punishable by imprisonment in a county jail for a term not exceeding one year, or by a fine not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars, or by both imprisonment and fine. If the defendant is a corporation or a limited liability company, the fine may not exceed one hundred fifty thousand dollars.ⁿ⁹ The court must consider "all relevant circumstances," including but not limited to, the nature, circumstances, extent, and gravity of the violation, any prior history of violations, the defendant's ability to pay, and any other matters required by the interests of justice in determining the amount of fine to be imposed.ⁿ¹⁰

The above criminal penalties do not apply "where another penalty is specifically provided."ⁿ¹¹ However, the civil penalties assessed by the Division pursuant to *Labor Code Sections 6427 through 6431*ⁿ¹² do not constitute "other penalties" for the purposes of Labor Code Section 6423.ⁿ¹³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCivil LiabilityTortsNegligenceGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6300 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6432(a)(1). For definition of "serious violation," see discussion in § 21.42[2][d].

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6423(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6423(a)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6423(a)(4).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 6423(a)(5).

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 6423(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 6423(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 6423(d).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code § 6423(e).

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 6423(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. See discussion in § 21.43.

(n13)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 6433.

80 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.64

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.64 False Statements and Representations

Any person who knowingly makes a false statement, representation, or certification in any application, record, report, plan, or other document filed or required to be maintained under Division 5 of the Labor Code may, on conviction, be punished by a fine not exceeding $70,000 or by imprisonment of up to 6 months, or both.ⁿ¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCivil LiabilityTortsIntentional TortsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6426.

81 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
 CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
 Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.65

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.65 Failure to Determine Presence of Asbestos-Containing Materials

As previously discussed in § 21.47[2][b], Labor Code Section 6505.5 provides civil and criminal penalties for any person who owns a commercial or industrial building or structure, any employer who engages in or contracts for asbestos-related work, any contractor, public agency, or any employee acting for any of the foregoing, who contracts for, or who begins, asbestos-related work in any commercial or industrial building or structure built prior to 1978 without first determining if asbestos-containing material is present.ⁿ¹

Any civil or criminal complaint regarding a violation of Labor Code Section 6505.5 may be filed by the Attorney General, any district attorney, or any city attorney in the court of any county with jurisdiction over the contractor or employer.ⁿ² The civil or criminal penalty assessed will be paid to the office of the prosecutor that brings the complaint, unless the case was referred for prosecution by the Division or some other governmental unit, in which case the civil or criminal penalty will be divided equally between the offices of the prosecutor and of the referring agency.ⁿ³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Civil Liability Torts Strict Liability Abnormally Dangerous Activities General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 6505.5(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6436.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6436.

82 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.66

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.66 Willful Refusal to Rehire, Promote, or Restore Employee After Unlawful Discrimination

Any employer who willfully refuses to rehire, promote, or otherwise restore an employee or former employee, who exercised any right under Labor Code Section 6310 (e.g., by making a bona fide complaint about unsafe or unhealthful working conditions),ⁿ¹ and who has been found to be eligible for rehiring or promotion by a grievance procedure, arbitration, or hearing, is guilty of a misdemeanor.ⁿ²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawDiscriminationGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. For discussion, see § 21.49.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6310(b).

83 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.67

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.67 Corporate Criminal Liability Act of 1989

[1] Overview of Prohibited Conduct and Penalties

The Corporate Criminal Liability Act of 1989,ⁿ¹ codified in Penal Code Section 387, allows criminal prosecution of any corporation or limited liability company and certain persons with management authority and actual authority for safety who have actual knowledge of a serious concealed danger and who knowingly fail to notify, within 15 days after acquiring such actual knowledge, both the Division of Occupational Safety and Health and any affected employees of the danger.

The Act provides that any corporation, limited liability company, or person who is a managerⁿ² with respect to a product,ⁿ³ facility, equipment, process, place of employment, or business practice, may be found guilty of a public offense, if the corporation or person does all of the following:ⁿ⁴

1. Has "actual knowledge"ⁿ⁵ of a "serious concealed danger"ⁿ⁶ that is subject to regulatory authority of an appropriate agencyⁿ⁷ and is associated with that product or a component of that product or business practice; and
2. Knowingly fails during the period ending 15 days after the actual knowledge is acquired, or immediately if there is an imminent risk of great bodily harm or death, to do both of the following:
 - a. Inform the Division of the danger in writing, unless the corporation, limited liability company, or manager has actual knowledge that the Division has already been so informed (except as discussed in [6], below); and
 - b. Warn its affected employees in writing, unless the corporation, limited liability company, or manager has actual knowledge that the employees have been so warned.

The obligation to warn affected employees requires that the employer "give sufficient description of the serious concealed danger to all individuals working for or in the business entity who are likely to be subject to the serious concealed danger in the course of that work to make those individuals aware of that danger."⁸

Violations of Penal Code Section 387 are punishable by imprisonment in the county jail for up to 1 year, or by a fine not exceeding $10,000, or both; or by imprisonment in state prison for 16 months, 2 years, or 3 years, or by fine not exceeding $25,000, or both.⁹ If the defendant is a corporation, a fine of up to $1,000,000 may be imposed.¹⁰

[2] "Manager" Defined

As discussed in [1], above, the criminal penalties of Penal Code Section 387 apply to corporations, to limited liability companies, and to any person who is a "manager" with respect to a product, facility, equipment, process, place of employment, or business practice.¹¹ For this purpose, a "manager" is defined as a person having both (1) "[m]anagement authority in or as a business entity"; and (2) "significant responsibility for any aspect of a business which includes actual authority for the safety of a product or business practice or for the conduct of research or testing in connection with a product or business practice."¹²

[3] "Actual Knowledge" Defined

Although Penal Code Section 387 purports to limit criminal penalties to cases in which the corporation, limited liability company, or manager has "actual knowledge" of a serious concealed danger,¹³ the statute defines "actual knowledge" as having "information that would convince a reasonable person in the circumstances in which the manager is situated that the serious concealed danger exists."¹⁴ Thus, the statute in effect appears to apply a "constructive knowledge" standard; that is, the corporation, limited liability company, or manager may apparently be prosecuted and convicted under Penal Code Section 387 if a reasonable person would have recognized the danger, even if the defendant did not in fact recognize the existence of the danger.

[4] "Serious Concealed Danger" and Related Terms Defined

For purposes of Penal Code Section 387, "serious concealed danger," when used in regard to a product or business practice, means "that the normal or reasonably foreseeable use of, or the exposure of an individual to, the product or business practice creates a substantial probability of death, great bodily harm, or serious exposure to an individual, and the danger is not readily apparent to an individual who is likely to be exposed."¹⁵ "Great bodily harm" is defined as "a significant or substantial physical harm."¹⁶ "Serious exposure" is defined as "any exposure to a hazardous substance, when the exposure occurs as a result of an incident or exposure over time and to a degree or in an amount sufficient to create a substantial probability that death or great bodily harm in the future would result from the exposure."¹⁷

[5] "Appropriate Government Agency" Defined

"Appropriate government agency," as used in Penal Code Section 387, means an agency on the following list that has regulatory authority over the product or business practice and serious concealed dangers of the sort discovered:¹⁸

1. The Division of Occupational Safety and Health in the Department of Industrial Relations;
2. The State Department of Health Services;
3. The Department of Agriculture;
4. County departments of health;
5. The United States Food and Drug Administration;

6. The United States Environmental Protection Agency;
7. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration;
8. The Federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration;
9. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission;
10. The Consumer Product Safety Commission;
11. The Federal Aviation Administration; and
12. The Federal Mine Safety and Health Review Commission.

If the concealed danger reported by a corporation or manager is regulated by some agency other than the Division of Occupational Safety and Health, the Division must notify the appropriate governmental agency of the hazard by telephone within 24 hours of receipt of the information and promptly forward any written notification the Division has received.ⁿ¹⁹

[6] Exceptions to Reporting Requirement

If the hazard has been abated within the time allowed for reporting such a hazard to the Division, the requirement to disclose the hazard does not apply unless disclosure is required by the regulations of the appropriate regulatory agency for such a hazard.ⁿ²⁰

No penalties apply even if the Division has not been notified if the corporation, limited liability company, or manager reasonably and in good faith believed that he or she was complying with the notification requirements of Penal Code Section 387 by notifying another governmental agency among those listed in Penal Code Section 387(b)(8).ⁿ²¹

[7] Prohibition Against Use of Notification in Criminal Prosecution Against Manager

Notification received pursuant to Penal Code Section 387 may not be used against any manager in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury or for giving a false statement.ⁿ²²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Business & Corporate LawCorporationsGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCriminal PenaltiesLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Stats. 1990, ch. 1616, § 1.

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in [2], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Penal Code § 387(b)(2) (definition of "product").

(n4)Footnote 4. Penal Code § 387(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussion in [3], below.

(n6)Footnote 6. See discussion in [4], below.

(n7)Footnote 7. See discussion in [5], below.

(n8)Footnote 8. Penal Code § 387(b)(7).

(n9)Footnote 9. Penal Code § 387(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Penal Code § 387(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Penal Code § 387(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. Penal Code § 387(b)(1).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Penal Code § 387(a)(1).

(n14)Footnote 14. Penal Code § 387(b)(3).

(n15)Footnote 15. Penal Code § 387(b)(4).

(n16)Footnote 16. Penal Code § 387(b)(5).

(n17)Footnote 17. Penal Code § 387(b)(6).

(n18)Footnote 18. Penal Code § 387(b)(8).

(n19)Footnote 19. Penal Code § 387(a)(2)(A).

(n20)Footnote 20. Penal Code § 387(a)(2).

(n21)Footnote 21. Penal Code § 387(a)(2). For list of agencies, see [5], above.

(n22)Footnote 22. Penal Code § 387(c).

84 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.68

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.68 Other Criminal Offenses Related to Occupational Safety and Health

Other statutes providing criminal penalties for violations relating to occupational safety and health include the following:

1. Labor Code Section 6509 (violation of permit and registration requirements of Labor Code Section 6500 for inherently hazardous and asbestos-related work);
2. Labor Code Section 6908 (violation of statutes regarding operation personnel working on railroads);
3. Labor Code Section 6951 (violation of statute relating to engine cab overhangs);
4. Labor Code Section 6952 (operating railroad without required handrails and footboards in engine cab);
5. Labor Code Section 6956 (common carrier in violation of safety glass requirements);
6. Labor Code Section 7155 (violation of scaffolding requirements in Labor Code Sections 7151 through 7154);
7. Labor Code Section 7156 (improper scaffold use for cleaning, repair, painting, construction, or alteration on buildings, and interference with inspection of scaffolding by Division);
8. Labor Code Section 7205 (violation of construction elevator provisions in Labor Code Sections 7200 through 7204);
9. Labor Code Section 7266 (proceeding with work on structural steel framed buildings without proper planking or nets);

10. Labor Code Section 7302 (operation of conveyance without proper permit);
11. Labor Code Section 7328 (window cleaning without required safety equipment);
12. Labor Code Section 7330 (failure to provide and maintain required safety devices for window cleaning);
13. Labor Code Section 7342 (operation of aerial passenger tramway without permit);
14. Labor Code Section 7501 (failure or refusal to install or maintain required telephone equipment in mines more than 500 feet deep);
15. Labor Code Section 7608 (violation of ship loading and unloading provisions in Labor Code Sections 7600 through 7611);
16. Labor Code Section 7750 (operation of tank or boiler without required permit);
17. Labor Code Sections 7770 and 7771 (negligent or willful mismanagement of steam boiler, steam engine, or other steam-generating apparatus);
18. Labor Code Section 7915 (failure to comply with requirements for amusement ride safety as provided in Labor Code Sections 7900 through 7915);
19. Labor Code Section 8003 (violations of laws and regulations relating to licensing for gas testing and use of explosives in tunnels and mines); and
20. Penal Code Section 385 (violations relating to certain operations in close proximity to high voltage overhead conductors).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Criminal Law & Procedure
Criminal Offenses
Miscellaneous Offenses
General Overview
Labor & Employment
Law
Occupational Safety & Health
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Occupational Safety & Health
Duties & Rights

85 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
 CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
 Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.69

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.69 Statutory Civil Actions for "Unfair Competition"

Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq. authorizes civil actions for equitable relief and, in some cases, civil penalties against any individual, corporation, firm, partnership, joint stock company, association, or other organization of personsⁿ¹ that engages, is engaged, or proposes to engage in "unfair competition."ⁿ² "Unfair competition," as used in these statutes, includes any "unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice."ⁿ³ Courts have interpreted this phrase as broadly encompassing "anything that can properly be called a business practice and that at the same time is forbidden by law."ⁿ⁴ Thus, it appears that any business act or practice that violates any state or federal statute or administrative regulation (such as an occupational safety and health statute or standard) may potentially be the basis for an action for unfair competition.

As interpreted by California courts, an "unfair" business practice need not deceive anyoneⁿ⁵ or harm any competitorⁿ⁶ to be actionable. However, with the passage of Proposition 64, effective January 1, 2005, it is the intent of the voters of California in amending Business and Professions Code Sections 17203, 17204, 17206, 17535, and 17536 to prohibit private attorneys from filing lawsuits for unfair competition when they have no client who has been injured in fact under the standing requirements of the United States Constitution.^{n6.1} Furthermore, cases have indicated that the plaintiff need not prove knowledge of the unfair business practice or intent on the part of the defendant.ⁿ⁷

An action for any relief pursuant to Business and Professions Code section 17200 et seq. may be brought by the Attorney General, any district attorney, or certain city attorneys and county counsel,ⁿ⁸ in the name of the People of the State of California on their own complaint or on the complaint of any board, officer, person, corporation, or association.ⁿ⁹ An action may also be brought by any person who has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of such unfair competition.ⁿ¹⁰

In such an action, in addition to enjoining the act of unfair competition, the court may make any orders or judgments, including the appointment of a receiver, that may be necessary to prevent the use or employment of any practice that constitutes unfair competition, or may grant restitution to persons deprived of money or property by unfair competition.ⁿ¹¹ However, a person may pursue representative claims for relief on behalf of others only if the claimant meets the standing requirements of Business and Professions Code Section 17204 (requiring actual injury in fact and the loss of money or property as the result of the alleged unfair competition) and complies with Code of Civil Procedure Section 382 (joinder as defendant of one who should be joined as plaintiff but will not consent). These limitations do not apply to unfair competition claims by the Attorney General, or any district attorney, county counsel, city attorney or city prosecutor.ⁿ¹¹ 1.1 The prohibition of Civil Code Section 3369 against the use of specific or preventative relief to enforce a penalty, forfeiture, or penal law does not apply to actions to enjoin unfair competition.ⁿ¹²

In addition, a person who commits an act of unfair competition may be assessed a civil penalty of up to $2,500 per violation in actions prosecuted by the Attorney General, a district attorney, a county counsel, or a city attorney or prosecutor.ⁿ¹³ The court must impose a civil penalty for each violation and assess the amount based on relevant circumstances, such as the nature and seriousness of the misconduct and the number of violations.ⁿ¹⁴ Additional civil penalties of up to $2,500 per violation may be assessed for violations perpetrated against senior citizens or disabled persons.ⁿ¹⁵ A person who intentionally violates the terms of an injunction against unfair competition may be held liable for a civil penalty of up to $6,000 per violation.ⁿ¹⁶ The civil penalty collected is paid to General Fund, the county treasury, and/or the city treasury, depending on which prosecuting agency brought the action.ⁿ¹⁷ These funds are for exclusive use by the Attorney General, district attorney, county counsel, or city attorney for the enforcement of consumer protection laws.^{n17.1} Reasonable expenses of local boards or agencies that assisted with the investigation and prosecution of the action may be awarded out of the civil penalty.ⁿ¹⁸

The remedies and penalties allowed provided under Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq. are cumulative to each other and to those available under all other laws of the State of California.ⁿ¹⁹

Attorney's fees will not be awarded to the successful party in such an action.ⁿ²⁰ Damages may not be awarded under the unfair competition law, but restitution may be ordered.ⁿ²¹

An action under the Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq. must be brought within four years after the cause of action accrued.ⁿ²²

For additional discussion of actions under Business and Professions Code Section 17200 et seq., see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Unfair Competition (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health Civil Liability Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17201.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203, 17204, 17206.

(n3)Footnote 3. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200.

(n4)Footnote 4. People v. McKale (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 626, 632, 159 Cal. Rptr. 811, 602 P.2d 731 ; Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 111, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Motors, Inc. v. Times Mirror Co. (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 735, 740 n.2, 162 Cal. Rptr. 543 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Barquis v. Merchants Collection Assn. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 111, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 .

(n7)Footnote 6.1. Proposition 64, approved by California voters on November 2, 2004, § 1(e).

(n8)Footnote 7. See People v. Superior Court (Olson) (1979) 96 Cal. App. 3d 181, 195, 157 Cal. Rptr. 628 (case involving false advertising).

(n9)Footnote 8. A city attorney of a city having a population exceeding 750,000, or a city attorney in any city and county may prosecute such as action. With the consent of the district attorney, a city prosecutor in any city having a full-time city prosecutor also may bring such an action. A county counsel may be authorized by agreement with the district attorney to bring such an action if the action involves violation of a county ordinance. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204.

(n10)Footnote 9. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204.

(n11)Footnote 10. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204. Former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204 allowed any person to file an action acting for the interests of the general public. Effective January 1, 2005, with the passage of Proposition 64 on November 2, 2004, an individual may no longer file and prosecute unfair competition actions on behalf of the general public. See also Proposition 64, approved by California voters on November 2, 2004, § 1(f) (intent of California voters in enacting Proposition 64 that only Attorney General and local public officials be authorized to file and prosecute actions on behalf of general public).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203.

(n13)Footnote 11.1. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203.

(n14)Footnote 12. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17202.

(n15)Footnote 13. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206(a).

(n16)Footnote 14. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206(b).

(n17)Footnote 15. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206.1.

(n18)Footnote 16. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17207(a), (b).

(n19)Footnote 17. See Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17206(c), 17207(c).

(n20)Footnote 17.1. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206(c).

(n21)Footnote 18. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17206(e).

(n22)Footnote 19. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17205.

(n23)Footnote 20. Pachmayr Gun Wks., Inc. v. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp., etc. (9th Cir. 1974) 502 F.2d 802, 809-813.

(n24)Footnote 21. Cortez v. Purolator Air Filtration Products Co. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 163, 173-174, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518, 999 P.2d 706; see also Industrial Indemnity Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1093, 1095-1097, 257 Cal. Rptr. 655 (private plaintiff could not recover damages in action under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq. alleging unfair and unlawful insurance practices); Czechowski v. Tandy Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1990) 731 F. Supp. 406, 410 (punitive damages not allowed).

(n25)Footnote 22. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17208.

86 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
 CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
 Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.70

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.70 Effect of Occupational Safety and Health Act and Standards in Civil Personal Injury Litigation

The Legislature has expressed its intent that the provisions of Division 5 of the Labor Code (Safety in Employment),ⁿ¹ and the occupational safety and health standards and orders promulgated under the Labor Code, be applicable only to proceedings brought against employers to maintain and enforce employee safety.ⁿ² As amended in 1999, Labor Code Section 6304.5 expressly provides that neither the issuance of, nor the failure to issue, a citation by the Division of Occupational Health and Safety has any application to and may not be considered or admitted into evidence in any personal injury or wrongful death action, except in actions between an employee and his or her employer. Section 6304.5 further provides that Evidence Code Sections 452 and 669 apply to the Cal-OSHA Act and to occupational safety and health standards adopted under it in the same manner as any other statute, ordinance, or regulation. The testimony of employees of the Division of Occupational Health and Safety is not admissible as expert opinion or with respect to the application of occupational safety and health standards.

In Elsner v. Uveges,ⁿ³ the California Supreme Court held that under the 1999 amendments to Section 6304.5, Cal-OSHA provisions may be used to establish standards and duties of care in negligence actions against private third parties. However, because Elsner involved a preamendment accident, use of Cal-OSHA provisions to establish the standard of care and to shift the burden of proof to defendant was an impermissible retroactive application of the 1999 amendment, which error was not harmless.^{n3.1} Any orders issued by the Division in the course of investigating an industrial accident or occupational illness are not admissible as evidence in any action for damages, or in any proceeding for compensation, based on or arising out of any injury or death caused by the accident or illness.ⁿ⁴

In a civil action, if the defendant violated an applicable OSHA regulation, the defendant would be deemed negligent as a matter of law and barred from asserting assumption of the risk or contributory negligence defenses.^{n4.1} But the defendant will not be liable if the OSHA regulation does not apply to that defendant. Thus, for example, OSHA regulations did not apply to homeowners sued by the injured employee of an unlicensed contractor performing a remodel on their home,^{n4.2} or to a homeowner who hired a tree trimmer who did not possess the appropriate license.^{n4.3} In deciding whether OSHA applies, the focus of the inquiry is on the status of the hirer, and historically, OSHA regulations have been directed at commercial activities.

Although the occupational safety and health laws and standards would, theoretically, be admissible in personal injury litigation against an employee's own employer,ⁿ⁵ most such personal injury actions are precluded by the exclusive remedy doctrine of the workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁶ For discussion of the exclusive remedy doctrine, see Chapter 20.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCivil LiabilityLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsTortsBusiness TortsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6300 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6304.5.

(n3)Footnote 3. Elsner v. Uveges (2005) 34 Cal. 4th 915, 926-936, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530, 102 P.3d 915 .

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Elsner v. Uveges (2005) 34 Cal. 4th 915, 936-940, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 530, 102 P.3d 915 .

(n5)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6313(b).

(n6)Footnote 4.1. Cortez v. Abich (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 261, 267, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 830 , superseded by grant of review, depublished by, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12822 (2009). See Lab. Code § 2801.

(n7)Footnote 4.2. Cortez v. Abich (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 261, 267-269, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 830, superseded by grant of review, depublished by, 2009 Cal. LEXIS 12822 (2009) (OSHA regulation requiring employers to provide safe workplace did not apply to homeowners who hired contractor and workers to remodel personal residence).

(n8)Footnote 4.3. Fernandez v. Lawson (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 31, 35-38, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422, 71 P.3d 779 (OSHA did not apply to noncommercial tree trimming performed at private home under Labor Code § 6303(b), "household domestic service" exception to duty to provide safe workplace). For discussion of Labor Code § 6303(b), see § 21.03[2][c], above.

(n9)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code § 6304.5.

(n10)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602.

87 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.71

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.71 Injunctive Relief to Prevent Workplace Violence

[1] Basis of Relief

Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8, any employer whose employee has suffered unlawful violence or a credible threat of violence from any individual, which can reasonably be construed to be carried out or to have been carried out at the workplace, may seek a temporary restraining order and an injunction on behalf of the employee and, at the discretion of the court, any number of other employees at the workplace (and, if appropriate, other employees at other workplaces of the employer).ⁿ¹

"Unlawful violence" for the purposes of this section is any assault or battery, or stalking as prohibited in Penal Code Section 646.9, but does not include lawful acts of self-defense or defense of others.ⁿ² "Credible threat of violence" is a knowing and willful statement or course of conduct that would place a reasonable person in fear for his or her safety, or for the safety of that person's immediate family, and serves no legitimate purpose.ⁿ³ "Course of conduct" is a pattern of conduct composed of a series of acts over a period of time, however short, evidencing a continuity of purpose, including (1) following or stalking an employee to or from the place of work; (2) entering the workplace; (3) following an employee during hours of employment; (4) making telephone calls to an employee; or (5) sending correspondence to an employee, by any means including, but not limited to, the use of the public or private mails, interoffice mail, fax, or computer e-mail.ⁿ⁴

Nothing in Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8 may be construed to permit a court to issue a temporary restraining order or injunction prohibiting speech or other activities that are constitutionally protected, or otherwise protected by Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.3 (regarding labor disputes) or any other provision of law.ⁿ⁵

[2] Definitions of "Employer" and "Employee" for Purposes of Relief

For the purposes of Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8, the terms "employer" and "employee" mean persons defined in Labor Code Section 350. The term "employer" also includes a federal agency, the state, a state agency, a city, county, or district, and a private, public, or quasi-public corporation, or any public agency thereof or therein. The term

"employee" also includes the members of boards of directors of private, public, and quasi-public corporations and elected and appointed public officers. For these purposes only, the term "employee" also includes a volunteer or independent contractor who performs services for the employer at the employer's worksite.ⁿ⁶

[3] Obtaining Temporary Restraining Order

On filing a petition for an injunction under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8, the plaintiff may obtain a temporary restraining order in accordance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 527(a) if the plaintiff also files an affidavit that, to the satisfaction of the court, shows reasonable proof that an employee has suffered unlawful violence or a credible threat of violence by the defendant, and that great or irreparable harm would result to an employee.ⁿ⁷ To meet the latter requirement, plaintiff must show to the satisfaction of the court that it is likely that harm will occur from future unlawful violence in the absence of a temporary restraining order.ⁿ⁸ In the court's discretion, on a showing of good cause, a temporary restraining order may include other named family or household members who reside with the employee. A temporary restraining order granted under section 527.8 may remain in effect, at the court's discretion, for a period not to exceed 15 days, unless otherwise modified or terminated by the court.ⁿ⁹

There is no filing fee for a petition alleging that a person has inflicted or threatened violence against an employee of the petitioner, or stalked the employee, or acted or spoken in any other manner that has placed the employee in reasonable fear of violence, and seeking protective or restraining orders or injunctions restraining stalking or future violence or threats of violence, in any action brought pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8. There is no fee for a subpoena filed in connection with a petition alleging these acts or for filing a response to a petition alleging these acts.^{n9.1}

Unless otherwise ordered, the party seeking a temporary restraining order under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8(e) need not submit a supporting memorandum.ⁿ¹⁰ For a blank copy, suitable for reproduction, of the Judicial Council form of Petition for Injunction Prohibiting Harassment of Employee (Form WH-100), which includes an application for temporary restraining orders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Judicial Council Forms, vol. II, pt. F (Matthew Bender). Blank copies are also available from the court clerk.

[4] Procedure on Petition for Injunction

[a] Filing of Petition and Service on Defendant

On filing of a petition for an injunction under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8, the defendant must be personally served with a copy of the petition, temporary restraining order, if any, and notice of hearing of the petition.ⁿ¹¹ The defendant must also be personally served with blank forms of the mandatory Judicial Council form for Response (form WV-110)^{n11.1} and Proof of Service of Completed Response (form WV-131).^{n11.2} Service must be made at least five days before the hearing. The court may, for good cause, on motion of the plaintiff or on its own motion, shorten the time for service on the defendant.ⁿ¹² Service must be made in the manner provided by law for personal service of summons in civil actions.ⁿ¹³

The Judicial Council has made available "Instructions for Petitions to Prohibit Workplace Violence," Judicial Council Form WV-150, to help litigants in these actions, especially employers and defendants representing themselves. The Instructions include filled-in examples of the Petition and Order to Show Cause and Temporary Restraining Order.

To petition for an injunction restraining actual or threatened workplace violence, the employer must use the Judicial Council petition form adopted for mandatory use, WV-100, Petition of Employer for Injunction Prohibiting Violence or Threats of Violence Against Employee [Petition].

The temporary restraining order and notice of the hearing are combined in the Judicial Council-approved form of Order to Show Cause and Temporary Restraining Order (Workplace Violence), Form WV-120. The Judicial Council has also approved a form of Proof of Personal Service (Form WV-130) for use in these proceedings. For blank copies of these forms that are suitable for reproduction, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Judicial Council Forms, vol. II, pt. F (Matthew Bender). Blank copies are also available from the court clerk.

[b] Response by Defendant

In reply to the petition, the defendant may file a response that explains, excuses, justifies, or denies the alleged unlawful violence or credible threats of violence, or may file a cross-complaint under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8.ⁿ¹⁴ A response must be filed and delivered to plaintiff or to plaintiff's attorney no later than 48 hours before the hearing on the petition.^{n14.1}

There is no fee for the response to a petition alleging that a person has inflicted or threatened violence against an employee of the petitioner, or stalked the employee, or acted or spoken in any other manner that has placed the employee in reasonable fear of violence.ⁿ¹⁵

The Judicial Council has adopted a form of Response to Petition for Injunction Prohibiting Harassment of Employee (Form WV-110), which defendants are required to use in responding to the petition. The employer must have a blank copy of the form served on the defendant when the petition, temporary restraining order and notice of hearing are served.^{n15.1} For a blank copy of this form suitable for reproduction, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Judicial Council Forms, vol. II, pt. F (Matthew Bender). Blank copies are also available from the court clerk.

[c] Scheduling of Hearing

On the filing of a petition for injunction under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8, a hearing must be set in accordance with the requirements of Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8(f).ⁿ¹⁶ The hearing must be held within 15 days of the filing of the petition.ⁿ¹⁷

[d] Conduct of Hearing and Issuance of Injunction

At the hearing, the judge is required to receive any testimony that is relevant, and may make an independent inquiry. Moreover, if the defendant is a current employee of the entity requesting the injunction, the judge must receive evidence concerning the employer's decision to retain, terminate, or otherwise discipline the defendant. If the judge finds by clear and convincing evidence not only that defendant engaged in unlawful violence or made credible threats of violence, but also that great or irreparable harm would result to an employee if a prohibitory injunction were not issued, due to the reasonable probability that unlawful violence will occur in the future, thenⁿ¹⁸ an injunction will be issued prohibiting further unlawful violence or threats of violence. An injunction issued pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8 may not have a duration of more than three years. At any time within the three months before the expiration of the injunction, the plaintiff may apply for a renewal of the injunction by filing a new petition for an injunction under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8.ⁿ¹⁹

The Judicial Council has approved a form of Order After Hearing on Petition for Injunction Prohibiting Harassment of Employee (Form WV-140).ⁿ²⁰ For a blank copy of this form suitable for reproduction, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Judicial Council Forms, vol. II, pt. F (Matthew Bender). Blank copies are also available from the court clerk.

[5] Notification to Law Enforcement Agencies

The court must order the plaintiff or the attorney for the plaintiff to deliver a copy of each temporary restraining order or injunction, or modification or termination, granted under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8, by the close of the business day on which the order was granted, to the law enforcement agencies within the court's discretion as are requested by the plaintiff. Each appropriate law enforcement agency must make available information as to the existence and current status of these orders to law enforcement officers responding to the scene of reported unlawful violence or a credible threat of violence.n21

At the request of the plaintiff, an order issued under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 must be served on the defendant, regardless of whether the defendant has been taken into custody, by any law enforcement officer who is present at the scene of reported unlawful violence or a credible threat of violence involving the parties to the proceedings. The plaintiff must provide the officer with an endorsed copy of the order and proof of service that the officer completes and sends to the issuing court.n21.1 Upon receiving information at the scene of an incident of unlawful violence or a credible threat of violence that a protective order has been issued under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8, or that a person who has been taken into custody is the subject of an order, if the plaintiff or the protected person cannot produce an endorsed copy of the order, a law enforcement officer must immediately attempt to verify the existence of the order.n21.2 If the law enforcement officer determines that a protective order has been issued but not served, the officer will immediately notify the defendant of the terms of the order and obtain the defendant's address. At that time, the law enforcement officer will also enforce the order, but may not arrest or take the defendant into custody for acts in violation of the order that were committed prior to the verbal notice of the terms and conditions of the order. The law enforcement officer's verbal notice of the terms of the order constitutes service of the order and sufficient notice for the purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 and Pen. Code §§ 273.6 and 12021(g). The plaintiff must mail an endorsed copy of the order to the defendant's mailing address provided to the law enforcement officer within one business day of the reported incident of unlawful violence or a credible threat of violence at which a verbal notice of the terms of the order was provided by a law enforcement officer.n21.3

Information on any temporary restraining order or injunction relating to harassment or domestic violence issued by a court pursuant to this section will be transmitted to the Department of Justice in accordance with Fam. Code § 6380(b).n21.4

[6] Penalties for Violation

Any intentional disobedience of any temporary restraining order or injunction granted under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8 is punishable pursuant to Penal Code Section 273.6.n22

[7] No Effect on Employer's Duty Regarding Safe Workplace

Nothing in Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8 may be construed as expanding, diminishing, altering, or modifying the duty, if any, of an employer to provide a safe workplace for employees and other persons.n23 For general discussion of the employer's duty to provide a safe workplace, see § 21.10. For a discussion of Cal/OSHA guidelines regarding workplace security and the prevention of workplace violence, see § 21.12[1A].

[8] Prohibition of Firearm Ownership

A person subject to a protective order issued under Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.8 may not own, possess, purchase, receive, or attempt to purchase or receive a firearm while the protective order is in effect.n24 The court must order a person subject to a protective order to relinquish any firearms he or she owns or possesses pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.9.n25 Every person who owns, possesses, purchases or receives, or attempts to purchase or receive a firearm while the protective order is in effect is punishable pursuant to Penal Code Section 12021(g).n26

[9] Subsequent Actions

Petitions under the Workplace Violence Safety Act do not provide a basis for malicious prosecution actions, even if the petitioner is unsuccessful.n27

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Procedure Remedies Injunctions General Overview Labor & Employment Law Occupational Safety & Health General Overview Labor & Employment Law Workplace Violence

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(b)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(b)(3).

(n5)Footnote 5. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(c). See also City of Los Angeles v. Animal Defense League (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 606, 614-627, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 632 (under anti-SLAPP statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16], trial court erred in denying special motions to strike petitions sought under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 on behalf of two city employees against animal rights activist and association, where city's petitions were not enforcement actions within meaning of § 425.16(d) and were subject to special motion to strike; where city's petitions for injunctive relief arose from acts in furtherance of activist's and association's rights of petition or free speech under United States and California Constitutions in connection with public issue; and where city failed to demonstrate probability it would prevail on its petitions under § 527.8).

(n6)Footnote 6. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(d).

(n7)Footnote 7. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(e).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(a), (e).

(n9)Footnote 9. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(e).

(n10)Footnote 9.1. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(p).

(n11)Footnote 10. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1152(b). See Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(m)-(n) (temporary restraining order issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 must be issued on forms adopted by Judicial Council and approved by Department of Justice pursuant to Fam. Code § 6380(i); however, fact that an order issued by a court pursuant to section 527.8 was not issued on forms adopted by the Judicial Council and approved by the Department of Justice does not, in and of itself, make the order unenforceable).

(n12)Footnote 11. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(h); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1152(c).

(n13)Footnote 11.1. See [b], below.

(n14)Footnote 11.2. See "Instructions for Petitions to Prohibit Workplace Violence," Judicial Council Form WV-150, p. 3.

(n15)Footnote 12. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(h).

(n16)Footnote 13. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1152(c); see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 415.10, 415.20 (personal service of summons in civil actions). For discussion of general rules regarding personal service of summons in civil actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers, pt. II (Matthew Bender).

(n17)Footnote 14. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(f).

(n18)Footnote 14.1. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1152(d).

(n19)Footnote 15. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(p).

(n20)Footnote 15.1. See "Instructions for Petitions to Prohibit Workplace Violence," Judicial Council Form WV-150, p. 3.

(n21)Footnote 16. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1152(a).

(n22)Footnote 17. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(f).

(n23)Footnote 18. Scripps Health v. Marin (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 335, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86 (injunction violated public policy by being imposed under factual circumstances which did not establish threat of future harm to plaintiff's employees); see Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(a), (f).

(n24)Footnote 19. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(f).

(n25)Footnote 20. See Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(m)-(n) (injunction issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 must be issued on forms adopted by Judicial Council and approved by Department of Justice pursuant to Fam. Code § 6380(i); however, fact that an order issued by a court pursuant to this section was not issued on forms adopted by the Judicial Council and approved by the Department of Justice shall not, in and of itself, make the order unenforceable).

(n26)Footnote 21. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(i)(1).

(n27)Footnote 21.1. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(i)(2).

(n28)Footnote 21.2. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(i)(3).

(n29)Footnote 21.3. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(i)(4).

(n30)Footnote 21.4. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(o)

(n31)Footnote 22. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(k); see Penal Code § 273.6 (punishment for violations of orders).

(n32)Footnote 23. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(l).

(n33)Footnote 24. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(j)(1).

(n34)Footnote 25. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(j)(2).

(n35)Footnote 26. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(j)(3).

(n36)Footnote 27. Robinzine v. Vicory (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1421-1424, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 65 ; see also Siam v. Kizilbash (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1563, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 368 (cause of action for malicious prosecution could not be predicated on unsuccessful civil harassment petition under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6, even where defendant obtained TRO on alleged misrepresentation to court).

88 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part E. CRIMINAL PENALTIES AND CIVIL LIABILITY

2-21 California Employment Law §§ 21.72 through 21.79

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 21.72[Reserved]

89 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part F. REGULATION OF SPECIFIC HAZARDS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.80

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.80 Introduction

Apart from the general safety laws described previously in this chapter, Title 8 of the California Code of Regulations contains safety rules relating to specific industries and types of hazards. These regulations are voluminous and highly technical, and space limitations preclude any detailed discussion of these regulations in this chapter. This part describes the regulations relating to airborne contaminants and confined spaces, which are applicable to a broad range of employers and are frequently the subject of citations.ⁿ¹ In addition, this part contains a list of hazards and industries for which there are specific Cal/OSHA safety regulations.ⁿ² Employers and their counsel should become familiar with the specific regulations applicable to the particular types of operations that they conduct.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthIndustry Standards

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in §§ 21.81, 21.82.

(n2)Footnote 2. See § 21.83.

90 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part F. REGULATION OF SPECIFIC HAZARDS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.81

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.81 Airborne Contaminants

[1] Overview of Regulations

Employee exposure to airborne contaminants is regulated primarily by Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5155. Section 5155 contains a table (Table AC-1) that lists several hundred hazardous airborne contaminants, with notations designating those substances that are readily absorbed through the skin. The list also indicates the common name of each listed hazardous substance and the maximum allowable exposures to each such substance as measured by the permissible exposure limit (PEL),ⁿ¹ ceiling limit,ⁿ² and short-term exposure limit (STEL).ⁿ³ Appendix A to Section 5155 sets forth an algebraic formula for calculating the eight-hour time-weighted average (TWA) exposure to a particular substance.

In addition to limiting employee exposure to such substances,ⁿ⁴ Section 5155 requires the employer to:

1. Conduct work environment monitoring in the workplace whenever it is reasonable to suspect that employees may be exposed to concentrations of such contaminants in excess of the levels permitted in Section 5155;ⁿ⁵
2. Take any necessary measures to control harmful exposures to such substances, in compliance with Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5141, whenever exposures to airborne contaminants exceed or are expected to exceed allowable levels;ⁿ⁶
3. If required by the Division, institute a medical surveillance program approved by the Division to monitor and maintain employee health;ⁿ⁷ and
4. Record and maintain all monitoring results in accordance with the requirements of Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 3204 (maintenance of employee exposure records).ⁿ⁸

In addition, the employer must provide and require employees to use appropriate protective clothing to skin absorption of any hazardous substance that is easily absorbed into the bloodstream through the skin, mucous membranes, or the eye, as indicated by the designation "S" in the list of hazardous substances.ⁿ⁹

[2] Ceiling Limits

The ceiling limit is the maximum concentration of an airborne contaminant to which any employee ever may be exposed at any time.ⁿ¹⁰ The employer must control employee exposures to ensure that the ceiling limit for a given substance, as specified in Table AC-1 of Section 5155, is not exceeded at any time.ⁿ¹¹

[3] Permissible Exposure Limits

The permissible exposure limit (PEL) is the maximum permitted eight-hour time-weighted average concentration (TWA) of an airborne contaminant.ⁿ¹² The TWA is an employee's exposure to an airborne contaminant during an eight-hour workday, as calculated or measured according to a formula set out in Appendix A to Section 5155.

Employee exposure to an airborne contaminant in a single workday, as measured by the TWA, must not exceed the PEL specified for that substance in Table AC-1 of Section 5155.ⁿ¹³

A special formula applies in cases where an employee is exposed to two or more toxic substances during the course of a workday.ⁿ¹⁴

[4] Short-Term Exposure Limits

The short-term exposure limit (STEL) is a 15-minute time weighted average exposure that is not to be exceeded at any time during a workday even if the 8-hour time weighted average (TWA) is below the PEL.ⁿ¹⁵ For some substances, an averaging period other than 15-minute intervals may be specified in Table AC-1 of Section 5155. The employer must ensure that employee exposure is sufficiently controlled so that it will not exceed the STEL for the substance listed in Table AC-1 at any time during the workday.ⁿ¹⁶

In the case of substances with no ceiling limit or STEL, the employer must control employee exposure so as to prevent exposure to concentrations in excess of the PEL and to prevent harmful effects resulting from short-term exposure, including narcosis, significant eye irritation, skin irritation, irritation to the respiratory tract, and chronic or irreversible tissue change.ⁿ¹⁷

[5] Methods of Controlling Employee Exposure to Airborne Contaminants

As noted in [1], above, whenever exposures to airborne contaminants exceed or are expected to exceed allowable levels, the employer must take any necessary measures to control harmful exposures to the substances, in compliance with Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5141.ⁿ¹⁸

Under Section 5141, an employer must control employee exposure to harmful dusts, vapors, fumes, mists, and gases by implementing "engineering controls," "administrative controls," or providing each affected employee with a respirator that is appropriate for the expected exposure.ⁿ¹⁹ Whenever feasible, the employer must prevent harmful employee exposure to such substances by means of "engineering controls," rather than by use of either of the other methods.ⁿ²⁰ Engineering controls consist of mechanical ventilation systems (such as those described in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Sections 5142 and 5143), substitution of a less hazardous material or process, or isolation or enclosure of the hazard-producing operations or machinery.ⁿ²¹

If engineering controls are not feasible or do not ensure full compliance, the employer may protect employees by use of "administrative controls,"ⁿ²² which refers to the limitation of exposure by adjusting work schedules.ⁿ²³

Respirators, used in accordance with Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5144, may be used to protect employees (1) during the time necessary to install or implement feasible engineering controls, (2) when feasible engineering controls and administrative controls fail to achieve full compliance,ⁿ²⁴ and (3) in emergencies.ⁿ²⁵

Detailed regulations regarding engineering and administrative controls for particular types of hazardous exposure are set out in Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5145 et seq.

[6] Respiratory Protection Programs

[a] Respiratory Protection In General

An employer must provide respirators when it is necessary to protect the health of the employee.ⁿ²⁶ The employer must provide respirators which are suitable for the purpose intended,ⁿ²⁷ and must establish and implement procedures for their proper use.ⁿ²⁸ In addition, the employer must establish and maintain a respiratory protection program.ⁿ²⁹

Because using a respirator may place a physiological burden on employees, the employer must provide a medical evaluation to determine the employee's ability to use a respirator before the employee is fit tested or required to use the respirator.ⁿ³⁰ When respirators are used, the employer must provide for their cleaning and disinfecting, storage, inspection, and repair.ⁿ³¹

[b] Respiratory Protection for M. Tuberculosis

Former 8 Cal. Code Reg. Section 5147, which applied specifically to m. tuberculosis, was repealed on October 18, 2004. The regulations in 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144, Respiratory Protection, discussed in [a], above, apply to m. tuberculosis.ⁿ³²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDICompensabilityInjuriesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in [4], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in [2], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion in [4], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(e)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(e)(2); see discussion in [5], below.

(n7)Footnote 7. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(f).

(n8)Footnote 8. See discussion in §§ 21.17[1][a], 21.19[9].

(n9)Footnote 9. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(d); see also discussion in § 21.11 (employer's general duty to provide protective equipment).

- (n10)Footnote 10. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(b).
- (n11)Footnote 11. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(c)(3).
- (n12)Footnote 12. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(b).
- (n13)Footnote 13. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(c)(1)(A).
- (n14)Footnote 14. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(c)(1)(B) & app. B.
- (n15)Footnote 15. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(b).
- (n16)Footnote 16. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(c)(2)(A).
- (n17)Footnote 17. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(c)(2)(B).
- (n18)Footnote 18. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5155(e)(2).
- (n19)Footnote 19. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5141.
- (n20)Footnote 20. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5141(a).
- (n21)Footnote 21. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5140.
- (n22)Footnote 22. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5141(b).
- (n23)Footnote 23. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5140.
- (n24)Footnote 24. See discussion in [6], below.
- (n25)Footnote 25. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5141(c).
- (n26)Footnote 26. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(a)(2).
- (n27)Footnote 27. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(a)(2); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(d) (selection of respirators).
- (n28)Footnote 28. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(g).
- (n29)Footnote 29. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(a)(2); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(c) (requirements for respiratory protection program); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(l) (program evaluation); 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(m) (recordkeeping).
- (n30)Footnote 30. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(e); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(f) (fit testing).
- (n31)Footnote 31. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5144(h).
- (n32)Footnote 32. Former 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5147, repealed October 18, 2004.

91 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part F. REGULATION OF SPECIFIC HAZARDS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.81A

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.81A Workplace Smoking

[1] Statewide Interest in Workplace Smoking

[a] Smoking Prohibited in Covered Places of Employment

The California Legislature has declared that regulation of smoking in the workplace is a matter of statewide interest and concern.ⁿ¹ To address that concern, Labor Code Section 6404.5 was enacted in 1994, and amended in 1996 and 2006, and is intended to prohibit the smoking of tobacco products in all ("100 percent of") enclosed places of employment in this state, as covered by the statute.ⁿ² The statute broadly provides that no employer may knowingly or intentionally permit, and no person may engage in, the smoking of tobacco products in an enclosed space at a place of employment.ⁿ³ Section 6404.5 defines "enclosed spaces" for these purposes to include lobbies, lounges, waiting areas, elevators, stairwells, and restrooms that are a structural part of the building and not specifically otherwise excluded from the definition of "places of employment" by the statute itself.ⁿ⁴ For discussion of these exclusions, see [3], below.

[b] Extent of Permissible Local Regulation of Workplace Smoking

The Legislature intended that the prohibition of smoking in enclosed places of employment eliminates the need of local governments to enact workplace smoking restrictions within their respective jurisdictions, and also eliminates the confusion and hardship that can result from enactment or enforcement of disparate local workplace smoking restrictions.ⁿ⁵ Therefore, local regulation of smoking of tobacco products in enclosed places of employment is suspended only for as long as, and to the extent that the 100 percent smoking prohibition of Labor Code Section 6404.5 remains in effect. If that section is repealed or modified by subsequent legislative or judicial action so that the 100 percent smoking prohibition no longer applies to all enclosed places of employment in California, local governments will have the full right and authority to enforce previously enacted, and enact and enforce new, restrictions on the smoking of tobacco products in enclosed places of employment within their jurisdictions, including a complete ban on smoking.ⁿ⁶

The statute also provides that, notwithstanding any other provision of Labor Code Section 6404.5, it is the intent of the Legislature that any area not defined as a "place of employment" under Labor Code § 6404.5(d) (discussed in [3], below), or in which the smoking of tobacco products is not regulated pursuant to Labor Code Section 6404.5(e) (providing that employers need not provide reasonable accommodation to smokers, or to provide breakrooms for smokers or nonsmokers), is subject to local regulation of smoking of tobacco products.ⁿ⁷

[2] Employer's Compliance

[a] Employer Cannot Knowingly or Intentionally Permit Smoking

No employer may knowingly or intentionally permit the smoking of tobacco products in an enclosed space at a place of employment.ⁿ⁸ The reasonable steps an employer may take to prevent smoking by nonemployees and preclude a finding that the employer acted knowingly or intentionally are discussed in [b], below; the statutory exclusions from the definition of "places of employment" are discussed in [3], below.

[b] Reasonable Steps to Prevent Smoking by Nonemployee

For purposes of Labor Code Section 6404.5, an employer who permits any nonemployee access to his or her place of employment on a regular basis has not acted knowingly or intentionally if he or she has taken the following reasonable steps to prevent smoking by a nonemployee:ⁿ⁹

1. Posted clear and prominent signs, as follows:

- a. Where smoking is prohibited throughout the building or structure, a sign stating "No smoking" must be posted at each entrance to the building or structure;
- b. Where smoking is permitted in designated areas of the building or structure, a sign stating "Smoking is prohibited except in designated areas" must be posted at each entrance to the building or structure; and

2. Has requested, when appropriate, that a nonemployee who is smoking refrain from smoking in the enclosed workplace.

For purposes of Labor Code Section 6404.5(c), "reasonable steps" does not include (1) the physical ejection of a nonemployee from the place of employment, or (2) any requirement for making a request to a nonemployee to refrain from smoking, under circumstances involving a risk of physical harm to the employer or any employee.ⁿ¹⁰

[3] Exclusions From "Place of Employment"

For purposes of Labor Code Section 6404.5, "place of employment" does not include any of the following:ⁿ¹¹

- 1. Sixty-five percent of the guest room accommodations in a hotel, motel, or similar transient lodging establishment;
- 2. Areas of the lobby in a hotel, motel, or other similar transient lodging establishment designated for smoking by the establishment. An establishment may permit smoking in a designated lobby area that does not exceed 25 percent of the total floor area of the lobby or, if the total area of the lobby is 2,000 square feet or less, that does not exceed 50 percent of the total floor area of the lobby;ⁿ¹²
- 3. Meeting and banquet rooms in a hotel, motel, other transient lodging establishment similar to a hotel or motel, restaurant, or public convention center, except while food or beverage functions are taking place, including setup, service, and cleanup activities, or when the room is being used for exhibit purposes; at times when smoking is not permitted in a meeting or banquet room pursuant to this paragraph, the establishment may permit smoking in corridors and prefunction areas adjacent to and serving the meeting or banquet room if no employee is stationed in that corridor or area on other than a passing basis;

4. Retail or wholesale tobacco shops and private smokers' lounges;n13

5. Cabs of motortrucks, as defined in Vehicle Code Section 410, or truck tractors, as defined in Vehicle Code Section 655, if no nonsmoking employees are present;

6. Warehouse facilities;n14

7. Gaming clubs, in which smoking is permitted by Labor Code Section 6404.5(f), discussed below;n15

8. Bars and taverns, in which smoking is permitted by Labor Code Section 6404.5(f), discussed below;n16

9. Theatrical production sites, if smoking is an integral part of the story in the theatrical production;

10. Medical research or treatment sites, if smoking is integral to the research and treatment being conducted;

11. Private residences, except for private residences licensed as family day care homes, during the hours of operation as family day care homes and in those areas where children are present;

12. Patient smoking areas in long-term health care facilities, as defined in Health and Safety Code Section 1418;

13. Breakrooms designated by employers for smoking, provided that all of the following conditions are met:

a. Air from the smoking room must be exhausted directly to the outside by an exhaust fan; air from the smoking room may not be recirculated to other parts of the building;

b. The employer must comply with any ventilation standard or other standard utilizing appropriate technology, including, but not limited to, mechanical, electronic, and biotechnical systems, adopted by the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board or the federal Environmental Protection Agency; if both adopt inconsistent standards, the ventilation standards of the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board shall be no less stringent than the standards adopted by the federal Environmental Protection Agency;

c. The smoking room must be located in a nonwork area where no one, as part of his or her work responsibilities, is required to enter;n17 and

d. There are sufficient nonsmoking breakrooms to accommodate nonsmokers;

14. Employers with a total of five or fewer employees, either full-time or part-time, may permit smoking if all of the following conditions are met:

a. The smoking area is not accessible to minors;

- b. All employees who enter the smoking area consent to permit smoking; no one, as part of his or her work responsibilities, may be required to work in an area where smoking is permitted;
- c. Air from the smoking area must be exhausted directly to the outside by an exhaust fan; air from the smoking area may not be recirculated to other parts of the building; and
- d. The employer must comply with any ventilation standard or other standard utilizing appropriate technology, including, but not limited to, mechanical, electronic, and biotechnical systems, adopted by the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board or the federal Environmental Protection Agency; if both adopt inconsistent standards, the ventilation standards of the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Board shall be no less stringent than the standards adopted by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Labor Code Section 6404.5(d)(14), permitting small employers to allow smoking if all employees in the smoking area consent, may not be construed to (1) supersede or render inapplicable any condition or limitation on smoking areas made applicable to specific types of business establishments by any other paragraph of Labor Code Section 6404.5(d), or (2) apply in lieu of any otherwise applicable paragraph of Labor Code Section 6404.5(d) that has become inoperative.ⁿ¹⁸ An employer who is determined by the Division to have used coercion to obtain an employee's consent to smoking by other employees under Labor Code Section 6404.5(d)(14) or who has required an employee to work in the smoking area shall be subject to the penalty provisions of Labor Code Section 6427.ⁿ¹⁹

The provisions of Labor Code Section 6404.5(d)(13) and (14) are not to be construed to require employers to provide reasonable accommodation to smokers, or to provide breakrooms for smokers or nonsmokers.ⁿ²⁰

[4] Penalties

Any violation of the prohibition set forth in Labor Code Section 6404.5(b) is an infraction punishable by a fine not to exceed one hundred dollars ($100) for a first violation, two hundred dollars ($200) for a second violation within one year, and five hundred dollars ($500) for a third and for each subsequent violation within one year. This penalty is to be enforced by local law enforcement agencies including, but not limited to, local health departments, as determined by the local governing body.ⁿ²¹

[5] Complaints to Division of Occupational Safety and Health

Notwithstanding Labor Code Section 6309, the Division of Occupational Safety and Health is not required to respond to any complaint regarding the smoking of tobacco products in an enclosed space at a place of employment, unless the employer has been found guilty pursuant to Labor Code Section 6404.5(j) of a third violation of Labor Code Section 6404.5(b) within the previous year.ⁿ²²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCompliance & DefensesLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & RightsWorkers' Compensation & SSDICompensabilityInjuriesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 6404.5(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 6404.5(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 6404.5(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 6404.5(b); see Lab. Code § 6404.5(d).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 6404.5(a), (g).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 6404.5(i).

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 6404.5(a), (i).

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 6404.5(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 6404.5(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 6404.5(c).

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 6404.5(d).

(n12)Footnote 12. For purposes of this paragraph, "lobby" means the common public area of an establishment in which registration and other similar or related transactions, or both, are conducted and in which the establishment's guests and members of the public typically congregate. Lab. Code § 6404.5(d)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. For purposes of this paragraph: (1) "Private smokers' lounge" means any enclosed area in or attached to a retail or wholesale tobacco shop that is dedicated to the use of tobacco products, including, but not limited to, cigars and pipes. (2) "Retail or wholesale tobacco shop" means any business establishment the main purpose of which is the sale of tobacco products, including, but not limited to, cigars, pipe tobacco, and smoking accessories. Lab. Code § 6404.5(d)(4).

(n14)Footnote 14. For purposes of this paragraph, "warehouse facility" means a warehouse facility with more than 100,000 square feet of total floor space, and 20 or fewer full-time employees working at the facility, but does not include any area within such a facility that is utilized as office space. Lab. Code § 6404.5(d)(6).

(n15)Footnote 15. For purposes of this paragraph, "gaming club" means any gaming club as defined in former Bus. & Prof. Code § 19802 or bingo facility as defined in Penal Code § 326.5 that restricts access to minors under 18 years of age. Lab. Code § 6404.5(d)(7).

(n16)Footnote 16. For purposes of this paragraph, "bar" or "tavern" means a facility primarily devoted to the serving of alcoholic beverages for consumption by guests on the premises, in which the serving of food is incidental. "Bar or tavern" includes those facilities located within a hotel, motel, or other similar transient occupancy establishment. However, when located within a building in conjunction with another use, including a restaurant, "bar" or "tavern" includes only those areas used primarily for the sale and service of alcoholic beverages. "Bar" or "tavern" does not include the dining areas of a restaurant, regardless of whether alcoholic beverages are served therein. Lab. Code § 6404.5(d)(7).

(n17)Footnote 17. For purposes of this paragraph, "work responsibilities" does not include any custodial or maintenance work carried out in the breakroom when it is unoccupied. Lab. Code § 6404.5(d)(13)(C).

(n18)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 6404.5(d)(14).

(n19)Footnote 19. Lab. Code § 6404.5(d)(14)(B).

(n20)Footnote 20. Lab. Code § 6404.5(e).

(n21)Footnote 21. Lab. Code § 6404.5(j).

(n22)Footnote 22. Lab. Code § 6404.5(k).

92 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
 CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
 Part F. REGULATION OF SPECIFIC HAZARDS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.82

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.82 Confined Spaces

Cal/OSHA regulations provide two separate sets of safety requirements for confined spaces. Confined space regulations for construction operations, agricultural operations, marine terminal operations, telecommunication manholes and unvented vaults, and grain handling facilities are set forth in Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 5158; all other confined space operations are governed by Title 8, California Code of Regulations, Section 5157.ⁿ¹

Generally, for purposes of these regulations, a confined space is one that has limited means of entry and exit and contains a potential for dangerous conditions to develop (such as fire, explosion, toxic gases, etc.).ⁿ² A confined space condition may exist or develop in locations such as silos, tanks, vats, vessels, tankers, boilers, compartments, ducts, sewers, pipelines, vaults, bins, tubs, and pits that an employee may be assigned to clean, inspect, repair, or construct.ⁿ³ A confined space hazard is particularly dangerous because the confined space condition may not be readily apparent to the senses, i.e., may not be visible or emit any detectable odor, and therefore must be anticipated by the employer and employees. Too often an employee may be overcome or asphyxiated by a confined space hazard, and rescuers without proper respiratory equipment and confined space procedures often are overcome and killed as well.

Before any employee is permitted to enter a confined space, the employer must develop and implement written, understandable operating and rescue procedures that must be provided to employees and used for employee training.ⁿ⁴ In addition, the employer must develop pre-entry procedures, in accordance with Title 8 California Code of Regulations Section 5157 or 5158, which may include a requirement that employees obtain a permit before entering a hazardous confined space.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCompliance & DefensesLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5156(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5157(b), 5158(b)(1).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5156(a), 5157(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5157, 5158.

93 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part F. REGULATION OF SPECIFIC HAZARDS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.83

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.83 Repetitive Motion Injury

[1] Scope and Application

Cal/OSHA regulations require an employer to institute a program designed to minimize repetitive motion injuries (RMIs) whenever two or more of its employees performing the same repetitive task have reported RMIs within a 12-month period, provided that the "triggering" RMIs are predominately work-related, the employees incurring the RMIs were performing a job, process, or operation of identical work activity and have been objectively diagnosed as having musculoskeletal injuries by a licensed physician.¹

[2] Program Designed to Minimize RMIs

The program to minimize RMIs must consist of each the following:²

- (1) An evaluation of each job process and operation of identical work activity for exposures that have caused RMIs.
- (2) Correction, or minimization to the extent feasible, of exposures. In controlling exposures causing RMIs, the employer must consider engineering controls such as work station redesign, adjustable fixtures and tool redesign, and administrative controls, such as job rotation, work pacing and work breaks.
- (3) Employee training, including explanations of exposures associated with RMIs, symptoms and consequences of RMIs, importance of reporting RMIs, and methods used to minimize RMIs.

[3] Satisfaction of Employer's Obligation

The employer is deemed to have satisfied its obligation to institute a program to minimize RMIs if it implements the three measures identified in the previous section, unless there is a measure known but not taken by the employer that is substantially certain to cause a greater reduction in RMIs without imposing additional unreasonable costs.³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthAdministrative ProceedingsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthCompliance & DefensesLabor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthDuties & Rights

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5110(a), (b); see Pulaski v. Occupational Safety & Health Stds. Bd. (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1315, 1325-1326, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 54 .

(n2)Footnote 2. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5110(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5110(c).

94 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part F. REGULATION OF SPECIFIC HAZARDS

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.84

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.84 APPENDIX--Topical List of Safety Orders and Related Statutes

[1] Aerial Passenger Tramways

Aerial passenger tramway safety. Lab. Code § 7340 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3150 et seq.

[2] Boilers, Tanks, and Pressure Vessels

Boilers and fired pressure vessels. Lab. Code § 7620 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 750 et seq.

Unfired pressure vessels (tanks). Lab. Code § 7620 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 450 et seq.

[3] Construction

General provisions and definitions. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1502 et seq.

Access and egress to construction site. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1629, 1630

Bins, bunkers, hoppers, and material storage. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1548, 1549

Construction elevators. Lab. Code § 7200 et seq.

Demolition. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1734 et seq.

Dusts, fumes, mists, vapors, and gases. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1528 et seq.

Electrical requirements for construction work. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1760

Erection and construction procedures. Lab. Code § 7250 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1709 et seq.

Excavations, trenches, and earthwork. Lab. Code §§ 6705-6707; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1539 et seq.

Explosives on construction sites. Lab. Code § 6710

Fire protection and prevention. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1920 et seq.

Floors, roofs, walls, openings. Lab. Code § 7100 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1632, 1633, 1635

Haulage and earth-moving. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1590 et seq.

Helicopter operations. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1900 et seq.

Hoists. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1604 et seq.

Ladders. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1675 et seq.

Miscellaneous construction tools and equipment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1693 et seq.

Nonionizing radiation. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1801

Oxygen, acetylene, and fuel gas. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1740 et seq.

Pile driving. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1600, 1601

Powder-actuated tools. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1684 et seq.

Railings, ramps, runways, stairwells, and stairs. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1620 et seq.

Rock drilling. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1538

Roofing operations and equipment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1723 et seq.

Safety belts and nets. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1669 et seq.

Scaffolding. Lab. Code § 7150 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 1635.1 et seq.

Vehicles, traffic control, flaggers, barricades, and warning signs at construction sites. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1597-1599

Water, construction work over or near. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1602, 1603

[4] Cranes and Hoisting Equipment

Cranes, derricks, boom-type excavators, and other hoisting equipment. Lab. Code §§ 6704, 7370 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4884 et seq.

[5] Diving Operations

Diving operations generally. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 6050 et seq.

Commercial diving operations. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 6059 et seq.

[6] Electrical Safety

High-voltage electrical safety. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 2700 et seq.

Low-voltage electrical safety. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 2300 et seq.

[7] Elevators

Elevator safety. Lab. Code § 7300 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3000 et seq.

[7A] Ergonomics

Repetitive motion injury. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5110

[8] General Machinery and Equipment[a] General Machine Safety

Power transmission equipment, prime movers, machines, and machine parts. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3940 et seq.

Compressed gas and air equipment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4649 et seq.

[b] Points of Operation and Other Hazardous Parts of Machinery

Scope and general definitions. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4184 et seq.

Chemical industry machines. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4565 et seq.

Compaction equipment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4350 et seq.

Cotton gins and seed cotton processing machines. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4640 et seq.

Die-casting machines. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4261 et seq.

Food and tobacco machinery. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4530 et seq.

Laundry and dry cleaning equipment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4480 et seq.

Leather and composition goods machines. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4510 et seq.

Metalworking machines. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4226 et seq.

Paper converting and printing machines. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4431 et seq.

Plastic processing machinery. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 4600, 4601

Power-operated presses. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4189 et seq.

Pulp, paper, and paperboard mills. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4401 et seq.

Refuse and trash collection equipment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4342 et seq.

Rubber and composition working machines. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4580 et seq.

Stone, clay, and glass working machines. 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 4625, 4626

Textile machinery. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4456 et seq.

Woodworking machines and equipment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4296 et seq.

[9] General Physical Conditions and Structures

General provisions. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3200 et seq.

Definitions. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3207

Access, work space, and work areas. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3270 et seq.

Powered platforms for exterior building maintenance. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3293 et seq.

Special design requirements. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3241 et seq.

Standard specifications for places of employment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3209 et seq.

Window cleaning. Lab. Code § 7325 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3281 et seq.

[10] General Plant Equipment and Special Operations

Abrasive wheels. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3575 et seq.

Agricultural operations. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3436 et seq.

Automotive lifts. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3541 et seq.

Electric welding. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4850 et seq.

Engines and compressors. Lab. Code §§ 6701-6703; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3511 et seq.

Gas systems for welding and cutting. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 4794 et seq.

Hand and portable powered tools and equipment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3555 et seq.

Marine terminal operations. Lab. Code § 7600 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3459 et seq.

Tree work, maintenance, or removal. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3420 et seq.

Vats, pans, bins, bunkers, hoppers, and similar containers and vessels. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3480 et seq.

[11] General Safe Practices and Personal Protection

Fire protection. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 6150 et seq.

Labor camps. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3350

Miscellaneous safe practices. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3300 et seq.

Noise exposure and protection. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5095 et seq.

Personal protective clothing and equipment for firefighters. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3401 et seq.

Personal safety devices and safeguards. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3380 et seq.

Sanitation. Lab. Code § 6712; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3360 et seq.

[12] Hazardous Materials and Substances

Confined space hazards. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5156 et seq.

Dusts, fumes, mists, vapors, and gases. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5139 et seq.

Explosives and pyrotechnics. Lab. Code §§ 6710, 6712; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5327 et seq.

Flammable liquids, gases, and vapors. Lab. Code § 7800 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5415 et seq.

Fumigation. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5221 et seq.

Labeling of substances. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5226 et seq.

Other hazardous substances and processes. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5160 et seq.

Radiation and radioactivity. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5075 et seq.

Regulated carcinogens. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 5200 et seq.

[13] Logging and Sawmill Operations

Logging and sawmill safety orders. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 6248 et seq.

[14] Mining and Tunneling Operations

Mine and tunnel safety. Lab. Code §§ 7500, 7950 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 6950 et seq., 8400 et seq.

[15] Mobile Equipment and Auxiliaries

Amusement rides. Lab. Code § 7900 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3900 et seq.

Elevating work platforms and aerial devices. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3636 et seq.

Industrial railroads. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3730 et seq.

Industrial trucks, tractors, haulage vehicles, and earth-moving equipment. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3649 et seq.

Mobile ladder stands and scaffolds (towers). 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3620 et seq.

Transportation of employees and materials. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3700 et seq.

Gantry trucks (straddle carriers). 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3801 et seq.

[16] Petroleum Operations

Drilling and production. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 6500 et seq.

Refining, transportation, and handling. Lab. Code § 7850 et seq.; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 6750 et seq.

[17] Railroad Operations

Jurisdiction of Division and Public Utilities Commission. Lab. Code §§ 6800-6802.

Operation personnel. Lab. Code § 6900 et seq.

Safety devices and trains. Lab. Code § 6950 et seq.

[18] Ship Building, Repairing, and Breaking

Ship building, repairing, and breaking safety. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 8345 et seq.

[19] Telecommunications Operations

Telecommunications safety. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 8600 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral Overview

95 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part F. REGULATION OF SPECIFIC HAZARDS

2-21 California Employment Law §§ 21.85 through 21.89

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 21.85[Reserved]

96 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part G. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.90

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.90 Legal Texts

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Pt. VII, Occupational Safety and Health (Matthew Bender).

Hogan, Hogan & Moran, Occupational Safety and Health Act.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral Overview

97 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES
CHAPTER 21 Occupational Safety and Health Regulation
Part G. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-21 California Employment Law § 21.91

AUTHOR: By Suzanne P. Marria, J.D.

§ 21.91 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

Tanenbaum & Henderson, STD Concern Has Cal/OSHA Watching Porn, 2009 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 361 (October 2009).

Tanenbaum & Kolek, Expedited Abatement Appeal Hearing Process Coming Soon to a Cal/OSHA Proceeding Near You, 2009 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 170 (May 2009).

Tanenbaum, A Preview: Hot Issues for Cal/OSHA in 2008, 2008 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 74 (February 2008).

Tanenbaum, The California Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board Limits the Scope of the Multi-Employer Regulation, 2007 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 195 (July 2007).

Belin, Cowan, Kristovich & Dominquez, Criminal Enforcement of California's Occupational Health Laws: A Preliminary Analysis of Occupational Carcinogens Control Act Violations, 8 Am. J. Crim. L. 43 (1980).

Caso, Nonconsensual Cal/OSHA Inspections After Salwasser, 14 Pac. L.J. 913 (1983).

Geis & Clay, Criminal Enforcement of California's Occupational Carcinogens Control Act, 53 Temp. L.Q. 1067 (1980).

Hunter, California Occupational Safety and Health Act: An Overview, 50 L.A. B. Bull. 303 (1975).

Tanenbaum, How to Implement S.B. 198 Injury and Illness Prevention Programs, 1991 Cal. Employment Law Reporter 343.

Tanenbaum, The "Be a Manager, Go to Jail" Act: Attempting to Enforce Workplace Safety Through Criminal Prosecution, 1991 Cal. Employment Law Reporter 305.

Comment, Criminal Probable Cause in Administrative Searches Under California OSHA: Mandated or Prevented, 11 Pac. L.J. 1019 (1980).

Comment, Unconstitutional California OSHA Searches: The Employer Strikes Back, 12 Pac. L.J. 1171 (1981).

Note, California Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973, 9 Loy. L.A. L. Rev. 905 (1976).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawOccupational Safety & HealthGeneral Overview

98 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION II EMPLOYEE ILLNESSES AND INJURIES

Chapters 22 - 29 RESERVED

2-22 - 29 California Employment Law Chapters 22 - 29

RESERVED

Chapters 22 - 29 RESERVED

99 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES

CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees

2-30 California Employment Law 30.syn

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.syn Synopsis to Chapter 30: Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees

§ 30.01 Theories of Direct and Vicarious Employer Liability

§ 30.02 Employer's Own Negligence or Fault as Basis for Liability

[1] Conduct Authorized, Directed, or Ratified by Employer

[a] Authorization or Direction

[b] Ratification

[2] Negligent Hiring or Retention of Unsuitable Employee

[3] Negligent Hiring, Training, or Supervision of Employee

[4] Negligent Misrepresentation Regarding Risk of Harm

[5] Negligent Entrustment

[6] Employer as Internet Provider

§ 30.03 Vicarious Liability of Employer Based on Respondeat Superior

[1] Generally

[2] Bases for Imposing Respondeat Superior Liability

§ 30.04 Who Is an Employee for Purposes of Employer Liability

[1] Generally

[2] Employer's Right of Control

[3] Employees and Agents Distinguished

[4] Employees and Independent Contractors Distinguished

[a] Generally

[b] Building Contractors

[5] Borrowed Employees: Special and Dual Employments

§ 30.05 Employee Conduct Within the Scope of Employment

[1] Generally

[2] Tests Applied to Determine Whether Conduct Was Within Scope of Employment

[3] Applicability of Workers' Compensation Cases in Defining Scope of Employment

[4] Time and Place Issues

[a] Going and Coming Rule

[i] Generally

[ii] Exception--Special Errand Rule

[iii] Exception--When Travel Inherent in Job Duties

[iv] Exception--When Employer Pays for Employee Commute Time

[v] Exception--When Employer Requires Use of Employee Vehicle

[vi] Exception--When Use of Car Gives Some Incidental Benefit to Employer

[vii] Exception--Special Risk Rule

[b] Social Functions

[c] Off-Duty and Break Time

[d] Commercial Traveler Rule

[e] Premises Line Rule

[5] Employee Personal Business Departures From the Scope of Employment

[6] Effect of Employee Violation of Employer's Rules or Instructions

[7] Employee's Use of Instrumentalities and Facilities of Employer

§ 30.06 Employer Liability for Intentional Torts

[1] Generally

[2] Specific Torts

[a] Assault and Battery

[b] Sexual Harassment

[c] Other Intentional Torts

§ 30.07 Employer Liability for Punitive Damages Under Civil Code Section 3294

[1] General Requirements for Employer Liability

[2] Additional Requirements for Holding Corporate Employers Liable for Punitive Damages

[3] What Constitutes Authorization or Ratification

§ 30.08 Defenses to Respondeat Superior Actions

[1] Generally

[2] Collateral Estoppel

[3] Firefighter's Rule

§ 30.09 Indemnity Issues

[1] Employer's Right to Indemnity When Employer Is Vicariously Liable

[2] Employer's Right to Indemnity if Employer is Also Directly Liable

[3] Employee's Right to Indemnity

[a] In General

[b] Waiver of Right to Indemnity

§ 30.10 Liability for Actions of Independent Contractors

[1] General Rule of Nonliability

[2] Exceptions to Rule of Nonliability

[a] Generally

[b] Peculiar Risk Doctrine

[i] Rule of Liability and Rationale

[ii] No Vicarious Liability to Employee of Independent Contractor

[iii] What Constitutes Peculiar Risk

[iv] No Immunity for Hirer's Own Negligent Selection, Control, and Supervision of Independent Contractor

[c] Inherently Dangerous Activities

[d] Nondelegable Duty

[e] Vicarious Liability for Nuisance or Trespass

[3] Intentional Torts

[4] Collateral Negligence

§ 30.11 Respondeat Superior and Proposition 51

§§ 30.12 through 30.19 [Reserved]

§ 30.20 Legal Texts

§ 30.21 Encyclopedias

§ 30.22 Law Reviews and Periodicals

By Mary Vail, J.D.n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Ms. Vail is a consultant on employee rights, labor law, and sex discrimination in Oakland, California.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

100 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES

CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees

2-30 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

Scope

By Mary Vail, J.D.n* SCOPE

This chapter discusses an employer's tort liability to third parties (that is, persons other than the employer or its employees) based on the conduct of its employees. The chapter discusses tort theories involving fault on the part of the employer (such as authorization or ratification, negligent hiring or retention, and negligent supervision or training), as well as vicarious liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior. The chapter also discusses the rules governing whether an individual will be deemed an employee or an independent contractor for purposes of imposing tort liability on an alleged employer. Finally, the chapter covers employer defenses to third-party actions and indemnity issues.

For discussion of contractual liability of employers for transactions entered into by employees with third parties, see Chapter 31. For discussion of liability of employers (and coemployees) for work-related injuries sustained by employees, see Chapter 20.

For forms for use in actions by third parties against employers for damages caused by employees, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Chapter 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts (Matthew Bender).

For discussion of the liability of public entity employers and their employees to third parties based on the acts or omissions of public employees, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 60 (Matthew Bender).

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Ms. Vail is a consultant on employee rights, labor law, and sex discrimination in Oakland, California.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

101 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.01

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.01 Theories of Direct and Vicarious Employer Liability

An employer may be liable in tort to third persons for the conduct of employees on either of two bases. First, an employer is liable if the employer's own conduct constitutes a tort. For example, an employer may have been negligent in its selection, training, or supervision of employees and agents, or in its promulgation of work rules and business procedures that created a risk of harm to others.ⁿ¹ Tortious conduct engaged in by employees in response to employer direction or prior authorization is another form of liability deemed to originate from the employer's own conduct.ⁿ² Similarly, tortious conduct of an employee followed by ratification of that conduct by the employer makes the employee's act the employer's own, and liability imposed for ratified acts is properly considered direct rather than vicarious.ⁿ³

Second, even if the employer is not directly at fault, the employer may be vicariously liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the torts of his or her employees or agents committed within the scope of the employment or agency.ⁿ⁴

Direct liability and vicarious liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior are not mutually exclusive. Depending on the facts in a particular case, the third-party plaintiff may be able to recover under either or both theories.ⁿ⁵ However, if liability is predicated on respondeat superior, a determination of the nonliability of the employee exonerates the employer also.ⁿ⁶ In contrast, an employer may be directly liable if its own conduct is actionable, even if vicarious liability is precluded by the nonliability of the employee.ⁿ⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityGeneral
OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Purdie (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 57, 69, 193 Cal. Rptr. 248 (negligent hiring); see also discussion in § 30.02[2], [3].

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Jameson v. Gavett (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 646, 651-652, 71 P.2d 937 ; see also discussion in § 30.02[1][a].

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 174-175, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 ; see also discussion in § 30.02[1][b].

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 967, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 ; Inter Mountain Mortgage, Inc. v. Sulimen (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1439-1440, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790 ; Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617-618, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143 . For discussion of vicarious liability generally, see § 30.03. For discussion of when an employee's acts are within the scope of employment, see § 30.05.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Srithong v. Total Investment Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 721, 726-728, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672 (hirer of independent contractor may be both directly and vicariously liable); see also Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 950-951, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Korens v. R.W. Zukin Corp. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1054, 1062, 261 Cal. Rptr. 137 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Lehmuth v. Long Beach Unified Sch. Dist. (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 544, 2 Cal. Rptr. 279, 348 P.2d 887 ; see discussion in § 30.02[1][a].

102 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.02

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.02 Employer's Own Negligence or Fault as Basis for Liability

[1] Conduct Authorized, Directed, or Ratified by Employer

[a] Authorization or Direction

An employer's negligent exercise of its authority to direct its enterprise and employees can generate liability for the employer based on the employer's own fault.ⁿ¹ For example, particular employer policies or procedures may be insufficient or inadequate or otherwise represent a danger to third persons. In such a case, the employer may be directly liable for injuries caused by the policy or procedure, whether or not a particular employee is negligent in its implementation.ⁿ²

In Coffee v. McDonnell-Douglas,ⁿ³ an employee doctor relied on inadequate employer procedures regarding blood test results in authorizing the employment of a man who had a significant disability. The jury absolved the doctor, but found the employer to be directly liable.ⁿ⁴ In McGuigan v. Southern Pacific,ⁿ⁵ the employer misrepresented the employee's job responsibilities in obtaining a doctor's termination of sick leave. The court found that whether or not the doctor was an employee was irrelevant because the employer was directly liable because of its incorrect description of the duties of the job.^{n5.1}

An employer may also be directly liable if the employee is following the express directions of the employer.^{n5.2} In Jensen v. Southern Pacific,^{n5.3} a train was being operated by an employee engineer at a speed and according to a schedule determined by the employer railroad when it struck a motor vehicle. Under these circumstances, the jury could absolve the engineer of liability, thereby precluding the imposition of vicarious liability on the railroad, without exonerating the railroad for its own negligence.^{n5.4}

[b] Ratification

An employer's ratification of employee conduct can be viewed as a postconduct authorization of the employee's acts. By ratifying an employee's previously committed torts, the employer makes the employee's tortious conduct the employer's own conduct.ⁿ⁶ If an employee's tort, negligent or intentional, is ratified by the employer and is committed within the course and scope of employee's employment, the employer is subject to both direct and vicarious liability.ⁿ⁷

Furthermore, employer ratification of an employee's intentional torts may potentially render the employer liable for punitive damages.ⁿ⁸ However, counsel should note that, although (as discussed below) retention of an employee may support a finding of ratification of the employee's acts for the purposes of imposing liability for compensatory damages, it may not be sufficient by itself to impose punitive damages on the employer.ⁿ⁹ For discussion of the recovery of punitive damages from employers based on the conduct of employees, see § 30.07.

Various forms of employer conduct, including retention of the tortfeasor in employment, may constitute direct and circumstantial evidence of ratification. In one case,ⁿ¹⁰ for example, plaintiff had a series of verbal policy disputes with defendant union's staff business agents. The agents threatened plaintiff at the union hall, and subsequently assaulted plaintiff away from the union premises. Plaintiff reported the assault to union officials, unsuccessfully pursued internal union grievance procedures, and subsequently commenced a civil suit against the union. Following the commencement of plaintiff's civil action, plaintiff had difficulty obtaining job referrals through the union hiring hall, and his principal witness in the civil action was himself assaulted and then expelled from the union. Throughout the proceedings, the business agents who had assaulted plaintiff remained in the defendant union's employ. The court of appeal held that by retaining a wrongdoer in service with full knowledge of the employee's wrongful conduct, the employer ratified the employee's torts.ⁿ¹¹ Moreover, ratification was also shown by the union's inactive pursuit of plaintiff's internal grievance, reduced job referrals to plaintiff, and the assault and expulsion from the union of plaintiff's witness.ⁿ¹²

Other cases have also relied on the employer's retention of the tortfeasor in its employ, despite knowledge of the tortious conduct, to support a finding that the employer ratified the conduct.^{n12.1} On the other hand, even if the employer retains the tortfeasor in its employ, the employer may behave in such a way as to make clear it did not ratify the tortious conduct.ⁿ¹³

In Plancarte v. Guardsmark, ^{n13.1} the court found that the employer's payment of the employee's attorney fees in a action by a third party against the employer and employee based on the employee's conduct did not logically constitute the employer's ratification of the employee's allegedly wrongful acts. If the employee could show his acts were not tortious, no liability would attach to the employer at all, under the respondeat superior doctrine or for negligent hiring/supervision. It was therefore in the employer's interest that the employee have adequate and reliable representation. If the employee were not individually represented, there could be a greater likelihood of poor self-representation or default, making the employer's defense of the case significantly more difficult. The fact that the employer pursued and ultimately prevailed on an alternate defense theory, i.e., nonliability under respondeat superior for an employee's sexual assault, did not restrict it from having all available defenses well advocated. Additionally, Labor Code Section 2802 required the employer to indemnify the employee for all the employee necessarily expended or lost in direct consequence of the discharge of his duties, which obligated the employer to pay any judgment entered against the employee for conduct arising out of the employment and to defend the employee when sued by a third person for such conduct.^{n13.2} Acts necessary for an employee's comfort and health while at work, including using the bathroom during a workshift, during which the allegedly tortious conduct occurred, even though personal and not direct acts of service to the employer, did not take the employee outside the scope of the employment. Although the nature of the employee's conduct against the third party as alleged in her complaint placed it outside the scope of his employment, there was no certainty the third party would succeed in proving her allegations. Given the reasonable possibility that a jury could find that the employee's conduct toward the third party while performing acts for his personal comfort during the course of his employment was not tortious, the employer could understandably elect to provide him a defense rather than await the outcome of the trial.^{n13.3} Finally, the employee denied any wrongful acts to the employer and, insofar as he pled nolo contendere to a criminal charge, did not admit wrongful acts via a guilty plea. The employer also suspended the employee immediately after the incident and terminated him after the criminal conviction, which militated against ratification of the acts he allegedly committed.^{n13.4}

[2] Negligent Hiring or Retention of Unsuitable Employee

An employer can be liable to a third party for the employer's negligence in hiring or retaining an employee who is incompetent or unfit if the employee tortiously injures the third party.ⁿ¹⁴ Liability under this theory requires more than just the existence of an employer-employee relationship. In the case of negligent hiring, the employee must, prior to the hiring, have had reason to believe that an undue risk of harm to others would exist because of the employment.ⁿ¹⁵

In Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Purdie,ⁿ¹⁶ defendant's employee shot a third party following a verbal argument. The third party commenced his action against defendant on a negligent hiring/negligent supervision theory, and alleged, among other things, that the employer knew before hiring the employee that the employee was unfit for any public contact job because of his vicious and violent character. In a declaratory relief action brought by the defendant's liability insurer, the court of appeal held that the third party had stated a cause of action against the defendant-employer that was covered by the insurance policy, based on the negligent hiring theory.^{n16.1}

On the other hand, in Flores v. AutoZone West, Inc.,^{n16.2} the appellate court upheld the grant of summary judgment to the employer on the plaintiff's claim that the employer was liable for negligently hiring an employee with a juvenile record to work in a position in which he interacted with customers, which resulted in the employee's hitting the plaintiff, who was a customer, in the head with a metal pipe. Although the employee had a prior juvenile delinquency record, the employer had no legal duty to conduct the sort of thorough background checks, or administer the sort of personality screening tests, that might have yielded the information about his violent nature. Further, the confidentiality of juvenile records is protected by law,ⁿ¹⁷ and recognizing a duty on the part of an employer to uncover those records would be inconsistent with that confidentiality policy. There were also no triable issues of fact relating to whether the employer was negligent in retaining the employee despite his record of prior discipline, because the employee had only one incident of misconduct toward a customer prior to the incident at issue, which occurred fully three years earlier than the instant altercation, and there was no evidence of violence. While an employer might reasonably choose to terminate an employee who was rude to even one customer, it did not follow that an employer necessarily acted unreasonably if it chose not to do so. Finally, there were no triable issues of fact that the employer was negligent in its training of the employee, because there was no reasonable basis to conclude that the employee's act of criminally assaulting a customer was the result of the employer's failure to make clear that such conduct would not be considered an acceptable employee act.

For the plaintiff to prevail on a negligent hiring or retention theory, he or she must establish that the employer knew or should have known of the employee's unsuitable characteristics before the employee injured the third party.^{n17.1} For example, in Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹⁸ plaintiff alleged that defendant's broadcast technician, who had assaulted plaintiff in a bar, had "violent propensities" of which defendant was aware. In support of its summary judgment motion, defendant presented declarations from the employee's supervisor stating that the employee was "efficient and hardworking" and had not demonstrated any propensity towards fighting or excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages. Plaintiff abandoned the negligent hiring theory on appeal, but the court indicated that bare allegations based on plaintiff's own experience with the tortfeasor will not establish the employer's knowledge, a prerequisite to liability based on negligence in hiring.ⁿ¹⁹ An employer is liable when it knew or should have known that hiring that employee posed a particular risk of harm and that harm occurred.^{n19.1}

Once the employer-employee relationship ends, the employer no longer has a duty of care to third parties for conduct of a former employee occurring after the end of the employer-employee relationship. For example, an employer does not owe a plaintiff a duty of care in a negligent hiring and retention action for an injury or other harm inflicted by a former employee on the plaintiff, even though the employee initially met the plaintiff while employed by the employer.^{n19.2}

An employer concerned with limiting its direct liability under the negligent hiring cause of action should exercise care in designing employee selection procedures, and then take reasonable steps to be sure to adhere to the proscribed procedures. Although an employer must exercise care in employee selection and retention, the employer must also be careful not to devise and apply selection standards that violate an employee's or job applicant's privacy rights, that discriminate on the basis of race, color, sex, or other prohibited bases, or that cause overbroad inquiry into a job applicant's background. For discussion of prohibitions on discrimination against job applicants and employees generally, see Chapters 40-44. For discussion of job applicants' and employees' rights to privacy in the employment context, see Chapters 50-51.

The negligent hiring theory of liability applies to the selection of independent contractors, as well as to the hiring of employees.²⁰ For discussion of the potential liability of the hirer of an independent contractor, see § 30.10.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The Capital Cities case^{20.1} presents a number of issues for employment law practitioners. The facts describe extreme conduct by an employee of Capital Cities. There can be a tendency under such circumstances to focus upon a means to find a remedy for the perceived wrong rather than upon a means to craft an analytical rule that is true to the letter and spirit of the legal authorities from which the rule is derived. Here, it is possible that no reviewing court would have reached a different conclusion--that Doe was an applicant for employment and that Capital Cities was liable for the sexually harassing conduct of its casting director. In this instance, however, it is arguable that the appellate panel fashioned far broader rules of liability than were strictly necessary or justified.

For example, in holding that Doe was an applicant, the panel cited to an already broad definition found in the regulations under the FEHA and stated that "[a]n applicant is any individual who otherwise indicates a specific desire to an employer ... to be considered for employment." The opinion makes no mention of a variety of lawful restrictions that employers may place on the application process which yield a narrower definition of "applicant." These lawful restrictions include, among others: (1) minimum age rules for minors who are not permitted to work near certain types of machinery; (2) time limits that obligate applicants to make applications only on certain days of the week or only during certain hours of the day; and (3) reasonable skill requirements, such as accounting skills for an accounting position. Again, Doe may have been an applicant to Capital Cities even under a definition of greatly heightened specificity. However, it is confusing (and contrary to considerable authority) to depict every unsolicited request for employment as an "application."

In addition, in holding that the casting director (Marshall) was an "agent" of Capital Cities, the appellate panel has greatly confused an already complicated area of FEHA law. Simply stated, the FEHA imposes strict liability upon employers for the harassing conduct of its "agents or supervisors." Presumably, if the two words "agent" and "supervisor" had identical meanings, the statute would contain a needless redundancy. It is more likely (and more appropriate from the perspective of statutory interpretation) that "agent" and "supervisor" have different meanings. Rather than struggle with this issue, however, the Doe opinion makes a critical assumption:

If the Act confers protection to "applicants," as it does, it is obvious that the counterpart to the position of supervisor must be the person to whom application for employment is made. Prior to employment the applicant has no "supervisor" so that logically, under the Act, the "agent" of the employer is the one designated to receive and process applications.

Despite the logic that the appellate court believed it had followed, this statement is clearly incorrect. The FEHA does not say, for example, that harassment by a "supervisor" is actionable only if the harasser is the "supervisor" of the aggrieved party. There is strict liability if an employee is harassed by any supervisor. The FEHA treats "supervisor" as a status, not as a person who must have some sort of work relationship to the harassee.

Thus, in Doe, the election not to focus upon Marshall's status as a "supervisor" of Capital Cities and to instead focus upon his status as an "agent" creates at least two significant analytical problems. First, Marshall may have satisfied the definition of "supervisor," thus obviating the need to break new ground on the definition of "agent." The opinion, however, provides no facts as to authority that Marshall held at Capital Cities and readers can only speculate. Second, the definition of "agent" in Doe now suggests that anyone who engages in harassment of applicants can impose strict liability on his or her employer so long as that person "acts for and in place of the principal for the purpose of bringing him into legal relations with third parties." The unanswered questions that flow from this standard, however, are many and disturbing: Who are such persons? All recruiting personnel? Only recruiting personnel who have the authority to make hiring decisions? All recruiting personnel who have the authority to make or recommend hiring decisions? Is there now strict liability for "agent-applicant" harassment but no strict liability for "agent-agent" harassment where the two agents are co-workers? Doe did not clearly have to open this Pandora's box and it is unfortunate that it did so. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

In Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc., n20.2 plaintiffs alleged that the employer was liable for negligent retention/negligent supervision because the employer allegedly knew that an employee was using its computer to accomplish his cyberthreats to plaintiffs, it refused to terminate his employment, and it failed to take measures to prevent their recurrence. The court however, applied the seven factors of Rowland v. Christian, n20.3 to find that the plaintiffs failed to establish that the employer owed them a legal duty. Plaintiffs had no business relationship with the employer, and there was no evidence the employee's cyberthreats directed toward plaintiffs arose out of or were in any way connected with his employment. Plaintiffs admitted that they sought no treatment for their alleged emotional injuries. There was little evidence the employer's conduct had any closeness to plaintiffs' alleged injuries, because, at most, the employer supplied the employee with an office computer by which its employee, unbeknownst to the employer, accessed his personal Internet account and sent threatening messages. There was no moral blame in the employer's conduct evidenced by the record. There was no significant policy of preventing future harm that would result from a finding of duty; a finding of duty might have a significant chilling effect on Internet free speech and encourage extreme employer oversight of employee activities, and the burden imposed on the employer would be enormous. However, assuming the existence of a duty, there was no evidence that the employer breached a duty of care with respect to the supervision or retention of Moore as an employee. The employer had no knowledge of the content of any threatening e-mails or postings before receiving an arrest affidavit for the employee, and the employer did not learn that the employee had used its computer systems to access his personal Internet account to send threatening messages until the day the employer placed the employee on administrative leave, leading to his ultimate termination a few days later. The employer's internal investigations prompted by the FBI's initial inquiry and conducted after the employee's 2003 arrest did not yield information that the employee had used the employer's computer system to send inappropriate messages over the Internet. Even assuming the employer knew or should have known that the employee had allegedly used its computers to send threatening e-mails and postings over the Internet and took no measures to prevent a recurrence of the threats, there was no evidence the employee in fact used the employer's system after that point to threaten plaintiffs, so any negligent supervision/retention was not the cause of plaintiffs' claimed injuries.

[3] Negligent Hiring, Training, or Supervision of Employee

Liability for negligent hiring, training, and supervision is based on the reasoning that if an enterprise hires individuals with characteristics which pose a danger to customers or other employees, the enterprise should bear the loss caused by its incompetent or unfit employees.ⁿ²¹ There is little California authority concerning an employer's potential liability based on negligent hiring, training, or supervision of employees. In an older case,ⁿ²² the employer kept a gun at his liquor store out of fear of crime, and apparently informed his employees of the gun's location. One of defendant's employees shot the plaintiff with this gun. There was no evidence of training or cautionary directives to defendant's employees concerning the gun, and the plaintiff commenced his action on multiple causes of action including "negligent supervision."ⁿ²³ The negligent supervision cause of action was not, however, expressly addressed by the court of appeal.ⁿ²⁴

More recently, in Baptist v. Robinson,^{n24.1} the court addressed the liability of a winery for injuries to a motorcycle rider caused by an employee's negligence in failing to secure an agricultural bin owned by the winery that fell off a truck owned and driven by employee on his way to pick up grapes to make wine for himself. The plaintiff alleged that the winery was directly negligent on the basis of the winery's failure to instruct its employees on safe methods of securing those bins in an open truck. However, on its motion for summary judgment, the winery showed that the specific type of bin the employee used was not intended to be used to transport harvested grapes, and that transporting grapes by means of those bins in pickup trucks was not a typical or common aspect of the employment duties at the winery. Thus, it was not reasonably foreseeable that someone would be harmed by that type of bin being used in a way it was not intended to be used. Therefore there was no duty of care on the winery's part to prevent harm by providing training to its employees in safe methods of securing those bins for transportation in open trucks.

Some out-of-state and secondary authorities indicate that an employer with inadequate training and supervision programs is subject to direct liability to third parties whose injuries are caused by such employer fault.ⁿ²⁵ An employer is liable when it knew, or should have known that hiring that employee posed a particular risk of harm and that harm occurred.ⁿ²⁶

In cases in which the employee was an off-duty police officer, some out-of-state courts have found police departments liable for the employee's acts of violence against members of the general public. The departments were held liable in cases in which the employees' acts were made possible by the use of the officers' service revolvers, which they were required to carry at all times.ⁿ²⁷ However, a California court recently found a drunk off-duty police officer not liable for the shooting of his wife utilizing a gun he had purchased as a cadet at the police academy.ⁿ²⁸ Noting that there is no California case imposing liability for negligent hiring or supervision in favor of an employee's family, the court explained that failing to require a connection between the employment and the injured party would result in the employer becoming an insurer of the safety of every person with whom its employees come into contact, regardless of their relationship to the employer. The court concluded that although there may be such a connection between an officer required to be armed at all times and members of the public, there is no such relationship between an officer not required to be armed and his or her family.ⁿ²⁹

[4] Negligent Misrepresentation Regarding Risk of Harm

The California Supreme Court recently held that three former employers were potentially liable in tort to a third party who had been harmed by the former employee.ⁿ³⁰ The basis of the former employers' liability was their unconditional praise of the former employee in their letters of recommendation, notwithstanding their alleged knowledge of sexual misconduct complaints against the employee.ⁿ³¹ In finding potential liability, the Court relied upon Sections 310 and 311 of the Restatement Second of Torts, which pertain to liability for physical harm caused by the intentional conduct of an actor who makes a misrepresentation that he or she knows, or should know, is likely to induce action involving an unreasonable risk of physical harm.ⁿ³² The Court concluded by emphasizing that writers of letters of recommendation owe both prospective employers and third persons a duty not to misrepresent facts about a former employee if the misrepresentations would present "a substantial, foreseeable risk of physical injury to the prospective employer or third persons."ⁿ³³ However, the Court pointed out that absent physical injury or some special relationship between the parties, no such duty of care extends to third persons for misrepresentations in letters of recommendation.ⁿ³⁴

1. An employer normally is under no duty to disclose information regarding the credentials or character of a former employee. Therefore, "no comment" letters that reveal only dates of employment and positions held are generally permissible.
2. However, a writer of a letter of recommendation owes a duty to prospective employers and third persons not to misrepresent the facts in describing the qualifications and character of a former employee, if making these recommendations would present a substantial, foreseeable risk of physical injury to the prospective employer or third persons. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The Randi W. n35 case would appear to stand for at least the following propositions:

1. An employer normally is under no duty to disclose information regarding the credentials or character of a former employee. Therefore, "no comment" letters that reveal only dates of employment and positions held are generally permissible.
2. However, a writer of a letter of recommendation owes a duty to prospective employers and third persons not to misrepresent the facts in describing the qualifications and character of a former employee, if making these recommendations would present a substantial, foreseeable risk of physical injury to the prospective employer or third persons. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[5] Negligent Entrustment

In Jen-Weld, Inc. v. Superior Court, n36 the court analyzed the potential for an employer to be liable to a third party for injuries caused by an employee through negligent entrustment of a vehicle or other instrumentality. In Jen-Weld, the employer made a pretrial admission of respondeat superior liability for any employee negligence in the allegedly wrongful death of plaintiffs' decedent. The court held that the employer was entitled to summary adjudication, because negligent entrustment should not be considered to be a separate independent tort, but rather a theory of vicarious liability.ⁿ³⁷ Once the employer admittedly becomes vicariously liable for the negligent acts of the employee, there is no remaining basis at a future trial to attempt to prove negligence of the employer itself, such as through knowledge of the employee's prior accidents, because the subject liability has already been adequately and completely established, and because only the single injury claimed should be compensated.ⁿ³⁸

The elements of a cause of action for negligent entrustment of a vehicle are as follows:ⁿ³⁹

- The driver was negligent in operating the vehicle.
- The defendant was an owner of the vehicle operated by the driver.
- The owner knew, or should have known, that the driver was incompetent or unfit to drive the vehicle.
- The owner permitted the driver to use the vehicle.
- The driver's incompetence or unfitness to drive was a substantial factor in causing harm to the injured party.

Negligent entrustment evidence of the employee's prior accidents may not be presented against the employer when the employer has admitted to vicarious liability for the employee's conduct.ⁿ⁴⁰

[6] Employer as Internet Provider

In Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc., n41 an employee sent anonymous messages from work by e-mails over the Internet and made postings on Internet sites threatening plaintiffs. Plaintiffs sued the employee and his employer for both intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress. The Court of Appeal found that the employer was immune under the Communications Decency Act as the provider of an interactive computer service.ⁿ⁴² There are three essential elements a defendant must establish to claim § 230 immunity:ⁿ⁴³

- The defendant was a provider or user of an interactive computer service;
- The cause of action treated the defendant as a publisher or speaker of information;
- The information at issue was provided by another information content provider.

In Delfino, the employer was immune under the CDA because it qualified as a provider or user of an interactive computer service. The employer provided its employees with Internet access through the company's internal computer system. The employer met the definition of "provider or user of an interactive computer service" because it provided or enabled computer access by multiple users, its employees, to a computer server through proxy servers that were the primary means by which thousands of its employees in the United States accessed the Internet.ⁿ⁴⁴ The causes of action treated the employer as a publisher or speaker of information by alleging that the employer knew that the employee was sending threatening messages, and that he was using the employer's computer system to send them. While many of the cases addressing CDA immunity involved claims for defamation, immunity under § 230 is not so limited and extends to the causes of action alleged for other torts, including infliction of emotional distress.ⁿ⁴⁵ The information at issue was provided by another information content provider, i.e., the employee who authored the offensive e-mails and postings.ⁿ⁴⁶

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityGeneral
OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Coffee v. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 551, 555-559, 105 Cal. Rptr. 358, 503 P.2d 1366 ; McGuigan v. Southern Pac. Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 704, 715, 247 P.2d 415 ; Jameson v. Gavett (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 646, 651, 71 P.2d 937 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Coffee v. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 551, 560-562, 105 Cal. Rptr. 358, 503 P.2d 1366 ; McGuigan v. Southern Pac. Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 704, 715, 247 P.2d 415 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Coffee v. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 551, 105 Cal. Rptr. 358, 503 P.2d 1366 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Coffee v. McDonnell-Douglas Corp. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 551, 560-562, 105 Cal. Rptr. 358, 503 P.2d 1366 .

(n5)Footnote 5. McGuigan v. Southern Pac. Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 704, 247 P.2d 415 .

(n6)Footnote 5.1. McGuigan v. Southern Pac. Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 704, 715, 247 P.2d 415 .

(n7)Footnote 5.2. See Roberts v. Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 800, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139 (if employee acts under direction of employer, then employer participates in act, and employer liability is based on employer's own fault); see also Jensen v. Southern Pacific Co. (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 67, 70-71, 276 P.2d 703 .

(n8)Footnote 5.3. Jensen v. Southern Pacific Co. (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 67, 276 P.2d 703 .

(n9)Footnote 5.4. Jensen v. Southern Pacific Co. (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 67, 70-71, 276 P.2d 703 .

(n10)Footnote 6. See Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 174-175, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 ; Coats v. Construction & Gen. Laborers Local No. 185 (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 908 ; Jameson v. Gavett (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 646, 651-652, 71 P.2d 937 . For the standard jury instruction on employer ratification of an employee's conduct, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3710 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n11)Footnote 7. See Jameson v. Gavett (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 646, 650-652, 71 P.2d 937 . For discussion of vicarious liability of employers for the acts of employees, see § 30.03; for discussion of scope of employment issues, see § 30.05.

(n12)Footnote 8. See Civ. Code § 3294(b); Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 172-174, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 ; Clark Equipment Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 503, 524, 154 Cal. Rptr. 874 ; Coats v. Construction & Gen. Laborers Local No. 185 (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 908, 914, 93 Cal. Rptr. 639 .

(n13)Footnote 9. See Coats v. Construction & Gen. Laborers Local No. 185 (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 908 .

(n14)Footnote 10. Coats v. Construction & Gen. Laborers Local No. 185 (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 908 .

(n15)Footnote 11. Coats v. Construction & Gen. Laborers Local No. 185 (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 908 .

(n16)Footnote 12. Coats v. Construction & Gen. Laborers Local No. 185 (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 908 .

(n17)Footnote 12.1. See Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 173-174, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 (employer's retention of employee after employer learned of employee's misrepresentations, and defense of employee in lawsuit based on those misrepresentations, as sufficient evidence of ratification); Clark Equipment Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 503, 524, 154 Cal. Rptr. 874 (employer's retention of attorney, with no change in authority, after employer learned of attorney's improper collection techniques and abuse of process, constituted ratification of the conduct, and supported an award of punitive damages against employer).

(n18)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790, 810-811, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 (employer did not ratify employee's actions of sending threatening e-mails and making threatening postings on Internet by not terminating employee during FBI investigation, where at time of initial investigation, employer had no knowledge of substance of any e-mail or posting by employee that was being investigated; employer was not provided with details about FBI's investigation; FBI told employer it was not planning to arrest employee, employee was not threat to anyone, and employer need not be concerned about him; employer conducted its own investigation, but did not discover evidence that employee used its computer systems to send threatening e-mails or Internet postings; and employee told employer he had not used its computer systems to send threatening e-mails or other messages; once employer learned content of e-mails and postings and employee admitted he sent communications through employer's computer systems that could be interpreted as threat, employer placed employee on administrative leave immediately and terminated him eight days later); Baptist v. Robinson (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 151, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 153, 2006 Cal. App. LEXIS 1454, *37-*39 (winery owner was not liable through ratification for injuries to motorcycle rider caused by employee's negligence in failing to secure agricultural bin owned by winery that fell off truck owned and driven by employee on his way to pick up grapes to make wine for himself, despite promoting employee after incident; there was no showing that employee's personal winemaking activities constituted form of misconduct that employer later ratified).

(n19)Footnote 13.1. Plancarte v. Guardsmark (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 640, 647, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 315 .

(n20)Footnote 13.2. Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1100, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 ; Douglas v. Los Angeles Herald-Examiner (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 449, 461 123 Cal. Rptr. 683 . For discussion of Lab. Code § 2802, see § 30.09[3].

(n21)Footnote 13.3. Plancarte v. Guardsmark (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 640, 647-648, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 315 .

(n22)Footnote 13.4. Plancarte v. Guardsmark (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 640, 650, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 315 .

(n23)Footnote 14. See Phillips v. TLC Plumbing, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1139 ; Evan F. v. Hughson United Methodist Church (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 828, 836, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 748 ; see also Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Purdie (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 57, 69, 193 Cal. Rptr. 248 (citing Rest. 2d Agency § 213).

(n24)Footnote 15. See Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Purdie (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 57, 69, 193 Cal. Rptr. 248 (quoting from Rest. 2d Agency § 213, comment d).

(n25)Footnote 16. Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Purdie (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 57, 60-62, 193 Cal. Rptr. 248 .

(n26)Footnote 16.1. Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Purdie (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 57, 69-71, 193 Cal. Rptr. 248 .

(n27)Footnote 16.2. Flores v. AutoZone West, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 373, 384-386, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 178 .

(n28)Footnote 17. See Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 827-828.

(n29)Footnote 17.1. See Evan F. v. Hughson United Methodist Church (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 828, 836-837, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 748 (employer can be liable for injury caused by particular risk or hazard presented by employee of which it was aware).

(n30)Footnote 18. Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 .

(n31)Footnote 19. See Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 954, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 .

(n32)Footnote 19.1. See Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 122 (allegation that employer knew that employee would use his position of authority to extract or coerce sexual favors was not knowledge that he would drug and then attack potential employee so that negligent hiring not sufficiently alleged).

(n33)Footnote 19.2. See Phillips v. TLC Plumbing, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1140-1146 (employer was not liable for murder of customer who was shot by former employee, with whom customer had relationship, even though former employee met her as consequence of his employment, where murder occurred two years after his employment was terminated). See also Rest. Third Agency § 7.05, com. c, illus. 5 (when actor's tort follows termination of actor's employment, tort and employment may not be causally related for purposes of liability for negligent hiring and/or retention).

(n34)Footnote 20. See Grahn v. Tosco Corp. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1379-1380, 1384-1385, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806 (case reversed because of significant instructional errors; see § 20.44[2] for further discussion), disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 and Hooker v. Dept. of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 214, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 ; see also Holman v. State of California (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 317, 335-336, 124 Cal. Rptr. 773 (citing Risley v. Lenwell (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 608, 622-625, 277 P.2d 897 , and Rest. 2d Torts § 411).

(n35)Footnote 20.1. Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 122 .

(n36)Footnote 20.2. Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790, 815-818, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 .

(n37)Footnote 20.3. Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal.2d 108, 113, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97, 443 P.2d 561 .

(n38)Footnote 21. Mendoza v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1333, 1339-1340, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 ; see North, The Responsibility of Employers for the Actions of Their Employees: The Negligent Hiring Theory of Liability (1977) 53 Chicago-Kent L. Rev. 717, 719.

(n39)Footnote 22. Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Purdie (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 57, 193 Cal. Rptr. 248 .

(n40)Footnote 23. See Underwriters Ins. Co. v. Purdie (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 57, 62, 193 Cal. Rptr. 248 .

(n41)Footnote 24. Defendant employer and its insurer disputed the insurer's obligation to pay under a liability insurance policy that excluded coverage for liability based on the insured's use of firearms. The appellate court held that the policy covered the action notwithstanding the firearm exclusion, because the employer's negligence in hiring and retaining the employee was a basis of liability independent of the employee's use of the firearm. see Underwriters Ins. Co v. Purdie (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 57, 71, 193 Cal. Rptr. 248 .

(n42)Footnote 24.1. Baptist v. Robinson (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 151, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 153, 2006 Cal. App. LEXIS 1454, *39-*42 .

(n43)Footnote 25. See Restatement (Second) of Agency § 213; Cutter v. Town of Farmington (N.H. 1985) 126 N.H. 836, 498 A.2d 316, 319-321 (liability based on municipality's failure to train police officers concerning application of handcuffs and use of weapons).

(n44)Footnote 26. Doe v. Capital Cities (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1038, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 122 (allegation that employer knew that employee would use his position of authority to extract or coerce sexual favors was not knowledge that he would drug and then attack potential employee so that negligent hiring not sufficiently alleged).

(n45)Footnote 27. See Mendoza v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1333, 1340, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 (collecting cases).

(n46)Footnote 28. Mendoza v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1333, 1341, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 .

(n47)Footnote 29. Mendoza v. City of Los Angeles (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1333, 1341, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 .

(n48)Footnote 30. Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1081, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 .

(n49)Footnote 31. See Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1070, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 .

(n50)Footnote 32. See Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1081, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 .

(n51)Footnote 33. See Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1081, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 .

(n52)Footnote 34. See Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1081, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 .

(n53)Footnote 35. Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 .

(n54)Footnote 36. Jen-Weld, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 853 .

(n55)Footnote 37. Jen-Weld, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 853 .

(n56)Footnote 38. Jen-Weld, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 853 .

(n57)Footnote 39. Jen-Weld, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 853. see CACI 724.

(n58)Footnote 40. Armenta v. Churchill (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 448, 267 P.2d 303 . see Jen-Weld, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 853 (California Supreme Court's views on evidentiary problems presented in Armenta, evidence of employee's prior accidents, were clearly meant to be binding on lower courts faced with parallel fact situations, and noting disagreement with Syah); see also Evid. Code § 1104 (excluding evidence of employee's prior accidents when employer assumes vicarious liability for employee's negligence). But see Syah v. Johnson (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 534, 543-545, 55 Cal. Rptr. 741 (evidence simultaneously presented as to employee's prior accidents and employer's alleged negligent entrustment of vehicle).

(n59)Footnote 41. Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 .

(n60)Footnote 42. 47 U.S.C. § 230(c)(1) (no provider or user of interactive computer service may be treated as publisher or speaker of information provided by another information content provider), (e)(3) (no cause of action may be brought and no liability imposed under any state or local law inconsistent with § 230). See Zeran v. America Online, Inc. (4th Cir. 1997) 129 F.3d 327, 331-334 , cert. den. (1998) 524 U.S. 937, 118 S. Ct. 2341 141 L. Ed. 2d 712 ((230(c)(1) conferred broad immunity applicable to all interactive computer service providers, irrespective of whether they were publishers or distributors of alleged defamatory matter authored by information content provider); Barrett v. Rosenthal (2006) 40 Cal.4th 33, 57-58, 146 P.3d 510 (Zeran properly construed § 230(c)(1) as affording broad immunity to any provider or user of interactive computer service, irrespective of whether provider or user may have been viewed under traditional defamation law as publisher or distributor, i.e., secondary publisher, of allegedly defamatory statement). See also Carafano v. Metrosplash.com, Inc. (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1119 ; Batzel v. Smith (9th Cir. 2003) 333 F.3d 1018 , cert. den. (2004) 541 U.S. 1085, 124 S. Ct. 2812, 159 L. Ed. 2d 246 ; Green v. America Online (AOL) (3d Cir. 2003) 318 F.3d 465 ; Ben Ezra, Weinstein, & Co. v. America Online Inc. (10th Cir. 2000) 206 F.3d 980 ; Gentry v. eBay, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 816, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 703 ; Kathleen R. v. City of Livermore (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 684, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 772 .

(n61)Footnote 43. Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790, 805, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 ;, Gentry v. eBay, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 816, 830, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 703 .

(n62)Footnote 44. Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790, 805-806, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 .

(n63)Footnote 45. Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790, 806-807, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 . See Carafano v. Metrosplash.com, Inc. (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1119 (invasion of privacy, misappropriation of right of publicity and negligence); Kathleen R. v. City of Livermore (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 684, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 772 (nuisance and premises liability; defense not limited to tort claims for damages and applied to taxpayer actions and suits for declaratory and injunctive relief); Doe v. America Online, Inc. (Fla. 2001) 783 So. 2d 1010 (negligent failure to control third party's illegal postings); Donato v. Moldow (2005) 374 N.J. Super. 475, 486-488, 865 A.2d 711, 718 (intentional infliction of emotional distress).

(n64)Footnote 46. Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790, 807, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 .

103 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
 CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
 Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.03

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.03 Vicarious Liability of Employer Based on Respondeat Superior

[1] Generally

The doctrine of respondeat superior, literally "let the master answer," provides that an employer or principal is vicariously liable for the wrongful conduct of his or her employees or agents committed within the scope of the employment or agency.ⁿ¹ Civil Code Section 2338, which provides that a principal is responsible to third persons for its agent's negligence, including wrongful acts, in the transaction of the agency's business, has long been held to reflect the common law doctrine of respondeat superior.^{n1.1} The rationale for the doctrine is that because the use of employees or agents benefits the employer or principal, the torts of employees or agents are imputed back to their hirers for purposes of assigning liability. The liability is "vicarious" because the employer or principal is held liable even if the employer or principal has not personally engaged in wrongful conduct.ⁿ²

Respondeat superior applies to public and private employers, alike.ⁿ³ However, a public employer is not responsible for the acts of public employees performed outside the scope of their employment. Thus, for example, in Hoblitzell v. City of Ione,^{n3.1} the plaintiff failed to present a genuine issue of material fact as to a city's liability for the acts of a law enforcement officer and a building inspector. The employees were acting outside the city's jurisdiction, they were wearing civilian clothing, and they were acting for personal reasons, substantially deviating from their employment duties for the city. It made no difference that the building inspector identified himself as a building inspector from the city or used an unmarked city car, because the purported misconduct did not arise from the employer's enterprise but for personal reasons. The police officer was not in uniform or on duty, was in civilian clothes, and did not use his official authority in any fashion. He claimed to be a building inspector from the city, and he was not acting within the scope of his employment.^{n3.2}

Similarly, in de Villers v. County of San Diego,^{n3.3} a county could not be liable for the death of the husband of a county employee who took toxic materials from her employer to kill her husband, because she was not acting within the course and scope of her employment when she killed him. The county also could not be liable for negligent hiring and supervision by failing to discover the employee's history of drug use and her criminal record. There was no evidence supporting a conclusion that any county employee had undertaken a special protective relationship toward the husband. Moreover, the evidence appears undisputed that no one--including the husband or other family members--had actual knowledge that the employee posed a threat to her husband. Further, plaintiffs could not state a claim for direct liability based on a public entity's allegedly negligent hiring and supervision practices.

The fact that an employee may have been present at the workplace and performing regular employment functions before or after engaging in the conduct that injured the plaintiff does not transform an employee's personal conduct into actions for which the employer may be held vicariously liable.^{n3.4}

There must be some evidence linking the employee's activities causing injury to a third person to the employment to impose liability on the employer under respondeat superior.^{n3.5}

[2] Bases for Imposing Respondeat Superior Liability

Although earlier authorities sought to justify the respondeat superior doctrine on such theories as "control" by the master of the servant, the master's "privilege" in being permitted to employ another, the third party's innocence in comparison to the master's selection of the servant, or the master's "deep pocket" to pay for the loss, the modern justification for vicarious liability is a rule of policy, a deliberate allocation of a risk. The losses caused by the torts of employees are placed on the employer as a cost of doing business. The rule of respondeat superior is based in part on the rationale that, between the employer who has voluntarily engaged in an enterprise that may pose some risk of harm to others and the injured third party, fairness supports requiring the employer to bear the loss.ⁿ⁴ Courts have also justified the rule on the ground that the employer is better able to absorb the losses, and distribute them, through prices, rates, or liability insurance, to the public.ⁿ⁵ California courts have long recognized that an employer's responsibility for the torts of its employees extends beyond its actual or possible control of the servant to injuries that are the "risks of the enterprise."ⁿ⁶

Recent California Supreme Court decisions have articulated three reasons for applying the doctrine of respondeat superior: (1) to prevent recurrence of tortious conduct; (2) to give greater assurance of compensation for the victim; and (3) to ensure that the victim's losses will be equitably borne by those who benefited from the enterprise that gave rise to the injury.ⁿ⁷ The court has given great weight to these policy factors in determining whether to attach vicarious liability in different situations.ⁿ⁸

A plaintiff must establish an employment relationship between the tortfeasor and the defendant (which requires an element of right of control over the tortfeasor's conduct), and prove that the tort was committed within the scope of the tortfeasor's employment, in order to recover from the employer.ⁿ⁹ For discussion of rules governing the determination of whether an employment relationship exists, see § 30.04. For discussion of the criteria for determining the scope of employment, see § 30.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 967, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 ; Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 617-618, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143 ; see also Garton v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 365, 165 Cal. Rptr. 449 (discussing applicability of vicarious liability principles to tortfeasors working for several employers in varying capacities).

For the standard introductory jury instruction on respondeat superior, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3700 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim of tort liability asserted against a principal for the acts of the agent, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3701 (Matthew Bender). For the CACI special verdict form on vicarious liability for negligence, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-3700 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction on respondeat superior when the legal agency relationship is not disputed, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3703 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Depew v. Crocodile Enters., Inc. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 480, 486, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 (citing cases); see Civ. Code § 2338.

(n3)Footnote 2. See Roberts v. Craig (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 202, 208, 268 P.2d 500 .

(n4)Footnote 3. See Gov. Code § 815.2(a); Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 209, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 . For the standard jury instruction on the scope of employment in the context of a police officer's misuse of authority, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3721 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Hoblitzell v. City of Ione (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 675, 682-687, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 8 .

(n6)Footnote 3.2. See also Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790, 811-814, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 (employee's sending of threatening e-mails and making threatening postings on Internet through employer's computer systems was plainly outside scope of his employment, where injury he inflicted was out of personal malice, not engendered by employment, messages of hate were not outgrowth of his employment, and using employer's computer system to log on to private Internet account to send messages was never part of his job duties).

(n7)Footnote 3.3. de Villers v. County of San Diego (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 238, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 253, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 1730, *11-*31 .

(n8)Footnote 3.4. Delfino v. Agilent Technologies, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 790, 814, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 376 .

(n9)Footnote 3.5. See Miller v. American Greetings Corp. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1055, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 489, *8-*19 (plaintiffs' evidence did not permit reasonable trier of fact to conclude that employee hit plaintiff with his pickup truck while on his cell phone with coworker, where employee testified in his deposition that on morning of accident he had taken day off work and was on personal errand and admitted running into plaintiff after taking his eyes off road to check address, and plaintiffs had no evidence to contradict him).

(n10)Footnote 4. See Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 959-960, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988 .

(n11)Footnote 5. Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 959-960, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988 .

(n12)Footnote 6. See Hinman v. Westinghouse Electric Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 960, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988 (citing Carr v. Wm. C. Crowell Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 655-656, 171 P.2d 5 , among other cases).

(n13)Footnote 7. Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 209, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 ; Miller v. Stouffer (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 70, 77, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 ; Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 967, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 .

(n14)Footnote 8. See Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hosp. (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 304-305, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 (hospital not liable for sexual assault by medical technician); Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 214-216, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 (city liable for sexual assault by on-duty police officer); John R. v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 438, 447-452, 256 Cal. Rptr. 766, 769 P.2d 948 (school district not liable for sexual assault by teacher); see also discussion in § 30.06.

(n15)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hosp. (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 304-305, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358; Alma W. v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 139, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287; Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 955, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95

104 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.04

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.04 Who Is an Employee for Purposes of Employer Liability

[1] Generally

An employee is one who is subject to his or her employer's right of control with respect to any act, labor, or work to be done in the course and scope of the employment.ⁿ¹ The term "servant" is synonymous with the term "employee."ⁿ²

Evidence that a person who hires another withholds income taxes or social security taxes, pays unemployment taxes, or carries workers' compensation insurance, may support a finding of an employment relationship.ⁿ³ However, the converse is of no significance in establishing a nonemployment relationship. An employer cannot change the status of an employee to one of independent contractor by illegally requiring the employee to assume the burdens that the law imposes directly on the employer.^{n3.1}

It is not necessary that the employer be a business enterprise in order for respondeat superior liability to attach. The purposes behind the doctrine are served by extending liability to employers in nonbusiness situations, in part, because of the availability of insurance to such persons to spread and absorb the costs of injury.^{n3.2} Similarly, although most employees work for monetary compensation, such as salaries, hourly wages, or commissions, monetary compensation is not an essential element of an employer-employee relationship.ⁿ⁴ An employment relationship may exist between spousesⁿ⁵ or between parent and child.ⁿ⁶

If a person is performing work and labor for another, a prima facie showing of an employer-employee relationship is established, and the person is presumed to be an employee in the absence of evidence to the contrary.ⁿ⁷ Additionally, Labor Code Section 2750.5, which provides a rebuttable presumption that a worker providing services for which a license is required is an employee rather than an independent contractor, and denying independent contractor status to a person who does not have a license required for his or her work, applies to tort cases as well as workers' compensation cases.ⁿ⁸

For discussion of the right to control as a criterion for the existence of an employment relationship, see [2], below. For discussion of the distinctions between employment relationships and agency relationships, see [3], below. For discussion of the distinctions between employment relationships and independent contractor relationships, see [4], below.

[2] Employer's Right of Control

Whether or not an employer-employee relationship exists between the defendant and the tortfeasor is normally a question of fact, and the key factor in determining whether that type of relationship exists is whether the employer has the right to exercise control over the employee, regardless of whether or not that potential control is actually exercised with respect to all of the employee's duties.ⁿ⁹ If the defendant has such a right of control over the tortfeasor, an employment relationship exists even if control was not being exercised at the time of plaintiff's injury.ⁿ¹⁰ The right to discharge an employee at will without cause is evidence of the employer's right to control.ⁿ¹¹

The control must encompass both the means and manner of performance of the work. If control pertains only to the result of the work and not to the means by which it is accomplished, the relationship is of independent contractor rather than employee.ⁿ¹²

[3] Employees and Agents Distinguished

An agent is one who represents another in dealings with third parties.ⁿ¹³ An agency may be specific (that is, created for a particular act or transaction) or general.ⁿ¹⁴

A single individual may be both an employee and an agent, but the terms "employee" and "agent" are not synonymous.ⁿ¹⁵ An agent can be distinguished from an employee in that an agent works both for and in the place of the principal.ⁿ¹⁶ In other words, an agent is distinguished from an employee by the agent's "representative" powers and "derivative authority."ⁿ¹⁷

For discussion of an employer's contractual liability under agency principles for transactions entered into by employees with third persons, see Chapter 31.

[4] Employees and Independent Contractors Distinguished

[a] Generally

Although employers and principals are subject to vicarious liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the torts of their employees and agents, the general rule is that a person who employs an independent contractor will not be vicariously liable for the torts of his or her independent contractor.ⁿ¹⁸ However, there are many exceptions to this general rule of nonliability. For discussion of the application of respondeat superior liability for conduct of independent contractors, see § 30.10.

The question of whether an individual is an employee or independent contractor is a question of fact if dependent on the resolution of disputed evidence or inferences. If the evidence is undisputed and if only one inference may be drawn from the facts, the question becomes one of law.ⁿ¹⁹

The categories of employee and independent contractor are mutually exclusive; an individual cannot be both an employee and an independent contractor, depending on the nature of the function by the individual at a given time.^{n19.1} In determining whether an individual is an employee or an independent contractor, the most important factor is the right of control.ⁿ²⁰ An employee is hired to perform specified work, with the employer controlling the means and manner of the performance of the work. In contrast, the hirer of an independent contractor retains control only over the result of the work, not over the means by which the work is accomplished.ⁿ²¹ A worker's adherence to a federally-dictated work protocol arguably supports his or her status as an independent contractor, rather than as an employee.^{n21.1}

In determining the extent of control, it is important to differentiate between general rights of supervision and review for the purpose of determining a contractor's progress, which are normally exercised by the hirer, and the immediate, detailed supervision that an employer normally exercises with respect to an employee. Reservation or exercise of the former type of rights alone with regard to one performing labor or services is not likely to cause that person to be characterized as an employee.n22

While the presence of complete or absolute control will support a finding that the relationship is one of employment, the converse is not necessarily true, that the lack of absolute control means there is not an employment relationship. It does not follow that because there is a certain amount of freedom inherent in the work done that one becomes an independent contractor.n22.1

In addition to the extent of control, other factors to be taken into consideration in determining whether one is an employee or an independent contractor are (1) whether or not the one performing the services is engaged in a distinct occupation or business; (2) whether, in the locality, the kind of occupation or business is one in which the work is usually done under the direction of a principal or by a specialist without supervision; (3) the skill required in the particular occupation or business; (4) whether the principal or worker supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and place of work; (5) the length of time for which the services are to be performed; (6) the method of payment, whether based on time or by the job; (7) whether or not the work is part of the regular business of the alleged principal; and (8) whether or not the parties believe that they are creating an employment relationship.n22.2

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Practitioners should become familiar with S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations, n22.3 in which the California Supreme Court broadened the definition of employee under the Workers' Compensation Actn22.4 and, in dicta, a number of other acts as well. In Borello, the Court not only focused on the "right of control" test, which conforms to traditional independent contractor-employee analysis, but also focused on the "public purposes" of the Workers' Compensation Act (as distinguished from the "private interests" of the workers).n22.5 Without defining the full import of the dichotomy, the Court indicated that its analysis might have application to independent contractor-employee determinations under the Agricultural Labor Relations Act,n22.6 wage and hour law, the Fair Employment and Housing Act,n22.7 and Cal OSHA.n22.8 Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Although not necessarily controlling, standards under workers' compensation, unemployment insurance, and other statutes can all be considered by the courts as "useful" when a court is determining the tortfeasor's employment status in a third-party tort claim lodged against the tortfeasor's alleged employer.n23 Ultimately, the determination must be made in the context of the purpose behind the particular application of vicarious liability at issue in the case.n23.1

For discussion of the definition of "employee" as distinguished from "independent contractor" under wage and hour, workers' compensation, Cal OSHA, equal employment opportunity, and unemployment insurance statutes, see Chapters 1, 20, 21, 40, and 80, respectively. For discussion of the applicability of workers compensation authority in determining scope of employment issues in tort cases, see § 30.05[3].

Although it is the agreement of the parties that determines the status as independent contractor or employee, the fact that the agreement designates the relationship of the parties as that of independent contractors is not in itself controlling.n24 The parties' characterization will be ignored if they, by their conduct, act like employer and employee. Indeed, the attempt to conceal employment by formal documents purporting to create other relationships have led the courts to disregard the terms whenever the acts and declarations of the parties are inconsistent with the labels.n24.1

[b] Building Contractors

Labor Code Section 2750.5 provides that there is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of proof that a worker performing services for which a license is required under Business and Professions Code Section 7000 et seq., governing building contractors, or who is performing such services for a person who is required to obtain such a license, is an employee rather than an independent contractor. The statute further provides that proof of independent contractor status, which may rebut the presumption, includes satisfactory proof of the following:

1. The individual has the right to control and discretion in the manner of performance of the contract for services in that the result of the work and not the means by which it is accomplished is the primary factor bargained for;ⁿ²⁵
2. The individual is customarily engaged in an independently established business;ⁿ²⁶ and
3. The individual's independent contractor status is bona fide and not a subterfuge.ⁿ²⁷

Labor Code Section 2750.5 further provides that a bona fide independent contractor status is evidenced by the presence of the following cumulative factors:ⁿ²⁸

1. Substantial investment other than personal services in the business;
2. Holding out that one is in business for oneself;
3. Bargaining for a contract to complete a specific project for compensation by project rather than by time;
4. Control over the time and place the work is performed;
5. Supplying the tools or instrumentalities used in the work other than tools and instrumentalities normally and customarily provided by employees;
6. Hiring employees;
7. Performing work that is not ordinarily in the course of the principal's business;
8. Performing work that requires a particular skill;
9. Holding a license pursuant to the Business and Professions Code; and
10. The parties intending that the work relationship is of an independent contractor status or that the relationship is not severable or terminable at will by the principal but gives rise to an action for breach of contract.

In Foss v. Anthony Industries, ⁿ²⁹ the court of appeal held that the history and terminology of Labor Code Section 2750.5 indicated that the statute was intended to apply to third-party tort claims as well as workers' compensation proceedings.ⁿ³⁰ The court also concluded that the statute codified the general tort standard for independent contractor status, and that Labor Code provisions concerning employment status have long been cited by California courts in tort cases involving injuries to third parties.ⁿ³¹

In Ramirez v. Nelson, ^{n31.1} the family of a deceased employee of an unlicensed contractor sued the homeowners after his death by electrocution while trimming trees on their property as a result of the contact between his polesaw and a high voltage overhead line. The family identified a statute, Penal Code section 385(b), making it a misdemeanor for any person, either personally or through an employee, to move any tool or equipment within six feet of a high voltage overhead line, and argued the decedent was the homeowners' employee by operation of law under Labor Code section 2750.5, so that the homeowners were vicariously liable for any breach of the duty of care embodied in section 385(b) in their capacity as the decedent's employers, giving rise to a presumption of negligence. The California Supreme Court found that the question whether an unlicensed contractor's worker must be deemed a homeowner-hirer's employee under Labor Code section 2750.5 for purposes of tort liability is neither an easy nor settled one. The Court in State Compensation Ins. Fund n31.2 construed the penultimate paragraph of section 2750.5 to mean that contractors injured on the job, who prove to be unlicensed, cannot be independent contractors in the eyes of the law, and are instead deemed employees of the party who hired them by operation of law. But that holding was reached in the specific context of determining whether, for policy reasons, an unlicensed contractor hired to remodel a homeowner's house, who became injured on the job, should be deemed the homeowner's employee at law for purposes of rendering him eligible for workers' compensation benefits under the homeowner's insurance policy. The homeowner's potential exposure to tort liability for the contractor's injuries was neither in issue nor considered in State Compensation Ins. Fund. Nor was a homeowner's liability for injury to a worker in an unlicensed contractor's work crew considered.n31.3 However, the Court declined to address whether an unlicensed contractor or his or her worker, when injured on the job, becomes the employee of the homeowner who hired the contractor, under Labor Code section 2750.5, for purposes of tort liability in Ramirez, because the Court concluded that the homeowners neither had nor breached any statutory duty of care owed to the deceased worker under section 385(b) in the first instance. Since section 385(b) would not support a negligence per se theory of liability on these facts within the meaning of Evidence Code section 669, the question of whether the decedent was the homeowners' employee under section 2705.5 was moot.n31.4

Under Labor Code section 2705.5, the presumption of employee status can be rebutted only as to persons who hold a valid contractor's license; the presumption cannot be rebutted as to persons who do not hold a valid contractor's license.n31.5 However, notwithstanding the conclusive presumption established by the second to last paragraph of section 2750.5, one who misrepresents himself or herself as a licensed contractor is estopped from asserting that the unlicensed status makes him or her an employee under the statute.n31.6 In the absence of a representation by the contractor that he or she is licensed, there can be no estoppel.n31.7 Whether a party's conduct estops it from taking a particular legal position usually, though not always, involves a factual determination.n31.8 The burden is on the hirer to prove that the worker is estopped from claiming employee status.n31.9

One court has stated that it is difficult to create a hard and fast rule for every situation in which the status of a contractor's license changes over a period of time. On one end of the spectrum, the worker affirmatively lies when asked if he or she is licensed, commences work, and shortly thereafter is injured. In the absence of extenuating circumstances, the unlicensed worker in this setting is estopped from claiming employee status.n31.10 On the other end of the spectrum, the hirer fails to inquire and the worker makes no representation about his licensing or her status. In order to effect the mandatory language of the penultimate paragraph of section 2750.5, the unlicensed worker cannot be estopped, and is deemed an employee.n31.11 In the gray part of the spectrum, the worker initially accurately informs the hirer that he or she is licensed but over time his or her license expires or is revoked, the worker says nothing, and the employer makes no further inquiry. In this situation, estoppel is a factual question to be resolved by the trier of fact.n31.12 Relevant factors include the following:n31.13

- The nature of the worker's initial disclosure and the hirer's initial inquiry.
- The length of time the license was valid and how long since it had lapsed.
- The parties' expectations.
- The nature and length of the relationship between worker and hirer.
- Custom and practice in the industry.

It may be reasonable for a hirer to assume a worker remains licensed when the valid license was presented a few weeks before the start of work. It may be unreasonable to require written proof on a weekly or monthly basis on a long project. On the other hand, oral representation of valid license status, though reasonable to accept at the time, may require further investigation, even written proof, later on depending on the circumstances.ⁿ³¹.¹⁴

[5] Borrowed Employees: Special and Dual Employments

When one employer (the "general" employer) lends an employee to another employer and relinquishes its right of control over the employee's activities to the borrowing employer, a "special employment" relationship is created between the borrowed employee and the borrowing employer.ⁿ³² For the duration of the special employment relationship, the special or borrowing employer is solely liable in tort under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the special employee's job-related torts.ⁿ³³

A special employment relationship may be negated, and the general employer remains liable, by proof that the general employer has not relinquished its right to control the employee.ⁿ³⁴ Courts have held that evidence of the following factors tends to negate the existence of a special employment:ⁿ³⁵

1. The employee is not paid by and cannot be discharged by the borrowing employer.
2. The employee is skilled and has substantial control over the operational details of his or her work.
3. The employee is not engaged in the borrowing employer's usual business.
4. The employee is borrowed for only a brief period of time.
5. The employee continues to use tools and equipment furnished by the lending employer while working for the borrowing employer.

If both the borrowing and lending employers share control of an employee's work, a "dual employment" arises, and the general employer remains concurrently and simultaneously, jointly and severally liable for the employee's torts committed within the scope of the employment.ⁿ³⁶

For example, in Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles,ⁿ³⁷ the defendant city provided staff harbor pilots to shipmasters entering the city harbor on a voluntary basis and under contracts providing that the loaned staff harbor pilots would be exclusively the shipowner's employees while in the shipowner's service. While plaintiff's ship was being piloted by a staff harbor pilot, a collision occurred, which resulted in damage to the ship, the city's dock, and a third party's loading facilities. The trial court found the pilot to be the sole employee of the city, that the city was 75 percent negligent, and that the plaintiff's shipmaster and crew were 25 percent negligent.

The California Supreme Court reversed. The Court held that the trial court erred as a matter of law in finding that the city was the pilot's sole employer at the time of the accident because, under federal maritime law, a shipowner exercises sufficient control over a voluntarily hired pilot to render him or her an employee of the shipowner.ⁿ³⁸ However, the Court also held that the existence of an employment relationship between the shipowner and the pilot did not necessarily sever the respondeat superior nexus between the pilot and the city.ⁿ³⁹ The Court noted that a dual employment may exist, rendering both the lending and borrowing employer liable for the employee's torts.ⁿ⁴⁰ The Court further stated that when, as in this case, the employee performs work of interest to both the general and the special employer, there is a presumption that the employee also remains in his or her general employment, and that the general employer can avoid liability only if it proves that it relinquished "authoritative direction and control" of the employee to the borrowing employer.ⁿ⁴¹ The Court observed that, in this case, the city selected and trained staff harbor pilots, assigned pilots to particular ships, regulated the manner in which pilot's performed their duties, and retained the power to suspend or terminate the pilot's employment, and that the shipmaster had only advisory powers concerning the pilot's navigational decisions.ⁿ⁴² As the city failed to establish such a total relinquishment of direction and control, the Court concluded that the pilot was an employee of both the city and the shipowner at the time of the accident and that both employers were jointly and severally liable to third parties for the pilot's negligence.ⁿ⁴³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersScope of EmploymentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; see also Lab. Code § 2750 ("contract of employment" defined). For the standard jury instruction on respondeat superior when the legal agency relationship is not disputed, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3703 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction on respondeat superior when the existence of "employee" status is disputed, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3704 (Matthew Bender), or when the existence of an "agency" relationship is disputed, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3705 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n2)Footnote 2. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Corrigan v. Cox (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 919, 924, 62 Cal. Rptr. 733 .

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 877, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647 .

(n5)Footnote 3.2. Miller v. Stouffer (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 70, 80-81, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 (homeowner liable for negligence of housekeeper).

(n6)Footnote 4. See Eye v. Kafer, Inc. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 449, 453, 20 Cal. Rptr. 841 .

(n7)Footnote 5. See Workman v. City of San Diego (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 36, 39, 72 Cal. Rptr. 509 .

(n8)Footnote 6. See Hughes v. Quackenbush (1934) 1 Cal. App. 2d 349, 357, 37 P.2d 99 .

(n9)Footnote 7. Pierson v. Holly Sugar Corp. (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 298, 301, 237 P.2d 28 .

(n10)Footnote 8. Foss v. Anthony Industries (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 794, 797-799, 189 Cal. Rptr. 31 .

(n11)Footnote 9. City of Los Angeles v. Vaughn (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 198, 201, 10 Cal. Rptr. 457, 358 P.2d 913 ; see Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 946-947, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 .

(n12)Footnote 10. See Eye v. Kafer, Inc. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 449, 453, 20 Cal. Rptr. 841 (defendant bar owner held liable for assault on patron by temporary employee).

(n13)Footnote 11. City of Los Angeles v. Vaughn (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 198, 201, 10 Cal. Rptr. 457, 358 P.2d 913 ; Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 875, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647 .

(n14)Footnote 12. See Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446, 458, 183 Cal. Rptr. 51, 645 P.2d 102 ; see also Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 946-947, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 (freelance television writers held to be employees for unemployment insurance purposes).

(n15)Footnote 13. Civ. Code § 2295; see Store of Happiness v. Carmona & Allen (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 266, 269, 312 P.2d 1104 .

(n16)Footnote 14. See Civ. Code § 2297.

(n17)Footnote 15. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .

(n18)Footnote 16. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205-206, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .

(n19)Footnote 17. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 206, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .

(n20)Footnote 18. Schmidlin v. Alta Planing Mill Co. (1915) 170 Cal. 589, 591, 150 P. 983 ; see also People v. Palma (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1566, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334 ; Anderson v. Chancellor Western Oil Dev. Corp. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 235, 239, 125 Cal. Rptr. 640 .

(n21)Footnote 19. Millsap v. Federal Express Corp. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 425, 431, 277 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 608-609 n.6, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 ; see S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 (workers' compensation case).

(n22)Footnote 19.1. Briggs v. Lawrence (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 605, 614-615, 281 Cal. Rptr. 578 (but finding it conceivable that one individual could serve in both capacities if, say, a clerical employee agreed, for a separate consideration, to paint the employer's building on weekends).

(n23)Footnote 20. Flores v. Brown (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 622, 628, 248 P.2d 922 ; Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 875, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647 (characterizing all other factors as secondary elements); see discussion in [2], above.

(n24)Footnote 21. Millsap v. Federal Express Corp. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 425, 431, 277 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; see Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446, 458, 183 Cal. Rptr. 51, 645 P.2d 102 .

(n25)Footnote 21.1. Southwest Research Institute v. Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 705, 709-710, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769 .

(n26)Footnote 22. McDonald v. Shell Oil Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 785, 790, 285 P.2d 902 .

(n27)Footnote 22.1. Briggs v. Lawrence (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 605, 614, 281 Cal. Rptr. 578 .

(n28)Footnote 22.2. Malloy v. Fong (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 356, 370-372, 232 P.2d 241 ; Briggs v. Lawrence (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 605, 614-615, 281 Cal. Rptr. 578 ; Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 874, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647 ; Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 220.

(n29)Footnote 22.3. S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n30)Footnote 22.4. Lab. Code § 3201 et seq.

(n31)Footnote 22.5. See S.G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 354-355, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n32)Footnote 22.6. Lab. Code § 1140 et seq.

(n33)Footnote 22.7. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n34)Footnote 22.8. Lab. Code § 6300 et seq.

(n35)Footnote 23. See Fleming v. Foothill-Montrose Ledger (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 681, 688-689, 139 Cal. Rptr. 579 (news carrier-vendor held to be independent contractor).

(n36)Footnote 23.1. See Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 608-609 n.6, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (expressing "grave doubts" as to whether staff doctors are independent contractors with hospital for purposes of sexual harrassment cause of action under Fair Employment and Housing Act, Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.); see also Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 878 n.10, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647 (placing respondeat superior liability on pizza franchisee for torts of driver while making delivery is consistent with rationale behind doctrine, that business enterprise should be liable for risks inherent in, or created by, operation of enterprise).

(n37)Footnote 24. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 877, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647 ; Anderson v. Badger (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d 736, 742-743, 191 P.2d 768 .

(n38)Footnote 24.1. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 877, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647 .

(n39)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 2750.5(a).

(n40)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 2750.5(b).

(n41)Footnote 27. Lab. Code § 2750.5(c).

(n42)Footnote 28. Lab. Code § 2750.5(c).

(n43)Footnote 29. Foss v. Anthony Industries (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 794, 189 Cal. Rptr. 31 .

(n44)Footnote 30. Foss v. Anthony Industries (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 794, 797-799, 189 Cal. Rptr. 31 .

(n45)Footnote 31. Foss v. Anthony Industries (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 794, 798, 189 Cal. Rptr. 31 ; see also Review of Selected 1978 California Legislation, 10 Pac. L.J. 247, 347-349 (1979).

(n46)Footnote 31.1. 0v. Nelson (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 908, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728, 188 P.3d 659 .

(n47)Footnote 31.2. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 15, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 .

(n48)Footnote 31.3. Ramirez v. Nelson (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 908, 917, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728, 188 P.3d 659 .

(n49)Footnote 31.4. Ramirez v. Nelson (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 908, 917, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 728, 188 P.3d 659 .

(n50)Footnote 31.5. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1003-1004, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 . See Mendoza v. Brodeur (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 72, 77, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 310 (presumption that a person who hires an unlicensed contractor is an employer is conclusive.)

(n51)Footnote 31.6. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1004, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 ; Rinaldi v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 217, 223, 244 Cal. Rptr. 637 .

(n52)Footnote 31.7. State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (Meier) (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 5, 16, 219 Cal. Rptr. 13, 706 P.2d 1146 ; Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1004-1005, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 . See also Travelers Ins. Co. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1038, 195 Cal. Rptr. 564 .

(n53)Footnote 31.8. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1006, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 .

(n54)Footnote 31.9. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1007, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 .

(n55)Footnote 31.10. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1006, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 .

(n56)Footnote 31.11. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1006, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 .

(n57)Footnote 31.12. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1004-1009, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 .

(n58)Footnote 31.13. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1007-1008, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 (evidence was sufficient to support finding that worker was in fact independent contractor and was estopped from denying otherwise, where defendants knew he was at one time licensed and he failed to disclose to them that license had since lapsed, and where trial court reasonably could have found that defendants understandably relied on him to their detriment).

(n59)Footnote 31.14. Chin v. Namvar (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 994, 1007, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 294 .

(n60)Footnote 32. Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 492, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 .

(n61)Footnote 33. Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446, 456, 183 Cal. Rptr. 51, 645 P.2d 102 ; Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 492, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 .

(n62)Footnote 34. See Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 492, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 . For the standard jury instruction on respondeat superior when the general employer and/or special employer denies responsibility, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3706 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction on joint responsibility in a special employment, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3707 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n63)Footnote 35. See Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 492, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 ; see also Von Beltz v. Stuntman, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1467, 1487, 255 Cal. Rptr. 755 .

(n64)Footnote 36. Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446, 460, 183 Cal. Rptr. 51, 645 P.2d 102 ; Marsh v. Tilley Steel Co. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 486, 494-495, 162 Cal. Rptr. 320, 606 P.2d 355 ; see, e.g., Stevens v. Roman Catholic Bishop of Fresno (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 877, 889-891, 123 Cal. Rptr. 171 (priest was dual employee of both local and regional church authorities).

(n65)Footnote 37. Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446, 459, 183 Cal. Rptr. 51, 645 P.2d 102 .

(n66)Footnote 38. See Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446 .

(n67)Footnote 39. Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446 .

(n68)Footnote 40. Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446 .

(n69)Footnote 41. See Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446 .

(n70)Footnote 42. See Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446 .

(n71)Footnote 43. Societa per Azioni de Navigazione Italia v. City of Los Angeles (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 446 .

105 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.05

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.05 Employee Conduct Within the Scope of Employment

[1] Generally

Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer is vicariously liable for the torts of his or her employees if those torts are committed within the scope of the tortfeasor's employment.ⁿ¹ The third-party plaintiff has the burden of proving that the employee's tort occurred within the scope of employment.ⁿ² Whether an employee's tort occurred within the scope of his or her employment is generally a question of fact, but when the facts are undisputed and no conflicting inferences can be drawn from the facts presented, resolution of scope of employment issues then becomes a question of law.ⁿ³ Summary judgment may be granted on the basis of the employee's uncontroverted declaration that he or she was acting in the course of employment unless the opposing party asserts at least some theory to the contrary.^{n3.1}

The various tests that courts have applied in determining whether or not specific conduct is within the scope of employment are discussed in [2], below. The persuasive effect of workers' compensation precedent on scope of employment determinations is discussed in [3], below. Time and place issues, including the "going and coming rule" and the liability of employers for employee torts committed during social functions sponsored by the employer and during off-duty and break time, are discussed in [4], below. The effect of the fact that the employee was acting for his or her own personal business at the time of the tort on the scope of employment determination is discussed in [5], below. The consequences of an employee's violation of the employer's rules or instructions on the vicarious liability of the employer is discussed in [6], below. Finally, the implications of the employee's use of the employer's facilities and/or instrumentalities in the commission of the tort are discussed in [7], below.

[2] Tests Applied to Determine Whether Conduct Was Within Scope of Employment

Courts have utilized various tests to determine whether or not specific conduct by an employee is within the scope of his or her employment. Older cases focused on the relationship between the employee's conduct and the duties of his or her employment. For example, in Jameson v. Gavett,ⁿ⁴ the scope of employment test was articulated as follows:ⁿ⁵

1. What are the employee's express duties and was the employee doing them at the time of the tort?
2. Did the tort occur while the employee was pursuing the employer's business interests?
3. Did the employee have express or implied employer authority to do the acts causing plaintiff's injuries?

Under this test, if the answer to any of these questions was affirmative, the employee's conduct was deemed to be within the scope of employment and the employer was liable for plaintiff's injuries.ⁿ⁶

More recently, courts have followed a different approach, especially in cases involving an employee's intentional torts. California no longer follows the traditional rule that conduct is within the scope of employment only if motivated, in whole or in part, by a desire to serve the employer's interest,^{n6.1} and liability is also not precluded by an employer's rule against the tortious conduct.ⁿ⁷ However, the California Supreme Court has made clear that respondeat superior liability for intentional torts requires a showing that the tort had a causal nexus to the employee's work.^{n7.1}

It is not entirely clear what effect these rules concerning the requisite nexus between intentional tortious conduct and the employee's work will have in the context of nonintentional torts. In many cases involving negligent conduct, the determination of the nexus between the conduct and the duties of employment has been viewed as only one part of the test. Even if the conduct is deemed to lie outside the scope of employment under the "nexus" test, the employer may nevertheless be liable if the conduct is "foreseeable," meaning that it is not so unusual or startling that it would seem unfair to include the resultant loss among the other costs of the employer's business.ⁿ⁸ The inquiry should be whether the risk is one that may fairly be regarded as typical of or broadly incidental to the enterprise undertaken by the employer.^{n8.1} In short, the trend is toward application of a dual test, under which a tort is deemed to be committed within the scope of employment if either (1) the employee's act or conduct was "foreseeable" in the above sense, or (2) the employee's act or conduct was required by or incident to his or her duties, regardless of whether it could be foreseen by the employer.ⁿ⁹

In determining whether or not an employee's tort was incidental to his or her job duties, courts have held that an employee's duties, and the purpose of his or her employment, are broadly construed.ⁿ¹⁰ A corollary to this principle is that, even if an employee was engaged in a specific activity or function that he or she was not hired to perform, the employee may still be found to be within the scope of employment if the activity in question is related to the employment or provides an indirect benefit to the employer.ⁿ¹¹

[3] Applicability of Workers' Compensation Cases in Defining Scope of Employment

Under workers' compensation law, an applicant for benefits must establish that the applicant's injury arose out of and in the course of the employment.ⁿ¹² This rule is discussed at length in Chapter 20.

California courts have held that, because of the similarity in terminology between the tests applied to determine whether respondeat superior liability exists and those applied to determine whether an injury is covered by workers' compensation, and because of the fact that both laws cover the allocation of risks from workplace injuries, consideration of workers' compensation case authority is appropriate in tort cases involving the doctrine of respondeat superior, not only in determining threshold scope of employment issues, but also in the application of corollary rules and exceptions to the scope of employment rule.ⁿ¹³ The courts have also held, however, that although workers' compensation case authority is "useful," "helpful," or "illuminating," it is not controlling in tort cases because of the differences in the purposes and policies behind the workers' compensation law and the doctrine of respondeat superior.ⁿ¹⁴ The workers' compensation law is a protective statute intended to provide limited benefits for work-related injuries to employees, regardless of fault, and contains a statutory mandate in favor of liberal interpretation for the purpose of awarding such benefits.ⁿ¹⁵ The tort doctrine of respondeat superior, by contrast, imposes vicarious liability on employers for injuries to third parties caused by employees.ⁿ¹⁶ Furthermore, tort awards are intended to provide complete indemnification to the injured person for losses proximately caused by tortious conduct, as contrasted with the more limited awards available under the workers' compensation law.ⁿ¹⁷ Thus, an employee who suffers an injury that is compensable under workers' compensation law, because it "arose out of and occurred in the course of employment," may not necessarily be held to have "acted within the scope of employment" for purposes of the doctrine of respondeat superior.ⁿ¹⁸

[4] Time and Place Issues

[a] Going and Coming Rule

[i] Generally

The "going and coming rule" is applied by courts to determine whether torts committed while an employee is commuting or traveling constitute employee conduct within the scope of employment. Under the going and coming rule, an employee is outside the scope of employment while commuting to and from work.ⁿ¹⁹ Thus, an employer ordinarily will not be liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior for torts committed by an employee while he or she is commuting to and from work.ⁿ²⁰ The going and coming rule also generally applies to an employee when he or she is traveling to or from lunch (or other meal periods), even if the employee is driving a vehicle owned by the employer, unless he or she is also performing an errand for the employer.ⁿ²¹

Numerous exceptions to the rule, discussed in [ii]-[vii], below, have limited the application of the rule to other situations. Generally, an exception to the going and coming rule will be found when the employer derives some incidental benefit from the employee's trip.^{n21.1}

[ii] Exception--Special Errand Rule

When an employee pursues the employer's business during his or her commute time, the going and coming rule will not apply, and the employee will be held to be within the scope of employment during his or her entire commute period.ⁿ²² One court stated the exception as follows:

If the employee is not simply on his way from his home to his normal place of work or returning from said place to his home for his own purpose, but is coming from home or returning to it on a special errand either as part of his regular duties or at a specific order or request of his employer, the employee is considered to be in the scope of his employment from the time that he starts on the errand until he has returned or until he deviates therefrom for personal reasons.ⁿ²³

The special errand rule applies both to employees who regularly perform work for their employer during commute periods, and to employees who only occasionally do so.ⁿ²⁴

Just as the going and coming rule applies to employees while commuting and during lunch hour break travel, the special errand rule applies whether the employer errands are performed during commute periods or during the employee's lunch period.ⁿ²⁵

The special errand rule can apply to a wide variety of employment or employment-related activities. Such activities include tasks such as transporting or retrieving employer tools and equipment,ⁿ²⁶ traveling to and from a service call when the employee is "on call" at home for the employer's business,ⁿ²⁷ attending an out-of-town business conference,^{n27.1} and going to and from employer-sponsored social events when the social event confers a direct or indirect business benefit on the employer and the employer expects or requires the employee to attend.ⁿ²⁸ Attendance at nonrequired but employer-compensated college classes is not a special errand,^{n28.1} nor is driving a fellow employee to a park-and-ride lot after work.^{n28.2}

An employee's attendance at an out-of-town business conference may be considered a special errand under the special errand doctrine. When an employee intends to drive home from the errand, the errand is not concluded simply because the employee drives his or her regular commute route, but rather, the errand is concluded when the employee returns home or deviates from the errand for personal reasons.^{n28.3}

Even if the special-errand exception to the going-and-coming rule is found to be applicable, the employee may yet be found to be outside of the scope of employment if, at the time of the injury, the employee has completely abandoned the employer's business for personal reasons. To constitute an abandonment, however, the deviation or departure from the employer's business to pursue a personal errand must be substantial and complete. A mere deviation for personal reasons is insufficient. An employee who is pursuing a business errand and a personal objective simultaneously is still acting within the scope of employment.ⁿ²⁹

Whether there has been a deviation so material as to constitute a complete departure by the employee from the course of employment is usually a question of fact. However, if the evidence clearly shows a complete abandonment, the court may make the determination that the employee is outside the scope of employment as a matter of law.ⁿ³⁰ Similarly, a court may find as a matter of law that a deviation is insufficiently material to relieve the employer of respondeat superior liability.^{n30.1}

In making the determination, a variety of relevant circumstances should be considered and weighed. These factors may include (1) the intent of the employee; (2) the nature, time, and place of the employee's conduct; (3) the work that the employee was hired to do; (4) the incidental acts that the employer should reasonably have expected the employee to do; (5) the amount of freedom allowed the employee in performing his or her duties; and (6) the amount of time consumed in the personal activity.^{n30.2}

One court has cast the question as whether the employee's deviation was both minor and foreseeable.^{n30.3} In Lazar v. Thermal Equipment Corp.,ⁿ³¹ the employee injured the plaintiff while the employee was driving to a store on a personal errand. Pursuing that errand also required the employee to deviate from the most direct route between employer's main office and employee's residence. The employee-tortfeasor was a project engineer who was frequently called at home in the evenings to "trouble shoot" and drive to the employer's worksites. He traveled frequently from his home to both the employer's main office and various work locations, sometimes using a company car, and was required to transport employer equipment in either his own or a company vehicle. He was both required to use his own vehicle for company business and authorized to use company vehicles for personal business.ⁿ³² The court of appeal held that these employment arrangements were of mutual interest to the employee and employer, and that the employer was therefore liable to plaintiff because the employee's "deviation" in stopping to shop was both minor and foreseeable.ⁿ³³

[iii] Exception--When Travel Inherent in Job Duties

The going and coming rule was primarily intended to apply to employees with a single, fixed work location, whose job duties do not include driving.ⁿ³⁴ Courts have held that an employee whose regular job duties require frequent field work, customer contact, or travel between various locations of the employer are not subject to automatic application of the going and coming rule.ⁿ³⁵

Lazar v. Thermal Equipment Corp. ⁿ³⁶ provides an example of the going and coming rule's inapplicability when employee travel is an inherent and frequent element of the employee's job duties. In that case, the court's holding that the employer could be held liable for the negligence of the employee was based on the facts that the employee-tortfeasor ran errands for the employer during commute hours on a regular basis, was "on call" at home to handle business emergencies in the evening and on weekends, and traveled between the employer's various work locations during daytime work hours.ⁿ³⁷

In Ducey v. Argo Sales Co., ⁿ³⁸ a housecleaner traveled from home to one or more employer properties each day, but was not required to use her automobile or to transport employer equipment between her job locations. The employee was killed and plaintiffs were seriously injured in an accident that occurred while the employee was commuting home at the end of her workday. The California Supreme Court held that the going and coming rule applied to preclude employer liability, because travel by personal auto was not inherent in employee's job and because, at the time of her death, she was not performing any special errand for her employer.ⁿ³⁹

[iv] Exception--When Employer Pays for Employee Commute Time

The going and coming rule may be inapplicable in some instances when the employer compensates the employee for his or her work time. In Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co.,ⁿ⁴⁰ the employee and employer agreed that the employee's commute time would be paid work time. While the employee was driving home from work, he was involved in an accident that resulted in injury to a third party. The California Supreme Court held that when the commute period is made part of the employee's paid workday, the employee remains within the scope of employment during commute periods, and the employer is therefore liable for its employee's torts as long as the employee was using the commute portion of his or her paid workday for its designated purpose.ⁿ⁴¹ The Court supported the result of employer liability on the rationale that the employer had chosen to compensate its employees for their commute time because the arrangement also benefitted the employer by geographically expanding the size of employer's employee selection pool.ⁿ⁴²

The Court in Hinman expressly reserved the question of whether the mere payment of travel expenses, without additional payment for the employee's travel time, reflects a sufficient benefit for the employer so that the employer should bear responsibility to innocent third parties for the risks inherent in the travel.ⁿ⁴³ The Court did cite a workers' compensation case that had suggested that the payment of travel expenses must be a substantial inducement to accept the employment, and the place of employment must be an extensive distance from the employee's home, for the going and coming rule to be held inapplicable.ⁿ⁴⁴

The issue left open by the Supreme Court in Hinman was addressed in the earlier case of Harris v. Oro-Dam Constructors.ⁿ⁴⁵ In Harris, the employer had paid its employees who lived over 15 miles from their worksite a travel allowance pursuant to an agreement between the employer and its employees' labor organization. At trial, the jury had exonerated the employer because its employee had completed his workday at the time of the accident with plaintiff. On appeal, the plaintiff argued that when the employer pays an employee's commute or travel expenses, the employee's commute periods should be deemed within the scope of employment as a matter of law. The court of appeal stated that the obtaining of such a benefit in the collective bargaining process, standing alone, cannot automatically make commuting employees within the scope of employment in a tort action.ⁿ⁴⁶ In reaching this conclusion, the court also relied on the facts that the employer did not control employee commute methods, did not require employees to use their personal vehicles for travel to and from work, and did not pay employees their hourly wage for commute time.ⁿ⁴⁷ The court also concluded that, unless the employer controlled the employee's travel in some way, the employer did not benefit from the employee's commute, and therefore could not be held liable for the employee's torts committed during the commute.ⁿ⁴⁸

Subsequent cases have also addressed the issue left open in Hinman. These courts have refused to impose liability on an employer based solely on the payment of a travel allowance.^{n48.1} The fact that the payment of a travel allowance may bring an employee within the scope of employment for purposes of workers' compensation law does not require that the employer also be subject to respondeat superior liability under tort law. The tests, though similar, are not identical; and the benefit to the employer provided by an allowance has been held insufficient to impose vicarious liability under respondeat superior principles.^{n48.2}

[v] Exception--When Employer Requires Use of Employee Vehicle

When an employee is required to drive his or her own vehicle to work so that the vehicle will be available for use for the employer's business during the workday, motor vehicle accidents during the regular business hours and while the employee is commuting between his or her home and the job site are considered foreseeable and inherent risks of the employer's enterprise. Therefore, accidents that occur on the way to or from work are within the scope of employment.ⁿ⁴⁹ Workers' compensation cases have also held that if the employer requires employees to furnish a vehicle on the job, the going and coming rule will not apply, at least when there is no evidence that at the time of the accident the employee was not driving directly to or from work.ⁿ⁵⁰

The required-vehicle exception to the going and coming rule has typically been applied when an employer requires the use of a vehicle as an integral part of performing the job at disparate locations throughout the course of work hours.^{n50.1} It does not apply to impose liability on an employer for the conduct of the employee during time that he or she is not actually performing the job, such as during a break between shifts.^{n50.2}

[vi] Exception--When Use of Car Gives Some Incidental Benefit to Employer

A related concept is the exception recognized when the employer derives some incidental benefit from the employee's use of the vehicle.^{n50.3} Thus in a recent case, the court of appeal found that an accident that occurred en route to work was outside the coming and going rule because the employee was on call for emergencies, carried his employer's equipment and supplies and because he would sometimes go from his home to a jobsite.^{n50.4} In Singh the court noted that it is irrelevant who owns the vehicle, whether the employee receives reimbursement for its use, and whether the employee performs a personal errand while driving home.^{n50.5}

[vii] Exception--Special Risk Rule

The special risk exception to the going and coming rule has typically been applied in workers' compensation cases when the employee suffers an injury from a special risk causally related to employment. That exception applies if (1) the employee would not have been at the location where the injury occurred but for the employment; and (2) the risk is distinctive in nature or greater than risks common to the public.^{n50.6} Although noting important distinctions between the workers' compensation cases and respondeat superior law, the court of appeal, in Depew v. Crocodile Enterprises, Inc., assumed that the special risk exception does apply for purposes of respondeat superior.^{n50.7}

In Depew, an employee who fell asleep at the wheel while driving home from work after working extra hours killed a third party. The court of appeal held that, even assuming the special risk exception applies, this case did not fall within that exception because there was an insufficient causal nexus between the employment and the third party's death.^{n50.8} The court explained that the causation standard in the respondeat superior context requires more than "but for" causation. The applicable standard is whether the incident leading to injury was an outgrowth of the employment, inherent in the employment, or foreseeable from the employee's duties.^{n50.9} In this case, neither the nature of the employee's job nor the hours he worked made it predictable that he would fall asleep at the wheel and cause a fatal car accident. In addition, to the extent that the employee was too tired to drive home without causing a fatal accident, his condition was neither an outgrowth of his employment nor inherent in the working environment. Furthermore, such extreme fatigue was not typical of or broadly incidental to operating a restaurant.^{n50.10}

On the other hand, in Bussard v. Minimed, Inc., ^{n50.11} the court held that the special risk exception applied when an employee was involved in an automobile accident with a third party while driving home after suffering pesticide exposure at work. That an employee might not be fit to drive after breathing lingering pesticide fumes for several hours was not such a startling or unusual event that a car accident on her commute home was unforeseeable. The accident occurred after the employee decided to drive home even though her supervisors asked about her ability to drive and offered her medical assistance. She insisted she was fine and declined their help. Her decision to drive home gave the employer an opening to raise the going-and-coming rule; the rule did not apply because her decision was a fortuity that did not obscure the third party's central claim that her job had contributed to the accident. Foreseeability of a risk arising from or connected to work requires no more than a causal connection between a work-related event and the employee's subsequent act causing injury.n50.12

[b] Social Functions

Because most employees are not hired for the purpose of attendance at or participation in social events, when an employee is involved in tortious activity while going to, attending, or commuting home from a social event, obvious scope of employment issues are raised. California appellate courts have held that attendance at social events, although not part of an employee's normal job duties, may in some instances come under the "special errand" exception to the going and coming rule.n51 For a social event to qualify as a special errand, the event must be related to the employee's employment and provide an intended direct or indirect benefit to the employer.n52 Whether or not a particular social event is within the scope of employment is generally a question of fact.n53

In Boynton v. McKales, n54 plaintiff was injured by an employee who was returning home from a company banquet. The employee was intoxicated at the time of the accident, and had pleaded guilty to driving while intoxicated in related criminal proceedings. Evidence was presented at trial that service pins were presented at the banquet, that the banquet benefitted the employer by promoting its sales program and continuity of employment, that supervisors attended the event, and that the event was an annual and official company function. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's finding that the employer was liable to plaintiff, holding that the evidence supported the inference that the event was to the benefit of the employer.n55

In Robbins v. Hewlett-Packard Co., n56 the employee was en route home from an employer-sponsored annual summer picnic when he caused a traffic accident, resulting in the death of plaintiff's spouse and child. At trial in plaintiff's action for wrongful death, evidence was presented indicating that the picnic provided a benefit to the employer in the form of increased employee morale, but that attendance at the picnic was voluntary, devoid of educational or awards presentations, and bore no relationship to an attending employee's continued employment, performance evaluation, or promotional opportunities.n57 The court of appeal affirmed a trial court judgment in favor of the employer-defendant, holding that the evidence of indirect employer benefit was insufficient to form the basis of respondeat superior liability for the social event in question.n58

While Robbins and Boynton involved planned and formally scheduled social events, informal social activity at the workplace can also raise the potential for employer liability. Employers have been held liable to injured employees or third parties when after-hours socializing and the furnishing of alcohol occurs with the express or implied permission of the employer, and accidents or workplace physical altercations occur. Especially when the employees are encouraged to remain near the jobsite so that the employer may more readily recall them to work, the foreseeability of fights and other injuries resulting from drinking may support the imposition of liability on the employer when injuries do occur.n59

However, a plaintiff must show more than employee drinking on the employer's premises. In one case, an off-duty employee injured plaintiff in an auto accident that occurred while the employee was driving home from the employer's premises. The plaintiff sought damages from the employer on three theories: respondeat superior; that employer was liable to plaintiff under Business and Professions Code section 25602 for furnishing liquor to a person (the tortfeasor) whom employer knew was an alcoholic; and that by permitting consumption of alcohol on its premises, employer had violated its statutory duty under Labor Code section 6400 to provide its employees with a safe workplace. The court of appeal first held that the tortfeasor had not been acting within the scope of his employment for respondeat superior purposes. The court based this conclusion on the evidence that showed that the tortfeasor was off-duty on the evening of the accident, was on the employer's premises that evening for wholly personal reasons, and was supplied with liquor by a second off-duty employee.n60 The court also held that the employer's failure to stop the consumption of alcohol on its premises could not constitute the "furnishing" of alcohol to the tortfeasor within the meaning of Business and Professions Code section 25602.n61 Lastly, the appellate court held that plaintiff could not prevail on the basis of Labor Code Section 6400, because plaintiff had failed to establish that he was in a class of persons intended to be protected from harm under that statute.n62 The appellate court in Calrow also held that plaintiff had failed to establish or offer proof that the defendant employer had made drinking at its facilities a customary incident of employment.ⁿ⁶³ This portion of the court's ruling was significant because plaintiff had attempted to support his claims by citing workers' compensation case authorityⁿ⁶⁴ holding that employers supporting a high level of on-the-job socializing and furnishing of alcohol at social events, or who had clearly and repeatedly furnished alcohol at employment-related functions to employees it knew to be alcoholics, could be found to have brought the drinking within the scope of the employment. The court held that plaintiff had not made the requisite showing of employer participation, and that in any event the workers' compensation case involved the finding that the employer was estopped to raise a defense of voluntary intoxication, which was not pertinent to the third-party personal injury action.ⁿ⁶⁵

[c] Off-Duty and Break Time

Generally, the going-and-coming rule encompasses the time that an employee takes away from work for meals. Under the "lunch-break" rule, the employer is not vicariously liable for the negligence of an employee who is not in the service of his or her employer while taking time away from work for meals.^{n65.1} However, in some instances, an employee may be found to be acting within the scope of employment for purposes of respondeat superior even during the employee's lunch hour or off-duty hours.ⁿ⁶⁶

In Gipson v. Davis Realty Co.,ⁿ⁶⁷ the employee combined his lunch break with auto travel to a potential real estate listing for his employer. The accident occurred before the employee reached either his lunch site or the property listing site. The court of appeal held that when the employee combines his or her break time with accomplishment of employer business, that employee remains within the scope of employment for the duration of the relevant break period.ⁿ⁶⁸ The court stated that an employee on a lunch break or off-duty period who combines his or her break with work for the employer should be on the same footing as a commuting employee who performs a special errand for the employer while en route between the job and the employee's residence.ⁿ⁶⁹ The employee will remain within the scope of employment in both situations until reaching his or her home or office destination unless the employee totally departs from the purposes of his or her multipurpose mission.ⁿ⁷⁰ⁿ⁷¹ The Gipson court indicated that, although activities during a pure break will be outside the scope of employment, once break time is devoted in any measure to accomplishment of employer business, the employer can be liable to the plaintiff under the special errand exception to the going and coming rule.ⁿ⁷²

Employer liability for the torts of employees may also apply, under appropriate circumstances, to conduct occurring during employees' off-duty hours. The California Supreme Court has held that employees who are off-duty at home, but also "on call" for employer business are acting within the scope of employment while going to, performing, and returning home from a service call for the employer.ⁿ⁷³ A public entity may be vicariously liable for the conduct of an off-duty law enforcement officer in the course of making an arrest.^{n73.1}

However, an employee who has been furnished with a company vehicle and is on call while at home does not bring 24-hour employer liability regardless of the nature of the employee's activities at the time of the accident.^{n73.2} The focus is strictly on the employee's purpose at the time of the injury-producing accident, and there is no employer liability if the employee's use of the vehicle at that time was purely personal.^{n73.3}

Respondeat superior liability may arise for conduct committed by an employee on the work premises, but after work hours have ended. The employer may be liable if the employee's presence is endorsed by the express or implied permission of the employer, and the employer either receives a benefit from the employee's presence or the employee's presence is a customary incident of the employment relationship.^{n73.4} However, an off-duty employee who travels to his or her employer's premises for his or her own purposes, and in the course of doing so commits a tort, will generally not expose his or her employer to liability to plaintiff under the doctrine of respondeat superior.^{n73.5} Further, an employer will not be liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior for injury caused by an employee while driving on off-duty time to and from a location in order to comply with a condition required for employment, such as getting fingerprinted, when the employee has discretion to decide when, where and how to satisfy the condition.^{n73.6}

As with scope-of-employment questions generally, the determination of whether a tort committed during an employee's off-duty time is within the scope of employment is ordinarily a question of fact.^{n73.7} However, it becomes a question of law if the undisputed facts will not support an inference that the employee was acting within the scope of employment.^{n73.8}

[d] Commercial Traveler Rule

The commercial traveler rule in workers' compensation provides that during the period an employee travels on the employer's business, the employee is within the course of employment, which includes the activities of obtaining food and shelter.^{n73.9} By contrast, if an employee commits the tort while engaged in purely private purposes, the private conduct is outside the scope of employment and cannot form the basis for an employer's respondeat superior liability.^{n75.10}

For example, in Sunderland v. Lockheed Martin Aeronautical Systems Support Co.,^{n75.11} an employee on a travel assignment for his employer collided with plaintiffs' car at a fast-food establishment. On the day the accident occurred, the employee had finished work in the middle of the day and left the work site. Much later, driving his own vehicle, the employee stopped at a fast food restaurant, where the collision with plaintiffs' vehicle occurred. At that time, the purpose of the employee's driving and activity was personal in nature and not related to his employment or to his employer. The employee would have been covered for workers' compensation purposes under the commercial traveler rule. However, because he was not acting within the scope of his employment when the accident occurred, his activity could not form the basis for vicariously imposing liability on his employer. Although the employer paid the employee an additional 10 percent above his salary during his travel assignment and a per diem amount for housing and incidental expenses including transportation, the payment of a travel allowance did not reflect a sufficient benefit to the employer for it to bear responsibility for plaintiffs' injuries. The benefit of the employee's activity to the employer's enterprise, and the employer's right to control that activity, were relevant factors in determining whether the activity came within the scope of employment. The employee performed no services for the employer after leaving the workplace, and drove to the fast food restaurant for his own benefit. His visit to the fast-food establishment was not for the benefit of the employer, which exercised no control over his choice of transportation generally or his movements at the time he collided with plaintiffs' vehicle. The fact that the employer required the employee to be on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week while on the travel assignment did not alter the fact that the purpose of his trip to the fast-food establishment to buy food was a purely private and personal activity, which was a substantial personal deviation from his employment duties sufficient to make it unfair to hold the employer vicariously liable.

[e] Premises Line Rule

Under workers' compensation law, for purposes of applying the going-and-coming rule, the employment relationship begins when the employee enters the employer's premises. Injuries sustained in close proximity to the employer's premises may arise out of the employment, especially when the accident occurs in the parking lot used by employees or on public property immediately adjacent to the workplace. Thus, for purposes of workers' compensation, the course of employment includes a reasonable margin of time and space necessary to be used in passing to and from the place where the work is to be done.^{n75.12}

However, the premises rule does not apply in civil tort cases involving the going-and-coming rule for purposes of respondeat superior. The risks associated with an employee's commute to and from work generally are not, absent special circumstances recognized by the exceptions to the going-and-coming rule, inherent in, typical of, or created by their work.ⁿ⁷⁴ For example, in Hartline v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals,ⁿ⁷⁵ the trial court did not err in granting the employer's motion for summary adjudication of plaintiff's vicarious liability cause of action. As a matter of law, the employee, who was employed as a physical therapist, was not acting within the scope of her employment when she hit plaintiff and his dog with her car on her way into the employer's parking lot before her working hours began. The fact that the accident occurred on the employer's premises, i.e., the driveway to the parking lot, or on public property immediately adjacent to the premises, did not change the character of the accident to a risk foreseeably related to the employee's particular employment or to the necessary operation of the employer's business.

[5] Employee Personal Business Departures From the Scope of Employment

An on-duty employee who commits a tort in the pursuit of purely personal objectives will generally be found to have departed from the scope of employment.ⁿ⁷⁶ However, if the gist of an employee's personally-motivated activity is incidental in nature, aimed at employee convenience or comfort, and the tort occurs while the employee is also engaged in work for the employer, the employee is generally held not to have departed from the scope of employment.ⁿ⁷⁷

The employee's objectives or purposes for engaging in the activity causing the tort, rather than whether or not the tort occurred during working hours or involved any use of the employer's facilities, is the determinative factor. If an employee is pursuing purely personal ends, the employer will generally not be vicariously liable to plaintiff even though the employee is on duty at the time of the accident, while an off-duty or commuting employee-tortfeasor who is pursuing employer objectives or performing work assignments at the time of the accident will generally expose the employer to vicarious liability.ⁿ⁷⁸

[6] Effect of Employee Violation of Employer's Rules or Instructions

Respondeat superior liability does not depend on the employee's specific authority to perform the act that results in the third-party plaintiff's injury. Even without such authority, if the employee acts within the scope of employment, his or her employer is vicariously liable to plaintiff.ⁿ⁷⁹ Even if the employee's conduct is contrary to the employer's instructions, this fact alone will not take the employee outside the scope of employment for purposes of respondeat superior liability.ⁿ⁸⁰

For example, in Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc.,ⁿ⁸¹ plaintiff rode with his uncle, the employee, on a tractor while the employee was performing his normal task of disking a field. The employer had maintained a "no rider" rule because of the potential danger. Plaintiff fell off the tractor into the disking attachment, and was severely injured. Plaintiff sued the employer on a respondeat superior theory, and sought an instruction that the employee was acting within the scope of his employment as a matter of law. The trial court refused, and instead submitted the issue of scope of employment to the jury as a factual question. The trial court found for defendant, and plaintiff appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed, concluding that the trial court should have determined that the employee was acting within the scope of his employment as a matter of law.ⁿ⁸² The Court held that, as long as it was clear that at the time of the injury the employee was following the employer's instructions regarding the task to be performed, the fact that the employer had not authorized the employee to take a passenger was immaterial.ⁿ⁸³ The Court also rejected the employer's contention that the employee's negligence should not be imputed to the employer because the unauthorized act did not benefit the employer. The Court noted that an employer can be liable for its employee's unauthorized intentional torts committed within the scope of employment, despite lack of benefit to the employer.ⁿ⁸⁴ Although the employer anticipated the risk of injury inherent in carrying a passenger on a tractor and sought to minimize the risk with its no passenger rule, the Court held that an employer cannot avoid liability by ordering its employees to act carefully.ⁿ⁸⁵ The law imposes the risk of injury arising out of the employment on the employer as a cost attendant to doing business, and because it was undisputed that the employee was performing a task within the scope of the employment at the time of the injury, the issue of the scope of employment should have been determined as a matter of law.ⁿ⁸⁶

In an earlier case, it was held that acts of employee insubordination were insufficient to sever the employee's employment relationship or to take him outside the scope of employment. The employee, a bus driver, reported for work intoxicated, ignored the orders of a company supervisor not to take his bus onto his route, and drove the bus into plaintiff's vehicle. The court of appeal held that the employer could not avoid liability to plaintiff by arguments that tortfeasor terminated his employment by reporting for work intoxicated and was in any event outside of his scope of employment by driving the bus in violation of employer orders.ⁿ⁸⁷

[7] Employee's Use of Instrumentalities and Facilities of Employer

An employee who commits a tort using employer property while pursuing purely personal, nonemployment-related ends is generally found to be outside the scope of employment.ⁿ⁸⁸ Therefore, when plaintiff sues an employer on a respondeat superior theory based solely on the facts that tortfeasor was defendant's employee, and that the employee was on duty at the time of plaintiff's injury or was driving the employer's vehicle at the time of the accident, the employer is likely to prevail on the ground that the employee was not acting in the scope of his or her employment. In order to establish the employer's vicarious liability when the tort was accomplished through the use of the employer's facilities or instrumentalities, the plaintiff must also show that the employee was acting in a manner relating to his or her employment rather than solely for his or her personal ends.ⁿ⁸⁹ However, even if the employee was acting for his or her personal ends, the employer will be held liable if the deviation from the employer's business is insubstantial and foreseeable.ⁿ⁹⁰ For further discussion of issues involving the scope of employment when the employee is engaged in personal activities, see [5], above.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersScope of EmploymentGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 296, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 ; Munyon v. Ole's, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 701, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 . For the standard jury instructions on the scope of employment, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3720 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions; on the employer's liability for the employee's unauthorized acts, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3722 (Matthew Bender); and on the employer's liability when the employee's acts substantially deviate from the scope of employment, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3723 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n2)Footnote 2. Ducey v. Argo Sales Co. (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 707, 721, 159 Cal. Rptr. 835, 602 P.2d 755 ; Jeffrey E. v. Central Baptist Church (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 718, 722, 243 Cal. Rptr. 128 ; Munyon v. Ole's, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 701, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 299, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 ; Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 213, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 ; Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 963, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988 ; see also Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 125, 140, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326 (as matter of law, residential security company could not be held liable under respondeat superior doctrine for alleged rape by employee-security guard, because alleged rape was not within scope of security guard's employment).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. See Golden West Baseball Co. v. Talley (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1294, 1305, 284 Cal. Rptr. 53 .

(n5)Footnote 4. Jameson v. Gavett (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 646, 71 P.2d 937 .

(n6)Footnote 5. Jameson v. Gavett (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 646, 650-651, 71 P.2d 937 .

(n7)Footnote 6. Jameson v. Gavett (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 646, 650-651, 71 P.2d 937 ; see also Coats v. Construction & Gen. Laborers Local No. 185 (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 908, 913, 93 Cal. Rptr. 639 (employee acting within scope of employment if employee's conduct was authorized by employer, arose out of employee's performance of services for the employer or was for employer's benefit, or was incidental to the employee's work).

(n8)Footnote 6.1. See Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hosp. (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 297, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 (citing Carr v. Wm. C. Crowell Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 654, 171 P.2d 5).

(n9)Footnote 7. See Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 969, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 ; see Bailey v. Filco, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1552, 1560, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333 .

(n10)Footnote 7.1. See Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hosp. (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 297, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 . For discussion of employer liability for intentional torts, see § 30.06.

(n11)Footnote 8. Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 209, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 ; Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 968, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 ; Alma W. v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 141-142, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 ; Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 958, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; see Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 619, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143 .

(n12)Footnote 8.1. Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 209, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 (police officer who raped women whom he stopped for traffic violation acted within scope of employment because, although act was uncommon, it was "broadly incidental" to enterprise of law enforcement).

(n13)Footnote 9. Jeffrey E. v. Central Baptist Church (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 718, 722, 243 Cal. Rptr. 128 ; Alma W. v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 141-142, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 ; Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 956-957, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 .

(n14)Footnote 10. Lazar v. Thermal Equip. Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 465, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 ; Alma W. v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 139, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 . see O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local #856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1158 ("Such a broad definition of 'within the scope of employment' ensures that third parties injured by an employee have a remedy against a party that is more likely to be able to pay a judgment--i.e., employers--under the theory of respondeat superior.").

(n15)Footnote 11. Robbins v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494, 103 Cal. Rptr. 184 . For discussion of the "special errand rule," and the effect on employer's liability of torts occurring during social events, see [4], below.

(n16)Footnote 12. See Lab. Code § 3600(a); Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 958-959, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; Huntsinger v. Glass Containers Corp. (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 803, 807, 99 Cal. Rptr. 666 .

(n17)Footnote 13. See Depew v. Crocodile Enters., Inc. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 480, 487, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 (applying special risk exception to going and coming rule from workers' compensation cases for purposes of respondeat superior); Alma W. v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 143, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 (risk allocation); Huntsinger v. Glass Containers Corp. (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 803, 807, 99 Cal. Rptr. 666 (coming and going rule and exceptions to it in the tort field have strongly parallel rules and exceptions in the workers' compensation system). See also Tryer v. Ojai Valley Sch. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1476, 1482, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 114 (trial court did not err by refusing to consider workers' compensation cases, because finding of no liability was supported by both workers' compensation and tort cases).

(n18)Footnote 14. See Bailey v. Filco, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1552, 1560, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333 ; Anderson

v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 254, 259, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 534 ; Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 958-959, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; see also Tognazzini v. San Luis Coastal Unified School Dist. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1053, 1057, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790 (concept of "scope of employment" for purpose of determining respondeat superior liability in tort is more restrictive than phrase "arising out of and in the course of employment" used in workers' compensation); Munyon v. Ole's, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 702, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 ; Alma W. v. Oakland Unified Sch. Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 143, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 ; Castro v. State of California (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 156, 159, 138 Cal. Rptr. 572 .

(n19)Footnote 15. See Blackman v. Great American First Sav. Bank (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 598, 604-605, 284 Cal. Rptr. 491 ; Munyon v. Ole's, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 702, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 ; Huntsinger v. Glass Containers Corp. (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 803, 807-808, 99 Cal. Rptr. 666 .

(n20)Footnote 16. See Munyon v. Ole's, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 702, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 ; Castro v. State of California (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 156, 159, 138 Cal. Rptr. 572 .

(n21)Footnote 17. See Munyon v. Ole's, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 702, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 .

(n22)Footnote 18. See Munyon v. Ole's, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 703, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 ; see also Anderson v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 254, 259, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 534 (travel allowance brings commuting within coverage under workers' compensation law, but not within scope of employment under tort law); Castro v. State of California (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 156, 159-160, 138 Cal. Rptr. 572 (person who is employee for purposes of workers' compensation law may be regarded as nonemployee for purposes of imposing vicarious liability under doctrine of respondeat superior).

(n23)Footnote 19. Ducey v. Argo Sales Co. (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 707, 722, 159 Cal. Rptr. 835, 602 P.2d 755 ; Blackman v. Great Am. First Sav. Bank (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 598, 602, 284 Cal. Rptr. 491 ; Munyon v. Ole's, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 703, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 ; Castro v. State of California (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 156, 161, 138 Cal. Rptr. 572 ; Robbins v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 489, 493-494, 103 Cal. Rptr. 184 ; Harris v. Oro-Dam Constructors (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 911, 912, 75 Cal. Rptr. 544 .

(n24)Footnote 20. See Ducey v. Argo Sales Co. (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 707, 722-723, 159 Cal. Rptr. 835, 602 P.2d 755 ; Robbins v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 489, 493-494, 103 Cal. Rptr. 184 . For the standard jury instruction on the going-and-coming rule, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3724 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n25)Footnote 21. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 . For discussion of the "special errand rule," see [ii], below. For discussion of whether meal periods or other work breaks are within scope of employment, see [c], below.

(n26)Footnote 21.1. Depew v. Crocodile Enters., Inc. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 480, 486-487, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 (quoting Anderson v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 254, 258).

(n27)Footnote 22. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 210, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; Boynton v. McKales (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 777, 789, 294 P.2d 733 .

(n28)Footnote 23. Boynton v. McKales (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 777, 789, 294 P.2d 733 .

(n29)Footnote 24. Boynton v. McKales (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 777, 789, 294 P.2d 733 .

(n30)Footnote 25. See Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 209-210, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .

(n31)Footnote 26. See Tarasco v. Moyers (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 804, 809-810, 185 P.2d 86 .

(n32)Footnote 27. See Robinson v. George (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 238, 245, 105 P.2d 914 .

(n33)Footnote 27.1. See Jeewarat v. Warner Bros. Entertainment Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 427, 436-438, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837 .

(n34)Footnote 28. See Munyon v. Ole's Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 703, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 ; Boynton v. McKales (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 777, 789-791, 294 P.2d 733 . For further discussion of an employer's liability for torts committed while the employee is engaged in a social function, see [b], below.

(n35)Footnote 28.1. See Blackman v. Great Am. First Sav. Bank (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 598, 602, 284 Cal. Rptr. 491 .

(n36)Footnote 28.2. See Anderson v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 254, 259, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 534 .

(n37)Footnote 28.3. Jeewarat v. Warner Bros. Entertainment Inc. (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 427, 433-439, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 837 (because employer failed to show employee was not acting within course and scope of his employment when employee was involved in traffic accident on his way home from 3-day business conference, even though accident occurred on his regular commute route, trial court improperly granted employer summary judgment).

(n38)Footnote 29. Felix v. Asai (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 926, 932, 237 Cal. Rptr. 718 ; see O'Connor v. McDonald's Restaurants (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 25, 29 n.4, 269 Cal. Rptr. 101 .

(n39)Footnote 30. Loper v. Morrison (1944) 23 Cal. 2d 600, 605, 145 P.2d 1 ; O'Connor v. McDonald's Restaurants (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 25, 30, 269 Cal. Rptr. 101 .

(n40)Footnote 30.1. See Lazar v. Thermal Equip. Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 462-467, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 (court granted judgment notwithstanding verdict, finding employee within scope of employment).

(n41)Footnote 30.2. Loper v. Morrison (1944) 23 Cal. 2d 600, 605-606, 145 P.2d 1 ; O'Connor v. McDonald's Restaurants (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 25, 30, 269 Cal. Rptr. 101 ; Felix v. Asai (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 926, 932-933, 237 Cal. Rptr. 718 .

(n42)Footnote 30.3. See Lazar v. Thermal Equip. Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 462-467, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 .

(n43)Footnote 31. Lazar v. Thermal Equip. Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 .

(n44)Footnote 32. Lazar v. Thermal Equip. Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 461, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 .

(n45)Footnote 33. Lazar v. Thermal Equip. Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 465-466, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 .

(n46)Footnote 34. See Huntsinger v. Glass Containers Corp. (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 803, 809, 99 Cal. Rptr. 666 ; Harris v. Oro-Dam Constructors (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 911, 916-917, 75 Cal. Rptr. 544 .

(n47)Footnote 35. See Richards v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1941) 19 Cal. 2d 236, 120 P.2d 650 (insurance salesperson held not within going and coming rule as a matter of law, reversing nonsuit granted to employer-defendant at trial).

(n48)Footnote 36. Lazar v. Thermal Equip. Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 .

(n49)Footnote 37. Lazar v. Thermal Equip. Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 460-461, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 ; see also Huntsinger v. Glass Containers Corp. (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 803, 806, 99 Cal. Rptr. 666 (employee was required to perform service duties daily, meet customers at their offices, and appear daily at employer's main office for office work and staff meetings, and in addition frequently performed job assignments during commute hours and/or ran special errands for employer while commuting; employee held within the scope of employment).

(n50)Footnote 38. Ducey v. Argo Sales Co. (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 707, 159 Cal. Rptr. 835, 602 P.2d 755 .

(n51)Footnote 39. Ducey v. Argo Sales Co. (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 707, 722-723, 159 Cal. Rptr. 835, 602 P.2d 755 .

(n52)Footnote 40. Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988 .

(n53)Footnote 41. Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 962, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988 .

(n54)Footnote 42. Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 962, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988 .

(n55)Footnote 43. Hinman v. Westinghouse Elec. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 956, 962-963, 88 Cal. Rptr. 188, 471 P.2d 988 .

(n56)Footnote 44. See Zenith Nat. Ins. Co. v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 944, 947-948, 59 Cal. Rptr. 622, 428 P.2d 606 (payment of $10 per day to induce employee to commute 130 miles sufficient to hold injury during commute within scope of employment for purposes of workers' compensation benefits).

(n57)Footnote 45. Harris v. Oro-Dam Constructors (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 911, 75 Cal. Rptr. 544 .

(n58)Footnote 46. Harris v. Oro-Dam Constructors (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 911, 917, 75 Cal. Rptr. 544 .

(n59)Footnote 47. Harris v. Oro-Dam Constructors (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 911, 917-918, 75 Cal. Rptr. 544 .

(n60)Footnote 48. Harris v. Oro-Dam Constructors (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 911, 917-918, 75 Cal. Rptr. 544 .

(n61)Footnote 48.1. See Anderson v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 254, 259, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 534 ; see also Caldwell v. A.R.B., Inc. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1041, 222 Cal. Rptr. 494 .

(n62)Footnote 48.2. See Anderson v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 254, 259, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 534 ; see also Caldwell v. A.R.B., Inc. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1041, 222 Cal. Rptr. 494 . For discussion of the similarities and differences between the analyses used in workers' compensation and respondeat superior situations, see [3], above.

(n63)Footnote 49. See State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Haight (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 242, 252 Cal. Rptr. 162 ; see also Huntsinger v. Glass Containers Corp. (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 803, 810, 99 Cal. Rptr. 666 . For the standard jury instruction on the vehicle-use exception to the going-and-coming rule, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3725 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n64)Footnote 50. Smith v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Bd. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 814, 816-820, 73 Cal. Rptr. 253, 447 P.2d 365 ; see Huntsinger v. Glass Containers Corp. (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 803, 807, 99 Cal. Rptr. 666 . For discussion of the applicability of workers' compensation precedent to respondeat superior situations, see [3], above.

(n65)Footnote 50.1. See Tryer v. Ojai Valley Sch. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1476, 1481-1482, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 114 (citing cases).

(n66)Footnote 50.2. See Tryer v. Ojai Valley Sch. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1476, 1481-1483, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 114 (employee was required to drive between two sites during each of two shifts, but accident occurred while employee was returning for afternoon shift after lunch break).

(n67)Footnote 50.3. See Huntsinger v. Glass Containers Corp. (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 803, 811, 99 Cal. Rptr. 666 .

(n68)Footnote 50.4. See Singh v. Bd. of Retirement (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1186, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 220 .

(n69)Footnote 50.5. See Singh v. Board of Retirement (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1187 .

(n70)Footnote 50.6. Depew v. Crocodile Enters., Inc. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 480, 487, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 ; see § 20.22[4][b].

(n71)Footnote 50.7. Depew v. Crocodile Enters., Inc. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 480, 488, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 ; see Caldwell v. A.R.B., Inc. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1028, 1035-1036, 222 Cal. Rptr. 494 (assuming, without deciding, that special risk exception applies to third party claims against employer).

(n72)Footnote 50.8. Depew v. Crocodile Enters., Inc. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 480, 489, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 .

(n73)Footnote 50.9. Depew v. Crocodile Enters., Inc. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 480, 488-489, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 .

(n74)Footnote 50.10. Depew v. Crocodile Enters., Inc. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 480, 490, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 (citing cases recognizing necessity of causal nexus between employer's work and injury that occurs); see § 30.05[2].

(n75)Footnote 50.11. Bussard v. Minimed, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 798, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 675 .

(n76)Footnote 50.12. Bussard v. Minimed, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 798, 803-807, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 675 .

(n77)Footnote 51. See Robbins v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494, 103 Cal. Rptr. 184 ; Boynton v. McKales (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 777, 789, 294 P.2d 733 .

(n78)Footnote 52. Robbins v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494, 103 Cal. Rptr. 184 . For the standard jury instruction on social or recreational activities as within the scope of employment, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3726 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n79)Footnote 53. Boynton v. McKales (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 777, 790, 294 P.2d 733 .

(n80)Footnote 54. Boynton v. McKales (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 777, 294 P.2d 733 .

(n81)Footnote 55. Boynton v. McKales (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 777, 790-791, 294 P.2d 733 .

(n82)Footnote 56. Robbins v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 489, 103 Cal. Rptr. 184 .

(n83)Footnote 57. Robbins v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 489, 491-492, 103 Cal. Rptr. 184 .

(n84)Footnote 58. Robbins v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494-495, 103 Cal. Rptr. 184 .

(n85)Footnote 59. See Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 619-621, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143 .

(n86)Footnote 60. Calrow v. Appliance Industries, Inc. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 556, 561, 564, 122 Cal. Rptr. 636

- (n87)Footnote 61. Calrow v. Appliance Industries, Inc. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 556, 569, 122 Cal. Rptr. 636 .
- (n88)Footnote 62. Calrow v. Appliance Industries, Inc. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 556, 571, 122 Cal. Rptr. 636 .
- (n89)Footnote 63. Calrow v. Appliance Industries, Inc. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 556, 571, 122 Cal. Rptr. 636 .
- (n90)Footnote 64. Tate v. Industrial Acci. Com. (1953) 120 Cal. App. 2d 657, 665, 261 P.2d 759 .
- (n91)Footnote 65. Calrow v. Appliance Industries, Inc. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 556, 572-573, 122 Cal. Rptr. 636 .
- (n92)Footnote 65.1. Peccolo v. City of Los Angeles (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 532, 539, 66 P.2d 651 ; Tryer v. Ojai Valley School (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1476, 1482, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 114 .
- (n93)Footnote 66. See Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 209-210, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .
- (n94)Footnote 67. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .
- (n95)Footnote 68. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 212, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .
- (n96)Footnote 69. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 210-211, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .
- (n97)Footnote 70. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 213, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .
- (n98)Footnote 71. [Reserved]
- (n99)Footnote 72. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 210-212, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .
- (n100)Footnote 73. Robinson v. George (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 238, 245, 105 P.2d 914 .
- (n101)Footnote 73.1. Inouye v. County of Los Angeles (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 278 . 282-284. 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 367 ; but cf. Henriksen v. City of Rialto (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1617-1622, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308 (city not liable for negligent handling of service revolver by off duty officer not then engaged in any law enforcement activity).
- (n102)Footnote 73.2. Le Elder v. Rice (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1604, 1609-1610, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 .
- (n103)Footnote 73.3. Le Elder v. Rice (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1604, 1609-1610, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 (involving employee' use of company vehicle for personal errand from and back to home); but see Lazar v. Thermal Equipment Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 462-467, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 (involving employee on way home from work in company vehicle, which was for his use for emergency after-hour calls; court determined that employee's purpose at time of accident was "minor deviation" rather than "substantial departure" from employer's business based on foreseeability).
- (n104)Footnote 73.4. Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 620, 124 Cal. Rptr 143 (employer liable for assault committed by employee who remained on job site after hours to drink and socialize).
- (n105)Footnote 73.5. Munyon v. Ole's, Inc. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 697, 700-701, 706, 186 Cal. Rptr. 424 ; Calrow v. Appliance Industries, Inc. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 556, 570-571, 122 Cal. Rptr. 636 .
- (n106)Footnote 73.6. Tognazzini v. San Luis Coastal Unified School Dist. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1053, 1058-1059, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790 (school district not liable for injury to motorcyclist caused by off-duty employee returning from complying with state-mandated fingerprinting, where employee had discretion to decide when, where and how to satisfy mandate, no other job-related activities were involved, and task not performed during working hours).

(n107)Footnote 73.7. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .

(n108)Footnote 73.8. Henriksen v. City of Rialto (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 1612, 1617, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 308 ; see also Le Elder v. Rice (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1604, 1608, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 .

(n109)Footnote 73.9. Sunderland v. Lockheed Martin Aeronautical Systems Support Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1, 5, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 665 . For discussion of the commercial traveler rule, see § 20.22[5][b], above.

(n110)Footnote 75.10. Sunderland v. Lockheed Martin Aeronautical Systems Support Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1, 5, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 665 .

(n111)Footnote 75.11. Sunderland v. Lockheed Martin Aeronautical Systems Support Co. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8-12, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 665 .

(n112)Footnote 75.12. Santa Rosa Junior College v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (1985) 40 Cal.3d 345, 353 n.11, 220 Cal. Rptr. 94, 708 P.2d 673 . For discussion, see § 20.22[4], above.

(n113)Footnote 74. Hartline v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 458.

(n114)Footnote 75. Hartline v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 458 .

(n115)Footnote 76. See Jeffrey E. v. Central Baptist Church (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 718, 721, 243 Cal. Rptr. 128 ; Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 140, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 (employers will not be held vicariously liable for employee torts simply because the tort occurs on employer premises and on tortfeasors work shift, when employee acts are motivated by personal concerns and conduct is unrelated to employee's employment); see also Baptist v. Robinson (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 151, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 153, 2006 Cal. App. LEXIS 1454, *12-*37 (winery owner was not vicariously liable for injuries to motorcycle rider caused by employee's negligence in failing to secure agricultural bin owned by winery that fell off truck owned and driven by employee on his way to pick up grapes to make wine for himself; employee was not engaged in enterprise undertaken by employer, was not on special errand for employer but was on personal errand for his own benefit on his own time, and was not attending to his own business and employer's business at same time; there was no showing his personal winemaking was reasonably related to his employment duties or that it was foreseeable he would be hauling grapes to winery for employment-related purpose; although experience making his own wine helped him to develop his skills, this was not type of tangible benefit providing nexus necessary to bring his conduct at time of accident within course and scope of his employment); Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 957, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 (personal quarrel and assault unrelated to employment or employment-related dispute does not result in employer's vicarious liability, even though employee is on duty or on employer-reimbursed travel or meal time).

(n116)Footnote 77. See Lazar v. Thermal Equipment Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 466, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 ; Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; see also State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Haight (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 242-243, 252 Cal. Rptr. 162 .

(n117)Footnote 78. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; see also Lazar v. Thermal Equipment Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 462-463, 466, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 .

(n118)Footnote 79. Foss v. Anthony Industries (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 794, 801-802, 189 Cal. Rptr. 31 (citing De Mirjian v. Ideal Heating Corp. (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 758, 765, 278 P.2d 114).

(n119)Footnote 80. Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 209, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 ; Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 968-971, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 ; Foss v.

Anthony Industries (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 794, 802, 189 Cal. Rptr. 31 .

(n120)Footnote 81. Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 .

(n121)Footnote 82. Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 970-971, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 .

(n122)Footnote 83. Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 969, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 .

(n123)Footnote 84. Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 969, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 (citing Carr v. Wm. C. Crowell Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 654-656, 171 P.2d 5).

(n124)Footnote 85. Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 970, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 .

(n125)Footnote 86. Perez v. Van Groningen & Sons, Inc. (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 962, 970-971, 227 Cal. Rptr. 106, 719 P.2d 676 .

(n126)Footnote 87. Ingle. v. Bay Cities Transit Co. (1945) 72 Cal. App. 2d 283, 287, 164 P.2d 508 (also holding that the decision in the case was compelled by the employer's failure to prove that the foreman's job duties included authority to give the driver directions or to terminate his employment on behalf of the company).

(n127)Footnote 88. See Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 140, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 (employee committing sexual assault during work hours on employer's premises as outside scope of employment; employer not vicariously liable to plaintiff).

(n128)Footnote 89. See Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 140, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 .

(n129)Footnote 90. See Lazar v. Thermal Equipment Corp. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 458, 465-467, 195 Cal. Rptr. 890 (employer gave employee company vehicle to facilitate the employee's performance of "on call" work in the evenings and errands for employer during commute; employee's trip to store on way home held foreseeable and insubstantial deviation, and employer held vicariously liable).

106 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.06

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.06 Employer Liability for Intentional Torts

[1] Generally

Generally, an employer will be held vicariously liable for employee torts committed within the scope of employment, regardless of whether the employee's conduct is characterized as negligent or as intentionally tortious.ⁿ¹ However, in the case of intentional torts, courts have closely scrutinized a number of factors, including the employee's job duties, the time, place, and manner of the tort's commission, the genesis of any dispute leading to the conduct, the motive or purpose of the employee's conduct, the nature of the employer's business and the risks associated with it, and the public policy supporting respondeat superior, in determining whether or not the employee's act was committed within the scope of employment.ⁿ²

In two cases in which plaintiffs attempted to hold employers vicariously liable for sexual misconduct committed by employees,ⁿ³ the California Supreme Court has clarified the showing that must be made to establish vicarious liability. In both cases, the Court examined whether the tortious conduct had a causal nexus to the employee's work; in the absence of such a causal link, vicarious liability is not imposed on the employer.ⁿ⁴ To establish the requisite link, "but for" causation is insufficient; that the employment brought tortfeasor and victim together in time and place is not enough.^{n4.1} Instead, an additional showing must be made, which has been described in varied language: the incident leading to injury must be an "outgrowth" of the employment; the risk of tortious injury must be "inherent in the working environment" or "typical of or broadly incidental to the enterprise [the employer] has undertaken."^{n4.2} Although the Court applied the traditional "foreseeability" analysis, it emphasized that the inquiry is made in the context of the particular enterprise. In addition, it is not an inquiry of statistical frequency, but rather of a relationship between the work involved and the type of tort committed; the employment must be such as predictably to create the risk employees will commit intentional torts of the type for which liability is sought.^{n4.3}

An employer may be vicariously liable for all of a plaintiff's noneconomic damages, even if the employer itself is only negligent, if one of its employees is an intentional tortfeasor.^{n4.4}

As in the case of a nonintentional tort, in order to prevail in an action seeking to impose vicarious liability on the employer for an employee's intentional tort, the plaintiff must first establish the existence of an employer-employee relationship between the tortfeasor and the person or entity alleged to be vicariously liable.ⁿ⁵ For discussion of the factors involved in establishing such a relationship, see § 30.04.

[2] Specific Torts

[a] Assault and Battery

In determining whether an assault or battery was committed within the scope of employment, the courts have generally focused on two factors: (1) the nature of the employee's duties, and (2) the source of any dispute that led to the assault or battery.

If the employee's job duties involve the possibility of force being used against others, the employer may be held vicariously liable for the employee's wrongful or excessive use of force in carrying out his or her duties.ⁿ⁶ For example, an employer who operates a bar or saloon may be vicariously liable for the excessive use of force by a "bouncer" in ejecting a patron from the employer's premises.ⁿ⁷

Even if the employee's job duties do not require or contemplate the use of force, a battery may be held to be committed within the scope of employment if it arose out of a dispute that was work-related or that arose out of the performance of the employee's job duties.ⁿ⁸ However, an employee who commits an assault or battery while working will not be deemed to be acting within the scope of employment if the conduct is the result of personal malice not engendered by the employment.ⁿ⁹

Numerous recent cases have considered whether a sexual assault committed by an employee can be within the scope of employment. In John R. v. Oakland Unified School Dist.,ⁿ¹⁰ the California Supreme Court held that a sexual assault committed by a public school teacher is not within the scope of employment because the act is in no way incident to any duties that a teacher is engaged to perform and may not be fairly said to be a foreseeable risk inherent in the teacher's activities.ⁿ¹¹ In Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital,^{n11.1} the Court reached the same conclusion in a case involving a sexual assault made by a medical technician during an examination of a patient, holding that the technician's reasons for committing the assault did not derive from any events or conditions of his employment, and were not provoked by anything that occurred during the examination, and so could not be the basis for respondeat superior liability.^{n11.2} Courts of appeal have reached the same conclusion in several different situations.ⁿ¹²

In John R., the Court rejected the view that the inherent authority that a teacher exercises over his or her students should make the employer liable for acts done during the exercise of that authority. Instead, the Court found that the public policies behind the doctrine of respondeat superior (incentive for accident prevention, assurance of compensation for victims, and distribution of loss)^{n12.1} were not advanced by holding school districts liable for sexual assault by teachers.^{n12.2}

However, in Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles,^{n12.3} the Court reached the opposite conclusion in the case of a sexual assault by an on-duty police officer following a traffic stop. The Court observed that a police officer who detains an individual is acting as the official representative of the state, with all of its coercive power. Inherent in that power is the potential for abuse.^{n12.4} In view of the considerable power and authority that police officers possess, it is neither startling nor unexpected that, on occasion, an officer will misuse that authority by engaging in assaultive conduct. The risk of such tortious conduct is broadly incidental to the enterprise of law enforcement, and thus, liability for such acts may be imposed on the employing public entity.^{n12.5} The Court found that imposition of liability would encourage the employer to take preventive measures and would provide compensation for victims of police misconduct, and that the cost resulting from the misuse of police power should be borne by the community at large because of the substantial benefits that the community derives from the lawful exercise of police power.^{n12.6}

Subsequent decisions have limited Mary M. to its facts, noting the unique position of trust held by on-duty police officers.^{n12.7} For example, in Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc.,^{n12.8} the Court of Appeal found that the plaintiff failed to raise a triable issue as to whether a security guard's sexual assault on a member of the public was within the scope of the security guard's employment. The court noted that the Supreme Court had specifically distinguished the facts in Mary M., which involved a police officer, from cases involving private security guards, who do not act as official representatives of the state and whose authority is different from and far less than that conferred on law enforcement officers.^{n12.9} In Maria D., the court noted that even though the security guards in that case projected the authority of police officers by: patrolling communities in marked vehicles, wearing uniforms and carrying firearms, having their employer's authorization to make arrests of private persons, and to use deadly force in certain circumstances, their projected authority served the employer's profit-making purposes. Nevertheless, the guards' actual authority was not comparable to that of police officers, either in degree or kind; and it was the police officers' actual authority and power that led the Supreme Court in Mary M. to conclude that the police officer's sexual assault could be found to be within the scope of his employment.^{n12.10}

■ PRACTICE TIP:

In Maria D., the court noted that the employer had extensive written policies covering the conduct at issue, i.e., prohibiting sexual assault and specifying the manner in which the guard was to come into contact with the plaintiff, which the guard violated. The court stated specifically that it was not addressing a situation in which a security services provider has no policies, or none that address the manner in which a guard comes into contact with a member of the public, and noted that different respondeat superior considerations may be present in that case. The court also stated that in Maria D., the parties raised no issue of a possible scenario in which written policies were in place, but not enforced.
Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

In addition to limiting Mary M. to its facts, one court of appeal has questioned the continued viability of Mary M.^{n12.11} In M.P. v. City of Sacramento,^{n12.12} the court rejected the efforts of the victims of sexual assaults by firefighters to apply Mary M. to the facts of that case. The court concluded that the holding in Mary M. (that a public employer of a police officer may be vicariously liable for a sex crime committed by the officer against a person detained by the officer while on duty) is, at best, limited to those acts by an on-duty police officer and does not extend to any other form of employment, including firefighting. Thus, as a matter of law, the alleged sexual assaults by firefighters in M.P. was not conduct within the scope of the firefighters' employment and could not support a finding that the city that employed them was vicariously liable for the harm.

[b] Sexual Harassment

Employer liability for sexual harassment by its employees is addressed by statute. First, under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), harassment of an employee, of an applicant, or of a person providing services under a contract by another employee, other than an agent or supervisor, is unlawful if the employer, or its agents or supervisors, knows or should have known of the conduct and fails to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.ⁿ¹³ This language has been construed as imposing a rule of strict employer liability for harassing conduct by a supervisor. The fact that the employer may have a rule prohibiting such conduct is of no import. The employer is liable regardless of any reasonable steps it may have taken to prevent such conduct and regardless of whether or not it was aware that the harassment was taking place.ⁿ¹⁴ However, for an employer to be found vicariously liable for sexual harassment committed by an employee, the causal nexus between the employee's job duties and the tortious conduct (discussed in [1] and [2][a], above, must be shown.ⁿ¹⁵ The FEHA prohibition against sexual harassment includes acts of nonemployees when the employer or its agents or supervisors knew or should have known of the conduct and has failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action.^{n15.1}

Second, a provision of the Unruh Act (Civil Code Section 51.9) prohibits sexual harassment by professional and other service providers against the recipients of services. The statutory definition of occupations that qualify as service providers is sufficiently broad enough to cover all branches of medicine, banking, law, retailing, and transportation, to name only a few examples. Furthermore, even though Section 51.9 only expressly creates a cause of action by the service recipient against the individual who provided the service, the doctrine of respondeat superior is sufficiently broad to permit a Section 51.9 action against the employer of an employee who is alleged to have engaged in sexual harassment in the context of a service relationship.^{n15.2}

For full discussion of employer liability for sexual harassment of employees, see Chapter 41, Part D.

[c] Other Intentional Torts

Employers have been found liable under respondeat superior for an employee's fraud,ⁿ¹⁶ intentional infliction of emotional distress,ⁿ¹⁷ malicious prosecution,ⁿ¹⁸ inducement of breach of contract,ⁿ¹⁹ defamation,ⁿ²⁰ and false imprisonment.ⁿ²¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsIntentional TortsGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 956-957, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 621, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 298-306, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 (involving sexual molestation); John R. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 438, 451-452 (involving sexual molestation); Inter Mountain Mortgage, Inc. v. Sulimen (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1441-1442, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790 ; Jeffrey E. v. Central Baptist Church (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 718, 722-724 (involving sexual molestation); Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 956-958 (involving battery). For discussion of the application of these principles to specific causes of action, see [2], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 ; Farmers Ins. Group v. County of Santa Clara (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 992, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478, 906 P.2d 440 ; see also Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 125, 135-140, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 297, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 ; Farmers Ins. Group v. County of Santa Clara (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 992, 1006, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478, 906 P.2d 440 .

(n5)Footnote 4.1. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 298, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 .

(n6)Footnote 4.2. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 298, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 .

(n7)Footnote 4.3. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 302, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 .

(n8)Footnote 4.4. Thomas v. Duggins Construction Co. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1110-1113, 44 Cal. Rptr.

3d 66 (trial court properly refused to apportion plaintiffs' noneconomic damages between defendant (which was company that sold scissor lift to their employer) and employer after lift collapsed and injured them, despite finding that defendant and employer were each 40 percent responsible for injuries, while two of defendant's employees were each 10 percent responsible; passage of Proposition 51 did not change existing law regarding intentional tortfeasor's potential liability for entirety of the plaintiff's damages, and, although defendant's liability in negligence would have otherwise entitled it to apportionment of plaintiffs' noneconomic damages under Proposition 51, its vicarious liability for intentional tort by one of its employees was not subject to reduction, even though jury concluded that employee's intentional misconduct constituted only a 10 percent contributing factor to plaintiffs' injuries).

(n9)Footnote 5. See Garton v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 365, 375, 165 Cal. Rptr. 449 .

(n10)Footnote 6. See Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 957, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; Monty v. Orlandi (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 620, 624, 337 P.2d 861 ; Haworth v. Elliott (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 77, 81, 153 P.2d 804 ; see also Jameson v. Gavett (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 646, 649, 651, 71 P.2d 937 (employer who encouraged workmen to expel trespassers held vicariously liable to trespasser-plaintiff; although security and trespasser control were not within tortfeasor's express job duties, employer encouraged employees to perform such tasks and tortfeasor acted in prosecution of employer's business when he assaulted plaintiff).

(n11)Footnote 7. See, e.g., Johnson v. Monson (1920) 183 Cal. 149, 151, 190 P. 635 ; Haworth v. Elliott (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 77, 81-82, 153 P.2d 804 .

(n12)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Fields v. Sanders (1947) 29 Cal. 2d 834, 841-842, 180 P.2d 684 (employee truck driver assaulted another person during dispute over traffic mishap); Carr v. Wm. C. Crowell Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 657, 171 P.2d 5 (employer vicariously liable for employee throwing hammer at employee of another contractor after dispute relating to manner in which employee was doing his job); Flores v. AutoZone West, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 373, 379-384, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 178 (summary judgment in favor of employer in action by customer resulting from employee hitting customer with metal pipe was error, where employee's physical eruption, stemming from his interaction with customer, was predictable risk of retail employment, and jury could reasonably conclude customer's "personal" remark to employee, which employer contended was immediate cause of his violent act, was merely last phase of quarrel that began when customer first made noise intended to get employee's attention and assistance with his intended purchase of motor oil); Rodgers v. Kemper Constr. Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 608, 621-624, 124 Cal. Rptr. 143 (battery on jobsite after hours arose in part because of dispute over rights and duties of employees); Stansell v. Safeway Stores, Inc. (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 822, 113 P.2d 264 (dispute between store employee and customer over customer's order is foreseeable, and therefore within scope of employment); Hiroshima v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 24, 27-32, 63 P.2d 340 (dispute over collection by employee of employer's bill).

(n13)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Kephart v. Genuity, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 280, 289-297, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 845 (employer was not liable for employee's acts of road rage, resulting in an accident involving another vehicle that caused injury, where it was virtually inconceivable that reasonable jury would have found employee's conduct to have been mere negligence; had this been criminal prosecution, there was sufficient evidence to support charge of assault with a deadly weapon; where special errand rule did not apply, even though employee was ultimately going to airport for business trip; considering together both time and place of road rage incident, jury reasonably could conclude connection between incident and employment was tenuous; and where jury reasonably could conclude employee deliberately caused crash by intentionally forcing other car off roadway and his conduct was willful, malicious, and even criminal, and nothing in evidence suggested attack on plaintiffs was somehow motivated by intent to serve employer's interests). Golden West Broadcasters, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 947, 957-958, 171 Cal. Rptr. 95 (broadcast employee who engaged in fistfight not related to employment while off duty and drinking in bar was not acting within scope of employment, even though employment brought employee to area and employer furnished employee with company car and per diem payment); Monty v. Orlandi (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 620, 624, 337 P.2d 861 (ejecting disorderly patrons was within bartender's scope of employment, but when bartender ejected his wife over personal dispute and injured bystander, employer was not vicariously liable for bystander's injuries); see also Lisa M. v. Henry

Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 297-298, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 (requiring causal connection between employment duties and tort for imposition of vicarious liability for intentional torts generally).

(n14)Footnote 10. John R. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 438, 256 Cal. Rptr. 766, 769 P.2d 948 .

(n15)Footnote 11. John R. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 438, 447-452, 256 Cal. Rptr. 766, 769 P.2d 948 (molestation of 14-year-old student participating in school-approved program conducted at teacher's residence).

(n16)Footnote 11.1. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 .

(n17)Footnote 11.2. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 306, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 .

(n18)Footnote 12. See Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 125, 145-149, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326 (alleged rape of member of public driving on public road by residential security guard who allegedly stopped and detained her for drunken driving and then raped her); Debbie Reynolds Prof. Rehearsal Studios v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 222, 226-229, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 514 (sexual assault on minor dance student by instructor in trailer provided by employer); Kimberly M. v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 545, 547-549, 263 Cal. Rptr. 612 (molestation of five-year-old student by teacher on school premises); Jeffrey E. v. Central Baptist Church (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 718, 722-724, 243 Cal. Rptr. 128 (molestation of child by volunteer Sunday school teacher during church-sponsored home visitation); Rita M. v. Roman Catholic Archbishop (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1453, 1461, 232 Cal. Rptr. 685 (molestation of 16-year-old parishoner by priests); Alma W. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 133, 139-144, 176 Cal. Rptr. 287 (molestation of student by janitor on school premises while janitor was on duty).

(n19)Footnote 12.1. See discussion in § 30.03[2].

(n20)Footnote 12.2. John R. v. Oakland Unified School Dist. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 438, 447-452, 256 Cal. Rptr. 766, 769 P.2d 948 ; see Kimberly M. v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 545, 547-549, 263 Cal. Rptr. 612 (following John R.; refusing to find any distinction based on youth of victim or whether molestation was on or off employer's premises).

(n21)Footnote 12.3. Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 .

(n22)Footnote 12.4. Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 216-217, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 .

(n23)Footnote 12.5. Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 217-218, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 ; accord, White v. County of Orange (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 566, 571-572, 212 Cal. Rptr. 493 ; cf. Thorn v. City of Glendale (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1379, 1382, 1384, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (refusing to extend rule of Mary M. to city fire marshall who allegedly committed arson while on premises under color of authority to conduct fire inspection).

(n24)Footnote 12.6. Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 214-216, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 .

(n25)Footnote 12.7. Lisa M. v. Henry Mayo Newhall Memorial Hospital (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 291, 303-304, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510, 907 P.2d 358 ; Farmers Ins. Group v. County of Santa Clara (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 992, 1012-1013, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478, 906 P.2d 440 ; Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 125, 146 .

(n26)Footnote 12.8. Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 125 .

(n27)Footnote 12.9. Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 125, 146 .

(n28)Footnote 12.10. Maria D. v. Westec Residential Security, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 125, 148 .

(n29)Footnote 12.11. See M.P. v. City of Sacramento (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 121, 124, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812 ("It is questionable whether the holding in Mary M. is still viable... . The Chief Justice of California has described it as an 'aberrant holding' that was 'wrongly decided' and should be 'overrule[d]' "), citing Farmers Ins. Group v. County of Santa Clara (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 992, 1020, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478, 906 P.2d 440 (conc. opn. of George, J.).

(n30)Footnote 12.12. M.P. v. City of Sacramento (2009) 177 Cal. App. 4th 121, 128-134, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 812 .

(n31)Footnote 13. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1).

(n32)Footnote 14. See Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 414-417, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 .

(n33)Footnote 15. Farmers Ins. Group v. County of Santa Clara (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 992, 1019-1020, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478, 906 P.2d 440 .

(n34)Footnote 15.1. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(1).

(n35)Footnote 15.2. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements in a claim for sexual harassment under Civ. Code § 51.9, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3024 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction on the civil penalty applicable to an action under Civ. Code § 51.9, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3027 (Matthew Bender). For the CACI special verdict form on a claim for sexual harassment under Civ. Code § 51.9, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-3014 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n36)Footnote 16. See Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 173-174, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 .

(n37)Footnote 17. See Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 618, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 (hostile work environment that constitutes sexual harassment in violation of FEHA, Gov. Code § 12900 et seq., also constitutes intentional infliction of emotional distress).

(n38)Footnote 18. See Shoopman v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 848, 856, 338 P.2d 3 ; but see Ecker v. Raging Waters Group, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1320, 1329-1332, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320 (amusement park was properly found not liable for malicious prosecution based on initiation of criminal prosecution of plaintiff, even though plaintiff was later acquitted of charge, where, based on undisputed facts, it was objectively reasonable to suspect that plaintiff's actions in following male juveniles and videotaping their bodies in secretive manner, which clearly disturbed and upset boys who complained to park personnel, were criminal, negating essential element of malicious prosecution claim, i.e., lack of probable cause; question of whether park employees conducted sufficient or adequate investigation and fact that park employee was uncertain of precise crime plaintiff may have committed were legally irrelevant to probable cause determination).

(n39)Footnote 19. See Pratt v. Local 683, Film Technicians (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 545, 563, 67 Cal. Rptr. 483 .

(n40)Footnote 20. See Di Giorgio Fruit Corp. v. AFL & CIO (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 560, 576, 30 Cal. Rptr. 350 .

(n41)Footnote 21. See Hanna v. Raphael Weill & Co. (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 461, 463-464, 203 P.2d 564 ; see also Ecker v. Raging Waters Group, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1320, 1333-1336, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320 (nonsuit improperly granted to amusement park in false imprisonment action based on Pen. Code § 490.6(c) defense that probable cause and reasonable conduct under all the circumstances is defense to civil action resulting from detention or arrest by amusement park employee; evidence did not support conclusion that park security personnel acted reasonably under all of the circumstances).

107 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
 CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
 Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.07

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.07 Employer Liability for Punitive Damages Under Civil Code Section 3294

[1] General Requirements for Employer Liability

While the purpose of compensatory damages is to indemnify plaintiff for losses caused by another's tortious conduct,ⁿ¹ the purpose of punitive or exemplary damages is to punish the defendant and to deter the recurrence of similar conduct by the defendant or others.ⁿ²

As reflected by the text of Civil Code Section 3294, liability for punitive damages is based on the defendant's having been found guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice.ⁿ³ Although an employer may be held vicariously liable (that is, without having personally committed any tort) for compensatory damages caused by an employee's torts committed within the scope of employment,ⁿ⁴ courts have traditionally been reluctant to impose punitive damages on an employer on the basis of an employee's conduct when there is no evidence of the employer's own participation in the tort.ⁿ⁵ Under Civil Code Section 3294, an employer may not be held liable for punitive damages based on acts of an employee unless the employer (1) had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with a conscious disregard for the rights or safety of others; (2) authorized or ratified the employee's wrongful conduct for which the punitive damages are awarded;ⁿ⁶ or (3) was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice.ⁿ⁷ Unless one of the above criteria are satisfied, an employer cannot be liable for punitive damages based solely on the conduct of its employee, no matter how malicious or oppressive its employee's conduct may have been.ⁿ⁸ However, if the employee is determined to be acting under the direction of the employer, then the employer participates in the act, and the employer's liability is based not on the acts of the employee, but on its own separate culpability. In such a case, punitive damages may be awarded against the employer even if none are assessed against the employee.ⁿ⁹ Additional requirements imposed by Civil Code Section 3294(b) when the employer is a corporation are discussed in [2], below.

[2] Additional Requirements for Holding Corporate Employers Liable for Punitive Damages

When punitive damages are sought against a corporate employer, the third-party plaintiff must prove that an officer, director, or "managing agent" of the corporation (1) had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and acted with the requisite conscious disregard for the rights or safety of others, (2) authorized or ratified the employee's conduct, or (3) personally committed an act of oppression, fraud, or malice.ⁿ¹⁰

In White v. Ultramar, Inc.,ⁿ¹¹ the California Supreme Court construed the meaning of the term "managing agent" under Civ. Code § 3294(b). The Court variously defined the responsibilities of a managing agent to include:

- "Substantial independent authority and judgment over decisions that ultimately determine corporate policy[;]"ⁿ¹²
- "Substantial discretionary authority over decisions that ultimately determine corporate policy[;]"ⁿ¹³ and
- "Substantial discretionary authority over significant aspects of a corporation's business."ⁿ¹⁴

Accordingly, liability turns not on the employee's managerial classification or title, but on the extent of his or her decision-making discretion.ⁿ¹⁵ Thus, supervisors who have no discretionary authority over decisions that ultimately determine corporate policy are not considered managing agents even though they may have the ability to hire or fire other employees. In order to demonstrate that an employee is a true managing agent under Civ. Code § 3294(b), a plaintiff seeking punitive damages must show that the employee exercised substantial discretionary authority over significant aspects of a corporation's business.ⁿ¹⁶

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

In White v. Ultramar,ⁿ¹⁷ the Court twice made reference to the recent United States Supreme Court decision in Kolstad ⁿ¹⁸ for the proposition that punitive damages should not be awarded in a manner that discourages compliance with EEO law. In this regard, Footnote 2 raises, but does not decide, the question whether an employer may avoid liability for punitive damages if it adopts and implements in good faith a policy that forbids retaliation against employees who testify at unemployment insurance hearings.ⁿ¹⁹ White, in short, is strong dictum in favor of the adoption of general nonretaliation policies--or the amendment of existing nondiscrimination policies to include clear nonretaliation clauses. Such employment rules may serve as a basis for an affirmative defense to punitive damages liability. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

The White Court approved the holding in Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co.,ⁿ²⁰ in which the California Supreme Court held that the critical inquiry in determining whether a corporate employee's position is sufficient to impose liability for punitive damages on the corporation is not whether the employee is in a high-level policy-making position, but rather, the degree of discretion the employee possesses to make decisions that will ultimately determine corporate policy. The Egan Court concluded that when an employee can act with little or no supervision in an area in which tort liability may result, the employee possesses sufficient discretion to impute the employee's actions to the corporate employer for the purpose of awarding punitive damages.ⁿ²¹ The Egan Court also noted that managerial capacity is not determined by title, and that an employer cannot insulate itself from punitive damage liability by giving an employee a nonmanagerial title while permitting that employee to make crucial policy decisions.ⁿ²²

In another, the California Supreme Court clarified that a corporate employer cannot be held liable for punitive damages based on an act of malice, oppression, or fraud committed by a managerial employee unless the managerial employee committed that act within the scope of employment. The employer cannot be held liable for punitive damages based on conduct by a managerial employee that is wholly unrelated to the employer's business or to the employee's duties.ⁿ²³

The standard applicable to a corporation has been found to apply as well to an unincorporated association.ⁿ²⁴

[3] What Constitutes Authorization or Ratification

As noted in [1], above, an employer may be held liable for punitive damages if it authorizes or ratifies the employee's act of malice, oppression, or fraud.ⁿ²⁵ Authorization and ratification are questions of fact that may be proved by any circumstantial or direct evidence demonstrating adoption or approval of the employee's actions by the corporation's managerial agent.ⁿ²⁶

Authorization or direction (employer action taken prior to the tortious act) of an employee's tortious conduct can be given in the form of written or oral consent or encouragement.ⁿ²⁷

Ratification can be established by showing that the employer was advised, after the fact, of the employee's tortious conduct, and implicitly or expressly approved of the conduct with such knowledge.ⁿ²⁸ An employer's retention of the tortfeasor in employment, after the employer is advised of the employee's wrongful conduct, can also be utilized by plaintiff to establish ratification.ⁿ²⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsDamagesPunitive DamagesGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Civ. Code § 3333; Mozzetti v. City of Brisbane (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 565, 576, 136 Cal. Rptr. 751 ; see generally Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, ch. 50, pt. A.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Civ. Code § 3294(a); Neal v. Farmers Ins. Exchange (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 910, 928 n.13, 148 Cal. Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980 ; see generally Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, ch. 54.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Civ. Code § 3294(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See generally discussion in § 30.03.

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Ebaugh v. Rabkin (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 891, 895, 99 Cal. Rptr. 706 (no employer liability for punitive damages absent direction or ratification of wrongful act). For the standard jury instruction admonishing the jury not to include punitive damages in its damage award, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3924 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n6)Footnote 6. For discussion of what constitutes authorization or ratification, see [3], below.

(n7)Footnote 7. Civ. Code § 3294(b). For the standard jury instructions on an award of punitive damages against an employer or principal for the conduct of a specific agent or employee, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3943 et seq. (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict forms for punitive damages, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-3900 et seq. (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Foley v. Martin (1904) 142 Cal. 256, 262, 75 P. 842 ; Hale v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 681, 690, 117 Cal. Rptr. 146 (disapproved on other grounds, Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 822). See also Flores v. AutoZone West, Inc. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 373, 386, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 178 (trial court did not err in summarily adjudicating customer's claim for punitive damages against employer of employee who hit customer in head with metal pipe, where evidence was insufficient as matter of law to demonstrate employer had advance notice that employee was unfit or employed him with conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others, and where there was no evidence that employer ratified employee's violent treatment of customers, since employee was promptly fired after incident in this case).

(n9)Footnote 9. Roberts v. Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 800-802, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139 .

(n10)Footnote 10. Civ. Code § 3294(b); see Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 420-421, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 (noting that ratification need not be shown if conduct is of officer, director, or managing agent, and criticizing BAJI No. 14.73.1). For the standard jury instructions on punitive damage awards involving corporate defendants, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3948 et seq. (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n11)Footnote 11. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 .

(n12)Footnote 12. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 573, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 .

(n13)Footnote 13. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 573, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 .

(n14)Footnote 14. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 .

(n15)Footnote 15. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 ; Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 421-422, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 (plaintiff not entitled to punitive damages in sexual harassment action because there was no evidence that her manager had substantial discretion in his decisionmaking capabilities, even though he was company administrator who had direct authority over plaintiff's employment responsibilities).

(n16)Footnote 16. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 (manager who terminated plaintiff was managing agent under Civ. Code § 3294(b), whose conduct could make defendant corporation liable for punitive damages because she "exercised substantial discretionary authority over vital aspects of [defendant's] business" including managing eight retail stores and making significant decisions affecting both store and company policy).

(n17)Footnote 17. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944

(n18)Footnote 18. Kolstad v. ADA (1999) 527 U.S. 526, 119 S. Ct. 2118, 144 L.Ed. 2d 494, 512 .

(n19)Footnote 19. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 568 n.2, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 .

(n20)Footnote 20. Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809 .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 822-823 .

(n22)Footnote 22. Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 809, 822-823 .

(n23)Footnote 23. See College Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 704, 722-724, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 898, 882 P.2d 894 .

(n24)Footnote 24. J.R. Norton Co. v. General Teamsters, Warehousemen & Helpers Union, Local 890 (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 430 (labor union).

(n25)Footnote 25. See Civ. Code § 3294(b).

(n26)Footnote 26. Roberts v. Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 801, 274

Cal. Rptr. 139; Hartman v. Shell Oil Co. (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 240, 249-250, 137 Cal. Rptr. 244; see Storage Services v. Oosterbaan (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 498, 516, 262 Cal. Rptr. 689 (ratification or approval inferred from employer's (1) close supervision of employee, (2) familiarity with transaction, (3) awareness of meetings between parties, and (4) subsequent discussions with employee about acts giving rise to tort).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Jameson v. Gavett (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 646, 650, 71 P.2d 937 (employer encouraged and gave oral express and implied consent to his employees' use of any means, including physical force, to deter trespassing or to remove trespassers from employer's business premises).

(n28)Footnote 28. Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 173-174, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136 (employer was advised by its employee of employee's irregular conduct in representing plaintiff-real estate seller; employer let transaction proceed nonetheless); see Roberts v. Ford Aerospace & Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 800-802, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139.

(n29)Footnote 29. See Clark Equipment Co. v. Wheat (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 503, 524, 154 Cal. Rptr. 874 (defendant hired collection counsel to pursue action against plaintiff; after employer was advised that attorney was misusing court procedures and pursuing legal remedies against party no longer liable for the debt, employer did not discharge attorney or take any steps to limit attorney's discretion or latitude to act; court held that ratification of conduct had been established); Coats v. Constr. & Gen. Laborers Local No. 185 (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 908, 914, 93 Cal. Rptr. 639 (union staff business agent retained after business agent's assaults on members of union became known to employer; employer's argument on appeal that retention of the tortfeasor was compelled because of tortfeasor's special or irreplaceable skills rejected by appellate court).

108 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.08

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.08 Defenses to Respondeat Superior Actions

[1] Generally

Because vicarious liability is based on the tortious conduct of another, liability will not attach if the other person is absolved from liability.ⁿ¹ In all actions based on a theory of respondeat superior, if the employee is found not to be at fault, the employer will not be held liable for the employee's conduct.ⁿ² Thus, even in a case in which a default judgment was entered against an employer sued only on a theory of respondeat superior, the employer was exonerated of all liability because the employee was subsequently found to have been free from fault.ⁿ³

However, it is not necessary to name or join any specific employees as defendants. The plaintiff's inability to identify which employee committed the wrongful act is not fatal to the employer's liability if the evidence establishes that some employee, in the scope of employment, committed the wrongful act. Even if the plaintiff names a particular employee and the judgment is for that employee, a judgment against the employer is valid if the evidence supports the conclusion that other unnamed employees committed the acts.^{n3.1}

The employer may raise defenses such as comparative negligence,^{n3.2} assumption of the risk, privilege on the part of the active tortfeasor, statute of limitations,^{n3.3} and any other defense going to the merits of the cause of action.ⁿ⁴ However, the employer may not raise certain defenses that would negate the right to recover against the particular employee-tortfeasor, such as infancy and bankruptcy, but that do not relate to the merits of the cause of action.ⁿ⁵

[2] Collateral Estoppel

A prior judgment in favor of an employee bars an action against his or her employer if the employer's liability could only be predicated on a theory of respondeat superior.ⁿ⁶ The rule is the same whether the actions are separate or the employer and employee are joined in the same action.ⁿ⁷

In one case, a court of appeal held that a dismissal of the person who was allegedly the active tortfeasor from the action with prejudice has the same effect as an adjudication on the merits that the alleged tortfeasor was not at fault; therefore, a finding of vicarious liability is precluded by the doctrine of collateral estoppel.ⁿ⁸

The employer may also take advantage of any prior judgment against the employee as an upper limit of damages for which it may be held liable in a separate subsequent action against the employer based on the doctrine of respondeat superior. Thus, even if a default judgment is entered against the employee, the employer is entitled to prevent the injured third party from relitigating the issue of damages.ⁿ⁹ However, if the employer so wishes, it may relitigate the issue of damages.ⁿ¹⁰

[3] Firefighter's Rule

The "firefighter's rule" precludes a firefighter from recovering damages from the person whose negligence contributed to the fire that caused the firefighter's injuries.ⁿ¹¹ The rule applies as well to police.ⁿ¹² There is an exception to the firefighter's rule holding a person responsible for the results of that person's willful acts causing injury to a peace officer employed by a public entity, and for any injury occasioned to that person by the want of ordinary care or skill in the management of the person's property or person, in any of the following situations:ⁿ¹³

- (1) The conduct causing the injury occurs after the person knows or should have known of the presence of the peace officer.
- (2) The conduct causing injury violates a statute, ordinance, or regulation, and the conduct causing injury was itself not the event that precipitated either the response or presence of the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel.
- (3) The conduct causing the injury was intended to injure the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel.
- (4) The conduct causing the injury is arson as defined in Penal Code section 451.

The firefighter's rule also does not apply to conduct other than that which necessitated the summoning of the police officer, or independent acts of misconduct committed after the officer arrived at the scene.ⁿ¹⁴

In Yamaguchi v. Harnsmut,ⁿ¹⁵ the court of appeal considered an employer's liability for the actions of a restaurant employee, a cook, in injuring a police officer called to the premises to intervene into an altercation between the cook and his assistant. After the cook stabbed the assistant and the police were summoned, the cook threw a pot of hot oil at the officer and the officer suffered injuries. The court first found that the cook would be subject to the exception to the firefighter's rule, because he willfully or negligently caused the police officer's resulting injuries and he threw the oil after he knew or should have known the police were present.^{n15.1}

The court then found that whether the cook's actions were within the scope of his employment was a question of fact, and it was the police officer's burden as plaintiff to prove that the cook's acts were within the scope of his employment. A reasonable trier of fact could find that a cook's use of a knife and hot oil to attack his assistant in the kitchen after work-related disputes, and the injuries to persons attempting to quell the disputes, were actions "broadly incidental" to the operation of a restaurant, so that there was some basis for concluding that the cook's injurious conduct was within the scope of his employment for purposes of respondeat superior. However, the court of appeal could not say that the evidence was so compelling that no reasonable juror could reach the opposite conclusion, or at least decide that the officer had failed to meet the requisite burden of proof. The court's conclusion, that the trial court erred in ruling that as a matter of law the cook's conduct was within the scope of his employment for purposes of respondeat superior, was based on the following:ⁿ¹⁶

- It was not undisputed the assault occurred as the result of, and during, a dispute at work.ⁿ¹⁷ The evidence was that the cook and the assistant had argued about work in the past, which could give rise to an inference that the stabbing was due to a work conflict, but it did not compel such an inference because it was undisputed there was no work-related argument between them on the morning of the stabbing.

- While the employee and victim had no apparent association outside their respective employment, they had known one another for 16 months, during which time a personal grudge might have arisen.ⁿ¹⁸

- The cook did not testify, so there was no direct evidence of his state of mind at the time of the attack.ⁿ¹⁹

- The court could not say that the cook's conduct or the risk it posed was foreseeable as a matter of law, or that every restaurant owner should be vicariously liable for every assault perpetrated by restaurant employees merely because the restaurant has a kitchen. The critical question was whether the act causing the officer's injury, i.e., throwing hot oil in the officer's direction, was foreseeable, not whether it was foreseeable that restaurant employees' disagreements might erupt into a physical altercation. A reasonable juror could conclude that the throwing of the oil was so unusual or startling that it would seem unfair to include the loss resulting from it among other costs of the restaurant owners' business.

- It was unclear whether imposing vicarious liability in this context would be consistent with the public policies behind the doctrine of respondeat superior: preventing recurrence of the tortious conduct; giving greater assurance of compensation for the victim; and ensuring that the victim's losses will be equitably borne by those who benefit from the enterprise giving rise to the injury.ⁿ²⁰

In Yamaguchi, because the court vacated the judgment on the ground that the trial court erred in not presenting to the jury the issue of whether the cook's conduct occurred in the scope of his employment, the court did not address whether the firefighter's rule precludes the restaurant owners' liability.ⁿ²¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesGeneral

OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Campbell v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 379, 386, 133 Cal. Rptr. 77 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Davis v. Pine Mountain Lbr. Co. (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 218, 227, 77 Cal. Rptr. 825 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Plott v. York (1939) 33 Cal. App. 2d 460, 463-464, 91 P.2d 924 .

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Perez v. City of Huntington Beach (1992) 7 Cal. App. 4th 817, 820-821, 9 Cal. Rptr. 2d 258 (defense judgments for four police officers upheld because plaintiff could not identify which one of them battered him; judgment against employer city affirmed because evidence supported court's finding that at least one of them did).

(n5)Footnote 3.2. For the standard jury instruction on the affirmative defense of the plaintiff's agent's contributory negligence, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3702 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n6)Footnote 3.3. See Boyer v. Jensen (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 62, 69-71, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 124 (employer's motion for judgment on pleadings was properly granted, where allegation against employer of respondeat superior liability was time-barred under former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(c), and employee's filing of complaint, waiving statute of limitations defense for himself by asserting claim, did not waive defense for employer because employer was not sued within the bounds of any arguably applicable limitations period).

(n7)Footnote 4. See Ecker v. Raging Waters Group, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1320, 1333-1336, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 320 (although amusement park could raise Pen. Code § 490.6(c) defense that probable cause and conduct which is reasonable under all the circumstances defeats civil action resulting from detention or arrest by amusement park employee, granting nonsuit in action for false imprisonment, negligent infliction of emotional distress, and negligent training and/or supervision based on Pen. Code § 490.6(c) was improper because evidence did not support conclusion that park security personnel acted reasonably under all of the circumstances); see also Freeman v. Churchill (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 453, 461, 183 P.2d 4; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Superior Oil Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 289, 297, 52 Cal. Rptr. 53 (both cases decided prior to advent of comparative fault and holding that contributory negligence of plaintiff was defense available to employer); Plott v. York (1939) 33 Cal. App. 2d 460, 463, 91 P.2d 924. For a discussion of comparative negligence and assumption of the risk, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, ch. 4.

(n8)Footnote 5. See Plott v. York (1939) 33 Cal. App. 2d 460, 463, 91 P.2d 924; see also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 217(b)(ii) (employer may be liable under respondeat superior when employee has immunity from civil liability).

(n9)Footnote 6. Ponce v. Tractor Supply Co. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 500, 505, 105 Cal. Rptr. 628; Davison v. Diamond Match Co. (1935) 10 Cal. App. 2d 218, 222-224, 51 P.2d 452.

(n10)Footnote 7. Freeman v. Churchill (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 453, 461, 183 P.2d 4.

(n11)Footnote 8. Campbell v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 379, 385-386, 133 Cal. Rptr. 77.

(n12)Footnote 9. Ponce v. Tractor Supply Co. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 500, 505-506, 105 Cal. Rptr. 628.

(n13)Footnote 10. Ponce v. Tractor Supply Co. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 500, 506-507, 105 Cal. Rptr. 628.

(n14)Footnote 11. Calatayud v. State of California (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1057, 1061, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202, 959 P.2d 360.

(n15)Footnote 12. Neighbarger v. Irwin Industries, Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 538, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347.

(n16)Footnote 13. Civil Code section 1714.9(a).

(n17)Footnote 14. Neighbarger v. Irwin Industries, Inc. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 532, 538, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630, 882 P.2d 347; see Yamaguchi v. Harnsmut (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 472, 481 n.5, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706 (employee's throwing of hot oil at police officer called to intervene in altercation between employees was different act than employee's original stabbing of another employee which prompted summoning of police, but it was not independent of conduct prompting call to police).

(n18)Footnote 15. Yamaguchi v. Harnsmut (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 472, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706.

(n19)Footnote 15.1. Yamaguchi v. Harnsmut (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 472, 480-481, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706.

(n20)Footnote 16. Yamaguchi v. Harnsmut (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 472, 481-487, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706.

(n21)Footnote 17. Compare Carr v. Wm. C. Crowell Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 171 P.2d 5 (undisputed that assault occurred as result of, and during, dispute at work).

(n22)Footnote 18. Compare Carr v. Wm. C. Crowell Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 171 P.2d 5 (employee had never seen his victim before day preceding incident and had never even conversed with him before dispute, precluding any inference of personal grudge).

(n23)Footnote 19. Compare Carr v. Wm. C. Crowell Co. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 652, 171 P.2d 5 (employee and victim both testified).

(n24)Footnote 20. See Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 202, 209, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 .

(n25)Footnote 21. Yamaguchi v. Harnsmut (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 472, 487 n.9, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706 .

109 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
 CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
 Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.09

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.09 Indemnity Issues

[1] Employer's Right to Indemnity When Employer Is Vicariously Liable

A party who is liable solely under principles of vicarious liability generally has a right to indemnity from the person who was actually at fault.ⁿ¹ Thus, an employer who is subjected to liability on the grounds of respondeat superior may look to the tortfeasor-employee for indemnity for any liability it might incur as a result of the employee's tort.ⁿ² Total indemnity from the employee to the employer is appropriate on the ground that, under principles of comparative indemnity, the tortfeasor-employee is 100 percent responsible for the damage and the vicariously liable employer is 0 percent responsible.ⁿ³

A vicariously liable employer's indemnity rights may be defeated by a good-faith settlement entered into between the employee and the injured party.ⁿ⁴ However, the interests of the employer in asserting that its liability is only vicarious may be protected by participation in the hearing on the good faith of the settlement. If the settlement does not require the culpable employee to bear his or her fair share of the loss, the court may find that the settlement is not in good faith, and as a consequence, the settlement will not bar the vicariously liable employer from pursuing its indemnity claim against the employee.ⁿ⁵

Although in making the good-faith determination a trial court must consider and protect the interests of a nonsettling employer who is only vicariously liable, it need not require dismissal of the employer. A vicariously liable tortfeasor may be left to bear some portion of the plaintiff's loss, even in situations in which the trier of fact might have concluded that the equities supported a total shift of loss had the indemnity claim gone to trial. Departure from a precise allocation of loss is the price that a nonsettling defendant bears to promote the settlement of litigation.ⁿ⁶ Further, if the actively negligent employee has insufficient financial resources to wholly compensate the plaintiff, the vicariously liable employer may be expected to make up the difference.ⁿ⁷

For a complete discussion of indemnity and the effects of a good-faith settlement on a nonsettling defendant's right to indemnity, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 74.

[2] Employer's Right to Indemnity if Employer is Also Directly Liable

If an employer has been actively at fault and is directly liable for a tort for which an employee is also directly liable, normal principles of comparative indemnity apply.ⁿ⁸ The comparison would be made between the negligence of the employer and that of the employee, for example, by comparing the relative culpability of the employer's negligent hiring or training with the employee's tortious conduct. The employer would then be directly liable for its own comparative share, and vicariously liable for the employee's share.ⁿ⁹ The employer might then be entitled to indemnity from the employee for any amount paid in satisfaction of its vicarious liability, but not its direct liability.

For a complete discussion of comparative indemnity, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 74.

[3] Employee's Right to Indemnity

[a] In General

Labor Code Section 2802 provides that an employer must indemnify an employee for all that the employee necessarily expends or loses in direct consequence of the discharge of his or her duties, or of obedience to the directions of the employer, even though unlawful, unless the employee, at the time of obeying the directions, believed them to be unlawful.^{n9.1} Labor Code Section 2804 expressly prohibits the waiver of the rights afforded by § 2802.^{n9.2}

The Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) enforces and administers California's labor laws, including Lab. Code § 2802.^{n9.3} The California Supreme Court has held that all of the DLSE's interpretive policies contained in its 1989 operations and procedures manual were void because they had not been promulgated in compliance with the Administrative Procedure Act,^{n9.4} and that insofar as the void regulations reflected the DLSE's statutory interpretations, those interpretations were entitled to no deference.^{n9.5} However, a court may adopt a DLSE statutory interpretation embodied in a void regulation if the court independently determines that the interpretation is correct.^{n9.6} The DLSE's interpretation of Labor Code Section 2802, as applied to employees' automobile expenses, was incorporated into a void regulation. Courts will review relevant DLSE policy statements and DLSE advice and opinion letters as evidence of the DLSE's interpretation of Labor Code Sections 2802 and 2804, recognizing that its interpretation is entitled to no deference, but also that the court may adopt the DLSE's interpretation if the court independently determines that it is correct.ⁿ¹⁰

The elements of a cause of action, as delineated by the statutory language, are:^{n10.1}

- The employee made expenditures or incurred losses;
- The expenditures or losses were incurred in direct consequence of the employee's discharge of his or her duties, or obedience to the directions of the employer;
- The expenditures or losses were necessary.

The second element is met if the conduct defended against was within the course and scope of employment.^{n10.2} All awards made by a court or the DLSE carry interest from the date on which the expenditure or loss was incurred.ⁿ¹¹ Necessary expenditures and losses include all reasonable costs, including attorney's fees incurred in enforcing the rights granted by Labor Code Section 2802.ⁿ¹²

The Labor Code does not expressly define "employee" for purposes of section 2802. Therefore, the common law test of employment applies.^{n12.1} The essence of the test is the "control of details," i.e., whether the principal has the right to control the manner and means by which the worker accomplishes the work. There are a number of additional factors in the modern equation, including the following:^{n12.2}

- Whether the worker is engaged in a distinct occupation or business.
- Whether, considering the kind of occupation and locality, the work is usually done under the principal's direction or by a specialist without supervision.
- The skill required.
- Whether the principal or worker supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and place of work.
- The length of time for which the services are to be performed.
- The method of payment, whether by time or by job.
- Whether the work is part of the principal's regular business.
- Whether the parties believe they are creating an employer-employee relationship.

The parties' label is not dispositive, and will be ignored if their actual conduct establishes a different relationship.^{n12.3} The determination is one of fact and must be affirmed if supported by substantial evidence.^{n12.4}

Thus, for example, in Estrada v. FedEx Ground Package System, Inc., ^{n12.5} the trial court properly found that drivers were employees rather than independent contractors for the purposes of Labor Code Section 2802(a). Although the agreement said that the manner and means to satisfy the objectives of the contract were within the discretion of the drivers and the employer did not have the authority to impose any term or condition to the contrary, the evidence showed that the employer discharged drivers at will and that the employer's control over every detail of the drivers' performance supported the trial court's conclusion. Many standard employee benefits were provided, and the drivers worked full time, with regular schedules and regular routes. The terminal managers were the drivers' immediate supervisors and could unilaterally reconfigure the drivers' routes without regard to the drivers' resulting loss of income. The customers were the employer's customers, not the drivers' customers. The employer had discretion to reject a driver's helper, temporary replacement, or proposed assignee.

There are very few California decisions that discuss Labor Code Section 2802 in the indemnification context.^{n12.6} Some courts that have considered it have held that in order to be acting in "discharge of [his or her] duties" the employee must have acted "within the course and scope of ... employment" and the action against the employee must be "unfounded."ⁿ¹³ One court, however, has found that application of section 2802 does not require that the underlying action be unfounded.^{n13.1} An employee's conduct is within the scope of employment unless it is "so unusual or startling that it would be unfair to include the loss as a cost of the employer's doing business."^{n13.2} However, an employee who has acted within the scope of employment, but has not met the other requirement ("unfounded" claims) is not entitled to indemnification under the statute, according to some courts. As the Ninth Circuit observed in O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local 856,^{n13.3} a contrary rule that held employers liable whenever an employee simply acted within California's broad definition of "scope of employment" (see § 30.50, below), would result in indemnification in many cases in which the employee is proven to have acted illegally or in a grossly negligent fashion. "Simply put, California's policy decision to broadly construe 'within the scope of employment' to create a friendly environment for third-party plaintiffs does not require employers to indemnify employees for costs incurred in defending well-founded claims levied against them by those third parties."^{n13.4}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

In Jacobus v. Krambo Corp.,^{n13.5} the appellate panel reaches two primary conclusions. One is not surprising. The second is disturbing.

First, the panel holds that Labor Code Section 2802 does not allow for recovery of fees. In the words of the opinion, "We decline to read into the statutory phrase 'all that the employee necessarily expends or loses in direct consequence of the discharge of his duties as such' a specific provision allowing recovery of attorneys fees to enforce its indemnification provisions."n13.6 This holding is in line with the majority of federal and state opinions finding that a prevailing party is not entitled to recover attorneys fees absent an express contract or statutory mandate.

Second, however, the panel finds that the phrase "in direct consequence of the discharge of his duties" encompasses conduct that "does not benefit the employer, even though the act is willful or malicious, and even though the act may violate the employer's direct orders or policies."n13.7 Thus, "[T]he mutual exchange of sexual materials between [a male coworker] and [a female coworker] was broadly incidental to their employment and [the male coworker] was entitled to indemnification of his legal costs incurred in successfully defending [the female coworker's] sexual harassment action."n13.8

At a time when most employers are going to great lengths to rid the workplace of all forms of improper harassment, it is a giant leap backwards to offer an employee reimbursement for the expenses incurred defending his or her "willful" and "malicious" harassing conduct that may be in violation of the employer's "direct orders or policies." In short, according to the First Appellate District, conduct in direct violation of employer policy may nonetheless be "in direct discharge" of an employee's duties. Other appellate districts, over time, are likely to disagree. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

In Boyer v. Jensen, n13.9 an employee was sued on a cross-complaint for personal injuries resulting from an automobile accident. The cross-complainant, after the statute of limitations had clearly expired, added the employer as a defendant.n13.10 During the pendency of the proceedings, the employee had filed for bankruptcy protection, obtained an automatic stay, and the bankruptcy court issued a discharge. The employee then moved to dismiss and the employer moved for judgment on the pleadings based on the statute of limitations. The trial court granted the motions. On appeal, the cross-complainant argued that her claim against the employee should not have been dismissed because bankruptcy discharge did not prevent litigation against the debtor from going forward when the claimant ultimately intended to obtain recovery from a third party, by which the cross-complainant meant the employer and/or its insurer. The appellate court held that Labor Code Section 2802 creates no rights between employees sued by an injured third party and the employer's insurance company.n13.11 Reviewing federal bankruptcy authorities, the court found that a party should not be able to continue an action against a debtor in order to reach a third party unless it is necessary to join the debtor in order to establish liability against the third party, and that there is no reason to impose the potential burden of litigation on a discharged debtor unless his or her presence is truly essential.n13.12 The court then held that when an injured party seeks to recover from the employer on a respondeat superior theory, despite the employee's dismissal due to the bankruptcy, the injured party may continue the action against the employer with the expectation that the employer will pursue its rights against its own insurer if necessary. However, the fact that in this case, the cross-complainant had a statute of limitations problem precluding suit against the employer did not justify creating an expanded exception to bankruptcy discharge law.n13.13

In Cassady v. Morgan, Lewis & Brockius LLP, n13.14 an attorney performed legal services for a client for many years, and during that time practiced law with several firms in a variety of capacities. Years later, the client sued the attorney and law firms and attorneys with whom the attorney had been affiliated for a variety of claims including professional negligence, premised on numerous aspects of the attorney's and other entities' representation over a multi-year period. One firm provided a defense for several other attorneys, but not for Cassady. After incurring legal fees for his defense, Cassady sought indemnity from the firm under Labor Code § 2802. The court held that there was no dispute that the attorney's representation of the client while at the firm was within the scope of his employment. Thus, the court had to determine the application of § 2802 when the defense costs arose from the attorney's alleged conduct spanning a period during which he was employed by several different successive employers. The court found that the plain language of § 2802 made clear that the firm was responsible for indemnifying the attorney, if at all, only for defense costs arising from aspects of the attorney's representation of the client undertaken during the period he was employed by the firm. Defense costs arising from his conduct when he was practicing law elsewhere did not meet the statutory criteria, because they could not have been incurred in direct consequence of the discharge of duties for the firm. On the other hand, when the attorney incurred fees on an issue common to defense of the client's claims arising both from periods he was and was not employed by the firm, indemnity would be proper. The attorney bore the burden of apportioning defense fees among the several employers during the period. One of the elements of the § 2802 claim was that the costs of defense of the client's malpractice action were incurred in direct consequence of the attorney's discharge of his duties for the firm. Thus, the attorney was required to show that the conduct defended against was within the course and scope of his employment with the firm.

In situations in which the employee and employer are both at fault, normal principles of comparative indemnity apply.ⁿ¹⁴ For a complete discussion of comparative indemnity, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 74 (Matthew Bender).

To satisfy its statutory reimbursement obligation, an employer may separately reimburse employees for their actual expenses.ⁿ¹⁵ In reimbursing employees for their actual expenses, the employer may consider not only the actual expenses that the employee incurred, but also whether each of those expenses was necessary, which in turn depends on the reasonableness of the employee's choices.ⁿ¹⁶ For example, an employee's choice of automobile significantly affects the costs incurred. Calculation of automobile expense reimbursement using the actual expenses method requires detailed recordkeeping by the employee and complex allocation calculations, and the exercise of judgment by the employer, the employee, and officials charged with enforcement of § 2802, to determine whether the expenses incurred were reasonable and therefore necessary. Because of the onerous burdens that the actual expense method imposes on both employer and employee, few employers use this method to determine reimbursement for work-required use of employees' own automobiles.ⁿ¹⁷

An employer may also use the mileage reimbursement method to determine the amount of reimbursement due under § 2802 for work-required use of an employee's own automobile. The employee need only keep a record of the number of miles driven to perform job duties. The employee submits that information to the employer, who then multiplies the work-required miles driven by a predetermined amount that approximates the per-mile cost of owning and operating an automobile. As indicated in DLSE opinion letters and policy statements, the IRS has calculated an automobile mileage rate for federal income tax purposes, based on national average expenses for fuel, maintenance, repair, depreciation, and insurance. The IRS mileage rate is widely used and accepted by private business employers for calculating reimbursable employee automobile expenses. Labor Code Section 2802 permits use of the IRS mileage rate to calculate automobile expense reimbursement under the mileage reimbursement method.ⁿ¹⁸ A mileage rate used in the mileage reimbursement method is merely an approximation of actual expenses, so the mileage reimbursement method is inherently less accurate than the actual expense method. Lab. Code Section 2802 requires the employer to fully reimburse the employee for all expenses actually and necessarily incurred. Thus, if an employer uses the mileage reimbursement method, the employee must be permitted to challenge the resulting reimbursement payment. If the employee can show that the reimbursement amount that the employer has paid is less than the actual expenses that the employee has necessarily incurred for work-required automobile use as calculated using the actual expense method, the employer must make up the difference.ⁿ¹⁹ The mileage rate may also be a subject of negotiation and agreement between employer and employee; however, under Lab. Code § 2804, any agreement made by the employee is null and void insofar as it waives the employee's rights to full expense reimbursement under § 2802. Therefore, an agreement concerning a mileage reimbursement rate does not relieve the employer of the statutory obligation to provide complete reimbursement or preclude an employee from challenging the sufficiency of a reimbursement payment calculated using the agreed mileage rate.ⁿ²⁰

The employer may also use a lump-sum payment. Under this method, the employee need not submit any information to the employer about work-required miles driven or automobile expenses incurred. The employer merely pays a fixed amount for automobile expense reimbursement. The fixed amount may take various forms and have various labels, including per diem, car allowance, and gas stipend. The amount is generally based on the employer's understanding of the employee's job duties, including the number of miles that the employee typically or routinely must drive to perform those duties.ⁿ²¹ Labor Code Section 2802 does not prohibit an employer's use of a lump-sum method to reimburse employees for work-required automobile expenses, provided that the amount paid is sufficient to provide full reimbursement for actual expenses necessarily incurred. An employee may challenge the amount of a lump-sum payment as insufficient under § 2802 by comparing the payment with the amount that would be payable under either the actual expense method or the mileage reimbursement method. If the comparison reveals that the lump sum is inadequate, the employer must make up the difference. An employer and an employee may agree on a particular lump sum to be paid as automobile reimbursement, but under Lab. Code § 2804, the existence of an agreement between an employer or employee regarding a lump-sum reimbursement payment does not relieve the employer of the statutory obligation to pay full reimbursement or bar an employee challenge to a lump-sum payment as insufficient under § 2802 to provide full reimbursement.ⁿ²² An employer's decision to use a lump-sum method rather than a mileage reimbursement system may have income tax consequences, affecting whether the resulting payments are exempt from withholding requirementsⁿ²³ and, ultimately, the extent to which they are taxable as income or instead treated as deductible business expenses. However, § 2802 does not require an employer to use a reimbursement method that is congruent with any tax law or has any particular tax consequence. Any tax consequences that result from the employer's choice of reimbursement method should be considered in determining whether a particular payment provides the full measure of reimbursement that § 2802 requires.ⁿ²⁴ The employer is not required to segregate the lump sum from other compensation, but may pay the lump sum in the form of an increase to the employee's base salary or commissions.ⁿ²⁵

Because wages and expense reimbursement are conceptually distinct and subject to different statutory and sometimes contractual constraints, an employer may not combine the payments for both in a way that would seriously hamper or effectively preclude enforcement of the various statutory and contractual obligations. The employer must provide some apportionment method or formula to identify the amount of the combined employee compensation payment intended to provide expense reimbursement. Using that method or formula, the employee, and officials charged with enforcement of state and federal wage laws, can readily determine whether the employer has discharged all of its legal obligations as to both wages and business expense reimbursement.ⁿ²⁶ An employer that chooses to link expense reimbursement to employee performance by providing automobile expense reimbursement through an increase in commission rates runs a risk that the employee may earn less commission income than the employer anticipated, so that the increase in the commission rate may be insufficient to provide full reimbursement for the automobile expenses that the employee necessarily incurred. If that happens, the employer's full reimbursement obligation under § 2802 will require it to make up the difference.ⁿ²⁷ In providing the documentation required by Lab. Code § 226(a), employers that provide business expense reimbursement to employees through increases in base salary or commission rates should separately identify the amounts that represent payment for labor performed and the amounts that represent reimbursement for business expenses.ⁿ²⁸ Thus, an employer may satisfy its statutory business expense reimbursement obligation under Lab. Code § 2802 by paying employees enhanced compensation in the form of increases in base salary or commission rates, provided the employer establishes some means to identify the portion of overall compensation that is intended as expense reimbursement, and provided also that the amounts so identified are sufficient to fully reimburse the employees for all expenses actually and necessarily incurred.ⁿ²⁹

[b] Waiver of Right to Indemnity

Labor Code section 2804 voids any agreement to waive the protections of Labor Code section 2802 as against public policy. Labor Code section 2804 provides that any contract or agreement, express or implied, made by an employee to waive the benefits of Labor Code section 2800 et seq. is null and void, and Labor Code section 2800 et seq. will not deprive an employee or the employee's personal representative of any right or remedy to which the employee is entitled under the laws of California. Courts have interpreted Labor Code section 2804 to apply to Labor Code section 2802, making all contracts that waive an employee's right to indemnification null and void.ⁿ³⁰ Thus, indemnity rights are nonwaivable, and any contract that purports to waive an employee's indemnity right would be contrary to the law and therefore unlawful to that extent.ⁿ³¹

In Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP,ⁿ³² the California Supreme Court held that a contract provision releasing "any and all" claims against an employer did not encompass nonwaivable statutory protections, such as the employee indemnity protection of Labor Code section 2802 and, accordingly, was not void under Labor Code section 2804. The employee worked for a large accounting firm, which was being investigated by the federal government at the time of his separation from employment. At that time, he was asked to execute a broad general release in the firm's favor, which, inter alia, provided that he was required to release and discharge the firm from the following:

[A]ny and all actions, causes of action, claims, demands, debts, damages, costs, losses, penalties, attorneys' fees, obligations, judgments, expenses, compensation or liabilities of any nature whatsoever, in law or equity, whether known or unknown, contingent or otherwise, that Employee now has, may have ever had in the past or may have in the future against any of the Released Parties by reason of any act, omission, transaction, occurrence, conduct, circumstance, condition, harm, matter, cause, or thing that has occurred from the beginning of time up to and including the date hereof, including, without limitation, claims that in any way arise from or out of, are based upon or relate to Employee's employment by, association with or compensation from [the firm] or any of its affiliated firms, except for claims (i) arising out of [the firm's] obligations set forth in this agreement or (ii) for any accrued and unpaid salary or other employee benefit or compensation owing to Employee as of the date hereof."

The Court found that the agreement did not expressly reference indemnity rights and refused to read it as encompassing a waiver of the employee's indemnity rights, because giving it such a reading was consistent with the tenets of contractual interpretation to make the contract lawful, valid and capable of being carried into effect. Thus, the Court interpreted it such that it did not violate Labor Code section 2804. The Court also found that releasing "any and all" claims did not implicate the employee's nonwaivable right to indemnity, because the employer was aware that under Labor Code section 2804, such rights are statutorily nonwaivable so that such an exception was legally unnecessary.ⁿ³³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Employer Liability
General Overview
Torts
Vicarious Liability
General Overview
Torts
Vicarious Liability
Employers
Indemnity

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 695, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 ; see also Popejoy v. Hannon (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 159, 173, 231 P.2d 484 ; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Superior Oil Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 289, 299, 52 Cal. Rptr. 53 ; Herrero v. Atkinson (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 69, 77, 38 Cal. Rptr. 490 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 876(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Continental Cas. Co. v. Phoenix Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 423, 428, 296 P.2d 801 ; but see Lab. Code § 2802; Holt v. Booth (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1080 n.6, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 727 (dicta in footnote suggesting that statute may require vicariously liable employer to indemnify negligent employee for liability to third party arising from conduct within scope of employment).

(n3)Footnote 3. See E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 366, 373-377, 187 Cal. Rptr. 879 (cited with approval in Far West Financial Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 808, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399).

(n4)Footnote 4. Far West Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 817, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6.

(n5)Footnote 5. Far West Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 815-816, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Far West Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 816-817, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 869-870, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 . For the standard jury instruction on comparative fault between and among tortfeasors for purposes of indemnity, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3800 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Srithong v. Total Inv. Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 721, 726-728, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672 ; Rashtian v. BRAC-BH, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 1854, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 411 ; see also Miller v. Stouffer (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 70, 84, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 454

(n10)Footnote 9.1. Lab. Code § 2802(a).

(n11)Footnote 9.2. Lab. Code § 2804. See Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 561, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n12)Footnote 9.3. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 563, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 . See also Reynolds v. Bement (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1075, 1084, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 483, 116 P.3d 1162 ; Morillion v. Royal Packing Co. (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 575, 581, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 3, 995 P.2d 139 . For discussion of enforcement powers of DLSE generally, see § 1.05[3][a].

(n13)Footnote 9.4. Tidewater Marine Western, Inc. v. Bradshaw (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 557, 572, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 186, 927 P.2d 296 . See Gov. Code § 11340 et seq. For discussion, see § 1.05[3][c].

(n14)Footnote 9.5. Tidewater Marine Western, Inc. v. Bradshaw (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 557, 576-577, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 186, 927 P.2d 296 .

(n15)Footnote 9.6. Tidewater Marine Western, Inc. v. Bradshaw (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 557, 577, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 186, 927 P.2d 296 .

(n16)Footnote 10. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 563, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n17)Footnote 10.1. Cassady v. Morgan, Lewis & Brockius LLP (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 220, 230, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 .

(n18)Footnote 10.2. Cassady v. Morgan, Lewis & Brockius LLP (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 220, 230-231, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 ; Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1100, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 .

(n19)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 2802(b).

(n20)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 2802(c).

(n21)Footnote 12.1. Reynolds v. Bement (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1075, 1087, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 483, 116 P.3d 1162 ; Estrada v. FedEx Ground Package Syst., Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 327 .

(n22)Footnote 12.2. S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 350-351, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399; Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975; Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43-44, 168 P.2d 686; Estrada v. FedEx Ground Package Syst., Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 327; Air Couriers Int'l. v. Employment Development Dept. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 923, 933, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37; JKH Enterprises, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1046, 1064-1065, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 563.

(n23)Footnote 12.3. S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399; Estrada v. FedEx Ground Package Syst., Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1, 10-11, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 327; Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 877-878, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647.

(n24)Footnote 12.4. S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Department of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 341, 349, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399; Estrada v. FedEx Ground Package Syst., Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1, 11, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 327; Air Couriers Int'l. v. Employment Development Dept. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 923, 937, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37; Santa Cruz Transportation, Inc. v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1363, 1367, 1373, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 64; Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 877, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647.

(n25)Footnote 12.5. Estrada v. FedEx Ground Package Syst., Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1, 11-13, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 327.

(n26)Footnote 12.6. See Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 562, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 (relatively few appellate decisions have construed or applied Lab. Code § 2802).

(n27)Footnote 13. O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local 856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1158 (quoting Devereaux v. Latham & Watkins (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1571, 1583, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849, quoting Los Angeles Police Protective League v. City of Los Angeles (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 168, 177, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 574 (italics in original); but see Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1106, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 (expressly disagrees with O'Hara because of established principle that prevailing party not entitled to recover attorney fees in the absence of specific contract or statute, and § 2802 is not specific provision allowing recovery of attorney fees to enforce its indemnification provisions); see Grissom v. Vons Companies, Inc. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 52, 57-59, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808 (indemnification of employee for expenses or losses necessarily incurred in discharge of employee's duty within meaning of Lab. Code § 2802 is question of fact, requiring inquiry into what is reasonable under circumstances, and, in this case, allowing plaintiff to amend his complaint to state cause of action for independent counsel); Douglas v. Los Angeles Herald-Examiner (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 449, 461, 123 Cal. Rptr. 683 (requiring indemnification under Lab. Code § 2802 by employer of newspaper reporter required to defend suit against third party exclusively because of acts performed for or at employer's direction); cf. Continental Cas. Co. v. Phoenix Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 423, 428, 296 P.2d 801 (employer entitled to indemnity on being held vicariously liable under respondeat superior for employee's authorized negligence), discussed in [1], above.

(n28)Footnote 13.1. Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1101, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425, 429.

(n29)Footnote 13.2. O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local 856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1158 n.1 (quoting Devereaux v. Latham & Watkins (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1571, 1583, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849 and citing examples).

(n30)Footnote 13.3. See O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local 856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152.

(n31)Footnote 13.4. See O'Hara v. Teamsters Union Local 856 (9th Cir. 1998) 151 F.3d 1152, 1158.

(n32)Footnote 13.5. Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425, 429.

(n33)Footnote 13.6. See Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1106, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425, 429 .

(n34)Footnote 13.7. See Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1102, 1106, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425, 429 .

(n35)Footnote 13.8. See Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1104, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425, 429 .

(n36)Footnote 13.9. Boyer v. Jensen (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 62, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 124 .

(n37)Footnote 13.10. For discussion of the statute of limitations as a defense to a respondeat superior action, see § 3.08[1], above.

(n38)Footnote 13.11. Boyer v. Jensen (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 62, 71-75, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 124 . see Republic Indemnity Co. v. Schofield (1995) 47 Cal. App. 4th 220, 226-227, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 637 .

(n39)Footnote 13.12. Boyer v. Jensen (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 62, 75-77, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 124 .

(n40)Footnote 13.13. Boyer v. Jensen (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 62, 77-79, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 124 .

(n41)Footnote 13.14. Cassady v. Morgan, Lewis & Brockius LLP (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 220, 230-239, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 .

(n42)Footnote 14. See American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 ; see also discussion in [2], above.

(n43)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 568, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 (to reimburse employees for use of their automobiles, employer could use actual expense method, by calculating automobile expenses employees actually and necessarily incurred and separately paying employees that amount).

(n44)Footnote 16. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 568, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 . See Grissom v. Vons Companies, Inc. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 52, 58, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808 (under § 2802, ascertaining necessary expenditure will require inquiry into what was reasonable under circumstances).

(n45)Footnote 17. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 568-569, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n46)Footnote 18. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 569, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n47)Footnote 19. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 569, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n48)Footnote 20. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 569-570, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n49)Footnote 21. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 570, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n50)Footnote 22. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 570-571, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n51)Footnote 23. See, e.g., Shotgun Delivery, Inc. v. U.S. (9th Cir. 2001) 269 F.3d 969, 972-973 .

(n52)Footnote 24. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 571, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n53)Footnote 25. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 572-573, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n54)Footnote 26. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 572-573, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n55)Footnote 27. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 573, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n56)Footnote 28. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 574 n.6, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n57)Footnote 29. Gattuso v. Harte-Hanks Shoppers, Inc. (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 554, 570-574, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 169 P.3d 889 .

(n58)Footnote 30. Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 951, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 . See Liberio v. Vidal (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 273, 276, fn. 1, 49 Cal. Rptr. 520 .

(n59)Footnote 31. Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 951-952, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 .

(n60)Footnote 32. Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 . To view California Supreme Court briefs available on Lexis.com, go to 2006 CA S. Ct. Briefs 47190A .

(n61)Footnote 33. Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 951-955, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 .

110 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.10

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.10 Liability for Actions of Independent Contractors

[1] General Rule of Nonliability

As noted previously,ⁿ¹ the general rule is that a person who employs an independent contractor, as distinguished from an employee, is not liable for the torts of the contractor or the torts of the employees of the contractor.ⁿ² However, as discussed in [2], below, there are many exceptions to the rule.ⁿ³

For discussion of the definition of an independent contractor, and the distinction between employees and independent contractors, see § 30.04[4].

[2] Exceptions to Rule of Nonliability

[a] Generally

A person may not insulate himself or herself from liability to others in all cases by the employment of an independent contractor.ⁿ⁴ Courts have articulated a number of theories, summarized below, under which a person may be held vicariously liable for the torts of an independent contractor.

In addition, an employer may be liable for the acts of an independent contractor in the same way that an employer may be directly liable for the acts of an employee as discussed in § 30.02. For example, the employer may be liable for the acts of an independent contractor pursuant to orders or directions negligently given by the employer.ⁿ⁵ The employer may also be liable for negligent selection of an independent contractor,ⁿ⁶ for negligent failure to inspect the work of a contractor,ⁿ⁷ or for negligently exercising retained control over work entrusted to the contractor.^{n7.1}

The determination that a defendant is not vicariously liable for the acts of an independent contractor may be made on summary judgment as a matter of law for failure to allege any facts or identify any relevant policy considerations that would warrant imposition of vicarious liability.^{n7.2}

[b] Peculiar Risk Doctrine[i] Rule of Liability and Rationale

The "peculiar risk" doctrine, as stated by the Restatement (Second) of Torts, Section 416, has been adopted in California.ⁿ⁸ That section provides as follows:

One who employs an independent contractor to do work that the employer should recognize as likely to create during its progress a peculiar risk of physical harm to others, unless special precautions are taken, is subject to liability for physical harm caused to them by the failure of the contractors to exercise reasonable care to take such precautions, even though the employer has provided for such precautions in the contract or otherwise.ⁿ⁹

The peculiar risk doctrine applies only for the benefit of injured third parties. It imposes no liability on the hirer for injuries to the independent contractor.^{n9.1}

It has been stated that peculiar risk is not exclusively a form of vicarious liability, and that it may arise as a form of direct liability if the person who hires an independent contractor (1) fails to provide in the contract that the contractor must take special precautions, or (2) fails to exercise reasonable care to provide in some other manner for the taking of such precautions.^{n9.2} However the California Supreme Court, in a footnote, seemed to reject any differentiation of the peculiar risk doctrine as imposing either direct or vicarious liability based on the presence or absence of one of these factors. The Court stated that the conclusion that peculiar risk is a form of vicarious liability is unaffected by the characterization of the doctrine as "direct" liability in situation when the person hiring an independent contractor fails to provide in the contract that the contractor must take special precautions. Thus, the Court said, peculiar risk liability is normally premised on the broader rule of vicarious liability for the contractor's negligence.ⁿ¹⁰ What facts might take the doctrine out of the "normal" situation and impose direct liability on the hirer remains to be determined.ⁿ¹¹

[ii] No Vicarious Liability to Employee of Independent Contractor

California courts formerly permitted an employee of an independent contractor to use the peculiar risk exception to hold a nonnegligent hirer of an independent contractor vicariously liable for the negligence of the employer-contractor.ⁿ¹² However, in Privette v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹³ the California Supreme Court overruled these cases and held that employees of an independent contractor hired to do dangerous work may not recover from the nonnegligent hirer of their employer under the peculiar risk doctrine; workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for these employees.ⁿ¹⁴

In Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁵ the Supreme Court held that "Privette...bars employees of a hired contractor who are injured by the contractor's negligence from seeking recovery against the hiring person, irrespective of whether recovery is sought under the theory of peculiar risk set forth in Section 416 [direct liability] or Section 413 [vicarious liability] of the Restatement Second of Torts."ⁿ¹⁶

The Privette decision has been applied retroactively.ⁿ¹⁷ The limitation of Privette also has been extended to the situation in which the negligence of one independent contractor injures the employee of another. In this situation as well, the hirer has no vicarious liability to the injured employee.ⁿ¹⁸

For further discussion of the exclusive remedy doctrine, see Chapter 20.

[iii] What Constitutes Peculiar Risk

A peculiar risk is something other than the ordinary and customary dangers that may arise in the course of the work or of normal human activity.ⁿ¹⁹ It is a risk that is peculiar to the work to be done that arises from the character of the work or from the place where the work is to be done, against which a reasonable person would recognize the necessity of taking special precautions.ⁿ²⁰

A peculiar risk does not mean that the risk must be one that is abnormal to the type of work done, or that it is an abnormally great risk, but rather refers to a special, recognizable danger arising out of the work itself.ⁿ²¹

Factors that are important in determining whether a particular danger is recognizable as a "special" danger include (1) the foreseeability of the specific risk or set of risks arising in connection with the work as planned, (2) whether the risk is "intimately connected with the work" or "accidental," (3) the degree of risk, and (4) the possibility of anticipating and prescribing definite precautions to avert the anticipated risk or risks.ⁿ²² Examples of cases involving peculiar risks of harm in the absence of special precautions includeⁿ²³ the risk of a cave-in from a nine-foot deep trench on a construction site when there is an indication of the likelihood of danger absent proper shoring,ⁿ²⁴ and the risk of explosion while painting the inside of a tank with volatile paint.ⁿ²⁵

The fact that a special risk is foreseeable justifies the imposition of liability.ⁿ²⁶ As a general rule, the foreseeability of special risks is determined at the time that the parties enter into the contract.ⁿ²⁷ However, liability may be imposed on an employer who at the time of entering into the contract had no reason to anticipate that conditions requiring special precautions would arise, if such conditions subsequently arise of which the employer knows or should know.ⁿ²⁸

In order for the peculiar risk doctrine to apply, there must be some direct link between the risk and the dangerous event or condition that results in injury. A foreseeable course of conduct is not a peculiar risk absent some evidence linking that course of conduct with some specific and special harm, against which the hirer should guard.ⁿ²⁹

The fact that the employer does not know, or that a reasonable person would not know, that the independent contractor has not taken special precautions, or is not planning to take them, does not preclude liability.ⁿ³⁰ However, the possibility of routine negligence in the performance of work cannot provide a basis for liability under the peculiar risk doctrine.ⁿ³¹ While the hirer of an independent contractor might always foresee that the contractor may in some way be negligent toward third persons, the doctrine has no reference to such a general anticipation.ⁿ³² Thus, a contractor's use of defective equipment or misuse of equipment is not within the peculiar risk doctrine.ⁿ³³ For example, if a contractor is hired to transport goods, the hirer would have no liability for the contractor's failure to inspect the brakes or for negligent driving. But if the goods are logs weighing several tons, the hirer is liable for the contractor's failure to take special precautions to secure the logs to the truck.ⁿ³⁴

[iv] No Immunity for Hirer's Own Negligent Selection, Control, and Supervision of Independent Contractor

The Supreme Court's decision in Privette does not shield a hirer of an independent contractor from liability to the independent contractor's employee who sustains work-related injuries caused by the hirer's own independent fault. This is true even if the employee's injuries are also compensable by workers' compensation.ⁿ³⁵

[c] Inherently Dangerous Activities

One who employs an independent contractor to perform work that is inherently dangerous is liable for the negligence on the part of the independent contractor (or servants of the independent contractor) in the improper performance of the work or for their negligent failure to take necessary precautions.ⁿ³⁶

[d] Nondelegable Duty

A person who hires an independent contractor is liable for the misconduct of the contractor in regard to a duty of the hirer that is deemed "nondelegable."ⁿ³⁷ Thus, when the law imposes a definite affirmative duty on one by reason of his or her relationship with others, whether as an owner or proprietor of landⁿ³⁸ or chattels or in some other capacity, such a person cannot escape liability for a failure to perform the duty thus imposed by entrusting it to an independent contractor.ⁿ³⁹

A nondelegable duty may be imposed by statute, by charter, or by common law.ⁿ⁴⁰ For example, certain statutory safety provisions such as those found in the Vehicle Code create duties that may not be delegated, so that the owner of a vehicle is liable for the harm caused by the negligence of his or her mechanic in servicing a vehicle, even though the mechanic is an independent contractor.ⁿ⁴¹ A nondelegable duty imposed by statute depends on statutory language and legislative purpose.ⁿ⁴²

A nondelegable duty may also be created by ordinances, regulations, or other public safety rules and orders. However, the duty imposed must involve specific safeguards; a general requirement that a safe workplace must be provided is insufficient to create a nondelegable duty.ⁿ⁴³ For example, billboard owners had a nondelegable duty to comply with a billboard safety regulation,^{n43.1} and the employee of an independent contractor who was injured in a fall from the billboard raised a genuine issue of material fact as to whether they breached that duty.^{n43.2}

A nondelegable duty may also be created by contract. A promisor may not escape liability to the promisee by delegating performance of a contractual obligation to an independent contractor. However, under this exception, no liability is incurred with regard to a nonparty to the contract who is injured by the independent contractor.ⁿ⁴⁴

"Nondelegable duties" may also be imposed in connection with an activity done under license of public authority.ⁿ⁴⁵ Thus, cases have stated that one carrying on an activity that can be lawfully carried on only under a franchise granted by public authority and that involves an unreasonable risk of harm to others is subject to liability for personal injury caused by the negligence of a contractor employed to do work in carrying on the activity.ⁿ⁴⁶ This rule imposes liability on common carriers operating under a public franchise for the acts of independent-contractor drivers,ⁿ⁴⁷ and it has also been applied to nonfranchised highway contract carriers.ⁿ⁴⁸

It has been held that the rule that the hirer of an independent contractor is not vicariously liable for injuries to the contractor's employees under the peculiar risk doctrineⁿ⁴⁹ is not a limitation under the nondelegable duty rule.ⁿ⁵⁰

[e] Vicarious Liability for Nuisance or Trespass

The employer of an independent contractor may be held liable for injuries resulting from acts of the contractor that constitute a nuisance if the employer had knowledge of or should have known of the nuisance.ⁿ⁵¹

[3] Intentional Torts

As a general rule, the vicarious liability of an employer for the torts of an independent contractor does not extend to intentional torts committed by the contractor.ⁿ⁵² However, in those instances in which the independent contractor is also deemed the agent of the employer, the employer may be liable for the agent's intentional torts.ⁿ⁵³

[4] Collateral Negligence

Under the collateral negligence doctrine, an employer of an independent contractor is not liable for acts of the contractor or the contractor's employees that are deemed "collateral."ⁿ⁵⁴ Under this doctrine, an employer of an independent contractor is not liable for harm caused by the contractor if (1) the contractor's negligence consists solely of the improper manner in which he or she does the work, (2) the negligence creates a risk of harm that is not inherent in or normal to the work, and (3) the employer had no reason to contemplate the contractor's negligence when the contract was made and the employer was not otherwise negligent.ⁿ⁵⁵ The negligence for which the employer of an independent contractor is liable must be of a type that is intimately connected with the work authorized and that is reasonably likely from its nature. Negligence in the doing of ordinary acts, that are not necessarily incidental, but only accidentally connected with the work, does not fall within the policy of the law that imposes the extraordinary liability on the employer.n56

The doctrine of collateral negligence is based on the premise that, when harm results from a risk other than the one that makes the employer liable for the acts of the independent contractor, the reason for applying vicarious liability no longer applies. Thus, when an independent contractor is hired to take down a heavy sign, while the employer would be liable for harm caused in lowering the sign to the ground, he or she is not liable for harm caused after the sign has been lowered.n57

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityIndependent ContractorsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in § 30.04[4].

(n2)Footnote 2. Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 838, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 ; Anderson v. Chancellor Western Oil Dev. Corp. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 235, 239, 125 Cal. Rptr. 640 ; see Matthews v. Sears Roebuck & Co. (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 96, 97, 253 P.2d 43 (employer of independent contractor hired to install carpet as not liable for tort of contractor in negligently leaving carpet on sidewalk, causing injury to person who fell over carpet).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 252-253, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Anderson v. Chancellor Western Oil Dev. Corp. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 235, 239, 125 Cal. Rptr. 640 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Widman v. Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 734, 743, 97 Cal. Rptr. 52 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Chevron U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 544, 549, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 674 ; Golden v. Conway (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 948, 957, 128 Cal. Rptr. 69 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See McCordic v. Crawford (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 1, 6-7, 142 P.2d 7 .

(n8)Footnote 7.1. See Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 123, 137-140, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 ; Villafana v. Camco Pacific Construction Co. (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 189, 197-198, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 170 (imposition of liability on general contractor not allowed for mere failure to exercise power to compel subcontractor to adopt safer procedures); Yanez v. U.S. (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 870, 874-875 ; see also Restatement 2d Torts § 414.

(n9)Footnote 7.2. Weiss v. Chevron, U. S. A., Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1094, 1100, 251 Cal. Rptr. 727 (oil company's supply of products to service station insufficient to impose vicarious liability for acts of station's employee).

(n10)Footnote 8. See Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 839, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 ; Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 123, 132, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 ; LaCount v. Hensel Phelps Constr. Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 754, 763, 145 Cal. Rptr. 244 . For the standard jury instruction on the peculiar risk doctrine, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3708 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n11)Footnote 9. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 416. A closely related provision, Restatement (Second) of Torts § 413, imposes direct liability on an employer for failing to provide for appropriate precautions in the agreement with the independent contractor. Furthermore, the substance of Restatement (Second) of Torts § 416 is practically duplicated by Restatement (Second) of Torts § 427. see Henderson Brothers Stores, Inc. v. Smiley (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 903, 912 n.4, 174 Cal. Rptr. 875.

(n12)Footnote 9.1. Torres v. Reardon (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 831, 839-841, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52.

(n13)Footnote 9.2. See Owens v. Giannetta-Heinrich Construction Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1667, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11 (dicta citing Restatement of Torts 2d, § 413).

(n14)Footnote 10. See Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 695 n.2, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721.

(n15)Footnote 11. See Owens v. Giannetta-Heinrich Construction Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1667 n.4, 1668, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11 (emphasizing word "normally" in concluding that Supreme Court intended its holding in Privette, discussed in [ii], below, to apply only in situations in which third-party liability is vicarious rather than direct); cf. Yanez v. United States (9th Cir. 1995) 63 F.3d 870, 873 (refusing to characterize negligent failure to supervise as within any possible exception to rule of Privette); see also [a], above.

(n16)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Aceves v. Regal Pale Brewing Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 502, 508-509, 156 Cal. Rptr. 41, 595 P.2d 619; Woolen v. Aerojet General Corp. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 407, 410-411, 20 Cal. Rptr. 12, 369 P.2d 708.

(n17)Footnote 13. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721.

(n18)Footnote 14. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 696-702, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721; Andreini v. Superior Court (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1424-1429, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 153 (after exhaustively reviewing Privette factors, court concluded that Privette exception to peculiar risk doctrine does not apply when contractor does not have workers' compensation insurance or is not otherwise self-insured); Redfeather v. Chevron USA, Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 702, 707-708, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159 (corporation that hired independent contractor to close oil well is not liable to employee for personal injuries under Privette, notwithstanding independent contractor's agreement to indemnify corporation against that liability).

(n19)Footnote 15. Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 955 P.2d 504.

(n20)Footnote 16. Toland v. Sunland Housing Group, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 253, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878, 955 P.2d 504. For a complete discussion see § 20.44[2], above.

(n21)Footnote 17. See Whitford v. Swinerton & Walberg Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1054, 1059-1060, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 688; Smith v. ACandS, Inc. (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 77, 94-95, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457; Owens v. Giannetta-Heinrich Construction Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1669-1671, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11.

(n22)Footnote 18. Smith v. ACandS, Inc. (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 77, 95-97, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457.

(n23)Footnote 19. Griesel v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 578, 586, 153 Cal. Rptr. 213, 591 P.2d 503; Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 123, 132, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747.

(n24)Footnote 20. Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 123, 132, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747.

(n25)Footnote 21. Aceves v. Regal Pale Brewing Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 502, 509, 156 Cal. Rptr. 41, 595 P.2d 619 (in determining whether danger is recognizable, hirer's knowledge and experience in field of work to be done are relevant); Henderson Bros. Stores, Inc. v. Smiley (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 903, 915-916, 174 Cal. Rptr. 875 (quoting from Restatement (Second) of Torts § 413, comment b).

(n26)Footnote 22. Henderson Brothers Stores, Inc. v. Smiley (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 903, 916-917, 174 Cal.

Rptr. 875 .

(n27)Footnote 23. See Henderson Brothers Stores, Inc. v. Smiley (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 903, 911 n.3, 174 Cal. Rptr. 875 (containing long list of examples).

(n28)Footnote 24. See Griesel v. Dart Indus., Inc. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 578, 586-587, 153 Cal. Rptr. 213, 591 P.2d 503 .

(n29)Footnote 25. See Woolen v. Aerojet General Corp. (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 407, 410, 20 Cal. Rptr. 12, 369 P.2d 708 , overruled on other grounds, Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 702, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 .

(n30)Footnote 26. Holman v. State of California (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 317, 330, 124 Cal. Rptr. 773 .

(n31)Footnote 27. See McDonald v. City of Oakland (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 816, 823, 63 Cal. Rptr. 593 .

(n32)Footnote 28. Mackey v. Campbell Construction Co. (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 774, 784, 162 Cal. Rptr. 64 .

(n33)Footnote 29. Jordy v. County of Humboldt (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 735, 746-747, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 (risk that foster child would attempt to run away from foster home is not basis for holding agency that placed foster child is liable for injury to foster child during operation of off-road vehicle).

(n34)Footnote 30. McDonald v. City of Oakland (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 816, 823, 63 Cal. Rptr. 593 .

(n35)Footnote 31. Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 123, 132-133, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 ; Hughes v. Atlantic Pacific Construction Co. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 987, 1000, 240 Cal. Rptr. 200 .

(n36)Footnote 32. Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 123, 133, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 .

(n37)Footnote 33. Johnson v. Tosco Corp. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 123, 133, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747 (defective scaffolding on job site not peculiar risk); see Stark v. Weeks Real Estate (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 965, 972, 156 Cal. Rptr. 701 (misuse of hand-held saw).

(n38)Footnote 34. Holman v. State of California (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 317, 327-328, 124 Cal. Rptr. 773 (citing examples from Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 416, comment d).

(n39)Footnote 35. Grahn v. Tosco Corp. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1373, 1379-1380, 1384-1385, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 806 (case reversed because of significant instructional errors; see § 20.44[2] for further discussion), disapproved to the extent it is inconsistent with Camargo v. Tjaarda Dairy (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 1235, 1245 and Hooker v. Dept. of Transportation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 198, 214, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 853, 38 P.3d 1081 .

(n40)Footnote 36. Wilson v. Rancho Sespe (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 10, 20, 24 Cal. Rptr. 296 (blasting operations); Snyder v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 793, 800-801, 285 P.2d 912 .

(n41)Footnote 37. Dow v. Holly Manufacturing Co. (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 720, 728, 321 P.2d 736 (duty of a general contractor to construct building safely may not be delegated).

(n42)Footnote 38. See Snyder v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 793, 797, 285 P.2d 912 (possessor of land as liable for negligence of independent contractor in building or maintaining structures on premises); Golden v. Conway (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 948, 958, 128 Cal. Rptr. 69 (landlord may be vicariously liable for negligent installation of heater by independent contractor).

(n43)Footnote 39. Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 251, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 .

- (n44)Footnote 40. Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 251, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 .
- (n45)Footnote 41. Maloney v. Rath (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 442, 446-448, 71 Cal. Rptr. 897, 445 P.2d 513 .
- (n46)Footnote 42. Jordy v. County of Humboldt (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 735, 745-747, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 (refusing to impose liability on county for acts of foster parents; construing Welf. & Inst. Code § 202).
- (n47)Footnote 43. Felmler v. Falcon Cable TV (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1038-1039, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 158 .
- (n48)Footnote 43.1. 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3416.
- (n49)Footnote 43.2. Evard v. Southern California Edison (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 137, 144-148, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 479 .
- (n50)Footnote 44. Millsap v. Federal Express Corp. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 425, 433, 277 Cal. Rptr. 807 .
- (n51)Footnote 45. See Anderson v. Chancellor Western Oil Dev. Corp. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 235, 239, 125 Cal. Rptr. 640 .
- (n52)Footnote 46. Millsap v. Federal Express Corp. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 425, 433-434, 277 Cal. Rptr. 807 ; Klein v. Leatherman (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 792, 794-796, 76 Cal. Rptr. 190 ; see Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 428.
- (n53)Footnote 47. See Eli v. Murphy (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 598, 599-600, 248 P.2d 756 ; Serna v. Pettey Leach Trucking, Inc. (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 1475, 1486-1488 (poultry exemption in 49 U.S.C. § 13506(a)(6)(B) did not mean carrier was not regulated or not subject to authority of Surface Transportation Board); Gamboa v. Conti Trucking, Inc. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 663, 666, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564 .
- (n54)Footnote 48. See Gamboa v. Conti Trucking, Inc. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 663, 666, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 564 ; Klein v. Leatherman (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 792, 794-796, 76 Cal. Rptr. 190 ; cf. Gaskill v. Calaveras Cement Co. (1951) 226 P.2d 633 (no liability based on nondelegable duty as between two contract carriers that stood on equal footing with regard to Public Utilities Commission regulation).
- (n55)Footnote 49. Privette v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 689, 692, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72, 854 P.2d 721 , discussed in [b], above.
- (n56)Footnote 50. Felmler v. Falcon Cable TV (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1032, 1037-1038, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 158 .
- (n57)Footnote 51. Henderson Brothers Stores, Inc. v. Smiley (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 903, 909 n.2, 174 Cal. Rptr. 875 ; see Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 427B.
- (n58)Footnote 52. Campbell v. Security Pac. Nat. Bank (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 379, 386-387, 133 Cal. Rptr. 77 .
- (n59)Footnote 53. See Draper v. Hellman Com. T. & S. Bank (1928) 203 Cal. 26, 38-39, 263 P. 240 ; Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 654, 661-663, 109 Cal. Rptr. 269 .
- (n60)Footnote 54. See Van Arsdale v. Hollinger (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 245, 252, 66 Cal. Rptr. 20, 437 P.2d 508 .
- (n61)Footnote 55. See LaCount v. Hensel Phelps Constr. Co. (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 754, 764-765, 145 Cal. Rptr. 244 .
- (n62)Footnote 56. Snyder v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 793, 801, 285 P.2d 912 .
- (n63)Footnote 57. Smith v. Lucky Stores (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 826, 829-831, 132 Cal. Rptr. 628 .

111 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.11

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.11 Respondeat Superior and Proposition 51

Proposition 51, the so-called "Deep Pockets" initiative passed by the voters in June 1986, limits the doctrine of joint and several liability. Under Proposition 51, in any action for personal injury, property damage, or wrongful death based on principles of comparative fault, the liability of each defendant for "noneconomic damages" is several only and not joint. Thus, each defendant is liable only for the percentage of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages that corresponds to the defendant's comparative share of fault.ⁿ¹ Noneconomic damages are subjective nonmonetary losses, such as general damages for pain and suffering.ⁿ²

Proposition 51, however, does not eliminate liability for noneconomic damages of a defendant whose liability is vicarious only under respondeat superior (and who, therefore, is technically without fault). The vicariously liable employer stands in the shoes of the employee for purposes of determining the employer's comparative share of fault and noneconomic damages. If there are no other tortfeasors, the employer and employee remain jointly and severally liable for 100 percent of the plaintiff's damages, including noneconomic damages. If there are other tortfeasors, then the employer is liable only for the proportion of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages that corresponds to the employee's percentage of comparative fault.ⁿ³

For more detailed discussion of Proposition 51, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 74 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 1431.2(a). For the standard jury instruction on economic and noneconomic damages, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3902 et seq. (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)(2).

(n3)Footnote 3. Miller v. Stouffer (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 70, 81-86, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 ; see also Rashtian v. BRAC-BH, Inc. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1847, 1854, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 411 (Proposition 51 does not apply to defendant vehicle owner who is vicariously liable under Veh. Code § 17150 for driver's negligence).

112 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES

CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees

Part A. TEXT

2-30 California Employment Law §§ 30.12 through 30.19

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 30.12[Reserved]

113 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.20

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.20 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice

"Master and Servant."

"Negligence."

"Principal and Agent."

California Points and Authorities, "Principal and Agent."

Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts

Ch. 8, "Vicarious Liability."

Ch. 20, "Motor Vehicles," Part B.

Ch. 74, "Comparative Indemnity and Related Remedies."

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Ch. 270, Employer Liability for Acts of Employees (Matthew Bender).

Witkin, Summary of California Law (9th ed. 1987), Vol. 2, "Agency and Employment," §§ 115-143, Vol. 5 "Torts," §§ 997-1047.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

114 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.21

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.21 Encyclopedias

3 Cal. Jur. 3d, "Agency," §§ 131-134.

29 Cal. Jur. 3d, "Employer and Employee," §§ 91-117.

38 Cal. Jur. 3d, "Independent Contractors," §§ 1-28.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

115 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 30 Employers' Tort Liability to Third Parties for Conduct of Employees
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-30 California Employment Law § 30.22

AUTHOR: By Mary Vail, J.D.

§ 30.22 Law Reviews and Periodicals

Rygiel-Boyd, An Employer's Duty to Investigate a Worker's Online Porn Viewing, 2006 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 53 (February 2006).

Hetherington, "Trends in Enterprise Liability: Law and the Unauthorized Agent," 19 Stan. L. Rev. 76 (1966).

Jolowicz, "Liability for Independent Contractors in the English Common Law--A Suggestion," 9 Stan. L. Rev. 690 (1957).

Comment, "Employer Liability for a Drunken Employee's Action Following an Office Party: A Cause of Action Under Respondeat Superior," 19 Cal. West. L. Rev. 107 (1982).

Comment, "Liability for the Torts of Independent Contractors in California," 44 Cal. L. Rev. 762 (1956).

Comment, "Liability of Landowners Resultant From Their Employment of Independent Contractors," 13 Hastings L.J. 147 (1961).

Note, "Agency--Master Servant--Respondeat Superior--Scope of Employment," 28 So. Cal. L. Rev. 314 (1955).

Note, "Employer and Employee: Employer's Liability for Assault by Employee," 35 Cal. L. Rev. 126 (1947).

Note, "Employer and Employee: Respondeat Superior--When Is Agent's Tort in Scope of Employment," 30 Cal. L. Rev. 472 (1942).

Note, "Respondeat Superior--Right to Direct and Control--Liability of Corporation for Negligence of Physicians It Retains," 28 So. Cal. L. Rev. 423 (1955).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

116 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES

CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees

2-31 California Employment Law 31.syn

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.syn Synopsis to Chapter 31: Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees

§ 31.01 Overview

§ 31.02 Contracts Made Under Actual Authority

[1] Creating or Conferring Actual Authority

[2] Scope of Actual Authority

[a] Generally

[b] Statutory and Implied Actual Authority

[c] Authority of Corporate Officers

[d] Equal Dignities Rule

[i] Generally

[ii] Exceptions

[iii] Estoppel to Assert Rule

§ 31.03 Contracts Made Under Ostensible Authority

[1] Creating Ostensible Authority

[2] Requirement of Good-Faith Reliance

[3] Fraud of Agent

[4] Applicability of Equal Dignities Rule

[5] Statutory Ostensible Authority

§ 31.04 Ratified Contracts

[1] Generally

[2] Form and Manner of Ratification

[3] Effect of Partial Ratification

[4] Rescission of Ratification

§ 31.05 Undisclosed Principal

[1] Generally

[2] When Third Party Must Elect Whether to Hold Principal or Agent Liable

§ 31.06 Liability of Employer for Contracts in Excess of Employee's Authority

§ 31.07 Liability of Employee-Agent to Third Party

[1] Breach of Warranty of Authority

[2] Employee-Agent Liable as Principal

§ 31.08 Employee-Agent's Right to Indemnification From Employer

§§ 31.09through 31.19 [Reserved]

§ 31.20 Legal Texts

§ 31.21 Encyclopedias

§ 31.22 Law Reviews and Periodicals

By James Buyoucos, J.D.n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

117 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES

CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees

2-31 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

Scope

By James Buyoucos, J.D.n* SCOPE

This chapter discusses an employer's liability for contracts entered into by its employees with third parties pursuant to actual or ostensible authority given by the employer. The chapter also discusses liability for unauthorized contracts that are subsequently ratified by the employer. The employee's right to indemnity from the employer is also discussed, as well as the employee's liability to the third party.

The tort liability of employers for the acts of employees is discussed in Chapter 30.

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

118 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.01

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.01 Overview

The issue of whether an employer is bound by a contract with a third party entered into by an employee on behalf of the employer is determined by the law of agency. An agency is a relationship in which one person represents another in dealings with a third party.ⁿ¹ In California, the law of agency is set forth in Civil Code Section 2295 et seq. and cases interpreting those provisions.

As previously discussed,ⁿ² an employee is a person engaged to do something for the benefit of the employer or a third person.ⁿ³ An employee is subject to the control and direction of his or her employer in regard to any act, labor, or work to be done in the course and scope of his employment.ⁿ⁴ An agent is one who represents another, called the principal, in dealings with third persons.ⁿ⁵ While one may be both an employee and an agent, the terms are not synonymous. Although both employment and agency relationships involve the idea of service for another, an agent works not only for, but in the place of, his or her principal in transactions with third persons.ⁿ⁶ An agent for a particular act or transaction is called a special agent; all other agents are general agents.ⁿ⁷

An agency may be either actual or ostensible.ⁿ⁸ If the agent is an employee of the principal, the agency is actual.ⁿ⁹ An agency is ostensible if the principal intentionally, or by want of ordinary care, causes a third person to believe that one who is not employed by the principal is the principal's agent.ⁿ¹⁰ Because an employee is, by statute, deemed to be an actual agent, this chapter does not further consider the doctrine of ostensible agency. However, an actual employee-agent may have either actual or ostensible authority. Actual authority is that which the principal intentionally confers on the agent, or intentionally, or by want of ordinary care, allows the agent to believe that he or she possesses.ⁿ¹¹ Ostensible authority is that which the principal, intentionally or by want of ordinary care, allows a third person to believe the agent possesses.ⁿ¹² If an agency relationship is established, the principal is bound for the acts of the agent that are within the scope of the agent's actual or ostensible authority.ⁿ¹³

Thus, for the purposes of determining the contractual liability of an employer for contracts entered into by one of its employees, the mere fact that an employee is the employer's actual agent is not determinative. The determinative issue is whether the employee was authorized by the employer to represent it in the particular transaction in issue (or if a substitute for actual authorization, such as ostensible authority or ratification, is present). An employer is bound by a contract entered into by an employee on its behalf in four situations:

1. If the employer has conferred actual authority on the employee to enter into the contract on its behalf;ⁿ¹⁴
2. If the employee appears to have the ostensible authority to enter into the contract due to the employer's representations or conduct toward the third party;ⁿ¹⁵
3. If the employer has subsequently ratified an unauthorized contract;ⁿ¹⁶ or
4. If the employer employs a person who, with the employer's consent, enters into a contract on the behalf of the employer in the employee's own name (the "undisclosed principal" theory).ⁿ¹⁷

The extent of the authority of an agent is ordinarily a question of fact.ⁿ¹⁸ In resolving it, the trier of fact may draw inferences from the conduct of the parties.ⁿ¹⁹ Thus, an agent's authority may be proved by circumstantial evidence.ⁿ²⁰

The burden of proving the scope of an agent's authority, rests on the party seeking to charge the principal with the representations of the agent.ⁿ²¹ Mere surmise as to the authority of an agent is insufficient to impose liability on the principal.ⁿ²²

In the discussion that follows, unless otherwise indicated, the terms "employee" and "agent" are used interchangeably to refer to an employee acting on behalf of the employer in transactions with third parties. The terms "employer" and "principal" are likewise used interchangeably to refer to the person or entity being represented by the employee-agent.

1. Informing all employees (especially sales personnel and those in positions to commit the employer's assets), in writing if possible, that they may make no contractual commitments except those for which they are given express authority.
2. Including clauses in all preprinted contract forms which (a) clearly identify the types of persons whom the employer has authorized to sign such contracts; and (b) clearly state that the contract is invalid if not signed by authorized personnel;
3. Periodically reviewing the contract-signing procedures that the employer has implemented to ensure compliance with their terms; and
4. Acting quickly, with the aid of legal counsel, to address any evidence that an employee may have acted beyond the scope of his or her authority to enter into a contractual relationship that the employer does not wish to continue.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The ability of an agent to contract for a principal, whether the agent acts with actual or ostensible authority, is of special significance for employers. That is, because issues of actual or ostensible authority are frequently fact-intensive, employers should recognize that the existence of an employer-employee relationship with an individual may be a critical element in a third party's argument that the relationship is also one of principal and agent. Employers, therefore, are advised to take steps to ensure that their employees do not act as agents for any transactions except those for which the agency is intended. Such steps should include at least the following:

1. Informing all employees (especially sales personnel and those in positions to commit the employer's assets), in writing if possible, that they may make no contractual commitments except those for which they are given express authority.
2. Including clauses in all preprinted contract forms which (a) clearly identify the types of persons whom the employer has authorized to sign such contracts; and (b) clearly state that the contract is invalid if not signed by authorized personnel;
3. Periodically reviewing the contract-signing procedures that the employer has implemented to ensure compliance with their terms; and
4. Acting quickly, with the aid of legal counsel, to address any evidence that an employee may have acted beyond the scope of his or her authority to enter into a contractual relationship that the employer does not wish to continue.

These steps cannot provide complete protection from the effects of an unintended agency, but, without the implementation of such minimum guidelines, an employer may find itself to be not only a party to a number of unwanted contracts, but also to have no firm basis for disciplining the employees who have made those contracts. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityThird Party InsurersTortsVicarious LiabilityEmployersGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 2295.

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in ch. 30.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code § 2750.

(n4)Footnote 4. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Civ. Code § 2295.

(n6)Footnote 6. Gipson v. Davis Realty Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 190, 205, 30 Cal. Rptr. 253 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Civ. Code § 2297.

(n8)Footnote 8. Civ. Code § 2298.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Civ. Code § 2299.

(n10)Footnote 10. Civ. Code § 2300. For the standard jury instruction on ostensible agency, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3709 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n11)Footnote 11. Civ. Code § 2316.

(n12)Footnote 12. Civ. Code § 2317.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Civ. Code § 2330.

(n14)Footnote 14. See discussion in § 31.02.

(n15)Footnote 15. See discussion in § 31.03.

(n16)Footnote 16. See discussion in § 31.04.

(n17)Footnote 17. See discussion in § 31.05.

(n18)Footnote 18. Inglewood Teachers Assn. v. Public Employment Relations Bd. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 767, 780, 278 Cal. Rptr. 228 .

(n19)Footnote 19. Rubens v. Texam Oil Corp. (1965) 239 Cal. App. 2d 78, 82, 48 Cal. Rptr. 411 .

(n20)Footnote 20. Tomerlin v. Canadian Indemnity Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 638, 644, 39 Cal. Rptr. 731, 394 P.2d 571 ; Whittaker v. Otto (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 619, 622-623, 10 Cal. Rptr. 689 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Inglewood Teachers Assn. v. Public Employment Relations Bd. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 767, 780, 278 Cal. Rptr. 228 .

(n22)Footnote 22. Inglewood Teachers Assn. v. Public Employment Relations Bd. (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 767, 782, 278 Cal. Rptr. 228 .

119 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.02

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.02 Contracts Made Under Actual Authority

[1] Creating or Conferring Actual Authority

Actual authority is such as a principal intentionally confers on the agent, or intentionally, or by want of ordinary care, allows the agent to believe that he or she possesses.ⁿ¹ Actual authority may be conferred by precedent authorization or subsequent ratification.ⁿ² An oral authorization is sufficient for any purpose, except that an authority to enter into a contract required by law to be in writing can only be given by an instrument in writing.ⁿ³ Consideration is not necessary to make an authority binding on the principal.ⁿ⁴

Actual authority may be implied from the conduct of the parties. It arises as a consequence of conduct of the principal that causes the agent (as opposed to the third party) to reasonably believe that the principal consents to the agent's execution of an act on behalf of the principal.ⁿ⁵ If the agent does not, in fact, believe that he or she has the authority to bind the principal, then there can be no actual authority.ⁿ⁶ Even if the agent does believe that he or she has the authority, the belief must be engendered by the conduct of the principal. Otherwise, the agent would have the power to bind the principal to any contract within the general scope of the agent's duties, however detrimental to the principal's interests the contract might be.ⁿ⁷

A principal's silence in the face of an agent's assertion of authority may reasonably cause the agent to believe that he or she possesses actual authority with regard to the matter at issue.ⁿ⁸ Similarly, the principal's silence to the agent's conduct over a period of time allows the agent to assume that he or she has the authority and approval of the principal to so act.ⁿ⁹ⁿ¹⁰

[2] Scope of Actual Authority

[a] Generally

Actual authority is the authority that the principal intentionally confers on the agent, or that the principal intentionally or by want of ordinary care allows the agent to believe that he or she possesses.ⁿ¹² Thus, an agent has actual authority to bind the principal to all types of contracts within the scope of the agency as expressed by the parties.ⁿ¹³ In addition, as discussed in [b], below, an agent's actual authority is supplemented by statute.ⁿ¹⁴

An authority expressed in general terms, however broad, does not authorize an agent to do any of the following: (1) act in the agent's own name, unless it is the usual course of business to do so; (2) define the scope of the agency; or (3) violate any duty to which a trustee is subject pursuant to Probate Code Sections 16002, 16004, 16005, or 16009.ⁿ¹⁵ Nor can an agent have authority, either actual or ostensible, to do an act that is, and is known or suspected to be by the person with whom he or she deals, a fraud on the principal.ⁿ¹⁶

In determining the scope of an agent's authority, when the authority is given partly in general terms and partly in specific terms, the general authority gives no higher powers than those specifically mentioned.ⁿ¹⁷

[b] Statutory and Implied Actual Authority

Civil Code Section 2318 provides that every agent has such actual authority as is defined in Civil Code Section 2295 et seq., unless specially deprived thereof by the principal, and even then has that authority ostensibly, except as to persons who have actual or constructive knowledge of the restriction on the agent's authority.ⁿ¹⁸

Under Civil Code Section 2319, an agent has authority to do everything necessary or proper and usual, in the ordinary course of business, for effecting the purpose of the agency.ⁿ¹⁹ Thus, an agent has implied authority to use any means that are incidental to and reasonably proper in the performance of an assigned task.ⁿ²⁰ When acting in furtherance of the purposes of the agency, this implied authority includes the power to enter into contracts to accomplish the purposes of the agency.ⁿ²¹

An agent has the power to disobey instructions in dealing with the subject of the agency, when it is clearly for the interest of the principal that the instructions be disobeyed, and there is not time to communicate with the principal.ⁿ²²

An agent also has authority to make representations to third persons about facts on which the right to use the authority depends and that are either not known to the third party to whom the representations are made or not discoverable by that party by the use of reasonable diligence.ⁿ²³ However, an agent is not authorized to make representations about the terms of his or her authority.ⁿ²⁴

Unless specifically forbidden by the principal, an agent may delegate his or her powers to another person (1) to perform a purely mechanical act; (2) to perform an act that the agent cannot perform personally, but that can lawfully be performed by the subagent; or (3) when such powers are customarily delegated according to "the usage of the place."ⁿ²⁵ Of course, an agent's powers may also be delegated to a subagent when authorized by the principal.ⁿ²⁶

[c] Authority of Corporate Officers

A corporation can act only through its agents.ⁿ²⁷ Corporate officers, as agents of the corporation, derive their actual authority from the corporate bylaws or from the actions or apparent acquiescence of the corporate board of directors.ⁿ²⁸ Any contract or conveyance made in the name of the corporation that is authorized or ratified by the board of directors or is done within the the scope of the authority, actual or apparent, conferred by the board or within the agency or power of the officer executing the contract binds the corporation, whether the contract is executed or executory.ⁿ²⁹ In addition, any written contract between a corporation and a third person, when signed by the chairman of the board, the president, or any vice president and the secretary, an assistant secretary, the chief financial officer, or any assistant treasurer of the corporation is not invalidated as to the corporation by any lack of authority of the signing officers in the absence of actual knowledge on the part of the other party to the contract that the officers lacked authority to execute the contract.ⁿ³⁰

Corporate officers have implied power to execute certain types of contracts depending on the nature of their office. For example, the president of the corporation may execute contracts to carry on the ordinary business of the corporation,ⁿ³¹ but may not normally alienate the real property of the corporation.ⁿ³² The secretary of a corporation has no right to assign or transfer assets of the corporation without authority from the board of directors.ⁿ³³

[d] Equal Dignities Rule

[i] Generally

An agency relationship conferring actual authority on the agent to enter into a contract may ordinarily be created informally, without writing and without consideration.ⁿ³⁴ However, the equal dignities rule provides that an agent's authority to enter into a contract that is required by law to be in writing can only be given by an instrument in writing.ⁿ³⁵ Thus, an agent's authority to enter into agreements falling within the statute of frauds, such as contracts that cannot be performed within one year of their making,ⁿ³⁶ contracts for the sale of realty,ⁿ³⁷ or contracts for the sale of goods over $500,ⁿ³⁸ must be in writing.ⁿ³⁹ For example, in McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp.,ⁿ⁴⁰ the sales representative of an oil company entered into an agreement with the plaintiff for a five-year lease of one of the company's service stations. The court held that because leases of real property for over one year must be in writing,ⁿ⁴¹ the agent needed written authority to bind the principal, and because the sales representative did not have written authority, the plaintiff could not enforce the contract.ⁿ⁴²

The equal dignities rule is not applicable when a writing is required by the terms of the contract rather than by law. In Ripani v. Liberty Loan Corp.,ⁿ⁴³ the court held that a written lease providing that exercise of an option to extend the lease for two years must be in writing could be exercised by an agent with only an oral authorization. The lease was written as required by Civil Code Section 1624(c) (requiring writing for lease longer than one year), but the lease itself, not the statute of frauds, required a written exercise of the option. Therefore, the agent who exercised the option was not entering into a contract required by law to be in writing and was not required by Civil Code Section 2309 to have a written authorization.ⁿ⁴⁴

For a discussion of the application of the equal dignities rule when the authority of the agent to bind a principal is based on a theory of ostensible authority, see § 31.03[1][c].

[ii] Exceptions

No written authorization is required when the agent is not given any discretionary power but is authorized only to perform a mechanical task for the principal, such as the signing of the contract.ⁿ⁴⁵ Written authorization is also unnecessary when an agent is an executive officer of a corporation and acts on behalf of the corporation.ⁿ⁴⁶

[iii] Estoppel to Assert Rule

A principal may be estopped from asserting the equal dignities rule as a defense if his or her own conduct lulls the third party into believing that the agent has written authority to enter the contract or has no need for written authority.ⁿ⁴⁷ For example, a principal who referred all inquiries regarding contract negotiations to his agent without notifying third parties of any limitations on the agent's authority was held estopped from asserting the equal dignities rule as a defense to an action for breach of a contract entered into by the agent.ⁿ⁴⁸ However, a principal is not estopped from asserting the equal dignities rule because the agent has led a third party to believe that he or she has authority to contract on behalf of the principal.ⁿ⁴⁹

Estoppel to assert the equal dignities rule should not be confused with estoppel to rely on the statute of frauds.ⁿ⁵⁰ A contract may be required by law to be in writing under Civil Code Section 1624, yet may be enforced without a writing because of one party's change of position in reliance on the other party's representations.ⁿ⁵¹ Thus, an agent who negotiates with a third party a contract that would ordinarily require a writing, but who has represented to the third party that no writing will be required, may be estopped from using the statute of frauds as a defense in an action for breach of contract. But a finding that the contract is enforceable notwithstanding the statute of frauds (for example, because of an estoppel to rely on the statute of frauds) does not dispense with the requirement under Civil Code Section 2309 that the agent's authority to enter into the contract be in writing, unless the third party also relied on the principal's express or implied representations regarding the agent's authority. The principal will be estopped from asserting Section 2309 as a defense only if his or her own conduct lulls the third party into believing that the agent has written authority or that written authority is not needed.ⁿ⁵²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Employer Liability
Contract Liability
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Employer Liability
Contract Liability
Third Party Liability
Torts
Vicarious Liability
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 2316.

(n2)Footnote 2. Civ. Code § 2307; see discussion in § 31.04 (ratification).

(n3)Footnote 3. Civ. Code § 2309; see discussion in [2] [d], below (equal dignities rule).

(n4)Footnote 4. Civ. Code § 2308.

(n5)Footnote 5. Tomerlin v. Canadian Indemnity Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 638, 643, 39 Cal. Rptr. 731, 394 P.2d 571 ; Frank Pisano & Associates v. Taggart (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 1, 15, 105 Cal. Rptr. 414 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Columbia Outfitting Co. v. Freeman (1950) 36 Cal. 2d 216, 218-219, 223 P.2d 21 .

(n7)Footnote 7. South Sacramento Drayage Co. v. Campbell Soup Co. (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 851, 856-857 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Tomerlin v. Canadian Indemnity Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 638, 644, 39 Cal. Rptr. 731, 394 P.2d 571 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Vertex Inv. Co. v. Schwabacher (1943) 57 Cal. App. 2d 406, 418, 134 P.2d 891 , cert. denied, 320 U.S. 754 .

(n10)Footnote 10. [Reserved]

(n11)Footnote 12. See Civ. Code § 2316.

(n12)Footnote 13. See Civ. Code § 2330.

(n13)Footnote 14. See Civ. Code § 2318.

(n14)Footnote 15. Civ. Code § 2322.

(n15)Footnote 16. Civ. Code § 2306.

(n16)Footnote 17. Civ. Code § 2321.

(n17)Footnote 18. For a discussion of ostensible authority, see § 31.03.

(n18)Footnote 19. Civ. Code § 2319(1); see Garber v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 693, 701, 22 Cal. Rptr. 123 .

(n19)Footnote 20. Garber v. Prudential Ins. Co. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 693, 701, 22 Cal. Rptr. 123 .

(n20)Footnote 21. See Madden v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 699, 705-709, 131 Cal. Rptr. 882, 552 P.2d 1178 .

(n21)Footnote 22. Civ. Code § 2320.

(n22)Footnote 23. See Civ. Code § 2319(2).

(n23)Footnote 24. See Civ. Code § 2319(2).

(n24)Footnote 25. See Civ. Code § 2349(1)-(3).

(n25)Footnote 26. See Civ. Code § 2349(4).

(n26)Footnote 27. Herring v. Fisher (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 322, 330, 242 P.2d 963 .

(n27)Footnote 28. Padgham v. Inyo Marble Co. (1931) 116 Cal. App. 328, 331, 2 P.2d 531 .

(n28)Footnote 29. Corp. Code § 208(b).

(n29)Footnote 30. See Corp. Code § 313.

(n30)Footnote 31. Herring v. Fisher (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 322, 330, 242 P.2d 963 .

(n31)Footnote 32. Butler v. Solano Land Co. (1920) 46 Cal. App. 171, 174, 188 P 1019 .

(n32)Footnote 33. Gilbert v. Miller (1924) 68 Cal. App. 40, 42, 228 P. 662 .

(n33)Footnote 34. See Civ. Code §§ 2308, 2309, discussed in [1], above.

(n34)Footnote 35. See Civ. Code § 2309.

(n35)Footnote 36. See Civ. Code § 1624(a)(1).

(n36)Footnote 37. See Civ. Code § 1624(a)(3) (further providing that agent's authority to bind principal as to sale of real property or lease of property for longer than one year must be in writing subscribed by party to be charged).

(n37)Footnote 38. See Com. Code § 2201(1).

(n38)Footnote 39. Civ. Code § 2309.

(n39)Footnote 40. McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 249-251, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902 .

(n40)Footnote 41. See Civ. Code § 1624(c).

(n41)Footnote 42. McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 254-256, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902 .

(n42)Footnote 43. Ripani v. Liberty Loan Corp. (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 603, 610, 157 Cal. Rptr. 272 .

(n43)Footnote 44. Ripani v. Liberty Loan Corp. (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 603, 609-610, 157 Cal. Rptr. 272 .

(n44)Footnote 45. Ellis v. Mihelis (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 206, 214, 32 Cal. Rptr. 415, 384 P.2d 7 .

(n45)Footnote 46. Jeppi v. Brockman Holding Co. (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 11, 17-18, 206 P.2d 847 ; see also discussion in [c], above.

(n46)Footnote 47. Kerner v. Hughes Tool Co. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 924, 934, 128 Cal. Rptr. 839 (estoppel found); see also McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 258, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902 (survey of prior case law; no estoppel found).

(n47)Footnote 48. Kerner v. Hughes Tool Co. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 924, 934-935, 128 Cal. Rptr. 839 .

(n48)Footnote 49. McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 254-255, 258, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902 .

(n49)Footnote 50. See Civ. Code § 1624.

(n50)Footnote 51. See Monarco v. Lo Greco (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 621, 625-626, 220 P.2d 737 .

(n51)Footnote 52. McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 254-258, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902 .

120 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.03

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.03 Contracts Made Under Ostensible Authority

[1] Creating Ostensible Authority

Ostensible authority (or apparent authority) is authority that a principal, intentionally or by want of ordinary care, causes or allows a third person to believe that an agent possesses.ⁿ¹ An agent may have both ostensible and actual authorityⁿ² if the principal both causes the agent to believe that he or she has the authority and causes the third party to believe that the agent has the authority.ⁿ³ Also, an actual agent, such as an employee, may have ostensible authority even if he or she has no actual authority to represent the principal with regard to the transaction at issue.ⁿ⁴

Ostensible authority arises as a result of conduct of the principal that causes a third party reasonably to believe that the agent possesses the authority to act on the principal's behalf. Ostensible authority must be based on acts or declarations of the principal and not on the conduct or representation of the alleged agent.ⁿ⁵ Ostensible authority may be established by proof that the principal has approved prior similar acts of the agent.ⁿ⁶

It is not necessary that the principal be in direct contact with the third party. The manifestation of the principal may be to the community at large, for example, by appointing the agent to a particular position within a corporation.ⁿ⁷

[2] Requirement of Good-Faith Reliance

A principal is bound by the acts of an agent under a merely ostensible authority only to third parties who, in good faith and without want of ordinary care, have incurred a liability or parted with value in reliance on the agent's authority.ⁿ⁸ Liability of the principal for an agent's conduct under ostensible authority rests on the doctrine of estoppel. Its essential elements are representations (or conduct) by the principal, justifiable reliance thereon by the third party, and change of position or injury resulting from the reliance.ⁿ⁹

The third party's belief in the agent's authority must be a reasonable one. The belief must be generated by some act or neglect of the principal, and the third party in relying on the agent's ostensible authority must not be guilty of negligence.ⁿ¹⁰

In the absence of any conduct on the part of either principal or agent warranting inquiry, the third party is entitled to rely on ostensible authority and is not bound by undisclosed limitations.ⁿ¹¹ However, if the conduct of the principal warrants further inquiry, the third party acts at its peril in assuming authority and not ascertaining the nature and extent of the authority.ⁿ¹²

The general rule is that one who is ignorant or inexperienced with regard to matters concerning which representations are made may rely on statements of material fact made by an agent that are essentially connected with the substance of the transaction. The agent must, however, know of the third party's ignorance or inexperience and must also be aware that reliance is being placed on the representations and that the facts are not, and cannot be expected to be, within the third party's knowledge.ⁿ¹³ Negligence on the part of a third party in failing to discover that a particular statement of an agent is false is not a defense if the misrepresentation was intentional rather than negligent. Even in the case of a mere negligent misrepresentation, a third party will be denied recovery from the principal only if his or her conduct is manifestly unreasonable in the light of his or her own intelligence or information.ⁿ¹⁴

If the third party commences an investigation, the failure to discover the truth may be excused by the agent's superior knowledge of the facts, the difficulty in ascertaining all of the facts, or the third party's incompetence to judge the facts without expert assistance. The fact that the third party may have relied to some extent on independent advice does not bar recovery. Even if he or she discovers some suspicious circumstances, reliance is reasonable if the agent allays the doubts with further assurances.ⁿ¹⁵

[3] Fraud of Agent

A principal who puts an employee or other agent in a position that enables the agent, while apparently acting within his or her authority, to commit a fraud on third persons, is subject to liability to the third persons for the fraud. The principal is liable even though he or she is entirely innocent and has received no benefit from the transaction. The principal is not relieved from liability by the fact that the agent acts entirely for his or her own purposes unless the defrauded party has notice. Liability is based on the fact that the agent's position facilitates the consummation of the fraud, in that from the point of fact of the third person, the transaction seems regular on its face, and the agent appears to be acting in the ordinary course of the business confided to him or her.ⁿ¹⁶

[4] Applicability of Equal Dignities Rule

As discussed previously,ⁿ¹⁷ Civil Code Section 2309, which codifies the equal dignities rule, provides that an oral authorization is sufficient for any purpose except that an authority to enter into a contract that is required by law to be in writing can only be given by an instrument in writing. The extent to which the equal dignities rule applies to situations in which an employee or agent acts under ostensible authority is not entirely clear under California law.

Marr v. Postal Union Life Ins. Co. ⁿ¹⁸ involved a contract for the sale of real property between a seller and a company that purported to be acting on its own behalf, but was in fact acting as agent for another company (an "undisclosed principal").ⁿ¹⁹ The court held that when a third party deals with such an agent and fully performs his or her part of the contract, the undisclosed principal is estopped from relying on the agent's lack of written authority as a defense to an action by the third party to enforce the contract.ⁿ²⁰ Since the doctrine of ostensible authority is similarly based on the principal's estoppel to deny the ostensible agent's authority,ⁿ²¹ the equal dignities rule is arguably inapplicable as a defense to an action for enforcement of a contract entered into by an employee with ostensible authority. However, in McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp.,ⁿ²² the court applied the equal dignities rule to bar enforcement of a contract notwithstanding its holding that the employee had ostensible authority to enter into the agreement on behalf of the employer. This apparent split of authority remains unresolved.

[5] Statutory Ostensible Authority

Civil Code Section 2318 provides that every agent has statutory authority as defined by *Civil Code Section 2295 et seq.*ⁿ²³ unless specifically deprived of such authority by the principal, and even then has that authority ostensibly, except as to persons who have actual or constructive knowledge of the restriction on the agent's authority. Thus, when a principal has limited an agent's actual authority, the agent nonetheless has ostensible authority to do everything necessary or proper and usual, in the ordinary course of business, for effecting the purpose of the agency, unless the third party has knowledge of the limitation.ⁿ²⁴ For example, when a general agent has actual authority to buy, a secret limitation on the price that the agent is authorized to pay is not binding on a third person who has acted in good faith and with reasonable prudence and when the price fixed is not unusual.ⁿ²⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employer Liability Contract Liability General Overview Torts Vicarious Liability General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 2317.

(n2)Footnote 2. For discussion of actual authority, see § 31.02.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Tomerlin v. Canadian Indemnity Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 638, 644, 39 Cal. Rptr. 731, 394 P.2d 571.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 104, 115-116, 43 Cal. Rptr. 420 (assuming arguendo that agent had no actual authority, evidence supported ostensible authority).

(n5)Footnote 5. Petersen v. Securities Settlement Corp. (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 1452, 277 Cal. Rptr. 468; see Freitas v. Marsh (1945) 70 Cal. App. 2d 711, 713-714, 161 P.2d 565.

(n6)Footnote 6. United States Credit Bureau, Inc. v. Cheney (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 357, 360, 45 Cal. Rptr. 525.

(n7)Footnote 7. Meyer v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 90, 102, 79 Cal. Rptr. 816.

(n8)Footnote 8. Civ. Code § 2334.

(n9)Footnote 9. Kelley v. R.F. Jones Co. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 113, 121, 77 Cal. Rptr. 170.

(n10)Footnote 10. Associated Creditors' Agency v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 374, 399-400, 118 Cal. Rptr. 772, 530 P.2d 1084.

(n11)Footnote 11. Myers v. Stephens (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 104, 115, 43 Cal. Rptr. 420.

(n12)Footnote 12. United States Credit Bureau, Inc. v. Cheney (1965) 235 Cal. App. 2d 357, 361, 45 Cal. Rptr. 525; see People v. Surety Ins. Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 556, 562, 186 Cal. Rptr. 385.

(n13)Footnote 13. Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 942, 966, 72 Cal. Rptr. 722.

(n14)Footnote 14. Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 942, 964-965, 72 Cal. Rptr. 722.

(n15)Footnote 15. Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 942, 966, 72 Cal. Rptr. 722.

(n16)Footnote 16. Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 942, 960, 72 Cal. Rptr. 722 .

(n17)Footnote 17. See discussion in § 31.02[2][d].

(n18)Footnote 18. Marr v. Postal Union Life Ins. Co. (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 673, 105 P.2d 649 .

(n19)Footnote 19. See discussion in § 31.05.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Marr v. Postal Union Life Ins. Co. (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 673, 679, 105 P.2d 649 .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Kelley v. R. F. Jones Co. (1969) 272 Cal. App. 2d 113, 120-121, 77 Cal. Rptr. 170 .

(n22)Footnote 22. McGirr v. Gulf Oil Corp. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 246, 252, 115 Cal. Rptr. 902 .

(n23)Footnote 23. For a discussion of the statutory authority of agents, see § 31.02[2][b].

(n24)Footnote 24. See Civ. Code §§ 2318, 2319, discussed in § 31.02[2][b].

(n25)Footnote 25. Leavens v. Pinkham & McKevitt (1912) 164 Cal. 242, 246-249, 128 P. 399 .

121 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
 CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
 Part A. TEXT

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.04

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.04 Ratified Contracts

[1] Generally

Even if the employee lacks actual or ostensible authority at the time he or she enters into a transaction with a third party, the employer may nevertheless be bound by the employee's act if the employer subsequently ratifies the transaction.ⁿ¹ However, the act must have been undertaken by the employee on behalf of the employer. An act of a purported agent not acting on behalf of the principal cannot be ratified.ⁿ² Thus, ratification is normally found in situations in which an employee-agent was purporting to act on behalf of the employer, but exceeded the scope of his or her authority.ⁿ³

A ratification is not valid unless, at the time of ratifying the act done, the principal has power to confer authority for such an act.ⁿ⁴ For example, a lessor who has granted a lease to one party cannot later attempt to ratify a previous, unauthorized lease, because no power to lease the property existed once the subsequent lease was executed.ⁿ⁵

A third party who enters into a contract with an agent lacking authority to consummate such a contract may repudiate the contract prior to its ratification by the principal.ⁿ⁶ Furthermore, an unauthorized act cannot be made valid retroactively to the prejudice of third persons without their consent.ⁿ⁷ For example, one court held that an agent's unauthorized cancellation of an insurance policy could not be ratified to the prejudice of the beneficiaries of the policy.ⁿ⁸

[2] Form and Manner of Ratification

A ratification can be made only in the manner that would have been necessary to confer an original authority for the act ratified, or when an oral authorization would suffice, by accepting or retaining the benefit of the act with notice thereof.ⁿ⁹ Thus, when a written authorization would have been required by Civil Code Section 2309, the equal dignities rule, the unauthorized act of an agent may be ratified only by an instrument in writing.ⁿ¹⁰ For a discussion of the equal dignities rule and exceptions to the rule, see § 31.02[2][d].

When a written authorization would not have been required by Civil Code Section 2309, the unauthorized act of an agent in entering into a contract on behalf of a principal may be ratified either expressly or by implication from the principal's conduct.ⁿ¹¹ Ratification most clearly occurs when the principal accepts benefits under the agreement.ⁿ¹² For example, ratification has been found when a principal retained the benefits of an unauthorized transaction and knew or should have known of the source of the benefit.ⁿ¹³

A principal is not bound by ratification unless he or she acts with knowledge of all the material facts involved in the unauthorized transaction, particularly with knowledge of the acts of the person who assumed to act as the principal's agent. The notice necessary for ratification includes not only knowledge of the agent's acts, but also the legal effect of those acts.ⁿ¹⁴ However, if the principal's ignorance of the facts arises from a failure to investigate when a reasonable person would do so, ratification may be found despite a lack of full knowledge.ⁿ¹⁵

Ratification will not be found unless the principal's act of ratification was voluntary, and even voluntary conduct will not constitute ratification if the principal cannot rescind the transaction or merely acts to minimize losses from the agent's acts.ⁿ¹⁶ Thus, ratification may not be premised on retention of benefits of the agent's act if the principal had no option to reject or return the benefits. For example, in Pacific Bone etc. Co. v. Bleakmore,ⁿ¹⁷ a purported agent had made an unauthorized purchase of fertilizer from a third party and spread it on the land of the defendant. The court held that the defendant had not ratified the contract under a theory of retention of benefits since he did not know of the transaction until the fertilizer had been spread, and by that time it was impossible to return the fertilizer.ⁿ¹⁸

[3] Effect of Partial Ratification

Ratification of part of an indivisible transaction is a ratification of the entire transaction.ⁿ¹⁹ This rule precludes a principal from ratifying the beneficial parts of the agent's unauthorized transaction while disavowing the burdens of the same transaction.ⁿ²⁰ Similarly, when separate transactions are closely related, as when one would not have been agreed to without the other, a ratification of one will constitute a ratification of all.ⁿ²¹

[4] Rescission of Ratification

A ratification may be rescinded only if it is made with imperfect knowledge of the material facts of the transaction ratified, or made without the consent required for a binding contract.ⁿ²² A principal who has deliberately remained ignorant of material facts, however, may be precluded from rescinding on the basis of imperfect knowledge.ⁿ²³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Contracts Law Contract Conditions & Provisions General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employer Liability General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employer Liability Contract Liability General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Civ. Code § 2307. For the standard jury instruction on employer ratification of an employee's conduct, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3710 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n2)Footnote 2. Jacks v. Taylor (1917) 34 Cal. App. 95, 97-98, 166 P. 858.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Jacks v. Taylor (1917) 34 Cal. App. 95, 97, 166 P. 858.

(n4)Footnote 4. Civ. Code § 2312; see Los Angeles Dredging Co. v. Long Beach (1930) 210 Cal. 348, 359, 291 P. 839 (when municipality's power to award contract is limited by requirement that competitive bidding process determine contract award, bidding requirement cannot be avoided by unauthorized award of contract without bidding and later ratification of the contract).

(n5)Footnote 5. Borderre v. Den (1895) 106 Cal. 594, 600, 39 P. 946 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Waratah Oil Co. v. Reward Oil Co. (1914) 23 Cal. App. 638, 643, 139 P. 91 ; Restatement (Second) of Agency § 89.

(n7)Footnote 7. Civ. Code § 2313.

(n8)Footnote 8. Hooker v. American Indemnity Co. (1936) 12 Cal. App. 2d 116, 123, 54 P.2d 1128 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Civ. Code § 2310.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Civ. Code § 2310; Moore v. Hoar (1938) 27 Cal. App. 2d 269, 280, 81 P.2d 226 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Rakestraw v. Rodrigues (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 67, 73, 104 Cal. Rptr. 57, 500 P.2d 1401 ; Union Trust and Realty Co. v. Best (1911) 160 Cal. 263, 267, 116 P. 737 .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Reusche v. California Pac. Title Ins. Co. (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 731, 737, 42 Cal. Rptr. 262 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Reusche v. California Pac. Title Ins. Co. (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 731, 737, 42 Cal. Rptr. 262 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Bate v. Marsteller (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 573, 582-583, 346 P.2d 903 ; Estate of Fletcher (1940) 36 Cal. App. 2d 567, 573, 97 P.2d 1039 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Reusche v. California Pac. Title Ins. Co. (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 731, 737, 42 Cal. Rptr. 262 ; Volandri v. Hlobil (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 656, 659, 339 P.2d 218 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Rakestraw v. Rodrigues (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 67, 73, 104 Cal. Rptr. 57, 500 P.2d 1401 ; Pacific Vinegar etc. Works v. Smith (1907) 152 Cal 507, 511-512, 93 P. 85 ; Pacific Bone etc. Co. v. Bleakmore (1927) 81 Cal. App. 659, 664, 254 P. 618 .

(n17)Footnote 17. Pacific Bone etc. Co. v. Bleakmore (1927) 81 Cal. App. 659, 664, 254 P. 618 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Pacific Bone etc. Co. v. Bleakmore (1927) 81 Cal. App. 659, 664, 254 P. 618 .

(n19)Footnote 19. Civ. Code § 2311.

(n20)Footnote 20. Navrides v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 698, 704, 97 Cal. Rptr. 309, 488 P.2d 637 ; Price v. McConnell (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 660, 666, 7 Cal. Rptr. 695 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Vanciel v. Kumle (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 732, 735, 160 P.2d 802 .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Civ. Code § 2314; see also Civ. Code §§ 1565-1590 (governing consent to contract).

(n23)Footnote 23. Hutchinson Co. v. Gould (1919) 180 Cal. 356, 358, 181 P. 651 .

122 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.05

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.05 Undisclosed Principal

[1] Generally

A contract made by an agent for an undisclosed principal is, for most purposes, the contract of the principal. Unless excluded by the terms of the agreement made by the agent, the undisclosed principal may claim the benefits of the contract and may sue and be sued in his or her own name.ⁿ¹ Similarly, the undisclosed principal, when discovered, is normally liable on the contract.^{n1.1} Furthermore, the principal may be bound by the contracts of the agent even if the agent exceeds the scope of his or her actual authority.ⁿ²

An actual agency must have existed for the undisclosed principal to be held liable.ⁿ³ Furthermore, the principal is not bound if exclusive credit is given to the agent and the agent and the third party both intend that no resort shall be had by or against the principal.ⁿ⁴ In addition, if the third party relies on the skill, solvency, or other personal attribute of the agent in entering into the contract, the principal is not a party to the contract and has no rights or liabilities under it.ⁿ⁵

In addition to being bound by the contract, an undisclosed principal is also entitled to the rights derived from the contract and may enforce it against the third party.ⁿ⁶ However, a third party who has entered into a contract with the agent, without knowing or having reason to believe that the agent acted as such in the transaction, may set off against any claim of the principal arising out of the transaction all claims that he or she might have set off against the agent before notice of the agency.ⁿ⁷

[2] When Third Party Must Elect Whether to Hold Principal or Agent Liable

When a third party has contracted with an agent without knowledge of the principal's existence, and later learns of the agency relationship, the third party must elect to proceed against either the agent or the undisclosed principal.ⁿ⁸ The election is not required, however, until the plaintiff has obtained sufficient knowledge regarding the status of the alleged principal to enable him to make an intelligent election.ⁿ⁹ Thus, when it is unclear whether the agent was indeed acting on the behalf of the principal, such as when the principal contends that the agent lacked authority to act for the principal, the third party is not required to make an election until the court has ruled whether or not the principal can be bound by the agent's acts.ⁿ¹⁰ A judgment obtained against the agent without knowledge of the identity of the principal or the existence of the agency does not preclude a later action against the undisclosed principal.ⁿ¹¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Business & Corporate Law Agency Relationships Disclosure Undisclosed Principal Labor & Employment Law Employer Liability Contract Liability General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. American Builder's Assn. v. Au-Yang (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 170, 176, 276 Cal. Rptr. 262 .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Standard Oil Co. of Cal. v. Doneux (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 608, 611, 13 Cal. Rptr. 749 ; see Civ. Code § 2330.

(n3)Footnote 2. Marr v. Postal Union Life Ins. Co. (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 673, 679-680, 105 P.2d 649 .

(n4)Footnote 3. Associated Creditors' Agency v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 374, 385, 118 Cal. Rptr. 772, 530 P.2d 1084 .

(n5)Footnote 4. Walton v. Davis (1913) 22 Cal. App. 456, 459-460, 134 P. 795 .

(n6)Footnote 5. Walton v. Davis (1913) 22 Cal. App. 456, 459-460, 134 P. 795 .

(n7)Footnote 6. See Civ. Code § 2330; Schader v. White (1916) 173 Cal. 441, 445, 160 P. 557 .

(n8)Footnote 7. Civ. Code § 2336.

(n9)Footnote 8. Standard Oil Co. of Cal. v. Doneux (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 608, 611, 13 Cal. Rptr. 749 ; Klinger v. Modesto Fruit Co., Inc. (1930) 107 Cal. App. 97, 100, 290 P. 127 .

(n10)Footnote 9. Standard Oil Co. of Cal. v. Doneux (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 608, 612, 13 Cal. Rptr. 749 (quoting McEwen v. Taylor (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 25, 29-30, 234 P.2d 754).

(n11)Footnote 10. See Standard Oil Co. of Cal. v. Doneux (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 608, 612-614, 13 Cal. Rptr. 749 .

(n12)Footnote 11. See Standard Oil Co. of Cal. v. Doneux (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 608, 613, 13 Cal. Rptr. 749 ; Rest. 2d Agency § 210.

123 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.06

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.06 Liability of Employer for Contracts in Excess of Employee's Authority

When an agent exceeds his or her authority, the principal is liable for the agent's authorized acts only so far as they can be plainly separated from the unauthorized acts.ⁿ¹ However, if the principal ratifies the unauthorized transaction prior to repudiation by the third party,ⁿ² the third party may not complain that the agent exceeded his or her authority and is bound by a contract in excess of the agent's authority if the principal wishes to enforce the contract.ⁿ³

If the principal wishes to avoid the contract, the principal must repudiate the contract once he or she has knowledge of the terms of the contract and return all benefits conferred by the third party.ⁿ⁴ The principal may not split a transaction into separate parts and take the benefits without the burdens.ⁿ⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityContract LiabilityGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 2333.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Waratah Oil Co. v. Reward Oil Co. (1914) 23 Cal. App. 638, 643, 139 P. 91 ; Rest. 2d Agency § 89; see also discussion in § 31.04[1].

(n3)Footnote 3. See Boteler v. Conway (1936) 13 Cal. App. 2d 79, 83, 56 P.2d 587 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See J. A. Eck Co. v. Coachella Valley O. G. Assn. (1929) 102 Cal. App. 1, 8-9, 282 P. 408 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Gift v. Ahrnke (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 614, 623, 237 P.2d 706 ; see also discussion of partial ratification in § 31.04 [3].

124 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.07

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.07 Liability of Employee-Agent to Third Party

[1] Breach of Warranty of Authority

One who assumes to act as an agent thereby warrants, to all who deal with him or her as an agent, that the authority to act as such actually exists.ⁿ¹ In an action for breach of the warranty of authority against an agent, the third party must allege and prove that the agent acted in excess of his or her authority and that the third person was ignorant of the true limits of the agent's authority and acted on the basis of representations, either express or implied, that the agent was acting pursuant to his or her authority.ⁿ² The measure of damages in an action for breach of a warranty of an agent's authority is the amount that could have been recovered and collected from the agent's principal had the warranty been complied with, and the reasonable expenses of legal proceedings taken in good faith to enforce the act of the agent against his or her principal.ⁿ³

[2] Employee-Agent Liable as Principal

One who assumes to act as an agent is responsible to third persons as a principal for contracts made on behalf of a principal in the course of the agency if (1) with the agent's consent, credit is given to him or her personally in a transaction,ⁿ⁴ or (2) the agent enters into a written contract in the principal's name without believing in good faith that he or she has authority to do so.ⁿ⁵ In addition, an agent for an undisclosed principal who enters into a contract without disclosing the principal at the time of the contract is liable as a party to the contract.ⁿ⁶ In order for an agent to avoid personal liability on a contract negotiated in the principal's behalf, the agent must disclose not only that he is an agent but also the identity of the principal.ⁿ⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityContract LiabilityThird Party Liability

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 2342.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Yoakum v. Tarver (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 202, 206-207, 64 Cal. Rptr. 7 ; Cheda v. Grandi (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 513, 518-519, 218 P.2d 97 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Civ. Code § 3318.

(n4)Footnote 4. Civ. Code § 2343(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. Civ. Code § 2343(2).

(n6)Footnote 6. Coover v. Cox (1928) 95 Cal. App. 1, 4, 272 P. 343 . For a discussion of the liability of an undisclosed principal, see § 31.05.

(n7)Footnote 7. W. W. Leasing Unlimited v. Commercial Standard Title Ins. Co. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 792, 795-796, 197 Cal. Rptr. 118 .

125 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
Part A. TEXT

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.08

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.08 Employee-Agent's Right to Indemnification From Employer

An agent who becomes personally liable for the performance of a contract that was undertaken for the principal may hold the principal liable for indemnity for damages sustained because of the principal's breach of the contract.ⁿ¹ To hold the principal liable for indemnity, the agent must have been pursuing the instructions of the principal and thus acting within the scope of his or her actual authority.ⁿ² However, if the principal knows that the agent has misapprehended the scope of his or her authority, the principal may be liable for indemnity even though the agent exceeds his or her authority.ⁿ³

A cause of action for indemnity arises only when the agent has actually satisfied the obligation to the third person.ⁿ⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityContract LiabilityIndemnityLabor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityContract LiabilityThird Party Liability

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Sunset-Sternau Food Co. v. Bonzi (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 834, 837, 36 Cal. Rptr. 741, 389 P.2d 133 (principal liable to agent for indemnity even though principal was not liable to third party on contract because equal dignities rule was not satisfied); see also Lab. Code § 2802 (employer must indemnify employee for amounts that employee necessarily expends or loses in direct consequence of discharge of his or her duties, or of obedience to employer's directions).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Rimington v. General Accident Group of Ins. Cos. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 394, 397, 23 Cal. Rptr. 40 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Towle v. Norbest Turkey Growers Association (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1960) 275 F.2d 196, 201-202 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Sunset-Sternau Food Co. v. Bonzi (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 834, 843, 36 Cal. Rptr. 741, 389 P.2d 133 ; see Civ. Code § 2778(2).

126 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES

CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees

Part A. TEXT

2-31 California Employment Law §§ 31.09through 31.19

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 31.09[Reserved]

127 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.20

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.20 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice

"Principal and Agent."

"Statute of Frauds."

California Points and Authorities

"Principal and Agent."

"Statute of Frauds."

Witkin, Summary of California Law (9th ed. 1987), Vol. 1, "Agency and Employment," §§ 75-109.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityContract
LiabilityGeneral Overview

128 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES

CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees

Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.21

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.21 Encyclopedias

3 Cal. Jur. 3d, "Agency," §§ 34-86, 121-128, 142-150.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityContract
LiabilityGeneral Overview

129 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES
CHAPTER 31 Employer's Liability to Third Parties for Contracts Entered Into by Employees
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

2-31 California Employment Law § 31.22

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 31.22 Law Reviews and Periodicals

Comment, "The Power of an Agent To Bind His Principal--California and the Restatement," 22 Cal. L. Rev. 392 (1934).

Note, "An Agent's Authority to Bind a Principal to Arbitration," 65 Cal. L. Rev. 355 (1977).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployer LiabilityContract LiabilityGeneral Overview

130 of 130 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION III EMPLOYER LIABILITY TO THIRD PARTIES FOR CONDUCT OF EMPLOYEES

Chapters 32 - 39 RESERVED

2-32 - 39 California Employment Law Chapters 32 - 39

RESERVED

Chapters 32 - 39 RESERVED

1 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

2-40 California Employment Law 40.syn

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.syn Synopsis to Chapter 40: Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

§ 40.01 Availability of Multiple Remedies

§ 40.02 Standards of Construction Applicable When More Than One Law Addresses Same Subject

[1] Effect of State Laws With Broader Protections

[2] Preemption of State Antidiscrimination Law by Federal Statutes

[a] Federal Antidiscrimination Statutes

[b] Other Federal Statutes

[3] Effect of FEHA on State Common-Law and Local Government Remedies

[4] Effect of Workers' Compensation Act on State Antidiscrimination Law

[5] Effect of Railway Labor Act on State and Federal Antidiscrimination Law

§ 40.03 Effect of Collective Bargaining Agreements

[1] Discriminatory Agreements

[2] Antidiscrimination Provisions and Preemption

§§ 40.04 through 40.09 [Reserved]

§ 40.10 California Fair Employment and Housing Act

2-40 California Employment Law 40.syn

- [1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage
- [2] Enforcement and Remedies
- [3] Employers Covered and Exempted
- [3A] Aiders and Abettors of Discrimination
- [4] Employees Covered and Exempted
- [5] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination
- [6] Prohibited Employment Practices
- [7] Defenses

§ 40.11 California Equal Pay Act

- [1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage
- [2] Enforcement and Remedies
- [3] Employers Covered and Exempted
- [4] Employees Covered and Exempted
- [5] Prohibited Employment Practices
- [6] Defenses

§ 40.12 Unruh/Ralph Acts, Public Access of Disabled Persons, and Prohibited Business Transactions

- [1] The Unruh Civil Rights Act
- [2] The Ralph Civil Rights Act and the Bane Civil Rights Act
- [3] Public Access of Disabled Persons
- [4] Prohibited Business Transactions

§ 40.13 Government Code Section 11135--Prohibition Against Discrimination in State-Funded Program or Activities

- [1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage
- [2] Enforcement and Remedies
- [3] Employers Covered and Exempted
- [4] Employees Covered and Exempted

[5] Prohibited Employment Practices

[6] Defenses

§ 40.14 Miscellaneous State Provisions

[1] Generally

[2] California Constitution

[3] Public Works Projects

[4] Business Transactions

[5] Employment Assistance for Workers With Disabilities

[6] Unfair Competition Law

§§ 40.15through 40.19 [Reserved]

§ 40.20 Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[2] Effect on State Law

[3] Enforcement and Remedies

[4] Employers Covered and Exempted

[a] Generally

[b] Industry Affecting Commerce

[c] Labor Unions

[5] Employees Covered and Exempted

[6] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination

[7] Prohibited Employment Practices

[8] Defenses

[9] Anti-SLAPP Motions

§ 40.21 Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

[5] Prohibited Employment Practices

[6] Defenses

§ 40.22 Equal Pay Act of 1963

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

[3] Employers and Employees Covered and Exempted

[4] Prohibited Employment Practices

[5] Defenses

§ 40.22A Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

[5] Prohibited Employment Practices

[6] Defenses

[7] Individual Liability

§ 40.23 Rehabilitation Act of 1973

[.5] Section 501--Discrimination Against Disabled in Federal Employment Decisions

[1] Section 503--Employers With Federal Contracts

[a] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[b] Enforcement and Remedies

[c] Employers Covered and Exempted

2-40 California Employment Law 40.syn

[d] Employees Covered and Exempted

[e] Prohibited Employment Practices

[f] Defenses

[2] Section 504--Employers Who Receive Financial Assistance From Federal Government

[a] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[b] Enforcement and Remedies

[c] Employers Covered and Exempted

[d] Employees Covered and Exempted

[e] Prohibited Employment Practices

[f] Defenses

§ 40.24 Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974 and Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

[5] Prohibited Employment Practices

[6] Defenses

§ 40.25 Civil Rights Act of 1866 (Title 42 United States Code Section 1981)

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

[4] Employees Covered

[5] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination

[6] Defenses

§ 40.26 Civil Rights Act of 1871 (Title 42 United States Code Section 1983)

2-40 California Employment Law 40.syn

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[2] "Color of Law" Requirement

[3] Enforcement and Remedies

[4] Employers Covered and Exempted

[5] Employees Covered and Exempted

[6] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination

[7] Prohibited Employment Practices

[8] Defenses

[9] Anti-SLAPP Motions

§ 40.27 Executive Order 11246: Prohibition Against Discrimination by Government Contractors

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[2] Enforcement

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

[5] Prohibited or Required Employment Practices

[6] Defenses

§ 40.28 Executive Order 11141: Prohibition Against Age Discrimination by Federal Contractors

[1] Scope of Coverage

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

[5] Prohibited or Required Employment Practices

[6] Defenses

§ 40.29 Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964

[1] Governing Law and Scope of Coverage

[2] Enforcement and Remedies

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

[5] Prohibited Bases of Discrimination

[6] Prohibited Employment Practices

§ 40.30 Uniform Guidelines Relating to Tests and Employee Selection Procedures

[1] Purpose and Application

[2] Scope of Coverage and Substantive Requirements

[3] Enforcement

[4] Employers and Employees Covered and Exempted

§ 40.31 Miscellaneous Federal Provisions

[1] Generally

[1A] Civil Rights Act of 1991

[2] United States Constitution

[2A] Immigration Reform and Control Act

[2B] Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993

[3] Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX)

[4] Revenue Sharing Act

§§ 40.32 through 40.39 [Reserved]

§ 40.40 Legal Texts

§ 40.41 Encyclopedias

§ 40.42 Legal Periodicals

By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

2 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

2-40 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

Scope

By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.n* SCOPE

This chapter provides an overview of the scope and applicability of California and federal equal employment opportunity laws. For each statutory scheme, the chapter discusses the employers and employees covered, provides an overview of the bases of discrimination and general types of conduct prohibited, and briefly describes the available enforcement mechanisms. Statutory provisions that are limited to public employers are beyond the scope of this chapter.

For a detailed discussion of the substantive requirements of various equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 41. For a complete discussion of administrative enforcement of equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 42. For a full discussion of judicial remedies under such laws, see Chapter 43. For discussion of affirmative action requirements and enforcement of those requirements, see Chapter 44. Laws barring discrimination on the basis of protected activities, as distinguished from protected characteristics, are discussed in Chapter 60.

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

3 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part A. GENERAL PRINCIPLES

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.01

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.01 Availability of Multiple Remedies

Several statutory and regulatory schemes bar employment discrimination based on specified characteristics, such as race, national origin, religion, sex, or age. The California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)ⁿ¹ and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII)ⁿ² are the principal antidiscrimination statutes, but there are many other federal and state sources of equal employment opportunity rights. Other federal sources include the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967,ⁿ³ the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA),ⁿ⁴ the Equal Pay Act of 1963,ⁿ⁵ Sections 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973,ⁿ⁶ the Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974,ⁿ⁷ the Civil Rights Act of 1866,ⁿ⁸ the Civil Rights Act of 1871,ⁿ⁹ Executive Order Numbers 11141ⁿ¹⁰ and 11246,ⁿ¹¹ Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VI),ⁿ¹² and federal agency uniform guidelines on employment tests and other employee selection procedures.ⁿ¹³ Other state sources include the California Equal Pay Act,ⁿ¹⁴ the Unruh and Ralph Civil Rights Acts,ⁿ¹⁵ Government Code Section 11135,ⁿ¹⁶ and regulations promulgated by the California Fair Employment and Housing Commission, interpreting these statutes.ⁿ¹⁷

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

These laws evidence a legislative intent to create a set of "parallel or overlapping" state and federal remedies.ⁿ¹⁸ Although Congress intended that Title VII serve as a comprehensive statutory enforcement scheme to eliminate employment discrimination, Title VII was intended to supplement rather than supplant other remedies.ⁿ¹⁹ In particular, Congress made clear that Title VII was intended to coexist with compatible state law rights and remedies. Title VII's administrative enforcement mechanism is intended to be coordinated with state enforcement proceedings.ⁿ²⁰ Title VII specifically provides that "[n]othing in this subchapter shall be deemed to exempt or relieve any person from liability, duty, penalty or punishment provided by any present or future law of any State or political subdivision of a State" other than a law that requires or permits acts that are unlawful under Title VII.ⁿ²¹ Furthermore, Title XI of the Civil Rights Act, which applies to all titles of the act, including Title VII, provides that "[n]othing contained in any title of this Act shall be construed as indicating an intent on the part of Congress to occupy the field in which any title operates to the exclusion of State laws on the same subject matter."ⁿ²²

The FEHA and Title VII provide parallel and overlapping remedies.ⁿ²³ Pursuant to its authority under Title VII,ⁿ²⁴ the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the federal agency charged with enforcing Title VII, has certified the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH), the state agency charged with enforcing the FEHA, as an agency whose findings and resolutions in cases the EEOC will usually accept.ⁿ²⁵

The multiplicity of remedies means that a plaintiff often has the choice between a state or federal forum, and sometimes between an administrative or judicial forum. Care must be exercised in the choice of forum with respect, for example, to time limitations, availability of jury trial, remedial opportunities, and expense considerations.ⁿ²⁶ Federal causes of action and pendent state claims may be brought in a single federal action. Defendants often seek dismissal of state causes of action pleaded in a complaint in federal court. Commentary by Bill Lann Lee.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission General Overview Labor & Employment Law U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Exhaustion of Remedies General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.; see discussion in § 40.10.

(n2)Footnote 2. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.; see discussion in § 40.20.

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.; see discussion in § 40.21.

(n4)Footnote 4. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.; see discussion in § 40.22A.

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 U.S.C. § 206(d); see discussion in § 40.22.

(n6)Footnote 6. 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.; see discussion in § 40.23.

(n7)Footnote 7. 38 U.S.C. § 2011 et seq.; see discussion in § 40.24.

(n8)Footnote 8. 42 U.S.C. § 1981; see discussion in § 40.25.

(n9)Footnote 9. 42 U.S.C. § 1983; see discussion in § 40.26.

(n10)Footnote 10. Exec. Order No. 11141, 29 Fed. Reg. 2477 (1964); see discussion in § 40.28.

(n11)Footnote 11. Exec. Order No. 11246, 30 Fed. Reg. 12319 (1965); see discussion in § 40.27.

(n12)Footnote 12. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq.; see discussion in § 40.29.

(n13)Footnote 13. See 29 C.F.R., pt. 1607; see discussion in § 40.30; see also Easton v. Crossland Mortg. Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 979, 982 (federal court lacks jurisdiction over action referencing federal theories but failing to seek federal remedies).

(n14)Footnote 14. Lab. Code § 1197.5; see discussion in § 40.11.

(n15)Footnote 15. Civ. Code §§ 51, 51.7, 52; see discussion in § 40.12.

(n16)Footnote 16. See discussion in § 40.13.

(n17)Footnote 17. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7285.0 et seq.

(n18)Footnote 18. See Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 47, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295 ; Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 48-49, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 .

(n20)Footnote 20. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5; EEOC v. Commercial Office Products Co. (1988) 486 U.S. 107, 121-123, 108 S. Ct. 1666, 100 L. Ed. 2d 96 .

(n21)Footnote 21. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-7.

(n22)Footnote 22. 42 U.S.C. § 2000h-4; see California Federal S. & L. Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613, 624 ; Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 48, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 ; See also § 40.02[2].

(n23)Footnote 23. See Price v. Civil Serv. Com. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 257, 271, 161 Cal. Rptr. 475, 604 P.2d 1365 ("Although the wording of these ... provisions varies in some respects, each of these sections provides in essence that no person shall be discriminated against in employment opportunities on the basis of his race, color, creed, sex, or national origin").

(n24)Footnote 24. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(b).

(n25)Footnote 25. See 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.75, 1601.80.

(n26)Footnote 26. See generally discussion in ch. 42, pt. A.

4 of 171 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IV EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY
CHAPTER 40 Overview of Equal Employment Opportunity Laws
Part A. GENERAL PRINCIPLES

2-40 California Employment Law § 40.02

AUTHOR: By David M. Youngsmith, J.D.

§ 40.02 Standards of Construction Applicable When More Than One Law Addresses Same Subject

[1] Effect of State Laws With Broader Protections

California equal employment opportunity laws are often broader in scope than their federal counterparts, and thus employers may be liable for employment discrimination under California law even if they are not liable under a particular federal law. For example, although the FEHA and Title VII prohibit many of the same types of discrimination, the FEHA extends its prohibitions to discrimination based on age, marital status, sexual orientation, disability, and medical condition, which are not covered by Title VII.ⁿ¹ Another example of the broader reach of California law is that the FEHA generally covers employers who have five or more employees,ⁿ² while Title VII covers only employers who have at least 15 employees.ⁿ³ Accordingly, a California employer with 10 employees who engages in sex discrimination will not be liable under Title VII, but will be liable under the FEHA.^{n3.1}

In instances in which federal equal employment opportunity law is broader than state law, the converse is true, and employers must comply with the stricter federal standards.ⁿ⁴

Even when state and federal provisions have the same scope, state provisions may afford more expansive rights to employees or, correlatively, impose more onerous duties on employers. An example is the special FEHA provision requiring employers to provide leave and reinstatement to employees disabled by pregnancy,ⁿ⁵ which has no counterpart in Title VII's prohibition of sex discrimination based on pregnancy.ⁿ⁶ Another example is found in the disability-discrimination provisions of the FEHA,^{n6.1} which go beyond what is prohibited by the Americans with Disabilities Act.^{n6.2} Title VII also contains several exemptions that are absent from the FEHA, such as the exemptions for bona fide seniority or merit systemsⁿ⁷ and bona fide private membership clubs.ⁿ⁸

[2] Preemption of State Antidiscrimination Law by Federal Statutes

[a] Federal Antidiscrimination Statutes

Under the United States Constitution, federal laws are the "supreme [l]aw of the [l]and,"ⁿ⁹ and any state law, however clearly within a state's acknowledged power, that interferes with or is contrary to federal law is void.ⁿ¹⁰ In California Federal S. & L. Assn. v. Guerra,ⁿ¹¹ the United States Supreme Court explained that federal laws may supersede state laws in three separate situations: (1) when Congress enacts a statute that explicitly preempts state law; (2) when a federal scheme is so comprehensive as to create a reasonable inference that Congress intended to "occupy the field," leaving no room for supplementary state regulation; or (3) when state law actually conflicts with federal law.

In general, the federal equal employment opportunity laws discussed in this chapter supplement, rather than supersede, California equal employment opportunity laws under the standards set forth in Guerra. For example, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII)ⁿ¹² expressly preserves state equal employment opportunity laws, as long as they do not require or permit any act that violates Title VII.ⁿ¹³ Similarly, a preemption provision in Title XI of the act expressly provides that the act does not "occupy the field" in which it operates; nor does it invalidate state law, unless the state law is inconsistent with the act.ⁿ¹⁴

The ADA provides that it does not preempt state and local public health laws regarding food handling that are designed to protect the public health from individuals who pose a significant risk to the health or safety of others.ⁿ¹⁵

States may extend their equal employment opportunity laws to areas not covered by Title VII,ⁿ¹⁶ as long as such laws are not "inconsistent" with Title VII.ⁿ¹⁷ For example, the FEHAⁿ¹⁸ prohibits employment discrimination by private clubs,ⁿ¹⁹ which are specifically exempted under Title VII.ⁿ²⁰ The FEHA provision, however, has been held not to be "inconsistent" with Title VII, because it does not hinder the objective of the federal scheme to eliminate employment discrimination.ⁿ²¹ In short, state equal employment opportunity laws may prohibit practices that are not prohibited by Title VII, but may not authorize practices that would violate Title VII.

Generally, the FEHA is also not preempted by federal employment relations statutes, such as the Railway Labor Act (RLA),ⁿ²² that do not purport to cover discrimination claims and do not expressly preempt federal or state equal employment opportunity statutes.ⁿ²³ However, to the extent that discrimination issues are subject to collective bargaining and arbitration, the FEHA may be preempted.ⁿ²⁴ For a discussion of the effect of antidiscrimination provisions in collective bargaining agreements, see § 90.10.

The California Supreme Court has held that a provision of the federal National Bank Act that empowers the board of directors of a national bank to dismiss bank officers "at pleasure" has been impliedly amended by Title VII and the ADEA. The court also held that the same provision preempts the FEHA to the extent the FEHA conflicts with Title VII and the ADEA, but does not preempt the FEHA to the extent the FEHA does not conflict with Title VII and the ADEA.ⁿ²⁵

A court of appeal has held that preemption of FEHA claims by the federal National Bank Act depends on whether the employee is an "officer" of the bank. Often, a plaintiff employee will assert that his or her position as an "officer" was not vested with any of the duties or responsibilities normally associated with the position. To obtain summary judgment on preemption grounds under the National Bank Act in such circumstances, the bank must show that the employee was an "officer" using the criteria set forth in Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court.^{n25.1}

[b] Other Federal Statutes

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) can preempt a FEHA claim for age discrimination when the FEHA claim relates to an employee benefit plan. ERISA contains a broad preemption provision stating that ERISA supersedes state laws insofar as they relate to any employee benefit plan described in ERISA and not exempt under ERISA.^{n25.2} ERISA also provides that its general preemption provision cannot be construed to alter, amend, modify, invalidate, impair, or supersede any federal law.^{n25.3}

This latter provision applied in Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc.^{n25.4} There, the United States Supreme Court held that

ERISA § 514(d) saved from preemption a state anti-discrimination law that related to an employee benefit plan under ERISA § 514(a). The Court recognized that Title VII provides for a comprehensive joint state/federal enforcement scheme in which states and the federal government enact valid anti-discrimination laws and work together to enforce them.^{n25.5} The Court held that preemption of a state anti-discrimination law would impair Title VII to the extent that the state law provided a means of enforcing Title VII's commands. As long as the state anti-discrimination law did not prohibit something that Title VII allowed, preempting the state law would have frustrated the goal of encouraging joint state/ federal enforcement of Title VII and thus impaired federal law. The Court expressed concern that if ERISA were interpreted to entirely preempt state anti-discrimination laws as they relate to employee benefit plans, states would be unable to prohibit or grant relief for discrimination in ERISA plans and an employee's only remedies for discrimination prohibited by Title VII in ERISA plans would be federal ones.^{n25.6} The Court also noted that Title VII does not prevent states from extending their nondiscrimination laws to areas not covered by Title VII. However, enforcement of Title VII does not depend on those extensions of state law.^{n25.7}

In Hurlic v. So. Cal. Gas Opinion Co.,^{n25.8} the Ninth Circuit held that ERISA did preempt a FEHA age discrimination claim that related to an employee benefits plan. The court found that like Title VII, the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA)^{n25.9} provides for a joint state/federal enforcement scheme that is nearly identical to that provided in Title VII.^{n25.10} But the FEHA does not merely parallel the ADEA, even though both statutes contain broad prohibitions against age discrimination.^{n25.11} Unlike the FEHA, the ADEA contains specific provisions relating to pension plans.^{n25.12} and ADEA § 4(i)(1)(A) mirrors ERISA § 204(b)(1)(H)(i), the section which formed the basis for the age discrimination claim. The two provisions were enacted together,^{n25.13} and Congress made clear they should be interpreted to have an identical meaning.^{n25.14} In Hurlic, the Ninth Circuit held that the employee benefits plan did not violate ERISA § 204(b)(1)(H)(i). Thus, it followed that the plan did not violate ADEA § 4(i)(1)(A). Although the age-discrimination FEHA claim was not identical to the ERISA claim, the difference between them did not save the FEHA claim from preemption. Plaintiffs sought to invalidate the specific "wear-away" provision under FEHA, a broad, general anti-age discrimination provision, which they would not have been allowed to do under the ADEA. The court found that because the FEHA prohibited practices that would be lawful under the ADEA, the FEHA claim was preempted.

[3] Effect of FEHA on State Common-Law and Local Government Remedies

The FEHA does not preempt other state laws, including the common law, that prohibit or restrict employment discrimination,ⁿ²⁶ unless those provisions provide less protection than that afforded by the FEHA to the enumerated classes of persons covered under the FEHA.ⁿ²⁷ Furthermore, although an employee must exhaust the FEHA administrative remedy before bringing a civil action under the FEHA or seeking any remedies provided by the FEHA,ⁿ²⁸ exhaustion of the FEHA administrative remedy is not required before filing a civil action for damages alleging nonstatutory causes of action.ⁿ²⁹

Thus, for example, the California Supreme Court has held that Article I, Section 8, of the California Constitution, which provides that no person may be disqualified from entering or pursuing a business, profession, vocation, or employment because of sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin,ⁿ³⁰ sets forth a fundamental public policy against employment discrimination on any of those grounds and may be the basis for a tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, independent of the FEHA.ⁿ³¹ As another example, a court of appeal has held that conduct constituting sexual harassment may also constitute the outrageous behavior element of a tort cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress.ⁿ³² However, the California Supreme Court has held that an employee not covered by the FEHA because his or her employer does not regularly employ five or more employeesⁿ³³ cannot maintain a tort action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy tort based on the FEHA's policy against age discrimination.ⁿ³⁴ For discussion of common-law causes of action for wrongful termination and related causes of action, see Chapters 60 and 63.

The FEHA does preempt local ordinances relating to employment discrimination. A provision of the FEHA expressly declares "the intention of the Legislature to occupy the field of regulation of discrimination in employment ... encompassed by the provisions of [the FEHA], exclusive of all other laws banning discrimination in employment ... by any city, city and county, county, or other political subdivision of the state."³⁵

[4] Effect of Workers' Compensation Act on State Antidiscrimination Law

Several court of appeal decisions have indicated that the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act³⁶ do not bar a civil action for damages under the FEHA for discrimination in employment based on age, race, sex, or religion, or for retaliation for opposition to discrimination or harassment.³⁷ Similarly, at least one panel of the Court of Appeal has held that a claim for emotional distress arising out of employment is not barred when the distress was caused by an employer's illegal discriminatory practices.³⁸ More recently, the California Supreme Court held that Labor Code Section 132a does not provide an exclusive remedy and does not preclude an industrially-injured employee from pursuing FEHA and common law wrongful discharge remedies based on allegations of disability discrimination. In addition, disability discrimination can form the basis of a common law wrongful discharge claim.³⁹

One Ninth Circuit case discussed 1992 amendments to the FEHA that incorporated provisions of the ADA but that deleted a provision during the drafting stage that would have provided that the FEHA's provisions were not to be superseded by workers' compensation law. The court found this significant since the Legislature could have included an explicit provision exempting FEHA claims from workers' compensation exclusivity but declined to do so. The court thus found that the workers' compensation exclusive remedy provisions preempt work-related disability discrimination claims, but it remanded on the issue of whether the disability involved in that case was actually work-related.⁴⁰ However, no reported appellate decision has discussed the 1993 amendments to Government Code Section 12993(a). Prior to its amendment, that section stated that nothing in the FEHA should be deemed to repeal any California law relating to discrimination because of physical disability (or other enumerated bases). The amendment added the phrase, "unless those provisions provide less protection to the enumerated classes of persons under this part." Thus, the amended version of this statute could be interpreted as stating that the FEHA supersedes provisions of other state laws that have a narrower remedy than the FEHA's antidiscrimination provisions. Furthermore, a federal district court held that the exclusive remedy provisions of California workers' compensation law are preempted by the federal Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA)⁴¹ to the extent that the California law purports to limit the potential remedies available under the ADA to a worker disabled by an on-the-job injury.⁴² For discussion of the ADA's coverage, see § 40.22A.

For complete discussion of the exclusive remedy doctrine under workers' compensation law, see Chapter 20.

[5] Effect of Railway Labor Act on State and Federal Antidiscrimination Law

A state antidiscrimination law prohibiting handicap discrimination may be preempted by the Railway Labor Act ("RLA")⁴³ if resolution of the suit depends on analysis of the labor contract.⁴⁴ However, recent case law has narrowed the scope of RLA preemption by limiting it to minor disputes grounded in the collective bargaining agreement (CBA).⁴⁵ Thus, claims involving obligations that exist independently of a CBA are not preempted. To determine whether to apply RLA preemption, the Ninth Circuit has held⁴⁶ that courts should apply the preemption test used in cases under the Labor Management Relations Act (LMRA).⁴⁷ That test asks:

1. Does the CBA contain provisions that govern the actions giving rise to the state claim?
2. Is the state statute "sufficiently clear" so that the claim can be evaluated without consideration of overlapping provisions in the CBA?
3. Has the state shown an intent not to allow the statute to be altered or removed by private contract?

State law is preempted under this test only if the answer to the first question is "yes," and the answer to either the second or third is "no."n48

Applying the three-prong preemption test to the facts of a disability discrimination claim, the Ninth Circuit in Espinal v. Northwest Airlines n49 found that (1) the CBA did not govern actions giving rise to disability discrimination claims because it did not provide a framework either for challenging determinations that an employee was not physically fit, or for accommodating disabled workers; (2) the Fair Employment and Housing Actn50 has sufficiently clear statutory standards and regulations, so that the claim could be evaluated without considering the provisions in the CBA; and (3) the state had shown its intent not to allow its prohibitions to be altered by private contract. The court therefore concluded that the disability discrimination claims at issue were not preempted by the RLA.n51

Because the RLA and Title VII are both federal statutes, one Ninth Circuit panel held that the RLA cannot "preempt" Title VII.n52 However, even applying a similar analysis of the issue in terms of whether the RLA's mandatory arbitration mechanism precluded an independent action under Title VII, the court found that the RLA did not bar the Title VII action since the dispute was not a "minor" one.n53 The court stated that under the "major/minor" dispute analysis, there was no doubt that Title VII rights exist independent of a CBA. In addition, the court said that the CBA at issue did not expressly reference Title VII rights, but merely contained a nondiscrimination rule that provided that CBA provisions were to be applied in compliance with state and federal laws.n54 Further, the court stated that employees may not be forced to arbitrate Title VII claims unless they have knowingly agreed to submit to arbitration.n55

Similarly, ADA claims are not preempted by the RLA. In Saridakis v. United Airlines,n56 the Ninth Circuit addressed the intersection of the ADA and the RLA. Although the preemption doctrine does not necessarily govern questions related to the compatibility of two or more federal laws, courts must determine whether Congress intended the RLA's mandatory arbitration scheme to preclude a claim under the ADA. As under Title VII, ADA rights exist independently of any employment rights granted by a CBA. Even when the CBA contains an anti-discrimination clause and provides a dispute resolution mechanism, the CBA does not necessarily define the rights that exist under the ADA. Therefore, the claim cannot be "conclusively resolved" by interpreting the ADA. Rather, the merit of an ADA claim ultimately depends upon the application of ADA standards, not the dispute resolution mechanism in the CBA. Thus, a dispute under the ADA is not minor, and an independent suit to resolve the dispute is not precluded by the RLA.n57

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Despite the ruling in Saridakis,n58 practitioners should not conclude that the provisions of a CBA are always irrelevant to the interpretation of an employee's rights under the ADA or the FEHA. On the contrary, an increasing number of collectively bargained contracts are attempting to define thoughtfully and carefully the rights of disabled employees within unique work settings by establishing the accommodations that are reasonable under prescribed circumstances. While courts may not always conclude that collectively bargained assessments of reasonable accommodation are dispositive, practitioners should not conclude that such collectively bargained assessments will be accorded no weight at all. Therefore, it would appear likely that, over time, the Saridakis rule will be tempered by judicial acknowledgment that courts are not the best evaluators of reasonable accommodation in every instance and that some definitions of reasonable accommodation reached through collective bargaining may be viewed as fairly determined. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawU.S. Equal Employment Opportunity CommissionGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawU.S. Equal Employment Opportunity CommissionEnforcementGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Compare Gov. Code §§ 12940(a), 12943, 12945, with 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a)-(d); see discussions in §§ 40.10 and 40.20[6][a]. Age and disability discrimination, however, are not left unprotected by the federal equal employment opportunity laws. The Age Discrimination in Employment Act (29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.) prohibits age discrimination, and the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.), §§ 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.), and the Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974 (38 U.S.C. § 2011 et seq.), proscribe disability discrimination. see discussions in §§ 40.21, 40.22A, 40.23, 40.24.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Gov. Code § 12926(d); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. However, an employer is liable for harassment under the FEHA even if the employer only has one employee. Gov. Code § 12940(j)(4)(A).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Duke v. University of Texas at El Paso (5th Cir. 1982) 663 F.2d 522, 527 .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Gov. Code § 12945(a).

(n7)Footnote 6. See California Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 274-277, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n8)Footnote 6.1. Gov. Code 12926(h), (i) and (k).

(n9)Footnote 6.2. U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.

(n10)Footnote 7. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(h).

(n11)Footnote 8. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b)(2); Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 17-18, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 .

(n12)Footnote 9. See U.S. Const., art. VI, § 2.

(n13)Footnote 10. Sail'er Inn, Inc. v. Kirby (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 1, 10, 95 Cal. Rptr. 329, 485 P.2d 529 .

(n14)Footnote 11. See California Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 280-281, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613 .

(n15)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n16)Footnote 13. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-7; see also 29 U.S.C. § 633(b) (Age Discrimination in Employment Act preserves state agency jurisdiction and defers federal action pending opportunity for investigation of state claims based on state age discrimination laws).

(n17)Footnote 14. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000h-4.

(n18)Footnote 15. 42 U.S.C. § 12113(e).

(n19)Footnote 16. See California Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 281-284, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613 ; cf. Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1983) 463 U.S. 85, 103-104, 103 S. Ct. 2890, 77 L. Ed. 2d 490 (no ERISA preemption of state antidiscrimination laws that are consistent with Title VII).

(n20)Footnote 17. See California Federal Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Guerra (1987) 479 U.S. 272, 281-284, 107 S. Ct. 683, 93 L. Ed. 2d 613 ; Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 17, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 .

(n21)Footnote 18. See Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n22)Footnote 19. See Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 ; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7286.5(a)(6); see also discussion in § 40.10[3].

(n23)Footnote 20. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e(b); see also discussion in § 40.20[4][a].

(n24)Footnote 21. See Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 17, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 .

(n25)Footnote 22. 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n26)Footnote 23. See Evans v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1378, 1385-1387, 262 Cal. Rptr. 416 .

(n27)Footnote 24. See Evans v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1378, 1385-1387, 262 Cal. Rptr. 416 .

(n28)Footnote 25. See Peatros v. Bank of America (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 147, 168-169, 172-173, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659, 990 P.2d 539 ; see 12 U.S.C. § 24, para. 5; see also Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1082, 1104, 282 Cal. Rptr. 841, 811 P.2d 1025 (defining bank "officer" within meaning of § 24; declining to decide whether § 24 preempts state-law causes of action for age discrimination).

(n29)Footnote 25.1. Ramanathan v. Bank of America (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1024-1031 (bank failed to show vice president was officer subject to at--pleasure provisions of 12 U.S.C. § 24 (Fifth), where fact that board gave vice president his title was not sufficient to bring him within National Bank Act, regardless of his actual position within bank or his job duties, and vice president's unrefuted assertions regarding limited, nonbanking nature of his duties and responsibilities as computer programming consultant raised issues of material fact as to whether he qualified as officer).

(n30)Footnote 25.2. 29 U.S.C. § 1144(a).

(n31)Footnote 25.3. 29 U.S.C. § 1144(d).

(n32)Footnote 25.4. Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1983) 463 U.S. 85, 101-106, 103 S. Ct. 2890, 77 L. Ed. 2d 490 .

(n33)Footnote 25.5. Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1983) 463 U.S. 85, 101-102, 103 S. Ct. 2890, 77 L. Ed. 2d 490 .

(n34)Footnote 25.6. Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1983) 463 U.S. 85, 102, 103 S. Ct. 2890, 77 L. Ed. 2d 490 .

(n35)Footnote 25.7. Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1983) 463 U.S. 85, 102, 103 S. Ct. 2890, 77 L. Ed. 2d 490 .

(n36)Footnote 25.8. Hurlic v. So. Cal. Gas Opinion Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 539 F.3d 1024, 1035-1037 .

(n37)Footnote 25.9. 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.

(n38)Footnote 25.10. Compare 29 U.S.C. § 633(b) with 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(c).

(n39)Footnote 25.11. Compare 29 U.S.C. § 623(a) with Gov. Code §§ 12940, 12941.

(n40)Footnote 25.12. See 29 U.S.C. § 623(i).

(n41)Footnote 25.13. See 99 Pub. L. 509, 100 Stat. 1874.

(n42)Footnote 25.14. H.R. Rep. No. 99-1012, at 378-79 (1986) (Conf. Rep.).

(n43)Footnote 26. See Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 73-82, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 ; see Gov. Code § 12993(a).

(n44)Footnote 27. Gov. Code § 12993(a); see Ruiz v. California Department of Corrections (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 891, 897-898, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 139 (state employees are entitled to seek review of their claims either through FEHA by DFEH or Civil Service Act by State Personnel Board; the FEHA was meant to supplement, not supplant or be supplanted by, existing antidiscrimination remedies, in order to give employees maximum opportunity to vindicate their civil rights against discrimination).

(n45)Footnote 28. See generally discussion in chs. 42 and 43.

(n46)Footnote 29. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n47)Footnote 30. See discussion in § 40.14[2].

(n48)Footnote 31. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 89-91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 ; see Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 230-233, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 ; Blom v. N.G.K. Spark Plugs (U.S.A.), Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 382, 386-388, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 139 .

(n49)Footnote 32. Fisher v. San Pedro Peninsula Hospital (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 590, 618, 622, 262 Cal. Rptr. 842 ; see generally Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California torts, ch. 44 (Matthew Bender).

(n50)Footnote 33. See Gov. Code § 12926(d); See also § 40.10[3].

(n51)Footnote 34. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 124-125, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 ; see also Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 227-230, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 (tort action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, based on FEHA's policy against race and sex discrimination and retaliation by nonprofit, religious entity exempt from FEHA).

(n52)Footnote 35. Gov. Code § 12993(c); see Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 78, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n53)Footnote 36. See Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602.

(n54)Footnote 37. See Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 347, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 ; Flait v. North American Watch Corp. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 467, 480, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522 (retaliation for efforts to prevent sexual harassment); Goldman v. Wilsey Foods, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1085, 1095-1096, 265 Cal. Rptr. 294 (religious discrimination); Meninga v. Raley's, Inc. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 79, 91, 264 Cal. Rptr. 319 (sex discrimination); Watson v. Department of Rehabilitation (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1271, 1286-1287, 261 Cal. Rptr. 204 (age and race discrimination); Jones v. Los Angeles Community College Dist. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 794, 804, 807-808, 244 Cal. Rptr. 37 (race discrimination).

(n55)Footnote 38. Accardi v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 341, 351, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 292 .

(n56)Footnote 39. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1161, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 . For further discussion, see § 43.01[14][c.1] and ch. 60.

(n57)Footnote 40. Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1529-1530 .

(n58)Footnote 41. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.

(n59)Footnote 42. See Wood v. County of Alameda (N.D. Cal. 1995) 875 F. Supp. 659, 665 .

(n60)Footnote 43. 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n61)Footnote 44. Croston v. Burlington N. R.R. Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 999 F.2d 381, 387-389 (involving Montana antidiscrimination law).

(n62)Footnote 45. See Hawaiian Airlines, Inc. v. Norris (1994) 512 U.S. 246, 114 S. Ct. 2239, 2251, 129 L. Ed. 2d 203 .

(n63)Footnote 46. Espinal v. Northwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1996) 90 F.3d 1452, 1456-1457 .

(n64)Footnote 47. 29 U.S.C. § 185(a).

(n65)Footnote 48. See Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1523 ; See also § 60.09[1][b] regarding LMRA preemption of wrongful termination claims.

(n66)Footnote 49. Espinal v. Northwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1996) 90 F.3d 1452, 1457-1458 .

(n67)Footnote 50. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n68)Footnote 51. See Espinal v. Northwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1996) 90 F.3d 1452, 1457-1458 (RLA does not preempt claim under FEHA); see also Jimeno v. Mobil Oil Corp. (9th Cir. 1995) 66 F.3d 1514, 1521 (FEHA claim for disability discrimination not preempted).

(n69)Footnote 52. See Felt v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1416, 1418-1419 .

(n70)Footnote 53. See Felt v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1416, 1419-1420 .

(n71)Footnote 54. See Felt v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (9th Cir. 1995) 60 F.3d 1416, 1419-1420 .

