[5] Fingerprinting Required by Federal Securities Law

[6] Fingerprinting Required for Licensed Child Care Providers

§ 50.16 Polygraph Examinations and Voice Stress Analysis

[1] State Law

[a] Polygraph Examinations

[i] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[ii] Employers and Employees Covered by Statute

[iii] Method of Enforcement

[b] Voice Stress Analysis

[2] Federal Law

[a] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[i] General Prohibitions

[ii] Exception for Employees of Certain Defense and Intelligence Contractors

[iii] Exception for Employer Investigations

[iv] Exception for Security Services

[v] Exception for Certain Drug Manufacturers and Distributors

[vi] Restrictions on Manner of Conducting Test and Use of Results

[vii] Disclosure of Test Results

[viii] Activity Outside Scope of Prohibited Conduct

[b] Employers Covered and Exempted

[c] Methods of Enforcement

[d] Effect on State or Local Law and Collective Bargaining Agreements

[3] Effect of Arbitration Agreements

§ 50.17 Security Clearance Investigations--Defense Department Regulations

§ 50.18 Shopping Investigator's Report

§ 50.19 Wiretapping and Eavesdropping

[1] Coverage

[2] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[a] Wiretapping

[b] Eavesdropping on or Recording Confidential Communications

[c] Interception of Cellular Radio Telephone and Cordless Telephone Communications

[d] Exemptions

[3] Enforcement

[a] Criminal Penalties

[b] Civil Remedies

[i] Action for Damages

[ii] Action for Injunctive Relief

[c] FORM--Complaint for Damages and Injunction for Violation of Employee's Privacy Rights by Wiretapping or Unlawfully Eavesdropping

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[4] Comparison With Federal Law

[5] Federal Stored Communications Act

§ 50.20 Audio, Photographic and Video Recording

§§ 50.21 through 50.29 [Reserved]

§ 50.30 Constitutional Privacy Protections

[1] California Constitution

[a] Nature and Scope of Right to Privacy

[i] Rights Protected

- [ii] Protection Encompasses Nongovernmental Action

- [b] Essential Elements of Privacy Action

- [c] Competing Interest Defense--Balancing Test

- [d] Compelling Interest Defense

- [e] Application to Employer-Employee Relationship

- [f] Remedies

- [2] Federal Constitution

- § 50.31 Common Law Theories of Recovery

- [1] Invasion of Privacy (Intrusion)

- [a] Elements of Cause of Action

- [b] Defenses

- [c] Application to Employer-Employee Relationship

- [2] False Imprisonment

- [a] Elements of Cause of Action

- [b] Defenses

- [i] Privilege

- [ii] Citizen's Arrest

- [c] Application to Employer-Employee Relationship

- [3] Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

- [4] Damages and Other Remedies Available

- [5] Possible Preemption of Tort Action by Workers' Compensation Law

- § FORM--Complaint Against Employer for Damages Based on Collection of Private Information in Violation of Constitutional and Common Law Privacy Rights

- [1] Comment

- [a] Use of Form

- [b] Allegations

[c] Verification

[d] Statute of Limitations

[2] Form

§§ 50.33 through 50.39 [Reserved]

§ 50.40 Introduction

§ 50.41 Employer Searches and Surveillance of Employees

§ 50.42 Medical and Physical Examinations

[1] Constitutional Privacy Issues

[a] Generally

[b] Waiver

[2] Related Legal Issues

[a] Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

[b] Other Issues

§ 50.43 Drug and Alcohol Tests

[1] Potential Legal Issues Involved in Drug Testing

[a] Testing of Employees

[i] No Statutory Prohibition of Drug Screening by Employers

[ii] Collective Bargaining Agreement May Limit Employer's Right to Conduct Drug Testing

[iii] Balancing Employer's Interest in Drug-Free Workplace Against Employee's California Constitutional Right to Privacy

[iv] Fourth Amendment Issues in Drug Testing by Government Employer

[v] Fourth Amendment Issues in Drug Testing by Private Employer

[b] Testing of Applicants for Employment

[i] Balancing Test for Analyzing Privacy Claims Under California Constitution

[ii] Issues Under Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) and Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA)

[iii] Drug Testing When Mandated by Law

[2] Potential Issues Involved in Alcohol Testing

[3] Accommodation of Employee in Alcohol or Drug Rehabilitation Program

§§ 50.44 through 50.49 [Reserved]

§ 50.50 Legal Texts

§ 50.51 Encyclopedias

§ 50.52 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D.,^{n*} Edward Baskauskas, J.D.^{n}

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Ms. Reeves is an attorney in San Francisco. Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

(n2)Footnote . Edward Baskauskas is a member of the California Bar and an adjunct professor of law at Golden Gate University.

2 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees

3-50 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

Scope

By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D.,^{n*} Edward Baskauskas, J.D.^{n} SCOPE

This chapter discusses constitutional, statutory, and common-law restrictions on the right of a private employer to collect confidential or private information about employees.

Restrictions on the employer's use and disclosure of private information concerning employees are discussed in Chapter 51.

FOOTNOTES:

(n3)Footnote *. Ms. Reeves is an attorney in San Francisco. Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

(n4)Footnote . Edward Baskauskas is a member of the California Bar and an adjunct professor of law at Golden Gate University.

3 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part A. OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEES' PRIVACY PROTECTION

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.01

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.01 Overlapping Sources of Privacy Rights

The right of an employee to be free from unreasonable intrusions into his or her person, property, and private affairs is protected by a number of legal theories, some of which overlap. An employer's right or ability to obtain private information about his or her employee may be limited in any given case by one or more of these theories.

First, various California and federal statutes limit the employer's right to acquire information about employees, whether directly from the employee or indirectly through such third parties as credit reporting agencies. Some of these statutes limit the collection of certain specific types of information; others limit the use of certain means of acquiring information. These statutory provisions are discussed in Part B (§§ 50.10-50.19).

Second, the California Constitution imposes potentially broad limitations on invasion of an employee's privacy by his or her employer.ⁿ¹ In more limited instances, protection may also be afforded to private employees by provisions of the United States Constitution, specifically the prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures.ⁿ² Potential constitutional protections are discussed in § 50.30.

Finally, employees may seek recovery for employers' interference with their privacy rights under several common law tort theories. Tort theories of recovery are discussed in § 50.31.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Constitutional LawSubstantive Due ProcessPrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of Privacy

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 1.

(n2)Footnote 2. See U.S. Const., amend. IV.

4 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees

Part A. OVERVIEW OF EMPLOYEES' PRIVACY PROTECTION

3-50 California Employment Law §§ 50.02 through 50.09

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 50.02[Reserved]

5 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.10

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.10 HIV Test Results

The California Health and Safety Code contains provisions designed to ensure the confidentiality of the results of tests used to detect the human immunodeficiency virus or "HIV," the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS),ⁿ¹ and to penalize most disclosures of such results made without the written authorization of test subjects.ⁿ² These provisions are discussed in detail in Chapter 51. Among other things, the Health and Safety Code provides that before ordering a test that identifies infection with HIV, a medical care provider must inform the patient that the test is planned, provide information about the test, inform the patient that there are numerous treatment options available for a patient who tests positive for HIV and that a person who tests negative for HIV should continue to be routinely tested, and advise the patient that he or she has the right to decline the test. If a patient declines the test, the medical care provider must note that fact in the patient's medical file.^{n2.1} Further, except as provided in Health & Safety Code Section 120990(a), no person may administer a test for HIV infection unless the person being tested or his or her parent, guardian, conservator, or other person specified in Health & Safety Code § 121020, signs a written statement documenting the person's informed consent to the test.^{n2.2} These requirements do not apply, however, when a person independently requests an HIV test from the provider.^{n2.3} Furthermore, except as otherwise provided by statute,ⁿ³ the results of such an HIV test may not be used to determine suitability for employment.ⁿ⁴

The Health and Safety Code also prohibits the use of either (1) confidential, personally identifying information relating to AIDS research or (2) personally identifying information contained in public health records, in the event such information is disclosed to the employer, to determine the subject's employability.ⁿ⁵

The statutory prohibition on use of the results of an HIV test for determining suitability for employmentⁿ⁶ in effect precludes employers from (1) testing applicants and employees for AIDS and HIV and (2) from making hiring and other employment decisions based on such tests.

Although the Health and Safety Code specifically provides for civil penalties and the recovery of actual damages resulting from unauthorized disclosure of test results,ⁿ⁷ it does not contain an express cause of action for wrongful use of the information in making hiring decisions.ⁿ⁸ It is arguable, however, that an employee terminated after an employer's illegal demand for an HIV test may have a cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy.ⁿ⁹ For full discussion of liability for wrongful termination, see Chapter 60.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Constitutional Law Substantive Due Process Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Medical & Related Examinations Torts Intentional Torts Invasion of Privacy General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Health & Safety Code § 120775(a), (b) (definitions of "AIDS" and "HIV" test).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Health & Safety Code §§ 120980, 120990, 121115, 121025.

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Health & Safety Code § 120990(a). Nothing in Section 120990 precludes a medical examiner or other physician from ordering or performing a test to detect HIV on a cadaver when an autopsy is performed or body parts are donated pursuant to the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act [Health & Safety Code § 7150 et seq.]. See Health & Safety Code § 120990(d).

(n4)Footnote 2.2. Health & Safety Code § 120990(c). If the patient is incompetent to give consent, consent may be given under certain circumstances by the patient's parent, guardian, conservator, or other person legally authorized to make health care decisions for the patient. See Health & Safety Code § 121020. These requirements do not apply when blood is tested as part of a scientific investigation conducted either by a medical researcher operating under the approval of an institutional review board or by the department, in accordance with a protocol for unlinked testing, i.e., blood samples obtained anonymously, or that have the name or identifying information of the individual who provided the sample removed in a manner that prevents the test results from ever being linked to a particular individual who participated in the research or study. Health & Safety Code § 120990(e).

(n5)Footnote 2.3. Health & Safety Code § 120990(b).

(n6)Footnote 3. See Ins. Code § 799 et seq., regarding underwriting of AIDS risks.

(n7)Footnote 4. Health & Safety Code § 120980(f).

(n8)Footnote 5. Health & Safety Code §§ 121025(f) (ban on use of confidential public health records pertaining to AIDS to determine employability of subject), 12115 (ban on use of confidential AIDS research information to determine employability of research subject).

(n9)Footnote 6. See Health & Safety Code § 120980(f).

(n10)Footnote 7. See Health & Safety Code § 120980(a)-(d).

(n11)Footnote 8. See Health & Safety Code § 120980.

(n12)Footnote 9. See Health & Safety Code § 120980(h) (nothing in statute limits or expands right of injured subject to recover damages under any other applicable law); cf. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 172-179, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 (recognizing tort cause of action for termination of employment in violation of public policy).

6 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.11

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.11 Arrest Records

[1] Statutory Coverage

Labor Code Section 432.7 prohibits employers, with certain exceptions, from asking applicants for employment to disclose information regarding arrests or detentions not resulting in conviction, or referrals to or participation in any pretrial or posttrial diversion program,ⁿ¹ and from taking such information, from whatever source acquired, into consideration in determining any condition of employment.ⁿ² As used in Section 432.7, "conviction" includes a plea, verdict, or finding of guilt regardless of whether sentence is imposed by the court.ⁿ³ The limitations imposed on employers under Labor Code Section 432.7 also apply with respect to applicants' convictions for certain marijuana-related offenses after two years from the date of such convictions.ⁿ⁴ In addition to violating Labor Code Section 432.7, consideration of information relating to an applicant's arrests not leading to conviction may violate antidiscrimination provisions of stateⁿ⁵ and federalⁿ⁶ law. That is, a practice of excluding applicants on the basis of arrest records, even if applied in a facially neutral manner, may unlawfully discriminate against minorities who are arrested with a frequency disproportionate to their representation in the population.ⁿ⁷ For discussion, see Chapter 41.

In the federal Combat Methamphetamine Epidemic Act of 2005 (CMA), which, effective September 30, 2006, permits retail pharmacies to ask applicants whether they had ever been convicted of any crime involving controlled substances notwithstanding state law,ⁿ⁸ Congress replaced California's prohibition against asking about a certain class of prior convictions with an express right to ask about those convictions, thereby effecting a partial repeal of Lab. Code § 432.7(c) without any express saving clause. This partial repeal of Lab. Code § 432.7 abated the pending state lawsuit of an applicant for employment at a retail store containing a pharmacy for violation of Lab. Code § 432.7 based on the store's application for employment containing a question as to whether the applicant had been convicted during previous last seven years of a felony, a crime concerning use or possession of illegal drugs, or any misdemeanor, which resulted in imprisonment. No vested or contractual rights had arisen under Lab. Code § 432.7. The delayed effective date of certain provisions was not an express saving clause, and the federal general saving statuten⁹ did not preclude application of abatement principles in this case.ⁿ¹⁰

[2] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

No employer, whether a public agency or a private individual or corporation, is permitted to ask an applicant for employment to disclose, through any written form or verbally, information concerning an arrest or detention that did not result in conviction.ⁿ¹⁰ Nor is any employer permitted to question an applicant about his or her referral to and participation in any pretrial or posttrial diversion program.ⁿ¹¹ Employers are prohibited from seeking from any source and from utilizing as a factor in determining any condition of employment (including hiring, promotion, termination, or any apprenticeship or training program leading to employment) information about which applicants may not be asked directly.ⁿ¹² An employer is permitted to ask an applicant or employee about an arrest for which the applicant or employee is out on bail or on his or her own recognizance pending trial.ⁿ¹³ However, the employer may not utilize such an arrest as a factor in making an employment decision.ⁿ¹⁴

In general, peace officers and employees of law enforcement agencies with access to criminal offender record information maintained by a local law enforcement criminal justice agency are prohibited by Labor Code section 432.7 from knowingly disclosing, with intent to affect a person's employment, any information relating to an arrest or detention or proceeding that did not result in a conviction, including information concerning a referral to and participation in a pretrial or posttrial diversion program, to anyone not authorized by law to receive the information.ⁿ¹⁵ Other persons authorized by law to receive criminal offender record information are also prohibited from knowingly disclosing such information to anyone not authorized by law to receive the information.ⁿ¹⁶ Employers are not among the statutorily defined class of persons who are ordinarily authorized by law to receive such information.ⁿ¹⁷ No person who knows he or she is not authorized by law to receive or possess criminal justice records information pertaining to an arrest or other proceeding that did not result in a conviction (including information regarding a referral to and participation in a pretrial or posttrial diversion program) may receive or possess such information.ⁿ¹⁸ Knowing receipt or possession by an employer of prohibited information concerning an applicant constitutes a violation of section 432.7, for which the applicant may bring an action for damages.ⁿ¹⁹

The California Department of Justice is responsible for the security and dissemination of summary criminal offender information. One court of appeal has held that the right to privacy under *California Constitution, Article I, Section 1*ⁿ²⁰ in conjunction with Labor Code section 432.7, imposes certain limitations on the department's dissemination of criminal history summaries to employers. Specifically the court held that the state constitutional right to privacy prohibits the department from (1) disseminating nonconviction information for employment, licensing, and certification purposes, to employers and licensing agencies who are not exempt from Labor Code section 432.7(a);ⁿ²¹ (2) disseminating to such "nonexempt" employers and licensing agencies information regarding arrests not followed by dispositions without confirming that charges are still pending; (3) disseminating to employers and licensing agencies pre-1962 juvenile arrests or detentions without indicating disposition; and (4) "masking" information in a manner so as to indicate to the inquiring agency that material has been omitted.ⁿ²²

The Central Valley court also held that the right to privacy prohibits the Department of Justice from disseminating the following information, for employment purposes, to employers who are exempt from Labor Code section 432.7:ⁿ²³ (1) information concerning an arrest for which diversion has been ordered without attempting to determine whether diversion has been successfully completed; (2) information concerning an arrest or detention followed by a dismissal or release without attempting to determine whether the individual was exonerated; and (3) information concerning an arrest without a disposition, without attempting to determine whether diversion was successfully completed or the individual was exonerated.ⁿ²⁴

[3] Employers Covered and Exempted

Labor Code section 432.7 applies to all employers except those specifically exempted by the statute. One exemption permits an employer at a health facility,ⁿ²⁵ such as a hospital or clinic, to ask persons applying for positions with regular access to patients to disclose arrests relating to specified types of sex offenses.ⁿ²⁶ An employer at a health facility may also ask an applicant for a position with access to drugs and medication to disclose arrests relating to certain controlled substances.n27

[4] Employees Covered and Exempted

Labor Code section 432.7 exempts from its coverage persons employed or seeking employment as peace officers or in positions in the Department of Justice or other criminal justice agencies,n28 but imposes certain limitations on the use of arrest records by government agencies in making employment decisions concerning peace officers.n29

[5] Method of Enforcement

[a] Misdemeanor

An intentional violation of Labor Code section 432.7 is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $500.n30 If an employer knowingly and willfully asks an applicant to disclose arrest or other information covered by section 432.7, the applicant may file a complaint with local law enforcement authorities or with the Labor Commissioner.n31

[b] Civil Action

An applicant or employee who reasonably believes that an employer has obtained or used arrest or other information covered by Labor Code section 432.7 in violation of that statute may bring a civil action for damages against the employer.n32 The applicant or employee is entitled to recover the greater of actual damages or $200 for a violation of section 432.7, plus costs and reasonable attorney's fees.n33 For an intentional violation of the statute, the applicant or employee may recover treble actual damages or $500, whichever is greater, plus court costs and reasonable attorney's fees.n34

An applicant cannot bring an action for violation of Labor Code Section 432.8, which precludes employers from asking for information regarding applicants' convictions for certain marijuana-related offenses after two years from the date of the convictions, even if the application is ambiguous regarding those offenses, if the applicant does not believe that he or she is being asked to disclose marijuana-related convictions that were more than two years old.n35 Further, those applicants who have no marijuana convictions to disclose cannot bring a class action on behalf of applicants who do, because they are not similarly situated to persons whose minor drug histories were wrongly revealed on improper job applications, or who refused to disclose the offenses in response to a question about them on an application, and who therefore may be entitled to actual damages or the statutory minimum under Lab. Code §§ 432.7, 432.8. Labor Code § 432.7(c) does not expressly provide that any applicant may recover a minimum of $ 200 as a statutory penalty for an employer asking a prohibited question on a job application, regardless of any nexus to a marijuana conviction lurking somewhere in his or her past.n36

[c] FORM--Complaint Against Employer for Violation of Labor Code Section 432.7

[i] Comment

The form set forth in [ii], below, is for use by an employee or an applicant for employment to obtain damages from an employer who has asked the plaintiff to disclose either information concerning an arrest or detention that did not result in conviction, or information concerning the plaintiff's participation in a pretrial or posttrial diversion program. The form may also be used by an employee or applicant to obtain damages from an employer who has sought, from some other source, or used such prohibited information in determining any condition of employment.n37

In an action against an employer under Labor Code section 432.7, the complaint must allege (1) either that an employer-employee relationship exists between the plaintiff and the defendant or that the plaintiff applied for employment with the defendant and (2) that the defendant either asked the plaintiff, through any written form or orally, to disclose the prohibited information or sought the prohibited information from another source or used such information to determine a condition of employment, such as hiring, promotion, termination, or an apprenticeship or other training program leading to employment.ⁿ³⁸ The complaint should also specify whether the violations were intentional, not intentional, or both, and demand either actual or statutory damages.ⁿ³⁹

The complaint must be filed within one year after the date of the violation.ⁿ⁴⁰

[ii] Form Complaint Against Employer for Violation of Labor Code Section 432.7

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	COMPLAINT AGAINST EMPLOYER FOR DAM-
Defendant.	)	AGES FOR VIOLATION OF LABOR CODE SEC-)	TION 432.7
	)

[Lab. Code § 432.7]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. _____ [Allege capacity and residence of defendant, if venue allegation desired, e.g., Defendant is, and at all times mentioned herein was, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California with its principal place of business in _____ (city), _____ County].

[2. The acts complained of herein occurred in _____ (city), _____ County, California.]

[EITHER, if plaintiff is an applicant]

3. On _____ [date], plaintiff sought employment as a _____ [specify position sought, e.g., computer operator] with defendant by _____ [specify acts by which plaintiff sought employment, e.g., visiting the offices of defendant's human resources department, located in defendant's headquarters in _____ (city), and complying with the request of _____ (name), defendant's human resources administrator, to fill out a written employment application form].

[OR, if plaintiff is an employee]

3. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [city], _____ County, California, plaintiff and defendant entered into a _____ [a written or an oral] agreement for the employment of plaintiff by defendant _____ [describe general nature of work, e.g., as an account executive in defendant's branch office in _____ (city)]. The terms of the agreement were _____ [as follows: _____ (specify) or as stated in the copy of the employment agreement attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and incorporated herein by reference]. Plaintiff subsequently entered into employment pursuant to the above-described agreement. [CONTINUE]

4. _____ [Allege defendant's violation of Lab. Code § 432.7, e.g., Question No. 7 on defendant's written employment application form asked, "Have you ever been arrested for a felony or misdemeanor offense?" Such question was designed to elicit information concerning arrests not resulting in plaintiff's conviction, in violation of Labor Code section 432.7. Plaintiff truthfully and accurately completed all of the questions on the form except for Question No. 7, which plaintiff at first left blank. Plaintiff asked _____ (name), defendant's human resources officer, whether every question on the form had to be answered. _____ (Name) replied that incomplete applications would not be considered. Plaintiff then answered Question No. 7 by disclosing that _____ (specify facts of arrest, detention, or diversion program, e.g., he/she had been arrested in 1979 in _____ County on suspicion of burglary, but that the prosecution had dismissed the charge before trial for insufficient evidence). On _____ (date), defendant notified plaintiff that plaintiff would not be offered employment].

5. Defendant's actions as alleged in Paragraph 4 constitute a violation of Labor Code section 432.7. [As a proximate result of defendant's actions herein alleged, plaintiff has suffered actual damages _____ (in the amount of $ _____ or in an amount to be proven at trial), as follows: _____ (specify nature of damages suffered).] Pursuant to Labor Code section 432.7(c), plaintiff is entitled to recover [the greater of his/her actual damages or] statutory damages in the amount of $200.

[6. Defendant's actions as herein alleged were done intentionally and knowingly in violation of Labor Code section 432.7, thereby entitling plaintiff to the greater of three times his/her actual damages, as previously alleged, or $500.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

[EITHER, if nonintentional violation is alleged]

1. For actual damages _____ [in the amount of $ _____ or according to proof] or $200, whichever is greater.

[OR, if intentional violation is alleged]

1. For three times the amount of plaintiff's actual damages, as alleged herein, or $500, whichever is greater.

[CONTINUE]

2. For reasonable attorney's fees pursuant to Labor Code section 432.7(c);

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Add verification, if desired (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5).]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Criminal Law & Procedure Arrests General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview Torts Intentional Torts Invasion of Privacy General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 432.7(j) (definition of "diversion program").

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 432.7(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 432.7(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 432.8.

(n5)Footnote 5. See generally Gov. Code § 12940.

(n6)Footnote 6. See generally 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Gregory v. Litton Systems, Inc. (C.D. Cal. 1970) 316 F. Supp. 401, 403 , modified on other grounds, 472 F.2d 631, 632, 634 (9th Cir. 1972) .

(n8)Footnote 8. 21 U.S.C. § 830(e)(1)(G).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 1 U.S.C. § 109.

(n10)Footnote 10. Rankin v. Longs Drug Stores California, Inc. (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1253-1262, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 543 .

(n11)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 432.7(a). See, e.g., Starbucks Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1444-1445, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 482 (employment application used nationally and internationally, which contained disclaimer for California applicants regarding marijuana convictions, did not comply with Lab. Code § 432.8, where, although there was no problem with language of disclaimer, placement of disclaimer did not satisfy "clear and conspicuous" test, because disclaimer was on reverse side of application from convictions question, located immediately above signature line at very end of 346-word paragraph, with "U.S." disclaimer, followed by host of irrelevant provisions from states like Maryland and Massachusetts; any value to be gained by placing it in boldface for emphasis was submerged in veritable sea of boldface type; and reasonable applicant could have looked at convictions question and not have noticed misplaced California disclaimer on back side).

(n12)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 432.7(a); see Lab. Code § 432.7(j) ("pretrial or posttrial diversion program" is any program under Penal Code §§ 1000-1000.5, 1001-1001.9, Veh. Code §§ 13201, 13352.5, or any other program expressly authorized and described by statute as diversion program).

(n13)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 432.7(a).

(n14)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 432.7(a).

(n15)Footnote 14. See Pitman v. City of Oakland (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1044, 243 Cal. Rptr. 306 (but sustaining demurrer to cause of action under Lab. Code § 432.7 on ground that arrest resulted in conviction).

(n16)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 432.7(g)(1).

(n17)Footnote 16. Lab. Code § 432.7(g)(2).

(n18)Footnote 17. See Lab. Code § 432.7(g); Penal Code §§ 11105, 13300; but see Penal Code § 11105.3(a) (employer may request from Department of Justice records of convictions, or any arrest pending adjudication, involving sex crimes, drug crimes, and crimes of violence of person who applies for position in which he or she would have supervisory or disciplinary authority over minors or any person under his or her care; Department of Justice shall then give record to employer and furnish copy to applicant).

(n19)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 432.7(g)(3).

(n20)Footnote 19. Lab. Code § 432.7(c).

(n21)Footnote 20. Central Valley Chapter 7th Step Foundation, Inc. v. Younger (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 145, 262 Cal. Rptr. 496 ; see discussion in § 50.30[1][a].

(n22)Footnote 21. See discussion of covered and exempt employers in [3], below.

(n23)Footnote 22. Central Valley Chapter 7th Step Foundation, Inc. v. Younger (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 145, 165, 262 Cal. Rptr. 496 .

(n24)Footnote 23. See Lab. Code § 432.7(a), (e); Penal Code § 13101; see also discussion in [3] and [4], below.

(n25)Footnote 24. Central Valley Chapter 7th Step Foundation, Inc. v. Younger (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 145, 170, 262 Cal. Rptr. 496 .

(n26)Footnote 25. See Health & Safety Code § 1250 (definition of health facility).

(n27)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 432.7(f)(1) (employer at health facility may ask about arrests for alleged sex offenses listed in Penal Code § 290).

(n28)Footnote 27. Lab. Code § 432.7(f)(2); (employer at health facility may ask about arrests for drug-related offenses listed in Health & Safety Code § 11590).

(n29)Footnote 28. Lab. Code § 432.7(e); see Penal Code § 13101 (defining criminal justice agencies).

(n30)Footnote 29. See Lab. Code § 432.7(b) (authorizing release of certain criminal history information, including certain arrest records, to government agency employing peace officer, but limiting use of such records to imposition of paid administrative leave and initiation of independent, internal investigation).

(n31)Footnote 30. Lab. Code § 432.7(c).

(n32)Footnote 31. See Lab. Code § 95(a), (d).

(n33)Footnote 32. See Lab. Code § 432.7(c).

(n34)Footnote 33. Lab. Code § 432.7(c).

(n35)Footnote 34. Lab. Code § 432.7(c).

(n36)Footnote 35. Starbucks Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1445-1447, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 482 (trial court properly granted employer summary judgment, where applicants who admitted during deposition testimony that they read application and understood application did not ask for information about marijuana-related convictions more than two years old failed to show existence of triable issue of material fact on ambiguity).

(n37)Footnote 36. Starbucks Corp. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1447-1452, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 482 .

(n38)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 432.7(c). For discussion, see [2], above.

(n39)Footnote 38. Lab. Code § 432.7(a); see also Pitman v. City of Oakland (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1044, 243 Cal. Rptr. 306 (plaintiff must affirmatively allege that the arrest asked about or considered in employment decision did not ultimately result in a conviction).

(n40)Footnote 39. See Lab. Code § 432.7(c).

(n41)Footnote 40. See Code Civ. Proc. § 340(a).

7 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.12

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.12 California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

[1] Statutory Coverage

The California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Actⁿ¹ is intended to ensure that entities engaged in assembling and evaluating information on consumers for employment, insurance, and housing purposes do so fairly, impartially, and with respect for the consumer's privacy.ⁿ² An investigative consumer report is a consumer report in which information on a consumer's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, or mode of living is obtained through any means.ⁿ³ The term does not include a consumer report or other compilation of information that is limited to specific factual information relating to a consumer's credit record or manner of obtaining credit directly from a creditor or from a consumer reporting agency, when that information was obtained directly from a potential or existing creditor of the consumer or from the consumer.ⁿ⁴ The collection and dissemination of information limited to a consumer's credit record is covered by the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act,ⁿ⁵ which is discussed in § 50.13.

An investigative consumer reporting agency includes any person who, for monetary fees or dues, engages in the practice of collecting, assembling, evaluating, compiling, reporting, transmitting, transferring, or communicating information concerning consumers for the purposes of furnishing investigative consumer reports to third parties, but does not include any governmental agency whose records are maintained primarily for traffic safety, law enforcement, or licensing purposes, or any licensed insurance agent, insurance broker, or solicitor, insurer, or life insurance agent.ⁿ⁶

The provisions of the federal Fair Credit Reporting Actⁿ⁷ overlap in many respects with the California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act.ⁿ⁸ An employer who requests or receives and uses a "investigative consumer report" from a "consumer reporting agency," as those terms are defined by the federal statute,ⁿ⁹ is subject to the federal provisions relating to users of such reports,ⁿ¹⁰ as well as to the California provisions. When both are applicable, the federal provisions supersede the state provisions to the extent that they are inconsistent.ⁿ¹¹ However, state law generally is not considered "inconsistent" if it goes further than the federal act in protecting the consumer, as long as compliance with state law would not result in a violation of the federal law.ⁿ¹² For discussion of the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act, see § 50.14.

[2] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[a] Limits on Employer's Right to Request Preparation of Report

An employer who intends to use consumer information for employment purposes other than suspicion of wrongdoing or misconduct¹³ by the subject of the investigation may procure an investigative consumer report or cause the report to be made, only if all of the following apply:¹⁴

1. The employer procuring the report has a permissible purpose, as defined in the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act.¹⁵
2. The employer provides a clear and conspicuous disclosure in writing to the consumer (employee) at any time before the employer procures the report in a document consisting solely of the disclosure, that includes the following information:
 - a. A statement that an investigative consumer report may be obtained;
 - b. The permissible purpose of the report is identified;
 - c. A statement that the disclosure may include information on the consumer's (employee's) character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living;
 - d. The name, address, and telephone number of the investigative consumer reporting agency conducting the investigation;
 - e. Notification in writing of the nature and scope of the investigation requested, including a summary of the provisions of Civ. Code § 1786.22, which specifies conditions under which a consumer may inspect the file.
3. The consumer (employee) has authorized the procurement of the report in writing.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Many employers mistakenly assume symmetry between the disclosure obligations under federal and state fair credit reporting statutes. The requirements, however, are materially different. The California rules require that employers make use of one set of disclosure forms in this state and a separate set of disclosure forms in all other states, except those that may have their own distinctive fair credit reporting procedures. Employers' counsel should carefully and thoroughly review their clients' California disclosure obligations. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Further, the employer must certify to the agency that proper disclosures have been made.¹⁶

The notification requirement applies to investigations both prior to and during employment.¹⁷

[b] Disclosure and Scope of Report

The agency must disclose the recipients of any investigative consumer report on the applicant or employee that the agency has furnished for employment or insurance purposes within the three-year period preceding the request, and for any other purpose, within the three-year period preceding the request.¹⁸

The report may not contain any of the following types of information:¹⁹

1. Bankruptcies that, from the date of adjudication, predate the report by more than 10 years;
2. Suits that, from the date of filing, and satisfied judgments that, from the date of entry, predate the report by more than seven years;
3. Unsatisfied judgments that, from the date of entry, predate the report by more than seven years;
4. Unlawful detainer actions when the defendant was the prevailing party or the action is resolved by settlement agreement;
5. Paid tax liens that, from the date of payment, predate the report by more than seven years;
6. Accounts placed for collection or charged to profit and loss that predate the report by more than seven years; or
7. Records of arrest, indictment, information, misdemeanor complaint, or conviction of a crime that, from the date of disposition, release, or parole, predate the report by more than seven years. (These items of information may no longer be reported if at any time it is learned that, in the case of a conviction, a full pardon has been granted, or, in the case of an arrest, indictment, information, or misdemeanor complaint a conviction did not result.ⁿ²⁰ However, records of arrest, indictment, information, and misdemeanor complaints may be reported pending pronouncement of judgment on the particular subject matter of those records.)

Additionally, the report may not contain any other adverse information predating the report by more than seven years.ⁿ²¹ However, the prohibition on reporting the listed types of adverse information does not apply if the report is to be used by an employer explicitly required by a governmental regulatory agency to check for records prohibited by Civil Code Section 1786.18(a) when the employer is reviewing a consumer's qualification for employment.ⁿ²²

Every investigative consumer reporting agency is required to maintain reasonable procedures to avoid disclosure of prohibited information and to limit furnishing of reports to permitted purposes such as use for employment purposes.ⁿ²³ To that end, procedures mandated by the act impose on employers certain identification and certification requirements. Thus, agencies must require users of their reports to identify themselves, certify the purposes for which the information is sought and that the information will be used for no other purposes, and certify that the requisite disclosures have been made.ⁿ²⁴ The agency must make a reasonable effort to verify the identity of employers who are new prospective users of an agency's reports and the uses certified by such employers before the agency may lawfully furnish the reports.ⁿ²⁵

An agency may not make an inquiry in order to prepare an investigative consumer report for employment purposes if the inquiry by an employer or prospective employer would violate any applicable federal or state equal employment opportunity law or regulation.ⁿ²⁶

[c] Employer's Collection of Information in Lieu of Report

Any person who collects, assembles, evaluates, compiles, reports, transmits, transfers, or communicates information on a consumer's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, or mode of living for employment purposes, which are records documenting an arrest, indictment, conviction, civil judicial action, tax lien, or outstanding judgment,ⁿ²⁷ in lieu of using the services of an investigative consumer reporting agency, must provide a copy of the related public record to the consumer within seven days after receipt of the information, regardless of whether the information is received in a written or oral form.ⁿ²⁸ An employer that obtains such records or information must provide on any job application form or any other written form a box that, if checked by the consumer, permits the consumer to waive his or her right to receive a copy of any public record obtained pursuant to Civil Code Section 1786.53.ⁿ²⁹

If an employer obtains a public record for the purpose of conducting an investigation for suspicion of wrongdoing or misconduct by the subject of the investigation, the employer may withhold the information until completion of the investigation. Upon completion, however, the employer must provide a copy of the public record, unless the consumer waived his or her rights.ⁿ³⁰ If an employer takes any adverse actionⁿ³¹ as a result of receiving this information, the employer must provide the consumer with a copy of the public record, regardless of whether the consumer waived his or her rights.ⁿ³² However, nothing in Civil Code Section 1786.53(a) or (b) requires an employer to provide the same information to a consumer on more than one occasion.ⁿ³³ Further, nothing in the California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Actⁿ³⁴ is intended to modify Labor Code Section 1198.5 or existing law concerning information obtained by an employer or employment agency without the use of the services of an investigative consumer reporting agency for employment reference checks, background investigations, credential verifications, or employee investigations, except as provided in Civil Code Section 1786.53; and nothing in the Act is intended to change or supersede existing law related to privileged attorney-client communications or attorney work product, or require the production or disclosure of that information.ⁿ³⁵

[3] Method of Enforcement

[a] Right to Maintain Action

An employer who fails to comply with any requirement of the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act is liable to the person who is the subject of the report.ⁿ³⁶ The plaintiff may bring suit in any appropriate court of competent jurisdiction for actual damages or $10,000, whichever is greater.ⁿ³⁷ A successful plaintiff may also recover court costs and a reasonable attorney's fee as determined by the court.ⁿ³⁸ Additionally, if the court determines that the violation was grossly negligent or willful, the court may assess punitive damages.ⁿ³⁹ No damages are recoverable if the failure to comply with the act results in a more favorable report than if there had been no failure to comply.ⁿ⁴⁰

The action to enforce liability under the act must be brought within two years of the date of discovery.ⁿ⁴¹

If a suit is pending against the employer under the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act,ⁿ⁴² no suit may be brought under the California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act for the same act or omission.ⁿ⁴³ Further, entry of a final judgment against the employer in an action under the Fair Credit Reporting Actⁿ⁴⁴ is a bar to the maintenance of any action based on the same act or omission that might be brought under the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act.ⁿ⁴⁵ For discussion of the Fair Credit Reporting Act, see § 50.14.

The remedy afforded by the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act does not preclude the employee from suing the employer under a common law invasion of privacy or defamation theory.ⁿ⁴⁶ For discussion of actions for invasion of privacy, see § 50.31. For discussion of actions for defamation, see Chapters 51 and 63.

An employer may not be held liable to a plaintiff for a failure to comply with the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act if its failure to comply results in a more favorable report than if there had not been a failure to comply.ⁿ⁴⁷

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

As the discussion of the California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act indicates, literal compliance with the terms of the statute will not necessarily free an employer from privacy-related lawsuits filed by applicants and employees.ⁿ⁴⁸ First, a consumer report may contain information regarding arrests. As discussed previously, however,ⁿ⁴⁹ California Labor Code section 432.7 bars employers (with limited exceptions) from "seek[ing] from any source whatsoever" any "information concerning an arrest or detention which did not result in conviction."ⁿ⁵⁰

The tension between these two statutes is clear and requires most employers who wish to secure consumer reports to seriously consider instructing their consumer reporting agencies not to furnish arrest information of any kind. Also, a consumer report necessarily will contain information regarding the financial condition of an applicant or employee. Employers should be aware that in the absence of a showing of business necessity, an applicant or employee may be able to file an action under EEO laws alleging that consideration of financial information has an unlawful adverse impact on certain minorities protected under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964ⁿ⁵¹ and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act.ⁿ⁵² For discussion of potential discrimination claims, see Chapters 40 and 41. Finally, maintenance of consumer reports in a manner that may easily result in their disclosure to persons who have no business reason to know their contents may potentially subject an employer to a constitutional or common law action for invasion of privacy. Optimally, consumer reports should be kept in a locked cabinet, separate from the regular personnel file, to ensure against unintended disclosures. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[b] FORM--Complaint for Damages for Failure to Comply With Requirements of Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

[i] Comment

The form set forth in [ii], below, is for use by an employee against an employer that has failed to comply with one or more of the requirements of the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act.ⁿ⁵³ For discussion of such actions, see [a], above.

In an action against an employer under the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act, the complaint must allege the following:

1. Either that an employer-employee relationship exists between the plaintiff and the defendant or that the plaintiff applied for employment with the defendant;
2. That the defendant procured or caused to be prepared an investigative consumer report concerning the plaintiff; and
3. That the defendant failed to comply with one or more of the requirements of the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act.

An employer's failure to comply may consist of a failure to notify the plaintiff, at any time before the report is procured, that an investigative consumer report regarding the plaintiff's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living was being made, together with the name and address of the investigative consumer reporting agency making the report.ⁿ⁵⁴

The form contains an optional allegation for use when bringing a class action (Paragraph 4).

[ii] Form Complaint for Damages for Failure to Comply With Requirements of Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.12

_____ [name(s)], [On Behalf of)
Himself/Herself/Themselves and All Others Similarly)	NO. _____
Situated,])	COMPLAINT AGAINST EMPLOYER FOR DAM-
Plaintiff(s),)	AGES FOR VIOLATION OF INVESTIGATIVE vs.)	CONSUMER REPORTING AGENCIES ACT
_____ [name],)	[Civ. Code § 1786.50]
Defendant.)

Plaintiff(s) allege(s):

1. [Capacity, residence of defendant. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 1].

[2. Where acts complained of occurred. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 2.]

3. [Relationship of parties. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 3].

[4. Plaintiff(s) bring(s) this action on his/her/their own behalf and on behalf of all persons similarly situated. The class that plaintiff(s) represent(s) is composed of _____ (specify facts from which class can be determined). The persons in the class are so numerous (consisting of approximately _____ individuals) that the joinder of all such persons is impracticable and the disposition of their claims in a class action is a benefit to the parties and to the court. There is a well-defined community of interest in the questions of law and fact involved that affect the parties to be represented, in that _____ (specify common issues to be litigated). Proof of a common or single state of facts will establish the right of each member of the class to recover. The _____ (plaintiff's or plaintiffs') claims are typical of those of the class and plaintiff(s) will fairly and adequately represent(s) the interests of the class. There is no plain, speedy, or adequate remedy other than by maintenance of this class action, since plaintiff(s) _____ (is or are) informed and believe(s) that the damage to each plaintiff is relatively small (in that _____ (specify type and amount of damage)). Consequently there would be a failure of justice but for the maintenance of the present class action.]

5. _____ [Allege facts showing application of Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act, e.g., Prior to his/her/its decision _____ (specify employment decision, e.g., whether to hire plaintiff or whether to terminate plaintiff's employment), defendant caused to be prepared, for his/her/its use in making that decision, an investigative consumer credit report concerning plaintiff's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living. (This report was prepared by (defendant) _____ (name of investigative consumer credit reporting agency), and a copy of the report is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and incorporated herein by reference)].

6. _____ [Allege defendant's violation of Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act, e.g., Defendant notified plaintiff that such a report was to be prepared, but failed and refused to disclose to plaintiff the name of the investigative consumer reporting agency conducting the investigation and further failed to include in its notification a summary of the provisions of the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act, Civil Code Section 1786.22, as required by Civil Code Section 1786.16(a)(2). (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that) (W)hen, on or about _____ (date), defendant _____ (specify adverse action, e.g., declined to hire plaintiff or terminated plaintiff's employment), defendant failed to advise plaintiff _____ (name) that defendant's decision was based wholly or in part on the investigative consumer report and failed to supply plaintiff with the name and address of the investigative consumer reporting agency making the report.]

[7. As a proximate result of the acts alleged herein, plaintiff(s) suffered severe mental anguish and emotional (and physical) distress, and plaintiff(s) (has or have) been injured in mind (and body) as follows: _____ (describe injuries), all to _____ (plaintiff's or plaintiffs') damage (in the sum of $ _____).]

[8. As a further proximate result of the acts alleged herein, plaintiff(s) _____ (was or were) required to and did employ _____ (specify medical professionals, e.g., physicians and psychotherapists) to examine, treat, and care for him/her/them and incurred medical expenses _____ (in the approximate amount of $ _____ or in an amount that has not yet been ascertained). (Plaintiff(s) _____ (is or are) informed and believe(s) and thereon allege(s) that he/she/they will incur some additional medical expenses, the exact amount of which is presently unknown.)]

[9. By reason of the acts alleged herein, plaintiff(s) _____ (was or were) prevented from attending to his/her/their usual _____ (occupation or profession) and thereby lost earnings (in the amount of $ _____). (Plaintiff(s) _____ (is or are) informed and believe(s) and thereon allege(s) that he/she/they will thereby be prevented from attending to his/her/their usual _____ (occupation or profession) for an additional period in the future that he/she/they cannot now ascertain and will thereby sustain further loss of earnings.)]

[10. Unless action is brought as class action, allege: Pursuant to Civil Code Section 1786.50(a)(1), _____ [each] plaintiff is entitled to recover (the greater of his/her/their actual damages as previously alleged herein or) statutory damages in the amount of $10,000.]

[11. If punitive damages sought, allege: Defendant's actions herein alleged were done _____ (willfully and knowingly in violation of the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act or with gross negligence and in complete disregard of its duty to comply with the requirements of the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act). Plaintiff(s) therefore request(s) that the court assess punitive damages against defendant pursuant to Civil Code Section 1786.50(b).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff(s) pray(s) for judgment as follows:

[EITHER, if a class action]

1. For actual damages [in the sum of $ _____], as herein alleged;

[OR, in all other cases]

1. For actual damages [in the sum of $ _____], as herein alleged, or statutory damages in the sum of $3,500 per plaintiff, whichever is greater.

[CONTINUE]

[2. For an award of punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and deter similar improper conduct by others;]

3. For reasonable attorney's fees pursuant to Civil Code Section 1786.50(a)(2);

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and
5. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff(s)

[Add verification, if desired (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5).]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawPreemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Civ. Code §§ 1786 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Civ. Code § 1786.

(n3)Footnote 3. Civ. Code § 1786.2(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Civ. Code § 1786.2(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Civ. Code §§ 1785.1 et seq., effective July 1, 1998.

(n6)Footnote 6. Civ. Code § 1786.2(d) (term does not include governmental agencies whose records are maintained primarily for traffic safety, law enforcement, or licensing purposes, or any licensed insurance agent, insurance broker, solicitor, insurer, or life insurance agent); but see Civ. Code § 1786.54 (act does not apply to any investigative consumer report that is limited to disclosures from public records relating to land and land titles or to any person whose records are maintained primarily to report portions of public records imparting constructive notice under law of matters relating to land and land titles).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.

(n8)Footnote 8. Compare, e.g., 15 U.S.C. § 1681c (information that may not be included in "consumer report" under federal act) with Civ. Code § 1786.18 (information that may not be included in "investigative consumer report" under state law).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(d), (e), (f).

(n10)Footnote 10. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681d, 1681m.

(n11)Footnote 11. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681t.

(n12)Footnote 12. Credit Data of Arizona, Inc. v. State of Arizona (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 195, 198 ; see 15 U.S.C. § 1681t(a), (d)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(2), (c).

(n14)Footnote 14. Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(2).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Civ. Code § 1786.12.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(4); see also Civ. Code § 1786.16(b).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Civ. Code § 1786.2(f).

(n18)Footnote 18. Civ. Code § 1786.10(c).

(n19)Footnote 19. Civ. Code § 1786.18(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Lab. Code § 432.7(a) (no employer may seek from any source, or use as factor in determining any condition of employment, information relating to employee's or applicant's arrests not leading to conviction), discussed in § 50.11.

(n21)Footnote 21. Civ. Code § 1786.18(a)(8).

(n22)Footnote 22. Civ. Code § 1786.18(b)(2).

(n23)Footnote 23. Civ. Code § 1786.20(a); see Civ. Code § 1786.12, 1786.18.

(n24)Footnote 24. Civ. Code § 1786.20(a); see Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(4); see also [a], above.

(n25)Footnote 25. Civ. Code § 1786.20(a).

(n26)Footnote 26. Civ. Code § 1786.20(c).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Civ. Code § 1786.53(a)(3).

(n28)Footnote 28. Civ. Code § 1786.53(a), (b)(1).

(n29)Footnote 29. Civ. Code § 1786.53(b)(2).

(n30)Footnote 30. Civ. Code § 1786.53(b)(3).

(n31)Footnote 31. See Civ. Code § 1786.53(a)(1).

(n32)Footnote 32. Civ. Code § 1786.53(b)(4).

(n33)Footnote 33. Civ. Code § 1786.53(c).

(n34)Footnote 34. Civ. Code § 1786 et seq.

(n35)Footnote 35. Civ. Code § 1786.55.

(n36)Footnote 36. Civ. Code § 1786.50.

(n37)Footnote 37. Civ. Code §§ 1786.50(a)(1), 1786.52.

(n38)Footnote 38. Civ. Code § 1786.50(a)(2).

(n39)Footnote 39. Civ. Code § 1786.50(b).

(n40)Footnote 40. Civ. Code § 1786.50(c).

(n41)Footnote 41. Civ. Code § 1786.52.

(n42)Footnote 42. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.

(n43)Footnote 43. Civ. Code § 1786.52(a).

(n44)Footnote 44. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n, 1681o.

(n45)Footnote 45. Civ. Code § 1786.52(b).

(n46)Footnote 46. Civ. Code § 1786.52.

(n47)Footnote 47. Civ. Code § 1786.50(c).

(n48)Footnote 48. See Civ. Code § 1786.52.

(n49)Footnote 49. See discussion in § 50.11.

(n50)Footnote 50. See Lab. Code § 432.7(a).

(n51)Footnote 51. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2000e-17.

(n52)Footnote 52. See Gov. Code §§ 12900-12996.

(n53)Footnote 53. Civ. Code §§ 1786-1786.56; see [2], above.

(n54)Footnote 54. See Civ. Code § 1786.16(a)(2).

8 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.13

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.13 Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act

[1] Statutory Coverage

The Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Actⁿ¹ is designed to insure that consumer credit reporting agencies exercise their responsibilities for assembling and evaluating consumer credit and other information on consumers with fairness, impartiality, and respect for the consumer's privacy by requiring such agencies to comply with certain requirements regarding confidentiality, accuracy, relevancy, and proper use of information gathered by such agencies.ⁿ²

A consumer credit report, as defined by the act, includes any written, oral, or other communication of any information by a consumer credit reporting agency bearing on a consumer's credit worthiness, credit standing, or credit capacity, which is used or collected in whole or in part to serve as a factor in establishing the consumer's eligibility for, among other purposes, employment.ⁿ³ As used in the act, a consumer credit report prepared for "employment purposes" means a report used for the purpose of evaluating a consumer for employment, promotion, reassignment, or retention as an employee.ⁿ⁴

Not included in the definition is any report containing information solely on a consumer's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, or mode of living that is obtained through personal interviews with neighbors, friends, or associates of the consumer or others with whom the consumer is acquainted or who may have knowledge concerning any such items of information.ⁿ⁵ Such reports are governed by the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act, discussed in § 50.12.ⁿ⁶ The definition of consumer credit report also does not include the following: (1) a report (or communication) regarding solely the transactions between the consumer and the person making the report; (2) a communication of credit application information internal within the reporting organization (if it is conspicuously disclosed by specified means that the information may be provided); (3) any authorization or approval of a specific extension of credit by the issuer of a credit card or similar device; (4) any report by a person conveying a decision whether to make a specific extension of credit in response to a request by a third party, if certain conditions are satisfied; (5) a communication about a consumer regarding a credit transaction not initiated by the consumer, between persons affiliated by common ownership or common corporate control,ⁿ⁷ if either person has complied with the requirements concerning a prequalifying report,ⁿ⁸ and the consumer has consented in writing to the provision and the use of the prequalifying report; and (6) a consumer credit report regarding an extension of credit solely for a commercial purpose.

The Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act does not apply to reports prepared by licensed private investigators unless employed directly by a consumer credit reporting agency.ⁿ⁹

The provisions of the federal Fair Credit Reporting Actⁿ¹⁰ overlap in many respects with the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act.ⁿ¹¹ An employer who requests or receives and uses a "consumer report" from a "consumer reporting agency," as those terms are defined by the federal statute,ⁿ¹² is subject to the federal provisions relating to users of those reports,ⁿ¹³ as well as to the California provisions. When both are applicable, the federal provisions supersede the state provisions to the extent that they are inconsistent.ⁿ¹⁴ However, state law generally is not considered "inconsistent" if it goes further than the federal act in protecting the consumer, as long as compliance with state law would not result in a violation of the federal law.ⁿ¹⁵ For discussion of the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act, see § 50.14.

[2] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[a] Limits on Employer's Right to Request Preparation of Report

An employer who intends to use the information for employment purposes may obtain a consumer credit report.ⁿ¹⁶ However, before requesting a consumer credit report for employment purposes, the user of the report must provide written notice to the person involved. The notice must inform the person that a report will be used and the source of the report, and must contain a box that the person may check off to receive a copy of the credit report. If the consumer indicates that he or she wishes to receive a copy of the report, the user must request that a copy be provided to the person when the user requests its copy from the credit reporting agency. The report to the user and to the subject person must be provided contemporaneously and at no charge to the subject person.ⁿ¹⁷ In addition, the employer may, in its discretion, notify the applicant or employee that on request the employer will contact the agency and ask it to investigate the current status of an item or items of information contained in the report if the consumer disputes the completeness or accuracy of information as provided to the employer.ⁿ¹⁸

A consumer may elect to place a security freeze on a credit report by making a request in writing by mail to a consumer credit reporting agency. "Security freeze" means a notice placed in a consumer's credit report at the consumer's request prohibiting the consumer credit reporting agency from releasing the consumer's credit report or any information from it without the express authorization of the consumer. When a security freeze is in place, the agency cannot release information from the credit report to a third party without prior express authorization from the consumer, but the agency can advise the third party that a security freeze is in effect.^{n18.1} If a consumer requests a security freeze, the agency must disclose both the process of placing and temporarily lifting a freeze and the process for allowing access to information from the report for a specific party or period of time while the freeze is in place.^{n18.2}

The agency must place a security freeze on a consumer's credit report no later than three business days after receiving a written request from the consumer,^{n18.3} send written confirmation of the security freeze to the consumer within ten business days, and provide the consumer with a unique personal identification number or password to be used by the consumer for providing authorization for the release of the credit report for a specific party or period of time.^{n18.4} A security freeze remains in place until the consumer, upon presentation of proper identification and any unique identification number or password, requests that it be removed. The agency must remove the security freeze within three business days of receiving any such request.^{n18.5}

If the consumer wishes to allow the credit report to be accessed by a specific party or during a period of time while a freeze is in place, the consumer must contact the consumer credit reporting agency and request that the freeze be temporarily lifted by providing specified information, including the unique personal identification number or password provided by the credit reporting agency.^{n18.6} When a consumer credit reporting agency receives a request from a consumer to temporarily lift a freeze on a credit report, it must comply no later than three business days after receiving the request.^{n18.7} If an employer requests access to a consumer credit report on which a security freeze is in effect and the applicant does not allow the employer access to the credit report, the employer may treat the application as incomplete.^{n18.8}

Regardless of the existence of a security freeze, a consumer reporting agency may disclose public record information lawfully obtained by, or for, the consumer reporting agency from an open public record to the extent otherwise permitted by law. This does not prohibit a consumer reporting agency from electing to apply a valid security freeze to the entire contents of a credit report.^{n18.9}

[b] Scope of Report

The report may not contain any of the following items of information:ⁿ¹⁹

1. Bankruptcies that, from the date of adjudication, predate the report by more than ten years;ⁿ²⁰
2. Suits and judgments that, from the date of entry or renewal, predate the report by more than seven years or until the governing statute of limitations has expired, whichever period is longer;
3. Unlawful detainer actions, unless the lessor was the prevailing party;ⁿ²¹
4. Paid tax liens that, from the date of payment, predate the report by more than seven years;
5. Accounts placed for collection or charged to profit and loss that predate the report by more than seven years;ⁿ²³
6. Records of arrest, indictment, information, misdemeanor complaint, or conviction of a crime that, from the date of disposition, release, or parole, predate the report by more than seven years. These items of information must not be included in the report if at any time it is learned that, in the case of a conviction, a full pardon has been granted, or in the case of an arrest, indictment, information, or misdemeanor complaint, a conviction did not result.ⁿ²⁴

In addition, there are two, general limitations on the inclusion of other adverse information in a report. First, the report may not contain any adverse information predating the report by more than seven years.ⁿ²⁵ Second, the report may not include any adverse information concerning a consumer predating the report by more than ten years, or which otherwise is prohibited from being included in the report.ⁿ²⁶

A reporting agency may not furnish medical information for employment purposes without the consumer's consent.ⁿ²⁷ Also, a consumer reporting agency must include any information regarding the consumer's failure to pay overdue child or spousal support pursuant to the statewide automated reporting procedures,ⁿ²⁸ or reports by other federal, state, or local governmental agencies.ⁿ²⁹

Every consumer credit reporting agency is required to maintain reasonable procedures to avoid disclosure of prohibited information and to limit furnishing of reports to permitted purposes such as use for employment purposes.ⁿ³⁰ To that end, procedures mandated by the act impose on employers certain identification and certification requirements. For example, agencies must require users of their reports to identify themselves, certify the purposes for which the information is sought, and certify that the information will be used for no other purposes.ⁿ³¹ The agency must make a reasonable effort to verify the identity of employers who are new prospective users of an agency's reports and the uses certified by such employers before the agency may furnish the reports.ⁿ³² No consumer credit reporting agency may furnish a report to any person unless the agency has reasonable grounds for believing that the report will be used for proper purposes;^{n32.1} the agency lacks reasonable grounds unless specific requirements are satisfied.^{n32.2} No consumer credit reporting agency may prohibit any user of the report from disclosing the contents to the consumer, if adverse actionⁿ³³ may be taken, based in whole or in part on the report.ⁿ³⁴ Disclosure in this context is not a basis for liabilityⁿ³⁵ of the consumer credit reporting agency or the user for violation of the provisions of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act.ⁿ³⁶

[c] Limit on Employer's Use of Report

If any person takes "adverse action" against any consumer, based in whole or in part on any information contained in a consumer credit report, that person must comply with certain procedures.ⁿ³⁷ "Adverse action" is defined in part as any denial of employment, or any other decision made for employment purposes that adversely affects any current or prospective employee.ⁿ³⁸ An employer to which this provision applies must do all of the following:ⁿ³⁹

1. Provide written notice of the adverse action to the consumer;
2. Provide the consumer with the name, address, and telephone number of the consumer credit reporting agency that furnished the report to the employer;
3. Provide a statement that the credit grantor's decision to take adverse action was based in whole or in part on information contained in a consumer credit report; and
4. Provide the consumer with a written notice of the rights of the consumer to receive a free copy of the report,ⁿ⁴⁰ and to dispute the accuracy or completeness of the report.ⁿ⁴¹

The employer cannot be held liable for a violation of this requirement if he or she shows, by a preponderance of the evidence, that at the time of the alleged violation he or she maintained reasonable procedures to assure compliance.ⁿ⁴²

[d] Obligations of Furnishers and Resellers of Credit Information

[i] Persons Who Regularly Furnish Credit Information

A person is prohibited from furnishing information on a specific transaction or experience to any consumer credit reporting agency, with the knowledge that the information is incomplete or inaccurate.ⁿ⁴³ A person who, in the ordinary course of business, routinely furnishes information about the person's own transactions with the consumer must notify the consumer credit reporting agency of any incomplete or inaccurate information, and provide the agency with the appropriate corrections.ⁿ⁴⁴ The person may not furnish information that is subject to a continuing dispute with the affected consumer, without including a notice to that effect.ⁿ⁴⁵ Special notification requirements apply if the information concerns an open-end credit account,ⁿ⁴⁶ or if the account in question is delinquent.ⁿ⁴⁷

If the consumer disputes the completeness or accuracy of information, the person furnishing the credit information must comply with certain investigation procedures.ⁿ⁴⁸ The furnisher of information to a consumer credit reporting agency is liable for failure to comply with its obligations, unless it establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that it maintained reasonable procedures for compliance at the relevant time.ⁿ⁴⁹

[ii] Creditors

A creditor may submit negative credit information concerning a consumer to a consumer credit reporting agency only if the creditor notifies the consumer affected. After providing this notice, a creditorⁿ⁵⁰ may submit additional information to a credit reporting agency respecting the same transaction or extension of credit that gave rise to the original negative credit information without providing additional notice.ⁿ⁵¹

The notice must be in writing and must be delivered in person or mailed first class, postage prepaid, to the party's last known address, prior to or within 30 days after the transmission of the negative credit information.ⁿ⁵² The notice may be part of any notice of default, billing statement, or other correspondence, and must contain substantially the following language:ⁿ⁵³ "As required by law, you are hereby notified that a negative credit report reflecting on your credit record may be submitted to a credit reporting agency if you fail to fulfill the terms of your credit obligations."

A creditor is liable for failure to provide the required notice, unless it establishes, by a preponderance of the evidence, that at the time of that failure to give notice the creditor maintained reasonable procedures for compliance.ⁿ⁵⁴

[iii] Persons Who Resell Credit Reports

A person may not procure a consumer credit report for the purpose of reselling the report, or any information in it, unless the person discloses to the consumer credit reporting agency issuing the report the identity of the ultimate end user and each permissible purpose for which the report is furnished.ⁿ⁵⁵

A person who procures a consumer credit report for the purpose of reselling the report or any information in it must comply with specified procedures to ensure use of the information for a permissible purpose.ⁿ⁵⁶

[3] Methods of Enforcement

[a] Procedure for Correction of Information

Consumer credit reporting agencies are required to allow any consumer to visually inspect all files regarding such consumer on request and proper identification, during normal business hours and on reasonable notice.ⁿ⁵⁷ Additionally, the consumer has the right to request and receive a copy of the file in written form.ⁿ⁵⁸ The consumer also has the right to receive on request a record of all inquiries within the previous twelve months, not initiated by the consumer, for which information was provided concerning a credit transaction, and a list of the recipients, including end users,ⁿ⁵⁹ of any report furnished for employment purposes within the previous two years.ⁿ⁶⁰ The consumer has a right to receive a record of all inquiries in the previous 12 months.^{n60.1} Additionally, the consumer will be able to request from the credit reporting agency his or her credit score, key factors which determined that score, and other related information.^{n60.2} A credit score is a score derived from one of a variety of credit scoring models.^{n60.3}

If the consumer disputes the completeness or accuracy of any item of information contained in the file and conveys the dispute to the agency, the agency must, within a reasonable period of time and without charge, reinvestigate and record the current status of the disputed information.ⁿ⁶¹ The agency must do so before the end of the 30-business-day period beginning on the date the agency receives notice of the dispute from the consumer or user, unless it has reasonable grounds to believe and determines that the dispute is frivolous or irrelevant.ⁿ⁶² Grounds for this belief include the consumer's failure to provide sufficient information that was requested by the agency to investigate the dispute.ⁿ⁶³ Unless the agency determines that the dispute is frivolous or irrelevant, before the end of the five-business-day period beginning on the date the agency receives notice of dispute, the agency must notify any person who provided information in the dispute at the address and in the manner specified by the person.^{n63.1} A consumer credit reporting agency may require that disputes by consumers be in writing.ⁿ⁶⁴

In its reinvestigation, the consumer credit reporting agency must review and consider all relevant information submitted by the consumer. If it determines that the dispute is frivolous or irrelevant, the agency must notify the consumer by mail, or other authorized means, within five business days that it is terminating its reinvestigation, stating the specific reasons for its finding.ⁿ⁶⁵ If the disputed item is found to be missing, inaccurate, or can no longer be verified by the evidence submitted, the agency must promptly add, correct, or delete the information from the file.ⁿ⁶⁶

After information is deleted according to this procedure, it may not be reinserted in a consumer's file unless the person furnishing the information certifies that it is accurate. If the information is reinserted, the agency must promptly notify the consumer in writing, or by any other means authorized by the consumer for that purpose. Further, within five business days after reinserting the information, the agency must provide the consumer the following items in writing:n67

1. A statement that the disputed information has been reinserted.
2. A notice that the agency will provide the consumer, within 15 days of a request, the name, address, and telephone number of the furnisher of the reinserted information.
3. The toll-free telephone number the consumer can use to obtain the name, address, and telephone number of the furnisher of the reinserted information.
4. A notice that the consumer has a right to a reinvestigation of the reinserted information and to add a statement disputing the accuracy or completeness of the information.

The consumer credit reporting agency must notify the consumer in writing of the results of any reinvestigation within five days. The notice must include the following items:n68

- (1) A statement that the reinvestigation is completed;
- (2) A consumer credit report that is based on the consumer's file as that file is revised as a result of the reinvestigation;
- (3) A description or indication of any changes made in the consumer credit report as a result of those revisions to the consumer's file, a description of any changes made or sought by the consumer that were not made, and an explanation why they were not made;
- (4) A notice that, if requested by the consumer, a description of the procedure used to determine the accuracy and completeness of the information shall be provided to the consumer by the consumer credit reporting agency, including the name, business address, and telephone number of any furnisher of information contacted in connection with that information;
- (5) A notice that the consumer has the right to add a statement to the consumer's file disputing the accuracy or completeness of the information;
- (6) A notice that the consumer has the right to request that the consumer credit reporting agency furnish notifications under subdivision (h);
- (7) A notice that the dispute will remain on file with the agency as long as the credit information is used; and
- (8) A statement about the details of the dispute will be furnished to any recipient as long as the credit information is retained in the agency's.

The agency must provide this notice not later than 15 days after receiving a request from the consumer.n68.1 This procedure is not required if the agency deletes the disputed information within three business days of receiving notice of the dispute and notifies the consumer of the deletion within five business days after the deletion.n68.2

If the dispute is found to be frivolous or irrelevant, or remains unresolved, or if the information is reinserted, the consumer may file a brief statement setting forth the nature of the dispute, which must be included in future reports provided by the agency.ⁿ⁶⁹

If after reinvestigation, the disputed information is deleted, or the information is reinserted but the consumer has provided a statement of dispute,ⁿ⁷⁰ on the consumer's request, the agency must furnish notification of that fact to any specifically designated person who has, within the previous two years, received a credit report concerning the consumer for employment purposes.ⁿ⁷¹

If information in a consumer's file has been deleted, the consumer credit reporting agency must maintain reasonable procedures designed to prevent the information's reinsertion in the file.ⁿ⁷²

If a consumer submits a copy of a valid police report or Department of Motor Vehicles investigative report filed pursuant to Penal Code § 530.5 to a credit reporting agency, the agency must promptly and permanently block reporting any information that the consumer alleges appears on the credit report as a result of a violation of that section, so that the information cannot be reported. The agency must promptly notify the furnisher of the information that the information has been blocked.^{n72.1}

[b] Action for Damages

An applicant or employee who suffers damages as a result of the employer's negligent violation of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act may bring an action against the employer in a court of competent jurisdiction to recover actual damages, including court costs, loss of wages, attorney's fees, and when applicable, pain and suffering.ⁿ⁷³ For a willful violation, the plaintiff may recover actual damages--as for a negligent violation--as well as punitive damages of not less than $100 or more than $5,000 for each violation, as the court deems proper, and any other relief the court deems proper.ⁿ⁷⁴ Injunctive relief is available to any consumer aggrieved by a violation or threatened violation of the Act, whether or not the person seeks any other remedy for the violation.ⁿ⁷⁵ In addition, a consumer who is awarded actual damagesⁿ⁷⁶ against a natural person who obtained a consumer credit report under false pretenses, or knowingly without a permissible purpose, must be awarded an amount not less than $2,500.ⁿ⁷⁷

If a class action is brought under the act, any defendant who has willfully violated any requirement of the act may be liable for punitive damages in the amount the court allows.ⁿ⁷⁸ In determining the amount of the award in a class action, the court must consider among the relevant factors the amount of any actual damages awarded, the frequency of the violations, the violator's resources, and the number of persons adversely affected by the defendant's conduct.ⁿ⁷⁹

The prevailing party in any action is entitled to court costs and reasonable attorney's fees, unless the plaintiff seeks and obtains only injunctive relief to compel compliance with the Act. If the plaintiff seeks and obtains only injunctive relief, court costs and attorney's fees will be awarded pursuant to the general procedures for such awards in cases affecting matters of public interest.ⁿ⁸⁰ However, if the plaintiff brings an action against a debt collector^{n80.1} and the basis for the action is related to the collection of a debt, whether those issues are raised in the same or another proceeding, the debt collector will be entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees if the court finds that the action was not brought in good faith.^{n80.2}

In addition to damages (or any other remedy provided by law), a consumer may seek civil penalties against any person who knowingly and willfully obtains access to a file or obtains data from a file other than as provided under Civil Code Section 1785.11,ⁿ⁸¹ or who uses the data from a file in violation of an agreement with the consumer reporting agency.ⁿ⁸² This remedy is also available against the person or entity responsible for the file accessed.ⁿ⁸³ A successful plaintiff is entitled to costs and reasonable attorney's fees.ⁿ⁸⁴

The action to enforce liability under the Act generally must be brought within two years from the date the plaintiff knew of, or should have known of, the violation of the Act, but no more than seven years from the earliest date on which liability could have arisen. However, if a defendant has materially and willfully misrepresented any information required under the Act to be disclosed to a consumer, and that information is material to the establishment of the defendant's liability, the action may be brought at any time within two years after the consumer discovers the misrepresentation.ⁿ⁸⁵

If a suit is pending against the employer under the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act,ⁿ⁸⁶ no suit may be brought under the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act for the same act or omission.ⁿ⁸⁷ Further, entry of a final judgment against the employer in an action under the Fair Credit Reporting Actⁿ⁸⁸ is a bar to the maintenance of any action based on the same act or omission that might be brought under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act.ⁿ⁸⁹

The remedy provided by the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act is exclusive of all other remedies in the nature of defamation, invasion of privacy, and negligence that the applicant or employee might otherwise have against the employer (or the agency) with respect to information disclosed under the act,ⁿ⁹⁰ except in regard to false information furnished with malice or willful intent to injure the applicant or employee.ⁿ⁹¹

[c] FORM--Complaint for Damages for Violation of Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act

[i] Comment

The form set forth in [ii], below, is for use by an employee against an employer that has violated any of the requirements of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act.ⁿ⁹² For discussion of civil actions under the act, see [b], above.

In an action against an employer under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act, the complaint must allege the following:ⁿ⁹³

1. Either that an employer-employee relationship exists between the plaintiff and the defendant or that the plaintiff applied for employment with the defendant;
2. That the defendant procured or caused to be prepared a consumer credit report concerning the plaintiff; and
3. That the defendant violated the act.

An employer's violation of the act would most likely consist of a failure to notify the plaintiff that it adversely decided an employment question (such as hiring, termination, or promotion) concerning plaintiff, in whole or in part, because of information contained in a consumer credit report, and to provide the required notice.ⁿ⁹⁴ The required notice must include the name and address of the agency making the report, the telephone number of the agency, and an enumeration of the consumer's rights, such as the right to dispute the accuracy or completenessⁿ⁹⁵ of the report.ⁿ⁹⁶

The form provides for an optional allegation appropriate to a class action (Paragraph 4).

[ii] Form Complaint for Damages for Violation of Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name(s)],	)
[On Behalf of Himself/Herself/Themselves and All	)	NO. _____
Others Similarly Situated,] Plaintiff(s), vs.	)	COMPLAINT AGAINST EMPLOYER FOR DAM-
_____ [name],	)	AGES FOR VIOLATION OF CONSUMER CREDIT
Defendant.	)	REPORTING AGENCIES ACT

Plaintiff(s) allege(s):

1. [Capacity, residence of defendant. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 1].
- [2. Where acts complained of occurred. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 2.]
3. [Relationship of parties. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 3].
- [4. Class action allegations, if appropriate. See Form in § 50.12[3][b][ii], Paragraph 4.]
5. _____ [Allege facts showing application of Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act, e.g., Prior to his/her/its decision _____ (specify adverse action regarding employment decision, e.g., whether to hire plaintiff or whether to terminate plaintiff's employment), defendant caused to be prepared, for his/her/its use in making that decision, a consumer credit report concerning plaintiff's credit worthiness, credit standing, and credit capacity. (The report was prepared by _____ (name of agency), and a copy of the report is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and incorporated herein by reference)].
6. _____ [Allege defendant's violation of Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act, e.g., (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that) (W)hen, on or about _____ (date), defendant _____ (specify adverse action, e.g., declined to hire plaintiff or terminated plaintiff's employment), defendant failed to _____ (specify, e.g., provide plaintiff with the name, address, and telephone number of the consumer credit reporting agency making the report or provide plaintiff with written notice of the right to obtain a free copy of the report within 60 days or other requirement enumerated under Civ. Code § 1785.20(a)). Defendant has willfully continued to refuse to supply plaintiff with such information, in violation of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act, Civil Code Sections 1785.20(a) and 1785.20.5].
- [7. Defendant's actions herein alleged were done willfully and knowingly in violation of the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act.]
8. [General damage allegation. See Form in § 50.12[3][b][ii] (Paragraph 8)].
- [9. Medical expense allegation. See Form in § 50.12[3][b][ii] (Paragraph 9).]
- [10. Lost earnings allegation. See Form in § 50.12[3][b][ii] (Paragraph 10).]
- [11. Allege the following if appropriate, to establish entitlement to minimum amount of $2,500 in actual damages: Defendant _____ (name) is a natural person who obtained a consumer credit report under false pretenses and/or knowingly without a permissible purpose.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff(s) pray(s) for judgment as follows:

1. For actual damages [in the sum of $_____];
- [2. For medical and related expenses (_____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof));]
- [3. For lost earnings, past and future(, _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof));]
- [4. For punitive damages pursuant to Civil Code Section 1785.31(a)(2)(B), in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct;]
5. For reasonable attorney's fees pursuant to Civil Code Section 1785.31(a)(1) and (d);
6. For costs of suit herein incurred; and
7. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Add verification, if desired (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5).]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Banking LawConsumer ProtectionFair Credit ReportingConsumer ReportsLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawPreemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq., effective July 1, 1998.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Civ. Code § 1785.1(b), (c), (d). In addition, any person who, for monetary fees, dues, or on a cooperative nonprofit basis, regularly engages in whole or in part in the practice of assembling, evaluating, or disseminating information on the checking account experiences of consumer customers of banks or other financial institutions is subject to the same laws that govern consumer credit reporting agencies. Civ. Code § 1785.5, effective until January 1, 2003. Effective January 1, 2003, Civ. Code § 1785.5 provides that any person who, for monetary fees, dues, or on a cooperative nonprofit basis, regularly engages in whole or in part in the practices of assembling, evaluating, or disseminating information on the checking account experiences of consumer customers of banks or other financial institutions is, with the exception of compliance with the requirements of Civ. Code § 1785.10(c)-(e), only with regard to the provision of the address and telephone number, shall be subject to the same laws which govern consumer credit reporting agencies.

(n3)Footnote 3. Civ. Code § 1785.3(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Civ. Code § 1785.3(f).

(n5)Footnote 5. Civ. Code § 1785.3(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Civ. Code § 1786.2(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Corp. Code §§ 150, 160.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Civ. Code § 1785.20.1(b)(2).

(n9)Footnote 9. Civ. Code § 1785.4; see Civ. Code § 1785.35 (Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act does not apply to any consumer credit report that is limited to disclosures from public records relating to land and land titles or to any person whose records are maintained primarily to report portions of public records imparting constructive notice under law of matters relating to land and land titles).

(n10)Footnote 10. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.

(n11)Footnote 11. Compare, e.g., 15 U.S.C. § 1681c (information that may not be included in "consumer report" under federal act) with Civ. Code § 1785.13 (information that may not be included in "consumer credit report" under state law).

(n12)Footnote 12. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(d), (f).

(n13)Footnote 13. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681b, 1681d, 1681m.

(n14)Footnote 14. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681t.

(n15)Footnote 15. Credit Data of Arizona, Inc. v. State of Arizona (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 195, 198 ; see 15 U.S.C. § 1681t(a).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Civ. Code § 1785.11(a)(3)(B).

(n17)Footnote 17. Civ. Code § 1785.20.5(a).

(n18)Footnote 18. Civ. Code § 1785.21(a).

(n19)Footnote 18.1. Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(a).

(n20)Footnote 18.2. Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(i).

(n21)Footnote 18.3. Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(b).

(n22)Footnote 18.4. Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(c).

(n23)Footnote 18.5. Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(j).

(n24)Footnote 18.6. Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(d).

(n25)Footnote 18.7. Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(e).

(n26)Footnote 18.8. Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(h).

(n27)Footnote 18.9. Civ. Code § 1785.11.2(n).

(n28)Footnote 19. Civ. Code § 1785.13(a).

(n29)Footnote 20. Any information in a consumer credit report regarding a bankruptcy must designate the chapter of the federal bankruptcy law pursuant to which the bankruptcy proceeding was filed, if ascertainable from information provided. Civ. Code § 1785.13(c).

(n30)Footnote 21. For this purpose, the lessor is deemed to be the prevailing party only if final judgment was awarded to the lessor on entry of the tenant's default, on the granting of the lessor's motion for summary judgment, or following trial, or if the action was resolved by a written settlement agreement between the parties that states that the unlawful detainer action may be reported. In any other instance in which the action is resolved by settlement agreement, the lessor is not deemed to be the prevailing party for this purpose. Civ. Code § 1785.13(a)(3).

(n31)Footnote 22. [Reserved]

(n32)Footnote 23. The commencement of the seven-year limitation period is governed by Civ. Code § 1785.13(b).

(n33)Footnote 24. See Lab. Code § 432.7(a) (no employer may seek from any source, or use as a factor in determining any condition of employment, information relating to employee's or applicant's arrests not leading to conviction), discussed in § 50.11.

(n34)Footnote 25. Civ. Code § 1785.13(a)(7). The commencement of the seven-year limitation period is governed by Civ. Code § 1785.13(b).

(n35)Footnote 26. Civ. Code § 1785.13(d)

(n36)Footnote 27. Civ. Code § 1785.13(f).

(n37)Footnote 28. See Fam. Code § 4701.

(n38)Footnote 29. Civ. Code § 1785.13(g).

(n39)Footnote 30. Civ. Code § 1785.14(a); see Civ. Code § 1785.11, 1785.13.

(n40)Footnote 31. Civ. Code § 1785.14(a).

(n41)Footnote 32. Civ. Code § 1785.14(a).

(n42)Footnote 32.1. Civ. Code § 1785.14(a); see Civ. Code § 1785.11.

(n43)Footnote 32.2. See Civ. Code § 1785.14(a)(1)-(3).

(n44)Footnote 33. See Civ. Code § 1785.3(a)(2) (denial of employment or other employment decision constitutes adverse action).

(n45)Footnote 34. Civ. Code § 1785.14(c).

(n46)Footnote 35. See Civ. Code § 1785.31.

(n47)Footnote 36. Civ. Code § 1785.14(c).

(n48)Footnote 37. Civ. Code § 1785.20(a).

(n49)Footnote 38. See Civ. Code § 1785.3(a)(2).

(n50)Footnote 39. Civ. Code § 1785.20(a).

(n51)Footnote 40. See Civ. Code § 1785.20(a)(4)(A).

(n52)Footnote 41. See Civ. Code § 1785.20(a)(4)(B); see also Civ. Code § 1785.6 (notices and disclosures to consumers under Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act required only as to consumers who have mailing addresses in California).

(n53)Footnote 42. Civ. Code §§ 1785.20(c), 1785.20.5(b).

(n54)Footnote 43. Civ. Code § 1785.25(a).

(n55)Footnote 44. See Civ. Code § 1785.25(b).

(n56)Footnote 45. See Civ. Code § 1785.25(c).

(n57)Footnote 46. See Civ. Code § 1785.25(d).

(n58)Footnote 47. See Civ. Code § 1785.25(e).

(n59)Footnote 48. See Civ. Code § 1785.25(f).

(n60)Footnote 49. See Civ. Code § 1785.25(g).

(n61)Footnote 50. "Creditor" includes an agent or assignee of a creditor. Civ. Code § 1785.26(a)(1).

(n62)Footnote 51. Civ. Code § 1785.26(b).

(n63)Footnote 52. Civ. Code § 1785.26(c); see Civ. Code § 1785.6 (notices and disclosures to consumers under Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act required only as to consumers who have mailing addresses in California).

(n64)Footnote 53. Civ. Code § 1785.26(c). There is no authorization to use this notice with respect to a violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1592 et seq.; Civ. Code § 1785.26(c)(4).

(n65)Footnote 54. Civ. Code § 1785.26(d).

(n66)Footnote 55. Civ. Code § 1785.22(a).

(n67)Footnote 56. See Civ. Code § 1785.22(b).

(n68)Footnote 57. Civ. Code §§ 1785.10(a), 1785.15(a).

(n69)Footnote 58. Civ. Code §§ 1785.10(a), 1785.15(a).

(n70)Footnote 59. See Civ. Code § 1785.15.

(n71)Footnote 60. Civ. Code § 1785.15(a)(4)(A).

(n72)Footnote 60.1. Civ. Code § 1785.10(d)(1)(B).

(n73)Footnote 60.2. Civ. Code § 1785.15(a)(2).

(n74)Footnote 60.3. See Civ. Code §§ 1785.15.1; 1785.15.2.

(n75)Footnote 61. Civ. Code § 1785.16(a).

(n76)Footnote 62. Civ. Code § 1785.16(a).

(n77)Footnote 63. Civ. Code § 1785.16(a).

(n78)Footnote 63.1. Civ. Code § 1786.15(a).

(n79)Footnote 64. Civ. Code § 1785.16(a).

(n80)Footnote 65. Civ. Code § 1785.16(b); see Civ. Code § 1785.16(f) (consumer may file brief statement).

(n81)Footnote 66. Civ. Code § 1785.16(b).

(n82)Footnote 67. Civ. Code § 1785.16(c).

(n83)Footnote 68. Civ. Code § 1785.16(d).

(n84)Footnote 68.1. Civ. Code § 1785.16(d).

(n85)Footnote 68.2. See Civ. Code § 1785.16(j); see also Civ. Code § 1785.6 (notices and disclosures to consumers under Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act required only as to consumers who have mailing addresses in California).

(n86)Footnote 69. Civ. Code § 1785.16(f), (g). This procedure is not required if the agency deletes disputed information within three days. see Civ. Code § 1785.16(j).

(n87)Footnote 70. See Civ. Code § 1785.16(f).

(n88)Footnote 71. Civ. Code § 1785.16(h).

(n89)Footnote 72. Civ. Code § 1785.16(i).

(n90)Footnote 72.1. Civ. Code § 1785.16(k) (grounds for unblocking blocked information).

(n91)Footnote 73. Civ. Code §§ 1785.31(a)(1), 1785.33.

(n92)Footnote 74. Civ. Code § 1785.31(a)(2).

(n93)Footnote 75. Civ. Code § 1785.31(b).

(n94)Footnote 76. See Civ. Code § 1785.31(a)(1), (2)(A).

(n95)Footnote 77. Civ. Code § 1785.31(a)(3).

(n96)Footnote 78. Civ. Code § 1785.31(c).

(n97)Footnote 79. Civ. Code § 1785.31(c).

(n98)Footnote 80. Civ. Code § 1785.31(d), (f); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5.

(n99)Footnote 80.1. See Civ. Code § 1788.2 (definition).

(n100)Footnote 80.2. Civ. Code § 1785.31(e).

(n101)Footnote 81. See Civ. Code § 1785.11 (procedure for furnishing consumer credit report).

(n102)Footnote 82. See Civ. Code § 1785.19(a).

(n103)Footnote 83. Civ. Code § 1785.19(a).

(n104)Footnote 84. Civ. Code § 1785.19(b).

(n105)Footnote 85. Civ. Code § 1785.33.

(n106)Footnote 86. 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq. For discussion of Fair Credit Reporting Act, see § 50.14.

(n107)Footnote 87. Civ. Code § 1785.34(a).

(n108)Footnote 88. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n, 1681o.

(n109)Footnote 89. Civ. Code § 1785.34(b).

(n110)Footnote 90. See Civ. Code §§ 1785.10 (inspection of files by consumer), 1785.15 (agency's supplying of files and information to consumer), 1785.20 (notice of adverse action based on report).

(n111)Footnote 91. Civ. Code § 1785.32. For discussion of actions for common law invasion of privacy, see § 50.31[1]. For discussion of actions for defamation, see chs. 51 and 63.

(n112)Footnote 92. Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq.; see discussion in [2], above.

(n113)Footnote 93. See Civ. Code §§ 1785.20(a), 1785.20.5, 1785.31.

(n114)Footnote 94. See Civ. Code §§ 1785.20(a), 1785.20.5.

(n115)Footnote 95. See Civ. Code § 1785.16.

(n116)Footnote 96. Civ. Code § 1785.20(a).

9 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.14

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.14 Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act

[1] Coverage

[a] Scope of Act

The federal Fair Credit Reporting Actⁿ¹ is designed to ensure that consumer credit reporting agencies exercise their responsibilities for assembling and evaluating consumer credit and other information on consumers with fairness, impartiality, and respect for consumers' privacy.ⁿ² The act requires consumer credit reporting agencies to adopt procedures for meeting the needs of employers (and other permissible users) for personnel information in a manner that is fair and equitable to the consumer, with regard to the confidentiality, accuracy, relevancy, and proper use of the information in accordance with the requirements of the act.ⁿ³

A "consumer report," as defined by the act, is any written, oral, or other communication of any information by a consumer reporting agency bearing on a consumer's credit worthiness, credit standing, credit capacity, character, general reputation, personal characteristics, or mode of living that is used or expected to be used or collected, in whole or in part, to serve as a factor in establishing the consumer's eligibility for, among other things, employment purposes.ⁿ⁴ However, the term "consumer report" does not include any communication made to a prospective employer for the purpose of procuring an employee or procuring an opportunity for a person to work for the employer, if (1) the communication is made by a person who regularly performs such procurement, and (2) the communication will not be used for any purpose other than the procurement of an employee or employment. If the communication may be used for other purposes, and the communication otherwise qualifies as a consumer report, it will be treated as a consumer report unless the person making the communication obtains the consumer's consent to the communication and complies with certain other requirements concerning notice and disclosure to the consumer.ⁿ⁵ The term "consumer report" also does not include a communication to an employer if each of the following is true:^{n5.1}

- But for 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(d)(2)(D), the communication would be a consumer report.
- It was made to an employer in connection with an investigation of either suspected misconduct relating to employment or of compliance with federal, state, or local laws and regulations, the rules of a self-regulatory organization,^{n5.2} or any preexisting written policies of the employer.

- It was not made for the purpose of investigating a consumer's credit worthiness, credit standing, or credit capacity.

- It was not provided to any person except the employer or an agent of the employer; any federal or state officer, agency, or department, or any officer, agency, or department of a unit of general local government; any self-regulatory organization with regulatory authority over the activities of the employer or employee; as otherwise required by law; or pursuant to 15 U.S.C. § 608.

Some courts have held that an insurance claim report prepared by an investigator for a workers' compensation adjuster does not constitute a "consumer report," on the ground that Congressional intent was to include only reports prepared to determine an applicant's eligibility for insurance, not information gathered to substantiate claims.ⁿ⁶

An "investigative consumer report," under the act, is a consumer report, or portion of a consumer report, in which information on a consumer's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, or mode of living is obtained through personal interviews with the consumer's neighbors, friends, or associates, or with others with whom the consumer is acquainted or who may have knowledge concerning any such items of information. An "investigative consumer report" does not include a report of specific factual information on a consumer's credit record obtained directly from a creditor of the consumer or from a consumer reporting agency when the information was obtained directly from a creditor of the consumer or from the consumer.ⁿ⁷ The use of a consumer report for "employment purposes" means the use of the report to evaluate a consumer for employment, promotion, reassignment, or retention as an employee.ⁿ⁸

A "consumer reporting agency," for purposes of the federal act, is any person (1) that, for monetary fees, dues, or on a cooperative nonprofit basis, regularly engages in whole or in part in the practice of assembling or evaluating consumer credit information or other information on consumers for the purpose of furnishing consumer reports to third parties, and (2) that uses any means or facility of interstate commerce for the purpose of preparing or furnishing consumer reports.ⁿ⁹ An employer who requests or receives and uses a consumer report from such an agency is thus subject to the federal provisions relating to users of such reports.ⁿ¹⁰

[b] State Law Generally Not Preempted

The provisions of the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act overlap in many respects with the California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Actⁿ¹¹ and the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act,ⁿ¹² which were discussed previously.ⁿ¹³ The federal act provides that except as specifically provided by the act,ⁿ¹⁴ it does not annul, alter, or exempt any person subject to the federal law from complying with any state law with respect to the collection, distribution, or use of any information on consumers for the prevention or mitigation of identity theft, except to the extent that those laws are inconsistent with any provision of the federal act, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency.ⁿ¹⁵ In interpreting this provision, the Ninth Circuit has held that a state law will not be considered "inconsistent" with the Fair Credit Reporting Act if it goes further than the federal act in protecting the consumer, as long as compliance with state law would not result in a violation of the federal law.ⁿ¹⁶ Therefore, as a practical matter, California employers will be required to comply with both laws, since the applicable California statutes are either identical to or more protective of the consumer than the federal act.

[c] Specific Preemptions of State Laws

The act does contain some specific preemptions of state law.ⁿ¹⁷ For example, the act preempts state laws imposing requirements concerning the duties of a person who takes adverse action (including any decision for employment purposes that adversely affects a current or prospective employee) based on a consumer report.ⁿ¹⁸ Under the federal act, such duties include notifying the consumer of (1) the adverse decision, (2) the consumer reporting agency that submitted the report, and (3) the consumer's right to obtain a copy of the report and to dispute the report.ⁿ¹⁹

Also, any state law taking effect after September 30, 1996, is preempted to the extent that it conflicts with the federal act's provisions prohibiting the inclusion in a report of certain adverse information that antedates the report.ⁿ²⁰

The federal act generally preempts state laws regulating the duties of persons who furnish information to consumer reporting agencies.ⁿ²¹ However, this preemption does not apply to the provision of the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (as of September 30, 1996) that prohibits any person from knowingly furnishing a consumer credit reporting agency with incomplete or inaccurate information on a specific transaction or experience.ⁿ²²ⁿ²³

[2] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[a] Limits on Employer's Right to Request Preparation of Report

An employer who intends to use the information for employment purposes may obtain a consumer report.ⁿ²⁴ A consumer reporting agency may furnish a consumer report for employment purposes only if the following conditions are satisfied:ⁿ²⁵

1. The employer certifies to the agency that (a) the employer has disclosed to the consumer that the report may be obtained,ⁿ²⁶ (b) that the employer will comply with the requirements of the Fair Credit Reporting Act if the employer takes adverse action based on the report,ⁿ²⁷ and (c) the information in the report will not be used in violation of any federal or state equal employment opportunity law or regulation; and
2. The agency includes with the report a summary of the consumer's rights under the Fair Credit Reporting Act.ⁿ²⁸

[b] Disclosures to Employee or Applicant; Consent to Procurement of Report

An employer may not procure or cause to be prepared a consumer report on an employee or applicant (the "consumer") unless both of the following conditions are satisfied:ⁿ²⁹

1. A clear and conspicuous disclosure has been made to the consumer at any time before the report is procured or caused to be procured, in a written document that consists solely of the disclosure, that a consumer report may be obtained for employment purposes; and
2. The consumer has authorized in writing the procurement of the report by the employer.

In addition, if the report or a portion of it will be an investigative consumer report,ⁿ³⁰ the employer must do the following:ⁿ³¹

1. Clearly and accurately disclose to the employee or applicant that an investigative consumer report, including information about character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living, may be made. The disclosure must be made in a writing that is mailed or delivered not later than three days after the report was first requested and that includes (a) a statement informing the employee or applicant of the right to request additional disclosure of the nature and scope of the investigation requested, and (b) a written summary of the employee or applicant's rights under the Fair Credit Reporting Act.ⁿ³² (form and content of summary prescribed by Federal Trade Commission); and

2. Certify to the consumer reporting agency that the required disclosures have been made to the employee or applicant and that the employer will provide additional information requested by the employee or applicant pursuant to the act.

If the employee or applicant requests the additional disclosure, the disclosure must be made in a writing mailed or delivered to the employee or applicant not later than five days after the later of the date the request was received from the consumer or the date that the report was first requested.ⁿ³³ As discussed in [1], above, some courts have held that an insurance claim report prepared by an investigator for a workers' compensation adjuster is not a "consumer report" that must be furnished to an employee who filed a claim.ⁿ³⁴

After taking any adverse action based in whole or in part on a communication that was made to an employer in connection with an investigation of either suspected misconduct relating to employment or of compliance with federal, state, or local laws and regulations, the rules of a self-regulatory organization, or any preexisting written policies of the employer,^{n34.1} the employer must disclose to the consumer a summary containing the nature and substance of the communication on which the adverse action was based, except that the sources of information acquired solely for use in preparing what would be an investigative consumer report but for 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(d)(2)(D) need not be disclosed.^{n34.2}

[c] Scope of Report

A consumer report for employment purposes may not contain any of the following items of information:ⁿ³⁵

1. Cases under Bankruptcy Code (Title 11 United States Code) or under the former federal Bankruptcy Act that, from the date of entry of the order for relief or the date of adjudication, predate the report by more than 10 years;
2. Civil suits, civil judgments, and records of arrestⁿ³⁶ that, from the date of entry, predate the report by more than seven years or until the governing statute of limitations has expired, whichever is the longer period;
3. Paid tax liens that, from the date of payment, predate the report by more than seven years;
4. Accounts placed for collection or charged to profit and loss that predate the report by more than seven years;
5. Any other adverse information that predates the report by more than seven years;ⁿ³⁷
6. The name, address, and telephone number of any medical information furnisher that has notified the agency of its status, unless the name, address, and telephone number are restricted or reported using codes that do not identify, or provide information sufficient to infer, the specific provider or the nature of such services, products, or devices to a person other than the consumer, or the report is being provided to an insurance company for a purpose relating to engaging in the business of insurance other than property and casualty insurance.^{n37.1}

The prohibition on reporting the foregoing kinds of adverse information other than information about a medical information furnisher,^{n37.2} unless the information is relevant to process or effect the employment or credit transaction and does not apply, however, if the report relates to the employment of an individual at an annual salary that equals, or may reasonably be expected to equal, $75,000 or more.ⁿ³⁸

A consumer reporting agency may not furnish for employment purposes a consumer report that includes medical information about the consumer, other than medical contact information treated in the manner required under 15 U.S.C. § 1681c(a)(6), unless the consumer consents to the furnishing of the report.ⁿ³⁹

Every consumer reporting agency is required to maintain reasonable procedures to avoid disclosure of prohibited information and to limit the furnishing of reports to permitted purposes such as use for employment purposes.ⁿ⁴⁰ To that end, procedures mandated by the act impose on employers certain identification and certification requirements. Agencies must require users of their reports to identify themselves, certify the purposes for which the information is sought, and certify that the information will be used for no other purposes.ⁿ⁴¹ An agency must make a reasonable effort to verify the identity of employers who are new prospective users of an agency's reports and the uses certified by such employers before the agency may furnish the reports.ⁿ⁴²

[d] Employer's Duties When Taking Adverse Action Based on Report

Before taking any adverse action based in whole or in part on the consumer report, an employer must provide the employee or applicant (the "consumer") a copy of the report and a written description of the consumer's rights under the Fair Credit Reporting Act.ⁿ⁴³ For purposes of the act, "adverse action" includes a denial of employment or any other decision for employment purposes that adversely affects any current or prospective employee.ⁿ⁴⁴

In addition, when adverse action is taken, the employer must provide the consumer with the following, either orally, in writing, or electronically:ⁿ⁴⁵

1. Notice of the adverse action;
2. The name, address, and telephone number of the consumer reporting agency that furnished the report, including a toll-free telephone number if the agency compiles and maintains files on a nationwide basis; and
3. A statement that the consumer reporting agency did not make the adverse action and is unable to provide the specific reasons for the adverse action.

The employer cannot be held liable for failing to provide the three foregoing items if the employer shows, by a preponderance of the evidence, that at the time of the alleged violation the employer maintained reasonable procedures to assure compliance.ⁿ⁴⁶

[3] Methods of Enforcement

[a] Criminal Penalties

Any employer who knowingly and willfully obtains information on an employee or applicant from a consumer reporting agency under false pretenses is subject to a fine, imprisonment for not more than two years, or both.ⁿ⁴⁷

[b] Civil Liability for Willful Noncompliance

An employer that willfully fails to comply with any requirement imposed under the Fair Credit Reporting Act with respect to any employee or applicant is liable to the aggrieved employee or applicant for the following amounts:ⁿ⁴⁸

1. The employee or applicant's actual damages. "Actual damages" recoverable under the Fair Credit Reporting Act include, generally, all elements of compensatory awards, and not merely pecuniary or out-of-pocket losses.ⁿ⁴⁹ Even if the employee or applicant cannot establish actual damages, the employer may nevertheless be held liable for damages of up to $1,000;

2. Punitive damages as the court may allow; and

3. In the case of a successful action to enforce any liability based on the employer's willful noncompliance, the costs of suit and reasonable attorney's fees as determined by the court.

The statutory provision authorizing recovery of punitive damages "as the court may allow" for willful noncompliance with the Fair Credit Reporting Act has been interpreted as a statutory codification of the court's duty to review excessive verdicts and to attempt to eliminate from the jury system emotion and prejudice, rather than a statement that the court alone must determine the punitive damage award.ⁿ⁵⁰

An employer who knowingly and willfully obtains information on an employee or applicant under false pretenses is liable for civil damages as well as the criminal penalties prescribed by the Fair Credit Reporting Act.ⁿ⁵¹

[c] Civil Liability for Knowing Noncompliance

Any employer who obtains a consumer report from a consumer reporting agency under false pretenses or knowingly without a permissible purpose is liable to the agency for the agency's actual damages or $1,000, whichever is greater.ⁿ⁵²

[d] Civil Liability for Negligent Noncompliance

An employer who negligently fails to comply with any requirement imposed under the Fair Credit Reporting Act with respect to an employee or applicant is liable to him or her in an amount equal to the sum of any actual damages he or she sustained as a result of the failure and, in a successful action to enforce such liability for negligent noncompliance, the costs of suit and reasonable attorney's fees as determined by the court.ⁿ⁵³

[e] Jurisdiction and Limitations Period

An action for damages for willful, knowing, or negligent noncompliance with the Fair Credit Reporting Act may be brought in any appropriate United States district court, without regard to the amount in controversy, or in any other court of competent jurisdiction.ⁿ⁵⁴ An appropriate state court is a "court of competent jurisdiction" within the meaning of the statute,ⁿ⁵⁵ and federal district courts have disagreed over the question whether a suit under the Fair Credit Reporting Act that is brought in a state court may be removed to a federal district court.ⁿ⁵⁶

An action for noncompliance with the Fair Credit Reporting Act must be brought not later than the earlier of 2 years after the date of discovery by the plaintiff of the violation that is the basis for liability or 5 years after the date on which the violation that is the basis for liability occurs.ⁿ⁵⁷

If an employee or applicant brings an action under the federal act, he or she will be precluded from bringing an action under the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Actⁿ⁵⁸ or the California Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Actⁿ⁵⁹ for the same act or omission.ⁿ⁶⁰

[f] FORM--Complaint for Damages for Failure to Comply With Requirements of Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act

[i] Comment

The form set forth in [ii], below, is for use by an employee or applicant against an employer in a civil action for violation of the Fair Credit Reporting Act.ⁿ⁶¹ For discussion of such actions, see [a]-[e], above.

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.14

In an action against an employer under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, the complaint must allege the following:

1. Either that an employer-employee relationship existed between the plaintiff and the defendant during the relevant time or that the plaintiff applied for employment with the defendant;
2. That the defendant procured or caused to be prepared a consumer credit report concerning the plaintiff; and
3. That the defendant negligently, knowingly, or willfully violated the act.ⁿ⁶²

The form provides for an optional allegation appropriate to a class action (Paragraph 4).

If the court finds that an unsuccessful complaint or any other unsuccessful pleading, motion or paper in connection with the action was filed in bad faith or for purposes of harassment, the court must award reasonable attorney's fees to the prevailing party.ⁿ⁶³

[ii] Form Complaint for Damages for Failure to Comply With Requirements of Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name(s)], [On Behalf of)
Himself/Herself/Themselves and All Others Similarly)	NO. _____
Situated,])	COMPLAINT AGAINST EMPLOYER FOR DAM-
Plaintiff(s),)	AGES FOR _____ [WILLFUL or vs.)	NEGLIGENT] VIOLATION OF FAIR CREDIT RE-
_____ [name],)	PORTING ACT
Defendant.)	[15 U.S.C. §§ _____ (1681n or 1681o), 1681p]

Plaintiff(s) allege(s):

1. [Capacity, residence of defendant. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 1].

[2. Where acts complained of occurred. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 2.]

3. [Relationship of parties. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 3].

[4. Class action allegations. See Form in § 50.12[3][b][ii], Paragraph 4.]

5. _____ [Allege facts showing application of Fair Credit Reporting Act, e.g., Prior to defendant's decision _____ (specify employment decision, e.g., whether to hire plaintiff or whether to terminate plaintiff's employment), defendant caused to be prepared, for his/her/its use in making that decision, an investigative consumer report concerning plaintiff's character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living].

6. _____ [Allege defendant's violation of Fair Credit Reporting Act, e.g., Defendant notified plaintiff that such a report was to be prepared, but failed to obtain plaintiff's written authorization for the report and refused to disclose to plaintiff the name of the agency conducting the investigation and further failed to include in its notification to plaintiff a statement informing plaintiff of his/her right to request additional disclosure of the nature and scope of the investigation requested. Furthermore, when, on or about _____ (date), defendant _____ (specify adverse action, e.g., declined to hire plaintiff or terminated plaintiff's employment), defendant failed to advise plaintiff that defendant's decision was based wholly or in part on the investigative consumer report and failed to supply plaintiff with the name and address of the reporting agency making the report. Defendant has (willfully) continued to fail to supply plaintiff with such information, in violation of the Fair Credit Reporting Act, Title 15 United States Code, sections 1681b(b), 1681d(a), and 1681m(a)].

7. [General damage allegation. See Form in § 50.12[3][b][ii] (Paragraph 7)].

[8. Medical expense allegation. See Form in § 50.12[3][b][ii] (Paragraph 8).]

[9. Lost earnings allegation. See Form in § 50.12[3][b][ii] (Paragraph 9).]

[10. If seeking punitive damages for willful violation, allege the following: Defendant's actions herein alleged were done willfully and knowingly in violation of the Fair Credit Reporting Act, in that _____ (specify facts showing willful violation).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff(s) pray(s) for judgment as follows:

1. For actual damages [in the sum of $_____];

[2. For medical and related expenses (_____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof));]

[3. For lost earnings, past and future(, _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof));]

[4. For an award of punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and to deter others from engaging in similar misconduct, pursuant to Title 15 United States Code, section 1681n(a)(2);]

5. For prejudgment interest on all amounts claimed;

6. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to Title 15 United States Code, section _____ [1681n or 1681o];

7. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

8. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff(s)

[Add verification, if desired (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5).]

[g] Administrative Enforcement

Compliance with the Fair Credit Reporting Act is also enforced under the Federal Trade Commission Act (FTCA) by the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) with respect to most consumer reporting agencies and users of consumer reports.ⁿ⁶⁴ Exceptions to the FTC's enforcement jurisdiction exist for (1) national banks, member banks of the Federal Reserve System, and banks insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation;ⁿ⁶⁵ (2) savings associations whose deposits are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation;ⁿ⁶⁶ (3) federal credit unions;ⁿ⁶⁷ (4) common carriers subject to Title 49 United States Code, Subtitle IV, regulating interstate commerce;ⁿ⁶⁸ (5) air carriers and foreign air carriers subject to the Federal Aviation Act of 1958;ⁿ⁶⁹ and (6) activities subject to the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921.ⁿ⁷⁰ Compliance with the Fair Credit Reporting Act by those entities is enforced by other federal agencies.ⁿ⁷¹

For purposes of administrative enforcement by the FTC, a violation of the Fair Credit Reporting Act constitutes an unfair or deceptive act or practice in commerce in violation of FTCA section 5(a)ⁿ⁷² and is subject to enforcement by the FTC under FTCA section 5(b)ⁿ⁷³ regardless of whether the violator is engaged in commerce or meets any other jurisdictional tests in the FTCA.ⁿ⁷⁴ The FTC has the procedural, investigative, and enforcement powers, including the power to require the filing of reports, the production of documents, and the appearance of witnesses, that it would have if the applicable provisions of the FTCA were a part of the Fair Credit Reporting Act.ⁿ⁷⁵ Any person violating the Fair Credit Reporting Act is subject to the penalties and entitled to the privileges and immunities provided in the FTCA, as if the applicable provisions were part of the Fair Credit Reporting Act.ⁿ⁷⁶

The Fair Credit Reporting Act also authorizes state agencies (1) to bring actions to enjoin violations of the act and (2) to sue on behalf of state residents to recover damages for violations of the act.ⁿ⁷⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Banking Law Consumer Protection Fair Credit Reporting Consumer Reports Civil Rights Law Contractual Relations & Housing Fair Housing Rights Credit & Mortgage Laws Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681(a)(3), (4).

(n3)Footnote 3. 15 U.S.C. § 1681(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(d)(1).

(n5)Footnote 5. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(d)(2)(D)(o).

(n6)Footnote 5.1. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(x)(1).

(n7)Footnote 5.2. For definition of "self-regulatory organization," see 16 U.S.C. § 1681a(x)(3).

(n8)Footnote 6. Kemp v. County of Orange (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1422, 1425-1427, 260 Cal. Rptr. 131 ; see Cochran v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (N.D. Ga. 1979) 472 F. Supp. 827, 831-832 (also noting that the FTC has determined that claims reports are not regulated by the act); but see Beresh v. Retail Credit Co. (C.D. Cal. 1973) 358

F. Supp. 260 (reaching the opposite conclusion, which Kemp declined to follow).

(n9)Footnote 7. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(e).

(n10)Footnote 8. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(h).

(n11)Footnote 9. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(f).

(n12)Footnote 10. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681d, 1681m; see also discussion in [2], below.

(n13)Footnote 11. See Civ. Code §§ 1786-1786.56.

(n14)Footnote 12. See Civ. Code §§ 1785.1-1785.35.

(n15)Footnote 13. See discussions in §§ 5.12, 5.13.

(n16)Footnote 14. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681t(b)-(d) (specific areas in which act preempts state law).

(n17)Footnote 15. 15 U.S.C. § 1681t.

(n18)Footnote 16. Credit Data of Arizona, Inc. v. State of Arizona (9th Cir. 1979) 602 F.2d 195, 198 .

(n19)Footnote 17. 15 U.S.C. § 1681t(b).

(n20)Footnote 18. 15 U.S.C. § 1681t(b)(1)(C); see 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681a(k)(1)(B)(ii), 1681m(a).

(n21)Footnote 19. 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(a).

(n22)Footnote 20. 15 U.S.C. § 1681t(b)(1)(E); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681c; see [2][c], below.

(n23)Footnote 21. 15 U.S.C. § 1681t(b)(1)(F).

(n24)Footnote 22. 15 U.S.C. § 1681t(b)(1)(F); see Civ. Code § 1785.25(a).

(n25)Footnote 23. [Reserved]

(n26)Footnote 24. 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(a)(3)(B).

(n27)Footnote 25. 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(b)(1).

(n28)Footnote 26. 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(b)(2); see [b], below.

(n29)Footnote 27. 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(b)(3); see [d], below.

(n30)Footnote 28. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681g(c)(3) (form and content of summary prescribed by Federal Trade Commission).

(n31)Footnote 29. 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(b)(2).

(n32)Footnote 30. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(e).

(n33)Footnote 31. 15 U.S.C. § 1681d(a).

(n34)Footnote 32. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681g(c)(3)

(n35)Footnote 33. 15 U.S.C. § 1681d(b).

(n36)Footnote 34. See Kemp v. County of Orange (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1422, 1425-1427, 260 Cal. Rptr. 131 ; but see Beresh v. Retail Credit Co. (C.D. Cal. 1973) 358 F. Supp. 260 (reaching the opposite conclusion, which Kemp declined to follow).

(n37)Footnote 34.1. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(x)(1); see § [1][a], above.

(n38)Footnote 34.2. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(x)(2).

(n39)Footnote 35. 15 U.S.C. § 1681c(a).

(n40)Footnote 36. Note that under California law, most employers are entirely prohibited from seeking or receiving from any source, or using as a factor in determining any condition of employment, information relating to an employee's or applicant's arrests not leading to conviction, regardless of how recent the arrest. Typically, the employer may ask only about arrests for which the employee is currently out on bail or own recognizance pending trial. see Lab. Code § 432.7(a); see also Civ. Code §§ 1785.13(a)(6), 1786.18(a)(7) (consumer credit reports and investigative consumer reports may not contain records of such arrests). For discussion of restrictions on receipt of information about employee arrests, see § 50.11.

(n41)Footnote 37. 15 U.S.C. § 1681c(a)(5).

(n42)Footnote 37.1. This addition to 15 U.S.C. § 1681c(a) is effective at the end of the 15-month period beginning on Dec. 4, 2003. Act Dec. 4, 2003, P.L. 108-159, Title IV, § 412(b), (c), 117 Stat. 2002 (effective at end of 15-month period beginning on enactment, as provided by § 412(g) of Act, which appears as 15 U.S.C. § 1681b note).

(n43)Footnote 37.2. This addition to 15 U.S.C. § 1681c(b) is effective at the end of the 15-month period beginning on Dec. 4, 2003. Act Dec. 4, 2003, P.L. 108-159, Title IV, § 412(b), (c), 117 Stat. 2002 (effective at end of 15-month period beginning on enactment, as provided by § 412(g) of Act, which appears as 15 U.S.C. § 1681b note).

(n44)Footnote 38. 15 U.S.C. § 1681c(b)(3).

(n45)Footnote 39. 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(g).

(n46)Footnote 40. 15 U.S.C. § 1681e(a).

(n47)Footnote 41. 15 U.S.C. § 1681e(a).

(n48)Footnote 42. 15 U.S.C. § 1681e(a).

(n49)Footnote 43. 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(b)(3); see 15 U.S.C. § 1681g(c)(3) (form and content of summary prescribed by Federal Trade Commission).

(n50)Footnote 44. 15 U.S.C. § 1681a(k)(1)(B)(ii).

(n51)Footnote 45. 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(a).

(n52)Footnote 46. 15 U.S.C. § 1681m(c).

(n53)Footnote 47. 15 U.S.C. § 1681q.

(n54)Footnote 48. 15 U.S.C. § 1681n(a).

(n55)Footnote 49. See Razor v. Retail Credit Co. (1976) 87 Wash. 2d 516, 554 P.2d 1041, 1049 .

(n56)Footnote 50. Collins v. Retail Credit Co. (E.D. Mich. 1976) 410 F. Supp. 924, 933 .

(n57)Footnote 51. Hansen v. Morgan (9th Cir. [Idaho] 1978) 582 F.2d 1214, 1217-1221 ; see 15 U.S.C. § 1681q (penalty for knowingly and willfully obtaining information on consumer from consumer reporting agency under false pretenses is fine, imprisonment for not more than two years, or both); see also [a], above.

(n58)Footnote 52. 15 U.S.C. § 1681n(b).

(n59)Footnote 53. 15 U.S.C. § 1681o(a).

(n60)Footnote 54. 15 U.S.C. § 1681p.

(n61)Footnote 55. See Ruth v. Westinghouse Credit Co., Inc. (W.D. Okla. 1974) 373 F. Supp. 468, 469 .

(n62)Footnote 56. Compare Haun v. Retail Credit Co. (W.D. Pa. 1976) 420 F. Supp. 859, 863-864 (holding that 15 U.S.C. § 1681p does not amount to prohibition against removal), with Ruth v. Westinghouse Credit Co., Inc. (W.D. Okla. 1974) 373 F. Supp. 468, 469-471 (holding suit not removable).

(n63)Footnote 57. 15 U.S.C. § 1681p.

(n64)Footnote 58. See Civ. Code §§ 1785.1-1785.13.

(n65)Footnote 59. See Civ. Code §§ 1786-1786.56.

(n66)Footnote 60. See Civ. Code §§ 1785.34, 1786.52; see also discussion in §§ 50.12[3][a], 50.13[3][b].

(n67)Footnote 61. 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq.

(n68)Footnote 62. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n(a), (b), 1681o(a). For discussion of the duties imposed on employers by the act, see [2], above.

(n69)Footnote 63. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681n(c), 1681o(b).

(n70)Footnote 64. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(a).

(n71)Footnote 65. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(b)(1); see 12 U.S.C. § 1818 (Federal Deposit Insurance Act § 8).

(n72)Footnote 66. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(b)(2); see 12 U.S.C. § 1818 (Federal Deposit Insurance Act § 8).

(n73)Footnote 67. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(b)(3); see 12 U.S.C. §§ 1751-1751k (Federal Credit Union Act).

(n74)Footnote 68. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(b)(4); see 49 U.S.C. §§ 10101-11917.

(n75)Footnote 69. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(b)(5); see generally 49 U.S.C. §§ 1301-1557 (Federal Aviation Act of 1958).

(n76)Footnote 70. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(b)(6); see generally 7 U.S.C. §§ 181-229 (Packers and Stockyards Act).

(n77)Footnote 71. See 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(b), (c).

(n78)Footnote 72. See 15 U.S.C. § 45(a).

(n79)Footnote 73. See 15 U.S.C. § 45(b).

(n80)Footnote 74. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(a).

(n81)Footnote 75. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(a).

(n82)Footnote 76. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(a).

(n83)Footnote 77. 15 U.S.C. § 1681s(c).

10 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.15

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.15 Fingerprints and Photographs

[1] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

Under California law, an employer may require, as a condition precedent to securing or retaining employment, fingerprints and photographs of applicants and employees for the employer's own use and information.ⁿ¹ Labor Code section 1051 provides, however, that with certain exceptions discussed below, any person (or his or her agent or officer) who requires fingerprints or photographs for the purpose of furnishing them, or information concerning them or concerning the employee or applicant, to any other employer or a third person when the photographs or fingerprints could be used to the employee's or applicant's detriment is guilty of a misdemeanor.ⁿ² An employer is also guilty of a misdemeanor if it knowingly causes or permits an agent, supervisor, manager, or employee to violate Labor Code section 1051 or fails to take all reasonable steps within its power to prevent such a violation.ⁿ³ The statute thus prohibits the employer from furnishing an applicant's or employee's fingerprints to a local law enforcement agency in order to obtain criminal offender information about him or her,ⁿ⁴ except in the limited situations described in [2] and [3], below. In addition to the criminal penalty provided for by Labor Code section 1051, a person who violates that section is liable to the aggrieved party in a civil action for treble damages.ⁿ⁵

[2] Employers Covered and Exempted

Banks and their affiliates, and savings and loan associations and their subsidiaries and their affiliates, may avail themselves of a limited statutory exemption from the operation of Labor Code sections 1051, 1052, and 1054.ⁿ⁶

Under the Financial Code, a savings and loan association, its subsidiary or affiliate, or any of its officers or employees may deliver fingerprints taken of a director, an officer, an employee, or an applicant for employment to local, state, or federal law enforcement agencies for the purpose of obtaining information about the existence and nature of a criminal record, if any, of the person fingerprinted relating to convictions, and to any arrest for which that person is released on bail or on his or her own recognizance pending trial, for the commission or attempted commission of a crime involving robbery, burglary, theft, embezzlement, fraud, forgery, bookmaking, receiving stolen property, counterfeiting, or involving checks or credit cards or using computers.ⁿ⁷ This provision applies notwithstanding Labor Code sections

1051, 1052, 1054 and Penal Code section 2947.n8 "Affiliate" for the purposes of this provision means any corporation controlling, controlled by, or under common control with, a savings association, whether directly, indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries.n9

The Department of Justice must, under Penal Code section 11105 (and a local agency may, under Penal Code section 13300), furnish to the officer of the savings and loan association or its subsidiary or affiliate responsible for the final decision regarding employment of the person fingerprinted, or to his or her designees having responsibilities for personnel or security decisions in the usual scope and course of their employment with the association, subsidiary, or affiliate summary criminal history information pursuant to the request.n10 If, on evaluation of the criminal history information received, the association, subsidiary, or affiliate determines that employment of the person fingerprinted would constitute an unreasonable risk to the association, subsidiary, or affiliate or its customers, the person fingerprinted may be denied employment.n11

The request for records must be made on the form approved by the Department of Justice and may not be submitted without the written consent of the person fingerprinted.n12 Any criminal history information obtained through this procedure is confidential, and recipients are prohibited from disclosing its contents other than for purposes for which it was acquired.n13

A similar provision applies to banks.n14 A bank or its affiliates, licensed under the laws of any state or of the United States, or any of its officers or employees, may deliver fingerprints taken of a director, an officer, an employee, or an applicant for employment to local, state, or federal law enforcement agencies for the same purposes.n15 An "affiliate" is any corporation controlling, controlled by, or under common control with, a bank, whether directly, indirectly, or through one or more intermediaries.n15.1 Additional provisions regarding request for summary criminal information to the Department of Justice by a bank and the confidentiality of criminal history information parallel those regarding a savings and loan association.n16 In addition, banks and their affiliates must submit to the Department of Justice fingerprint images and related information required by the Department of Justice of all directors, officers, employees, or an applicant for employment for the purpose of obtaining information regarding the existence and content of a record of state and federal convictions and also information regarding the existence and content of a record of state and federal arrests for which the Department of Justice establishes that the person is free on bail, or on his or her recognizance, pending trial or appeal.n16.1 When the Department of Justice receives a request for federal summary criminal history information, it must forward the request to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Once the information is received from the FBI, the Department of Justice reviews, compiles, and disseminates the information to the federally chartered bank or affiliate pursuant Penal Code section 11105(o)(1).n16.2 When the Department of Justice receives a request for federal summary criminal history information from a nonchartered bank, it must forward the request to the FBI. Once the information is received from the FBI, the Department of Justice will review and provide a fitness determination on an applicant for employment based on criminal convictions or on arrests for which the person is released on bail or on his or her recognizance pending trial for the commission or attempted commission of crimes specified in Finance Code § 550(a).n16.3 A bank or affiliate may request from the Department of Justice subsequent arrest notification servicen16.4 for directors, officers, employees or applicants for employment.n16.5 The Department of Justice will charge a fee sufficient to cover the cost of processing these requests.n16.6 Any criminal history information obtained pursuant to Fin. Code § 550 is confidential. No recipient may disclose its contents other than for the purpose for which it was acquired.n16.7

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Financial institutions that are covered by the provisions of Title 12, United States Code, Sections 1811-1832, relating to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), face difficult interpretive issues when, through fingerprinting or other means of investigation, they learn that a director, officer, or employee has been convicted of a criminal offense involving dishonesty or a breach of trust. Among the most difficult of these issues is how to treat a conviction that has occurred before a potential employee's date of hire, but that has been judicially dismissed or sealed.

Title 12, United States Code, Section 1829 provides that any person who has been convicted of any criminal offense involving dishonesty or a breach of trust may not, except with the prior written consent of the FDIC, own or control, become an institution-affiliated party, or otherwise participate, directly or indirectly, in any manner in the conduct of the affairs of an insured depository institution.ⁿ¹⁷

Furthermore, an insured depository institution may not permit such participation.ⁿ¹⁸ The statute also limits the FDIC's discretion to authorize such participation,ⁿ¹⁹ and provides federal criminal penalties for violations of its provisions.ⁿ²⁰

Penal Code Section 1203.4 pertains to the dismissal of felony convictions, Penal Code Section 1203.4a pertains to the dismissal of misdemeanor convictions, and Penal Code Section 1203.45 governs the sealing of records of misdemeanor convictions of persons below the age of 18 years.

A question arises whether these Penal Code sections operate to release a covered financial institution from being required to seek FDIC consent under Section 1829. Although the answer is not free from doubt, it is arguable that if a record is sealed pursuant to Penal Code Section 1203.45 before the date of hire, the financial institution could forgo seeking FDIC consent for hiring the new employee. By comparison, because Penal Code Sections 1203.4 and 1203.4a do not serve to seal the record or to treat the conviction as though it had never occurred, the requirements of Section 1829 would remain applicable. The important lesson is not to assume that the removal of state disabilities flowing from felony and misdemeanor convictions operates to eliminate federal obligations or to assume the legal equivalency of the many ways in which state courts may alter a felony or misdemeanor conviction history (such as by dismissing charges, expunging records, or sealing records). Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[3] Employees Covered and Exempted

Federal law extensively regulates the operations of investment management companies.ⁿ²¹ Labor Code section 1051's prohibition on furnishing fingerprints and photographs taken of applicants and employees to other employers and to third persons when the fingerprints and photographs could be used to the detriment of the applicant or employee does not apply to any employee of a diversified or nondiversified management company (as defined in Title 15 United States Code, section 80a-5), and the affiliates of such a company (as defined in Title 15 United States Code, sections 80a-2(a)(2) and 80a-2(a)(3)), who is required to be fingerprinted pursuant to federal law.ⁿ²²

It also appears that Labor Code section 1051 should not apply to any employee of a member of a national securities exchange, a securities broker or dealer, a registered transfer agent, or a registered clearing agency who is required to be fingerprinted pursuant to federal law.ⁿ²³ For discussion of fingerprint requirements under federal securities law, see [5], below.

[4] Methods of Enforcement

As previously mentioned, violation of Labor Code section 1051 by an employer, or an employer's officer or agent, is a misdemeanor.ⁿ²⁴ Furthermore, under Labor Code section 1052, any person who knowingly causes, suffers, or permits an agent, superintendent, manager, or employee in his or her employ to commit a violation of section 1051, or who fails to take all reasonable steps within his or her power to prevent such a violation, is guilty of a misdemeanor.ⁿ²⁵

In addition to the criminal penalty, any employer, or an employer's officer or agent, who violates Labor Code section 1051 or 1052 is liable to the aggrieved employee or applicant for treble damages in a civil action.ⁿ²⁶ An action for damages may be brought by the employee or applicant, or by his or her assignees or successors in interest, without first establishing criminal liability for the violation.ⁿ²⁷

The Labor Commissioner and Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) also have jurisdiction to enforce the provisions of Labor Code section 1051.ⁿ²⁸ For discussion of proceedings before the Labor Commissioner, see Chapter 5.

[5] Fingerprinting Required by Federal Securities Law

Every member of a national securities exchange, broker, dealer, registered securities transfer agent, and registered securities clearing agency must require each of its partners, directors, officers, and employees to be fingerprinted and must submit the fingerprints to the Attorney General of the United States for processing.ⁿ²⁹ However, the Securities and Exchange Commission may by rule exempt from this requirement, on specified terms, conditions, and for specified periods, any class of partners, directors, officers, or employees if it finds such an exemption not inconsistent with the public interest or the protection of investors.ⁿ³⁰ An employer who furnishes fingerprints to the Justice Department pursuant to this provision is arguably exempt from the requirements of Labor Code section 1051.ⁿ³¹

[6] Fingerprinting Required for Licensed Child Care Providers

All child day care facilities must obtain fingerprints of the following people before initial licensure or, after initial licensure, as a condition of employment, residence, or presence in the facility unless exempt: (1) adults responsible for administration or direct supervision of staff; (2) any non-child residing in the facility; (3) any person providing care and supervision to the children; and (4) any staff person, volunteer, or employee who has contact with the children.ⁿ³² Further, the licensee may require a criminal record clearance of any otherwise exempt individuals.ⁿ³³

The fingerprints must be submitted to the Department of Justice on a card supplied by the California Department of Social Services (DSS), along with a second set for an F.B.I. search, before the individual's employment, residence, or initial presence in the facility. The fingerprints are forwarded to the DSS for processing. Within 14 calendar days of receipt of the fingerprints, the Department of Justice will notify the DSS of the criminal record information; if no criminal record information is recorded, the Department of Justice will provide the licensee and the DSS with a statement of that clearance within 14 days of receipt.ⁿ³⁴ However, if the fingerprint check reveals a prior conviction of a sex offense against a minor, or conviction of Penal Code Sections 243.4, 273a, 273d, 273g, 368 or any felony, then the DSS will be notified and will in turn notify the licensee who must immediately terminate the person's employment, remove that person from the facility, or bar that person's entry to the facility.ⁿ³⁵ The DSS may subsequently grant an exemption.^{n35.1} If the conviction is for another crime except a minor traffic violation, the licensee must either immediately terminate the employment, remove the person from the child day care facility, or bar entry, or seek an exemption.ⁿ³⁶ The DSS will determine whether the individual may remain in the facility until a decision on the exemption is rendered.ⁿ³⁷ In addition, the DSS may issue an exemption on its own motion when the criminal history indicates that the person is of good character based on the age, seriousness, and frequency of the conviction(s).ⁿ³⁸ Concurrently with notifying the licensee, the DSS must also notify the affected individual of his or her right to seek an exemption, which is contingent on the licensee's terminating or removing that person from the facility after receiving notice from the DSS.ⁿ³⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Employee Privacy
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Employee Privacy
Disclosure of Employee Information
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Employee Privacy
Medical & Related Examinations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 10 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 19 (1947) ; see Lab. Code § 1051.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 1051.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 1052.

(n4)Footnote 4. 10 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 19 (1947) .

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 1054; see also discussion in [4], below.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fin. Code §§ 550, 6525.

(n7)Footnote 7. Fin. Code § 6525(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. Fin. Code § 6526(a); see Lab. Code § 432.7(a) (general prohibition against seeking arrest records does not apply to arrests for which employee or applicant is out on bail or own recognizance pending trial), discussed in § 50.11; see also Penal Code § 2947 (communication of felony conviction for purpose of depriving person of employment constitutes felony).

(n9)Footnote 9. Fin. Code § 6525(e).

(n10)Footnote 10. Fin. Code § 6525(b).

(n11)Footnote 11. Fin. Code § 6525(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. Fin. Code § 6525(c).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fin. Code § 6525(d).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Fin. Code § 550.

(n15)Footnote 15. See Fin. Code § 550(a).

(n16)Footnote 15.1. Fin. Code § 550(i).

(n17)Footnote 16. See Fin. Code § 550(b) (request to Department of Justice for summary criminal information history by officer of bank or affiliate), (h) (confidentiality of criminal history information).

(n18)Footnote 16.1. Fin. Code § 550(c).

(n19)Footnote 16.2. Fin. Code § 550(d).

(n20)Footnote 16.3. Fin. Code § 550(e).

(n21)Footnote 16.4. See Pen. Code § 11105.2.

(n22)Footnote 16.5. Fin. Code § 550(f).

(n23)Footnote 16.6. Fin. Code § 550(g).

(n24)Footnote 16.7. Fin. Code § 550(h).

(n25)Footnote 17. 12 U.S.C. § 1829(a)(1)(A).

(n26)Footnote 18. 12 U.S.C. § 1829(a)(1)(B).

(n27)Footnote 19. See 12 U.S.C. § 1829(a)(2).

(n28)Footnote 20. See 12 U.S.C. § 1829(b).

(n29)Footnote 21. See generally 15 U.S.C. § 80a-1 et seq.

(n30)Footnote 22. Lab. Code § 1057.

(n31)Footnote 23. See 15 U.S.C. § 78q(f)(2) (requiring fingerprinting of such employees); U.S. Const., Art. VI, cl. 2 (supremacy of federal law).

(n32)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 1051.

(n33)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 1052.

(n34)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 1054.

(n35)Footnote 27. Lab. Code § 1054.

(n36)Footnote 28. See Lab. Code §§ 95(a), 98(a).

(n37)Footnote 29. 15 U.S.C. § 78q(f)(2).

(n38)Footnote 30. 15 U.S.C. § 78q(f)(2).

(n39)Footnote 31. See generally U.S. Const., Art. VI, cl. 2 (supremacy of federal statutes over state laws).

(n40)Footnote 32. Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(a), (b)(1)(A)-(D), (c)(1) (following are exempt from fingerprinting requirements (1) the volunteer provides time-limited specialized services and is directly supervised by the licensee or employee with criminal record clearance or exemption, spends no more than 16 hours per week at facility, and is not left alone with children in care; (2) a student enrolled or participating at accredited educational institution directly supervised by the licensee or employee with criminal record clearance or exemption, facility has agreement with institution concerning student's placement, student spends no more than 16 hours per week at facility and is not left alone with children in care; (3) the volunteer is relative, legal guardian, or foster parent of child in care; (4) a contracted repair person retained by facility if not left alone with children; and any person similar to those described, as defined by the Department of Social Services in regulations); see Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(b)(1)(E)-(G) (requirements for entity applicants), (H), (I) (exemptions); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 101169(d)(13), 101170(b), (c).

(n41)Footnote 33. Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(b)(2).

(n42)Footnote 34. Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(c)(1)(A), (B), (h)(1).

(n43)Footnote 35. Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(c)(2).

(n44)Footnote 35.1. Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(c)(2); see Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(f).

(n45)Footnote 36. Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(c)(2); see Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(f).

(n46)Footnote 37. Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(c)(2).

(n47)Footnote 38. Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(c)(3); see Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(f).

(n48)Footnote 39. Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(c)(4); see Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(f).

11 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.16

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.16 Polygraph Examinations and Voice Stress Analysis

[1] State Law

[a] Polygraph Examinations

[i] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

Labor Code section 432.2 prohibits private employers from demanding or requiring that any employee or applicant for employment submit to a polygraph, lie detector, or similar examination as a condition of employment or continued employment.ⁿ¹ The statute also prohibits employers from requesting that any person take such a test, or administering such a test, without first advising the person in writing, at the time the test is to be administered, of the rights guaranteed by section 432.2.ⁿ²

If the employer requests, and if the applicant or employee voluntarily consents to take an examination that produces damaging facts, the employer may refuse to hire the applicant or may fire the employee without violating Labor Code section 432.2.ⁿ³ However, because of the ease of claiming duress and the difficulties of demonstrating voluntariness in the event of a dispute, employers should be extremely cautious in requesting polygraph tests. For example, a "request" that an applicant submit to a polygraph test as an alternative to more rigorous or lengthy types of screening may in fact be deemed to constitute a prohibited "demand" if an applicant who refuses the test is not further screened or considered for employment.ⁿ⁴ Moreover, as discussed in [2], below, federal law provides additional restrictions on the circumstances under which employers may request that employees submit to polygraph examinations.ⁿ⁵

[ii] Employers and Employees Covered by Statute

Labor Code section 432.2 applies to all private employers.ⁿ⁶

The provisions of Labor Code section 432.2 do not apply to applications for employment filed with common carriers by railroads who are subject to the Railway Labor Act.ⁿ⁷

[iii] Method of Enforcement

A violation of Labor Code section 432.2 is a misdemeanor.ⁿ⁸

Labor Code section 432.2 does not provide an explicit civil remedy for its violation.ⁿ⁹ An employee who is threatened with a compulsory polygraph examination in violation of section 432.2 may apparently seek an injunction against such an examination.ⁿ¹⁰ The extent to which a discharged or disciplined employee can recover damages resulting from the employer's violation of Section 432.2 has not been addressed by the courts; presumably, however, the employee would be entitled to introduce evidence of the violation in support of a common law action for wrongful termination based on violation of public policy.ⁿ¹¹

The Labor Commissioner and DLSE have jurisdiction to enforce the provisions of Labor Code section 432.2.ⁿ¹² For discussion of proceedings before the Labor Commissioner, see Chapter 5.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Although polygraph testing by many employers is common, there are many issues to consider beyond those raised by Labor Code section 432.2. First, the employer must be careful to comply also with the federal statute,ⁿ¹³ discussed in [2], below, which prohibits a broader range of conduct than does Labor Code section 432.2, although it also provides a number of exemptions from its provisions. Second, polygraph testing remains a highly interpretive specialty. Employers should seek and check references before retaining a polygraph expert.ⁿ¹⁴ Third, when an employer retains a polygraph specialist, it does not retain just a technical professional. It also retains a potential witness for future legal proceedings. Therefore, employers should consider the credibility of a polygraph expert in an arbitration or judicial setting before agreeing to the retainer. Fourth, employers should be aware that the results of polygraph tests may be extremely difficult to introduce into evidence in subsequent court proceedings. Thus, it is not advisable to premise disciplinary proceedings solely on test results. There should be separate and sufficient grounds for the employer's decision.

Finally, given the speculative admissibility of polygraph test results and the desirability of independent grounds for discipline, there is good reason not to resort automatically to polygraph testing, but to do so only on a case-by-case basis. To give but one illustration of the need to consider each case individually, assume that an employer has an honest belief that an employee merits discipline, but chooses to attempt confirmation of its belief through polygraph testing. Assume further that the employee voluntarily consents to test and clearly passes the test. Under these circumstances, the test results make it legally difficult for the employer to continue to claim an honest belief in the need for discipline. If the employer nonetheless resorts to discipline, it may be at greater risk of a breach of its duty of good faith and fair dealing.ⁿ¹⁵ Assume further that the employee consents to the test and clearly flunks, but later claims that he or she took the test under duress, notwithstanding his or her signature on an agreement to be tested. If the employer resorts to discipline, it may not be greatly concerned that the test results are subject to exclusion at trial, because, it is hoped, the employer will have independent grounds for its action. However, the employer should be concerned that the allegation of forced testing will strengthen an otherwise weak claim that it has breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing in the investigation of the disciplinary matter. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[b] Voice Stress Analysis

Penal Code section 637.3 provides that no person or entity may use any system that examines or records in any manner voice prints or other voice stress patterns of another person to determine the truth or falsity of statements made by that other person without his or her express written consent given in advance of the examination or recordation.ⁿ¹⁶ Any person injured by a violation of the statute may bring an action against the violator for actual damages or $1,000, whichever is greater.n17

[2] Federal Law

[a] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[i] General Prohibitions

With the exceptions discussed in [ii]-[v], below, the Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988 (EPPA) prohibits employers covered by the actn18 from doing any of the following:n19

1. Requiring, requesting, suggesting, or causing, directly or indirectly, any employee or prospective employee to take or submit to a lie detector test;
2. Using, accepting, or inquiring about the results of a lie detector test taken by any employee or prospective employee; and
3. Discharging, disciplining, discriminating against, denying employment or promotion, or threatening any employee or prospective employee with such action for refusal or failure to take or submit to such test, on the basis of the results of a test, for filing a complaint, for testifying in any proceeding, or for exercising any rights afforded by the EPPA.

Prohibited conduct includes an employer's active cooperation with a law-enforcement agency's polygraph testing of an employee in conjunction with an investigation arising from the employer's allegations of theft or similar wrongdoing, such as testing administered by the employer at a law-enforcement agency's request, or administered by a law enforcement agency and reimbursed by the employer.n20 Similarly, an employer's receipt of information from a polygraph test administered by law-enforcement authorities pursuant to an investigation is prohibited under the act.n21 This prohibited conduct is distinguishable from an employer's passive cooperation in a law-enforcement investigation that includes polygraph testing conducted by a law-enforcement agency, which is not prohibited by the EPPA.n22

In addition, prohibited conduct includes misleading the individual to believe that an actual test is being or may be performed (for example, to elicit confessions or admissions of guilt); connecting an employee (or prospective employee) to the instrument with no diagnostic purpose; placing an instrument, unconnected to the person, in an interrogation room; or merely suggesting that the instrument may be used during the course of the interview.n23

For purposes of the EPPA, a "lie detector" test includes a polygraph, deceptograph, voice stress analyzer, psychological stress evaluator, or any other similar device (whether mechanical or electrical) that is used, or the results of which are used, for the purpose of rendering a diagnostic opinion regarding the honesty or dishonesty of an individual.n24 The term "lie detector" does not include medical tests used to determine the presence or absence of controlled substances or alcohol in bodily fluids. The term also does not include written or oral tests commonly referred to as "honesty" or "paper and pencil" tests, machine-scored or otherwise, nor graphology tests commonly referred to as handwriting tests.n25 The term "polygraph" means an instrument that (1) records continuously, visually, permanently, and simultaneously changes in cardiovascular, respiratory, and electrodermal patterns as minimum instrumentation standards; and (2) is used, or the results of which are used, for the purpose of rendering a diagnostic opinion regarding the honesty or dishonesty of an individual.n26

The EPPA extends to all employees of covered employers,n27 regardless of citizenship status, and to foreign corporations operating in the United States. Moreover, the EPPA extends to any actions relating to the administration of lie detector (including polygraph) tests that occur within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.n28 It also protects a former employee from employer discrimination (e.g., bad references), if he or she had resigned rather than submit to a test, or exercised rights under the EPPA, such as filing a complaint with the Department of Labor.ⁿ²⁹

[ii] Exception for Employees of Certain Defense and Intelligence Contractors

The EPPA does not prohibit the administration by the federal government, in the performance of intelligence or counterintelligence functions, of lie detector tests to certain employees of private employers who have contracts with the Department of Defense, the Department of Energy, the National Security Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, or any other federal department, agency, or program whose duties involve access to classified information of a specified type.ⁿ³⁰ These exemptions apply only to the Federal Government; they do not allow private employers or their contractors to administer the tests.ⁿ³¹

[iii] Exception for Employer Investigations

Subject to certain limitations regarding the manner of conducting the examination and the use of the results, discussed in [vi], below, the act does not prohibit an employer from requesting an employee to submit to a polygraph test if all of the following criteria are met:ⁿ³²

1. The test is administered in connection with an ongoing investigation involving economic loss or injury to the employer's business, such as theft, embezzlement, misappropriation, or an act of unlawful industrial espionage or sabotage;
2. The employee had access to the property that is the subject of the investigation;
3. The employer has a reasonable suspicion that the employee was involved in the incident or activity under investigation; and
4. The employer executes a statement, provided to the examinee before the test, that does the following:
 - a. Sets forth with particularity the specific incident or activity being investigated and the basis for testing particular employees;
 - b. Is signed by a person (other than the polygraph examiner) authorized to legally bind the employer;
 - c. Is retained by the employer for at least three years;ⁿ³³ and
 - d. Contains, at a minimum, (i) an identification of the specific economic loss or injury to the business of the employer, (ii) a statement indicating that the employee had access to the property that is the subject of the investigation, and (iii) a statement describing the basis of the employer's reasonable suspicion that the employee was involved in the incident or activity under investigation.

For this exemption to apply, the "ongoing investigation" must be of a specific incident or activity. Random testing (or a "fishing expedition") is precluded by the EPPA. Thus, for example, an employer may not request that an employee submit to a polygraph test in an effort to determine whether or not any thefts have occurred. Moreover, the EPPA precludes testing pursuant to a continuous "ongoing investigation" based only on frequent losses of inventory items, rather than on a reasonable suspicion (i.e., observable, articulable basis in fact)ⁿ³⁴ that the employee tested was involved in the loss of specific items.ⁿ³⁵

"Economic loss or injury to the employer's business" includes both direct and indirect economic loss or injury.ⁿ³⁶

Direct loss or injury may consist of the misappropriation of confidential or trade-secret information, as well as the items enumerated, which are not exclusive.ⁿ³⁷ Indirect loss or injury may occur when an employee uses an employer's business to commit a crime, such as money-laundering, or commits theft of another's property in the custody of the employer, but does not occur merely because an illegal act, such as a drug transaction, takes place on the premises.ⁿ³⁸ This exemption does not permit testing based on economic loss resulting from unintentional or lawful conduct (e.g., a traffic accident), even if the employer in some way bears the cost of the incident;ⁿ³⁹ nor does it apply to polygraph testing to detect the employee's use of drugs, even if drug use may have caused economic loss.ⁿ⁴⁰

[iv] Exception for Security Services

Subject to limitations regarding the manner of conducting the examination and the use of the results, discussed in [vi], below, the EPPA does not prohibit the use of polygraph tests on prospective employees by any private employer whose primary business purpose consists of providing armored car personnel, personnel engaged in the design, installation, and maintenance of security alarm systems, or other uniformed or plainclothes security personnel, and whose function includes protection of the following:ⁿ⁴¹

1. Facilities, materials, or operations having a significant impact on the health or safety of any state or political subdivision of a state, or on the national security of the United States, including (a) facilities engaged in the production, transmission, or distribution of electrical or nuclear power, (b) public water supply facilities, (c) shipments or storage of radioactive or other toxic waste materials, and (d) public transportation; or
2. Currency, negotiable securities, precious commodities or instruments, or proprietary information.

This exception does not apply if the test is administered to a prospective employee who would not be employed to protect the facilities, materials, operations, or assets referred to above.ⁿ⁴²

Persons who may be tested under this exemption include any job applicants who would likely protect the security of any qualifying "facilities, materials, operations, or assets" in a direct manner, such as armored-car drivers and alarm-system installers, as well as various support personnel who have no direct access to the protected entities, but who may nevertheless be able to breach security, for example, administrative employees with access to security information.ⁿ⁴³ "Prospective employee" within the meaning of this exemption, includes a current employee who was initially hired for a position outside the scope of this exemption, but subsequently applies for a position for which polygraph testing is permitted. In that case, any adverse action taken against the employee that is based in part on a polygraph test may be taken only with respect to the prospective position.ⁿ⁴⁴

An employer within the meaning of this exemption is one that has met the "primary business purpose" test (i.e., with at least 50 percent of employer's annual dollar volume of business derived from enumerated services)ⁿ⁴⁵ and whose operations include protection of at least one of the facilities within the scope of the exemption.ⁿ⁴⁶

Specific facilities, materials, or operations subject to the security protection under this exemption include those against which acts of sabotage, espionage, terrorism, or other hostile, destructive, or illegal acts could significantly impact on the general public's safety or health, or national security.ⁿ⁴⁷ They may be either publicly or privately owned,ⁿ⁴⁸ including commercial and industrial operations that are protected pursuant to government defense contracts or registration under the Controlled Substances Act,ⁿ⁴⁹ or that would pose a serious public threat, such as a hazardous-material manufacturer. They also include such entities as public and private power plants, oil and gas refineries, network computer systems, media transmission facilities, stock exchanges, hospitals, and large enclosed shopping centers.ⁿ⁵⁰

The terms "currency, negotiable securities, precious commodities or instruments or proprietary information" refer to assets that are typically handled by, protected for, and transported between and among commercial and financial institutions. They also include cash assets of casinos, racetracks, lotteries, or other businesses in which cash constitutes the inventory or stock in trade. However, security-alarm or guard services provided to protect private homes, or businesses not primarily engaged in activities enumerated in the statute, are normally outside the scope of this exemption.ⁿ⁵¹

[v] Exception for Certain Drug Manufacturers and Distributors

Subject to limitations regarding the manner of conducting the examination and the use of the results, discussed in [vi], below, the EPPA does not prohibit certain uses of polygraph tests by employers who are authorized (i.e., registered with the Drug Enforcement Administration)ⁿ⁵² to manufacture, distribute, or dispense certain controlled substances.ⁿ⁵³ Such an employer may administer polygraph tests to prospective employees who would have direct access to the manufacture, storage, distribution, or sale of any such controlled substance.ⁿ⁵⁴ A "prospective employee" includes a current employee who holds a position that does not entail direct access, but applies for a position that does. In that case, any adverse action taken against the employee that is based in part on a polygraph test may be taken only with respect to the prospective position.ⁿ⁵⁵ "Direct access" means either physical proximity to a controlled substance, or the ability to obtain possession by diverting the substance. A position allows direct access if it affords contact with or direct involvement in the manufacture, storage, testing, distribution, sale, or dispensing of a controlled substance, which may include such activities as packaging, ordering, licensing, shipping, providing security, and taking inventory.ⁿ⁵⁶

Such an employer may also administer a polygraph test to a current employee if (1) the test is administered in connection with an ongoing investigation of criminal or other misconduct involving, or potentially involving, loss or injury to the manufacture, distribution, or dispensing of such a controlled substance by the employer, and (2) the employee had accessⁿ⁵⁷ to the person or property that is the subject of the investigation.ⁿ⁵⁸ A current employee may be tested only in connection with an investigation based on a specific incident or activity, or potential incident or activity, to the exclusion of random testing to discover the existence of theft.ⁿ⁵⁹ However, the employer has greater latitude to test an employee under this exemption than under the exemption regarding an investigation to discover economic loss.ⁿ⁶⁰ Unlike the economic-loss exemption, this exemption applies to ongoing investigations of misconduct involving potential drug losses, and does not require a "reasonable suspicion" standard.ⁿ⁶¹ Consequently, for example, a pharmacy employer is permitted to test all current employees who have access to a controlled substance after the substance is stolen from the inventory, or when evidence exists that theft of the substance is planned.ⁿ⁶² Moreover, unlike procedures regarding the economic-loss exemption,ⁿ⁶³ an employer is not required under this exemption to provide a current employee with a written statement describing the specific incident under investigation prior to testing.ⁿ⁶⁴ although, as with all exemptions under the EPPA, the employer must provide the employee with written notice regarding the polygraph-testing procedure and the employee's rights.ⁿ⁶⁵

Inasmuch as this exemption pertains only to employers registered with the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA),ⁿ⁶⁶ it only affects the polygraph-testing of employees and prospective employees of those employers. Therefore, for example, truck drivers and warehouse employees are subject to testing if they are employed by persons or entities registered with the DEA, but are not within the scope of this exemption if they are employed by common or contract carriers that transport controlled substances but are not registered with the DEA.ⁿ⁶⁷

[vi] Restrictions on Manner of Conducting Test and Use of Results

The EPPA provides certain restrictions on the manner of conducting, and the use of results of, polygraph tests that are conducted pursuant to the exceptions described in [iii]-[v], above. Those exceptions are inapplicable unless the employer complies with certain notice requirements and affords the employee specified rights regarding testing procedures and use of the test results.ⁿ⁶⁸

Before the examination,ⁿ⁶⁹ the employer must provide the examinee with a written notice, in a language understood by the examinee, of the date, time, and location of the test, and of his or her right to consult with legal counsel or an employee representative before each phase of the test.ⁿ⁷⁰ The examinee must also be informed orally and in writing of the nature and characteristics of the tests and of the instruments involved, including an explanation of the physical operation of the polygraph instrument and the procedure used during the examination.ⁿ⁷¹

In addition, before the testing phase, the employer is required to present the examinee with a written notice, in a language understood by the examinee, containing specified additional information relating to the examinee's rights, which must be read and signed by the examinee.ⁿ⁷² The Department of Labor has provided a form of notice that contains all the required provisions.ⁿ⁷³ If the notice is in a different format, it must contain at least the following information concerning the examination and the employee's rights regarding the conduct of the examination:ⁿ⁷⁴

1. Whether the polygraph examination area contains a two-way mirror, a camera, or other device through which the examinee may be observed;ⁿ⁷⁵
2. Whether any other device, such as those used in conversation or recording, will be used during the examination.ⁿ⁷⁶
3. That both the examinee and the employer have the right, with the other's knowledge, to make a recording of the entire examination;ⁿ⁷⁷
4. That the examinee has the right to terminate the test at any time;ⁿ⁷⁸
5. That the examinee has the right, and will be given the opportunity, to review all questions to be asked during the test;ⁿ⁷⁹
6. That the examinee may not be asked questions in a degrading or needlessly intrusive manner;ⁿ⁸⁰
7. That the examinee may not be asked any questions concerning religious beliefs or opinions; beliefs regarding racial matters; political beliefs or affiliations; matters relating to sexual behavior; or beliefs, affiliations, opinions, or lawful activities regarding unions or labor organizations;ⁿ⁸¹
8. That the test may not be conducted if there is sufficient written evidence by a physician that the examinee is suffering from a medical or psychological condition or undergoing treatment that might cause abnormal responses during the examination;ⁿ⁸²
9. That the test is not and cannot be required as a condition of employment;ⁿ⁸³
10. That the employer may not discharge, dismiss, discipline, deny employment or promotion, or otherwise discriminate against the examinee based on the analysis of a polygraph test, or based on the examinee's refusal to take the test, without additional evidence that would support the action;ⁿ⁸⁴
11. In connection with an ongoing investigation,ⁿ⁸⁵ that the additional evidence required for the employer to take adverse action against the examinee, including termination,ⁿ⁸⁶ may be evidence that the examinee had access to the property that is the subject of the investigation, together with evidence supporting the employer's reasonable suspicion that the examinee was involved in the incident or activity under investigation;ⁿ⁸⁷ that any statement made by the examinee before or during the test may serve as additional supporting evidence for adverse employment action;ⁿ⁸⁸ and that any admission of criminal conduct by the examinee may be transmitted to an appropriate government law enforcement agency;ⁿ⁸⁹
12. That information acquired from a polygraph test may be disclosed by the examiner or by the employer only to the examinee or any other person specifically designated in writing by the examinee to receive the information;ⁿ⁹⁰ to the employer that requested the test;ⁿ⁹¹ to a court, governmental agency, arbitrator, or mediator pursuant to a court order;ⁿ⁹² to a Department of Labor official when specifically designated in writing by the examinee to receive the information;ⁿ⁹³ and by the employer, to an appropriate governmental agency without a court order if, and only insofar as, the information disclosed is an admission of criminal conduct;ⁿ⁹⁴

13. That if any of the examinee's rights or protections under the EPPA are violated, the examinee has the right to file a complaint with the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor, or to take action in court against the employer; that employers who violate the EPPA are liable to the affected examinee, who may recover appropriate legal or equitable relief, including, but not limited to, employment, reinstatement, and promotion, payment of lost wages and benefits, and reasonable costs, including attorney's fees;ⁿ⁹⁵ and that the Secretary of Labor may also bring action to obtain compliance with the EPPA, and may assess civil money penalties against the employer;ⁿ⁹⁶

14. That the examinee has the right to obtain and consult with legal counsel or other representative before each phase of the test,ⁿ⁹⁷ although the legal counsel or representative may be excluded from the room in which the test is administered during the actual testing phase;ⁿ⁹⁸ and

15. That the employee's rights under the EPPA may not be waived, either voluntarily or involuntarily, by contract or otherwise, except as part of a written settlement to a pending action or complaint under the EPPA, agreed to and signed by the parties.ⁿ⁹⁹

In addition, during the initial or any subsequent pretest phases, the examinee must be given the opportunity, at any time prior to the actual testing phase, to review all questions in writing that the examiner will ask during each testing phase.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ The examiner is prohibited from asking any question that was not presented in writing to the examinee for review before the test.ⁿ¹⁰¹ Further restrictions govern the length of the testing period,ⁿ¹⁰² and the number of tests that the employee may be given within a given time period.ⁿ¹⁰³

Before any adverse employment action, the employer must further interview the examinee on the basis of the results of the test, and provide him or her with a written copy of any opinion or conclusion reached as a result of the test, and a copy of the questions asked during the test, along with the corresponding charted responses.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

Finally, the EPPA provides that the exceptions described in [iii]-[v], above, do not apply unless the examiner complies with applicable state licensing requirements (if any), maintains a $50,000 bond or an equivalent amount of professional liability insurance, and complies with certain requirements regarding the form, contents, and maintenance of the polygraph test results.ⁿ¹⁰⁵

[vii] Disclosure of Test Results

The EPPA provides that a polygraph examiner may disclose information acquired from a polygraph test only to (1) the examinee or other person specifically designated in writing by the examinee, (2) the employer that requested the test, or (3) any court, governmental agency, arbitrator, or mediator, in accordance with due process of law, pursuant to an order from a court of competent jurisdiction.ⁿ¹⁰⁶ An employer (other than employers subject to the exception for defense and intelligence contractors described in [ii], above) for whom a polygraph test is conducted may disclose information from the test only to (1) a person described in the preceding sentence, or (2) a governmental agency, but only insofar as the disclosed information is an admission of criminal conduct.ⁿ¹⁰⁷ A polygraph examiner may disclose test charts without any identifying information to another examiner solely for consultation purposes regarding the veracity of the examinee's answers.ⁿ¹⁰⁸

For discussion of other restrictions on the use and disclosure of private information concerning employees, see Chapter 51.

[viii] Activity Outside Scope of Prohibited Conduct

An employer who merely reports a theft or incident involving economic loss to a law enforcement agency does not violate the EPPA solely because the agency subsequently tests an employee suspected of culpability in the incident. Similarly, an employer's passive cooperation with law-enforcement authorities during the course of a criminal investigation by the agency that involves a polygraph test does not violate the EPPA. For example, an employer may properly allow testing by the agency on the employer's premises, and may release an employee during working hours to take a test at a law enforcement facility.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ This type of conduct is distinguishable from prohibited active participation in law-enforcement testing.ⁿ¹¹⁰

[b] Employers Covered and Exempted

The substantive prohibitions of the act apply to "any employer engaged in or affecting commerce or in the production of goods for commerce."ⁿ¹¹¹ For purposes of the act, "commerce" has same meaning as in the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA),ⁿ¹¹² that is, trade, commerce, transportation, transmission, or communication among the several States or between a state and any place outside the state.ⁿ¹¹³ Courts that have interpreted the phrase "affecting commerce" in other contexts have found coverage to be coextensive with the full scope of the Congressional power to regulate commerce.ⁿ¹¹⁴ Inasmuch as most employers engage in one or more types of activities that would be regarded as "affecting commerce" under widely accepted principles, virtually all employers are deemed subject to the provisions of the EPPA, unless specifically exemptedⁿ¹¹⁵ by the EPPA.ⁿ¹¹⁶

"Employer" includes any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee or prospective employee.ⁿ¹¹⁷

Restrictions under the EPPA apply to state employment services, private employment placement agencies, job recruiting firms, and vocational trade schools with respect to persons who may be referred to potential employers. These entities are not liable for EPPA violations, however, by virtue of referring job applicants to employers who violate the EPPA, if the entities had no reason to know that the employers would do so.ⁿ¹¹⁸

The act does not apply to the United States government, any state or local government, or any political subdivision thereof.ⁿ¹¹⁹

[c] Methods of Enforcement

Violation of the act may result in the assessment of civil penalties by the Secretary of Labor, who may also bring an action for legal and equitable relief against employers who violate the act.ⁿ¹²⁰

In addition, an employer who violates the act is liable to the affected employee or prospective employee for appropriate legal or equitable relief including, but not limited to, employment, reinstatement, promotion, and payment of lost wages and benefits.ⁿ¹²¹ A civil action to obtain such relief may be brought in any federal or state court of competent jurisdiction within three years after the date of the alleged violation.ⁿ¹²² In its discretion, the court may award reasonable costs, including attorney's fees, to the prevailing party.ⁿ¹²³

[d] Effect on State or Local Law and Collective Bargaining Agreements

Apart from the exceptions relating to governmental agencies and certain national security and defense contractors,ⁿ¹²⁴ the EPPA does not preempt any provision of any state or local law or of any negotiated collective bargaining agreement that prohibits lie detector tests or is more restrictive with respect to such tests than any provision of the EPPA.ⁿ¹²⁵

However, industry exemptions and applicable restrictions on them under the EPPA do preempt less restrictive exemptions established by state law for the same industry.ⁿ¹²⁶ For discussion of California statutory provisions relating to lie detector tests,ⁿ¹²⁷ see [1], above.

[3] Effect of Arbitration Agreements

A civil action for violation of the federal or state polygraph protection statutes may be precluded by an arbitration provision that covers the subject matter of the claims.ⁿ¹²⁸ An employee who has signed a properly drafted arbitration agreement or is otherwise subject to industry rules requiring arbitration may therefore be precluded from bringing an action in federal or state court for violation of the statutes discussed above.

In Saari v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., Inc.,ⁿ¹²⁹ plaintiff, as a condition of his employment as a securities account executive, signed a securities registration application, which contained an arbitration provision. When he became a registered representative of the New York Stock Exchange, he also became subject to a rule of the Exchange requiring arbitration. Plaintiff was terminated after refusing to submit to a polygraph examination following the apparent theft of a client's money from the office. He filed a complaint in federal district court, alleging violation of the Federal Employee Polygraph Protection Act (EPPA),ⁿ¹³⁰ violation of California Labor Code section 432.2,ⁿ¹³¹ and slander.ⁿ¹³² Defendant filed a motion to compel arbitration and stay proceedings pending arbitration, pursuant to the Federal Arbitration Act.ⁿ¹³³ The federal district court denied the motion, but the Ninth Circuit reversed, holding that all the causes of action were subject to arbitration. With respect to the federal statutes, the court held that the EPPA's anti-waiver provisionⁿ¹³⁴ does not support the argument that the procedures available under the EPPA are solely judicial and therefore not subject to arbitration.ⁿ¹³⁵

With respect to the California statute, the court rejected plaintiff's contention that Congress intended to exempt state polygraph claims from arbitration by its enactment of the EPPA.ⁿ¹³⁶ The court also stated that plaintiff's termination for refusal to submit himself to polygraph examination arose out of the scope of his employment as a registered representative of the stock exchange, based on the securities rule in question, which states that "any controversy between a registered representative and any member or member organization arising out of the employment or termination or employment of such registered representative by and with such member or member organization shall be settled by arbitration ..."ⁿ¹³⁷

For additional discussion of the effect of arbitration agreements on civil actions for wrongful termination, see Chapter 90.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Criminal Law & Procedure
Discovery & Inspection
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Employee Privacy
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Employee Privacy
Disclosure of Employee Information
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Employee Privacy
Medical & Related Examinations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 432.2(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 432.2(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. 43 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 25, 27 (1964) .

(n4)Footnote 4. 43 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 25, 26 (1964) .

(n5)Footnote 5. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 2002, 2006, 2007.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code § 432.2(a). In addition, although they are excluded from the provisions of Lab. Code § 432.2, public employees may not be subjected to compulsory polygraph examinations. see Gov. Code §§ 3301, 3307 ("public safety officers" may not be required to take lie detector test); Long Beach City Employees Ass'n v. City of Long Beach (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 937, 956, 227 Cal. Rptr. 90, 719 P.2d 660 (other public employees may not constitutionally be required to submit to polygraph examinations).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code § 434.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code § 433.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code § 432.2.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Civ. Code § 3422; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527; Long Beach City Employees Ass'n v. City of Long Beach (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 937, 941, 227 Cal. Rptr. 90, 719 P.2d 660 .

(n11)Footnote 11. For discussion of liability for wrongful termination and discipline, see ch. 60.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Lab. Code §§ 95(a), 98(a).

(n13)Footnote 13. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 2001-2009.

(n14)Footnote 14. Note that under federal law, the polygraph examiner must be licensed under any applicable state law and must either be bonded or maintain professional liability insurance in a specified amount. see 29 U.S.C. § 2007(c)(1).

(n15)Footnote 15. See generally ch. 60.

(n16)Footnote 16. Penal Code § 637.3(a). see Gov. Code § 3307 ("public safety officers" may not be required to take any lie detector test, including voice stress analyzer).

(n17)Footnote 17. Penal Code § 637.3(c).

(n18)Footnote 18. See discussion in [b], below.

(n19)Footnote 19. 29 U.S.C. § 2002; 29 C.F.R. § 801.4(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. 29 C.F.R. § 801.4(b).

(n21)Footnote 21. 29 C.F.R. § 801.4(c); see 29 U.S.C. § 2002(2).

(n22)Footnote 22. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.4(c); see also [viii], below.

(n23)Footnote 23. 29 C.F.R. § 801.4(d).

(n24)Footnote 24. 29 U.S.C. § 2001(3); 29 C.F.R. § 801.2(d)(1).

(n25)Footnote 25. 29 C.F.R. § 801.2(d)(2).

(n26)Footnote 26. 29 U.S.C. § 2001(4); 29 C.F.R. § 801.2(e).

(n27)Footnote 27. See discussion in [b], below.

(n28)Footnote 28. 29 C.F.R. § 801.3(b).

(n29)Footnote 29. 29 C.F.R. § 801.8(c).

(n30)Footnote 30. See 29 U.S.C. § 2006(b), (c); 29 C.F.R. § 801.11(b)-(e).

(n31)Footnote 31. 29 C.F.R. § 801.11(a).

(n32)Footnote 32. 29 U.S.C. § 2006(d); 29 C.F.R. § 801.12(a).

(n33)Footnote 33. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.30(a)(1) (three-year period begins on date of examination, or, if no examination, on date of request for examination); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.12(a)(5) (employer must also retain proof of service and make documents available to Department of Labor).

(n34)Footnote 34. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.12(f).

(n35)Footnote 35. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.12(b); cf. 29 U.S.C. § 2006(f)(2)(B), discussed in [v], below.

(n36)Footnote 36. 29 C.F.R. § 801.12(c)(1)(i).

(n37)Footnote 37. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.12(c)(1)(ii).

(n38)Footnote 38. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.12(c)(1)(iii), (iv).

(n39)Footnote 39. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.12(c)(2).

(n40)Footnote 40. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.12(d). For discussion of employee drug-testing, see § 50.43.

(n41)Footnote 41. 29 U.S.C. § 2006(e)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(a).

(n42)Footnote 42. 29 U.S.C. § 2006(e)(2); 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(g).

(n43)Footnote 43. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(g).

(n44)Footnote 44. 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(b)(2).

(n45)Footnote 45. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(c) (also providing that when parent corporation has subsidiary involved in security services, test applicable to subsidiary).

(n46)Footnote 46. 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(f).

(n47)Footnote 47. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(d)(2).

(n48)Footnote 48. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(d)(1).

(n49)Footnote 49. See 21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq.

(n50)Footnote 50. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(d)(2).

(n51)Footnote 51. 29 C.F.R. § 801.14(e)(ii).

(n52)Footnote 52. 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(b)(2); see 21 U.S.C. § 812 et seq. (Controlled Substances Act).

(n53)Footnote 53. See 29 U.S.C. § 2006(f)(1); 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(a); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(b)(1) (enumerated activities construed within meaning of 21 U.S.C. § 812 et seq. (Controlled Substances Act)).

(n54)Footnote 54. See 29 U.S.C. § 2006(f)(2)(A); 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(c).

- (n55)Footnote 55. 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(d).
- (n56)Footnote 56. 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(c)(1).
- (n57)Footnote 57. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(c)(2) (access may be infrequent, random, or opportunistic, rather than direct).
- (n58)Footnote 58. See 29 U.S.C. § 2006(f)(2)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(c).
- (n59)Footnote 59. 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(f)(1).
- (n60)Footnote 60. See 29 U.S.C. § 2006(d)(3), discussed in [iii], above.
- (n61)Footnote 61. 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(f)(1); cf. 29 U.S.C. § 2006(d)(3), discussed in [iii], above.
- (n62)Footnote 62. 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(f)(1); but see 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(f)(2) (exemption inapplicable based on theft of non-drug items, e.g., cosmetics in pharmacy, although testing may be permitted under 29 U.S.C. § 2006(d), discussed in [iii], above).
- (n63)Footnote 63. See 29 U.S.C. 2006(d)(4), discussed in [iii], above.
- (n64)Footnote 64. 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(e).
- (n65)Footnote 65. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2), discussed in [vi], below.
- (n66)Footnote 66. 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(b)(2); see 21 U.S.C. § 812 et seq. (Controlled Substances Act).
- (n67)Footnote 67. 29 C.F.R. § 801.13(b)(2).
- (n68)Footnote 68. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007; see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 801.22-801.26; 29 C.F.R. pt. 801, app. A.
- (n69)Footnote 69. Generally, the notice must be given at least 48 hours before the examination. see 29 C.F.R. § 801.23(a)(1) (time requirements).
- (n70)Footnote 70. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(A); 29 C.F.R. § 801.23(a)(1).
- (n71)Footnote 71. 29 C.F.R. § 801.23(a)(2); see 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(B).
- (n72)Footnote 72. 29 C.F.R. § 801.23(a)(3); see 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(C),(D).
- (n73)Footnote 73. See 29 C.F.R. pt. 801, app. A.
- (n74)Footnote 74. 29 C.F.R. § 801.23(a)(3).
- (n75)Footnote 75. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(C)(i).
- (n76)Footnote 76. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(C)(ii).
- (n77)Footnote 77. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(C)(iii).
- (n78)Footnote 78. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(1)(A); 29 C.F.R. § 801.22(b)(1); see 29 C.F.R. § 801.22(b)(5) (rights regarding adverse action).
- (n79)Footnote 79. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(E).

- (n80)Footnote 80. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(1)(B); 29 C.F.R. § 801.22(b)(2).
- (n81)Footnote 81. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(1)(C); 29 C.F.R. § 801.22(b)(3).
- (n82)Footnote 82. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(1)(D); 29 C.F.R. § 801.22(b)(4); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.22(b)(5) (rights regarding adverse action).
- (n83)Footnote 83. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(D)(i).
- (n84)Footnote 84. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(a); see 29 U.S.C. § 2006(e), (f); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.21.
- (n85)Footnote 85. See 29 U.S.C. § 2006(d).
- (n86)Footnote 86. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(a)(1).
- (n87)Footnote 87. See 29 U.S.C. § 2006(d); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.20.
- (n88)Footnote 88. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(D)(ii); 29 C.F.R. § 801.20(b)(2).
- (n89)Footnote 89. See 29 U.S.C. § 2008(c)(2).
- (n90)Footnote 90. See 29 U.S.C. § 2008(b)(1),(2); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.35(a)(1).
- (n91)Footnote 91. See 29 U.S.C. § 2008(b)(2); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.35(a)(2).
- (n92)Footnote 92. See 29 U.S.C. § 2008(b)(3); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.35(a)(3).
- (n93)Footnote 93. See 29 U.S.C. § 2008(b)(1); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.35(a)(4).
- (n94)Footnote 94. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(D)(v); see 29 U.S.C. § 2008(c); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.35(b).
- (n95)Footnote 95. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(D)(iv); see 29 U.S.C. § 2005(c); see also discussion in [c], below.
- (n96)Footnote 96. See 29 U.S.C. § 2005(a), (b).
- (n97)Footnote 97. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(A).
- (n98)Footnote 98. 29 C.F.R. § 801.23(a)(3)(xiv).
- (n99)Footnote 99. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(D)(v); see also 29 U.S.C. § 2005(d) (prohibition against waiver).
- (n100)Footnote 100. 29 C.F.R. § 801.23(b); see 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(2)(E).
- (n101)Footnote 101. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(3); 29 C.F.R. § 801.24(a).
- (n102)Footnote 102. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(5) (90-minute minimum duration); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.24(b).
- (n103)Footnote 103. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(5) (five-test maximum per day); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.26(c)(2).
- (n104)Footnote 104. 29 U.S.C. § 2007(b)(4); see 29 C.F.R. § 801.25.
- (n105)Footnote 105. See 29 U.S.C. § 2007(c); see also 29 C.F.R. § 801.26.
- (n106)Footnote 106. See 29 U.S.C. § 2008(b); 29 C.F.R. § 801.35; see also discussion in [vi], above.

- (n107)Footnote 107. See 29 U.S.C. § 2008(c); 29 C.F.R. § 801.35; see also discussion in [vi], above.
- (n108)Footnote 108. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.35(c).
- (n109)Footnote 109. 29 C.F.R. § 801.4(b).
- (n110)Footnote 110. See discussion in [i], above.
- (n111)Footnote 111. See 29 U.S.C. § 2002.
- (n112)Footnote 112. 29 U.S.C. § 2001(1); 29 C.F.R. § 801.2(b)(1). For full discussion of the definition of "commerce" under the FLSA, see ch. 1.
- (n113)Footnote 113. 29 U.S.C. § 203(b); 29 C.F.R. § 801.2(b)(1).
- (n114)Footnote 114. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.3(a); see, e.g., Godwin v. Occupational Safety & Health Review Com'n (9th Cir. 1976) 540 F.2d 1013, 1015 .
- (n115)Footnote 115. See 29 U.S.C. § 2006(a)-(c); see also 29 C.F.R. §§ 801.10, 801.11.
- (n116)Footnote 116. See 29 C.F.R. § 801.3(a).
- (n117)Footnote 117. 29 U.S.C. § 2001(2); 29 C.F.R. § 801.2(c) (polygraph examiner not included within definition).
- (n118)Footnote 118. 29 C.F.R. § 801.8(b).
- (n119)Footnote 119. 29 U.S.C. § 2006(a); see 29 C.F.R. § 801.10 (exclusion includes interstate governmental agency; exclusion does not extend to contractors or nongovernmental agents of governmental agency).
- (n120)Footnote 120. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 2001(5), 2005(a), (b); see also 29 U.S.C. § 2004 (Secretary of Labor's general authority to administer act); 29 C.F.R. §§ 801.40-801.75.
- (n121)Footnote 121. 29 U.S.C. § 2005(c)(1).
- (n122)Footnote 122. 29 U.S.C. § 2005(c)(2).
- (n123)Footnote 123. 29 U.S.C. § 2005(c)(3).
- (n124)Footnote 124. See 29 U.S.C. § 2006(a), (b), (c); see also discussion in [a][ii] and [b], above.
- (n125)Footnote 125. See 29 U.S.C. § 2009; 29 C.F.R. § 801.5(a).
- (n126)Footnote 126. 29 C.F.R. § 801.5(b)(3).
- (n127)Footnote 127. See Lab. Code § 432.2 (polygraphs); Penal Code § 637.3 (voice stress analyzers).
- (n128)Footnote 128. See Saari v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1992) 968 F.2d 877, 881-883 .
- (n129)Footnote 129. Saari v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1992) 968 F.2d 877 .
- (n130)Footnote 130. 29 U.S.C. § 2001 et seq.; see discussion in [2], above.
- (n131)Footnote 131. See discussion in [1][a], above.

(n132)Footnote 132. See discussion in ch. 51, pt. B.

(n133)Footnote 133. See 9 U.S.C. § 3.

(n134)Footnote 134. 29 U.S.C. § 2005(d); see discussion in [2][a], above.

(n135)Footnote 135. Saari v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1992) 968 F.2d 877, 881 .

(n136)Footnote 136. Saari v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1992) 968 F.2d 877, 883 .

(n137)Footnote 137. Saari v. Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1992) 968 F.2d 877, 882-883 (emphasis provided by the court).

12 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.17

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.17 Security Clearance Investigations--Defense Department Regulations

Public employees and employees in private, defense-related industries may require access to classified information in the course of their duties, and accordingly may be required to obtain security clearances from the federal government.ⁿ¹ The security clearance determination process involves a detailed investigation of each employee applying for a clearance with respect to a number of matters that would be considered private in other employment contexts.ⁿ² Executive Order No. 10865ⁿ³ establishes the administrative framework for grants and denials of security clearances. Additional Defense Department regulations governing security clearance investigations are contained in the Code of Federal Regulations.ⁿ⁴ The Executive Order and regulations are aimed at protecting the United States against hostile or destructive activities by preventing unauthorized disclosures of classified national defense information while also recognizing, and providing certain procedural safeguards to protect, the interests of individuals affected by the regulations.ⁿ⁵

The Director of the Directorate for Industrial Security Clearance Review (DISCR) is the governmental official having responsibility for the management of the defense industrial personnel security clearance program, and the General Counsel, Department of Defense, is responsible for the program's administration.ⁿ⁶

Defense Department regulations require an applicant for a security clearance to give (and to authorize other persons to give) full, frank, and truthful answers to relevant questions needed by DISCR to reach a security clearance determination.ⁿ⁷ The applicant may choose not to comply, but refusal or failure to furnish or authorize the provision of relevant information needed by DISCR at any stage in the investigation or subsequent adjudication process may preclude DISCR from reaching the required finding that the granting or continuance of a security clearance with respect to the applicant is clearly consistent with the national interest.ⁿ⁸ The applicant's privacy interests have been held to be outweighed by the government's interest in preventing highly sensitive information from falling into the wrong hands, provided that the information sought and questions asked are relevant to a proper subject of inquiry and no more intrusive than is reasonably necessary to allow responsible officials to make an informed and rational determination that the granting or continuance of an applicant's security clearance is clearly consistent with the national interest.ⁿ⁹

Examples of criteria on which the security clearance determination is based, and about which the DISCR may investigate, are set forth in the regulations.ⁿ¹⁰ A broad range of personal characteristics and conduct may be investigated, including not only overt acts of espionage, treason, or sedition, but also other violations of law and such matters as "acts of sexual perversion," acts indicating poor judgment or untrustworthiness, illnesses or mental conditions that may cause a significant defect in judgment or reliability, excessive use of alcohol, illegal or improper use of drugs, and any circumstances that may render the applicant vulnerable to coercion or influence to act contrary to the national interest.ⁿ¹¹ The security clearance determination must include consideration of the nature and seriousness of the conduct; the circumstances surrounding the conduct; the frequency of the conduct and how recently it has occurred; the individual's age; and the individual's motivation, or the extent to which the conduct was negligent, willful, voluntary, or undertaken with knowledge of the circumstances or consequences involved.ⁿ¹²

The regulations provide for a due process procedure to be followed in the event that a security clearance is to be denied or revoked, including notice, opportunity to respond, a hearing with a limited right of cross-examination, and a right to appeal.ⁿ¹³ However, in instances when the threat to the national interest is clearly direct and imminent, the Director of DISCR and the Director of the Defense Investigative Service are authorized to take emergency measures to suspend an existing security clearance after consultation with the Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Policy and the Office of the General Counsel of the Department of Defense,ⁿ¹⁴ and the Secretary of Defense or the head of another agency or department may deny or revoke a security clearance without regard to the procedural requirements of the regulations whenever the security of the nation so requires, on a determination that the regulations cannot be invoked consistently with the national security.ⁿ¹⁵

When a security clearance is subsequently granted after suspension, denial, or revocation, an applicant may petition for reimbursement of loss of earnings resulting directly from the suspension, revocation, or denial of clearance.ⁿ¹⁶ The claim must be filed within one year after the date the claim arises.ⁿ¹⁷ Reimbursement is not authorized in cases in which the General Counsel, Department of Defense, or designee, finds that the Department of Defense was justified in taking the initial action to suspend, deny, or revoke the security clearance.ⁿ¹⁸ The amount of reimbursement shall not exceed the difference between the applicant's earnings at the time of the initial action and interim earnings, subject to reasonable efforts on the part of the applicant to mitigate any loss of earnings.ⁿ¹⁹ No reimbursement is allowed for any period of undue delay resulting from the applicant's acts or failure to act.ⁿ²⁰ Reimbursement is also not allowed for loss of merit raises and general increases, loss of employment opportunities, counsel fees, or other costs relating to the industrial security clearance proceeding.ⁿ²¹ Claims approved by the Department of Defense are forwarded for payment to the agency concerned.ⁿ²² Any payment made in response to a claim for reimbursement is in full satisfaction of any further claim against the United States or any federal agency, or any of its officers or employees.ⁿ²³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

GovernmentsFederal GovernmentGeneral OverviewGovernmentsFederal GovernmentDomestic SecurityLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewPublic Contracts LawPerformanceSecurity Clearances & Restrictions

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 32 C.F.R. §§ 155.2(c), 155.3.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Marks v. Schlesinger (C.D. Cal. 1974) 384 F. Supp. 1373, 1377 ; 32 C.F.R. § 155.6.

(n3)Footnote 3. Exec. Order No. 10865, reprinted following 50 U.S.C. § 401.

(n4)Footnote 4. 32 C.F.R. §§ 155.1-155.8.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Exec. Order No. 10865, reprinted following 50 U.S.C. § 401 (preamble).

(n6)Footnote 6. 32 C.F.R. § 155.5(b), (c).

(n7)Footnote 7. 32 C.F.R. § 155.6(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. 32 C.F.R. § 155.6(b), (c).

(n9)Footnote 9. Marks v. Schlesinger (C.D. Cal. 1974) 384 F. Supp. 1373, 1377-1378 ; see Gayer v. Schlesinger (D.C. Cir. 1973) 490 F.2d 740, 751-754 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See 32 C.F.R. § 155.6(e).

(n11)Footnote 11. See 32 C.F.R. § 155.6(e).

(n12)Footnote 12. 32 C.F.R. § 155.6(d).

(n13)Footnote 13. See 32 C.F.R. §§ 155.4, 155.6, 155.7.

(n14)Footnote 14. See 32 C.F.R. § 155.6(g).

(n15)Footnote 15. 32 C.F.R. § 155.6(k).

(n16)Footnote 16. 32 C.F.R. § 155.7(v).

(n17)Footnote 17. 32 C.F.R. § 155.7(w).

(n18)Footnote 18. 32 C.F.R. § 155.7(w).

(n19)Footnote 19. 32 C.F.R. § 155.7(x).

(n20)Footnote 20. 32 C.F.R. § 155.7(x).

(n21)Footnote 21. 32 C.F.R. § 155.7(x).

(n22)Footnote 22. 32 C.F.R. § 155.7(y).

(n23)Footnote 23. 32 C.F.R. § 155.7(y).

13 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.18

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.18 Shopping Investigator's Report

Labor Code section 2930 applies to an employer's use of shopping investigators to test the conduct, performance, or honesty of employees. A "shopping investigator" is a person who shops in commercial, retail, or service establishments to test the integrity of sales, warehouse, stockroom, and service personnel, and evaluates sales techniques and services rendered customers.ⁿ¹ The shopping investigator may also review the establishment's policies and standards to ascertain employee performance requirements and evaluate employees' sales techniques and courtesy by buying merchandise, ordering food, or utilizing services.ⁿ² The shopping investigator may carry merchandise to a checkstand or sales counter and observe employees during sales transactions in order to detect irregularities in listing or calling prices, itemizing merchandise, or handling cash.ⁿ³ Following one or more of such activities, the shopping investigator writes a report of his or her investigations for the establishment visited.ⁿ⁴

Any employer who disciplines or discharges an employee on the basis of a shopping investigator's report performed by a licensed private investigator must provide the employee with a copy of the investigation report before disciplining or discharging the employee.ⁿ⁵ When an interview occurs that might result in the termination of an employee for dishonesty, the employee must, prior to the conclusion of the interview, be handed a copy of the latest investigator's report on which the interview was based.ⁿ⁶

Labor Code section 2930 does not apply if the person conducting the investigation is employed exclusively and regularly by one employer in connection with the affairs of only that employer.ⁿ⁷ In such case, the investigator must be an employee of the employer; an independent contractor relationship would be insufficient to invoke this exception.ⁿ⁸ Additionally, the entire investigation must be conducted solely for that employer by the investigator.ⁿ⁹ Labor Code section 2930 also appears not to apply to reports prepared by persons who are not licensed private investigators,ⁿ¹⁰ but employers should note that the Business and Professions Code prohibits unlicensed persons from engaging in a business regulated by the Private Investigator Act;ⁿ¹¹ and employers may be subject to criminal penalties for knowingly hiring an unlicensed private investigator.ⁿ¹²

Labor Code section 2930 does not explicitly provide a remedy for its violation, and no cases have yet arisen determining whether an aggrieved employee has a private right of action under the statute. It is, therefore, uncertain whether and to what extent a discharged or disciplined employee can recover damages for an employer's failure to provide him or her with a copy of a shopping investigator's report. Conceivably, a plaintiff in a common law wrongful discharge suit might seek to introduce evidence of a violation of section 2930 in support of his or her cause of action. For discussion of wrongful termination and discipline, see Chapter 60.

The Labor Commissioner and DLSE have jurisdiction to enforce the provisions of Labor Code section 2930.ⁿ¹³ For discussion of proceedings before the Labor Commissioner, see Chapter 5.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawPreemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 2930(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 2930(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 2930(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 2930(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 2930(a). (Although Lab. Code § 2930(a) refers to Ch. 11 of Div. 3 of the Bus. & Prof. Code, which until its repeal by 1983 Stats., ch. 1186, § 1, governed private detectives, it appears that § 2930(a) should instead refer to Ch. 11.5 of Div. 3 of the Bus. & Prof. Code, governing private investigators.) The current Ch. 11 regulates repossessioners.

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. Bus. & Prof. Code § 7520; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 7521(a) (private investigator defined as including any person or entity acting for purpose of investigating and reporting to any private employer information concerning the employer's employees involving questions of integrity, honesty, breach of rules, or other standards of performance of job duties).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 7523(b) (any person who conspires with another person to violate Private Investigator Act or who knowingly engages an unlicensed private investigator after being notified in writing by Bureau of Collection and Investigative Services of investigator's unlicensed status is guilty of misdemeanor punishable by fine not to exceed $1,000 or by imprisonment in county jail not to exceed one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Lab. Code §§ 95(a), 98(a).

14 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.19

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.19 Wiretapping and Eavesdropping

[1] Coverage

No person other than an authorized law enforcement officer may wiretap or eavesdrop on confidential communications.ⁿ¹ The Legislature enacted these provisions to protect the right of privacy of the people of California, declaring that advances in science and technology had led to the development of new devices and techniques for eavesdropping on private communications and that the invasion of privacy resulting from the increasing use of such devices had created a serious and intolerable threat to the free exercise of personal liberties.ⁿ²

These provisions effectively prohibit an employer from engaging in electronic eavesdropping on employee telephone conversations or other confidential conversations.ⁿ³

[2] Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[a] Wiretapping

The following wiretapping activities are criminal offenses:ⁿ⁴

- Intentionally tapping or making any unauthorized connection with any telegraph or telephone wire, line, cable, or instrument (whether physically, electrically, acoustically, inductively, or otherwise), including any internal telephonic communication system.
- Willfully and without the consent of all parties to the communication, or in any unauthorized manner, reading or attempting to read or to learn the contents or meaning of any message, report, or communication while it is in transit over any such telegraph or telephone wire, line, or cable, or while it is being sent from or received at any place in California.
- Using or attempting to use, in any manner or for any purpose, or communicating in any way, any information obtained by means of a prohibited wiretap or unauthorized connection.

- Aiding, agreeing with, employing, or conspiring with any persons to unlawfully do, permit, or cause to be done any of the foregoing acts.

Evidence obtained in violation of the prohibition against wiretapping and related activities is inadmissible in any judicial, administrative, legislative, or other proceeding, except as proof in an action or prosecution for the violation.ⁿ⁵

[b] Eavesdropping on or Recording Confidential Communications

It is generally a crime for any person, intentionally and without the consent of all parties to a confidential communication, to eavesdrop on or record the communication by means of any electronic amplifying or recording device.ⁿ⁶ This prohibition applies whether the communication is carried on among the parties within the presence of one another or by telephone, telegraph, or any other device except a radio.ⁿ⁷

For purposes of this prohibition against eavesdropping, a "person" generally is any individual, business association, partnership, corporation, limited liability company, or other legal entity, as well as any individual acting on behalf of any government or government subdivision. However, an individual known by all parties to a confidential communication to be overhearing or recording the communication is not considered a person subject to the prohibition against eavesdropping.ⁿ⁸

A "confidential communication" for these purposes includes any communication carried on in circumstances that reasonably indicate that any party to the communication desires it to be confined to the parties to the communication. Thus, a communication made in a public gathering or in any circumstances in which the parties may reasonably expect that the communication may be overheard or recorded is not considered a confidential communication.ⁿ⁹

The prohibition against eavesdropping does not apply to the use of hearing aids and similar devices, by persons afflicted with impaired hearing, for the purpose of overcoming the impairment to permit the hearing of sounds ordinarily audible to the human ear.ⁿ¹⁰

Evidence obtained in violation of Penal Code section 632 is inadmissible in any judicial, administrative, legislative, or other proceeding, except as proof in an action or prosecution for the violation.ⁿ¹¹

[c] Interception of Cellular Radio Telephone and Cordless Telephone Communications

It is a crime for any person, maliciously and without the consent of all parties to the communication, to intercept, receive, or assist in intercepting or receiving a communication transmitted between cellular radio telephones, between cordless telephones, between a cordless telephone and a cellular telephone, between a cellular radio telephone and a landline telephone, or between any cordless telephone and a landline telephone.ⁿ¹²

In addition, it is a crime for any person, without the consent of all parties to a communication, to intercept or receive and intentionally record, or to assist in the interception or reception, and intentional recordation of, a cellular radio telephone communication or a cordless telephone communication.ⁿ¹³ Communications covered by this provision include, but are not limited to, communications transmitted by voice, data, or image, including facsimile.ⁿ¹⁴

For these purposes, a "cellular radio telephone" is a wireless telephone authorized by the Federal Communications Commission to operate in the frequency bandwidth reserved for cellular radio telephones.ⁿ¹⁵ A "cordless telephone" is a two-way low-power communication system consisting of two parts (a "base" unit that is connected to the public switched telephone network, and a handset or "remote" unit) that are connected by a radio link and authorized by the Federal Communications Commission to operate in the frequency bandwidths reserved for cordless telephones.ⁿ¹⁶

[d] Exemptions

The statutory prohibitions on wiretapping, on eavesdropping on or recording confidential communications, and on interception of cellular radio telephone or cordless telephone communications do not apply to the following:ⁿ¹⁷

- Any public utility engaged in the business of providing communications services or facilities.
- The officers, employees, and agents of such a public utility, if the acts otherwise prohibited are done for the purpose of construction, maintenance, conduct, or operation of the services and facilities of the public entity.
- The use of any instrument, equipment, facility, or service furnished and used pursuant to the tariffs of such a public utility. The use of an extension telephone for eavesdropping on confidential communications does not fall within this exception.ⁿ¹⁸
- Any telephonic communication system used for communication exclusively within a public correctional facility.

In addition, the prohibition on eavesdropping or wiretapping on telephone or telegraph communications does not apply to a public entity acting in good faith in reliance on a court order authorizing interception of wire communications relating to certain controlled substance offenses.ⁿ¹⁹

The statutory prohibitions on wiretapping, on eavesdropping on or recording confidential communications, and on interception of cellular radio telephone or cordless telephone communications are not intended to prohibit law enforcement officers from overhearing or recording any communication that they could lawfully have overheard or recorded before those statutes became effective.ⁿ²⁰

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The provisions of Penal Code sections 630-637.5 place severe restrictions on an employer's ability to monitor the quality of the service rendered to its customers or clients by listening to the telephone conversations of its employees. One means to address this issue without engaging in unlawful eavesdropping is to give advance notice of, and thereafter randomly place, telephone calls to employees by persons claiming to be customers, but who actually are members of a quality control group within the employer's organization. Such quality control "customers" can ask questions regarding employer services and rate employees on the accuracy of the information supplied and on such other matters as courtesy and responsiveness. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[3] Enforcement[a] Criminal Penalties

A violation of any statutory prohibition on wiretapping, on eavesdropping on or recording confidential communications, or on the interception of cellular radio telephone or cordless telephone communications ordinarily is punishable by a fine of up to $2,500, by imprisonment in the county jail for up to one year, by imprisonment in the state prison,ⁿ²¹ or by both the fine and imprisonment.ⁿ²² However, if the defendant has previously been convicted of such a violation, he or she may be punished by a fine of up to $10,000, by imprisonment of up to one year in the county jail, by imprisonment in the state prison, or by both the fine and imprisonment.ⁿ²³ These punishments also apply to any person convicted of trespassing for the purpose of committing or attempting to commit any of the prohibited acts.ⁿ²⁴

[b] Civil Remedies

[i] Action for Damages

An employee or any other person who has been injured by a violation of the statutory prohibitions on wiretapping, on eavesdropping on or recording confidential communications, or on the interception of cellular radio telephone or cordless telephone communications may bring a civil action against the person who committed the violation.n25

The injured person is entitled to recover either $5,000 or three times the amount of any actual damages, whichever is greater.n26 The plaintiff need not have sustained or be threatened with actual damages; he or she may recover statutory damages of $5,000 without pleading or proof of actual damages.n27

[ii] Action for Injunctive Relief

An aggrieved employee or any other person may bring an action to enjoin and restrain any violation of the statutory prohibitions on wiretapping, on eavesdropping on or recording confidential communications, or on the interception of cellular radio telephone or cordless telephone communications.n28

An action for injunctive relief may be joined with an action for damages.n29

[c] FORM--Complaint for Damages and Injunction for Violation of Employee's Privacy Rights by Wiretapping or Unlawfully Eavesdropping[i] Comment

The form of complaint set forth in [ii], below, is for use by an employee against an employer who has violated the employee's privacy rights by unlawfully wiretapping, eavesdropping, or recording the employee's confidential communications.n30 For discussion of the prohibition on wiretapping, eavesdropping, and recording, see [2], above.

The complaint alleges the existence of the employer-employee relationship (Paragraph 3) and contains alternative allegations (Paragraph 4) (1) that the employer intentionally tapped or made an unauthorized connection with the employee's telephone and used the information so obtained, or that the employer willfully and without the consent of all parties to the communication, or in any other unauthorized manner, read or attempted to read or to learn the contents of the communication while it was in transit or as it was being sent or received in violation of Penal Code section 631(a); and (2) that the employer intentionally and without the consent of all parties to a confidential communication between the employee and another person or persons eavesdropped on or recorded the communication, in violation of Penal Code section 632(a). The form contains an optional allegation (Paragraph 6) of actual damages.n31 The form also contains optional allegations (Paragraph 5) for use when an injunction is sought.n32

The complaint must be filed within one year after the date on which the liability arose.n33

[ii] Form Complaint for Damages and Injunction for Violation of Employee's Privacy Rights by Wiretapping or Unlawfully Eavesdropping

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs. _____ [name],	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES FOR VIOLATION
Defendant.	)	OF EMPLOYEE'S PRIVACY RIGHTS BY UN-

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.19

-) LAWFULLY _____ ) [WIRETAPPING or EAVESDROPPING] [Penal Code §§ _____ (631 or 632), 637.2]
-

Plaintiff alleges:

1. [Capacity, residence of defendant. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 1].

[2. Where acts complained of occurred. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 2.]

3. [Relationship of parties. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 3].

[EITHER]

4. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] [O]n or about _____ [date], defendant intentionally tapped and/or made an unauthorized connection with plaintiff's telephone line and used such information by the following means: _____ [specify, e.g., on or about _____ (date), unknown to plaintiff, defendant installed an electronic device inside plaintiff's office telephone, without his/her knowledge or consent. Plaintiff is informed and believes that this electronic device transmitted a signal to a recording device in the office of _____ (name), defendant's general manager, enabling _____ (name) to listen in on and record all incoming and outgoing calls made through plaintiff's office telephone. Plaintiff discovered the existence of the electronic device in his/her office telephone on _____ (date), and plaintiff is informed and believes that from _____ (date), until at least _____ (date), defendant listened in on or recorded all telephone calls made through plaintiff's office telephone. On _____ (date), defendant terminated plaintiff's employment without good cause. Plaintiff is informed and believes that defendant used the information obtained through its unlawful eavesdropping and recording of confidential communications in making its decision to terminate plaintiff's employment]. Defendant's unauthorized connection with plaintiff's telephone line and use of information obtained thereby was in violation of Penal Code section 631(a).

[AND/OR]

4. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] [O]n or about _____ [date], defendant willfully and without the consent of all parties to the communication read or attempted to read or to learn the contents of a telephone message and/or communication between plaintiff and another person while it was in transit and/or as it was being sent or received by the following means: _____ [specify]. Defendant's unauthorized interception of plaintiff's telephone communication was in violation of Penal Code section 631(a).

[AND/OR]

4. [Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that] [O]n or about _____ [date], defendant intentionally and without the consent of all parties to a confidential communication between plaintiff and another person eavesdropped on and/or recorded the communication by the following means: _____ [specify].

Defendant's unauthorized eavesdropping on the confidential communication was in violation of Penal Code section 632(a).

[CONTINUE]

[5. Defendant's wrongful conduct, unless and until enjoined and restrained by order of this court, will cause great and irreparable injury to plaintiff, in that _____ (specify facts constituting great and irreparable harm to plaintiff). Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for the injuries currently being suffered in that _____ (specify facts showing inadequacy of legal remedy)].

[6. As a proximate result of defendant's unlawful _____ (wiretapping or eavesdropping) as herein alleged, plaintiff has suffered actual damages _____ (in the amount of $ _____ or in an amount to be proven at trial) in that _____ (specify nature of actual damages).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. For statutory damages in the sum of $5,000, or in the alternative, three times the amount of actual damages sustained by plaintiff, whichever amount is greater, as provided in Penal Code section 637.2(a);

[2. For an order requiring defendant to show cause, if any there be, why defendant should not be enjoined as hereinafter set forth during the pendency of this action;]

[3. For a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, and a permanent injunction, all enjoining defendant, and his/her/its agents, servants, and employees, and all persons acting under, in concert with, or for them, _____ (specify each act, course of conduct, and condition defendant is to be prohibited from doing and/or commanded to do, e.g., from listening in on and recording any and all confidential communications made through plaintiff's office telephone);]

4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

5. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Add verification, if desired (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5).]

[4] Comparison With Federal Law

Title III of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968³⁴ contains the federal law governing wiretapping and eavesdropping. Although principally aimed at regulating the electronic surveillance activities of law enforcement officials, the act also prescribes severe criminal penalties for any person found to have willfully violated the act and provides a civil remedy to persons aggrieved by its violation.³⁵ A crucial difference between California and federal law is that the former prohibits wiretapping and recording of confidential communications without the consent of all parties,³⁶ while the latter permits such activities with the consent of one party.³⁷ Furthermore, the "business extension exception" exempts from the operation of the federal act telephones furnished to the subscriber by a provider of wire or electronic communication service in the ordinary course of its business and being used by the subscriber in the ordinary course of its business.ⁿ³⁸ It has been held that personal calls may not be intercepted in the ordinary course of business, except to the extent necessary to guard against unauthorized use of the telephone or to determine whether a call is personal or not.ⁿ³⁹

[5] Federal Stored Communications Act

Generally, the federal Stored Communications Act^{n39.1} prevents "providers" of communication services from divulging private communications to certain entities and/or individuals.^{n39.2} Under the Stored Communications Act ("SCA"), employees may have the right, depending on their employers' stated policies and practices, to the confidentiality of text messages sent and received by the employee, even if they are sent and received on equipment provided by the employer, such as a computer or a pager. For example, in Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co.,^{n39.3} the Ninth Circuit held that a wireless service that provided wireless pagers to a city's police department provided an "electronic communication service" to the city under the SCA and acted "knowingly" when it released transcripts of text messages sent and received by one of the police officers to the city on his pager. When the service knowingly turned over the text-messaging transcripts to the city, which under the SCA was a "subscriber," not "an addressee or intended recipient of such communication," the service provider violated the SCA.^{n39.4} The court, relying in part on evidence that a supervisor had informed the employees that such messages would remain confidential, found in favor of the employee, as well as the recipients and senders of the transcribed text messages.

Note:

The United States Supreme Court has granted certiorari in the city's appeal in Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co.,^{n39.5} while denying certiorari in the service's appeal.^{n39.6}

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Criminal Law & Procedure Search & Seizure Electronic Eavesdropping General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Invasion of Privacy Labor & Employment Law Preemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Penal Code §§ 631, 632-632.7, 636; see Penal Code §§ 633, 633.1 (limited exemptions for law enforcement officers).

(n2)Footnote 2. Penal Code § 630.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Penal Code §§ 631(a), 632(a), 632.5(a), 632.6(a), 632.7(a); see also [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. Penal Code § 631(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Penal Code § 631(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. Penal Code § 632(a); see People v. Gibbons (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1204, 1208, 263 Cal. Rptr. 905 (prohibition applies to use of video recorder to eavesdrop).

(n7)Footnote 7. Penal Code § 632(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. Penal Code § 632(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. Penal Code § 632(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. Penal Code § 632(f).

(n11)Footnote 11. Penal Code § 632(d).

(n12)Footnote 12. Penal Code §§ 632.5(a), 632.6(a).

(n13)Footnote 13. Penal Code § 632.7(a)

(n14)Footnote 14. Penal Code § 632.7(c)(3).

(n15)Footnote 15. Penal Code §§ 632.5(c), 632.7(c)(1).

(n16)Footnote 16. Penal Code §§ 632.6(c), 632.7(c)(2).

(n17)Footnote 17. Penal Code §§ 631(b), 632(e), 632.5(b), 632.6(b), 632.7(b).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Ribas v. Clark (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 355, 362-363, 212 Cal. Rptr. 143, 696 P.2d 637 .

(n19)Footnote 19. Penal Code § 631(b); see Penal Code §§ 629-629.48.

(n20)Footnote 20. Penal Code § 633.

(n21)Footnote 21. See Penal Code § 18 (unless a different term is prescribed by statute, an offense punishable by imprisonment in state prison is punishable by imprisonment for 16 months, two years, or three years).

(n22)Footnote 22. Penal Code §§ 631(a), 632(a), 632.5(a), 632.6(a), 632.7(a).

(n23)Footnote 23. Penal Code §§ 631(a), 632(a), 632.5(a), 632.6(a), 632.7(a).

(n24)Footnote 24. Penal Code § 634.

(n25)Footnote 25. Penal Code § 637.2(a). For the standard jury instruction in a civil action based on Pen. Code §§ 632, 637.2, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1809 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim based on Pen. Code §§ 632, 637.2, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1807 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n26)Footnote 26. Penal Code § 637.2(a).

(n27)Footnote 27. Penal Code § 637.2(a)(1), (c); see Nagy v. Whittlesey Automotive Group (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 395 ; Coulter v. Bank of America (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 923, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 766 ; Ion Equipment Corp. v. Nelson (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 868, 882, 168 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

(n28)Footnote 28. Penal Code § 637.2(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 525 et seq.

(n29)Footnote 29. Penal Code § 637.2(b); see Penal Code § 637.2(a); see also [i], above.

(n30)Footnote 30. See Penal Code §§ 631, 632, 637.2.

(n31)Footnote 31. See Penal Code § 637.2(a). If no actual damages are suffered, plaintiff may still recover $5,000 in statutory damages. see Penal Code § 637.2(a), (c).

(n32)Footnote 32. See Penal Code § 637.2(b).

(n33)Footnote 33. See Code Civ. Proc. § 340(a).

(n34)Footnote 34. See 18 U.S.C. §§ 2510 et seq.

(n35)Footnote 35. See Citron v. Citron (S.D.N.Y. 1982) 539 F. Supp. 621, 624 , aff'd, 722 F.2d 14 (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1983) , cert. denied, 466 U.S. 973 (1984) ; 18 U.S.C. §§ 2511, 2520.

(n36)Footnote 36. See Penal Code §§ 631(a), 632(a).

(n37)Footnote 37. See 18 U.S.C. § 2511(2)(d).

(n38)Footnote 38. See 18 U.S.C. § 2510(5)(a)(i).

(n39)Footnote 39. Watkins v. L.M. Berry & Co. (11th Cir. 1983) 704 F.2d 577, 582-584 .

(n40)Footnote 39.1. 18 U.S.C. § 2701 et seq.

(n41)Footnote 39.2. Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 900 .

(n42)Footnote 39.3. Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 900-903 .

(n43)Footnote 39.4. See 18 U.S.C. § 2702(a)(1).

(n44)Footnote 39.5. See City of Ontario v. Quon (2009) 175 L. Ed. 2d 617 .

(n45)Footnote 39.6. See USA Mobility Wireless, Inc. v. Quon (2009) 175 L. Ed. 2d 618 .

15 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.20

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.20 Audio, Photographic and Video Recording

No private or public employer may cause an audio or video recording to be made of an employee in a restroom, locker room, or other room designated by the employer for changing clothes unless authorized by a court order.ⁿ⁴⁰ No recording made in violation of this statute may be used by the employer for any purpose.ⁿ⁴¹ This ban does not apply to the federal government.ⁿ⁴²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Criminal Law & Procedure Search & Seizure Electronic Eavesdropping General Overview Criminal Law & Procedure Search & Seizure Electronic Eavesdropping Sealing Requirements Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Invasion of Privacy

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 40. Lab. Code § 435(a)-(c) (violation constitutes infraction).

(n2)Footnote 41. Lab. Code § 435(b).

(n3)Footnote 42. Lab. Code § 435(b).

16 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees

Part B. STATUTORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

3-50 California Employment Law §§ 50.21 through 50.29

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 50.21[Reserved]

17 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part C. CONSTITUTIONAL AND COMMON LAW PRIVACY ISSUES

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.30

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.30 Constitutional Privacy Protections

[1] California Constitution

[a] Nature and Scope of Right to Privacy

[i] Rights Protected

In November 1972, California voters amended Article I, Section 1, of the California Constitution to include an express right of privacy among the various "inalienable rights" of the people. In the leading case interpreting the constitutional cause of action for invasion of privacy, Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,ⁿ¹ the California Supreme Court limited the scope of state constitutional protection to specific, legally-protected privacy interests. The Court examined the analysis and arguments contained in the official ballot pamphlet to determine the voters' intent in enacting the provision.ⁿ²

The Hill Court identified the core values furthered by the constitutional right as informational privacy and autonomy privacy.ⁿ³ Informational privacy embodies the right against the unauthorized dissemination or misuse of sensitive and confidential information.ⁿ⁴ Autonomy privacy refers to the federal constitutional tradition of safeguarding certain intimate and personal decisions from government interference.ⁿ⁵ Whether a legally protected privacy interest exists depends on social norms, common law developments, constitutional development, statutory enactment, and the ballot arguments for the privacy initiative.ⁿ⁶

The right to privacy in the California Constitution sets standards similar to the common law tort of intrusion.^{n6.1}

[ii] Protection Encompasses Nongovernmental Action

The state constitutional right of privacy may be enforced against private entities. In Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,ⁿ⁷ the California Supreme Court rejected the defendant's arguments that the state constitutional right only applied to governmental intrusions, and concluded that the right's protections encompass intrusions caused by private conduct. The Court noted that court of appeal decisions had consistently reached the conclusion that, in contrast to the federal right of privacy, the state constitutional right of privacy may be enforced against private parties.ⁿ⁸

Although the Court in Hill allowed the right of privacy to be enforced against private entities, the Court concluded that the relative strength and importance of the right was not necessarily the same in cases of private, as opposed to governmental, action because of the following considerations:ⁿ⁹

1. The pervasive presence of coercive government power in basic areas of human life poses greater dangers to freedom than does private conduct.
2. An individual generally has greater choice and alternatives when dealing with private entities, as opposed to the government.
3. Some private conduct, such as the activities of voluntary associations, carries its own mantle of constitutional protection in the form of freedom of association.

Employers often encounter constitutional right of privacy arguments in connection with electronic communications by employees on employer-provided equipment, such as computers, pagers, cellular telephones, etc.^{n9.1} The privacy right protected by Cal. Const., art. I, § 1 in the area of search and seizure is coextensive with the privacy right protected by the Fourth Amendment.^{n9.2} Thus, courts may utilize a Fourth Amendment analysis for claims by employees of violation of their privacy rights under the California Constitution by searches and/or seizures by the employer and others.

In Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co.,^{n9.3} because the employer was a public employer, the Ninth Circuit used a Fourth Amendment analysis to address privacy claims. The plaintiffs had also alleged a cause of action for violation of the California constitutional right to privacy, which the court found to be coterminous with their rights under the Fourth Amendment analysis.^{n9.4} The employer had a formal, written policy that no employee had a right to expect privacy or confidentiality in any communications sent or received on equipment supplied by the employer.^{n9.5} The employer also had an informal policy that text messages sent and received on a pager supplied to the employer by a wireless service would not be audited by the employer if the pager-user paid the cost of any characters over the amount allowed. Despite the informal policy, the employer asked the wireless service to provide transcripts of text messages sent and received by one employee. When the wireless service provided the messages, the employee and the senders and recipients of text messages to and from him sued for violations of privacy. The court found first that despite the employer's policy the plaintiffs had a reasonable expectation of privacy. Although the extent to which the Fourth Amendment provided protection for the contents of electronic communications in the Internet age was an open question, the court found that users of text messaging services such as those at issue in Quon have a reasonable expectation of privacy in their text messages stored on the service provider's network.^{n9.6} E-mail users have no expectation of privacy in the to/from addresses of their messages because they should know that this information is provided to and used by Internet service providers for the specific purpose of directing the routing of information.^{n9.7} However, e-mail users do have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the content of their e-mails vis-a-vis the service provider.^{n9.8} That the service provider may be able to access the contents of the messages for its own purposes is irrelevant.^{n9.9} In Quon, the senders and recipients of e-mails to the officer did not expect that the wireless service provider would monitor their text messages, much less turn over the messages to third parties, including his employer, without their consent, and since the employer surreptitiously reviewed the messages without the consent of the officer, as a matter of law, they had a reasonable expectation the employer would not review their messages absent consent from either a sender or recipient of the text messages.^{n9.10} The employee also had a reasonable expectation of privacy, because the employer's informal policy that the text messages would not be audited if he paid the overages rendered the employee's expectation of privacy in those messages reasonable, because the employer's formal policy was not the operational reality. The supervisor in charge of administering the use of the city-owned pagers had made it clear to the staff, and to the employee in particular, that he would not audit their pagers so long as they agreed to pay for any overages. Before the events that transpired in Quon, the employer did not audit any employee's use of the pager for the eight months the pagers had been in use, and the employee had exceeded the character limit three or four times, and had paid for the overages every time without anyone reviewing the text of the messages. This demonstrated that the employer followed its informal policy and the employee reasonably relied on it. The court then found that the search was not reasonable, even though the employer's purpose in auditing the text messages was to determine the efficacy of the character limit, which was a legitimate work-related rationale. However, the search was not reasonable in scope, because there were alternative ways to verify the efficacy of the character limit without intruding on the plaintiffs' Fourth Amendment rights.^{9.11}

Note:

The United States Supreme Court has granted certiorari in the city's appeal in Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co.,^{9.12} while denying certiorari in the service's appeal.^{9.13}

■ PRACTICE TIP:

In the Quon case, the Ninth Circuit gave great weight to the statement of the supervisor in charge of administering the use of the city-owned pagers regarding the employer's informal policy, which implicated the employer's lack of enforcement of its own formal policy regarding electronic communications. Absent that statement or similar evidence regarding the employer's formal policy and its operational reality, the case might have come out differently. The message for employers with formal policies regarding the nonprivate and nonconfidential nature of electronic communications using its equipment is to make sure that none of their agents vary in practice from the formal policy established in writing by the employer. Employers might even want to state explicitly in their policies that no employee other than the appropriate level of employee has authority to waive, vary or amend the employer's email policy.

[b] Essential Elements of Privacy Action

In Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,¹⁰ the California Supreme Court set forth three essential elements for a cause of action for invasion of the state constitutional right of privacy:^{10.1}

1. A legally-protected privacy interest.¹¹
2. A reasonable expectation of privacy.
3. A serious invasion of the privacy interest.

In Loder v. City of Glendale,¹² the California Supreme Court explained that these elements are threshold elements that are used to screen out insignificant intrusions. Once these elements are established, the court must then weigh and balance the employer's justification for the invasive conduct against the resulting intrusion on privacy.¹³

The plaintiff in an invasion of privacy case has the burden of establishing each element.¹⁴ The first element, whether a legally protected privacy interest exists, is a question of law¹⁵ that depends on social norms, common law developments, constitutional development, statutory enactment, and an analysis of the ballot arguments for the privacy initiative.¹⁶ Legally protected privacy interests include conducting personal activities without observation, intrusion, or interference as determined by established social norms derived from such sources as the common law and statutory enactment.^{16.1}

The second element, whether the plaintiff's expectation of privacy is reasonable, is a mixed question of law and fact.¹⁷ Factors affecting the extent of a privacy interest include advance notice of impending action, customs, societal norms and practices, physical settings surrounding particular activities, and the presence or absence of opportunities for voluntary consent.ⁿ¹⁸

The third element, whether the defendant's invasion of privacy is serious, is a mixed question of law and fact.ⁿ¹⁹ An actionable invasion of privacy under California Constitution, Article I, Section 1 must be sufficiently serious in its nature, scope, and actual or potential impact to constitute an egregious breach of the social norms underlying the privacy right.ⁿ²⁰

[c] Competing Interest Defense--Balancing Test

In Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,ⁿ²¹ the California Supreme Court recognized a competing interest defense that allows defendants to justify an invasion of privacy by asserting legitimate competing or countervailing interests.^{n21.1} This defense is less rigorous than the "compelling interest" defense referred to in previous appellate decisions. The Court in Hill limited the application of the compelling interest test to cases involving either "obvious government action impacting freedom of expression and association" or an "obvious invasion of an interest fundamental to personal autonomy."ⁿ²²

The competing interest defense involves the use of a balancing test that compares the specifically identified privacy interests of the plaintiff with legitimate competing and countervailing nonprivacy interests asserted by the defendant.ⁿ²³ If the interests asserted by the defendant justify the invasion of privacy, the intrusion does not violate the California Constitution. The relative importance of an asserted interest depends on its proximity to the central functions of a particular public or private enterprise.ⁿ²⁴

For purposes of the balancing function, and except in the rare case in which a fundamental right of personal autonomy is involved, the defendant need not present a compelling countervailing interest. Only general balancing tests are employed.^{n24.1} To the extent the plaintiff raises the issue in response to a claim or defense of competing interests, the defendant may show that less intrusive alternative means were not reasonably available. A relevant inquiry is whether the intrusion was limited, such that no confidential information was gathered or disclosed.^{n24.2}

In Hill, the California Supreme Court applied the competing interest defense for the first time.ⁿ²⁵ The plaintiffs were student athletes who established a prima facie case that a drug testing program administered by a private athletic association violated their state constitutional right of privacy.ⁿ²⁶ The drug testing program required the student athletes to provide urine samples under direct visual observation and to disclose medical information that could have caused embarrassment to individual athletes. The Court held that the athletes' privacy interest in urination was outweighed by two competing interests that justified the NCAA's conduct:ⁿ²⁷

1. Safeguarding the integrity of intercollegiate athletic competition; and
2. Protecting the health and safety of student athletes.

The first interest was persuasive, "whatever the provable incidence of drug use," to combat the perception that the use of certain drugs may enhance athletic performance and because of the practical realities of intercollegiate sports.ⁿ²⁸ The second interest exists for the benefit of all persons involved in sporting events, as well as the sport itself.ⁿ²⁹ The Court also found that the athletes' privacy interest in the confidentiality of medical treatment and information was not violated by the NCAA because the types of medical questions answered were routine in the athletic context, and the medical procedures had sufficient safeguards to protect the confidentiality of medical information furnished by the athletes.ⁿ³⁰

The plaintiff may rebut the assertion of a competing interest by showing that there are feasible and effective alternatives to the defendant's conduct that would have a lesser impact on privacy interests.ⁿ³¹ In Hill, the Court found that uncontradicted evidence in the record demonstrated as a matter of law the constitutional validity of the NCAA's program.ⁿ³²

[d] Compelling Interest Defense

In Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,ⁿ³³ the California Supreme Court rejected the blanket use of the compelling interest defense, which requires a defendant to justify an invasion of privacy by proving both (1) a compelling interest, and (2) the absence of any alternative, less-intrusive means of accomplishing that interest.ⁿ³⁴ The Court analyzed its previous decision in White v. Davis,ⁿ³⁵ as applying only to some aspects of the right of privacy under California Constitution, Article I, Section 1, such as those that implicate obvious government action impacting freedom of expression.ⁿ³⁶ The Court also suggested that the compelling interest standard is applicable in cases involving an obvious invasion of an interest fundamental to personal autonomy, such as freedom from involuntary fertilization or the freedom to pursue consensual familial relationships.ⁿ³⁷ If the privacy right is less central, then the "balancing test" standard applies, and this test is less stringent than the compelling interest standard.ⁿ³⁸

Hill culminates a trend in California case law that makes it clear that "not every act which has some impact on personal privacy invokes the protections of the state's Constitution and requires such justification."ⁿ³⁹

Counsel should approach privacy cases decided before Hill with caution. The California Supreme Court has made it clear that the Hill standard will apply to future claims for invasion of the state constitutional right to privacy. The Court offered no analysis on the continuing vitality of cases decided before Hill.ⁿ⁴⁰

[e] Application to Employer-Employee Relationship

As noted in [a][ii], above, the right of privacy set forth in California Constitution, Article I, Section 1, has been held to be applicable to the conduct of private businesses and individuals.ⁿ⁴¹ Thus, the constitutional right of privacy represents a potential limitation on any type of practice or procedure whereby an employer attempts to gather private information about an employee or applicant. The actual scope of the limitations placed on the employer must be determined by a careful analysis of the interests involved in each particular case, and by a balancing of those interests.ⁿ⁴²

In Loder v. City of Glendale,ⁿ⁴³ the California Supreme Court applied the balancing test established in Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,ⁿ⁴⁴ to determine the constitutionality of preemployment drug testing. The court overcame the threshold requirements set forth in Hill, i.e., that drug testing which (1) requires individuals to provide a urine sample under surveillance, (2) uses the sample to acquire information about the individual's internal physical state, and (3) requires an individual to disclose those medications he or she currently is taking "clearly intrudes on both autonomy privacy interests and informational privacy interests which are protected by the state Constitution."ⁿ⁴⁵ The Court, however, found that the actual intrusion was lessened by the fact that the drug testing was part of a preemployment medical examination which a job applicant "reasonably must anticipate." It then balanced that intrusion against the employer's interest in avoiding the financial burdens and morale problems caused by an employee's abuse of drugs or alcohol.ⁿ⁴⁶ The court determined that the limited intrusion caused by a drug test performed on an individual who was already undergoing a complete medical examination was justified by the city's interests.ⁿ⁴⁷

Courts of appeal have applied Hill to the employment setting. Pettus v. Cole ⁿ⁴⁸ involved an employer who requested and obtained psychiatric information regarding an employee and used that information to make an adverse employment decision.ⁿ⁴⁹ The court found that the employee established legally cognizable informational and autonomy privacy rights,ⁿ⁵⁰ that he had a reasonable expectation of privacy,ⁿ⁵¹ that the intrusion was seriousⁿ⁵² and that there were less intrusive means to serve the countervailing interests of the employer.ⁿ⁵³

However, in Feminist Women's Health Center v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁵⁴ the court concluded that the employee's right to privacy was not violated by a requirement that employees of a women's health center demonstrate cervical self-examination to female clients and employees. Although the court stated that the requirement was an invasion of privacy, it concluded that the employee had a substantially diminished expectation of privacy because she had agreed at the outset of her employment to perform the self-exams. It also found that the self-examination was a reasonable requirement for the job in question.ⁿ⁵⁵

In TBG Ins. Servs. Corp. v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁵⁶ the court, applying Hill, assumed that a terminated employee whose employer had provided a computer for home use but who allegedly used the computer to access pornographic web sites had an abstract privacy interest in the personal and financial information on the computer. The court concluded, however, that the employee had no reasonable expectation of privacy under the circumstances. The employee had signed the employer's "electronic and telephone equipment policy statement" and had agreed in writing that his computers could be monitored by his employer. The issue arose when the later sued the employer and the employer demanded production of the home computer. The court found that in the 21st century computer-dependent business community, the use of computers in the employment context carries with it social norms that effectively diminish an employee's reasonable expectation of privacy with regard to the use of the employer's computers, including the employer's reasonable monitoring of computer usage.ⁿ⁵⁷ The court then found that the employer's advance notice to the employee in the form of the company's policy statement gave the employee the opportunity to consent to or reject the employer's monitoring of his computer use at the office and at home, and that the notice, combined with his written consent to the policy, defeats his claim that he had a reasonable expectation of privacy.ⁿ⁵⁸ Finally, the court found that the employer's demand for production was not a serious invasion of any lingering privacy interest the employee had in the information he stored on the home computer and that appropriate protective orders could define the scope of the employer's inspection and copying of information on the computer to that directly relevant to the litigation and prohibit unnecessary copying and dissemination of the employee's financial and other information that had no rational bearing on the case.ⁿ⁵⁹

In Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn.,ⁿ⁶⁰ a private nonprofit association that administers police officers' benefits terminated one of its employees for her refusal to end an intimate relationship with an incarcerated felon. The court examined the three elements of a constitutional privacy claimⁿ⁶¹ to decide whether the employer's invasion of privacy was more than de minimus.ⁿ⁶²

Having concluded that Ortiz's claim satisfied the requirements of a serious invasion of privacy, it proceeded to evaluate the parties' competing interests. The court held first that the employer's conflict-of-interest rule, which required that the employee end the relationship or resign, was valid if it was rationally related to a legitimate employer interest, and did not warrant analysis under a strict scrutiny standard.ⁿ⁶³ The court then found that the conflict-of-interest rule served the employer's legitimate interests in preventing the improper disclosure of confidential information about police officers to criminals,ⁿ⁶⁴ and was a rational means of pursuing its legitimate interests.^{n64.1} The court concluded that the employee had not shown there were feasible and effective alternatives to the employer's conduct which would have had a lesser impact on privacy interests.ⁿ⁶⁵

In Barbee v. Household Automotive Finance Corp.,^{n65.1} the employer's termination of the employee based on his violation of a company policy restricting inter-company dating did not violate his state constitutional right to privacy. The employee may have had a legally protected privacy interest in pursuing an intimate or sexual relationship guaranteed by the California Constitution.^{n65.2} However, the employee could not prove a reasonable expectation of privacy in pursuing an intimate relationship with a subordinate because employers have legitimate interests in avoiding conflicts of interest between work-related and family-related obligations, reducing favoritism or even the appearance of favoritism; and preventing family conflicts from affecting the workplace, strongly suggesting that a supervisor has no reasonable expectation of privacy in pursuing an intimate relationship with a subordinate.^{n65.3} Courts have also recognized that managerial-subordinate relationships present issues of potential sexual harassment.^{n65.4} The company had an express policy requiring any supervisor who wanted to maintain an intimate relationship with a subordinate bring the matter to the attention of management to allow management the opportunity to take appropriate action to avoid the potential conflict of interest. Further, the employee's superiors expressly told him that intercompany dating was a bad idea, giving him advance notice that the company believed his conducting an intimate relationship with a subordinate would present a potential conflict of interest. The notice further diminished any expectation of privacy the employee otherwise may have had in pursuing an intimate relationship with a subordinate.ⁿ⁶⁶

Employers should exercise caution when inquiring into any arguably private matters concerning an employee and should be prepared to justify both its need for the information and the means of acquiring that information. Thus, when investigating an employee or applicant for any purpose, employers should endeavor to limit both the scope of the information sought and the means of acquiring it in order to avoid unnecessary invasion of an employee's or applicant's privacy.

Privacy issues may arise in a number of employment contexts, including the following:

1. Questions asked in employment applications and hiring interviews;
2. Preemployment investigations into an employee's qualifications, reliability, or character;
3. Physical or medical examinations of employees or applicants, including drug or alcohol screening; and
4. Investigation of employees for the purpose of ascertaining violations of law or of the employer's policies, including surveillance of the employee or searches of the employee's workplace or personal belongings.

Privacy considerations relating to investigative searches, medical examinations, and drug and alcohol tests are further discussed in Part D (§§ 50.40-50.43).

[f] Remedies

Injunctive relief is available as a remedy for violation of the privacy clause of the California Constitution.^{n66.1} The California Supreme Court has not yet considered whether violation of the state constitutional privacy clause permits an action for damages.^{n66.2}

Public employers covered by the California Tort Claims Act are entitled to the immunity provided by Gov. Code § 821.6 for alleged conduct that might otherwise violate the state constitutional privacy provision.^{n66.3} The litigation privilege also applies to a constitutionally based privacy cause of action.^{n66.4}

[2] Federal Constitution

Several fundamental guarantees have been recognized by the courts as the source of a right of privacy under the United States Constitution. Among the provisions creating this right of privacy are the First Amendment (protecting the right to receive and express ideas), the Fourth Amendment (protecting against governmental invasions of the home and other places with respect to which persons entertain a reasonable expectation of privacy),^{n66.5} the Fifth Amendment (protecting against compulsory self-incrimination), and the Ninth Amendment (protecting rights not enumerated in the Constitution, but nevertheless retained by the people). These federal constitutional rights, by virtue of the Due Process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, are protected against interference by the state.ⁿ⁶⁷ Thus, they generally will be inapplicable to actions by private employers.ⁿ⁶⁸ However, if private employees are subject to some type of government regulation, the circumstances must be evaluated to determine whether that regulation transforms otherwise private action into government action for purposes of the Fourth Amendment. For example, the United States Supreme Court has held that federal regulations that provide for mandatory drug and alcohol testing of private railroad employees are within the purview of the Fourth Amendment. It also found, under the circumstances, that the Fourth Amendment was applicable to regulations providing for permissive drug and alcohol testing of private railroad employees.^{n68.1}

Under the Fourth Amendment, a public employer's action to uncover information is considered a search if the target of the search has a reasonable expectation of privacy in the information being sought, which means a subjective expectation of privacy that society is prepared to recognize as reasonable.^{n68.2} One does not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in one's information merely because that information is of a "private" nature,^{n68.3} and the Fourth Amendment does not prohibit obtaining information revealed to third party and conveyed by third party to Government authorities.^{n68.4} Thus, written inquiries sent to third parties, no matter how private the subject of their questioning, cannot be considered searches.^{n68.5} Further, the Fourth Amendment has not generally been applied to direct questioning.^{n68.6} Thus, the insistence of NASA that employees submit to in-depth background investigations was not likely to be found to violate employees' right of privacy under the Fourth Amendment, because the government's actions were not likely to be deemed searches.ⁿ⁶⁹

An employer's cooperation with law enforcement authorities may also implicate an employee's constitutional rights in a private employment context. For example, after a report to federal law enforcement authorities that an employee had accessed child-pornographic websites from his workplace computer, the employer cooperated in the investigation and had other employees voluntarily turn over a copy of the hard drive of the employee's computer to the F.B.I. without a search warrant. After being indicted, the employee moved to suppress the evidence obtained from the search of his computer on the ground that the F.B.I. agent, lacking a warrant, violated the Fourth Amendment by directing the other employees to search his computer. The district court denied the motion on the ground that the employee had no reasonable expectation of privacy in the files he accessed on the Internet.^{n69.1} The Ninth Circuit, however, found that the employee did have a reasonable expectation of privacy in his workplace computer and the files stored on it. His subjective expectation of privacy in his office and the computer were evidenced by his use of a password on his computer and the lock on his private office door. The court then held that the employee also had an objectively reasonable expectation of privacy. The court cited Mancusi v. DeForte,^{n69.2} in which the United States Supreme Court held that a union employee had a legitimate expectation of privacy in the contents of records he stored in an office he shared with several other union officials and therefore standing under the Fourth Amendment to object to the search and that the search was unreasonable. The Supreme Court found it clear that if the union employee had occupied a private office in union headquarters, and union records had been seized from a desk or a filing cabinet in that office, he would have had standing, because he could expect that he would not be disturbed except by business or personal invitees and that the records would not be taken except with the permission of his supervisors. The fact that the office was shared with a few other individuals was of no constitutional distinction.^{n69.3}

In United States v. Ziegler,^{n69.4} the Ninth Circuit found that Mancusi compels it to recognize that in the private employer context, employees retain at least some expectation of privacy in their offices.^{n69.5} In Ziegler, the employee's expectation of privacy in his office was reasonable, because his office was not shared by co-workers, and he kept it locked.^{n69.6} The existence of a master key did not necessarily defeat a reasonable expectation of privacy in an office given over for personal use.^{n69.7} Because Ziegler had a reasonable expectation of privacy in his office, any search of that space and the items located in the office had to comply with the Fourth Amendment.^{n69.8} The court then found that there clearly was a search and seizure by the government so as to invoke the Fourth Amendment.^{n69.9} Nonetheless, although the employee retained a legitimate expectation of privacy in his office, the search and seizure were not unreasonable, because his employer retained the ability to consent to a search of the office and his business computer, and because the employer gave a valid third party consent to search the office and computer located in the office.^{n69.10} The employer had the authority to consent to the search because it exercised "common authority" over the office and workplace computer, had complete administrative access to all employees' machines, routinely monitored workers' computer use, and had installed a firewall to monitor internet traffic. Moreover, the company informed employees of its monitoring efforts and that the company's computers should not be used for personal reasons.

For discussion of privacy issues relating to drug and alcohol testing, see § 50.43.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Constitutional Law Substantive Due Process Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Constitutional Protections Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 16-18, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; see also White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 775 n.11, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 35-36, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1301, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 35, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1301-1302, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 ; see White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 774, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 ; see also Planned Parenthood Golden Gate v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 347, 367-369, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627 (privacy rights of abortion clinic's non-party employees, staff and volunteers outweighed state's interest in compelling disclosure of names, addresses and phone numbers in litigation brought by anti-abortion protestors).

(n5)Footnote 5. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 35, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1301, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 36, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n7)Footnote 6.1. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 ; Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 27, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 . For discussion of the elements of a state constitutional privacy action, see [b], below. For discussion of the elements of the common law tort of intrusion, see § 50.31[1][a], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 16-20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n9)Footnote 8. See, e.g., Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1299-1314, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (applying right of privacy to private employer's termination of employee of organization administering police officers' benefits for refusal to terminate romantic relationship with incarcerated felon, but finding no violation); Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1040, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (applying constitutional right of privacy to private employer's preemployment drug-testing program, but finding no violation).

(n10)Footnote 9. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 38-39, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n11)Footnote 9.1. See, e.g., Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892 .

(n12)Footnote 9.2. See Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 903 ; Hill v. Natl. Collegiate Ath. Ass'n (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 30 n.9, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n13)Footnote 9.3. Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 903-909 .

(n14)Footnote 9.4. Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 903 .

(n15)Footnote 9.5. See, e.g., Muick v. Glenayre Elecs. (7th Cir. 2002) 280 F.3d 741, 743 (employer announced that it could inspect laptops it furnished for use of its employees, which destroyed any reasonable expectation of privacy employee might have had); Bohach v. City of Reno (D. Nev. 1996) 932 F. Supp. 1232, 1234-35 (finding diminished expectation of privacy under Fourth Amendment where police department had issued memorandum informing employees that messages sent on city-issued pagers would be logged on department's network and certain types of messages were banned from system, and because any employee with access to, and working knowledge of, department's computer system could see messages). See also O'Connor v. Ortega (1987) 480 U.S. 709, 719, 107 S. Ct. 1492, 94 L. Ed. 2d 714 (expectation of privacy would not be reasonable if employer had established any reasonable regulation or policy discouraging employees from storing personal papers and effects in their desks or file cabinets); Schowengerdt v. General Dynamics Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 1328, 1335 (employee would enjoy reasonable expectation of privacy in areas given over to his exclusive use, unless he was on notice from his employer that searches of type to which he was subjected might occur from time to time for work-related purposes).

(n16)Footnote 9.6. Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 904-908 .

(n17)Footnote 9.7. United States v. Forrester (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 500, 510 .

(n18)Footnote 9.8. Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 905-908 . See also United States v. Finley (5th Cir. 2007) 477 F.3d 250, 259 (defendant had reasonable expectation of privacy in text messages on his cell phone and consequently had standing to challenge search).

(n19)Footnote 9.9. Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 905-906 . See United States v. Heckenkamp, 482 F.3d 1142, 1146-47 (9th Cir. 2007) (student did not lose his reasonable expectation of privacy in information stored on his computer despite university policy that it could access his computer in limited circumstances while connected to university's network); United States v. Ziegler, 474 F.3d 1184, 1189-90 (9th Cir. 2007) (employee had reasonable expectation of privacy in computer in locked office despite company policy that computer usage would be monitored).

(n20)Footnote 9.10. Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 906 .

(n21)Footnote 9.11. Quon v. Arch Wireless Operating Co. (9th Cir. 2008) 529 F.3d 892, 907-909 .

(n22)Footnote 9.12. See City of Ontario v. Quon (2009) 175 L. Ed. 2d 617 .

(n23)Footnote 9.13. See USA Mobility Wireless, Inc. v. Quon (2009) 175 L. Ed. 2d 618.

(n24)Footnote 10. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 39-40, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 . See also Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 .

(n25)Footnote 10.1. For the standard jury instruction on what is required to establish a claim under the right to privacy protected under the California constitution, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1806 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim for violation of the right to privacy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1805 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n26)Footnote 11. See Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1302-1304, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (part of legally protected autonomy privacy-interest recognizes right of intimate association and right to marry).

(n27)Footnote 12. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 (drug testing by public employer).

(n28)Footnote 13. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 893-894, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n29)Footnote 14. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 39, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n30)Footnote 15. Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1300, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n31)Footnote 16. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 36, 40, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; see also [a][i], above.

(n32)Footnote 16.1. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 .

(n33)Footnote 17. Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1300, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (if undisputed material facts show no reasonable expectation of privacy, question of invasion may be adjudicated as matter of law).

(n34)Footnote 18. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287, 288-294, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 (element rests on examination of customs, practices, and physical settings surrounding particular activities, as well as opportunity to be notified in advance and consent to intrusion; Court of Appeal did not err as matter of law in finding prima facie case on question of whether employer's secret video surveillance measures intruded upon employees' reasonable expectations of privacy simply because employer never intended to view or record employees or because employer did not capture employees' images at all, where employees had no reasonable expectation their employer would intrude so tangibly into their semiprivate office); Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 36-37, 40, 42, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 (upholding constitutionality of direct visual monitoring of urination by collegiate athletes after determining that they have a diminished expectation of privacy).

(n35)Footnote 19. Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1300, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (if undisputed material facts show insubstantial impact on privacy interests, question of invasion may be adjudicated as matter of law).

(n36)Footnote 20. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287, 295-301, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 (employees could not reasonably expect to establish that intrusion into privacy by secretly installed video system was sufficiently serious, where, from standpoint of reasonable person based on employer's vigorous efforts to avoid intruding on employees' visual privacy altogether, activation of video surveillance system was narrowly tailored in place, time, and scope, and was prompted by legitimate business concerns, and where employees were not at risk of being monitored or recorded during regular work hours and were never actually caught on camera or videotape); Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37, 40, 43-52, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 (direct visual observation of urination is a very serious intrusion, but no violation of privacy right found due to justifying competing interests).

(n37)Footnote 21. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37-38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 . See also Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287-288, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 .

(n38)Footnote 21.1. For the standard jury instruction on the competing interest defense, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1807 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see §

61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for the competing interest defense, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1806 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n39)Footnote 22. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; see discussion in [d], below.

(n40)Footnote 23. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 (applying this test to NCAA drug testing program for student athletes and finding no violation).

(n41)Footnote 24. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n42)Footnote 24.1. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 288, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 ; Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n43)Footnote 24.2. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 288, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 ; Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n44)Footnote 25. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 40-57, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n45)Footnote 26. For discussion of the essential elements of a plaintiff's case, see [b], above.

(n46)Footnote 27. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 43-44, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n47)Footnote 28. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 45-46, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n48)Footnote 29. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 46, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n49)Footnote 30. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 52-54, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n50)Footnote 31. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 40, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n51)Footnote 32. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 40-57, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n52)Footnote 33. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34-35, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n53)Footnote 34. See, e.g., White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 776, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 .

(n54)Footnote 35. White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 .

(n55)Footnote 36. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n56)Footnote 37. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n57)Footnote 38. See discussion in [c], above.

(n58)Footnote 39. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1046-1048, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 , citing, e.g., Schmidt v. Superior Court (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 370, 375-391, 256 Cal. Rptr. 750, 769 P.2d 932 ; and Alarcon v. Murphy (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5, 248 Cal. Rptr. 26 (applying test of objectively reasonable expectation of privacy in finding no violation of privacy by city's disclosure of identity of murder suspect arrested by police).

(n59)Footnote 40. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 55-56 n.20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n60)Footnote 41. See Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Pettus v. Cole (1996) 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 ; Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1040-1044, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (preemployment drug testing by private employers).

(n61)Footnote 42. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 39, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1046, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; see discussion in [c], [d], above.

(n62)Footnote 43. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n63)Footnote 44. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n64)Footnote 45. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 896, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n65)Footnote 46. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 897-898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n66)Footnote 47. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n67)Footnote 48. Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 402, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n68)Footnote 49. Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 402, 457, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n69)Footnote 50. Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 402, 457-458, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n70)Footnote 51. Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 402, 458-460, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n71)Footnote 52. Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 402, 460, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n72)Footnote 53. Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 402, 460-462, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n73)Footnote 54. Feminist Women's Health Ctr. v. Superior Court (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1234, 1244-1249, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 187 .

(n74)Footnote 55. Feminist Women's Health Ctr. v. Superior Court (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1234, 1244-1249, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 187 .

(n75)Footnote 56. TBG Ins. Servs. Corp. v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 443, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155 .

(n76)Footnote 57. TBG Ins. Servs. Corp. v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 443, 450-452, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155 .

(n77)Footnote 58. TBG Ins. Servs. Corp. v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 443, 452-453, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155 .

(n78)Footnote 59. TBG Ins. Servs. Corp. v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 443, 453, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 155 .

(n79)Footnote 60. Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n80)Footnote 61. See Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37-38, 43, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 (elements are (i) legally protected privacy interest, (ii) reasonable expectation of privacy, and (iii) seriousness of invasion of privacy interest; See also § 50.30[1][b]).

(n81)Footnote 62. Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1301-1307, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670

(n82)Footnote 63. Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1312, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n83)Footnote 64. Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1313, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n84)Footnote 64.1. Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1313-1314, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n85)Footnote 65. Ortiz v. Los Angeles Police Relief Assn. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1288, 1314, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n86)Footnote 65.1. Barbee v. Household Automotive Finance Corp. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 525, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 .

(n87)Footnote 65.2. Barbee v. Household Automotive Finance Corp. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 525, 531, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 (no California case has decided that state constitution protects right to pursue intimate relationship and court assumed possibility of right without resolving for purposes of analysis of case).

(n88)Footnote 65.3. Barbee v. Household Automotive Finance Corp. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 525, 532, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 . See also Parks v. City of Warner Robins, Ga. (11th Cir. 1995) 43 F.3d 609, 615 .

(n89)Footnote 65.4. Barbee v. Household Automotive Finance Corp. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 525, 532, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 . See also Crosier v. United Parcel Service (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1140, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 (employers are legitimately concerned with possible claims of sexual harassment created by romantic relationships between management and nonmanagement employees); Holly D. v. California Institute of Technology (9th Cir. 2003) 339 F.3d 1158 (plaintiff contending she was coerced into performing unwanted sexual acts with her supervisor by threats of discharge if she failed to comply with his demands has alleged tangible employment action under Title VII which, if proved, would entitle her to relief against her employer).

(n90)Footnote 66. Barbee v. Household Automotive Finance Corp. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 525, 532-533 ., 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 .

(n91)Footnote 66.1. White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 ; Richardson-Tunnell v. Schools Ins. Program for Employees (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1056, 1066, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 176 .

(n92)Footnote 66.2. Katzberg v. Regents of University of California (2002) 29 Cal. 4th 300, 313, fn. 13, 315, n. 16, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 482, 58 P.3d 339 . See Richardson-Tunnell v. Schools Ins. Program for Employees (2007) 157

Cal. App. 4th 1056, 1066, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 176 .

(n93)Footnote 66.3. Richardson-Tunnell v. Schools Ins. Program for Employees (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1056, 1066, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 176 .

(n94)Footnote 66.4. See Jacob B. v. County of Shasta (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 948, 961, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 477, 154 P.3d 1003 .

(n95)Footnote 66.5. For the standard jury instruction for the essential factual elements of a cause of action in state court for violation of 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983 by unreasonable search without a warrant, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3003 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim of unreasonable search without a warrant under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-3003 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction on the affirmative defense that the employee consented to the search, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3005 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction on the affirmative defense of exigent circumstances, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3006 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction on municipal liability under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3007 (Matthew Bender). For the CACI special verdict form on municipal liability, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-3005 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction defining "official policy" under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3008 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n96)Footnote 67. Griswold v. Connecticut (1965) 381 U.S. 479, 484-485, 85 S. Ct. 1678, 14 L. Ed. 2d 510 .

(n97)Footnote 68. See, e.g., Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1044-1045, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (regarding preemployment drug testing by private employer; Fourth Amendment inapplicable because state action not involved). For a discussion of the application of the Fourth Amendment to drug testing by a California public employer see Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 866-887, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n98)Footnote 68.1. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 614-618, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 (testing system permissible under the circumstances). However, in a subsequent case involving drug testing of employees by a private railroad, a California court of appeal held Fourth Amendment analysis to be inapplicable under the circumstances of that particular case because the plaintiff did not hold a position that was regulated by federal law and because the conduct under attack did not involve federal regulations. Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19 n.12, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 (drug testing of computer programmer).

(n99)Footnote 68.2. See United States v. Diaz-Castaneda (9th Cir. 2007) 494 F.3d 1146, 1151 , citing Katz v. United States (1967) 389 U.S. 347, 361, 88 S. Ct. 507, 19 L. Ed. 2d 576 (Harlan, J., concurring).

(n100)Footnote 68.3. Nelson v. Natl. Aeronautics & Space Admin. (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1134, 1146 . See United States v. Miller (1976) 425 U.S. 435, 443, 96 S. Ct. 1619, 48 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1976) (no reasonable expectation of privacy in bank records because information was voluntarily disclosed to bank).

(n101)Footnote 68.4. Nelson v. Nat'l Aeronautics & Space Admin. (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1134, 1146 . See United States v. Miller (1976) 425 U.S. 435, 443, 96 S. Ct. 1619, 48 L. Ed. 2d 71 (1976) (no reasonable expectation of privacy in bank records because information was voluntarily disclosed to bank).

(n102)Footnote 68.5. Nelson v. Nat'l Aeronautics & Space Admin. (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1134, 1146 .

(n103)Footnote 68.6. Nelson v. Nat'l Aeronautics & Space Admin. (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1134, 1145-1146 . See also Greenawalt v. Ind. Dep't of Corr. (7th Cir. 2005) 397 F.3d 587, 591 (historically, when objective is to obtain testimonial rather than physical evidence, relevant constitutional amendment is not Fourth but Fifth).

(n104)Footnote 69. Nelson v. Nat'l Aeronautics & Space Admin. (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 1134, 1145-1146 .

(n105)Footnote 69.1. United States v. Ziegler (9th Cir. 2006) 474 F.3d 1184, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 1952 .

(n106)Footnote 69.2. Mancusi v. DeForte (1968) 392 U.S. 364, 88 S. Ct. 2120, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1154 .

(n107)Footnote 69.3. Mancusi v. DeForte (1968) 392 U.S. 364, 369, 88 S. Ct. 2120, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1154 .

(n108)Footnote 69.4. United States v. Ziegler (9th Cir. 2007) 474 F.3d 1184, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 1952 .

(n109)Footnote 69.5. United States v. Ziegler (9th Cir. 2007) 474 F.3d 1184, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 1952, *13-*14 ; see Mancusi v. DeForte (1968) 392 U.S. 364, 369, 88 S. Ct. 2120, 20 L. Ed. 2d 1154 ; see also Ortega v. O'Connor (1987) 480 U.S. 709, 716, 107 S. Ct. 1492, 94 L. Ed. 2d 714 (employees may have reasonable expectation of privacy against intrusions by police).

(n110)Footnote 69.6. United States v. Ziegler (9th Cir. 2007) 474 F.3d 1184, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 1952, *13-*14 ; see also Schowengerdt v. United States (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 483, 487 (plaintiff would enjoy reasonable expectation of privacy in areas given over to his exclusive use, unless he was on notice from his government employer that searches of type to which he was subjected might occur from time to time for work-related purposes); United States v. Taketa (9th Cir. 1991) 923 F.2d 665, 672-73 .

(n111)Footnote 69.7. United States v. Ziegler (9th Cir. 2007) 474 F.3d 1184, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 1952, *14 ; see United States v. Taketa (9th Cir. 1991) 923 F.2d 665, 673 (allowing existence of master key to overcome expectation of privacy would defeat legitimate privacy interest of any hotel, office, or apartment occupant).

(n112)Footnote 69.8. United States v. Ziegler (9th Cir. 2007) 474 F.3d 1184, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 1952, *14 .

(n113)Footnote 69.9. United States v. Ziegler (9th Cir. 2007) 474 F.3d 1184, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 1952, *15 .

(n114)Footnote 69.10. United States v. Ziegler (9th Cir. 2007) 474 F.3d 1184, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 1952, *15-22 .

18 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part C. CONSTITUTIONAL AND COMMON LAW PRIVACY ISSUES

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.31

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.31 Common Law Theories of Recovery

[1] Invasion of Privacy (Intrusion)

[a] Elements of Cause of Action

Intrusion is one of the four types of invasions of privacy actionable under California common law, the others being (1) public disclosure of embarrassing private facts about the plaintiff; (2) publicity that places a plaintiff in a false light in the public eye; and (3) the appropriation, for the defendant's benefit, of the plaintiff's name or likeness.ⁿ¹ Intrusion is committed when there is an invasion of the plaintiff's seclusion or solitude or into his or her private affairs.ⁿ² The intrusion may involve either a physical or a technical trespass.ⁿ³

In order to be actionable as an intrusion, the invasion must be made into a place or sphere, such as the plaintiff's home or a restroom, from which the plaintiff could reasonably expect that the defendant should be excluded.ⁿ⁴ The defendant must have penetrated a zone of physical or sensory privacy or obtained unwanted access to data by electronic or other covert means, in violation of the law or social norms.^{n4.1} The second element of the tort requires the plaintiff to show that the intrusion was one that would have been highly offensive to a reasonable person.ⁿ⁵ The cause of action recognizes a measure of personal control over the individual's autonomy, dignity, and serenity. The gravamen is the mental anguish sustained when both conditions of liability exist.^{n5.1} The reasonableness of privacy expectations is linked to factors such as the following:^{n5.2}

- 1) The identity of the intruder.
- 2) The extent to which other persons had access to the subject place, and could see or hear the plaintiff.
- 3) The means by which the intrusion occurred.

Even in cases involving the use of photographic and electronic recording devices, which can raise difficult questions about covert surveillance, there is no bright line on "offensiveness," and each case must be taken on its facts.^{n5.3}

The preliminary determination of "offensiveness," for the purpose of assessing whether the plaintiff has a cause of action for intrusion, is made by the court, which must take into consideration the degree of intrusion and the context, conduct, and circumstances surrounding the intrusion, as well as the intruder's motives and objectives, the setting into which he or she intruded, and the expectations of those whose privacy was invaded.ⁿ⁶

An unreasonably intrusive investigation into the plaintiff's affairs may constitute a tortious invasion of privacy.ⁿ⁷ However, a defendant cannot be held liable for violating a plaintiff's sensibilities by instituting an investigation if the plaintiff would have voluntarily divulged the information sought.ⁿ⁸ The use or avoidance of deception by investigators is relevant to the determination whether the intrusion was reasonable.ⁿ⁹

For additional discussion of the tort of intrusion, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 46, "Invasion of Privacy."

[b] Defenses

If the intrusion was unintended, or if it was not of a kind that is highly offensive to a reasonable person, but rather of a kind normally to be expected by people living in society, the intrusion is not actionable.ⁿ¹⁰ Furthermore, if the plaintiff had no reasonable expectation that the defendant should be excluded from the place intruded on, then the cause of action fails.ⁿ¹¹ In addition, although no California case has expressly addressed the issue, a plaintiff apparently may not recover for an invasion to which he or she has given consent, either explicitly or by his or her conduct.ⁿ¹²

[c] Application to Employer-Employee Relationship

In the employer-employee context, issues of intrusion may arise with respect to employer searches of desks, lockers, and other facilities owned by the employer and used by the employee for the storage of personal effects. Surveillance of employees in any place where they may have an expectation of privacy may also possibly give rise to liability for intrusion. No reported case in California has as yet squarely addressed the issue of the extent to which such searches and investigations are permissible. In such a situation, when both the employer and the employee may be said to have interests in the place or thing searched, analysis of the propriety of the search may depend on whether the employee reasonably expected that the employer should be excluded from the desk, locker, or other place searchedⁿ¹³ in light of any relevant employer policies, personnel handbooks, or customs, or a determination whether, despite the employee's interest in keeping his or her personal effects private, the employer has a privilege to search when a violation of law or plant rules is suspected.ⁿ¹⁴ In addition, the degree of suspicion (i.e., "probable cause," or some greater or lesser standard) necessary to justify a search remains to be decided by the courts.

Facts that may raise issues of common law liability for intrusion may also involve potential liability under certain statutes and the California Constitution. For example, the placing of electronic surveillance devices in employee offices is proscribed by Penal Code section 632 and gives rise to a cause of action under Penal Code section 637.2.ⁿ¹⁵ Further, a common law intrusion may also implicate the right of privacy contained in the California Constitution, Article I, Section 1.ⁿ¹⁶

For further discussion of potential limitations on employer searches and surveillance, see § 50.41.

[2] False Imprisonment

[a] Elements of Cause of Action

False imprisonment is the unlawful violation of another's personal liberty.ⁿ¹⁷ It consists of the arrest or detention of another person without legal authority.ⁿ¹⁸ Confinement in an actual jail or prison is not necessary;ⁿ¹⁹ rather, false imprisonment is committed whenever there is an exercise of force, or an express or implied threat of force, by which a person is deprived of his or her liberty, compelled to remain where he or she does not wish to remain, or to go where he or she does not wish to go.ⁿ²⁰

Actionable threats may be accomplished by conduct or by words, provided that the words or conduct are such as to induce a reasonable apprehension of force if the plaintiff does not submit to the false imprisonment.ⁿ²¹ An offer by the tortfeasor to release the plaintiff on some condition, such as the signing of a confession of wrongdoing, does not affect the existence of the right of action.ⁿ²²

Detention for any appreciable length of time, however short, gives rise to a cause of action for false imprisonment.ⁿ²³ The period of the detention may, however, be relevant to the amount of damages.

Intent, in the sense of a deliberate, voluntary act, is a necessary element of the tort of false imprisonment.ⁿ²⁴ Malice, however, is not an element, and no finding of ill will or desire to injure is required to prevail in an action for false imprisonment.ⁿ²⁵ Neither the defendant's good faith nor bad motive is an element of the cause of action or defense, although facts relating to motive may be considered in determining an award of punitive damages.ⁿ²⁶ Furthermore, it is not necessary that the plaintiff prove that the dispute underlying the imprisonment was finally resolved in his or her favor; in this respect false imprisonment differs from the tort of malicious prosecution.ⁿ²⁷

For full discussion of the tort of false imprisonment, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 42.

[b] Defenses

[i] Privilege

At common law, a privilege exists for an owner to protect his or her property by restraining another person who seeks to interfere with or injure it.ⁿ²⁸ The privilege has been codified, with respect to merchants (as well as libraries, museums, and other similar facilities), in Penal Code section 490.5(f). In exercising this privilege, an owner who has reasonable grounds to believe that another is stealing his or her property is justified in detaining the suspect for a reasonable length of time for the purpose of investigating the theft in a reasonable manner.ⁿ²⁹ However, the privilege does not extend to detentions undertaken not to investigate a current or ongoing theft but rather to secure a confession to an offense that was completed at some time in the past.ⁿ³⁰ The privilege is also lost if the manner of the detention is unreasonable, such as when the detention is for an excessively long period or when physical violence accompanies the detention.ⁿ³¹ At least in the case of merchants and employees of library facilities and museums, the detention includes the privilege to make a limited search of the detainee's packages, shopping bags, handbags, or other items in the immediate possession of the detainee for the purpose of recovering the item believed to be stolen, but does not include the right to search clothing worn by that person.ⁿ³²

[ii] Citizen's Arrest

In some instances, a private citizen may have a privilege to make a citizen's arrest of a person believed to have committed a public offense.ⁿ³³ If the offense for which the person is arrested is a felony and the person making the arrest has reasonable cause to believe that the person arrested committed the felony, the offense need not have been committed in the presence of the person making the arrest.ⁿ³⁴ In the case of any offense other than a felony, the arrest is not lawful unless the offense was committed in the presence of the person making the arrest.ⁿ³⁵

[c] Application to Employer-Employee Relationship

Potential issues of the employer's liability for false imprisonment may arise, for example, in the case of compulsory detention or search of an employee to investigate misconduct on the job, such as theft of the employer's property, unless conducted in a reasonable manner and based on a reasonable belief that the detained employee is committing or attempting to commit an offense.ⁿ³⁶

For further discussion of potential limitations on employer searches and surveillance, see § 50.41.

[3] Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

The elements of a prima facie case for the tort of intentional infliction of emotional distress are (1) outrageous conduct by the defendant; (2) the defendant's intention of causing, or reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress; (3) the plaintiff's suffering severe emotional distress; and (4) actual and proximate causation of the emotional distress by the defendant's outrageous conduct.ⁿ³⁷

Ordinarily, a civil action to recover damages based on intentional infliction of emotional distress in connection with an alleged wrongful termination or other disciplinary action will be precluded by the exclusive remedy doctrine of the California Workers' Compensation Act,ⁿ³⁸ unless the employer's conduct exceeds the bounds of the employment relationship. The California Supreme Court has held that even intentional misconduct may constitute a normal part of the employment relationship.ⁿ³⁹ In addition, the Court has held that even when no physical injury or disability is alleged, a claim for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress is within the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, so long as the basic conditions of compensation are otherwise satisfied and the employer's conduct neither contravenes a fundamental public policy nor exceeds the risks inherent in the employment relationship.ⁿ⁴⁰

For further discussion of civil actions based on intentional infliction of emotional distress, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 44.

For discussion of the exclusive remedy doctrine of the California Workers' Compensation Act generally, including emotional distress claims, see Chapter 20.

[4] Damages and Other Remedies Available

In a tort action, a successful plaintiff-employee is entitled to recover compensatory damages for all injuries proximately caused by the defendant employer's wrongful conduct, including medical expenses, lost income, and emotional distress.ⁿ⁴¹ Special damages (such as loss of income) may be recovered, if sustained; otherwise, general damages for injury to peace of mind, happiness, and feelings may be recovered in the absence of a showing of any specific loss.ⁿ⁴² Anxiety, embarrassment, humiliation, shame, depression, feelings of powerlessness, and anguish are elements that may be considered by the jury in awarding damages for emotional distress.ⁿ⁴³ For full discussion of compensatory damages in tort actions, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapters 50-53.

As in any tort action, when the employer has acted with malice, oppression, or fraud, the jury may in its discretion award punitive damages to the employee.ⁿ⁴⁴ The requisite malice, oppression, or fraud must be proved by clear and convincing evidence.ⁿ⁴⁵ An employer is not, however, liable for punitive damages based on the acts of another employee (such as a manager or supervisor) unless the employer had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee and employed him or her with conscious disregard of the rights or safety of others or unless the employer authorized or ratified the employee's wrongful conduct, or was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice.ⁿ⁴⁶ For a corporate employer to be held liable for punitive damages, the wrongdoer must have been a managerial employee.ⁿ⁴⁷ Whether an employee is managerial depends on the degree of discretion the employee has to make decisions that will ultimately determine corporate policy; the employee's status is not determined by his or her title.ⁿ⁴⁸ For full discussion of punitive damages, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 54.

Permanent and temporary injunctive relief may also be available for violations or threatened violations of privacy rights in appropriate cases.ⁿ⁴⁹

[5] Possible Preemption of Tort Action by Workers' Compensation Law

While the general rule is that an action for damages for intentional infliction of physical and emotional injuries is subject to preemption by the exclusive-remedy provisions of the workers' compensation laws,ⁿ⁵⁰ in a case involving false imprisonment, the California Supreme Court found that the preemption did not apply.ⁿ⁵¹ It is possible that this reasoning might apply to physical and emotional injuries resulting from a constitutional invasion of privacy, but this issue has not yet been addressed by the courts.

For full discussion of the nature and scope of the exclusive-remedy doctrine under workers' compensation law, see Chapter 20.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Constitutional Law Substantive Due Process Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Invasion of Privacy Torts Intentional Torts Invasion of Privacy General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lugosi v. Universal Pictures (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 813, 819, 160 Cal. Rptr. 323, 603 P.2d 425 ; Alim v. Superior Court (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 144, 150, 229 Cal. Rptr. 599 . For the standard jury instructions on the four types of actionable invasions of privacy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1800 (intrusion into private affairs), 1801 (public disclosure of private facts), 1802 (false light), 1803 (appropriation of name or likeness) (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict forms for invasion of privacy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1800 (intrusion into private affairs), VF-1801 (public disclosure of private facts), VF-1802 (false light), 1803 (appropriation of name or likeness). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n2)Footnote 2. Dietemann v. Time, Inc. (9th Cir. 1971) 449 F.2d 245, 248-249 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Dietemann v. Time, Inc. (9th Cir. 1971) 449 F.2d 245, 248-249 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Dietemann v. Time, Inc. (9th Cir. 1971) 449 F.2d 245, 248-249 (reporters eavesdropping in plaintiff's home held actionable intrusion); Bielicki v. Superior Court (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 602, 605-609, 21 Cal. Rptr. 552, 371 P.2d 288 (person using toilet stall in public restroom enjoyed right of privacy); cf. Cramer v. Consolidated Freightways, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 255 F.3d 683, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS, 19157, *8-*9 , (employer's illegal activity in installing surveillance equipment in men's and women's restrooms in violation of Pen. Code § 653n was not preempted by 29 U.S.C. § 185 (§ 301 of Labor Management Relations Act); privacy claims were independent of the collective bargaining agreement (CBA) and, in any event, employer could not contract for the right to perform activity illegal under state law; People v. Metcalf (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 20, 23-24, 98 Cal. Rptr. 925 (Penal Code § 653n, prohibiting installation or maintenance of two-way mirrors and other disguised surfaces in specified places, including public restrooms, enunciates public policy that users of public restroom enjoy reasonable expectation of privacy there).

(n5)Footnote 4.1. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287, 288-294, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 (Court of Appeal did not err as matter of law in finding prima facie case on question of whether employer's secret video surveillance measures intruded upon employees' reasonable expectations of privacy simply because employer never intended to view or record employees or because employer did not capture employees' images at all, where employees had no reasonable expectation their employer would intrude so tangibly into their semiprivate office); Shulman v. Group W Productions, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 200, 232, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 955 P.2d 469 .

(n6)Footnote 5. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287, 295-301, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 (employees could not reasonably expect to establish that intrusion into privacy by secretly installed video system was sufficiently serious, where, from standpoint of reasonable person based on employer's vigorous efforts to avoid intruding on employees' visual privacy altogether, activation of video surveillance system was narrowly tailored in place, time, and scope, and was prompted by legitimate business concerns, and where employees were not at risk of being monitored or recorded during regular work hours and were never actually caught on camera or videotape); Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1481-1482, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 ; Rest. 2d Torts, § 652B. But cf. Kemp v. County of Orange (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 1422, 1427-1428, 260 Cal. Rptr. 131 (investigator for workers' compensation adjuster not unreasonable in contacting credit-reporting agency, interviewing co-workers, and writing report without disclosing report to workers' compensation claimant).

(n7)Footnote 5.1. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 286, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 ; Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1484-1485, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 .

(n8)Footnote 5.2. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 286-287, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 ; Sanders v. American Broadcasting Companies (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 907, 923, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 909, 978 P.2d 67 .

(n9)Footnote 5.3. Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 ; Shulman v. Group W Productions, Inc. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 200, 237, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 955 P.2d 469 .

(n10)Footnote 6. Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1483-1484, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 . See also Hernandez v. Hillsides, Inc. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 272, 287, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 274, 211 P.3d 1063 (offensiveness element essentially involves policy determination as to whether alleged intrusion was highly offensive under particular circumstances, including degree and setting of intrusion and intruder's motives and objectives).

(n11)Footnote 7. Noble v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 654, 659-660, 109 Cal. Rptr. 269 .

(n12)Footnote 8. Emerson v. J.F. Shea Co. (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 579, 591-592, 143 Cal. Rptr. 170 ; see also Solis v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 382, 391-392, 164 Cal. Rptr. 343 (no invasion of privacy by unreasonably intrusive investigation occurred when investigators entered hospital emergency room and briefly questioned plaintiff while she was still receiving treatment, when plaintiff responded voluntarily).

(n13)Footnote 9. See Solis v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 382, 392, 164 Cal. Rptr. 343 .

(n14)Footnote 10. Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1482-1483, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 .

(n15)Footnote 11. Dietemann v. Time, Inc. (9th Cir. 1971) 449 F.2d 245, 248-249 .

(n16)Footnote 12. See Rest. 2d Torts § 892A; cf. Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1486, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 (allegation that television camera crew entered woman's home without her consent stated cause of action for intrusion).

(n17)Footnote 13. Dietemann v. Time, Inc. (9th Cir. 1971) 449 F.2d 245, 248-249 .

(n18)Footnote 14. cf. Collyer v. S.H. Kress & Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 175, 180-181, 54 P.2d 20 (owner has privilege, at common law, to protect property by restraining person from interfering with or injuring it).

(n19)Footnote 15. See discussion in § 50.19.

(n20)Footnote 16. See discussion in § 50.30[1].

(n21)Footnote 17. Penal Code § 236; City of Newport Beach v. Sasse (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 803, 810, 88 Cal. Rptr. 476 (Penal Code definition governs in civil as well as criminal actions).

(n22)Footnote 18. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559; Vandiveer v. Charters (1930) 110 Cal. App. 347, 355, 294 P. 440.

(n23)Footnote 19. Ware v. Dunn (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 936, 943, 183 P.2d 128.

(n24)Footnote 20. Moffatt v. Buffums', Inc. (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374, 69 P.2d 424; Vandiveer v. Charters (1930) 110 Cal. App. 347, 355, 294 P. 440.

(n25)Footnote 21. Vandiveer v. Charters (1930) 110 Cal. App. 347, 355, 294 P. 440.

(n26)Footnote 22. See Vandiveer v. Charters (1930) 110 Cal. App. 347, 355, 294 P. 440.

(n27)Footnote 23. City of Newport Beach v. Sasse (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 803, 810, 88 Cal. Rptr. 476.

(n28)Footnote 24. See Capachi v. Glens Falls Insurance Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 843, 848, 30 Cal. Rptr. 323.

(n29)Footnote 25. See Capachi v. Glens Falls Insurance Co. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 843, 848, 30 Cal. Rptr. 323.

(n30)Footnote 26. Singleton v. Perry (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 489, 494, 289 P.2d 794.

(n31)Footnote 27. Singleton v. Perry (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 489, 494-495, 289 P.2d 794.

(n32)Footnote 28. Collyer v. S.H. Kress & Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 175, 180-181, 54 P.2d 20.

(n33)Footnote 29. Collyer v. S.H. Kress & Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 175, 180-181, 54 P.2d 20.

(n34)Footnote 30. Moffatt v. Buffums' Inc. (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374-375, 69 P.2d 424.

(n35)Footnote 31. Moffatt v. Buffums' Inc. (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374-375, 69 P.2d 424 (five-hour detention during which defendant took plaintiff by arm and pushed her down onto chair held unreasonable); but see Penal Code § 490.5(f)(2) (merchant or employee of "library facility" may use reasonable amount of nondeadly force necessary to protect himself or herself and to prevent escape of person detained or loss of property).

(n36)Footnote 32. See Penal Code § 490.5(f)(4).

(n37)Footnote 33. See Cervantez v. J.C. Penney Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 579, 587, 156 Cal. Rptr. 198, 595 P.2d 975; Penal Code § 837.

(n38)Footnote 34. See Penal Code § 837(2), (3).

(n39)Footnote 35. See Penal Code § 837(1).

(n40)Footnote 36. See Moffatt v. Buffums' Inc. (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 371, 374-375, 69 P.2d 424.

(n41)Footnote 37. Davidson v. City of Westminster (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 197, 209-210, 185 Cal. Rptr. 252, 649 P.2d 894; State Rubbish Collectors Association v. Siliznoff (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 330, 337-339, 240 P.2d 282; Fletcher v. Western National Life Insur. Co. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 376, 394, 89 Cal. Rptr. 78.

(n42)Footnote 38. See Lab. Code § 3602.

(n43)Footnote 39. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 752, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 ; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 .

(n44)Footnote 40. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 . See, e.g., Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9-10, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 (plaintiff's emotional distress action was preempted by workers' compensation law, because workers' compensation is exclusive remedy for intentional infliction of emotional distress caused by employer's work-related conduct when that conduct does not contravene public policy).

(n45)Footnote 41. See Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 493, 497-498, 86 Cal. Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216 ; Civ. Code § 3333. For the standard jury instruction on damages in an action for invasion of privacy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1820 (except for a cause of action for false light invasion of privacy) (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instructions on damages generally, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 3900 et seq. (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n46)Footnote 42. Fairfield v. American Photocopy Equipment Co. (1955) 138 Cal. App. 2d 82, 88-89, 291 P.2d 194 .

(n47)Footnote 43. Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1485, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 .

(n48)Footnote 44. Civ. Code § 3294(a).

(n49)Footnote 45. Civ. Code § 3294(a).

(n50)Footnote 46. Civ. Code § 3294(b).

(n51)Footnote 47. Civ. Code § 3294(b).

(n52)Footnote 48. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 ; Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 157 Cal. Rptr. 482, 598 P.2d 452 ; See also ch. 30.

(n53)Footnote 49. See Civ. Code §§ 3420-3423; Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526, 527.

(n54)Footnote 50. See Lab. Code §§ 3601, 3602; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 .

(n55)Footnote 51. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

19 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part C. CONSTITUTIONAL AND COMMON LAW PRIVACY ISSUES

3-50 California Employment Law §

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ FORM--Complaint Against Employer for Damages Based on Collection of Private Information in Violation of Constitutional and Common Law Privacy Rights

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form of complaint set forth in [2], below, may be used by an employee in an action for damages against a private employer based on improper collection of private information about the employee. The form sets forth causes of action based on the California constitutional right of privacyⁿ¹ as well as the common law theory of invasion of privacy by intrusion on private affairs.ⁿ² The form also contains optional causes of action based on intentional infliction of emotional distress and false imprisonment.

In appropriate cases, counsel should consider adding causes of action based on the various statutory privacy provisions discussed in Part B. Examples of statutory provisions that may provide additional theories of recovery include the following:

1. Labor Code section 432.7, prohibiting employer inquiries regarding arrests that did not lead to a conviction;ⁿ³
2. The Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act,ⁿ⁴ placing certain restrictions on an employer's use of investigative consumer reports about employees or applicants;ⁿ⁵
3. Penal Code section 637.3, prohibiting use of voice stress analysis systems without express written consent of the subject;ⁿ⁶
4. Penal Code sections 631, 632, 632.5, 632.6 and 632.7, which prohibit certain types of eavesdropping and electronic surveillance.ⁿ⁷

[b] Allegations

The cause of action for invasion of privacy in violation of the California Constitution⁸ alleges acts by the defendant constituting an invasion of privacy (Paragraph 5), the plaintiff's reasonable expectation of privacy regarding the matter invaded (Paragraph 6), the lack of justification for the alleged intrusion (Paragraph 7), and resulting damages (Paragraphs 8-10).

The common law cause of action for physical intrusion into the plaintiff's solitude or private affairs⁹ contains allegations of acts by the defendant constituting an intrusion (Paragraph 13), that such acts were offensive and objectionable to plaintiff and to a person of ordinary sensibilities (Paragraph 14), and that the place or subject intruded on was private and entitled to be kept private (Paragraph 15).

The optional cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress¹⁰ contains allegations of the defendant's extreme and outrageous conduct (Paragraph 19), the intent to cause the plaintiff severe emotional distress (Paragraph 20), and resulting injury to the plaintiff (Paragraph 21).

The optional cause of action for false imprisonment alleges acts by the defendant constituting an involuntary detention of the plaintiff by force or threat of force (Paragraph 24), as well as resulting injury (Paragraph 25).¹¹

Each cause of action contains an optional allegation of malice and oppression for use when punitive damages are sought.¹²

[c] Verification

The complaint is not required to be verified; however,¹³ a verified complaint requires the defendant to file a verified answer¹⁴ and precludes the use of a general denial.¹⁵

[d] Statute of Limitations

The complaint must be filed within two years after the date on which the cause of action arose.¹⁶

[2] Form Complaint Against Employer for Damages Based on Collection of Private Information in Violation of Constitutional and Common Law Privacy Rights

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT AGAINST EMPLOYER FOR DAM-
_____ [name(s)],	)	AGES [AND INJUNCTION] BASED ON COLLEC-
Defendant(s).	)	TION OF PRIVATE INFORMATION IN VIOLA-)	TION OF CONSTITUTIONAL AND COMMON
	)	LAW PRIVACY RIGHTS
		[Cal. Const., art. I, § 1; Civ. Code §§ 3294, 3333]

3-50 California Employment Law §

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION

(Invasion of Privacy in Violation of California Constitution, Article I, Section 1)

1. [Capacity, residence of defendant(s). See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 1].

[2. Where acts complained of occurred, for venue purposes. See Form in § 50.11[5][c][ii], Paragraph 2.]

[3. Defendant(s) _____ (names) at all times mentioned herein _____ (was or were) the agent(s) and employee(s) of defendant _____ (name), and in doing the actions alleged herein _____ (was or were) acting within the course and scope of that agency and with the permission and consent of his/her/their codefendant(s).]

4. _____ [Allege relationship of parties, e.g., On _____ (date), plaintiff was employed by defendant _____ (name) as _____ (specify position held). _____ (Plaintiff is currently so employed or On or about _____ (date), plaintiff _____ (resigned or was terminated) from his/her employment with defendant).]

5. On or about _____ [date], defendant(s, and each of them,) invaded plaintiff's right to privacy under California Constitution, Article I, Section 1, by _____ [specify acts constituting invasion of constitutional right of privacy].

[6. The conduct of defendant(s) intruded on plaintiff's reasonable expectation of privacy in that _____ (specify).]

7. The above-alleged intrusion on plaintiff's expectation of privacy is unjustified because, among other things, it does not substantially further any compelling interest of defendant(s); the degree of intrusion into plaintiff's privacy interests far outweighs any interests asserted by defendant(s); and defendant(s) _____ [has or have] available to him/her/it/them less intrusive means of satisfying any such interests.

8. As a direct, proximate, and foreseeable result of the above-described conduct of defendant(s), [and each of them,] plaintiff has suffered humiliation, mental anguish, and _____ [severe] emotional and physical distress, and has been injured in mind [and body] as follows: _____ [describe injuries, e.g., plaintiff has suffered sleeplessness, anxiety, and loss of appetite], all to plaintiff's damage (in the amount of $_____).

[9. As a further proximate result of the acts alleged herein, plaintiff was required to and did employ _____ (specify medical professionals, e.g., physicians and psychotherapists) to examine, treat, and care for him/her and incurred medical expenses _____ (in the approximate amount of $_____ or in an amount that has not yet been ascertained). (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that he/she will incur some additional medical expenses, the exact amount of which is presently unknown.)]

[10. By reason of the acts alleged herein, plaintiff was prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupation or profession) and thereby lost earnings (in the amount of $_____). (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that he/she will thereby be prevented from attending to his/her usual _____ (occupation or profession) for an additional period in the future that he/she cannot now ascertain and will thereby sustain further loss of earnings.)]

[11. If seeking punitive damages, allege: The actions of defendant(s), and each of them,) as herein alleged were committed maliciously, oppressively, and with conscious disregard for plaintiff's right of privacy under the California Constitution(, in that _____ (specify)].]

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION

(Invasion of Privacy--Physical Intrusion Into Solitude or Private Affairs)

12. Plaintiff refers to and herein incorporates Paragraphs 1-4 of the First Cause of Action.

13. On or about _____ [date], defendant(s), [and each of them,] without plaintiff's consent, invaded plaintiff's right to privacy by _____ [specify acts constituting physical intrusion into plaintiff's solitude or private affairs].

14. The intrusion was offensive and objectionable to plaintiff and to a reasonable person of ordinary sensibilities in that _____ [specify reasons].

15. The intrusion was into a place or thing that was private and entitled to be private, in that _____ [specify].

16. As a direct, proximate, and foreseeable result of the above-described conduct of defendant(s), [and each of them,] plaintiff has suffered damages as previously alleged in Paragraphs 8-10 of the First Cause of Action, which plaintiff hereby refers to and incorporates herein.

[17. If seeking punitive damages, allege: The actions of defendant(s), and each of them,) as herein alleged were committed maliciously, oppressively, and with conscious disregard for plaintiff's right of privacy(, in that _____ (specify)].]

[Include additional causes of action, as appropriate, such as the following]

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION

(Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress)

18. Plaintiff refers to and herein incorporates Paragraphs 1-4 of the First Cause of Action.

19. _____ [Allege defendant's extreme and outrageous conduct, including any facts showing defendant's misuse of position of authority and/or knowledge of plaintiff's particular susceptibility to emotional distress].

20. Defendant _____'s [name] actions were intentional and malicious and were taken for the purpose of causing plaintiff to suffer severe emotional distress, and with reckless disregard for the likelihood that such distress would result. [Defendant _____'s [name] conduct in confirming and ratifying that conduct was done with knowledge that plaintiff's emotional (and physical) distress would thereby increase, and was done with a wanton and reckless disregard of the consequences to plaintiff.]

21. As a direct, proximate, and foreseeable result of the above-described conduct of defendant(s), [and each of them,] plaintiff has suffered damages as previously alleged in Paragraphs 8-10 of the First Cause of Action, which plaintiff hereby refers to and incorporates herein.

[22. If seeking punitive damages, allege: The actions of defendant(s, and each of them,) as herein alleged were committed maliciously, oppressively, with intention to cause plaintiff mental and physical harm, and with conscious disregard for plaintiff's rights.]

FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION

(False Imprisonment)

23. Plaintiff refers to and herein incorporates Paragraphs 1-4 of the First Cause of Action.

24. _____ [Describe plaintiff's detention by defendant(s), alleging use of force or words or actions threatening use of force by defendant(s)].

25. As a further direct, proximate, and foreseeable result of the above-described conduct of defendant(s), [and each of them,] plaintiff has suffered damages as previously alleged in Paragraphs 8-10 of the First Cause of Action, which plaintiff hereby refers to and incorporates herein.

[26. If seeking punitive damages, allege: The actions of defendant(s, and each of them,) in detaining plaintiff as herein alleged were committed maliciously, oppressively, with intention to cause plaintiff mental and physical harm, and with conscious disregard for plaintiff's rights.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. For general damages [in the sum of $_____];

[2. For medical and related expenses (_____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof));]

[3. For lost earnings, past and future(, _____ (in the sum of $_____ or according to proof));]

[4. For an award of punitive damages against defendant(s), (and each of them,) in an amount appropriate to punish defendant(s) and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct;]

[5. For prejudgment interest on all amounts claimed;] and

6. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Add verification, if desired (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5).]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of PrivacyTortsIntentional TortsInvasion of PrivacyGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Cal. Const., art. I, § 1; White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 775, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1481-1482, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 .

(n3)Footnote 3. For discussion and form of complaint, see § 50.11.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Civ. Code §§ 1786-1786.56.

(n5)Footnote 5. For discussion and form of complaint, see § 50.11. By contrast, the statutory remedies under the Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (Civ. Code §§ 1785.1-1785.35) preclude commonlaw remedies for defamation, invasion of privacy, or negligence unless the defendant disclosed false information with malice or willful intent to injure the employee or applicant. see Civ. Code § 1785.32; see also discussion in § 50.12[3][b].

(n6)Footnote 6. For discussion, see § 50.16[1][b].

(n7)Footnote 7. For discussion and form of complaint, see § 50.19.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 1; see also discussion in § 50.30[1].

(n9)Footnote 9. See Miller v. National Broadcasting Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1480-1481, 232 Cal. Rptr. 668 ; Rest. 2d Torts § 652B; see also discussion in § 50.31[1].

(n10)Footnote 10. See Alcorn v. Anbro Engineering, Inc. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 493, 497-499, 86 Cal. Rptr. 88, 468 P.2d 216 ; see also discussion in § 50.31[3].

(n11)Footnote 11. See generally Vandiveer v. Charters (1930) 110 Cal. App. 347, 355, 294 P. 440 ; see also discussion in § 50.31[2].

(n12)Footnote 12. See Civ. Code § 3294.

(n13)Footnote 13. [Reserved]

(n14)Footnote 14. Code Civ. Proc. § 446.

(n15)Footnote 15. Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(d).

(n16)Footnote 16. Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1; Cain v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 310, 313, 132 Cal. Rptr. 860 .

20 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees

Part C. CONSTITUTIONAL AND COMMON LAW PRIVACY ISSUES

3-50 California Employment Law §§ 50.33through 50.39

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 50.33[Reserved]

21 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees

Part D. SPECIFIC INFORMATION-GATHERING PRACTICES IMPLICATING EMPLOYEE PRIVACY ISSUES

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.40

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.40 Introduction

Almost any procedure by which an employer attempts to obtain information about an applicant or employee may raise potential issues of the applicant's or employee's right to privacy under the California Constitution and common law principles set out in Part C. Furthermore, the specific statutory provisions discussed in Part B may impose further limitations on the employer. This part discusses the potential effect of the legal principles previously discussed in this chapter on certain specific information-gathering practices of employers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of PrivacyTortsIntentional TortsInvasion of PrivacyGeneral Overview

22 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees

Part D. SPECIFIC INFORMATION-GATHERING PRACTICES IMPLICATING EMPLOYEE PRIVACY ISSUES

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.41

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.41 Employer Searches and Surveillance of Employees

Issues of employee privacy may arise in the context of investigative searches and surveillance by an employer to determine whether an employee has committed a violation of law or company policy or has otherwise committed misconduct in connection with his or her job.

The right of privacy under California Constitution, Article I, Section 1, is one potential limitation on an employer's right to conduct searches of an employee's office, desk drawers, or personal belongings. As noted previously, this constitutional provision is applicable to private business interests as well as the government and may therefore limit the conduct of private employers.ⁿ¹ In Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,ⁿ² the California Supreme Court adopted a new "balancing test" approach for analyzing state constitutional privacy claims.ⁿ³ This standard is less stringent than the "compelling interest" standard, which under Hill only applies in limited circumstances.ⁿ⁴ The precise scope of each of these standards is not entirely settled, nor is the extent of an employee's privacy rights in a workplace setting. The result may depend on the public interest, the employer's special interests, and the employees' reasonable expectations of privacy in a particular employment setting.ⁿ⁵

With respect to places such as desk drawers or lockers where personal effects are typically stored, an employee may arguably be held to possess a reasonable expectation of privacy in the absence of facts indicating that such an expectation would be unreasonable. Such expectation might be found unreasonable if the employee was on notice that searches of desks, lockers, credenzas, and the like would occur for work-related purposes.ⁿ⁶ The existence in employee personnel handbooks of applicable provisions governing inspections or searches would presumably be relevant to the determination whether the employee's expectation of privacy was reasonable under the circumstances.ⁿ⁷ Notwithstanding notice to employees that their belongings were subject to search, any search actually performed must still be reasonable in its inception and scope.

Assuming the constitutionality of a given search, the employer must also be aware of potential statutory restrictions on the method of investigation, as discussed in Part B. For example, any use of eavesdropping, electronic surveillance devices, telephone wiretapping, or voice stress analyzers in an investigation may lead to criminal penalties under the Penal Code,ⁿ⁸ as well as civil liability.ⁿ⁹ As another example, both federal and state law restrict the use of polygraph examinations by employers.ⁿ¹⁰

In addition, the manner of investigation may raise potential liability issues under common law tort theory. For example, the employer is potentially subject to liability under a theory of false imprisonment if the employer physically detains the employee.ⁿ¹¹ Furthermore, an otherwise justifiable search or investigation may lead to potential liability under a theory of intentional infliction of emotional distress if carried out in an "extreme" or "outrageous" manner.ⁿ¹²

1. Area Searched.

- a. What is targeted for the search? Remember that various areas and items fall along a privacy "continuum." (That is, some areas are more "private" than others. For example, (1) work station, (2) open office, (3) locked office; (1) shared desk, (2) exclusive unlocked desk, (3) locked desk; (1) locker, (2) briefcase, (3) handbag.)
- b. Does the employee have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the area or item targeted for search?

2. Company Policy or Practice.

- a. Does the company have an announced policy or long-standing practice of conducting searches that would tend to compromise an expectation of privacy on the part of the employee?
- b. If the company has an announced policy, does that policy recite its business justification?
- c. If the company has an announced policy or practice, has the policy been uniformly applied?

3. Reason for Search. What is the reason for the search? Is it work-related or is it primarily intended to gather information for public law enforcement authorities? An employer is on firmer ground if it can show a substantial work-related reason for a search. While the involvement of public law enforcement authorities is not necessarily problematic, such involvement poses (1) a risk that if public authorities drop the charges, the grounds for any discipline will be severely undermined; (2) a risk that the mere filing of charges will increase exposure to a claim of defamation; and (3) a risk that if other similarly situated employees were not similarly treated, the employer may be liable for breach of its duty of good faith and fair dealing.

4. Level of Suspicion.

- a. What level of suspicion justifies the search--a reasonable suspicion or probable cause? The employer should examine what specific facts it has to support that suspicion. Under either standard, a "hunch" will be insufficient to justify the search.
- b. Is the suspicion particularized? Suspicion focusing on a particular individual makes the search of that employee's locker or desk easier to justify than a more general suspicion, for example, that some unknown employees may have stored drugs at work.

5. Consent.

- a. Has the employee consented to the search?
- b. Are there compelling reasons not to ask the employee for consent? Employers should not inform employees that if they do not consent to the search, they will be disciplined or the search will take place anyway.

6. Scope and Manner of Search.

- a. Will the search be conducted to minimize its intrusiveness while preserving its effectiveness?
- b. Are areas targeted for search limited to those that are likely to contain the items that the search is intended to locate?

7. Confidentiality of Results.

- a. Is a mechanism in place to ensure that the results of the search are not communicated outside the circle of persons having a business need to know?
- b. Have the persons who will receive the information been informed of their possible exposure to liability (for example, for defamation) for improper disclosure of search results?

The legal issues identified in the text are grounds for caution in the context of employee searches. In advance of any such search, it is prudent to consider the following matters:

1. Area Searched.

- a. What is targeted for the search? Remember that various areas and items fall along a privacy "continuum." (That is, some areas are more "private" than others. For example, (1) work station, (2) open office, (3) locked office; (1) shared desk, (2) exclusive unlocked desk, (3) locked desk; (1) locker, (2) briefcase, (3) handbag.)
- b. Does the employee have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the area or item targeted for search?

2. Company Policy or Practice.

- a. Does the company have an announced policy or long-standing practice of conducting searches that would tend to compromise an expectation of privacy on the part of the employee?
- b. If the company has an announced policy, does that policy recite its business justification?
- c. If the company has an announced policy or practice, has the policy been uniformly applied?

3. Reason for Search. What is the reason for the search? Is it work-related or is it primarily intended to gather information for public law enforcement authorities? An employer is on firmer ground if it can show a substantial work-related reason for a search. While the involvement of public law enforcement authorities is not necessarily problematic, such involvement poses (1) a risk that if public authorities drop the charges, the grounds for any discipline will be severely undermined; (2) a risk that the mere filing of charges will increase exposure to a claim of defamation; and (3) a risk that if other similarly situated employees were not similarly treated, the employer may be liable for breach of its duty of good faith and fair dealing.

4. Level of Suspicion.

a. What level of suspicion justifies the search--a reasonable suspicion or probable cause? The employer should examine what specific facts it has to support that suspicion. Under either standard, a "hunch" will be insufficient to justify the search.

b. Is the suspicion particularized? Suspicion focusing on a particular individual makes the search of that employee's locker or desk easier to justify than a more general suspicion, for example, that some unknown employees may have stored drugs at work.

5. Consent.

a. Has the employee consented to the search?

b. Are there compelling reasons not to ask the employee for consent? Employers should not inform employees that if they do not consent to the search, they will be disciplined or the search will take place anyway.

6. Scope and Manner of Search.

a. Will the search be conducted to minimize its intrusiveness while preserving its effectiveness?

b. Are areas targeted for search limited to those that are likely to contain the items that the search is intended to locate?

7. Confidentiality of Results.

a. Is a mechanism in place to ensure that the results of the search are not communicated outside the circle of persons having a business need to know?

b. Have the persons who will receive the information been informed of their possible exposure to liability (for example, for defamation) for improper disclosure of search results?

Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Criminal Law & Procedure Search & Seizure General Overview Criminal Law & Procedure Search & Seizure Electronic

EavesdroppingGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of PrivacyTortsIntentional TortsInvasion of PrivacyGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See § 50.30[1][a][ii].

(n2)Footnote 2. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37-38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 50.30[1][c].

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 50.30[1][d].

(n5)Footnote 5. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 55-56 & n.20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n6)Footnote 6. cf. Schowengerdt v. General Dynamics Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 823 F.2d 1328, 1335 (civilian Navy engineer had reasonable expectation of privacy in his office and was permitted to seek damages for federal agents' warrantless search of locked desk and credenza and seizure of personal photographs and correspondence relating to sexual matters, absent notice that such searches would occur for work-related purposes).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Sec. & Law Enforcement Employees District Council 82 v. Carey (2d Cir. 1984) 737 F.2d 187, 202 (handbook provision warning employees that they were subject to search diminished employees' reasonable expectation of privacy in personal belongings).

(n8)Footnote 8. Penal Code §§ 631, 632, 632.5, 632.6, 632.7, 637, 637.3. see Lab. Code § 435 (ban against causing audio or video recording of employees in restroom, locker room, or other room designated for changing clothes without court order).

(n9)Footnote 9. Penal Code §§ 637.2, 637.3; see §§ 50.16[1][b], 50.19.

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 432.2; 29 U.S.C. § 2001 et seq.; see § 50.16[1][a], [2].

(n11)Footnote 11. See § 50.31[2].

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 50.31[3].

(n13)Footnote 13. For discussion of legal restrictions on disclosure of private information, see ch. 51.

(n14)Footnote 13. For discussion of legal restrictions on disclosure of private information, see ch. 51.

23 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees

Part D. SPECIFIC INFORMATION-GATHERING PRACTICES IMPLICATING EMPLOYEE PRIVACY ISSUES

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.42

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.42 Medical and Physical Examinations

[1] Constitutional Privacy Issues

[a] Generally

As in the case of any other information-gathering procedure, an employer's requirement that an applicant or employee submit to a medical or physical examination as a condition of hiring or continued employment raises potential issues under the right to privacy contained in California Constitution, Article I, Section 1.ⁿ¹ In Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,ⁿ² the California Supreme Court adopted a new "balancing test" approach for analyzing state constitutional privacy claims.ⁿ³ This standard is less stringent than the "compelling interest" standard, which under Hill only applies in limited circumstances.ⁿ⁴ The precise scope of each of these standards is not entirely settled, nor is the extent of an employee's privacy rights in a workplace setting. The result may depend on the public interest, the employer's special interests, and the employees' reasonable expectations of privacy in a particular employment setting.ⁿ⁵

The Hill Court applied the balancing test to determine that collegiate athletes' privacy interest in the confidentiality of medical treatment and information was not violated by a private athletic association's drug-testing program because the types of medical questions answered were routine in the athletic context, and the medical procedures had sufficient safeguards to protect the confidentiality of medical information furnished by the athletes.ⁿ⁶ In Pettus v. Cole (discussed in section 50.30[1][e], above) the court of appeal applied the Hill analysis to a case involving an employer who invaded an employee's autonomy privacy by requiring that the employee enter a 30-day inpatient rehabilitation program as a condition of continued employment.ⁿ⁷ This required treatment was deemed an invasion of privacy because the employer offered no justification for that particular requirement, and it was clear from the record that there were far less intrusive alternatives.ⁿ⁸

Further, several pre-Hill court of appeal decisions have held, in a number of different contexts, that the right to privacy under the California Constitution protects the information contained in an individual's medical records in the absence of a compelling interest justifying the disclosure of that information.ⁿ⁹ The Hill Court offered no analysis on the continuing vitality of these cases.

In Loder v. City of Glendale,¹⁰ the California Supreme Court determined that urinalysis drug testing occurring in the context of preemployment medical examinations is permissible, thus apparently assuming, without discussion, that preemployment medical examinations are constitutional. While the Court discussed the fact that post offer, preemployment physicals do not violate the FEHA¹¹ or the ADA,¹² the opinion contains no similar determination with respect to the viability of such examinations under the state constitution.¹³

In Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab.,^{13.1} the Ninth Circuit determined that employees undergoing a general employee health examination may not be tested without their knowledge for highly private and sensitive medical and genetic information, such as syphilis, sickle cell trait, and pregnancy. Such medical tests may violate the right to privacy under federal and state law, as well as Title VII.^{13.2}

Initially, the court addressed the statute of limitations issue; the district court dismissed all claims on this ground, finding that the limitations period began to run when the tests were taken, in which case each claim was time-barred. Under federal law, a limitations period begins to run when the plaintiff knows or has reason to know of the injury that is the basis of the action. Whether plaintiffs knew or had reason to know of the specific testing turned on material issues of fact that precluded summary judgment; similarly, factual disagreements over the objective reasonableness of the specific tests could only be resolved at trial.^{13.3}

Second, the Ninth Circuit examined the merits of the claim of invasion of right to privacy under federal law under the Fourth Amendment and the due process clauses of the Fifth or Fourteenth Amendment.^{13.4} The constitutionally protected privacy interest in avoiding disclosure of personal matters clearly encompasses medical information and its confidentiality. The most basic violation possible involves the performance of unauthorized tests, regardless of whether any disclosure has been made to third parties. Because few subjects are more personal and likely to implicate privacy interests than a person's health or genetic make-up, particularly when the intrusion involves such highly sensitive matters as sexual health, pregnancy, and reproductive decision-making, any additional testing beyond consent is not incremental, but rather constitutes a significant invasion of an important right. With regard to the syphilis and pregnancy tests, the Ninth Circuit clearly bars unregulated, unrestrained employer inquiries into personal sexual matters that do not bear on job performance. The court noted that no violation would occur if the test were authorized, or if the subjects reasonably should have known that the samples would be used for the disputed testing and failed to object.^{13.5}

The Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. court also examined the merits of the claim of invasion of right to privacy under the California Constitution.^{13.6} As a threshold matter, a cause of action for violation of privacy rights requires (1) a legally protected privacy interest, (2) a reasonable expectation of privacy under the circumstances, and (3) conduct by the defendant amounting to a serious invasion of the protected privacy interest. Assuming that this test is met, the court must conduct a balancing test between the countervailing interests for the conduct in issue and the resulting privacy intrusion. Under the same rationale applied to the federal claim, the court concluded that the district court erred in granting summary judgment on the merits; the only possible difference between the state and federal claim is the threshold requirement that the invasion be serious.^{13.7}

Next, the court addressed the merits of the Title VII claim, which alleged that blacks and women were singled out for additional nonconsensual testing, and that certain employees' privacy interests were selectively invaded based on race, sex, and pregnancy. Because the preemployment examination was a condition of employment, the employment of blacks and women is conditioned on allegedly unconstitutional invasions of privacy, which did not affect white and/or male employees. Being subjected to an additional term or condition involving an unconstitutional invasion of privacy or illicit category is clearly actionable under Title VII; the requisite adverse effect on the employees is the unauthorized obtaining of sensitive medical information on the basis of race or sex.^{13.8}

Finally, the court examined the merits of the ADA claim, concluding that the ADA claim was properly dismissed. The ADA gives more latitude to these types of tests and imposes no restrictions on their scope, but only guarantees the confidentiality of the information gathered and restricts the use of that information.^{13.9}

Given the protected nature of the information revealed by a medical examination and the fact that the examination itself is necessarily physically intrusive, an employer may arguably be required to demonstrate a compelling need for requiring such an examination. In some instances, an employer may be able to demonstrate safety or security concerns that outweigh the employee's right to be free from physical examinations. For example, facts may raise a reasonable suspicion that an employee in (or applicant for) a critical position suffers from a health condition posing a substantial risk of harm to other employees or to the public. Furthermore, by analogy to employment discrimination law,¹⁴ an employer may be able to argue that the duties of a particular job require the employee to meet certain standards of health and physical condition and that these needs outweigh the employee's privacy interests. In that case, however, the right of privacy may require that the scope of the examination be limited to matters that are directly related to the employer's legitimate concerns.

[b] Waiver

Even if a required medical or physical examination would otherwise be constitutionally prohibited, such examinations may arguably be permitted if the applicant or employee has voluntarily waived his or her privacy rights. In the context of such medical examinations, the primary issues are (1) whether such a waiver is, in fact, voluntary, and (2) whether an employer may condition employment on waiver of a constitutional right. No California cases have discussed either issue in the context of private employment.

With regard to the first issue, in Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,¹⁵ the California Supreme Court analyzed whether a collegiate athlete's participation in a private athletic association's drug testing program was voluntary in order to determine the reasonableness of the athlete's expectations of privacy, which is one of the essential elements of a plaintiff's invasion of privacy claim.¹⁶ The Court concluded that the athlete had a diminished expectation of privacy because of advance notice of the program and the opportunity to consent to testing. The Court reasoned that although a refusal to consent to drug testing disqualified the athlete from competition, "this consequence does not render the athlete's consent to testing involuntary in any meaningful legal sense. Athletic participation is not a government benefit or an economic necessity that society has decreed must be open to all."¹⁷ By analogy, the employer may be able to argue that a waiver made by an applicant is voluntary because the applicant has a minimal interest in the potential employment with any particular employer and is free to apply elsewhere. The strength of this argument may be diminished to the extent that other employers in a particular industry or field also require such examinations. Also, the argument may not be as strong in the case of current employees who have a greater stake in continued employment.

Regarding the second issue, the California Supreme Court has repeatedly held that a public employer cannot require current employees to waive their constitutional rights, including the right to privacy, as a condition of employment unless the public entity demonstrates a compelling interest justifying the waiver.¹⁸ Whether or not this rule applies to private employers has apparently never been addressed by any California appellate court. However, in the Hill case, the California Supreme Court drastically limited the continued application of the compelling interest standard.¹⁹ And in Loder v. City of Glendale,²⁰ the California Supreme Court held that applicants for public employment should "reasonably... anticipate" a preemployment medical exam.

[2] Related Legal Issues

[a] Equal Employment Opportunity Laws

Apart from the general privacy issues discussed in [1], above, employer-required physical and medical examinations raise potential issues under equal employment opportunity laws. As discussed further in Chapters 40-44, both federal and state laws prohibit discrimination against employees and applicants based on physical or mental disability, as defined by those laws.ⁿ²¹ Thus, any requirement that an employee "pass" a physical examination or respond to questions about his or her physical or medical condition must comply with the requirements of state and federal equal employment opportunity laws.ⁿ²² For example, pursuant to its statutory authority under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA),ⁿ²³ the Fair Employment and Housing Commission (FEHC) has issued regulationsⁿ²⁴ implementing and interpreting the FEHA's statutory prohibition against employment discrimination based on physical disability.ⁿ²⁵ The regulations include a provision regulating the conditions under which an employer may require a job applicant to submit to a preemployment medical examination.ⁿ²⁶ Under that provision, an employer may condition an offer of employment on the results of a medical examination conducted before the employee enters into employment in order to determine fitness for the job in question, provided that all of the following requirements are met:ⁿ²⁷

1. All entering employees in similar positions are subjected to such an examination;
2. When the results of such a medical examination would result in disqualification for the position, the applicant may submit independent medical opinion for consideration before a final determination on disqualification is made; and
3. The results of medical examinations must be maintained on separate forms and must be accorded confidentiality as medical records,ⁿ²⁸ except that supervisors and managers may be informed of restrictions on the work or duties of physically handicapped individuals and of accommodations that are necessary, and first aid and safety personnel may be informed, when appropriate, that the employee's condition may require emergency treatment.

The regulation also provides that an employer may lawfully inquire concerning an applicant's present physical condition or medical history "if, and only if, that inquiry is directly related and pertinent to the position in question or is directly related to a determination of whether the applicant would endanger his or her health and safety or the health and safety of others."ⁿ²⁹

For full discussion of prohibitions against employment discrimination based on medical condition or disability, see Chapter 41. For discussion of employers and employees covered under equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 40.

[b] Other Issues

Assuming that the employer is legally justified in requiring an applicant or employee to submit to a medical examination, the employer must be careful to comply with statutory and case law restrictions regarding the use and disclosure of medical information obtained from such examinations.ⁿ³⁰ The Confidentiality of Medical Information Act prohibits an employer from discriminating against an employee in terms or conditions of employment because of that employee's refusal to sign an authorization for disclosure of medical records.ⁿ³¹ However, this provision also provides that the prohibition does not "prohibit an employer from taking such action as is necessary in the absence of medical information due to an employee's refusal to sign an authorization."ⁿ³² This provision appears to authorize an employer to take action against an employee who refuses to authorize release of the results of a physical or medical examination if such action is necessitated by the absence of medical information that would have been obtained from the examination. In Loder v. City of Glendale ⁿ³³ the plaintiff claimed that by rejecting applicants who refuse to authorize disclosure to the city, as employer, of the results of their drug test, the city violated Civil Code section 56.20(b). The California Supreme Court, however, determined that the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act had no bearing on whether an employer could require either applicants or current employees to undergo drug testing.ⁿ³⁴ For discussion of restrictions on the use and disclosure of medical information, see Chapter 51.

In addition, the employer is required by statute to bear the cost of any preemployment medical or physical examination, or any examination required by federal, state, or local law.ⁿ³⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Constitutional Law Substantive Due Process Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Constitutional Protections Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Medical & Related Examinations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally discussion in § 50.30[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37-38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 50.30[1][c].

(n4)Footnote 4. See discussion in § 50.30[1][d].

(n5)Footnote 5. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 55-56 & n.20, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 52-54, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Pettus v. Cole (1996) 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Pettus v. Cole (1996) 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Cutter v. Brownbridge (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 836, 842-843, 228 Cal. Rptr. 545 ; Board of Medical Quality Assur. v. Hazel Hawkins Memorial Hospital (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 561, 565, 185 Cal. Rptr. 405 ; Jones v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 534, 548-550, 174 Cal. Rptr. 148 ; Board of Medical Quality Assurance v. Gherardini (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 669, 679, 156 Cal. Rptr. 55 .

(n10)Footnote 10. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Gov. Code § 12940 et seq.

(n12)Footnote 12. 42 U.S.C. § 12001 et seq.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 995, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 (in context of Fourth Amendment, Court noted absence of authority suggesting such examinations are constitutionally impermissible); see Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1273-1274 (medical inquiries and exams conducted after offer of employment but before beginning duties need not be concerned solely with ability to perform job-related functions under ADA; ADA imposes no restrictions on scope of this type of exam, but guarantees confidentiality of information gathered).

(n14)Footnote 13.1. Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260 .

(n15)Footnote 13.2. Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1268-1273 ; 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq. (Title VII).

(n16)Footnote 13.3. Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1266-1268 (for summary judgment purposes, foreseeability cannot be established on ground that plaintiffs were required to and did submit to general medical exam).

(n17)Footnote 13.4. Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1268-1270 (tests may be characterized as searches; under Fourth Amendment, court must balance government interest in tests against individual's privacy expectations).

(n18)Footnote 13.5. Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1268-1270 (consent to general medical exam does not abolish one's privacy right not to be tested for intimate, personal matters involving health; consent to provide blood and urine samples or completing questionnaire is not waiver; error to grant summary judgment on merits).

(n19)Footnote 13.6. Cal. Const., art. I, § 3.

(n20)Footnote 13.7. Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1271 .

(n21)Footnote 13.8. Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1270-1271 .

(n22)Footnote 13.9. Norman-Bloodsaw v. Lawrence Berkeley Lab. (9th Cir. 1998) 135 F.3d 1260, 1273-1274 (fact that employers did not provide or adequately describe privacy safeguards insufficient to state cause of action under ADA).

(n23)Footnote 14. See discussion in [2], below, and in ch. 41.

(n24)Footnote 15. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 42-43, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n25)Footnote 16. See discussion in § 50.30[1][b].

(n26)Footnote 17. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 42, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 . see American Federation of Labor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 51, 57, 67, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210 (testing of oil-platform workers at annual physical exam did not violate right to privacy; court did not cite Hill).

(n27)Footnote 18. See Long Beach City Employees Association v. City of Long Beach (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 937, 951-952, 227 Cal. Rptr. 90, 719 P.2d 660 (privacy rights); Bagley v. Washington Township Hospital District (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 499, 501, 507, 55 Cal. Rptr. 401, 421 P.2d 409 (First Amendment rights).

(n28)Footnote 19. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 34-35, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; see discussion in § 50.30[1][d].

(n29)Footnote 20. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 896-898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 ; see 50.30[1][e], 50.42[1][b] for discussion of Loder.

(n30)Footnote 21. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 793, 794 (Rehabilitation Act of 1973), 12100 et seq. (Americans with Disabilities Act); Gov. Code § 12940 (Fair Employment and Housing Act).

(n31)Footnote 22. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n32)Footnote 23. See Gov. Code § 12935(a).

(n33)Footnote 24. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 7293.5-7294.2.

(n34)Footnote 25. See Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n35)Footnote 26. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(d).

(n36)Footnote 27. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(d).

(n37)Footnote 28. For discussion of statutory provisions relating to confidentiality of medical records, see ch. 51.

(n38)Footnote 29. 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(3).

(n39)Footnote 30. See, e.g., Civ. Code §§ 56.20-56.24.

(n40)Footnote 31. See Civ. Code § 56.20(b).

(n41)Footnote 32. See Civ. Code § 56.20(b).

(n42)Footnote 33. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n43)Footnote 34. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 859-865, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n44)Footnote 35. See Lab. Code § 222.5; see also discussion in ch. 4.

24 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees

Part D. SPECIFIC INFORMATION-GATHERING PRACTICES IMPLICATING EMPLOYEE PRIVACY ISSUES

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.43

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.43 Drug and Alcohol Tests

[1] Potential Legal Issues Involved in Drug Testing

[a] Testing of Employees

[i] No Statutory Prohibition of Drug Screening by Employers

Apparently in reaction to increased concern over the economic, societal, and safety problems associated with drug abuse and the use of drugs in the workplace, an increasing number of employers have instituted drug-screening programs, either as part of a required physical and medical examination or separately from such an examination. The programs vary in their scope. Some employers test only applicants.ⁿ¹ Others test current employees under various circumstances--for example, when there is "probable cause" to suspect drug use on the job, following an accident on the job, or at random. The most common method currently used to test for the presence of illegal drugs in the body involves urinalysis using the "EMIT system." This method detects the presence of drugs in an individual's blood system but cannot measure the degree of impairment of functions caused by such drugs.

There are currently no generally applicable California or federal statutes that directly prohibit private employers from requiring applicants or employees to submit to drug screening, although some local ordinances may restrict the practice.ⁿ² In fact, federal statutes and regulations actually require certain private employers (primarily in transportation-related industries, but also including other types of businesses that employ drivers who operate commercial motor vehicles in interstate commerce) to establish drug testing programs for employees engaged in safety-sensitive functions.ⁿ³ Space limitations preclude a full discussion of these provisions in this chapter. For a further discussion of these federal laws and regulations, see Larson, employment screening, ch. 12 (Matthew Bender).

In the absence of an express statutory provision either prohibiting or authorizing drug testing, institution of a mandatory drug-testing program poses many of the same potential legal issues previously discussed regarding medical and physical examinations.ⁿ⁴

[ii] Collective Bargaining Agreement May Limit Employer's Right to Conduct Drug Testing

If a union employee is discharged as a result of the outcome of a challenged drug test, federal labor laws may preclude state-law causes of action pertaining to the dispute. For example, the Ninth Circuit has held that *section 301 of the Labor Management Relations Act*⁵ preempts a unionized employee's action for wrongful termination under state law, violation of state constitutional rights, and related claims, when the employee's causes of action are based on suspicion-based drug testing by a private employer because an employee's right to be free from mandatory drug testing is the proper subject of collective bargaining.⁶

[iii] Balancing Employer's Interest in Drug-Free Workplace Against Employee's California Constitutional Right to Privacy

With regard to the right to privacy under the California Constitution,⁷ as previously discussed,⁸ the California Supreme Court in *Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Assn.*⁹ applied a "balancing test" standard to hold that the National Collegiate Athletic Association's drug testing program did not violate the privacy rights of student athletes. The Court indicated that the same standard will apply to determine under what circumstances it is permissible to use drug testing in order to maintain a workplace free of substance abuse and applied this standard in Loder v. City of Glendale.¹⁰

Courts have previously indicated that individuals have a legitimate expectation of privacy in connection with conventional urinalysis testing.¹¹ The privacy right applies to the act of urination and the taking of the urine sample,¹² as well as the disclosure of test results.¹³ First, the act of urination is itself a private function.¹⁴ Thus, for example, any drug-screening methods that require a third party to observe the collection of the sample would implicate the employee's privacy interest. Second, as in the case of physical examinations, drug urinalysis may reveal other types of information that may be held to be private, including prescription-drug use and medical conditions (such as epilepsy and pregnancy) that are unrelated to whether the test subject uses illicit drugs.¹⁵

In Loder v. City of Glendale,¹⁶ the California Supreme Court stated that drug testing by an employer that requires individuals to provide a urine sample under surveillance, uses the sample to acquire information about the individual's internal physical state, and requires an individual to disclose those medications he or she currently is taking "clearly intrudes on both autonomy privacy interests and informational privacy interests which are protected by the state Constitution."¹⁷

In Edgerton v. State Personnel Bd.,^{17.1} the court found that the trial court properly permanently enjoined Caltrans from conducting off-duty follow-up drug testing of employees because it intruded on an employee's constitutionally protected right to privacy. The court found that Caltrans' on-duty random drug testing is a significant intrusion on an individual's privacy rights, which is significantly augmented when an employee is subject to follow-up testing on off-duty time. The court also noted that Caltrans' employees have no reasonable expectation they will be subject to off-duty follow-up testing on their personal time because written policies provide that employees will be subject to testing on duty, and that Caltrans failed to sustain its burden of showing that less intrusive alternatives were unavailable. Further, the injunction permitted testing contiguous to on-duty time, as well as off-duty follow-up testing if necessary to comply with federal regulations as less intrusive alternatives permitted Caltrans to conduct follow-up testing while protecting against an unjustified intrusion into employees' right of privacy.

In a case decided before Hill and Loder, one court of appeal held that a pupillary reaction eye examination, which consists of shining a light into the employee's eye and watching the reaction, may implicate the constitutional right of privacy, depending on factors such as the nature of the test, the equipment used, the manner of administration, the reliability of the testing method, and the handling of test results, and a weighing of those factors against any asserted justification for the test.¹⁸

In another case decided before Hill, and cited without approval in Loder, in the context of preemployment drug screening, an appellate court held that the justification of maintaining a workplace free of substance abuse outweighs the intrusiveness of drug testing.ⁿ¹⁹ The court in that case emphasized that the plaintiffs' status as mere applicants for employment, rather than employees, was perhaps the most important factor in its analysis.ⁿ²⁰ Loder v. City of Glendale ⁿ²¹ addressed this distinction peripherally. That is, Loder credited the argument that employers have no opportunity to observe applicants over a period of time.ⁿ²² Accordingly, the court found that employers have a greater need for suspicionless testing of applicants than of current employees.ⁿ²³

[iv] Fourth Amendment Issues in Drug Testing by Government Employer

Because Loder involved a municipal employer, the implied right to privacy under the Fourth Amendment of the United States Constitution was also at issue--a factor that directly implicated the propriety of current employee testing. The City of Glendale sought to require all employees who were offered a promotion to undergo drug testing as part of a required physical examination. The Court found that such suspicionless testing was impermissible under the principles set forth by the United States Supreme Court in Treasury Employees v. Van Raab ⁿ²⁴ because the City sought to test every promoted employee regardless of the nature of the position sought.ⁿ²⁵ Thus, the court sustained suspicionless drug testing of applicants but found similar testing of employees to exceed constitutional bounds.

In Treasury Employees v. Von Raab,ⁿ²⁶ the United States Supreme Court determined for the first time the constitutionality of drug testing of government employees. A federal employees' union challenged, on Fourth-Amendment grounds, a drug-testing program requiring certain United States Customs Service employees to submit to a urine test. The Customs Service had implemented a program under which drug testing was a condition of placement or employment for positions that required the following activities: (1) involvement in drug interdiction or enforcement of related laws; (2) possession of firearms; and (3) the handling of "classified" material. The United States Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the drug-testing program with respect to the first two positions enumerated above, and remanded the matter for further determination of the scope of the employment position regarding "classified material."ⁿ²⁷ The Court initially found that a warrant is not required by a balance of privacy and governmental interests, holding that the primary mission of the Customs Service would be compromised if it were required to seek search warrants in connection with routine, yet sensitive, employment decisions.ⁿ²⁸

The Court also relied on its decision in Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association,ⁿ²⁹ for the holding that, in certain limited circumstances, the government's need to discover latent or hidden conditions, or to prevent their development, is sufficiently compelling to justify the intrusion on privacy entailed by conducting searches without any measure of individualized suspicion.ⁿ³⁰ The Court found that the public interest involved, for example, in employing armed customs agents who are unimpaired by drug use, outweighed any invasion-of-privacy interests of the employees, noting, as it did in Skinner, that the nature of the employment implies a diminished expectation of privacy.ⁿ³¹ The Court reasoned, for example, that Customs employees who are directly involved in the interdiction of illegal drugs or who are required to carry firearms in the line of duty have a diminished expectation of privacy with respect to the intrusions occasioned by a urine test.ⁿ³²

Unlike the circumstances under Skinner, the drug-testing program in Von Raab was not implemented pursuant to any preliminary study that revealed significant drug use among the affected employees. To the contrary, Customs employees had not exhibited any perceived drug problem, and the implementation of the testing program had not led to the discovery of a significant number of drug users. Nevertheless, the Court held that when the possible harm against which the government seeks to guard is substantial, the need to prevent its occurrence furnishes an ample justification for reasonable searches calculated to advance the government's goal. It held that the mere circumstance that all but a few of the employees tested are entirely innocent of wrongdoing does not impugn the program's validity.ⁿ³³ The Court also rejected the union's argument that the method of testing is ineffective because employees are given notice of the test, and have an opportunity to abstain from any drug use prior to the testing. The Court cited expert opinion that the time it takes for particular drugs to become undetectable in urine can vary widely depending on the individual. It also noted that persons addicted to drugs may be unable to abstain from use at any given time.ⁿ³⁴

The Supreme Court in Von Raab concluded that the government demonstrated that its compelling interests in safeguarding the borders of the United States and the public safety outweigh the privacy expectations of employees who seek to be promoted to positions that directly involve the interdiction of illegal drugs or that require the incumbent to carry a firearm; and that the testing of those employees is reasonable under the Fourth Amendment.ⁿ³⁵

In Lanier v. City of Woodburn, ^{n35.1} the Ninth Circuit held that a city's requirement of a pre-employment drug and alcohol screening for all prospective applicants as a condition of employment was unconstitutional as applied to an applicant for the job of library page. The drug screening policy clearly effected a search within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment.^{n35.2} Further, the policy was not facially invalid, because the policy could constitutionally be applied to jobs that, for example, required the operation of dangerous equipment. However, the city could not demonstrate a special need to screen all prospective library pages for drugs without a showing of individualized suspicion as required by the Fourth Amendment.^{n35.3} The city asserted no evidence of a drug problem among library pages, and the library pages were not involved in interdiction or typically perform high-risk, safety-sensitive tasks.^{n35.4} Jobs are considered safety-sensitive if they involve work that may pose a great danger to the public, such as the following, and the city failed to show that the work of a library page entailed anything on that order of magnitude:

- Operation of railway cars.^{n35.5}
- The armed interdiction of illegal drugs.^{n35.6}
- Work in a nuclear power facility.^{n35.7}
- Work involving matters of national security.^{n35.8}
- Work involving the operation of natural gas and liquified natural gas pipelines.^{n35.9}
- Work in the aviation industry.^{n35.10}
- Work involving the operation of dangerous instrumentalities, such as trucks that weigh more than 26,000 pounds, that are used to transport hazardous materials, or that carry more than fourteen passengers at a time.^{n35.11}

Further, although the city had an obvious interest in protecting children, the link the city identified between that interest and a position as part-time library page was tenuous at best.

The California courts have not yet considered a drug-testing program designed to test employees only on particularized suspicion of impairment. It is likely, however, that such a program would be upheld, especially if the duties of the tested employees were safety-related.ⁿ³⁶ An employer might also argue that the employee has waived his or her privacy rights. Generally, issues regarding waiver are essentially the same as those previously discussed concerning physical and medical examinations.ⁿ³⁷

Edgerton v. State Personnel Bd.,^{n37.1} raises the Fourth Amendment issue of chain of custody. In Edgerton, the Court of Appeal held that the trial court properly set aside the State Personnel Board's decision terminating a Caltrans employee on the basis of a positive drug test on the ground that certification that the chain of custody over the employee's urine sample was complete was incorrect, rendering the positive test result inadmissible. The employer bears the ultimate burden of proof in establishing a positive drug test in order to justify an adverse employment action, but the employee bears the burden of proving a break in the chain of custody under the Evid. Code § 664 presumption that official duty has been regularly performed, which presumption the court found the employee rebutted.^{n37.2}

[v] Fourth Amendment Issues in Drug Testing by Private Employer

In Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association,ⁿ³⁸ the United States Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether the Fourth Amendment prohibits drug and alcohol testing of private railroad employees who are subject to government regulations requiring or permitting drug- and alcohol-testing under certain circumstances. In Skinner, the Railway Labor Executives' Association and member labor organizations sought to enjoin the enforcement of certain regulations promulgated by the Federal Railroad Administration. One of the two regulations in question provided for mandatory blood and urine testing of covered railroad employees following a "major train accident" or an "impact accident," or any train incident involving a fatality to any on-duty railroad employee.ⁿ³⁹ The other regulation provided for permissive breath or urine testing of covered employees following a reportable accident or incident on reasonable suspicion of the employee's culpability, in the event of certain specific rule violations, such as excessive speeding, and on reasonable suspicion that the employee is under the influence of alcohol.ⁿ⁴⁰ The Supreme Court concluded that, taking into account the nature of railroad employment, the interests of government in regulating railroad safety, and the extensiveness of the intrusion in question, neither the mandatory nor the permissive regulations violate a railroad employee's rights under the Fourth Amendment, because testing under the regulations is reasonable even without a warrant or reasonable suspicion that any particular employee may be impaired.ⁿ⁴¹ In so holding, the Supreme Court reversed the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, which had invalidated the federal regulations on the ground that a showing of particularized suspicion prior to testing is essential to ensure reasonableness within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment, and the regulations did not require such a showing.ⁿ⁴²

The Supreme Court in Skinner initially addressed the issue of whether government regulation of private railroad employees constituted government action regarding private conduct so as to bring the regulations within the reach of the Fourth Amendment. The Court noted that the mandatory-testing regulation implicates the Fourth Amendment because sovereign authority compels a railroad to comply with those provisions.ⁿ⁴³ It then discussed the permissive regulation, noting that whether a private party should be deemed an agent or instrument of the government for Fourth Amendment purposes necessarily turns on the degree of the government's participation in the private party's activities. The fact that the government has not compelled a private party to perform a search does not, by itself, establish that the search is a private one. The Court found that, in light of specific features of the regulations, the government did more than adopt a passive position toward the underlying private conduct; that it in fact encouraged, endorsed, and participated in the testing, to an extent sufficient to implicate the Fourth Amendment. It based that finding, among other reasons, on the fact that the regulations pre-empt state law and supersede any collective-bargaining agreement, and that the federal government is entitled to receive certain biological samples and test results.ⁿ⁴⁴ The Court found that subjecting a person to a breathalyzer test, blood test, and urinalysis are intrusions that constitute searches within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment.ⁿ⁴⁵

The Court then discussed whether the regulations met the Fourth Amendment's "reasonableness" requirement, focusing on three separate considerations: (1) the warrant requirement; (2) the probable-cause or "individualized suspicion" requirement; and (3) the legitimacy of government interest in testing without individualized suspicion. The Court found the absence of a warrant requirement reasonable, noting that the government's interest in dispensing with the warrant requirement is at its strongest when "the burden of obtaining a warrant is likely to frustrate the governmental purpose behind the search." It found that to require a warrant under the regulations would frustrate the government's purpose, because alcohol and other drugs are eliminated from the body over the passage of time, and detection within a certain timeframe, depending on the method of testing, is crucial.ⁿ⁴⁶

With regard to the probable-cause requirement, the Court noted initially that even a search without a warrant must be based on probable cause to believe that the person to be searched has violated the law. When the balance of interests precludes insistence on a showing of probable cause, "some quantum of individualized suspicion" is usually required before a search is considered reasonable. However, in limited circumstances, when the privacy interests implicated by the search are minimal, and when an important governmental interest furthered by the intrusion would be placed in jeopardy by a requirement of individualized suspicion, a search may be reasonable despite the absence of that suspicion.ⁿ⁴⁷ The Court found the privacy interests of the employees involved to be minimal because of the nature of employment in the railroad industry, which the Court noted was subject to many regulations because of government interests in promoting safety. The Court pointed out that the interest in bodily security enjoyed by those employed in a regulated industry need not always be considered minimal, but noted that covered railroad employees have long been a principal focus of regulatory concern.ⁿ⁴⁸

Finally, the Court held that the compelling government interests served by the regulations would be significantly hindered if railroads were required to provide a reasonable suspicion of impairment before testing a given employee. It found the government interests compelling because of the significant dangers inherent in the performance of duties by impaired railroad employees. In view of its conclusion that the toxicological testing contemplated by the regulations is not an undue infringement on the justifiable expectations of privacy of covered railroad employees, the Court held that the government's compelling interests outweigh privacy concerns.ⁿ⁴⁹

In a subsequent case, railroad workers challenged additional regulations on Fourth Amendment grounds.ⁿ⁵⁰ Unlike the regulations in Skinner, these involved random mandatory drug testing of railroad workers in safety-sensitive positions. The federal court of appeals upheld the implementation of the regulations based on the guidelines set forth in Skinner and Von Raab, holding that the increased intrusion on the privacy interests of the railroad employees is justified by the importance of maximizing safety in the railroad industry by preventing drug use.ⁿ⁵¹

Lower federal court opinions decided prior to Skinner and Von Raab had determined the extent of public employees' Fourth-Amendment rights with regard to drug and alcohol testing with conflicting results.ⁿ⁵²

In a case decided subsequent to Skinner and Von Raab, the District of Columbia Circuit upheld mandatory random drug testing of certain categories of employees in the U.S. Department of Transportation whose positions were deemed to have "a direct and immediate impact on public health and safety, the protection of life and property, law enforcement, or national security" against federal constitutional and statutory challenges.ⁿ⁵³

Based on Skinner and Von Raab, the Ninth Circuit upheld requirements of the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) of the Department of Transportation, mandating various forms of drug testing for commercial motor vehicle operators, including random, biennial, and post-accident drug testing.ⁿ⁵⁴ The Court initially noted that testing conducted by private employers under compulsion of governmental regulations amounts to governmental action subject to the Fourth Amendment, and concluded after analyzing the nature of the testing program, that motor carriers need not obtain a search warrant prior to the administration of drug tests ordered by the FHWA, primarily because the interests of public safety outweigh the degree of potential employer abuses.ⁿ⁵⁵ Under the facts, the random-testing urinalysis program (allowing a maximum average of biennial tests) was found to be constitutional on its face, after balancing the degree of intrusion of drivers' privacy and the governmental interest in highway safety.ⁿ⁵⁶ The same balancing test supported the constitutionality of the periodic testing program under the facts (biennially in the course of thorough medical examinations, and only prior to full implementation of random testing program).ⁿ⁵⁷ In addition, the court upheld the constitutionality of the post-accident testing requirement (within 32 hours of a reportable accident), pursuant to the reasoning of Skinner.ⁿ⁵⁸

The Ninth Circuit has likewise upheld random drug testing of civilian employees of the United States Navy who hold top secret security clearances.ⁿ⁵⁹ The Court held that even though the plaintiffs were engineers who are not in fact allowed access to top secret areas, the Navy's determination that they require top secret clearance meets the justification criterion under Von Raab that the employees subject to testing are likely to gain access to sensitive information.ⁿ⁶⁰ The Court also deferred to the Navy's determination of which classifications of employees are subject to testing, noting that the naval officers responsible for that determination have discretion tempered by sufficient procedural safeguards.ⁿ⁶¹

Similarly, the Ninth Circuit has upheld random drug testing of clerical, warehouse, and maintenance employees at a nuclear plant pursuant to Nuclear Regulatory Commission regulations applicable to workers who have unescorted access to "protected areas."ⁿ⁶² The Court noted that although the plaintiff (the union representing the employees) asserted that not all clerical and warehouse workers held safety-sensitive positions, it failed to particularize to which subgroups of employees it referred; consequently, testing of all those employees was held to be constitutional.ⁿ⁶³

Finally, the Ninth Circuit has also upheld a provision of the Department of Labor's Drug-Free Workplace Plan providing for drug testing of employees in public health and safety-sensitive or security-sensitive positions based on reasonable suspicion of off-duty drug use.ⁿ⁶⁴ The Court held that the provision was not facially unconstitutional under the Fourth Amendment, but emphasized that its opinion did not preclude a further constitutional challenge to the provision as applied.ⁿ⁶⁵

[b] Testing of Applicants for Employment

[i] Balancing Test for Analyzing Privacy Claims Under California Constitution

In Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association,ⁿ⁶⁶ the California Supreme Court adopted a new "balancing test" approach for analyzing state constitutional privacy claims. In Loder v. City of Glendale,ⁿ⁶⁷ the California Supreme Court applied the balancing test established in Hill to determine the constitutionality of pre-employment drug testing of all applicants by the City of Glendale. The city performed the drug testing at issue as a component of a physical examination required of all applicants who had received a conditional offer of employment.ⁿ⁶⁸ Applicants were notified of the drug testing in the job announcement bulletin and signed a consent form when they entered the doctor's office. The physician who performed the examination asked about medications currently being taken and required the applicant to provide a urine sample while an attendant stood next to the cubicle in which the applicant was urinating. The sample was tested for blood, sugar and protein as part of the medical screening and then sent to a drug lab for testing for drugs and alcohol.ⁿ⁶⁹

The Court easily overcame the threshold requirements set forth in Hill.ⁿ⁷⁰ It reasoned that Hill established that drug testing which requires individuals to provide a urine sample under surveillance, uses the sample to acquire information about the individual's internal physical state, and requires an individual to disclose those medications he or she currently is taking "clearly intrudes on both autonomy privacy interests and informational privacy interests which are protected by the state Constitution." The Court noted, however, that the actual intrusion was lessened by the fact that the drug testing was part of a preemployment medical examination that a job applicant "reasonably must anticipate."ⁿ⁷¹

The Court then balanced this intrusion against the employer's interest in avoiding the financial burdens and morale problems caused by an employee's abuse of drugs or alcohol.ⁿ⁷² The Court accepted the City's position that drug and alcohol abuse resulted in absenteeism and tardiness, decreased productivity, increased turnover and greater safety issues. It further agreed that employers have a greater need for suspicionless testing of applicants than current employees because they have not had an opportunity to observe the behavior of those individuals over time.ⁿ⁷³ The Loder court determined that the limited intrusion caused by a drug test performed on an individual who was already required to undergo a complete medical examination was justified by the city's interests.ⁿ⁷⁴

In Pilkington Barnes Hind v. Superior Court,^{n74.1} the court of appeal was faced with the narrow issue of whether the plaintiff was a job applicant or an employee within the meaning of Loder when the plaintiff submitted to a mandatory pre-employment drug test, in the absence of individualized suspicion of drug abuse, four days after the plaintiff was placed on the employer's payroll.^{n74.2} As discussed above, Loder distinguished between job applicants and current employees for purposes of an employer's legitimate interest in suspicionless testing: because a prospective employer lacks the ability to observe and evaluate the person as an employee, before incurring investment costs, the employer has a greater need for suspicionless drug testing of applicants. Although the plaintiff was already an "employee" on the date of the test,^{n74.3} the plaintiff was solely responsible for the delays in testing.^{n74.4} The court held that a job applicant, who requests and receives a delay in submitting to a constitutionally permissible preemployment drug test until after the start of employment, may not evade the employer's testing requirement after employment on the ground the applicant became an "employee" and is immune from such testing. Under these facts, and for purposes of suspicionless drug testing, the applicant who caused delay must submit to testing after the employment date. If the "employee" fails the test given in the brief period between employment and administration of the test, that employment, conditioned on passing the delayed test, may be terminated. Thus, for purposes of Loder, the plaintiff was still a job applicant and the suspicionless drug test was constitutionally permissible.^{n74.5}

In Loder, the Court discussed, without either approving or disapproving, an earlier decision of the appellate court regarding applicant drug testing.ⁿ⁷⁵ In Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp., the court of appeal upheld the constitutionality of a testing program that provided for notice to the job applicant of urinalysis requirements, limited intrusiveness of testing procedures, and restricted access to test results, emphasizing that its holding constituted a balancing of interests with regard to the particular program in the case before it.ⁿ⁷⁶

The employer in Wilkinson, a publishing company, implemented a policy providing for preemployment physical examinations, including a drug and alcohol-screening test for all job applicants.ⁿ⁷⁷ Under that policy, applicants who received a conditional offer of employment based on their applications, written tests, and interviews, were informed that the offer was contingent on successful completion of a medical examination, which included a medical history, certain diagnostic tests, and a urinalysis for drugs and alcohol. Applicants who accepted the conditional offer were referred to a medical clinic. They were asked to report all medication taken in the last 72 hours and to submit to urine collection during the examination, although the act of urination itself was not observed by medical personnel. The sample was sent to an independent laboratory for analysis. Based on the results of the physical examination and the urinalysis, applicants were assigned a numerical suitability rating from one to five. A rating of five precluded the applicant from consideration for employment. A positive test result was reported as a rating of five, but that rating could also result from some other disqualifying medical condition. No medical information revealed during the test was reported to the employer, which was informed only of the suitability rating. An applicant who received a rating of five was permitted to reapply for employment after six months. The testing program was part of an existing substance-abuse program, which did not include any testing of employees already hired.ⁿ⁷⁸

The plaintiffs in Wilkinson had applied for various editorial and office jobs and had completed various stages of the preemployment process, but all refused to submit to the required urinalysis; none of the applicants was hired. Their complaint stated causes of action under, inter alia, California Constitution, Article I, Section 1, and sought injunctive and declaratory relief on behalf of themselves as well as all others similarly situated, and damages for themselves. The trial court granted a preliminary injunction, restraining the employer from conditioning employment of the plaintiffs or any other job applicants on submission to mandatory urinalysis testing for alcohol and drugs. The employer appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The Court began its analysis with a discussion of the scope of the right to privacy under the California Constitution, Article I, Section 1. As discussed in § 50.30[1][a][ii], the court rejected the employer's contention that the constitutional protection limits only government actors, not private parties.ⁿ⁷⁹ The Court then turned to the question of whether the preemployment drug testing program in that case violated the state constitutional right to privacy. The Court noted that the general concept of privacy encompasses a broad range of personal action and belief, but that the right is not absolute. It emphasized that a balancing of interests, rather than a deduction from principle, is required for a determination of the boundaries of the right of privacy. In this respect, Wilkinson is consistent with the standards and elements subsequently announced in Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association.ⁿ⁸⁰

Another important factor guiding the Wilkinson court's decision was that the plaintiffs were applicants for employment, rather than current employees. The Court reasoned that any individual who chooses to seek employment necessarily also chooses to disclose certain personal information to prospective employers and to allow the prospective employer to verify that information. When plaintiffs were asked to consent to drug and alcohol screening as a condition of an employment offer, they were in effect asked to disclose voluntarily the personal information that might be revealed by that screening.

The Court noted also that although the collecting and testing of urine does to some extent intrude on reasonable expectations of privacy, several factors in this case minimized the intrusiveness of the employer's drug-screening program. As applicants for employment in private business, plaintiffs necessarily had to anticipate being asked to take a preemployment physical examination.ⁿ⁸¹ Further, California law authorizes private employers to condition an offer of employment on the results of a medical examination conducted to determine fitness for the job, subject to certain other restrictions.ⁿ⁸² The Court reasoned that urinalysis is ordinarily part of a routine physical examination, so that any applicant for private employment should reasonably anticipate that it would be required. Subjecting urine samples to analysis for alcohol and drugs is only slightly more intrusive than the procedures normally anticipated by job seekers with private business. Moreover, the employer in this case specifically informs job applicants, and did inform plaintiffs, that a job offer is conditioned on consent to drug testing.

Finally, the court noted that the testing procedures, such as disclosure restrictions, and the applicant's access to test results and right to challenge the results or reapply after six months, minimize the intrusion into individual privacy. The Court stated that the job applicants under this program have a choice: they may consent to the limited invasion of their privacy resulting from the testing, or decline both the test and the conditional offer of employment, in which case they may seek employment elsewhere.ⁿ⁸³

Plaintiffs argued that a private employer may not ask a prospective employee to consent to an invasion of privacy simply because that applicant has no independent right to the job, citing cases that hold that when the state implements a general public-benefit program, the California Constitution limits the state's ability to condition receipt of those benefits on waiver of a constitutional right.ⁿ⁸⁴ The Court held those cases inapplicable to the instant case, and stated that plaintiffs failed to cite any authority on point.

The Court noted that when selecting employees, private employers must comply with applicable federal and state statutes prohibiting many forms of discrimination, such as that based on race or religion.ⁿ⁸⁵ Subject to those restrictions, however, a private employer has considerable discretion in setting job-related hiring standards. The Court stated that a private employer "unquestionably" has a legitimate interest in a drug and alcohol-free work environment, and in excluding from employment those individuals whose drug and alcohol use may affect their job performance or threaten harm to themselves.ⁿ⁸⁶ Plaintiffs, while not disputing that goal, argued that drug testing is an unreliable and ineffective method of accomplishing it. The Court disagreed, noting that the United States Supreme Court in Skinner concluded that drug tests, if properly conducted, identify the presence of alcohol and drugs with great accuracy. The Court found that the employer's decision to rely on drug testing as a screening mechanism in the instant case was neither arbitrary nor irrational.ⁿ⁸⁷

The Court concluded that the employer in this case did not violate California Constitution, article I, section 1, by asking job applicants to consent to urinalysis tests for alcohol and other drugs as a condition of a job offer, given the notice provided to prospective employees, the limited intrusiveness of the collection process, and the procedural safeguards that restricted access to the test results.ⁿ⁸⁸ The Court emphasized that it was not holding that all preemployment drug and alcohol testing by private employers is constitutional, or that a private employer's hiring practices are absolutely immune from judicial scrutiny. It noted that there may be preemployment inquiries and requests of a personal nature that are so intrusive as to be constitutionally unreasonable.ⁿ⁸⁹ The Court urged the California Legislature to provide guidance regarding regulation of drug testing of employees and prospective employees.ⁿ⁹⁰

[ii] Issues Under Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) and Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA)

In addition to privacy issues, a mandatory drug-testing program for applicants, to the extent that it constitutes a "physical examination" or an "inquiry" into an individual's "physical condition," may raise issues under FEHA and FEHC regulations that limit preemployment inquiries and physical examinations to those that are job-related.ⁿ⁹¹ However, as previously discussed,ⁿ⁹² these regulations were promulgated to implement the FEHA's prohibition against discrimination based on physical disability.ⁿ⁹³ The FEHC regulations expressly exclude current "alcoholism" and "narcotics addiction" from the definition of physical disability.ⁿ⁹⁴ In the Loder case,ⁿ⁹⁵ the Court analyzed the effect of both the FEHA regulations and the ADAⁿ⁹⁶ on drug testing of applicants. The Court specifically found that nothing in the FEHAⁿ⁹⁷ or any other state statute "purports to prohibit, or place general limitations upon, employer-mandated drug testing."ⁿ⁹⁸ With respect to federal law, the Court found that while the ADA restricts medical examinations in general, it does not restrict applicant testing to determine if an applicant is engaging in illicit drug use.ⁿ⁹⁹

[iii] Drug Testing When Mandated by Law

Some private employers are subject to government-imposed requirements for applicant drug-testing. The cases decided thus far have involved employees whose positions may affect public safety, and testing has been upheld under balancing analyses that acknowledge the strong governmental interest in protecting the public.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ For example, applicants for the position of a commercial motor vehicle operator with a private carrier must submit to urinalysis for drugs during the course of a thorough preemployment medical examination, pursuant to mandates imposed by the Federal Highway Administration of the Department of Transportation. This testing program has withstood constitutional attacks on grounds of the right to privacyⁿ¹⁰¹ and the guarantees against unreasonable searches and seizures,ⁿ¹⁰² based on the balancing of the need to prevent transportation risks against the minimal intrusion of a job applicants' privacy under the facts.ⁿ¹⁰³

1. Before instituting a drug-screening program, identify and document, insofar as possible, the nature of any problem that the drug testing is intended to address, focusing on the extent of drug use in the workplace and the consequences of such use.
2. Tailor the program as closely as possible to address the problem identified.
3. Consider implementing a drug-screening program in conjunction with a comprehensive anti-drug program and policy.ⁿ¹⁰⁴
4. Publicize the employer's anti-drug program in writing well in advance of any testing or enforcement efforts.
5. Before engaging in any screening or testing, obtain a written waiver that conforms with the requirements of the California Confidentiality of Medical Information Act.ⁿ¹⁰⁵ If possible, obtain this waiver at the time of initial application for employment.
6. To the greatest extent possible, have the drug-screening program handled by reliable, certified outside laboratories or physicians.
7. To avoid possible violations of handicap discrimination laws, do not ask questions regarding the use of legal drugs that would not impair performance or pose on-the-job risks. If such information is needed to interpret test results, have information obtained by the outside health professionals administering the test and instruct them not to reveal the information to the employer's supervisors or employment decisionmakers.
8. Make every effort to ensure that test results are accurate by ensuring that any personnel conducting such tests follow proper procedures to safeguard specimens and chain of custody.
9. Be sensitive to potential privacy, emotional distress, and defamation concerns when obtaining samples, especially when testing "for cause."

10. If an employee is having performance problems, consider not testing the employee for the presence of drugs (regardless of whether there is "cause" to suspect a drug problem) and instead base any disciplinary action on the performance problems alone.

11. If the results of a test are positive, confirm the tests by a reliable method before acting on them, and consider providing the employee or an applicant with an opportunity to submit independent evaluations or to retest.

12. Maintain test results in the strictest confidence, apart from all other records concerning the applicant or employee, and do not disclose results to supervisors. Establish procedures to maintain confidentiality. If test results are positive, inform only those persons who "need to know."

13. If a current employee tests positive, be sure to comply with any accommodation requirements, and if possible emphasize rehabilitation rather than discipline.ⁿ¹⁰⁶

In light of the principles discussed above, an employer who plans to implement a mandatory drug-testing program may wish to take certain steps to try to avoid, or at least reduce, the potential litigation risks associated with such testing. Such steps might include the following:

1. Before instituting a drug-screening program, identify and document, insofar as possible, the nature of any problem that the drug testing is intended to address, focusing on the extent of drug use in the workplace and the consequences of such use.

2. Tailor the program as closely as possible to address the problem identified.

3. Consider implementing a drug-screening program in conjunction with a comprehensive anti-drug program and policy.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

4. Publicize the employer's anti-drug program in writing well in advance of any testing or enforcement efforts.

5. Before engaging in any screening or testing, obtain a written waiver that conforms with the requirements of the California Confidentiality of Medical Information Act.ⁿ¹⁰⁵ If possible, obtain this waiver at the time of initial application for employment.

6. To the greatest extent possible, have the drug-screening program handled by reliable, certified outside laboratories or physicians.

7. To avoid possible violations of handicap discrimination laws, do not ask questions regarding the use of legal drugs that would not impair performance or pose on-the-job risks. If such information is needed to interpret test results, have information obtained by the outside health professionals administering the test and instruct them not to reveal the information to the employer's supervisors or employment decisionmakers.

8. Make every effort to ensure that test results are accurate by ensuring that any personnel conducting such tests follow proper procedures to safeguard specimens and chain of custody.

9. Be sensitive to potential privacy, emotional distress, and defamation concerns when obtaining samples, especially when testing "for cause."

10. If an employee is having performance problems, consider not testing the employee for the presence of drugs (regardless of whether there is "cause" to suspect a drug problem) and instead base any disciplinary action on the performance problems alone.

11. If the results of a test are positive, confirm the tests by a reliable method before acting on them, and consider providing the employee or an applicant with an opportunity to submit independent evaluations or to retest.

12. Maintain test results in the strictest confidence, apart from all other records concerning the applicant or employee, and do not disclose results to supervisors. Establish procedures to maintain confidentiality. If test results are positive, inform only those persons who "need to know."

13. If a current employee tests positive, be sure to comply with any accommodation requirements, and if possible emphasize rehabilitation rather than discipline.ⁿ¹⁰⁶

Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[2] Potential Issues Involved in Alcohol Testing

In general, alcohol testing by employers and discipline based on such testing may raise the same potential privacy issues as do drug testing and consequent discipline;ⁿ¹⁰⁷ however, the balance between employer and employee interests may be struck differently with respect to alcohol testing. This different balance may result principally from the fact that the breathalyzer, the primary method of testing for evidence of alcohol consumption, is less physically intrusive than urinalysis and does not detect the use of substances other than alcohol. Moreover, alcohol testing, unlike drug urinalysis, can measure the level of on-the-job impairment. An employer, therefore, may be better able to justify a program of alcohol testing than drug urinalysis.

Discharge or discipline of employees on the basis of alcohol testing may, however, be problematic for other reasons. Both juries and labor arbitrators are more likely to be sympathetic to an employee with a drinking problem than an employee with a drug use problem.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ This sympathy may be attributable in part to the legality and consequently greater use and social acceptability of alcohol, as well as to the widespread perception of alcoholism as a disease.

[3] Accommodation of Employee in Alcohol or Drug Rehabilitation Program

In the event that an employer does conduct drug or alcohol tests, and discovers the presence of a potential drug or alcohol abuse problem, the employer may have a duty to assist a current employee in overcoming that problem. Private employers in California who have more than 25 employees have a statutory obligation under the Labor Code to reasonably accommodate any employee who wishes to voluntarily enter an alcohol or drug rehabilitation program as long as such accommodation does not impose undue hardship on the employer.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ The employer must also make reasonable efforts to safeguard the privacy of the employee regarding his or her enrollment in an alcohol or drug rehabilitation program.ⁿ¹¹⁰ However, this provision does not prohibit an employer from refusing to hire or from discharging an employee who, because of his or her current use of alcohol or drugs, is unable to perform his or her duties, or is unable to perform those duties without endangering his or her own health or safety or the health or safety of others.ⁿ¹¹¹ Furthermore, the employer is not required to provide time off with pay to participate in such a program, except that an employee may use sick leave to which he or she is entitled for this purpose.ⁿ¹¹² The Labor Code provision requiring employer accommodation of employees in alcohol or drug rehabilitation programs does not apply to the participants, director, and staff of a live-in alternative to incarceration rehabilitation program with special focus on substance abusers,ⁿ¹¹³ when participating in operations owned and operated by the program, so long as all revenues generated by the operations are used to support the program.ⁿ¹¹⁴

In addition, employers covered by the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973ⁿ¹¹⁵ may in some instances have a duty to accommodate recovered or recovering alcoholics and drug abusers.ⁿ¹¹⁶ For a discussion of the duty to accommodate persons with disabilities under state and federal employment discrimination laws, see Chapter 41.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Constitutional Law Substantive Due Process Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Alcohol & Drug Testing Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See [b], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., San Francisco Police Code, § 3300A.5 ("worker privacy" ordinance barring testing of employees except when employer has reasonable grounds to believe employee's faculties are impaired on job; employee is in position where such impairment presents clear and present danger to physical safety of employee, another employee, or member of public; and employer provides employee, at employer's expense, opportunity to have sample tested or evaluated by state-licensed independent laboratory/testing facility and provides employee with reasonable opportunity to explain or rebut results); see also Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1051-1052, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (urging state legislation regarding permissible scope of employment and preemployment testing by private employers). At least 14 other states, however, have statutes that regulate this area.

(n3)Footnote 3. See generally Pub. L. No. 102-143, tit. V (Omnibus Transportation Employee Testing Act of 1991); 59 Fed. Reg. 7301 (Feb. 15, 1994); see, e.g., 49 C.F.R., pt. 382 (Federal Highway Administration regulations regarding commercial motor vehicle operators).

(n4)Footnote 4. See discussion in § 50.42.

(n5)Footnote 5. 29 U.S.C. § 185(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Schlacter-Jones v. General Tel. (9th Cir. 1991) 936 F.2d 435, 439-443. For discussion of wrongful termination generally, see chs. 60, 61. For discussion of LMRA preemption of wrongful termination claims, see ch. 60.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 1.

(n8)Footnote 8. See discussion in §§ 50.30[1], 50.42[1].

(n9)Footnote 9. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37-38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 896-898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200.

(n11)Footnote 11. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 41, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633; see Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 16, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 (citing Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 617, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 (holding that mandatory urinalysis is a "search" for purposes of U.S. Const., amend. IV)).

(n12)Footnote 12. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 41, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834,

865 P.2d 633 ; Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 16, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 52, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1038, 1051, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (upholding drug-testing program of employment applicants in part because procedural safeguards restricted access to test results).

(n14)Footnote 14. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 41, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 ; Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 617, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 617, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n17)Footnote 17. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 896, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n18)Footnote 17.1. Edgerton v. State Personnel Bd. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1359-1361, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 491 .

(n19)Footnote 18. Semore v. Pool (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1099-1100, 266 Cal. Rptr. 280 .

(n20)Footnote 19. See Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (involving a publishing company).

(n21)Footnote 20. See Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1048-1051, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 . For full discussion of this case, see [b][i], below.

(n22)Footnote 21. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n23)Footnote 22. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 897, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n24)Footnote 23. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 897-898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n25)Footnote 24. National Treasury Employees Union v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n26)Footnote 25. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 877-881, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n27)Footnote 26. Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n28)Footnote 27. Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 664-665, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n29)Footnote 28. Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 666-667, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n30)Footnote 29. Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 , discussed above.

(n31)Footnote 30. Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 668, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n32)Footnote 31. Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 671, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n33)Footnote 32. Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 672, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n34)Footnote 33. Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 674, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n35)Footnote 34. Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 676, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n36)Footnote 35. Treasury Employees v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 677, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n37)Footnote 35.1. Lanier v. City of Woodburn (9th Cir. 2008) 518 F.3d 1147, 1149-1152 .

(n38)Footnote 35.2. See Chandler v. Miller (1997) 520 U.S. 305, 322, 117 S. Ct. 1295, 137 L. Ed. 2d 513 .

(n39)Footnote 35.3. See Chandler v. Miller (1997) 520 U.S. 305, 314, 117 S. Ct. 1295, 137 L. Ed. 2d 513 ; Skinner v. Ry. Labor Executives' Assn. (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 617, 619, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n40)Footnote 35.4. See Chandler v. Miller (1997) 520 U.S. 305, 321-322, 117 S. Ct. 1295, 137 L. Ed. 2d 513 .

(n41)Footnote 35.5. Skinner v. Ry. Labor Executives' Assn. (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 628-629, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n42)Footnote 35.6. Nat'l Treasury Employees Union v. Von Raab (1989) 489 U.S. 656, 677-78, 109 S. Ct. 1384, 103 L. Ed. 2d 685 .

(n43)Footnote 35.7. IBEW, Local 1245 v. United States NRC (9th Cir. 1992) 966 F.2d 521, 525-26 .

(n44)Footnote 35.8. AFGE Local 1533 v. Cheney (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 503, 506 .

(n45)Footnote 35.9. IBEW, Local 1245 v. Skinner (9th Cir. 1990) 913 F.2d 1454, 1461-63 .

(n46)Footnote 35.10. Bluestein v. Skinner (9th Cir. 1990) 908 F.2d 451, 456 .

(n47)Footnote 35.11. Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters v. Dep't of Transp. (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 1292, 1303 .

(n48)Footnote 36. cf. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 628-633, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 (upholding drug testing of certain railroad employees in absence of particularized-suspicion standard under U.S. Const., amend. IV); with Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 21-25, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 (applying compelling-interest standard higher than that of Fourth Amendment in rejecting testing of employees having no safety-related duties).

(n49)Footnote 37. See discussion in § 50.42[1][b].

(n50)Footnote 37.1. Edgerton v. State Personnel Bd. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1356-1359, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 491 .

(n51)Footnote 37.2. Edgerton v. State Personnel Bd. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 1358, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 491 .

(n52)Footnote 38. Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n53)Footnote 39. See 49 C.F.R. § 219.201(a) (also defining "major train accident" and "impact accident").

(n54)Footnote 40. See 49 C.F.R. § 219.301(b).

(n55)Footnote 41. Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 626-634, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n56)Footnote 42. Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 612-613, 634, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n57)Footnote 43. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 614-615, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n58)Footnote 44. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 614-615, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n59)Footnote 45. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 617, 617 n.4, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 (also noting that blood and urine testing might constitute "seizures" under the Fourth Amendment).

(n60)Footnote 46. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 623, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n61)Footnote 47. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 624, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n62)Footnote 48. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 628, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n63)Footnote 49. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 628-633, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n64)Footnote 50. Railway Labor Executives' Assoc. v. Skinner (9th Cir. 1991) 934 F.2d 1096 (referring to Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 622-624, 632-633, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639).

(n65)Footnote 51. Railway Labor Executives' Assoc. v. Skinner (9th Cir. 1991) 934 F.2d 1096, 1098-1100 (also holding that Federal Railroad Administration's random drug testing regulations do not violate separation of powers doctrine because Congress can delegate rule-making power to executive branch).

(n66)Footnote 52. See, e.g., Mullholland v. Department of Army (E.D. Va. 1987) 660 F. Supp. 1565, 1566-1570 (upholding random testing of civilian army employees in sensitive aviation-related positions); Taylor v. O'Grady (N.D. Ill. 1987) 669 F. Supp. 1422, 1434-1443 (invalidating compulsory drug urinalysis of county correctional officers without reasonable suspicion of illegal drug use); Smith v. White (E.D. Tenn. 1987) 666 F. Supp. 1085, 1089-1090 (mandatory urinalysis of nuclear power plant workers, based on reasonable suspicion of use, possession, and sale of illegal drugs, held reasonable); Feliciano v. City of Cleveland (N.D. Ohio 1987) 661 F. Supp. 578, 582-596 (surprise urinalysis of police cadets without individualized, reasonable suspicion and without waiver or consent held to be unreasonable search and seizure).

(n67)Footnote 53. See American Federation of Government Employees v. Skinner (D.C. Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 884, 887 & n.4, 889-893.

(n68)Footnote 54. International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Department of Transportation (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 1292, 1294-1309 (also involving preemployment testing program; for discussion, see [b][i], below).

(n69)Footnote 55. International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Department of Transportation (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 1292, 1299-1300 (citing Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 622-624, 632-633, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639).

(n70)Footnote 56. International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Department of Transportation (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 1292, 1300-1306 .

(n71)Footnote 57. International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Department of Transportation (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 1292, 1306-1307 .

(n72)Footnote 58. International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Department of Transportation (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 1292, 1306-1307 (citing Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 626-632, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639).

(n73)Footnote 59. AFGE Local 1533 v. Cheney (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 503 .

(n74)Footnote 60. AFGE Local 1533 v. Cheney (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 503, 506 .

(n75)Footnote 61. AFGE Local 1533 v. Cheney (9th Cir. 1991) 944 F.2d 503, 506 .

(n76)Footnote 62. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 1245 v. United States Nuclear Regulatory Com. (9th Cir. 1992) 966 F.2d 521 .

(n77)Footnote 63. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 1245 v. United States Nuclear Regulatory Com. (9th Cir. 1992) 966 F.2d 521, 526-527 .

(n78)Footnote 64. Local 2391 v. Martin (9th Cir. 1992) 969 F.2d 788, 791-793 .

(n79)Footnote 65. Local 2391 v. Martin (9th Cir. 1992) 969 F.2d 788, 793 .

(n80)Footnote 66. Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37-38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n81)Footnote 67. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n82)Footnote 68. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 891-898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 (the city's drug testing program also applied to current employees who were seeking promotions. However, the decision held such testing to be unconstitutional under the implied right to privacy found in the Fourth Amendment).

(n83)Footnote 69. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 854-855, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n84)Footnote 70. See discussion in [a][iii], above.

(n85)Footnote 71. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 896-897, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n86)Footnote 72. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 897-898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d

1200 .

(n87)Footnote 73. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 897-898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n88)Footnote 74. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 898, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n89)Footnote 74.1. Pilkington Barnes Hind v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 28, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596 .

(n90)Footnote 74.2. Pilkington Barnes Hind v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 28, 31, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596 .

(n91)Footnote 74.3. Pilkington Barnes Hind v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 28, 31-32, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596 (court did not reach second argument that employer could terminate at will employee at any time with or without cause).

(n92)Footnote 74.4. Pilkington Barnes Hind v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 28, 31-32, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596 (court did not reach second argument that employer could terminate at will employee at any time with or without cause).

(n93)Footnote 74.5. Pilkington Barnes Hind v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 28, 31-34, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596 (court rejected arguments that four days of employment gave ample time to evaluate and that employment begins at precise moment of hire; court rejected notion that termination violated employee assistance program because program only applied to employees).

(n94)Footnote 75. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 888, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n95)Footnote 76. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1051, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n96)Footnote 77. See Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1037-1038, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n97)Footnote 78. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1037-1038, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n98)Footnote 79. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1040, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; see discussion in § 50.30[1][a].

(n99)Footnote 80. See Hill v. National Collegiate Athletic Association (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1, 37-38, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834, 865 P.2d 633 .

(n100)Footnote 81. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1048, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n101)Footnote 82. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(d); see also Gov. Code §§ 12920, 12921, 12926, 12940 (FEHA disability discrimination provisions). For discussion, see § 50.42[2][a], and ch. 41, pt. C.

(n102)Footnote 83. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1049-1050, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n103)Footnote 84. See, e.g., Long Beach Employees Association v. City of Long Beach (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 937, 951-952, 227 Cal. Rptr. 90, 719 P.2d 660 ; see also discussion in § 50.42[1][b] (waiver issues).

(n104)Footnote 85. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1050, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n105)Footnote 86. See, e.g., Lab. Code § 1025 (notwithstanding drug rehabilitation accommodation requirements, employer may discharge, or refuse to hire, person based on impaired performance due to drug use); see also discussion in [2], below.

(n106)Footnote 87. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1051, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n107)Footnote 88. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1052, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 . The Court also held that its conclusion that the employer's drug testing policy was constitutional was fatal to the plaintiffs' claims under Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17100-17208 (Unfair Practices Act), which were based on allegations that the employer's preemployment drug-testing policy was an unlawful business practice. see Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1052, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n108)Footnote 89. Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1051, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n109)Footnote 90. See Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1052, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 .

(n110)Footnote 91. See Gov. Code § 12940(e), (f); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7294.0(b)(3), (d).

(n111)Footnote 92. See discussion in § 50.42[2][a].

(n112)Footnote 93. See Gov. Code § 12940(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.5(b).

(n113)Footnote 94. See 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.6(a)(4).

(n114)Footnote 95. Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 862-865, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n115)Footnote 96. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12112(d), 12114.

(n116)Footnote 97. See Gov. Code § 12935.

(n117)Footnote 98. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 865, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n118)Footnote 99. See Loder v. City of Glendale (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 846, 864, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696, 927 P.2d 1200 .

(n119)Footnote 100. See, e.g., Skinner v. Railway Labor Exec. Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 (involving private railroad employees; discussed in [a][v], above).

(n120)Footnote 101. Skinner v. Railway Labor Executives Association (1989) 489 U.S. 602, 626, 109 S. Ct. 1402, 103 L. Ed. 2d 639 .

(n121)Footnote 102. See U.S. Const., amend. IV.

(n122)Footnote 103. International Brotherhood of Teamsters v. Department of Transportation (9th Cir. 1991) 932 F.2d 1292, 1307 .

(n123)Footnote 104. In some circumstances, federal law now requires employers who are government contractors to have such a policy. see 41 U.S.C. § 701 et seq. In addition, California law requires employers involved in state and local government contracts to provide a drug-free workplace under certain circumstances. see Gov. Code § 8351 et seq. (Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1990). For an example of a comprehensive "drug-free workplace" policy, see Morrison

& Foerster, california employers' guide to employee handbooks and personnel policy manuals, §§ 2.34, 3.29 (Matthew Bender).

(n124)Footnote 105. See Civ. Code §§ 56-56.37; see also discussion in § 50.42[2][b]. For discussion of act, see ch. 51.

(n125)Footnote 106. See discussion in [2], below.

(n126)Footnote 104. In some circumstances, federal law now requires employers who are government contractors to have such a policy. see 41 U.S.C. § 701 et seq. In addition, California law requires employers involved in state and local government contracts to provide a drug-free workplace under certain circumstances. see Gov. Code § 8351 et seq. (Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1990). For an example of a comprehensive "drug-free workplace" policy, see Morrison & Foerster, california employers' guide to employee handbooks and personnel policy manuals, §§ 2.34, 3.29 (Matthew Bender).

(n127)Footnote 105. See Civ. Code §§ 56-56.37; see also discussion in § 50.42[2][b]. For discussion of act, see ch. 51.

(n128)Footnote 106. See discussion in [2], below.

(n129)Footnote 107. See discussion in [a], above.

(n130)Footnote 108. See generally Spencer, The Developing Notion of Employer Responsibility for the Alcoholic, Drug-Addicted, or Mentally Ill Employee: An Examination Under Federal and State Employment Statutes and Arbitration Decisions, 53 St. John's L. Rev. 659 (1979).

(n131)Footnote 109. Lab. Code § 1025.

(n132)Footnote 110. Lab. Code § 1026.

(n133)Footnote 111. Lab. Code § 1025.

(n134)Footnote 112. Lab. Code § 1027.

(n135)Footnote 113. See Penal Code § 8001 (definition of qualifying programs).

(n136)Footnote 114. See Penal Code § 8002.

(n137)Footnote 115. See 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.

(n138)Footnote 116. See 29 U.S.C. § 706(7)(c)(ii) (successfully rehabilitated drug user or currently being rehabilitated).

25 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees

Part D. SPECIFIC INFORMATION-GATHERING PRACTICES IMPLICATING EMPLOYEE PRIVACY ISSUES

3-50 California Employment Law §§ 50.44 through 50.49

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 50.44[Reserved]

26 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part E. BIBLIOGRAPHY

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.50

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.50 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender)

"Privacy."

"False Imprisonment."

"Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress."

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Ch. 272, Privacy in the Workplace (Matthew Bender).

Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts (Matthew Bender)

Ch. 42, "False Imprisonment and False Arrest."

Ch. 44, "Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress."

Ch. 46, "Invasion of Privacy."

Larson, Employment Screening (Matthew Bender)

State Bar of California, Labor and Employment Law Section, Privacy in the Workplace.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Constitutional Law Substantive Due Process Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee
Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Invasion of Privacy Torts Intentional Torts Invasion of Privacy General Overview

27 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part E. BIBLIOGRAPHY

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.51

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.51 Encyclopedias

6 Cal. Jur. 3d, "Assault and Other Willful Torts," §§ 49-97, 98-104, 105-127.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Constitutional Law Substantive Due Process Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Invasion of Privacy Torts Intentional Torts Invasion of Privacy General Overview

28 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 50 Limitations on Employer Collection of Private Information About Employees
Part E. BIBLIOGRAPHY

3-50 California Employment Law § 50.52

AUTHOR: By Kaye M. Reeves, J.D., Edward Baskauskas, J.D.

§ 50.52 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

Whelan, California Supreme Court Weighs in on Privacy in the Workplace, 2009 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 328 (September 2009).

Comment, "Section 301 and Random Drug Testing by Employers: Are California State Constitutional Claims Preempted?" 23 U.S.F. Law Rev. 221 (1989).

Bishop, "Drug Testing Comes to Work," 6(4) Cal. Lawyer 28 (April 1986).

Carey and Arthur, "The Developing Law on AIDS in the Workplace," 46 Md. L. Rev. 284 (1987).

Cross and Haney, "Legal Issues Involved in Private Sector Medical Testing of Job Applicants and Employees," 20 Ind. L. Rev. 517 (1987).

Hartsfield, "Medical Examinations as a Method of Investigating Employee Wrongdoing," 37 Lab. L.J. 692, 767 (1986).

Prosser, "Privacy," 48 Cal. L. Rev. 383 (1960).

Rothstein, "Medical Screening of Workers: Genetics, AIDS, and Beyond," 2 Lab. Lawyer 675 (1986).

Rust, "Drug Testing: The Legal Dilemma," 72 A.B.A.J. 50 (Nov. 1986).

Young & Wells, "Managing Aids in the Workplace," 41(3) Prac. Law. 29 (1995).

Comment, "Employee Drug Testing--Balancing the Employer's Right to Know With the Employee's Right to Privacy," 1987 Det. C. L. Rev. 27 (1987).

Comment, "Unrestricted Private Employee Drug Testing Programs: An Invasion of the Workers' Right to Privacy," 23 Cal. West. L. Rev. 72 (1986).

Comment, "Use and Abuse of Urinalysis Testing in the Workplace: A Proposal for Federal Legislation Limiting Drug Screening," 35 Emory L.J. 1011 (1986).

Comment, "Your Urine or Job: Is Private Employee Drug Urinalysis Constitutional in California?" 19 Loyola L. Rev. 1451 (1986).

Note, "Employee Drug Testing Legislation: Redrawing the Battlelines in the War on Drugs," 39 Stan. L. Rev. 1453 (1987).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Constitutional Law Substantive Due Process Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Invasion of Privacy Torts Intentional Torts Invasion of Privacy General Overview

29 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees

3-51 California Employment Law 51.syn

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.syn Synopsis to Chapter 51: Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees

§ 51.01 Employee Records Maintained by Employer

§ 51.02 Employees' Right to Inspect Employment Files

[1] Inspection of Personnel Files By Employees

[2] Disclosure of Written Employment References

[3] Disclosure Procedures

[4] Remedies

§ 51.03 Disclosure of Instruments Relating to Employment Signed by Employee

§ 51.04 Disclosure of Shopping Investigators' Reports

§ 51.05 Disclosure of Medical Records

§ 51.06 Inspection and Copying of Records Regarding Wage Deductions

§§ 51.07 through 51.09 [Reserved]

§ 51.10 Use and Disclosure of HIV Test Results

[1] Restrictions on Use and Disclosure of Test Results

[2] Remedies

[3] Exceptions to Liability

§ 51.11 Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation Programs

[1] Requirements

[2] Method of Enforcement

§ 51.12 Business Records Act

[1] Coverage of Act

[2] Employers Subject to Act

[3] Disclosures Exempt From Act

[4] Method of Enforcement

§ 51.13 Confidentiality of Medical Information

[1] Duties Imposed on Employers and Health Care Providers

[2] Employers' Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[a] Limitations on Use and Disclosure of Medical Information

[b] Authorization for Release of Information

[c] FORM--Authorization for Release of Medical Information

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[d] Cancellation of Authorization

[e] Establishment of More Restrictive Policy by Employer

[f] Employer's Duty to Communicate Limits of Authorized Disclosure

[g] Disclosure by Recipient

[h] No Waiver

[i] Discrimination by Employers

[3] Exceptions to Prohibition Against Disclosure

[4] Enforcement and Remedies

[a] Criminal Penalty

[b] Civil Action

[5] FORM--Complaint for Damages Arising From Wrongful Disclosure of Medical Information

[a] Comment

[b] Form

§ 51.14 Unauthorized Commercial Use of Name or Likeness

§ 51.15 Disclosure of Information to Employing Law Enforcement Agency

§ 51.16 Subpoena Seeking Production of Employment Records

§§ 51.17 through 51.29 [Reserved]

§ 51.30 Constitutional Protection

[1] Employee's Right to Privacy

[2] Employee's Civil Action to Enforce Constitutional Right of Privacy

[3] Employer's Affirmative Defense Based on Compelling Interest

§ 51.31 Common Law Protection

[1] Theories of Recovery

[a] Public Disclosure of Private Facts

[b] False Light Privacy Action

[c] Defamation

[d] Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

§ 51.32 FORM--Complaint for Damages Against Employer for Invasion of Privacy by Disclosure of Private Information to Third Parties

[1] Comment

[2] Form

§§ 51.33 through 51.39 [Reserved]

§ 51.40 Legal Texts

§ 51.41 Encyclopedias

§ 51.42 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

By John M. True, III, J.D.,^{n*} Edward Baskauskas J.D.^{n}

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Mr. True is an attorney with the Employment Law Center, a project of the San Francisco Legal Aid Society. He specializes in litigation involving employee privacy and related rights.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

(n2)Footnote . Edward Baskauskas is a member of the California Bar and an adjunct professor of law at Golden Gate University.

30 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees

3-51 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

Scope

By John M. True, III, J.D.,^{n*} Edward Baskauskas J.D.^{n} SCOPE

This chapter discusses statutory, constitutional, and common law restrictions on an employer's use and disclosure of private information about employees. Part A enumerates and explains the circumstances under which an employer may be required by the provisions of various statutes to make disclosures to an employee who requests information such as the contents of a personnel file, medical records, or disciplinary records. Part B discusses restrictions on the disclosure of private information about employees to third parties. Applicable statutory law is treated in Subpart 1 of Part B (including restrictions on the results of AIDS tests, restrictions on the use of medical records, and other subjects). Constitutional and common law protections against employer disclosures are discussed in Subpart 2.

For discussion of the collection of private information by employers, see Chapter 50. Other issues relating to employee privacy are discussed elsewhere. Protections regarding garnishment of employees' wages are discussed in Chapter 4. Protections against dissemination of information gathered during investigations of alleged EEO violations are discussed in Chapter 42. Protections against discharge from employment or discipline for nonjob-related conduct, which may involve privacy concerns, are discussed in Chapter 60.

FOOTNOTES:

(n3)Footnote *. Mr. True is an attorney with the Employment Law Center, a project of the San Francisco Legal Aid Society. He specializes in litigation involving employee privacy and related rights.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

(n4)Footnote . Edward Baskauskas is a member of the California Bar and an adjunct professor of law at Golden Gate University.

31 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part A. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO EMPLOYEES

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.01

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.01 Employee Records Maintained by Employer

As discussed in Chapter 50, employers compile and maintain a variety of information and records relating to their employees. Some of these records are required to be kept under federal and state statutes concerning health and safety, employment discrimination, and other matters.ⁿ¹ Other employee records are maintained for the administrative purposes of the employer. This part discusses the circumstances under which an employer must disclose such records or must allow an employee to inspect the records.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawPosting & Recordkeeping

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-8(c); 29 C.F.R. §§ 1602, 1607 (recordkeeping requirements under Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964); Gov. Code § 12946; 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7287.0(c) (recordkeeping requirements under Fair Employment and Housing Act); see also discussion in Chapter 41.

32 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part A. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO EMPLOYEES

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.02

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.02 Employees' Right to Inspect Employment Files

[1] Inspection of Personnel Files By Employees

The obligation of an employer to permit employees to inspect their own "personnel files" is codified in Lab. Code § 1198.5. Under § 1198.5(a), every employer must, at reasonable times and at reasonable intervals as determined by the California Labor Commissioner, on the request of an employee, permit that employee to inspect the personnel files that are used or that have been used to determine that employee's qualifications for employment, promotion, additional compensation, or termination or other disciplinary action.ⁿ¹

The definition of "personnel file" is a broad one, intended to include any record used by an employer to make any personnel decision about an employee, such as anything used to determine the employee's qualifications for employment, promotion, additional compensation, termination, or other disciplinary action, wherever located.ⁿ² Thus, more than just the information in an employee's "official" personnel file must be disclosed.

Labor Code Section 1198.5(a) as repealed and reenacted effective January 1, 2001,ⁿ³ provides that every employee has the right to inspect the personnel records that the employer maintains relating to the employee's performance or to any grievance concerning the employee.

Under the Labor Commissioner's current interpretation of Labor Code § 1198.5, categories of records generally considered to be "personnel records" are those that are used or have been used to determine an employee's qualifications for promotion, additional compensation, or disciplinary action, including termination. The following are some examples of "personnel records": application for employment; payroll authorization form; notices of commendation, warning, discipline, and/or termination; notices of layoff, leave of absence, and vacation; notices of wage attachment or garnishment; education and training notices and records; performance appraisals/reviews; and attendance records.ⁿ⁴ Thus, for example, if a line supervisor keeps a file on an employee, and that file is used for any of the purposes enumerated in Section 1198.5(a), inspection generally must be permitted.

An employer must maintain a copy of each employee's personnel records at the place the employee reports to work, must provide them to the employee within a reasonable period of time following an employee's request, or permit the employee to inspect them at the location where they are kept, with no loss of compensation to the employee.ⁿ⁵ The employer must make the personnel records available to the employee at reasonable intervals and at reasonable times.ⁿ⁶ There is no requirement that a request to see personnel records be in writing.ⁿ⁷

The Labor Commissioner may adopt regulations that determine the reasonable times and reasonable intervals for the inspection of records maintained by an employer that is not a public agency.ⁿ⁸ Under the current interpretation, "reasonable times" is during the regular business hours of the office where personnel records are usually and ordinarily maintained or at anytime during the employee's regularly scheduled work shift, with sufficient time available to permit the employee an ample opportunity to conduct a thorough inspection. The inspection time must be commensurate with the volume and content of the file, as arbitrary time limits that do not allow for a sufficient review are not within the spirit of the law. The DLSE considers "reasonable intervals" to be once every year unless there is reasonable cause to believe that the file has been altered in a manner that might adversely affect the interests of the employee, or the file contains information pertinent to an ongoing investigation affecting the employee, in which case more frequent inspections would be considered "reasonable." The employer can require that the employee inspect the personnel file on the employee's own free time. However, if the employee is required to travel to the location where the records are stored, the inspection must be during a time when the employee is required to render services to the employer, and the employee must be compensated for that time at the employee's regular rate of pay.ⁿ⁹

Labor Code section 1198.5(d) provides some important exceptions to the general requirement that an employer must provide access to an employee's personnel records. For example, an employer need not disclose letters of reference.ⁿ¹⁰ In addition, the records of an employee relating to the investigation of a possible criminal offense need not be made available for inspection.ⁿ¹¹ Similarly, one court of appeal held that the identity of complainants who triggered an investigation of a physician by a hospital substance abuse committee was not required to be disclosed to the physician before suspension of his staff privileges.ⁿ¹² Also, the employer need not disclose ratings, reports, or records that were (1) obtained prior to the employee's employment, (2) prepared by identifiable examination committee members, or (3) obtained in connection with a promotional examination.ⁿ¹³

Moreover, the statute does not provide for anything more than inspection of the files that must be disclosed. Thus, an employer who does not permit employees to photocopy their files is generally in compliance with the statute.ⁿ¹⁴ However, an employee is entitled to a copy of any instrument relating to the obtaining or holding of employment that the employee has signed.ⁿ¹⁵ Thus, for example, some employers permit employees to inventory, to take notes, or to hand-copy the contents of their personnel files, but will not allow photocopying or other electronic reproduction of any documents except those signed by the employee.

Labor Code section 1198.5 also lacks any provision allowing employees to comment on or to demand removal of any item contained in a personnel file.ⁿ¹⁶ Although the statute is arguably intended to articulate a policy in favor of maintaining truthful and accurate employment records,ⁿ¹⁷ it does not provide a right of action by which an employee can seek to correct alleged inaccuracies.

Finally, the statute by its terms applies only to "employees," which is construed to mean a person who is currently employed, one who is laid off with rights of reemployment, or a person on leave of absence.ⁿ¹⁸ Thus, applicants for employment are not permitted to inspect the records, and neither are lawyers, union officials, or other representatives of employees. Former employees also have the right of inspection until the statute or limitations on any claims they may have against their former employer expire.ⁿ¹⁹

[2] Disclosure of Written Employment References

Labor Code section 1198.5 does not require the disclosure of letters of reference.ⁿ²⁰ Moreover, at least one court has recognized that an employee's interest in the contents of his or her employment records can conflict with the rights of those who have provided the employer with a confidential reference, recommendation, or opinion about the employee's qualifications. In Board of Trustees v. Superior Court,ⁿ²¹ the court struck a balance between these two interests. The court held that an employee is entitled to discovery of his or her personnel file, including letters of reference, but that the employer may delete any information that would identify the person who had given the reference.ⁿ²²

[3] Disclosure Procedures

The employer's obligation to disclose personnel records is limited to a reasonable time at the place of work.ⁿ²³ The employer must (1) keep a copy of each employee's personnel records at the place where the employee reports to work; (2) make the employee's personnel records available at the place where the employee reports to work within a reasonable period of time following an employee's request; or (3) permit the employee to inspect the personnel records at the location where the employer stores the personnel records, with no loss of compensation to the employee.ⁿ²⁴ Other than as set forth in the previous sentence, the employer is not required to make personnel records available at a time when the employee is actually required to render service to the employer.ⁿ²⁵

[4] Remedies

It is a misdemeanor to violate, or to refuse or neglect to comply with, the provisions of Labor Code section 1198.5.ⁿ²⁶

In addition, an employee may apply to the Labor Commissioner for enforcement of the disclosure requirements of Labor Code section 1198.5.ⁿ²⁷ There is no statutory provision that expressly permits an employee to bring a civil action for enforcement, although there is no provision making the jurisdiction of the Labor Commissioner exclusive.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information Personnel Files

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 1198.5(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 1198.5(a); Wellpoint Health Networks, Inc. v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 110, 120, 124-125, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844 (Lab. Code § 1198.5 does not create implied exception to attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine; attorney client privilege applies to legal advice before litigation is threatened, as well as to communications made in anticipation of litigation); see Kaiser Found. Hospitals v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1217, 1227, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543 (employer did not waive attorney-client privilege or work product protections either by pleading adequacy of its prelitigation investigation as defense to action for employee discrimination or harassment or by providing claimants substantial discovery of employer's nonattorney in-house investigation report, unless it could be established through other discovery that significant part of any particular communication had already been disclosed to third parties).

(n3)Footnote 3. 2000 Cal. Stat. 886, § 11.

(n4)Footnote 4. See http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlse/FAQ_RightToInspectPersonnelFiles.html.

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 1198.5(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code 1198.5(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. See generally Lab. Code 1198.5(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 1198.5(e).

(n9)Footnote 9. See http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlse/FAQ_RightToInspectPersonnelFiles.html.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Johnson v. Winter (1982) 127 Cal. App. 3d 435, 439-440, 179 Cal. Rptr. 585 ; Board of Trustees v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 516, 530-531, 174 Cal. Rptr. 160 . For further discussion of the question of employees' access to letters of reference about them, see [2], below.

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 1198.5(d).

(n12)Footnote 12. Goodstein v. Cedars-Sinai Medical Ctr. (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1257, 1268, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 577 (noting that although principles of constitutional criminal procedure did not apply in this setting, role of complainants here was essentially identical to the role that of informant in criminal case).

(n13)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 1198.5(d)(3).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Lab. Code § 1198.5(a).

(n15)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 432; see discussion in § 51.03.

(n16)Footnote 16. cf. Gov. Code § 31011 (applicable to employees of State of California); Educ. Code §§ 44031 (school district employees), 87031 (community college district employees), 89546 (state college and university employees).

(n17)Footnote 17. See D.L.S.E. Policy & Procedure Memo. No. 76-2 (Jan. 15, 1976).

(n18)Footnote 18. See http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlse/FAQ_RightToInspectPersonnelFiles.html.

(n19)Footnote 19. See http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlse/FAQ_RightToInspectPersonnelFiles.html.

(n20)Footnote 20. Lab. Code § 1198.5(d)(2).

(n21)Footnote 21. Board of Trustees v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 516, 174 Cal. Rptr. 160 .

(n22)Footnote 22. Board of Trustees v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 516, 531-533, 174 Cal. Rptr. 160

(n23)Footnote 23. See Lab. Code § 1198.5(b).

(n24)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 1198.5(c).

(n25)Footnote 25. Lab. Code § 1198.5(b).

(n26)Footnote 26. Lab. Code § 1199(c); see http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlse/FAQ_RightToInspectPersonnelFiles.html.

(n27)Footnote 27. Lab. Code §§ 95(a), 96, 98-98.7.

33 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part A. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO EMPLOYEES

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.03

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.03 Disclosure of Instruments Relating to Employment Signed by Employee

If an employee or job applicant has signed any instrument relating to the obtaining or holding of employment, he or she must be given a copy of the instrument on request.ⁿ¹ Such instruments may include employment applications, employment agreements, confidentiality agreements, covenants not to compete, authorizations, tax forms, and employee evaluations.

Violation of this requirement is punishable as a misdemeanor,ⁿ² and the requirement can be enforced by the Labor Commissioner as head of the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement.ⁿ³ There is no statutory provision for private enforcement of the requirement; however, there is no provision making the Labor Commissioner's enforcement jurisdiction exclusive.

The employer's duty to provide copies of instruments signed by the employee is separate from the duty to make the instruments available for inspection.ⁿ⁴

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

*Labor Code sections 432 and 1198.5 and the DLSE's policyn5 answer many questions about employees' access to employment records, but they leave a number of practical and legal issues unresolved. For example, although an employer may refuse to give an employee a copy of unsigned personnel documents in his or her personnel file,ⁿ⁶ the prospect of the employee taking notes on file contents for hours may be unacceptable. Thus, many employers provide copies of files on request, even though they are under no legal obligation to do. In addition, although an employer may refuse to reveal "letters of reference" and records "relating to the investigation of a possible criminal offense,"ⁿ⁷ neither category of record is defined by statute. The employer also need not reveal certain specified ratings or reports.ⁿ⁸ In light of these interpretive dilemmas and the rise in wrongful discharge litigation, an employer that has reason to believe that a request for inspection of personnel records is the first step toward legal action may wish to consult counsel before deciding how best to respond. *Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationPersonnel Files

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 432.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 433.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Lab. Code §§ 95(a), 98-98.9.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 1198.5 (requiring only that employer allow employee to "inspect" personnel records); see also discussion in § 51.02.

(n5)Footnote 5. [Reserved]

(n6)Footnote 6. Compare Lab. Code § 1198.5(a) (providing for inspection of personnel records) with Lab. Code § 432 (requiring employer to provide copies of employment documents signed by employee or applicant); see discussion in § 51.02[1].

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code § 1198.5(d).

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 1198.5(d)(3).

34 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part A. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO EMPLOYEES

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.04

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.04 Disclosure of Shopping Investigators' Reports

An employer in the retail, commercial, or service industry that conducts investigations of employees by means of a licensed "shopping investigator"ⁿ¹ must provide a copy of the investigator's report to any employee prior to disciplining or discharging that employee as a result of the investigation.ⁿ² If an investigatory interview occurs pursuant to the investigator's report and as a result of which the employee could be disciplined or discharged, the employer must make the investigator's report available to the employee during the course of the interview prior to its conclusion.ⁿ³ The employer must provide the report to the investigated employee in the foregoing circumstances regardless of whether the employee has requested the report.ⁿ⁴

The obligation to provide this information does not apply if the shopping investigator is employed exclusively and regularly by one employer in connection with the affairs of only that employer, there exists an employer-employee relationship, and the entire investigation is conducted solely for that employer by the investigator.ⁿ⁵ For discussion of restrictions on such investigations, see Chapter 50.

The duty to provide employees with shopping investigators' reports may be enforced by the Labor Commissioner as head of the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement.ⁿ⁶ There is no statutory provision for private enforcement of the duty; however, there is no provision making the Labor Commissioner's enforcement jurisdiction exclusive.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Disclosure of Employee Information Personnel Files

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lab. Code § 2930(b) ("shopping investigator" is person who shops for, buys, or orders goods, or who observes or otherwise reviews the procedures and performance of retail, commercial or service employees, and then writes report on what he or she has observed).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Lab. Code §§ 95(a), 98-98.9.

35 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part A. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO EMPLOYEES

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.05

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.05 Disclosure of Medical Records

The California Confidentiality of Medical Information Act generally restricts an employer's use and disclosure of employee medical records.ⁿ¹ However, the provisions of the Act do not affect existing laws relating to an employee's right of access to his or her own medical information, or relating to disclosures made pursuant to Evidence Code section 1158, or relating to privileges established under the Evidence Code.ⁿ² Similarly unaffected are obligations to disclose medical information to employees or their representatives under Cal/OSHA "right to know" regulations.ⁿ³ For example, employees may demand to see records of tests performed on them or others to measure the levels of toxic substances in their systems or in the work environment.ⁿ⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyMedical & Related Examinations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code §§ 56-56.37; see § 51.13.

(n2)Footnote 2. Civ. Code § 56.28.

(n3)Footnote 3. Civ. Code § 56.30(e); see 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 3204(e).

36 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part A. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO EMPLOYEES

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.06

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.06 Inspection and Copying of Records Regarding Wage Deductions

Employers must provide written statements of wage deductions to their employees, either semi-monthly or at the time of each wage payment.ⁿ¹ Employers who make cash payments of wages must keep copies of those statements or a record of deductions on file for at least three years at either the place of employment or a central location within California.ⁿ²

An employer that is required by the Labor Code or by any regulation to keep this information must afford any current or former employee the right to inspect or copy the records pertaining to that employee.ⁿ³ The employer may take reasonable steps to assure the identity of the current or former employee, and, if the employer provides copies of records, it may charge the actual cost of reproduction to the current or former employee.ⁿ⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationPersonnel FilesLabor & Employment LawWage & Hour LawsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Labor Code § 226(a); see Chapter 4.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 226(a). For discussion of other recordkeeping requirements under wage and hour laws, see Chapter 7.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 226(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 226(b).

37 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part A. DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO EMPLOYEES

3-51 California Employment Law §§ 51.07 through 51.09

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 51.07[Reserved]

38 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees

Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE

Subpart 1. Specific Statutory Restrictions

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.10

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.10 Use and Disclosure of HIV Test Results

[1] Restrictions on Use and Disclosure of Test Results

The Legislature has responded to the problems posed by the spread of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) by enacting comprehensive legislation providing for research in a number of areas, care of persons with AIDS, and other subjects. Among other things, this legislation restricts the use and disclosure of tests designed to detect the human immunodeficiency virus ("HIV," the virus that causes AIDS).ⁿ¹ For purposes of this legislation, an "HIV test" is any clinical test, laboratory or otherwise, used to identify HIV, a component of HIV, or antibodies or antigens to HIV.ⁿ²

The results of an HIV test that identifies or provides identifying characteristics of the person to whom the test results apply may not be used in any instance for the determination of suitability for employment, except as otherwise provided by statute.ⁿ³ This provision, coupled with other provisions requiring written consent to testing and covering privacy rights of persons subject to HIV blood tests,ⁿ⁴ effectively bans the use of HIV testing of employees or applicants for employment. Indeed, the statutory language is arguably broad enough to foreclose even questioning employees or applicants regarding whether they have tested positive for HIV.ⁿ⁵

In addition to these restrictions on the use of test results, the law imposes civil and criminal liability on those who improperly disclose test results.ⁿ⁶ For discussion of the remedies provided by the statutes, see [2], below.

Because the statute is worded expansively with respect to both use and disclosure of HIV test results,ⁿ⁷ there can be little question that it applies to all California employers, absent some specific statutory exemption. For discussion of the exemptions provided for by the statute, see [3], below.

[2] Remedies

Any person who negligently discloses results of an HIV test to any third party, in a manner that identifies or provides identifying characteristics of the person to whom the test results apply, is subject to assessment of a civil penalty in an amount not to exceed $2,500 plus court costs as determined by the court, to be paid to the subject of the test. This liability does not apply to (1) a disclosure made pursuant to a written authorization as described in Health and Safety Code section 120980(g); (2) a disclosure under Health and Safety Code sections 1603.1 or 1603.3, which provide for notification of potential contamination of blood supplies, or Health and Safety Code section 121022, pertaining to reporting of cases of HIV and AIDS to the appropriate governmental agencies, or (3) a disclosure under any other statute that provides an exemption to the penalty.ⁿ⁸ For a willful violation, the amount of the civil penalty is not less than $5,000 and not more than $10,000, plus court costs as determined by the court.ⁿ⁹

Each wrongful disclosure of HIV test results is a separate violation of the statute.ⁿ¹⁰ Thus, if an employer has access to an employee's HIV test results, disclosure to a number of different individuals may give rise to multiple liability.

In addition to these civil penalties, any person who commits negligent or willful disclosure is liable to the subject for all actual damages, including damages for economic, bodily, or psychological harm that is proximately caused by the act.ⁿ¹¹ Additionally, an injured subject may recover damages under any other applicable law.ⁿ¹² Thus, for example, an employee may be able to bring an action for common law or constitutional invasion of privacy, for intentional infliction of emotional distress, or for defamation, in addition to the action based on the statutory restrictions on the disclosure of HIV test results. For discussion of constitutional and common law theories of recovery, see §§ 51.20, 51.21.

In contrast to the statutory remedies specified for wrongful disclosure of test results, there is no specific statutory remedy for the improper use of test results in a determination of suitability for employment.ⁿ¹³ However, an employee whose employment is terminated because of a positive test result could arguably state an action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy based on the statutory prohibition of Health and Safety Code section 120980(f).ⁿ¹⁴ For discussion of liability for wrongful termination, see Chapter 60.

[3] Exceptions to Liability

There is no liability for disclosure of HIV test results if the disclosure is made pursuant to written authorization by a person responsible for the care and treatment of the person tested.ⁿ¹⁵ However, this exemption from liability applies only to the disclosure of test results by a person responsible for the care and treatment of the person subject to the test. Moreover, written authorization is required for each separate disclosure of the test results, and the authorization must specify the person to whom the disclosure would be made.ⁿ¹⁶ Thus, the "written authorization" exemption would not ordinarily apply to disclosure by an employer.

Also exempt from liability are disclosures that are necessary for public health purposes.ⁿ¹⁷ In addition, other statutes may expressly provide exemptions from liability for disclosure.ⁿ¹⁸

Compliance with Insurance Code sections 799 et seq., regarding the underwriting of risks associated with AIDS, is an exception to the prohibition of using the results of an HIV test that identifies or provides identifying characteristics of the person to whom the test results apply for the determination of suitability for employment.^{n18.1}

Finally, there is no liability or criminal sanction for disclosure of an HIV test in accordance with any reporting requirement for a diagnosed case of AIDS by the state Department of Health or the Centers for Disease Control under the United States Public Health Service.ⁿ¹⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Medical & Related Examinations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Health & Safety Code § 120775(b) (definition of HIV).

(n2)Footnote 2. Health & Safety Code § 120775(c).

(n3)Footnote 3. Health & Safety Code § 120980(f). See Ins. Code § 799 et seq., regarding underwriting of AIDS risks.

(n4)Footnote 4. Health & Safety Code §§ 120975, 120990.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Health & Safety Code § 120980(f) (precluding use of test results to determine suitability for employment, except as otherwise provided by statute); see also Ch. 50.

(n6)Footnote 6. Health & Safety Code § 120980(a)-(d); see also Health & Safety Code § 120980(k), (l) (defining "disclosed").

(n7)Footnote 7. See Health & Safety Code § 120980(a),(b) (imposing liability on "[a]ny person" who discloses results), (f) (precluding use of results "in any instance," except as otherwise provided by statute).

(n8)Footnote 8. Health & Safety Code § 120980(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Health & Safety Code § 120980(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Health & Safety Code § 120980(e).

(n11)Footnote 11. Health & Safety Code § 120980(d).

(n12)Footnote 12. Health & Safety Code § 120980(h).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Health & Safety Code § 120980.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Health & Safety Code § 120980(h) (section does not limit or expand right of injured subject under other applicable law).

(n15)Footnote 15. Health & Safety Code § 120980(a), (b); see [2], above.

(n16)Footnote 16. Health & Safety Code § 120980(g).

(n17)Footnote 17. Health & Safety Code § 120980(a),(b); see Health & Safety Code §§ 1603.1, 1603.3 121022.

(n18)Footnote 18. Health & Safety Code § 120980(a),(b); see, e.g., Health & Safety Code § 120985 (regarding disclosure by physician who ordered test to other health care providers under certain conditions).

(n19)Footnote 18.1. See Health & Safety Code § 120980(f).

(n20)Footnote 19. Health & Safety Code § 120980(i).

39 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees

Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE

Subpart 1. Specific Statutory Restrictions

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.11

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.11 Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation Programs

[1] Requirements

An employer of 25 or more employees must reasonably accommodate employees who wish to voluntarily enter and participate in an alcohol or drug rehabilitation program, by providing unpaid time off (or permitting the use of any accrued paid sick leave) for this purpose, provided that such accommodation does not impose an undue hardship on the employer.ⁿ¹ This accommodation must be accompanied by "reasonable efforts to safeguard the privacy of the employee" concerning the fact that he or she has enrolled in a rehabilitation program.ⁿ²

These substantive provisions have yet to be interpreted by the courts. Moreover, the term "reasonable efforts" in respect to safeguarding privacy is not defined in the statute.

The accommodation requirements and exceptions thereto are further discussed in Chapter 50.

[2] Method of Enforcement

An employee who believes that he or she has been denied reasonable accommodation to participate in an alcohol or drug rehabilitation program may file a complaint with the Labor Commissioner.ⁿ³

Although the statute does not provide a specific remedy for violations of its confidentiality provision,ⁿ⁴ it is likely that recourse to the Labor Commissioner may also be had by employees aggrieved by breaches of confidentiality with respect to statutorily mandated drug or alcohol program accommodation.ⁿ⁵

Additionally, the provisions of Labor Code section 98.7 apply to a complaint based on a violation of the accommodation requirement.ⁿ⁶ Labor Code section 98.7 permits a complainant to bring an action in an appropriate court after a determination by the Labor Commissioner that no violation has occurred.ⁿ⁷ Section 98.7(d) also permits the appropriate court to determine whether a violation occurred, and if so, to restrain the violation and to order all appropriate relief to remedy the violation. Appropriate relief includes, but is not limited to, reimbursement of lost wages, with interest, and other compensation or equitable relief as is appropriate under the circumstances of the case.ⁿ⁸ For complete discussion of the remedies provided for by section 98.7, see Chapter 5.

A common law action for invasion of privacy also could conceivably include an allegation that an employer violated the statutory requirement that the employer to make reasonable efforts to safeguard the privacy of the employee concerning the enrollment in an alcohol or drug rehabilitation program.ⁿ⁹ For a discussion of common law principles that apply to employer disclosures of information about employees, see § 51.21.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Labor Code sections 1025-1028 pertaining to reasonable accommodation of employees who voluntarily enter alcohol or drug rehabilitation programs, present a number of difficult interpretive issues. For example, an employee whom an employer has legitimately decided to discipline or discharge may invoke section 1025 after the employer has decided to act but before the decision has been communicated to the employee. Section 1025 does not necessarily prohibit an otherwise legitimate discipline or discharge under such circumstances,ⁿ¹⁰ but the facial integrity of a consequent lawsuit brought pursuant to section 1025 is obvious. In addition, the absence of a statutory definition of the required accommodation leaves open the question whether courts will find the accommodation obligations under section 1025 and the accommodation obligations under the disability provisions of the Fair Employment and Housing Actⁿ¹¹ and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973ⁿ¹² to be coextensive.ⁿ¹³ Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyAlcohol & Drug TestingLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code §§ 1025-1028; see Lab. Code §§ 1025, 1027; see also Stats. 1984, ch. 1103, § 2, Stats. 1987, ch. 506 (stating legislative intent regarding alcohol and drug rehabilitation); but see Penal Code § 8002 (exempting participants, director, and staff of certain live-in rehabilitation programs from application of Lab. Code § 1025).

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 1026.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 1028.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Lab. Code § 1026

(n5)Footnote 5. See Lab. Code § 95(a) (providing that Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, of which the Labor Commissioner is the head, may enforce the provisions of the Labor Code the enforcement of which is not specifically vested in any other officer, board, or commission).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 1028.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lab. Code §§ 98.7(d)(1), 1028.

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 98.7(d)(1).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code § 1026.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code § 1025.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Gov. Code §§ 12926(i), 12940(a); 2 Cal. Code Reg. § 7293.9.

(n12)Footnote 12. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 793, 794; 28 C.F.R. § 41.53; 41 C.F.R. § 60-741.21(f).

(n13)Footnote 13. For discussion of accommodation requirements for physically handicapped employees and applicants under equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 41.

40 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees

Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE

Subpart 1. Specific Statutory Restrictions

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.12

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.12 Business Records Act

[1] Coverage of Act

The Business Records Act¹ provides in pertinent part that no business entity that performs bookkeeping services may disclose in whole or in part the contents of any record, including the disclosure of information in the record in any composite of information that is prepared or maintained by that business entity to any person, other than the individual or business entity that is the subject of the record, without the express written consent of that individual or business entity.² This provision precludes a business entity that performs bookkeeping services from disclosing to third parties the contents of records prepared by it without the consent of the subjects of such records, even though the identities of the individual subjects would not be disclosed with the information.³

The terms used in the Act are broadly defined.⁴ Although certain financial institutions are excluded from the law's coverage,⁵ the bookkeeping functions carried out by many employers appear to fall within the literal definition of the activities regulated by the statute. Thus, as most employers perform some "bookkeeping services,"⁶ a duty not to disclose private information about individuals whose personal data is contained in the employer's records may be inferred. Therefore, assuming that the Act applies to employers' personnel records, employees have a right not to have business records of which they are the subject disclosed to third parties without the employees' permission.⁷

[2] Employers Subject to Act

For purposes of The Business Records Act, a "business entity" includes a sole proprietorship, partnership, corporation, association or other group, however organized and whether or not organized to operate at a profit, but does not include a financial institution organized, chartered, or holding a license or authorization certificate under California or federal law to make loans or extend credit and subject to supervision by an official or agency of California or the United States, nor the parent of any such financial institution, nor any subsidiary of any such financial institution or parent.⁸

[3] Disclosures Exempt From Act

The Act does not prohibit any of the following:⁹

1. A disclosure¹⁰ made pursuant to a subpoena or court order.
2. A disclosure of information that is discoverable.
3. Compliance with a lawful search warrant.
4. A disclosure to a law enforcement agency when required for a lawful investigation of criminal activity.
5. A disclosure to a taxing agency for purposes of tax administration.

[4] Method of Enforcement

A person may initiate a civil action against a business entity in accordance with state law whenever the entity violates the provisions of The Business Records Act.¹¹ The action must be brought within two years after the cause of action arises.¹²

The plaintiff in such an action may recover actual damages sustained as a result of the violation (but not less than $500), plus the attendant court costs and reasonable attorney's fees.¹³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code §§ 1799-1799.3

(n2)Footnote 2. Civ. Code § 1799.1(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. 62 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 10 (1979) .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Civ. Code § 1799(a)-(e).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Civ. Code § 1799(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Civ. Code § 1799(a) (defining bookkeeping services to include keeping books, making trial balances, making audits, or preparing statements and reports, all as a part of bookkeeping operations, provided that the trial balances, statements, or reports are not issued as having been prepared or examined by a certified public accountant or public accountant over his or her name); see also Civ. Code § 1799(e) ("record" is any item, collection, or grouping of information about an individual or business entity).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Civ. Code § 1799.1(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. Civ. Code § 1799(b).

(n9)Footnote 9. Civ. Code § 1799.1(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Although the statute does not prohibit disclosure of personnel records pursuant to a subpoena, the employee's right of privacy under Cal. Const., art. I, § 1 may impose limitations on such disclosure. see El Dorado Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-346, 235 Cal. Rptr. 303 (employee's personnel file was protected by constitutional right to privacy; plaintiff seeking disclosure of file in employment discrimination action had burden of showing that production of entire file was necessary and that there were no less intrusive means of obtaining the relevant information); see also Harding Lawson Assocs. v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 7, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538 (wrongful termination plaintiff failed to show compelling need for confidential documents in former coemployees' personnel files to justify trial court's discovery order regarding those files); and discussion in § 51.20. Furthermore, a subpoena seeking production of employment records must comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6, as discussed in § 51.16.

(n11)Footnote 11. Civ. Code § 1799.2(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. Civ. Code § 1799.2(c).

(n13)Footnote 13. Civ. Code § 1799.2(b).

41 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE
Subpart 1. Specific Statutory Restrictions

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.13

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.13 Confidentiality of Medical Information

[1] Duties Imposed on Employers and Health Care Providers

The Confidentiality of Medical Information Actⁿ¹ significantly restricts the use and disclosure of medical information about employees. For purposes of the Act, "medical information" is any individually identifiable information, in electronic or physical form, in possession of or derived from a provider of health care or health care service plan regarding a patient's medical history, mental or physical condition, or treatment. "Individually identifiable" means that the medical information includes or contains any element of personal identifying information sufficient to allow identification of the individual, such as the patient's name, address, electronic mail address, telephone number, social security number, or other information that, alone or in combination with other publicly available information, reveals the individual's identity.ⁿ²

The Act requires all employers to establish appropriate measures to ensure the confidentiality and protection from unauthorized use and disclosure of medical information.ⁿ³

In addition, the Act limits the disclosure of medical information by health care providers, health care service plans, or contractors.ⁿ⁴ Therefore, to the extent that an employer is also a provider of health care, the employer is also subject to these requirements.

An employer that is a provider of health care, health care service plans, or contractors does not violate the employers' duties spelled out in the Actⁿ⁵ by complying with their dutiesⁿ⁶ concerning medical information possessed in connection with providing health care services to the patients.ⁿ⁷ Conversely, such a health care provider does not violate the obligations of providers set forth in the Act by disclosing, in accordance with the duties imposed on employers, medical information possessed in connection with employing the provider's employees.ⁿ⁸

For further discussion of the Act as it relates to health care providers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, "Privacy."

[2] Employers' Substantive Rights and Responsibilities

[a] Limitations on Use and Disclosure of Medical Information

Each employer that receives medical information from a provider of health care must establish appropriate procedures to ensure the confidentiality and protection from unauthorized use and disclosure of that information.ⁿ⁹ These procedures may include, but are not limited to, instruction regarding confidentiality of employees and agents handling files containing medical information, and security systems restricting access to files containing medical information.ⁿ¹⁰

An employer generally may not use, disclose, or knowingly permit its employees or agents to use or disclose medical information about an employee without the employee having first signed an authorization permitting such use or disclosure.ⁿ¹¹ However, disclosure may be made under certain circumstances even if the employee has not authorized it.ⁿ¹²

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

In light of the statutory protections afforded employee medical information, employers are advised to keep employee medical information separate from other personnel records, under lock and key if possible. Only supervisors with clear business reasons to know the contents of such medical files should be allowed access. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[b] Authorization for Release of Information

An authorization for the release of medical information must comply with the following requirements:ⁿ¹³

- The authorization must be either handwritten by the person who signs it or printed in at least 14-point type.ⁿ¹⁴
- The authorization must be clearly separate from any other language present on the same page, and it must be executed by a signature that serves no purpose other than to execute the authorization.ⁿ¹⁵
- The authorization must be signed and dated by either:
 - The patient.ⁿ¹⁶ However, if the patient is a minor, then he or she may sign an authorization only for the disclosure of information obtained by a health care provider in the course of furnishing services for which the minor could legally give consent.ⁿ¹⁷
 - The legal representative of the patient, if the patient is a minor or incompetent.ⁿ¹⁸ However, if the patient is a competent minor, his or her representative may not sign an authorization for the disclosure of information obtained by a health care provider in the course of furnishing services for which the minor could legally give consent.ⁿ¹⁹
 - The beneficiary or personal representative of a deceased patient.ⁿ²⁰
- The authorization must state the limitations, if any, on the types of medical information to be disclosedⁿ²¹ and on the uses to which the information may be put.ⁿ²²
- The authorization must state the name or functions of the employer or person authorized to disclose the information.ⁿ²³

■ The authorization must state the name or functions of the persons or entities authorized to receive the information.n24

■ The authorization must specify the date after which the employer is no longer authorized to disclose the medical information.n25

■ The authorization must include a statement advising the person who signed the authorization of the right to receive a copy of it.n26

On demand from the patient or the person who signed the authorization, an employer possessing the authorization must furnish a true copy of the authorization.n27

[c] FORM--Authorization for Release of Medical Information

[i] Comment

The form set forth in [ii], below, is sufficient to authorize the release of medical information under the provisions of the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act.n28

[ii] Form AUTHORIZATION FOR RELEASE OF MEDICAL INFORMATION

AUTHORIZATION FOR RELEASE OF MEDICAL INFORMATION

I hereby authorize _____ [name of employer or person authorized to release information] to release the medical information described below relating to _____ [myself or name of patient] to _____ [name of person or entity authorized to receive information].

This authorization is limited to the following types of information: _____ [specify] .

This information is limited to the following uses of the information released: _____ [specify] .

This authorization shall remain valid only until _____ [date] .

[If authorization is signed by parent or guardian of minor employee, insert: I am the _____ (parent or guardian) of _____ (name), a minor, whose records are to be furnished only for the purpose of _____ (specify).]

I understand that I have the right to receive a true copy of this authorization. By placing my initials to the left of this clause on the original authorization, I acknowledge that I have received a true copy of this authorization.

Date: _____.

_____ [Signature]

[d] Cancellation of Authorization

A person who can sign an authorization pursuant to the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act may cancel or modify the authorization. However, the cancellation or modification becomes effective only after the employer actually receives written notice of it.n29

[e] Establishment of More Restrictive Policy by Employer

If an employer maintains a written policy or makes a written agreement with one or more of its employees providing that particular types of medical information are not to be used or disclosed by the employer in particular ways, the employer must obtain authorization for such uses or disclosures, even if authorization would not otherwise be required by the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act.ⁿ³⁰

[f] Employer's Duty to Communicate Limits of Authorized Disclosure

An employer that discloses medical information pursuant to an authorization required by the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act must communicate to the person or entity to which it discloses the medical information any limitations in the authorization regarding its use. An employer that has attempted in good faith to comply with this requirement will not be held liable for any unauthorized use of the medical information by the person or entity to whom the employer disclosed the information.ⁿ³¹

[g] Disclosure by Recipient

A recipient of medical information pursuant to an authorization under the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act may not further disclose that medical information unless the further disclosure is made pursuant to a new authorization that meets the requirements of the Act, or as specifically required or permitted by other provisions of the Act or other laws.ⁿ³²

[h] No Waiver

No provider of health care, a health care service plan, or contractor may require a patient to sign an authorization, release, consent, or waiver permitting the disclosure of otherwise confidential medical information as a condition of receiving health care.ⁿ³³ Any waiver sought or obtained from an employee, except by valid authorization, is contrary to public policy and is unenforceable.ⁿ³⁴

[i] Discrimination by Employers

No employer may discriminate against an employee in terms or conditions of employment due to that employee's refusal to sign an authorization to release medical information under the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act.ⁿ³⁵ However, this provision does not prohibit an employer from taking such action as is necessary in the absence of medical information due to an employee's refusal to sign an authorization under the Act.ⁿ³⁶

Thus, for example, although an employer may not terminate or otherwise discipline an employee for the act of refusing to authorize disclosure of medical information by the employee's physician, the employer apparently would be permitted to draw adverse inferences from the resulting lack of pertinent medical information when making an employment decision.

[3] Exceptions to Prohibition Against Disclosure

An employer may disclose medical information under any of the following circumstances, even if the patient has not authorized disclosure:ⁿ³⁷

- When disclosure is compelled by judicial or administrative process or by any other specific provision of law.
- When the information is relevant to a lawsuit, arbitration, grievance, or other claim or challenge to which the employer and employee are parties and in which the employee has placed in issue his or her medical history, mental or physical condition, or treatment.

- When the information is necessary for the administration and maintenance of employee benefit plans (including health care, disability, and workers' compensation plans), and for determining eligibility for paid and unpaid leave from work for medical reasons.

- When necessary to aid the diagnosis or treatment of the employee by a health care provider in circumstances in which the patient or other person who has the power to authorize disclosure³⁸ is unable to authorize the disclosure.

[4] Enforcement and Remedies

[a] Criminal Penalty

A violation of the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act that results in economic loss or personal injury to the employee is punishable as a misdemeanor.³⁹

[b] Civil Action

A patient who has sustained economic loss or personal injury as a result of a violation of the use or disclosure provisions of the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act may recover compensatory damages, punitive damages not to exceed $3,000, attorney's fees not to exceed $1,000, and the costs of litigation.⁴⁰ The Act's provision permitting the recovery of punitive damages does not specifically refer to Civil Code section 3294, which sets forth the requirements for imposing punitive damages in civil actions generally.⁴¹ It is not clear, therefore, whether the procedures and evidentiary showings required by section 3294 are required to recover punitive damages under the Act.

The foregoing civil remedy under the Act is available in addition to any other remedies available at law.⁴²

For a form of complaint for violation of the disclosure provisions of the Act, see [5], below.

The civil remedy provided under the Act refers only to violations of the Act's use and disclosure provisions.⁴³ It appears, therefore, that the only remedies for violation of the discrimination provision⁴⁴ would be common-law actions, such as actions for wrongful discharge or defamation. For discussion of wrongful discharge actions, see Chapter 60.

[5] FORM--Complaint for Damages Arising From Wrongful Disclosure of Medical Information

[a] Comment

This form is a complaint for damages brought by an employee against his or her employer, alleging wrongful disclosure of medical information in violation of the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act.⁴⁵

The complaint contains allegations of the identities and capacities of the parties, the medical information disclosed, the particulars of disclosure (when, by whom, and to whom), the damage sustained by the plaintiff, and a prayer for relief.

It is not clear whether an award of punitive damages under the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act requires the same showing as punitive damages awarded under the general punitive damages statute, Civil Code, section 3294.⁴⁶ If there is evidence that the defendant acted with oppression, fraud, or malice as defined in Civil Code, section 3294, counsel should allege such facts using the statutory language to the extent possible. For further discussion of the requirements for alleging punitive damages, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, "Damages," Part I.

[b] Form Complaint for Damages Arising From Wrongful Disclosure of Medical Information

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA

COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	No. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES
_____ [name],	)	(Use and Disclosure of Medical Information in Viol-
Defendant(s).	)	ation of Confidentiality of Medical Information
	)	_____ [name(s)], Act)
	)	[Civil Code § 56.35]

Plaintiff alleges:

1. Plaintiff, _____ [name], is a resident of the City of _____, County of _____, State of California.

2. Defendant(s) _____ [name(s)], are residents of the County of _____, State of California.

3. At all times relevant to this complaint, plaintiff was an employee of defendant _____ [name of employer], during which time said defendant acquired the following information in regard to plaintiff: _____ [describe medical information].

4. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of second defendant] requested the following medical information from defendant _____ [name of employer]: _____ [describe medical information requested].

5. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of employer] disclosed to defendant _____ [name of second defendant] the medical information described above regarding plaintiff.

6. The request for and the disclosure of the medical information regarding plaintiff were without the prior written authorization of plaintiff, which authorization is required by Civil Code section 56.20; both the request and the disclosure were, therefore, contrary to the provisions of the California Confidentiality of Medical Information Act, Civil Code sections 56-56.37.

7. As a direct and proximate result of both the wrongful request for and the wrongful disclosure of the medical information described above, plaintiff has been damaged in that _____ [specify damages suffered, e.g., plaintiff's employment was terminated, and plaintiff was thereafter unable to pay for the necessities of life, which inability also resulted in emotional distress and illness]. [The economic loss suffered by plaintiff amounted to $_____.]

8. [Defendant's conduct was _____ (specify basis for punitive damages under Civil Code section 3294, e.g., malicious, in that it was despicable conduct carried on by defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of plaintiff's rights).] Defendant's conduct warrants the assessment of punitive damages pursuant to Civil Code section 56.35 in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct.

9. As a further direct and proximate result of both the wrongful request for and disclosure of the medical information described above, it has been necessary for plaintiff to engage the services of an attorney, and plaintiff has incurred attorney's fees in excess of $1000.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment against defendants, jointly and severally, as follows:

1. Compensatory damages in the amount of: $_____;
2. Punitive damages;
3. Attorney's fees in the amount of $1000;
4. Costs of suit; and
5. Such other and further relief as the Court may deem just and proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Verification, if desired]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyMedical & Related Examinations

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Civ. Code § 56 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. Civ. Code § 56.05(g).

(n3)Footnote 3. Civ. Code § 56.20(a); see Civ. Code §§ 56.20-56.245, discussed in [2], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. Civ. Code § 56.10(a); see Civ. Code §§ 56.10-56.16; see also Civ. Code § 56.05(j) (defining "provider of health care"). see Garrett v. Young (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1393, 1401-1410, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 134 (Civ. Code § 56.16 permits health care providers to discuss general medical information about patient without his or her consent, and information disclosed by doctor to employer was of sufficiently nonspecific nature to fit within exception).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Civ. Code § 56.20.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Civ. Code § 56.10.

(n7)Footnote 7. Civ. Code § 56.25(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. Civ. Code § 56.25(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. Civ. Code § 56.20(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. Civ. Code § 56.20(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. Civ. Code § 56.20(c); see Civ. Code §§ 56.11, 56.21 (requirements for authorization).

(n12)Footnote 12. Civ. Code § 56.20(c); see [3], below.

(n13)Footnote 13. Civ. Code § 56.21; see Civ. Code § 56.11.

(n14)Footnote 14. Civ. Code § 56.21(a).

(n15)Footnote 15. Civ. Code § 56.21(b).

(n16)Footnote 16. Civ. Code § 56.21(c)(1).

(n17)Footnote 17. Civ. Code § 56.21(c)(1); see Civ. Code §§ 25 et seq., 60 et seq.

(n18)Footnote 18. Civ. Code § 56.21(c)(2)

(n19)Footnote 19. Civ. Code § 56.21(c)(2); see Fam. Code § 6900 et seq. (consent to medical treatment of minors), Civ. Code §§ 25 et seq., 60 et seq.

(n20)Footnote 20. Civ. Code § 56.21(c)(3).

(n21)Footnote 21. Civ. Code § 56.21(d).

(n22)Footnote 22. Civ. Code § 56.21(g).

(n23)Footnote 23. Civ. Code § 56.21(e).

(n24)Footnote 24. Civ. Code § 56.21(f).

(n25)Footnote 25. Civ. Code § 56.21(h).

(n26)Footnote 26. Civ. Code § 56.21(i).

(n27)Footnote 27. Civ. Code § 56.22.

(n28)Footnote 28. See Civ. Code §§ 56.20(c), 56.21.

(n29)Footnote 29. Civ. Code § 56.24.

(n30)Footnote 30. Civ. Code § 56.20(d).

(n31)Footnote 31. Civ. Code § 56.23.

(n32)Footnote 32. Civ. Code § 56.245.

(n33)Footnote 33. Civ. Code § 56.37(a); see Civ. Code § 56.10; see also Health & Safety Code §§ 1374.7, 1389.1 (limited disclosure for underwriting process).

(n34)Footnote 34. Civ. Code § 56.37(b); see Civ. Code §§ 56.11, 56.21, 56.26(b) (waiver authorization).

(n35)Footnote 35. Civ. Code § 56.20(b).

(n36)Footnote 36. Civ. Code § 56.20(b).

(n37)Footnote 37. Civ. Code § 56.20(c).

(n38)Footnote 38. See Civ. Code § 56.21(c).

(n39)Footnote 39. Civ. Code § 56.36(a).

(n40)Footnote 40. Civ. Code § 56.35.

(n41)Footnote 41. See Civ. Code § 3294 (punitive damages recoverable based on clear and convincing evidence of oppression, fraud, or malice).

(n42)Footnote 42. Civ. Code § 56.35.

(n43)Footnote 43. Civ. Code § 56.35.

(n44)Footnote 44. See Civ. Code § 56.20(b), discussed in [2][i], above.

(n45)Footnote 45. See Civ. Code § 56.35.

(n46)Footnote 46. See Civ. Code § 56.35 (punitive damages recoverable for violation of Act); Civ. Code § 3294 (punitive damages generally recoverable based on clear and convincing evidence of oppression, fraud, or malice); see also [4][a], above.

42 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE
Subpart 1. Specific Statutory Restrictions

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.14

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.14 Unauthorized Commercial Use of Name or Likeness

Civil Code section 3344 codifies the existing common law tort of appropriation of name or likeness. The statute prohibits the knowing use by any person of another's name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness, in any manner for business or commercial purposes without consent.ⁿ¹ The statute prohibits the appropriation of the likenesses of living persons only.ⁿ²

When a photograph or likeness of an employee of the person using the photograph or likeness appearing in the advertisement or other publication prepared by or on behalf of the user is only incidental, and not essential, to the purpose of the publication in which it appears, there is a rebuttable presumption affecting the burden of producing evidence that the failure to obtain the consent of the employee was not a knowing use of the employee's photograph or likeness.ⁿ³ Thus, the employee must produce evidence that his or her employer's use for commercial purposes was "knowing" in order to prevail in an action under section 3344.

To constitute a violation of Civil Code section 3344, there must be a "direct connection" between the use of the name or likeness and a commercial purpose.ⁿ⁴

Civil Code section 3344.1, the Astaire Celebrity Image Protection Act, protects the name, voice, signature, photograph, or likeness of a "deceased personality" from misappropriation from acts occurring in California.ⁿ⁵ The Act also provides a method for contractual, intestate, trust, or testamentary transfer of the deceased person's property rights in these interests.ⁿ⁶ Unlike Civil Code section 3344, which protects against knowing use of another's likeness, Civil Code section 3344.1 protects against any use of the likeness of a deceased personality.ⁿ⁷

One who violates either of these statutes is liable for any damages sustained, or for at least $750, plus any profits attributable to the knowing misuse.ⁿ⁸ In establishing profits from any unauthorized use, the injured party need only present proof of the gross revenue attributable to the use.ⁿ⁹ Punitive damages may also be awarded, and a prevailing party in an action under either section is entitled to attorneys' fees and costs.ⁿ¹⁰ These remedies are cumulative, and are available in addition to any others provided by law.ⁿ¹¹

For complete discussion of the tort of invasion of privacy in this context, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 46 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Privacy Act General Overview Torts Business Torts General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 3344(a). For the standard jury instruction on use of name of likeness, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1804 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the First Amendment defense to the use or appropriation of name or likeness, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1805 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction on damages in an action under Civ. Code § 3344, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1821 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim under Civ. Code § 3344 (Matthew Bender), see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1804 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lugosi v. Universal Pictures (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 813, 821-822, 160 Cal. Rptr. 323, 603 P.2d 425 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Civ. Code § 3344(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Compare Eastwood v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 409, 420-421, 198 Cal. Rptr. 342 (tabloid's printing of information about actor was sufficiently connected with commercial purpose to allow actor to invoke statute) with Johnson v. Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovich, Inc. (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 880, 895, 118 Cal. Rptr. 370 (educational textbook's use of plaintiff's name and likeness as educational tool was not directly connected with commercial purpose of publisher).

(n5)Footnote 5. Civ. Code § 3344.1(a)-(c), (n), (o); see Civ. Code § 3344.1(h) (defining "deceased personality"); see also Civ. Code § 3344.1(a)(2) (exception for specified works in entertainment or dramatic, literary, or musical work).

(n6)Footnote 6. Civ. Code § 3344.1(b), (d); see Civ. Code § 3344.1(e) (extinguishment of rights).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Civ. Code §§ 3344(a), 3344.1(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Civ. Code §§ 3344(a), 3344.1(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Civ. Code §§ 3344(a), 3344.1(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Civ. Code §§ 3344(a), 3344.1(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Civ. Code §§ 3344(g), 3344.1(m).

43 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE
Subpart 1. Specific Statutory Restrictions

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.15

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.15 Disclosure of Information to Employing Law Enforcement Agency

An employer must, under certain conditions, disclose employment information to a law enforcement agency contemplating the hiring of a current or former employee of the employer.ⁿ¹ The purpose of this disclosure requirement is to allow law enforcement agencies to perform thorough background investigations of applicants.ⁿ²

Disclosure is required if the following three conditions are met:ⁿ³

- The request is made in writing.
- The request is accompanied by a notarized authorization by the applicant releasing the employer of liability.
- The request and the authorization are presented to the employer by a sworn officer or other authorized representative of the employing law enforcement agency.

The information that must be disclosed includes written information in connection with job applications, performance evaluations, attendance records, disciplinary actions, eligibility for rehire, and other information relevant to peace officer performance, except information prohibited from disclosure by any other state or federal law or regulation.ⁿ⁴

The employer may charge reasonable fees to cover the costs incurred in copying and furnishing the required documents.ⁿ⁵

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawPreemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Gov. Code § 1031.1(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 1031.1(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. Gov. Code § 1031.1(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Gov. Code § 1031.1(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. Gov. Code § 1031.1(f).

44 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees

Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE

Subpart 1. Specific Statutory Restrictions

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.16

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.16 Subpoena Seeking Production of Employment Records

Code of Civil Procedure section 1985.6 imposes certain requirements when a party to litigation seeks to subpoena employment records of an individual from his or her employer. Failure to comply with these requirements is a sufficient basis for the employer-witness to refuse to produce the employment records sought by the subpoena duces tecum.ⁿ¹

For purposes of this statute, "employment records" are the original or any copy of books, documents, other writings or electronic data pertaining to the employment of any employee maintained by the current or former employer of the employee, or by any labor organization that has represented or currently represents the employee.ⁿ² An "employee" is any individual who is or has been employed by a witness that is subject to a subpoena duces tecum, or any individual who is or has been represented by a labor organization that is a witness subject to a subpoena duces tecum.ⁿ³ A "subpoenaing party" is any person causing a subpoena duces tecum to be issued or served in connection with a civil action or proceeding, except for certain specified public agencies.ⁿ⁴ For these purposes, "labor organization" has the meaning set forth in Lab. Code § 1117.ⁿ⁵

The procedures specified by Code of Civil Procedure section 1985.6 do not apply to workers' compensation or Cal/OSHA proceedingsⁿ⁶ or to any subpoena duces tecum that does not request the records of any particular employee and that requires a custodian of records to delete any information that would identify any employee whose records are to be produced.ⁿ⁷

At least 10 days before the date of production and 5 days before the subpoena is served on the custodian of the employment records (with extensions if service is by mail), the subpoenaing party must serve copies of the following papers on the employee, unless the subpoenaing party is the employee, and the employee is the only subject of the subpoenaed records:ⁿ⁸

- The subpoena duces tecum.

- The affidavit supporting issuance of the subpoena, if any.
- A notice to the employee, in a typeface designed to call attention to it, indicating the following:⁹
 - Employment records about the employee are being sought from the witness named in the subpoena.
 - The employment records may be protected by a right of privacy.
 - If the employee objects to the witness furnishing the records to the party seeking the records, the employee must file papers with the court before the date specified in the subpoena.
 - If the subpoenaing party does not agree in writing to cancel or limit the subpoena, an attorney should be consulted about the employee's interest in protecting his or her privacy rights.
- Proof of service.¹⁰

If a notice of taking of deposition is also served, that other notice may be set forth in a single document with the notice required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(e).¹¹

These papers must be served on the employee personally, at his or her last known address, in accordance with the procedures for service of papers in civil actions generally¹² or, if the employee is a party, on his or her attorney of record.¹³ If the employee is a minor, the papers must be served on the employee's parent, guardian, conservator, or similar fiduciary, or if none of these people can be found, on the person having care and custody of the minor or with whom the minor resides, and on the minor if the minor is at least 12 years of age.¹⁴

Before the production of records, the subpoenaing party must either (1) serve on the witness a proof of personal service or service by mail attesting to the subpoenaing party's compliance with the service and notice requirements; or (2) furnish the witness with a written authorization to release the records that is signed by the employee or by his or her attorney of record. The witness may presume that the attorney purporting to sign the authorization on behalf of the employee acted with the consent of the employee and that any objection to the release of records is waived.¹⁵

The subpoena itself must be served on the witness itself in sufficient time to allow the witness a reasonable time¹⁶ to locate and produce the records or copies of the records.¹⁷

The subpoenaing party may move for an order shortening the time for serving the subpoena duces tecum or waiving the requirements concerning service of copies of the subpoena and required notice on the employee. To obtain such an order, the subpoenaing party must show (1) good cause, (2) that the subpoenaing party has exercised due diligence, and (3) that the rights of the employee and witness will be preserved.¹⁸

An employee whose employment records are sought under a subpoena duces tecum may, before the date of production, bring a motion to quash or modify the subpoena duces tecum.¹⁹ Notice of the bringing of the motion must be given to the witness and to the deposition officer at least five days before the production of the records. The failure to provide notice to the deposition officer does not invalidate the motion, but may be raised by the deposition officer as an affirmative defense in any action for liability for improper release of records.²⁰ No witness or deposition officer may be required to produce employment records after receipt of notice that such a motion has been brought by an employee, or after receipt of a written objection from a nonparty employee, except on order of the court in which the action is pending or by agreement of the parties, witnesses, and employees affected.ⁿ²¹ In addition, any nonparty employee whose records are sought by subpoena duces tecum may, before the date of production, serve a written objection on the subpoenaing party, the deposition officer, and the witness stating the specific grounds on which the production of the employment records should be prohibited.ⁿ²²

The party requesting an employee's employment records may bring a motionⁿ²³ to enforce the subpoena within 20 days of service of the written objection. The motion must be accompanied by a declaration showing a reasonable and good faith attempt at informal resolution of the dispute between the party requesting the records and the employee or the employee's attorney.ⁿ²⁴

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The enactment of Code of Civil Procedure section 1985.6 removes a portion, but not all, of the burden placed on employers to protect the privacy interests of their employees. Employers who receive a subpoena for employment records of a current or former employee should review the documents to ensure that the subpoenaing party has followed the requirements of the statute. If the subpoenaing party has failed to follow the timing, service, or notice requirements, the employer should inform the attorney of record for the subpoenaing party in writing that the employer will not produce the records.

A lingering question, however, is whether compliance by the subpoenaing party with the requirements of Code of Civil Procedure section 1985.6 provides blanket immunity to the employer who then produces all subpoenaed employment records. For example, an employee may claim that the employer never informed the employee of the contents of the employee's personnel file, and, had the employee known of its contents, he or she would have objected to its production. Arguably, because the statute affords the employee the opportunity to object before production, the employee should not be heard to complain later. Nonetheless, employers who have questions regarding the production of employment records should consult with legal counsel before producing the documents.

Employers should also note that the procedure outlined in Code of Civil Procedure section 1985.6 does not apply if the employer whose records are sought is a party to the litigation, and the requesting party uses the procedure for inspection of documents outlined in Code of Civil Procedure section 2031.010 et seq. In that case, the employer still has the obligation and the right to protect the privacy interests of its current and former employees in their employment records. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Procedure
Pretrial Matters
Subpoenas
Labor & Employment Law
Employee Privacy
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Employee Privacy
Disclosure of Employee Information
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(j).

(n2)Footnote 2. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(a)(3).

(n3)Footnote 3. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(a)(2).

(n4)Footnote 4. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(a)(5).

(n5)Footnote 5. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(a)(4).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(i).

(n7)Footnote 7. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(h).

(n8)Footnote 8. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(b), (e). See Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(k) (if subpoenaing party is employee and employee is only subject of subpoenaed records, notice to employee and delivery to the employee of the other documents specified in § 1985.6(b) are not required).

(n9)Footnote 9. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(e).

(n10)Footnote 10. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(c)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(e).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1010 et seq.

(n13)Footnote 13. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(b)(1).

(n14)Footnote 14. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(b)(1).

(n15)Footnote 15. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(c).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2020.410.

(n17)Footnote 17. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(d).

(n18)Footnote 18. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(g).

(n19)Footnote 19. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(f)(1); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1987.1.

(n20)Footnote 20. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(f)(1); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1985.6(a)(1), 2020.420 ("deposition officer" defined).

(n21)Footnote 21. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(f)(3).

(n22)Footnote 22. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(f)(2).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1987(c).

(n24)Footnote 24. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.6(f)(4).

45 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees

Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE

Subpart 1. Specific Statutory Restrictions

3-51 California Employment Law §§ 51.17 through 51.29

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 51.17[Reserved]

46 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
 CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
 Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE
 Subpart 2. Constitutional and Common-Law Protection

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.30

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.30 Constitutional Protection

[1] Employee's Right to Privacy

Since 1972, the California Constitution's enumeration of rights has provided that "[a]ll people are by nature free and independent and have inalienable rights. Among these are enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining safety, happiness and privacy."n1 This section discusses the constitutional implications of disclosure of private information about employees by private employers. For a general discussion of privacy rights under the California Constitution, see Chapter 50.

Courts interpreting the foregoing constitutional provision have indicated that the amendment adding the right to privacy did more than declare an already existing right:

The elevation of the right to be free from invasions of privacy to constitutional stature was ... intended to be an expansion of the privacy right. The election brochure ... states: "The right to privacy is more than 'unnecessary wordage.' It is fundamental to any free society. ... This simple amendment will extend various court decisions on privacy to insure protection of our basic rights."n2

One manifestation of this expansion of the constitutional protection of privacy is the creation of a constitutional right enforceable against private entities, including private employers, as well as the government. As one court stated, "[p]rivacy is protected not merely against state action; it is considered an unalienable right which may not be violated by anyone. ... The language of the election brochure argument refers to "effective restraint on the information activities of government and business."n3

The constitutional right to privacy provides protection against, among other things, the improper use of information properly obtained for a specific purpose, such as the use of it for another purpose or the disclosure of it to some third party.n4 An employer may potentially run afoul of the constitution, therefore, when it discloses private or confidential information about an employee to a third person in the absence of sufficient justification.ⁿ⁵ For example, in Payton v. City of Santa Clara,ⁿ⁶ a communication to an employee concerning the reasons for his termination was posted on an employee bulletin board. Even though the information published was apparently truthful, the court held that the employee's complaint stated a cause of action for violation of the constitutional provision.ⁿ⁷ In Sanchez v. County of San Bernardino,ⁿ⁸ the chief of a county's employee relations division was asked to resign after her employer discovered that she had a dating relationship with the president of the union representing some county employees. The employee and the county entered into a confidential severance agreement regarding her resignation. Shortly thereafter, the county breached the confidentiality provision of the agreement by providing information for newspaper articles reporting on her resignation. The Court of Appeal concluded that the trial court erred in granting the county summary adjudication on the ground that the confidentiality provision was void as against public policy. Had there been a request under the Public Records Actⁿ⁹ for the severance agreement, arguably the county would have had to disclose it, which would not have violated the confidentiality provision, because it would have been a disclosure required by applicable law. However, merely disclosing the agreement would not have disclosed any of the circumstances surrounding the resignation. Although, the circumstances of the resignation were a matter of legitimate public concern, the broad, general public policy in favor of open government had to be balanced against the broad, general public policy in favor of privacy articulated in California Constitution, article I, § 1. In the absence of a statute requiring the county to make the disclosures, the county's agreement not to make the disclosures did not violate public policy.

Also, the disclosure of an employee's personnel records pursuant to subpoena or court order may be limited by the employee's constitutional right to privacy.ⁿ¹⁰

[2] Employee's Civil Action to Enforce Constitutional Right of Privacy

The constitutional right of privacyⁿ¹¹ is intended to be self executing; that is, the constitutional provision itself creates a legal and enforceable right of privacy for every Californian.ⁿ¹² An employee may therefore obtain enforcement of his or her constitutional privacy right by filing a civil suit for damages, declaratory relief, or injunctive relief.ⁿ¹³

In Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson,ⁿ¹⁴ the court held that an employee's civil action based on the invasion of her constitutional right to privacy by intentional disclosure of a reprimand to coworkers with no need to know was a violation of her constitutional right to privacy in violation of public policy, and was not precluded by the exclusivity provision of the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ¹⁵

[3] Employer's Affirmative Defense Based on Compelling Interest

In general, a showing that the disclosure of the information is justified by a compelling need is a defense against a claim of violation of the constitutional right of privacy.ⁿ¹⁶ Thus, for instance, if an employee's suit is based on the public posting of the reasons for terminating the employee's employment, the employer can defend by showing some compelling public interest justifying the posting of the information.ⁿ¹⁷ However, even if a compelling need is established, the means taken to address that need must avoid or minimize the conflict between the values protected by the constitution and the values found to be of compelling interest, if possible.ⁿ¹⁸ For further discussion of defenses based on compelling need, see Ch. 50, pt. C.

The gravamen of an action based on a violation of the constitutional privacy right is the disclosure of private matter. Therefore, that the matter disclosed is true is not likely to constitute a defense to the action.ⁿ¹⁹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Constitutional Law Substantive Due Process Privacy Personal Information Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employee Privacy Constitutional Protections Labor & Employment

LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of Privacy

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Cal. Const., art. I, § 1 (emphasis added).

(n2)Footnote 2. Porten v. University of San Francisco (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 825, 829, 134 Cal. Rptr. 839 (emphasis in original); see City of Santa Barbara v. Adamson (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 123, 130, 164 Cal. Rptr. 539, 610 P.2d 436 ; Wood v. Superior Court (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1138, 1147, 212 Cal. Rptr. 811 . The California Supreme Court has recognized the election brochure as the definitive "legislative history" of the privacy amendment. White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 775, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Porten v. University of San Francisco (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 825, 829 n.2, 134 Cal. Rptr. 839 ; see White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 775, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 (noting that right to privacy is self-executing); Rulon-Miller v. International Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 248, 255, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524 (noting in apparent dictum that right to privacy may be implicated by employer's inquiry into employee's private life); see also Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 402, 415, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 ; Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1040-1048, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 ; but see Schmidt v. Superior Court (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 370, 389 n. 14, 256 Cal. Rptr. 750, 769 P.2d 932 (dictum suggesting that question of whether Cal. Const., art. I, § 1, applies to private entities is still unsettled).

(n4)Footnote 4. White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 775, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 ; see Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1040-1051, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (upholding constitutionality of preemployment drug testing by private employer based on, inter alia, restrictions on disclosure of results); See also Chapter 50, pt. C.

(n5)Footnote 5. For discussion of factors that will justify disclosure, see [2], below.

(n6)Footnote 6. Payton v. City of Santa Clara (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 152, 183 Cal. Rptr. 17 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Payton v. City of Santa Clara (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 152, 154-155, 183 Cal. Rptr. 17 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Sanchez v. County of San Bernardino (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 516, 525-527, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 96 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Gov. Code § 6250 et seq .

(n10)Footnote 10. See, e.g., Harding Lawson Assoc. v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 7, 10, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538 (wrongful termination plaintiff failed to show compelling need for confidential documents in former co-employees' personnel files to justify trial court's discovery order regarding those files); El Dorado Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-346, 235 Cal. Rptr. 303 (employee's personnel file was protected by constitutional right to privacy; plaintiff seeking disclosure of file in employment discrimination action had burden of showing that production of entire file was necessary and that there were no less intrusive means of obtaining the relevant information).

(n11)Footnote 11. Cal. Const., art. I, § 1.

(n12)Footnote 12. White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 775, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 .

(n13)Footnote 13. See White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 760, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 ; Payton v. City of Santa Clara (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 152, 183 Cal. Rptr. 17 ; Porten v. University of San Francisco (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 825, 134 Cal. Rptr. 839 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Operating Engineers Local 3 v. Johnson (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 180, 184-192, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552 .

(n16)Footnote 16. See White v. Davis (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 757, 775, 120 Cal. Rptr. 94, 533 P.2d 222 ; Porten v. University of San Francisco (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 825, 832, 134 Cal. Rptr. 839 . See also Sanchez v. County of San Bernardino (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 516, 528, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 96 (although county's statements regarding resignation of employee may have been protected under First Amendment, county could be liable for breach of confidentiality provision in severance agreement by disclosing information regarding resignation to newspapers, where confidentiality provision waived county's First Amendment free speech rights by contract); Wilkinson v. Times Mirror Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1034, 1040-1048, 264 Cal. Rptr. 194 (holding that compelling-interest standard applies only if intrusion substantially affects privacy right; otherwise reasonable standard applies).

(n17)Footnote 17. Payton v. City of Santa Clara (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 152, 155, 183 Cal. Rptr. 17 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Wood v. Superior Court (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1138, 1148, 212 Cal. Rptr. 811 ; see also Long Beach City Employees Ass'n v. City of Long Beach (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 937, 948 fn. 12, 227 Cal. Rptr. 90, 719 P.2d 660 ; City of Santa Barbara v. Adamson (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 123, 131-133, 164 Cal. Rptr. 539, 610 P.2d 436

(n19)Footnote 19. cf. Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 581A, comment i (rule that truth is defense to defamation actions "is not necessarily applicable" to "an action based on another rule of law," citing as example Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 652D, involving invasion of privacy); see also Kapellas v. Kofman (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 20, 35-39, 81 Cal. Rptr. 360, 459 P.2d 912 (noting that action for invasion of privacy does not necessarily require proof of falsity, but holding that no cause of action was stated; citing Melvin v. Reid (1931) 112 Cal. App. 285, 289, 297 P. 91); Levy, Golden and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 46, "Invasion of Privacy"; Prosser & Keeton, Law of Torts (5th ed. 1984), Ch. 20, "Privacy," § 117, p. 856.

47 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
 CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
 Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE
 Subpart 2. Constitutional and Common-Law Protection

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.31

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.31 Common Law Protection

[1] Theories of Recovery

[a] Public Disclosure of Private Facts

Dissemination of false information about an employee can lead to employer liability under common law theories of defamationⁿ¹ or infliction of emotional distress.ⁿ² However, the dissemination even of truthful information can lead to common law tort liability for invasion of privacy under certain circumstances. To establish tort liability, a plaintiff must establish (1) public disclosure (2) of a private fact (3) that would be offensive and objectionable to the reasonable person, and (4) that is not of legitimate public concern.ⁿ³ Thus, there is a right "to be free from public disclosure of private embarrassing facts, in short, '[a] right to be let alone.'"ⁿ⁴

To establish common law liability for public disclosure of private facts, plaintiff must show that the private information was publicly disclosed.ⁿ⁵ Accordingly, an employer who discloses facts concerning an employee's drinking problem to a small number of supervisory personnel is not liable for common law invasion of privacy.ⁿ⁶

A cause of action for public disclosure differs from a claim of defamation or "false light" invasion of privacyⁿ⁷ in that the plaintiff seeking to recover damages based on improper public disclosure of private facts need not challenge the accuracy of the information published, but must assert that the publicity is so intimate and unwarranted as to outrage the community's notion of decency.ⁿ⁸ The distinction between defamation actions and public disclosure actions has been characterized as the difference between engendering a false opinion about a person, either in the mind of one other person or many people (defamation), and degrading a person by laying his or her life open to public view (invasion of privacy).ⁿ⁹

For further discussion of common law tort actions for invasion of privacy, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 46.

[b] False Light Privacy Action

Placing another in a "false light" in the public eye is a form of the common law tort of invasion of privacy. The elements of the cause of action are (1) a public disclosure¹⁰ (2) that places the plaintiff in a false light¹¹ and (3) that is objectionable to a reasonable person.¹² If a false light action is based on a defamatory statement, the action will be viewed as substantially equivalent to a defamation claim and subject to the same requirements and restrictions as a defamation claim.¹³ Defamation actions are discussed briefly in [c], below.

For further discussion of common law tort actions for invasion of privacy, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 46, "Invasion of Privacy."

[c] Defamation

An employer may incur liability under a defamation theory if any disclosures about an employee or former employee are shown to be false, and the employee or former employee's reputation is injured as a result.¹⁴ However, employers are protected from liability in many situations by the qualified privilege that protects a communication made without malice to an interested person by (1) one who is also interested, (2) one who stands in such relation to the person interested as to afford a reasonable ground for supposing an innocent motive for the communication, or (3) one who is asked by the interested person to give the information.¹⁵

Thus, absent evidence of malice, statements regarding an employee's conduct (such as allegations of dishonesty) to persons who have some reasonable interest in the information are ordinarily protected.¹⁶ For the purposes of this qualified privilege, "malice" is a state of mind arising from hatred or ill will toward the employee.¹⁷ For further discussion of this privilege, see Chapter 63.

Defamation law is discussed fully in Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 45.

[d] Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

The elements of a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress are (1) outrageous conduct by the defendant; (2) an intention to cause, or reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress; and (3) actual and proximate causation of severe emotional distress.¹⁸

In many cases, a tort cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress based on improper disclosure of private information may be precluded by workers' compensation exclusivity principles. Ordinarily, a civil action to recover damages based on intentional infliction of emotional distress in connection with an alleged wrongful termination or other disciplinary action will be precluded by the exclusive-remedy doctrine of the California Workers' Compensation Act,¹⁹ unless the employer's conduct exceeds the bounds of the employment relationship. Generally, even intentional misconduct may constitute a normal part of the employment relationship.²⁰ Moreover, even if no physical injury or disability is alleged, a claim for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress is within the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, so long as the basic conditions of compensation are otherwise satisfied and the employer's conduct neither contravenes a fundamental public policy nor exceeds the risks inherent in the employment relationship.²¹

For further discussion of civil actions based on intentional infliction of emotional distress, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 44.

For discussion of the exclusive remedy doctrine of the California Workers' Compensation Act, see Chapter 20.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of PrivacyTortsIntentional TortsInvasion of PrivacyGeneral OverviewTortsIntentional TortsInvasion of PrivacyPublic Disclosure of Private FactsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See [c], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See [d], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. Diaz v. Oakland Tribune, Inc. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 118, 126, 188 Cal. Rptr. 762 ; see also Prosser & Keeton, Law of Torts (5th ed. 1984), ch. 20, § 117; Restatement (Second) of Torts, § 652D.

(n4)Footnote 4. Diaz v. Oakland Tribune, Inc. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 118, 125, 188 Cal. Rptr. 762 (citing Melvin v. Reid (1931) 112 Cal. App. 285, 289, 297 P. 91).

(n5)Footnote 5. cf. Porten v. University of San Francisco (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 825, 828-829, 134 Cal. Rptr. 839 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See Hudson v. S.D. Warren Co. (D. Me. 1985) 608 F. Supp. 477, 480 .

(n7)Footnote 7. "False light" privacy actions are discussed in [b], below.

(n8)Footnote 8. Diaz v. Oakland Tribune, Inc. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 118, 126, 188 Cal. Rptr. 762 (citing Briscoe v. Reader's Digest Ass'n (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 529 ; Sidis v. F-R Pub. Corp. (2d Cir. 1940) 113 F.2d 806, 809) .

(n9)Footnote 9. Diaz v. Oakland Tribune, Inc. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 118, 126, 188 Cal. Rptr. 762 (quoting Nimmer, The Right to Speak from Times to Time: First Amendment Theory Applied to Libel and Misapplied to Privacy, 56 Cal. L. Rev. 935, 958-959 (1968)).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Werner v. Times-Mirror Co. (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 111, 120, 14 Cal. Rptr. 208 , disapproved on other grounds, Kapellas v. Kofman (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 20, 35 .

(n11)Footnote 11. O'Hilderbrandt v. Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc. (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 323, 334, 114 Cal. Rptr. 826 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Gill v. Curtis Publishing Co. (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 273, 280, 239 P.2d 630 .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Fellows v. National Enquirer, Inc. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 234, 248-249, 251, 228 Cal. Rptr. 215, 721 P.2d 97 (requiring proof of special damages under Civ. Code § 45a); Briscoe v. Reader's Digest Ass'n (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 529 (requiring compliance with Civ. Code § 48a concerning demand for retraction); Kapellas v. Kofman (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 20, 35, 81 Cal. Rptr. 360, 459 P.2d 912 (requiring compliance with Civ. Code § 48a concerning demand for retraction).

(n14)Footnote 14. See generally Civ. Code §§ 43, 44-48a.

(n15)Footnote 15. Civ. Code § 47(c); see Bierbower v. FHP, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1, 4, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 393 (discrepancy in office memo regarding date of alleged incident of sexual harassment is insufficient evidence of malice for purposes of avoiding common interest privilege under Civ. Code § 47(c)).

(n16)Footnote 16. See, e.g., Kelly v. General Tel. Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 278, 285, 186 Cal. Rptr. 184 ; Deaile v. General Tel. Co. of California (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 841, 845, 115 Cal. Rptr. 582 .

(n17)Footnote 17. Slaughter v. Friedman (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 149, 156, 185 Cal. Rptr. 244, 649 P.2d 886 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 946, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Lab. Code § 3602.

(n20)Footnote 20. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 752, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 ; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 . See, e.g., Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9-10, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 (plaintiff's emotional distress action was preempted by workers' compensation law, because workers' compensation is exclusive remedy for intentional infliction of emotional distress caused by employer's work-related conduct when that conduct does not contravene public policy).

48 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE
Subpart 2. Constitutional and Common-Law Protection

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.32

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.32 FORM--Complaint for Damages Against Employer for Invasion of Privacy by Disclosure of Private Information to Third Parties

[1] Comment

This form is for use by an employee to recover damages from an employer who has intruded on the employee's privacy by improperly disclosing private information about the employee to third parties. The complaint alleges the tort of invasion of privacy based on public disclosure of private facts. If appropriate, counsel may also add causes of action based on statutory violations, such as the complaint set forth in § 51.13[5] for violation of the Confidentiality of Medical Information Act. If the information disclosed is false or tends to put plaintiff in a false light, counsel should consider adding causes of action for defamation or false-light invasion of privacy. Counsel may also wish to consider adding a cause of action based on the state constitutional right of privacy.¹

[2] Form Complaint for Damages Against Employer for Invasion of Privacy by Disclosure of Private Information to Third Parties

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	No. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.32

_____, [name(s)],) (Invasion of Privacy) Defendant(s).)
)
)

Plaintiff alleges:

1. _____ [Allege capacity and residence of defendant, if venue allegation desired, e.g., Defendant is, and at all times material herein was, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California with its principal place of business in _____ (city), _____ (county)].
2. _____ [Allege capacity and residence of plaintiff, e.g., Plaintiff is a resident of the city of _____ (city), _____ (county)].
3. _____ [Allege facts concerning the employment relationship of plaintiff and defendant, e.g., Since on or about _____ (date), plaintiff has been employed by defendant in the capacity of _____ (job title or description)].
4. _____ [Allege the acquisition of private information about plaintiff by defendant, e.g., On or about _____ (date) and thereafter from time to time defendant came into possession of private medical information about plaintiff by reason of _____ (specify, e.g., periodic physical examinations)].
5. _____ [Allege plaintiff's interest in maintaining the confidentiality of the information, e.g., At all material times the information collected by defendant about plaintiff was private and confidential _____ (specify, e.g., including but not limited to information about medications plaintiff has from time to time used, counseling, a treatment plaintiff has from time to time received.) A reasonable person would have an interest in maintaining the confidentiality of such information].
6. _____ [Allege disclosure, e.g., On or about _____ (date), defendant publicly disclosed the private information described above in Paragraph 5 to persons having no need for such information or legitimate interest in knowing it].
7. _____ [Allege objectionable nature of disclosure, e.g., Said disclosure was objectionable and highly offensive to plaintiff, and would be to any reasonable person].
8. As a proximate result of defendant's conduct herein alleged, plaintiff was seriously injured in his/her health, strength and activity and sustained shock to his/her nervous system and person, all of which have caused, and continue to cause, plaintiff great mental, physical, and nervous pain and suffering. As a result of such injuries, plaintiff has suffered general damages _____ [in an amount according to proof or in the sum of $_____].
9. As a further result of defendant's conduct herein alleged, plaintiff has incurred [, and will continue to incur,] medical and related expenses _____ [in an amount according to proof or in the sum of $_____].
- [10. Defendant's conduct herein alleged was undertaken willfully, wantonly and maliciously to injure plaintiff, justifying an award of punitive damages in favor of plaintiff.] [Insert additional causes of action, including statutory causes of action, as appropriate.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays for judgment as follows:

1. For general damages for pain and suffering [in the sum of $_____];
2. For damages for past [and future] medical expenses [in the sum of $_____];
- [3. For punitive and/or exemplary damages;]
4. For costs of suit herein incurred; and
5. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Verification, if desired]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure
of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of PrivacyTortsIntentional TortsInvasion of PrivacyGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 1; see also discussion in § 51.20.

49 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees

Part B. RESTRICTIONS ON USE OF PRIVATE EMPLOYEE INFORMATION AND ON DISCLOSURE TO PERSONS OTHER THAN EMPLOYEE

Subpart 2. Constitutional and Common-Law Protection

3-51 California Employment Law §§ 51.33 through 51.39

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 51.33[Reserved]

50 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part C. BIBLIOGRAPHY

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.40

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.40 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender), Ch. 429, Privacy.

California Points and Authorities (Matthew Bender), Ch. 185, Privacy.

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Ch. 272, Privacy in the Workplace (Matthew Bender).

Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts (Matthew Bender), chs. 44-46.

Personal Injury: Actions, Defenses, Damages (Matthew Bender), Right of Privacy, §§ 1.06, 1.10.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure
of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of PrivacyTortsIntentional TortsInvasion of PrivacyGeneral Overview

51 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part C. BIBLIOGRAPHY

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.41

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.41 Encyclopedias

6 Cal. Jur. 3d, Assault and Other Wilful Torts, §§ 105-127.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure
of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of PrivacyTortsIntentional TortsInvasion of PrivacyGeneral Overview

52 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS
CHAPTER 51 Use and Disclosure of Private Information About Employees
Part C. BIBLIOGRAPHY

3-51 California Employment Law § 51.42

AUTHOR: By John M. True, III, J.D., Edward Baskauskas J.D.

§ 51.42 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

Behr, Privacy: To Be Or Not To Be, That Is The Question, 10 Pac. L.J. 663 (1979).

Freger and Kramer, 39th N.Y. Univ. Conf. on Labor, ch. 16, AIDS and the Workplace: Employment Law Issues (1986).

Prosser, Privacy, 48 Calif. L. Rev. 383 (1960).

Weinstein, Commercial Appropriation of Name or Likeness: Section 3344 and the Common Law, 52 L.A. Bar J. 430 (1977).

Young & Wells, Managing AIDS in the Workplace, 41(3) Prac. Law. 29 (1995).

Note, Publicity as an Aspect of Privacy and Personal Autonomy, 55 So. Cal. L. Rev. 727 (1982).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyDisclosure of Employee InformationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployee PrivacyInvasion of PrivacyTortsIntentional TortsInvasion of PrivacyGeneral Overview

53 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION V EMPLOYEE PRIVACY RIGHTS

Chapters 52 -- 59 RESERVED

3-52 - 59 California Employment Law Chapters 52 -- 59

RESERVED

Chapters 52 -- 59 RESERVED

54 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline

4-60 California Employment Law 60.syn

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.syn Synopsis to Chapter 60: Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline

§ 60.01 Employment At-Will, Generally

§ 60.02 Emergence of Exceptions to At-Will Doctrine

[1] Statutory Exceptions

[2] Judicial Exceptions

[a] Public Policy

[b] Breach of Contract

[c] Breach of Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

§ 60.03 Statutory Prohibitions and Limitations on Employer's Right to Terminate or Discipline Employees

[1] Generally

[2] California Statutes

[a] Accommodation for Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation (Labor Code Sections 1025-1028)

[b] Accommodation for Illiteracy (Labor Code Section 1040 et seq.)

[c] Disclosure of Arrest Records (Labor Code Section 432.7)

[d] Disclosure or Assignment of Inventions as Condition of Employment (Labor Code Sections 2870 and 2871)

- [e] Discrimination in Violation of the Fair Employment and Housing Act (Government Code Sections 12900 et seq.)
- [f] [Reserved]
- [g] Discrimination Against Employee for Filing Claim With Labor Commissioner (Labor Code Sections 98.6, 98.7)
- [h] Discrimination Against Employee for Seeking Unemployment Insurance Information (Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1237)
- [i] Discrimination Against Injured Workers (Labor Code Section 132a)
- [i.1] Domestic Violence or Sexual Assault Victims (Labor Code Section 230.1)
- [j] Elections Officer (Elections Code Section 12312)
- [k] Fingerprints or Photographs for Improper Purpose (Labor Code Sections 1051, 1052, 1054)
- [l] Garnishment or Assignment of Wages (Labor Code Section 2929(b); Family Code Section 5290)
- [m] Health Care Workers (Health and Safety Code Section 123420(a); Penal Code Section 11161.8; Government Code Section 12940(g))
- [n] Jurors and Witnesses (Labor Code Section 230)
- [o] Labor Organization Affiliation (Labor Code Sections 921, 923)
- [p] Medical Information Disclosure (Civil Code Sections 56.10(a) et seq.)
- [q] Military Duty (Military and Veterans Code Section 394)
- [r] Political Affiliation (Labor Code Sections 1101-1102)
- [s] Polygraph Examinations (Labor Code Section 432.2)
- [t] Refusal to Patronize Employer (Labor Code Section 450)
- [t.1] Relocations, Terminations, and Mass Layoffs (Labor Code Section 1400 et seq.)
- [u] Safety of Employees (Labor Code Sections 6300 et seq.)
- [v] School Visit by Parent (Labor Code Section 230.8)
- [w] Shopping Investigations (Labor Code Section 2930)
- [x] Voice Stress Analysis (Penal Code Section 637.3)
- [y] Volunteer Firefighters, Reserve Peace Officers, Emergency Rescue Personnel (Labor Code Section 230.3)
- [z] Wage Amount Disclosure by Employees (Labor Code Section 232)

[z.1] Disclosure of Working Conditions (Labor Code Section 232.5)

[aa] Whistleblowing Activities

[i] Generally (Labor Code Section 1102.5)

[ii] False Claims Against Public Entity (Government Code Section 12653)

[iii] Reporting of Improper Governmental Activities (Government Code Section 8547)

[iv] Child Day Care Facilities Act Violations

[bb] Parental Attendance at School of Suspended or Disciplined Child (Education Code Section 48900.1; Labor Code Section 230.7)

[cc] Health Insurance Coverage Assignments (Family Code Section 3769)

[dd] Displaced Janitor Opportunity Act (Labor Code Section 1060 et seq.)

[ee] Public Transit Service Contracts (Labor Code Section 1070 et seq.)

[3] Federal Statutes

[a] Age Discrimination in Employment Act (Title 29 United States Code, Sections 621-634)

[b] Americans With Disabilities Act (Title 42 United States Code Section 12101 et seq.)

[c] Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1871 (Title 42 United States Code, Sections 1981 and 1983)

[d] Mine Safety and Health Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 30 United States Code, Section 815(c))

[e] Consumer Credit Protection Act Provision Regarding Wage Garnishment (Title 15 United States Code, Section 1674)

[f] Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988 (Title 29, United States Code, Section 2001 et seq.)

[g] Employee Retirement Income Security Act Provision Prohibiting Discharge to Avoid Payment of Benefits (Title 29 of United States Code, Section 1140)

[h] Environmental Statutes With Employee Protection Provisions

[i] Air Pollution Prevention and Control Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 42 United States Code, Section 7622)

[ii] Energy Reorganization Act of 1974 Provision Protecting Employees (Title 42 United States Code, Section 5851)

[iii] Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (Superfund Act) Provision Protecting Employees (Title 42 United States Code, Section 9610)

[iv] Safe Drinking Water Act Employee Protection Provision (Title 42 United States Code, Section 300j-9)

- [v] Solid Waste Disposal Act Employee Protection Provision (Title 42 United States Code, Section 6971)
- [vi] Toxic Substances Control Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 15 United States Code, Section 2622)
- [vii] Water Pollution Control Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 33 United States Code, Section 1367)
- [i] Fair Labor Standards Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 29 United States Code, Section 215(a)(3))
- [j] Immigration Reform and Control Act (Title 8 United States Code, Section 1324b)
- [k] Jury System Improvement Act of 1978 Employee Protection Provision (Title 28 United States Code, Section 1875)
- [l] National Labor Relations Act (Title 29 United States Code, Section 158)
- [m] Occupational Safety and Health Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 29 United States Code, Section 660(c))
- [n] Amtrak Reform and Accountability Act of 1997 (Title 49 United States Code, Section 20101)
- [o] Railway Labor Act--Provision Protecting Employees (Title 45 United States Code, Section 152)
- [p] Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Title 29 United States Code, Sections 701-796(i))
- [q] Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title 42 United States Code Sections 2000e et seq.)
- [r] Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994 (Title 38, United States Code, Section 4301 et seq.)
- [s] Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act (Title 29 United States Code, Sections 2101 et seq.)
- [t] Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) (Title 29 United States Code, Section 2101 et seq.)
- [u] Federal Airline Deregulation Act's Whistleblower Protection Program
- [4] Local Ordinances
 - § 60.04 Violation of Public Policy
- [1] Public Policy Limitations on Discharge
 - [a] Elements of Cause of Action
 - [b] Generally
- [2] Sources of Public Policy
 - [a] Legislative or Constitutional Basis Required

[b] Termination Must Affect Duty That Inures to Benefit of Public at Large

[c] Policy Must Be Fundamental and Substantial

[d] Policy Must Be Applicable to Defendant

[e] Statutes Explicitly Prohibiting Termination or Discipline

[f] Statutes Not Explicitly Prohibiting Termination or Discipline

[g] Constitutional Bases for Public Policy

[h] Required Showing of Statutory Violation

[i] Special Rules Applied to Attorney Employees

[3] Subsequent Employer's Retaliation for Protected Activities in Previous Job

[4] Actions Against Public Entities

[5] Actions Against Individuals

§ 60.05 Breach of Express or Implied-in-Fact Promise Not to Terminate Except for Cause

[1] Contractual Limitations on Discharge

[a] Elements of a Cause of Action

[b] Generally

[c] Factors Creating an Implied Agreement

[d] The Good Cause Requirement

[2] Effect of Written Employment Contracts, Handbooks, Policies, and Other Writings

[a] Writings May Be Relevant to At Will Issue

[b] Written Employment Contracts

[c] Personnel Manuals and Policies

[d] Employment Applications

[e] Other Writings

§ 60.06 Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

[1] Generally

[2] Elements

§ 60.06A Retaliatory Discharge

§ 60.07 Employer Actions Short of Actual Discharge

[1] Constructive Discharge

[a] Constructive Discharge Has Legal Effect of Employer Termination of Employment

[b] Elements Required to Establish Constructive Discharge

[i] Employee's Burden of Proof

[ii] Intolerable Conditions

[iii] Intolerability Determined by Objective Standard

[iv] Employer Knowledge or Intent Required

[v] Effect of Delay Before Resignation

[2] Wrongful Discipline and Demotion

[3] Salary Reductions

§ 60.08 Remedies in Wrongful Discharge Action

[1] Introduction

[2] Tort Action

[a] General Damages

[b] Special Damages

[i] Wages and Benefits

[ii] Future Earnings

[iii] Prejudgment Interest

[c] Punitive Damages

[3] Contract Action

[a] Wages and Benefits

[b] Future Earnings

[c] Reliance Damages

[d] Prejudgment Interest

[4] Mitigation of Damages and Deduction of Collateral Compensation

[5] Equitable Remedies

§ 60.09 Defenses to Wrongful Discharge Action

[1] Preemption by Statutory Remedy

[a] Generally

[b] Banking Laws

[c] Federal Labor Law

[i] National Labor Relations Act

[ii] Labor Management Relations Act Section 301

[iii] Railway Labor Act

[iv] Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act

[d] Pension Benefits

[e] California Workers' Compensation Law

[f] Discrimination Claims

[g] Nuclear Industry Regulatory Laws

[h] Federal Immigration Laws

[2] Statute of Frauds

[3] Parol Evidence Rule

[4] Statute of Limitations

[5] Termination for Cause

[a] Order and Burden of Proof

[b] What Constitutes "Good Cause"

[6] No Employment Relationship

- [7] At-Will Employment of Corporate Officers
- [8] Arbitration Agreements
- [9] Effect of After-Acquired Evidence Justifying Termination
- [10] Effect of Bankruptcy Proceedings
- [11] Issue Precluded by Prior Administrative Proceeding
- [12] Failure to Exhaust Internal Grievance Procedures
 - § 60.10 Potential Counter-Claims Against Employee
 - § 60.11 Unclean Hands
 - §§ 60.12 through 60.19 [Reserved]
 - § 60.20 Legal Texts
 - § 60.21 [Reserved]
 - § 60.22 Legal Periodicals

By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.^{n*}

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Ms. Maulitz practices in the Law Offices of Marilyn Mac Rae in Oakland, California, specializing in wrongful termination and employment discrimination law.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

55 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline

4-60 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

Scope

By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.n* SCOPE

This chapter provides an overview of wrongful termination law in California. It describes the employment at-will doctrine and discusses the exceptions to the at-will rule. The chapter examines the numerous state and federal statutes that provide protection to the employee against termination or other discrimination by the employer. It also discusses the three judicially developed exceptions to the at-will rule termination in violation of public policy, breach of an implied or express contract not to terminate except for good cause, and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and the applicability of principles of wrongful termination to disciplinary actions by the employer that fall short of actual termination. Finally, the chapter describes the remedies available to the plaintiff in a wrongful termination action, and covers the defenses that may be raised by the defendant.

For discussion of bringing and defending wrongful termination and discipline actions, see Chapter 61. Procedures and practices for avoiding claims of wrongful termination and discipline are discussed in Chapter 62. Related causes of action are covered in Chapter 63. For more detailed discussion of certain specific statutes relating to wrongful termination, see Chapter 5 (wage and hour remedies) and Chapters 40- 44 (equal employment opportunity laws).

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Ms. Maulitz practices in the Law Offices of Marilyn Mac Rae in Oakland, California, specializing in wrongful termination and employment discrimination law.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

56 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.01

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.01 Employment At-Will, Generally

In California, the at will rule is codified in Labor Code Section 2922, which reads in pertinent part: "An employment, having no specified term, may be terminated at the will of either party on notice to the other." Based on this provision, an at will employment relationship is presumed if there is no oral or written agreement specifying the length of employment or the grounds for termination.ⁿ¹

The at will rule found initial broad acceptance. Early interpretations of the at will doctrine in California included the holding that employment represented as "permanent" was, in fact, employment for an indefinite period, and thus employment at will.ⁿ² In a much-quoted passage, the early decision of Union Labor Hosp. v. Vance Lumber Co.,ⁿ³ emphasized freedom of contract and mutuality of obligation and the absolute right of the employer to discharge an employee at his or her discretion:

[I]t is the unquestioned right of the employee to leave the employment at his pleasure, and it is equally the right of the employer to discharge at his pleasure Precisely as may the employee cease labor at his whim or pleasure ... so, upon the other hand, may the employer discharge, and, whatever be his reason, good, bad, or indifferent, no one has suffered a legal wrong.ⁿ⁴

The unfettered right of the employer to discharge an employee without cause was reaffirmed in more recent cases. In DeGonia v. Building Material Dump Truck Drivers Local Union 420,ⁿ⁵ discharged employees sued their union and employers, alleging that they were pretextually fired in order to obtain new membership fees for the employees' union. The court held that no cause of action was stated against either defendant and quoted the above language from Union Labor Hosp. with approval.ⁿ⁶ In Mallard v. Boring,ⁿ⁷ an appellate court again cited with approval the Union Labor Hosp. opinion in denying a cause of action for wrongful discharge to an employee who allegedly was terminated for agreeing to serve on jury duty. In dicta, however, the court reprimanded the defendant for its "reprehensible" conduct.ⁿ⁸ In Marin v. Jacuzzi,ⁿ⁹ an employee who alleged he was fired for reporting his employer's violations of securities laws to appropriate state officials was also denied a cause of action. The court held that under an at will contract, the employer has an absolute privilege to discharge an employee at any time with or without cause, and this privilege is not affected by "the presence of ill will or improper motive." Under present law, the employer's action in Marin would be prohibited by Lab. Code § 1102.5.ⁿ¹⁰

The at will doctrine continues to define employment relationships in many circumstances. However, Congress, the California Legislature, and the courts have now imposed substantial limitations on an employer's prerogative to discharge or discipline employees at will. It is these exceptions to the at will rule that make up the bulk of wrongful termination law in California today. For discussion of exceptions to the at will doctrine, see § 60.09.

It is important to note that the "at will" rule does not apply until an employment relationship has been created. Thus, an employer cannot defend a breach of contract claim by a prospective employee by demonstrating that employment would have been "at will." In Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co.,ⁿ¹¹ the express terms of an oral offer provided that if the plaintiff satisfied certain conditions, the defendant would assign him "work and salary." This offer, together with an integrated employment application stating that employment would be "at will," constituted an employment contract. However, the defendant breached its agreement with the plaintiff because it never assigned him work and a salary after he satisfied the conditions set forth in the defendant's oral offer. Thus, "the parties never reached the point in time when the [application] would begin to govern termination of the relationship."ⁿ¹²

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

The analysis in any suit alleging wrongful termination or discrimination requires determination of whether one of the exceptions to the presumption of "at will" employment applies. Regardless of the unfairness of the discharge, unless the case can be pleaded and supported by proof of liability within the framework of one of the statutory and/or judicially created exceptions, the plaintiff will be unsuccessful in asserting such a claim.ⁿ¹³

Care should be taken to be sure that each of the elements of at least one of the applicable exceptions to Labor Code Section 2922 are present. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Employment Relationships
At-Will Employment
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Wrongful Termination
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675-677, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 . For the standard jury instruction on the at-will presumption, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2400 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lord v. Goldberg (1889) 81 Cal. 596, 601 602, 22 P. 1126 ; see also Corp. Code § 312(b), with similar at will employment rule for corporate officers. For discussion, see § 60.09[7].

(n3)Footnote 3. Union Labor Hospital Asso. v. Vance Redwood Lumber Co. (1910) 158 Cal. 551, 112 P. 886 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Union Labor Hospital Asso. v. Vance Redwood Lumber Co. (1910) 158 Cal. 551, 554, 112 P. 886 .

(n5)Footnote 5. DeGonia v. Building Material etc. Union (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 573, 583 584, 318 P.2d 486 .

(n6)Footnote 6. DeGonia v. Building Material etc. Union (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 573, 583 584, 318 P.2d 486 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Mallard v. Boring (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 390, 394, 396, 6 Cal. Rptr. 171 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Mallard v. Boring (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 390, 394, 396, 6 Cal. Rptr. 171 . For discussion of the statute that would now protect an employee called to jury duty, see § 60.03[2][n].

(n9)Footnote 9. Marin v. Jacuzzi (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 549, 553, 36 Cal. Rptr. 880 .

(n10)Footnote 10. For discussion of this statute, see § 60.03[2][aa][i].

(n11)Footnote 11. Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1264 .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1264, 1270 (emphasis omitted).

(n13)Footnote 13. See, e.g., Burton v. Security Pacific National Bank (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 972, 977, 243 Cal. Rptr. 277 .

57 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline

Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.02

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.02 Emergence of Exceptions to At-Will Doctrine

[1] Statutory Exceptions

The limited applicability of the at will rule today is most apparent in the large volume of state and federal legislation restricting the employer's right to terminate or otherwise discipline or discriminate against its employees. The statutory scheme enacted in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries providing civil service protection to federal employees was the earliest legislation of this type.ⁿ¹ With the rise of labor unions in the early twentieth century came the next wave of federal legislation protecting concerted activity and collective bargaining.ⁿ²

The broadest and best-known federal legislation prohibiting discrimination in employment came about in 1964 with the enactment of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act,ⁿ³ but there are several other federal anti-discrimination laws as well.ⁿ⁴

For discussion of specific federal statutes limiting an employer's right to discharge or discipline employees, see § 60.03[3].

The California Legislature has also enacted significant legislation protecting employees. The Fair Employment and Housing Actⁿ⁵ prohibits discrimination on the same bases as Title VII and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, as well as other bases, but sometimes provides broader remedies in civil actions.ⁿ⁶ Other California statutes forbid termination for a wide variety of protected activities, including service as an election officer,ⁿ⁷ service as a juror or witness,ⁿ⁸ appearance in court to obtain relief as a victim of domestic violence or sexual assault,ⁿ⁹ political affiliation,ⁿ¹⁰ "whistleblowing,"ⁿ¹¹ and exercise of one's statutory rights to initiate proceedings or testify under certain statutory schemes, such as the Occupational Safety and Health Act.ⁿ¹²

For discussion of specific state statutes limiting an employer's right to discharge or discipline employees, see § 60.03[2].

Some of these statutory schemes have been held to preempt certain common law causes of action. The National Labor Relations Act, for example, preempts certain common law wrongful discharge actions brought by employees covered by collective bargaining agreements.ⁿ¹³

For discussion of statutory preemption of wrongful termination actions, see § 60.09.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

If the basis for a public policy claim is a statute, care should be taken to review cases discussing the issues of whether the statute is considered the exclusive remedy, and whether it would be considered cumulative or in addition to a pre-existing common law remedy.ⁿ¹⁴

If the statute provides the exclusive remedy, a claim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing may nevertheless be available based on factors independent from the breach of the statute (such as breach of the employer's policies regarding discharge).ⁿ¹⁵ Commentary by William M. Crosby.

[2] Judicial Exceptions

In addition to the numerous statutory limitations on the at will rule, three broad exceptions to the rule have developed in the courts of California: wrongful termination in violation of public policy, breach of express or implied contract, and breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

[a] Public Policy

The first court-developed theory, wrongful termination in violation of public policy, was initially defined in detail by the California Supreme Court in Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. ⁿ¹⁶

Later, in Foley v. Interactive Data Corp., ⁿ¹⁷ Gantt v. Sentry Insurance,ⁿ¹⁸ and Green v. Ralee Engineering Co.,ⁿ¹⁹ the Court expanded on the characteristics that a public policy must possess to serve as the basis for a Tameny claim. For full discussion of the public policy exception, see § 60.04.

[b] Breach of Contract

The second theory, based in contract law, provides that an employee may not be terminated without cause if the employer has represented by written or oral agreement, or by its conduct, that the employee would be terminated only for cause. The seminal case under this theory is Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc.,ⁿ²⁰ which held that such a contract may be implied from a variety of circumstances. For a full discussion of the contract theory of wrongful discharge, see § 60.05.

[c] Breach of Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

The third judicial exception to the at will rule is breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Although the California Supreme Court has held that every contract contains such a covenant,ⁿ²¹ the Court has also stated that the damages available for breach of the covenant are not the same for all types of contractual relationships. In Foley v. Interactive Data Corp., ⁿ²² the Court held that a plaintiff who alleges breach of the covenant in connection with an employment contract may recover contract damages only. For further discussion of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing exception to the at will rule, see § 60.06.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships At-Will Employment General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships At-Will Employment Exceptions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Pendleton Act, 5 U.S.C. § 1502(a)(2); Lloyd-LaFollette Act, 5 U.S.C. § 7513.

(n2)Footnote 2. Norris-LaGuardia Act, 29 U.S.C. § 101 et seq.; National Labor Relations Act, 29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq. For detailed discussion of anti-discrimination laws, see chs. 40 and 41.

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1871, 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1983; Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, 29 U.S.C. §§ 621-634; Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C. §§ 701-796i. For detailed discussion of anti-discrimination laws, see chs. 40 and 41.

(n5)Footnote 5. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq. For detailed discussion, see chs. 40 and 41.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Commodore Home Sys., Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 213, 216, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Elec. Code § 12312.

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 230(a), (b).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 230(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code §§ 1101, 1102.

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 1102.5.

(n12)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 6310.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Frisroe v. Reynolds Metals Co. (9th Cir. 1980) 615 F.2d 1209, 1214 ; but see Garibaldi v. Lucky Food Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1367, 1373-1375 (common law cause of action for discharge in violation of public policy is not preempted by federal labor law); see also Lingle v. Norge Division, Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410, 423 (discussing scope of federal preemption under Labor Management Relations Act).

(n14)Footnote 14. See, e.g., Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 109-110, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 (agreeing with Hentzel v. Singer Co. that Lab. Code § 6312 does not constitute exclusive remedy for action brought pursuant to Lab. Code § 6310, but rather is cumulative, and finding plaintiff could state cause of action for tortious discharge based on violation of Lab. Code § 6310); Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 303-304, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 .

(n17)Footnote 17. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 665-671, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations may be source of fundamental public policy).

(n19)Footnote 19. Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 75-80, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n20)Footnote 20. Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 327, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; see also Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 676-681, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Seaman's Direct Buying Serv., Inc. v. Standard Oil Co. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 752, 768, 206 Cal. Rptr. 354, 686 P.2d 1158 , overruled on other grounds, Freeman & Mills, Inc. v. Belcher Oil Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 85, 88, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 420, 900 P.2d 669 .

(n22)Footnote 22. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 663, 700, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

58 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.03

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.03 Statutory Prohibitions and Limitations on Employer's Right to Terminate or Discipline Employees

[1] Generally

There are numerous California and federal statutes that limit employers' rights to discipline, terminate, or discriminate against employees under various circumstances. These statutes are enumerated in subsections [2] (state statutes) and [3] (federal statutes), below. Some, but not all, of these statutes contain remedial provisions. Whether or not a violation of a statute may constitute a basis for a common law tort claim will depend on the particular statutory provision involved and the common law theory advanced. In some cases, the statutory remedy will be regarded as the exclusive remedy, and will thus preempt a common law action. For a discussion of preemption of common law causes of action by specific statutory schemes, see § 60.09[1].

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

There is no substitute for a general familiarity with the state and federal statutory restrictions on employee discharge. Evidence of an employer's good faith and fair dealing, no matter how extensive, will not necessarily provide a defense to a discharge that otherwise contravenes a statutory expression of "public policy." Furthermore, the number of statutes that proscribe an employer's discretion to discharge increases each year. Therefore, employers are advised to consult a personnel professional or counsel in connection with their discharge decisions to ensure that no statute exists that bears upon the discharge decision in question. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

It will rarely be economical to pursue a claim for statutory violation unless it is joined with a common law or statutory discrimination claim giving rise to tort damages. Pleading additional counts of statutory violations may, however, tend to support the plaintiff's goal of establishing a pattern of wrongful conduct on the part of the employer. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

[2] California Statutes

[a] Accommodation for Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation (Labor Code Sections 1025-1028)

Labor Code Section 1025 provides that any private employer regularly employing 25 or more employees must "reasonably accommodate" any employee who wishes to enter an alcohol or drug rehabilitation program, as long as such accommodation does not impose any "undue hardship" on the employer. Labor Code Section 1026 requires the employer to make reasonable efforts to protect the employee's privacy regarding his or her enrollment in such a program. If an employee's rights under Section 1025 are violated, he or she may file a complaint with the Labor Commissioner.ⁿ¹

Section 1025 does not require an employer to hire or to continue employing an employee who is unable to properly perform his or her duties or cannot perform the duties without endangering the health and safety of the employee or others because of alcohol or drug abuse.ⁿ²

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

In Sullivan v. Delta Airlines ⁿ³ the First District Court of Appeal held that Labor Code Section 1025 does not articulate a public policy concerning discrimination against a person suffering from alcoholism.ⁿ⁴ Thus, the plaintiff's practitioner should take care to proceed under the statute's terms alone and not use it as an articulation of public policy. Commentary by John M. True, III.

For discussion of the privacy aspects of the Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation Act, see Chapters 50, Part C, and 51, Part B.

[b] Accommodation for Illiteracy (Labor Code Section 1040 et seq.)

The Employee Literacy Education Assistance Act requires private employers who regularly employ 25 or more employees to reasonably accommodate and assist any employee who reveals a problem of illiteracy and requests employer assistance in enrolling in an adult literacy education program, provided that the reasonable accommodation does not impose an undue hardship on the employer.ⁿ⁵

"Employer assistance" includes, but is not limited to, providing the employee with the locations of local literacy education programs or arranging for a literacy education provider to visit the jobsite.ⁿ⁶

The employer must make reasonable efforts to safeguard the privacy of the employee as to the fact that he or she has a problem with illiteracy.ⁿ⁷ An employer is expressly not required to provide time off with pay for an employee to enroll and participate in an adult illiteracy program.ⁿ⁸ An employee who reveals a problem of illiteracy and who satisfactorily performs his or her work may not be subject to termination of employment because of the disclosure of illiteracy.ⁿ⁹

[c] Disclosure of Arrest Records (Labor Code Section 432.7)

Labor Code Section 432.7(a) makes it unlawful for any employer to obtain or seek from any source or to use either information concerning an arrest or detention that did not result in conviction, or information about participation in a pretrial or posttrial diversion program.ⁿ¹⁰

It also prohibits the employer from using such information as a factor in determining any condition of employment, including, among other things, termination.ⁿ¹¹ In Faria v. San Jacinto Unified School District ⁿ¹² a California court of appeal read Labor Code Section 432.7(a) broadly to extend the statute's protections to employees.

There are certain limited exceptions to the proscriptions of Section 432.7(a). For example, persons employed or applying for employment as peace officers are exempted from its protections.ⁿ¹³

Further, a health care facility employer is specifically permitted to ask an applicant for a position involving regular access to patients about any arrest under the sex offender statutes,ⁿ¹⁴ and to ask an applicant for a position with access to drugs about any drug-related arrest.ⁿ¹⁵ In addition, an employer may ask an employee or applicant about an arrest for which the employee is out on bail or on his or her own recognizance pending trial.ⁿ¹⁶

However, the employer may not use the information about such arrests in making an employment decision.ⁿ¹⁷

When an employer violates Labor Code Section 432.7, the applicant may sue for actual damages or $200, whichever is greater (or, in the case of an intentional violation, treble the damages or $500), plus costs and attorney's fees.ⁿ¹⁸ An intentional violation is also a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not to exceed $500.ⁿ¹⁹ These remedies are cumulative to those otherwise provided by law.ⁿ²⁰ However, an employee who sues for violation of this statute is limited to his or her actual damages and is not entitled to treble damages or attorney's fees.ⁿ²¹

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Faria ⁿ²² provides mixed news for employees and employers. The plaintiff sought damages for his demotion from assistant principal to teacher and prevailed at the trial court on two separate theories of recovery. First, he prevailed on a non-jury count based upon an allegation that the school district had provided untimely notice of his reassignment. For this count, the trial court awarded him actual damages of $17,766, the difference between his salary as assistant principal and his salary as a teacher for one school year. Second, he recovered on a jury count under Labor Code Section 432.7 based upon an allegation that the school district had used an arrest record as factor in its demotion decision. For this count, a jury awarded him more than $250,000 in "actual" damages. The trial court reduced that total to $213,192 a sum precisely 12 times the one-year pay differential of $17,766. The trial court also tripled the award and granted attorneys' fees under the terms of the statute.

The appellate panel eliminated the multiplier and the award of attorneys' fees, but allowed the "actual" damages of $213,192 to stand. It did so on two grounds. First, the remedial clause of section 432.7 expressly indicates that its provisions pertain only to applicants. Thus, the plaintiff an employee was ineligible for any statutory recovery. Second, proceeding on the notion that for every wrong, there must be a remedy, the appellate panel created a private right of action for employees under the section.

In short, Faria has construed a statute that practitioners apply most often in the context of applicants for employment as providing significant rights for employees. Faria also has opened the remedies available to employees to include any damages awarded at common law presumably, back pay, front pay, interest, damages for emotional distress, and punitive damages. While employment law practitioners have known for many years not to use arrest records for any employment-related purpose (except as authorized by statute), Faria adds good reason to be vigilant for any lapses in that prohibition. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Labor Code Section 432.7 also prohibits law enforcement personnel from disseminating arrest record information, with the intent to affect a person's employment, to anyone not authorized to receive it.ⁿ²³

For discussion of the privacy implications of Labor Code Section 432.7, see Chapter 50, Part B.

[d] Disclosure or Assignment of Inventions as Condition of Employment (Labor Code Sections 2870 and 2871)

Under Labor Code Section 2870, any provision in an employment agreement that requires an employee to assign his or her rights in an invention to his or her employer is unenforceable if the employee developed the invention on his or her own time, without use of the employer's facilities, equipment, supplies, or trade secret information. Such an agreement is not void, however, if (1) the invention relates to the employer's business, or (2) the invention results from work performed for the employer. Labor Code Section 2871 prohibits an employer from requiring a provision made unenforceable by Labor Code Section 2870 as a condition of employment or continued employment. Thus, an employer can neither refuse to hire nor terminate an employee for refusing to enter into such an agreement. However, the statute provides no specific remedies for violation of its provisions. These statutes do not hinder the employer's right to require confidential disclosure of all the employee's inventions during the term of his or her employment.ⁿ²⁴

For further discussion of the rights of employees and employers to inventions developed as part of the employment, see Chapter 70.

[e] Discrimination in Violation of the Fair Employment and Housing Act (Government Code Sections 12900 et seq.)

The Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)ⁿ²⁵ prohibits discrimination based on race, religious creed, color, national origin, marital status, medical condition, physical and mental disability, sex, age, or sexual orientation,ⁿ²⁶ pregnancy,ⁿ²⁷ or taking family care leave.ⁿ²⁸

The FEHA requires exhaustion of its administrative remedies prior to pursuing a FEHA civil action. The administrative procedures include a one-year period after the act of discrimination during which one may file an administrative complaintⁿ²⁹ and a one-year period after receipt of the right-to-sue letter during which one may file a civil suit.ⁿ³⁰

Remedies in court actions include compensatory and punitive damages and attorneys' fees as well as back pay and injunctive relief.ⁿ³¹

The FEHA does not preempt other state laws, including the common law, that prohibit or restrict employment discrimination.ⁿ³²

For further discussion, see § 60.09[1][e].

For full discussion of equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapters 40- 44.

[f] [Reserved]

[g] Discrimination Against Employee for Filing Claim With Labor Commissioner (Labor Code Sections 98.6, 98.7)

Labor Code Section 98.6 prohibits discharge or any other form of discrimination against an employee because he or she has filed a bona fide complaint or instituted any proceeding with the Labor Commissioner, or has testified or will testify in any such proceeding.ⁿ³³ It includes conduct under Labor Code Section 96(k), which allows the Labor Commissioner to take assignments of claims for loss of wages as the result of demotion, suspension, or discharge from employment for lawful conduct occurring during nonworking hours away from the employer's premises.^{n33.1}

Reinstatement and reimbursement of lost wages and benefits are remedies for a violation of the statute.ⁿ³⁴ It is also a misdemeanor for the employer to refuse to so remedy a violation on a finding of entitlement for the employee.ⁿ³⁵

Section 98.6, however, does not adequately support a public policy against a private employer's termination of an employee for the employee's lawful conduct, otherwise unprotected by the Labor Code, occurring during nonworking hours away from the employer's premises.^{n35.1} In Grinzi v. San Diego Hospice Corp.,^{n35.2} the discharged employee sought to base a cause of action for public policy wrongful termination (allegedly resulting from her participation in an investment group during nonworking hours) on Labor Code Sections 98.6 and 96(k), which allows the Labor

Commissioner to take assignments of claims for loss of wages as the result of demotion, suspension, or discharge from employment for lawful conduct occurring during nonworking hours away from the employer's premises. The court held that, to successfully establish a tortious discharge claim under Section 96(k) as included in Section 98.6, the employee had to allege her discharge occurred because she asserted a recognized constitutional right. However, the First Amendment speech guarantees she alleged were only recognized against government interference, and her former employer was a private entity. Consequently, she was not terminated for exercising a recognized constitutional right as described in Section 96(k) as proscribed by Section 98.6. Further, although Section 98.6 prohibits termination because of the exercise by the employee on behalf of himself, herself, or others of "any rights" afforded him or her, the Legislature intended the phrase "any rights" to refer to rights otherwise protected by the Labor Code. The discharged employee in this case did not allege her termination occurred because she exercised a right protected by the Labor Code.

Labor Code Section 98.7 provides that an employee may file a complaint with the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) within six months after an alleged violation of Section 98.6.ⁿ³⁶ The six-month period may be extended for good cause.ⁿ³⁷ The employee may file concurrently during the same time period with the United States Department of Labor.ⁿ³⁸ On the filing of a complaint, the DLSE undertakes an investigation of the complaint, and the Labor Commissioner makes a determination within 60 days.ⁿ³⁹ If the Commissioner dismisses the complaint, the employee may file a civil action.ⁿ⁴⁰

The rights and remedies provided by Labor Code Section 98.7 are not exclusive.ⁿ⁴¹

[h] Discrimination Against Employee for Seeking Unemployment Insurance Information (Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1237)

Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1237 prohibits any business entity from discharging or otherwise discriminating against any person because such individual has (1) sought information from the Employment Development Department concerning his or her rights under either the Unemployment Insurance Code or the Labor Code, (2) has cooperated with any investigation undertaken by the department, or (3) has testified or is about to testify in any proceeding under the Unemployment Insurance Code or Labor Code.ⁿ⁴² An employee who believes that his or her rights under this provision have been violated may file a complaint with the Labor Commissioner.ⁿ⁴³

The rights, remedies, and procedures applicable to the complaint are the same as for a violation of Labor Code Section 98.6.ⁿ⁴⁴

For full discussion of the Unemployment Insurance Code, see Chapter 80.

[i] Discrimination Against Injured Workers (Labor Code Section 132a)

Labor Code Section 132a prohibits discrimination against any employee, including discharge or threats to discharge, because the employee has (1) filed or plans to file a worker's compensation claim, (2) received a rating, award, or settlement, or (3) testified or will testify in another employee's proceedings. An employer who violates Section 132a is guilty of a misdemeanor. In addition, an employee who establishes a violation of Section 132a is entitled not only to reinstatement and reimbursement of lost wages, but to an increase of his or her workers' compensation benefits of up to one-half (but not to exceed $10,000), plus costs and expenses not exceeding $250.ⁿ⁴⁵

These penalties apply to any insurance carrier that influences its insured to take such discriminatory actions, as well as to the employer.ⁿ⁴⁶ An employee damaged under Labor Code Section 132a must institute proceedings before the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board within one year of the discriminatory act or date of termination of the employee.ⁿ⁴⁷

Because the preface to Labor Code Section 132a states a public policy prohibiting discrimination against injured workers, the statute has been interpreted broadly to prohibit discriminatory conduct not specifically enumerated in its provisions.ⁿ⁴⁸ Furthermore, the statute is not the exclusive remedy for persons discharged in violation of its provisions: remedies under Government Code Section 12940(a) and common law remedies are available to employees for discrimination based on a disability created by a workplace injury.ⁿ⁴⁹

For further discussion of discrimination based on work-related injuries, see Chapter 20.

[i.1] Domestic Violence or Sexual Assault Victims (Labor Code Section 230.1)

An employer with 25 or more employees may not discharge or in any manner discriminate or retaliate against an employee who is a victim of domestic violence^{n49.1} or sexual assault^{n49.2} for taking time off from work to attend to any of the following:^{n49.3}

1. To seek medical attention for injuries caused by domestic violence or sexual assault;
2. To obtain services from a domestic violence shelter, program, or rape crisis center as a result of domestic violence or sexual assault;
3. To obtain psychological counseling related to an experience of domestic violence or sexual assault;
4. To participate in safety planning and take other actions to increase safety from future domestic violence or sexual assault, including temporary or permanent relocation.

For these absences, an employee may use vacation, personal leave, or compensatory time off otherwise available under the terms of employment or under a collective bargaining agreement. The employee's entitlement to be absent for these purposes cannot be diminished by a collective bargaining agreement term or condition.^{n49.4} However, Labor Code section 230.1 does not create a right for an employee to take unpaid leave that exceeds the unpaid leave time allowed under, or in addition to the unpaid leave time permitted by, the federal Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 [29 U.S.C. § 2606 et seq.].^{n49.5}

As a condition of taking time off for one of these purposes, the employee must give the employer reasonable advance notice of the employee's intention to take time off, unless the advance notice is not feasible.^{n49.6} When an unscheduled absence occurs, the employer must not take any action against the employee if the employee, within a reasonable time after the absence, provides a certification to the employer. Certification is sufficient in the form specified in Labor Code section 230.1.^{n49.7} To the extent allowed by law, an employer must maintain the confidentiality of any employee requesting leave under Labor Code section 230.1(a).^{n49.8}

An employee who is discharged, threatened with discharge, demoted, suspended, or in any other manner discriminated or retaliated against in the terms and conditions of employment for an absence authorized by this statute, is entitled to reinstatement and reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits caused by the employer's acts. An employer who willfully refuses to rehire, promote, or otherwise restore an employee or former employee determined to be eligible for rehiring or promotion by a grievance procedure or hearing authorized by law is guilty of a misdemeanor.^{n49.9} The employee may file a complaint with the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement of the Department of Industrial Relations within one year.^{n49.10}

[j] Elections Officer (Elections Code Section 12312)

Elections Code Section 12312 prohibits the suspension or termination of an employee because of his or her absence from work while serving as an election officer on election day. In Kouff v. Bethlehem-Alameda Shipyard,ⁿ⁵⁰ the court relied on a predecessor statute to Section 12312ⁿ⁵¹ as the basis for a common law wrongful termination action.

[k] Fingerprints or Photographs for Improper Purpose (Labor Code Sections 1051, 1052, 1054)

Labor Code Section 1051 makes it a misdemeanor for an employer to require an employee or job applicant, as a condition of securing or retaining employment, to submit to photographs or fingerprints for the purpose of furnishing them, or information concerning them, to any third party, if the photographs or fingerprints "could be used to the detriment of the employee or applicant." This section does not apply to any employee of a diversified or nondiversified management company, as defined in Labor Code Section 1057.ⁿ⁵²

In addition to the criminal penalty for violation of Labor Code Section 1051, the aggrieved employee may bring a civil action against the employer for treble damages.ⁿ⁵³ Criminal liability need not be established before the civil action may be brought.ⁿ⁵⁴

For additional discussion of this provision, see Chapter 50, Part B.

[l] Garnishment or Assignment of Wages (Labor Code Section 2929(b); Family Code Section 5290)

Labor Code Section 2929(b) forbids termination of an employee based on a threatened garnishment of wages or an actual garnishment for any one indebtedness. Any employment contract providing less protection to the employee is void as against public policy.ⁿ⁵⁵ The procedures by which an employer may withhold earnings of an employee for payment of a judgment or other debt are discussed in Chapter 4.

Labor Code Section 2929(e) indicates that the statute is intended to aid in the enforcement of the prohibition against discharge for garnishment of earnings provided in the federal Consumer Credit Protection Act.ⁿ⁵⁶ The Law Revision Commission Comments to section 2929 state that the section is therefore meant to be interpreted consistently with the federal provisions. For discussion of these federal statutes, see [3][d] below.

In addition, a Family Code provision pertaining to judicially ordered wage assignments for child, spousal, and family support prohibits any employer from using such a wage assignment as grounds for refusing to hire a person, for discharging or taking disciplinary action against an employee, for denying a promotion to an employee, or for taking any other action adversely affecting the terms and conditions of employment of an employee.ⁿ⁵⁷ An employer's violation of this provision may result in assessment of a civil penalty of up to $500.ⁿ⁵⁸

[m] Health Care Workers (Health and Safety Code Section 123420(a); Penal Code Section 11161.8; Government Code Section 12940(g))

Health care workers receive special protection under several California statutes. The first of these, Health and Safety Code Section 123420(a), relates to specified health care employees who refuse to participate in the performance of abortions. No employer or other person may require a physician, registered nurse, licensed vocational nurse, or any other person employed or with staff privileges at a hospital, facility, or clinic to directly participate in the performance of an abortion if that individual has filed a written statement with the employer, hospital, facility, or clinic indicating a moral, ethical, or religious basis for his or her refusal to participate.ⁿ⁵⁹ A person may not be penalized in any way for such a refusal.ⁿ⁶⁰

On the other hand, a facility that does not permit the performance of abortions may not discriminate against any employee or individual with staff privileges due to that person's participation in the performance of abortions elsewhere.ⁿ⁶¹

Two other statutes provide protection to health care workers who file reports of patient abuse with governmental authorities. Penal Code Section 11161.8 requires that certain health care workers who observe a patient suffering from a condition that appears to be the result of abuse or neglect must file a report within 36 hours with the local police authority and the county health department. An employee may not be discharged, suspended, disciplined, or harassed for making such a report.ⁿ⁶²

Government Code Section 12940(g), which is part of the Fair Employment and Housing Act,ⁿ⁶³ also forbids discrimination against or discharge of a person who has made such a report.

[n] Jurors and Witnesses (Labor Code Section 230)

Labor Code Section 230 prohibits discharge or other discrimination against an employee for taking time off from work to serve as a juror as long as the employee gives reasonable notice of the anticipated absence.ⁿ⁶⁴

Labor Code Section 230 also prohibits discharge, or other discrimination, or retaliation against an employee (including, but not limited to an employee who is a victim of a crime) for taking time off to appear in court to comply with a subpoena or other court order as a witness in any judicial proceeding.ⁿ⁶⁵

Additionally, Labor Code Section 230 prohibits discharge, or other discrimination, or retaliation against an employee who is a victim of domestic violenceⁿ⁶⁶ or sexual assaultⁿ⁶⁷ for taking time off from work to obtain any relief to help ensure the health, safety, or welfare of the employee or his or her child.ⁿ⁶⁸ As a condition for taking time off in these circumstances, the employee must give the employer reasonable advance notice of the employee's intention to take time off, unless the advance notice is not feasible.ⁿ⁶⁹ When an unscheduled absence occurs, the employer must not take any action against the employee if the employee, within a reasonable time after the absence, provides a certification to the employer.ⁿ⁷⁰

Labor Code Section 230 further provides that an employee who has been discharged or suffered discrimination or retaliation in violation of this section is entitled to reinstatement and reimbursement of lost wages and benefits.ⁿ⁷¹ In addition, an employer who fails to rehire or restore an eligible employee is guilty of a misdemeanor.ⁿ⁷² Moreover, an employee who is discharged or has suffered discrimination or other retaliation in violation of this section may file a complaint with the Department of Industrial Relations, Division of Labor Standards Enforcement.^{n72.1}

An employee is entitled to use available vacation, personal leave, or compensatory time off for time taken off for a purpose specified in this section, unless otherwise provided by a collective bargaining agreement.^{n72.2}

[o] Labor Organization Affiliation (Labor Code Sections 921, 923)

Labor Code Section 921 sets forth the public policy against any employment agreement that includes a promise by either party to join or not join, or remain or not remain a member of, a labor or employer organization. Labor Code Section 923 proclaims the broader policy of granting every worker "full freedom of association, self-organization, and designation of representatives of his own choosing, to negotiate the terms and conditions of his employment."

The protections of the statute have been interpreted fairly broadly. Two courts of appeal found that Labor Code Section 923 permitted an individual employee to designate an attorney or other individual to represent him or her in negotiating terms and conditions of employment, and that discharge for doing so constitutes a violation of section 923.ⁿ⁷³ In Gelini v. Tishgart,^{n73.1} the court would have found the discharge of an employee for using an attorney to negotiate terms and conditions of employment not to be violation of section 923, but for the decision in Montalvo v. Zamora ^{n73.2} and favorable references to that decision by the California Supreme Court in Tameny ^{n73.3} and Foley.^{n73.4}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

In Gelini,^{n73.5} the court of appeal found a violation of public policy in the termination of an employee for retaining an attorney who wrote a letter of complaint to the employer on behalf of the employee. At the core of the decision is the panel's reluctant conclusion that it must follow past precedent interpreting

Labor Code Section 923 to mean that "the individual employee has the right to designate an attorney or other individual to represent him in negotiating the terms and conditions of his employment."^{n73.6}

Whether or not this interpretation will survive if reviewed by the California Supreme Court, one question that lingers in the aftermath of Gelini deserves special attention. Stated most simply: must an employer now allow an employee to have his or her attorney present during an investigatory interview of the employee? Nothing in Gelini suggests that this question must be answered in the affirmative. That is, the right of an employee to retain an attorney to represent him or her in the negotiation of the terms and conditions of his or her employment does not encompass a right to require that the employer deal only with (or only in the presence of) that attorney. Thus, the common practice of interviewing employees without the presence of counsel to determine their knowledge of or complicity in a specific fact pattern would appear to remain intact. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

However, there are limits to the application of the statute. Another court of appeal rejected an employee's claim that the employer violated Labor Code Section 923 by allegedly discharging the employee for requesting the presence of an attorney at performance evaluations.ⁿ⁷⁴ The court noted that requiring an employer to permit an attorney to be present at every informal job performance evaluation would seriously affect a company's efficiency.ⁿ⁷⁵

The public policy protecting labor organization affiliation was an early exception to the general rule allowing termination of employees at will. As early as 1961, Labor Code Section 923 was interpreted as prohibiting an employer from terminating an employee solely because of his or her union membership or activity.ⁿ⁷⁶ An employee so terminated has been held to be entitled to tort damages as well as injunctive relief.ⁿ⁷⁷

Whether such a termination gives rise to liability depends on whether it was "primarily" due to the employee's union affiliation; the union affiliation need not be the sole motive for the termination in order for liability to attach.ⁿ⁷⁸

However, because the National Labor Relations Actⁿ⁷⁹ gives exclusive jurisdiction of cases in which a covered employer wrongfully terminates an employee for union-related activities to the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB), a state wrongful termination action based on Labor Code Sections 921 and 923 would be preempted, unless the NLRB for some reason declines to issue a complaint.ⁿ⁸⁰

For discussion of preemption of state wrongful termination actions by federal labor law, see § 60.09[1][b].

[p] Medical Information Disclosure (Civil Code Sections 56.10(a) et seq.)

Health care providers and employers must obtain a written authorization to disclose medical information about an individual, except in certain limited circumstances.ⁿ⁸¹

Civil Code Section 56.20(b) provides that an employer may not discriminate against an employee for refusing to sign an authorization for such disclosure. If an employee does sign an authorization, the employer must provide the employee with a copy of the document on demand.ⁿ⁸²

For further discussion of restrictions on disclosure of medical information by employers, see Chapter 51, Part B.

[q] Military Duty (Military and Veterans Code Section 394)

Military and Veterans Code Section 394 forbids discrimination against any officer or enlisted person in the military or naval forces of California or the United States. It specifically prohibits employers from discriminating against any employee for "the performance of any ordered military duty or training."ⁿ⁸³

[r] Political Affiliation (Labor Code Sections 1101-1102)

Labor Code Section 1101 prohibits employers from making or enforcing any policy which prevents employees from engaging in political activities or from running for public office, or which tends to control or direct the political activities or affiliations of employees. Labor Code Section 1102 forbids employers from attempting to coerce or influence employees' political activities by means of threat of discharge.

These sections were construed broadly by the California Supreme Court in Gay Law Students Association v. Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co.,ⁿ⁸⁴ in which the Court held that "political activity" includes participation in litigation, wearing armbands, and associating with others for the advancement of ideas.ⁿ⁸⁵

In Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication,^{n85.1} the court stated that Labor Code §§ 1101 and 1102 reinforce the substantial public interest in protecting the fundamental right of employees to engage in political activity without interference or threat of retaliation from employers. There is no doubt that the statutory protection for an employee's political activity, particularly political speech, inures to the public at large rather than simply to the individual or proprietary interests of the employee or employer.^{n85.2}

[s] Polygraph Examinations (Labor Code Section 432.2)

Labor Code Section 432.2(a) forbids private employers from requiring employees or job applicants to take polygraph or similar tests as a condition of employment or continued employment. An employer may request employees or applicants to take such tests voluntarily, as long as the employer provides written notice of the rights guaranteed by Labor Code § 432.2.ⁿ⁸⁶

Although public employees are specifically exempted from the provisions of Labor Code Section 432.2(a), they are afforded similar protection from involuntary polygraph examinations by the privacy clause of the California Constitution.ⁿ⁸⁷

Federal law also restricts use of polygraph examinations and prohibits discipline or discharge of employees who fail or refuse to take such examinations or based on the results of such examinations, subject to certain exemptions.ⁿ⁸⁸

For discussion, see [3][f], below. For further discussion of Labor Code Section 432.2, see Chapter 50, Part B.

[t] Refusal to Patronize Employer (Labor Code Section 450)

An employer may not force an employee or a job applicant to patronize the employer or any other person in connection with the purchase of any thing of value.ⁿ⁸⁹ A violation of Labor Code Section 450 is a misdemeanor,ⁿ⁹⁰ but no other remedies are explicitly stated in the statute, and no reported cases have indicated whether any civil remedies exist for violation of the statute.

[t.1] Relocations, Terminations, and Mass Layoffs (Labor Code Section 1400 et seq.)

An employern^{90.1} may not order a mass layoff,^{n90.2} relocation,^{n90.3} or termination^{n90.4} at a covered establishment^{n90.5} unless, 60 days before the order takes effect, the employer gives written notice of the order to the following:^{n90.6}

1. The employees^{n90.7} of the facility affected by the order.
2. The Employment Development Department, the local workforce investment board, and the chief elected official of each city and county government within which the termination, relocation, or mass layoff occurs.

However, an employer is not required to provide notice if a mass layoff, relocation, or termination is necessitated by a physical calamity or act of war.^{n90.8} Moreover, the notice requirement does not apply when the closing or layoff is the result of the completion of a particular project or undertaking of an employer subject to the Wage Orders governing the broadcasting industry,^{n90.9} motion picture industry,^{n90.10} or certain on-site occupations in the construction, drilling, logging and mining industries,^{n90.11} and the employees were hired with the understanding that their employment was limited to the duration of that project or undertaking.^{n90.12} Nor does the notice requirement apply to employees in seasonal employment hired with the understanding that their employment was seasonal and temporary.^{n90.13} An employer also is not required to comply with the notice requirement if the Employment Development Department determines that all of the following conditions exist:^{n90.14}

1. As of the time the notice would have been required, the employer was actively seeking capital or business.
2. The capital or business sought, if obtained, would have enabled the employer to avoid or postpone the relocation or termination.
3. The employer reasonably and in good faith believed that giving the required notice would have precluded the employer from obtaining the needed capital or business.

Moreover, there is no "mass layoff" within the meaning of the California WARN Act, and an employer is not required to give notice, if employees are transferred from one employer to another for whom they perform the same work at the same rates of pay and with whom they retain the same benefits.^{n90.15}

An employer required to give notice of a mass layoff, relocation, or termination must include in its notice the elements required by the federal Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act ("WARN Act").^{n90.16}

An employer who fails to give the required notice before ordering a mass layoff, relocation, or termination is liable to each terminated employee for all of the following:^{n90.17}

1. Back pay at the average regular rate of compensation received by the employee during the last three years of employment, or the employee's final rate of compensation, whichever is higher;
2. The value of the cost of any benefits to which the employee would have been entitled had his or her employment not been lost, including the cost of any medical expenses incurred by the employee that would have been covered under an employee benefit plan.

Liability is calculated for the period of the employer's violation, up to a maximum of 60 days, or one-half the number of days the employment, whichever is smaller.^{n90.18} The amount of liability is reduced by the following:^{n90.19}

1. Any wages, except vacation moneys accrued prior to the period of the employer's violation, paid by the employer to the employee during the period of the employer's violation;
2. Any voluntary and unconditional payments made by the employer to the employee that were not required to satisfy any legal obligation; or
3. Any payments by the employer to a third party or trustee, such as premiums for health benefits or payments to a defined-contribution pension plan on behalf of and attributable to the employee, for the period of the violation.

An employer who fails to give the required notice is also subject to a civil penalty for each day of violation, unless the employer pays all applicable employees the amounts for which the employer is liable within three weeks from the date the employer orders the mass layoff, relocation, or termination.^{n90.20} A person, including a local government or an employee representative, seeking to establish liability against an employer may bring a civil action on behalf of the person, other persons similarly situated, or both, in any court of competent jurisdiction. The court may award reasonable attorney's fees as part of costs to any prevailing plaintiff.^{n90.21} If the court determines that an employer conducted a reasonable investigation in good faith, and if the employer had reasonable grounds to believe that its conduct was not a violation of the notice requirement, the court may reduce the amount of any penalty imposed against the employer.^{n90.22}

Payments by an employer who failed to provide the advance notice of facility closure required by Lab. Code § 1400 et seq. or the federal Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act^{n90.23} may not be construed as wages or compensation for personal services for unemployment insurance purposes.^{n90.24} Unemployment insurance benefits^{n90.25} may not be denied or reduced because of the receipt of payments related to an employer's violation of the notice requirements or the federal WARN Act.^{n90.26}

In any investigation or proceeding relating to these requirements, the Labor Commissioner has, in addition to all other powers granted by law, the authority to examine the books and records of an employer.^{n90.27}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The California WARN Act is materially different from the federal WARN Act. In addition, many of the provisions of the California WARN Act are confusing and seemingly internally inconsistent. Employers should not assume that compliance with the federal WARN Act is sufficient to satisfy California law.

Commentary by Kirby Wilcox

[u] Safety of Employees (Labor Code Sections 6300 et seq.)

The California Occupational Safety and Health Act (Cal/OSHA)ⁿ⁹¹ prohibits discrimination against employees who make oral or written complaints about workplace safety to either their employer or a governmental agency, or who participate in an occupational health and safety committee established pursuant to Labor Code Section 6401.7, or who institute or testify in proceedings under the Act.ⁿ⁹² An employer may not retaliate against an employee because the employer fears the employee will make a complaint.^{n92.1}

The prohibitions in Labor Code Section 6310(b), permitting an action for damages if the employee is discharged, threatened with discharge, or discriminated against because of complaints about unsafe working conditions, have been broadly interpreted to include refusing to renew an employment contract that has expired on its own terms.ⁿ⁹³

The protections of Cal/OSHA do not depend on whether a Cal/OSHA standard ultimately is found to have been violated; it is sufficient that the employee complained in good faith about working conditions he or she reasonably believed to be unsafe.ⁿ⁹⁴

Labor Code Section 6311 forbids the termination or layoff of an employee who refuses to work in conditions which violate the provisions of Cal/OSHA if the violation would create a real and apparent hazard to the employee or other employees. An employee who is terminated or who is not paid because of such a refusal to work has a right of action for lost wages.ⁿ⁹⁵

An employee claiming a violation of Labor Code Sections 6310 or 6311 may file a complaint with the California Labor Commissioner, pursuant to the procedures set out in Labor Code Section 98.7.ⁿ⁹⁶ The employee must file the complaint within six months of the violation.ⁿ⁹⁷ Potential remedies include rehiring or reinstatement, and reimbursement of lost wages and benefits, with interest and attorney's fees.ⁿ⁹⁸ See Chapter 5 for discussion of proceedings before the Labor Commissioner.

The administrative remedy provided a terminated employee by Labor Code Section 6312 is not exclusive, and does not preclude a common law wrongful discharge action.ⁿ⁹⁹ An arbitration decision under a collective bargaining agreement (CBA) does not have preclusive effect in a civil suit for retaliatory discharge under Labor Code section 6310(b) unless both of the following are true:^{n99.1}

- The CBA clearly and unmistakably provided for binding arbitration of the employee's statutory claim under the Labor Code.
- The arbitration was conducted in a manner that allowed for a full litigation and fair adjudication of the Labor Code claim.

For full discussion of Cal/OSHA, see Chapter 21.

[v] School Visit by Parent (Labor Code Section 230.8)

Labor Code Section 230.8(a)(1) prohibits an employer who employs 25 or more employees working at the same location from discharging or in any way discriminating against an employee who is a parent, guardian, or grandparent with custody of one or more children in kindergarten or grades 1 to 12, inclusive, or attending a licensed child day care facility, for taking off up to 40 hours each year, not exceeding eight hours in any calendar month, to participate in activities of the school or licensed child day care facility of any child, if the employee, prior to taking the time off, gives reasonable notice to the employer of the planned absence of the employee.ⁿ¹⁰⁰

An employee must utilize existing vacation, personal leave, or compensatory time off for purposes of the planned absence under Labor Code Section 230.8, unless otherwise provided by a collective bargaining agreement entered into before January 1, 1995, and in effect on that date. An employee may also utilize time off without pay for this purpose, to the extent made available by his or her employer. The entitlement of any employee under section 230.8 cannot be diminished by any collective bargaining agreement term or condition that is agreed to on or after January 1, 1995.ⁿ¹⁰¹

The employee, if requested by the employer, must provide documentation from the school or licensed child day care facility that he or she participated in school or day care facility activities on a specific date and at a particular time.ⁿ¹⁰²

An employee who is discharged, threatened with discharge, demoted, suspended, or in any other manner discriminated against in terms or conditions of employment by his or her employer because the employee has taken time off to participate in school or licensed child day care activities as described in Labor Code Section 230.8 is entitled to reinstatement and reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits caused by the employer's acts.ⁿ¹⁰³ An employer who willfully refuses to rehire, promote, or otherwise restore an employee or former employee who has been determined to be eligible for rehiring or promotion by a grievance procedure, arbitration, or hearing authorized by law is subject to a civil penalty equal to three times the amount of the employee's lost wages and work benefits.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

[w] Shopping Investigations (Labor Code Section 2930)

Labor Code Section 2930 provides some protection to a sales employee who is the subject of a report by a "shopping investigator." A "shopping investigator" is defined in Labor Code Section 2930(b) as a person who shops in business establishments to test the integrity, sales technique, and courtesy of employees and then writes a report of his or her investigation for each establishment visited.

Labor Code Section 2930(a) provides that an employer who disciplines or fires an employee based on a shopping investigator's report must provide the employee with a copy of the report before the discipline or termination occurs. Moreover, if the employer interviews the worker about some alleged dishonesty and it is possible that the interview may result in termination, the employer must give the employee a copy of the latest investigation report during the course of the interview.ⁿ¹⁰⁵

However, Labor Code Section 2930 does not apply if the shopping investigator is employed exclusively by one employer and conducts his or her entire investigation solely for that employer.ⁿ¹⁰⁶

For further discussion of shopping investigator reports, see Chapters 50 and 51.

[x] Voice Stress Analysis (Penal Code Section 637.3)

Penal Code Section 637.3 prohibits the use of any system that examines or records in any manner voice prints or other voice stress patterns of another person to determine the truth or falsity of statements made by that person without his or her express written consent given in advance of the examination or recordation.ⁿ¹⁰⁷ The statute does not apply to the use of a voice stress system by a peace officer who is carrying out his or her official duties.ⁿ¹⁰⁸

Any person injured by a violation of Penal Code Section 637.3 may bring a civil action for the amount of actual damages or $1,000, whichever is greater.ⁿ¹⁰⁹

Although Penal Code Section 637.3 does not expressly prohibit termination based on the results of, or the refusal to submit to, a voice stress test, it arguably embodies a public policy against nonconsensual testing that could form the basis of a common law wrongful termination action.

[y] Volunteer Firefighters, Reserve Peace Officers, Emergency Rescue Personnel (Labor Code Section 230.3)

Labor Code Section 230.3 prohibits any employer from discharging or in any manner discriminating against an employee for taking time off to perform emergency duty as a volunteer firefighter, reserve peace officer, or emergency rescue personnel.ⁿ¹¹⁰

Any employee who is discharged, threatened with discharge, demoted, suspended, or in any other manner discriminated against in the terms of conditions or employment by his or her employer because the employee has taken time off to perform emergency duty as a volunteer firefighter, reserve peace officer, or emergency rescue personnel is entitled to reinstatement and reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits caused by the employer's acts.ⁿ¹¹¹ An employer who willfully refuses to rehire, promote, or otherwise restore any such employee or former employee who has been determined to be eligible for rehiring or promotion by a grievance procedure, arbitration, or hearing authorized by law is guilty of a misdemeanor.ⁿ¹¹²

Labor Code Section 230.3 does not apply to any public safety agency or provider of emergency medical services when, as determined by the employer, the employee's absence would hinder the availability of public safety or emergency medical services.ⁿ¹¹³

[z] Wage Amount Disclosure by Employees (Labor Code Section 232)

An employer may not forbid an employee from disclosing the amount of his or her wages, nor require an employee to sign a writing that purports to forbid such disclosure.ⁿ¹¹⁴ Further, an employer may not discharge, discipline, or otherwise discriminate against an employee who discloses the amount of his or her compensation.ⁿ¹¹⁵

[z.1] Disclosure of Working Conditions (Labor Code Section 232.5)

An employer may not require, as a condition of employment, that an employee refrain from disclosing information about the employer's working conditions and may not require an employee to sign a waiver or other document purporting to deny the employee the right to disclose information about the employer's working conditions.n115.1 Further, an employer may not discharge, formally discipline, or otherwise discriminate against an employee who discloses information about the employer's working conditions.n115.2 However, Labor Code Section 232.5 is not intended to permit an employee to disclose proprietary information, trade secret information, or information otherwise subject to a legal privilege, without the consent of the employer.n115.3

[aa] Whistleblowing Activities

[i] Generally (Labor Code Section 1102.5)

Labor Code Section 1102.5 provides that an employer may not make, adopt, or enforce any rule, regulation, or policy preventing an employee from disclosing information to a government or law enforcement agency, when the employee has a reasonable belief that the information reveals a violation of, or noncompliance with, state or federal statute, or a violation or noncompliance with a state or federal rule or regulation.n116 "Employee" for this purpose includes, but is not limited to, any individual employed by the state or its subdivisions, any county, city, city and county (including any charter city or county), and any school district, community college district, municipal or public corporation, political subdivision, or the University of California.n117

Section 1102.5 prohibits retaliation by an employer against an employee under the following circumstances:

- For disclosing information to a government or law enforcement agency, when the employee has reasonable cause to believe the information discloses a violation of state or federal statute or a violation or noncompliance with a state or federal rule or regulation.n118
- For refusing to participate in an activity that would result in a violation of state or federal statute, or a violation or noncompliance with a state or federal rule or regulation.n119
- For having exercised his or her rights under Labor Code section 1102.5(a), (b), or (c) in any former employment.n119.1

A report by an employee of a government agency to his or her employer is a disclosure of information to a government or law enforcement agency pursuant to Labor Code section 1102.5(a) and (b).n119.2

Section 1102.5 does not apply to rules, regulations, or policies which implement, or actions against employees who violate, any of the following:n119.3

- The confidentiality of the lawyer-client privilege.n119.4
- The confidentiality of the physician-patient privilege.n119.5
- Trade secret information.

Section 1102.5 does not apply when the alleged violation is of an employer's own policies.n119.6

Matters such as transferring employees, writing up employees, and counseling employees are personnel matters, which do not rise to the level of whistleblowing retaliation under section 1102.5.n119.7

Violation of this statute is a misdemeanor, punishable in the case of an individual by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed one year or a fine not to exceed $1,000, or both.n120 Violation by a corporation is punishable by a fine not to exceed $5,000.n121

In addition to other penalties, a corporation or limited liability company is liable for a civil penalty not exceeding $10,000 for each violation of Labor Code section 1102.5.n121.1 This statutory remedy does not, however, preclude the injured employee from recovering damages from his or her employer.n122 In a civil action or administrative proceeding brought pursuant to Section 1102.5, once it has been demonstrated by a preponderance of the evidence that a proscribed activity was a contributing factor in the alleged prohibited action against the employee, the employer has the burden of proof to demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence that the alleged action would have occurred for legitimate, independent reasons even if the employee had not engaged in activities protected by Section 1102.5.n122.1

When the employer provides administrative remedies, an employee alleging a violation of Labor Code § 1102.5 must exhaust administrative remedies prior to filing a lawsuit, even when no internal damage remedy is available or when a plaintiff seeks only money damages, so that resort to the courts is inevitable.n122.2 However, a party may waive the exhaustion requirement by failing to raise it at trial, and may not raise it for the first time on appeal.n122.3

Similar statutory provisionsn123 protect state employees from retaliation for whistleblowing.n124

In addition to this statutory protection, the California Supreme Court has held that discrimination against whistleblowing employees is contrary to public policy.n125 Although the Court noted that other jurisdictions permit common law wrongful discharge actions by terminated whistleblowers, it refrained from deciding whether such relief was available in California.n126 At least one court of appeal has, however, suggested that Labor Code Section 1102.5 supports a common law wrongful termination claim. Specifically, in Collier v. Superior Court,n127 the court suggested that Labor Code Section 1102.5(b), which prohibits employer retaliation for reporting reasonably suspected illegal activity in the workplace to a government or law enforcement agency, may support a claim by an employee who is fired for reporting such activity to his or her employer.n128 Although section 1102.5(b) does not directly protect such employees, it does evince a strong policy interest in encouraging employee reports of illegal activity in the workplace.n129 The fundamental public interest in a crime-free workplace would not be served if public policy were strictly circumscribed to protect only employees who report reasonable suspicions to public agencies. Such a delineation could deter employees from reporting their reasonable suspicions at all. Thus, an employee might not report his or her suspicion to an employer out of fear of retaliation.n129.1

The standard of "adverse employment action" applicable in an employment retaliation lawsuit under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) also applies to an employment retaliation lawsuit under Labor Code section 1102.5(b) for retaliation for whistleblowing.n129.2

It is a defense to a claim for retaliation under Labor Code § 1102.5 and the statutory provisions protecting state employees that the employer's conduct was privileged under Civil Code § 47(b), which bars a civil action for damages based on statements made in a judicial proceeding, in an official proceeding authorized by law, or in the initiation or course of a mandate-reviewable proceeding authorized by law.n129.3

An action under Labor Code Section 1102.5 is subject to a motion to strike the complaint as a SLAPP (strategic lawsuit against public participation) suit under Code of Civil Procedure Section 425.16, when the complaint arises out of statements and writings made before official and judicial proceedings, thus falling within the ambit of the anti-SLAPP statute. The court will dismiss the action if it falls within the ambit of Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16 and the plaintiff cannot demonstrate a probability of prevailing on the merits of the causes of action.n129.4

The Attorney General's office must maintain a whistleblower hotline to receive calls from persons who have information regarding possible violations of state or federal statutes, rules, or regulations, or violations of fiduciary responsibility by a corporation or limited liability company to its shareholders, investors, or employees.n130 The Attorney General refers calls received on the hotline to the appropriate government authority for review and possible investigation.n130.1 During the initial review of a call, the Attorney General or appropriate government agency holds information disclosed through the hotline in confidence, including the identity of the caller disclosing the information and the employer identified by the caller.n130.2 A call made to the hotline or its referral to the appropriate agency may not be the sole basis for a time period under a statute of limitation to commence. This does not change existing law relating to statutes of limitation.n130.3 An employer must prominently display in lettering larger than size 14 type a list of employees' rights and responsibilities under the whistleblower laws, including the telephone number of the whistleblower hotline.n130.4

Article VIII(1) of the Friendship, Commerce, and Navigation Treaty,n130.5 which confers on Japanese employers the limited right to discriminate in favor of their fellow citizens for certain managerial and technical positions, does not preempt California's whistle bower protection laws.n130.6

For discussion of other California whistleblower protection statutes, see [m] and [u], above. For discussion of wrongful discharge actions based on public policy, see § 60.04.

[ii] False Claims Against Public Entity (Government Code Section 12653)

Government Code Section 12651 imposes liability for damages and a civil penalty on any person who knowingly presents a false claim against the state or a political subdivision or who engages in certain other specified activities related to false claims.n131

Government Code Section 12652 sets forth procedures for bringing a civil action by the Attorney General, the prosecuting authority for the political subdivision, or a private party in the name of the state or a political subdivision to enforce the liability imposed by Government Code Section 12651.

Government Code Section 12653 prohibits an employer from making, adopting, or enforcing any rule, regulation, or policy that prevents an employee from disclosing information to a government or law enforcement agency or from assisting in furtherance of a false claims action, including investigating, initiating, testifying, or assisting in an action filed or to be filed under Government Code Section 12652.n132

The statute further prohibits any employer from discharging, demoting, suspending, threatening, harassing, denying a promotion to, or in any other manner discriminating against an employee in the terms and conditions of employment because of lawful acts done by the employee on behalf of himself or herself or others in disclosing information to a government or law enforcement agency or in furthering a false claims action, including investigation for, initiation of, testimony for, or assistance in, an action filed or to be filed under Government Code Section 12652.n133 The elements of a cause of action are as follows:n133.1

- The employee was engaged in protected conduct.
- The employer knew the employee engaged in such conduct.
- The employer retaliated against the employee because of the conduct.

An employer who violates the prohibition against retaliatory discharge or discrimination contained in Government Code Section 12653(b) is liable for all relief necessary to make the employee whole, including (1) reinstatement with the same seniority status that the employee would have had but for the discrimination, (2) double the amount of back pay, (3) interest on the back pay, (4) compensation for any special damages sustained as a result of the discrimination, and (5) when appropriate, punitive damages.n134 In addition, the defendant employer is required to pay litigation costs and reasonable attorney's fees.n135 An employee may bring an action in the appropriate superior court to obtain this relief.n136

An employee who is discharged, demoted, suspended, harassed, denied promotion, or in any other manner discriminated against in terms or conditions of employment by his or her employer because of participation in conduct that directly or indirectly resulted in a false claim being submitted to the state or a political subdivision is entitled to the statutory remedies under Government Code Section 12653(c) only if both of the following occur:ⁿ¹³⁷

1. The employee voluntarily disclosed information to a government or law enforcement agency or acted in furtherance of a false claims action, including investigation for, initiation of, testimony for, or assistance in an action filed or to be filed; and
2. The employee had been harassed, threatened with termination or demotion, or otherwise coerced by the employer or its management into engaging in the fraudulent activity in the first place.

When the employer provides administrative remedies, an employee alleging a violation of Gov. Code § 12653 must exhaust administrative remedies prior to filing a lawsuit, even when no internal damage remedy is available or a plaintiff seeks only money damages, so that resort to the courts is inevitable.^{n137.1}

[iii] Reporting of Improper Governmental Activities (Government Code Section 8547)

Government Code Section 8547 imposes liability for damages and criminal penalties on any person who retaliates against or threatens a state employee or applicant for state employment who discloses improper governmental activities.ⁿ¹³⁸ The term "improper governmental activities" includes illegal activities and those that are economically wasteful or involve gross misconduct, incompetency, or inefficiency.ⁿ¹³⁹

A University of California employee must exhaust internal remedies before bringing suit against the University.^{n139.1} The employee may then bring a suit for damages if the resolution by the University is not timely.^{n139.2} The employee need not challenge the untimely decision by a writ of mandate.^{n139.3}

A University employee also must exhaust administrative remedies before bringing suit against individual University employees under Gov. Code § 8547.11, which prohibits University of California employees from directly or indirectly using or attempting to use the official authority or influence of the employee to intimidate, threaten, coerce, command, or attempt to intimidate, threaten, coerce, or command any person for the purpose of interfering with the right of that person to whistleblow.^{n139.4} Causes of action against individual employees of the University may be barred by privileges, including the absolute privilege in Civ. Code § 47(b) for official proceedings, and the immunity provided by Gov. Code § 821.6.^{n139.5}

State employees other than those employed by the University of California are also required to exhaust internal remedies by filing a complaint with the State Personnel Board before bringing a court action to challenge an adverse employment action in retaliation for whistleblowing.^{n139.6} So long as the Board has issued findings or the deadline for issuing findings has passed, the employee may proceed with a damages action in superior court regardless of whether the Board's findings are favorable or unfavorable to the employee. Once the Board has issued findings, the employee need not pursue additional administrative remedies and need not challenge the findings by way of a petition for a writ of administrative mandate.^{n139.7}

The damages and penalties authorized by Government Code Section 8547 are in addition to any other penalties that may be provided by law.ⁿ¹⁴⁰

[iv] Child Day Care Facilities Act Violations

The California Child Day Care Facilities Act^{n140.1} is a comprehensive statutory scheme governing the licensing and staffing of various childcare facilities. Under the Act, no employer may discriminate against an employee who makes a good faith complaint to a regulatory agency or an employer covered under the Act regarding violations of the law by the employer.^{n140.2} An employee who is discriminated against in violation of this provision must, in most cases, pursue a grievance through the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement.^{n140.3}

In Boston v. Penny Lane Centers, Inc.,^{n140.4} a former employee of a social services agency that operated group homes for juveniles and offered therapy for children and families, sued for wrongful termination, alleging a violation of the California Occupational Safety & Health Act,^{n140.5} tortious termination in violation of public policy, defamation of character, discrimination based on disability, and harassment based on disability. She did not reference Health & Saf. Code §§ 1596.881, 1596.882 in her complaint, and her case at trial did not rely on the employer having violated the law governing staff-child ratios. However, the employer argued that because her workplace safety concerns had to do with inadequate staffing, she was limited as a matter of law to pursuing her claim under Health & Saf. Code §§ 1596.881 and 1596.882. The appellate court found first that it was unclear whether the employer was subject to the Act, given an exception from the Act for community care facilities.^{n140.6} The court did not resolve that question, however, in light of the conclusion that even if the Act applied, it did not bar the action for wrongful discharge in violation of the public policy favoring workplace safety. The gravamen of her claim was that she was retaliated against for complaining about an unsafe work environment, not illegal staffing ratios violating the Act. Her wrongful termination claim was tethered to the protections embodied in the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1973 (Cal-OSHA), which specifically prohibits retaliation against an employee who makes a complaint with reference to employee safety or health.^{n140.7} Thus, she vindicated her right to a safe workplace using the common law tort of wrongful discharge, which preexisted and was separate from the cause of action created by Health & Safety Code §§ 1596.881 and 1596.882.

[bb] Parental Attendance at School of Suspended or Disciplined Child (Education Code Section 48900.1; Labor Code Section 230.7)

Pursuant to Education Code Section 48900.1, a school district may request that the parent or guardian of a pupil who has been suspended for specified disciplinary reasons attend the class from which the child was suspended after the child's return from suspension.ⁿ¹⁴¹ No employer may discharge or in any manner discriminate against an employee who is the parent or guardian of a pupil for taking time off to appear in the pupil's school pursuant to a request made under Education Code Section 48900.1 if the employee, prior to taking the time off, gives reasonable notice to the employer that he or she is requested to appear in the school.ⁿ¹⁴²

Any employee who is discharged, threatened with discharge, demoted, suspended, or in any other manner discriminated against in the terms and conditions of employment by his or her employer because the employee has taken time off to appear in the school of a pupil pursuant to a request made under Education Code Section 48900.1 is entitled to reinstatement and reimbursement for lost wages and work benefits caused by those acts of the employer.ⁿ¹⁴³

[cc] Health Insurance Coverage Assignments (Family Code Section 3769)

Statutory provisions governing family law proceedings authorize a court to order an employer to enroll a covered employee's child in any available health care insurance coverage and to deduct the necessary premiums or contributions from the employee's earnings.ⁿ¹⁴⁴ An employer may not use a health insurance coverage assignment for supported children as grounds for discharging or taking disciplinary action against an employee.ⁿ¹⁴⁵ An employer who violates this provision is subject to a civil penalty of $500.ⁿ¹⁴⁶

[dd] Displaced Janitor Opportunity Act (Labor Code Section 1060 et seq.)

When a contract or subcontract for janitorial or building maintenance services performed within Californian^{n146.1} has been or will be terminated,^{n146.2} the successor contractor or subcontractor must retain employees employed by the terminated contractor or its subcontractors for a 60-day transition period, so long as the employees worked for the preceding four months or longer at the sites covered by the successor contract. The successor contractor or subcontractor is excused from this obligation, if it has reasonable and substantiated cause not to hire a particular employee based on the employee's performance or conduct while working under the terminated contract.n146.3

Except for the obligations specified in Lab. Code § 1061(a), (b), nothing in Lab. Code § 1060 et seq. changes or increases the relationship or duties of a property owner or an awarding authority, or their agents, with respect to contractors, subcontractors, or their employees.n146.4 Furthermore, nothing in Lab. Code § 1060 et seq. limits the right of a property owner or an awarding authority to terminate a service contract or to replace a contractor with another contractor or with the property owner's or awarding authority's own employees.n146.5 The successor contractor or successor subcontractor must make a written offer of employment to each employee in the employee's primary language or another language in which the employee is literate, stating the time within which the employee must accept that offer, but in no case less than 10 days. However, the successor contractor or subcontractor is not required to pay the same wages or offer the same benefits as the prior contractor or prior subcontractor.n146.6

If at any time the successor contractor or subcontractor determines that fewer employees are needed to perform the services than were required by the terminated contractor, the successor contractor or subcontractor must retain employees by seniority within the job classification.n146.7 During the transition period, the successor contractor or subcontractor must maintain a preferential hiring list of eligible covered employees not retained by the successor contractor or subcontractor from which the successor contractor or successor subcontractor must hire additional employees until all of the terminated contractor's or subcontractor's employees have been offered employment with the successor contractor or successor subcontractorn146.8 and may not discharge without cause an employee retained from the terminated contractor or subcontractor. Cause may be based only on the performance or conduct of the particular employee.n146.9 At the end of the transition period, the successor contractor or subcontractor must provide a written performance evaluation to each retained employee. If the employee's performance during the period is satisfactory, the successor contractor or subcontractor must offer the employee continued employment. Any employment after the transition period is at-will, meaning the employee may be terminated without cause.n146.10

An employee who is not offered employment or discharged in violation of Labor Code Section 1060 et seq., may bring an action against the successor contractor or subcontractor. Upon finding a violation Labor Code Section 1060 et seq., the court must award backpay, including the value of benefits, for each day during which the violation occurred and continues to occur.n146.11 The court may also order a preliminary or permanent injunction of a continuing violation.n146.12 If the employee is the prevailing party, the court will award the employee reasonable attorney's fees and costs.n146.13 In the absence of a claim that an employee was terminated in violation of Labor Code § 1060 et seq., the employee may not maintain a cause of action solely for the employer's failure to provide a written performance evaluation.n146.14

Nothing in Labor Code Section 1060 et seq. prohibits a local government agency from enacting ordinances relating to displaced janitors that impose greater standards than, or establish additional enforcement provisions to, those prescribed in Labor Code Section 1060 et seq..n146.15

[ee] Public Transit Service Contracts (Labor Code Section 1070 et seq.)

Labor Code Section 1070 et seq. establishes a bidding preference for public transit servicen146.16 contractorsn146.17 and subcontractorsn146.18 who agree to retain, for a period of at least 90 days, certain employees who were employed to perform essentially the same services by the previous contractor or subcontractor.n146.19 Contractors or subcontractors who agree to retain employees under these provisions must offer employment to those employees except for reasonable and substantiated cause, as specified.n146.20 If a successor contractor or subcontractor determines that fewer employees are needed than under the prior contract, qualified employees must be retained by seniority within the job classification.n146.21 The existing contractor, when required by the awarding authority,n146.22 must provide employment information relating to wage rates, benefits, dates of hire, and job classifications of employees under the existing service contract to the awarding authority or a successor contractor, as specified.^{n146.23}

An employee not offered employment or discharged in violation of these provisions may bring a civil action against the successor contractor or subcontractor. On finding a violation, the court will order the employee reinstated with the successor contractor or subcontractor and backpay, including the value of benefits, for each day of violation.^{n146.24} and reasonable attorneys' fees and costs.^{n146.25} The court may also preliminarily or permanently enjoin the continued violation.^{n146.26}

[3] Federal Statutes

[a] Age Discrimination in Employment Act (Title 29 United States Code, Sections 621-634)

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

In California, where state employment discrimination remedies closely track, and in some cases surpass, federal remedies, it is rarely wise to plead a cause of action based on federal law unless it is absolutely necessary to do so. Inclusion of a federal claim will permit the employer to remove the lawsuit to federal court, a forum generally considered to be less favorable for employment plaintiffs. Commentary by John M. True, III.

The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA)ⁿ¹⁴⁷ prohibits discrimination against persons 40 years of age and older.ⁿ¹⁴⁸ Litigation under the ADEA requires prior exhaustion of administrative remedies.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ The ADEA provides a right to a jury trial,ⁿ¹⁵⁰ as well as remedies including, among other things, injunctive relief, back pay, and liquidated damages for a willful violation.ⁿ¹⁵¹ Although compensatory and punitive damages are not available under the ADEA, they may be recovered in a pendent state claim in the Ninth Circuit and some other circuits.ⁿ¹⁵² For example, in one Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal case,ⁿ¹⁵³ in which the plaintiff's ADEA claims were based on age discrimination in firing, the court held that the ADEA does not preempt the award of tort damages and, therefore, upheld the award of punitive damages to the plaintiff for violation of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing under California law.

For further discussion of the ADEA, see Chapters 40 through 43.

[b] Americans With Disabilities Act (Title 42 United States Code Section 12101 et seq.)

The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990ⁿ¹⁵⁴ prohibits employment discrimination against disabled persons.ⁿ¹⁵⁵ A disabled person who has suffered discrimination must file a timely charge with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), which will then investigate the charge. Either the EEOC or the aggrieved individual may ultimately file a civil action and receive various remedies, including equitable relief, reinstatement with or without back pay, and front pay.ⁿ¹⁵⁶

Limited compensatory and punitive damages are also available in cases involving intentional discriminatory conduct.ⁿ¹⁵⁷

For further discussion of the ADA, see Chapters 40 through 43.

[c] Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1871 (Title 42 United States Code, Sections 1981 and 1983)

Like Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964,ⁿ¹⁵⁸ the Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1871ⁿ¹⁵⁹ have been interpreted to prohibit employment discrimination. The two primary provisions of these early Civil Rights Acts differ somewhat in their coverage. Title 42 United States Code Section 1981 states that all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States have the same right to make and enforce contracts as is enjoyed by white citizens.ⁿ¹⁶⁰ For purposes of section 1981, the term "make and enforce contracts" includes the making, performance, modification, and termination of contracts, and the enjoyment of all benefits, privileges, terms, and conditions of the contractual relationship.ⁿ¹⁶¹ The section relates primarily to racial discrimination,ⁿ¹⁶² although it has also been held to apply to discrimination on the basis of alienage,ⁿ¹⁶³ and to discrimination on the basis of Arab ancestry.ⁿ¹⁶⁴

Section 1981 applies to both public and private employers.ⁿ¹⁶⁵

Section 1983 provides that any person who under color of law deprives a citizen or other person within the jurisdiction of the United States of any right, privilege, or immunity secured by the Constitution or by statute is liable to the injured party.ⁿ¹⁶⁶

Section 1983 has been held to cover more bases of discrimination than does section 1981. For example, section 1983 prohibits discrimination based on sex and religion, but it is applicable only when the defendant has acted under color of state law.ⁿ¹⁶⁷

Unlike Title VII, sections 1981 and 1983 do not require the exhaustion of administrative remedies before a civil action may be brought, and both sections afford a right to jury trial.ⁿ¹⁶⁸ Moreover, in addition to injunctive relief and back pay, compensatory and punitive damages may be sought under sections 1981 and 1983.ⁿ¹⁶⁹ Compensatory and punitive damage awards under section 1981 are not subject to the statutory limits applicable to such awards under Title VII.ⁿ¹⁷⁰ For further discussion of the Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1871, see Chapters 40 through 43.

[d] Mine Safety and Health Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 30 United States Code, Section 815(c))

The Federal Coal Mine Safety and Health Actⁿ¹⁷¹ prohibits discrimination against any miner, applicant for employment in a mine, or representative of miners because of that person's involvement in proceedings under the act or exercise of rights afforded by the act.ⁿ¹⁷² A person who believes he or she is the victim of this type of discrimination may file a complaint with the Secretary of the Interior within 60 days of the alleged discrimination.ⁿ¹⁷³ The Secretary will commence an investigation within 15 days of receipt of the complaint. If it appears that the complaint was not frivolously brought, reinstatement of the miner may be ordered.ⁿ¹⁷⁴ Within the following 90 days, the Secretary will inform the parties if a violation has been established.ⁿ¹⁷⁵ If so, the Secretary files a complaint with the Federal Mine Safety and Health Review Commission, which provides an opportunity for hearing and orders appropriate relief.ⁿ¹⁷⁶ Remedies include "such affirmative action to abate the violation as the Commission deems appropriate," including but not limited to reinstatement with back pay and interest, costs, and attorney's fees.ⁿ¹⁷⁷ Even if the Secretary finds no violation, the complainant may file a complaint with the Commission on his or her own behalf.ⁿ¹⁷⁸

[e] Consumer Credit Protection Act Provision Regarding Wage Garnishment (Title 15 United States Code, Section 1674)

A provision of the Consumer Credit Protection Actⁿ¹⁷⁹ prohibits an employer from discharging an employee because his or her wages have been garnished to satisfy any one indebtedness.ⁿ¹⁸⁰ A willful violation of this prohibition is punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 and/or imprisonment for up to one year.ⁿ¹⁸¹

The discharge of an employee whose wages have been garnished more than once is not unlawful under the federal act, except when the discharge is the result of discrimination against the employee on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.ⁿ¹⁸²

Although there is disagreement among the federal circuit courts, there appears to be no private right of action for violation of the federal act.ⁿ¹⁸³

The provisions of the Consumer Credit Protection Act must be read in connection with section 525(b) of the Federal Bankruptcy Act,ⁿ¹⁸⁴ which, under specified circumstances, may prohibit an employer from discharging an employee whose wages have been garnished for more than one indebtedness.ⁿ¹⁸⁵

For discussion of California laws concerning employee protection regarding wage garnishment, see [2][1], above, and Chapter 4.

[f] Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988 (Title 29, United States Code, Section 2001 et seq.)

The Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988 prohibits an employer engaged in or affecting commerce or engaged in the production of goods for commerceⁿ¹⁸⁶ from doing any of the following:ⁿ¹⁸⁷

1. Directly or indirectly requiring, requesting, suggesting, or causing any employee or prospective employee to take or submit to any lie detector test;
2. Using, accepting, referring to, or inquiring concerning the results of any lie detector test of any employee or prospective employee;
3. Discharging, disciplining, discriminating against in any manner, or denying employment or promotion to, or threatening to take any such action against (a) any employee or prospective employee who refuses, declines, or fails to take or submit to any lie detector test, or (b) any employee or prospective employee on the basis of the results of any lie detector test; or
4. Discharging, disciplining, discriminating against in any manner, or denying employment or promotion to, or threatening to take any such action against an employee or prospective employee (a) because the individual has filed any complaint or instituted or caused any proceeding under or related to the Act, (b) because the individual has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding, or (c) because of the exercise by the individual, on behalf of himself or herself or another person, of any right afforded by the Act.

For purposes of this provision, a "lie detector test" includes a polygraph, voice stress analyzer, psychological stress evaluator, or any other similar device (whether mechanical or electrical) that is used, or the results of which are used, for the purpose of rendering a diagnostic opinion regarding the honesty or dishonesty of an individual.ⁿ¹⁸⁸

The act does not apply to the United States government, any state or local government, or any political subdivision thereof.ⁿ¹⁸⁹ The act also provides exemptions for administration by the federal government, in the performance of intelligence or counterintelligence functions, of lie detector tests to certain employees of private employers who have contracts with the Department of Defense, the Department of Energy, the National Security Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, or any other department, agency, or program whose duties involve access to certain classified information.ⁿ¹⁹⁰ Certain limited exemptions are also provided for private employers when the lie detector test is part of an ongoing investigation involving economic loss to the employer's business,ⁿ¹⁹¹ or when the employer's primary business purpose consists of providing specified types of security services, unless the prospective employee to whom the test is to be administered is not employed to render those services.ⁿ¹⁹² In addition, employers who are authorized to manufacture, distribute, or dispense certain controlled substances are also permitted to administer lie detector tests to current or prospective employees under specified circumstances.ⁿ¹⁹³

Violation of the act may result in the assessment of civil penalties by the Secretary of Labor, who may also bring an action for legal and equitable relief against employers who violate the Act.ⁿ¹⁹⁴ In addition, an employer who violates the Act is liable to the affected employee or prospective employee for appropriate legal or equitable relief including, but not limited to, employment, reinstatement, promotion, and payment of lost wages and benefits.ⁿ¹⁹⁵ A civil action to obtain such relief may be brought in any federal or state court of competent jurisdiction within three years of the alleged violation.ⁿ¹⁹⁶ In its discretion, the court may award reasonable costs, including attorney's fees, to the prevailing party.ⁿ¹⁹⁷

Except for the exemptions relating to governmental agencies and certain national security and defense contractors, the act does not preempt any provision of any state or local law or of any negotiated collective bargaining agreement that prohibits lie detector tests or is more restrictive with respect to such tests than any provision of the act.ⁿ¹⁹⁸

For discussion of California statutory provisions relating to lie detector tests,ⁿ¹⁹⁹ see [2][s] and [x], above. For complete discussion of federal and state statutory restrictions on the use of lie detector tests, see Chapter 50.

[g] Employee Retirement Income Security Act Provision Prohibiting Discharge to Avoid Payment of Benefits (Title 29 of United States Code, Section 1140)

The Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA)ⁿ²⁰⁰ makes it unlawful for an employer to discharge, fine, suspend, expel, discipline, or otherwise discriminate against anyone for exercising his or her rights or testifying in a proceeding related to ERISA or for the purpose of interfering with the attainment of any right to which the person may become entitled under an employee benefits plan.ⁿ²⁰¹ The section can be enforced by a civil action pursuant to Title 29 United States Code Section 1132.ⁿ²⁰² No specific remedies are provided by the statute, but the case law indicates that courts may award back pay, reinstatement, and other make-whole relief, including attorney's fees.ⁿ²⁰³

It should be noted that a common law wrongful termination action relating to ERISA benefits is preempted by ERISA.ⁿ²⁰⁴

For further discussion of preemption by ERISA, see § 60.09[1][c].

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

In a common law wrongful termination complaint, plaintiff's counsel should carefully avoid any reference to an alleged motivation on the part of the employer to deprive the employee of severance or pension benefits (or any other benefits regulated by ERISA) as a basis for the termination. The broad sweep of ERISA preemption will almost certainly be held to defeat any tort claims based on such allegations of bad faith. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

ERISA does not require however, a well pleaded state-law complaint be preempted just because it includes in its prayer language demanding back pay and benefits. Commentary by John M. True, III.

[h] Environmental Statutes With Employee Protection Provisions

[i] Air Pollution Prevention and Control Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 42 United States Code, Section 7622)

Title 42 United States Code Section 7622(a), provides that no employer may discharge or otherwise discriminate against any employee for his or her participation in any proceedings related to the Air Pollution Prevention and Control Act.ⁿ²⁰⁵

Section 7622 provides an administrative remedy for an employee who believes he or she has suffered such discrimination.ⁿ²⁰⁶ The employee must file a complaint with the Secretary of Labor within thirty days of the alleged discriminatory action.ⁿ²⁰⁷ The Secretary investigates and notifies both parties of the results of the investigation within thirty days.ⁿ²⁰⁸ Within the following 90 days, after providing notice and an opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary either denies the complaint or orders relief.ⁿ²⁰⁹ Relief may include any "affirmative action to abate the violation," as well as reinstatement, lost wages and benefits, compensatory damages, and attorney's fees and costs.ⁿ²¹⁰ Review of the Secretary's order is in the United States Court of Appeals; a petition for such review must be filed within 60 days after the issuance of the order.ⁿ²¹¹ The employee or the Secretary of Labor may file a civil action in federal district court to enforce an order issued by the Secretary under section 7622(b), and, if successful, may obtain relief including injunctive relief and compensatory and punitive damages.ⁿ²¹²

In addition, any person on whose behalf an order is issued under section 7622(b) may bring a civil action to enforce the order in federal district court.ⁿ²¹³ In enforcing the order, the court may award attorneys fees and costs in its discretion.ⁿ²¹⁴

[ii] Energy Reorganization Act of 1974 Provision Protecting Employees (Title 42 United States Code, Section 5851)

Title 42 United States Code Section 5851(a) prohibits employers from discriminating against any employee who notifies his or her employer of an alleged violation of, refuses to engage in any practice made unlawful by, or participates in a proceeding under the Energy Reorganization Actⁿ²¹⁵ or the Atomic Energy Act of 1954.ⁿ²¹⁶ The Fourth Circuit has held that, in addition to retaliatory discharge, retaliatory harassment is a form of discrimination actionable under this statute.ⁿ²¹⁷ However, not every termination of an employee involved in activity protected by the Act is a violation of the statute. For example, in one case, the Ninth Circuit upheld a decision by the Secretary of Labor finding that an employer could require an employee to obtain permission from a supervisor to engage in certain protected activity, and that failure to obtain such permission could give rise to a reasonable cause for termination.ⁿ²¹⁸

An employee who believes he or she has experienced discrimination under the statute must file a complaint with the Secretary of Labor within 180 days of the discriminatory act.ⁿ²¹⁹

Within 30 days thereafter, the Secretary will investigate, provide notice and a hearing, and within 90 days issue an order.ⁿ²²⁰

Potential relief includes any "affirmative action to abate the violation," including reinstatement, back pay, compensatory damages, and costs and attorney's fees. Appeal from the Secretary's order must be taken within 60 days to the United States Court of Appeals.ⁿ²²¹ If the Secretary has not issued a final decision within 1 year after the filing of the complaint, and there is no showing that the delay is due to the bad faith of the employee seeking relief, the employee may bring an action at law or equity for de novo review in the appropriate federal district court, which has jurisdiction over the action without regard to the amount in controversy.^{n221.1}

The remedies provided under the statute are cumulative to any relief available under pre-existing state law.ⁿ²²² Thus, for example, the United States Supreme Court has held that an employee's state law claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress, arising from an alleged wrongful termination because of the employee's complaints about nuclear safety violations, was not preempted by the Energy Reorganization Act.ⁿ²²³ For further discussion of preemption issues, see § 60.09[1][f].

[iii] Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (Superfund Act) Provision Protecting Employees (Title 42 United States Code, Section 9610)

The Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (Superfund Act)ⁿ²²⁴ regulates the release of hazardous substances into the environment. It prohibits terminating or discriminating against any employee or employee representative for providing information, instituting a proceeding, or testifying in any proceeding under the Act.ⁿ²²⁵ The Act provides an administrative remedy for violation of the employee's rights under the Act.ⁿ²²⁶ The employee may apply to the Secretary of Labor for review of any termination or discriminatory act against the employee within 30 days of the occurrence of the firing or discrimination.ⁿ²²⁷

The Secretary investigates the charges and holds a hearing at the request of any party.ⁿ²²⁸ If the Secretary finds that the violation did occur, he or she may order affirmative action to abate the violation, including rehiring or reinstatement and attorney's fees.ⁿ²²⁹ The statute has no application to any employee who, acting without discretion from the employer, deliberately violates any requirement of the Act.ⁿ²³⁰

In Pogue v. U.S. Department of Labor,ⁿ²³¹ the Secretary of Labor dismissed a complaint for wrongful termination based on retaliation under this statute, in contravention of the administrative law judge's finding of retaliation, and the Ninth Circuit reversed. The court held that the evidence supported the conclusion that the plaintiff's discharge resulted from her attempts to report instances of hazardous waste noncompliance at the naval shipyard in which she was a civilian employee charged with responsibility for surveying and reporting on hazardous waste compliance. Because the defendant asserted that legitimate reasons existed for the plaintiff's discharge, the court applied the "dual motive" test. Under this test, once the employee shows that illegal motives played some part in the discharge, the employer must prove that it would have discharged the employee even if he or she had not been engaged in protected conduct. Based on the facts in this case, the employer failed to meet that burden.ⁿ²³²

[iv] Safe Drinking Water Act Employee Protection Provision (Title 42 United States Code, Section 300j-9)

Title 42 United States Code Section 300j-9(i)(1) prohibits an employer from discharging or otherwise discriminating against an employee for commencing, testifying in, or assisting or participating in proceedings under the Safe Drinking Water Actⁿ²³³ or comparable state regulations. An employee who feels that the section has been violated may report the violation to the Secretary of Labor within 30 days.ⁿ²³⁴ The Secretary is empowered to order reinstatement, back pay, compensatory and punitive damages, and attorney's fees and costs.ⁿ²³⁵ If a party fails to comply with the Secretary's order, the Secretary may file a civil action in federal district court to enforce it.ⁿ²³⁶ Review of the Secretary's orders takes place in the United States Court of Appeals.ⁿ²³⁷

[v] Solid Waste Disposal Act Employee Protection Provision (Title 42 United States Code, Section 6971)

The Solid Waste Disposal Actⁿ²³⁸ is a statutory scheme providing for proper and economical solid waste disposal practices. Title 42 United States Code Section 6971(a) prohibits discharge or other discrimination against any employee or employee representative for filing, instituting, or testifying in proceedings under the Act. An aggrieved employee may file a complaint with the Secretary of Labor within 30 days of the alleged discriminatory act.ⁿ²³⁹ Potential remedies include, without limitation, rehiring or reinstatement, back pay, attorney's fees, and costs.ⁿ²⁴⁰

[vi] Toxic Substances Control Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 15 United States Code, Section 2622)

The Toxic Substances Control Actⁿ²⁴¹ regulates chemical substances that pose a risk of injury to health or the environment. The act prohibits discharge or discrimination against any employee who commences proceedings or assists or testifies in such proceedings.ⁿ²⁴² An employee who feels that the section has been violated may report the violation to the Secretary of Labor within 30 days.ⁿ²⁴³ The Secretary is empowered to order reinstatement, back pay, compensatory and punitive damages, and attorney's fees and costs.ⁿ²⁴⁴ The Secretary may file a civil action in federal district court to enforce an order.ⁿ²⁴⁵ Review of the Secretary's orders takes place in the United States Court of Appeals.ⁿ²⁴⁶

[vii] Water Pollution Control Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 33 United States Code, Section 1367)

Title 33 United States Code Section 1367(a) prohibits the firing of or discrimination against an employee or employee representative because that person has filed, instituted, or testified in proceedings to administer or enforce the Water Pollution Control Act.ⁿ²⁴⁷ Anyone subjected to a violation of section 1367(a) may file a complaint within 30 days with the Secretary of Labor, who will investigate the complaint, provide an opportunity for a hearing, and make a determination.ⁿ²⁴⁸ If the Secretary determines that a violation did occur, the Secretary may require affirmative action to remedy the violation, including but not limited to reinstatement, attorney's fees and costs.ⁿ²⁴⁹

Any employee or employee representative who is discharged, laid off, threatened with discharge or layoff, or otherwise discriminated against because of the results of any effluent limitation or order issued under the act may request a full investigation and public hearing on the matter.ⁿ²⁵⁰

A public report on the matter must be prepared, indicating the effect of the effluent order on the discharge, lay-off, or discrimination, and making recommendations regarding the same.ⁿ²⁵¹

[i] Fair Labor Standards Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 29 United States Code, Section 215(a)(3))

The Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA)ⁿ²⁵² governs the wages and hours of certain employees. Title 29 United States Code Section 215(a)(3), makes it unlawful to discharge or otherwise discriminate against any person for filing, instituting, or testifying in proceedings under the FLSA. Title 29 United States Code Section 216(b) provides that an employer violating section 215(a)(3) shall be liable for such legal and equitable relief as may be appropriate to effectuate the protective purposes of section 215(a)(3), including but not limited to reinstatement, promotion, back pay, and an equal additional amount as liquidated damages.^{n252.1} The injured employee may file an action on behalf of himself or herself and any similarly situated employee in any state or federal court of competent jurisdiction.ⁿ²⁵³ A successful plaintiff may also obtain attorney's fees and costs.ⁿ²⁵⁴ The right to bring such a civil action terminates if the Secretary of Labor files a complaint for minimum wages or overtime compensation or for legal or equitable relief for violation of section 215(a)(3).ⁿ²⁵⁵

For discussion of administrative and judicial remedies under federal wage and hour laws, see Chapter 5.

[j] Immigration Reform and Control Act (Title 8 United States Code, Section 1324b)

The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA)ⁿ²⁵⁶ contains a provision prohibiting employment discrimination based on an authorized alien's national origin or, if the alien is a "protected individual" (e.g., a lawful permanent resident or a temporary resident), because of the alien's citizenship status.ⁿ²⁵⁷ An aggrieved alien must file a discrimination charge with the Justice Department's Special Counsel for Immigration-Related Unfair Employment Practices.ⁿ²⁵⁸ The Special Counsel will investigate the charge and may bring a discrimination complaint before an administrative law judge (ALJ).ⁿ²⁵⁹

After a hearing, the ALJ will issue a discrimination determination,ⁿ²⁶⁰ and may order various remedies, including back pay and specified civil penalties.ⁿ²⁶¹

For an overview of the IRCA antidiscrimination provisions, see Chapter 40, Part C.

[k] Jury System Improvement Act of 1978 Employee Protection Provision (Title 28 United States Code, Section 1875)

A provision of the Jury System Improvement Act of 1978ⁿ²⁶² protects permanent employees from discharge, intimidation, or coercion because of actual or scheduled federal jury service.ⁿ²⁶³ An employer violating this provision may be liable to the employee for reinstatement, lost wages and benefits, and any "other appropriate relief."ⁿ²⁶⁴ Additionally, the employer may be fined up to $5,000 for each violation as to each employee, and may be ordered to perform community service.ⁿ²⁶⁵

An employee who believes he or she has been subjected to a violation of the statute may apply to the appropriate district court to obtain appointed counsel.ⁿ²⁶⁶ A prevailing employee in a jury service discrimination case may obtain attorney's fees and costs, while a prevailing employer can obtain attorney's fees only on a showing that the action was frivolous, vexatious, or brought in bad faith.n267

Any employee who is reinstated in accordance with this statute is considered to have been on furlough or leave of absence during the period of jury service, and the absence will not deprive the employee of any seniority rights, insurance, or benefits relating to employees on furlough or leave of absence.n268

[l] National Labor Relations Act (Title 29 United States Code, Section 158)

The National Labor Relations Act,n269 enacted in 1935, codifies the right of employees to engage in self-organization, collective bargaining, and mutual aid and protection. The act prohibits discharge based on union activity or other concerted activity relating to the employees' common interests, or the exercise of any rights under the act.n270 A common law wrongful termination claim is preempted by the NLRA if the plaintiff contends he or she was discharged for union or other concerted activity.n271 The employee terminated for such activity must file an unfair labor practice charge with the National Labor Relations Board.n272

For discussion of preemption of common law wrongful discharge actions by federal labor laws, see § 60.09[1][b].

[m] Occupational Safety and Health Act Provision Protecting Employees (Title 29 United States Code, Section 660(c))

The Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA)n273 forbids discharge or discrimination against any employee because he or she has instituted or testified in any proceedings under the Act or exercised rights afforded by its provisions.n274 Title 29 United States Code Section 660 provides that an employee who believes he or she has been discharged in violation of the Act may file a complaint with the Secretary of Labor within 30 days of the discriminatory action.n275 If, on investigation, the Secretary finds a violation, he or she must bring a civil action against the violator in the district court.n276 The court may order reinstatement, back pay, and any other appropriate remedy.n277

Section 660(c) does not give rise to a private right of action.n278

[n] Amtrak Reform and Accountability Act of 1997 (Title 49 United States Code, Section 20101)

A section of the Amtrak Reform and Accountability Act of 1997n279 provides that a railroad engaged in interstate or foreign commerce may not discharge, demote, suspend, reprimand, or otherwise discriminate against any employee because the employee has filed a complaint, instituted proceedings, or testified under the Act.n280 It further provides that the railroad may not discharge, demote, suspend, reprimand, or discriminate against an employee for refusing to work when confronted by a hazardous condition related to the performance of the employee's duties, if the following conditions exist: (1) the refusal is in good faith and there is no reasonable alternative available to the employee; (2) the condition is such that a reasonable person would conclude that it posed imminent danger of death or serious injury; (3) there is insufficient time to eliminate the danger through regular statutory channels; and (4) the employee, when possible, has notified the employer of the existence of the hazardous condition and his or her intention not to work unless the condition is corrected immediately.n281

Any dispute under Title 45 United States Code Section 441, is subject to the jurisdiction of the National Railroad Adjustment Board and the administrative procedures set out in Title 45 United States Code Section 153.n282 An employee protected by section 441 and any other provision of law must elect either the remedy provided in the Railroad Safety Act or the other available remedy.n283

The Secretary of Transportation or the Secretary of Homeland Security may not disclose the name of an employee who has provided information about an alleged violation of either this act, or 49 U.S.C. § 5101 et seq., or a regulation under either, except that the employee's identity may be disclosed to the Attorney General if the matter is referred to the Attorney General for enforcement.^{n283.1}

[o] Railway Labor Act--Provision Protecting Employees (Title 45 United States Code, Section 152)

The Railway Labor Actⁿ²⁸⁴ governs the relationship between covered railway and airline employers and employees. In Title 45 United States Code Section 152, the act sets out the following general rights and duties of the employer and employee, among other things: (1) carriers and employees must make every reasonable effort to make and maintain agreements and to settle disputes; (2) employers must not coerce employees in their designation of representatives; (3) employees have the right to organize and bargain collectively; and (4) carriers may not require job applicants to sign any agreement promising to join or not join a labor organization. Section 152 also sets out the procedure for resolving disputes, and provides that a willful failure to comply with any of these provisions is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine and/or imprisonment.

An individual discharged in violation of this section may bring a private civil action for damages and reinstatement.ⁿ²⁸⁵ The statute has been interpreted broadly to provide a private right of action for a nonunion employee discharged for his or her organizing activities.ⁿ²⁸⁶ The remedy for a violation of the statute includes reinstatement and compensatory damages.ⁿ²⁸⁷ Moreover, the Supreme Court has determined that the RLA does not preempt a claim for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy brought under the state whistleblower statute.ⁿ²⁸⁸ For discussion, see § 60.09[1][c][iii].

[p] Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Title 29 United States Code, Sections 701-796(i))

In addition to the provisions of the California Fair Employment and Housing Actⁿ²⁸⁹ and the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990,ⁿ²⁹⁰ disabled employees may be protected by the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973.ⁿ²⁹¹

Title 29 United States Code Section 793(a), requires federal contractors to take affirmative action to employ and advance qualified handicapped persons. An employee may file a complaint with the Department of Labor if section 793(a) is violated.ⁿ²⁹² However, there is no private right of action under this provision.ⁿ²⁹³

The act also forbids discrimination against the disabled by any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance.ⁿ²⁹⁴ This type of discrimination may be addressed by way of a private civil action.ⁿ²⁹⁵ The act explicitly makes available all the rights and remedies set forth in section 717 of Title VII,ⁿ²⁹⁶ including injunctive relief, back pay, and attorney's fees.ⁿ²⁹⁷

For discussion of disability discrimination against employees generally, see Chapters 40 through 44.

[q] Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title 42 United States Code Sections 2000e et seq.)

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964,ⁿ²⁹⁸ prohibits employment discrimination, including discharge, on the basis of race, color, sex, religion, or national origin.ⁿ²⁹⁹ It also prohibits retaliation against an employee who opposes any practice prohibited by Title VII or who participates in any proceedings under Title VII.ⁿ³⁰⁰ An employee or job applicant who believes he or she has experienced discrimination violative of Title VII must file a charge of discrimination with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission within prescribed periods of time.ⁿ³⁰¹ The complainant must commence a civil action within 90 days of the EEOC's issuance of a notice of right to sue.ⁿ³⁰² A Title VII plaintiff in a civil action may be able to obtain back pay, injunctive relief, attorney's fees, and any other equitable relief that the court may deem proper.ⁿ³⁰³ In addition, compensatory and punitive damages, up to a statutory maximum, are available in Title VII civil actions involving intentional discrimination.ⁿ³⁰⁴ For further discussion of Title VII, see Chapters 40 through 43.

[r] Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994 (Title 38, United States Code, Section 4301 et seq.)

Federal law provides job protection to working persons who leave work to perform service in the armed forces or other uniformed service.ⁿ³⁰⁵

Generally, these statutory provisions provide for employment and reemployment of, and prohibit discrimination against, persons returning to their jobs after service in the uniformed services. Once a person is reemployed, he or she may not be discharged, except for cause, for one year after the date of reemployment if he or she served more than 180 days, for 180 days after the date of reemployment if he or she served more than 30 but less than 180 days.ⁿ³⁰⁶ A person reemployed under these provisions is entitled to retain seniority and certain other benefits on reemployment.ⁿ³⁰⁷

The provisions protecting former uniformed services members may be enforced administratively through complaints filed with the Department of Labor.ⁿ³⁰⁸ Alternatively, the aggrieved person may bring an action in federal district court on his or her own behalf to obtain relief for violation of the statute.ⁿ³⁰⁹ The potential relief available in such an action includes lost wages and benefits, liquidated damages for wilful violations, equitable relief, attorney's fees and other litigation costs, and prejudgment interest.ⁿ³¹⁰

For additional discussion of protections applicable to veterans, see Chapters 40, 43, and 44.

[s] Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act (Title 29 United States Code, Sections 2101 et seq.)

Under the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act (WARN Act),ⁿ³¹¹ certain employers are generally required to give employees notice of "plant closings" or "mass layoffs,"ⁿ³¹² as defined in the WARN Act,ⁿ³¹³ and they may not order such closings or layoffs until 60 days after they have served written notice thereof on the employee representativesⁿ³¹⁴ or employees and on the state dislocated worker unit and the chief elected official of the unit of local governmentⁿ³¹⁵ within which the closing or layoff is to occur.ⁿ³¹⁶

The WARN Act defines "employer" as any business enterprise that employs either (1) 100 or more employees, excluding part-time employees, or (2) 100 or more employees who in the aggregate work at least 4,000 hours per week, exclusive of overtime.ⁿ³¹⁷

The WARN Act requires employers to give employees 60 days' notice in the event of a plant closing or mass layoff at a "single site of employment."^{n317.1} For construction workers, the "site of employment" is the workers' actual work site, under the Act's implementing regulations.^{n317.2}

An employer who violates the WARN Act is liable to each aggrieved employeeⁿ³¹⁸ who suffers an employment loss because of the closing or layoff.ⁿ³¹⁹ An aggrieved employee is entitled to back pay for each day of the violation, up to a maximum of 60 days, and certain employee benefits governed by ERISA.ⁿ³²⁰ The Ninth Circuit joins the majority of circuits which have addressed the issue in construing the statute to mean 60 work days, rather than 60 calendar days. Thus, "back pay" means pay for every work day the employee would have been paid had the violation not occurred, not pay for each calendar day during the period.ⁿ³²¹ "Back pay" includes tip income and holiday-rate pay if employees can prove that they would have worked on a holiday.ⁿ³²² The employer's liability is reduced by certain payments made by the employer to the employee or to third parties on behalf of the employee.ⁿ³²³ Employers who fail to give notice to local government units with respect to these notice requirements are also subject to a civil penalty of not more than $500 for each day of violation.ⁿ³²⁴ The court may award attorney's fees, in its discretion, to the prevailing party as part of the costs.ⁿ³²⁵ Payments to employees for violations of the WARN Act may not be construed to be wages or compensation for purposes of unemployment compensation benefits. Thus, unemployment compensation benefits may not be denied or reduced because of the receipt of payments related in any way to an employer's violation of the WARN Act.ⁿ³²⁶

The U.S. Supreme Court has held that the statute of limitations for a claim alleging a violation of the WARN Act is determined by borrowing the statute of limitations from the most closely analogous state statute.ⁿ³²⁷

A federal district court had previously held that the analogous California statute of limitations to be applied to WARN Act violations is Code of Civil Procedure, section 338(a), which provides a three-year limitation period for an action on a liability created by statute, other than a penalty or forfeiture.ⁿ³²⁸

[t] Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) (Title 29 United States Code, Section 2101 et seq.)

The Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) (Title 29 United States Code Section 2101 et seq.) limits an employer's right to terminate or discipline employees. For a complete discussion of the statute, see Chapter 8.

[u] Federal Airline Deregulation Act's Whistleblower Protection Program

The Federal Airline Deregulation Act's Whistleblower Protection Programⁿ³²⁹ does not create a private right of action, allowing an aggrieved employee to bring a suit in federal district court to allege violations of the Act.ⁿ³³⁰

[4] Local Ordinances

An ordinance enacted by the City of Los Angeles requiring purchasers of large grocery stores to employ the prior store's workforce for 90 days was preempted by the California Retail Food Code,ⁿ³³¹ based on the Legislature's express intent to fully occupy the field of health and sanitation standards for retail food facilities, because the ordinance required successor grocery employers to employ experienced workers in order to maintain health and safety standards at the store during the transition to new management.ⁿ³³² Further, the ordinance was preempted by the National Labor Relations Actⁿ³³³ and federal law interpreting its provisions, because it invaded a zone reserved to market freedom and altered the bargaining process established under federal law, as shown by its effect on a new employer's obligation to bargain with the employees of its predecessor.ⁿ³³⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships At-Will Employment General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 1028.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 1025. See also Gosvener v. Coastal Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 805, 815-816, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339, 51 Cal. App. 4th 805, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339 (employer that repeatedly accommodated employee's attempts to recover from alcoholism could properly discharge employee after he began drinking after each accommodation and was often too drunk to come to work).

(n3)Footnote 3. Sullivan v. Delta Airlines (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 938, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584.

(n4)Footnote 4. Sullivan v. Delta Airlines (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 938, 942, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584.

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 1041(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 1041(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 1042.

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 1043.

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 1044.

(n10)Footnote 10. Pitman v. City of Oakland (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1044, 243 Cal. Rptr. 306 (to state cause of action under Lab. Code § 432.7, plaintiff must affirmatively allege that that arrest did not result in a conviction).

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 432.7(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. Faria v. San Jacinto Unified School District (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1939, 1943-1948, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Lab. Code § 432.7(e).

(n14)Footnote 14. Lab. Code § 432.7(f)(1).

(n15)Footnote 15. Lab. Code § 432.7(f)(2).

(n16)Footnote 16. Lab. Code § 432.7(a).

(n17)Footnote 17. Pitman v. City of Oakland (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1037, 1044, 243 Cal. Rptr. 306 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Lab. Code § 432.7(c).

(n19)Footnote 19. Lab. Code § 432.7(c).

(n20)Footnote 20. Lab. Code § 432.7(d).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Lab. Code § 432.7(c) (section only refers to applicants); see also Faria v. San Jacinto Unified School District (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1939, 1943-1948, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72 .

(n22)Footnote 22. Faria v. San Jacinto Unified School District (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1939, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 72 .

(n23)Footnote 23. Lab. Code § 432.7(g).

(n24)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 2871.

(n25)Footnote 25. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n26)Footnote 26. Gov. Code § 12940(a).

(n27)Footnote 27. Gov. Code § 12945(a).

(n28)Footnote 28. Gov. Code § 12945.2.

(n29)Footnote 29. Gov. Code § 12960.

(n30)Footnote 30. Gov. Code § 12965(b). For discussion of the statutes of limitation under FEHA, see ch. 43, .

(n31)Footnote 31. Gov. Code § 12965(b); Commodore Home Systems, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 211, 215, 185 Cal. Rptr. 270, 649 P.2d 912 ; see American National Ins. Co. v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 603, 607, 186 Cal. Rptr. 345, 651 P.2d 1151 (awarding back pay and reinstatement to victim of discrimination under FEHA). For discussion of remedies under FEHA, see ch. 43, pt. A.

(n32)Footnote 32. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 894-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 (FEHA's age discrimination remedies are not exclusive and "do not bar a tort claim for wrongful discharge in violation of the public policy against age discrimination"); Nelson v. United Technologies (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 597, 611-612, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 (California Family Rights Act (CFRA) remedies are not exclusive and do not bar claim for wrongful discharge based on violation of CFRA); Rojo v. Klinger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 73 82, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 ; see Gov. Code § 12993(a) (FEHA not deemed to repeal any other California law relating to discrimination, unless provisions of other law provide less protection than that afforded by FEHA to enumerated classes of persons covered under FEHA).

(n33)Footnote 33. Lab. Code § 98.6(a). See ch. 5 for discussion of proceedings before Labor Commissioner.

(n34)Footnote 33.1. Lab. Code § 98.6(a).

(n35)Footnote 34. Lab. Code § 98.6(b).

(n36)Footnote 35. Lab. Code § 98.6(b).

(n37)Footnote 35.1. Grinzi v. San Diego Hospice Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 72, 84-87, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 893 .

(n38)Footnote 35.2. Grinzi v. San Diego Hospice Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 72, 84-87, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 893 .

(n39)Footnote 36. Lab. Code § 98.7(a).

(n40)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 98.7(a).

(n41)Footnote 38. Lab. Code § 98.7(a).

(n42)Footnote 39. Lab. Code § 98.7(e).

(n43)Footnote 40. Lab. Code § 98.7(d)(1).

(n44)Footnote 41. Lab. Code § 98.7(f).

(n45)Footnote 42. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1237(a).

(n46)Footnote 43. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1237(b).

(n47)Footnote 44. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1237(b); see Labor Code §§ 98.6, 98.7; see also § 60.03[2][g].

(n48)Footnote 45. Lab. Code § 132a(1).

(n49)Footnote 46. Lab. Code § 132a(2), (3), (4).

(n50)Footnote 47. Lab. Code § 132a(4).

(n51)Footnote 48. Judson Steel Corp. v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Board (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 658, 667, 150 Cal. Rptr. 250, 586 P.2d 564 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n52)Footnote 49. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1148, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959

P.2d 752 .

(n53)Footnote 49.1. For these purposes, "domestic violence" is any of the types of abuse set forth in Fam. Code § 6211; Lab. Code § 230.1(g)(1).

(n54)Footnote 49.2. For these purposes, "sexual assault" is any of the crimes set forth in Pen. Code §§ 261, 261.5, 262, 265, 266, 266a, 266b, 266c, 266g, 266j, 267, 269, 273.4, 285, 286, 288, 288a, 288.5, 289, 311.4; Lab. Code § 230.1(g)(2).

(n55)Footnote 49.3. Lab. Code § 230.1(a).

(n56)Footnote 49.4. Lab. Code § 230.1(e).

(n57)Footnote 49.5. Lab. Code § 230.1(f).

(n58)Footnote 49.6. Lab. Code § 230.1(b)(1).

(n59)Footnote 49.7. Lab. Code § 230.1(b)(2).

(n60)Footnote 49.8. Lab. Code § 230.1(b)(3).

(n61)Footnote 49.9. Lab. Code § 230.1(c).

(n62)Footnote 49.10. Lab. Code § 230.1(d); see Lab. Code § 98.7.

(n63)Footnote 50. Kouff v. Bethlehem-Alameda Shipyard (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 322, 324-325, 202 P.2d 1059 .

(n64)Footnote 51. Former Elec. Code § 695.

(n65)Footnote 52. Lab. Code §§ 1051, 1057. While not addressed by these Labor Code sections, licensed day care providers would presumably be exempt from these provisions because they are required to obtain and submit fingerprints of their employees. See Health & Safety Code § 1596.871(c)(1).

(n66)Footnote 53. Lab. Code § 1054.

(n67)Footnote 54. Lab. Code § 1054.

(n68)Footnote 55. Lab. Code § 2929(b).

(n69)Footnote 56. 15 U.S.C. § 1671 et seq.

(n70)Footnote 57. Fam. Code § 5290.

(n71)Footnote 58. Fam. Code § 5290.

(n72)Footnote 59. See Health & Safety Code § 123420(a).

(n73)Footnote 60. See Health & Safety Code § 123420(a).

(n74)Footnote 61. Health & Safety Code § 123420(a).

(n75)Footnote 62. Penal Code § 11161.8.

(n76)Footnote 63. Gov. Code § 12900 et. seq. For discussion of FEHA, see [c], above.

(n77)Footnote 64. See Lab. Code § 230(a).

(n78)Footnote 65. Lab. Code § 230(b).

(n79)Footnote 66. See Fam. Code § 6211 ("domestic violence" defined).

(n80)Footnote 67. See Pen. Code §§ 261, 261.5, 262, 265, 266, 266a, 266b, 266c, 266g, 266j, 267, 269, 273.4, 285, 286, 288, 288a, 288.5, 289, 311.4 ("sexual assault" defined).

(n81)Footnote 68. Lab. Code § 230(c).

(n82)Footnote 69. Lab. Code § 230(d)(1).

(n83)Footnote 70. Lab. Code § 230(d)(2) (sufficient certification defined).

(n84)Footnote 71. See Lab. Code § 230(e).

(n85)Footnote 72. Lab. Code § 230(e).

(n86)Footnote 72.1. See Lab. Code § 230(f); see also Lab. Code § 98.7.

(n87)Footnote 72.2. Lab. Code § 230(g).

(n88)Footnote 73. Montalvo v. Zamora (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 69, 75, 86 Cal. Rptr. 401 .

(n89)Footnote 73.1. Gelini v. Tishgart (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 219, 222, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 447 .

(n90)Footnote 73.2. Montalvo v. Zamora (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 69, 75, 86 Cal. Rptr. 401 .

(n91)Footnote 73.3. See Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 176, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 .

(n92)Footnote 73.4. See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 666, fn. 5, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n93)Footnote 73.5. Gelini v. Tishgart (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 219, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 447 .

(n94)Footnote 73.6. See Gelini v. Tishgart (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 219, 222, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 447 .

(n95)Footnote 74. Robinson v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1108, 1131-1132, 228 Cal. Rptr. 591 .

(n96)Footnote 75. Robinson v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1108, 1131-1132, 228 Cal. Rptr. 591 .

(n97)Footnote 76. Glenn v. Clearman's Golden Cock Inn (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 793, 798, 13 Cal. Rptr. 769 .

(n98)Footnote 77. Wetherton v. Growers Farm Labor Ass'n (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 168, 175, 79 Cal. Rptr. 543 , disapproved on other grounds, Applied Equipment Corp. V. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 n.10, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 475, 869 P.2d 454 ; Glenn v. Clearman's Golden Cock Inn (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 793, 797, 13 Cal. Rptr. 769 .

(n99)Footnote 78. Escamilla v. Marshburn Bros. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 472, 483, 121 Cal. Rptr. 891 .

(n100)Footnote 79. 29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n101)Footnote 80. Henry v. Intercontinental Radio, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 707, 711-715, 202 Cal. Rptr. 328.

(n102)Footnote 81. See Civ. Code §§ 56.10(a)-(c), 56.20(c), 56.30.

(n103)Footnote 82. Civ. Code § 56.22.

(n104)Footnote 83. Mil. & Vet. Code § 394; see also 38 U.S.C. § 4031 et seq. for similar federal provisions. For discussion of federal provisions, see [3][o], below.

(n105)Footnote 84. Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pac. Tele. & Tele. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 156 Cal. Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592.

(n106)Footnote 85. Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pac. Tele. & Tele. Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 156 Cal. Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592.

(n107)Footnote 85.1. Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791.

(n108)Footnote 85.2. Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1487, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 (plaintiff's allegations that his position as newspaper columnist was terminated after he appeared on radio show and criticized congresswoman, who was friend of newspaper publisher and who pressured publisher to terminate relationship, was sufficient evidence of public policy violation to survive summary judgment).

(n109)Footnote 86. Lab. Code § 432.2(b).

(n110)Footnote 87. Cal. Const., art. I, § 1; Long Beach City Employees Ass'n v. City of Long Beach (1986) 41 Cal. 3d 937, 948, 227 Cal. Rptr. 90, 719 P.2d 660.

(n111)Footnote 88. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 2002, 2006, 2007.

(n112)Footnote 89. Lab. Code § 450 (a); see Lab. Code § 450(b) (examples of employer coercion); see also discussion in ch. 2, pt. B.

(n113)Footnote 90. See Lab. Code § 451.

(n114)Footnote 90.1. See Lab. Code § 1400(b) ("employer" is any person, as defined by Lab. Code § 18, who directly or indirectly owns and operates a "covered establishment", as defined in Lab. Code § 1400(a) (has employed at least 75 persons within past 12 months), and includes a parent corporation as employer of any covered establishment directly owned and operated by its corporate subsidiary).

(n115)Footnote 90.2. See Lab. Code § 1400(c), ("layoff" for these purposes is a separation from a position for lack of funds or lack of work); and Lab. Code § 1400(d) ("mass layoff" is a layoff during any 30-day period of 50 or more employees at a covered establishment).

(n116)Footnote 90.3. See Lab. Code § 1400(e) ("relocation" is removal of all or substantially all of the industrial or commercial operations in a covered establishment to a different location at least 100 miles away).

(n117)Footnote 90.4. See Lab. Code § 1400(f) ("termination" is the cessation or substantial cessation of industrial or commercial operations in a covered establishment).

(n118)Footnote 90.5. See Lab. Code § 1400(a) ("any industrial or commercial facility or part thereof that employs, or has employed within the preceding 12 months, 75 or more persons").

(n119)Footnote 90.6. Lab. Code § 1401(a).

(n120)Footnote 90.7. See Lab. Code § 1400(h) ("employee" for these purposes is "a person employed by an employer for at least six of the 12 months preceding the date on which notice is required").

(n121)Footnote 90.8. Lab. Code § 1401(c).

(n122)Footnote 90.9. See discussion of Wage Order 11 in Ch. 1, § 1.05[2][b][xi]

(n123)Footnote 90.10. See discussion of Wage Order 12 in Ch. 1, § 1.05[2][b][xi].

(n124)Footnote 90.11. See discussion of Wage Order 16 in Ch. 1, § 1.05[2][c.1].

(n125)Footnote 90.12. Lab. Code § 1400(g)(1).

(n126)Footnote 90.13. Lab. Code § 1400(g)(2).

(n127)Footnote 90.14. Lab. Code § 1402.5(a).

(n128)Footnote 90.15. MacIsaac v. Waste Management Collection & Recycling, Inc. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1076, 1081-1092, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 650 (42 employees who were transferred to new employer were not separated from their positions and would not be added to 20 employees laid off to require notice under California WARN Act, where transferred employees continued to perform same functions at new employer that they had performed at former employer, new employer took on transferred employees at same pay, with same benefits, and at same level of seniority they had at former employer, and transferred employees lost not even one minute of work).

(n129)Footnote 90.16. Lab. Code § 1401(b). The federal WARN act is codified at 29 U.S.C. § 2101 et seq.

(n130)Footnote 90.17. Lab. Code 1402(a).

(n131)Footnote 90.18. Lab. Code § 1402(b).

(n132)Footnote 90.19. Lab. Code § 1402(c).

(n133)Footnote 90.20. Lab. Code § 1403.

(n134)Footnote 90.21. Lab. Code § 1404

(n135)Footnote 90.22. Lab. Code § 1405.

(n136)Footnote 90.23. 29 U.S.C. § 2101 et seq.

(n137)Footnote 90.24. Lab. Code § 1407(a); Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.1(a). See Unemp. Ins. Code § 926 et seq. For discussion of unemployment insurance, see Ch. 80.

(n138)Footnote 90.25. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.1(b). See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1251; for discussion, see Ch. 80.

(n139)Footnote 90.26. Lab. Code § 1407(b).

(n140)Footnote 90.27. Lab. Code § 1406.

(n141)Footnote 91. Lab. Code § 6300 et seq.

(n142)Footnote 92. Lab. Code § 6310.

(n143)Footnote 92.1. Lujan v. Minagar (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1040, 1044-1046, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 861 (employer could not fire employee she feared would make OSHA complaint).

(n144)Footnote 93. See Daly v. Exxon Corp. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 39, 45, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 727 .

(n145)Footnote 94. Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 299, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 .

(n146)Footnote 95. Lab. Code § 6311.

(n147)Footnote 96. Lab. Code § 6312.

(n148)Footnote 97. Lab. Code § 98.7(a).

(n149)Footnote 98. Lab. Code §§ 98.7, 6310(b).

(n150)Footnote 99. Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 109-110, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 ; Jenkins v. Family Health Program (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 440, 449, 262 Cal. Rptr. 798 ; Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 303 304, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 . See § 60.04[2][e].

(n151)Footnote 99.1. Taylor v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 380, 384-387, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 358 (trial court erroneously granted summary judgment in favor of employer after determining employee's claim under § 6310 was collaterally estopped by labor arbitrator's decision that employee was terminated for good cause, because CBA was never presented to court and there was no evidence it clearly and unmistakably provided for arbitration of employee's statutory claim).

(n152)Footnote 100. Lab. Code § 230.8(a)(1); see Lab. Code § 230.8(a)(2) (priorities if both parents employed by same employer at one work site, requiring employer approval for both parents to take leave at same time).

(n153)Footnote 101. Lab. Code § 230.8(b)(1); see Lab. Code § 230.8(b)(2) (limitation if employer accords all full-time employees vacation during same period of time during calendar year).

(n154)Footnote 102. Lab. Code § 230.8(c) (also providing that "documentation" means whatever written verification of parental participation school or licensed child day care facility deems appropriate and reasonable).

(n155)Footnote 103. Lab. Code § 230.8(d).

(n156)Footnote 104. Lab. Code § 230.8(d).

(n157)Footnote 105. Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n158)Footnote 106. Lab. Code § 2930(a).

(n159)Footnote 107. Penal Code § 637.3(a).

(n160)Footnote 108. Penal Code § 637.3(b).

(n161)Footnote 109. Penal Code § 637.3(c).

(n162)Footnote 110. Lab. Code § 230.3(a). For purposes of this provision, "volunteer firefighter" has the same meaning as the term "volunteer" in Gov. Code § 50952(n) (pertaining to length-of-service awards for firefighters). Lab. Code § 230.3(d).

(n163)Footnote 111. Lab. Code § 230.3(b).

(n164)Footnote 112. Lab. Code § 230.3(b).

(n165)Footnote 113. Lab. Code § 230.3(c).

(n166)Footnote 114. See Lab. Code § 232(a), (b).

(n167)Footnote 115. Lab. Code § 232(c).

(n168)Footnote 115.1. Lab. Code § 232.5(a), (b).

(n169)Footnote 115.2. Lab. Code § 232.5(c).

(n170)Footnote 115.3. Lab. Code § 232.5(d).

(n171)Footnote 116. See Lab. Code § 1102.5(a).

(n172)Footnote 117. See Lab. Code § 1106.

(n173)Footnote 118. Lab. Code § 1102.5(b). See Mokler v. County of Orange (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 121, 138-141, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 568 (substantial evidence supported former county employee's claim of retaliation in violation of Lab. Code § 1102.5(b), where employee established prima facie case by presenting substantial evidence she reasonably believed county's proposed action was illegal and her supervisors also believed change was illegal, because they instructed her not to inform state officials, and where evidence supporting pretext included fact she had never been reprimanded or received negative performance review during her county employment before she complained).

(n174)Footnote 119. Lab. Code § 1102.5(c).

(n175)Footnote 119.1. Lab. Code § 1102.5(d).

(n176)Footnote 119.2. Lab. Code § 1102.5(e).

(n177)Footnote 119.3. Lab. Code § 1102.5(g).

(n178)Footnote 119.4. See Evid. Code § 950 et seq.

(n179)Footnote 119.5. See Evid. Code § 990 et seq.

(n180)Footnote 119.6. See, e.g., Mueller v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 809, 821-822, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 281 (trial court properly granted employer summary judgment as to claim under Lab. Code § 1102.5, where claim was not about perceived violations of federal or state statutes, rules or regulations, but, rather, about perceived violations of employer's own policies, which were local policies).

(n181)Footnote 119.7. Mueller v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 809, 822, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 281 ; Patten v. Grant Joint Union High School Dist. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1378, 1385, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 113 .

(n182)Footnote 120. Lab. Code § 1103.

(n183)Footnote 121. Lab. Code § 1103.

(n184)Footnote 121.1. Lab. Code § 1102.5(f).

(n185)Footnote 122. Lab. Code § 1105.

(n186)Footnote 122.1. Lab. Code § 1102.6.

(n187)Footnote 122.2. Campbell v. Regents of University of California (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311 .

(n188)Footnote 122.3. Mokler v. County of Orange (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 121, 133-138, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 568 .

(n189)Footnote 123. See Gov. Code § 8547 et seq.

(n190)Footnote 124. See Shoemaker v. Myers (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1416, 1427-1428, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203 (construing former Gov. Code § 19683).

(n191)Footnote 125. Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 575, 588, 205 Cal. Rptr. 501, 685 P.2d 61 . See Colores v. Board of Trustees (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1301 n.1, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 (Lab. Code § 1102.5 reflects broad public-policy interest in encouraging whistleblowers to report unlawful acts without fearing retaliation): quoting Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 77, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046).

(n192)Footnote 126. Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 575, 588 n.12, 205 Cal. Rptr. 501, 685 P.2d 61 .

(n193)Footnote 127. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 . See also Colores v. Board of Trustees (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1305-1313, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 (former employee of state university system who reported suspected embezzlement to her employer could assert public-policy wrongful discharge claim without having informed other governmental agency).

(n194)Footnote 128. See Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1123-1124, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 . but see American Computer Corp. v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 664, 667-669, 261 Cal. Rptr. 796 (no violation of the public policy contained in Labor Code Section 1102.5 where employee reported suspected embezzlement to his employer, because only the employer's interest was served by the employee's report, as opposed to any public interest).

(n195)Footnote 129. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 77, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 . Lab. Code § 1102.5 has codified this holding with regard to government employees in Labor Code § 1102.5(e), which provides that a report by an employee of a government agency to his or her employer is a protected disclosure.

(n196)Footnote 129.1. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1123, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 .

(n197)Footnote 129.2. Patten v. Grant Joint Union High School Dist. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1378, 1384-1390, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 113 (trial court erred in granting summary judgment to employer where, although several disclosures by junior high school principal did not amount to whistleblowing as matter of law, others did present triable issue of material fact of protected whistleblowing, and where principal raised triable issue of material fact regarding whether her transfer from one position to another in smaller school constituted adverse employment action even though wages, benefits and duties were same and both schools were junior highs). See Yanowitz v. L'Oreal USA, Inc. (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 1028, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 436 .

(n198)Footnote 129.3. Brown v. Dept. of Corrections (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 520 (state employee's action for retaliation based on criminal prosecution of employee, who had made criminal threats against other correctional officers in course of phone call reporting misbehavior by officers, was barred by Civ. Code § 47(b)).

(n199)Footnote 129.4. See Hansen v. Dept. of Corrections & Rehabilitation (2008) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1537, 1542-1546, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 381 (trial court properly dismissed former correctional officer's cause of action for violation of Lab. Code § 1102.5 based on former employer's obtaining search warrant and having his home searched after he had retired, where statements and writings by employer's personnel during internal investigation and in securing search warrant were protected by anti-SLAPP statute as arising during official proceeding and judicial proceeding; officer did not establish that employer's activities were illegal as matter of law, given that there was no evidence that false accusations were knowingly made by employer's personnel; officer did not meet his burden of demonstrating probability of prevailing on his claims, as alleged retaliation took place after officer retired so that employer-employee relationship did not exist and officer could not state cause of action under Lab. Code § 1102.5).

(n200)Footnote 130. Lab. Code § 1102.7(a).

(n201)Footnote 130.1. Lab. Code § 1102.7(b).

(n202)Footnote 130.2. Lab. Code § 1102.7(c).

(n203)Footnote 130.3. Lab. Code § 1102.7(d).

(n204)Footnote 130.4. Lab. Code § 1102.8(a).

(n205)Footnote 130.5. U.S.-Japan, April 2, 1953, 4 U.S.T. 2063.

(n206)Footnote 130.6. *Ventress v. Japan Airlines (9th Cir. 2007) 486 F.3d 1111, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 9289, 6-17 (reversing district court's granting of judgment on pleadings for employer on ground that claims under California whistleblower statute, Lab. Code § 1102.5, were pre-empted by treaty).

(n207)Footnote 131. See Gov. Code § 12651(a).

(n208)Footnote 132. Gov. Code § 12653(a).

(n209)Footnote 133. Gov. Code § 12653(b).

(n210)Footnote 133.1. Mendonado v. Centinela Hospital Medical Center (9th Cir. 2008) 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 6854, *(nurse's complaint against employer alleging that she was wrongfully terminated in violation of Gov. Code § 12653(b) stated claim, where she alleged that she engaged in protected activity because she reasonably believed employer was possibly committing fraud against government and she investigated possible fraud, she complained to employer's CEO about possible civil and criminal violations, and employer terminated her because of her investigation into facts relating to employer's submission of false claims and false records to government).

(n211)Footnote 134. Gov. Code § 12653(c).

(n212)Footnote 135. Gov. Code § 12653(c).

(n213)Footnote 136. Gov. Code § 12653(c).

(n214)Footnote 137. Gov. Code § 12653(d).

(n215)Footnote 137.1. Campbell v. Regents of University of California (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 311.

(n216)Footnote 138. Gov. Code § 8547.3, 8547.8, 8547.10, 8547.11, 8547.12.

(n217)Footnote 139. Gov. Code § 8547.2(b).

(n218)Footnote 139.1. Gov. Code § 8547.10(c) (action for damages not available to injured party unless injured party has first filed complaint with designated university officer, and university has failed to reach decision regarding complaint within time limits established for that purpose by regents). See, e.g., Jones v. Regents of University of California (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1072, 1076-1077, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817 (nurse employed by UCLA was not entitled to injunction against university's use of complaint form to report retaliation for whistleblowing, where use of form was not mandatory for whistleblower retaliation complaint, as long as complainant fulfilled requirement of Gov. Code § 8547.10(a) of statement made under penalty of perjury, and where form's confidentiality requirement was not itself act of whistleblower retaliation, violative of Lab. Code § 1102.5, because form was intended to remediate whistleblower retaliation, and its limited and optional requirement of applicant confidentiality did not constitute adverse employment action).

(n219)Footnote 139.2. Miklosy v. Regents of University of California (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 876, 885-898, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 188 P.3d 629 (former employees were precluded from bringing damages action for retaliation, where University of California timely decided their retaliation complaint); Brand v. Regents of University of California (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1349, 1361-1367, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 419 (former employee of University of California could bring action for damages under Gov. Code § 8547.10(c) after seeking internal resolution of his grievance that University retaliated against him, ultimately by terminating his employment, for whistleblowing, where judicially noticed documents established that Regents failed to make decision to deny grievance within the applicable time limits).

(n220)Footnote 139.3. Brand v. Regents of University of California (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1349, 1367-1369, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 419 .

(n221)Footnote 139.4. Brand v. Regents of University of California (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1349, 1369-1372, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 419 .

(n222)Footnote 139.5. See Brand v. Regents of University of California (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1349, 1372-1375, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 419 .

(n223)Footnote 139.6. Gov. Code § 8547.8(c) (action for damages not available to injured party unless injured party has first filed complaint with State Personnel Board and board has issued or failed to issue findings pursuant to Gov. Code § 19683).

(n224)Footnote 139.7. State Bd. of Chiropractic Examiners v. Superior Court (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 963, 971-978, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 576, 201 P.3d 457 , disapproving California Public Employees' Retirement System v. Superior Court (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 174, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 561 to extent it reaches contrary conclusion.

(n225)Footnote 140. Gov. Code § 8547.8(c), 8547.10(c), 8547.12(c).

(n226)Footnote 140.1. Health & Saf. Code § 1596.70 et seq.

(n227)Footnote 140.2. Health & Saf. Code § 1596.881.

(n228)Footnote 140.3. See Health & Saf. Code § 1596.882(f) (except for grievance procedure or arbitration or hearing available to employee pursuant to collective bargaining agreement, Health & Saf. Code § 1596.882 is exclusive means for presenting claims under Act).

(n229)Footnote 140.4. Boston v. Penny Lane Centers, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 936, 942-947, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 707 .

(n230)Footnote 140.5. See Lab. Code §§ 6310-6312.

(n231)Footnote 140.6. See Health & Saf. Code § 1596.792(c).

(n232)Footnote 140.7. [Lab. Code § 6310.]

(n233)Footnote 141. Educ. Code § 48900.1(a); Educ. Code §§ 48900, 48910 (grounds for discipline; procedures for suspension).

(n234)Footnote 142. Lab. Code § 230.7(a).

(n235)Footnote 143. Lab. Code § 230.7(b).

(n236)Footnote 144. See Fam. Code § 3760 et seq.

(n237)Footnote 145. Fam. Code § 3769.

(n238)Footnote 146. See Fam. Code § 3769.

(n239)Footnote 146.1. See Lab. Code § 1060 et seq. (applies to contracts and subcontracts entered into on or after January 1, 2002).

(n240)Footnote 146.2. Lab. Code § 1063(a).

(n241)Footnote 146.3. Lab. Code § 1061(b)(1).

(n242)Footnote 146.4. Lab. Code § 1063(b).

(n243)Footnote 146.5. Lab. Code § 1063(c).

(n244)Footnote 146.6. Lab. Code § 1061(b)(2).

(n245)Footnote 146.7. Lab. Code § 1061(b)(3).

(n246)Footnote 146.8. Lab. Code § 1061(d).

(n247)Footnote 146.9. Lab. Code § 1061(e).

(n248)Footnote 146.10. Lab. Code § 1061(f).

(n249)Footnote 146.11. Lab. Code § 1062(a) (calculation of backpay).

(n250)Footnote 146.12. Lab. Code § 1062(b).

(n251)Footnote 146.13. Lab. Code § 1062(c).

(n252)Footnote 146.14. Lab. Code § 1062(d).

(n253)Footnote 146.15. Lab. Code § 1064.

(n254)Footnote 146.16. See Lab. Code § 1071(f) for definition of "public transit services."

(n255)Footnote 146.17. See Lab. Code § 1071(c) for definition of "contractor" in this context.

(n256)Footnote 146.18. See Lab. Code § 1071(h) for definition of "subcontractor" in this context.

(n257)Footnote 146.19. See Lab. Code § 1072(a), (b).

(n258)Footnote 146.20. Lab. Code § 1072(c)(2).

(n259)Footnote 146.21. Lab. Code § 1072(c)(4).

(n260)Footnote 146.22. See Lab. Code § 1071(a) for definition of "awarding authority."

(n261)Footnote 146.23. Lab. Code § 1072(c)(1).

(n262)Footnote 146.24. Lab. Code § 1073(a). A violation continues for each day the successor contractor or subcontractor fails to employ the employee. See Lab. Code § 1073(a).

(n263)Footnote 146.25. Lab. Code § 1073(c).

(n264)Footnote 146.26. Lab. Code § 1073(b).

(n265)Footnote 147. 29 U.S.C. §§ 621-634

(n266)Footnote 148. 29 U.S.C. §§ 623, 631(a).

(n267)Footnote 149. 29 U.S.C. § 626(d).

(n268)Footnote 150. 29 U.S.C. § 626(c)(2).

(n269)Footnote 151. 29 U.S.C. § 626(b).

(n270)Footnote 152. See Cancellier v. Federated Department Stores (9th Cir. 1982) 672 F.2d 1312, 1318, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 859, 103 S. Ct. 131, 74 L. Ed. 2d 113 (1982).

(n271)Footnote 153. Cancellier v. Federated Department Stores (9th Cir. 1982) 672 F.2d 1312, 1318, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 859, 103 S. Ct. 131, 74 L. Ed. 2d 113 (1982).

(n272)Footnote 154. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.

(n273)Footnote 155. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 12111(2), 12112.

(n274)Footnote 156. See 42 U.S.C. § 12117(a) (incorporating Title VII enforcement and remedies provisions, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-4 2000e-6, 2000e-8, 2000e-9); see also discussion in [q], below.

(n275)Footnote 157. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(a)(2), (b).

(n276)Footnote 158. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq. For discussion, see [q], below.

(n277)Footnote 159. 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1983.

(n278)Footnote 160. 42 U.S.C. § 1981(a).

(n279)Footnote 161. 42 U.S.C. § 1981(b).

(n280)Footnote 162. Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295.

(n281)Footnote 163. See Graham v. Richardson (1971) 403 U.S. 365, 377, 91 S. Ct. 1848, 29 L. Ed. 2d 534. For discussion of coverage of 42 U.S.C. § 1981, see ch. 40, pt. B; see also Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law, ch. 21 (BNA 2d ed. 1976), and cases cited therein.

(n282)Footnote 164. Saint Francis College v. Al-Khazraji (1987) 481 U.S. 604, 107 S. Ct. 2022, 95 L. Ed. 2d 582, 592.

(n283)Footnote 165. Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 459-460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed. 2d 295; 42 U.S.C. § 1981(c).

(n284)Footnote 166. 42 U.S.C. § 1983.

(n285)Footnote 167. See Larson, Employment Discrimination, vol. 1, ch. 2; Schlei and Grossman, Employment Discrimination Law, ch. 21 (BNA 2d ed. 1976). For discussion of coverage of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 generally, see ch. 40, pt. C.

(n286)Footnote 168. See Long v. Ford Motor Company (6th Cir. 1974) 496 F.2d 500, 503 .

(n287)Footnote 169. Johnson v. Railway Express Agency (1975) 421 U.S. 454, 460, 95 S. Ct. 1716, 44 L. Ed 2d 295 ; Smith v. Wade (1983) 461 U.S. 30, 35, 103 S. Ct. 1625, 75 L. Ed. 2d 632 .

(n288)Footnote 170. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981a(b)(4).

(n289)Footnote 171. 30 U.S.C. § 801 et seq.

(n290)Footnote 172. 30 U.S.C. § 815(c)(1).

(n291)Footnote 173. 30 U.S.C. § 815(c)(2).

(n292)Footnote 174. 30 U.S.C. § 815(c)(2).

(n293)Footnote 175. 30 U.S.C. § 815(c)(3).

(n294)Footnote 176. 30 U.S.C. § 815(c)(2).

(n295)Footnote 177. 30 U.S.C. § 815(c)(2), (3).

(n296)Footnote 178. 30 U.S.C. § 815(c)(2), (3).

(n297)Footnote 179. 15 U.S.C. §§ 1671-1677.

(n298)Footnote 180. 15 U.S.C. § 1674(a).

(n299)Footnote 181. 15 U.S.C. § 1674(b).

(n300)Footnote 182. Johnson v. Pike Corporation of America (C.D. Cal. 1971) 332 F. Supp. 490, 496 ; see 15 U.S.C. § 1674.

(n301)Footnote 183. See Le Vick v. Skaggs Cos. (9th Cir. 1983) 701 F.2d 777, 780 ; Smith v. Cotton Bros. Baking Co., Inc. (5th Cir. 1980) 609 F.2d 738, 743 , cert. denied, 449 U.S. 821, 101 S. Ct. 79, 66 L. Ed. 2d 23 (1980) ; McCabe v. City of Eureka, Mo. (E.D. Mo. 1980) 500 F. Supp. 59, 62 , aff'd, 664 F.2d 680 (8th Cir. 1981) ; but see Stewart v. Travelers Corporation (9th Cir. 1974) 503 F.2d 108, 114 (holding that private right of action exists); Ellis v. Glover & Gardner Const. Co. (M.D. Tenn. 1983) 562 F. Supp. 1054, 1065 (same); Maple v. Citizens National Bank & Trust Co. (W.D. Okla. 1977) 437 F. Supp. 66, 69 (same).

(n302)Footnote 184. 11 U.S.C. § 525(b).

(n303)Footnote 185. 11 U.S.C. § 525(b) also modifies the "one garnishment" rule found in Lab. Code § 2929.

(n304)Footnote 186. See 29 U.S.C. § 2001(1) (commerce has same meaning as in Fair Labor Standards Act, 29 U.S.C. § 203(b)).

(n305)Footnote 187. 29 U.S.C. § 2002.

(n306)Footnote 188. 29 U.S.C. § 2001(3).

(n307)Footnote 189. 29 U.S.C. §§ 2006(a).

(n308)Footnote 190. 29 U.S.C. §§ 2006(b), (c).

(n309)Footnote 191. 29 U.S.C. §§ 2006(d), 2007(a)(1), (b), (c).

(n310)Footnote 192. 29 U.S.C. §§ 2006(e), 2007(a)(2), (b), (c).

(n311)Footnote 193. 29 U.S.C. §§ 2006(f), 2007(a)(2), (b), (c).

(n312)Footnote 194. 29 U.S.C. §§ 2001(5), 2005(a), (b); 29 U.S.C. § 2004 (Secretary of Labor's general authority to administer Act).

(n313)Footnote 195. 29 U.S.C. § 2005(c)(1).

(n314)Footnote 196. 29 U.S.C. § 2005(c)(2).

(n315)Footnote 197. 29 U.S.C. § 2005(c)(3).

(n316)Footnote 198. See 29 U.S.C. § 2009.

(n317)Footnote 199. See Lab. Code § 432.2 (polygraphs); Penal Code § 637.3 (voice stress analyzers).

(n318)Footnote 200. 29 U.S.C. §§ 1001-1461.

(n319)Footnote 201. 29 U.S.C. § 1140. See also Inter-Modal Railway Employees Association v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. (1997) 520 U.S. 510, 117 S. Ct. 1513, 1516, 137 L. Ed. 2d 763, 769-770 (ERISA prohibits interference with attainment of vested or unvested rights under welfare benefits plans, as well as pension plans); Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 142, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474 (ERISA protects plan participants from termination motivated by employer's desire to prevent pension from vesting).

(n320)Footnote 202. 29 U.S.C. § 1140.

(n321)Footnote 203. See Bittner v. Sandoff & Rudoy Industries (E.D. Wis. 1980) 490 F. Supp. 534, 536. Whether compensatory and punitive damages are available in such an action appears to be an open question. See Massachusetts Mut. Life Insurance Co. v. Russell (1985) 473 U.S. 134, 139 n.5, 146-148, 150, 105 S. Ct. 3085, 87 L. Ed. 2d 96 (holding that 29 U.S.C. § 1109(a), establishing liability of employee benefit plan for breach of fiduciary duty, did not authorize award of compensatory and punitive damages in action brought by employee under 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(2) for improper or untimely processing of benefit claims, but leaving open the question of whether such damages are available under other provisions of ERISA).

(n322)Footnote 204. See Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 137-145, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474; Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 799.

(n323)Footnote 205. 42 U.S.C. §§ 7401-7642.

(n324)Footnote 206. 42 U.S.C. § 7622(b).

(n325)Footnote 207. 42 U.S.C. § 7622(b)(1).

(n326)Footnote 208. 42 U.S.C. § 7622(b)(2)(A).

- (n327)Footnote 209. 42 U.S.C. § 7622(b)(2)(A).
- (n328)Footnote 210. 42 U.S.C. § 7622(b)(2)(B).
- (n329)Footnote 211. 42 U.S.C. § 7622(c)(1).
- (n330)Footnote 212. 42 U.S.C. § 7622(d).
- (n331)Footnote 213. 42 U.S.C. § 7622(e)(1).
- (n332)Footnote 214. 42 U.S.C. § 7622(e)(2).
- (n333)Footnote 215. 42 U.S.C. §§ 5801 et seq.
- (n334)Footnote 216. 42 U.S.C. §§ 2011 et seq.
- (n335)Footnote 217. English v. Whitfield (4th Cir. 1988) 858 F.2d 957, 963-964 .
- (n336)Footnote 218. See Lockert v. United States Dep't of Labor (9th Cir. 1989) 867 F.2d 513, 518 .
- (n337)Footnote 219. 42 U.S.C. § 5851(b)(1).
- (n338)Footnote 220. 42 U.S.C. § 5851(b)(2)(A).
- (n339)Footnote 221. 42 U.S.C. § 5851(b)(2)(B).
- (n340)Footnote 221.1. 42 U.S.C. § 5851(b)(4).
- (n341)Footnote 222. Stokes v. Bechtel North American Power Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1985) 614 F. Supp. 732, 744 .
- (n342)Footnote 223. English v. General Electric Co. (1990) 496 U.S. 72, 84-85, 110 S. Ct. 2270, 110 L. Ed. 2d 65 .
- (n343)Footnote 224. 42 U.S.C. §§ 9601 et seq.
- (n344)Footnote 225. 42 U.S.C. § 9610(a).
- (n345)Footnote 226. 42 U.S.C. § 9610(b).
- (n346)Footnote 227. 42 U.S.C. § 9610(b).
- (n347)Footnote 228. 42 U.S.C. § 9610(b).
- (n348)Footnote 229. 42 U.S.C. § 9610(b), (c).
- (n349)Footnote 230. 42 U.S.C. § 9610(d).
- (n350)Footnote 231. Pogue v. United States Dep't of Labor (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1287 .
- (n351)Footnote 232. See Pogue v. United States Dep't of Labor (9th Cir. 1991) 940 F.2d 1287, 1289-1291 .
- (n352)Footnote 233. 42 U.S.C. §§ 300f et seq.
- (n353)Footnote 234. 42 U.S.C. § 300j-9(i)(2)(A).

(n354)Footnote 235. 42 U.S.C. § 300j-9(i)(2)(B)(ii).

(n355)Footnote 236. 42 U.S.C. § 300j-9(i)(4).

(n356)Footnote 237. 42 U.S.C. § 300j-9(i)(3)(A).

(n357)Footnote 238. 42 U.S.C. §§ 6901-6991i.

(n358)Footnote 239. 42 U.S.C. § 6971(b).

(n359)Footnote 240. 42 U.S.C. § 6971(b), (c).

(n360)Footnote 241. 15 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq.

(n361)Footnote 242. See 15 U.S.C. § 2622(a).

(n362)Footnote 243. 15 U.S.C. § 2622(b)(1).

(n363)Footnote 244. 15 U.S.C. § 2622(b)(2)(B).

(n364)Footnote 245. 15 U.S.C. § 2622(d).

(n365)Footnote 246. 15 U.S.C. § 2622(c).

(n366)Footnote 247. 33 U.S.C. § 1251 et seq.

(n367)Footnote 248. 33 U.S.C. § 1367(b).

(n368)Footnote 249. 33 U.S.C. § 1367(b), (c).

(n369)Footnote 250. 33 U.S.C. § 1367(e).

(n370)Footnote 251. 33 U.S.C. § 1367(e).

(n371)Footnote 252. 29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq.

(n372)Footnote 252.1. 29 U.S.C. § 216(b); Mitchell v. De Mario Jewelry (1960) 361 U.S. 288, 295-296, 80 S. Ct. 332, 4 L. Ed. 2d 323; see Lambert v. Ackerley (9th Cir. 1999) 180 F.3d 997, 1011, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1116 (2000) (revealing that court would likely conclude that punitive damages are available under FLSA, but treating issue as waived, because defendant did not raise any objection in district court).

(n373)Footnote 253. 29 U.S.C. § 216(b).

(n374)Footnote 254. 29 U.S.C. § 216(d).

(n375)Footnote 255. 29 U.S.C. § 216(b).

(n376)Footnote 256. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b.

(n377)Footnote 257. 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(a)(1); see 8 U.S.C. §§ 1324a(h)(3) ("unauthorized alien" defined), 1324b(a)(3)(A) ("protected individual" defined).

(n378)Footnote 258. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(b), (c).

(n379)Footnote 259. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(d).

(n380)Footnote 260. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(e), (f), (g).

(n381)Footnote 261. See 8 U.S.C. § 1324b(g)(2)(B)(iii), (iv).

(n382)Footnote 262. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1363, 1863, 1865, 1866, 1869, 1871, 1875.

(n383)Footnote 263. 28 U.S.C. § 1875(a).

(n384)Footnote 264. See 28 U.S.C. § 1875(b)(1), (2). The Jury System Improvement Act of 1978 amended the Jury Selection and Service Act of 1968. 28 U.S.C. § 1861 et seq.

(n385)Footnote 265. 28 U.S.C. § 1875(b)(3).

(n386)Footnote 266. 28 U.S.C. § 1875(d)(1).

(n387)Footnote 267. 28 U.S.C. § 1875(d)(2).

(n388)Footnote 268. 28 U.S.C. § 1875(c).

(n389)Footnote 269. 29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n390)Footnote 270. See 29 U.S.C. § 158(a)(1), (3), (4).

(n391)Footnote 271. Henry v. Intercontinental Radio, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 707, 715, 202 Cal. Rptr. 328 .

(n392)Footnote 272. See 29 U.S.C. § 160.

(n393)Footnote 273. 29 U.S.C. § 651 et seq.; see discussion in ch. 21.

(n394)Footnote 274. 29 U.S.C. § 660(c)(1).

(n395)Footnote 275. 29 U.S.C. § 660(c)(2).

(n396)Footnote 276. 29 U.S.C. § 660(c)(2).

(n397)Footnote 277. 29 U.S.C. § 660(c)(2).

(n398)Footnote 278. George v. Aztec Rental Center Inc. (5th Cir. 1985) 763 F.2d 184, 187 ; Taylor v. Brighton Corp. (6th Cir. 1980) 616 F.2d 256, 264 ; Irving v. United States (D.N.H. 1982) 532 F. Supp. 840, 843 .

(n399)Footnote 279. 49 U.S.C. § 20101 et seq., formerly codified as the Railroad Safety Act at 45 U.S.C. 421 et seq.

(n400)Footnote 280. 49 U.S.C. § 20109(a).

(n401)Footnote 281. 49 U.S.C. § 20109(b).

(n402)Footnote 282. 49 U.S.C. § 20109(d).

(n403)Footnote 283. 49 U.S.C. § 20109(f).

(n404)Footnote 283.1. 49 U.S.C. § 20109(i).

(n405)Footnote 284. 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n406)Footnote 285. Burke v. Compania Mexicana de Aviacion, S.A. (9th Cir. 1970) 433 F.2d 1031, 1033-1034 .

(n407)Footnote 286. Stepanischen v. Merchants Despatch Transportation Corp. (1st Cir. 1983) 722 F.2d 922, 927 .

(n408)Footnote 287. Brady v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (3d Cir. 1968) 401 F.2d 87, 102 .

(n409)Footnote 288. Hawaiian Airlines v. Norris (1994) 512 U.S. 246, 264-265, 114 S. Ct. 2239, 129 L. Ed. 2d 203, 220 . See Saridakis v. United Airlines (9th Cir.) 166 F.3d 1272, 1278 (RLA did not preempt claim for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy because plaintiff's allegations that his termination was due to disability discrimination, not breach of collective bargaining agreement (CBA), gave rise to right independent of CBA); Fennessy v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1996) 91 F.3d 1359, 1362 (following Hawaiian Airlines).

(n410)Footnote 289. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq. For discussion of FEHA, see [2][e], above.

(n411)Footnote 290. 42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq. For discussion, see [b], above.

(n412)Footnote 291. 29 U.S.C. § 701 et seq.

(n413)Footnote 292. 29 U.S.C. § 793(b).

(n414)Footnote 293. Fisher v. City of Tucson (9th Cir. 1981) 663 F.2d 861, 867 .

(n415)Footnote 294. 29 U.S.C. § 794; CONRAIL v. Darrone (1984) 465 U.S. 624, 631-637, 104 S. Ct. 1248, 79 L. Ed. 2d 568 (29 U.S.C. § 794 applies to private employer receiving federal assistance regardless of whether primary purpose of assistance was to provide employment).

(n416)Footnote 295. Kling v. County of Los Angeles (9th Cir. 1980) 633 F.2d 876, 878 .

(n417)Footnote 296. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-16.

(n418)Footnote 297. 29 U.S.C. § 794a.

(n419)Footnote 298. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n420)Footnote 299. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a).

(n421)Footnote 300. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a).

(n422)Footnote 301. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(e).

(n423)Footnote 302. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1).

(n424)Footnote 303. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g), (k).

(n425)Footnote 304. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981a.

(n426)Footnote 305. See 38 U.S.C. § 4301 et seq. For definition of "uniformed services," see 38 U.S.C. § 4303(16).

(n427)Footnote 306. 38 U.S.C. § 4316(c).

(n428)Footnote 307. 38 U.S.C. §§ 4316(a), 4317, 4318.

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.03

(n429)Footnote 308. 38 U.S.C. §§ 4321, 4322, 4323(a)(1).

(n430)Footnote 309. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(a)(3).

(n431)Footnote 310. 38 U.S.C. § 4323(d), P.L. 105-368, Nov. 10, 1998, 112 Stat. 3315.

(n432)Footnote 311. 29 U.S.C. § 2101 et seq.

(n433)Footnote 312. Under certain circumstances, an employer may order a shutdown or plant closing or mass layoff before the conclusion of the 60-day period. See 29 U.S.C. § 2102(b)(1), (2)(A), (B). Certain other plant closings or mass layoffs are exempt from the act. See 29 U.S.C. § 2103; see also Deveraturda v. Globe Aviation Security Svcs. (9th Cir. 2006) 454 F.3d 1043, 1046-1049 (WARN Act did not apply to mass layoff of employees who worked for private employer as airport security screeners until United States government federalized airport security services and took over operations at their airport under Aviation and Transportation Security Act (ATSA) of 2001); International Alliance v. Compact Video Servs., Inc. (9th Cir. 1995) 50 F.3d 1464, 1466-1469 (sale of business does not by itself trigger requirement of WARN Act notice; sale must be accompanied by an "employment loss" as defined in 29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(6)).

(n434)Footnote 313. 29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(2), (3) (defining "plant closing" and "mass layoff").

(n435)Footnote 314. 29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(4) (definition of "employee representatives").

(n436)Footnote 315. 29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(7) (definition of "unit of local government").

(n437)Footnote 316. 29 U.S.C. § 2102(a)(1), (2).

(n438)Footnote 317. 29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(1)(A), (B).

(n439)Footnote 317.1. 29 U.S.C. § 2101(a)(2) ("plant closing" defined as loss of employment for at least 50 full-time employees at single site of employment during any 30-day period, as a result of permanent or temporary shutdown of single site of employment).

(n440)Footnote 317.2. Bader v. Northern Line Layers (9th Cir. 2007) 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 21645, *6-*22 (plaintiffs failed to demonstrate that 50 or more laid-off employees worked at single site of employment so that layoffs were not covered by WARN Act, where remote construction locations did not qualify as single site of employment under 29 C.F.R. § 639.3(i)(1)-(5), and, with respect to 29 C.F.R. § 639.3(i)(6), there was no evidence employees at remote construction projects physically reported to headquarters during course of projects, that headquarters originated work or was responsible for day-to-day management of the majority of workers at remote construction project locations, or that workers directly reported their progress to headquarters).

(n441)Footnote 318. "Aggrieved employee" means an employee who has worked for the employer ordering the plant closing or mass layoff and who, as a result of the failure by the employer to comply with the notice requirements of 29 U.S.C. § 2102, did not receive the required timely notice either directly or through his or her representative. See 29 U.S.C. § 2104(a)(7).

(n442)Footnote 319. 29 U.S.C. § 2104(a)(1).

(n443)Footnote 320. 29 U.S.C. § 2104(a)(1)(A), (B); see 29 U.S.C. § 1002(3) (employee benefit plans under ERISA).

(n444)Footnote 321. Burns v. Stone Forest Indus., Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1182, 1185 (employees deprived of 60-days notice of plant closing are entitled to be paid only for what would have been work days during that period, citing cases from other circuits).

(n445)Footnote 322. Local Joint Executive Board of Culinary/Bartenders Trust Fund v. Las Vegas Sands, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 244 F.3d 1152, 1157-1159 .

(n446)Footnote 323. 29 U.S.C. § 2104(a)(2). See Local Joint Executive Board of Culinary/Bartenders Trust Fund v. Las Vegas Sands, Inc. (9th Cir. 2001) 244 F.3d 1152, 1159-1160 (neither payments to nonunion employees on condition they not quit before date of casino's closure nor payments to union employees pursuant to bargained-for Memorandum of Agreement were "voluntary and unconditional payments" casino could deduct from WARN Act damages).

(n447)Footnote 324. 29 U.S.C. § 2104(a)(3).

(n448)Footnote 325. 29 U.S.C. § 2104(a)(6).

(n449)Footnote 326. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.1.

(n450)Footnote 327. North Star Steel Co. v. Thomas (1995) 515 U.S. 29, 33-34, 115 S. Ct. 1927, 132 L. Ed. 2d 27 .

(n451)Footnote 328. Wholesale and Retail Food v. Santa Fe Terminal Services, Inc. (C.D. Cal. 1993) 826 F. Supp. 326, 329-331 .

(n452)Footnote 329. 49 U.S.C. § 42121.

(n453)Footnote 330. Williams v. United Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 500 F.3d 1019, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 20962, *4-*14 .

(n454)Footnote 331. Health & Saf. Code § 113700 et seq.

(n455)Footnote 332. Cal. Grocers Assn. v. City of Los Angeles (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 51, 63-65, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 34 .

(n456)Footnote 333. 29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n457)Footnote 334. Cal. Grocers Assn. v. City of Los Angeles (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 51, 65-77, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 34 .

59 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.04

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.04 Violation of Public Policy

[1] Public Policy Limitations on Discharge

[a] Elements of Cause of Action

The elements of a cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy are as follows:ⁿ¹

1. A public policy;
2. An adverse employment action that violates the public policy, such as a termination in retaliation for statutorily protected activity or for refusal to participate in illegal activity;
3. Damages resulting from the adverse employment action.

For further discussion, see [1][b] and [2], below, and Chapter 61.

[b] Generally

Under Labor Code Section 2922, an employment contract of indefinite duration is terminable at the will of either party. However, courts have created a public policy exception. This exception does not depend on the terms of an express or implied employment agreement, but, rather, reflects a duty that is imposed by federal or state law.

The first California case that considered the public policy exception in any detail was Petermann v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters.^{n1.1} The plaintiff in Petermann had been instructed by his employer to lie to a legislative committee; when he refused to do so, he was fired the next day. The court first noted that, according to Labor Code Section 2922, an employment contract of indefinite duration is generally terminable at the will of either party.ⁿ² The court held, however, that the right to terminate an employee may be limited by statute or by public policy.ⁿ³ While acknowledging the vagueness of the term "public policy," the court adopted the following definition: "that principle of law which holds that no citizen can lawfully do that which has a tendency to be injurious to the public or against the public good."ⁿ⁴ Noting that the penal statutes make perjury and its solicitation unlawful,ⁿ⁵ the court found that public policy would be offended by permitting an employer to fire an employee because the employee refused to commit an unlawful act.ⁿ⁶

Other early public policy cases involved an employee's statutorily protected right to join a unionⁿ⁷ and to designate a representative to negotiate the terms and conditions of his or her employment. In both Glenn v. Clearman's Golden Cock Inn ⁿ⁸ and Wetherton v. Growers Farm Labor Assn., ⁿ⁹ plaintiffs were terminated for union activities. In both cases, the court held that Labor Code Sections 922 and 923, granting workers the rights of association and self-organization, were a declaration of public policy and thus an exception to the at will rule. The Wetherton court noted that violation of such a public policy statute is actionable even though no specific remedy is provided.ⁿ¹⁰ In Montalvo v. Zamora, ⁿ¹¹ plaintiffs, a husband and wife, were terminated when their attorney representative wrote to their employer to demand that the wife be paid the minimum wage. The court held that the termination violated the rights to designate representatives and negotiate the terms and conditions of employment protected by Labor Code Section 923.ⁿ¹²

Today, the law of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy is principally defined by the California Supreme Court's decision in Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. ⁿ¹³ The Supreme Court later refined the scope of such claims in Foley v. Interactive Data Corp.,ⁿ¹⁴ Gantt v. Sentry Insurance,ⁿ¹⁵ and Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. ^{n15.1} In Tameny, the plaintiff was a sales representative who allegedly was terminated by his employer for refusing to participate in an illegal scheme to fix gasoline prices. The Court held that a discharged employee may bring a tort action against an employer if the discharge violated fundamental principles of public policy.ⁿ¹⁶ The Court noted the existence of the general rule of employment at will expressed in Labor Code Section 2922, but explained that judicial authorities in California and elsewhere had long recognized that the employer's right to discharge an employee was limited by statute and public policy.ⁿ¹⁷

Significantly, the Tameny decision also explicitly approved of tort remedies for wrongful termination of the contractual relationship of employment. The Court identified other California decisions outside the employment area holding that wrongful acts committed in the course of a contractual relationship give rise to both tort and contract remedies.ⁿ¹⁸ The Court stated that when the defendant has breached a duty arising out of the contract, rather than merely a promise set forth in the contract, the plaintiff is entitled to tort relief.ⁿ¹⁹ The Court also pointed out that although Petermann did not address the issue, subsequent decisions had interpreted that decision as approving tort remedies in a wrongful discharge case.ⁿ²⁰

Another important aspect of Tameny was its affirmation of the notion that a termination might violate public policy even if there is no statute expressly prohibiting termination on the grounds indicated in the particular case. The Court approved earlier decisions (i.e., Petermann, Glenn, Wetherton, and Montalvo) in which courts recognized that general statutes affording employees certain rights formed the basis of fundamental public policies, which would be contravened by employee dismissal.ⁿ²¹ Thus, a public policy against termination could be deduced by the courts from statutes condemning or protecting certain types of conduct. Although Tameny did not expressly base its finding of public policy on any particular statute, its determination that "the employer cannot condition employment upon required participation in unlawful conduct"ⁿ²² apparently derived from the penal statutes outlawing price-fixing.

Several years later, in Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. ⁿ²³ the California Supreme Court reaffirmed the existence of a public policy tort for wrongful termination, but limited the scope of such claims by holding that the violation which forms the basis for the action must inure to the public interest, rather than to a particular individual.ⁿ²⁴

In Foley, the employer allegedly discharged the plaintiff for reporting that his new supervisor was under investigation by the FBI for embezzling funds from a previous employer. According to the plaintiff, the discharge violated "a substantial public policy that imposes a legal duty on employees to report relevant business information to management."²⁵ The Court, however, disagreed. In analyzing the plaintiff's claims, the Court declined to decide whether a Tameny action "may be based only on policies derived from a statute or constitutional provision or whether nonlegislative sources may provide the basis for such a claim."²⁶ Instead, the Court held that, whatever the source of the duty alleged by the plaintiff "to report information relevant to his employer's interest, we do not find a substantial public policy prohibiting an employer from discharging an employee for performing that duty."²⁷ To illustrate the absence of a distinctly "public" interest in Foley, the Court drew an analogy to the law of contracts. According to the Court, "if an employer and employee were expressly to agree that the employee has no obligation to, and should not, inform the employer of any adverse information the employee learns about a fellow employee's background, nothing in the state's public policy would render such an agreement void."²⁸ By contrast, as indicated in Tameny, a contract "purporting to obligate the employee to ... violate the antitrust laws would clearly [be] void as against public policy."²⁹ For further discussion, see [2][b], below.

Later, in Gantt v. Sentry Insurance,³⁰ the Court answered the question left open by Foley regarding the source of a public policy underlying a wrongful termination action. According to the Court, in order to support a tortious discharge action, a public policy must be derived from statutory or constitutional authority.³¹ The Court clarified that administrative regulations can be the source of fundamental public policy.^{31.1}

From these Supreme Court decisions, and the Supreme Court's recent reexamination and recitation of the elements of a cause of action for tortious wrongful discharge in violation of fundamental public policy in Stevenson v. Superior Court,^{31.2} and Green v. Ralee Engineering Co.,^{31.3} the characteristics of a public policy that will support a wrongful discharge action have emerged: the policy must be supported by a statutory or constitutional provision,³² it must inure to the public interest,³³ it must have been well-established at the time of the discharge, and the policy must be "fundamental" and "substantial."³⁴ In addition, the policy must be applicable to the defendant.³⁵

There is no tort cause of action under Tameny for failure to renew a fixed term employment agreement. For example, one court of appeal found that where an employer refused to renew a contract because the employee had complained about unsafe working conditions, the employee could not state a claim for tort damages.³⁶ Similarly, an emergency-credentialed teacher hired by a school district for a specific period of time had no cause of action for tortious nonrenewal of her employment contract in violation of public policy.^{36.1}

Furthermore, a Tameny action does not extend outside the employment relationship. Thus, for example, there is no tort cause of action for breach of a commercial contract in violation of public policy.³⁷ Similarly, independent contractors may not state a tort claim for wrongful termination in violation of the public policy against racial discrimination grounded in the California Constitution.³⁸

[2] Sources of Public Policy

[a] Legislative or Constitutional Basis Required

In Gantt v. Sentry Insurance,³⁹ the California Supreme Court stated that in wrongful termination actions based on violation of public policy, the public policy must derive from constitutional or statutory authority; reliance on judicial or other nonlegislative sources is insufficient to support this cause of action.⁴⁰ This opinion resolved the previous conflict among courts of appeal⁴¹ regarding whether the public policy sufficient to support a tort cause of action for wrongful termination may be based solely on decisional law.⁴²

In support of its position, the Court stated that a public policy exception to the at will doctrine, carefully tethered to fundamental policies that are delineated⁴³ in constitutional or statutory provisions, strikes the proper balance among the interests of employers, employees, and the public. The employer is bound, at a minimum, to know the fundamental public policies of the state and nation as expressed in their constitutions and statutes. So limited, the public policy exception presents no impediment to employers that operate within the bounds of law. Employees are protected against employer actions that contravene fundamental state policy, and society's interests are served through a more stable job market, in which its most important policies are safeguarded.ⁿ⁴⁴ The Court reiterated these guidelines in Stevenson v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁴⁵ in which it found a public policy against age discrimination in the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA). In D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc.,^{n45.1} the court found in Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 a clear legislative declaration of public policy against covenants not to compete and held that termination of an employee who refuses to sign an employment agreement containing an illegal covenant not to compete constitutes wrongful termination in violation of public policy.^{n45.2} In Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc.,^{n45.3} allegations that an employee was terminated for complaining about and refusing to engage in fraudulent billing practices were sufficient to state a claim for retaliatory discharge in violation of a public policy. The employee supported the allegation with references to Civil Code Sections 1572, 1709 and 1710, Penal Code Sections 484 and 536, and Business & Professions Code Section 17200.

In Franklin v. The Monadnock Co.,^{n45.4} the court found that Labor Code Sections 6400 et seq., addressing employers' duties and responsibilities regarding safety in employment, established a public policy sufficient to support a claim for wrongful termination, after an employee was fired for complaining about another employee's threats to his life and the lives of coworkers and the employee's report of an assault to the police.

However, the Court has also limited the scope of the public policies to which employers must conform, to exclude those from which a particular defendant is exempt. Thus, despite the statutory declaration in the FEHA that discrimination in employment on the basis of age is against the public policy of the state,ⁿ⁴⁶ an employer who is exempt from the FEHA's substantive prohibition against age discrimination because he or she does not employ the requisite number of employees cannot be held liable in a common law tort action based on that statement of public policy.ⁿ⁴⁷ Similarly, a nonprofit, religious employer that was exempt from the FEHA at the time plaintiff's claim arose is exempt from the common law claim as well.^{n47.1} For further discussion of the limitations on the scope of legislative expressions of public policy, see [d], below.

Regarding the sources of public policy, the Supreme Court has settled the issue of whether the public policy supporting a wrongful termination claim may be based on administrative regulations. In *Green v. Ralee Engineering Co.*ⁿ⁴⁸ the Court overruled Gantt to the extent it could be read to conclude that administrative regulations could not be the source of fundamental public policy,^{n48.1} explaining that fundamental public policy may be enunciated in administrative regulations that serve a statutory objective.^{n48.2} The Court emphasized that only administrative regulations that implicated substantial public policies could be the basis for declaring a public policy in the context of a retaliatory discharge action and went on to conclude that important public safety regulations governing commercial airline safety could provide such a basis.^{n48.3}

The statutes comprising public policy fall into two categories: those explicitly prohibiting termination or discipline, and those embodying a public policy but not expressly addressing the issue of termination or discipline of employees. Examples of these provisions, and the issues raised by them, are discussed in [e] and [f], below. Constitutional bases for public policy are discussed in [g], below.

Terminations of employment in violation of public policy generally fall into one of the following categories:^{n48.4}

- Termination for refusing to violate a statute or governmental regulation that enunciates a fundamental public policy and is authorized by statute.^{n48.5}
- Termination for performing a statutory obligation.
- Termination for exercising a statutory right or privilege.
- Termination for reporting an alleged violation of a statute of public importance.

[b] Termination Must Affect Duty That Inures to Benefit of Public at Large

In Foley v. Interactive Data Corp.,ⁿ⁴⁹ the California Supreme Court held that in a wrongful termination action based on violation of public policy, the termination must affect a duty that inures to the benefit of the public at large, rather than to a particular employer or employee. In Foley, the plaintiff asserted violation of public policy based on statute, and the Court stressed that even when a statutory or constitutional basis has been asserted, disparagement of a public policy must be alleged. The Court noted, for example, that many statutes simply regulate conduct between private individuals, or impose requirements whose fulfillment does not implicate fundamental public policy concerns.ⁿ⁵⁰ In Deschene v. Pinole Point Steel Company,ⁿ⁵¹ a court of appeal found that a claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy can be based on an employer's retaliatory actions against an employee who gives truthful adverse testimony pursuant to a subpoena.ⁿ⁵² In Jie v. Liang Tai Knitwear Co., Ltd.,^{n52.1} the court found that a claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy can be based on an employer's layoff of employees in retaliation for reporting the employer's violations of the Immigration and Naturalization Act^{n52.2} to the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

There are a number of court decisions addressing when a report directly to an employer of wrongdoing will support a public policy claim. Relying on Foley, the court of appeal in American Computer Corp. v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁵³ held there was no public policy violation when an employer discharged an employee for reporting payment of consulting fees to former employees who were not performing any consulting services for the employer. The court held that this was a strictly private concern of the employer.ⁿ⁵⁴

In Collier v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁵⁵ however, another court of appeal distinguished both Foley and American Computer and held that an employee had stated a cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy because he was fired for reporting to his employer suspected illegal conduct by coemployees.ⁿ⁵⁶ The court explained that there were policy implications in Collier not present in Foley, namely active violations of antitrust laws and laws against bribery, kickbacks, embezzlement, tax evasion, and possibly even drug trafficking and money laundering.ⁿ⁵⁷

Thus, the employee's report served not only his employer's interests, but also the public interest in deterring crime and the interests of persons who stood to suffer specific harm.ⁿ⁵⁸ Similarly, the court found American Computer to be factually distinguishable, because the only victim of wrongdoing in that case was the employer.ⁿ⁵⁹

Collier also pointed out that American Computer had erroneously focused on the absence of both an attempt to coerce the plaintiff to engage in criminal conduct and a direct violation of a statute protecting the plaintiff's rights.ⁿ⁶⁰ Soon after American Computer, the California Supreme Court expressly rejected the argument that public policy claims should be limited to those situations. In Rojo v. Kliger,ⁿ⁶¹ the Court declared instead that a public policy claim will lie when the basis of a discharge contravenes fundamental public policy, such as a "fundamental public interest in a workplace free from ... sexism."ⁿ⁶² According to Collier, "[t]he fundamental public interest in a workplace free from crime is no less compelling."ⁿ⁶³

[c] Policy Must Be Fundamental and Substantial

In establishing a set of guidelines regarding the characteristics of a public policy that will support a tortious discharge action, the California Supreme Court has stated that the policy must be "fundamental" and "substantial."ⁿ⁶⁴ The Court has noted that there is no difference between "fundamental" and "substantial," and that the two terms are interchangeable.ⁿ⁶⁵ Despite its broad acceptance, the principle underlying the public policy exception is more easily stated than applied. The difficulty lies in determining where and how to draw the line between claims that genuinely involve matters of public policy, and those that concern merely ordinary disputes between employer and employee. This determination depends in large part on whether the public policy alleged is sufficiently clear to provide the basis for such a potent remedy as tortious wrongful discharge. Because an employer, at a minimum, is bound to know the fundamental public policies of the state and nation as expressed in their constitutions and statutes, the public policy exception limited to fundamental and substantial policies presents no impediment to employers that operate legally. Employees are protected against employer actions that contravene fundamental state policy; society's interests are served through a more stable job market, in which its most important policies are safeguarded.ⁿ⁶⁶ The Court has clarified that fundamental public policy may be enunciated in administrative regulations that serve a statutory objective.ⁿ⁶⁷

The Court has not articulated a test for determining when a public policy is sufficiently fundamental and substantial to support a wrongful discharge in violation of public policy action. However, in Stevenson v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁶⁸ the Court did identify certain considerations that underly a fundamental public policy. In deciding whether the public policy against age discrimination was sufficiently fundamental and substantial, the Court considered the following: the fact that the policy was similar to the substantial public policy prohibiting race and sex discrimination; the fact that the Fair Employment and Housing Act declares age discrimination to be against public policy; the fact that the policy against age discrimination has been the law for over 35 years and has been reaffirmed by the state legislature at least twice; and the fact that there is a wide variety of other California laws prohibiting age discrimination. As additional assurance that the policy against age discrimination was fundamental and substantial, the Court pointed to the fact that the policy is found in the laws of other jurisdictions, including federal laws.ⁿ⁶⁹ The Court has also concluded that the policy against disability discrimination is fundamental and substantial, noting that disability discrimination is indistinguishable in many ways from race and sex discrimination.ⁿ⁷⁰ The Court cautioned, however, that an employer may treat a disabled employee differently than a nondisabled employee if the disability impacts the ability to perform a particular job.ⁿ⁷¹

In Green v. Ralee Engineering Co.,ⁿ⁷² the Court examined whether the policy expressed in Federal Aviation Administration regulations promoting proper manufacture and inspection of component airline parts advanced important public policy objectives. After reviewing Congress' delegation of authority to the FAA in the commercial aircraft safety context, the Court concluded that if a statute seeking to further public policy delegates the authority to adopt regulations to an administrative agency to fulfill that objective, and that agency then adopts regulations within the scope of that authority, those regulations may manifest important public policy.ⁿ⁷³

In Sullivan v. Delta Air Lines, Inc.,ⁿ⁷⁴ the court examined whether the policy expressed in the Alcohol and Drug Rehabilitation Act (ADRA)ⁿ⁷⁵ is fundamental and substantial. The Sullivan court carefully reviewed the Stevenson Court's emphasis on sufficient notice to employers,ⁿ⁷⁶ noting that the Stevenson considerations can be grouped into two categories of factors that provide clear notice to employers of potential tort liability: the similarity between the subject policy and other policies that have already been declared substantial and fundamental, such as policies against race and sex discrimination; and the broad and consistent legislative and statutory support for the policy.ⁿ⁷⁷ In concluding that Lab. Code § 1025 is not substantial and fundamental, the Sullivan court recognized the following:ⁿ⁷⁸

- The ADRA expresses three potentially conflicting policies: accommodation of employees involved in alcohol and drug rehabilitation programs, avoidance of undue hardship on employers, and intolerance to alcohol and drug use that interferes with employee performance.
- There is no explicit declaration of the significance of the statute's policies in either the Constitution or the ADRA.
- The legislature chose not to impose criminal sanctions for statutory violations.
- It is difficult to determine precisely what employer conduct is prohibited, especially because of the broad grant of authority to employers to discharge employees for deficient performance caused by the same condition that precipitates the need for accommodation.
- The statute contains multiple conflicting undefined standards for employer conduct, such as the employer's duty to reasonably accommodate the employee's rehabilitation program and the employer's right to avoid any obligation if compliance would create an "undue hardship."

Overall, the undefined and potentially contradictory standards of conduct stated in Labor Code § 1025 are insufficient to enable an employer to know the fundamental public policies expressed in that law. Further, the policy of requiring reasonable accommodation of an employee's alcohol or drug rehabilitation efforts does not resemble other public policies that have been found to support a cause of action for tortious discharge; an employee's voluntary participation in an alcohol or drug rehabilitation program does not reflect an immutable characteristic like race, gender, or age.ⁿ⁷⁹

In Nelson v. United Technologies,ⁿ⁸⁰ the court of appeal held that the policy within the California Family Rights Act (CFRA),ⁿ⁸¹ prohibiting discrimination based on an employee's taking family and medical leave, is fundamental and substantial, and that an employee may state a claim under California law for wrongful discharge in violation of the policy.ⁿ⁸² The inclusion of this provision in the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)ⁿ⁸³ indicates that it is fundamental and substantial and promotes the stability and security of families, an important policy and one that has been declared important in other jurisdictions.ⁿ⁸⁴ In addition, FEHA's policy against employment discrimination for the exercise of rights under the CFRA is well-established; that is, it has been contained in a statutory provision long enough for an employer to have notice of it.ⁿ⁸⁵ As the federal counterpart to CFRA, violation of the FMLA also must constitute a violation of public policy.^{n85.1}

In Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists,ⁿ⁸⁶ the court of appeal held that there is a fundamental public policy against an employer's retaliation for its employee having asserted a right to be free of the employer's withholding of pay.ⁿ⁸⁷ The court identified a number of Labor Code Sections demonstrating, generally, the importance the Legislature has attached to the payment of an employee's wages.ⁿ⁸⁸ The court further noted that Code of Civil Procedure Section 487.020 (prohibiting the attachment of an employee's wages except under certain limited circumstances not present in this case), and the cases construing it,ⁿ⁸⁹ demonstrate the importance to an employee, to his or her family, and to society at large, of the employee's prompt receipt of wages.ⁿ⁹⁰ The Phillips court found a clear fundamental and substantial public policy, set forth in the enumerated Labor Code Sections and in Code of Civil Procedure Section 487.020, protecting an employee's wages both in general and in particular from setoffs such as the one in this case, taken without written authorization, contrary to plaintiff's request, and for an amount in excess of the agreed-on sum.ⁿ⁹¹

In Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps ⁿ⁹² the court of appeal found that if a claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy is based on a right or duty that can be bargained away, the claim is not rooted in a substantial public policy, absent other factors to the contrary.ⁿ⁹³ In Lagatree, the plaintiff was discharged because he would not agree, predispute, to arbitrate disputes with the employer rather than take those disputes to court.ⁿ⁹⁴ Plaintiff alleged that he had been terminated in violation of public policy for refusing to waive his constitutional right to a jury trial and a judicial forum.ⁿ⁹⁵ The Lagatree court, after reviewing the enforceability of arbitration agreements, found that under both federal and state law an employee's rights to a jury trial and a judicial forum can be validly waived by agreement, even where the waiver is required as a condition of employment. Thus, these rights do not implicate a substantial public policy.ⁿ⁹⁶

In Jie v. Liang Tai Knitwear Co., Ltd.,^{n96.1} the court found that the criterion that the policy be fundamental and substantial was met by a claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on an employer's laying off employees in retaliation for reporting the employer's violations of the Immigration and Naturalization Act^{n96.2} to the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

In Scott v. Phoenix Schools, Inc., ^{n96.3} the court concluded that the public policy embodied in 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 101216.3, which governs student-teacher ratios, was substantial and fundamental. The purpose of the teacher-student ratios was to protect the safety and ensure the educational development of the children by ensuring they are adequately supervised. The court found that the public policy embodied by the regulation was no less substantial and fundamental than other public policies courts found sufficient to subject an employer to tort liability.^{n96.4} The regulation regarding teacher-student ratios had been in effect for over 20 years, the ratios were clearly set forth, and the school's administrators were well aware of the ratios.

[d] Policy Must Be Applicable to Defendant

The California Supreme Court has held that a statutory provision cannot establish the existence of a fundamental public policy if an inseparable part of the legislative statement of policy exempts defendant from the statutory provision.ⁿ⁹⁷ Absent some other statutory or constitutional basis for the policy alleged to have been contravened by the termination of plaintiff's employment, a cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy will not lie if the defendant is exempt from the statute.ⁿ⁹⁸

In Jennings v. Marralle,ⁿ⁹⁹ defendant employed fewer than five employees and was therefore exempt from the age-discrimination provisions of the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA).ⁿ¹⁰⁰ Plaintiff's complaint alleged that her termination was based on her age and therefore was a violation of public policy, even though defendant was not subject to the FEHA, because of the statutory public policy prohibiting age discrimination.ⁿ¹⁰¹ The California Supreme Court rejected this argument, holding that the exemption of small employers from the substantive provisions of the FEHA is inseparable from the legislative statements of policy concerning age discrimination.ⁿ¹⁰² The Court stated that it would be unreasonable to expect employers who are expressly exempted from the FEHA ban on age discrimination to nonetheless realize that they must comply with the law from which they are exempted under pain of possible tort liability.ⁿ¹⁰³

Similarly, in Badih v. Myers,ⁿ¹⁰⁴ the defendant argued that his exemption from the FEHA because he employed fewer than five employees compelled reversal of a jury verdict that he had wrongfully discharged a former employee on the basis of pregnancy in violation of public policy. The court of appeal explained, however that, unlike the prohibition against age discrimination, a proscription against pregnancy discrimination exists that is independent of the FEHA. Specifically, California Constitution, Article I, Section 8, expresses a public policy against sex discrimination, which, the court found, includes pregnancy discrimination. Thus, the court affirmed the judgment for the employee.ⁿ¹⁰⁵

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Although Badih dealt with a small employer, its lesson for the scope of sex discrimination under the California Constitution is applicable to all employers in the state.

Leonard Myers, a doctor in an office employing fewer than five persons, terminated Fatmeh Badih because she became pregnant. Badih filed a public policy tort claim against Myers alleging that pregnancy discrimination is sex discrimination under Article I, Section 8, of the California Constitution. The jury ruled in favor of Badih. Myers appealed contending that pregnancy discrimination is not sex discrimination, and therefore *Jennings v. Marralle*ⁿ¹⁰⁶ barred Ms. Badih's public policy claim. The court of appeal disagreed and sustained the verdict.

Although most practitioners have long operated under statutory authority that equates sex discrimination and pregnancy discrimination, it is important to note that the bedrock of that authority lies in definitions placed in the FEHA and Title VII after the U.S. Supreme Court decision in General Electric Co. v. Gilbert.ⁿ¹⁰⁷

Thus, it is important to stress that, however one reacts to the conduct of Leonard Myers, Ms. Badih did not face an easy task of equating sex discrimination with pregnancy discrimination under constitutional authority that drew no such express link. That is, the court of appeal could just as easily have ruled that the only definitive California authority interpreting pregnancy discrimination to be sex discrimination is found in the FEHA and that Jennings controls. Instead, the court of appeal construed the legislative action following Gilbert to be a declaration that the Supreme Court's failure to link pregnancy and sex discrimination was the product of faulty logic, and that there was no reason to conclude that the link found in the FEHA applied only to that statute.

Badih, therefore, stands for the general proposition that the prohibition against sex discrimination in the California Constitution also extends to discrimination on the basis of pregnancy. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

In Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center, n107.1 the court of appeal upheld the trial court's finding that the FEHA did not support plaintiff's cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy because the defendant was a nonprofit, religious corporation, which was exempt from the FEHA at the time plaintiff's race and sex discrimination and retaliation claims arose. n107.2 The FEHA was later amended to include religious corporations in the definition of employer with coverage limited to persons employed to perform duties other than religious duties, at a health care facility operated by the corporation for the provision of health care not restricted to adherents of the religion that established the corporation, n107.3 which would have applied to the defendant had the legislation been enacted before plaintiff's claim arose. The court also found that the FEHA amendments were not retroactive, precluding plaintiff's reliance on them as the basis of public policy for his wrongful discharge claim. However, as in Badih, the court found that plaintiff could base a claim on the California Constitution, Article I, Section 8's prohibition of sex and race discrimination. n107.4 The court also found that the plaintiff could base a wrongful discharge claim on Title VII, even though it directly conflicted with the California Legislature's intent at the time of plaintiff's termination that nonprofit religious corporations should be exempt from anti-discrimination legislation. The court found that Title VII could be the basis for the claim because, although there was a conflict between state and federal law, no authority restricted the use of federal law as an articulation of the public policy for a wrongful discharge claim. The court also found that because California religious-entity employers were required to comply with federal anti-discrimination statutes, they had adequate notice of those laws, including Title VII. The court also found adequate notice in the fact that in his first charge with the DFEH, plaintiff noted that he had filed his claim with both the DFEH and the EEOC and listed his EEOC claim number on the DFEH charge. n107.5

The First Amendment free speech provision does not support a public policy on which to base a tortious discharge claim against a private employer's termination of an employee for the employee's exercise of First Amendment rights. n107.6 The First Amendment free speech provision expresses a guarantee only against action taken by the government. n107.7 Thus, no protection or redress is provided by the First Amendment itself against a private corporation or person who seeks to abridge the free expression of others. n107.8 The First Amendment free speech rights are distinguishable from the California constitutional right to privacy because the privacy right is an inalienable right which may not be violated by anyone, including private parties. n107.9

It is not clear from these opinions whether plaintiff must plead and prove that a statute or constitutional provision is expressly applicable to defendant, or whether instead the defendant must prove that an exemption limits the nature of the fundamental policy. It would appear that the plaintiff will be required to prove the fundamental nature of the policy, which would include a showing of the policy's applicability to defendant, but the courts have not expressed any opinion on the appropriate burden of proof.

[e] Statutes Explicitly Prohibiting Termination or Discipline

Termination of an employee most clearly violates public policy when it contravenes the provisions of a statute expressly forbidding termination for a specified reason or in a specified manner. Thus, for example, an employee terminated for missing work in order to serve as an election officer may bring a wrongful termination action for the employer's violation of Elections Code Section 12312, which expressly forbids such a discharge. n108

Similarly, one court has suggested that an employee who is terminated for reporting to his or her employer the illegal activities of a coworker may base a common law wrongful termination claim on Labor Code Section 1102.5(b), which generally prohibits such retaliation.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ Another court allowed a claim for constructive wrongful discharge in violation of public policy in retaliation for plaintiff's whistle blowing activities.^{n109.1}

A physician or surgeon terminated for advocating medically appropriate health care may premise a common law wrongful termination claim on Bus. & Prof. Code § 2056, which prohibits such a termination.^{n109.2}

When an employee asserts that he or she has been discharged for exercising a statutory right, the employee must prove that she actually exercised the right protected by the statute.^{n109.3} In Harvey v. Sybase, Inc.,^{n109.4} the court found that although Lab. Code § 232, which prohibits an employer from discharging an employee who discloses the amount of his or her wages, can support a claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy,^{n109.5} plaintiff could not state a claim for wrongful termination of public policy based on Labor Code § 232(c), because no substantial evidence supported the claim that her employment was terminated because she disclosed the amount of her wages.

To support a claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, the policy must be established at the time of the termination. For example, in Harvey v. Sybase, Inc.,^{n109.6} plaintiff also advanced a claim for wrongful termination in violation of the public policy expressed in Lab. Code § 232.5, which prohibits the discharge of an employee who discloses information about the employer's working conditions.^{n109.7} The court assumed solely for the purposes of discussion that the statute could support such a claim in appropriate circumstances and that plaintiff's conduct satisfied the statute's requirements. However, the trial court properly granted nonsuit on the claim because the policy set forth in § 232.5 was not well-established at the time of her discharge. A particular policy can support a common law wrongful discharge claim only if it is, among other things, well-established at the time of the discharge.^{n109.8} At the time of plaintiff's discharge, there was no well-established public policy protecting plaintiff's right to complain about her proposed demotion or her supervisor, because Lab. Code § 232.5 became effective approximately six weeks before the termination. Once a policy is expressed in a statute, it is not necessarily well-established for purposes of a wrongful termination claim. The court declined to fully flesh out the precise amount of time required before a statutory policy may be considered well-established, but concluded that the six-week period in Harvey was too short absent evidence the policy predated the statute's effective date.

The statutory means for an employee to redress his or her grievances is not necessarily the exclusive remedy available. For example, in City of Moorpark v. Superior Court ⁿ¹¹⁰*Labor Code Section 132a*, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of a work-related injury, was found not to preclude Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) and common law claims for discrimination.ⁿ¹¹¹ Similarly, in Hentzel v. Singer Co.,ⁿ¹¹² the existence of laws protecting employees' health and safety in the workplace (Cal OSHA)ⁿ¹¹³ was held not to preclude the common law wrongful termination action. In Hentzel, the plaintiff was fired in retaliation for his efforts to obtain a smoke-free work environment. The court noted the Legislature's express prohibition of terminations based on employees' activities promoting health and safety in the workplace,ⁿ¹¹⁴ and pointed out the irony that would be present if an employee were prevented from bringing a civil action precisely because of the Legislature's expressed concern in the area. The court found that when common law rights protecting employees exist before a statutory remedy is created and there is no apparent legislative intent to preclude a common law action, the statutory remedy is deemed cumulative and does not bar a wrongful termination action based on its provisions.ⁿ¹¹⁵

In another case, the court of appeal upheld a state employee's Tameny claim based on the employer's violation of public policy as expressed in a statute that protected state employees from retaliation for reporting illegal activities,ⁿ¹¹⁶ as well as the Public Safety Officers' Procedural Bill of Rights Act,ⁿ¹¹⁷ which gives public safety officers certain due process rights.ⁿ¹¹⁸

A wrongful termination action may be based on retaliation for an employee's filing or making known his or her intention to file a claim for workers' compensation with the employer in violation of Labor Code section 132a. In analyzing these wrongful termination claims, courts apply the burden-shifting test from McDonnell Douglas.^{n118.1} To establish a prima facie case of retaliation, a plaintiff must show (1) he or she engaged in conduct protected by Labor

Code section 132a, (2) the employer subjected him or her to an adverse employment action, and (3) there is a causal link between the two.^{n118.2} The employer is then given an opportunity to articulate a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the employment action.^{n118.3} The employee can then present evidence that the employer's articulated reason is a pretext.^{n118.4}

The Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA),ⁿ¹¹⁹ which generally prohibits employment discrimination based on race, religion, sex or sexual orientation, age, national origin, physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, or marital status,ⁿ¹²⁰ provides its own remedies for unlawful discharge.ⁿ¹²¹ In Rojo v. Kliger,ⁿ¹²² the California Supreme Court held that a civil action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy may lie for discriminatory discharge or discipline based on the California California Constitution, Article I, Section 8, which prohibits, among other things, employment discrimination based on sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin. The rationale is that the California Constitution sets forth a fundamental public policy that is independent of the FEHA.ⁿ¹²³ The Court left unsettled the question of whether the FEHA itself could form the basis for a public policy wrongful discharge action. Later, however, in Stevenson v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹²⁴ the California Supreme Court confirmed that the FEHA does not preempt state common law remedies for employment discrimination. Thus, the Court found that a plaintiff could bypass the FEHA's administrative scheme and rely on the FEHA's articulation of a public policy against age discrimination to support an action for wrongful discharge in violation of the public policy.ⁿ¹²⁵ Note, however, that if the FEHA claim fails or would fail, the wrongful termination claim necessarily fails as well.^{n125.1} Further, the broad statement of public policy that the FEHA sets forth in Government Code Section 12920 is not sufficient, standing alone, to impose tort liability on an employer that is specifically exempted from the substantive prohibition on age discrimination contained in the FEHA, because there is no other legislative or constitutional basis for a fundamental policy against age discrimination by small employers.ⁿ¹²⁶ Further, the FEHA does not provide remedies to national guardsmen on state active duty when the challenged personnel action is incident to military service. A national guardsman therefore could not state a tort claim predicated on the FEHA as the targeted public policy. A decision to terminate a national guardsman on the basis of disability without offering reasonable accommodation was incident to military service as a matter of law. Thus, the trial court properly granted the defendant's demurrer without leave to amend.^{n126.1}

For a complete discussion of the scope and application of the FEHA, see Chapter 40, Part A. For further discussion of wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on employment discrimination, see , § 60.09[1][g].

[f] Statutes Not Explicitly Prohibiting Termination or Discipline

In many of the published cases involving wrongful termination violative of public policy derived from statute, the statutes relied on do not explicitly prohibit termination of employment. In most of these cases, the employee was terminated for either refusing to commit an act made illegal by statute, or for asserting rights protected by statute.

Two of the significant early cases in this area involved employees who were discharged for refusing to break the law for their employers. In Petermann v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters,ⁿ¹²⁷ the plaintiff refused to commit perjury. In Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co.,ⁿ¹²⁸ the plaintiff refused to be involved in a price-fixing scheme.

Later, in Gantt v. Sentry Insurance,ⁿ¹²⁹ the California Supreme Court held that an employer's attempt to induce or coerce an employee to lie to an investigator from the Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH) plainly contravenes the public policy of the state, and consequently supports a claim for wrongful discharge based on violation of public policy. Specifically, Government Code Section 12975 (willful interference with a DFEH investigation constitutes misdemeanor),ⁿ¹³⁰ a provision of the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA),ⁿ¹³¹ enjoins any obstruction of a DFEH investigation. The Court stated that the facts of Gantt fit squarely within the rubric of Petermann and Tameny. In Gantt, the plaintiff, despite the employer's indirect threats of retaliation, testified at a DFEH hearing on behalf of a coworker who asserted sex discrimination claims against the employer. The employer thereafter demoted the plaintiff, who ultimately resigned under stressful circumstances. The Supreme Court held that the plaintiff had established a valid claim for wrongful discharge (i.e., wrongful constructive discharge) based on violation of public policy, finding that the employer had retaliated against him as a consequence of his refusal to withhold information or to provide false information to the DFEH.ⁿ¹³²

In Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. ⁿ¹³³ the Court overruled Gantt to the extent it could be read to conclude that administrative regulations could not be the source of fundamental public policy,ⁿ¹³⁴ explaining that fundamental public policy may be enunciated in administrative regulations that serve a statutory objective.ⁿ¹³⁵ The Court examined whether the policy expressed in Federal Aviation Administration regulations promoting proper manufacture and inspection of component airline parts advanced important public policy objectives. After reviewing Congress' delegation of authority to the FAA in the commercial aircraft safety context, the Court concluded that if a statute seeking to further public policy delegates the authority to adopt regulations to an administrative agency to fulfill that objective, and that agency then adopts regulations within the scope of that authority, those regulations may manifest important public policy.ⁿ¹³⁶

In another case, an employee stated a claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on allegations that he was terminated for purposes of avoiding payment to him of commissions and vacation pay and in retaliation for reporting to management the failure to pay overtime.ⁿ¹³⁷ The court of appeal found that both matters are the subject of statutory protections that exist for the benefit of society as a whole.ⁿ¹³⁸ Similarly, in Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists,ⁿ¹³⁹ an employee stated a valid Tameny cause of action based on allegations that he was fired because he asserted his right to receive wages free from his employer's withholding of pay:ⁿ¹⁴⁰ "One need only examine provisions in the Labor Code to realize that 'the prompt payment of wages due an employee is a fundamental public policy right of this state.'" ⁿ¹⁴¹

In Garibaldi v. Lucky Food Stores, Inc., ⁿ¹⁴² a Ninth Circuit decision, an employee reported spoiled milk to health authorities, ignoring his supervisor's instruction to deliver it. Sale or delivery of spoiled milk is forbidden by Food and Agricultural Code Section 32906. The court held that termination for refusing to commit the illegal act of delivering bad milk is grounds for a wrongful termination action.ⁿ¹⁴³

In Casella v. SouthWest Dealer Services, Inc., ^{n143.1} the court found the employee's wrongful termination in violation of public policy claim sufficiently tethered to Penal Code § 487, defining "fraudulent activities." The wrongful termination in violation of public policy claim as presented to the jury was premised on the theory that the employee reasonably suspected the employer was committing or was aiding and abetting the commission of fraudulent activities proscribed by Penal Code § 487.^{n143.2} Although the conduct the employee described constituted payment packing and the Legislature did not pass legislation proscribing payment-packing practices until after trial, the employer was on notice of the long-established policies prohibiting theft by misrepresentation to customers as proscribed by Penal Code § 487, and the viability of the claim did not depend on the existence of another statute specifically proscribing car dealers from secretly inflating monthly payment quotes to customers.

Earlier cases are also illustrative of sufficient statutory bases for this cause of action. For example, courts have disapproved the termination of employees who had exercised the rights of self-organization and designation of representatives guaranteed by Labor Code Sections 922 and 923.ⁿ¹⁴⁴

On the other hand, some statutes will not support a public policy claim. Labor Code Section 96(k), for example, does not provide a statutory basis for a wrongful termination claim based on the employee's conduct during nonworking hours. Section 96(k) allows the Labor Commissioner to take assignments of claims for loss of wages as the result of demotion, suspension, or discharge from employment for lawful conduct occurring during nonworking hours away from the employer's premises. It does not set forth an independent public policy providing employees with substantive rights, but, rather, establishes a procedure by which the Labor Commissioner may assert recognized constitutional rights on behalf of employees by outlining the types of claims over which the Labor Commissioner may exercise jurisdiction.^{n144.1} In Ross v. RagingWire Telecommunications, Inc., ^{n144.2} the California Supreme Court held that the

Compassionate Use Act of 1996,^{n144.3} which was adopted by the voters of California and gives a person who uses marijuana for medical purposes on a physician's recommendation a defense to certain state criminal charges involving the drug, could not support a cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy by a former employee against his employer for firing him for using medical marijuana. The Court first held that the employee could not state a cause of action under the FEHA for disability discrimination based on the employer's refusal to accommodate his use of marijuana.^{n144.4} The employee also attempted, based on the employer's refusal to accommodate his use of marijuana, to state a cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on the violation of fundamental public policies supported by the Compassionate Use Act and the privacy clause of the California Constitution.^{n144.5} The California Supreme Court found that the Compassionate Use Act did not speak to employment law, because nothing in the act's text or history indicated the voters intended to articulate policy concerning marijuana in the employment context, or a fundamental public policy requiring employers to accommodate marijuana use by employees. Further, because the Act articulated no such policy, reading the FEHA in light of the Compassionate Use Act led to no different result. The Compassionate Use Act did not put the employer on notice that employers would thereafter be required under the FEHA to accommodate the use of marijuana.^{n144.6} The Court also found that the discharge did not violate the public policy that underlies an adult patient's right to determine whether or not to submit to lawful medical treatment,^{n144.7} located both in the privacy clause of the state Constitution and in the common law.^{n144.8} However, that body of law imposes, inferentially, an obligation on health care providers to seek patients' informed consent before undertaking medical procedures. An employer's decision not to accommodate an employee's marijuana use does not implicate the employee's right to refuse medical treatment.^{n144.9}

In other cases, the required nexus between the statute and the termination appears to be looser. In Hentzel v. Singer Co.,ⁿ¹⁴⁵ the court disapproved the termination of an employee in retaliation for his efforts to obtain a smoke-free workplace. The court did so without citing any statutory guarantee of a smoke-free working environment. Instead, it found the requisite "firmly established principle[s] of public policy" in three different statutes: (1) Labor Code Section 923, protecting employees' right to criticize their working conditions; (2) Labor Code Sections 6400 and 6404, protecting the safety of employees, and (3) Labor Code Sections 6310 and 6312, prohibiting terminations based on employees' activities concerning workplace health and safety.ⁿ¹⁴⁶

A later court of appeal decision distinguished Hentzel in a case in which an employee alleged that she was terminated because she took a lengthy medical leave following surgery. The court rejected the employee's contention that Labor Code provisions protecting the health and safety of employeesⁿ¹⁴⁷ provided a general public policy in favor of proper medical care for employees.ⁿ¹⁴⁸

In Dabbs v. Cardiopulmonary Management Services,ⁿ¹⁴⁹ the plaintiff, a respiratory therapist, was terminated after she refused to work the night shift. Her refusal was a protest over what she perceived as the serious understaffing of the respiratory care unit during the nighttime hours. The trial court held that plaintiff had not stated a cause of action because she could not claim she was fired for refusing to engage in illegal activities. The court of appeal reversed, finding support for plaintiff in a number of statutes dealing with safeguards for the health of patients, which denote a public policy favoring qualified care for the ill and infirm. The court found public policy embodied in the Respiratory Care Practice Act,ⁿ¹⁵⁰ which went into effect two months after plaintiff was fired, as well as general societal concerns for qualified patient care.ⁿ¹⁵¹ The court also noted that in Hentzel v. Singer Co., discussed above, although there was no express statute dealing with smoking in the workplace, the Hentzel court had looked to California's general policy of protecting employees in the workplace as embodied in various provisions of the Labor Code, and from this had implied a public policy against discharging an employee for protesting reasonably perceived hazardous conditions in the workplace.ⁿ¹⁵²

In another case, Hejmadi v. AMFAC, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁵³ an employee alleged, among other causes of action, that the employer had wrongfully terminated him in retaliation for his protests that the employer was engaging in illegal behavior by allowing store security personnel to stripsearch customers to determine if shoplifting had occurred. The court stated that the employee had stated a cause of action for wrongful discharge based on public policy by pleading that (1) the employer contravened a statutory proscription affecting matters relating to the employer's business, (2) the employee protested the unlawful policy to company management, and (3) the company terminated the employee in retaliation for the protest.ⁿ¹⁵⁴

[g] Constitutional Bases for Public Policy

Tortious discharge claims based on public policy that is derived from the California Constitution generally have arisen in the context of privacy or discrimination. Several court of appeal opinions have dealt with the issue of whether a violation of an employee's state constitutional right to privacyⁿ¹⁵⁵ constitutes a violation of public policy sufficient to support a tort cause of action for wrongful termination. In two cases, courts held that employee drug testing programs violated the right to privacy.ⁿ¹⁵⁶ The courts, however, reached opposite conclusions regarding whether an employee who is fired for refusing to submit to drug testing has a cause of action for wrongful termination based on tortious violation of public policy.ⁿ¹⁵⁷ In Semore v. Pool,ⁿ¹⁵⁸ the court concluded that there is a public policy concern in an individual's right to privacy and that assertion of the right not to participate in a drug test establishes a fundamental right shared by other employees and Californians generally. The court thus held that the plaintiff employee had stated a cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy.ⁿ¹⁵⁹

By contrast, in Luck v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co.,ⁿ¹⁶⁰ the court held that, under the Foley standard requiring that the public policy inure to the public benefit,ⁿ¹⁶¹ a violation of the right to privacy, by its very name, cannot be a public right. In addition, the court in Luck stated that two other requirements set forth in Foley for a public policy cause of action were missing. First, the public policy must be one about which reasonable persons can have little disagreement; drug testing, however, is a hotly contested issue about which there is no consensus concerning whether it is consistent with privacy rights. Second, the public policy must be one that was firmly established at the time of the termination; at the time the plaintiff in Luck was terminated, however, no cases had held that drug testing intruded on privacy rights.ⁿ¹⁶² In more recent cases, other courts have found that a violation of an employee's right to privacy does give rise to a claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy.ⁿ¹⁶³ In both *Pettus v. Cole*ⁿ¹⁶⁴ and Feminist Women's Health Center v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹⁶⁵ the courts, after reviewing Luck and Semore, concluded that a claim for wrongful termination in breach of public policy could lie if the elements for invasion of privacy were all present.

In Rojo v. Kliger,ⁿ¹⁶⁶ the California Supreme Court held that California Constitution, Article I, Section 8, which provides that no person may be disqualified from entering or pursuing a business, profession, vocation, or employment because of sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin,ⁿ¹⁶⁷ sets forth a fundamental public policy against employment discrimination on any of those grounds and may be the basis for a tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, independent of the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA).ⁿ¹⁶⁸ More recently, the California Supreme Court found that the FEHA itself articulated a public policy against employment discrimination that is sufficient to support a common law tortious discharge cause of action.ⁿ¹⁶⁹

Even more recently, the California Supreme Court has held that a nonprofit religious organization's termination of an employee for what the employer considered to be objectionable religious speech was not contrary to a fundamental public policy of the state "tethered to" a constitutional or statutory provision.^{n169.1} Article I, Section 8 of the California Constitution expresses a fundamental policy against religious discrimination in employment and requires reasonable accommodation of employees' religious practices. However, the state and federal free exercise and establishment clauses give religious organizations some degree of latitude to choose their employees in order to define their religious mission. Further, the FEHA expressly exempts nonprofit religious organizations from liability for religious and other forms of discrimination in order to further that goal.^{n169.2} Thus, the Court concluded that reading California Constitution, Article I, Section 8's prohibition against religious discrimination in employment together with the free exercise and establishment clauses of the state and federal constitutions, and with the FEHA's explicit exemption of religious organizations from liability for such discrimination, the Court could not say there is a fundamental and substantial public policy that prohibits a religious employer from terminating an employee because of his or her objectionable religious speech in the workplace.^{n169.3} The Court expressly did not consider whether a religious employer would be liable in tort for terminating an employee in violation of a public policy against sexual discrimination found in article I, section 8 of the California Constitution, despite the FEHA exemption.^{n169.4} Since the case involved a nonprofit religious corporation providing health care as the employer, the Court also found that the addition of Gov. Code Section 12926.2(c) in 1999, to define "employer" under FEHA to include a religious corporation or association with respect to persons employed by the religious association or corporation to perform duties, other than religious duties, at a health care facility operated by the religious association or corporation for the provision of health care that is not restricted to adherents of the religion that established the association or corporation, did not alter its holding. Assuming arguendo the amendment created an unqualified, fundamental public policy against religious health care employers unreasonably restricting religious speech at workplaces, the amendment occurred after the termination, and therefore could have no bearing on the suit. The employer could not be liable for violating a public policy that was not manifest at the time it committed the alleged tortious action.^{n169.5}

In Jersey v. John Muir Medical Center,^{n169.6} the employer discharged the plaintiff for filing a lawsuit against a patient who had assaulted her. The plaintiff sued for wrongful termination in violation of public policy. She based her claim on the right of access to the courts and other statutory provisions. The court found that access to the courts is a right guaranteed to all persons by the federal and state constitutions because it is regarded as arising from the First Amendment right to petition the government for redress of grievances, which is a right also protected by article 1, section 3 of the California Constitution.^{n169.7} However, the court found that none of the broad constitutional and statutory provisions on which the plaintiff relied reflected a legislative determination that it is against public policy for an employer to insist that its employees not sue its customers, clients, or patients. Notwithstanding plaintiff's clear right to bring an action for injuries against the third-party who caused them,^{n169.8} the court noted that not every discharge that contravenes a fundamental public policy satisfies the criteria for a wrongful termination action: "Discharging an employee for exercising a right is tortious only if the criteria enumerated in Gantt and subsequent decisions are met."^{n169.9}

The Jersey court also found that an explicit agreement between an employee and employer, in which the employee agreed not to sue patients for their behavior while in the hospital, would not be unenforceable as against public policy. The court thus held that because the plaintiff could expressly waive the right to bring such an action, it followed that there is no strong public policy preventing her employer from discharging her for commencing litigation, despite the absence of an express agreement.^{n169.10} Finally, the court held the absence of a provision in the employee handbook or any other personnel rule forbidding the plaintiff from suing a patient was irrelevant because her employment was at will.^{n169.11}

For further discussion of the relationship of the FEHA to wrongful termination law, see § 60.09[1][f]. For full discussion of equal employment opportunity laws, including the FEHA, see Chapters 40 through 44.

[h] Required Showing of Statutory Violation

It is not yet clear exactly what standard a plaintiff must meet in order to establish that his or her termination violated a statute or constitutional provision, therefore supporting a claim for tort damages. In Holmes v. General Dynamics Corp.,ⁿ¹⁷⁰ the plaintiff alleged that the true reason for his discharge was to retaliate against him for his disclosure of his employer's violations of the federal False Statements Actⁿ¹⁷¹ in conjunction with defendant's contracts with the Department of Defense. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff based on a jury verdict finding that defendant had violated the False Statements Act. The defendant appealed in part on the ground that there was insufficient evidence that its breaches of the government contracts violated the act.ⁿ¹⁷²

The appellate court in Holmes found that sufficient evidence supported the jury's conclusion that defendant had in fact violated the act,ⁿ¹⁷³ and therefore did not address whether some lesser standard might have sufficed.

However, in a recent case, the California Supreme Court stated that an employee need not prove an actual violation of law. It would suffice if the employee was fired for reporting "reasonably based suspicions" of illegal activity.ⁿ¹⁷⁴ Further, statutes that expressly prohibit retaliation have been held to protect an employee who acts under a reasonable belief that the employer was acting unlawfully, without requiring proof of an actual violation.ⁿ¹⁷⁵

[i] Special Rules Applied to Attorney Employees

The California Supreme Court has held that an attorney's status as "in-house" counsel does not preclude a tort cause of action for discharge in violation of public policy, but that an action may be stated only if (1) the reasons for discharge contravene an attorney's mandatory ethical obligations, or (2) the reasons would support a claim by a non-attorney employee and a statutory or ethical code provision permits the attorney to depart from the usual rule that client matters remain confidential.ⁿ¹⁷⁶

In General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court, ⁿ¹⁷⁷ the Court noted the increasing number and professional stature of so-called in-house or corporate counsel, and the difficulties inherent in attempting to apply standards applicable to outside law firms to attorneys whose economic fate is tied to a single employer. The Court described their status as often similar to other corporate executives, with the addition (by virtue of the attorney's professional license) of ethical imperatives that exceed those of non-attorneys. The Court therefore phrased the issue as a consideration of the effects of in-house counsel's professional role and ethical duties on access to judicial remedies for alleged wrongful termination available to the nonattorney colleague.ⁿ¹⁷⁸

The Court discussed the conflicting values presented. On the one hand, there is a case for shielding the in-house attorney from retaliation by the employer for either insisting on adhering to mandatory ethical norms of the profession or for refusing to violate them; on the other hand, there is a case for protecting the confidential role of the attorney from the damage that could be caused by suits against the client, especially given an attorney's ethical obligation to withdraw from representation when an ethical conflict arises.ⁿ¹⁷⁹ The Court rejected the approach taken by courts in other states, under which actions by in-house counsel are precluded on the ground that the ethical obligation to withdraw is sufficient.ⁿ¹⁸⁰ Instead, the Court held that it is because of the nature of the attorney's role that a remedy should be available when mandatory ethical norms embodied in the Rules of Professional Conduct collide with illegitimate demands of the employer, and the attorney insists on adhering to his or her clear professional duty.ⁿ¹⁸¹ The "remedy" of withdrawal (i.e., resignation) from representation of the client was seen as illusory, in that it appeared more likely that, in the absence of any available remedy, counsel would tend to remain silent in the face of unethical demands.ⁿ¹⁸²

Instead, the Court fashioned a rule designed to support in-house counsel in remaining faithful to the fundamental public policies reflected in the governing ethical code when carrying out professional assignments.ⁿ¹⁸³ The Court held that the fiduciary values of mutual trust and confidence can be protected from the threat of damages by limiting judicial access to those claims grounded in the explicit and unequivocal ethical norms embodied in the Rules of Professional Conduct and statutes, and to claims that are maintainable by the non-attorney employeeⁿ¹⁸⁴ under circumstances in which the Legislature has manifested a judgment that the principle of professional confidentiality does not apply.ⁿ¹⁸⁵

If the elements of a wrongful discharge in violation of public policy claim cannot, for reasons peculiar to the particular case, be fully established without breaching the attorney-client privilege, the suit must be dismissed in the interest of preserving the privilege.ⁿ¹⁸⁶

Whether the attorney-client privilege precludes a plaintiff's recovery will ordinarily not be resolvable at the demurrer stage. Rather, in the usual case, whether the privilege serves as a bar to the plaintiff's recovery will be litigated and determined in the context of motions for protective orders or to compel further discovery responses, as well as at the time of summary judgment.ⁿ¹⁸⁷ In making this determination, the trial court can and should apply an array of ad hoc measures within its equitable powers in order to permit the attorney plaintiff to attempt to make the necessary proof while protecting from disclosure client confidences subject to the privilege.ⁿ¹⁸⁸ The Court rejected any suggestion that the scope of the attorney-client privilege should be diluted in the context of in-house counsel and their corporate clients.n189

The Court also set forth subsidiary rules that will deter the incidence of strike suits or claims filed in bad faith. The contested ethical requirement must be clearly established by the ethics code or statutory provision; disagreements over policy are not actionable. The plaintiff bears the burden of establishing the unequivocal requirements of the ethical norm at issue, and that the employer's conduct was motivated by impermissible considerations under a "but for" standard of causation. The ethical norm at issue must be one that is intended for the protection of the public at large; measures designed solely for the benefit of the attorney or the client will not suffice to support a wrongful discharge claim.n190

In Fox Searchlight Pictures, Inc. v. Paladino, n191 the court of appeal held further that former in-house counsel may disclose ostensible employer-client confidences to his or her own attorneys to the extent they may be relevant to the preparation and prosecution of a wrongful termination action against the former client-employer. The court based its holding on three grounds:n192

1. The opinion of the California Supreme Court in General Dynamics itself contemplates that in a wrongful termination action, a limited disclosure of employer-client confidences to the plaintiff's own attorney will take place. The Court's apprehension about the public disclosure of confidential information did not include in-house counsel's disclosure of the former employer's secrets to counsel's own attorneys. Plaintiff's attorneys are themselves bound by the rules of confidentiality and attorney-client privilege, so that disclosure to them is not public disclosure.
2. The disclosure does not violate the plaintiff's duty of confidentiality to the employer under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e) so long as the disclosure is limited to information plaintiff reasonably believes is necessary to the attorney's preparation and prosecution of the case.
3. Fundamental fairness to the plaintiff requires the plaintiff be allowed to make limited disclosure of the former employer's secrets to plaintiff's own attorneys to the extent necessary to prepare a claim for wrongful discharge.

[3] Subsequent Employer's Retaliation for Protected Activities in Previous Job

In Skillsky v. Lucky Stores, Inc., n193 an employee claimed that his original employer had informed his subsequent employer of the employee's health and safety complaints to OSHA, which had led to the original employer being required to replace a fleet of ten trucks. The employee claimed that he was then discharged by the subsequent employer in retaliation for his whistleblowing. The Ninth Circuit stated that although there were no California cases on point, it predicted that if the issue arose in a California court, the Supreme Court would allow an action for retaliatory discharge against the subsequent employer for public policy reasons.n194

[4] Actions Against Public Entities

The Government Claims Actn195 establishes the limits of common law liability for public entities. Under the Government Claims Act, except as otherwise provided by statute, a public entity is not liable for an injury, whether the injury arises out of an act or omission of the public entity or a public employee or any other person.n196 California courts have held that section 815 abolishes common law tort liability for public entities.n197

In Miklosy v. Regents of University of California, n198 the California Supreme Court held in the context of a whistleblower retaliation claim against the University of California that section 815 bars Tameny-public policy violation actions against public entities.

Notwithstanding the elimination of common law tort liability for public entities, however, they are liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the actions of their employees.ⁿ¹⁹⁹ A public employee generally is liable for an injury caused by his or her act or omission to the same extent as a private person.ⁿ²⁰⁰ When the act or omission of the public employee occurs in the scope of employment, the public entity is vicariously liable for the injury.ⁿ²⁰¹ On the other hand, a public entity cannot be liable in respondeat superior for a Tameny action for wrongful discharge, because that claim can only be asserted against an employer.ⁿ²⁰²

[5] Actions Against Individuals

In Miklosy v. Regents of University of California,ⁿ²⁰³ the California Supreme Court held that Tameny actions cannot be brought against individual defendants, such as supervisors. A Tameny action for wrongful discharge can be asserted only against an employer. An individual who is not an employer cannot commit the tort of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy; rather, the individual can only be the agent by which an employer commits that tort.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Employment Relationships
At-Will Employment
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Employment Relationships
At-Will Employment
Exceptions
Public Policy
Labor & Employment Law
Wrongful Termination
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim for wrongful discharge/demotion in violation of public policy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2430 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions; for the special verdict form for a cause of action for wrongful discharge/demotion in violation of public policy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction for a claim that plaintiff was required to violate public policy and constructively discharged in violation of public policy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2431 (Matthew Bender); for the special verdict form for a cause of action for constructive discharge in violation of public policy, that plaintiff was required to violate public policy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2407 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction on the allegation that plaintiff was required to endure intolerable conditions for an improper purpose violating public policy and constructively discharged in violation of public policy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2432 (Matthew Bender); for the special verdict form for a cause of action for constructive discharge in violation of public policy, that plaintiff was required to endure intolerable conditions for an improper purpose that violates public policy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2408 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI instructions and special verdict forms generally, see §§ 61.05, 61.06.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Petermann v. Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 184, 344 P.2d 25 .

(n3)Footnote 2. Petermann v. Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 184, 188, 344 P.2d 25 .

(n4)Footnote 3. Petermann v. Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 184, 188, 344 P.2d 25 .

(n5)Footnote 4. Petermann v. Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 184, 188, 344 P.2d 25 , quoting Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Retail Clerks International Association (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 567, 575, 261 P.2d 721 .

(n6)Footnote 5. See Penal Code §§ 118, 653f.

(n7)Footnote 6. Petermann v. Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 184, 188-189, 344 P.2d 25 .

(n8)Footnote 7. However, a cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy may be preempted by federal labor laws if the public policy allegedly violated is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board. See, e.g., Kelecheva v. Multivision Cable T.V. Corp. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 521, 527-529, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 . For discussion of preemption of wrongful termination claims by federal labor law, see § 60.09[1][b].

(n9)Footnote 8. Glenn v. Clearman's Golden Cock Inn (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 793, 13 Cal. Rptr. 769 , disapproved on other grounds, Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 .

(n10)Footnote 9. Wetherton v. Growers Farm Labor Ass'n (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 168, 79 Cal. Rptr. 543 .

(n11)Footnote 10. Wetherton v. Growers Farm Labor Ass'n (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 168, 174, 79 Cal. Rptr. 543 , disapproved on other grounds, Applied Equipment Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 .

(n12)Footnote 11. Montalvo v. Zamora (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 69, 86 Cal. Rptr. 401 .

(n13)Footnote 12. Montalvo v. Zamora (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 69, 73-75, 86 Cal. Rptr. 401 .

(n14)Footnote 13. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 .

(n15)Footnote 14. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 661-671, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n16)Footnote 15. Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental policy); see discussion of Gantt in [2][a], below.

(n17)Footnote 15.1. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 75-78, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n18)Footnote 16. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 170, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 .

(n19)Footnote 17. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 172, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 , citing Montalvo v. Zamora (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 69, 73-75, 86 Cal. Rptr. 401 ; Glenn v. Clearman's Golden Cock Inn (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 793, 13 Cal. Rptr. 769 ; Petermann v. International Bhd. of Teamsters (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 184, 344 P.2d 25 .

(n20)Footnote 18. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 174 175, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 , citing Aweeka v. Bonds (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 278, 281, 97 Cal. Rptr. 650 (wrongfully evicted tenant entitled to tort damages); Sloane v. Southern Cal. Ry. Co. (1896) 111 Cal. 668, 676 677, 44 P. 320 (passenger wrongfully ejected from train may obtain tort damages).

(n21)Footnote 19. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 175-176, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 .

(n22)Footnote 20. See, e.g., Glenn v. Clearman's Golden Cock Inn (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 793, 797, 13 Cal. Rptr. 769 .

(n23)Footnote 21. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 177, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 .

(n24)Footnote 22. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 178, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 .

(n25)Footnote 23. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n26)Footnote 24. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 661-667, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n27)Footnote 25. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 669, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n28)Footnote 26. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 669, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n29)Footnote 27. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 670, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n30)Footnote 28. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 670 n.12, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 (emphasis in original); see Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1117, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 , petition for review filed 10/22/99 (finding no cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on employee's discharge for refusing to sign predispute arbitration agreement requiring work-related disputes be resolved through binding arbitration because rights at issue--rights to jury trial and to judicial forum--were subject to waiver by agreement and additional factors weighed against recognition of public policy claim).

(n31)Footnote 29. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 670 n.12, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; but see Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1125, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 (applying Foley test to conclude that agreement prohibiting employee from reporting suspicions of ongoing coworker criminal conduct would be disservice to public interests, and would present serious public policy concerns).

(n32)Footnote 30. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy); see full discussion of Gantt in [2][a], below.

(n33)Footnote 31. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy).

(n34)Footnote 31.1. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n35)Footnote 31.2. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 887-890, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 .

(n36)Footnote 31.3. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 77-79, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n37)Footnote 32. See Barbee v. Household Automotive Finance Corp. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 525, 533, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 (sole basis for employee's claim he was terminated for asserting civil rights guaranteed by California Constitution was that employer violated his state constitutional right to privacy by terminating his employment because of his relationship with subordinate; termination of his employment did not invade his right to privacy, so that wrongful termination claim failed as matter of law). See § [2][a], below.

(n38)Footnote 33. See [2][b], below.

(n39)Footnote 34. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 669-670, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 . See Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 75-79, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 ; Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 889-890, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 ; Barbee v. Household

Automotive Finance Corp. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 525, 533, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 ; Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 226, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 ; Nelson v. United Technologies (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 597, 609-610, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 . See also [2][c], below.

(n40)Footnote 35. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 135, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 ; see [2][d], below.

(n41)Footnote 36. Daly v. Exxon Corp. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 39, 45, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 727 ; see Tollefson v. Roman Catholic Bishop (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 843, 854, 268 Cal. Rptr. 550 , disapproved on other grounds, Scott v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 474 fn.5, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 .

(n42)Footnote 36.1. Motevalli v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 97, 108-113, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562 . See also Wells v. Bd. of Trs. of the Cal. State Univ. (N.D. Ca. 2005) 393 F. Supp. 2d 990, 997 (an employee, whose fixed-term contract is not renewed, cannot state a claim for wrongful discharge).

(n43)Footnote 37. Harris v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 70, 77, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 649 (party to franchise agreement alleged retaliatory conduct by oil company in violation of public policy based on pricing dispute and plaintiff's reporting gasoline leak to authorities).

(n44)Footnote 38. Sistare-Meyer v. Young Men's Christian Assn. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 10, 16-18, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (analyzing Cal. Const., art. I, § 8; neither constitutional provision nor body of law concerning independent contractors clearly favors public interest in curbing discrimination over existing social benefits attached to independent contractor-hiring party relationship).

(n45)Footnote 39. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy).

(n46)Footnote 40. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy); see also Carter v. Escondido Union High School Dist. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 922, 928-935, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 262 (discharged high school teacher's failure to identify statutory or constitutional policy that would be thwarted by his discharge doomed his cause of action; even if school district's decision to terminate him for having reported at prior job that football coach had recommended nutritional supplement to student was misguided or based on erroneous factual premise, that would not eliminate need for clear expression of legislative policy disfavoring discharge for that reason to support wrongful discharge claim); Jie v. Liang Tai Knitwear Co., Ltd. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 654, 661-662, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682 (although violation of statute or constitutional provision is not invariably prerequisite to conclusion that discharge violates public policy, existence of statute on particular topic is one excellent method of establishing public policy as to that subject; if employer fires employee who complains to authorities about violation, termination is in violation of public policy).

(n47)Footnote 41. See Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy).

(n48)Footnote 42. Compare, e.g., Dabbs v. Cardiopulmonary Management Servs. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1437, 1443, 234 Cal. Rptr. 129 (dictum suggesting that action may be based on judicial definition); with Gray v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 813, 819, 226 Cal. Rptr. 570 (public policy must derive from statute); Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 477, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 (same).

(n49)Footnote 43. See Sequoia Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1472, 1480, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d

888 ("delineate" entails more specificity than "derived from"; employer insurance company's alleged practice of inflating policy reserves was not addressed in Proposition 103 or any other source required under Gantt).

(n50)Footnote 44. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680, overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046.

(n51)Footnote 45. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 889-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157; see Nelson v. United Technologies (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 597, 609-610, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 (public policy against discrimination based on employee's taking family and medical leave under California Family Rights Act (CFRA), Gov. Code § 12945.2).

(n52)Footnote 45.1. D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495.

(n53)Footnote 45.2. See Walia v. Aetna, Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1213, 1224-1227, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 737 (covenant not to compete violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, and discharge of employee for refusal to sign violated public policy); D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 935, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495; see also Advanced Bionics Corp. v. Medtronic, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1235, 1249-1250, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 265, mod. 88 Cal. App. 4th 594a (in action involving enforceability of covenant not to compete signed in Minnesota by then-employee of Minnesota company, after which employee termination employment and became California resident working for California employer, court held that Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 reflects strong public policy of California; that California had materially greater interest than Minnesota in application of its law to dispute; and that California's interests would be more seriously impaired if its policy were subordinated to Minnesota policy favoring use and enforcement of noncompetition covenants).

(n54)Footnote 45.3. Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 623, 641-643, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 336.

(n55)Footnote 45.4. Franklin v. The Monadnock Co. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 252, 258-263, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 692.

(n56)Footnote 46. See Gov. Code § 12920.

(n57)Footnote 47. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 134-136, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074.

(n58)Footnote 47.1. Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 227-230, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770.

(n59)Footnote 48. Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 P.2d 1046.

(n60)Footnote 48.1. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046.

(n61)Footnote 48.2. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046.

(n62)Footnote 48.3. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 82-83, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046.

(n63)Footnote 48.4. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1091, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680; Scott v. Phoenix Schools, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 702, 708-709, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 159.

(n64)Footnote 48.5. Green v. Ralee Engineering Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 79-80, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046. See Scott v. Phoenix Schools, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 702, 708-715, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 159 (termination of school teacher who refused to enroll child in violation of 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 101216.3, governing student-teacher ratios, violated public policy enunciated in teacher staffing regulation, where jury's conclusion that addition of one more child would have caused classroom to operate out of compliance was a reasonable inference, where there was substantial evidence from which jury could reasonably infer teacher disclosed violation to employer, and where public policy embodied in regulation was substantial and fundamental.

(n65)Footnote 49. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n66)Footnote 50. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 669, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n67)Footnote 51. Deschene v. Pinole Point Steel Co. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 33, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 15 .

(n68)Footnote 52. See Deschene v. Pinole Point Steel Co. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 33, 43 .

(n69)Footnote 52.1. Jie v. Liang Tai Knitwear Co., Ltd. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 654, 661, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682 .

(n70)Footnote 52.2. 8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.

(n71)Footnote 53. American Computer Corp. v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 664, 261 Cal. Rptr. 796 .

(n72)Footnote 54. American Computer Corp. v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 664, 667-669, 261 Cal. Rptr. 796 .

(n73)Footnote 55. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 .

(n74)Footnote 56. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1119 1120, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 .

(n75)Footnote 57. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1122, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 .

(n76)Footnote 58. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1123, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 ; see also Franklin v. The Monadnock Co. (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 252, 263-266, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 692 (plaintiff's complaints of coworker's threats to his life and lives of coworkers and his report of assault to police served public interest in promoting workplace safety, in deterring workplace crime, and the interests of innocent coworkers who could have suffered harm, so that plaintiff's conduct inured to benefit of public); Gould v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1149-1150, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 (employee's complaint to supervisors regarding current failure to pay overtime wages supported public policy claim when complaint related to ongoing conduct that was not only illegal, but also inimical to public health and general welfare of the state).

(n77)Footnote 59. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1125-1126, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 .

(n78)Footnote 60. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1126, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 ; see American Computer Corp. v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 664, 668, 261 Cal. Rptr. 796 .

(n79)Footnote 61. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n80)Footnote 62. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 ; see discussion in [e], below, and in § 60.09[1][e].

(n81)Footnote 63. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1127, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 .

(n82)Footnote 64. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 889, 896-897, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 (primary rationale for requiring that public policy be substantial and fundamental is to ensure that employers have adequate notice of conduct that will subject them to tort liability for discharging employees); see Sullivan v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 938, 943, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584 (corollary of substantial and fundamental requirement is that the relevant law must sufficiently describe type of prohibited conduct to enable employer to know fundamental policies expressed in law); Gould v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1147, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 (fundamental policy must be sufficiently clear to employer at time of discharge); see also [a], above.

(n83)Footnote 65. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 896-897, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 .

(n84)Footnote 66. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1090-1096, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy); Sullivan v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 938, 942-943, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584 .

(n85)Footnote 67. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n86)Footnote 68. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 896-897, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 .

(n87)Footnote 69. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 896-897, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 .

(n88)Footnote 70. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1160-1161, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n89)Footnote 71. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1160, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n90)Footnote 72. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n91)Footnote 73. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 82, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n92)Footnote 74. Sullivan v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 938, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584 .

(n93)Footnote 75. See Lab. Code § 1025.

(n94)Footnote 76. Sullivan v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 938, 943, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584 ; see Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1256, n. 9, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (statutory provision must sufficiently describe type of prohibited conduct to enable employer to know fundamental public policies expressed in that law).

(n95)Footnote 77. Sullivan v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 938, 943-944, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584 .

(n96)Footnote 78. Sullivan v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 938, 944-945, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584 .

(n97)Footnote 79. Sullivan v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 938, 945-947, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 584 (ADRA is not buttressed by other consistent constitutional or statutory provisions; employees have no recognized constitutional right to voluntarily enter drug or alcohol rehabilitation program; Legislature has not given this policy same broad recognition as fundamental public policy against race, gender, and age discrimination); see also Sinatra v. Chico Unified School Dist. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 701, 705-708, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 661 (Educ. Code § 44922, under which governing board of school district or county superintendent of schools may establish regulations allowing certificated employees to reduce workload from full-time to part-time duties, does not embody fundamental public policy to establish wrongful termination in violation of public policy, because school districts are not obligated to provide part-time program and there is no direct benefit to public at large). Compare Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 887-890, 896, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 (policy involved immutable characteristic like race, gender, or age and has broad and consistent legislative and statutory support).

(n98)Footnote 80. Nelson v. United Technologies (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 597, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 .

(n99)Footnote 81. Gov. Code § 12945.2.

(n100)Footnote 82. Nelson v. United Technologies (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 597, 611-612, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 (employee may state claim for tortious wrongful discharge based on violation of CFRA, but undisputed evidence established that employer did not fire this employee for exercising his rights under CFRA). See also Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 347 F.3d 1125, 1137-1138 (because there was triable issue of material fact as to whether employee was terminated in violation of FMLA and CFRA, summary judgment improper on whether her termination violated public policy); Faust v. California Portland Cement Co. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 864, 886, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 729 (because employee had viable claims for violation of CFRA, it necessarily followed that triable issue existed with respect to cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy).

(n101)Footnote 83. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n102)Footnote 84. Nelson v. United Technologies (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 597, 610-611, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 .

(n103)Footnote 85. Nelson v. United Technologies (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 597, 610-611, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 .

(n104)Footnote 85.1. Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 347 F.3d 1125, 1138 .

(n105)Footnote 86. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 .

(n106)Footnote 87. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 .

(n107)Footnote 88. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571-572, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 ("One need only examine provisions in the Labor Code to realize that 'the prompt payment of wages due an employee is a fundamental public policy right of this state,' " quoting Gould v. Maryland Sound Industries, Inc. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1148, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718). See also Lab. Code § 201, 202 (prompt payment required), 216 (misdemeanor for employee willfully not to pay wages), 221 (unlawful for employer to collect or receive any part of wages paid to employee), 222 (unlawful to withhold wages agreed to in collective bargaining agreement), 224 (enumerating unlawful deductions from pay), 1175 (misdemeanor to fail to furnish information on employee's wages to Industrial Welfare Commission).

(n108)Footnote 89. See § 4.10[1][b].

(n109)Footnote 90. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 572-574, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 .

(n110)Footnote 91. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 574, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 (employee may bring tortious discharge action based on fundamental public policy of right to be free from employer's withholding of pay).

(n111)Footnote 92. Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 .

(n112)Footnote 93. See Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1121-1122, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 .

(n113)Footnote 94. See Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1109-1110, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 .

(n114)Footnote 95. See Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1110, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 .

(n115)Footnote 96. See Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1128, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 ; see § 90.10 for discussion of compelling employee to arbitrate pursuant to collective bargaining agreement.

(n116)Footnote 96.1. Jie v. Liang Tai Knitwear Co., Ltd. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 654, 661, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682 .

(n117)Footnote 96.2. 8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.

(n118)Footnote 96.3. Scott v. Phoenix Schools, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 702, 712-715, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 159 .

(n119)Footnote 96.4. See, e.g., Eisenberg v. Insurance Co. of North America (9th Cir. 1987) 815 F.2d 1285, 1289 (applying California law; employee terminated in retaliation for complaints that company required its employees to manage too many claims sufficiently stated Tameny claim for violation of California Department of Insurance guidelines setting maximum caseload, where public policy to ensure each insurance claim received adequate consideration was significant); Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 297, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 (recognizing Tameny claim of employee after complaining about other employees smoking in workplace).

(n120)Footnote 97. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 135-136, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 .

(n121)Footnote 98. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 135, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 .

(n122)Footnote 99. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 .

(n123)Footnote 100. See Gov. Code § 12926(d).

(n124)Footnote 101. See Gov. Code §§ 12920, 12921.

(n125)Footnote 102. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 135, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 .

(n126)Footnote 103. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 135-136, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 . But later, in Stevenson v. Superior Court, 16 Cal. 4th 880, 894-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 , the California Supreme Court found that, as applied to employers regularly employing five or more workers, the FEHA does state a fundamental public policy prohibiting employment discrimination against older workers sufficient to support a cause of action for tortious wrongful discharge.

(n127)Footnote 104. Badih v. Myers (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 .

(n128)Footnote 105. Badih v. Myers (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1293-1296, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 .

(n129)Footnote 106. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 ; see discussion in [b.1], above.

(n130)Footnote 107. General Elec. Co. v. Gilbert (1976) 429 U.S. 125, 97 S. Ct. 401, 50 L. Ed. 2d 343 .

(n131)Footnote 107.1. Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 .

(n132)Footnote 107.2. Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 227-230, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 .

(n133)Footnote 107.3. See Gov. Code § 12926.2(c).

(n134)Footnote 107.4. Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 230-233, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 ; see Badih v. Myers (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1293-1296, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 229 .

(n135)Footnote 107.5. Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 233-237, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 .

(n136)Footnote 107.6. Grinzi v. San Diego Hospice Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 72, 80-84, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 893 .

(n137)Footnote 107.7. Hudgens v. N.L.R.B. (1976) 424 U.S. 507, 513, 96 S. Ct. 1029, 47 L. Ed. 2d 196 .

(n138)Footnote 107.8. Grinzi v. San Diego Hospice Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 72, 82, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 893 .

(n139)Footnote 107.9. Grinzi v. San Diego Hospice Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 72, 82, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 893 .

(n140)Footnote 108. Kouff v. Bethlehem-Alameda Shipyard (1949) 90 Cal. App. 2d 322, 324-325, 202 P.2d 1059 (based on former Elec. Code § 655).

(n141)Footnote 109. Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1123-1124, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 ; see Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 77, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (while employee who reports suspicions directly to employer is not covered, Lab. Code § 1102.5 shows legislative interest in encouraging employees to report workplace activity that may violate important public policies). Lab. Code § 1102.5 has codified this protection for government employees in Labor Code § 1102.5(e), which provides that a report by an employee of a government agency to his or her employer is a protected disclosure.

(n142)Footnote 109.1. Colores v. Board of Trustees (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1305-1313, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 .

(n143)Footnote 109.2. Khajavi v. Feather River Anesthesia Medical Group (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 32, 51-52, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627 (anesthesiologist presented sufficient evidence from which jury could have concluded that termination of his employment was principally result of protesting surgery he reasonably believed impaired his ability to provide medically appropriate health care to patient and that came within meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 2056).

(n144)Footnote 109.3. Harvey v. Sybase, Inc. (2008) 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 580, *32 . See Hejmadi v. AMFAC, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 525, 539, 249 Cal. Rptr. 5 (plaintiff could state no claim for whistleblowing under Lab. Code § 1102.5, prohibiting retaliation against employees who disclose violations of law to government or law enforcement agencies, where plaintiff made no complaints to any governmental agency).

(n145)Footnote 109.4. Harvey v. Sybase, Inc. (2008) 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 580, *32-*37 .

(n146)Footnote 109.5. See Grant-Burton v. Covenant Care, Inc. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1378, n. 2, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 204 (Lab. Code § 232, in combination with Lab. Code § 923 and provisions of National Labor Relations Act at 29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq., could support claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy).

(n147)Footnote 109.6. Harvey v. Sybase, Inc. (2008) 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 580, *37-*44 .

(n148)Footnote 109.7. See Lab. Code § 232.5(c).

(n149)Footnote 109.8. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1159, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n150)Footnote 110. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1148, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 448, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n151)Footnote 111. See Lab. Code § 132a; Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.; see, e.g., Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1485-1492, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 (applying Moorpark's holding that Lab. Code § 132a is not exclusive remedy for work-related injury discrimination and allowing claims against two coemployees for disability discrimination in violation of FEHA and for emotional distress).

(n152)Footnote 112. Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 .

(n153)Footnote 113. Lab. Code § 6300 et seq.

(n154)Footnote 114. Lab. Code §§ 6310, 6312. For discussion, see § 60.03[2][u] and ch. 21.

(n155)Footnote 115. Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 300-301, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 ; accord, Jenkins v. Family Health Program (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 440, 449, 262 Cal. Rptr. 798 . See, e.g., Cablesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 109-110, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 (agreeing with Hentzel that Lab. Code § 6312 does not constitute exclusive remedy for action brought pursuant to Lab. Code § 6310, but rather is merely cumulative, and finding plaintiff could state cause of action for tortious discharge based on violation of Lab. Code § 6310).

(n156)Footnote 116. Former Gov. Code § 19683 (now see Gov. Code § 8547).

(n157)Footnote 117. Gov. Code § 3300 et seq. For discussion, see California Public Sector Labor Relations, ch. 16, pt. C (Matthew Bender).

(n158)Footnote 118. Shoemaker v. Myers (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1419-1421, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203 (finding, however, that the Tameny claim is subject to immunity under Government Tort Claims Act (Gov. Code § 810 et seq.)).

(n159)Footnote 118.1. Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 ; Crown Appliance v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 620, 624-625, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 415 .

(n160)Footnote 118.2. Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 356, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 (plaintiff presented prima facie case by showing that he filed workers' compensation claims with employer; his employment was terminated, which constituted adverse employment action; and he was terminated within few days of filing claims). See also Crown Appliance v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 620, 624-625, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 415 ; Patten v. Grant Joint Union High School Dist. (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 1378, 1384, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 113 .

(n161)Footnote 118.3. Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 356, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 (employer submitted adequate evidence to support its stated reason for terminating employee, that management lost confidence in him, as legitimate nondiscriminatory business reason for termination).

(n162)Footnote 118.4. Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 327, 356-357, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 (employee failed to show employer's articulated reason for termination was pretext).

(n163)Footnote 119. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n164)Footnote 120. Gov. Code § 12940.

(n165)Footnote 121. Gov. Code § 12965(b).

(n166)Footnote 122. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n167)Footnote 123. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 89-91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n168)Footnote 124. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 894-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 .

(n169)Footnote 125. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 894-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 ; see Nelson v. United Technologies (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 597, 611-612, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 (California Family Rights Act's remedies (CFRA), Gov. Code § 12945.2, are not exclusive and therefore do not bar tort claim for wrongful discharge in violation of CFRA); see also City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1161, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 (disability discrimination can form basis of common law wrongful discharge claim); Leibert v. Transworld Systems, Inc. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1693, 1704-1706, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 (employee could base common law wrongful termination action on public policy against sexual orientation discrimination as expressed in former Lab. Code § 1102.1, now see Gov. Code § 12940).

(n170)Footnote 125.1. See, e.g., Arteaga v. Brink's, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App 4th 327, 355, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 654 (where wrongful termination claim based on FEHA's prohibition of physical disability discrimination failed, wrongful termination claim failed for same reasons).

(n171)Footnote 126. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 134-136, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 , discussed in [1][b], above.

(n172)Footnote 126.1. Estes v. Monroe (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1355-1365 .

(n173)Footnote 127. Petermann v. Int'l Bhd. of Teamsters (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 184, 344 P.2d 25 . See discussion of Petermann in [1], above.

(n174)Footnote 128. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 . See discussion of Tameny in [1], above.

(n175)Footnote 129. Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy); see discussion of Gantt in [a], above.

(n176)Footnote 130. See also Penal Code §§ 118 (perjury), 653f (solicitation to commit felony).

(n177)Footnote 131. See Gov. Code § 12900 et seq. For full discussion of the FEHA, see chs. 40-44.

(n178)Footnote 132. Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1096-1097, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy).

(n179)Footnote 133. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n180)Footnote 134. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n181)Footnote 135. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n182)Footnote 136. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 82, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n183)Footnote 137. Gould v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1146-1150, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 .

(n184)Footnote 138. Gould v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1146-1150, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 .

(n185)Footnote 139. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 .

(n186)Footnote 140. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 574, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 (employee may bring tortious discharge action based on fundamental public policy of right to be free from employer's withholding of pay).

(n187)Footnote 141. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 571, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 , quoting Gould v. Maryland Sound Industries, Inc. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1148, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718).

(n188)Footnote 142. Garibaldi v. Lucky Food Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1367 .

(n189)Footnote 143. Garibaldi v. Lucky Food Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1367, 1369 .

(n190)Footnote 143.1. Casella v. SouthWest Dealer Services, Inc. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1127, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 445 .

(n191)Footnote 143.2. Casella v. SouthWest Dealer Services, Inc. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1127, 1140-1143, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 445 . See also Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 623, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 336 (where employee sued employer for wrongful termination in violation of public policy referring to, inter alia, Penal Code § 484 defining theft, employee's allegations that he was terminated for complaining about and refusing to engage in fraudulent billing practices were sufficient to state claim for retaliatory discharge in violation of public policy).

(n192)Footnote 144. Montalvo v. Zamora (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 69, 86 Cal. Rptr. 401 ; Glenn v. Clearman's Golden Cock Inn (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 793, 13 Cal. Rptr. 769 .; see also Gelini v. Tishgart (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 219, 222, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 447 (court would have found discharge of employee for using attorney to negotiate terms and conditions of employment not a violation of section 923 but for Montalvo and approving reference thereto by California Supreme Court). See discussion of cases in [1], above.

(n193)Footnote 144.1. Grinzi v. San Diego Hospice Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 72, 84, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 893 . See also Barbee v. Household Automotive Finance Corp. (2003), 113 Cal. App. 4th 525, 533, 535, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 .

(n194)Footnote 144.2. Ross v. RagingWire Telecommunications, Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920, 931-933, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 382, 174 P.3d 200 .

(n195)Footnote 144.3. Health & Saf. Code § 11362.5.

(n196)Footnote 144.4. Ross v. RagingWire Telecommunications, Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920, 925-931, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 382, 174 P.3d 200 . For discussion, see § 41.51[3][a].

(n197)Footnote 144.5. Cal. Const., art. I, § 1.

(n198)Footnote 144.6. Ross v. RagingWire Telecommunications, Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920, 931-932, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 382, 174 P.3d 200 .

(n199)Footnote 144.7. See Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 242, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1 .

(n200)Footnote 144.8. See Conservatorship of Wendland (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 519, 531-532, 110 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412, 28 P.3d 151 .

(n201)Footnote 144.9. Ross v. RagingWire Telecommunications, Inc. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 920, 932-933, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 382, 174 P.3d 200 .

(n202)Footnote 145. Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 .

(n203)Footnote 146. Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 295-296, 297-298, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 (quoting Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 172, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330); see Jenkins v. Family Health Program (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 440, 449, 262 Cal. Rptr. 798 (holding nurse had right to bring action for retaliatory discharge because of her complaints about unsafe and unhealthy working conditions).

(n204)Footnote 147. Lab. Code §§ 6303, 6401.

(n205)Footnote 148. Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1589, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330 (cited statutes required the employer to maintain a safe and healthful workplace, rather than to encourage proper medical care).

(n206)Footnote 149. Dabbs v. Cardiopulmonary Management Servs. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1437, 234 Cal. Rptr. 129 .

(n207)Footnote 150. Bus. & Prof. Code § 3700 et seq.

(n208)Footnote 151. Dabbs v. Cardiopulmonary Management Servs. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1437, 1443-1444, 234 Cal. Rptr. 129 .

(n209)Footnote 152. Dabbs v. Cardiopulmonary Management Servs. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1437, 1442, 234 Cal. Rptr. 129 .

(n210)Footnote 153. Hejmadi v. AMFAC, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 525, 538-540, 249 Cal. Rptr. 5 .

(n211)Footnote 154. Hejmadi v. AMFAC, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 525, 538-540, 249 Cal. Rptr. 5 .

(n212)Footnote 155. See Cal. Const., art. I, § 1.

(n213)Footnote 156. For discussion of employee privacy issues pertaining to drug testing, see ch. 50, pt. D.

(n214)Footnote 157. See Luck v. S. Pac. Transp. Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 26-29, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 ; Semore v. Pool (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1096-1098, 266 Cal. Rptr. 280 .

(n215)Footnote 158. Semore v. Pool (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 266 Cal. Rptr. 280 .

(n216)Footnote 159. Semore v. Pool (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1087, 1096-1098, 266 Cal. Rptr. 280 . See also Kraslawsky v. Upper Deck Co. (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 179, 194, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 297 (court denied summary judgment to employer on tortious discharge cause of action based on claim that requiring employee to submit to drug test violated her right to privacy because employer did not have reasonable cause to demand the test).

(n217)Footnote 160. Luck v. S. Pac. Transp. Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 26-29, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 .

(n218)Footnote 161. See discussion in [b], above.

(n219)Footnote 162. Luck v. S. Pac. Transp. Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 28-29, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 .

(n220)Footnote 163. See Feminist Women's Health Ctr. v. Superior Court (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1234, 1244-1249, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 187 ; Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 402, 456, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n221)Footnote 164. Pettus v. Cole (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 402, 456, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 .

(n222)Footnote 165. Feminist Women's Health Ctr. v. Superior Court (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1234, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 187 .

(n223)Footnote 166. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n224)Footnote 167. See discussion in ch. 40, pt. B.

(n225)Footnote 168. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 89-91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 ; see also Gov. Code § 12993(a) (FEHA does not preempt other state laws barring employment discrimination).

(n226)Footnote 169. See Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 894-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 . See also [a], above.

(n227)Footnote 169.1. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162 .

(n228)Footnote 169.2. Gov. Code § 12926(d); Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162 .

(n229)Footnote 169.3. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162).

(n230)Footnote 169.4. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162).

(n231)Footnote 169.5. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162 .

(n232)Footnote 169.6. Jersey v. John Muir Medical Center (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 814, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807 .

(n233)Footnote 169.7. Jersey v. John Muir Medical Center (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 814, 821, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807 .

(n234)Footnote 169.8. See, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 3852 (injured worker's claim does not affect right of action against any person other than the employer), 3856 (priority of payments from third-party prosecution); Jersey v. John Muir Medical Center (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 814, 827, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807 .

(n235)Footnote 169.9. Jersey v. John Muir Medical Center (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 814, 821, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807 .

(n236)Footnote 169.10. Jersey v. John Muir Medical Center (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 814, 827-828, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807 .

(n237)Footnote 169.11. Jersey v. John Muir Medical Center (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 814, 828, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807 .

(n238)Footnote 170. Holmes v. General Dynamics Corp. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1418, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172 .

(n239)Footnote 171. 18 U.S.C. § 1001.

(n240)Footnote 172. Holmes v. General Dynamics Corp. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1418, 1427, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172 .

(n241)Footnote 173. Holmes v. General Dynamics Corp. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1418, 1427-1432, 22 Cal. Rptr.

2d 172 .

(n242)Footnote 174. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 79, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 , citing Collier v. Superior Court (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1117, 1125, 279 Cal. Rptr. 453 .

(n243)Footnote 175. See, e.g., E.E.O.C. v. Crown Zellerbach Corp. (9th Cir. 1983) 720 F.2d 1008, 1013 (Title VII) ; Sias v. City Demonstration Agency (9th Cir. 1978) 588 F.2d 692, 695 (Title VII) . For complete discussion of retaliation in the employment discrimination context, see ch. 41, pt. F.

(n244)Footnote 176. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1188-1189, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n245)Footnote 177. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n246)Footnote 178. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1172-1173, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n247)Footnote 179. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1182-1185, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n248)Footnote 180. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1185, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 (citing Balla v. Gambro, Inc. (Ill. 1991) 145 Ill. 2d 492, 164 Ill. Dec. 892, 584 N.E.2d 104).

(n249)Footnote 181. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1186, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n250)Footnote 182. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1188, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n251)Footnote 183. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1189, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n252)Footnote 184. See Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 75-79, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (reviewing requirements of Tameny action) discussed in [a], above.

(n253)Footnote 185. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1189, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n254)Footnote 186. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1190, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n255)Footnote 187. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1190, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n256)Footnote 188. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1191, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n257)Footnote 189. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1190, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n258)Footnote 190. General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1191, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 876 P.2d 487 .

(n259)Footnote 191. Fox Searchlight Pictures, Inc. v. Paladino (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 294, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906 .

(n260)Footnote 192. Fox Searchlight Pictures, Inc. v. Paladino (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 294, 308-315, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 906 .

(n261)Footnote 193. Skillsky v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 893 F.2d 1088 .

(n262)Footnote 194. Skillsky v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 893 F.2d 1088, 1092, 1094 .

(n263)Footnote 195. Gov. Code § 810 et seq.

(n264)Footnote 196. Gov. Code § 815(a).

(n265)Footnote 197. See Eastburn v. Regional Fire Protection Authority (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1175, 1179, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 552, 80 P.3d 656 ; Zelig v. County of Los Angeles (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1112, 1127-1128, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 45 P.3d 1171 . See also Lloyd v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 320, 328-330, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 (former county employee's common law tort claims of retaliation in violation of the public policy in Cal. Const., art. I, §§ 1, 8 failed to state a cause of action); Adkins v. State of California (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1802, 1817-1818, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 59 ; Michael J. v. Los Angeles County Dept. of Adoptions (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 859, 866-867, 247 Cal. Rptr. 504 . See also Legis. Com., 32 West's Ann. Gov. Code (1995) foll. § 815, p. 167 (section 815 abolishes all common law or judicially declared forms of liability for public entities, except when liability is required by state or federal constitution, e.g., inverse condemnation).

(n266)Footnote 198. Miklosy v. Regents of University of California (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 876, 898-900, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690, 188 P.3d 629 . See also Lloyd v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 320, 328-330, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 (former county employee's Tameny claim alleging wrongful termination in violation of public policy against retaliation for whistleblower activity, predicated on public policies set forth in Lab. Code §§ 98.6, 1102.5, 6399.7, and Gov. Code § 8547 failed to state a cause of action); Palmer v. Regents of University of California (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 (also applying section 815 in context of whistleblower retaliation and holding in dictum that section 815 barred Tameny claim, because only statutory authorization for civil damage action based on alleged retaliation against University of California employee for reporting improper activity is Gov. Code § 8547.10, and "classic Tameny cause of action" is common law, judicially created tort and not authorized by statute). Cf. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1158-1161, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 (allowing employee to bring Tameny cause of action against public entity, but question of public entity's tort immunity was not raised).

(n267)Footnote 199. Lloyd v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 320, 330, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 . See Mary M. v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 54 Cal.3d 202, 209, 285 Cal. Rptr. 99, 814 P.2d 1341 .

(n268)Footnote 200. Lloyd v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 320, 330, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 . See Gov. Code § 820(a); Zelig v. County of Los Angeles (2002) 27 Cal.4th 1112, 1127, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 45 P.3d 1171 .

(n269)Footnote 201. Lloyd v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 320, 330, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 . See Gov. Code § 815.2; Zelig v. County of Los Angeles (2002) 27 Cal.4th 1112, 1127, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 709, 45 P.3d 1171 .

(n270)Footnote 202. Lloyd v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 320, 330, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 . See [5], below.

(n271)Footnote 203. Miklosy v. Regents of University of California (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 876, 900-901, 80 Cal.

Rptr. 3d 690, 188 P.3d 629 .

60 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.05

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.05 Breach of Express or Implied-in-Fact Promise Not to Terminate Except for Cause

[1] Contractual Limitations on Discharge

[a] Elements of a Cause of Action

The elements of a cause of action for breach of an express or implied agreement not to terminate except for good cause include:ⁿ¹

1. A contract, which may be oral, written, or implied by conduct;
2. Adverse action that is contrary to the terms of the agreement; and
3. Damages resulting from the adverse action.

For further discussion, see [1][b], below.

[b] Generally

The presumption created by Labor Code Section 2922 that employment is at will may be overcome by evidence in the form of an express (oral or written) or implied agreement to terminate only for cause. Thus, an employer's right to discharge an employee at will may be limited if the action is contrary to such an agreement between the parties.

In the landmark decision of Foley v. Interactive Data Corp.,^{n1.1} the California Supreme Court defined the parameters of a claim for breach of an express or implied agreement not to terminate except for cause. In so doing, Foley approved the reasoning of Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc.,ⁿ² which was the first case to provide a detailed analysis of the cause of action by applying basic contract principles in the context of an employment relationship. Two earlier decisions, however, Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc.,ⁿ³ and Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Industries, Inc.,ⁿ⁴ were important antecedents to Foley and Pugh and merit brief mention.

Each of the two earlier decisions had held that the employment at will presumption was rebuttable with evidence of a promise by the employer that the employee could be terminated only for cause.ⁿ⁵ In Drzewiecki, the employee had a written contract stating he could be terminated only if he conducted the business improperly. The court noted the general presumption that contracts for "permanent" employment are terminable at will, pointing out that a few cases had found the presumption rebutted when there was some additional consideration beyond the employee's services.ⁿ⁶ The court held, however, that even without such "independent consideration," the employment contract can be terminated only for good cause if the employer has expressly or impliedly limited its right to terminate the employee at will.ⁿ⁷

Rabago-Alvarez followed Drzewiecki in holding that employment contracts are terminable only for good cause if either of two conditions exist: (1) the contract is supported by some consideration independent of the employee's services, or (2) the parties have an express or implied agreement to this effect.ⁿ⁸ In Rabago-Alvarez, both conditions were satisfied. Plaintiff was persuaded to leave a steady, satisfying job (the independent consideration) by oral promises that her position with defendant would be permanent as long as her work was satisfactory (the express agreement).ⁿ⁹ Because the trial court found that plaintiff was not dismissed for good cause, the court of appeal upheld the jury verdict for plaintiff.ⁿ¹⁰

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, construing California wrongful termination law including Rabago-Alvarez, has stated that an employee does not convert an at will employment relationship into one allowing termination only for cause simply by showing that he or she left attractive prior employment to take a new job. In Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. ⁿ¹¹ the court explained that the employee must show that he or she gave up prior employment only after explicitly bargaining with the employer to do so, in exchange for the promise of a termination only for cause contract. The court added that relocation, in and of itself, does not constitute independent consideration, absent evidence of such explicit bargaining.ⁿ¹²

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

In any circumstance in which the plaintiff has given up secure employment to accept a job or has otherwise detrimentally relied on employer promises, counsel should consider including claims of fraud or promissory estoppel as long as such claims can be articulated with some precision.ⁿ¹³ Also, if an employee has relocated, consider alleging a violation of California Labor Code Section 970 which prohibits inducing an employee to move from one location to another by means of material misrepresentations about the terms of employment. Commentary by John M. True, III.

Pugh modified and expanded the rules announced in these early cases by characterizing the independent consideration factor as an evidentiary matter, rather than a substantive requirement, by broadly defining an implied agreement to terminate only for cause, and by holding that such an agreement takes the employment contract out of the strictures of Labor Code Section 2922.ⁿ¹⁴

In Foley, the California Supreme Court affirmed Pugh, rejecting the argument that an express contract provision requiring good cause for termination was required for a wrongful discharge cause of action. The Court approved the plaintiff's claim for breach of an implied in fact contract based on a course of conduct, including oral representations.ⁿ¹⁵

The Court explained that the presumption of at will employment contained in Labor Code Section 2922 can be overcome by evidence of an express oral or written agreement specifying the term of employment.ⁿ¹⁶ However, the absence of such an express agreement does not automatically indicate that the employment is at will, because the at will presumption can be overcome by evidence that the parties had a contrary intent.ⁿ¹⁷

Foley also adopted Pugh's rejection of the requirement that there be separate consideration in order to support an implied in fact contract not to terminate without good cause, stating that an implied in fact agreement is not void merely because it fails to impose a mutual obligation on the employee.ⁿ¹⁸ The Court explained that there is no analytical reason why an employee's promise to render services or actual rendition of services over time may not support an employer's promise both to pay a particular wage and to refrain from arbitrary dismissal.ⁿ¹⁹ In Pugh, the court of appeal acknowledged that some cases have suggested a requirement of "independent consideration" for such a limitation on the employer's rights, but stated that such a requirement contradicts the general contract principle that courts should not inquire into the adequacy of consideration.ⁿ²⁰ Instead, the Court said, independent consideration should be viewed as serving an evidentiary function in the essential determination of whether there was an agreement to terminate only for cause. Such consideration would show that it is more probable that the parties intended a continuing relationship, with limitations on the employer's dismissal authority, when the employee has provided some benefit to the employer, or suffers some detriment, beyond the usual rendition of service.ⁿ²¹

[c] Factors Creating an Implied Agreement

In Foley, the Court specified a number of factors, originally identified by Pugh, that can be relied on, apart from consideration and express terms, to ascertain the existence and content of an employment agreement.ⁿ²²

These factors include:

1. The personnel policies or practices of the employer;
2. The employee's longevity of service;
3. Actions or communications by the employer reflecting assurances of continued employment;^{n22.1} and
4. The practices of the industry in which the employee is engaged.

Applying these factors, the Supreme Court in Foley was persuaded by the following alleged facts that the plaintiff had stated a cause of action: (1) the employee had worked for the employer for six years, nine months; (2) the employer had given oral assurances of job security; (3) the employer had given consistent promotions, salary increases, and bonuses; (4) the employer had placed self-imposed limitations on its power to discharge at will in the form of written termination guidelines; and (5) the employee had signed a noncompetition agreement, which was probative of an intent to create a continuing employment relationship.ⁿ²³

In Pugh, the plaintiff was a 32-year employee who had received numerous promotions and awards and no criticism for his job performance. He was frequently told that his future with the company was secure if he was loyal and did a good job. The defendant had a longstanding practice of terminating employees only for good cause. Plaintiff alleged he had been terminated because of his opposition to his employer's "sweetheart contract" with a union. The court of appeal found that at least the first three of the above factors were found to be present in the plaintiff's employment history, buttressed by the lack of criticism of plaintiff's performance and the commendations and promotions he received. The court said that although "oblique language" alone is not enough to prove an implied agreement, the "totality of the parties' relationship" was sufficient to send the case to the jury.ⁿ²⁴

The Ninth Circuit has held that the length of employment alone may be sufficient to show an implied contract to terminate only for cause. In one pre-Foley case, the Ninth Circuit, interpreting Pugh, found that mere length of employment could suffice to establish an implied contract.ⁿ²⁵ The court upheld jury instructions that included the sentence: "[t]he expectation of continued employment can be inferred from the longevity of plaintiff's employment."ⁿ²⁶ The court stated that the instructions were not misleading because they also included reference to the variety of factors given in Pugh and used permissive rather than mandatory language.ⁿ²⁷

Since Robards, in Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc.,ⁿ²⁸ the California Supreme Court found that "an employee's mere passage of time in the employer's service, even where marked with tangible indicia that the employer approves the employee's work, cannot alone form an implied-in-fact contract that the employee is no longer at will.^{n28.1} The Court noted that absent other evidence of the employer's intent, longevity, pay raises and promotions are their own rewards for the employee's continuing valued service; they do not, in and of themselves, additionally constitute a contractual guarantee of future employment security. A rule granting such contract rights on the basis of successful longevity alone would discourage the retention and promotion of employees.^{n28.2}

In Davis v. Consolidated Freightways,ⁿ²⁹ the court of appeal held that evidence of nine years' employment, and regular promotions and salary increases during that time, were insufficient to establish an implied in fact agreement to terminate only for cause. The Davis court stated that promotions and salary increases are natural occurrences when an employee remains with an employer for a substantial period of time. Without some evidence of assurances of continued employment, or some other evidence controverting the presumption of at will employment, the court held that summary judgment for the employer was proper.ⁿ³⁰

On the other hand, in Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc.,^{n30.1} the court found that the record did not support the former employee's contention that he had either an express or implied contract for a minimum one-year term of employment. The employment agreement set forth no term of employment, and the statement in the agreement that a performance review was "to be completed after twelve (12) months of employment" did not constitute a minimum one-year contract term. The former employee had signed an employment application confirming he was an at-will employee and acknowledged receipt of a personnel manual with an explicit at-will provision. Furthermore, he admitted that no one told him he had a one-year employment contract or that he could be terminated only for cause. His contention that his supervisor told him he would have his job for at least a year had no support in the record. Finally, his "understanding" of the meaning of the performance review provision in the contract was not competent extrinsic evidence.^{n30.2}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The decision of the California Supreme Court in Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. ⁿ³¹ made a number of important changes in the law of wrongful discharge, but left a number of questions unanswered. With respect to the cause of action based on an implied in fact contract, the Foley Court not only unanimously reaffirmed the decision of the court of appeal in Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc., ⁿ³² but also eliminated the statute of frauds defense to implied in fact contract claims. Of the two holdings, the reaffirmation of Pugh is the most far-reaching.

However, because Foley, like Pugh, involved multiple factors alleged to create an implied in fact contract, it remains unclear whether a plaintiff may establish an implied in fact contract by indicating that an employee handbook alone or a proprietary information agreement alone may contain the requisite "facts." In addition, Foley suggests that the lack of at will language in certain personnel documents (the opinion used the example of a proprietary information agreement) may be construed as an indication that at will employment is not intended. By implication, therefore, employers that are interested in creating or maintaining at will employment environments are strongly advised to include at will clauses in all significant employment documents.ⁿ³³ Moreover, Foley does not resolve the question of whether an employer may compromise at will defenses that it creates at the outset of an employment relationship by later contrary statements and conduct. The Court acknowledged the existence of Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors, ⁿ³⁴ a court of appeal case which held that express at will contracts could not be contradicted by implied agreements to terminate for cause only, but the Supreme Court did not indicate whether it approved that precedent.ⁿ³⁵

In addition, a question arises over the proper interpretation of documents that contain both at will clauses and clauses typically viewed as inconsistent with at will employment. For example, it is not uncommon for an employee handbook to contain an at will clause and a clause providing for discharge for violation of specified rules of conduct. If the rules of conduct exist for the benefit of the employee as a form of notice of impermissible behavior, a court may view the at will clause as "superseded" by a "just cause" standard of discipline. Thus, it may be necessary for employers to specify that such rules of conduct clauses exist for their benefit only, to ensure that supervisors exercise their discretion in the manner which the employer deems appropriate for the conduct of its business. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

The flip side of this advice, for the plaintiff's practitioner, is that the mere appearance of "at will" language somewhere in an employment application, a personnel policy or even an offer letter is not fatal to a breach of employment contract claim unless the at will language appears in an integrated contract of employment. Cases should be evaluated on the totality of the circumstances they present, and not rejected because the employer has simply inserted at will language in the hope of magically insulating itself from employment litigation. Commentary by John M. True, III.

[d] The Good Cause Requirement

The nature of the good cause required for the termination of a particular contract depends on the individual circumstances of each case. In the effort to determine good cause, the Pugh court warned that care must be taken not to interfere with the legitimate exercise of managerial discretion, particularly with regard to an employee in a sensitive managerial or confidential position.ⁿ³⁶

Good cause, in the context of implied employment contracts, means "fair and honest reasons, regulated by good faith on the part of the employer, that are not trivial, arbitrary or capricious, unrelated to business needs or goals, or pretextual."^{n36.1} In an action involving termination based on plaintiff's breach of the employer's rules or policies, the question is not whether plaintiff in fact violated the rule or policy, but whether the employer had reasonable grounds for believing plaintiff had done so.^{n36.2}

The concern expressed in Pugh for the legitimate exercise of managerial discretion was echoed in Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. ⁿ³⁷ In that case, the plaintiff violated his employer's well-known rule forbidding fraternization with nonmanagement employees, and was terminated. The court held that the termination was properly within the substantial scope accorded an employer in dealing with a managerial employee.ⁿ³⁸ For further discussion of Crosier and good cause, see § 60.09[5]. A breach of contract action based on an oral or implied agreement not to terminate except for good cause is not barred by the statute of frauds.ⁿ³⁹ For further discussion of the statute of frauds, see § 60.09[2].

The principles underlying an action for breach of contract based on an express or implied agreement not to terminate are also applicable to actions for breach of an express or implied agreement not to demote.ⁿ⁴⁰ For further discussion of this topic, see § 60.07[2].

[2] Effect of Written Employment Contracts, Handbooks, Policies, and Other Writings

[a] Writings May Be Relevant to At Will Issue

Documents such as personnel manuals, bylaws, and letters of understanding that include language limiting the employer's prerogative to terminate an employee at will may be treated as agreements not to terminate without good cause.ⁿ⁴¹ In Foley v. Interactive Data Corp., ⁿ⁴² for example, the California Supreme Court stated that an agreement to limit the grounds for termination may be inferred from the employer's personnel manual or policies.

The importance of drafting specific and comprehensive written at will policies is evident from the cases discussed below. For guidance in drafting effective employee handbooks and personnel policies, see Morrison & Foerster, California Employers' Guide to Employee Handbooks and Personnel Policy Manuals (Matthew Bender).

[b] Written Employment Contracts

A written contract that contains an express at will clause creates evidence of an at will relationship that is difficult to rebut.ⁿ⁴³ For example, in Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc.,^{n43.1} the California Supreme Court held that the verbal formulation "at any time" in the termination clause of an employment contract was not per se ambiguous merely because it did not expressly speak to whether cause was required. Rather, as a matter of simple logic, the formulation would ordinarily entail the notion of "with or without cause." The Court also found that the employee's proffered extrinsic evidence did not render the contract ambiguous concerning whether he could be terminated only for cause.^{n43.2} Courts may refuse to allow parol evidence to rebut an integrated employment contract containing an at will clause.^{n43.3} In Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc.,^{n43.4} for example, the court refused to even consider the Pugh factors, calling them "irrelevant," because the plaintiff's written employment contract provided that he could be terminated on two weeks notice.^{n43.5}

A provision in an employment contract providing for termination upon specified notice is not reasonably susceptible, without more, to an interpretation allowing for the existence of an implied-in-fact agreement that termination will occur only for cause.ⁿ⁴⁴ Thus, for example, an insurance agent could not sue the insurance company he formerly represented in a contract action for constructive wrongful termination, because the agency agreement contained a provision allowing either side to terminate the agreement on notice.^{n44.1} The agent could not introduce extrinsic evidence that the company omitted "with or without cause" language from the termination provision, provided a termination review process, and stated in its company magazine in 1977 that termination would not occur without a serious breach, because the plain language of the termination-on-notice provision was not reasonably susceptible to an interpretation requiring the employer to have good cause for termination.^{n44.2} Further, a termination-review provision in the agency agreement, placed just after the termination-notice provision, did not provide for more than simply termination upon specified notice. The termination-review provision merely provided an internal forum, primarily for the insurance company's benefit, for reconsidering a decision to end an agency agreement.

When an employment agreement has both express and implied terms that are contradictory, the express terms control—even if the express terms are not contained in an integrated contract.^{n44.3} For example, in one case, an employee received housing assistance from his employer that resulted in a co-ownership agreement. That agreement, reached years after his date of hire, declared that the employee's employment was at will.^{n44.4} Following his termination for differences over "management style," the employee argued that the policies and practices of his employer were sufficient to establish an implied contract to be terminated only for cause. While stating in dictum that an agreement containing at will language could be so tenuously related to employment as to be nonbinding and that conduct subsequent to the formation of an express at will agreement could undermine its terms, the court of appeal found no such evidence in this case.^{n44.5} Moreover, the standard plaintiffs must meet is extremely high: "substantial evidence that the parties did not intend the written express term to be controlling."^{n44.6}

However, if the written contract is not integrated, the fact that "at will" language exists does not preclude the existence of an implied in fact contract to terminate for cause only.ⁿ⁴⁵

[c] Personnel Manuals and Policies

Personnel manual provisions or established employment policies may be construed to require good cause for termination if an at will policy is not otherwise clearly expressed and understood between the parties. For example, an express personnel policy providing for termination on failure to meet specified job requirements has been held to support the existence of an implied contract requiring cause for termination.ⁿ⁴⁶ Based on similar analysis, a court held an employer liable for contract damages for violating a policy that requires recall of laid off employees for any position for which they are qualified, even if outside applicants are better qualified.ⁿ⁴⁷

However, although courts will sometimes imply an agreement from a personnel manual or employment policy contrary to the statutorily presumed at-will status, courts will not imply an agreement to vary the terms of an express at-will employment agreement signed by the employee.^{n47.1} In Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc., ^{n47.2} the employee signed an employment application and an employment agreement expressly stating that her employment was at will. She was then laid off, while on family leave, as part of a company-wide workforce reduction. The court found that statements on family leave in the employer's personnel handbooks failed to create an implied agreement that vitiated her at-will status. Even assuming that the statements contradicted the express agreement by guaranteeing her continued employment, there could not be a valid express contract and an implied contract, each embracing the same subject, but requiring different results. The express term controlled, even if it was not part of an integrated employment contract. It nevertheless precluded the existence of an implied contract requiring good cause for termination.^{n47.3} Finally, the court concluded that, even assuming that the personnel policies, coupled with the guarantee of reinstatement contained in the letter granting the employee's request for family leave, could be deemed a valid and binding modification of her at-will status, the guarantee did not preclude the employer from terminating her employment as part of a company-wide reduction in work force.^{n47.4}

If a personnel manual states that one class of employee is subject to at will termination, a court may infer that other employees have an implied contract to be terminated only for cause. In one case, an employee handbook stated that probationary employees could be terminated at any time within the probationary period on the ground of unsatisfactory performance. The court held that the issue remained whether the policy implied that a nonprobationary employee could be terminated only for good cause.ⁿ⁴⁸

In that case, the handbook also stated that a nonprobationary employee was eligible for all benefits, presumably including the grievance procedures outlined elsewhere in the handbook.ⁿ⁴⁹

A disciplinary policy may also be construed to limit the grounds for termination to those that are in harmony with the stated discipline procedures. In a case in which a baseball coach at a private college was terminated without adherence to the employer's disciplinary policies set forth in a personnel manual, the court denied the employer's motion for summary judgment.ⁿ⁵⁰ However, the mere existence of a progressive discipline policy does not negate at will status.ⁿ⁵¹

The employer's conduct may enhance the effect of a written policy that is neutral with respect to at will status. In one case, the Ninth Circuit upheld a jury verdict finding that the employer had impliedly promised the employee that she would be treated fairly and not be laid off except in accordance with personnel policies and procedures.ⁿ⁵²

The employer's conduct and circumstances of the plaintiff's employment may contravene express at will language in a personnel manual, converting at will status to an implied promise not to terminate except for good cause. In one case, the court held that at will language in the handbook was contravened by such factors as the plaintiff's 19 1/2 years of service, consistent promotions, salary increases, and the defendant's implemented personnel policies.ⁿ⁵³ In another case, the court held that at will provisions in the handbook and operations manual did not as a matter of law preclude the existence of a contrary implied promise of termination only for cause. The court stated that because the parties had not reduced their employment relationship to an integrated writing, the employee handbook and manual were only factors regarding the existence and content of the employment agreement; other factors included the personnel policies and practices of the employer.ⁿ⁵⁴

The effect of a written personnel policy on at will status may be inferred from its stated purpose. For example, a personnel policy stated to be "a guide for supervisors involved with an employment termination" was held not to be part of an employment contract. The court construed the policy to be only a guideline, and not mandatory.ⁿ⁵⁵ In Asmus v. Pacific Bell, ^{n55.1} the California Supreme Court found that a policy that was apparently mandatory while it was in place could be unilaterally terminated by the employer if the condition was one of indefinite duration and the employer effected the change after a reasonable time, on reasonable notice and without interfering with the employees' vested benefits.^{n55.2}

[d] Employment Applications

An employment application may establish an at will employment relationship if it expressly so provides and is intended to be a complete integration of the terms on that issue.ⁿ⁵⁶ However, California appellate courts are divided on whether the parol evidence rule applies to employment applications. One line of reasoning holds that the courts must determine whether the application contains an integrated at will clause.ⁿ⁵⁷ Other courts have held that the application is not a contract at all, but rather a solicitation of an offer of employment, relegating an at will clause to mere evidence of any ultimate agreement between the parties.ⁿ⁵⁸

One court, following the first approach, found that an employment application was not determinative of the issue of at will employment because (1) the application was not the complete and integrated contract between the parties that would exclude evidence of all other agreements; (2) parol evidence was admissible to show that the application language was susceptible to other meanings; and (3) the evidence, including the employer's personnel manual, indicated an implied contract for termination based only on cause.ⁿ⁵⁹ In a similar case, the court analysed that a standardized two-page application. It lacked an integration clause and stated that an individual's employment was for no definite period and could be terminated at any time, but did not state the individual's position or salary, nor did it state the employment could be terminated for any reason. The court found the application did not have provisions indicative of an "at will" relationship. That court also found that an express personnel policy providing for termination on failure to meet specified job requirements supported the existence of an implied contract requiring cause.ⁿ⁶⁰

[e] Other Writings

In the absence of an express contract between the parties, or personnel policies on point, a court may need to evaluate other writings that imply the status of the employee as at will or entitled to good cause for termination.

In one case, the court considered a written letter of understanding, which read in pertinent part: "termination of this letter of understanding by either party may be accomplished upon thirty days' notice. [P] We look forward to a long, pleasant, and mutually satisfactory relationship with you ...".ⁿ⁶¹ It held that the document was irrelevant to the issue of at will or good cause status, rejecting plaintiff's assertion that the employer's hope of a good relationship constituted a promise of termination only for cause.ⁿ⁶² The court also rejected the parties' contentions that language requiring thirty days' notice supported either position, holding rather that the clause was silent regarding the possible causes for termination.ⁿ⁶³

The same court indicated that an employer's bylaws may constitute a contract with its employees in certain circumstances, holding that bylaws, like other written rules and procedures, could form part of the employment contract if the employer and employee had a mutual understanding that the rules or procedures would apply to the employee.ⁿ⁶⁴

In another case, a stock option agreement signed by the employee that expressly stated that the employer had the right to terminate him at any time, was held to constitute an express agreement between the parties defining an at will relationship. In that action, the plaintiff could not produce any documents to the contrary, and the court concluded that, because there cannot be both an express and an implied agreement requiring different results, the plaintiff could not rebut the at will status.ⁿ⁶⁵ Similarly, an at will provision contained in a property ownership agreement, reached years after the employee's date of hire, was held to constitute an express agreement between the parties. In that case, the employee admitted reading the agreement before signing and admitted that no one at the company told him that the at will provision was not meant to have the stated effect.^{n65.1}

An employee who signed several versions of a document entitled "Sales Regulations," the last of which contained express at will language, was held not to be an at will employee. The court observed that the language was inserted only shortly before the employee's termination and without his knowledge. Thus, the court categorized the new language as an "ex parte addition to the Sales Regulations."ⁿ⁶⁶ In another case, the court found that a confidentiality agreement with an at will termination clause and which expressly stated that it could only be modified by the president of the company in writing, whether or not it was considered an "employment agreement," was a complete and integrated expression of the parties' intent with respect to termination.ⁿ⁶⁷

For additional discussion of employee handbooks and model provisions for inclusion in such handbooks, see Morrison & Foerster California Employers' Guide to Employee Handbooks and Personnel Policy Manuals (Matthew Bender).

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The existence of an implied contract cause of action within the law of wrongful discharge necessarily obligates an employer to make no promises that it does not intend to keep. Such advice is easy to state, but requires care in its implementation. For example, employers may wish to consider an audit of their complete inventory of personnel forms, personnel manuals, personnel practices, and benefit plans. Such audits need not be time-consuming or disruptive, and may be of significant defensive value. Even simple modification of recruitment practices, offer letters, application forms, and employee handbooks can serve to limit exposure to wrongful discharge liability.ⁿ⁶⁸ Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Employment Relationships
Employment Contracts
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Employment Relationships
Employment Contracts
Breach
Labor & Employment Law
Wrongful Termination
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements for a claim of breach of employment contract for an unspecified term without good cause, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2401 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the special verdict form for a cause of action for breach of an employment contract for an unspecified term, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2400 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instructions that pertain to contracts generally, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 300 et seq. (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI instructions and special verdict forms generally, see §§ 61.05, 61.06.

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 676-681, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n3)Footnote 2. Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 .

(n4)Footnote 3. Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 695, 101 Cal. Rptr. 169 .

(n5)Footnote 4. Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Indus., Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 .

(n6)Footnote 5. Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Indus., Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 96, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 ; Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 695, 703, 101 Cal. Rptr. 169 .

(n7)Footnote 6. Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 695, 702, 101 Cal. Rptr. 169 .

(n8)Footnote 7. Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 695, 703-704, 101 Cal. Rptr. 169 , citing dicta in Ruinello v. Murray (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 687, 689, 690, 227 P.2d 251 .

(n9)Footnote 8. Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Indus., Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 96, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 .

(n10)Footnote 9. Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Indus., Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 96, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 .

(n11)Footnote 10. Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Indus., Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 96, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 .

(n12)Footnote 11. Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1264 .

(n13)Footnote 12. Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1264, 1272, n.8 .

(n14)Footnote 13. Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 645 ; see also Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 (employer's false statements made to induce person to become employee were basis for civil lawsuit alleging fraud against employer); Toscano v. Greene Music (2005) 124 Cal. app. 4th 685, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 (employee who resigns from at-will employment in reliance on prospective employer's unfulfilled promise of other employment may recover, under a promissory estoppel theory, future wages based on what employee would have earned at prior employment, provided the damages are not speculative or remote and are supported by substantial evidence); Helmer v. Bingham Toyota Isuzu (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 136 (same).

(n15)Footnote 14. Pugh v. See's Candies (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 324 329, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 .

(n16)Footnote 15. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n17)Footnote 16. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 677, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 . See Pugh v. See's Candies (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 324 325, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 , citing, inter alia, Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 695, 704, 101 Cal. Rptr. 169 and Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 96, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 .

(n18)Footnote 17. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 677, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n19)Footnote 18. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 679, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Pugh v. See's Candies (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 325-326, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 .

(n20)Footnote 19. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 679, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 . See Pugh v. See's Candies (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 325-326, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 .

(n21)Footnote 20. Pugh v. See's Candies (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 325, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 .

(n22)Footnote 21. Pugh v. See's Candies (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 326, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 .; but see Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1264, 1271-1272 & n.8 (no for cause contract existed because plaintiff failed to show independent consideration, even though he resigned from prior job and relocated as condition of new job).

(n23)Footnote 22. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 680, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Pugh v. See's Candies (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 326-327, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; see Gould v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1137, 1151-1153, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 718 (insufficient showing of implied contract based only on employee's length of service (three years), his completion of 90-day probationary period, and supervisor statement that employees who complete probationary period become "members" of company and "long-term" employees); Knights v. Hewlett Packard (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 775, 780, 281 Cal. Rptr. 295 (no triable issue as to whether employer promised to terminate only for good cause, in part because plaintiff had no longevity of service). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements for a claim of breach of employment contract for an unspecified term, implied-in-fact promise not to discharge without good cause, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2403 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n24)Footnote 22.1. See Stillwell v. The Salvation Army (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 360, 381-383 (employee presented substantial evidence to support jury's verdict that employer promised to terminate employee only for good cause, through considerable evidence that employer's managers made repeated assurances of continued employment during employee's long tenure with organization, evidence of his long and distinguished career with employer, and evidence that employer's customary practice was to terminate employees only for cause; language in several employee handbooks that described his employment relationship as being at will did not foreclose possibility of implied agreement to terminate only for cause and same handbooks contained personnel policies arguably inconsistent with at-will employment relationship); Kelly v. Stamps.com Inc. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1088, 1102-1103, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 240 (trial court properly granted employer summary adjudication on former employee's claim that two-part retention bonus employer had awarded employee created implied contract that otherwise at-will employment would continue until at least second installment had been paid, which employer breached by discharging former employee, where memo by which employer extended bonus expressed employer's desire that employee remain working for it and provided as incentive that to receive two parts of bonus employee had to be employed with company on each of respective dates, which may have represented offer of unilateral contract for bonus, calling for employee to continue employment, but it could not be read to have included promise by employer of continued employment).

(n25)Footnote 23. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n26)Footnote 24. Pugh v. See's Candies (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 329, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 .

(n27)Footnote 25. Robards v. Gaylord Bros., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F.2d 1152, 1156-1157 .

(n28)Footnote 26. Robards v. Gaylord Bros., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F.2d 1152, 1156-1157 .

(n29)Footnote 27. Robards v. Gaylord Bros., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F.2d 1152, 1157 .

(n30)Footnote 28. Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 .

(n31)Footnote 28.1. Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 341-342, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 ; see also Haycock v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1473, 1489-1495, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 248 (employer's failure to present substantial evidence that employment was at will did not permit court to rule that longevity created implied agreement to terminate only for cause).

(n32)Footnote 28.2. Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 342, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 .

(n33)Footnote 29. Davis v. Consolidated Freightways (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 354, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 .

(n34)Footnote 30. Davis v. Consolidated Freightways (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 354, 368-369, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 . See also Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 347 F.3d 1125, 1138 (short term of employment and explicit at-will provisions in employment letter and employee handbook suggested that no implied-in-fact contract was created limiting employer's ability to terminate employment at any time; further, even if employee could demonstrate employer was required to terminate her for good cause, valid reduction in force constituted good cause and there was no evidence to suggest reduction in force was invalid).

(n35)Footnote 30.1. Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 .

(n36)Footnote 30.2. Lenk v. Total-Western, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 959, 969-970, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 .

(n37)Footnote 31. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n38)Footnote 32. Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 .

(n39)Footnote 33. See [2], below.

(n40)Footnote 34. Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 .

(n41)Footnote 35. See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 680 n.23, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n42)Footnote 36. Pugh v. See's Candies (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 330, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; see also Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall Int'l, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 (good cause must be judged on objective basis, with jury evaluating termination decision under circumstances known to employer at time decision was made); Moore v. May Dept. Stores Co. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 836, 840, 271 Cal. Rptr. 841 (termination based on plaintiff's violation of employer's security rules upheld, quoting Pugh).

(n43)Footnote 36.1. Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall Int'l, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108 . 17 Cal. 4th 93, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 ; King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 438, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 .

(n44)Footnote 36.2. King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 438-440, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 (critical question was not whether plaintiff violated employer's integrity policy by encouraging subordinate to falsify his timecard, but whether employer, acting in good faith following appropriate investigation, had reasonable grounds for believing plaintiff had done so).

(n45)Footnote 37. Crosier v. United Parcel Serv., Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1139-1140, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

(n46)Footnote 38. Crosier v. United Parcel Serv., Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1139-1140, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

(n47)Footnote 39. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n48)Footnote 40. See Scott v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 464-465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 .

(n49)Footnote 41. See, e.g., Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Hejmadi v. AMFAC, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 525, 541, 249 Cal. Rptr. 5 (policies and procedures manuals provided that employees would not be discharged without just cause); Burton v. Security Pacific Nat'l Bank (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 972, 978, 243 Cal. Rptr. 277 ; Prevost v. First W. Bank (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1492, 1501-1502, 239 Cal. Rptr. 161 ; Walker v. Northern San Diego County Hosp. Dist. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 896, 903-905, 185 Cal. Rptr. 617 ; see also Asmus v. Pacific Bell 2000 Cal. Daily Op. Service 4247, 4247 (employment security policy enforceable until modified).

(n50)Footnote 42. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n51)Footnote 43. See, e.g., DeHorney v. Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust and Sav. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 459, 466-467 (bank's personnel policies did not modify clear terms of employment contract creating employment at will); Starzynski v. Capital Public Radio, Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 33, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 (supervisor's assurances of continued employment absent cause for termination did not create implied contract in face of express written acknowledgment signed by employee that his employment was at will).

(n52)Footnote 43.1. Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 388-391 .

(n53)Footnote 43.2. Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 391-393 .

(n54)Footnote 43.3. See, e.g., Stillwell v. The Salvation Army (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 360, 377-378 (assuming for sake of argument that if employment contract was valid, there could not be valid implied agreement to terminate only for cause, where contract had explicit termination at-will provision; given assumption, if court were to conclude trial court properly determined contract was enforceable as matter of law, employer would be entitled to JNOV because employee could not prevail on his claim of breach of implied agreement to terminate only for cause); Haggard v. Kimberly Quality Care Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 508, 521, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 (integrated at will clause precluded introduction of parol evidence); Anderson v. Savin Corp. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 356, 363-364, 254 Cal. Rptr. 627 ; Gerdlund v. Elec. Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 270, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 (implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing may not be relied on to establish a "good cause" requirement for termination if an express at will employment contract exists, because no obligation can be implied that would result in the obliteration of a right expressly given under a written contract); see also § 60.09[3].

(n55)Footnote 43.4. Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Servs., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383, 385 .

(n56)Footnote 43.5. Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Servs., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1388, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 ; see Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 327, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 (factors to be considered in determining existence of implied in fact agreement not to terminate except for good cause), discussed in [1][c], above; see also Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 630, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 .

(n57)Footnote 44. Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 384, 389, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 668, 139 P.3d 56 ; Bernard v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 304, 309, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700 ; Bionghi v. Metropolitan Water Dist. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1364, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 388 .

(n58)Footnote 44.1. Bernard v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. (2007) 158 Cal. App. 4th 304, 309-311, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700 . See also Appling v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2003) 340 F.3d 769, 778 ; Olander v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (8th Cir. 2003) 317 F.3d 807, 811-812 (en banc); Mooney v. State Farm Insurance Companies (D.N.H. 1972) 344 F. Supp. 697, 699-700 ; Ex Parte Gardner (Ala. 2001) 822 So. 2d 1211, 1217-1219 ; Melnick v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1988) 106 N.M. 726, 749 P.2d 1105, 1110-1111 .

(n59)Footnote 44.2. See also Appling v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2003) 340 F.3d 769, 778 (insurance agents erroneously sought to introduce extrinsic evidence to add "good cause" term to termination provision in agency agreement, rather than to properly interpret words of provision).

(n60)Footnote 44.3. Cruey v. Gannett Co., Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 362-363, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 ; citing Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 630, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 .

(n61)Footnote 44.4. Cruey v. Gannett Co., Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 361-362, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n62)Footnote 44.5. Cruey v. Gannett Co., Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 364, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 .

(n63)Footnote 44.6. Cruey v. Gannett Co., Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 364, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (plaintiff was unable to establish triable issue of fact to defeat summary judgment even though defendant employer had a progressive disciplinary policy and had personnel manuals that inconsistently stated that employment could and could not be terminated at will).

(n64)Footnote 45. See McLain v. Great Am. Ins. Cos. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1483-1487, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 (implied promise may supersede previous at will agreement embodied in nonintegrated document); Thomka v. Fin. Corp. Of Am. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 883-885, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 (employer's addition of at will language to sales regulations did not preclude jury finding that termination breached implied in fact agreement not to terminate without cause).

(n65)Footnote 46. Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1520 (personnel policy providing that salesperson could be terminated for failing to meet quota for two quarters).

(n66)Footnote 47. Kerr v. Rose (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1551, 1560-1562, 265 Cal. Rptr. 597 . but see Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 629-630, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 (signed acknowledgment that employment is at will can be basis for summary judgment against plaintiff on implied contract claim).

(n67)Footnote 47.1. Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 944, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 .

(n68)Footnote 47.2. Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 .

(n69)Footnote 47.3. Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 944-947, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 .

(n70)Footnote 47.4. Tomlinson v. Qualcomm, Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 934, 947-948, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 822 .

(n71)Footnote 48. Walker v. Northern San Diego County Hosp. Dist. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 896, 903-905, 185 Cal. Rptr. 617 .

(n72)Footnote 49. Walker v. Northern San Diego County Hosp. Dist. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 896, 903-905, 185 Cal. Rptr. 617 .

(n73)Footnote 50. Wood v. Loyola Marymount Univ. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 661, 671, 267 Cal. Rptr. 230 .

(n74)Footnote 51. See Davis v. Consol. Freightways (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 354, 368-369, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 .

(n75)Footnote 52. Kern v. Levolor Lorentzen, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 899 F.2d 772, 776 .

(n76)Footnote 53. Walker v. Blue Cross of California (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 985, 993, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184 (reversing summary judgment for defendant on cause of action for breach of implied in fact contract).

(n77)Footnote 54. Wilkerson v. Wells Fargo Bank (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1217, 1226-1228, 261 Cal. Rptr. 185 (disapproved on other grounds in Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412); see also Thomka v. Financial Corp. of Am. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 883-885, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 (reaching similar result, based on at will language added to regulations during course of employment).

(n78)Footnote 55. Knights v. Hewlett Packard (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 775, 780, 281 Cal. Rptr. 295 (also noting that even if the policy had been mandatory, it permitted termination for unacceptable performance, which applied to plaintiff).

(n79)Footnote 55.1. Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 ; 23 Cal. 4th 1, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71, 2000 Cal. LEXIS 4412 .

(n80)Footnote 55.2. Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 11, 18, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 ; 23 Cal. 4th 1, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71, 2000 Cal. LEXIS 4412 .

(n81)Footnote 56. See, e.g., Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1264, 1271 n.7 .

(n82)Footnote 57. See, e.g., Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1520 .

(n83)Footnote 58. See Harden v. Maybelline Sales Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1550, 1555-1556, 282 Cal. Rptr. 96 .

(n84)Footnote 59. McLain v. Great Am. Ins. Companies (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1484-1487, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 .

(n85)Footnote 60. Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1520 . See also Reid v. Smithkline Beecham Corp. (S.D. Cal. 2005) 366 F. Supp. 2d 989 (at-will provision in employment application and employee handbook did not bar employee from presenting evidence of implied employment contract where application and handbook stated that they were not intended to be contracts).

(n86)Footnote 61. Hillsman v. Sutter Community Hosps. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 743, 748, 200 Cal. Rptr. 605 .

(n87)Footnote 62. Hillsman v. Sutter Community Hosps. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 743, 750, 200 Cal. Rptr. 605 .

(n88)Footnote 63. Hillsman v. Sutter Community Hosps. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 743, 750-751, 200 Cal. Rptr. 605 .

(n89)Footnote 64. Hillsman v. Sutter Community Hosps. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 743, 753, 755, 200 Cal. Rptr. 605 (citing Walker v. Northern San Diego County Hosp. Dist. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 896, 902 905, 185 Cal. Rptr. 617).

(n90)Footnote 65. Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 482, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 , disapproved on other grounds, Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; see also Rochlis v. Walt Disney Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 201, 211, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 793 (provision in stock option agreement, reserving employer's right to terminate with or without cause, precluded as a matter of law any implied agreement to the contrary); Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 690 n. 23, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 (noting Shapiro but not deciding whether express at will agreement may be contradicted by implied in fact agreement).

(n91)Footnote 65.1. Cruey v. Gannett Co., Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 363-364, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (plaintiff was unable to establish triable issue of fact to defeat summary judgment even though defendant employer had a progressive disciplinary policy and had personnel manuals that inconsistently stated that employment could and could not be terminated at will).

(n92)Footnote 66. Thomka v. Fin. Corp. of Am. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 882-883, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 .

(n93)Footnote 67. Haggard v. Kimberly Quality Care (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 508, 523, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 .

(n94)Footnote 68. For full discussion of suggested procedures for avoiding wrongful discharge claims, see ch. 62.

61 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.06

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.06 Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

[1] Generally

In Foley v. Interactive Data Corp.,ⁿ¹ the California Supreme Court held that although there is an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in employment contracts, only contract, and not tort, remedies are available for its breach. The Court noted that a "well-developed" body of California case law had permitted tort recovery against insurers for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the performance of insurance contracts;ⁿ² but the Court characterized the insurance cases as "a major departure from traditional principles of contract law."ⁿ³

Although a number of court of appeal decisions had previously permitted tort recovery for breach of the implied covenant of good faith in the employment termination context,ⁿ⁴ the Court criticized these cases because of their "uncritical" incorporation of the insurance model into the employment context,ⁿ⁵ and disapproved their allowance of tort damages.ⁿ⁶ The Court stated that the tortious breach theory in the insurance area was based on a special relationship between the insured and the insurer and that the employer-employee relationship is sufficiently different that extension of the tort remedies was not warranted.ⁿ⁷ The Court cited the following differences between the two types of relationships: (1) a breach in the employment context does not place the employee in the same economic dilemma that an insured faces when an insurer refuses in bad faith to pay a claim, because the employee can seek other employment; (2) the employer does not have a "quasi-public" function of providing protection to its employees as does an insurance company; and (3) the interests of employer and employee are not financially at odds as are those of an insurer and an insured.ⁿ⁸

Courts are not free to imply a covenant of good faith and fair dealing directly at odds with a contract's express grant of discretionary power. The exception is the relatively rare instance in which a literal reading would, contrary to the parties' clear intention, result in an unenforceable, illusory agreement. In all other situations in which the contract is unambiguous, the express language governs. No obligation can be implied that would result in the obliteration of an express right in a written contract.^{n8.1}

Foley also precludes tort damages for negligence that is only a contributing cause of a termination decision. Thus, one court has held that an employee who was fired for missing a meeting, even though he did so out of fear of a coemployee who was harassing him, could not turn a contractual wrongful discharge action into a tort claim by alleging negligent supervision of the harassing coemployee.ⁿ⁹

In Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc., ^{n9.1} the Court held that the reasoning in Foley applies to any case in which an employee argues that even if the employment was at will, an arbitrary dismissal frustrated contract benefits and thus violated the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Precisely because employment at will allows the employer freedom to terminate the relationship as it chooses, the employer does not frustrate the employee's contractual rights merely by doing so. In that case, the employee cannot complain about a deprivation of the benefits of continued employment, because the agreement never provided for a continuation of its benefits in the first instance. The Court acknowledged that the covenant might be violated if termination of an at-will employee was a mere pretext to cheat the worker out of another contract benefit to which the employee was clearly entitled, such as compensation already earned.^{n9.2}

[2] Elements

The elements of a cause of action for breach of an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing include:^{n9.3}

1. A contract, one of the terms of which is a covenant of good faith and fair dealing;
2. Conduct that violates the covenant; and
3. Damages resulting from the conduct.

It is important to note that an implied covenant claim cannot be used to convert an employment relationship that is terminable at will into one that is terminable for good cause only. The claim can be used only to enforce the promises of the employment agreement.ⁿ¹⁰ If the agreement is at will, the only promise regarding its termination is that it may be terminated at any time, for any reason, by either party.ⁿ¹¹ In Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc., ^{n11.1} the California Supreme Court found that the covenant of good faith and fair dealing could not impose substantive duties or limits on the contracting parties beyond those incorporated in the specific terms of their agreement.^{n11.2} Thus, unless a contract term provides otherwise, the employer may terminate the employee for any reason or no reason and in any manner. If the termination does not breach a specific contract provision providing otherwise, the unfairness of the manner of termination does not set forth a cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing.^{n11.3}

In one pre-Foley case, Hejmadi v. AMFAC, Inc., ⁿ¹² the court suggested that even though an at will employee could not bring an implied covenant claim on the ground that he or she had been terminated without good cause, such an employee could bring an implied covenant claim to enforce another promise in the agreement that is not tied to continuous employment. The court opined that an at will employee could bring an implied covenant claim under the following circumstances: (1) the employee has an expectation of a benefit from the contract; (2) the benefit is independent of any alleged promise that the employee could be terminated for cause only; and (3) the employee was terminated by the employer in bad faith, so as to deprive the employee of this independent benefit.ⁿ¹³

In contrast, an employee who is employed under an express or implied contract to terminate for cause only may bring an implied covenant claim to enforce the alleged promise of continuous employment.ⁿ¹⁴ However, the advantage of alleging an implied covenant claim in this circumstance is questionable, since the same promise can be enforced under traditional breach of contract theory, and tort damages can no longer be recovered for breach of the implied covenant.ⁿ¹⁵

The implied covenant may not be the basis of an action for failure to enter into a new contract or to renew an expired one.ⁿ¹⁶ For example, in one case involving an employment contract that expressly provided for a one-year term and stated that there was no obligation to renew it, a court of appeal held that the implied covenant did not require an employer to apply an objective standard before deciding not to renew. The court concluded that there was no implied agreement to employ the plaintiff indefinitely absent good cause for not renewing the employment relationship.ⁿ¹⁷

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The elements of a cause of action for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing remain unclear even after Foley.ⁿ¹⁸

In the absence of clear definition, employers are advised to evaluate their discharge decisions against at least the following standards.

If the discharge is for misconduct, the employer should consider each of the following questions: (1) Does the employer have an existing policy or practice that prohibits the conduct in which the employee engaged? (2) In the absence of such a policy or practice, does the conduct in which the employee engaged exceed some identifiable boundary of reasonable behavior? (3) Did the employee know about the policy or practice that he or she violated (or should the employee have recognized that his or her behavior exceeded the bounds of reasonable conduct)? (4) Is there clear evidence that the employee engaged in the prohibited conduct? (5) Does the punishment fit the offense? (6) Have others who have engaged in similar behavior received similar discipline?

If the discharge is for poor performance, the employer should analyze whether the employee has received prior notice of (1) what is wrong with his or her performance (identifying specific examples of the problem), (2) what is required to correct (as distinguished from merely improving) the deficiencies, (3) how long the employee has to correct the deficiencies, and (4) the consequences of failure to correct the deficiencies at any time within the specified time period. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships At-Will Employment Exceptions Implied Contracts Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Breach

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 663, 700, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Gruenberg v. Aetna Ins. Co. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 566, 578, 108 Cal. Rptr. 480, 510 P.2d 1032 ; Crisci v. Security Ins. Co. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 425, 432, 58 Cal. Rptr. 13, 426 P.2d 173 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 684, 690, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See, e.g., Koehrer v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1155, 1171-1172, 226 Cal. Rptr. 820 ; Gray v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 813, 821, 226 Cal. Rptr. 570 ; Khanna v. Microdata Corp. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 250, 260-264, 215 Cal. Rptr. 860 ; Rulon-Miller v. International Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 247-248, 252, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524 ; Cleary v. American Airlines, Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 443, 456, 168 Cal. Rptr. 722 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 689, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 700 n.42, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d

373 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 690-693, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 692-693, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 . The Supreme Court subsequently held that Foley should be applied retroactively. See Newman v. Emerson Radio Corp. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 973, 976, 993, 258 Cal. Rptr. 592, 772 P.2d 1059 ; see also Fidler v. Hollywood Park Operating Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 483, 488, 272 Cal. Rptr. 895 (reversing judgment awarding compensatory and punitive damages because, although trial was completed, Foley was decided during pendency of appeal); but see Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1519, 281 Cal. Rptr. 890 (Foley decided after trial judgment entered; declining to reverse based on erroneous punitive damages instruction because jury did not award punitive damages and therefore instruction did not prejudice defendant).

(n9)Footnote 8.1. Oracle Corp. v. Falotti (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 1106, 1112 (employee's stock option agreement afforded employer's compensation committee sole discretion to interpret agreement, thus depriving employee of rights to stock options or stock-option damages).

(n10)Footnote 9. Hine v. Dittrich (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 59, 64, 278 Cal. Rptr. 330 .

(n11)Footnote 9.1. Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 350, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 .

(n12)Footnote 9.2. Guz v. Bechtel National, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 353, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 ; see also Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 596, 607-608, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565 (at-will employee could not claim breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, where employee did not claim entitlement to earned benefits under employer's compensation plan, but, rather, sought losses associated with termination of his contract benefits, such as continuing future employment and receipt of continued higher compensation, which were claims precluded by Guz).

(n13)Footnote 9.3. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements for an action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2423 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the special verdict form for a cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2404 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI instructions and special verdict forms generally, see §§ 61.05, 61.06.

(n14)Footnote 10. Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1390, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 (covenant cannot be used to imply obligation which would obliterate express right provided in written contract); see Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 690, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 . In one of its few comments on the issue of the elements of a claim for breach of the implied covenant, the Court said only (in dictum) that "with regard to an at will employment relationship, breach of the implied covenant cannot logically be based on a claim that discharge was made without good cause." Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 698 n.39, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; see also Flait v. North Am. Watch Corp. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 467, 481, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522 ; Slivinsky v. Watkins-Johnson Co. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 799, 806, 270 Cal. Rptr. 585 ; Schneider v. TRW, Inc. (9th Cir. 1991) 938 F.2d 986, 991 ; Rose v. Wells Fargo & Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 902 F.2d 1417, 1426 . But cf. Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 66-68, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 (although plaintiff could not prove contract to terminate for good cause, he could nonetheless seek contract damages for breach of implied covenant).

(n15)Footnote 11. See Flait v. North Am. Watch Corp. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 467, 481, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 522 ; Schneider v. TRW, Inc. (9th Cir. 1991) 938 F.2d 986, 991 .

(n16)Footnote 11.1. Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 .

(n17)Footnote 11.2. Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 349-350, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 .

(n18)Footnote 11.3. Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 350-352, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 .

(n19)Footnote 12. Hejmadi v. AMFAC, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 525, 249 Cal. Rptr. 5 .

(n20)Footnote 13. Hejmadi v. AMFAC, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 525, 551, 249 Cal. Rptr. 5 ; see also Walker v. Blue Cross of California (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 985, 996-997, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184 .

(n21)Footnote 14. See Hejmadi v. AMFAC, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 525, 547-549, 249 Cal. Rptr. 5 .

(n22)Footnote 15. See Aragon-Haas v. Family Security Ins. Servs., Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 232, 240, 282 Cal. Rptr. 233 .

(n23)Footnote 16. Tollefson v. Roman Catholic Bishop (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 843, 854, 268 Cal. Rptr. 550 . Cf. Daly v. Exxon Corp. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 39, 45, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 727 (where employer failed to renew fixed term employment agreement because employee complained about unsafe working conditions, employee could not state a cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy).

(n24)Footnote 17. Tollefson v. Roman Catholic Bishop (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 843, 855, 268 Cal. Rptr. 550 .

(n25)Footnote 18. However, the Court in Foley did expressly state that "with regard to an at will employment relationship, breach of the implied covenant cannot logically be based on a claim that a discharge was made without good cause." Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 698 n.39, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

62 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.06A

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.06A Retaliatory Discharge

In Lakeside-Scott v. Multnomah County,ⁿ¹ the Ninth Circuit held that the final decision maker's wholly independent, legitimate decision to terminate the employee insulated from liability a lower-level supervisor involved in the process who had a retaliatory motive to have the employee fired, because the termination decision was not shown to have been influenced by the subordinate's retaliatory motives. The employee brought a retaliatory discharge lawsuit in federal district court against the employer, a county agency, and the supervisor, alleging she was wrongfully terminated because she filed a complaint with a state agency alleging, among other things, that the supervisor gave preferential treatment to gays and lesbians in hiring and promotions, and because she openly criticized both the employer and the supervisor, claiming these were protected activities under the First Amendment and 42 U.S.C. § 1983 as well as under the state's whistle-blower act. The person who fired the employee testified that she was fired for misusing county property, conducting personal business on county time, accessing other employees' emails and documents, and engaging in workplace harassment and prejudicial acts, and that the supervisor played no role in the decision to fire the employee. The employee did not produce any evidence to the contrary. The Ninth Circuit held that the employee's protected conduct was not a substantial or motivating factor in her termination, which would have occurred even in the absence of this conduct, because even assuming the jury could have reasonably found that the supervisor harbored animosity toward the employee, a different person made the final and independent decision to terminate her.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lakeside-Scott v. Multnomah County (9th Cir. 2009) 556 F.3d 797, 803-809 .

63 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.07

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.07 Employer Actions Short of Actual Discharge

[1] Constructive Discharge

[a] Constructive Discharge Has Legal Effect of Employer Termination of Employment

Normally, in order to establish liability under one of the theories discussed §§ 60.04-60.06, the plaintiff will need to establish that the employer terminated the plaintiff's employment.ⁿ¹ However, the fact that the plaintiff resigned from his or her employment will not bar recovery for wrongful termination if he or she can prove that the employer's conduct forced him or her to resign and thus amounted to a "constructive" termination.ⁿ² An actual or constructive discharge in violation of fundamental public policy gives rise to a tort action in favor of the terminated employee.^{n2.1}

Standing alone, constructive discharge is neither a tort nor a breach of contract; it is a doctrine that transforms what is ostensibly a resignation into a firing. Even after establishing constructive discharge, an employee must independently prove a breach of contract or tort in connection with the termination of employment in order to obtain damages for wrongful termination.ⁿ³ The substantive doctrines that can support a wrongful discharge cause of action are discussed in §§ 60.04 through 60.06.

[b] Elements Required to Establish Constructive Discharge

[i] Employee's Burden of Proof

In order to establish a constructive discharge, an employee must plead and prove, by the usual preponderance of the evidence standard, that the employer either intentionally created or knowingly permitted working conditions that were so intolerable or aggravated that a reasonable person in the employee's position would be compelled to resign.ⁿ⁴ The individual elements are discussed in [ii] through [iv], below.

[ii] Intolerable Conditions

In order to support a claim of constructive discharge, the conditions giving rise to the resignation must be sufficiently extraordinary and egregious to overcome the normal motivation of a competent, diligent, and reasonable employee to remain on the job and earn a livelihood and serve his or her employer. The proper focus is on whether the resignation was coerced, not whether it was simply one rational option for the employee.ⁿ⁵ An employer need not provide a stress-free work environment. Rather, an employee is protected from unreasonably harsh conditions, in excess of those faced by his or her co-workers.^{n5.1}

The adverse working conditions must be unusually aggravated or amount to a continuous pattern before the situation will be deemed intolerable.ⁿ⁶ In some circumstances, a single intolerable incident, such as a crime of violence against an employee by an employer, or an employer's ultimatum that an employee commit a crime, may constitute a constructive discharge.ⁿ⁷ Generally, though, single, trivial, or isolated acts of misconduct are insufficient to support a constructive discharge claim. Moreover, a poor performance rating or a demotion, even if accompanied by a reduction in pay, does not by itself trigger a constructive discharge.ⁿ⁸ Similarly, the mere failure to promote the plaintiff, even if that failure is unlawfully discriminatory, does not support a finding of constructive discharge.^{n8.1}

The length of time an employee remains on the job after the onset of the alleged intolerable conditions may be one factor in determining whether a reasonable person would find the conditions intolerable; but it is not always dispositive.^{n8.2}

[iii] Intolerability Determined by Objective Standard

A constructive discharge can only exist if, under an objective standard, a reasonable person faced with the allegedly intolerable employer actions or conditions of employment would have no reasonable alternative but to quit.ⁿ⁹ Thus, courts will examine the circumstances surrounding an employee's resignation and determine whether those conditions were sufficiently egregious.ⁿ¹⁰

Whether conditions were so intolerable or aggravated under this standard is usually a question of fact. However, summary judgment against an employee on a constructive discharge claim is appropriate when, under the undisputed facts, the decision to resign was unreasonable as a matter of law.^{n10.1}

[iv] Employer Knowledge or Intent Required

The California Supreme Court has declined to require a showing that the employer intended to cause the employee to resign, but instead requires proof that the employer either deliberately created the intolerable conditions that triggered the discharge or, at a minimum, knew about the conditions and failed to remedy the situation in order to force the employee to resign.ⁿ¹¹ For purposes of this standard, the requisite knowledge or intent must exist on the part of either the employer or those persons who effectively represent the employer, that is, its officers, directors, managing agents, or supervisory employees.ⁿ¹²

The Court disapproved a line of cases that had permitted a constructive discharge to be established based on the employer's constructive knowledge of the intolerable conditions.ⁿ¹³ The Court stated that requiring employees to notify someone in a position of authority of their plight permits employers unaware of any wrongdoing to correct a potentially destructive situation.ⁿ¹⁴

Some language in the Court's discussion of the knowledge requirement suggests that an element of the proof is the employer's intent to force the employee to resign.ⁿ¹⁵ However, the Court also stated that it was not imposing an express intent requirement.ⁿ¹⁶ Thus, the Court took a middle position by requiring prior knowledge and an opportunity to correct the intolerable working conditions, without requiring evidence that the employer created the working conditions or permitted them to exist for the purpose of causing a resignation.

[v] Effect of Delay Before Resignation

Another issue that has arisen in regard to constructive discharge claims is the effect of a delay between the onset of the allegedly intolerable working conditions and the employee's resignation. The California Supreme Court made clear in Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. n17 that the "reasonable employee" standard (discussed in [iii], above) makes the length of time one relevant factor in determining the intolerability of employment conditions from the standpoint of a reasonable employee, but that it is not the dispositive factor.n18 The Court disapproved a court of appeal opinion to the extent that it held that a delay greater than the applicable statute of limitations period precluded a constructive discharge claim.n19 However, in the case before it the Court held that the delay between the allegedly illegal activities of the employer and the employee's resignation supported a conclusion that a reasonable employee would not have found the working conditions intolerable.n20

The California Supreme Court has held that in a constructive discharge action, the statute of limitations begins to run when the employment actually is terminated, that is, when the employee resigns, and not when the alleged intolerable working conditions occur.n21 The Court pointed out that having the statute of limitations run from the date of termination would not enable an employee to delay bringing a lawsuit indefinitely because the longer the employee delays resigning, the more difficult it may be to prove that the conditions were intolerable or that such conditions caused the resignation.n22

Similarly, the Ninth Circuit has held that in constructive discharge cases, periods of limitation begin to run on the date of the employee's resignation, just as they do in other cases of wrongful discharge.n22.1 In considering the timeliness of the complaint, the court first stated that the period of limitations runs from the discriminatory act. The court then concluded that while a resignation is ordinarily not a discriminatory act, when a resignation is a constructive discharge, it is a discriminatory act.n22.2 Accordingly, in this Title VII case, plaintiff's discrimination claim was timely filed when her quitting was precipitated by her supervisor's harassing and discriminatory conduct on that day, which was within the relevant period of limitations, even though plaintiff's action was the result of the cumulative effects of her supervisor's repeated acts of discrimination, most of which occurred before that date.n22.3

[2] Wrongful Discipline and Demotion

The California Supreme Court has held that the principles underlying an action for breach of an express or implied in fact agreement not to terminate are equally applicable in the context of discipline. In Scott v. Pacific Gas and Electric Co., n23 the plaintiffs alleged that their employer violated an implied agreement not to demote when they were demoted without the benefits of the employer's detailed progressive discipline policy. Following the court of appeal's dismissal of the action on the ground that there was no cognizable claim for wrongful demotion, the Supreme Court stated that it could see no reason why courts should not enforce contracts, express or implied, that restrict an employer's ability to demote an employee at will.n24 The Court explained that, just as in the termination context, there is a common law presumption that an employee may be demoted at will.n25 It concluded that under the principles enunciated in Foley v. Interactive Data Corp., n26 this presumption may be rebutted by evidence of an express or implied contractual agreement to demote only for good cause.n27

The Court found that the employer's progressive discipline policy, which was intended to be applicable to all employees, supported an implied agreement not to demote without good cause. Furthermore, the employer's failure to apply the progressive discipline policy to plaintiffs compelled the conclusion that the employer breached its implied contractual agreement by wrongfully demoting plaintiffs.n28

Similarly, the doctrine of wrongful termination in violation of public policy has been interpreted to embrace wrongful discipline as well. In Garcia v. Rockwell Int'l Corp., n29 the plaintiff alleged that his employer ordered him to mischarge the amount of time he and other workers spent on certain government projects. When he reported this alleged instruction to the appropriate governmental agency, the employer suspended him without pay. After he filed suit, the employer reinstated him. The court stated that it could see no reason why the rationale prohibiting retaliatory firing should not be applicable in a case in which an employee is wrongfully disciplined and suffers damage as a result of, not breach of a contract term, but rather, breach of a duty growing out of the contract.ⁿ³⁰ The court found that the public policy expressed in Labor Code Section 1102.5, which forbids retaliation against an employee for whistleblowing activities,ⁿ³¹ clearly prohibited the conduct of the plaintiff's employer.ⁿ³² It stated that there was no logical reason to disallow a cause of action for wrongful discipline when one exists for wrongful termination because the same wrongful conduct is involved whether the wrong inflicted (i.e., the retaliation) is a suspension without pay or a discharge.ⁿ³³ The court noted that the employer had not offered the employee reinstatement until after he had filed suit, and that if the court held that the employee only had a remedy for tortious termination, employers would not be encouraged to avoid legal action by offering reinstatement after imposition of retaliatory punitive measures.ⁿ³⁴

On the other hand, in Carter v. CB Richard Ellis, Inc.,^{n34.1} a woman sued her employer based on the employer's reorganization, which resulted in her demotion and reduction in her salary. The court recognized a cause of action for wrongful demotion without cause. However, the court held that the plaintiff presented no evidence suggesting the employer contractually limited its right to reorganize its administrative operations in any manner it saw fit. There was no evidence establishing or suggesting (or from which a reasonable inference could be drawn) that the employer created any such implied contractual rights orally or by implication in fact.

[3] Salary Reductions

In a case of first impression, the California Court of Appeal adopted the apparent majority rule that the power to terminate an employee at will includes the power to modify the terms of the employment relationship, such as salary terms. Further, continued employment after modification is deemed acceptance of that modification.ⁿ³⁵ In DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp.,ⁿ³⁶ the defendant-employer received notification from a contracting party that the plaintiff-employee's position should be eliminated as a cost-saving measure. The defendant instead reorganized the department, decreased the plaintiff's responsibilities, and reduced his pay rate. After written and oral notification of the decrease, the plaintiff asked that his pay not be reduced. After being informed that the decrease was the only way to preserve the job, the plaintiff refused to sign the notification letter, but continued to work for the defendant for almost one year before filing suit. The plaintiff argued that he did not expressly or impliedly rescind, repudiate, or abandon his claim for damages for breach of the original employment contract, and that continuing to work for the defendant constituted mitigation of damages. The defendant contended that plaintiff was an at-will employee whose employment was terminated and who was offered a new contract based on lower prospective compensation, and that the plaintiff's continued employment with knowledge of the lower compensation constitutes acceptance of the new contract and waiver of any right to claim additional compensation.ⁿ³⁷ The court concluded that an employer of an at-will employee can unilaterally change the compensation agreement without being in breach of the employment agreement; with respect to an at-will employee, the employer can terminate the old contract and make an offer for a unilateral contract under new terms. The DiGiacinto court identified the majority rule holding that, as a matter of law, an at-will employee who continues in the employ of an employer after that employer has given notice of changed terms or conditions of employment has accepted the changed terms and conditions.ⁿ³⁸ The court further noted that the minority rule does not reach this result as a matter of law, but examines the facts of each case to determine whether the employee accepted the modified terms.ⁿ³⁹ Expressly not choosing between these analyses, the DiGiacinto court concluded that the employee accepted the modified terms of employment. Moreover, the court concluded that the letter lowering the employee's salary constitutes the employer's notice of termination of the old at-will employment contract and an offer of a unilateral contract under new terms.ⁿ⁴⁰

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
 Discrimination
 Disparate Treatment
 Defenses & Exceptions
 General Overview
 Labor & Employment Law
 Employment Relationships
 General Overview
 Labor & Employment Law
 Wrongful

TerminationConstructive DischargeGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. An employer's coworkers may not be held liable for terminating the employee's employment, under either a common law contract or tort theory. See Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1522, 281 Cal. Rptr. 890 (agents of an employer, acting within the course and scope of their authority, and not solely for their own benefit, are protected by the manager's privilege from incurring tort liability for personnel decisions); Kacludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866, 872 ("If [the] privilege protects nothing else, it protects a manager's right to manage personnel (including firing and hiring) without fear of independent liability, absent concrete and specific allegations that such actions were entirely for the benefit of the individual.") (emphasis in original).

(n2)Footnote 2. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1245, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; Colores v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1305-1313, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 (allowing claim for wrongful constructive discharge in violation of public policy in retaliation for plaintiff's whistle blowing activities); see Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1110 ("Constructive discharge is, indeed, just one form of wrongful discharge. The fact that the actual act of terminating employment is initiated by the employee, who concludes that she is compelled to leave as a result of the employer's actions, rather than by the employer directly does not change the fact that the employee has been discharged"; thus, since date of employee's resignation fell within relevant period of limitations, her Title VII discrimination claim was timely filed).

For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements for a claim of breach of employment contract for unspecified term by constructive discharge, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2402 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the special verdict form for a cause of action for breach of an employment contract for an unspecified term, constructive discharge, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2401 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI instructions and special verdict forms generally, see §§ 61.05, 61.06.

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Colores v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1306, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 .

(n4)Footnote 3. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; Colores v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1306, 1313-1314, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 (plaintiff presented evidence of breach of implied employment contract in both employer's personnel practice of not firing except for cause and employee's 21-year service); see Starzynski v. Capital Public Radio, Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 33, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 525 (at-will employee has no contractual claim for wrongful discharge based on constructive discharge on account of intolerable working conditions).

(n5)Footnote 4. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; Colores v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1305, 1314-1319, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 (plaintiff's disability retirement did not preclude finding of constructive discharge); Casenas v. Fujisawa USA, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 101, 103, 113-115, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 827 (as matter of law, no reasonable employee would find Casenas's working conditions so egregious as to compel resignation; textbook example of appropriate response to harassment complaint).

(n6)Footnote 5. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1246, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 .

(n7)Footnote 5.1. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1247, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; Casenas v. Fujisawa USA, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 101, 113-114, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 827 .

(n8)Footnote 6. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1247, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; Colores v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1306, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 .

(n9)Footnote 7. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1247 n.3, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (noting that case before it involved no such allegations).

(n10)Footnote 8. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1247, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (citing Valdez v. City of Los Angeles (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1043, 1056, 282 Cal. Rptr. 726 , and Soules v. Cadam, Inc. (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 390, 401, 3 Cal. Rptr. 2d 6); Colores v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1306, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 ; see also Schnidrig v. Columbia Mach., Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 1406, 1411-1412 (replacement of employee with younger worker, move to smaller office, exclusion from meetings and decisions did not constitute constructive termination under federal age discrimination law); King v. AC & R Advertising (9th Cir. 1995) 65 F.3d 764, 767 (demotion in job level, even when accompanied by reduction in pay does not constitute constructive discharge); Addy v. Bliss & Glennon (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 205, 217-218, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 (denial of training and demotion not sufficiently intolerable to avoid summary judgement on constructive discharge claim); Gibson v. Aro Corp. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1628, 1634-1636, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 882 .

(n11)Footnote 8.1. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1247, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; Casenas v. Fujisawa USA, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 101, 114-115, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 827 .

(n12)Footnote 8.2. Colores v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1306, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 .

(n13)Footnote 9. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; Colores v. Board of Trustees of California State University (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1305, 1307-1313, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 (plaintiff made sufficient showing to raise a triable issue as to whether reasonable person would have felt compelled to resign; recognizing claim for constructive discharge in violation of public policy in retaliation for plaintiff's whistle blowing activities).

(n14)Footnote 10. See Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1254-1256, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (allegations of illegality at workplace were insufficient to support claim of constructive discharge); see also Casenas v. Fujisawa USA, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 101, 114-115, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 827 (as matter of law, no reasonable employee would find allegedly unfair performance evaluation and failure to consider plaintiff for management position so egregious as to compel resignation); Gibson v. Aro Corp. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1628, 1636 1637, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 882 (employee's embarrassment about working as sales representative did not convert demotion into constructive discharge; proper focus is on working conditions themselves and not on employee's subjective reaction to those conditions); Rochlis v. Walt Disney Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 201, 212-213, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 793 , disapproved on other grounds, Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (allegations that (1) job was not what plaintiff had expected, (2) plaintiff had not been given sufficient authority to carry out job's responsibilities, (3) plaintiff did not receive compensation he believed he deserved, and (4) plaintiff was criticized, held insufficient as matter of law to constitute constructive discharge; court characterized those allegations as merely common conditions for highly paid senior executives such as plaintiff).

(n15)Footnote 10.1. Scotch v. Art Institute of California (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 986, 1022-1023, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 338 (employee was not constructively discharged as matter of law by change of his status from full time to part time, where employer did not change his working conditions or make it difficult for him to perform his job functions, there was no evidence he was shunned, treated harshly, or subjected to epithets and scorn, and his appointment letter informed him employer might change his employment status to part time in case of enrollment decline, so that reasonable employer would not have realized reasonable person in employee's position would be compelled to resign).

(n16)Footnote 11. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248-1249, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; see also Gibson v. Aro Corp. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1628, 1638-1640, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 882 (judgment for employee reversed because employer did not have actual knowledge of alleged intolerable working conditions and employee admitted he did not tell any of his superiors that job was intolerable).

(n17)Footnote 12. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 876 P.2d 1022, 1032 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223 Colores v. Board of Trustees (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1293, 1305-1306, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 .

(n18)Footnote 13. See Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (disapproving cases following Brady v. Elixir Industries (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1306, 242 Cal. Rptr. 324 , to the extent that they required only constructive knowledge).

(n19)Footnote 14. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1250, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 .

(n20)Footnote 15. See Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1249-1250, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (employer must "know about [the intolerable working conditions] and fail to remedy the situation in order to force the employee to resign").

(n21)Footnote 16. See Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248, 1249, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (noting that majority of courts have declined to require express intent, and that express intent requirement might unduly focus trier of fact's attention on presence or absence of direct evidence).

(n22)Footnote 17. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 .

(n23)Footnote 18. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1254, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 .

(n24)Footnote 19. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1254, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 (disapproving Panopulos v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 660, 264 Cal. Rptr. 810).

(n25)Footnote 20. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1255, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 .

(n26)Footnote 21. Mullins v. Rockwell Internat. Corp. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 731, 737-739, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636, 936 P.2d 1246 .

(n27)Footnote 22. Mullins v. Rockwell Internat. Corp. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 731, 740, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636, 936 P.2d 1246 .

(n28)Footnote 22.1. Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1111 (date of resignation triggers the limitations period in a constructive discharge case).

(n29)Footnote 22.2. Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1111 .

(n30)Footnote 22.3. Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1110 (time limitation period for constructive discharge begins with employee's resignation when employer's discriminatory conduct persisted to employee's final day on job).

(n31)Footnote 23. Scott v. Pac. Gas and Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 .

(n32)Footnote 24. Scott v. Pac. Gas and Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 .

(n33)Footnote 25. Scott v. Pac. Gas and Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 464-465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 .

(n34)Footnote 26. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n35)Footnote 27. Scott v. Pac. Gas and Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 .

(n36)Footnote 28. Scott v. Pac. Gas and Elec. Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 465-466, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 .

(n37)Footnote 29. Garcia v. Rockwell Int'l Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1556, 1560-1562, 232 Cal. Rptr. 490 .

(n38)Footnote 30. Garcia v. Rockwell Int'l Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1556, 1561, 232 Cal. Rptr. 490 .

(n39)Footnote 31. See discussion of Lab. Code § 1102.5 at § 60.03[2][aa].

(n40)Footnote 32. Garcia v. Rockwell Int'l Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1556, 1561, 232 Cal. Rptr. 490 .

(n41)Footnote 33. Garcia v. Rockwell Int'l Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1556, 1562, 232 Cal. Rptr. 490 .

(n42)Footnote 34. Garcia v. Rockwell Int'l Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1556, 1562, 232 Cal. Rptr. 490 .

(n43)Footnote 34.1. Carter v. CB Richard Ellis, Inc. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 1326-1329 .

(n44)Footnote 35. DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 629, 636-639, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300 .

(n45)Footnote 36. DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 629, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300 .

(n46)Footnote 37. DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 629, 632-634, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300 (superior court rejected plaintiff's mitigation of damages argument as unpersuasive and lacking factual support; if employer had terminated employment, employee would have had no action against employer and, therefore, no damages to mitigate).

(n47)Footnote 38. DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 629, 636-637, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300 ; see, e.g., Hathaway v. General Mills, Inc. (Tex. 1986) 711 S.W.2d 227, 229 (continuation of work after modification constitutes acceptance as matter of law).

(n48)Footnote 39. DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 629, 636-637, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300 ; see, e.g., Schoppert v. CCTC Int'l, Inc. (N.D. Ill. 1997) 972 F. Supp. 444, 446-447 (continued employment for two and a half years after modification without indication that employer might change position constitutes acceptance despite oral objections to modifications).

(n49)Footnote 40. DiGiacinto v. Ameriko-Omserv Corp. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 629, 639, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 300 .

64 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.08

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.08 Remedies in Wrongful Discharge Action

[1] Introduction

Relatively few cases address specific damages issues relating to wrongful discharge. Therefore, the discussion below focuses on the general availability of certain types of damages. In some instances, remedies available in other areas of law, such as employment discrimination, are discussed when it seems likely that similar damages would be available to a wrongful discharge plaintiff.

[2] Tort Action

[a] General Damages

In tort actions generally, a plaintiff may obtain compensation for all harm proximately caused by the defendant's wrongful conduct.ⁿ¹ Damages properly include "[r]easonable compensation for any pain, discomfort, fears, anxiety and other mental and emotional distress suffered by [him or her] and of which injury was a cause [and for similar suffering reasonably certain to be experienced in the future from the same cause]."ⁿ² Tort damages are available in an action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy.ⁿ³

In Foley v. Interactive Data Corp.,ⁿ⁴ the California Supreme Court held that tort remedies are not available for the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the employment context. The dissent, however, suggested that, under circumstances where it could be shown that the employer was aware at the time of the contract that bad faith discharge would create emotional distress, the plaintiff might be able to recover damages for emotional distress.ⁿ⁵ The dissent cited four past contract cases outside of the employment context that held that emotional distress damages are available in contract cases if it is reasonably foreseeable at the time of making the contract that breach of the contract would cause plaintiff mental anguish.ⁿ⁶

For a general discussion of tort damages, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 50, Damages, Costs, Attorneys' Fees, and Interest, Part A, and Ch. 51, Recovery for Pain and Suffering.

[b] Special Damages[i] Wages and Benefits

The plaintiff can obtain damages for lost wages and benefits, including health insurance and life insurance, which should be calculated at the replacement cost for plaintiff, not the cost to the employer.ⁿ⁷ In most cases, the trier of fact must determine the period of time that plaintiff would have worked for defendant, and then calculate the monetary value of all the compensation he or she would have received during that time, subtracting any amounts obtained or obtainable through reasonable efforts at mitigation.ⁿ⁸ If the plaintiff would have received raises absent defendant's tortious conduct, damages should include amounts representing such raises.ⁿ⁹ Although these damages may to some degree be speculative, by analogy to the employment discrimination context it can be argued that "unrealistic exactitude" is not required and that any uncertainties in the calculation of damages should be resolved against an employer who has wrongfully terminated an employee.ⁿ¹⁰

Often, the amount of lost wages is determined by expert witnesses. There may be disparity between opposing experts' estimates and methodological disagreements, but a court will not reverse the fact finder's determination "unless the testimony on which it is based is wholly unacceptable to reasonable minds or unbelievable per se."ⁿ¹¹

[ii] Future Earnings

Compensation for wages and benefits from the date of judgment forward are referred to as "front pay." Front pay based on future earnings is available to a plaintiff in a wrongful discharge action.ⁿ¹² In Title VII cases, front pay is generally awarded as an alternative to reinstatement if reinstatement appears inappropriate.ⁿ¹³ For this reason, it may be wise for plaintiff's counsel to include a request for reinstatement when requesting front pay as an element of damages.ⁿ¹⁴ Front pay is generally awarded only for a limited period of time.ⁿ¹⁵

■ PRACTICE TIP:

No case expressly limits the amount of front pay that may be awarded in a wrongful termination suit. However, the employer may be able to argue mitigation of damages as an offset to front pay awards.ⁿ¹⁶
Commentary by William M. Crosby.

In general, that portion of a compensatory damages award which represents future wages and benefits must be reduced "to a present lump sum which, when invested to yield the highest rate of return consistent with reasonable security, will pay the equivalent of lost future benefits at the times, in the amounts and for the period such future benefits would have been received."ⁿ¹⁷ Competent evidence on any or all of the following factors should be considered by the trier of fact: (1) the amount the plaintiff would have earned during each period of lost compensation, (2) the discount rate that properly produces a present lump sum which by way of safe investments might yield the appropriate future sums, and (3) the effects of inflation.ⁿ¹⁸ For further discussion of discounting of future awards generally, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 52, Recovery for Medical Expenses and Economic Loss.

[iii] Prejudgment Interest

Prejudgment interest is an element of compensatory damages that provides plaintiff with "the accretion of wealth which money or particular property could have produced during a period of loss."ⁿ¹⁹

In a California tort case, prejudgment interest may be available under any of three statutes. Civil Code Section 3287(a) states that interest must be awarded if damages are certain or capable of being made certain by calculation on a particular day prior to judgment.ⁿ²⁰ This statute has been interpreted to apply to tort as well as contract causes of action.ⁿ²¹ However, the statute applies only if the dispute concerns a question of liability alone and not the basis on which damages are computed.ⁿ²² Thus, it may have limited utility with regard to damages other than those representing lost wages in wrongful termination cases because the amount of such damages is usually disputed.

Prejudgment interest also may be obtained in a wrongful discharge case sounding in tort under Civil Code Section 3288, which permits interest to be awarded at the discretion of the trier of fact in any case of a breach of a noncontractual obligation or in any case of malice, fraud, or oppression.ⁿ²³ Prejudgment interest under section 3288 does not apply to the portion of the judgment representing emotional distress damages.ⁿ²⁴

The third statute providing for prejudgment interest in a tort actionⁿ²⁵ is Civil Code Section 3291. This section provides that if the plaintiff in a "personal injury" action makes a written pretrial settlement offer pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 998, which defendant declines, and plaintiff later achieves a more favorable result at trial, he or she will receive interest at the legal rate of ten percent from the date of the unaccepted offer.ⁿ²⁶ It is not clear whether wrongful termination tort causes of action are classified as "personal injury" actions for purposes of this statute. One court of appeal held that a wrongful discharge action primarily involves the infringement of property rights and not personal injury. Therefore, according to the court, a wrongful discharge action is not an action to recover personal injury damages within the meaning of the statute.ⁿ²⁷

For a general discussion of prejudgment interest in tort actions, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 50, Damages, Costs, Attorneys' Fees, and Interest, §§ 50.50; 50.52.

[c] Punitive Damages

Punitive damages are available in tort actions in which it is proven by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice,ⁿ²⁸ and acted with an intent to vex, injure, or annoy, or with a conscious disregard of plaintiff's rights.ⁿ²⁹

Malice, oppression, and fraud are defined in Civil Code Section 3294(c).ⁿ³⁰ Wrongful termination, without more, will not sustain a finding of malice or oppression.^{n30.1}

Conscious disregard of rights is conduct by a defendant who is aware of the probable dangerous consequences of such conduct to plaintiff's interests and willfully and deliberately fails to avoid those consequences.ⁿ³¹ Punitive damages may be obtained in a wrongful discharge action that sounds in tort, i.e., violation of public policy.ⁿ³² For example, in one caseⁿ³³ in which an employee who resigned following his refusal to participate in illegal activities sued for tortious "constructive discharge," the employee was awarded punitive damages because the employer consciously disregarded the employee's rights by willfully failing to ensure that employees were informed of the law relevant to their duties or to ensure that employees would not be required to participate in illegal conduct.

In order to award punitive damages, the trier of fact must find that the plaintiff suffered some actual damages, but the amount of actual damages may be nominalⁿ³⁴ or offset by a defendant's cross-claim.ⁿ³⁵ Although it is often stated that punitive damages must bear a "reasonable relationship" to actual damages,ⁿ³⁶ no formula has been established to determine what is reasonable, and in fact the cases vary widely in their determinations on this issue.ⁿ³⁷

It appears that the "reasonableness" of the relationship between punitive and actual damages may depend in part on the reprehensibility of the defendant's conduct.ⁿ³⁸

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

In wrongful termination cases, particularly where employment discrimination or harassment is not alleged, punitive damages are by no means automatic. The practitioner should choose carefully when to plead and attempt to prove them. Typically, they may be awarded when an employer takes undue, overreaching advantage of a vulnerable employee. Obviously, after Foley, they are not available at all unless a violation of public policy is alleged. Commentary by John M. True, III.

An employer may be liable for punitive damages for the acts of an employee (for example, a supervisor), if the employer had advance knowledge of the unfitness of the employee but employed or continued to employ him or her with conscious disregard for the rights of others.ⁿ³⁹ If the employer authorized or ratified the wrongful conduct for which the damages are awarded, or if the employer was personally guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice.ⁿ⁴⁰ In employment cases, the primary defendant is often a corporation. With respect to a corporate employer, the advance knowledge and conscious disregard, authorization, ratification, or act of oppression, fraud, or malice must be on the part of an officer, director, or managing agent of the corporation.ⁿ⁴¹ Retention of the offending employee after the corporation has full knowledge of the wrongful acts constitutes ratification.ⁿ⁴² An employer's failure to act on an employee's complaints about harassment by coworkers and retaliation for such complaints also constitute ratification that may subject the corporate employer to punitive damages.ⁿ⁴³

In White v. Ultramar, Inc.,ⁿ⁴⁴ the California Supreme Court construed the meaning of the term "managing agent" under Civ. Code § 3294(b). The Court variously defined the responsibilities of a managing agent to include:

- "Substantial independent authority and judgment over decisions that ultimately determine corporate policy[;]"ⁿ⁴⁵
- "Substantial discretionary authority over decisions that ultimately determine corporate policy[;]"^{n45.1} and
- "Substantial discretionary authority over significant aspects of a corporation's business."^{n45.2}

Accordingly, liability turns not on the employee's managerial classification or title, but on the extent of his or her decision-making discretion.^{n45.3} Thus, supervisors who have no discretionary authority over decisions that ultimately determine corporate policy are not to be considered managing agents even though they may have the ability to hire or fire other employees. In order to demonstrate that an employee is a true managing agent under Civ. Code § 3294(b), a plaintiff seeking punitive damages must show that the employee exercised substantial discretionary authority over significant aspects of a corporation's business.^{n45.4}

The White Court approved the holding in Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co.,^{n45.5} stating that the key factor in determining whether an employee acts with managerial authority is not always determined by the employee's title in the corporate hierarchy, but rather by his or her ability to make more or less final decisions for the company in the particular aspect of the company's business which is at issue, for example, termination of a subordinate's employment.^{n45.6}

Punitive damages are awarded "for the sake of example and by way of punishing the defendant."ⁿ⁴⁶ Thus, in arriving at the amount of punitive damages, juries are instructed to determine the amount that will have a deterrent effect on the particular defendant in light of its financial condition.ⁿ⁴⁷ If the defendant is a large, profitable corporation, punitive damages must be proportionately sizeable to have the intended effect of punishment and deterrence.ⁿ⁴⁸ The financial condition of a defendant may be measured in terms of its net worth.ⁿ⁴⁹ Evidence of what proportion of a company's annual income is embodied by the punitive damages award may also be used to determine whether the amount of the award is proper.ⁿ⁵⁰ However, because defendant's financial condition is not relevant to compensatory damages and may be prejudicial to the jury,ⁿ⁵¹ a defendant may obtain a protective order requiring the plaintiff to establish a prima facie case of liability for punitive damages prior to the introduction of evidence of defendant's financial condition or any profits made by the defendant because of the alleged wrongful conduct.ⁿ⁵² In addition, the trial court, on application of the defendant, must bifurcate a trial in which punitive damages are sought; in that case, evidence of the defendant's profits and financial condition is admitted only after a verdict is returned for plaintiff awarding actual damages and finding that defendant's conduct warranted an award of punitive damages.ⁿ⁵³

For a complete discussion of punitive damages, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 54, "Punitive Damages."

[3] Contract Action

[a] Wages and Benefits

Civil Code Section 3300 provides that the proper measure of damages for breach of a contract is the amount that will compensate the party aggrieved for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, or that in the ordinary course of things would be likely to result therefrom.ⁿ⁵⁴ The general rule is that the measure of recovery by a wrongfully discharged employee in a contract action is the amount of salary agreed on for the period of service, less the amount which the employer proves the employee has earned or with reasonable effort might have earned from other employment.ⁿ⁵⁵ Benefits, such as health and life insurance provided by the employer, are included as part of the compensation to which wrongfully discharged employees are entitled.ⁿ⁵⁶ see discussion of calculation of damages for lost wages and benefits in [2][b][i], above.

It should be noted that once an employer is found to have wrongfully discharged an employee, the former employee is entitled to recover lost wages and benefits, even if the person is disabled from working following the termination.ⁿ⁵⁷

However, any workers' compensation or disability benefits the former employee receives may be offset from the contract damages.ⁿ⁵⁸

[b] Future Earnings

Awards of future lost earnings, or front pay, are available in a wrongful discharge action based on contract.ⁿ⁵⁹ see discussion of calculation of damages for future earnings in [2][b][ii], above.

[c] Reliance Damages

In most wrongful discharge cases based on breach of an employment contract, the damages suffered by plaintiff are based on the loss of the benefit of the bargain agreed to by plaintiff and defendant. In some cases, plaintiff may suffer additional damages because he or she acted in reliance on the existence of the contract. For example, a plaintiff may have moved a substantial distance to begin employment. Such "reliance" damages are properly included in plaintiff's recovery.ⁿ⁶⁰ The California Supreme Court has held that a plaintiff alleging fraud in the inducement of employment against his or her former employer may properly seek reliance damages for the cost of uprooting family, expenses incurred in relocation and loss of security and income associated with former employment.ⁿ⁶¹

[d] Prejudgment Interest

In a contract cause of action, prejudgment interest may be available under Civil Code Section 3287. Civil Code Section 3287(a) allows interest on damages that are certain, or able to be made certain by calculation, and that are vested in the plaintiff on a particular day. For discussion of the availability of interest under section 3287(a), see [2][b][iii], above.

Prejudgment interest may also be available in a contract case under Civil Code Section 3287(b), which permits an award of interest in a contract action where the amount of damages is not liquidated. The award of interest is in the court's discretionⁿ⁶² and must not be decided by the jury.ⁿ⁶³ Interest may run from any date chosen by the court, as early as the date the action was commenced.ⁿ⁶⁴ The delay involved in the litigation appears to be an important factor in determining whether to award interest under Section 3287(b).ⁿ⁶⁵

The good or bad faith of defendant in opposing plaintiff's claim may also play a role in the decision to award interest.ⁿ⁶⁶

[4] Mitigation of Damages and Deduction of Collateral Compensation

Plaintiffs in tort and contract actions generally have a duty to make a reasonable effort to minimize the damage caused by defendant's actions.ⁿ⁶⁷ In the case of the wrongfully discharged employee, mitigation means seeking other employmentⁿ⁶⁸ and making a reasonable effort to retain any employment that is secured.ⁿ⁶⁹ Defendant may show that compensation earned by the plaintiff after termination, or that amount which could have been earned with reasonable diligence, should be deducted from plaintiff's damages.ⁿ⁷⁰ Defendant must prove plaintiff's failure to mitigate by showing that comparable positions were available for which plaintiff was qualified, and that plaintiff did not make reasonable efforts to obtain them.ⁿ⁷¹ In the event that plaintiff found but failed to retain comparable employment, defendant may prove failure to mitigate by showing that plaintiff did not make reasonable efforts to retain such employment.ⁿ⁷² For example, if plaintiff is fired from the newly-obtained employment for cause, any amount the employee could have earned by retaining that employment should be deducted from plaintiff's damages.ⁿ⁷³

Plaintiff is not required to bear undue risk, burden, or humiliation in order to fulfill the duty to mitigate; only reasonable diligence is demanded.ⁿ⁷⁴ Thus, plaintiff need not accept inferior employment or work of a different kind,ⁿ⁷⁵ nor must he or she relocate to find a job.ⁿ⁷⁶ Plaintiff's damages should include any sums expended in his or her reasonable efforts at mitigation.ⁿ⁷⁷

A unique opportunity to mitigate damages may arise if the defendant employer offers the terminated employee his or her job back. In Ford Motor Co. v. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission,ⁿ⁷⁸ a case arising under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the United States Supreme Court held that an ex-employee's refusal of the employer's unconditional offer of reinstatement to the same or substantially equivalent position operates to cut off the back pay period at the date of refusal. The holding does not affect plaintiff's right to back pay for the period predating the effective date of the reinstatement offer.ⁿ⁷⁹ One Ninth Circuit case has stated that the Ford Motor Co. decision does not change the California rule that the question of whether the injured party has acted reasonably to minimize damages is one of fact.ⁿ⁸⁰ The court stated that the Ford Motor Co. rule need not be applied inflexibly, and held proper the jury's decision that an employer's offer of reinstatement was not a reasonable alternative mandated by the duty to mitigate damages because the evidence showed special circumstances for the employee's refusal to accept reinstatement, including the employee's poor mental condition.ⁿ⁸¹

As discussed above, a damages award may be reduced by the amounts earned or earnable by the plaintiff through reasonable diligence. Under the collateral source rule, other types of compensation received by the plaintiff from sources other than the defendant generally are not deducted from the award.ⁿ⁸² Note that the rule applies only to sources other than the defendant; thus, severance pay paid by defendant may be deducted from damages.ⁿ⁸³ Collateral benefits that are not deducted include unemployment benefits,ⁿ⁸⁴ retirement benefits,ⁿ⁸⁵ and medical benefits.ⁿ⁸⁶ However, workers' compensation benefitsⁿ⁸⁷ or disability benefitsⁿ⁸⁸ received by the plaintiff must be set off against any economic or contract damages recovered for wrongful termination.

For discussion of mitigation of damages and the collateral source rule generally, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, ch. 53 (Matthew Bender).

[5] Equitable Remedies

To date, only one court of appeal case has addressed the issue of the availability of reinstatement as an equitable remedy in common law wrongful termination actions. In Barndt v. County of Los Angeles,ⁿ⁸⁹ the court of appeal held that specific performance is not available as a remedy in a wrongful termination action because of the long-established rule that a contract for personal services cannot be specifically enforced.ⁿ⁹⁰ In Barndt, the plaintiff, a cardiologist, sued his employer to specifically enforce the terms of a settlement agreement that had been entered into by the parties, part of which included a withdrawal of plaintiff's termination and his appointment to a permanent position in the cardiology department of the medical center. The court of appeal held that plaintiff had not shown that money damages could not have adequately compensated him for his loss of employment and any consequent loss of professional status flowing from the alleged breach of contract.ⁿ⁹¹ Additionally, the court pointed out that the position to which plaintiff aspired required a marked degree of cooperation and goodwill among the parties, which an equitable decree requiring specific enforcement could not regulate, especially in light of the conceded conflict between plaintiff and the chief of cardiology.ⁿ⁹² It should be noted, however, that the above rule concerning reinstatement appears to be inapplicable to cases in which the employee is discharged in violation of a statute that expressly provides for reinstatement as a remedy.ⁿ⁹³ For discussion of the effect of an offer of reinstatement on a damages award, see [4], above.

For discussion of equitable remedies, including reinstatement, in employment discrimination cases, see Chapter 43.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Employment Relationships
General Overview
Labor & Employment Law
Wrongful Termination
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Civ. Code § 3333.

(n2)Footnote 2. BAJI No. 14.13; see also Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 952-953, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58. However, emotional distress claims that arise out of a normal part of the employment relationship may be preempted by the workers' compensation laws. See Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 18, 20, 25, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 159, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743. For discussion of preemption by workers' compensation laws, see § 60.09[1][d] and ch. 20.

(n3)Footnote 3. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 176-178, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330.

(n4)Footnote 4. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 663, 700, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373; see discussion in § 60.06.

(n5)Footnote 5. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 701-702, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 (Broussard, J., concurring and dissenting).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Ross v. Forest Lawn Memorial Park (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 988, 995, 203 Cal. Rptr. 468 (upholding claim for mental distress occasioned by breach of contract to protect grave from vandalism); Wynn v. Monterey Club (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 789, 799-800, 168 Cal. Rptr. 878 (upholding cause of action for mental suffering arising out of defendant's breach of contract to bar plaintiff's wife from gaming tables and consequent break-up of marriage); Allen v. Jones (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 207, 211, 163 Cal. Rptr. 445 (upholding mental distress claim for breach of contract to transport cremated remains of plaintiff's brother); Windeler v. Scheers Jewelers (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 844, 88 Cal. Rptr. 39 (upholding mental distress claim for breach of contract of bailment resulting in loss of jewelry of great sentimental value).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Wise v. Southern Pacific Co. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 600, 608, 83 Cal. Rptr. 202, 463 P.2d 426. However, counsel should keep in mind that the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), 29 U.S.C. §§ 1001-1461, is broadly preemptive of claims relating to employee benefit plans. See, e.g., Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 800. For discussion of ERISA preemption of wrongful termination actions, see § 60.09[1][c].

(n8)Footnote 8. Smith v. Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 503, 518, 241 Cal. Rptr. 916; see Parker v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 176, 181, 89 Cal. Rptr. 737, 474 P.2d 689; Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 98-99, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222. For discussion of mitigation of damages, see [4], below.

(n9)Footnote 9. Compare EEOC v. Kallir, Phillips, Ross, Inc. (S.D.N.Y. 1976) 420 F. Supp. 919, 923 (Title VII case) ; with Smith v. Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 503, 518-519, 241 Cal. Rptr. 916 (court of appeal upheld jury award of compensatory damages which may have included value of increases in bonuses and benefits which might have been received by constructively discharged employee).

(n10)Footnote 10. Hairston v. McLean Trucking Co. (4th Cir. [N.C.] 1975)520 F.2d 226, 233 (Title VII case) ; see Holloway & Leech, Employment Termination: Rights & Remedies (BNA 1985), Ch. 11, "Money Damages and Reinstatement," pp. 402-403. For discussion of Title VII remedies, see ch. 43, pt. B.

(n11)Footnote 11. Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1518-1519, 281 Cal. Rptr. 890 .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Smith v. Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 503, 241 Cal. Rptr. 916 ; Ortiz v. Bank of America (9th Cir. 1987) 824 F.2d 692 ; Petermann v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 155, 159, 29 Cal. Rptr. 399 .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Ackerman v. Western Elec. Co., Inc. (N.D. Cal. 1986) 643 F. Supp. 836 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Whittlesey v. Union Carbide Corp. (2d Cir. [N.Y.] 1984) 742 F.2d 724, 727-728 ; Cancellier v. Federated Department Stores (9th Cir. 1982) 672 F.2d 1312, 1318 ; see also Clapp, "Practical Tip: Drafting a Complaint for Wrongful Termination," 5(7) San Francisco Barrister 36, 39 (1986). However, there is some question as to the availability of reinstatement as a remedy. See Civ. Code § 3390. See also discussion in [5], below.

(n15)Footnote 15. Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Industries (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 97, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 (4 years); Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 695, 705, 101 Cal. Rptr. 169 (10 years).

(n16)Footnote 16. See discussion in [4], below.

(n17)Footnote 17. See Canavin v. Pacific Southwest Airlines (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 512, 521, 196 Cal. Rptr. 82 , citing BAJI No. 14.70.

(n18)Footnote 18. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. v. Pfeifer (1983) 462 U.S. 523, 537-538, 103 S. Ct. 2541, 76 L. Ed. 2d 768 (ascertaining future damages of injured worker under Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers Compensation Act); United States v. English (9th Cir. 1975) 521 F.2d 63, 75 (wrongful death action under Federal Tort Claims Act); Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 662, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399 (personal injury action by employee against contractors and subcontractors).

(n19)Footnote 19. Greater Westchester Homeowners Association v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 102-103, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329 ; see also Berns v. Pan American World Airways, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 667 F.2d 826, 829-830 ; In re Pago Pago Aircrash of January 30, 1974 (C.D. Cal. 1981) 525 F. Supp. 1007, 1013 .

(n20)Footnote 20. Civ. Code § 3287(a); see E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 366, 377, 187 Cal. Rptr. 879 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Levy-Zentner Co. v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1977) 74 Cal. App. 3d 762, 796-798, 142 Cal. Rptr. 1 .

(n22)Footnote 22. See National Farm Workers Service Center v. M. Caratan, Inc. (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 796, 810, 194 Cal. Rptr. 617

(n23)Footnote 23. Civ. Code § 3288; Harsany v. Cessna Aircraft Co. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 1139, 1142, 196

Cal. Rptr. 374 .

(n24)Footnote 24. Berns v. Pan American World Airways, Inc. (9th Cir. 1982) 667 F.2d 826, 829-830 ; Greater Westchester Homeowners Association v. City of Los Angeles (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 86, 103, 160 Cal. Rptr. 733, 603 P.2d 1329 .

(n25)Footnote 25. See section [3][d], below for discussion of prejudgment interest in contract cases.

(n26)Footnote 26. See Civ. Code § 3291.

(n27)Footnote 27. See Holmes v. General Dynamics Corp. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1418, 1436, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 172 .

(n28)Footnote 28. Civ. Code § 3294(a).

(n29)Footnote 29. Smith v. Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 503, 516, 241 Cal. Rptr. 916 ; Fleming v. Safeco Insurance Co. (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 31, 43, 206 Cal. Rptr. 313 .

(n30)Footnote 30. The definitions of "malice" and "oppression" were amended in 1987 to require that plaintiff show that the defendant's conduct was "despicable" in order to recover punitive damages. See Civ. Code § 3294(c), as amended by 1987 Stats. ch. 1498, § 5.

(n31)Footnote 30.1. Scott v. Phoenix Schools, Inc. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 702, 715-717, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 159 (although jury properly found employer wrongfully terminated employee in violation of public policy, trial court should have granted employer's motion for judgment notwithstanding jury's verdict awarding employee punitive damages based on lack of finding of malice or oppression, where there was no evidence employer attempted to hide reason for termination, and where there was no evidence employer engaged in program of unwarranted criticism to justify her termination).

(n32)Footnote 31. Smith v. Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 503, 516, 241 Cal. Rptr. 916 ; Flyer's Body Shop Profit Sharing Plan v. Ticor Title Insurance Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1149, 1155, 230 Cal. Rptr. 276 .

(n33)Footnote 32. See Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 176 178, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 .

(n34)Footnote 33. Smith v. Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 503, 516, 241 Cal. Rptr. 916 .

(n35)Footnote 34. Werschull v. United California Bank (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 981, 1002-1003, 149 Cal. Rptr. 829 ; James v. Public Finance Corp. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 995, 1000, 121 Cal. Rptr. 670 .

(n36)Footnote 35. Esparza v. Specht (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8 9, 127 Cal. Rptr. 493 .

(n37)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Rosener v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 740, 751, 168 Cal. Rptr. 237 .

(n38)Footnote 37. Compare, e.g., Chodos v. Insurance Co. of North America (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 86, 178 Cal. Rptr. 831 (1400-to-1 ratio approved) with Rosener v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 740, 168 Cal. Rptr. 237 (63-to-1 ratio adjudged excessive).

(n39)Footnote 38. Betts v. Allstate Insurance Co. (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 688, 711, 201 Cal. Rptr. 528 .

(n40)Footnote 39. Civ. Code § 3294(b); see BAJI No. 14.73.1.

(n41)Footnote 40. Civ. Code § 3294(b); see Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 950, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58; BAJI No. 14.73; see also Roberts v. Ford Aerospace and Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 801, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139.

(n42)Footnote 41. Civ. Code § 3294(b).

(n43)Footnote 42. Davis v. Local Union No. 11, Davis v. Local Union No. 11, Internat. Etc. of Elec. Workers (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 686, 697, 94 Cal. Rptr. 562.

(n44)Footnote 43. See Roberts v. Ford Aerospace and Communications Corp. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 793, 801, 274 Cal. Rptr. 139.

(n45)Footnote 44. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944.

(n46)Footnote 45. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 573, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944.

(n47)Footnote 45.1. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 573, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944.

(n48)Footnote 45.2. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944.

(n49)Footnote 45.3. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944; see Kelly-Zurian v. Wohl Shoe Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 397, 421-422, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 (plaintiff was not entitled to punitive damages in sexual harassment action because there was no evidence that her manager had substantial discretion in his decision-making capabilities, even though he was company administrator who had direct authority over plaintiff's employment responsibilities).

(n50)Footnote 45.4. White v. Ultramar, Inc. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 563, 577, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 19, 981 P.2d 944 (manager who terminated plaintiff was managing agent under Civ. Code § 3294(b), whose conduct could lead to imposing punitive damages on defendant corporation, because she "exercised substantial discretionary authority over vital aspects of [defendant's] business" that included managing eight retail stores staffed by at least 65 employees and making significant decisions affecting both store and company policy).

(n51)Footnote 45.5. Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 157 Cal. Rptr. 482, 598 P.2d 452

(n52)Footnote 45.6. Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 157 Cal. Rptr. 482, 598 P.2d 452; see BAJI No. 1471 (an agent or employee of a corporation acts with managerial authority "where the degree of discretion permitted the [employee] in making decision is such that the [employee's] decisions will ultimately determine the business policy of the [employer]"). For further discussion, see § 30.07

(n53)Footnote 46. Civ. Code § 3294(a).

(n54)Footnote 47. BAJI No. 14.71.

(n55)Footnote 48. Neal v. Farmers Insurance Exchange (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 910, 928, 148 Cal. Rptr. 389, 582 P.2d 980; Bertero v. National General Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 65, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608.

(n56)Footnote 49. Devlin v. Kearny Mesa AMC/Jeep/Renault, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 381, 391, 202 Cal. Rptr. 204.

(n57)Footnote 50. Moore v. American United Life Insurance Co. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 610, 642, 197 Cal. Rptr. 878; Egan v. Mutual of Omaha Ins. Co. (1979) 157 Cal. Rptr. 482 n.5, 598 P.2d 452.

(n58)Footnote 51. Farmy v. College Housing, Inc. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 166, 183, 121 Cal. Rptr. 658 .

(n59)Footnote 52. See Civ. Code § 3295(a); Richards v. Superior Court (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 265, 272, 150 Cal. Rptr. 77 .

(n60)Footnote 53. See Civ. Code § 3295(d).

(n61)Footnote 54. Civ. Code § 3300. For the standard jury instruction on damages in an action for breach of employment contract, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2406 (unspecified term); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2422(specified term) (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction on damages in an action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2433 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n62)Footnote 55. Parker v. Twentieth Century-Fox (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 176, 181-182, 89 Cal. Rptr. 737, 474 P.2d 689 ; Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 98, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 .

(n63)Footnote 56. Wise v. Southern Pacific Co. (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 600, 607, 83 Cal. Rptr. 202, 463 P.2d 426 .

(n64)Footnote 57. Mayer v. Multistate Legal Studies (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1433-1436, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 .

(n65)Footnote 58. Mayer v. Multistate Legal Studies (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1433-1436, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 .

See discussion of mitigation of damages in [d], below.

(n66)Footnote 59. Smith v. Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 503, 241 Cal. Rptr. 916 ; Ortiz v. Bank of America (9th Cir. 1987) 824 F.2d 692 ; Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 (4 years); Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 695, 705, 101 Cal. Rptr. 169 (10 years).

(n67)Footnote 60. Thomas v. Olin Mathieson Chem. Corp. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 806, 811, 63 Cal. Rptr. 454 ; see also Lab. Code §§ 970-972 (employer liability for inducing person to change location as a result of false representations concerning employment).

(n68)Footnote 61. See Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 649, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 .

(n69)Footnote 62. Civ. Code § 3287(b).

(n70)Footnote 63. George v. Double-D Foods, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 36, 47, 201 Cal. Rptr. 870 .

(n71)Footnote 64. See Civ. Code § 3287(b).

(n72)Footnote 65. A & M Produce Co. v. FMC Corp. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 473, 496, 186 Cal. Rptr. 114 ; Moreno v. Jessup Buena Vista Dairy (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 438, 448, 123 Cal. Rptr. 393 .

(n73)Footnote 66. Zalk v. General Exploration Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 786, 795, 164 Cal. Rptr. 647 .

(n74)Footnote 67. See Ash v. Soo Sing Lung (1918) 177 Cal. 356, 361-362, 170 P. 843 . For the standard jury instruction on the employee's duty to mitigate damages in an action for breach of employment contract for an unspecified term, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2407 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n75)Footnote 68. Meyer v. Byron Jackson, Inc. (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 402, 416-417, 207 Cal. Rptr. 663 .

(n76)Footnote 69. Stanchfield v. Hamer Toyota, Inc. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1495, 1502-1503, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 565 ; see West v. Bechtel Corp. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 966, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647, 662-663 (in age discrimination and breach of contract action, plaintiff failed to mitigate damages as matter of law because uncontradicted evidence showed that employer gave him every opportunity to resume working at comparable or substantially similar employment after he returned from Saudi Arabia, where he had been fired because of his age, and there was no evidence of disability).

(n77)Footnote 70. Parker v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 176, 181, 89 Cal. Rptr. 737, 474 P.2d 689 ; cf. Ford Motor Co. v. EEOC (1982) 458 U.S. 219, 231 n.14, 102 S. Ct. 3057, 73 L. Ed. 2d 721 (Title VII) .

(n78)Footnote 71. Parker v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 176, 182, 89 Cal. Rptr. 737, 474 P.2d 689 . See also Hope v. California Youth Authority (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 577, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 4 (employer has burden of proving mitigation (i.e., the amount the employee has earned or with reasonable effort might have earned from other comparable employment)).

(n79)Footnote 72. Stanchfield v. Hamer Toyota, Inc. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1495, 1501-1502, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 565 .

(n80)Footnote 73. Stanchfield v. Hamer Toyota, Inc. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1495, 1502-1503, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 565 .

(n81)Footnote 74. See Restatement (Second) of Contracts, § 350 (1979).

(n82)Footnote 75. Parker v. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 176, 182, 89 Cal. Rptr. 737, 474 P.2d 689 ; Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 99, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 .

(n83)Footnote 76. Hegler v. Board of Education of Bearden School Dististrict, Bearden, Ark. (8th Cir. 1971) 447 F.2d 1078, 1081 .

(n84)Footnote 77. W.C. Cook & Co. v. White Truck etc. Co. (1932) 124 Cal. App. 721, 727, 13 P.2d 549 .

(n85)Footnote 78. Ford Motor Co. v. EEOC (1982) 458 U.S. 219, 102 S. Ct. 3057, 73 L. Ed. 2d 721 .

(n86)Footnote 79. Ford Motor Co. v. EEOC (1982) 458 U.S. 219, 231 n.14, 102 S. Ct. 3057, 73 L. Ed. 2d 721 .

(n87)Footnote 80. Ortiz v. Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association (9th Cir. 1988) 852 F.2d 383, 386-387 .

(n88)Footnote 81. Ortiz v. Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association (9th Cir. 1988) 852 F.2d 383, 386-387 .

(n89)Footnote 82. Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit District (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 6, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61 ; see Graham v. Balcov Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1246 , clarifying mandate issued in Graham v. Balcov Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 146 F.3d 1052 (ERISA did not preempt state causes of action for breach of contract, breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing and intentional infliction of emotional distress based on termination of payments for former employee's medical expenses, where agreement under which employee agreed to waive wrongful discharge or employment discrimination claims if employer kept her enrolled in its employee benefits plan so long as she was disabled did not arise in course of employer's administration of benefits plan).

(n90)Footnote 83. Equal Emp. Opportunity Com'n v. Sandia Corp. (10th Cir. 1980) 639 F.2d 600, 626 ; Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (U.S.A.) v. Pacific Press Publishing Association (N.D. Cal. 1979) 482 F. Supp. 1291, 1317-1318 .

(n91)Footnote 84. Monroe v. Oakland Unified School District (1981) 114 Cal. App. 3d 804, 810-812, 170 Cal. Rptr. 867 .

(n92)Footnote 85. Hume v. Lacey (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 147, 152, 245 P.2d 672 .

(n93)Footnote 86. Helfend v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit District (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1, 6, 84 Cal. Rptr. 173, 465 P.2d 61 .

(n94)Footnote 87. Pichon v. Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 498-501, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677 .

(n95)Footnote 88. Mayer v. Multistate Legal Studies (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 1428, 1433-1436, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 .

(n96)Footnote 89. Barndt v. County of Los Angeles (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 397, 403-406, 259 Cal. Rptr. 372 .

(n97)Footnote 90. See Civ. Code § 3390 (codifying common law rule that personal service contracts cannot be specifically enforced).

(n98)Footnote 91. Barndt v. County of Los Angeles (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 397, 405-406, 259 Cal. Rptr. 372 .

(n99)Footnote 92. Barndt v. County of Los Angeles (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 397, 404-405, 259 Cal. Rptr. 372 .

(n100)Footnote 93. See, e.g., Lab. Code § 132a(1) (employee who is discharged for filing workers' compensation claim or testifying in workers' compensation proceeding is entitled to reinstatement, among other things).

65 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.09

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.09 Defenses to Wrongful Discharge Action

[1] Preemption by Statutory Remedy

[a] Generally

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The most important defenses against wrongful discharge lawsuits are (1) careful investigation of the facts relevant to the discharge decision, (2) careful consideration of whether similarly situated employees have been similarly disciplined in the past, and (3) careful explanation of the discharge decision by a person whom the dischargee respects. Too many employers ignore the possibility that wrongful discharge juries may view their charter as little more than a reconsideration of the perceived "fairness" of the underlying discharge decisions. Because this possibility exists, employers are well advised to analyze their discharge decisions from the twin perspectives of factual integrity and potential "appearance" to persons who may never understand the facts as well as the discharging supervisors. The obvious difficulties in predicting the outcome of jury deliberations should not necessarily deflect an employer from implementing a discharge decision, but such prediction difficulties should be considered in assessing the risks of ultimate liability. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

A number of state and federal employment-related laws may preempt common law wrongful termination causes of action. Generally, preemption by a state statute occurs when a statute provides that it is the exclusive remedy for a particular wrong.ⁿ¹ Federal preemption may (1) be explicit or implicit (from a statute's structure or purpose); (2) be inferred from a statutory scheme that is so pervasive that there is "no room for the States to supplement it"; or (3) occur when a state law conflicts with a federal law.ⁿ²

This section discusses the major state and federal statutes that most often preempt common law wrongful termination causes of action. Counsel should research all statutes relevant to the plaintiff's particular fact pattern to determine whether they will affect the existence of a common law remedy. For discussion of some statutes that explicitly affect an employee's rights regarding termination and discipline, see § 60.03[2] and [3].

[b] Banking Laws

Federal banking laws may preempt state law wrongful termination actions when the latter interfere or conflict with a federal interest in the regulation of banking employment agreements.ⁿ³ For example, the National Bank Act (Bank Act) gives national banks the power to appoint "president[s], vice president[s], cashier [s], and other officers," and to dismiss those officers "at pleasure."ⁿ⁴ In Peatros v. Bank of America NT & SA,ⁿ⁵ the California Supreme Court considered whether bank officers' state law causes of action against dismissal are preempted by the National Bank Act.ⁿ⁶ The Court held that the National Bank Act preempts the FEHA only to the extent it conflicts with the Bank Act (as impliedly modified by Title VII and the ADEA).^{n6.1} In particular, the FEHA limits the power of a national bank to dismiss any of its officers at the pleasure of the board of directors by prohibiting dismissal on the grounds of race, color, religion, sex, national origin or age.^{n6.2} The FEHA is preempted, however, to the extent it would prohibit a national bank from dismissing any of its officers at the pleasure of the board of directors on the grounds of physical disability, mental disability, medical condition, marital status, or ancestry.^{n6.3}

However, not all banking laws or regulations preempt wrongful termination actions. One court has pointed out that generally only banking laws that contain "at pleasure" language have been held to preempt such actions;ⁿ⁷ other courts have found less uniformity in federal decisions in considering the preemptive effect of federal dismissal-at-pleasure provisions.^{n7.1} In Hall v. Great Western Bank, the court held that a federal regulation governing the power of savings associations to terminate employment did not preempt a cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy.ⁿ⁸ The regulation provides that an association may terminate its employees "at any time," but that an employee fired for any reason other than "for cause" retains the "right to compensation or other benefits under the contract."ⁿ⁹ The regulation does not contain "at pleasure" language; thus, there was no conflict between state law that allows tort remedies for public policy violations and a federal regulation that allows contract remedies for termination without cause.ⁿ¹⁰ With the proliferation of failed financial institutions, the issue of a receiver's liability has been raised in several contexts, including wrongful termination. The "D'Oench, Duhme doctrine,"ⁿ¹¹ a partially codifiedⁿ¹² common law rule of estoppel that precludes a borrower from asserting against the FDIC defenses based on a secret or unrecorded side agreement that alters the terms of facially unqualified obligations, has been raised in defense of a breach of an implied in fact employment contract claim.ⁿ¹³ The doctrine operates to bar both defenses and affirmative claims for relief and encompasses any claim against an insolvent institution that would either diminish the value of the institution's assets or increase its liabilities.ⁿ¹⁴ In the first published California case in this context, the court stated that if applicable, the doctrine would bar the former employee's recovery. In that case, however, the doctrine had no factual application (i.e., plaintiff did not impede or hinder any bank examiner from evaluating the bank's assets, nor did he rely on any unrecorded documents or arrangements).ⁿ¹⁵

[c] Federal Labor Law

[i] National Labor Relations Act

The National Labor Relations Act (NLRA)ⁿ¹⁶ governs labor-management relations in the private sector, and claims brought under the NLRA are within the primary jurisdiction of the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB). The NLRA preempts certain types of state law claims for retaliatory or wrongful discharge of employees. In San Diego Unions v. Garmon,^{n16.1} the United States Supreme Court held that state law claims are preempted if they concern conduct that is "arguably" protected by section 7 or prohibited by section 8 of the NLRA. A second strand of federal preemption prohibits state interference with conduct Congress intended to be left unregulated, even if not protected or prohibited by the NLRA.^{n16.2} The scope of preemption based on conduct arguably protected by the NLRA does not extend to state law claims when the activity regulated is merely a peripheral concern of the NLRA^{n16.3} or touches on interests so deeply rooted in local feeling and responsibility that, in the absence of compelling congressional direction, it could not be inferred that Congress intended to deprive the state of the power to act.^{n16.4} For example, claims for wrongful discharge in retaliation for complaining about unsafe work conditions are not preempted by the NLRA.^{n16.5} The United States Supreme Court has refined its preemption analysis under the "arguably prohibited" branch of the preemption test. The critical inquiry is not whether the state is enforcing a law relating specifically to labor relations or one of general application, but whether the controversy is identical to or different from one which could have been but was not presented to the NLRB. Only in the latter context does the state court's exercise of jurisdiction necessarily involve a risk of interference with the unfair labor practice jurisdiction of the NLRB, which the "arguably prohibited" branch of the preemption test was designed to avoid.^{n16.6} The United States Supreme Court has addressed what "arguable" means in the context of questions of law and questions of fact. As to questions of law, the party asserting preemption must advance a statutory construction of the NLRA that is not plainly contrary to its language and that has not been authoritatively rejected by the courts or the NLRB. As to questions of fact, the party must put forth enough evidence to enable the court to find that the NLRB reasonably could uphold a claim based on such an interpretation.^{n16.7}

In Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc.,^{n16.8} the court held that a unionized employee's wrongful discharge action was not preempted by Section 7 of the NLRA.^{n16.9} The NLRB standard for determining when the acts of a single employee constitute concerted activity is an objective test requiring some linkage to group action before finding an act concerted.^{n16.10} The requirement for linkage or nexus between the individual employee's acts and a group is met in at least three distinct factual situations:^{n16.11}

1. An individual's act stems from prior concerted activity.
2. An individual acts, formally or informally, on behalf of a group.
3. An individual attempts to bring about or prepare for group action, even if those attempts are unsuccessful in achieving group action.

In the second situation, individual action is on behalf of a group and therefore concerted if engaged in with or on the authority of other employees.^{n16.12} In Haney, the employer did not identify any prior group action or prior concerted activity that could be associated with the employee's complaints about the employer's practices and refusal to act for which he was discharged, and did not show that the employee made the complaints and refusals in preparation for group action. Thus, the employer did not show that the employee engaged in concerted activity under either the first or third situation. With regard to the second situation, the employer did not show that one or more employees explicitly or implicitly authorized the discharged employee to complain about alleged overcharging of customers for which he was allegedly discharged.^{n16.13}

On the other hand, in Luke v. Collotype Labels USA, Inc.,^{n16.14} the former employee's complaint for wrongful termination in violation of public policy^{n16.15} was pre-empted by the NLRA. The employee was fired because of discussions with other employees regarding working conditions, which have been held to be protected activity under the NLRA.^{n16.16} A cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of California public policy does not fall within either exception to the general rule of NLRA preemption articulated by the United States Supreme Court. The first is that Congress did not intend to deprive states of the power to regulate when the activity regulated was a merely peripheral concern of the NLRA or when the regulated conduct touched interests so deeply rooted in local feeling and responsibility that, in the absence of compelling congressional direction, the Court could not infer that Congress had deprived the States of the power to act (Garmon preemption).^{n16.17} Garmon pre-emption involves balancing the state's interest in controlling or remedying the effects of the conduct in question against the interference with the National Labor Relations Board's ability to adjudicate controversies committed to it by the Act, and the risk that the state will sanction conduct that the Act protects.^{n16.18} The preemption issue as to both arguably prohibited and arguably protected conduct turns primarily on whether preemption is necessary to avoid conflicting adjudications that would interfere with the regulatory activity of the administrative board.^{n16.19} The second preemption doctrine is that state laws and state causes of action are preempted when they concern conduct that Congress intended to leave unregulated.^{n16.20} When a cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy does not involve health and safety laws, courts have held the claims are preempted by the NLRA.^{n16.21} The complaints for which the employee was fired in Luke did not involve unsafe working conditions, because he did not allege in his complaint, or testify in his deposition, that the employer terminated his employment because he complained about ColloTYPE's violations of California health and safety regulations. Moreover, he did not allege in his complaint that he was fired because of his own complaints to management regarding unsafe working conditions. He alleged instead that complaints about working conditions were made to him by two fellow employees, and management perceived he was a sympathetic ear because he advised the employees to keep notes to protect themselves, and to bring their complaints to management.

Thus, if the gravamen of a plaintiff's complaint is that he or she was discharged or disciplined because of his or her exercise of rights protected by the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA), the plaintiff's exclusive remedy is through the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB).ⁿ¹⁷ For example, in Henry v. Intercontinental Radio, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁸ the plaintiff brought a wrongful termination action against his employer, a radio station. The complaint alleged that a significant contributing factor in the decision to terminate the plaintiff was the perception on the defendant's part that the plaintiff was working to increase wages and working conditions for employees and to bring a union to the station. The California court of appeal upheld the granting of a demurrer to the complaint because discharge or discrimination based on union-related factors is arguably within the jurisdiction of the NLRB.ⁿ¹⁹ In another case, a cab driver brought a wrongful termination claim alleging that he was terminated in retaliation for his testimony at an administrative hearing in opposition to his employer's efforts to obtain an airport van permit. The driver's opposition was based in part on the potential effect such a permit would have on employees. The court held that the driver's conduct was actually protected union activity, and the action was therefore preempted by the NLRA.ⁿ²⁰

However, in Balog v. LRJV, Inc.,^{n20.1} the court of appeal held that if an action alleges mixed motivations for the wrongful discharge, which include the employee's refusal to commit an unfair labor practice, the action is not preempted by the NLRA, and the employee may recover for the wrongful discharge based on the other reasons.ⁿ²¹ Relying on Balog,^{n21.1} the court of appeal in Inter-Modal Rail Employees Ass'n v. Burlington Northern and Santa Fe Ry. Co. held that the NLRA does not preempt a state law claim for wrongful termination and unfair business practices based on violations of California safety regulations.^{n21.2} The court stated that federal preemption was improper because safety concerns are within the states' police powers to legislate, and the NLRA does not preempt them.^{n21.3} The court rejected defendants' argument that the large number of workers involved in the complaints distinguished the circumstances of this case from those in other cases that plainly hold the NLRA does not preempt wrongful termination actions based on retaliation for bringing safety complaints.^{n21.4}

Similarly, one court of appeal has held that an action for breach of an implied contract of employment, or an action for a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, is not preempted by the NLRA unless the controversy presented to the court is identical to that which would be presented to the NLRB.ⁿ²² The court reasoned that, in the case of an employee not covered by a collective bargaining agreement (such as a supervisory employee), the interest of the state in providing contract remedies outweighs any marginal effect the adjudication of those employees' contract claims might have on the administration of national labor policies.ⁿ²³

[ii] Labor Management Relations Act Section 301

Some wrongful discharge claims may be preempted by section 301 of the Labor Management Relations Act (LMRA),ⁿ²⁴ which provides the exclusive remedy for challenging a breach of a collective bargaining agreement. In Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Lueck,ⁿ²⁵ the United States Supreme Court held that when "evaluation of [a state law] tort claim is inextricably intertwined with consideration of the terms of the labor contract," section 301 preempts the state law action. In Hansen v. Aerospace Defense Related Industry Dist.,^{n25.1} the court held that a wrongful discharge claim by a clerical employee in the office of a subordinate unit of a labor union was preempted by the LMRA. The employee claimed that the reason given for her lay off, i.e., a lack of work resulting from the closure of the office, was pretextual and that the employer violated the collective bargaining agreement by laying her off before other, less senior, employees. In order to find pretext, the jury necessarily had to find she was laid off out of seniority order, and that the interpretation of the collective bargaining agreement was a prerequisite to the resolution of her claim.

Because a collective bargaining agreement generally governs the employment relationship between an employer and a unionized employee, such an employee's common law action for breach of contract or breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is likely to fail.ⁿ²⁶ In addition, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has held that a cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing may be preempted by section 301 even when the collective bargaining agreement provides no comparable protection against discharge at will, reasoning that a labor union may waive any requirement of good cause for termination that otherwise may be implied under California common law.ⁿ²⁷

The Ninth Circuit also held that a cause of action for wrongful termination, violation of state constitutional rights, and related claims, based on termination following mandatory drug testing by a private employer, was preempted by section 301 because determination of the employer's liability necessarily involved contract interpretation.ⁿ²⁸ In that case, the collective bargaining agreement contained no provision regarding drug testing, which was implemented by the employer after the plaintiff had been hired. The grievance arbitration resulted in a finding that, although the drug testing policy was not negotiated by collective bargaining, it was not a unilateral and illegal change of the bargaining agreement.ⁿ²⁹

However, not every state law cause of action concerning employment of unionized employees or tangentially involving a provision of a collective bargaining agreement is preempted by the LMRA.ⁿ³⁰ In Lingle v. Norge Division, Magic Chef,ⁿ³¹ the United States Supreme Court held that application of state law is preempted by section 301 of the LMRA only if such application requires interpretation of the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ³² The fact that dispute resolution under a collective bargaining agreement and judicial analysis of a state law claim would require analysis of the same set of facts does not in itself render the state claim preempted, as long as the state law claim can be resolved without interpreting the agreement itself.ⁿ³³ Thus, in Lingle, the Court held that a plaintiff's cause of action under Illinois law for retaliatory discharge for filing a workers' compensation claimⁿ³⁴ was not preempted by section 301 because none of the factual questions required to determine the state law claim required interpretation of the collective bargaining agreement in that case.ⁿ³⁵

Several Ninth Circuit cases have held that state law wrongful discharge claims based on violation of public policy were not preempted by section 301.ⁿ³⁶ These decisions have been largely based on the fact that the claims involved did not require interpretation of the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ³⁷ However, the Ninth Circuit has also considered whether the purpose of the state law was to "regulate the employment relationship,"ⁿ³⁸ whether the state law applies to "all employees as individual workers, not [just] because they are or are not members of a collective bargaining association,"ⁿ³⁹ and whether the rights provided by state law are "non-negotiable."ⁿ⁴⁰ In Lingle, however, the Supreme Court stated, in dicta, that neither the fact that a state-law remedy is "non-negotiable," nor the fact that it applies uniformly to unionized and nonunionized workers, ensures non-preemption. Such laws may still be pre-empted if their application in a given case requires interpretation of the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁴¹ For example, in one California wrongful termination case, Moreau v. San Diego Transit Corp.,ⁿ⁴² a plaintiff argued that his claim was not preempted because he was constructively discharged after having been entrapped into selling drugs in the workplace, and that the action was thus based on violation of a nonnegotiable right. The court of appeal held that because California has not articulated a public policy preventing parties from negotiating the means by which drug problems may be dealt with in the workplace, there was no nonnegotiable right involved. Furthermore, citing Lingle, the court stated that even if there had been a state nonnegotiable right involved, resort to the collective bargaining agreement to resolve the wrongful discharge actions would have been required, thus triggering preemption.ⁿ⁴³

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has stated that in deciding whether a cause of action for wrongful discharge based on public policy is preempted, the court must consider the following factors:ⁿ⁴⁴

1. Whether the collective bargaining agreement contains provisions that govern the actions giving rise to a state claim, and if so;

2. Whether the state has articulated a standard sufficiently clear that the state claim can be evaluated without considering the overlapping provisions of the agreement; and
3. Whether the state has shown an intent not to allow its prohibition to be altered or removed by private contract.

Under this test, the Ninth Circuit has stated that if the answer to the first question is affirmative, and the answer to either the second or third questions is negative, the state law will be preempted.ⁿ⁴⁵ Applying this test, the Ninth Circuit held that a state anti-discrimination law was not preempted by the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁴⁶

In Newberry v. Pacific Racing Association,ⁿ⁴⁷ the Ninth Circuit applied the Lingle test and concluded that because the employee's claim for wrongful discharge was based on her employment contract, and because her employment contract consisted of the collective bargaining agreement itself, the court would have to interpret the specific language of the terms of the collective bargaining agreement; therefore, the case was preempted.ⁿ⁴⁸ In another case, Harris v. Alumax Mill Products, Inc.,ⁿ⁴⁹ the Ninth Circuit held that an employee's wrongful termination claim that his employer violated the covenant of good faith and fair dealing was clearly dependent on the terms of the collective bargaining agreement and was thus preempted. The agreement expressly provided for an employee to grieve any discharge or application of work rules. The employee's action was based on his employer's rule deeming any 3-day unauthorized absence to be a voluntary termination. Because the complaint involved both wrongful discharge and application of a work rule, both of which were covered under the agreement, the action was preempted.ⁿ⁵⁰ In Jackson v. Southern California Gas Co.,ⁿ⁵¹ in which a collective bargaining agreement covered in detail the conduct that would give rise to dismissal for cause, the employee's action for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing was also held preempted by section 301. However, in a case in which the collective bargaining agreement had expired prior to the employee's discharge, the court held that section 301 could not preempt the wrongful termination action.ⁿ⁵² In Balcorta v. Twentieth Century Fox,^{n52.1} the Ninth Circuit found that section 301 does not completely preempt a claim under Labor Code Section 201.5, pertaining to termination of motion picture employees.^{n52.2} The Balcorta court found that the determination of whether Twentieth Century Fox had violated section 201.5 was a factual issue that a court could ascertain without the need to interpret the collective bargaining agreement.^{n52.3} Thus, a plaintiff's mere reference to the collective bargaining agreement is not enough for preemption pursuant to section 301.^{n52.4}

In Caterpillar v. Williams, the United States Supreme Court held that state-law claims based on individual contracts were not preempted, where the plaintiffs had claimed that the employer breached both their individual employment contracts and the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁵³ However, the Ninth Circuit has held that an independent employment agreement concerning a job position covered by the collective bargaining agreement can be effective only as part of the collective bargaining agreement. Therefore, according to the court, state law claims seeking to enforce the independent agreement are preempted.ⁿ⁵⁴ The court distinguished Caterpillar on the ground that Caterpillar dealt with a situation in which the individual employment contracts involved positions not covered by the collective bargaining agreement, at a time when the employees were not covered by the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁵⁵

Of course, section 301 does not preempt a wrongful termination action by an employee who is not actually covered by an existing collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁵⁶ Furthermore, section 301 does not preempt such an action merely because a court must scrutinize a collective bargaining agreement to determine whether an employee is covered.ⁿ⁵⁷

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Unless the attorney has particular expertise in dealing with union and collective bargaining issues, it is recommended that a suit alleging violation of section 301 of the LMRA not be undertaken. State law tort remedies will not be available, and remedies under the LMRA are limited (generally to back pay, possible reinstatement, and attorney's fees). Moreover, the employee's union must be joined as a defendant in a claim of breach of the duty of fair representation. This will necessitate dealing with two sets of opposing counsel in federal court. As a practical matter, such litigation is generally uneconomical.

Commentary by William M. Crosby.

[iii] Railway Labor Act

Another federal law that may preempt a wrongful discharge action is the Railway Labor Act (RLA),ⁿ⁵⁸ which applies to employees of railroads and commercial airlines. The RLA was enacted to promote stability in the railroad industry and to provide for prompt and efficient resolution of labor-management disputes arising out of railroad collective bargaining agreements.ⁿ⁵⁹ Thus, the RLA provides that all disputes between railroad employees and carriers growing out of grievances or interpretations of agreements concerning rates of pay, rules, or working conditions, which are "minor disputes," cannot be litigated in court, but must instead be referred to a railroad arbitration board for compulsory arbitration.ⁿ⁶⁰ The role of the courts is therefore limited in the area of minor disputes.ⁿ⁶¹ Moreover, the Supreme Court has determined that the RLA does not preempt a claim for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy brought under the state whistleblower statute.ⁿ⁶² The RLA does not preempt a wrongful termination action brought by a nonunion employee who is not subject to a collective bargaining agreementⁿ⁶³

[iv] Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act

In Screen Extras Guild, Inc. v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁶⁴ the California Supreme Court held that the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act (LMRDA),ⁿ⁶⁵ the primary objective of which is to ensure that labor unions are democratically governed and responsive to the will of their memberships,ⁿ⁶⁶ preempts wrongful discharge claims brought against unions or their officials by former policy-making or confidential employees.ⁿ⁶⁷ The Court explained that to allow such a claim would interfere with the ability of elected union officials to implement, by selecting their own administrators, the will of the union members they represent; the Court said such a result would frustrate the full realization of the goal of union democracy embodied by the LMRDA.ⁿ⁶⁸ The Court held that the Screen Extras plaintiff, a union business agent with significant decision-making responsibility for the implementation of union policies and their application to individual cases, was a policy-making or confidential employee covered by the LMRDA.ⁿ⁶⁹

In Thunderburk v. United Food & Commercial Workers' Union,^{n69.1} the court held that LMRDA preempted a wrongful termination action by a union chapter's "executive secretary"; although she was concededly not a management or policy-making employee and many of her job responsibilities were of a clerical, nonconfidential nature, she was a confidential employee because she had access to confidential union information, which if disclosed, could have thwarted union policies and objectives. LMRDA preempted both the contract causes of action for breach of implied contract and implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and the tort cause of action for tortious discharge based on public policy, Labor Code Sections 1101 and 1102, which prohibit discharge of employees for refusing to follow "any particular course or line of political action or political activity."^{n69.2}

On the other hand, in Smith v. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local Union 11,^{n69.3} the court held that the LMRDA does not preempt claims by a union employee against the union for wrongful discharge based on violation of the public policy against age and disability discrimination. As a union organizer, the plaintiff was a policymaking employee, which barred his action for breach of contract.^{n69.4} However, the LMRDA did not pre-empt his cause of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy and his age and disability discrimination claims under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act.^{n69.5}

[d] Pension Benefits

Plaintiffs whose claims relate to deprivation of benefits under employee benefit plans must be especially wary of preemption by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, commonly known as ERISA.ⁿ⁷⁰ ERISA is broadly preemptive, superseding "any and all State laws insofar as they may now or hereafter relate to an employee benefit plan described in [Section 4(a) of ERISA] and not exempt under [Section 4(b) of ERISA].ⁿ⁷¹ The words "relate to an employee benefit plan" are interpreted broadly to include any cause of action which has "a connection with or reference to such a plan."ⁿ⁷² Thus, an action need not seek actual recovery of pension benefits to be preempted by ERISA. In Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon,ⁿ⁷³ the United States Supreme Court held that a wrongful termination action alleging that a defendant fired a plaintiff to avoid contributing to his pension fund was preempted, even though the claim sought tort and contract damages rather than recovery of benefits. The Court reasoned that the cause of action "related to" a covered plan because it specifically referred to, "and indeed [was] premised on, the existence of a pension plan."ⁿ⁷⁴ In order to prevail on his wrongful termination action, the plaintiff had to plead, and the trial court had to find, both the existence of an ERISA plan and that the defendant intended to avoid the plan by firing the plaintiff.ⁿ⁷⁵

Furthermore, ERISA expressly provides a civil cause of action for, among other things, discharging an employee "for the purpose of interfering with the attainment of" covered benefits.ⁿ⁷⁶ Thus, ERISA, by its terms, prohibits an employer from firing an employee to prevent the employee's pension from vesting,ⁿ⁷⁷ and ERISA is the exclusive remedy for such an action.ⁿ⁷⁸ A common law cause of action based on such a termination is preempted because it purports to provide a remedy for the violation of a right expressly guaranteed and exclusively enforced by ERISA.ⁿ⁷⁹

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has addressed these issues in Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp.,ⁿ⁸⁰ a case involving a breach of contract claim that included allegations that the plaintiff's employer acted to deprive the plaintiff of pension benefits. The court held that, to the extent the cause of action related to the retirement plan, it was preempted. However, those portions of the cause of action independent of the employee benefit plan, such as allegations of termination without good cause, were not preempted by ERISA.ⁿ⁸¹ The court applied a similar analysis to plaintiff's claim for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.ⁿ⁸² ERISA preempts such claims, however, if they are based on misconduct that is identical to conduct on which an ERISA claim is based.ⁿ⁸³

The Ninth Circuit has emphasized that a claim does not relate to ERISA, and thus is not preempted, when the loss of pension benefits was a mere consequence of, but not a motivating factor behind, the termination.ⁿ⁸⁴

Thus, in one wrongful discharge case in which the employee asserted damages including "loss of employment and benefits," but the case did not otherwise relate to a covered plan or its administration, the court held that ERISA did not preempt the state action.ⁿ⁸⁵ In another case, the court found that an employee's allegation in his prayer for punitive damages that the employer knew he would lose his benefits as a consequence of termination did not state a cause of action that relates to an employee benefit plan.ⁿ⁸⁶

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Counsel should scrupulously avoid any reference to deprivation of pension or severance benefits as an alleged motive for the termination in order to avoid ERISA preemption. At trial, such unpaid benefits can be presented as damages.ⁿ⁸⁷ As a practical matter, jurors will likely infer such motives and take them into account in assessing whether the employer is guilty of bad faith. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

[e] California Workers' Compensation Law

A common law wrongful discharge action may be defeated by the exclusive nature of California's workers' compensation laws in either of two ways. First, Labor Code Section 132a provides the exclusive remedy for an employee who claims he or she was fired because he or she filed a workers' compensation claim for injuries on the job.ⁿ⁸⁸ The Workers' Compensation Appeals Board has exclusive jurisdiction over such claims of wrongful termination.ⁿ⁸⁹ Labor Code section 132a does not, however, provide the exclusive remedy for a claim alleging disability discrimination based on a work-related injury and does not preempt a claim of disability discrimination under the FEHA.ⁿ⁹⁰ For further discussion of section 132a, see Chapter 20.

More generally, workers' compensation law may preempt most actions by employees seeking damages for physical or mental injuries arising out of wrongful termination or discipline. The workers' compensation law provides that when the conditions for recovering workers' compensation benefits are satisfied, it is the employee's sole and exclusive remedy against the employer for injuries arising out of and in the course and scope of employment.ⁿ⁹¹ The California Supreme Court has held that termination of employment, and the events culminating in termination, are deemed a normal part of the employment relationship, and that the exclusive remedy doctrine bars an action for personal injury caused by termination, unless the injury is the result of conduct that does not reasonably come within the compensation bargain.ⁿ⁹² In Livitsanos v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁹³ the California Supreme Court held that even when no physical injury or disability is alleged, a claim for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress arising out of termination of employment is within the exclusive remedy provisions of the workers' compensation act, so long as the basic conditions of compensation are otherwise satisfied and the employer's conduct neither contravenes a fundamental public policy nor exceeds the risks inherent in the employment relationship.ⁿ⁹⁴

In Gantt v. Sentry Insurance,ⁿ⁹⁵ however, the Court specifically held that a cause of action for tortious discharge in violation of public policy is not preempted by workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁹⁶ Applying Gantt, the Ninth Circuit has held that the workers' compensation act did not preempt an employee's claims for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress when these claims arose out of conduct implicating fundamental public policies.ⁿ⁹⁷ For full discussion of the exclusive remedy doctrine and its applicability to wrongful termination and related actions, see Chapter 20.

[F] Discrimination Claims

The Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA)ⁿ⁹⁸ prohibits employment discrimination based on race, religion, sex or sexual orientation, age, national origin, physical or mental disability, and various other personal characteristics. In Rojo v. Kliger,ⁿ⁹⁹ the California Supreme Court has held that the FEHA supplements, but does not preempt other state laws, including the common law, that prohibit or restrict such discrimination.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ Furthermore, although an employee must exhaust the FEHA administrative remedy before bringing a civil action under the FEHA or seeking any remedies provided by the FEHA, exhaustion of the administrative remedy is not required before filing a civil action for damages alleging nonstatutory causes of action.ⁿ¹⁰¹

For public employees, both internal and external administrative remedies may be available. The California Supreme Court has determined that a city employee who claimed to have suffered employment-related discrimination is not required to exhaust both the internal administrative remedy in the city charter and the administrative remedy provided by the FEHA before filing a FEHA disability discrimination claim in superior court.^{n101.1} A public employee who claims employment-related discrimination and asserts both FEHA claims and nonstatutory claims for wrongful demotion and constructive termination in violation of public policy is similarly not required to exhaust the internal administrative remedy provided by his or her employer with respect to FEHA-related nonstatutory claims when the resolution of those claims would have a preclusive impact on the FEHA claim. However, the public employee is required to exhaust internal administrative remedies as to nonstatutory claims which are not FEHA-related, because the resolution of the nonstatutory claims would have no preclusive effect on the FEHA claim against the former employer.^{n101.2}

In Rojo, the California Supreme Court found that California Constitution, Article I, Section 8,ⁿ¹⁰² which provides that no person may be disqualified from entering or pursuing a business, profession, vocation, or employment because of sex, race, creed, color, or national or ethnic origin, sets forth a fundamental public policy against employment discrimination on any of those grounds. The Court further held that the constitutional provision may be the basis for a tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, independent of the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁰³

In Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center,^{n103.1} the court held that a wrongful discharge claim for violation of public policy for retaliation for filing discrimination claims could be based on California Constitution, Article I, Section

8. The court found that even though Section 8 does not explicitly enumerate retaliation as a prohibited form of discrimination, employment discrimination often manifests itself in retaliatory conduct. The court also noted that in Rojo, plaintiffs alleged they had been terminated for refusing to submit to their employer's sexual advances and in retaliation for exercising their fundamental right to be free from sexual harassment, and that the California Supreme Court indicated that under either theory, the plaintiffs' causes of action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy were sufficient to survive demurrer.^{n103.2}

Rojo left open the issue of whether the FEHA itself, in the absence of any other constitutional or statutory provision, could serve as the source of a fundamental public policy to establish a claim for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy. In Stevenson v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹⁰⁴ the California Supreme Court answered this question in the affirmative. The Court found that employees may bring a common law tortious discharge claim in violation of the FEHA's policy against age discrimination. Moreover, in order to bring such an action, a plaintiff does not need to exhaust the administrative remedies that are applicable to statutory claims under the FEHA.ⁿ¹⁰⁵ And, subsequently, the Court concluded that the policy against disability discrimination is fundamental and substantial, noting that disability discrimination is indistinguishable in many ways from race and sex discrimination.^{n105.1}

In Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation,^{n105.2} the California Supreme Court found that a Catholic hospital was exempt under the FEHA because it was a nonprofit religious corporation and therefore not an "employer" within the meaning of the FEHA.^{n105.3} Thus, it was not liable for terminating an employee in violation of public policy, i.e., for using what the employer considered objectionable religious speech in the workplace. Citing Rojo, the Court noted at the outset that the employer's exemption from FEHA liability did not necessarily mean it had no tort liability for terminating an employee in violation of public policy.^{n105.4} The Court distinguished Jennings v. Marralle,^{n105.5} in which the Court had held that the FEHA exemption for employers of fewer than five persons^{n105.6} precluded a tortious wrongful discharge claim based on the general public policy statements within the FEHA.^{n105.7} The Court made the distinction because the form of employment discrimination at issue in Jennings was age discrimination, which had only a statutory--not a constitutional--basis. In Silo, the Court confirmed that art. I, § 8 of the California Constitution articulates a fundamental public policy against religious discrimination, i.e., discrimination on the basis of creed, sufficient to sustain a wrongful discharge action.^{n105.8} However, the Court held that reading the art. I, § 8 prohibition against religious discrimination in employment together with the Free Exercise and Establishment clauses of the federal and state constitutions, and with the FEHA's explicit exemption of religious organizations from liability for such discrimination, the Court could not say there is a fundamental and substantial public policy that prohibits a religious employer from terminating an employee because of his or her objectionable religious speech in the workplace.^{n105.9} The Court expressly declined to consider whether a religious employer would be liable in tort for terminating an employee in violation of a public policy against sexual discrimination in article I, section 8 of the California Constitution, despite the FEHA exemption.^{n105.10} Finally, the Court held that the disposition was unaffected by the 1999 addition of Gov. Code § 12926.2(c), defining "employer" for the purposes of FEHA to include a religious corporation or association with respect to persons employed by the religious association or corporation to perform duties, other than religious duties, at a health care facility operated by the religious association or corporation for the provision of health care not restricted to adherents of the religion that established the association or corporation. The Court opined that, assuming arguendo the amendment now creates an unqualified, fundamental public policy against religious health care employers' unreasonable restriction of religious speech in the workplace, it would have no bearing on the decision in Silo because an employer cannot be held liable for violating a public policy that was not manifest at the time it committed the alleged tortious action.^{n105.11}

[g] Nuclear Industry Regulatory Laws

In English v. General Electric Co.,ⁿ¹⁰⁶ the United States Supreme Court held that a state law claim for infliction of emotional distress arising from a wrongful termination was not preempted by the Energy Reorganization Act of 1974,ⁿ¹⁰⁷ a federal law that regulates the nuclear power industry. The claim was based on actions allegedly taken by a nuclear fuels production facility to retaliate against a technician for her nuclear safety complaints. Such retaliation is forbidden by the federal statute, which provides an administrative remedy for such retaliation.¹⁰⁸ The Court held that although the field of nuclear safety is generally preempted by federal law, the state tort action was not preempted because it was not within the field of nuclear safety nor motivated by safety concerns, nor would it have a direct and substantial effect on nuclear safety concerns.¹⁰⁹ The Court also held that the state tort claim did not conflict with particular aspects of the federal statute, including its antiretaliation provisions.¹¹⁰

[h] Federal Immigration Laws

In Jie v. Liang Tai Knitwear Co., Ltd.,^{110.1} the California Court of Appeal held that California law allowing suits for wrongful termination based on retaliation for reporting violations of the federal Immigration and Naturalization Act (INA),^{110.2} is not preempted by the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA).^{110.3} The court found no actual conflict between IRCA and California law allowing employees to sue for wrongful termination, if they allege they were fired because they reported their employer for violating federal or state laws against employing undocumented workers. The court found that allowing the suits does not interfere with the policies behind IRCA and that no Congressional intent to foreclose the state remedy appears in IRCA. The court also held that the IRCA does not preempt the damages recoverable for wrongful termination in violation of public policy or operate to limit the damages recoverable in such an action.^{110.4}

In Incalza v. Fendi North America, Inc.,^{110.5} the Ninth Circuit held that the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 (IRCA) did not preempt California labor laws forbidding employers from firing an employee without good cause, because IRCA did not require the employer to terminate the employment. The court found that there was no conflict between federal and California law, because the employee was not discharged because of his unauthorized employment status, and the employer could lawfully have taken action other than discharge and been in compliance with IRCA. The employer itself recognized that discharge was not required, as evidenced by its decision to continue to employ an employee in the same position as the discharged employee while obtaining an H1-B visa for him. Further, the employer could have granted the employee's request for temporary, unpaid leave so that he could resolve his work authorization problems. IRCA requires that an employer not continue to employ workers who are unauthorized, but does not bar an employer from suspending an employee or placing the employee on unpaid leave for a reasonable period while the employee remedies the deficiency in his status. Hoffman Plastic Compounds v. NLRB ^{110.6} did not require the employer to terminate the employee immediately. Under Hoffman, as a general rule, individuals who are indisputably not authorized to work must be discharged immediately. Hoffman did not consider whether employees who were able to resolve their work authorization problems within a short time could be suspended or granted leave without pay for the interim period.^{110.7}

[2] Statute of Frauds

The statute of frauds does not bar wrongful termination claims based on breach of an oral or implied in fact contract not to terminate except for cause.¹¹¹ In Foley v. Interactive Data Corp.,¹¹² the employer had argued that the plaintiff's contract claims were barred by Civil Code Section 1624(a), which invalidates any unwritten agreement that "by its terms is not to be performed within a year from [its making]." The California Supreme Court held that the statute was inapplicable because it refers only to contracts which, by their terms, cannot possibly be performed within a year.¹¹³ The Court reasoned that an employment agreement with a good-cause limitation has the possibility of being completed within one year, because an employee may quit or the employer may discharge the employee for cause within that time.¹¹⁴

This rule is not limited to contracts of an indefinite term. If a contract for a specific term in excess of one year can possibly be terminated within one year, the statute of frauds does not require the contract be in writing.¹¹⁵

[3] Parol Evidence Rule

In some cases, the plaintiff-employee has signed an employment contract that provides for at will employment, but other oral promises have been made by the employer to the effect that termination will be for cause only. In these cases, the first issue to determine is whether or not the written at will contract is integrated, because the parol evidence rule generally prohibits the introduction of any extrinsic evidence that would vary or contradict the terms of an integrated written agreement (that is, one that is meant to be the complete and final embodiment of the agreement).ⁿ¹¹⁶ For example, in one case,ⁿ¹¹⁷ the court of appeal found that a contract that stated that employment would continue so long as it was "mutually agreeable to both parties" created an at will employment contract. Because the court found that the contract was integrated and because the contract provided that it superseded all prior agreements, evidence of an implied agreement contradicting those terms was not admissible.ⁿ¹¹⁸ In another case, the court held that an employment letter authorizing termination by either party in their discretion was the complete integrated contract, and therefore parol evidence was inadmissible to establish that under prior oral representations the employer had created an employment terminable only for cause.ⁿ¹¹⁹

Recently, the court held that an at will clause in a confidentiality agreement constituted a fully integrated agreement with respect to the subject of termination, thus precluding parol evidence.ⁿ¹²⁰ Another case held that an employment application and employment contract that each used at will language constituted an integrated agreement, and therefore the employer did not have to show good cause for termination or justify its business judgment in terminating the employee as part of a reduction in force.ⁿ¹²¹ An unintegrated application, however, does not preclude the introduction of parol evidence to determine whether the relationship could only be terminated for cause.ⁿ¹²²

If the contract is integrated, parol evidence may nevertheless be admitted to explain the meaning of the written contractual language, but only if the relevant language is reasonably susceptible to the interpretation advanced by the parol evidence.ⁿ¹²³ In two different cases dealing with this issue, the courts denied admission of parol evidence contradicting at will contracts which contained language, in one case, stating that the employment would continue so long as it was "mutually agreeable" and in the other case, that employment could be terminated "for any reason." The courts held that these terms were clear and not susceptible of other meanings.ⁿ¹²⁴ However, in another case, in which an employee had signed an employment application stating that employment could be terminated with or without cause at any time, the court held that parol evidence was admissible to establish an implied termination for cause agreement between the parties because (1) the application was not a complete integrated agreement, and (2) even if the agreement were an integrated one, the evidence was admissible to explain a meaning of the language of the application to which the language was reasonably susceptible.ⁿ¹²⁵

An agreement may also be only partially integrated, and in such cases the parol evidence rule applies to the integrated part of the agreement. However, extrinsic evidence may be used to prove elements of the agreement not reduced to writing.ⁿ¹²⁶ Thus, a court may consider such evidence to construe language in an unintegrated part that is susceptible to the meaning urged by either party.ⁿ¹²⁷ One court held that an at will provision in an employment application was a partial integration and that parol evidence of a subsequent agreement for permanent employment was inadmissible because it was not integrated with respect to the term of employment.ⁿ¹²⁸

In one unusual case, the plaintiff had a series of one-year contracts that provided for termination by either party on two weeks notice and stated that upon termination for any reason, the employer would continue to pay the employee for a specified period of time; but the contract did not specify that termination could be for any reason. The court held that the contract was silent on the acceptable grounds for termination and was only partially integrated. Therefore the plaintiff could properly offer parol evidence of a related oral understanding to prove additional terms of the contract not inconsistent with the express language of the writing.ⁿ¹²⁹ The court emphasized that the plaintiff's burden in this type of case is high, in that he or she must show the existence of an oral understanding, establish that it required good cause for termination, and also defeat the existence of good cause for his or her termination.ⁿ¹³⁰

[4] Statute of Limitations

There are several statutes of limitations set out in the Code of Civil Procedure that are potentially relevant to various causes of action in a wrongful termination suit. Code of Civil Procedure, section 337(1) establishes a four-year period for an action based on a written contract. Code of Civil Procedure, section 338(a) prescribes a three-year period for an action on a liability created by statute, other than a penalty or forfeiture. Code of Civil Procedure, section 339(1) provides a two-year limitations period for an action based on a contract not in writing. Additionally, Code of Civil Procedure, section 335.1 sets out a two-year statute for an action for injury caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another.

Although there are no cases directly on point, a wrongful termination action styled as a breach of contract case would appear to be governed by either the four-year statute for written contracts,ⁿ¹³¹ or the two-year statute for oral or implied contracts.ⁿ¹³²

A claim of wrongful termination in violation of public policy sets forth a claim for violation of a personal right. Accordingly, it has been held that the appropriate statute of limitations is the two-year statute set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1.ⁿ¹³³ The Ninth Circuit has also stated (without discussion) that the applicable statute of limitations for a wrongful discharge action based on violation of public policy is two years, pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure, section 335.1.ⁿ¹³⁴ Similarly, in light of the fact that the primary nature of the right sued on in a wrongful termination action is personal, the Ninth Circuit has held that the statute of limitations for a claim for wrongful termination in violation of ERISA Section 510^{n134.1} is the two-year statute set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1.^{n134.2}

The one-year limitations period under the Fair Employment and Housing Actⁿ¹³⁵ does not apply to bar a wrongful discharge action that alleges discrimination based on common law claims that are independent of the act. In Carmichael v. Alfano Temporary Personnel ⁿ¹³⁶ the plaintiff had pursued administrative remedies under both the FEHAⁿ¹³⁷ and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.ⁿ¹³⁸ After receiving right to sue letters from both agencies,ⁿ¹³⁹ the plaintiff filed a complaint stating common law causes of action for wrongful discharge (including violation of public policy) based on discrimination, after the limitations period under the FEHA had lapsed, but one day prior to the expiration of the one-year limitations period under former Code of Civil Procedure section 340(3)^{n139.1} (that limitations period having been tolled during plaintiff's pursuit of federal administrative remedies).ⁿ¹⁴⁰ Following Rojo v. Kliger, ⁿ¹⁴¹ the court of appeal held that the applicability of the one-year limitations period under the FEHA depends on whether the plaintiff alleged a common law claim independent of the act. After reviewing the facts, the court concluded that plaintiff's claims, based on retaliation for reporting discriminatory conduct, stated an independent cause of action in violation of public policy and therefore were not subject to the limitations period set forth in FEHA.ⁿ¹⁴²

In Mathieu v. Norrell Corp., ^{n142.1} the California Court of Appeal held that the two-year limitations period for an action for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy is not tolled while the plaintiff pursues an administrative claim with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing. The court found the tolling argument inconsistent with California Supreme Court decisions holding that a common law cause of action for discharge in violation of public policy is, in effect, an independent alternative to a FEHA administrative claim and subsequent cause of action under the Fair Employment and Housing Act.^{n142.2}

In Eisenberg v. Insurance Co. of North America, ⁿ¹⁴⁴ the Ninth Circuit held that a claim for the breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing was governed by the two-year limitations period set forth in Code of Civil Procedure, section 339(1), governing actions based on oral or implied contracts.

In Romano v. Rockwell International, Inc., ⁿ¹⁴⁵ the California Supreme Court considered when the statute of limitations began to run in a wrongful termination case in which the plaintiff had alleged causes of action sounding in tort and contract, as well as violation of the FEHA. The plaintiff, Romano, had been notified of his termination two and one-half years before his employment actually terminated. Under all causes of action, the claim accrued on the date of his actual termination. With respect to the contract claim, the Court reasoned that although the notification constituted an anticipatory breach on which plaintiff could elect to sue, the anticipatory breach did not prevent plaintiff from electing to wait until the actual breach occurred and suing on the actual breach. With respect to the tort claim for wrongful termination in breach of public policy, the Court reasoned that the cause of action alleged was one that limited the defendant's right to dismiss the plaintiff at will and therefore the action could not accrue until the actual dismissal. Finally, with respect to the FEHA claim, the Court found that because the statute expressly lists discriminatory "discharge" as grounds for a claim, and further states that the time to bring administrative claims begins to run "after" the unlawful employment practice has "occurred", the claim for discriminatory discharge could not accrue until the discharge had actually happened.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ The court expressly declined to follow the United States Supreme Court's approach in the decisions Delaware State College v. Ricks ⁿ¹⁴⁷ and Chardon v. Fernandez, ⁿ¹⁴⁸ which state that the cause of action occurs when the discriminatory decision is communicated to the plaintiff. The Court based its analysis on the fact that the FEHA defines "discharge" as a discriminatory act, while the federal discrimination laws focus on the discriminatory decision.

In reaching its holding, the Court discussed the fact that requiring an employee to bring his or her claims while still employed creates a situation in which the chances for conciliation or correction of the wrongful or discriminatory decision are greatly reduced. Later, in Mullins v. Rockwell International Corp.,ⁿ¹⁴⁹ the Court relied on Romano to find that in constructive discharge actions, the statute of limitations begins to run on the date employment actually is terminated, i.e., when the employee resigns, and not when the alleged intolerable conditions occur.

An employer may include in an employment contract a provision shortening the statute of limitations for suits related to the contract, including wrongful termination suits. In Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co., ^{n149.1} the Ninth Circuit construed California law and held that a contractual provision limiting to six months the time within which suits on an employment contract could be brought was not unconscionable. The court found the provision to be enforceable, despite some element of adhesion, because the six-month limitation was not substantively unconscionable.^{n149.2} However, the court held unconscionable a contractual requirement obligating the employee to serve the employer with written notice of the employment contract claim's particulars ten days before commencing suit. Applying the analysis set forth by the California Supreme Court in Armendariz, ^{n149.3} the court could find little justification for the notice requirement. It held that ten days is not enough time for the company to investigate the factual bases of a claim, to settle a claim without litigation, to consider the fiscal implication of potential litigation or to take corrective action to prevent other such claims. In addition, the ten-day notice provision does not prevent stale claims, since it applies to any claim, irrespective of its age. Finally, the notice provision cannot promote judicial economy, because there was no corresponding requirement to exhaust company grievance procedures. Thus, the court found the requirement unconscionable because failure to comply deprived an employee of a judicial forum and its concomitant rights.^{n149.4}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

As a practical matter, employers risk the invalidation of their arbitration agreements to the extent they curtail substantive and procedural rights otherwise available in court litigation. Soltani, however, is a reminder that some limitations upon substantive and procedural rights are permissible. Soltani should not be taken as a license to "experiment" with such limitations, but it is extremely helpful to know that certain statutes of limitation may be shortened, thus permitting more rapid resolution of employee concerns. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[5] Termination for Cause

[a] Order and Burden of Proof

In many wrongful termination cases, the plaintiff claims that he or she was protected from the dismissal at will, normally permissible under Labor Code Section 2922, by a contract or covenant (express or implied) requiring that there be good cause for termination. Assuming that such a contract or covenant exists in a given case, the plaintiff may not recover if the employer had good cause for termination. However, a court may decide as a matter of law that there was no agreement to terminate for good cause if there are no facts to show the existence of such an agreement.ⁿ¹⁵⁰ For further discussion, see 60.05.

Plaintiff carries the ultimate burden of proving that he or she was terminated wrongfully. First, plaintiff must demonstrate a prima facie case that he or she was terminated despite adequate job performance. The employer must then produce evidence of having conducted an appropriate investigation and having reached an honest belief that there was good cause for the termination.ⁿ¹⁵¹ The plaintiff may then attack the defendant's proffered reason for termination, either on the ground that it is pretextual and that the real reason is one prohibited by contract or public policy, or on the ground that it is insufficient to meet the employer's obligations under contract or applicable legal principles.ⁿ¹⁵²

When the plaintiff-employee alleges that the termination violated the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, the plaintiff must bring forth facts to show that the employer acted in bad faith and lacked probable cause to believe that it had cause to terminate the employee.ⁿ¹⁵³ In the absence of facts showing that the employer lacked a reasonable belief in the existence of cause for discharge, the employee cannot prevail merely by showing that the employer was mistaken and that, in fact, no good cause existed for the discharge.ⁿ¹⁵⁴

[b] What Constitutes "Good Cause"

Good cause for termination may be spelled out in an employment contract or may appear in written or unwritten company policies.ⁿ¹⁵⁵ If the employer has never defined good cause for the dismissal of its employees, the court considering the termination of an employee will likely adopt the definition employed in Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. ("Pugh I"):ⁿ¹⁵⁶ "a fair and honest cause or reason, regulated by good faith on the part of the party exercising the power." This definition was further elucidated in Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. ("Pugh II").ⁿ¹⁵⁷ the opinion on appeal of the Pugh I case after remand and trial. In Pugh II, the court of appeal stated that this definition allows the trier of fact to consider the business judgment of the employer or the fairness to the employee of the decision to discharge, while giving substantial weight to managerial discretion. The court stated that the employer's interest in operating its business efficiently and profitably should be balanced against the employee's interest in maintaining his or her employment.ⁿ¹⁵⁸ Thus, the trier of fact must scrutinize the employer's business judgment and determine whether the discharge was justified under all of the circumstances, and if it finds that the employer's reasons for discharge were trivial, capricious, or pretextual, it may find that the termination was not made for a "fair and honest cause or reason" regulated by good faith.ⁿ¹⁵⁹

In Pugh II, the court also discussed the employer's discretion to make termination decisions in cases involving high-ranking administrative or managerial employees. The court stated that an employer must have wide latitude in making independent decisions concerning high-ranking employees whose failure to perform may be difficult to articulate because "[m]easuring the effective performance of such an employee involves consideration of many intangible attributes such as personality, initiative, ability to function as part of the management team and to motivate subordinates, and the ability to conceptualize and effectuate management style and goals."ⁿ¹⁶⁰

Generally, employers have prevailed by showing good cause for termination in two ways. In one type of case, the termination was prompted by legitimate business reasons that had nothing to do with the employee's job performance.ⁿ¹⁶¹ In other cases, the employer acted in good faith by terminating an employee whom it reasonably believed had violated company policy.ⁿ¹⁶²

Reorganization of a company's business to respond to changing economic conditions was held to be good cause for termination in Gianaculas v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. ⁿ¹⁶³ and Clutterham v. Coachmen Industries, Inc. ⁿ¹⁶⁴ In Gianaculas, three management employees were terminated in a reduction in force ("RIF"). All were offered nonmanagement positions and declined them. They sued the company, claiming it breached their employment contracts and covenants of good faith and fair dealing by failing to follow its own policy manual regarding the displacement of lower-level managers. The court affirmed a summary judgment for the employer, holding that terminations that were part of a general RIF caused by economic conditions and that the abolition of certain job positions was not without good cause.ⁿ¹⁶⁵

Summary judgment for the employer was affirmed on similar reasoning in Clutterham.ⁿ¹⁶⁶ Defendant produced uncontradicted evidence that the termination was due to depressed market conditions and the concomitant reorganization of the business. The court cited Gianaculas ⁿ¹⁶⁷ for its holding that a business judgment to reorganize one's operations constitutes good cause for the termination of employees.ⁿ¹⁶⁸ Defendant carried its burden of producing evidence of good cause, and plaintiff failed to show that it was pretextual or that the employer acted in bad faith; therefore, summary judgment was held proper.ⁿ¹⁶⁹

Defendants have prevailed in other cases by showing that the terminations in question were carried out because the employee had violated company policies. In one case, for example, the court affirmed a summary judgment for the defendant because plaintiff failed to show that defendant's proffered reasons for terminating him were pretextual or that it had acted in bad faith.ⁿ¹⁷⁰ Plaintiff had violated an unwritten but well-known rule of the employer prohibiting fraternization among employees. He admitted in both his complaint and his deposition that he believed his fraternization with a nonmanagement employee was the reason for his termination. The court found that plaintiff's argument that the dismissal was based on other, improper motives was mere conjecture and speculation, insufficient to raise a triable issue of material fact.ⁿ¹⁷¹

Plaintiff also argued that violation of the no-fraternization rule was not good cause for termination because the rule was unreasonable and selectively applied. The court rejected the contention, concurring with the statement in Pugh v. See's Candies ("Pugh I") that an employer "must of necessity be allowed substantial scope for the exercise of subjective judgment" concerning the termination of an employee in a managerial position.ⁿ¹⁷² Moreover, the court found the employer's and the public's interests in preventing sexual harassment and/or favoritism outweighed plaintiff's interest in keeping his job.ⁿ¹⁷³ The court rejected defendant's proposal that it adopt a per se rule precluding judicial review of an employer's business reasons for discharging an employee. The court stated that the employer should not always be the final arbiter of what constitutes good cause.ⁿ¹⁷⁴

In Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc., ⁿ¹⁷⁵ the California Supreme Court considered the case of an employee who contested his termination for sexually harassing other employees. Specifically, the Court decided the jury's role in resolving whether an employee who has been dismissed for alleged misconduct, has been properly terminated for good cause.ⁿ¹⁷⁶ The Court rejected the plaintiff's argument that the jury's function is to decide whether the acts that led to the termination decision actually occurred. Rather, the Court said, "[I]t is the employer that decides whether acts of an employee amounting to just cause have occurred--and ... the role of the jury is to assess, through the lens of an objective standard, the reasonableness of that decision under the circumstances known to the employer at the time [the decision] was made." Therefore, the court held that the employer need not prove that the harassment actually occurred, only that it conducted an appropriate investigation and that it honestly concluded, for reasons that are neither arbitrary nor pretextual, that a dischargeable act had been committed.ⁿ¹⁷⁷

An employee's involvement in organizing a competing business may constitute a violation of the employee's duty of loyaltyⁿ¹⁷⁸ and may furnish good cause for termination of employment.ⁿ¹⁷⁹ In Fowler v. Varian Associates, Inc., ⁿ¹⁸⁰ a court of appeal upheld summary judgment for the employer in an action for wrongful termination based, in part, on breach of an alleged implied agreement not to terminate except for good cause. The court held that the employer had good cause for terminating the employee, as a matter of law, on either of two bases: (1) the employee's refusal to disclose information he had gathered concerning an enterprise being organized to compete directly with the employer, and (2) the employee's assistance in obtaining financing for the competing enterprise.ⁿ¹⁸¹ Similarly, another court of appeal found sufficient cause for termination existed when extensive acts were performed by plaintiffs, who were managerial level employees with access to confidential information, to establish a competing business.ⁿ¹⁸² In Stokes, the court affirmed judgment for the defendant even though the employees were not actually competing, because the extensive preparations to compete constituted a breach of loyalty and conflicts of interest.ⁿ¹⁸³

Summary judgment was reversed in one case, however, in which an employee was terminated before his job in another state even began, because the employer's proffered reasons for terminating the employee were disputed or did not show good cause.ⁿ¹⁸⁴ The employer's declarations in support of the motion stated that the employee had made disparaging and demeaning remarks regarding the employer and the city in which it was located. The court of appeal held that the declarations were based on conclusions rather than evidentiary facts.ⁿ¹⁸⁵

The declarations also stated that the employee had appeared at the office inappropriately attired. However, this occurred prior to the employee's actual starting date, and the declaration did not state that this was the reason for the termination. The court held that this was thus a disputed issue that could not be resolved by summary judgment.ⁿ¹⁸⁶

"Good cause" in the context of at-will employment differs from "good cause" for termination of a contract for employment for a specified term, which is governed by Lab. Code § 2924. An employment contract for a specified term may only be terminated for a willful breach of duty, habitual neglect of duty, or continued incapacity to perform.^{n186.1} In Khajavi v. Feather River Anesthesia Medical Group,^{n186.2} the court held that Lab. Code § 2924 does not allow termination of an employee under a contract for a specified term for an honest but mistaken belief that discharge was required or that the employee had breached his or her duty.^{n186.3}

[6] No Employment Relationship

Tort liability for violation of public policy is inapplicable when the relationship terminated is one of independent contractors, rather than employer and employee.ⁿ¹⁸⁷ In one case, a court of appeal found that independent contractors may not state a tort claim for wrongful termination in violation of the public policy against racial discrimination grounded in the California Constitution.ⁿ¹⁸⁸ Another court also indicated that the covenant of good faith and fair dealing is inapplicable to independent contractor relationships.ⁿ¹⁸⁹

Generally, whether an individual was an employee or independent contractor is a question of fact that depends on the trier of fact's evaluation of several factors, most notably whether the alleged employer has the right to control not only the result but also the means by which the work is accomplished.^{n189.1} Other relevant factors include the following:^{n189.2}

- (a) Whether the person performing services is engaged in a distinct occupation or business.
- (b) The kind of occupation, with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the principal or by a specialist without supervision.
- (c) The skill required in the particular occupation.
- (d) Whether the principal or the worker supplies the instrumentalities, tools, and the place of work for the person doing the work.
- (e) The length of time for which the services are to be performed.
- (f) The method of payment, whether by the time or by the job.
- (g) Whether the work is part of the regular business of the principal.
- (h) Whether the parties believe they are creating the relationship of employer-employee.

In addition, evidence that the relationship could be terminated by either party without cause is strong evidence of an at-will employment relationship.^{n189.3} On the other hand, neither the small amount of payment nor the failure to withhold taxes is controlling.^{n189.4} The factors are not to be mechanically applied. They are intertwined, and their weight depends often on particular combinations.^{n189.5} Thus, for example, in Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication,^{n189.6} the plaintiff, who was a newspaper columnist, raised a triable issue of fact as to whether he was an employee rather than independent contractor. The relatively nominal amount the defendant-newspaper paid the plaintiff and the fact that no taxes were withheld were not controlling; that he was paid by the article rather than given a guaranteed monthly salary was indicative of an independent contractor status, but that fact alone was not dispositive if other indicia of an employer-employee relationship existed. Particularly relevant was evidence the defendant controlled not only the result but also the means by which the result was accomplished. Whether the defendant maintained this control was disputed. The parties disputed whether the plaintiff attended or was required to attend weekly staff meetings, whether the defendant provided him with an office, computer and a receptionist to take messages on his behalf, and whether he assisted the editor in other editorial duties. The plaintiff submitted evidence that none of the people whom the defendant identified as "freelance writers" was afforded the instrumentalities the defendant gave him nor were they required to attend staff meetings; and it was of some dispute whether the defendant identified the plaintiff as an employee when it obtained a press pass for him.^{n189.7}

In a related vein, one court of appeal refused to hold a parent corporation liable for the acts or omissions of its subsidiary in an action alleging sex discrimination, age discrimination, and wrongful termination, even though the subsidiary was wholly owned and financially controlled by the parent company.ⁿ¹⁹⁰ The court pointed to the strong presumption that a parent company is not the employer of its subsidiary's employees,ⁿ¹⁹¹ and rejected the four arguments advanced by the plaintiff to sue the parent of an employee's employer: (1) integrated enterprise, (2) agency, (3) alter ego, and (4) equitable estoppel, absent any evidence that the parent corporation exercised day-to-day control over the subsidiary's employment decisions or that it exercised any control over the subsidiary's decisions with respect to the plaintiff.ⁿ¹⁹²

[7] At-Will Employment of Corporate Officers

Corporations Code Section 312(b) states in part that "[e]xcept as otherwise provided by the articles or bylaws, officers shall be chosen by the board and serve at the pleasure of the board, subject to the rights, if any, of an officer under any contract of employment." Courts have held that this provision essentially corresponds to the at-will presumption of Labor Code Section 2922, which is applicable to employees generally,ⁿ¹⁹³ and it creates a comparable presumption.ⁿ¹⁹⁴ However, as noted in the above-quoted language, the terms of "any contract of employment" may overcome the presumption of at-will status that would otherwise apply (just as in the case of employees who are not corporate officers).ⁿ¹⁹⁵ In one corporate officer wrongful termination case, the plaintiff alleged an implied contract not to terminate except for good cause. The court of appeal found plaintiff's allegations of longevity of service, promotions, praise of her work, regular pay raises and bonuses, and the corporation's express personnel practices and policies indicating its obligation to deal fairly and in good faith were sufficient, if proved, to overcome the presumption of at-will employment created by Corporations Code Section 312(b).ⁿ¹⁹⁶

[8] Arbitration Agreements

In recent years, federal and state courts have given much attention to the effect of arbitration agreements on a civil action for wrongful discharge, and especially the question of whether the civil action is precluded by the arbitration agreement. For full discussion, see Chapter 90.

[9] Effect of After-Acquired Evidence Justifying Termination

One issue that has frequently arisen is the extent to which evidence of employee misconduct that would have justified an employer's adverse employment action, but which was not discovered by the employer until after it took an allegedly wrongful employment action (so-called "after-acquired evidence"), may act as a defense to a wrongful discharge cause of action. The most common factual context in which this issue has arisen has involved an employer's discovery, typically after the commencement of litigation, that the employee had falsified his or her resume or employment application. In such cases, employers have argued that the plaintiff should not be entitled to recovery because the plaintiff would have been fired (or would have not been hired in the first place) had the employer known of the falsification.

In Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁹⁷ the California Court of Appeal for the Second District, in a case involving common law wrongful termination and age discrimination claims, refused to adopt a blanket rule that after-acquired evidence of falsification of an employment application is a complete defense to a wrongful termination or employment discrimination claim.ⁿ¹⁹⁸ The court reasoned that an automatic forfeiture of all employment rights, regardless of circumstances, was too harsh a penalty in many cases. The court further reasoned that in cases in which an employer has fired a worker in violation of the statutory ban on discrimination, the purpose and effect of the discrimination statutes would be unacceptably undermined by a principle that would allow a fact that played no part in the firing decision to bar any recovery.ⁿ¹⁹⁹ The court did not discuss the potential effect of such after-acquired evidence on the amount of damages, as the issue was not before the court.ⁿ²⁰⁰

The court in Cooper noted the existence of two conflicting lines of authority in the federal court decisions applying the "after-acquired evidence" doctrine to employment discrimination claims. One line of cases, rejected by the California court in Cooper,ⁿ²⁰¹ follows the reasoning of Summers v. State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Co.,ⁿ²⁰² in which the Tenth Circuit held that after-acquired evidence of employment application or resume falsification completely bars the plaintiff from obtaining any relief.ⁿ²⁰³ The Eleventh Circuit and Seventh Circuit have rejected a no-recovery rule, but have held that such evidence may preclude certain types of relief, such as front pay or reinstatement.ⁿ²⁰⁴

In McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publishing Co.,ⁿ²⁰⁵ which involved alleged age discrimination in violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA),ⁿ²⁰⁶ the United States Supreme Court rejected the Summers line of authority and held that after-acquired evidence of employee misconduct does not completely bar a plaintiff from any relief for ADEA violations.ⁿ²⁰⁷ The Court in McKennon did indicate, however, that such evidence is relevant to the scope of relief available and will, as a general rule, preclude reinstatement or front pay as a remedy, but that the plaintiff may generally recover back pay measured from the date of the unlawful discharge to the date of discovery of the evidence of misconduct.ⁿ²⁰⁸

One case has indicated, however, that, notwithstanding the Cooper and McKennon decisions, after-acquired evidence may still act as a complete bar to a wrongful termination claim in exceptional circumstances. In Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro,ⁿ²⁰⁹ a California court of appeal seized on language in Cooper suggesting that after-acquired evidence might limit or bar an employee's claims in some situations,ⁿ²¹⁰⁻²⁹²⁻ⁿ²⁹³ to find that public policy wrongful discharge claims were barred by after-acquired evidence of the plaintiffs' prior felony convictions. In Camp, the employer, a federal contractor, was required by law to certify that none of its employees had been convicted of a felony. The plaintiffs lied on their employment applications by denying any prior felony convictions, and one plaintiff also signed a post-employment form stating that she had never been convicted of a felony. In affirming a summary judgment for the employer on the plaintiffs' wrongful discharge claims, the court stated that after-acquired evidence could bar liability altogether where, as in the present case, the misrepresentations relate directly to the wrongful termination claims and would have disqualified the plaintiff from employment.ⁿ²⁹⁴ In distinguishing the facts of the case before it from both Cooper and McKennon, the court found significant that the employer policies in those cases were self-imposed.ⁿ²⁹⁵ By contrast, in the present case the employees misrepresented a job qualification that was required by law and which rendered them lawfully unqualified for the job.ⁿ²⁹⁶

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

The availability of after acquired evidence as a partial defense to wrongful termination remedies requires plaintiff's counsel to be especially careful in evaluating cases and advising potential clients. Indeed, the scope of the initial interview is necessarily significantly broadened because of this doctrine. Care should be taken to go over a potential client's resume, prior employment history, college and post-graduate degrees and any other information that the employer might have considered in hiring the employee. Additionally, where employer documents may be in the possession of the employee, careful inquiry into the employer's rules and policies about the confidentiality of those documents is advised. Commentary by John M. True, III.

For further discussion of the application of the after-acquired evidence doctrine in discrimination cases, see Chapter 41, Part E.

[10] Effect of Bankruptcy Proceedings

In one case, a California court of appeal held that a husband and wife's bankruptcy case did not preclude wrongful termination claims arising from the husband's post-petition termination.ⁿ²⁹⁷ The court rejected defendant's argument that all causes of action accruing subsequent to the filing of the bankruptcy petition belonged to the bankruptcy estate. The court reasoned that plaintiffs' causes of action arising from the husband's termination of employment, whether based on a contract for servicesⁿ²⁹⁸ or another theory, accrued post-petition and thus were not part of the bankruptcy estate.ⁿ²⁹⁹ With regard to the causes of action that accrued before the bankruptcy petition was filed, including the cause of action arising from the wife's termination, the court found that under the liberal amendment policy set forth in California cases, plaintiffs should have been allowed to amend their defective pleadings to substitute the bankruptcy trustee as party plaintiff and that the amendment would relate back to the original complaint.ⁿ³⁰⁰

[11] Issue Precluded by Prior Administrative Proceeding

Public employees may be required to administratively appeal a discharge before filing suit.ⁿ³⁰¹ If an administrative agency has determined that a public employee was not wrongfully terminated, the administrative determination is a basis upon which the employer may assert issue preclusion or collateral estoppel in the defense of a subsequent court action alleging wrongful termination. The threshold requirements for issue preclusion are the following:ⁿ³⁰²

- (1) The issue is identical to that decided in the former proceeding.
- (2) The issue was actually litigated in the former proceeding.
- (3) The issue was necessarily decided in the former proceeding.ⁿ³⁰³
- (4) The decision in the former proceeding is final and on the merits.
- (5) Preclusion is sought against a person who was a party or in privity with a party to the former proceeding.

When these requirements are met, the propriety of preclusion then depends on whether application will further the following public policies:ⁿ³⁰⁴

- Preserving the integrity of the judicial system.
- Promoting judicial economy.
- Protecting litigants from harassment by vexatious litigation.

Issue preclusion bars the relitigation of issues previously resolved in an administrative hearing by an agency acting in a judicial capacity as well as the relitigation of court findings.ⁿ³⁰⁵

In Castillo n305.1 issue preclusion was a proper ground for summary judgment for the employer against an employee of a municipal public works department who alleged that his discharge was in violation of public policies, including federal and state prohibitions against discrimination on the bases of age, race, and national origin. The employee had appealed his discharge to the civil service commission, but had not expressly raised the issue of discrimination in that proceeding. The hearing officer made findings that the employee had unsatisfactory attendance, that he had failed to improve that attendance over an extended period, and that the discharge was appropriate. At the hearing, the employee presented evidence of disparate treatment by his supervisor and others, but did not attribute the disparity to discrimination. The court, nonetheless, found issue preclusion proper. The court found that the issue was actually litigated in the administrative proceeding on the basis of evidence presented by the employee and that the employee was not precluded from presenting admissible evidence relevant to discrimination. The court also found that the issue of discrimination was necessarily decided on the ground that if the hearing officer had found that the reasons for discharge were merely a pretext for discrimination, she would not have found the discharge appropriate. Thus, the rejection of the employee's pretext claim was not entirely unnecessary to the judgment in the administrative proceeding.n306 In addition, the court found that allowing the employee to relitigate the discharge would diminish the value of the administrative process, especially if (as in this case) an employee must challenge the action administratively before filing suit. Finally, the court found that judicial economy was served by applying issue preclusion; the policy against vexatious litigation favored issue preclusion because the employee had an adequate opportunity at the administrative hearing to prove that his discharge was wrongful; and a single interest was protected by both the administrative and judicial proceedings.n307

[12] Failure to Exhaust Internal Grievance Procedures

In Palmer v. Regents of the University of California, n308 the court held that a former employee's failure to exhaust internal grievance procedures precluded her civil action for wrongful termination.n309 When a private association or public entity establishes an internal grievance mechanism, as the Regents had done in Palmer, failure to exhaust those internal remedies precludes any subsequent private civil action.n310 Exhaustion is jurisdictional.n311

The court distinguished exhaustion of external administrative remedies, such as the remedy provided by FEHA,n312 which an employee need not exhaust before bringing a civil suit.n313 The court also found that the doctrine of primary jurisdiction, which requires a litigant to first seek relief from an outside regulatory agency (such as the State Insurance Commissioner, the Federal Communications Commission or the Civil Aeronautics Board), did not apply to the requirement that internal administrative remedies be exhausted.n314 The court also held that in this case, Gov. Code § 8547.10, (part of the California Whistleblower Protection Act), reinforced the propriety of applying the exhaustion requirement since plaintiff had sued the Regents for wrongful termination without first exhausting the University's internal grievance procedures.n315 Government Code section 8547.10(c), which specifically applies to employees of the University of California, allows an action for damages against any person who intentionally engages in acts of reprisal, retaliation, threats, coercion, or similar acts against a university employee or applicant for employment for having made a protected disclosure. However, section 8547.10(c) provides that an action for damages is not available to the injured party unless the injured party has first filed a complaint with the specified university officer, and the university has failed to reach a decision regarding the complaint within the time limits established for that purpose by the Regents. Further, Gov. Code § 8547.10(f), which was added after the plaintiff in Palmer filed her lawsuit against the Regents, expressly preserves an employee's remedies under any other state law. However, a common-law action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy against retaliating against one who reports unlawful activity is generally not a "remedy under state law" available to a person in the position of the plaintiff in Palmer.

In Shuer v. County of San Diego, n316 a probationary employee sued the county for wrongful termination, and the trial court granted the county's demurrer for failure to exhaust internal administrative remedies. The court held that the county provided an administrative remedy to redress the claim of retaliatory dismissal from employment even though the rights of probationary employees were not as extensive as those of permanent employees. However, because the county provided the probationary employee with misleading and mistaken information concerning the availability of an administrative remedy, it was estopped from asserting her failure to exhaust the remedy.

In Lloyd v. County of Los Angeles,ⁿ³¹⁷ however, the trial court properly held that a county employee was not required to exhaust internal administrative remedies prior to filing suit against the county for retaliation, because the employee's claim that he suffered discrimination based on whistleblowing was not governed by the county's internal rules. The court distinguished Shuer on the ground that there, the county charter and rules repeatedly stated that all employment decisions had to be made on the basis of job-related qualifications, merit and equal opportunity without regard to age, color, creed, disability, national origin, political affiliation, race, religion, sex, or any other non-job-related factor, and a decision to dismiss an employee for revealing unethical or illegal conduct by county employees discriminated against her based on a non-job-related factor. In contrast, the county rule at issue in Lloyd was much narrower, and a claim of retaliation for whistleblower activity did not constitute discrimination on the basis of a factor within the meaning of that rule.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination Defenses General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Lab. Code §§ 132a (workers' compensation is exclusive remedy for employee who is fired for filing workers' compensation claim), 3600, 3602 (workers' compensation benefits are exclusive remedy for certain injuries arising out of employment); see also discussion in [d], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Aalgaard v. Merchants National Bank, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 686, 274 Cal. Rptr. 81 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Hall v. Great Western Bank (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 713, 720, 282 Cal. Rptr. 640 ; Aalgaard v. Merchants National Bank, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 692, 274 Cal. Rptr. 81 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See 12 U.S.C. § 24, para. 5; Wells Fargo Bank v. Superior Court (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 1082, 1091, 282 Cal. Rptr. 841, 811 P.2d 1025 ("bank officers" defined).

(n5)Footnote 5. Peatros v. Bank of America (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 147, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659, 990 P.2d 539 .

(n6)Footnote 6. 12 U.S.C. § 24 et seq.

(n7)Footnote 6.1. See Peatros v. Bank of America (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 147, 172, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659, 990 P.2d 539 .

(n8)Footnote 6.2. See Peatros v. Bank of America (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 147, 172, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659, 990 P.2d 539 .

(n9)Footnote 6.3. See Peatros v. Bank of America (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 147, 172-173, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659, 990 P.2d 539 .

(n10)Footnote 7. Hall v. Great Western Bank (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 713, 720, 282 Cal. Rptr. 640 ; see Inglis v. Feinerman (9th Cir. 1983) 701 F.2d 97 (12 U.S.C. § 1432(a)); Bollow v. Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco (9th Cir. 1981) 650 F.2d 1093 (12 U.S.C. § 341, para. 5); Aalgaard v. Merchants National Bank, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 674, 274 Cal. Rptr. 81 (12 U.S.C. § 24, para. 5).

(n11)Footnote 7.1. Marques v. Bank of Am. NT&SA (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 356, 361, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 154 ; see, e.g., Moodie v. Federal Reserve Bank of N. Y. (S.D.N.Y. 1993) 831 F. Supp. 333, 336-337 (court found nothing in Federal Reserve Act supporting view that Congress considered employment discrimination at the time of enactment and nothing in dismissal-at-pleasure language to support view that Congress intended to exempt federal reserve banks, regarding employment discrimination, from state statutes or regulations, particularly when state scheme is consistent with federal legislation); White v. Federal Reserve Bank (Ohio Ct. App. 1995) 103 Ohio App. 3d 534, 660 N.E.2d 493, 495-496 (following Moodie).

(n12)Footnote 8. Hall v. Great Western Bank (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 713, 719-722, 282 Cal. Rptr. 640 ; accord Thomka v. Financial Corp. of Am. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 887-891, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 .

(n13)Footnote 9. See 12 C.F.R. § 563.39. This regulation was promulgated under the Home Owner's Loan Act, which, among other things, charters federal savings associations. See 12 U.S.C. § 1464(a).

(n14)Footnote 10. See Hall v. Great Western Bank (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 713, 721-722, 282 Cal. Rptr. 640 ; Honig v. Financial Corp. of Am. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 960, 964-965, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922

(n15)Footnote 11. D'Oench, Duhme & Co. v. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (1942) 315 U.S. 447, 62 S. Ct. 676, 86 L. Ed. 956 .

(n16)Footnote 12. 12 U.S.C. § 1823(e).

(n17)Footnote 13. Thomka v. Financial Corp. of Am. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 887-891, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 .

(n18)Footnote 14. Thomka v. Financial Corp. of Am. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 887, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 .

(n19)Footnote 15. Thomka v. Financial Corp. of Am. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 889, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 .

(n20)Footnote 16. 29 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n21)Footnote 16.1. San Diego Unions v. Garmon (1959) 359 U.S. 236, 246, 79 S. Ct. 773, 3 L. Ed. 2d 775 .

(n22)Footnote 16.2. See Lodge 76, Int'l Ass'n of Machinists & Aerospace Workers v. Wis. Empl. Rels. Comm'n (1976) 427 U.S. 132, 149-151, 96 S. Ct. 2548, 49 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n23)Footnote 16.3. San Diego Unions v. Garmon (1959) 359 U.S. 236, 243, 79 S. Ct. 773, 3 L. Ed. 2d 775 .

(n24)Footnote 16.4. Operating Engineers v. Jones (1983) 460 U.S. 669, 676, 103 S. Ct. 1453, 75 L. Ed. 2d 368 ; San Diego Unions v. Garmon (1959) 359 U.S. 236, 244, 79 S. Ct. 773, 3 L. Ed. 2d 775 .

(n25)Footnote 16.5. See, e.g., Paige v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 857 (no preemption where two workers discharged after complaining about Cal-OSHA safety violations); Inter-Modal Rail Employees Assn. v. Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 918, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 (no preemption where employees who formed association to complain about unsafe working conditions were terminated en masse because of importance of state interest in providing safe workplace).

(n26)Footnote 16.6. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Carpenters (1978) 436 U.S. 180, 197, 98 S. Ct. 1745, 56 L. Ed. 2d 209 .

(n27)Footnote 16.7. Longshoremen v. Davis (1986) 476 U.S. 380, 395, 106 S. Ct. 1904, 90 L. Ed. 2d 389 .

(n28)Footnote 16.8. Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 623, 632-639, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 336 .

(n29)Footnote 16.9. 29 U.S.C. § 157 (employees have the right to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection).

(n30)Footnote 16.10. Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 623, 634-635, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 336 . See also Ewing v. N.L.R.B. (2d Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 353, 355 .

(n31)Footnote 16.11. Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 623, 635, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 336 . See also Ewing v. N.L.R.B. (2d Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 353, 361 .

(n32)Footnote 16.12. Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 623, 635, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 336 . See Meyers Industries, Inc. (1984) 268 N.L.R.B. 493, 497 .

(n33)Footnote 16.13. Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 623, 635-639, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 336 .

(n34)Footnote 16.14. Luke v. Collotype Labels USA, Inc. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1463, 1469-1474, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 440 .

(n35)Footnote 16.15. Lab. Code § 232.5.

(n36)Footnote 16.16. See e.g., Aroostook County v. N.L.R.B. (1996) 81 F.3d 209, 317 U.S. App. D.C. 114 (effect of employer's conditioning rehiring of fired employees on their agreement they would bring their complaints to him, avoid any discussions with particular employees, and cease all gossiping and complaining amongst themselves likely would have had on employees' ability to engage in behavior protected under NLRA was so obvious that employer did not seriously attempt to defend legitimacy of conditions); Needell & McGlone, P.C. (1993) 311 N.L.R.B. 455 (employee who engaged in discussions with other secretaries about what she perceived to be preferential treatment received by other secretary was discharged because employer believed she was engaged in concerted activities that by their nature are protected by NLRA).

(n37)Footnote 16.17. San Diego Unions v. Garmon (1959) 359 U.S. 236, 243-244, 79 S. Ct. 773, 3 L. Ed. 2d 775 .

(n38)Footnote 16.18. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts (1985) 471 U.S. 724, 748-749 n.26, 105 S. Ct. 2380, 85 L. Ed. 2d 728 .

(n39)Footnote 16.19. Hillhaven Oakland Nursing etc. Center v. Health Care Workers Union (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 846, 855, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 11 , quoting Kaplan's Fruit & Produce Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 26 Cal. 3d 60, 69-70, 160 Cal. Rptr. 745, 603 P.2d 1341 .

(n40)Footnote 16.20. Machinists v. Wisconsin Emp. Rel. Comm'n (1976) 427 U.S. 132, 140, 96 S. Ct. 2548, 49 L. Ed. 2d 396 .

(n41)Footnote 16.21. See Ruscigno v. American National Can Co. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 112, 118, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 585 (preemption of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy against discrimination based on being witness in legal proceeding or because of testimony offered in legal proceeding); Rodriguez v. Yellow Cab Cooperative, Inc. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 668, 253 Cal. Rptr. 779 (preemption of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on employee's testimony before Public Utilities Commission and involvement in class action); Kelecheva v. Multivision Cable T.V. Corp. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 521, 528-529, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 (preemption of employee's cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy based on his refusal to participate in employer's antiunion harassment).

(n42)Footnote 17. Rodriguez v. Yellow Cab Cooperative, Inc. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 668, 674-679, 253 Cal.

Rptr. 779 ; Henry v. Intercontinental Radio, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 707, 713-715, 202 Cal. Rptr. 328 ; see also McGough v. University of San Francisco (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 1577, 1586, 263 Cal. Rptr. 404 (NLRA preempted causes of action for breach of contract and bad-faith denial of existence of contract).

(n43)Footnote 18. Henry v. Intercontinental Radio, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 707, 202 Cal. Rptr. 328 .

(n44)Footnote 19. Henry v. Intercontinental Radio, Inc. (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 707, 713, 202 Cal. Rptr. 328 .

(n45)Footnote 20. Rodriguez v. Yellow Cab Cooperative, Inc. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 668, 674 679, 253 Cal. Rptr. 779 ; see also Ethridge v. Harbor House Restaurant (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 1389, 1396 1402 (because NLRB has exclusive primary jurisdiction over matters arguably protected by NLRA, federal courts have neither original nor removal jurisdiction over such actions; state-law wrongful termination action that is allegedly preempted by NLRA may not be removed to federal court solely on federal question grounds; state court is entitled to decide preemption issue, subject to appellate review. See also Kelecheva v. Multivision Cable T.V. Corp. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 521, 528, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 (claim of discharge from supervisory position, allegedly due to plaintiff's refusal to participate in employer's campaign of anti-union harassment, was preempted by NLRA).

(n46)Footnote 20.1. Balog v. LRJV, Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1295, 250 Cal. Rptr. 766 .

(n47)Footnote 21. Balog v. LRJV, Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1295, 1304, 1311, 250 Cal. Rptr. 766 (plaintiff "has alleged that he was fired for five distinct reasons, only one of which constitutes an unfair labor practice under the NLRA [refusal to engage in anti-union acts]. The other reasons all involve various violations of California health and safety regulations, which are not even arguably unfair labor practices, as they in no way implicate collective bargaining or unionization. [The employer's] alleged conduct in terminating [plaintiff] for refusing to violate these regulations, and for thereby refusing to endanger the health and safety of California workers, is clearly conduct which touches interests deeply rooted in local feeling and responsibility, and which is, if of any concern of the NLRA, of only peripheral concern. Therefore, to the extent that [the plaintiff's] causes of action are premised on such conduct, they are not preempted by the [National Labor Relations] Act." (emphasis in original)); but cf. Kelecheva v. Multivision Cable T.V. Corp. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 521, 528-529, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 (plaintiff's admission that defendant's sole unlawful motivation for termination involved "unionbusting" precluded reliance on "mixed motive" exception to preemption).

(n48)Footnote 21.1. Balog v. LRJV, Inc. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1295, 250 Cal. Rptr. 766 .

(n49)Footnote 21.2. Inter-Modal Rail Employees Ass'n. v. Burlington Northern and Sante Fe Ry. Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 918, 925, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 (NLRA did not preempt state law claim for wrongful termination and unfair business practices following mass firing of employees who complained of unsafe working conditions).

(n50)Footnote 21.3. Inter-Modal Rail Employees Ass'n. v. Burlington Northern and Sante Fe Ry. Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 918, 926-927, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 .

(n51)Footnote 21.4. Inter-Modal Rail Employees Ass'n. v. Burlington Northern and Sante Fe Ry. Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 918, 927-928, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 (reviewing cases).

(n52)Footnote 22. Kelecheva v. Multivision Cable T.V. Corp. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 521, 529-532, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 .

(n53)Footnote 23. See Kelecheva v. Multivision Cable T.V. Corp. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 521, 532, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 453 .

(n54)Footnote 24. 29 U.S.C. § 185(a).

(n55)Footnote 25. Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Lueck (1985) 471 U.S. 202, 211, 105 S. Ct. 1904, 85 L. Ed. 2d 206 .

(n56)Footnote 25.1. Hansen v. Aerospace Defense Related Industry Dist. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 977, 983-985, 109 Cal. Rptr 2d 482 .

(n57)Footnote 26. Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Lueck (1985) 471 U.S. 202, 221, 105 S. Ct. 1904, 85 L. Ed. 2d 206 (preemption of cause of action for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing based on denial of group insurance benefits provided pursuant to collective bargaining agreement); Aguilera v. Pirelli Armstrong Tire Corp. (9th Cir. 2000) 223 F.3d 1010, 1015-1016 (state-law based contract claims arising from alleged pre-employment misrepresentations are preempted by § 301 when employee is subsequently hired under CBA); Cook v. Lindsay Olive Growers (9th Cir. 1990) 911 F.2d 233, 238-239 (breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing cause of action preempted if collective bargaining agreement contains terms governing job security); Young v. Anthony's Fish Grottos, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 830 F.2d 993, 997-1001 (claims for breach of contract and breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing); Paige v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 857, 861-862 .

(n58)Footnote 27. See Young v. Anthony's Fish Grottos, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 830 F.2d 993, 999-1001 .

(n59)Footnote 28. Schlacter-Jones v. General Tel. (9th Cir. 1991) 936 F.2d 435, 439-443 . For discussion of drug testing generally see ch. 50.

(n60)Footnote 29. See Schlacter-Jones v. General Tel. (9th Cir. 1991) 936 F.2d 435, 438 . See also Busey v. P.W. Supermarkets, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2005) 368 F. Supp. 2d 1045, 1054-55 (where plaintiff's employment was governed by the terms of a collective bargaining agreement, his claims for breach of contract and wrongful discharge are preempted by Section 301 of the Labor Relations Management Act).

(n61)Footnote 30. See Lingle v. Norge Division, Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 413, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410 & n.12, 486 U.S. 399, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410 ; Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Lueck (1985) 471 U.S. 202, 211, 105 S. Ct. 1904, 85 L. Ed. 2d 206 .

(n62)Footnote 31. Lingle v. Norge Division, Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410 .

(n63)Footnote 32. Lingle v. Norge Div. of Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410, 423 .

(n64)Footnote 33. Lingle v. Norge Division, Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 409 410, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410 ; see also Firestone v. Southern Cal. Gas Co. (9th Cir. 2000) 219 F.3d 1063, 1066-1067 (section 301 of LMRA preempted state law claim because resolution of dispute required interpretation of pay and overtime provisions in collective bargaining agreement).

(n65)Footnote 34. For an analogous cause of action under California law, see Lab. Code § 132a, discussed in § 60.03[2][h] and in ch. 20.

(n66)Footnote 35. Lingle v. Norge Division, Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 408 410, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410 ; see, e.g., Niehaus v. Greyhound Lines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 173 F.3d 1207, 1211-1212 (former employee's breach of contract claims against union, based on union official's individual promise that employee would receive union's cooperation in his transfer from management to union position, were not preempted by LMRA and were properly remanded to state court, because even if contract claims could give rise to contract defenses which referenced collective bargaining agreement, meaning of collective bargaining agreement was not in dispute).

(n67)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Cook v. Lindsay Olive Growers (9th Cir. 1990) 911 F.2d 233, 237-238 (wrongful termination in violation of public policy against religious discrimination embodied in FEHA, Gov. Code § 12940(a)); Paige v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 857, 863 (wrongful termination in violation of public policy embodied in Lab. Code §§ 6310, 6311, 6400-6404, governing occupational health and safety); Garibaldi v. Lucky Food Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1367, 1373-1374 (wrongful termination action based on retaliation for "whistleblowing" by employee who reported sale of spoiled milk).

(n68)Footnote 37. Cook v. Lindsay Olive Growers (9th Cir. 1990) 911 F.2d 233, 237-238 ; Paige v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 857, 863 ; see also Haney v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 623, 639-641, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 336 (wrongful discharge complaint alleging unionized employee was terminated by employer without justifiable cause or reason and in violation of public policy and employer's own policies and procedures, was independent of CBA and not preempted by LMRA, where allegation regarding violation of employer's policies and procedures was not essential to legal theory under which employee sought relief, and where dispute over motivating reason for discharge involved factual issues that could be resolved without interpreting CBA); Deschene v. Pinole Point Steel Co. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 33, 40-41, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 15 (employee's state law claims of wrongful termination based upon retaliation were not preempted by section 301 because issues under claims were factual in nature and would not require court to construe terms of collective bargaining agreement).

(n69)Footnote 38. Paige v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 857, 863 ; Garibaldi v. Lucky Food Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1367, 1374, 1375 .

(n70)Footnote 39. Paige v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 857, 863 .

(n71)Footnote 40. Miller v. AT&T Network Systems (9th Cir. 1988) 850 F.2d 543, 548, 550 .

(n72)Footnote 41. See Lingle v. Norge Division, Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 407 n.7, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410 ; see also Moreau v. San Diego Transit Corp. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 614, 627, 258 Cal. Rptr. 647 (stating that Garibaldi doctrine was rejected by decision in Lingle holding that preemption occurs whenever it is necessary to interpret collective bargaining agreement, regardless of the cause of action asserted).

(n73)Footnote 42. Moreau v. San Diego Transit Corp. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 614, 258 Cal. Rptr. 647 .

(n74)Footnote 43. Moreau v. San Diego Transit Corp. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 614, 628, 258 Cal. Rptr. 647 .

(n75)Footnote 44. Miller v. AT & T Network Systems (9th Cir. 1988) 850 F.2d 543, 548, 550 .

(n76)Footnote 45. Miller v. AT & T Network Systems (9th Cir. 1988) 850 F.2d 543, 548, 550 .

(n77)Footnote 46. Miller v. AT & T Network Systems (9th Cir. 1988) 850 F.2d 543, 548, 550 (Oregon anti-discrimination statute not preempted); see also Chmiel v. Beverly Wilshire Hotel Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 873 F.2d 1283, 1286-1287 (California FEHA not preempted). For discussion of the preemptive effect of section 301 on the FEHA, see ch. 40, pt. A.

(n78)Footnote 47. Newberry v. Pacific Racing Association (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F.2d 1142 .

(n79)Footnote 48. Newberry v. Pacific Racing Association (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F.2d 1142, 1147 .

(n80)Footnote 49. Harris v. Alumax Mill Products, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 897 F.2d 400 .

(N81)Footnote 50. Harris v. Alumax Mill Products, Inc. (9th Cir. 1990) 897 F.2d 400, 402-403 .

(n82)Footnote 51. Jackson v. Southern California Gas Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 638, 644-645 .

(n83)Footnote 52. Overby v. Chevron USA, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 884 F.2d 470, 473-474 .

(n84)Footnote 52.1. Balcorta v. Twentieth Century Fox (9th Cir. 2000) 208 F.3d 1102 .

(n85)Footnote 52.2. See Balcorta v. Twentieth Century Fox (9th Cir. 2000) 208 F.3d 1102, 1112 .

(n86)Footnote 52.3. See Balcorta v. Twentieth Century Fox (9th Cir. 2000) 208 F.3d 1102, 1110 .

(n87)Footnote 52.4. See Balcorta v. Twentieth Century Fox (9th Cir. 2000) 208 F.3d 1102, 1108-1109 .

(n88)Footnote 53. See Caterpillar, Inc. v. Williams (1987) 482 U.S. 386, 391-392, 107 S. Ct. 2425, 96 L. Ed. 2d 318 .

(n89)Footnote 54. Beals v. Kiewit Pacific Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 892, 894-895 .

(n90)Footnote 55. Beals v. Kiewit Pacific Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1997) 114 F.3d 892, 894-895 .

(n91)Footnote 56. See Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1515, 281 Cal. Rptr. 890 (plaintiff manager refused to quit union, but collective bargaining agreement requiring that management employees not be union members was inconsistent with intent that such employees be covered by agreement).

(n92)Footnote 57. Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1517, 281 Cal. Rptr. 890 .

(n93)Footnote 58. 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n94)Footnote 59. See Union Pacific Railroad Co. v. Sheehan (1978) 439 U.S. 89, 94, 99 S. Ct. 399, 58 L. Ed. 2d 354 ; Lewy v. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. (9th Cir. 1986) 799 F.2d 1281, 1289 .

(n95)Footnote 60. 45 U.S.C. §§ 151a(5), 153(i); see Consolidated Rail Corp. v. Labor Executives (1989) 491 U.S. 299, 109 S. Ct. 2477, 105 L. Ed. 2d 250, 266 (describing test for differentiating between major and minor disputes).

(n96)Footnote 61. See DeTomaso v. Pan American World Airways, Inc. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 517, 525, 235 Cal. Rptr. 292, 733 P.2d 614 .

(n97)Footnote 62. Hawaiian Airlines v. Norris (1994) 512 U.S. 246, 264-265, 114 S. Ct. 2239, 129 L. Ed. 2d 203); see Saridakis v. United Airlines (9th Cir.) 166 F.3d 1272, 1278 (RLA did not preempt claim for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy because plaintiff's allegations that his termination was due to disability discrimination, not breach of collective bargaining agreement (CBA), gave rise to right independent of CBA); Fennessey v. Southwest Airlines (9th Cir. 1996) 91 F.3d 1359, 1362 (following Hawaiian Airlines).

(n98)Footnote 63. Luck v. Southern Pac. Transp. Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1, 11 12, 267 Cal. Rptr. 618 , cert. denied, 498 U.S. 939, 111 S. Ct. 344, 112 L. Ed. 2d 309 (1990) ; Mungo v. UTA French Airlines (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 327, 330 332, 212 Cal. Rptr. 369 .

(n99)Footnote 64. Screen Extras Guild, Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1017, 275 Cal. Rptr. 395, 800 P.2d 873 .

(n100)Footnote 65. 29 U.S.C. § 401 et seq.

(n101)Footnote 66. See Finnegan v. Leu (1982) 456 U.S. 431, 435-436, 102 S. Ct. 1867, 72 L. Ed. 2d 239 .

(n102)Footnote 67. Screen Extras Guild, Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1017, 1024, 1032, 275 Cal. Rptr. 395, 800 P.2d 873 .

(n103)Footnote 68. Screen Extras Guild, Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1017, 1030, 275 Cal. Rptr. 395, 800 P.2d 873 .

(n104)Footnote 69. See Screen Extras Guild, Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 1017, 1031-1032, 275

Cal. Rptr. 395, 800 P.2d 873 ; see also Hansen v. Aerospace Defense Related Industry Dist. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 977, 981-983, 109 Cal. Rptr 2d 482 (wrongful discharge action of appointed business agent preempted by LMRDA because pretext claim required interpretation of seniority clause of collective bargaining agreement; employer had contended that it terminated employee for poor performance and insubordinate criticizing of management, and president had right to have appointed business agent who supported his agenda).

(n105)Footnote 69.1. Thunderburk v. United Food & Commercial Workers' Union (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609 .

(n106)Footnote 69.2. Thunderburk v. United Food & Commercial Workers' Union (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 1343-1345, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609 ; for discussion of Lab. Code §§ 1101, 1102, see § 60.03[2][r].

(n107)Footnote 69.3. Smith v. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local Union 11 (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1637, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 374 .

(n108)Footnote 69.4. Smith v. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local Union 11 (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1637, 1647-1648, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 374 .

(n109)Footnote 69.5. Smith v. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local Union 11 (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1637, 1648-1654, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 374 . For age discrimination under FEHA, see § 41.31; for disability discrimination under FEHA, see § 41.32.

(n110)Footnote 70. 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.

(n111)Footnote 71. 29 U.S.C. § 1144(a).

(n112)Footnote 72. Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 139, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474, 484 ; Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc. (1983) 463 U.S. 85, 97, 103 S. Ct. 2890, 77 L. Ed. 2d 490 ; Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 799 800 .

(n113)Footnote 73. Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 145, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474, 483, 486 .

(n114)Footnote 74. Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 140, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474, 484-485 .

(n115)Footnote 75. Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 140, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474, 485 .

(n116)Footnote 76. 29 U.S.C. §§ 1132(a)(3), 1140.

(n117)Footnote 77. Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 139, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474, 486 ; see also Inter-Modal Ry. Employees Ass'n v. Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Ry. (1997) 520 U.S. 510, 117 S. Ct. 1513, 1516, 137 L. Ed. 2d 763, 769-770 (ERISA also prohibits discharging an employee for the purpose of interfering with attainment of rights under health and welfare benefit plans).

(n118)Footnote 78. Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 140, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474, 487 (relying on Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 54, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39).

(n119)Footnote 79. Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 145, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474, 488 .

(n120)Footnote 80. Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794 .

(n121)Footnote 81. Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 800 ; see also Totton v. New York Life Ins. Co. (D. Conn. 1987) 682 F. Supp. 731, 735 (opinion on grant of reconsideration; ERISA does not preempt state-law claim for breach of employment contract that includes lost pension benefits as element of damages); Barnick v. Longs Drug Stores, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 377, 383-384, 250 Cal. Rptr. 10 (holding only portions of causes of action relating to pension plan were preempted and other portions were not preempted).

(n122)Footnote 82. Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 800 ; see Graham v. Balcors Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 241 F.3d 1246, 1248 (clarifying mandate issued in Graham v. Balcors Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 146 F.3d 1052 (ERISA did not preempt state causes of action for breach of contract, breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing and intentional infliction of emotional distress based on termination of payments for former employee's medical expenses, because agreement under which employee agreed to waive wrongful discharge or employment discrimination claims if employer kept her enrolled in its employee benefits plan so long as she was disabled did not arise in course of employer's administration of benefits plan).

(n123)Footnote 83. Dytrt v. Mountain State Tele. & Tele. Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 921 F.2d 889, 897 (allegations of breach of express or implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing based on Plan Review Committee's denial of plaintiff's request to revoke her acceptance of early retirement).

(n124)Footnote 84. Campbell v. Aerospace Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1308, 1311-1314 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1117, 118 S.Ct. 1794, 140 L. Ed. 2d 935 (1998) ; Ethridge v. Harbor House Restaurant (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 1389, 1404 .

(n125)Footnote 85. Ethridge v. Harbor House Restaurant (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 1389, 1404 .

(n126)Footnote 86. Campbell v. Aerospace Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1308, 1311-1314 , cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1117, 118 S.Ct. 1794, 140 L. Ed. 2d 935 (1998) .

(n127)Footnote 87. See Totton v. New York Life Ins. Co. (D. Conn. 1987) 682 F. Supp. 731, 735 .

(n128)Footnote 88. Portillo v. G. T. Price Prods, Inc. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 285, 290, 182 Cal. Rptr. 291 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n129)Footnote 89. Portillo v. G. T. Price Prods., Inc. (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 285, 290, 182 Cal. Rptr. 291 , disapproved on other grounds, City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1156, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n130)Footnote 90. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1148, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n131)Footnote 91. See Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602.

(n132)Footnote 92. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 17-20, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; see Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; see also Kaccludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866, 870-871 (plaintiff's assertion that workers' compensation exclusivity is inapplicable because of defendant's fraud was ineffective because of insufficiency of fraud pleading); but see Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 715, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 (false imprisonment cause of action outside compensation bargain by its nature).

(n133)Footnote 93. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 .

(n134)Footnote 94. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d

1195 . See, e.g., Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9-10, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 (plaintiff's emotional distress action was preempted by workers' compensation law, because workers' compensation is exclusive remedy for intentional infliction of emotional distress caused by employer's work-related conduct when that conduct does not contravene public policy).

(n135)Footnote 95. Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy).

(n136)Footnote 96. Gantt v. Sentry Ins. (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1101, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 (clarifying that administrative regulations can be source of fundamental public policy); see Shoemaker v. Myers (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 1407, 1428, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203 (in wrongful termination action against state entities and employees, Tameny claim not barred by workers' compensation law, but defendants entitled to immunity under Government Tort Claims Act (Gov. Code § 810 et seq.); see also Leibert v. Transworld Sys., Inc. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1693, 1706 1707, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 .

(n137)Footnote 97. Maynard v. City of San Jose (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 1396, 1405-1406 .

(n138)Footnote 98. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.; see discussion in § 60.03[2][d] and in chs. 40 through 43.

(n139)Footnote 99. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n140)Footnote 100. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 73-82, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 ; Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 894-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 ; see also Gov. Code § 12993(a); Blom v. N.G.K. Spark Plugs (U.S.A.), Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 382, 386, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 139 .

(n141)Footnote 101. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 894-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 ; Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n142)Footnote 101.1. Schifando v. City of Los Angeles (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1074, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 457, 79 P.3d 569 . For discussion of administrative remedies under FEHA generally, see § 43.01[3].

(n143)Footnote 101.2. Williams v. Housing Authority of Los Angeles (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 708, 719-737, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 374 (claims for wrongful demotion and constructive termination in violation of public policy were barred for failure to exhaust internal administrative remedy, because permissive internal administrative procedures in city charter required exhaustion, employee did not allege futility to excuse exhaustion requirement, and employee could not allege equitable estoppel to revive nonstatutory claims).

(n144)Footnote 102. For discussion of this provision, see ch. 40, pt. B.

(n145)Footnote 103. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 89 91, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 .

(n146)Footnote 103.1. Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 .

(n147)Footnote 103.2. Phillips v. St. Mary Regional Medical Center (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 218, 230-233, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 770 .

(n148)Footnote 104. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 894-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 .

(n149)Footnote 105. Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 894-901, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941

P.2d 1157; see Nelson v. United Technologies (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 597, 611-612, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 239 (California Family Rights Act, Gov. Code § 12945.2, remedies are not exclusive and therefore do not bar tort claim for wrongful discharge in violation of CFRA because California legislature manifested intent to amplify, not abrogate, injuries relating to employment discrimination).

(n150)Footnote 105.1. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 1160, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 456, 959 P.2d 752 .

(n151)Footnote 105.2. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162 .

(n152)Footnote 105.3. Gov. Code § 12926(d).

(n153)Footnote 105.4. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 1104, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162, 1167 .

(n154)Footnote 105.5. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 134-135, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 .

(n155)Footnote 105.6. Gov. Code § 12926(d).

(n156)Footnote 105.7. Gov. Code §§ 12920, 12921.

(n157)Footnote 105.8. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 1104-1105, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162 .

(n158)Footnote 105.9. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 1109, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162 .

(n159)Footnote 105.10. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 1109-1110, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162 .

(n160)Footnote 105.11. Silo v. CHW Medical Foundation (2002) 27 Cal. 4th 1097, 1110, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698, 45 P.3d 1162 .

(n161)Footnote 106. English v. General Elec. Co. (1990) 496 U.S. 72, 110 S. Ct. 2270, 110 L. Ed. 2d 65 .

(n162)Footnote 107. 42 U.S.C. § 5801 et seq.

(n163)Footnote 108. See 42 U.S.C. § 5851; see also discussion in § 60.03[3][h][ii].

(n164)Footnote 109. English v. General Elec. Co. (1990) 496 U.S. 72, 84-85, 110 S. Ct. 2270, 110 L. Ed. 2d 65 .

(n165)Footnote 110. English v. General Elec. Co. (1990) 496 U.S. 72, 84-85, 110 S. Ct. 2270, 110 L. Ed. 2d 65 .

(n166)Footnote 110.1. Jie v. Liang Tai Knitwear Co., Ltd. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 654, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682 .

(n167)Footnote 110.2. 8 U.S.C. § 1101 et seq.

(n168)Footnote 110.3. Pub. L. 99-603 (Nov. 6, 1986) 100 Statutes at Large 3359, effective July 1, 1987.

(n169)Footnote 110.4. Jie v. Liang Tai Knitwear Co. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 654, 665, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682 .

(n170)Footnote 110.5. Incalza v. Fendi North America, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 479 F.3d 1005, 2007 U.S. App.

LEXIS 5196, *6-*18 .

(n171)Footnote 110.6. Hoffman Plastic Compounds v. NLRB (2002) 535 U.S. 137, 122 S. Ct. 1275, 152 L. Ed. 2d 271 .

(n172)Footnote 110.7. See also Zamora v. Elite Logistics, Inc. (10th Cir. 2006) 449 F.3d 1106, 1114-15 (employer who placed employee on leave without pay while immigration status was being clarified could defend itself in subsequent Title VII suit on basis that it did so to comply with IRCA).

(n173)Footnote 111. See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 673-675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 & n.19, 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 (disapproving Newfield v. Ins. Co. of the West (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 440, 446-447, 203 Cal. Rptr. 9). The Supreme Court has held that Foley should be applied retroactively. See Newman v. Emerson Radio Corp. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 973, 976, 993, 258 Cal. Rptr. 592, 772 P.2d 1059 .

(n174)Footnote 112. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 673-675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 & n.19, 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n175)Footnote 113. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; see White Lighting Co. v. Wolfson (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 336, 343, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345 & n.2, 68 Cal. 2d 336, 66 Cal. Rptr. 697, 438 P.2d 345 .

(n176)Footnote 114. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 675, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n177)Footnote 115. See Abeyta v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1037, 1043-1045, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 680 .

(n178)Footnote 116. Gerdlund v. Elec. Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 270, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 ; Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum and Chem. Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 314, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 .

(n179)Footnote 117. Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum and Chem. Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 .

(n180)Footnote 118. Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum and Chem. Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 315-316, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 ; see also Gerdlund v. Elec. Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 273, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 (citing Malmstrom and obtaining same result, interpreting contract terms stating notice of termination could be given "for any reason"); see also Tollefson v. Roman Catholic Bishop (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 843, 853-857, 268 Cal. Rptr. 550 (express written contract between administrator and parochial school allowing termination at will for any reason after one year superseded any implied contract for renewal absent good cause not to renew).

(n181)Footnote 119. Anderson v. Savin Corp. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 356, 364, 254 Cal. Rptr. 627 .

(n182)Footnote 120. Haggard v. Kimberly Quality Care Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 508, 521, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 .

(n183)Footnote 121. Slivinsky v. Watkins-Johnson Co. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 799, 804-806, 270 Cal. Rptr. 585 ; see also Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1264, 1271, n.8 (application stating that it constituted terms of employment contract and that employment relationship was "at will" was a complete integration of the at will nature of the relationship).

(n184)Footnote 122. See Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1520, 273 Cal. Rptr. 296 , (parol evidence rule does not apply to employment application because application is solicitation of offer of employment, not contract), overruled in part, Dore v. Arnold Worldwide, Inc. 39 Cal. 4th 384 .

(n185)Footnote 123. See, e.g., McLain v. Great Am. Ins. Cos. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1485-1486, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 ; Gerdlund v. Elec. Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 272-273, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 ; Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 314, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 ; see also Aragon-Haas v. Family Sec. Ins. Servs., Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 232, 240, 282 Cal. Rptr. 233 .

(n186)Footnote 124. Gerdlund v. Elec. Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 272-273, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 ; Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 314, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 ; but see Aragon-Haas v. Family Sec. Ins. Servs., Inc. (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 232, 240, 282 Cal. Rptr. 233 (fact that terms of contract appear clear does not preclude possibility that parties chose language to express different terms).

(n187)Footnote 125. McLain v. Great Am. Ins. Cos. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1485-1486, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 .

(n188)Footnote 126. Wallis v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 718, 730 .

(n189)Footnote 127. Wallis v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 718, 730-731 .

(n190)Footnote 128. Wagner v. Glendale Adventist Medical Ctr. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1379, 1388-1390, 265 Cal. Rptr. 412 .

(n191)Footnote 129. Esbensen v. Userware Int'l Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 631, 636-640, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 93 .

(n192)Footnote 130. Esbensen v. Userware Int'l Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 631, 636-640, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 93 .

(n193)Footnote 131. Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1).

(n194)Footnote 132. Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1).

(n195)Footnote 133. Barton v. New United Motor Mfg., Inc. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1200, 1209, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 328 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3), prescribing one-year statute of limitations for action for personal injury); see also Newfield v. Ins. Co. of the West (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 440, 443, 203 Cal. Rptr. 9 (dicta).

(n196)Footnote 134. Funk v. Sperry Corp. (9th Cir. 1988) 842 F.2d 1129, 1133 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3), prescribing one-year statute of limitations for action for personal injury and citing a California appellate case that was ultimately granted review and transferred without disposition).

(n197)Footnote 134.1. See 29 U.S.C. § 1140 (making it unlawful to discharge, discipline, or discriminate against any participant of an employee benefit plan for exercising or attaining any right under that plan).

(n198)Footnote 134.2. Burrey v. Pac. Gas & Elec. Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 159 F.3d 388, 392-393 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3), prescribing one-year statute of limitations for action for personal injury and citing Barton v. New United Motor Mfg., Inc. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1200, 1207-1209, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 328).

(n199)Footnote 135. See Gov. Code § 12965(b). For discussion generally, see ch. 43, pt. A.

(n200)Footnote 136. Carmichael v. Alfano Temporary Personnel (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1126, 285 Cal. Rptr. 143 .

(n201)Footnote 137. See Gov. Code § 12900 et seq. For discussion, see ch. 43, pt. A.

(n202)Footnote 138. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq. For discussion, see ch. 43, pt. B.

(n203)Footnote 139. For discussion of administrative remedies, see ch. 42.

(n204)Footnote 139.1. Now see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1, prescribing a two-year statute of limitations for personal injury actions.

(n205)Footnote 140. For discussion of administrative remedies under FEHA and the EEOC generally, see ch. 42.

(n206)Footnote 141. Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 82, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 . For discussion, see § 60.04[2][b], [g].

(n207)Footnote 142. Carmichael v. Alfano Temporary Personnel (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1126, 1131-1132, 285 Cal. Rptr. 143 .

(n208)Footnote 142.1. Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 .

(n209)Footnote 142.2. Mathieu v. Norrell Corp. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1174, 1189-1190, 10 Cal. Rptr. 3d 52 . See Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal.3d 65, 86, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 (although employee must exhaust administrative remedy under FEHA before bringing cause of action under FEHA, exhaustion is not required before filing civil action for damages alleging nonstatutory tort of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy against sex discrimination and sexual harassment in employment); Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal.4th 880, 905, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 (applying Rojo to claim of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy against age discrimination).

(n210)Footnote 144. Eisenberg v. Insurance Co. of North America (9th Cir. 1987) 815 F.2d 1285, 1291 .

(n211)Footnote 145. Romano v. Rockwell International (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 479, 490-492, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20, 926 P.2d 1114 .

(n212)Footnote 146. See Gov. Code § 12960.

(n213)Footnote 147. Delaware State College v. Ricks (1980) 449 U.S. 250, 101 S. Ct. 498, 66 L. Ed. 2d 431 .

(n214)Footnote 148. Chardon v. Fernandez (1981) 454 U.S. 6, 102 S. Ct. 28, 70 L. Ed. 2d 6 .

(n215)Footnote 149. Mullins v. Rockwell Internat. Corp. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 731, 737-739, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 636, 936 P.2d 1246 .

(n216)Footnote 149.1. Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038 .

(n217)Footnote 149.2. Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1042-1045 (applying Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 , unconscionability analysis; see § 40.04[2]).

(n218)Footnote 149.3. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; see § 40.04[2]).

(n219)Footnote 149.4. Soltani v. Western & Southern Life Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2001) 258 F.3d 1038, 1045-1047 .

(n220)Footnote 150. See, e.g., Miller v. Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1554, 1558-1559, 259 Cal. Rptr. 56 (court held as matter of law there was no enforceable contract to terminate for good cause only because it was undisputed that employer had no established policies governing termination of sales personnel and plaintiff received no oral assurances of job security).

(n221)Footnote 151. Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 ; see Binder v. Aetna Life Ins. Co. (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 832, 856-857, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 540 (employer not entitled to summary judgment on employee's claim of breach of implied contract not to terminate except for good cause where employee was fired for single instance of unethical conduct after long history of unblemished service).

(n222)Footnote 152. See Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 329-330, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; see also Huber v. Standard Insurance Co. (9th Cir. 1988) 841 F.2d 980, 985-986 (employee's affidavit stating verifiable facts contradicting stated reasons for termination raised genuine issue of fact regarding good cause for termination sufficient to avoid employer's motion for summary judgment).

(n223)Footnote 153. See Burton v. Security Pacific National Bank (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 972, 979, 243 Cal. Rptr. 277 ; see also discussion in § 60.06[3].

(n224)Footnote 154. See Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 (jury must assess reasonableness of employer's decision under circumstances known to employer at the time); Burton v. Security Pacific National Bank (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 972, 979, 243 Cal. Rptr. 277 (upholding summary judgment for employer when undisputed facts showed that employer conducted investigation of charges of misconduct against employee and employee failed to produce any evidence showing that employer had lack of good-faith belief that charges were true).

(n225)Footnote 155. For discussion of effect of handbooks and other written policies on definition of good cause, see § 60.05[2]. For examples of handbook provisions defining good cause, see ch. 62.

(n226)Footnote 156. Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 330, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; see Stokes v. Dole Nut Co. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 285, 293, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 ; Moore v. May Department Stores (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 836, 839-840, 271 Cal. Rptr. 841 .

(n227)Footnote 157. Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 743, 250 Cal. Rptr. 195 .

(n228)Footnote 158. See Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 743, 769, 250 Cal. Rptr. 195 .

(n229)Footnote 159. Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 743, 769 770, 250 Cal. Rptr. 195 . For the standard jury instruction on the definition of good cause in an action for breach of employment contract, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2404 (unspecified term); Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2405 (specified term) (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction on the good cause defense in an action for breach of employment contract for a specified term, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2421 (Matthew Bender). For the special verdict form for the good cause defense in an action for breach of employment contract for a specified term, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2403 (Matthew Bender). For the standard jury instruction on the good faith mistaken belief defense in an action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2424 (Matthew Bender). For the special verdict form for the affirmative defense of good faith mistaken belief in an action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2405 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI instructions and special verdict forms generally, see §§ 61.05, 61.06.

(n230)Footnote 160. Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 743, 769, 250 Cal. Rptr. 195 .

(n231)Footnote 161. See, e.g., Gianaculas v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1985) 761 F.2d 1391, 1394-1395 ; Clutterham v. Coachmen Industries, Inc. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1227, 215 Cal. Rptr. 795 ; see also Guz v. Bechtel Nat'l, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 317, 350-352, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 8 P.3d 1089 .

(n232)Footnote 162. See, e.g., Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 (jury question whether employer acted in good faith, after appropriate investigation and honest decision based upon circumstances known to employer at the time); Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1138-1139, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

(n233)Footnote 163. Gianaculas v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1985) 761 F.2d 1391, 1394-1395 .

(n234)Footnote 164. Clutterham v. Coachmen Industries, Inc. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1226-1228, 215 Cal. Rptr. 795 .

(n235)Footnote 165. Gianaculas v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1985) 761 F.2d 1391, 1395 .

(n236)Footnote 166. Clutterham v. Coachmen Industries, Inc. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1227, 215 Cal. Rptr. 795 .

(n237)Footnote 167. Gianaculas v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1985) 761 F.2d 1391, 1395 .

(n238)Footnote 168. Clutterham v. Coachmen Industries, Inc. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1227, 215 Cal. Rptr. 795 .

(n239)Footnote 169. Clutterham v. Coachmen Industries, Inc. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1227, 215 Cal. Rptr. 795 , citing Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1138-1140, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 ; see also Liu v. Amway Corp. (9th Cir. 2004) 347 F.3d 1125, 1138 (summary judgment for employer proper, where there was no evidence to suggest employer's reduction in force was invalid); but see Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 802-803 (employee laid off after plant closing raised triable issue regarding alleged breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing because of employee's lengthy service and employer's failure to follow its own termination policies).

(n240)Footnote 170. Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1138-1139, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

(n241)Footnote 171. Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1139, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

(n242)Footnote 172. Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1139-1140, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 , quoting Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 330, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 ; Moore v. May Department Stores (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 836, 840, 271 Cal. Rptr. 841 .

(n243)Footnote 173. Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1140, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

(n244)Footnote 174. Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1140, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

(n245)Footnote 175. Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412

(n246)Footnote 176. Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall Int'l, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 .

(n247)Footnote 177. Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall Int'l, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 .

(n248)Footnote 178. See generally discussion in ch. 70.

(n249)Footnote 179. Fowler v. Varian Assocs., Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 34, 41-43, 241 Cal. Rptr. 539 .

(n250)Footnote 180. Fowler v. Varian Assocs., Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 34, 241 Cal. Rptr. 539 .

(n251)Footnote 181. Fowler v. Varian Assocs., Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 34, 43, 241 Cal. Rptr. 539 .

(n252)Footnote 182. See Stokes v. Dole Nut Co. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 285, 296, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 .

(n253)Footnote 183. See Stokes v. Dole Nut Co. (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 285, 296, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 .

(n254)Footnote 184. Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 67-68, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 .

(n255)Footnote 185. Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 67-68, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 .

(n256)Footnote 186. Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 67-68, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 .

(n257)Footnote 186.1. Lab. Code § 2924. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements for a claim of breach of employment contract for specified term, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2420 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the special verdict form for a cause of action for breach of an employment contract for a specified term, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2402 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI instructions and special verdict forms generally, see §§ 61.05, 61.06.

(n258)Footnote 186.2. Khajavi v. Feather River Anesthesia Medical Group (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 32, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627 .

(n259)Footnote 186.3. Khajavi v. Feather River Anesthesia Medical Group (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 32, 55-59, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627 (employer was not entitled to have jury instructed under BAJI 10.37 that employer who acts in good faith on honest but mistaken belief that discharge is required by legitimate business reason has not breached contract, where employment contract was for specified term).

(n260)Footnote 187. Sistare-Meyer v. Young Men's Christian Assn. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 10, 16-18, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 ; Abrahamson v. NME Hosps., Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1325, 1329-1330, 241 Cal. Rptr. 396 . See also Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1485 n.4, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 (plaintiff did not challenge holding that because independent contractors are not employees, they lack standing to assert claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy). See, e.g., Varisco v. Gateway Science & Engineering, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1099, 1105-1108 (defendant met its burden of showing plaintiff was independent contractor, not employee, where undisputed facts established that he was independent contractor, not employee, and where single clause in the parties' letter agreement that allowed either party to terminate at will did not transform relationship into employment relationship).

(n261)Footnote 188. Sistare-Meyer v. Young Men's Christian Assn. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 10, 16-18, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (analyzing Cal. Const., art. I, § 8).

(n262)Footnote 189. See Abrahamson v. NME Hosps., Inc. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1325, 1329-1330, 241 Cal. Rptr. 396 .

(n263)Footnote 189.1. Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1485, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 . See also S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Dept. of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal.3d 341, 350-351, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n264)Footnote 189.2. Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1485, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 . See also S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Dept. of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal.3d 341, 351, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 , citing Rest.2d Agency § 220.

(n265)Footnote 189.3. Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1485, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 . See also S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Dept. of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal.3d 341, 350, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 ; Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal.3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 .

(n266)Footnote 189.4. Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1486, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 .

(n267)Footnote 189.5. Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1485, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 . See also S. G. Borello & Sons, Inc. v. Dept. of Industrial Relations (1989) 48 Cal.3d 341, 351, 256 Cal. Rptr. 543, 769 P.2d 399 .

(n268)Footnote 189.6. Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 .

(n269)Footnote 189.7. Ali v. L.A. Focus Publication (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1485-1486, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 791 .

(n270)Footnote 190. Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 740, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 .

(n271)Footnote 191. Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 738, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 , citing Frank v. U.S. West., Inc. (10th Cir. 1993) 3 F.3d 1357, 1364 .

(n272)Footnote 192. Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 738-743, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 .

(n273)Footnote 193. See generally discussion in § 60.01.

(n274)Footnote 194. Bell v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1108-1109, 263 Cal. Rptr. 787 .

(n275)Footnote 195. See generally discussion in § 60.05.

(n276)Footnote 196. Bell v. Superior Court (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1103, 1110-1111, 263 Cal. Rptr. 787 .

(n277)Footnote 197. Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n278)Footnote 198. Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 617-618, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n279)Footnote 199. Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 618-619, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n280)Footnote 200. See Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 619 n.1, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n281)Footnote 201. See Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 618-619, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 .

(n282)Footnote 202. Summers v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. (10th Cir. 1988) 864 F.2d 700 .

(n283)Footnote 203. See Summers v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. (10th Cir. 1988) 864 F.2d 700, 704 708 .

(n284)Footnote 204. See Kristufek v. Hussmann Foodservice Co. (7th Cir. 1993) 985 F.2d 364, 371 ; Wallace v. Dunn Construction Co. (11th Cir. 1995) 62 F.3d 374, 379-380 (decided after McKennon).

(n285)Footnote 205. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ'g Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S. Ct. 879, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 .

(n286)Footnote 206. 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.

(n287)Footnote 207. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ'g Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S. Ct. 879, 883, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852, 860 .

(n288)Footnote 208. McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ'g Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S. Ct. 879, 886, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852, 863-864 .

(n289)Footnote 209. Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 633, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 .

(n290)Footnote 210-292-. [Reserved]

(n291)Footnote 293. See Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 616, 617, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 (commenting that many of the decisions granting summary judgment based on job application misrepresentations had "probably reached the correct result on their facts" and "declin[ing] to adopt a blanket rule that material falsification of an employment application is a complete defense to [an employee's claim].").

(n292)Footnote 294. Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 638-640, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 .

(n293)Footnote 295. See Cooper v. Rykoff-Sexton, Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 614, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 (policy against hiring applicants previously fired by another employer); McKennon v. Nashville Banner Publ'g Co. (1995) 513 U.S. 352, 115 S. Ct. 879, 883, 130 L. Ed. 2d 852 (policy prohibiting removal of confidential documents).

(n294)Footnote 296. Camp v. Jeffer, Mangels, Butler & Marmaro (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 620, 636, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 .

(n295)Footnote 297. Haley v. Dow Lewis Motors, Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 497, 505-506, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352 ; see 11 U.S.C. § 101 et seq. (Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978).

(n296)Footnote 298. See 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(6) (excluding earnings from personal services from bankruptcy estate).

(n297)Footnote 299. Haley v. Dow Lewis Motors, Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 497, 506, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352 .

(n298)Footnote 300. Haley v. Dow Lewis Motors, Inc. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 497, 509, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352 .

(n299)Footnote 301. See, e.g., Castillo v. City of Los Angeles (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 477, 483, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 .

(n300)Footnote 302. Castillo v. City of Los Angeles (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 477, 481, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 , citing Lucido v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 335, 341, 272 Cal. Rptr. 767, 795 P.2d 1223 .

(n301)Footnote 303. See Lucido v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 335, 342, 272 Cal. Rptr. 767, 795 P.2d 1223 (issue "not entirely unnecessary" to judgment in prior proceeding).

(n302)Footnote 304. Castillo v. City of Los Angeles (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 477, 481, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 , citing Lucido v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 335, 341, 272 Cal. Rptr. 767, 795 P.2d 1223 .

(n303)Footnote 305. Castillo v. City of Los Angeles (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 477, 481, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 , citing Knickerbocker v. City of Stockton (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 235, 242, 244 Cal. Rptr. 764 .

(n304)Footnote 305.1. Castillo v. City of Los Angeles (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 477, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 .

(n305)Footnote 306. Castillo v. City of Los Angeles (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 477, 482-483, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 .

(n306)Footnote 307. Castillo v. City of Los Angeles (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 477, 483-484, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 .

(n307)Footnote 308. Palmer v. Regents of the University of California (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 .

(n308)Footnote 309. Palmer v. Regents of the University of California (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 903-910, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 (because employee did not pursue to completion grievance procedures available to her under either employer's personnel policies or procedures for whistle blowing, trial court properly granted employer summary judgment).

(n309)Footnote 310. Shuer v. County of San Diego (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 476, 482, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 776 ; Palmer v. Regents of the University of California (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 904, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 , citing Westlake Community Hosp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 465, 131 Cal. Rptr. 90, 551 P.2d 410 (physician's failure to pursue hospital's internal grievance process barred civil suit for damages based on hospital's purportedly improper denial of staff privileges), see § 62.03[4][a].

(n310)Footnote 311. See Shuer v. County of San Diego (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 476, 482, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 776 ; Palmer v. Regents of the University of California (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 906, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 .

(n311)Footnote 312. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n312)Footnote 313. See Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 905, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 ; Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 . see discussion at [1][f], above.

(n313)Footnote 314. Palmer v. Regents of the University of California (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 906-907, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 .

(n314)Footnote 315. Palmer v. Regents of the University of California (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 899, 908-910, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 567 .

(n315)Footnote 316. Shuer v. County of San Diego (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 476, 481-487, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 776 .

(n316)Footnote 317. Lloyd v. County of Los Angeles (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 320, 326-328, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 .

66 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline

Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.10

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.10 Potential Counter-Claims Against Employee

In one case, the Ninth Circuit held that an employer's counterclaim in the employee's wrongful discharge and discrimination suit that the employee had breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, her duty of loyalty to the employer, and certain statutory duties, was proper on its face and that the counterclaim was not necessarily an unreasonable or frivolous claim.ⁿ¹ The court stated that the district court's imposition of sanctions based on the frivolous nature of these claims was incorrect. However, the court did remand the case to the district court to reconsider its calculation of sanctions because the circuit court agreed that the damage claim for $4.2 million dollars warranted sanctions as an unconscionable attempt to chill the employee from bringing her wrongful discharge claim.ⁿ²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Hudson v. Moore Business Forms, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 836 F.2d 1156, 1160-1162 ; cf. Tonry v. Security Experts, Inc. (9th Cir. 1994) 20 F.3d 967, 973 (affirming judgment for plaintiff rejecting allegation of employee's breach of duty of loyalty).

(n2)Footnote 2. Hudson v. Moore Business Forms, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 836 F.2d 1156, 1162-1164 .

67 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
 CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
 Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.11

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.11 Unclean Hands

In Jacobs v. Universal Development Corp.,ⁿ¹ a California court of appeal addressed the extent to which an employer may use the in pari delicto (unclean hands) doctrine--which prevents a party whose actions were in bad faith with regard to the action in which he or she seeks relief from obtaining such relief--to bar a wrongful discharge public policy action. The court stated that before applying the rule, courts should consider the realities of the situation and the parties' relative fault. In Jacobs, the plaintiff participated in his employer's allegedly illegal rebate program, and was fired when he refused to participate further. The court found that the in pari delicto defense did not apply because the plaintiff merely acquiesced in his employer's scheme because he feared, rightly, that he would be fired for failing to do so.ⁿ² However, the court left open the possibility that the doctrine might apply under different factual circumstances.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Procedure Pleading & Practice Defenses, Demurrers & Objections Affirmative Defenses General Overview Contracts Law Remedies Equitable Relief Unclean Hands Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Jacobs v. Universal Dev. Corp. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 120, 53 Cal. App. 4th 692, 699-703, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Jacobs v. Universal Dev. Corp. (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 120, 53 Cal. App. 4th 692, 699-703, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 .

68 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline

Part A. TEXT

4-60 California Employment Law §§ 60.12 through 60.19

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 60.12[Reserved]

69 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.20

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.20 Legal Texts

California Employers' Guide to Employee Handbooks and Personnel Policy Manuals.

California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Employment Law Termination Discipline.

California Points and Authorities, Employer and Employee, Part I.

California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 21 (Matthew Bender).

California Legal Forms, Ch. 85 (Matthew Bender).

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Ch. 258, Employment Handbooks and Employment Contracts; Ch. 259, Employment At Will; Ch. 260, Promotions and Performance Evaluations; Ch. 261, Terms, Conditions, and Privileges of Employment, and Independent Contractor Status; Ch. 262, Discipline and Discharge, Independent Investigations; Ch. 263, Termination and Severance Agreements; Ch. 264, Layoffs, Reductions in Force and Plant Closings (Matthew Bender).

Larson and Borowsky, Unjust Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, pt. E, subpt. 1.

Advising California Employers, Ch. 17 (Cal. C.E.B. 1997).

Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cal. C.E.B. 1987).

Holloway and Leech, Employment Termination: Rights and Remedies (BNA 1985).

McCarthy, Punitive Damages in Wrongful Discharge Cases (Lawpress 1985).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

70 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline

Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

1-60 California Employment Law § 60.21

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

[Reserved]

§ 60.21[Reserved]

71 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 60 Liability for Wrongful Termination and Discipline

Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-60 California Employment Law § 60.22

AUTHOR: By Joy A. Maulitz, J.D.

§ 60.22 Legal Periodicals

Swe & Sharma, The California Supreme Court Shields Employers from Liability for Adverse Actions Against Marijuana Users, 2008 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 93 (March 2008).

Hermle, Focusing on Issues in Retaliation Trials: The Expert Witness Fight, 2006 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 129 (April 2006).

Cook, The Perils of Workplace Romances and Sexual Favoritism: Miller v. Department of Corrections, 2005 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 327 (September 2005).

Winikow, Revisiting CACI Jury Instructions: The Plaintiff's Perspective, 2005 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 312 (September 2005).

Fochtman & Rosenbaum, Helmer v. Bingham Toyota Isuzu: Overstatements in Recruitment Can Lead to Liability, 2005 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 223 (June 2005).

Boyle, Employment Law Litigation After Foley--A Defense Perspective, 18 Sw. U. L. Rev. 363 (1989).

Brody, Wrongful Termination as Labor Law, 17 Sw. U.L. Rev. 434 (1988).

Davis, The After-Acquired Defense Doctrine: A Dubious Defense in Employment Discrimination Cases, 22 Pepperdine L. Rev. 365 (1995).

Fleischman, Heller & Schley, The Organizational Sentencing Guidelines and the Employment At Will Rule as Applied to In-House Counsel, 48 Bus. Law. 61 (1993).

Grass, Legal Reasoning and Wrongful Discharge Tort Law in California, 26 Cal. W.L. Rev. 69 (1989).

Grodin, Remedying Wrongful Termination by Statute, 10(7) Cal. Lawyer 120 (July 1990).

Grodin, Toward a Wrongful Termination Statute for California, 42 Hastings L.J. 135 (1990).

Jensen, Developments in California Wrongful Discharge Law, 10 Indus. Rel. L.J. 27 (1988).

Jung & Harkness, Life After Foley: The Future of Wrongful Discharge Litigation, 41 Hastings L.J. 131 (1989).

Korn, Collective Rights and Individual Remedies: Rebalancing the Balance After Lingle v. Norge Division of Magic Chef, Inc., 41 Hastings L.J. 1149 (1990).

Levine, Judicial Backpedaling: Putting the Brakes on California's Law of Wrongful Termination, 20 Pac. L.J. 993 (1989).

Lopatka, The Emerging Law of Wrongful Discharge--A Quadrennial Assessment of the Labor Law Issue of the 80s, 40 Bus. Lawyer 1 (1984).

Miller & Estes, Recent Judicial Limitations on the Right to Discharge: A California Trilogy, 16 U.C.D. L. Rev. 65 (1982).

O'Brien, Employment Discrimination Claims Remain Valid Despite After-Acquired Evidence of Employee Wrongdoing, 23 Pepperdine L. Rev. 65 (1995).

Oppenheimer & Baumgartner, Employment Discrimination and Wrongful Discharge: Does the California Fair Employment and Housing Act Displace Common Law Remedies? 23 U.S.F. L. Rev. 145 (1989).

Posner, Yes, There Is Life After Foley, 18 Sw. U. L. Rev. 357 (1989).

Turner & LaPorte, Remaking the Law of Wrongful Discharge, 7(3) Cal. Lawyer 20 (March 1987).

Comment, California Wrongful Discharge Law and the Public Employee, 23 U.C. Davis L. Rev. 117 (1989).

Comment, NLRA Preemption of State Wrongful Discharge Claims, 34 Hastings L.J. 635 (1983).

Comment, Tortious Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing Since Foley: Opportunity or Efficiency, 26 San Diego L. Rev. 73 (1989).

Comment, Tort or Contract: Pigeon-Holing Wrongful Discharge Actions to Apply the Proper Statute of Limitations, 18 Sw. U. L. Rev. 471 (1989).

Note, Defining Public Policy Torts in At-Will Dismissals, 34 Stan. L. Rev. 153 (1981).

Note, Employer Opportunism and the Need for a Just Cause Standard, 103 Harv. L. Rev. 510 (1989).

Note, Implied Contract Rights to Job Security, 26 Stan. L. Rev. 335 (1974).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

72 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims

4-61 California Employment Law 61.syn

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.syn Synopsis to Chapter 61: Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims

§ 61.01 Initial Client Contact and Investigation

[1] Plaintiff

[a] Generally

[b] Initial Contact

[c] Pre-Interview Information and Documentation

[d] Interviewing the Client

[e] Preliminary Investigation

[f] Initial Advice to Prospective Plaintiffs

[2] Defendant

[a] Generally

[b] Initial Contact

[c] Preliminary Investigation

§ 61.02 FORM--Complaint for Damages for Wrongful Termination or Discipline

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

[i] Generally

[ii] Naming the Parties

[iii] Verification

[b] Pleading Public Policy Tort Claim

[c] Pleading Claim for Breach of Contract

[d] Pleading Claim for Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

[2] Form

§ 61.03 Responding to a Wrongful Discharge Complaint

[1] Removal to Federal Court

[a] Generally

[b] Grounds for Removal

[i] Generally

[ii] Federal Question Jurisdiction

[iii] Diversity Jurisdiction

[c] Procedures for Removal

[d] Remand

[2] Demurrer and Answer

[3] Summary Judgment or Summary Adjudication

[a] Tactics and Procedure

[b] Grounds for Motion

§ 61.04 Discovery

[1] Plaintiff's Discovery

[a] Timing and General Considerations

[b] Interrogatories

[c] Request for Production of Documents and Other Tangible Evidence

[d] Depositions

[e] Requests for Admission

[2] Defendant's Discovery

[a] Timing and General Consideration

[b] Interrogatories

[c] Requests for Production of Documents and Other Tangible Evidence

[d] Depositions

[e] Requests for Admissions

[f] Psychiatric Examination

§ 61.04A Exclusion of Evidence

§ 61.05 Jury Instructions

§ 61.06 Verdict Forms

§§ 61.07 through 61.09 [Reserved]

§ 61.10 Legal Texts

§ 61.11 Encyclopedias

§ 61.12 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

By Lawrence J. King, J.D.n* and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.n

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Mr. King is "of counsel" to the firm of Turner & Brorby in San Francisco. His practice emphasizes employment litigation. Previously, Mr. King was an Assistant Attorney General for the State of Texas, where he handled several complex employment discrimination cases; an associate in the firm of Morrison & Foerster in San Francisco, where he represented corporate employers in employment litigation; the Assistant to the Legal Director of the Texas Civil Liberties Foundation, Inc.; and law clerk to the Honorable Barefoot Sanders, United States District Judge for the Northern District of Texas.

(n2)Footnote . Ms. Laporte is an associate with Turner & Brorby, where she specializes in employment law, as well as consumer, civil rights, and civil liberties law. She graduated from Yale Law School in 1982 and clerked for U.S. District Court Judge Marilyn Hall Patel, of the Northern District of California. She has published articles on wrongful discharge and attorney-fee shifting.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

73 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims

4-61 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

Scope

By Lawrence J. King, J.D.n* and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.n SCOPE

This chapter examines the practical considerations involved in bringing and defending against wrongful termination claims. The chapter includes a discussion of the following areas: (1) initial client contact and investigation of wrongful discharge claims; (2) essential elements of a wrongful discharge complaint and factors to consider in deciding what to include in such a complaint; (3) alternative responses to a wrongful discharge claim and the tactical considerations involved in choosing the appropriate response; and (4) discovery plans for both plaintiffs and defendants in wrongful discharge actions. In addition, this chapter contains a form of complaint for wrongful termination and related causes of action.

For detailed discussion of the applicable legal theories for wrongful discharge claims and defenses to such claims, see Chapter 60. For discussion of related tort causes of action, see Chapter 63.

FOOTNOTES:

(n3)Footnote *. Mr. King is "of counsel" to the firm of Turner & Brorby in San Francisco. His practice emphasizes employment litigation. Previously, Mr. King was an Assistant Attorney General for the State of Texas, where he handled several complex employment discrimination cases; an associate in the firm of Morrison & Foerster in San Francisco, where he represented corporate employers in employment litigation; the Assistant to the Legal Director of the Texas Civil Liberties Foundation, Inc.; and law clerk to the Honorable Barefoot Sanders, United States District Judge for the Northern District of Texas.

(n4)Footnote . Ms. Laporte is an associate with Turner & Brorby, where she specializes in employment law, as well as consumer, civil rights, and civil liberties law. She graduated from Yale Law School in 1982 and clerked for U.S. District Court Judge Marilyn Hall Patel, of the Northern District of California. She has published articles on wrongful discharge and attorney-fee shifting.

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

74 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.01

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.01 Initial Client Contact and Investigation

[1] Plaintiff

[a] Generally

The importance of the initial interview with a potential client and a preliminary investigation of a potential client's wrongful termination claims cannot be overemphasized. The initial interview and the preliminary investigation provide the opportunity to screen each case to determine if it is worth bringing, to spot legal or factual barriers to recovery, to identify the need for immediate action when necessary to preserve meritorious claims, to give initial advice to the client, and to frame the initial strategy. Conversely, the failure to undertake an adequate investigation of the merits of an action prior to filing suit may burden the attorney with weak cases that are difficult to resolve and may subject the attorney to sanctions.ⁿ¹

To avoid such consequences, plaintiff's counsel should advise the client at the outset that a thorough analysis and investigation will be required before counsel decides what action should be taken on the client's behalf. Counsel may want to consider charging a potential client an hourly fee or a flat rate to provide an initial evaluation of the potential claims. As discussed below, this service would include a review of the employee's responses to a detailed questionnaire or a chronology prepared by the employee, a review of the documents provided by the employee, an interview with the employee, a preliminary factual investigation of the employee's potential claims, an initial evaluation, and basic advice, such as advice regarding the applicable statutes of limitations.

The exact format of the interview and the preliminary investigation will vary according to an attorney's individual style and the nature of the case. However, the process should include at least the steps discussed in [b]-[f], below.

■ PRACTICE TIP:

A competent "first interview" in a wrongful termination case will generally require at least one hour of the attorney's time to review the facts and explain the "legal framework" to the client. Because of the large number of referrals a plaintiff's attorney in this area may receive, counsel may wish to consider charging an initial consultation fee. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

[b] Initial Contact

Often, an attorney's first contact with a potential wrongful discharge plaintiff consists of a personal visit or a telephone inquiry from the potential client. Some attorneys have their staff screen such visits or calls, while others prefer to handle the initial request for representation themselves. Whoever handles the initial contact should obtain at least the following information: (1) the employee's full name; (2) the employer's full name, and the name of any related or affiliated corporate entities; (3) the full name of any individual whom the employee believes was involved in the decision to take the adverse action against the employee; (4) length of employment; (5) a brief description of what has occurred; (6) a brief description of any disabling injuries that the employee may attribute to the adverse employment action; (7) both the date the employee was notified of the adverse employment action and the date the action occurred or is scheduled to occur; (8) whether any written policies existed that may not have been followed; (9) whether the employee contends that the termination may be a result of refusal to commit an illegal act or other public policy violation; and (10) whether the employee is a union member and, if so, the full name of the union. This information is necessary to determine whether there is a potential conflict of interest that could prevent the attorney from representing the employee. It also will enable counsel to identify any preemption problems and to determine whether immediate action is necessary to preserve any of the employee's potential claims from the running of an applicable statute of limitations. For discussion of the substantive law concerning preemption and statutes of limitation, see Chapter 60.

■ PRACTICE TIP:

As a practical matter, in nearly all cases in which the employee does not have a written employment contract or a strong "public policy" or fraud claim, or if there is not significant longevity of employment, counsel should consider declining the case or limiting the representation to efforts to obtain a good reference or better severance pay. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

[c] Pre-Interview Information and Documentation

After the attorney has determined from the information obtained in the initial contact that there are no obvious reasons why he or she cannot represent the employee and that the attorney is interested in considering the case, an appointment should be scheduled to interview the employee more fully. At the time that the interview is scheduled, the employee should be informed that the attorney will need certain detailed information prior to the scheduled appointment in order to evaluate the employee's claims properly and to determine whether he or she will agree to represent the employee. It is important to make clear to the employee at this juncture that the attorney has not yet agreed to represent the employee, but that the attorney is interested in meeting with the employee to see if the case is potentially successful and whether an agreement to handle the case can be reached. If the attorney intends to charge an hourly rate or a flat fee for doing the initial evaluation of the case, this arrangement should be discussed with the employee at this time. The necessary information may be obtained by having the employee fill out a detailed questionnaire or by having the employee prepare a detailed chronology. In either case, the employee should be requested to provide the following information:

1. Employee's profile:

- a. Name;
- b. Address;
- c. Telephone number;
- d. Age;

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.01

- e. Race;
- f. Sex;
- g. Sexual orientation;
- h. National origin;
- i. Marital status;
- j. Any physical or mental disabilities, or other medical conditions such as pregnancy;
- k. Occupation or business;
- l. Current employer, if any;
- m. Current business address and telephone number.

2. Employee's prior employment history.

3. Profile of the employer:

- a. Name;
- b. Address and telephone number of company's headquarters;
- c. Address and telephone number of location where employee worked, if different than company headquarters;
- d. Nature of business;
- e. Type of business organization (i.e., corporation, partnership, etc.);
- f. Number of employees;
- g. Financial status of company;
- h. Related or affiliated corporate entities (such as parent corporations or subsidiary corporations).

4. Factual background relating to termination:

- a. Date of hire;
- b. Person who recruited or hired employee;
- c. Description of recruitment or hire, including any promises or statements concerning job security or future with the company;
- d. Position at time of hire;

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.01

- e. Salary at time of hire;
- f. Subsequent promotions;
- g. Subsequent salary increases;
- h. Subsequent promises or statements concerning job security;
- i. List of persons to whom employee reported and dates employee was supervised by those individuals;
- j. Description of employee's progress at the company and company's perception of employee's contributions, including any warnings that employee's performance was not satisfactory or any commendations received by the employee;
- k. Any grievances or complaints filed by employee against employer prior to termination;
- l. If employee resigned, reasons for doing so;
- m. If employee was fired, reasons employer gave for firing the employee;
- n. Reason employee believes he or she was terminated;
- o. Factual basis for employee's belief;
- p. List of individuals employee believes were involved in decision to fire employee;
- q. Circumstances of termination, including who was present, what was said, any prior warning;
- r. Position and salary at time of termination;
- s. Date that employee was first notified of termination or tendered resignation; and
- t. Date that termination or resignation was effective.

Before the scheduled interview, counsel should also obtain from the employee whatever documentation the employee has or can obtain concerning the employee's potential claims. These documents include:

1. The employee's entire personnel file, including the employee's employment application, discipline record, performance evaluations, and salary history;ⁿ²
2. The employer's personnel policies, especially those concerning termination, progressive discipline, salary, and benefits;
3. All employee manuals and handbooks;
4. All correspondence and memoranda between the employee and employer, from the time the employer began recruiting the employee up to the present, with special attention to any offer letters, written employment agreements, arbitration agreements, confidentiality and trade secret agreements, union contracts, stock options, bonus plans, the notice of termination or notice of resignation, and documents signed by the employee in connection with the termination;

5. All internal grievances or complaints filed by the employee against the employer, including but not limited to any grievance filed concerning the employee's termination;

6. All documents relating to any charge or complaint that the employee has filed against the employer with a government agency, such as complaints filed with the United States Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH), or the California Labor Commission;ⁿ³

7. All documents relating to any applications for unemployment insurance, workers compensation, or disability insurance or benefits;

8. All letters of reference by the employer;

9. All medical or psychiatric records concerning any condition from which the employee has suffered during his or her employment or as a result of the termination;

10. All written statements the employee has obtained from fellow employees or other potential witnesses;

11. The employee's current resume; and

12. All documentation of the employee's efforts to find another job.ⁿ⁴

[d] Interviewing the Client

Before the initial interview, the attorney should carefully review the questionnaire or chronology prepared by the employee and the documents that the employee has provided. Based on this review, the attorney may find it helpful to prepare a detailed list of questions or topics to discuss with the employee. Such a list should help ensure that counsel obtains all of the information necessary to make an informed decision on the merits of the case.

One of the primary goals of the initial interview with a potential plaintiff in a wrongful discharge case is to assess the employee's credibility and jury appeal, factors which can be determinative of success or failure at trial. For this reason, it is usually best for the attorney to allow the employee to narrate what happened in his or her own words rather than simply to question the employee based upon the list discussed above. When questioning the employee, counsel may wish to vary the style of questions. Sympathetic questions will help counsel build trust and rapport with the client; more challenging "devil's advocate" questions may help reveal how the employee will handle cross-examination. At an appropriate time, counsel should be sure to remind the employee that in order to assess the case accurately and to represent the employee adequately, the attorney must be told the full story--both the good news and the bad. Also, the attorney should explain to the employee the nature and the scope of the attorney-client privilege,ⁿ⁵ and the circumstances under which the privilege is waived.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

Many plaintiff's counsel begin an initial interview with a careful explanation of the attorney-client privilege and the reasons for its existence. This serves the dual purpose of (1) putting the client at ease in what is often a difficult situation and (2) encouraging the client to be as frank, forthcoming and objective as possible in regard to all aspects of his or her employment. By emphasizing that a complete, detailed history of all of the facts--good, bad and ugly--is necessary to an accurate legal "diagnosis" of the problem, clients can be encouraged to disclose important information which they might otherwise be reluctant to mention. Commentary by John M. True, III.

Another objective of the initial interview should be to fill in the basic facts in support of the employee's potential claims and alert counsel to defenses that the employer is likely to raise. It is better to find out early if there are any insurmountable legal barriers, such as statute of limitations or federal preemption, that could defeat the employee's claims, regardless of their factual merit. Therefore, counsel should be sure to determine when the employee received the notice of his or her termination, and advise the employee immediately about the statutes of limitations applicable to his or her potential claims. Counsel should also discuss with the employee his or her union status, if any, and whether there is a binding arbitration provision in the contract of employment to determine whether there are any potential problems concerning preemption. For discussion of these substantive defenses, see Chapter 60.

The interview should also cover the following:

1. The client's entire employment history before and after the alleged wrongful termination;
2. The employee's history with the terminating employer, including any notices by the employer that the employee was an employee at will or any promises of job security, any demotions or promotions, salary increases, decreases, bonuses or failure to meet the necessary goals to be eligible for a bonus, performance reviews, and disciplinary records, warnings, or commendations given to the employee;
3. The circumstances of the termination, including the reasons given by the employer and what the employee believes are the true reasons;
4. The method of termination, including any warning and the manner in which the termination was carried out;
5. Any abusive behavior on the employer's part or deviation from the employer's personnel policies;
6. Whether the termination was part of a general layoff and whether the employer offered to transfer the employee as an alternative to termination;
7. Whether the termination was related to the employee's whistleblowing activities or other conduct by the employee in furtherance of public policy;
8. The employer's treatment of similarly situated employees;
9. Whether the employee was replaced, and if so, by whom;
10. Any negotiations over the termination or discussions of a severance agreement;
11. The employee's knowledge of similar lawsuits by other employees; and
12. The employee's age, race, ethnic status, and other information regarding the plaintiff or others in the company that may relate to possible discrimination claims.

The purpose of going over each of these areas is to be sure that there are facts to establish the essential elements of the employee's potential claims or, conversely, to defeat the defenses that the employer may raise.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

Now that the "after-acquired evidence" doctrine is available to employers to abate, or in some cases even completely defend against wrongful termination claims, it is advisable to review carefully with a potential client all of the possible sources of difficulties in this area. Educational background, work history, resume claims and/or the client's possession of employer documents should be explored.

Commentary by John M. True, III.

Another essential objective of the interview is to assess the damages to which the employee may be entitled if successful. It serves no practical purpose for an employee to prosecute a wrongful discharge claim if the costs of such a suit will be greater than his or her potential recovery. Concerning damages, the interview should cover (1) lost wages and benefits, taking into account how long the employee was likely to continue on the job had the termination not occurred; (2) the employee's efforts to find a new job and the expenses the employee has incurred in that endeavor; (3) the employee's subsequent employment history and earnings; (4) any offer made by the employer to reinstate the employee and what conditions, if any, were placed upon the reinstatement; and (5) any emotional and medical problems related to the termination, as well as any psychiatric and medical treatment received. For complete discussion of recoverable damages in wrongful termination actions, see Chapter 60.

The interview should also cover the employee's objectives and expectations about the outcome of litigation. It is important to be sure that the employee has a realistic view of the litigation process and understands that counsel cannot guarantee a particular result. The employee must also be advised of attorney's fee arrangement and informed that he or she will be responsible for paying the costs incurred in the litigation and, if the employee loses the suit, may be liable for the employer's costs as well.⁶ It is often helpful to find out if the employee has any prior litigation experience or has consulted with other attorneys concerning the termination. If so, it may be advisable to obtain the employee's permission to contact the other attorneys.

Finally, it is important to inquire about potential witnesses, both those who will testify on the employee's behalf and those who the employee anticipates will testify on the company's behalf. Counsel should determine if the employee has discussed his or her termination with these individuals, and should compile a summary (in as much detail as is possible) of what the employee expects the potential witnesses to say. This will greatly assist you in the preliminary investigation of the employee's claims, and serve as a benchmark of the employee's credibility. The interview is also a good time to obtain the names and addresses of any treating physicians, psychiatrists, or counselors that the employee has seen during the relevant period, and a written release authorizing them to disclose otherwise confidential information to the attorney.

[e] Preliminary Investigation

In addition to reviewing relevant documents and interviewing the client, counsel should interview key potential witnesses. It is not uncommon for individuals whom the employee believes to be friendly witnesses to have a viewpoint different from the employee's regarding the reasons for the employee's termination, or to refuse to cooperate out of fear for their own job security. It is best to discover such facts before committing to represent the employee. On the other hand, finding one or two credible witnesses who corroborate the employee's version of the termination greatly enhances the employee's chances of defeating a summary judgment, negotiating a favorable settlement, or eventually convincing a jury of the merits of the employee's claims. Former employees may be more willing to testify on behalf of the terminated employee than employees who still work for the potential defendant, although a friendly witness who is still employed by the potential defendant may have greater credibility. Counsel may wish to obtain signed declarations from friendly witnesses to ensure against future changes of heart, and to preserve their testimony for possible use in summary judgment proceedings. Alternatively, having a third party present at the witness interview will permit impeachment later if necessary, while avoiding any need for the attorney to take the stand.

Before contacting witnesses who work for the employer, counsel should consider the ethical limitation on direct communication with a party who has legal representation. In general, counsel may not communicate with an employee if the subject of the communication is an act or omission of the employee in connection with a matter that may be binding on or imputed to the employer for purposes of civil liability. Counsel also may not communicate with any officer, director, or managing agent of the employer.ⁿ⁷ Although Los Angeles County Bar Association Opinion 410 (1983) and *Mills Land and Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co.*ⁿ⁸ would seem to support a blanket ban on communication with all employees, they appear to conflict with D.I. Chadbourne, Inc. v. Superior Court.ⁿ⁹ Chadbourne held that a defendant corporation's attorney-client privilege does not extend to statements by an employee who was a witness to conduct giving rise to potential liability, but who was neither personally involved with that conduct nor the natural person to be speaking for the corporation to its attorneys.ⁿ¹⁰ The Los Angeles County Bar Association itself repudiated its opinion 410 in its comments dated December 17, 1986 on an earlier version of proposed California Rule 2-100 (then numbered 7-103). Moreover, Mills Land and Water Co. is arguably of limited applicability in that the employee contacted by the attorney in that case was the corporation's former president and was a member of its board of directors when contacted.ⁿ¹¹

One court of appeal has held that the Mills Land decision does not bar ex parte contacts with former employees who are not and were not members of the employer's top management "control group."ⁿ¹² More recently, a court has found that Rule 2-100(B)(2) applies only to current employees so that an attorney may properly contact unrepresented former employees.ⁿ¹³ Finally, in the most recent opinion on this issue, another court has addressed this issue in the context of a motion to disqualify counsel for contacts with present employees prior to beginning litigation.ⁿ¹⁴ At issue was the fact that before filing suit, the plaintiff's counsel had her investigator interview the alleged harasser and two other employees. The court found that the contacts did not violate Rule 2-100, because those individuals were not represented by counsel (notwithstanding defendant's argument that it had in-house counsel) and the suit was not filed until 7 months later.ⁿ¹⁵ Rather, counsel was lauded for making a thorough investigation.ⁿ¹⁶

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Many practitioners assume fault on the part of any attorney who interviews "key witnesses" in actual or potential litigation without securing the permission of the counsel for such individuals. That is not the law. California Rule of Professional Conduct, rule 2-100 indicates that there is nothing ethically wrong with direct (or indirect) contact by an attorney with a party about the subject matter of the attorney's representation unless the attorney "knows" the party to be represented in the matter. In the Jorgensen case, the defendant sought to expand the word "knows" to mean "knew or should have known." The appellate panel declined.

As a practical matter, if an attorney (typically an attorney for a defendant) wishes to avoid the possibility that an opponent will interview important witnesses before the attorney has the opportunity to do so, the solution is to identify and contact all such witnesses as early in a case as feasible. In that contact, the attorney may instruct potential employee witnesses not to speak to any other counsel or investigators about a particular controversy (assuming the authorization of the employer to give that instruction and assuming that the attorney has clearly stated his or her role in the controversy); or the attorney may offer his or her representation in connection with the controversy (assuming proper admonitions regarding joint representation). As Jorgensen specifies, an attorney for a corporation also can "send the other party a letter warning that [its] employees are represented by counsel in the matter, and may not be interviewed under rule 2-100 without the consent of counsel." If no such protections are utilized, the courts will not discipline an attorney who conducts interviews without knowledge that the interviewees are represented.
Commentary by Kirby Wilcox

For additional discussion of ethical limitations on contact with potential witnesses, see California Attorney Practice, Chapter 22 (Matthew Bender).

[f] Initial Advice to Prospective Plaintiffs

Prospective wrongful discharge plaintiffs usually come to an attorney with only a general sense that they have been treated unfairly, and little understanding of the legal strengths and weaknesses of their claims. They must depend on their lawyer to evaluate the legal merits of their case and estimate the likelihood of success. Whether or not the attorney decides to take an employee's case after completing the preliminary investigation and evaluation, the attorney can provide a real service to the employee by giving a basic outline of the law of wrongful discharge and an honest initial evaluation. Otherwise, the employee may pursue the emotionally and financially draining illusion of a successful lawsuit at the expense of getting his or her career and life back on track. At the same time, and in order to avoid misleading the employee or risking malpractice liability, the attorney should be very careful to explain that the evaluation is only preliminary and based on the attorney's own opinion in a legal area fraught with uncertainty. Especially when providing a negative evaluation, the attorney should stress the difficulty of predicting outcomes in this area of the law, and should encourage the employee to seek another legal opinion.

The attorney should also carefully explain applicable statutes of limitations, including those for administrative agencies like the EEOC and DFEH, again explaining any uncertainties and cautioning against waiting until the last minute. If time is running out, some attorneys who decide not to handle a case nonetheless assist the employee in filing a pro se complaint to preserve the employee's rights, giving the employee time to find another attorney.

If the employee has not yet been given notice of termination, but rather fears that termination is imminent, advice is especially important. It is never appropriate to tell an employee to quit. Rather, the attorney should explain the risks of resigning and the difficulty of prevailing on a theory of constructive discharge,ⁿ¹⁷ and should let the employee reach his or her own decision. If the employee chooses to remain on the job, the attorney should caution the employee that, if termination occurs, any subsequent wrongful discharge action will be stronger if the employee can document the conduct of the employer that will support the action. Therefore, the employee should (1) be counseled to document all important events, (2) ask the employer to give reasons for any adverse actions, (3) defend his or her record in writing in response to any criticisms, and see that a copy is placed in the employee's personnel file, (4) exhaust internal grievance procedures, (5) take care not to make admissions (for example, in exit interviews) that may damage the employee's case, and (6) not sign any documents without first consulting an attorney. The employee should also be advised to collect all relevant documents to which the employee is entitled.

Finally, if the attorney does accept the case, all fee and cost arrangements should be fully explained.ⁿ¹⁸

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

In cases in which an attorney has decided to represent a new client, careful attention must be paid to drafting a clear, binding retainer agreement which adequately sets forth the respective duties of each party. The agreement should be written in simple, non-legalistic English so as to put the client on notice of what he or she may expect from the attorney and what is expected in return. Particularly important is advising the client of responsibilities to support the litigation as it goes forward, not only in respect to its cost but in other respects as well. Language such as the following might be used:

The Client warrants that all facts within the Client's knowledge that are material to the dispute which is the subject of this representation have been disclosed to the Attorneys and that no facts--favorable or unfavorable--have been held back from disclosure. The Client understands that the Attorneys are relying on this warranty in agreeing to this representation.

The Client shall keep the Attorneys advised of the Client's address at all times, shall appear on reasonable notice at any and all meetings or other appearances, and shall comply with all reasonable requests of the Attorneys in connection with the preparation and presentation of the Client's claims.

Also, careful consideration should be given to a demand letter at this stage of representation. In almost all cases, such a communication to the other side is useful. Cases which need not be litigated can be settled at the pre-complaint stage either through negotiations between counsel or with the assistance of a mediator. Even where settlement does not follow a demand letter, counsel can often learn useful information about the employer's version of the events leading to the termination, or about the termination itself, by providing the employer with some detail respecting the employee's claims.

Commentary by John M. True, III.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

If the attorney has agreed to conduct an investigation of the client's potential claims and ultimately decides not to take the case, it is strongly advised that a letter be sent to the client advising him or her briefly as to the reasons why the case was declined, applicable time periods for filing administrative claims, and applicable statutes of limitation. This may help avoid future malpractice claims against the attorney. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

[2] Defendant

[a] Generally

A preliminary investigation of a wrongful discharge claim is just as crucial to defense counsel as it is to plaintiff's counsel. A major difference is that often defense counsel already has an established relationship with the client and may even have played a role advising the client prior to the termination. However, whether defense counsel is called upon by an existing client or by a new client, the importance of the preliminary investigation cannot be overestimated. A timely and thorough preliminary investigation can lay the groundwork for a successful defense or a quick and satisfactory settlement by enabling the employer to develop evidence that undermines the factual and legal basis for the employee's claims, and by identifying and rectifying potential problems before they come to the opposing counsel's attention. In addition, a timely and thorough preliminary investigation will enable defense counsel to take an effective deposition of the employee before the employee has the benefit of any discovery.

[b] Initial Contact

When contacted about a potential new case, defense counsel should obtain sufficient information about the employer, the aggrieved employee, and the employee's allegations to be sure that no conflict of interest will ensue that would prevent counsel from representing the client, and that counsel has sufficient expertise to handle the case. Counsel should also ascertain when the employee's suit was filed and served on the employer so that an appropriate response can be filed in a timely manner. For instance, if there are grounds to remove the case to federal court and it is in the employer's interest to do so, a removal must be effectuated no later than 30 days after the employer has received the complaint or other paper from which it may be ascertained that the case is one that is, or has become, removable.ⁿ¹⁹ For further discussion of removal of actions to federal court, see § 61.03[1].

[c] Preliminary Investigation

The preliminary investigation should begin with an analysis of the employee's complaint. Counsel should determine the theory on which each claim is based, and the facts that have been alleged in support of each claim. It is also useful to outline the chronology of events that form the nucleus of the employee's factual allegations. Counsel should also ascertain whether the individuals mentioned in the complaint are currently employees, and which of them are likely to be friendly or hostile. This preliminary analysis will change over time as more information is gathered; however, from the very start it should operate as a blueprint of the case, including the potential strengths and weaknesses of the employee's claims. Based on this preliminary analysis, defense counsel should be able to ascertain whether the case can be removed to federal court based on the information in the complaint,ⁿ²⁰ whether any of the claims are preempted,ⁿ²¹ whether any of the claims are barred by the applicable statute of limitations,ⁿ²² and, finally, whether sufficient facts have been alleged in support of each claim to survive a demurrer.ⁿ²³ Similarly, an initial case analysis will help defense counsel identify who should be interviewed before a response is filed and what questions they should be asked.

Next, defense counsel should investigate the facts of the case. The employer will often have an in-house counsel or a member of its personnel office act as the liaison between defense counsel and the employer. Such a contact within the company can be used effectively to minimize defense counsel's time spent gathering documents and arranging interviews. However, defense counsel should not make the mistake of leaving the preliminary investigation, including interviews of the key percipient witnesses and decision makers, to the in-house counsel or personnel official. Defense counsel should personally evaluate the demeanor of potential witnesses and the credibility of the employer's explanation of the circumstances and reasons for the termination. Additionally, information obtained second-hand or third-hand often becomes distorted as it is passed from person to person. Accordingly, defense counsel should personally review the key documents in the case, including: the contents of the employee's personnel file and the documentation of the reasons for the termination; the employer's personnel policies; any employment contract, union contract, stock option plan, or bonus plan relating to the employee; the employer's files relating to any application made by the employee for worker's compensation or unemployment benefits; and all correspondence with the employee.ⁿ²⁴ Defense counsel should then personally interview the employee's supervisors and co-workers, with special attention given to the individuals who were involved in the decision to fire the employee.

When interviewing company employees, counsel should advise them that all discussions they have with the company's attorney are privileged and confidential. Further, counsel should explain to such employees the circumstances under which they risk waiving that privilege. In particular, they should be advised that they should not repeat what is said during the interviews except when the company's attorney is present or when instructed to do so for the purpose of preparing the company's defense. Counsel must be particularly sensitive in handling co-workers who may be sympathetic to the plaintiff. It is important that counsel win the confidence of potential witnesses so that a full and forthright statement of their knowledge can be obtained. It is also important that counsel play the devil's advocate and test the demeanor and credibility of potential witnesses.

The defense counsel's preliminary investigation should focus on whether the employee's claims can be defeated without reaching the factual merits of those claims and, if not, whether a jury can be convinced that the employee was terminated in good faith for a legitimate business reason and in a fair and reasonable manner. Therefore, it is important that defense counsel be able to answer the following questions at the completion of the preliminary investigation:ⁿ²⁵

1. Are any of the employee's claims expressly predicated on a federal statute that confers jurisdiction on the federal courts (thereby providing an explicit basis to remove the case to federal court based upon federal question jurisdiction)?
2. Has the employee named any defendants who are residents of the state in which the employee has sued or has the employee named any "Doe" defendants (thereby defeating a removal to federal court based upon diversity)?
3. Is there a collective bargaining agreement that covers the employee? If so, does the employee claim that the termination violated the terms and conditions of that agreement? Does the collective bargaining agreement require binding arbitration of employment disputes?
4. Is the employee's employment covered by an individual employment contract? If so, does that contract require binding arbitration of the employee's claims?
5. Was the employee given any written or oral promises concerning how long he or she would be employed or indicating that his or her employment would only be terminated for cause?
6. Does the employer have a written policy setting forth the reasons for which an employee may be terminated or the manner in which a termination should be carried out?

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.01

7. How long was the employee employed by the defendant? What raises, promotions, and commendations did the employee receive?

8. What was the employee's salary and title at the time of the termination?

9. Was the employee's performance periodically evaluated and, if so, how was the employee's performance rated?

10. Was the employee ever disciplined prior to the termination?

11. Did the employee ever file a grievance, complaint, or charge against the employer prior to termination?

12. Who was involved in the decision to terminate the employee? What is their reputation, demeanor and credibility? Do the employer's key witnesses have consistent versions of what occurred?

13. What were the reasons for the termination? Are the reasons documented? Are the reasons consistent with the employer's written policies and past practices, and any individual or union contract governing the employee's employment?

14. When and how was the employee notified of the decision? What was the employee told were the reasons for the termination? Who was present?

15. Was the manner in which the employee was terminated consistent with the employer's written policies and past practices, and any individual or union contract governing the employee's employment?

16. Was the employee's termination consistent with the treatment accorded other similarly situated employees?

17. Did the employee sign any document at the time of the termination that contained a waiver of any claims concerning the employee's employment?

18. Are any of the key witnesses hostile to the employer or likely to testify on the employee's behalf? Do any of them verify the employee's factual allegations?

19. Has the employee filed an internal grievance, an administrative complaint challenging the termination, or a claim for unemployment benefits or workers' compensation? If so, are the employee's allegations and testimony in any such proceeding consistent with the allegations in the judicial complaint? Likewise, are the statements made by any representatives of the employer consistent with the employer's current explanation of the reasons for the termination and the manner in which it was carried out?

20. What is the employee's reputation, demeanor, and credibility?

This list is not intended to be comprehensive. Each case will raise issues in addition to the ones suggested by this list. However, insofar as possible, defense counsel should gather the information necessary to answer these questions before responding to the complaint or taking the plaintiff's deposition.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Plaintiff's counsel and defense counsel may wish to consider the use of letters containing factual and legal arguments as strategic additions to exchanges of wrongful discharge pleadings. Counsel for plaintiff may wish to prepare such letters before or after serving the complaint to achieve a variety of purposes: (1) to alert the defendant to the broad scope of an intended or actual lawsuit; (2) to highlight favorable facts and legal arguments (for example, to alert the defendant to statements by supervisors that the supervisors may not have admitted to the defendant's investigators); and (3) to create pressure in favor of an early settlement. Counsel for defendant may wish to prepare such letters for similar purposes, tailored to the facts and arguments favorable to the defense perspective.

While many counsel for both plaintiffs and defendants have used such letters effectively, they pose a number of risks, including (1) the potential for misstatements of presumed facts and law that provide unintended encouragement for opposing counsel; (2) the disclosure of "free discovery" to the opponent; and (3) the "free" disclosure of the writer's potential litigation theory and strategy. Despite these drawbacks, wrongful discharge cases remain a fruitful area of the law for use of such tactical letters. As fact patterns begin to repeat themselves in case after case, litigation theory and strategy become increasingly predictable, thus rendering moot the fear of "free" information disclosures. Furthermore, because the contents of written settlement offers must be communicated to a client,ⁿ²⁶ and because the recipient counsel may simply give the client a copy of the letter, the writer may effectively reach a party with whom direct communication is otherwise prohibited.ⁿ²⁷ Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. Rules Civ. Proc., Rule 11 (permitting sanctions, including attorneys' fees, when pleading or other paper is filed without a belief--formed after reasonable inquiry--that the pleading or other paper is well-grounded in fact and warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension of existing law); Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 (permitting award of expenses, including attorneys' fees, for bad-faith actions or tactics that are frivolous or undertaken solely for purposes of delay). Code of Civ. Proc. § 128.5 applies to complaints filed prior to December 31, 1994. Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 imposes similar sanctions for complaints filed after January 1, 1995.

(n2)Footnote 2. If the employee does not have a copy of his or her personnel file, counsel should advise the employee to request a copy. Inform the employee that if the employer refuses to provide the employee a complete copy of the file, the employer must at least provide the employee copies of documents signed by the employee, which typically include employment applications, disciplinary notices, and performance evaluations. see Lab. Code § 432. Also, the employer must give the employee an opportunity to inspect his or her personnel file, except for records relating to investigations of possible criminal offenses, letters of reference, and other specified information. see Lab. Code § 1198.5(a), (c). For further discussion of an employee's right of access to personnel files, see ch. 51.

(n3)Footnote 3. The administrative files of the EEOC and DFEH can be particularly helpful, as they typically contain the employer's initial position on the employee's claim and responses to the agency's request for information, workforce statistics, witness interviews, and the investigator's notes. The employee is entitled to examine and copy the files after receiving a right to sue letter or filing a notice of intention to file a civil suit. see EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) §§ 83.4(a), 83.5; Associated Dry Goods Corp. v. E.E.O.C. (4th Cir. 1983) 720 F.2d 804, 811.

(n4)Footnote 4. If the employee has not been keeping records of his or her job search, copies of newspaper advertisements, applications for specific jobs, and rejection letters, the employee should be advised to do so.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Evid. Code §§ 952, 954.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Fed. Rules Civ. Proc., Rule 54(d); Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100.

(n8)Footnote 8. Mills Land & Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 127-129, 230 Cal. Rptr. 461 (decided under former Prof. Rules Cond., rule 7-103, predecessor to current Prof. Rules Cond., rule 2-100).

(n9)Footnote 9. D.I. Chadbourne, Inc. v. Superior Court (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 723, 736-737, 36 Cal. Rptr. 468, 388 P.2d 700 .

(n10)Footnote 10. D.I. Chadbourne, Inc. v. Superior Court (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 723, 736-737, 36 Cal. Rptr. 468, 388 P.2d 700 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Mills Land & Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 127-129, 230 Cal. Rptr. 461 (decided under former Prof. Rules Cond., rule 7-103, predecessor to current Prof. Rules Cond., rule 2-100).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Bobele v. Superior Court (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 708, 713, 245 Cal. Rptr. 144 .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Continental Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 94, 120-121, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Jorgensen v. Taco Bell Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 178 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Jorgensen v. Taco Bell Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 178 .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Jorgensen v. Taco Bell Corp. (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 178 .

(n17)Footnote 17. For discussion of constructive discharge principles, see ch. 60.

(n18)Footnote 18. For discussion of ethical duties regarding fee arrangements, see California Attorney Practice, ch. 10, "Fee Arrangements With Clients." (Matthew Bender).

(n19)Footnote 19. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n20)Footnote 20. See discussion in § 61.03[1].

(n21)Footnote 21. For discussion of preemption as a substantive defense, see Chapter 60.

(n22)Footnote 22. For discussion of the use of statutes of limitation as a defense to a wrongful discharge action, see Chapter 60; for discussion of the use of demurrers in raising a defense based on a statute of limitations, see § 61.03[2].

(n23)Footnote 23. For discussion of the use of demurrers in wrongful discharge actions, see § 61.03[2].

(n24)Footnote 24. For complete list of documents that should be obtained and reviewed by counsel, see § 61.01[1][c].

(n25)Footnote 25. For discussion of the substantive law underlying these questions, see ch. 60.

(n26)Footnote 26. See Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-510.

(n27)Footnote 27. cf. Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100 (attorney ordinarily prohibited from directly or indirectly contacting party known to be represented by counsel regarding subject of controversy, in absence of counsel's consent).

75 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.02

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.02 FORM--Complaint for Damages for Wrongful Termination or Discipline

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

[i] Generally

The form set forth in [2], below, is a complaint for damages for wrongful termination of employment. The complaint can also be used to allege wrongful discipline or demotion. The form complaint alleges the following causes of action: (1) wrongful discharge in violation of public policy (also known as "tortious discharge");ⁿ¹ (2) breach of an implied-in-fact contract;ⁿ² and (3) breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing.ⁿ³ The complaint includes a prayer for damages requesting lost wages and benefits, punitive and emotional distress damages (available on the public policy claims), and attorney's fees (arguably available on the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing claim to the extent incurred to secure benefits due under contract).ⁿ⁴ For complete discussion of the substantive law governing wrongful discharge, see Chapter 60.

Because the facts of each case vary greatly, counsel should carefully tailor the form to the specific case. In addition to the three basic "wrongful discharge" theories for recovery (public policy tort claim, implied contract claim, implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing claim), a number of related tort theories of recovery may be available, depending on the facts of the particular case, such as assault, battery, intentional infliction of emotional distress, negligent infliction of emotional distress, defamation, invasion of privacy, and interference with prospective business advantage.ⁿ⁵ For discussion of related tort theories of recovery, see Chapter 63. For discussion of tort liability for invasion of privacy, see Chapters 50 and 51.

Certain statutory remedies may also be available in particular cases.ⁿ⁶ For complete discussion of related statutory remedies, see Chapters 60 and 63. Causes of action based on these statutes may be added to the complaint when appropriate. Counsel should remember, however, that certain statutory remedies are exclusive and will preempt a common-law wrongful termination based on conduct covered by the statutory remedy.ⁿ⁷ In addition, counsel should bear in mind that previous statutory actions may have a res judicata effect on common law wrongful termination claims. For example, in one case, a federal court judgment in an action based on Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964ⁿ⁸ was res judicata and therefore precluded a subsequent state court action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing.ⁿ⁹

In choosing which causes of action to plead, counsel should carefully weigh whether to allege all possible causes of action or whether to allege only the strongest possible causes of action in light of the facts involved in the case. A "kitchen sink" complaint alleging every possible claim poses a greater risk of expensive and successful demurrers, motions for summary judgment or summary adjudication, and, eventually, jury confusion. Selective pleading of the strongest claims is advisable. However, excessively narrow complaints risk the possibility that the law may change, or that after the complaint is filed counsel will discover that the facts support an unpleaded cause of action better than the cause of action set forth in the complaint.

Counsel should carefully draft the complaint to avoid federal preemption.ⁿ¹⁰ For example, the complaint should not allege that the termination was for the purpose of depriving plaintiff of pension benefits, because such an allegation may trigger ERISA preemption.ⁿ¹¹

The complaint should be factually specific and detailed. This will help to discourage and defeat demurrers, and will impress the judge and opposing counsel with the seriousness of the lawsuit.

[ii] Naming the Parties

Usually the terminated employee will be the sole plaintiff. In rare cases, members of the employee's family may have separate claims, such as loss of consortium or intentional infliction of emotional distress.ⁿ¹² However, unless there are sufficient facts to support the family member's claim for damages in addition to the damages suffered by the employee, the extra time, trouble, and expense of bringing these claims will probably outweigh the benefits.

The key defendant, of course, is the employer. There is, however, a strong presumption that a parent company is not the employer of its subsidiary's employees.^{n12.1} Consequently, in a wrongful termination suit brought by a subsidiary employee, counsel representing the employee should be certain to name the subsidiary corporation, absent strong evidence that the parent corporation exercised day-to-day control over the subsidiary's employment decisions or that it exercised any control over the subsidiary's decisions with respect to the plaintiff.^{n12.2}

Because they are not parties to the employment contract, individual employees are usually not liable for the employer's breach of the employment contract or for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.ⁿ¹³ Moreover, except when a statutory exception applies, an employee or former employee cannot sue other employees based on their conduct, including acts and words relating to personnel actions, whether or not the employees acted within the scope of their employment and regardless of their personal motives.^{n13.1} However, it appears that coemployees are not entirely exempt when it comes to their conduct relating to personnel actions if there is a statutory basis, such as libel, for a suit.^{n13.2}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:.

The fact that the Sheppard court found triable issues of fact as to coemployees' malice^{n13.3} is unfortunate, because the holding seems to automatically bar demurrers of libel claims against coworkers and to force the issue of malice into summary judgment or trial. It would appear far more appropriate to require the plaintiff to specifically present facts in his or her complaint that show that the business interests of the employer were not a motivating factor for the conduct of the individual defendant. Under this test, an individual defendant may not like the plaintiff and may strongly hope that the plaintiff is discharged. However, so long as the individual defendant supplies some business-related information to the employer to support the challenged decision, any other motivations of the defendant would seem irrelevant. Stated otherwise, employees do and do not get along in the workplace--so long as there are business justifications for employment actions, "malice" should not include ill will born of petty jealousies. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Furthermore, unless the supervisor is alleged to be a sexual harasser, supervisory personnel cannot be held individually liable for discrimination under the Americans with Disabilities Act (42 U.S.C. § 12101 et seq.)^{n13.4} or for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy based on violation of the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) (Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.)ⁿ¹⁴ For further discussion of proper party defendants in FEHA actions, see § 43.01[3A].

As a practical matter, individual employees who may be named as defendants are more likely to be "judgment proof," and the jury may be sympathetic towards individual employees who are sued in their individual capacity rather than their official capacity. Finally, naming individual employees may increase their hostility as witnesses. Therefore, it is usually better not to name individual employees as defendants unless it is necessary to destroy diversity, or unless there is a serious possibility that the employee's harmful conduct toward plaintiff will be found to have been outside the course and scope of employment.ⁿ¹⁵ If an individual employee is named as a defendant, the complaint should allege that the employee acted for his or her own purpose and out of "malice and ill will." The complaint should also allege that the employee acted, at least in part, within the course and scope of his or her employment, so that the employer may be held liable on the basis of respondeat superior.ⁿ¹⁶

As a matter of law, only an employer can be liable for the tort of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy.^{n16.1} Thus, someone other than the employer, even someone who allegedly conspired with the employer to discharge the former employee in violation of public policy, cannot be liable for the termination of employment.^{n16.2}

Plaintiff should also name "Doe" defendantsⁿ¹⁷ when he or she does not know the true names and capacities of potential defendants or when plaintiff believes other unknown individuals or companies may be liable (e.g., based on agency or conspiracy).

[iii] Verification

It is not necessary to verify a wrongful discharge complaint, and it is usually better practice not to do so. A verified complaint may pin the plaintiff down prematurely, before he or she has the benefit of discovery. Thus, it provides a fertile source for impeachment of the plaintiff, and may come back to haunt him or her on demurrer or summary judgment. Although a verified complaint in superior court forces the defendant to file a verified answer,ⁿ¹⁸ the same benefit can be obtained by interrogatories and requests for admission.

[b] Pleading Public Policy Tort Claim

The first cause of action in the form set forth in [2], below, seeks recovery of damages for a termination (or other adverse action) in violation of public policy. To state the cause of action, the complaint must allege (1) a public policy; (2) conduct by the employer in violation of public policy, such as termination or other adverse employment action in retaliation for an employee's participation in legally protected activity or refusal to commit an illegal act; and (3) damages resulting from the adverse employment action.ⁿ¹⁹ For complete discussion of the elements of a cause of action for termination in violation of public policy, see Chapter 60.

Counsel should plead the source of the public policy as specifically as possible, whether a statute, constitutional provision, or administrative regulation.ⁿ²⁰ In addition, the California Supreme Court has held that the policy must be one that "affects a duty which inures to the benefit of the public at large rather than to a particular employer or employee," it must have been well-established at the time of the discharge, and the policy must be "fundamental" and "substantial."ⁿ²¹ Furthermore, the policy must be applicable to the defendant.ⁿ²²

If the statute that embodies the public policy also provides a private right of action, the statutory cause of action may in some cases be the exclusive remedy and/or may require exhaustion of administrative remedies. Therefore, if plaintiff can comply with the statutory requirements, such as the shorter statutes of limitation and requirements of exhaustion of administrative remedies, counsel should consider forgoing a common law public policy claim in favor of pleading the statute exclusively. Such a choice may provide counsel with advantages such as less jury confusion, better-developed law, and statutory attorney's fees. For discussion of situations in which a statutory remedy preempts a wrongful discharge action, see Chapter 60. For discussion of statutory remedies for employment discrimination, see Chapters 40-44.

Counsel should specifically allege that the public policy violation claimed was the proximate cause of the discharge or other adverse action.ⁿ²³ If the defendant did not actually terminate plaintiff's employment, but plaintiff resigned as a result of the employer's violation of public policy, the complaint should use the alternative allegations in Paragraph 7 of the form in [2], below, to allege either the action (such as discipline or demotion) taken by the employer, or facts that will support a conclusion that the conditions were so intolerable that a reasonable person would feel compelled to resign, and that the employer had actual knowledge of those conditions.ⁿ²⁴

When plaintiff is seeking emotional distress damages for tortious breach of public policy, the distress should be alleged. However, allegations that the termination caused emotional distress, especially allegations that the plaintiff continues to suffer from symptoms of mental distress, put the plaintiff's mental condition in controversy and may trigger a psychological examination by defendant's expert.ⁿ²⁵ Furthermore, plaintiff's counsel should be wary of potential workers' compensation preemption issues that may be raised if the complaint alleges that the distress resulted from acts occurring during the course of employment.ⁿ²⁶

If plaintiff wishes to seek punitive damages, the allegations in Paragraphs 9 and/or 10 should be used as appropriate to allege any bases for punitive damages,ⁿ²⁷ with particular attention to the allegations that will suffice to impute liability to the employer for conduct actually committed by the employer's agents or employees.ⁿ²⁸ For discussion of punitive damages awards in wrongful discharge actions, see Chapter 60. For discussion of circumstances under which an employer may be held liable for punitive damages based on conduct by its employees, see Chapter 30.

[c] Pleading Claim for Breach of Contract

The second cause of action in the form set forth in [2], below, alleges a breach of the employment contract, specifically a breach of a promise to terminate the employment only for cause. In alleging this cause of action, the complaint should specify whether the contract is written, oral, implied by conduct, or a combination of these types of contracts.ⁿ²⁹ If the contract is written, counsel should quote the contract or attach it as an exhibit. If the contract is oral or implied by conduct, the complaint should allege the specific conduct or representations that the plaintiff alleges are the basis for the existence of a contract.

If the action is not based on an express contract providing that termination must be for cause, plaintiff should allege in Paragraph 12 of the form facts sufficient to overcome the presumption of at will employment embodied in Labor Code section 2922, including as many of the following as possible: specific oral or written assurances of continued employment absent good cause for termination; longevity of service; commendations, promotions, and lack of criticism; the employer's personnel policies or practices (especially those governing discipline and termination); and industry practices regarding job security.ⁿ³⁰ A mere assertion that the employer implied that plaintiff would not be terminated as long as his performance was satisfactory is not sufficient to create an implied in fact contract.ⁿ³¹

If the employer caused the employee to change location by intentional misrepresentations about aspects of the work set forth in Labor Code section 970, the complaint should also allege a cause of action for double damages pursuant to Labor Code section 972. For discussion of those provisions, see Chapter 63.

If the contract was an express contract, either oral or written, counsel should allege in Paragraph 14 the terms of the agreement that plaintiff alleges were breached by the defendant. Paragraph 15 alleges that plaintiff was and is ready to perform his or her obligations under the contract. In Paragraph 16, counsel should allege the circumstances of plaintiff's termination, emphasizing those facts supporting the conclusion that plaintiff was discharged without the good cause required by the contract. Paragraph 17 sets forth the damages suffered as a result of the breach.

[d] Pleading Claim for Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

The third cause of action set forth in the form in [2], below, alleges a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. A complaint for a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the context of an employment contract must allege at least (1) the existence of an employment contract, whether written, oral, or implied by conduct, one term of which is the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (see Paragraph 19), (2) defendant's breach of the covenant (see Paragraph 23 and optional Paragraphs 24 and 25), and (3) plaintiff's resulting damages (see Paragraph 26).

In Foley v. Interactive Data Corp.,³² the California Supreme Court held that a cause of action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in an employment contract is not a tort and, therefore, relief is restricted to contract remedies. The Court, however, did not discuss the elements necessary to state a cause of action for breach of the implied covenant in the employment context. Cases decided before Foley were in disagreement regarding such elements. Thus, the issue remains open.³³

If applicable to the particular facts involved, the complaint should allege that the employee was treated differently from similarly situated employees, that the employer denied the employee the benefit of personnel policies or practices that it afforded to other employees, and any particularly abusive conduct involved in the way plaintiff was terminated.³⁴

For discussion of the substantive issues surrounding the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the employment context, see Chapter 60.

Counsel should be careful not to allege that the reason for the termination was to deprive the plaintiff of benefits (such as pensions), because such an allegation will probably lead to a ruling that the action is preempted by ERISA.³⁵ Other possible preemption "traps" to be avoided in pleading breach of the implied covenant include alleging retaliation for filing a workers' compensation claim and retaliation for union-organizing activities. For further discussion of preemption of wrongful discharge actions, see Chapter 60.

[2] Form Complaint for Damages for Wrongful Termination or Discipline

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES FOR TORTIOUS
[and DOES I through _____],	)	_____ [DISCHARGE or DISCIP-
Defendant[s].	)	LINE or DEMOTION] IN VIOLATION OF PUBLIC

-) POLICY; BREACH OF CONTRACT; BREACH OF ) THE COVENANT OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING[; AND _____ (specify other causes of action, if included, e.g., DEFAMA-TION)]
-

Plaintiff alleges:

1. _____ [Allege capacity and residence of defendant(s), for purposes of venue, e.g., Defendant _____ (name) is, and at all times mentioned herein was, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of California with its principal place of business in _____ County, California].

[2. _____ (Set forth Doe allegations, e.g., Defendants DOES I through _____ were at all times relevant herein _____ (specify capacity, e.g., employees, agents, and/or members of the Board of Directors of defendant _____ (name)). Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities of defendants sued herein as DOES I through _____, inclusive, and therefore sues these defendants by such fictitious names. Plaintiff will pray leave of this court to amend this complaint to allege the true names and capacities when ascertained.]

[3. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that each of the defendants herein was, at all times relevant to this action, the agent, employee, representing partner, or joint venturer of the remaining defendants and was acting within the course and scope of that relationship. Plaintiff is further informed and believes, and thereon alleges, that each of the defendants herein gave consent to, ratified, and authorized the acts alleged herein to each of the remaining defendants.]

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION

(_____ [Termination or Discipline or Demotion] in Violation of Public Policy)

4. From _____ [date], to _____ [date], plaintiff was employed by defendant as a _____ [describe position and duties, e.g., regional sales manager with responsibility for distribution of defendant's products to retailers].

5. _____ [Allege facts showing that defendant's actions were contrary to public policy, or facts showing that plaintiff either exercised rights protected by public policy or refused to act contrary to public policy as ordered by the employer, e.g., On or about _____ (date), defendant's directors, officers, and management proposed that defendant enter into a secret agreement with its competitors, whereby defendant and its competitors would fix the price of certain products distributed to retailers. On or about _____ (date), defendant's vice president of sales and marketing _____ (name), acting within the course and scope of his/her employment, approached plaintiff and asked him/her to contact _____ (name), the sales director for _____ (name), a competing firm, for the purpose of implementing the price-fixing plan. At that time and on subsequent occasions, plaintiff refused to participate in any manner in the plan to engage in price-fixing with competitors].

6. _____ [Allege specific public policy involved with any applicable citations, e.g., The actions defendant ordered plaintiff to engage in would have violated the Sherman Antitrust Act, Title 15 United States Code Sections 1 through 7, and the California Cartwright Act, Business and Professions Code, section 16700 et seq.].

[EITHER]

7. As a proximate result of plaintiff's conduct as described in Paragraph 5, above, and in violation of public policy as set forth in Paragraph 6, above, defendant _____ [name] terminated plaintiff's employment on _____ [date].

[OR]

7. As a proximate result of plaintiff's conduct as described in Paragraph 5, above, and in violation of public policy as set forth in Paragraph 6, above, defendant _____ [name] disciplined plaintiff by _____ [specify discipline imposed, e.g., suspended plaintiff without pay for a period of two weeks from _____ (date) until _____ (date)].

[OR]

7. As a proximate result of plaintiff's conduct as described in Paragraph 5, above, and in violation of public policy as set forth in Paragraph 6, above, defendant _____ [name] demoted plaintiff by _____ [specify action, e.g., reassigning plaintiff to a lower paying position].

[OR]

7. As a proximate result of plaintiff's conduct as described in Paragraph 5, above, and in violation of public policy as set forth in Paragraph 6, above, defendant _____ [name] _____ [specify defendant's conduct toward plaintiff, e.g., verbally harassed plaintiff, changed plaintiff's territory so that far less compensation could be earned, and threatened to terminate plaintiff's employment unless he/she cooperated in defendant's price-fixing plan]. As a result of this treatment, plaintiff reasonably concluded that the conditions of employment were intolerable, and resigned. At all times relevant hereto, defendant _____ [name of employer] [, through his/her/its directors, officers, managing agents, and supervisors,] had actual knowledge of these conditions.

[CONTINUE]

8. As a proximate result of defendant's conduct, plaintiff has suffered harm, including lost earnings and other employment benefits [, humiliation, embarrassment, and mental anguish], all to his/her damage _____ [in the sum of $ _____ or in an amount to be established at trial].

[9. In doing acts set forth above, defendants knew that _____ (specify defendants' knowledge of plaintiff's rights, e.g., the conduct that they would have required of plaintiff was unlawful, and required plaintiff to choose between violating the law and losing his/her job). Notwithstanding this knowledge, defendant despicably subjected plaintiff to cruel and unjust hardship in conscious disregard of plaintiff's rights by _____ (specify facts showing oppressive or cruel and unjust treatment by defendant, e.g., insisting that plaintiff violate the law, and terminating plaintiff's employment when plaintiff refused to do so, and castigating plaintiff in front of plaintiff's co-workers). _____ (When employer is a corporation, add when appropriate: This oppressive conduct was committed by _____ (name of officer, director, or managing agent of corporation), a managing agent of the defendant.) Defendant's conduct warrants the assessment of punitive damages.]

[EITHER]

[10. Defendant _____ (name of employer) employed _____ (name of employee who personally committed act(s) complained of) with advance knowledge of his/her unfitness, and employed him/her with a conscious disregard of the rights and safety of others. _____ (If employer is a corporation, add: The advance knowledge and conscious disregard was by _____ (name of officer, director, or managing agent of corporation), a managing agent of the defendant.)]

[AND/OR]

[10. Defendant _____ (name of employer) _____ (authorized or ratified) the conduct of _____ (name of employee who personally committed act(s) complained of) specified in Paragraph 9 by _____ (specify facts supporting inference of ratification or authorization, e.g., retaining the employee after learning of his/her conduct toward plaintiff and failing and refusing to discipline or reprimand him/her). _____ (If employer is a corporation, add: The (authorization or ratification) was by _____ (name of officer, director, or managing agent of corporation).)]

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION

(Breach of _____ [Implied and/or Express] Contract of Continued Employment)

11. Plaintiff incorporates herein by reference Paragraphs _____ (specify paragraph numbers of relevant allegations in previous cause of action).

12. _____ [Allege facts establishing written, oral, or implied by conduct contract not to terminate without cause, e.g., Plaintiff was employed by defendant for 15 years, consistently received good to excellent performance evaluations and merit raises, was assured on numerous occasions that he/she would not be terminated arbitrarily, and relied on the provisions of the personnel manual (a copy of which is appended as Exhibit _____) regarding the causes for which employees could be discharged to conclude that plaintiff and defendant had entered into an implied contract that plaintiff would not be discharged unless there was good cause to do so].

13. Based on the _____ [(written contract or oral representations and promises) and/or conduct of defendant], as set forth in Paragraph[s] _____, above, plaintiff had an employment contract with defendant that he/she would be employed by defendant so long as his/her performance was satisfactory and that defendant would not discharge him/her without good and just cause.

[14. The terms of the employment contract included, but were not limited to, the following: _____ (specify terms, e.g., defendant would not demote, discipline, or discharge plaintiff without good cause and fair warning, based on objective, reasonable job evaluations of plaintiff).]

15. Plaintiff at all times fulfilled his/her duties and conditions under the contract and has been ready, willing, and able to continue performing them in a competent and satisfactory manner.

16. Notwithstanding the _____ [express or implied] promise to terminate the employment contract only for good cause, on or about _____ [date], defendant terminated plaintiff's employment [or disciplined or demoted plaintiff] _____ [specify facts supporting inference that good cause to terminate, discipline, or demote did not exist, e.g., without specifying any cause for the termination or on the alleged] ground of poor performance, even though plaintiff had received consistently good performance evaluations and had received a merit raise only two months before his/her termination].

17. As a proximate result of defendant's breach of the employment contract, plaintiff has suffered and continues to suffer losses in earnings and other employment benefits, to his/her damage _____ [in the sum of $ _____ or in an amount to be established at trial].

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION

(Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing)

18. Plaintiff incorporates by reference and realleges Paragraphs _____ (specify paragraph numbers of relevant allegations in previous cause(s) of action).

19. The employment agreement referred to above contained an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, which obligated defendant[s] to perform the terms and conditions of the agreement fairly and in good faith and to refrain from doing any act that would prevent or impede plaintiff from performing any or all of the conditions of the contract that he/she agreed to perform, or any act that would deprive plaintiff of the benefits of the contract.

[20. _____ (Allege facts showing long service to employer and existence of employer policies that the employer failed to follow, especially policies or practices providing the employee with prior notice of intended termination or discipline and an opportunity to appeal such actions, e.g., Plaintiff was employed by defendant for 15 years, and reasonably relied on the provisions of the personnel manual (a copy of which is appended as Exhibit _____) regarding the causes for which employees could be discharged and the procedures set forth for such discharges for the expectation that defendant would apply its policies even-handedly to afford plaintiff the protections of those procedures if defendant believed there was cause to discharge plaintiff.]

[21. Plaintiff performed all the duties and conditions of the employment agreement.]

[22. Defendant knew that plaintiff had fulfilled all his/her duties and conditions under the contract.]

23. Defendant breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing under the employment agreement by _____ [discharging or _____ (allege other adverse employment actions or facts giving rise to constructive discharge)] plaintiff intentionally, maliciously, and without probable cause, in bad faith and for reasons extraneous to the contract. _____ [Allege facts showing ill motivation and/or non-job-related reasons for discharge, e.g., In fact, defendant discharged plaintiff, not because of alleged poor performance, but because plaintiff, in good faith and in a reasonable, appropriate, and businesslike manner, had attempted to secure payment of commissions due under the employment agreement. Such motives were retaliatory in nature and extraneous to the employment relationship and were intended to deprive plaintiff of the benefits thereof].

[24. Defendant further breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by violating and failing to follow its own personnel policies by _____ (allege facts showing defendant did not comply with personnel policies, e.g., not providing plaintiff with the written warning of performance deficiency required by its personnel policy before discharge).]

[25. Defendant further breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by depriving plaintiff of _____ (allege facts establishing that the termination deprived the employee of benefits about to accrue, e.g., commissions earned by plaintiff on sales completed before his/her termination and due as soon as the merchandise ordered was delivered).]

26. As a proximate result of defendant's breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, plaintiff has suffered and continues to suffer losses in earning and other employment benefits, to his/her damage _____ [in the sum of $ _____ or in an amount to be established at trial]. As a further proximate result of defendant's breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, plaintiff has incurred reasonable attorneys' fees in attempting to secure the benefits owed him/her under the employment contract. [Allege additional cause of action, if desired and appropriate. See Chapter 63.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant [s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For damages for breach of contract according to proof, including lost earnings and other employee benefits, past and future;
2. For compensatory damages according to proof, including lost earnings and other employee benefits[, costs of seeking other employment] [, and damages for emotional distress, humiliation, and mental anguish];
3. For interest on lost earnings and benefits at the prevailing legal rate from _____ [date];
- [4. For punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct;]
- [5. For reasonable attorney's fees incurred by plaintiff in obtaining the benefits due him/her under the employment contract with defendant;]
6. For costs of suit incurred by plaintiff;
7. For such other and further relief as the court deems proper.

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Procedure Pleading & Practice Pleadings Complaints General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination Remedies General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. For discussion of the considerations involved in pleading this cause of action, see [b], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. For discussion of the considerations involved in pleading this cause of action, see [c], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. For discussion of the considerations involved in pleading this cause of action, see [d], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. cf. Brandt v. Superior Court (1985) 37 Cal. 3d 813, 817, 210 Cal. Rptr. 211, 693 P.2d 796 (plaintiff in insurance bad-faith action could plead reasonable attorney's fees required to obtain policy benefits denied by insurer, as distinct from recovery of fees attributable to bringing of bad-faith suit itself).

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Rulon-Miller v. Int'l Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 254-256, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524 (intentional infliction of emotional distress).

(n6)Footnote 6. See, e.g., Lab. Code § 132a; see also discussion in chs. 20, 60.

(n7)Footnote 7. See discussion in ch. 60.

(n8)Footnote 8. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Gamble v. Gen. Foods Corp. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 893, 896, 280 Cal. Rptr. 457. For a comprehensive discussion of Title VII claims see ch. 43, pt. C.

(n10)Footnote 10. For complete discussion of federal preemption of wrongful discharge actions, see ch. 60.

(n11)Footnote 11. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 1132(e)(1), 1144(a); Velarde v. Pace Mbershp Warehouse (9th Cir. 1997[Ariz.]) 105 F.3d 1313, 1316-1317; (severance package not covered by ERISA because benefit does not "implicate" an "ongoing administrative scheme"); Inter-Modal Rail Emples. Ass'n v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. (1997) 520 U.S. 510, 117 S. Ct. 1513, 137 L. Ed. 2d 763, 769-770 (ERISA section 510 covers rights that vest, e.g., pension benefits, and rights that do not vest, e.g., welfare benefits); Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 137-145, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474 (ERISA preemption of wrongful termination claim alleging employer terminated plaintiff to avoid making contributions because claim "related to" plan); Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 799-800 (wrongful discharge claim preempted, and therefore within jurisdiction of federal courts, to the extent that claim "related to" ERISA plan); see also discussion in ch. 60.

(n12)Footnote 12. See, e.g., Wayte v. Rollins Int'l, Inc. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1, 17, 215 Cal. Rptr. 59 (wife stated claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress by alleging that she relied on representations that son was covered under her husband's policy and coverage was then denied, causing her severe emotional distress).

(n13)Footnote 12.1. Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 738, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454, citing Frank v. U.S. West., Inc. (10th Cir. 1993) 3 F.3d 1357, 1364.

(n14)Footnote 12.2. See Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 738-743, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454.

(n15)Footnote 13. See Cleary v. American Airlines, Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 443, 456, 168 Cal. Rptr. 722, disapproved on other grounds, Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 700 n.42, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373.

(n16)Footnote 13.1. Sheppard v. Freeman (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 339, 342, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 ("[p]ersonnel actions are made for the benefit of the enterprise--the employer, and it is the employer, not the individual employees, that must bear the risks and responsibilities attendant to these actions").

(n17)Footnote 13.2. See, e.g., Sheppard v. Freeman (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 339, 348-349, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 (because libel is statutory action under Civ. Code §§ 43-48.5, former employee could sue other employees based on their allegedly libelous conduct relating to his termination).

(n18)Footnote 13.3. See Sheppard v. Freeman (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 339, 348-349, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13.

(n19)Footnote 13.4. Le Bourgeois v. Fireplace Manufacturing, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1051, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660.

(n20)Footnote 14. Reno v. Baird (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 640, 663-664, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499, 957 P.2d 1333; Le Bourgeois v. Fireplace Manufacturing, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1051, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660; see discussion in Ch. 41.

(n21)Footnote 15. cf. Sanborn v. Chronicle Publ'g Co. (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 406, 411, 134 Cal. Rptr. 402, 556 P.2d 764 (employer may be held liable for defamation if publication was within scope of employment). see § 63.02 (defamation).

(n22)Footnote 16. See generally discussion in ch. 30.

(n23)Footnote 16.1. Khajavi v. Feather River Anesthesia Medical Group (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 32, 53, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627 .

(n24)Footnote 16.2. Khajavi v. Feather River Anesthesia Medical Group (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 32, 53-55, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 627 (ophthalmologist who was brother of anesthesiologist's employer and with whom anesthesiologist had argument about propriety of surgery for patient, could not be liable for discharge of or conspiracy to discharge anesthesiologist from employment in retaliation for advocating medically appropriate care in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 2056, because ophthalmologist had no power to terminate anesthesiologist's employment).

(n25)Footnote 17. See Code Civ. Proc. § 474.

(n26)Footnote 18. See Code Civ. Proc. § 446; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 92(b) (verified answer to verified complaint not required in limited civil cases).

(n27)Footnote 19. See Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 174, 178, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 ; see also BAJI No. 10.42.

(n28)Footnote 20. Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n29)Footnote 21. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 669-670, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 . See also Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 75-80, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 ; Stevenson v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 880, 888-890, 896-897, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888, 941 P.2d 1157 .

(n30)Footnote 22. Jennings v. Marralle (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 121, 135, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 275, 876 P.2d 1074 .

(n31)Footnote 23. See Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 167, 171 n.3, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 (allegations that sole reason for discharge was employee's refusal to commit illegal acts sufficiently alleged proximate cause).

(n32)Footnote 24. See Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1248-1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; see also discussion in ch. 60.

(n33)Footnote 25. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2032(d); (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2032.310, 2032.320 operative July 1, 2005). Vinson v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 833, 840-841, 239 Cal. Rptr. 292, 740 P.2d 404 . but see Doyle v. Superior Court (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1878, 1885-1887, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476 (employee who did not allege continuing emotional distress did not put her mental condition at issue so as to justify mental examination). For discussion of the examination of plaintiff during discovery, see § 61.04[2][e].

(n34)Footnote 26. See Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 ; Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 13-20, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 159-160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 ; Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9-10, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 (plaintiff's emotional distress action was preempted by workers' compensation law, because workers' compensation is exclusive remedy for intentional infliction of emotional distress by employer's work-related conduct when that conduct does not contravene public policy); see also discussion in chs. 20 and 60.

(n35)Footnote 27. See Civ. Code § 3294(a), (c).

(n36)Footnote 28. See Civ. Code § 3294(b).

(n37)Footnote 29. See Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g) (permitting defendant to object to complaint by answer or demurrer when it cannot be ascertained whether contract was written, oral, or implied by conduct).

(n38)Footnote 30. See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 680, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373; Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 327, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917.

(n39)Footnote 31. See Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 304, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 (facts alleged did not support existence of implied contract; court permitted amendment of complaint on remand).

(n40)Footnote 32. See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 663, 700, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373.

(n41)Footnote 33. Compare Cleary v. American Airlines, Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 443, 456, 168 Cal. Rptr. 722 (employee's long service, and existence of employer's procedures for terminating employees, as sufficient to give rise to cause of action for breach of the implied covenant when plaintiff was terminated without cause and without protection of the employer's procedures) with Koehrer v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1155, 226 Cal. Rptr. 820 (breach of implied covenant established if employer asserted existence of good cause to discharge employee without good-faith belief in cause to discharge) and Khanna v. Microdata Corp. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 250, 262-263, 215 Cal. Rptr. 860 (breach of implied covenant established by proof of employer's bad-faith conduct extraneous to contract coupled with intent to frustrate employee's contract rights); see also Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 743, 770, 250 Cal. Rptr. 195 ("Pugh II"; stating elements of cause of action as follows: (1) contract of employment exists; (2) circumstances of termination reveal bad faith; (3) damages caused by bad faith).

(n42)Footnote 34. See Rulon-Miller v. International Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 255, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524.

(n43)Footnote 35. See 29 U.S.C. §§ 1132(e)(1), 1144(a); Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 137-142, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474; Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 799-800 (wrongful discharge claim preempted, and therefore within jurisdiction of federal courts, to the extent that claim "related to" ERISA plan).

76 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.03

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.03 Responding to a Wrongful Discharge Complaint

[1] Removal to Federal Court

[a] Generally

When a wrongful discharge complaint has been filed in state court, one of defense counsel's first considerations should be whether there are grounds to remove the case to federal court and, if so, whether to do so. It is usually in the employer's interest to remove a wrongful discharge suit to federal court. An important advantage for defendants is that the employee must obtain a unanimous jury verdict in order to prevail in federal court (unless the parties agree otherwise).ⁿ¹ In state court, the plaintiff may prevail by convincing 3/4 or more of the jurors.ⁿ² Additionally, it is not uncommon for the employee to waive the right to a jury trial in federal court by inadvertently failing to make a jury demand within ten days after the case has been removed.ⁿ³ Also, federal judges are more likely to be familiar with many of the federal defenses to a wrongful discharge suit, such as preemption. Finally, the United States Supreme Court has instructed federal district and appellate courts to give more serious consideration to dispositive motions.ⁿ⁴

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

Federal courts have generally been found to be a more hostile forum to plaintiffs in wrongful termination suits than California courts. Since in most federal jurisdictions cases are handled on a "single assignment" basis, federal judges are frequently more inclined to consider granting summary judgment than state court law and motion judges might be. Also, case management techniques required by Rules 16 and 26 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and many local federal court rules require early disclosure of substantial amounts of information. Often, this can work to the disadvantage of the plaintiff. Commentary by John M. True, III.

[b] Grounds for Removal

[i] Generally

An employer may remove to federal court any civil action brought in state court that originally could have been filed in federal court.ⁿ⁵ The two most common bases for removing a state wrongful discharge suit to federal court are federal question jurisdiction, discussed in [ii], below, and diversity jurisdiction, discussed in [iii], below.

[ii] Federal Question Jurisdiction

Pursuant to federal statute, "[a]ny civil action of which the district courts have original jurisdiction founded on a claim or right arising under the Constitution, treaties or laws of the United States shall be removable without regard to the citizenship or residence of the parties."ⁿ⁶ Accordingly, if the employee's complaint asserts on its face a federal cause of action, the employer may remove the entire case to federal court, without regard to the citizenship or residence of the parties. For instance, if an employee's complaint includes a claim that he or she was terminated on the basis of race in violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1866,ⁿ⁷ the employer may remove the case to federal court. Further, the court has discretion to exercise pendant jurisdiction over any state law claims asserted in the same case, so long as they arise from the same nucleus of facts as the federal race claim.ⁿ⁸

Not surprisingly, plaintiff's attorneys (who usually prefer state court for the very reasons that defense counsel prefer federal court) often attempt to avoid having their cases removed to federal court by omitting mention of federal claims in their complaint. To the degree that both a state and a federal remedy are available to an employee based on the facts alleged, the employee may choose the state remedy and avoid removal to federal court.ⁿ⁹ For instance, if the plaintiff asserts that his or her employment was terminated for a reason violative of public policy, he or she may choose to sue based on the state law remedy rather than, for example, the Labor Management Relations Act (LMRA), and the action will not be removable to the federal court even though the facts could support an action under the LMRA.ⁿ¹⁰

Although the employee is the master of his or her own complaint, federal jurisdiction may not be avoided by "artful pleading," that is, by omitting from the complaint allegations of federal law that are essential to one or more claims stated therein.ⁿ¹¹ Rather, the determination whether a suit may be removed on the basis of federal question jurisdiction is governed by the judicially created "well-pleaded complaint" rule, which provides that a cause of action arises under federal law only when a federal question would be presented on the face of a properly pleaded complaint.ⁿ¹² On the one hand, under the "well-pleaded complaint" rule a federal court analyzes an ambiguous complaint to determine whether, had the complaint been properly pleaded, it would state a federal claim.ⁿ¹³ On the other hand, the same rule prevents an employer from removing a case to federal court on the basis that the employer intends to raise a federal defense to the claims asserted in the complaint. Thus, the case cannot be removed even if the defense is that a federally created remedy preempts the state-law cause of action stated in the complaint.ⁿ¹⁴

One corollary of the well-pleaded complaint rule, however, is that Congress may preempt claims in a particular area so completely that any civil complaint raising this select group of claims is necessarily federal in character.ⁿ¹⁵ In other words, the preemptive force of the particular federal statute may be so extraordinary that it "converts an ordinary state law claim into one stating a federal claim for purposes of the well-pleaded complaint rule."ⁿ¹⁶

In employment cases, the "complete preemption rule" has been applied primarily when a plaintiff has asserted certain state claims that are preempted by the Labor Management Relations Act (LMRA).ⁿ¹⁷ Section 301 of the LMRA provides:

Suits for violation of contracts between an employer and a labor organization representing employees in an industry affecting commerce ... may be brought in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction of the parties, without respect to the amount in controversy and without regard to the citizenship of the parties.ⁿ¹⁸

The preemptive force of section 301 has been held to be so powerful that it entirely displaces any state cause of action for violation of contracts between an employer and a labor organization. Any such suit is purely a creature of federal law, notwithstanding the fact that that state law would provide a cause of action in the absence of section 301.ⁿ¹⁹ However, the United States Supreme Court has more recently held that a state-law wrongful discharge claim is preempted by section 301 only if the claim requires interpretation of the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ²⁰ The fact that dispute resolution under a collective bargaining agreement and judicial analysis of a state-law claim would require analysis of the same set of facts does not in itself render the state claim preempted, as long as the state-law claim can be resolved without interpreting the agreement itself.ⁿ²¹

The "complete preemption rule" also applies to state-law claims that purport to remedy the violation of pension rights exclusively protected by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA).ⁿ²² For example, the United States Supreme Court has held that ERISA's preemptive effect is so complete that state law causes of action alleging the improper processing of benefits claims may be removed to federal court even if an ERISA preemption defense does not appear on the face of the complaint, as is normally required by the well-pleaded complaint rule.ⁿ²³ The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has applied this principle to a common law cause of action alleging that an employer fired an employee in order to deprive the employee of his retirement benefits.ⁿ²⁴

The Ninth Circuit has ruled that the National Railway Labor Act (RLA),ⁿ²⁵ which governs labor relations for certain railroad and airline employees, does not "completely preempt" state-law claims alleging that employees covered by the RLA were fired in retaliation for exercising rights guaranteed to them under the RLA, so as to require removal to federal court.ⁿ²⁶

For full discussion of federal preemption of wrongful termination actions, see Chapter 60.

[iii] Diversity Jurisdiction

Federal district courts also have original jurisdiction over all civil actions between citizens of different states, between a citizen of a state and citizens or subjects of a foreign state, or between a foreign state as plaintiff and citizens of a state or different states.ⁿ²⁷ The matter in controversy must exceed the sum of $75,000, excluding interest and costs.ⁿ²⁸ This jurisdiction also extends to actions in which a citizen or subject of a foreign state is an additional party.ⁿ²⁹ Title 28 of the United States Code, section 1441(b), provides that when a federal court would have had jurisdiction based on diversity of citizenship, the action may be removed only if none of the parties in interest who have been properly joined and served as defendants is a citizen of the state in which the action is brought. Accordingly, a wrongful discharge action brought in California state court may be removed to federal district court if neither the employer nor any of the named defendants is a citizen of California. For purposes of removal based on diversity of citizenship, the citizenship of any defendants sued under fictitious names is ignored.ⁿ³⁰

Even if the employee names individual defendants who are citizens of the state in which the suit is filed, the case may nonetheless be removed if no valid cause of action is stated against the individual defendants.ⁿ³¹ For example, an employee's co-employees are ordinarily not liable for the employer's breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, as they are not parties to the employment contract.ⁿ³² Thus, if the only cause of action alleged against a resident defendant is a claim that a co-employee breached the implied covenant, it would seem that removal based on diversity of citizenship would be proper.

[c] Procedures for Removal

In order to remove a case to federal court, a defendant must file a notice of removal within 30 days after receiving a copy of the pleading, motion, order, or other paper, from which it could be ascertained that the case is removable.ⁿ³³ However, an action may not be removed on the basis of diversity of citizenshipⁿ³⁴ more than one year after the commencement of the action.ⁿ³⁵ The notice must be filed in the District Court of the United States for the district and division in which the state court action is pending, and the notice must be accompanied by a copy of all process, pleadings, and orders served on the defendant-employer in the state court action. The notice must be signed pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 11, and must contain a short and plain statement of the grounds for removal.ⁿ³⁶ Thus, if the case is being removed based on the court's federal question jurisdiction, the notice should plainly identify the federal cause of action that the employee has asserted on the face of his or her complaint, or demonstrate that the employee's state claims are completely preempted by, for example, the LMRA or ERISA. Similarly, if the removal is based on diversity jurisdiction, the notice should identify all the defendants and demonstrate that none of the defendants named in the state court action is a citizen of California. When a corporation is named as a defendant, the notice should demonstrate that the corporate defendant is not incorporated in California and that neither the corporation's principal place of business nor its corporate headquarters is located in California.ⁿ³⁷ When individuals have been named as defendants, the notice should demonstrate that each of the individual defendants is a citizen of a state other than California.

The notice should also set forth the date the employer received the state court pleading, order, or paper from which it could be ascertained that the case was removable, and should state that the notice for removal is being filed within 30 days thereof.ⁿ³⁸ If removal is sought on the basis of diversity of citizenship,ⁿ³⁹ the notice should also show that removal is being sought within one year after commencement of the action.ⁿ⁴⁰ If there is more than one defendant, the notice should also state that all the defendants that have been served agree to the removal.

Promptly after the notice of removal has been filed in federal court, the employer must give written notice to all adverse parties and file a copy of the notice of removal with the clerk of the state court in which the case was originally filed.ⁿ⁴¹

Once the notice of removal has been properly filed and the state court has been given notice of the removal, the case has been effectively removed, and the state court may proceed no further unless and until the case is remanded.ⁿ⁴² Unless remanded by order of the federal court, the case will proceed as any other case in federal court, and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply.ⁿ⁴³

[d] Remand

If at any time before final judgment it appears that the federal district court lacks subject matter jurisdiction, the court must remand the action.ⁿ⁴⁴ A lack of subject matter jurisdiction may be challenged at any time before final judgment by a motion to remand,ⁿ⁴⁵ and may also be challenged on appeal.ⁿ⁴⁶ Although a litigant may "object" to removal by moving to remand the action to state court, the objection is not preserved unless an interlocutory appeal is filed challenging the order denying remand.ⁿ⁴⁷ If the litigant fails to move for remand and the action is tried on the merits, the remand may be challenged on appeal, but the issue is no longer whether the case was properly removed; it is whether the federal court would have had original jurisdiction had the case been filed in that court.ⁿ⁴⁸

A plaintiff may also request the federal court to exercise its discretion to remand to state court any claim that is separate and independent from the claim that provided the basis for removal, and that would not have been removable but for the joinder with the removable claim.ⁿ⁴⁹ In interpreting the "separate and independent" standard, courts have held that actions for recovery for a single wrong, even if stated as separate causes of actions against different defendants, are not separate and independent.ⁿ⁵⁰ In many cases, the claims included in a wrongful discharge suit will not be separate and independent from the federal claim that provided the basis for removal. For instance, if the basis of the removal was that the termination violated a collective bargaining agreement, all the employee's claims may arise from the same nucleus of common facts surrounding the termination, and therefore not be "separate and independent." On the other hand, if the employee is not covered by a collective bargaining agreement and the basis of the removal is that, after his or her termination, the employer refused to process pension benefits to which the employee was entitled (i.e., an ERISA claim), the other state-law claims may be sufficiently separate and independent to give the federal court discretion to remand the employee's state-law wrongful discharge claims to state court.

If the removal was based on federal question jurisdiction, and the federal claim has been eliminated and only pendent state claims remain to be adjudicated, the federal court may remand the case to state court.ⁿ⁵¹ This may occur, for example, when the employee initially includes a federal claim in his or her suit and later determines that the evidence will not support that claim, or when a summary judgment is granted on the federal claim. However, remand under such circumstances is not mandatory. Once a federal court acquires removal jurisdiction over a case, it also acquires jurisdiction over pendent state claims. Dismissal of the federal claims does not deprive a federal court of the power to adjudicate the remaining pendent state claims. The exercise of this power is discretionary, and the court should consider and weigh the values of judicial economy, convenience, fairness and comity.ⁿ⁵²

If after removal the plaintiff seeks to join additional defendants whose joinder would destroy subject matter jurisdiction, the court may deny joinder, or permit joinder and remand the action to the state court.ⁿ⁵³ Whether to deny joinder or permit joinder and remand the action appears to be within the discretion of the district court.

If remand is sought on the basis of a defect in the removal procedure (rather than on the basis of lack of subject matter jurisdiction), a motion to remand the case must be made within 30 days after the filing of the notice of removal.ⁿ⁵⁴

An order remanding the case may require the payment of just costs and any actual expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred as a result of the removal.ⁿ⁵⁵ A certified copy of the remand order is mailed by the district court clerk to the clerk of the state court. On receipt of the remand order, the state court may proceed with the case.ⁿ⁵⁶

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

Where there is any reasonable basis on which to do so, a motion to remand is advisable. Crowded dockets quite naturally cause federal judges to look askance at defense attempts to drag cases into federal court if they have been properly filed in state court. Commentary by John M. True, III.

[2] Demurrer and Answer

Once the complaint has been served on the employer, defense counsel must decide whether to demur to the complaint, or to answer and defer any attack on the plaintiff's case until a motion for summary judgment.ⁿ⁵⁷ The defendant must demur to or answer the complaint, or both,ⁿ⁵⁸ within 30 days after the date that the complaint was served.ⁿ⁵⁹ A demurrer must be accompanied by a memorandum supporting.ⁿ⁶⁰

Filing a demurrer has both advantages and disadvantages. On the one hand, demurrers take time and money and may serve to educate opposing counsel concerning the developing law of wrongful discharge. Further, many deficiencies in the complaint can be cured simply by filing an amended complaint. On the other hand, it is worthwhile to demur to a complaint containing defects that cannot be cured by amendment, as when a cause of action is barred by a statute of limitations, or when a demurrer will substantially narrow the issues in a "scattershot" complaint.

The grounds for demurrer are set forth in Code of Civil Procedure section 430.10. The demurrer is limited to attacking deficiencies that appear on the face of the complaint, or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice.ⁿ⁶¹ Any objections that do not appear on the face of the complaint may be made by answer,ⁿ⁶² either by denying the material allegation(s) of the complaint,ⁿ⁶³ or by alleging additional facts constituting a defense.ⁿ⁶⁴ All defenses or objections to the complaint are waived if not asserted in either a demurrer or an answer, except lack of subject matter jurisdiction and failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.ⁿ⁶⁵

The most common grounds for demurrer in wrongful discharge cases are:

1. The action is barred by the applicable statutes of limitations;^{n65.1}
2. The exclusive remedy for the allegedly wrongful conduct is established by a state statute, such as the workers compensation law;ⁿ⁶⁶

3. Federal law preempts any state-law remedy;
4. The complaint fails to state a specific, statutory or constitutional basis for a claim that the discharge violated public policy;
5. The complaint does not contain sufficient allegations of fact to state a claim;
6. The plaintiff is collaterally estopped from asserting his or her claim;ⁿ⁶⁷ or
7. The claims for breach of contract and conspiracy do not apply to the individual defendants.

For more detailed discussion of these and other potential defenses, see Chapter 60.

Counsel may also demur for uncertainty, e.g., if it is not clear from the face of the complaint whether the alleged contract is written, oral or implied by conduct.ⁿ⁶⁸ However, demurrers for uncertainty are usually not cost-effective because defects are easily cured.

A motion to strike irrelevant or false matters in the pleadingsⁿ⁶⁹ may be combined with a demurrer. For example, counsel may move to strike claims for emotional distress and punitive damages in actions alleging breach of contract and breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.ⁿ⁷⁰ Counsel may also move to strike claims that have no basis in law or fact, such as assertions of a right to a fair hearing when there is no allegation that an employer policy provides for one.ⁿ⁷¹

For full discussion of procedures regarding demurrers and motions to strike, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Demurrers, Motions to Strike, Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings, and Motions for Nonsuit and Judgment, Parts I and II (Matthew Bender), and California Civil Actions--Pleading and Practice, Chapters 10 and 22, Part C (Matthew Bender). For general discussion of answers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Answers, and California Civil Actions--Pleading and Practice, Chapter 9 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Summary Judgment or Summary Adjudication

[a] Tactics and Procedure

A motion for summary judgment is an invaluable defense tool, as it can resolve the case or at least substantially narrow the causes of action or defenses left for trial. It may also force plaintiff to reveal his or her legal theories and best evidence before trial. However, summary judgment is time-consuming, helps to educate the opponent, and requires careful planning to assemble the uncontested facts through discovery and to bring a properly timed motion.

Summary judgment motions may be brought when there is no merit to the action at all, or there is no defense thereto.ⁿ⁷² The court may grant summary judgment only if all the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.ⁿ⁷³ Alternatively, a party may move for summary adjudication regarding a particular cause of action or defense if the moving party contends that the cause of action or defense has no merit.ⁿ⁷⁴ Defendants may also move for summary adjudication regarding claims for punitive damages, and either party may move for summary adjudication regarding the issue of whether the defendant owed a legal duty to the plaintiff.ⁿ⁷⁵ In determining whether the moving party has met his or her burden of proof, the court must construe the affidavits or declarations of the moving party strictly, and those of the opposing party liberally, and any doubts are resolved in favor of the opposing party.ⁿ⁷⁶ However, the opposing party cannot create a triable issue of fact, thereby avoiding summary judgment, by making a statement in his or her declaration that contradicts an admission in his or her deposition.ⁿ⁷⁷

The basic procedures and requirements for summary judgment and summary adjudication under California law are set forth in Code of Civil Procedure, section 437c.ⁿ⁷⁸ A motion for summary judgment or adjudication in California state court may be made any time after 60 days have elapsed since the first general appearance of the opposing party, but may not be heard fewer than 30 days before the date of trial, unless the court for good cause orders otherwise.ⁿ⁷⁹ Notice of motion and supporting papers must be served at least 75 days before the hearing date, and that time is extended further if served by mail, facsimile transmission, or another method of delivery providing for overnight delivery.ⁿ⁸⁰ Counsel should also note that filing a summary judgment motion too early risks denial on the grounds that plaintiff has not had enough time for discovery.ⁿ⁸¹ The notice of motion must be accompanied by a supporting memorandum.ⁿ⁸²

When moving for summary judgment and/or summary adjudication of issues, counsel should always consult local court rules, which may impose additional requirements. For example, in San Francisco Superior Court, moving papers must be filed at least 15 calendar days before the hearing unless an order shortening time has been granted, and all supporting papers must accompany the notice of motion.ⁿ⁸³ Within 1 day of the filing, an endorsed copy of all motions, oppositions, and responses, including supporting papers, must be lodged with the Law and Motion Clerk.ⁿ⁸⁴ Failure to file this courtesy copy may cause the motion to be taken off the calendar.

Counsel should also be careful to request summary adjudication of individual causes of action or defenses in the notice of motion, as an alternative to summary judgment.ⁿ⁸⁵ Otherwise, the court may deny the entire summary judgment motion even if only one triable issue of fact is raised concerning only one cause of action.ⁿ⁸⁶ Further, counsel should specify with precision the issues that are argued to be without substantial controversy, and frame the issues no more broadly than the evidence will support.ⁿ⁸⁷

The moving party must prepare a separate statement of all material facts that he or she contends are undisputed, followed by a reference to the supporting evidence.ⁿ⁸⁸ Failure to comply with this requirement can, in the court's discretion, constitute sufficient grounds for denying the motion.^{n88.1} The opposing party must file a separate statement that responds to each of the purportedly undisputed facts, indicating agreement or disagreement.ⁿ⁸⁹ The opposing party's statement must also set forth plainly and concisely any other material facts the opposing party contends are disputed, followed by a reference to the supporting evidence.ⁿ⁹⁰ Failure to do so may be grounds for granting the motion for summary judgment.ⁿ⁹¹ All affidavits or declarations in support of or in opposition to the motion must be based on personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant, must set forth admissible evidence, and must affirmatively show that the affiant or declarant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein.ⁿ⁹² However, all objections based on failure to comply with the requirements regarding sufficiency of the supporting affidavits or declarations must be made at the hearing or will be deemed waived.ⁿ⁹³

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Code of Civil Procedure section 437c(g) requires that an order denying summary judgment set forth in the record any issues that the court determines are triable and the evidence proffered in support of and in opposition to the motion as to each issue. Plaintiff's counsel should prepare a proposed order for the judge's signature, along with the papers submitted in opposition to a defense motion for summary judgment. This should also include reference to all triable issues of ultimate fact, including any key issues that were not raised in the motion. This will help assure that the plaintiff's principal objective--causing the trial judge to find triable issues--will be achieved. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

Objections to the opposing party's evidence must be made in writing, and filed and served by 4:30 p.m. on the third court day before the hearing,ⁿ⁹⁴ unless counsel has arranged for a court reporter to be present at the hearing, in which case oral objections may be made.ⁿ⁹⁵ If objections are not made either in writing or orally at the hearing, the objections are waived.ⁿ⁹⁶ The objections must identify the objectionable evidence by page and line number and state the ground with the same specificity as a motion to strike evidence at trial.ⁿ⁹⁷ Prudent counsel should, if at all possible, prepare written objections, as busy superior court judges may not be receptive to last-minute oral objections.

Moreover, counsel should be aware that if a party makes evidentiary objections in reply to opposition papers, those objections are deemed granted for the purposes of the appellate record only if the trial court specifically so indicates in its summary judgment/adjudication order. In the words of a recent opinion: "The trial court's statement that it had considered only the admissible evidence was not an implied ruling sustaining unspecified evidentiary objections. On the contrary ... we must take this statement as an implied overruling of any objection not specifically sustained."^{n97.1}

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Laird^{n97.2} comment upon the record before an appellate court bears special mention. Laird teaches that practitioners should avoid drafting orders sustaining motions for summary judgment/adjudication that tie an award too closely to specific evidentiary rulings. Such narrowly tailored orders may be overturned on appeal, if the appellate panel disagrees with the trial court's treatment of the evidence. The wiser course is to prepare orders that offer alternative analyses. On the one hand, the order can link specific conclusions to specific evidence in the record. On the other hand, the order should also suggest that, even if certain excluded evidence is considered or certain included evidence is ignored, the party drafting the order should prevail. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

If the court grants the motion on the ground that there is no triable issue of material fact, the court must, by written or oral order, specify the reasons for its determination. The order must specifically refer to the supporting and opposing evidence that indicates that no triable issue exists.ⁿ⁹⁸

In a recent case of first impression,^{n98.1} a court of appeal held that even though the only parties to the arbitration agreement were the employee-plaintiff and the employer (and not the individual defendants), the employer was not barred from seeking summary judgment on the basis that all claims against it were subject to arbitration; plaintiff's allegations of nonarbitrable claims against the other defendants did not vitiate the employer-employee arbitration agreement.^{n98.2} The court interpreted the summary judgment statute^{n98.3} as being applicable in circumstances in which one defendant is entitled to judgment even though other defendants are not,^{n98.4} reasoning that to hold otherwise would encourage spurious claims and frivolous litigation by permitting the plaintiff to avoid arbitration merely by naming nonparties to the arbitration agreement, even if the plaintiff had no valid claims against those individuals.^{n98.5}

For additional discussion of procedures for summary judgment and summary adjudication of issues, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537 Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender), and California Civil Actions--Pleading and Practice, Ch. 45 (Matthew Bender).

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

If a defendant has a good-faith belief in the merits of a potential motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, the defendant is strongly advised to file the motion despite the potentially significant cost and despite the potential for losing the motion. Motions for summary judgment serve at least three critical litigation goals for the defendant. First, if successful, they can narrow the scope of the issues at trial, and such narrowing is a key to a strong defense. Defense counsel should be aware that, as court dockets become more crowded with wrongful discharge cases, and as wrongful discharge law becomes clearer, law and motion judges are becoming more willing to grant well-drafted summary judgment motions in full. Second, motions for summary judgment can create strong bargaining leverage while they are pending. Third, a motion for summary judgment is among the defendant's most powerful discovery devices. Even if a plaintiff does not believe that the motion will succeed, the plaintiff cannot be sure of success in opposing the motion. Thus, the plaintiff's opposing memorandum of points and authorities, of necessity, frequently contains a "blueprint" of the plaintiff's trial theory, as well as declarations containing documents and statements not previously revealed in the litigation.

Motions for summary judgment and summary adjudication are technical traps for the unwary in California state court. Code of Civil Procedure section 437c and the various local court rules contain detailed filing requirements, which must be followed to the letter. The better practice is to read Section 437c and the applicable local rules before every filing, no matter how exactly counsel may believe that he or she recalls the filing requirements. Consider, for example, that (1) Code of Civil Procedure section 437c(b) requires a separate statement of undisputed facts, including specific references to attached supporting evidence; (2) section 437c(b) further requires written or oral evidentiary objections, or else such objections are waived; (3) Code of Civil Procedure section 437c(d) requires that affidavits and declarations contain admissible evidence based on personal knowledge and thus may not, for example, contain hearsay; and (4) Code of Civil Procedure section 437c(h) requires the trial court to deny the motion if facts essential to the opposition may exist but cannot then be presented, such as when discovery is not sufficiently complete at the time of the motion. Summary judgment or summary adjudication motions, therefore, require considerable planning with respect to substantive content, technical preparation, and timing. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[b] Grounds for Motion

The same defenses that will support a demurrer (such as expiration of the statute of limitations, failure to exhaust administrative remedies, and exclusivity of a statutory remedy), discussed in [a], above, are also grounds for summary judgment against plaintiff. The distinction between a demurrer and a motion for summary judgment is that a motion for summary judgment may be made when the defects do not appear on the face of the complaint, but can be established by affidavits, declarations, admissions, answers to interrogatories or deposition questions, or matters of which the court may or must take judicial notice.ⁿ⁹⁹ For example, the fact that the terms of employment are governed by a collective bargaining agreement, thereby creating the possibility of a preemption defense based on federal labor law, may not necessarily appear on the face of the complaint, but may be readily established by affidavit or other evidence.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ Such technical defenses often lend themselves to relatively simple, inexpensive, and early motions for summary judgment.

Defendant may also move for summary judgment if the undisputed material facts show that one or more of the essential substantive elements of plaintiff's theory of recovery is lacking. Common grounds for summary judgment raised in wrongful termination actions include the following:

1. Undisputed material facts, such as the express terms of a written employment contract, show that plaintiff was an at will employee, and that cause for discharge was therefore not required (potentially negating a cause of action based on an implied in fact agreement not to terminate except for cause or the implied in law covenant of good faith and fair dealing).ⁿ¹⁰¹
2. Undisputed material facts show that plaintiff was terminated for good cause and in good faith (again negating a cause of action based on an implied in fact agreement not to terminate except for cause or the implied in law covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and possibly a cause of action based on violation of public policy).ⁿ¹⁰²
3. The facts regarding the reason for the discharge are undisputed, and defendant's reasons do not violate any public policy embodied in a statutory or constitutional provision.ⁿ¹⁰³
4. The plaintiff was not in fact discharged, but resigned voluntarily.ⁿ¹⁰⁴

In the case of a public employee suing for wrongful termination, the employer may be able to move for summary judgment on the ground that a public agency, such as a civil service commission, has made an administrative determination of the identical issue.ⁿ¹⁰⁵

For full discussion of these and other substantive principles that may provide potential grounds for summary judgment, see Chapter 60.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Procedure Pleading & Practice Pleadings Answers Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 48.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Code Civ. Proc. § 618.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Fed. Rules Civ. Proc., Rule 81(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Celotex Corp. v. Catrett (1986) 477 U.S. 317, 326, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265, 276 ; see also Matsushita Elec. Ind. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp. (1986) 475 U.S. 574, 585-588, 106 S. Ct. 1348, 89 L. Ed. 2d 538 .

(n5)Footnote 5. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a).

(n6)Footnote 6. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. See 42 U.S.C. § 1981.

(n8)Footnote 8. See United Mine Workers v. Gibbs (1966) 383 U.S. 715, 725, 86 S. Ct. 1130, 16 L. Ed. 2d 218 ; see also Nishimoto v. Federman-Bachrach & Associates (9th Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 709, 714 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Caterpillar, Inc. v. Williams (1987) 482 U.S. 386, 391-392, 107 S. Ct. 2425, 96 L. Ed. 2d 318 ; see Garibaldi v. Lucky Food Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1367, 1373-1375, 1370 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1099 (1985) .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Garibaldi v. Lucky Food Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 1984) 726 F.2d 1367, 1373-1375, 1370-1375 , cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1099 (1985) ; see also Campbell v. Aerospace Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 123 F.3d 1308, 1314-1315 ; (incorporating federal False Claims Act as the source of the public policy violated did not raise a sufficiently substantial disputed question of federal law so as to confer federal question jurisdiction).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Paige v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 857, 861 ; Olguin v. Inspiration Consol. Copper Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 740 F.2d 1468, 1472 ; Schroeder v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1983) 702 F.2d 189, 191 ; Fristoe v. Reynolds Metals Co. (9th Cir. 1980) 615 F.2d 1209, 1214, 1212 .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Caterpillar, Inc. v. Williams (1987) 482 U.S. 386, 391-392, 107 S. Ct. 2425, 96 L. Ed. 2d 318, 331 ; Franchise Tax Bd. v. Laborers Vacation Trust (1983) 463 U.S. 1, 9-11, 103 S. Ct. 2841, 77 L. Ed. 2d 420 ; Gully v. First National Bank (1936) 299 U.S. 109, 112-113, 57 S. Ct. 96, 81 L. Ed. 70 .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Paige v. Henry J. Kaiser Co. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 857, 861 ; Olguin v. Inspiration Consol. Copper Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 740 F.2d 1468, 1472 ; Schroeder v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1983) 702 F.2d 189, 191 ; Fristoe v. Reynolds Metals Co. (9th Cir. 1980) 615 F.2d 1209, 1214, 1212 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Caterpillar, Inc. v. Williams (1987) 482 U.S. 386, 391-392, 107 S. Ct. 2425, 96 L. Ed. 2d 318 ; Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. v. Taylor (1987) 481 U.S. 58, 66, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55 . See also Willy v. Coastal Corp. (5th Cir. 1988) 855 F.2d 1160, 1165-1167 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Caterpillar, Inc. v. Williams (1987) 482 U.S. 386, 391-392, 107 S. Ct. 2425, 96 L. Ed. 2d 318 ; Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. v. Taylor (1987) 481 U.S. 58, 66, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55 . See also Nishimoto v. Federman-Bachrach & Associates (9th Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 709, 713 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. v. Taylor (1987) 481 U.S. 58, 64-66, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55 ; see also Caterpillar, Inc. v. Williams (1987) 482 U.S. 386, 391-392, 107 S. Ct. 2425, 96 L. Ed. 2d 318, 327-328 ; Franchise Tax Bd. v. Laborers Vacation Trust (1983) 463 U.S. 1, 9-11, 103 S. Ct. 2841, 77 L. Ed. 2d 420 ; Avco Corp. v. Aero Lodge No. 735, International Asso. of Machinists & Aerospace Workers (6th Cir. 1967) 376 F.2d 337, 339-340 , aff'd, Avco Corp. v. Aero Lodge No. 735, 390 U.S. 557 (1968) .

(n17)Footnote 17. 29 U.S.C. §§ 141-187; see discussion in ch. 60.

(n18)Footnote 18. 29 U.S.C. § 185(a).

(n19)Footnote 19. Franchise Tax Bd. v. Laborers Vacation Trust (1983) 463 U.S. 1, 9-11, 103 S. Ct. 2841, 77 L. Ed. 2d 420 ; see also Caterpillar, Inc. v. Williams (1987) 482 U.S. 386, 391-392, 107 S. Ct. 2425, 96 L. Ed. 2d 318 (quoting Franchise Tax Bd.); Avco Corp. v. Aero Lodge No. 735, Avco Corp. v. Aero Lodge No. 735, International Asso. of Machinists & Aerospace Workers (6th Cir. 1967) 376 F.2d 337, 339-340 , aff'd, 390 U.S. 557 (1968) (state law does not exist as independent source of private right to enforce collective bargaining agreements); Olguin v. Inspiration Consol. Copper Co. (9th Cir. 1984) 740 F.2d 1468, 1472 (plaintiff's claims for breach of contract, wrongful discharge, and intentional infliction of emotional distress as arising under collective bargaining agreement, and therefore governed exclusively by federal labor law); Fristoe v. Reynolds Metals Co. (9th Cir. 1980) 615 F.2d 1209, 1214, 1212 (complaint's failure to refer to § 301 does not preclude federal jurisdiction over action). See also Abreu v. Svenhard's Swedish Bakery (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1446, 1452-1454, 257 Cal. Rptr. 26 .

(n20)Footnote 20. See Lingle v. Norge Division, Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 409, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410 .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Lingle v. Norge Division, Magic Chef (1988) 486 U.S. 399, 409, 108 S. Ct. 1877, 100 L. Ed. 2d 410, 420-421 ; Balcorta v. Twentieth Century Fox (9th cir. 2000) 208 F.3d 1102, 1110 (section 301 does not preempt claim under Labor Code section 201.5 because determination of issues requires reference to collective bargaining agreement but not interpretation of it); see also Niehaus v. Greyhound Lines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 173 F.3d 1207, 1211-1212 ; (former employee's breach of contract claims against union, based on union official's individual promise that employee would receive union's cooperation in his transfer from management to union position, were not preempted by LMRA and were properly remanded to state court, because even if contract claims could give rise to contract defenses which referenced collective bargaining agreement, meaning of collective bargaining agreement was not in dispute).

(n22)Footnote 22. 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.; see 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a) (ERISA's civil enforcement mechanism); Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 54, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39 (Congress intended 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a) to be exclusive remedy for ERISA rights).

(n23)Footnote 23. Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. v. Taylor (1987) 481 U.S. 58, 63-65, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55 (construing 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1)(B)).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 799 (construing 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(3)); see also Ingersoll-Rand v. McClendon (1990) 498 U.S. 133, 139, 111 S. Ct. 478, 112 L. Ed. 2d 474, 487 (29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(3) preempts wrongful termination action alleging that defendant fired plaintiff to avoid contributing to pension fund; citing Metropolitan Life with approval); Nishimoto v. Federman-Bachrach & Associates (9th Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 709, 713 (claim alleging that plaintiff was fired to prevent her from receiving pension and insurance benefits was preempted by ERISA).

(n25)Footnote 25. 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n26)Footnote 26. See Price v. PSA, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 829 F.2d 871, 876 .

(n27)Footnote 27. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a).

(n28)Footnote 28. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a). For actions commenced before January 17, 1997, the jurisdictional amount was $50,000.

(n29)Footnote 29. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n30)Footnote 30. 28 U.S.C. § 1441(a).

(n31)Footnote 31. See McCabe v. General Foods Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 811 F.2d 1336, 1339 (when plaintiff's failure to state cause of action against only resident defendant is obvious, removal is proper).

(n32)Footnote 32. See Cleary v. American Airlines, Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 443, 455, 168 Cal. Rptr. 722 .

(n33)Footnote 33. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a), (b).

(n34)Footnote 34. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n35)Footnote 35. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n36)Footnote 36. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(a).

(n37)Footnote 37. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332(c) (for purposes of diversity jurisdiction, corporation is deemed a citizen of both state of incorporation and state where principal place of business is located).

(n38)Footnote 38. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n39)Footnote 39. See 28 U.S.C. § 1332.

(n40)Footnote 40. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(b).

(n41)Footnote 41. 28 U.S.C. § 1446(d).

(n42)Footnote 42. See 28 U.S.C. § 1446(d).

(n43)Footnote 43. See Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 81(c).

(n44)Footnote 44. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n45)Footnote 45. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c) (a motion to remand based on any defect other than lack of subject matter jurisdiction must be made within 30 days after the notice of removal is filed); see Jenkins v. United Steel Workers of America (E.D. Pa. 1981) 522 F. Supp. 80, 82 .

(n46)Footnote 46. See Grubbs v. General Electric Credit Corp. (1972) 405 U.S. 699, 702, 92 S. Ct. 1344, 31 L. Ed. 2d 612 .

(n47)Footnote 47. See Nishimoto v. Federman-Bachrach & Associates (9th Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 709, 713 .

(n48)Footnote 48. See Nishimoto v. Federman-Bachrach & Associates (9th Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 709, 712-713 .

(n49)Footnote 49. See 28 U.S.C. § 1441(c).

(n50)Footnote 50. See American Fire & Casualty Co. v. Finn (1951) 341 U.S. 6, 14, 71 S. Ct. 534, 95 L. Ed. 702 .

(n51)Footnote 51. See Nishimoto v. Federman-Bachrach & Associates (9th Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 709, 715 (balance of judicial economy, convenience, fairness, and comity generally points toward declining to exercise jurisdiction over remaining state claims); Ondis v. Barrows (1st Cir. 1976) 538 F.2d 904, 908 (district court in such a situation should either resolve case on its merits or remand to state court).

(n52)Footnote 52. See Nishimoto v. Federman-Bachrach & Associates (9th Cir. 1990) 903 F.2d 709, 715 .

(n53)Footnote 53. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(e).

(n54)Footnote 54. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c). For discussion of removal procedure, see [c], above.

(n55)Footnote 55. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n56)Footnote 56. 28 U.S.C. § 1447(c).

(n57)Footnote 57. See discussion in [3], below.

(n58)Footnote 58. See Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(c) (party objecting to complaint may demur and answer at same time).

(n59)Footnote 59. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 412.20(a)(3), 430.40(a), 585(a).

(n60)Footnote 60. See Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a).

(n61)Footnote 61. Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a); see, e.g., Afuso v. United States Fid. and Guar. Co. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 859, 862, 215 Cal. Rptr. 490 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 430.70 (matters of which court is requested to take judicial notice must be specified in demurrer or in supporting points and authorities).

(n62)Footnote 62. Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(b).

(n63)Footnote 63. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 431.20(a), 431.30(b)(1), (f).

(n64)Footnote 64. See Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2), (g).

(n65)Footnote 65. See Code Civ. Proc. § 430.80(a).

(n66)Footnote 65.1. See, e.g., Gelfo v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 34, 44-46, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 874 (trial court properly determined cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy against disability discrimination was time-barred, where plaintiff's claim for wrongful discharge was not filed until nearly two and one-half years after he ceased being employee).

(n67)Footnote 66. See Lab. Code §§ 3600, 3602(a).

(n68)Footnote 67. When the ground for demurrer is collateral estoppel, counsel must request judicial notice of the ruling in the other forum. see Evid. Code § 452(a), (c)-(e) (grounds for judicial notice).

(n69)Footnote 68. See Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(g).

(n70)Footnote 69. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435(b)(1), 436(a).

(n71)Footnote 70. See Civ. Code §§ 3294 (punitive damages available only in actions not arising from contract), 3300 (limiting damages recoverable for breach of contract); Sawyer v. Bank of America (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 135, 139, 145 Cal. Rptr. 623 ; O'Neil v. Spillane (1974) 45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 159, 161, 119 Cal. Rptr. 245 ; see also Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 663, 700, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 (holding that tort remedies are not available for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing).

(n72)Footnote 71. See Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1140-1141, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 (private employees have no general right to due process hearing).

(n73)Footnote 72. See Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a).

(n74)Footnote 73. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(c).

(n75)Footnote 74. Code Civ. Proc. § 2032(j) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2032.640, 2032.650 operative July 1, 2005).

(n76)Footnote 75. See Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1).

(n77)Footnote 76. Corwin v. Los Angeles Newspaper Service Bureau, Inc. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 842, 851-852, 94 Cal. Rptr. 785, 484 P.2d 953 .

(n78)Footnote 77. See D'Amico v. Board of Medical Examiners (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 1, 21-22, 112 Cal. Rptr. 786, 520 P.2d 10 ; State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co. v. Eastman (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 562, 573, 204 Cal. Rptr. 827 ; see also Foster v. Arcata Assoc., Inc. (9th Cir. 1985) 772 F.2d 1453 , cert. denied, 106 S. Ct. 1267 (1986) (applying Federal Rules of Civil Procedure).

(n79)Footnote 78. A similar procedure for federal courts is codified in Fed. R. Civ. P., rule 56. For a good discussion of the summary judgment procedures used in the federal courts, see Celotex Corp. v. Catrett (1986) 477 U.S. 317, 322-325, 106 S. Ct. 2548, 91 L. Ed. 2d 265 .

(n80)Footnote 79. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a).

(n81)Footnote 80. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a).

(n82)Footnote 81. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(h).

(n83)Footnote 82. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a).

(n84)Footnote 83. See San Francisco Super. Ct. Law & Motion Man., § 16(a).

(n85)Footnote 84. See San Francisco Super. Ct. Law & Motion Man., § 16(d).

(n86)Footnote 85. See Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f) (motion for summary adjudication of cause of action, defense, punitive damage claim, or issue of duty may be made by itself or as an alternative to motion of summary judgment).

(n87)Footnote 86. Homestead Savings v. Superior Court (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 494, 498-499, 224 Cal. Rptr. 554 .

(n88)Footnote 87. See, e.g., San Francisco Super. Ct. Law & Motion Man., § 77(a) (papers supporting motion must include separate statement of all material facts moving party contends are undisputed, with each fact referenced to supporting evidence; court will deny motion for failure to file separate statement).

(n89)Footnote 88. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b).

(n90)Footnote 88.1. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b).

(n91)Footnote 89. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b).

(n92)Footnote 90. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b).

(n93)Footnote 91. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b).

(n94)Footnote 92. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(d); see also Ibarbia v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1330 n.7, 237 Cal. Rptr. 92 (inadmissible evidence can neither support nor defeat summary judgment motion).

(n95)Footnote 93. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(d).

(n96)Footnote 94. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1354(b).

(n97)Footnote 95. See Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1352.

(n98)Footnote 96. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b).

(n99)Footnote 97. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1354(2).

(n100)Footnote 97.1. Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 740, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 .

(n101)Footnote 97.2. Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 740, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 .

(n102)Footnote 98. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(g).

(n103)Footnote 98.1. 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1212, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 (suit for sexual harassment).

(n104)Footnote 98.2. 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1208-1209, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 .

(n105)Footnote 98.3. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(c).

(n106)Footnote 98.4. 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1208-1209, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 .

(n107)Footnote 98.5. 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1209, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 .

(n108)Footnote 99. Compare Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a) with Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b), (d).

(n109)Footnote 100. For discussion of federal labor law preemption, see ch. 60.

(n110)Footnote 101. See, e.g., Cruey v. Gannett Co., Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 364, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (plaintiff was unable to establish triable issue of fact as to implied-in-fact agreement not to terminate except for good cause sufficient to overcome contrary express at will provision in property ownership agreement, despite employer's progressive disciplinary policy and personnel manuals that inconsistently stated employment could/could not be terminated at will); DeHorney v. Bank of Am. Nat'l Trust and Sav. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 459 ; Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 482, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 .

(n111)Footnote 102. See, e.g., Clutterham v. Coachmen Indus., Inc. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1226-1228, 215 Cal. Rptr. 795 ("good cause" established as matter of law when plaintiff laid off as part of general reduction in force required by business conditions). If the motion is based on a claim that good cause existed, plaintiff may counter that the alleged reason for termination was a pretext for the real, improper reason. See, e.g., Rulon-Miller v. Int'l

Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 252 n.6, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524 (whether plaintiff's supposed conflict of interest in dating employee of competitors was true reason for termination was question of fact for jury). A genuine dispute over material facts regarding motive or intent may be sufficient to defeat summary judgment. See, e.g., Breitman v. May Co. Cal. (9th Cir. 1994) 37 F.3d 562, 564-565 (genuine issue of material fact existed regarding whether the falsification of timecards provided good cause for discharge when, although employer had policy prohibiting falsification, employee presented evidence that it was common practice to pay employees for their expenses by adding hours to time cards); Khanna v. Microdata Corp. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 250, 263, 215 Cal. Rptr. 860 (noting, while affirming jury verdict, that the "true reasons for an employee's dismissal, and whether they show bad faith rather than dissatisfaction with services and reflect intentions to deprive the discharged employee of the benefits of the contract, are evidentiary questions most properly resolved by the trier of fact"). An employee's allegations of improper motives based solely on conjecture will not defeat summary judgment. see Crosier v. United Parcel Serv., Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1139, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361. However, defense counsel must introduce declarations affirmatively showing good faith or lose the motion for summary judgment. see Koehrer v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1155, 1171-1172, 226 Cal. Rptr. 820 (summary judgment on implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing claim reversed because defendant failed to introduce evidence of good-faith belief in existence of asserted grounds for discharge); see also Sheppard v. Morgan Keegan & Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 61, 67-68, 266 Cal. Rptr. 784 (summary judgment for employer reversed because employer's supporting declarations were based on conclusions rather than evidentiary facts and failed to show good cause as a matter of law).

(n112)Footnote 103. See Green v. Ralee Eng'g Co. (1998)19 Cal. 4th 66, 75-80, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 ; see also discussion in ch. 60.

(n113)Footnote 104. Note, however, that the plaintiff may avoid summary judgment on this latter ground if he or she sets forth facts in the opposing affidavit demonstrating a triable issue of fact as to whether he or she was "constructively" discharged. see Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; see also discussion in ch. 60.

(n114)Footnote 105. See, e.g., Castillo v. City of Los Angeles (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 477, 481, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 870 , discussed at § 60.90[11].

77 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.04

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.04 Discovery

[1] Plaintiff's Discovery

[a] Timing and General Considerations

The Code of Civil Procedure provides defendants with a window of time after they have been served or have appeared in a case during which plaintiffs may not commence discovery unless the plaintiff, for good cause shown, has received leave of court to do so.ⁿ¹ The statutory "waiting periods" are 10 days for interrogatories, requests for admission, and demands for inspection of documents,ⁿ² and 20 days for notices of deposition.ⁿ³ As a practical matter, these "waiting periods" provide defendants an opportunity to notice and take a plaintiff's deposition before having their own depositions taken. However, if the defendant misses its statutory opportunity to notice plaintiff's deposition first, plaintiff should consider serving defendants with a document request and taking the deposition of at least one key defense witness before the deposition of plaintiff. This will afford plaintiff an opportunity to discover defendant's version of events before plaintiff's own deposition is taken.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

In every case, even the smallest one, it is a very good idea to draft a discovery plan at the same time the complaint is drafted. A "discovery plan" need be nothing more than a list of the material allegations of the complaint (including the essential elements of each cause of action) in one column and the potential sources of proof (e.g., witness testimony, admissions, documents, etc.) of each allegation in an adjacent column. This technique provides a "road map" for the first round of discovery. Then, as the case develops, the discovery plan can be amended and expanded to include new sources of information as they become available. Ultimately, it becomes the trial lawyer's trial notebook. Commentary by John M. True, III.

In most wrongful discharge cases, the heart of plaintiff's discovery is the depositions of employer witnesses, such as the decision makers involved in the discharge, key personnel officials, and co-employees who witnessed the disputed events.ⁿ⁴ An early deposition of at least one of the individuals directly involved in the termination decision permits the plaintiff to tie down the defendants' version of the reasons for the termination before defendants have had an opportunity to establish their defense and smooth over inconsistencies in the key witnesses' testimonies. Further, although serving defendants a set of interrogatories is less expensive and less time-consuming than taking a deposition, interrogatory responses are prepared by defendants' counsel and are, therefore, less useful than depositions except to obtain routine, objective information. For discussion of the uses of interrogatories, see [b], below.

In formulating plaintiff's discovery plan and preparing for depositions, counsel should take full advantage of the information already obtained from his or her initial investigation, as discussed previously.ⁿ⁵ Ideally, plaintiff's counsel would obtain and review key documents before filing suit, including plaintiff's personnel file, correspondence with the employer, and any administrative files from government agencies such as the EEOC. Counsel also should have thoroughly interviewed the plaintiff and talked to key sympathetic witnesses, such as other former employees who are favorably inclined. This information should enable counsel to prepare for an initial deposition and assess what documents and other information are needed, if any, before the deposition. If counsel does not already have the contents of plaintiff's personnel file and other key documents, counsel should consider serving defendants with a request for production of documents before the first deposition.

■ PRACTICE TIP:

By the time discovery is commenced, however, plaintiff's counsel should have carefully reviewed plaintiff's personnel file as part of the pre-screening investigation. It will be "too late" if a well-documented "paper trail" leading up to the discharge is discovered for the first time during discovery. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

Alternatively, to avoid the delay of waiting for a response to a request for production, counsel may include a notice to produce documents in the deposition notice to the initial company witness, requiring him or her to bring the key documents to that deposition.ⁿ⁶ However, this procedure does not provide counsel an opportunity to review the documents in advance of the deposition, and may be thwarted if the defendant either does not produce the documents sought, or produces voluminous documents that counsel cannot carefully review at the deposition.

The initial deposition of one of the defendant's witnesses should be followed up by interrogatories, document requests, further depositions of other witnesses and, finally, requests for admissions. Each of these is discussed below.

For full discussion of discovery procedures, see DeMeo, California Deposition and Discovery Practice; California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Depositions and Discovery (Matthew Bender); and California Civil Actions--Pleading and Practice, Chapter 34 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Interrogatories

Written interrogatories can be useful to get certain basic information, such as the existence of personnel policies, the warnings (if any) given plaintiff before termination, and the names and titles of all persons involved in the termination decision. They may also be useful to follow up on assertions or information obtained in depositions. For maximum effectiveness, interrogatories should usually be combined with requests for production of documents. Although interrogatories may only be directed to parties,ⁿ⁷ this is usually not a disadvantage in wrongful discharge suits because the defendant employer has most of the relevant information. Moreover, the employer has a duty to provide information known to any of its officers or agents, except when the information is equally available to plaintiff.ⁿ⁸ However, interrogatories are answered with the assistance of counsel over a period of weeks (the statutory period of 30 daysⁿ⁹ plus extensions if the interrogatories are served by mailⁿ¹⁰ and any courtesy extensions). Therefore, they are usually less effective than depositions when it comes to probing hotly contested issues or obtaining helpful admissions. Finally, although initially interrogatories may be less expensive than depositions, their cost mounts if foot-dragging and evasive answers necessitate a motion to compel answers or further answers.ⁿ¹¹

A party may serve only 35 interrogatories, without any subparts, unless accompanied by a declaration of necessity signed by the attorney stating why the additional interrogatories are needed.ⁿ¹² However, if additional interrogatories are accompanied by a declaration of necessity, defendant cannot object, but may only move for a protective order on the ground that the number of questions is "unwarranted."ⁿ¹³ The official form interrogatories approved by the Judicial Council do not count toward the 35-interrogatory limit.ⁿ¹⁴ Although many of the form interrogatories are inapplicable to wrongful discharge cases, some of the standard questions, such as those dealing with the status of a business entity, contract formation, damages, witnesses, affirmative defenses, and insurance, may be useful.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

In particular, Form Interrogatory 15.1 requires a defendant to disclose: "all facts upon which you base [a] denial or special or affirmative defense," to specify "the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of all persons who have knowledge of those facts," and to identify "all documents and other tangible things which support your denial or special or affirmative defense," stating "the name, address, and telephone number of the person who has each document." This question can be very useful, allowing a plaintiff to require an answer to what is in effect a blanket contention interrogatory about all of an employer's facts and legal theories. Commentary by John M. True, III.

Counsel should cover the following topics in the initial set of interrogatories served on the defendants:

1. Plaintiff's work history with defendant, including dates, titles and job duties, salary and benefits, promotions, performance reviews, commendations, and criticisms;
2. Personnel policies, manuals, and handbooks, including information on their dissemination to employees and a description of key policies (such as those concerning progressive discipline and termination);
3. Facts surrounding the termination, including who made the decision, the alleged reasons, existence of documentation of the reasons, and the date and the manner that the employee was notified;
4. Identification of percipient witnesses;
5. Information on similarly situated employees;
6. Post-termination discussions by defendant about plaintiff with co-workers or prospective employers;
7. Salary and benefit information pertaining to what plaintiff would have earned if still employed; and
8. Insurance coverage.

■ PRACTICE TIP:

It is crucial to "pin down" the defense regarding all reasons for the termination communicated to the plaintiff, because defendants frequently "dredge up" reasons to justify the termination at trial. Pinning down these reasons during discovery will assist in preparing appropriate in limine motions and in showing the unfairness of the discharge. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

In addition to obtaining basic facts, interrogatories may be used to determine defendant's legal contentions.ⁿ¹⁵ For example, plaintiff may ask whether defendant contends that it could terminate plaintiff without good cause, and request the facts on which defendant bases its contention. Similarly, plaintiff may ask whether defendant contends that plaintiff was fired for poor performance, and ask for the facts and documents that defendant claims support that contention.

[c] Request for Production of Documents and Other Tangible Evidence

Obtaining key documents, like favorable performance reviews or applicable personnel policies that were not followed by the employer, is crucial to plaintiff's case. Conversely, establishing the lack of supporting documentation for the purported reasons for the termination also can be helpful.

Documents may be obtained by a demand for inspection of documents addressed to the defendant (also known as a request for production);ⁿ¹⁶ a notice to produce documents accompanying a deposition notice of a party witness (including defendant's officers, directors, or managing agents);ⁿ¹⁷ or a deposition subpoena to a nonparty.ⁿ¹⁸ When subpoenaing nonparty records, a live deposition is not necessary if only "business records" are sought.ⁿ¹⁹ Regardless of which of the methods listed above is used, the documents sought must be described with reasonable particularity; however, specific information identifiable only to the deponent's record system is not required.ⁿ²⁰ Unlike interrogatories, there is no limit on the number of document requests or inspection demands that may be served. Also, it is often beneficial to serve document requests simultaneously with interrogatories.

Documents that plaintiff should request include:

1. Plaintiff's entire personnel file, including the employment application, discipline record, performance evaluations, and salary and benefit history;
2. The employer's personnel policies in effect during plaintiff's tenure, particularly concerning termination, progressive discipline, salary, and benefits;
3. Employee manuals and handbooks;
4. Documents from which plaintiff's future earnings and benefits if he or she had not been terminated may be calculated;
5. Documents related to plaintiff's performance, such as successful reports prepared by plaintiff, or plaintiff's attendance records;
6. All correspondence and memoranda between employer and employee, including any offer letters, written employment agreements, stock options, bonus plans, notice of termination, and documents signed by the employee in connection with the termination;
7. Any document specifying that plaintiff could be terminated at will;
8. Any documents relating to internal grievance procedures;
9. All documents relating to charges filed by the employee with a government agency (such as the EEOC, DFEH, California Labor Commission, or relating to benefit claims, such as workers' compensation or unemployment insurance);
10. Letters of reference by the employer; and
11. The employer's annual report, if any (for punitive damages purposes).ⁿ²¹

Occasionally, tangible evidence other than documents may be helpful. For example, if the employee's job involved activities such as building models or taking photographs, tangible examples of the employee's work could help to impress the jury with the plaintiff's competence. Counsel should consider requesting inspection of such objects.

The facts of the case may warrant the production of documents in which third parties, such as other employees, customers, or clients, may have an interest. For instance, if the case involves the treatment of similarly situated employees or defendant's conduct toward customers or others, that information may help plaintiff's case, but plaintiff's access is limited by those third parties' rights.ⁿ²²

Plaintiff's right to production of the personnel files of other employees is restricted by those employees' right to privacy under the California Constitution, Article I, Section 1.ⁿ²³ To counter the privacy interests involved, plaintiff must show a compelling public need for the discovery of particular documents (e.g., the relevancy of the information sought to the action), and that the information cannot reasonably be obtained through depositions or from nonconfidential sources. Even if discovery is granted in this context, the scope of the discovery must be narrowly circumscribed.ⁿ²⁴ In addition, a subpoena seeking production of employment records must comply with the requirements of Code of Civil Procedure, section 1985.6, which are discussed in Chapter 51.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

Discovery of the personnel files and/or related information concerning comparators in wrongful discharge/employment discrimination cases is usually vigorously resisted by defendants and frequently leads to energetic motion practice. Quite often, information as to whether a plaintiff has been the subject of disparate treatment is only found by studying the personnel records of other, similarly situated employees. While there are no dispositive cases, so as to develop this crucial area of proof, plaintiff's counsel should be permitted to gather this information, subject to appropriate privacy safeguards set out in a protective order. Judges and discovery referees are more likely to be responsive to narrowly drafted discovery requests seeking only relevant comparative information and accompanied with an appropriately drawn protective order rather than "shotgun" attempts to sweep in information which is clearly extraneous to the issues in the case. Commentary by John M. True, III.

In one case in which the plaintiff's case stemmed from her conduct with respect to the company's bid for a federal contract, the plaintiff sought production of the government bids and related documents. The court held that bid documents already presented to governmental agencies and opened by them are discoverable.ⁿ²⁵

[d] Depositions

Depositions are usually the most important discovery tool in wrongful discharge cases. Plaintiff can accomplish multiple purposes through depositions: (1) uncover the basic facts, (2) elicit favorable admissions, (3) avoid unpleasant surprises at trial, (4) assemble evidence to defeat summary judgment (or, less frequently, to move for summary judgment), (5) pin down defense witnesses so they cannot change their testimony at trial without risking impeachment, (6) assess witness credibility, and (7) preserve favorable testimony when the witness will not be available. At the same time, depositions are expensive and time-consuming, so it is important to assess carefully which depositions are really necessary. Finally, timing of depositions is especially important because natural persons (including parties) may only be deposed once, absent a court order based on a showing of good cause or a stipulation of the parties, including the consent of the deponent if the deponent is not a party.ⁿ²⁶

The most important depositions for plaintiff usually are those of the key decision makers, including the officials who recommended termination, and those who approved or ratified the decision to terminate plaintiff (particularly if plaintiff seeks punitive damages). It is important to act quickly to identify the alleged reasons for the termination. Often, inconsistencies between the reasons provided to plaintiff and the real reasons, discrepancies between witnesses, or the lack of supporting documentation are the employer's "Achilles' heel." For example, plaintiff may be able to show that the employer gave one reason to plaintiff at the time of his discharge, another to the EEOC prior to litigation, and yet a third in deposition by defendant's key witnesses.

Additionally, it is often useful to depose a responsible personnel official about personnel practices and the way written personnel policies are applied, especially if the official was consulted concerning the termination. Although written personnel policies may seem clear on their face, deposing personnel officials will help prepare plaintiff's counsel for unexpected interpretations of the policies and the claim that, in practice, the policies were not generally followed but subject to numerous unwritten exceptions. The deposition will also allow counsel to explore whether the employer applied the policies consistently to similarly situated employees. In addition, personnel officials with a reputation for treating employees fairly will, on occasion, candidly concede the importance of adherence to company rules, such as progressive discipline and shortcomings in the company's handling of plaintiff's termination. Conversely, some company personnel officials are so defense-oriented that they commit themselves to weak or extreme positions that may find little favor with the jury, and may provide a basis for effective impeachment.

Also, plaintiff's counsel should either depose or talk informally to other important percipient witnesses, such as co-workers who overheard key statements, or any supervisors who may have disagreed with the decision. However, counsel should be mindful of possible ethical limitations on ex parte interviews of defendant's employees. For discussion, see § 61.01[1][e].

[e] Requests for Admission

Any party may request in writing that the other party admit the genuineness of specified documents, or the truth of specified matters of fact, opinion relating to fact, or application of law to fact.ⁿ²⁷

Requests for admission are useful in that they may avoid wasteful expenditure of time and effort necessary to authenticate relevant documents whose genuineness is not in doubt or to establish facts that are not disputed by the parties. Thus, for example, plaintiff's counsel should request that defendant employer admit the genuineness of employee handbooks, performance evaluations, or any other document that he or she may wish to introduce as evidence at trial.

Requests for admission are not limited to undisputed facts and may relate to matters that are in controversy between the parties.ⁿ²⁸ Responses to requests for admission may serve as a basis for summary judgment or summary adjudication of issuesⁿ²⁹ and help narrow the scope of trial to those factual and legal issues that are genuinely and reasonably disputed by the parties. Any matter admitted in response to a request for admission is conclusively established against the party making the admission for purposes of the pending action, unless the court has permitted withdrawal or amendment of the admission as provided by statute.ⁿ³⁰ If a party fails to admit the genuineness of a document or the truth of any matter when requested to do so pursuant to a proper request, and the requesting party thereafter proves the genuineness of the document or the truth of the matter, the party requesting the admission may move the court for an order requiring the answering party to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred in making that proof.ⁿ³¹ The court must grant the order unless it finds that (1) an objection to the request was sustained or a response to the request was waived by the requesting party, (2) the admission sought was of no substantial importance, (3) the party failing to make the admission had reasonable ground to believe that the party would prevail on the matter, or (4) there was other good reason for the failure to admit the matter.ⁿ³²

No party may request, as a matter of right, more than 35 requests for admission, except that requests for the admission of genuineness of documents are unlimited, except as justice requires to protect the responding party from unwarranted annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden and expense.ⁿ³³ However, as in the case of interrogatories, an attorney may attach a declaration in a prescribed form stating that additional admissions are necessary due to the complexity of the case or quantity of existing and potential issues in the particular case.ⁿ³⁴ If the declaration is attached, the other party must respond to the additional requests unless the responding party successfully moves for a protective order limiting the responding party's obligation to respond.ⁿ³⁵ The requests must conform to certain format requirements.ⁿ³⁶

■ PRACTICE TIP:

An effective method to "flush out" key defense contentions is to serve a companion set of interrogatories inquiring into the factual basis, witnesses, and documents in support of any denials or conditional admissions. Commentary by William M. Crosby.

A party on whom requests for admission have been served must serve responses within 30 days after the requests were served, unless the time is extended as provided by statute.ⁿ³⁷ If a party fails to serve timely responses to requests for admission, the requesting party may move for an order that the genuineness of any documents and the truth of any matters specified in the requests be deemed admitted, as well as for monetary sanctions.ⁿ³⁸ Responses to requests must be complete and straightforward and comply with the other requirements set forth in Code of Civil Procedure section 2033(f) and (g) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2033.040, 2033.080 operative July 1, 2005).

[2] Defendant's Discovery[a] Timing and General Consideration

The California Code of Civil Procedure prohibits a plaintiff from serving defendants with interrogatories, demands for inspection of documents, and requests for admission until at least 10 days after the defendants have been served or appeared in a case,ⁿ³⁹ and from serving defendants with notices of deposition until at least 20 days after the defendants have been served or appeared in a case,ⁿ⁴⁰ unless the plaintiff obtains leave from the court.ⁿ⁴¹ Accordingly, defendants have an opportunity to seize the initiative in the discovery process and thereby gain certain tactical advantages. For example, defendants may serve plaintiff's counsel with an initial set of interrogatories, a request for production of documents, and a notice of plaintiff's deposition, timed to enable defendant's counsel to obtain this discovery before plaintiff's deposition of defendant's witnesses or defendant's responses to plaintiff's discovery requests. By engaging in early discovery, defendant's counsel often can tie down the plaintiff's version of events before plaintiff's counsel has adequately evaluated the weaknesses in the plaintiff's case and before plaintiff's counsel has had the opportunity to shape plaintiff's strategy in light of the weaknesses in the defendant's case. Further, by acting quickly, defendant's counsel can often force plaintiff's counsel to spend precious time and resources responding to defendant's discovery request rather than seizing the initiative for plaintiff.

In a wrongful discharge case, the defendants' discovery should focus on ascertaining the key facts, documents, and witnesses on which the plaintiff is basing his or her claim of wrongful discharge. It is equally important to ascertain the injuries that plaintiff has allegedly sustained. The initial case evaluation conducted by defendant's counselⁿ⁴² should enable defendant's counsel to serve plaintiff with a first set of interrogatories and requests for the production of documents and to prepare for an early deposition of the plaintiff. Defendant's counsel should follow plaintiff's deposition with the depositions of other individuals that plaintiff has identified as potential witnesses who favor the plaintiff's version of events, additional interrogatories and requests for the production of documents, and, finally, with requests for admissions. Each of these methods of discovery are discussed in more detail below.

[b] Interrogatories

Written interrogatories are a useful tool to force plaintiff to disclose the facts and evidence on which he or she bases a claim. Plaintiffs often rely on vague and broad allegations in the complaint. Although defendant's counsel can demur to a complaint on the ground that it is too vague to place defendant on proper notice of the basis of the claims asserted,ⁿ⁴³ courts often will deny such a demurrer on the ground that the discovery process provides defendant a fair opportunity to ascertain the basis of the plaintiff's claims. Accordingly, defendant's counsel should serve plaintiff with an initial set of interrogatories asking for the following:

1. Each and every fact on which plaintiff bases each of the claims asserted in the complaint;

2. The names, addresses, and phone numbers of any individual who has knowledge of the facts that plaintiff contends supports each of the claims asserted in the complaint; and
3. Identification of any document that supports each of the claims asserted in the complaint.

For example, if the plaintiff has asserted a claim for breach of contract, then the initial set of interrogatories should include three separate interrogatories requiring the plaintiff to disclose (1) the facts on which he or she bases the contract claim, (2) the identity of any individual whom plaintiff believes has knowledge concerning the formation or the breach of the contract, and (3) any documents that the plaintiff maintains constitute the contract, including offer letters, personnel policies, procedural manuals, or a document that itself purports to be an employment contract.

A party may serve only 35 specially prepared interrogatories, without any subparts, unless accompanied by a declaration of necessity signed by the attorney stating why the additional interrogatories are needed.ⁿ⁴⁴ However, if additional interrogatories are accompanied by a declaration of necessity, plaintiff cannot object, but may only move for a protective order on the ground that the number of questions is "unwarranted."ⁿ⁴⁵ When warranted, defendant's counsel should serve plaintiff with as many interrogatories as reasonably necessary to flush out plaintiff's claims. However, defendant's counsel should be careful to avoid the appearance that an excess number of interrogatories has been served for the purpose of harassment, rather than to obtain the information necessary to prepare a defense.

The official form interrogatories approved by the Judicial Council do not count toward the limit,ⁿ⁴⁶ and are objection-proof as to form. Some of the standard questions, such as those dealing with damages and witnesses, may be particularly useful.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Defense counsel should carefully evaluate the need to propound non-form interrogatories in advance of plaintiff's deposition. As a general matter, such interrogatories are not strategically advisable because (1) they may cause plaintiff's counsel to conduct an early evaluation of plaintiff's case and alert plaintiff to specific lines of inquiry; (2) they may be asked equally effectively at a deposition; and (3) they may unnecessarily waste a portion of the 35 interrogatories to which parties are normally entitled.ⁿ⁴⁷ By contrast, the propounding of Judicial Council form interrogatories before plaintiff's deposition is less strategically harmful because (1) they are not tailored to the facts of the particular case (and thus are not apt to alert plaintiff's counsel to matters that the defendant considers important); and (2) they are not counted toward the 35-interrogatory limit.ⁿ⁴⁸ Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[c] Requests for Production of Documents and Other Tangible Evidence

The documents that a plaintiff has in his or her possession or control may contain the key evidence in the defense of a wrongful discharge case. For example, if the plaintiff has in his or her possession a copy of the application for employment, a company manual, or a stock option plan that clearly sets forth that the plaintiff was hired as an employee at will, such a document may provide defendant's counsel an opportunity to demonstrate during the deposition or cross-examination of the plaintiff that plaintiff knew that he or she did not have a valid basis to assert a good cause requirement for termination. Note, however, that if plaintiff has taken confidential and/or privileged documents without the employer's consent, the employer may seek the return of such documents without going through normal discovery procedures.ⁿ⁴⁹

Furthermore, if the plaintiff has taken notes over a long period of time, they may provide the only contemporaneous record of the plaintiff's conduct and perceptions. While that record is not likely to contain more than a few entries helpful to the defendant, those few entries often serve to undercut key portions of a plaintiff's strategy. In either case, it is crucial that defendant's counsel serve plaintiff with a document request that requires plaintiff to give defendant's counsel access to any notes or documents that plaintiff has kept concerning his or her employment with the defendant.

and the representations, incidents, or events on which the plaintiff bases his or her claims.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

A defendant's document request should include requests for all documents that the plaintiff removed from work on or before the last day of employment. On occasion, a plaintiff will take documents containing trade secrets, which, even in the absence of a cross-claim by the defendant, may so seriously damage plaintiff's credibility that the defendant secures a favorable position for settlement or trial.

Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Similarly, if the plaintiff has asserted a claim for physical or emotional injuries, the records of the plaintiff's consultations with doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists, and counselors may either (1) reveal the true motivation for the suit or the actual causes of whatever emotional distress the plaintiff may be suffering, or (2) convince the defendant regarding the sincerity of the plaintiff's claims. In either event, whenever a plaintiff asserts a claim for physical or emotional injuries, defendant's counsel should serve plaintiff's doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists, and counselors with a subpoena duces tecum.ⁿ⁵⁰ Defendant's counsel need not take the depositions of these non-party witnesses at the time the medical and psychological records are tendered.ⁿ⁵¹ The better practice is to subpoena the records sufficiently before the individual's deposition is taken to enable defendant's counsel to have the records reviewed by an appropriate expert hired as a consultant. After the expert has reviewed the records, defendant's counsel should obtain the expert's opinion regarding the contents of the records, as well as recommendations concerning potential lines of inquiry to be pursued during the deposition. The expert should not be listed as an expert witness nor be requested to put his or her opinion in writing until after the expert has reviewed the records and defendant's counsel has consulted with the expert.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

A defendant should subpoena the medical records of the plaintiff as soon as it learns the names and addresses of plaintiff's physicians, psychologists, and other medical practitioners. The importance of such records cannot be overemphasized. They may reveal that (1) the stress that plaintiff links to the work environment has other causes; (2) the medical condition for which the plaintiff seeks compensation predates the employment relationship; (3) plaintiff was, for example, making a routine office visit to a doctor on a day previously alleged to have been spent in a hospital; or (4) plaintiff made no visits to doctors on one or more days requested off for that purpose. The medical records may also clarify critical time sequences relating to the case by revealing whether medical appointments preceded or followed specified employment actions. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[d] Depositions

Depositions are the most important discovery tool in wrongful discharge cases. Defendant can accomplish multiple purposes through depositions: (1) compel the plaintiff to explain the factual basis for his or her claims; (2) elicit favorable admissions; (3) avoid surprises at trial; (3) assemble evidence to support summary judgment; (4) record the testimony of witnesses so they cannot change their testimony at trial without risking impeachment; (5) assess the credibility of the plaintiff and other witnesses; and (6) preserve favorable testimony in case the witness will not be available to testify at trial.

Natural persons (including parties) may be deposed only once absent a court order based on a showing of good cause.ⁿ⁵² Therefore, defendant's counsel should not risk taking any deposition, including the plaintiff's deposition, without proper preparation. This creates an obvious tension between scheduling plaintiff's deposition early and spending more time collecting information to use in the deposition. The better practice is to move quickly to complete a thorough case evaluation and schedule plaintiff's deposition as soon as practicable. If new information surfaces later concerning which defendant's counsel needs to depose plaintiff, defendants' counsel can move the court for an order permitting an additional deposition.ⁿ⁵³

[e] Requests for Admissions

Requesting the plaintiff to admit the truth of specific facts, his or her opinions as to matters of fact, and the genuineness of particular documents is an effective method for obtaining evidence to support a motion for summary judgment and for narrowing the issues at trial. The procedure for obtaining admissions is set forth in Code of Civil Procedure section 2033 (Code of Civil Procedure section 2033.010 et seq. operative July 1, 2005). A party may not request, as a matter of right, that the other party admit more than 35 matters.ⁿ⁵⁴ However this limit does not apply to requests concerning the genuineness of documents.ⁿ⁵⁵ Furthermore, counsel may request more than 35 admissions if he or she attaches a supporting declaration, in a specified form, stating that the greater number is warranted by the complexity or quantity of existing or potential issues in the case.ⁿ⁵⁶

The matters to which the plaintiff admits are conclusively established for purposes of the pending action, unless the court permits the plaintiff to withdraw or amend the admission.ⁿ⁵⁷ The court may permit withdrawal or amendment of an admission only if it determines that the admission is the result of a mistake, inadvertence or excusable neglect and that the defendant will not be substantially prejudiced by the withdrawal or amendment.ⁿ⁵⁸ Further, if, in response to a request made pursuant to section 2033 (section 2033.010 et seq. operative July 1, 2005), plaintiff fails to admit the genuineness of a document or the truth of a particular matter and defendant later proves the genuineness of the document or the truth of the matter in question, the court may require the plaintiff to pay the expense incurred by the defendant in making that proof, including reasonable attorney's fees.ⁿ⁵⁹

[f] Psychiatric Examination

If the plaintiff alleges emotional distress, defendant's counsel should consider seeking a stipulation or court order under Code of Civil Procedure, section 2032 (Code of Civil Procedure section 2032.010 et seq. operative July 1, 2005) for a mental examination of the plaintiff by a psychiatrist or psychologist retained by the defense. A psychiatric examination of the plaintiff offers a number of benefits to the defense. It helps the defendant discover the actual degree of plaintiff's emotional injury and to what extent it was caused by the termination. It also enhances the credibility of a psychiatric expert retained by the defense to testify at trial against the plaintiff's emotional distress claim. Further, it is an opportunity for the defendant's expert to interview the plaintiff outside the presence of plaintiff's counsel, unless the plaintiff convinces the court with specific evidence that the defendant's expert will not respect the plaintiff's privacy or would be likely to disobey any court-imposed restrictions on the scope of the exam.ⁿ⁶⁰ Nevertheless, a mental examination of the plaintiff may pose some disadvantages for the defendant. First, it cannot be obtained automatically but requires a court order or stipulation.ⁿ⁶¹ Second, an examination is expensive. Third, an examination carries the risk that the defendant's expert will bolster plaintiff's case. Furthermore, because the plaintiff is entitled to receive a written report of the expert's findings on timely demand,ⁿ⁶² the plaintiff will be able to obtain written documentation of the expert's opinion, which will be valuable to the plaintiff if that opinion supports the plaintiff's claim.

Accordingly, defendant's counsel should first obtain the plaintiff's medical and psychiatric recordsⁿ⁶³ and depose the plaintiff and any other key percipient witness to the alleged distress, particularly any treating doctor. This discovery may eliminate the need for a defense mental exam if it sufficiently undermines the claims of emotional distress. (For example, the plaintiff's own doctor, friends, and family may admit that they did not observe any significant change in plaintiff's mood or behavior after the termination.) Counsel should also try to discover whether plaintiff intends to call his or her treating doctor or a specially retained expert to testify at trial to the causation and degree of plaintiff's emotional distress. If not, defendant may not need to counter with a psychologist or psychiatrist witness of its own. But if plaintiff does have some credible evidence of emotional distress and is likely to call a psychiatric witness, defendant should usually retain its own expert to examine plaintiff and testify at trial.

As noted above, to require plaintiff to submit to an examination, defendant must first obtain a court order based on a showing of good cause or a stipulation.ⁿ⁶⁴ In Vinson v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁶⁵ the court noted that a mere general allegation of severe emotional distress is not enough to show good cause, but allegations of continuing mental ailments such as ongoing reduced self-esteem, motivation, and appetite; sleeplessness; and loss of social contact and reputation may be sufficient. Even when an examination is ordered, the areas that the expert may inquire into are limited by plaintiff's right of privacy, which may be overcome only by a showing that the information is directly relevant and essential for the fair resolution of the case.ⁿ⁶⁶ In a recent case, plaintiff amended her pleadings to allege that her emotional distress was not ongoing and the court determined that this varied from the facts in Vinson;ⁿ⁶⁷ accordingly, the court declined to compel a mental examination.ⁿ⁶⁸ The court noted that the Supreme Court had limited the Vinson holding to the facts of that case.ⁿ⁶⁹

As noted above, plaintiff is not entitled to have his or her attorney present, absent an unusual showing of likelihood of abuse.ⁿ⁷⁰ However, the exam may be audio tape-recorded at the option of either party.ⁿ⁷¹ For the defendant, tape-recording the examination offers the advantage of an additional source of potential impeachment of the plaintiff, if plaintiff later contradicts earlier versions of key events. For the plaintiff, tape-recording the examination provides a check on whether the examination was conducted fairly and in compliance with any limitations ordered by the court or agreed to by the parties.

If the plaintiff fails to submit to a court-ordered or stipulated examination, defendant may move for sanctions.ⁿ⁷² The plaintiff in turn has the right to demand, in writing, that the defendant turn over a detailed written report by the examining doctor, setting forth all findings, diagnoses, prognoses, and conclusions; plaintiff also may enforce the demand by motion, and may request sanctions for defendant's failure to provide the report.ⁿ⁷³ In return, plaintiff must provide defendant with copies of any written reports prepared by plaintiff's doctors.ⁿ⁷⁴ However, plaintiff's counsel may avoid the risk of having to provide an unfavorable report by asking the expert to report orally, instead of in writing.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawWrongful TerminationGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025(b)(2), 2030(b), 2031(b), 2033(b)(Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.210, 2030.020, 2031.020, 2033.020 operative July 1, 2005).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030(b), 2031(b)), 2033(b) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030.020, 2031.020, 2033.020 operative July 1, 2005).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(b)(2) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.210 operative July 1, 2005).

(n4)Footnote 4. For discussion of depositions, see [d], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussion in § 61.01[1][c]-[e].

(n6)Footnote 6. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(d)(4), (h)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.220(a)(4), 2025.280(a) operative July 1, 2005).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(a) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.010 operative July 1, 2005).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(f)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.220 operative July 1, 2005); Gordon v. Superior Court (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 157, 167-168, 207 Cal. Rptr. 327.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(h) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.260 operative July 1, 2005).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2019(e) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2016.050 operative July 1, 2005) (providing that provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(a) apply to discovery methods).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(l) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.300 operative July 1, 2005).

(n12)Footnote 12. Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(c)(1), (3) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030.030, 2030.050 operative July 1, 2005).

(n13)Footnote 13. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030(c)(1), (2) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030.030, 2030.040 operative July 1, 2005).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(c)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.030 operative July 1, 2005).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(c)(6) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.010(b) operative July 1, 2005); see also Fed. Rules Civ. Proc., Rule 33(b).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2031 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq. operative July 1, 2005).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(h)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.280(a) operative July 1, 2005).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(h)(2) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.280(b) operative July 1, 2005); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 2020 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2020.010 et seq. operative July 1, 2005) (obtaining discovery from nonparties).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2020(a)(2), (d) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2020.010(b), 2020.410 et seq. operative July 1, 2005).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2020(d)(1), (e), 2031(c)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2020.410 (a)-(c), 2020.510, 2031.030 operative July 1, 2005).

(n21)Footnote 21. Annual reports of corporations whose stock is publicly traded are public documents, and defendants will often produce them. However, plaintiffs are not entitled to discovery of defendant's financial condition absent a court order based on a finding of "substantial probability" that plaintiff will prevail on his or her claim for punitive damages. see Civ. Code § 3295(c).

(n22)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Harding Lawson Associates v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal App. 4th 7, 10, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538 .

(n23)Footnote 23. El Dorado Savings & Loan Ass'n v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-346, 235 Cal. Rptr. 303 .

(n24)Footnote 24. Harding Lawson Associates v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal App. 4th 7, 10, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538

(n25)Footnote 25. Harding Lawson Associates v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 7, 10-11, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538 .

(n26)Footnote 26. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(t) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.610 operative July 1, 2005).

(n27)Footnote 27. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(a) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.010 operative July 1, 2005).

(n28)Footnote 28. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(a) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.010 operative July 1, 2005).

(n29)Footnote 29. See discussion in § 61.03[3].

(n30)Footnote 30. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(n) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.410 operative July 1, 2005); see Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(m) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.300 operative July 1, 2005) (court may permit withdrawal or amendment of admission only if it determines that admission was result of mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect and that party who obtained admission will not be substantially prejudiced).

(n31)Footnote 31. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(o) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.420 operative July 1, 2005).

(n32)Footnote 32. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(o) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.420 operative July 1, 2005).

(n33)Footnote 33. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(c)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.030 operative July 1, 2005).

(n34)Footnote 34. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(c)(2), (3) (Code of Civil Procedure §§ 2033.210-2033.240 operative July 1, 2005).

(n35)Footnote 35. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(c)(2), (e) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2033.040, 2033.080 operative July 1, 2005).

(n36)Footnote 36. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(c)(4)-(7) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.060(a)-(h) operative July 1, 2005).

(n37)Footnote 37. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(h), (i) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2033.250, 2033.260 operative July 1, 2005).

(n38)Footnote 38. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(k) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.280 operative July 1, 2005).

(n39)Footnote 39. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030(b), 2031(b), 2033(b) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030.020, 2031.020, 2033.020 operative July 1, 2005).

(n40)Footnote 40. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(b)(2) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.210 operative July 1, 2005).

(n41)Footnote 41. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025(b)(2), 2030(b), 2031(b), 2033(b) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.210, 2030.020, 2031.020, 2033.020 operative July 1, 2005).

(n42)Footnote 42. See discussion in § 61.01[2].

(n43)Footnote 43. See Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(f).

(n44)Footnote 44. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(c)(1), (2) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030.030, 2030.040 operative July 1, 2005).

(n45)Footnote 45. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(c)(1), (2) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030.030, 2030.040 operative July 1, 2005).

(n46)Footnote 46. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030(c)(1); 2033.5 (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030.030, 2033.710 et seq. operative July 1, 2005).

(n47)Footnote 47. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(c)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.030 operative July 1, 2005).

(n48)Footnote 48. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2030(c)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.030 operative July 1, 2005).

(n49)Footnote 49. See Pillsbury, Madison & Sutro v. Schectman (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1279, 1288-1289, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698 .

(n50)Footnote 50. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1985, 1985.3.

(n51)Footnote 51. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2020(a), (d) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2020.010 et seq., 2020.410 et seq. operative July 1, 2005).

(n52)Footnote 52. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(t) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.610 operative July 1, 2005).

(n53)Footnote 53. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(t) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.610 operative July 1, 2005).

(n54)Footnote 54. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(c)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.030 operative July 1, 2005).

(n55)Footnote 55. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(c)(1) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.030 operative July 1, 2005).

(n56)Footnote 56. See Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(c)(1)-(3) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2033.030-2033.050 operative July 1, 2005).

(n57)Footnote 57. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(n) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.410 operative July 1, 2005).

(n58)Footnote 58. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(m) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.300 operative July 1, 2005).

(n59)Footnote 59. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(o) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.420 operative July 1, 2005).

(n60)Footnote 60. See Vinson v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 833, 844-846, 239 Cal. Rptr. 292, 740 P.2d 404 .

(n61)Footnote 61. Code Civ. Proc. § 2032(d), (e) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2032.310, 2032.320, 2016.030 operative July 1, 2005).

(n62)Footnote 62. Code Civ. Proc. § 2032(h) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2032.610, 2032.620 operative July 1, 2005).

(n63)Footnote 63. Code Civ. Proc. § 1985.3.

(n64)Footnote 64. Code Civ. Proc. § 2032(d), (e) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2032.310, 2032.320, 2016.030 operative July 1, 2005).

(n65)Footnote 65. See Vinson v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 833, 840-841, 239 Cal. Rptr. 292, 740 P.2d 404 .

(n66)Footnote 66. Vinson v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 833, 841-842, 239 Cal. Rptr. 292, 740 P.2d 404 .

(n67)Footnote 67. Vinson v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 833, 239 Cal. Rptr. 292, 740 P.2d 404 .

(n68)Footnote 68. Doyle v. Superior Court (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1878, 1885-1887, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476 .

(n69)Footnote 69. Doyle v. Superior Court (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1878, 1885-1887, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476 (quoting Vinson v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 833, 840, 239 Cal. Rptr. 292, 740 P.2d 404).

(n70)Footnote 70. Vinson v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 833, 844-846, 239 Cal. Rptr. 292, 740 P.2d 404 .

(n71)Footnote 71. Code Civ. Proc. § 2032(g)(2) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.530 operative July 1, 2005).

(n72)Footnote 72. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2023, 2032(f) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2023.010 et seq., 2032.410, 2032.420 operative July 1, 2005).

(n73)Footnote 73. Code Civ. Proc. § 2032(h) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2032.610, 2032.620 operative July 1, 2005); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 2023 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.010 et seq. operative July 1, 2005) (sanctions for abuse of discovery).

(n74)Footnote 74. Code Civ. Proc. § 2032(j) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2032.640, 2032.650 operative July 1, 2005).

78 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.04A

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.04A Exclusion of Evidence

The gathering of evidence for the discipline or termination of an employee may implicate the Fourth Amendment's proscription of illegal searches and seizures and require the exclusion of evidence. But when the search takes place as part of a different proceeding, such as a criminal prosecution, the Fourth Amendment exclusionary rule may not apply. Thus, for example, a state transportation employee could not have the exclusionary rule applied in civil disciplinary proceedings to exclude evidence seized during a criminal investigation that was not conducted by the agency that employed him, even though the search was illegal.ⁿ¹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Dept. of Transportation v. State Personnel Bd. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 568, 2009 Cal. App. LEXIS 1690, *10-*21 (exclusionary rule did not apply in civil disciplinary proceeding to bar introduction of incriminating evidence seized from state transportation employee's car and pockets by the California Highway Patrol; although illegal search took place, it occurred during criminal investigation and was not conducted by agency that employed worker being disciplined).

79 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.05

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.05 Jury Instructions

The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Matthew Bender) ("CACI") contain specific instructions for wrongful termination actions.ⁿ¹ CACI are the official instructions for the State of California, authored and endorsed by the Judicial Council. The California Rules of Court strongly encourage their use.ⁿ²

Each instruction contains directions for its use. The instructions alert the user to special circumstances involving the instruction and may include references to other instructions that should or should not be used. Each instruction contains an analysis of applicable law. The instructions also give references to a variety of legal publications.ⁿ³ The instructions were drafted for the typical case. They can be used as drafted in most cases. However, when a case involves unique or complex circumstances, the user must adapt the instruction to the case.ⁿ⁴

The instructions provide for the insertion of names rather than legal titles such as "plaintiff" or "defendant," because jurors more easily understand instructions that refer to parties by name rather than by legal terms. For simplicity, the instructions use single party plaintiffs and defendants. If a case involves multiple parties or cross-complaints or counterclaims, the user will need to modify the instruction. The Judicial Council suggests that rather than naming a number of parties in each place calling for names, the user consider putting the names of all applicable parties in the beginning and thereafter identifying them as "plaintiff," "defendant," "cross-complainant," etc.ⁿ⁵

The instructions avoid separate definitions of legal terms whenever possible, but rather incorporate the definition into the language of the instruction.ⁿ⁶

In many instructions, "harm" is used in place of "damage," "injury" or other similar words. The drafters of the instructions felt that "harm" was clearer to jurors. The instructions frequently use "substantial factor" to state the element of causation, rather than referring to "cause" and then defining "cause" in a separate instruction as a substantial factor. There is an instruction that defines "substantial factor" in the series of instructions on negligence, but its use is not limited to cases involving negligence.ⁿ⁷ The drafters substituted "indirect evidence" for "circumstantial evidence," but the instructions include a sentence explaining that indirect evidence is also known as circumstantial evidence.ⁿ⁸

For ease of understanding, the elements of causes of action or affirmative defenses are listed by numbers and factors to be considered by jurors in their deliberations are listed by letters. The applicable burden of proof is included in each instruction explaining a cause of action or affirmative defense. For ease of understanding, instructions explaining affirmative defenses use the term "affirmative defense" in the title.ⁿ⁹

At the end of the instructions, CACI includes tables of related instructions in BAJI, California Jury Instructions, Civil, Book of Approved Jury Instructions.ⁿ¹⁰

In a wrongful termination action, if the trial court has previously granted summary adjudication on other causes of action, the court may not rely on the "undisputed facts" that supported summary adjudication of the other causes of action to instruct the jury that certain "facts" were established for purposes of trial. The summary judgment statute itselfⁿ¹¹ precludes comment on the grant or denial of a summary adjudication motion to a jury.ⁿ¹²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Procedure Trials Jury Trials Jury Instructions General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2400 et seq. (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

(n2)Footnote 2. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 2.1050.

(n3)Footnote 3. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xii (Matthew Bender).

(n4)Footnote 4. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xii.

(n5)Footnote 5. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xii.

(n6)Footnote 6. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xiii.

(n7)Footnote 7. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xiii. see CACI 430, Causation: Substantial Factor.

(n8)Footnote 8. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xiii.

(n9)Footnote 9. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xiii. Titles are not part of the instruction and should be removed before presentation to the jury.

(n10)Footnote 10. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xii (Matthew Bender).

(n11)Footnote 11. Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(n)(3).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Raghavan v. The Boeing Co. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1134-1139, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 397 (in action by former employee alleging causes of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy, defamation, breach of implied contract, and breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing, trial court granted employer's motion for summary adjudication as to each cause of action other than wrongful termination; trial court, relying on "undisputed facts" supporting summary adjudication of defamation cause of action, erroneously instructed jury that "facts" were established for purposes of trial; summary adjudication of defamation cause of action did not restrict type of evidence employee could introduce in support of wrongful termination cause of action).

80 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.06

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.06 Verdict Forms

The Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (Matthew Bender) ("CACI") contain special verdict forms for wrongful termination actions.ⁿ¹ The forms generally track the elements of the cause of action. The purpose of the special verdict forms is to obtain the jury's finding on the elements defined in an instruction. Thus, modifications to an instruction will ordinarily necessitate modifications to a corresponding special verdict form.ⁿ²

The verdict forms address one plaintiff against one defendant. In cases involving multiple parties, the issues and evidence may allow the jury to reach different results for different parties. The jury should consider the liability of each defendant individually and determine damages to be awarded to each plaintiff separately. Thus, the drafters recommend that separate special verdicts be prepared for each plaintiff with regard to each defendant in the case.ⁿ³ The forms are directed to a particular cause of action. When multiple causes of action are submitted to the jury, it may be better to combine the forms and eliminate duplication.ⁿ⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil Procedure Trials Jury Trials Verdicts General Overview Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2400 et seq. (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. The drafters have indicated that these are models only and can rarely be used without modification to fit the circumstances of the case.

(n2)Footnote 2. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xiv.

(n3)Footnote 3. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xiv.

(n4)Footnote 4. Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, Guide for Using Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, at xiv.

81 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-61 California Employment Law §§ 61.07 through 61.09

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 61.07[Reserved]

82 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.10

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.10 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice, "Master and Servant" (Matthew Bender).

California Points and Authorities, "Employer and Employee" (Matthew Bender).

Larson, Employment Discrimination, Ch. 26, "Employment-At-Will Exceptions," §§ 117-121 (Matthew Bender).

Larson and Borowsky, Unjust Dismissal(Matthew Bender).

Ch. 3, "Judicial Exceptions Based on Contract Theory."

Ch. 4, "Judicial Exceptions Based on Tort Theory."

Ch. 9, "Employer Defenses."

"Practice Appendix."

Advising California Employers, ch. 17 (Cal. C.E.B. 1997).

Wrongful Employment Termination Practice (Cal. C.E.B. 1987)

Ch. 2, "Theories of Liability," §§ 2.32-2.50, 2.52.

Ch. 4, "Bringing the Action," §§ 4.1-4.11, 4.21-4.32, 4.65-4.83, 4.86.

Ch. 5, "Defending the Action."

Ch. 6, "Discovery."

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview

83 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.11

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.11 Encyclopedias

29 Cal. Jur. 3d, "Employer and Employee," §§ 63, 70-79.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawWrongful TerminationGeneral Overview

84 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 61 Bringing and Defending Wrongful Termination Claims
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-61 California Employment Law § 61.12

AUTHOR: By Lawrence J. King, J.D. and Elizabeth D. Laporte, J.D.

§ 61.12 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

Mirman, "Wrongful Termination is a Dubious Use for Writs of Attachment", 11(2) Cal. Law. 60 (1991).

Brandon, "From Tameny to Foley: Time for Constitutional Limitations on California Employment At Will Doctrine," 15 Hastings Const. L.Q. 359 (1988).

Jensen, "Developments in California Wrongful Discharge Law. (Forum: Labor Law Symposium Proceedings)," 10 Industrial Relations L.J. 27 (1988).

Kornblau, "Common Law Remedies for Wrongfully Discharged Employee," 9 Industrial Relations L.J. 660 (1987).

Perritt, "Wrongful Dismissal Legislation," 35 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 65 (1987).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Labor & Employment LawWrongful TerminationGeneral Overview

85 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims

4-62 California Employment Law 62.syn

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

§ 62.syn Synopsis to Chapter 62: Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims

§ 62.01 Introduction

§ 62.02 Formation of the Employment Relationship

[1] Advertising and Recruiting

[2] Employment Applications

[a] Applications Generally

[b] Disclaimer Clauses in Applications

[c] FORM--Disclaimer Clause

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[3] Employment Interviews

[4] Offer Letters

[a] Acceptable and Unacceptable Statements

[b] FORM--Offer Letter

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[5] Employment Agreements

[a] Acceptable and Unacceptable Statements

[b] Checklist of Clauses for Written Employment Agreements

[c] FORM--Employment Agreement

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

§ 62.03 Maintenance of Employment Relationship

[1] Handbooks and Policy Manuals

[a] Affirming Employer Discretion to Control Employment Relationship

[b] Disclaimer Clauses

[c] FORM--Sample Disclaimer Clause

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[d] Probationary Period Clauses

[e] FORM--Introductory Period Clause

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[f] Grievance Clauses

[g] Discipline and Discharge Clauses

[h] FORM--Sample Discipline and Discharge Clause

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[i] Modifying Employment Policies

[2] Stock Purchase Plans and Profit-Sharing Agreements

[3] Performance Evaluations

[4] Grievance Procedures

[a] Types of Procedures

[b] FORM--Open Door Policy

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[c] FORM--Informal Grievance Procedure

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

§ 62.04 General Considerations in Disciplining Employees

[1] Review to Ensure Compliance With Statutes, Employer Policy, and Past Practice

[2] Consideration of Disciplinary Alternatives

§ 62.05 Termination of the Employment Relationship

[1] Voluntary Termination

[a] Exit Interviews

[b] Constructive Discharge

[i] Employer-Offered Option to Resign or Be Terminated

[ii] Resignations Because of Employee Claim of Intolerable Working Conditions

[c] "No-Show" Policies

[2] Expiration of Express Contract

[3] Layoff

[4] Discharge Procedure

[a] Independent Review to Ensure Compliance With Statutes, Employer Policy, and Past Practice

[i] In General

[ii] Verify Documentation Sufficient to Support the Discharge

- [iii] Check for "Red Flag" Situations

- [iv] Investigate the Facts and Circumstances

- [v] Verify That All Applicable Rules and Procedures Are Followed

- [b] Pre-Termination Interview of Employee

- [c] Consideration of Probation or Other Alternatives

- [d] Exit Interview

- [e] FORM--Termination Checklist

- [i] Comment

- [ii] Form

- [5] Releases of Liability

- [a] Unilateral or Mutual General Release

- [b] Releases From Wage Claims

- [c] Release of Workers' Compensation Claims

- [d] Waiver of Unknown Claims

- [e] Confidentiality

- [f] Employment References

- [g] Waiver of Reemployment Rights

- [h] FORM--Release

- [i] Comment

- [ii] FORM--Settlement Agreement and Release

- [i] FORM--Short Form Separation Agreement

- [i] Comment

- [ii] Form

- [6] Post-Discharge Procedure

- [a] Employment References

[b] Unemployment Insurance Claims

[c] Workers' Compensation Claims

§§ 62.06through 62.19 [Reserved]

§ 62.20 Legal Texts

§ 62.21 Legal Periodicals

By Ray E. Smith, J.D.^{n*}

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Mr. Smith is with the firm of Thierman, Cook, Brown, and Mason in San Francisco. He specializes in labor and employment law. Before joining the firm, he was in-house counsel for DHL Worldwide Courier Express. His prior publications include "Preempting State Regulation of Employment Relations: A Model for Analysis," 20 U.S.F. L. Rev. 35 (1985).

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

86 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims

4-62 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

Scope

By Ray E. Smith, J.D.n* SCOPE

This chapter discusses suggested procedures to be followed by an employer in the formation, maintenance, and termination of the employment relationship to help avoid claims for wrongful termination or discipline. It includes discussion of recruitment, employment applications, and pre-employment interviews. It also discusses offer letters and employment agreements and provides sample forms of each.

This chapter also examines the factors to be considered in drafting and using employment handbooks and policies, performance evaluations, and grievance procedures, and includes sample forms, when applicable. Finally, the chapter discusses procedures to be followed in terminating an employee and includes a checklist as well as forms of sample releases.

For discussion of legal principles governing liability for wrongful termination, see Chapter 60. For discussion of causes of action related to wrongful termination, see Chapter 63. For discussion of bringing and defending wrongful termination actions, see Chapter 61. Employment discrimination laws and remedies are covered in Chapters 40 -44.

For additional discussion of, and model provisions for use in, employee handbooks and personnel policy manuals, see California Employers' Guide to Employee Handbooks and Personnel Policy Manuals (Matthew Bender).

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Mr. Smith is with the firm of Thierman, Cook, Brown, and Mason in San Francisco. He specializes in labor and employment law. Before joining the firm, he was in-house counsel for DHL Worldwide Courier Express. His prior publications include "Preempting State Regulation of Employment Relations: A Model for Analysis," 20 U.S.F. L. Rev. 35 (1985).

Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

87 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-62 California Employment Law § 62.01

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

§ 62.01 Introduction

The California Labor Code provides generally that an employment having no specified term may be terminated at the will of either party on notice to the other.ⁿ¹ However, as fully discussed in Chapter 60, numerous limitations are imposed by statutory and case law on an employer's power to terminate an employee. Some of these limitations involve a prohibition against disciplining or terminating an employee for specified reasons;ⁿ² others involve an implied requirement that an employee not be terminated except for good cause. In either case, improper termination of the employee can expose the employer to substantial liability.ⁿ³ This chapter sets forth suggested procedures that may help avoid disputes that may lead to wrongful termination litigation and that may strengthen the employer's position in the event of such litigation.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships At-Will Employment General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 2922.

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Lab. Code § 132a (prohibition against discharging employee for filing workers' compensation claim, receiving award, or testifying regarding another employee's claim).

(n3)Footnote 3. See generally generally discussion in Chapter 60.

88 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-62 California Employment Law § 62.02

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

§ 62.02 Formation of the Employment Relationship

[1] Advertising and Recruiting

Although no California case has held that statements regarding job tenure or security in advertisements or recruiting documents are necessarily binding on the employer as a matter of law, such statements may serve as evidence that limitations on the freedom to discipline or discharge were intended. Therefore, unless specifically desired, employers should avoid written or oral representations to prospective employees or new-hires regarding "permanent," "steady," "secure," or "long-term" employment; employment "so long as" an employee performs "satisfactorily"; or the "hope" that the individual will "grow into the position."

To be enforceable, promises regarding job security or termination for cause must be communicated in "express language or [by] clear implication."ⁿ¹ The mere indication of optimism and good will does not necessarily alter the at will nature of an employment relationship.ⁿ² The totality of the circumstances determines the nature of the contract. For example, an agreement limiting the employer's power to terminate may be shown by longevity of employment, repeated oral assurances of job security, consistent promotions, salary increases and bonuses, an employer's own termination guidelines, and other acts that would lead an employee to reasonably expect he or she will not be discharged except for good cause.ⁿ³ The California Supreme Court has made it clear that independent consideration is not necessary to support an implied promise to discharge only for good cause.ⁿ⁴

Apart from liability for wrongful termination, knowingly false representations made during the recruiting process may also support an independent action for deceit. In Lazar v. Superior Court ⁿ⁵ representations made by the defendant that induced plaintiff to leave secure employment and move his family across the country to begin employment with defendant were found by the California Supreme Court to be actionable as fraud.ⁿ⁶ In an earlier case,ⁿ⁷ the plaintiff was permitted to state causes of action for breach of contract and deceit by alleging "repeated requests" by the defendant to close his competing jewelry business and come to work for defendant as a manager for "so long as he should satisfactorily perform his duties," and by alleging he was discharged shortly thereafter.ⁿ⁸ In addition, knowingly false representations regarding employment that induce a person to change his or her place of residence subject an employer to misdemeanor liability and double civil damages under Labor Code sections 970-972.ⁿ⁹

[2] Employment Applications

[a] Applications Generally

Careful drafting of employment applications raises many questions regarding the scope of inquiries permitted under federal and state equal employment opportunity laws, the permissible scope of inquiries under state privacy law, and the possible creation of limitations on the right to terminate at will. For discussion of limitations on permissible inquiries in employment applications under equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 41. For discussion of various statutory and case law restrictions on the employer's right to obtain private information about the applicant, either through an application form or otherwise, see Chapter 50. For discussion of at will employment recitations in an application, see [b] and [c], below.

If applicants are required to sign an employer's application form,ⁿ¹⁰ a copy must be provided the applicant on request.ⁿ¹¹ The Fair Employment and Housing Act requires that employers, labor organizations, and employment agencies maintain applications on file for a minimum of two years.ⁿ¹²

[b] Disclaimer Clauses in Applications

An express disclaimer in an employment application form that employment is at will can limit the exposure of an employer to a later claim by an employee that he or she accepted employment in reliance on an implied agreement that termination would occur only for cause or that the employment would be for a specific term.ⁿ¹³ While the issue remains unresolved, there is authority in California and in other jurisdictions suggesting that express disclaimers that are prominently placed to give actual notice to applicants may be enforced.ⁿ¹⁴ Nevertheless, even if enforced, express disclaimers will not necessarily provide broad protection against all wrongful discharge causes of action, including counts based on alleged violations of statute or violations of public policy.

It is also possible that a court or jury could hold that oral assurances by a personnel representative or manager override a written disclaimer in an application, although there is case authority implying otherwise.ⁿ¹⁵ However, in one case, a disclaimer in an employment application which stated that the terms of employment could be changed at any time was overridden by subsequent implied promises found in the personnel manual and employer practices.ⁿ¹⁶ To avoid this problem, the disclaimer should state that its terms cannot be altered except in writing by a specified and highly placed company representative.

[c] FORM--Disclaimer Clause

[i] Comment

The sample disclaimer clause set forth in [ii], below, is intended to be used in employment application forms. A modification of this language is suggested for inclusion in employee handbooks and in the acknowledgment of receipt which the employee signs when he or she receives that handbook.ⁿ¹⁷

[ii] Form EMPLOYMENT AT WILL

EMPLOYMENT AT WILL

In consideration of my employment, I agree to conform to all Company work rules and policies. I further agree that my employment with the company is at will so that either I or the Company may terminate my employment with or without cause and with or without prior notice, at any time. I also agree that I may be demoted or disciplined at any time and the terms of my employment may be altered at any time, with or without cause, at the discretion of the Company. No one other than an officer of the Company has the authority to alter this arrangement, to enter into an agreement for employment for a specified period of time, or to make any agreement contrary to this policy, and any such agreement must be in writing and must be signed by an officer of the Company and by me.

[3] Employment Interviews

Pre-employment interviews raise many of the same questions encountered in the context of drafting lawful employment applications, such as the permissible scope of inquiries under federal and state EEO and privacy laws and the need to avoid unintended representations regarding employment tenure. As a consequence, managers, supervisors, personnel administrators, and other company representatives who participate in the pre-employment interview process should avoid statements that violate EEO or privacy laws, that may bind the employer to an implied contract for any specific term, or that otherwise limit the employer's right to discharge. If possible, such persons should be intimately familiar with both the legal purpose and the content of company policies regarding hiring and retention of employment. For discussion of permissible inquiries under EEO laws, see Chapter 41.

The best defense against later employment disputes, whether regarding job performance, misconduct, or job tenure, is to screen applicants thoroughly to ensure the hiring of a person qualified for the job in question. Employers should not assume that, during probationary periods, they will retain unfettered discretion to discharge employees for perceived performance deficiencies.¹⁸ Probationary periods are not substitutes for proper interviewing and hiring procedures.

[4] Offer Letters

[a] Acceptable and Unacceptable Statements

Offer letters are a step in the hiring process and, like oral recruiting comments, may constitute evidence of intended limitations on the employer's freedom to discipline or discharge. Whether an offer letter will be deemed to constitute a written employment contract for a definite term will depend, of course, on the particular facts and circumstances of the case, including the specific wording of the letter.¹⁹ Therefore, if an employer decides to use offer letters in its employment process, it should carefully review their contents for unintended promises.

As a general rule, offer letters should confirm only the employment benefits discussed during the recruiting process and should avoid reference to a specified term (that is, duration) of employment.²⁰ If the employer wishes, the letter may include express language disclaiming employment for any specified term or declaring the employment to be at will.²¹ In specifying salary benefits, the employer should be aware that some cases have suggested that a specific employment term may be inferred from the period designated for the measure of compensation.²² Although the same logic might apply to other benefits as well, one court has held that a reference to vesting schedules or other waiting periods for accrual of rights to deferred compensation will not by itself create implied agreements of employment for any specified term.²³

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Offer letters often are introduced in wrongful discharge litigation as evidence that the employer intended employment for a specified term, intended discharge only for "just cause," or intended "just cause" to have a narrow meaning. Similarly, offer letters, even if not introduced as evidence of an implied contract, nevertheless may be used as evidence of bad faith and unfair dealing in the administration of the post-hire relationship. Thus, whether or not an employer considers its employment relationship to be at will, offer letters may be strong evidence of what the employer "really intended" for the particular employee.

In short, unless specifically desired, employers should avoid such statements as: "You will be entitled to an annual bonus"; "You will be responsible for restoring XYZ Division to profitability" (such assignments imply a sufficiently lengthy employment to enable the parties to measure "success"); or "You will be entitled to exercise your stock options at annual intervals" (unless the employer also indicates that no specified employment term is intended and that entitlement to stock options is governed by a separate option agreement).

Finally, although mentioned in the text, it is important to emphasize that offer letters also are commonly used as evidence of violation of Labor Code sections 970-972. Those sections create criminal liability and civil liability for double damages for inducing an individual by false representations to move from one location to another for employment. While a defendant employer may view the allegations of false representations as unfounded, Labor Code section 970-972 claims are difficult to defeat by pre-trial motion. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[b] FORM--Offer Letter

[i] Comment

The form of offer letter set forth in [ii], below, is suggested for situations in which the employer concludes that written confirmation of the terms of hire is advisable.

[ii] Form Offer Letter

Re: Offer of Employment

Dear _____:

Thank you for taking the time to meet with _____ [names of company officials who interviewed applicant] to discuss the possibility of joining _____ [name of employer] as _____ [title of position]. After considering your qualifications and your interest in working for _____ [name of employer], we are pleased to offer you the position of _____ [title of position], at a salary of $_____ per _____ [specify, e.g., hour, week or month]. We understand that if you decide to accept this offer, you will be available to work on _____ [date].

If you accept this offer, your employment with _____ [name of employer] will be at will so that you or _____ [name of employer] may terminate the employment relationship with or without cause and with or without prior notice, at any time.

[As we discussed, this offer is contingent on the satisfactory results of an employment reference check, as well as on the satisfactory results of _____ [specify, e.g., drug and/or alcohol test, medical examination, criminal background investigation, credit records check, driving record check].

[For your information, I have enclosed a copy of our current employee handbook that describes the other terms and conditions of employment with _____ (name of employer), as well as the various benefits to which you may be entitled.] If you have any questions about this offer, [the other terms of employment described in the handbook, or about your eligibility to participate in or be covered by any of the described benefits,] please call me directly at _____ [telephone number].

We hope that you will accept our offer by signing and dating this letter in the space provided below and returning it to us by no later than _____ [date].

Yours very truly,

_____ [signature]

[Title of employer's representative]

ACCEPTED on _____ [date], by _____ [signature of prospective employee].

[5] Employment Agreements

[a] Acceptable and Unacceptable Statements

Written employment agreements provide an opportunity to clearly and thoroughly define the terms of employment. They are advised for high-level executives, sales representatives, and employees (such as professional or technical employees) hired to perform highly specialized job duties. They are required under Labor Code sections 2751 and 2752 for commissioned employees if the employer has no permanent and fixed place of business in California. They are also required under Civil Code section 3423(e) if the contract obligates the employee to render services exclusively for the employer and the employer wishes to obtain injunctive relief in court in the event of a breach.

Regardless of the desirability or mandatory nature of an employment contract, except for an employee who is a party to a contract to render personal service in the production of phonorecords in which sounds are first fixed,^{n23.1} and a contract of apprenticeship,^{n23.2} a contract to render personal service may not be enforced against the employee beyond seven years from the commencement of service under it.ⁿ²⁴

Care in the drafting of written employment agreements is essential. Ambiguities in agreements drafted by the employer will be resolved in favor of the employee.ⁿ²⁵ However, well drafted agreements according the employer broad discretion to discipline and discharge may possibly preclude an employee from later successfully alleging an inconsistent implied agreement to terminate only for cause.ⁿ²⁶ A written contract that contains an express at will clause creates evidence of an at will relationship that is difficult to rebut.ⁿ²⁷ Courts may refuse to allow parol evidence to rebut an integrated employment contract containing an at will clause.ⁿ²⁸ However, if the written contract is not integrated, the fact that at will language exists does not preclude the existence of an implied in fact contract to terminate for cause only.ⁿ²⁹

[b] Checklist of Clauses for Written Employment Agreements

The following is a checklist, with comments where appropriate, of potential clauses for written employment agreements. The list is not exhaustive, but covers most common contract terms.

1. Period of Employment. The agreement should state (a) the basic term of the contract, and (b) any provisions for contract renewal. Care should be taken not to guarantee employment for the duration of the basic term unless such guarantee is intended.

2. Position, Duties, and Responsibilities. The agreement should state (a) the employee's job title, (b) the employee's primary job duties, (c) the employer's discretion to modify the job title or duties, and (d) the standard of care or performance (for example, "best efforts") applicable to performance of job duties.

3. Compensation, Benefits, and Expenses. The agreement should state (a) the amount and method of compensation (for example, by salary and commissions payable monthly); (b) the benefits to which the employee is entitled (referring to the master benefit plans wherever appropriate to avoid inconsistencies in benefit descriptions), and (c) the employer's policy regarding reimbursement of employee expenses.

4. Termination. The agreement should state the grounds for its termination, including, for example, (a) by the death, disability, or incapacity of the employee (or the employer, if the employer is a natural person);ⁿ³⁰ (b) by the merger, sale, bankruptcy, or dissolution of the employer, if the employer is a corporation;ⁿ³¹ (c) by the employer for cause and/or not for cause;ⁿ³² and (d) by the employee (for example, for material breach by the employer).ⁿ³³ The agreement should also include the obligations of the employee upon termination, such as (a) return of the employer's property, and (b) survival of any confidentiality provisions.

5. Proprietary Information. The agreement should (a) define any proprietary information of the employer that is covered by the agreement, (b) state the restrictions on its use by the employee, (c) include a covenant not to compete during the term of the employment, and (d) state the remedies for breach of the agreement. For discussion of trade secrets, proprietary information, and covenants not to compete, see Chapter 70.

6. Employee Inventions and Ideas. The agreement should cover (a) disclosure of inventions and ideas to the employer; (b) assignments of inventions and ideas; and (c) any exclusions from the disclosure obligations. The clause should discuss inventions and ideas developed during the post-termination period. For example, the clause might include a presumption that inventions made within one year of termination were conceived during the employment. Finally, the clause should comply with Labor Code sections 2870-2872, which require the inclusion of a specific disclaimer that excludes inventions developed on the employee's own time that are unrelated to the employer's business. For full discussion of employee inventions, see Chapter 70.

7. Assignment of Rights and Binding Effect on Successors.

8. Required Notices.

9. Merger or Integration Clause (also known as a "zipper" or "entire agreement" clause), incorporating all previous written and oral representations.

10. Amendments and Waivers.

11. Severability and Enforcement.

12. Governing Law.

13. Opportunity to Consult Counsel/Understanding of Agreement.

14. Remedies. The agreement should cover (a) injunctive relief; (b) liquidated damages; (c) resort to arbitration; and (d) the exclusive nature of the specified remedies and remedial procedures.

[c] FORM--Employment Agreement

[i] Comment

The sample employment agreement below is a simple contract for an indefinite period. For sensitive positions, or high-level managers or executives, the employer may wish to more fully describe the respective rights and obligations of the parties.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Employment agreements are valuable beyond their ability to limit exposure for wrongful termination. They provide a vehicle for making critical employment policies a matter of contract (such as policies regarding trade secrets, inventions, ⁿ³⁴ and employee privacy regarding testing or employer searches).ⁿ³⁵ They provide a vehicle confirming the scope of special employee benefits arrangements.

They provide a vehicle for confirming exempt status under state and federal wage and hour laws,ⁿ³⁶ which, although not binding on the federal Wage and Hour Administrator or the California Labor Commissioner, may nevertheless help preclude imposition of penalties if the exempt status is successfully challenged. They also provide a vehicle for confirming the interpretation of important equal employment obligations, such as leave for pregnancy disabilities or nepotism rules and their application to married employees.ⁿ³⁷ Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[ii] Form Employment Agreement

EMPLOYMENT AGREEMENT

This agreement is made as of _____ [date] between _____ [employer's name] ("Employer") and _____ [employee's name] ("Employee").

1. The Employee shall serve as _____ [specify job title or position], and shall perform all services necessary, required, or advisable to fulfill the duties of that position. The Employee shall at all times be subject to the direction of the Employer, its management and other authorized agents, and to all policies established from time to time by the Employer.

2. The Employer's duties shall include _____ [specify], and such other duties as may be assigned from time to time.

3. The Employee will at all times faithfully, industriously, and to the best of his/her ability, experience, and talents, perform all the duties that may be required of him/her. The Employee shall not without the prior written consent of the Employer render services of a business, commercial, or professional nature to any other person or organization that might create a conflict of interest or otherwise interfere in any way with the Employee's obligations under this agreement.

4. As compensation for his/her services, the Employee shall receive a _____ [specify period, e.g., weekly or hourly] salary of $_____, payable _____ [specify time for payment, e.g., bi-weekly] during the period of employment, pro-rated for any partial payroll period.

5. The Employee shall also receive the following benefits: _____ [specify all benefits to be received, such as medical coverage, holidays, defined benefit or defined contribution plans, deferred compensation, life insurance, and sick pay].

[6. Insert confidentiality provision, if appropriate, or refer to separate attached agreement. See discussion in Chapter 70.]

[7. Insert intellectual property assignment clause, if appropriate.]

8. Either party may terminate this agreement for any reason, with or without cause, on _____ days' written notice, without further obligation or liability (except that Employer shall be obligated to pay Employee all compensation then due and owing and make payment for accrued unused vacation, if any). The foregoing notwithstanding, the Employer may terminate this agreement on immediate notice if the Employee materially breaches his/her obligations or neglects his/her duties hereunder. This agreement will terminate automatically on the death or incapacity of the Employee, or on _____ [the death or incapacity of the Employer or the merger, sale of assets, or dissolution of the Employer]. [It is expressly understood that the provisions of Paragraph 6 are intended to extend and remain in effect and enforceable despite the cancellation of the remainder of this agreement.]

9. This document embodies the entire terms and conditions of the agreement between the parties, and the Employee acknowledges that he/she has not relied on any warranties, representations, or promises except as set forth expressly in this document. This agreement may be changed, amended, or superseded only by an agreement in writing signed by the parties.

10. The parties further agree that they have been represented by counsel in the negotiation and preparation of this agreement or have been afforded the opportunity to be so represented. Each party agrees that they enter into this agreement freely, without coercion, and relying on each party's own judgment, not on any representations or promises made by the other party, except those contained herein.

[11. Insert grievance or arbitration clause, if desired. See discussion in § 62.03[1][f]-[h].]

12. This agreement shall be construed in accordance with the laws of the State of California [, and the parties hereby submit themselves to the courts of the County of _____ (insert desired county, such as the county in which the Employer has its principal place of business) for the purpose of enforcing the agreement].

Executed at _____ [insert city or county], California, on _____ [date] .

_____ [signature]

[Employer's name]

_____ [signature]

[Employee's name]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts General Overview Labor & Employment Law Preemployment Practices

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Drzewiecki v. H & R Block, Inc. (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 695, 703, 101 Cal. Rptr. 169

(n2)Footnote 2. Hillsman v. Sutter Community Hospitals (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 743, 750, 200 Cal. Rptr. 605 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 677-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 327, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 (discussing factors showing implied agreement to terminate for cause only).

(n4)Footnote 4. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 679, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 649, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 ; see also discussion in ch. 63.

(n7)Footnote 7. Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Limited (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 73 Cal. Rptr. 494 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Limited (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 674-675, 73 Cal. Rptr. 494 . For general discussion of tort of deceit, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, ch. 40, "Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts," Part A (Matthew Bender).

(n9)Footnote 9. Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1521-1522 ; see also Lab. Code §§ 973-976 (criminal sanctions for misrepresentations regarding existence of labor dispute or compensation); but cf. Tyco Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 148, 156-157, 211 Cal. Rptr. 540 (cause of action for violation of Lab. Code § 970 not stated under facts of case). For discussion of liability for fraud or violation of Labor Code sections 970-972, see ch. 63.

(n10)Footnote 10. [Reserved]

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 432.

(n12)Footnote 12. Gov. Code § 12946; see discussion in Chapter 41.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Comeaux v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Co. (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 1264, 1271 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1520 (disclaimer in application form enforceable if contains integration clause); Novosel v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (E.D. Mich. 1980) 495 F. Supp. 344, 346 (enforcing express disclaimer on an application form that was located directly above the applicant's signature); Crain v. Burroughs Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1983) 560 F. Supp. 849, 852 (plaintiff not entitled to introduce evidence of an implied agreement to terminate only for cause to contradict express written disclaimer); but see Harden v. Maybelline Sales Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1550, 1555-1556, 282 Cal. Rptr. 96 (application not a contract, but only a solicitation of an offer of employment, relegating at will clause to mere evidence of any ultimate agreement between the parties).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Mannion v. Campbell Soup Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 317, 323, 52 Cal. Rptr. 246 (personnel manager had no authority to bind the company to an employment for a specified term); Bene v. La Grande Laundry Co. (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 512, 515, 71 P.2d 351 (company officials had no apparent authority to bind the employer to an agreement of employment for life).

(n16)Footnote 16. McLain v. Great American Ins. Companies (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1485-1487, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 .

(n17)Footnote 17. See discussion in § 62.03[1][b].

(n18)Footnote 18. For a discussion of the use of introductory periods, see § 62.03[1][d].

(n19)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Ferreya v. E. & J. Gallo Winery (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 426, 41 Cal. Rptr. 819 ; Seifert v. Arnold Bros. (1934) 138 Cal. App. 324, 31 P.2d 1059 , in which offer letters were found not to create contracts for a specified period.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Lab. Code § 2924.

(n21)Footnote 21. See discussion in § 62.03[1][b].

(n22)Footnote 22. See Swaffield v. Universal Ecsco Corp. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 147, 168, 76 Cal. Rptr. 680 (assuming, but not deciding, that corporate minutes providing for an annual salary for plaintiff might evidence a one-year employment contract); Mannion v. Campbell Soup Co. (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 317, 320, 52 Cal. Rptr. 246 (when employment contract fixes no duration, term of employment extends for such period as the parties fix for the computation of salary).

(n23)Footnote 23. Bos v. United States Rubber Co. (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 565, 569, 224 P.2d 386 .

(n24)Footnote 23.1. See Lab. Code § 2855(b).

(n25)Footnote 23.2. See Lab. Code §§ 2855(a), 3070 et seq.

(n26)Footnote 24. Lab. Code § 2855.

(n27)Footnote 25. See Civ. Code § 1654; Hamilton v. Stockton Unified Sch. Dist. (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 944, 951-952, 54 Cal. Rptr. 463 (adhesion contract construed against drafting party).

(n28)Footnote 26. See Gerdlund v. Elec. Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 270, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 ; Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 313-314, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 ; Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 482, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 ; Wal-Noon Corp. v. Hill (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 605, 613, 119 Cal. Rptr. 646 ; Bos v. United States Rubber Co. (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 565, 570, 224 P.2d 386 ; Crain v. Burroughs Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1983) 560 F. Supp. 849, 852 ; Crossen v. Foremost-McKesson, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 1982) 537 F. Supp. 1076, 1077 ; Anderson v. Savin Corp. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 356, 364, 254 Cal. Rptr. 627 ; Haggard v. Kimberly Quality Care, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 508, 521, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 (integrated at will clause precluded introduction of parol evidence).

(n29)Footnote 27. See, e.g., DeHorney v. Bank of Am. Nat. Trust and Sav. Ass'n (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 459, 466-467 (bank's personnel policies did not modify clear terms of employment contract creating employment at will).

(n30)Footnote 28. See, e.g., Halvorsen v. Aramark Unif. Serv., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1388, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 (factors supporting existence of implied-in-fact employment agreement are irrelevant when there is express at will agreement); Haggard v. Kimberly Quality Care Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 508, 521, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16 (integrated at will clause precluded introduction of parol evidence); Anderson v. Savin Corp. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 356, 363-364, 254 Cal. Rptr. 627 ; Gerdlund v. Elec. Dispensers Int'l (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 263, 270, 235 Cal. Rptr. 279 (implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing may not be relied on to establish a "good cause" requirement for termination if an express at will employment contract exists, because no obligation can be implied that would result in the obliteration of a right expressly given under a written contract); see also discussion in § 60.09[3].

(n31)Footnote 29. See McLain v. Great Am. Ins. Cos. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1483-1487, 256 Cal. Rptr. 863 (implied promise may supersede previous at will agreement embodied in nonintegrated document); Thomka v. Fin. Corp. Of Am. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 877, 883-885, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 (employer's addition of at will language to sales regulations did not preclude jury finding that termination breached implied in fact agreement not to terminate without cause).

(n32)Footnote 30. See Lab. Code §§ 2920(c), (d), 2921, 2923.

(n33)Footnote 31. See Ray v. Alad Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 22, 29, 136 Cal. Rptr. 574, 560 P.2d 3 ; Gaspar v. United Milk Producers of Cal. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 546, 551, 144 P.2d 867 ; Pierce v. Riverside Mortg. Securities Co. (1938) 25 Cal. App. 2d 248, 254-255, 77 P.2d 226 ; cf. Corp. Code § 1107(a) (after merger, surviving corporation is subject to all liabilities of disappearing corporation).

(n34)Footnote 32. See Lab. Code § 2924; Compton, "Self-Insurance Against Wrongful Discharge Suits," 7 Cal. Lawyer 14 (May 1987).

(n35)Footnote 33. See Lab. Code § 2925.

(n36)Footnote 34. See generally discussion in ch. 70.

(n37)Footnote 35. See generally discussion in ch. 50.

(n38)Footnote 36. See generally discussion in chs. 1 -7.

(n39)Footnote 37. See generally discussion in ch. 41.

89 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-62 California Employment Law § 62.03

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

§ 62.03 Maintenance of Employment Relationship

[1] Handbooks and Policy Manuals

[a] Affirming Employer Discretion to Control Employment Relationship

A well-drafted employee handbook serves many useful purposes. It can help (1) create and promote a desired image or "corporate culture"; (2) improve employee morale by acquainting employees with their benefits and other aspects of employment that make the company a desirable place to work; (3) reduce employer-employee disputes by giving notice of uniform employment guidelines and policies (especially those concerning equal employment opportunity and employee discipline and discharge); (4) limit the possibility of union organizing; and (5) persuade an opposing counsel, a judge, or a jury in a wrongful discharge case that the employer has followed a coherent employee relations philosophy.

■ PRACTICE TIP:--EMPLOYER'S PERSPECTIVE

Some high-tech employers have put their employee manuals "on-line." This allows human resources professionals or counsel to make revisions as the law or policy changes and insures that supervisors and employees have current information. An "on-line" manual, however, is a document to which employees have access and not necessarily a document which an employer can prove that it has distributed.

Therefore, employers who create "on-line" manuals should make sure that e-mail or some other communication is sent to all employees advising them of new provisions. Moreover, employers should take note of the posting and notice requirements of various state and federal statutes, which may require hard copies of some employment policies to be delivered to employees or posted in the workplace.

Commentary by Lori A.M. Middlehurst.

Wrongful discharge law, however, dictates caution in the drafting of handbooks. An employer may be held contractually bound by the representations it makes to its employees through both employee handbooks and policy manuals.¹ For example, an employer's violation of termination guidelines in employment manuals or of other policies implying self-imposed limitations on the power to terminate at will may be sufficient to state a cause of action for breach of an implied in fact employment contract.ⁿ² Nor is a decision to avoid publishing a handbook a solution to this problem. Oral representations by employer representatives or past practice may similarly limit an employer's freedom to discipline or discharge.ⁿ³

As a consequence, the best protection in developing a handbook is to assume that the document will be treated as a contract and, therefore, to preserve the maximum discretion in policy administration and to make only those promises that the employer truly intends to keep. Nonetheless, employers are well advised to seriously consider the inclusion of a clause in their employee handbooks that disclaims the contractual nature of the document and that indicates that the employment relationship is at will. Thus, if the contract disclaimer is upheld, the employer preserves considerable control over the employment relationship. If the contract disclaimer is not upheld, the employer becomes party to an agreement that contains only those assurances that the employer freely supports and that contains an express indication of at will employment status.

For additional discussion of, and model provisions for use in, employee handbooks and personnel policy manuals, see California Employers' Guide to Employee Handbooks and Personnel Policy Manuals (Matthew Bender).

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The decision whether or not to adopt an employee handbook or a policy manual, or both, requires careful consideration. The two documents serve different functions.

An employee handbook should be viewed as an employer's simplest and most direct statement to its employees concerning its basic employment guidelines—for example, its equal employment opportunity, vacation, sick leave, disability, and discipline policies.ⁿ⁴ A policy manual should be viewed as a more expansive statement to an employer's managers and supervisors of most, if not all, of its employment policies. The policy manual, for example, is the most appropriate place to provide explanations of how to implement specific policies and to provide copies of important or frequently used personnel forms.ⁿ⁵ If adopted, a policy manual should not be distributed to nonmanagement employees. Adoption of an employee handbook is strongly recommended. It serves the purposes stated in the text and, thereby, can help to reduce the many problems that can arise in a vacuum of employment guidelines.

Adoption of a policy manual is not automatically advisable. As noted above, a judge or a jury has the discretion to find a policy manual to be a binding contract, no matter how carefully an employer may try to draft clauses to avoid that effect. The same holds true for employee handbooks, but policy manuals are typically longer and more procedurally complex. Thus, policy manuals, if adopted and ignored, can turn from a useful tool of personnel administration into damaging evidence of failure to follow internal guidelines. In short, an employer should adopt only those policies that it can say with assurance that it will follow. If an employer has doubts about the utility of a policy manual, the best advice is to develop an employee handbook only, and to reconsider the need for a policy manual at a later date. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[b] Disclaimer Clauses

Not all employers will wish to include in their handbooks a blunt statement that employment is "at will" and that employees may be discharged at any time and for any reason. Such statements may provide fuel to union organizers, who often rely on the promise of negotiating a "just cause" provision in any collective bargaining agreement. An employer may suspect that confronting its employees with an express disclaimer may affect morale or exacerbate turnover. A disclaimer that is not well drafted may inject into the handbook a tone that undermines the promotional purpose of the remainder of the publication. Finally, a disclaimer may simply be inconsistent with the employer's overall employment relations philosophy. However, the best defense against a wrongful discharge suit based on handbook representations is an express limitation of their binding effect, and should be included in every handbook if it is management's intent to preserve maximum flexibility in dealing with its employees.

While the issue is unsettled, it appears that clear disclaimers limiting the legal effect of handbooks will be given effect. In Crain v. Burroughs Corp.,ⁿ⁶ a federal district court, applying California law, held that a plaintiff was not entitled to reach a jury on the issue of "just cause" for termination because a written agreement provided that either party could terminate the relationship at any time and for any reason. Because there was a valid express contract, the plaintiff could not rely on the terms of an implied contract, based on the employee manual or otherwise, to contradict the terms of the written agreement. The court also commented, "Moreover, the Preface to the ... Manual ... provides that [its] contents were under no circumstances to be construed as describing conditions of employment or as creating or constituting a contract. ... "n7

A well-drafted disclaimer should include a statement that the handbook is not intended to cover all possible situations that may arise in the employment relationship or to be contractually binding, that no employer representative except for specified individuals (for example, the president or other designated management employees) may create any employment contract or alter the provisions of the handbook, and that any such agreements must be in writing and signed by the affected employee and by a company official. The clause should also reserve to the employer the right to change the handbook's provisions at any time. However, notice to employees may nonetheless be required for new or changed policies to become effective.ⁿ⁸

This disclaimer should be echoed in other areas of the handbook that deal with the exercise of employer discretion, such as performance appraisalsⁿ⁹ and discipline and discharge provisions.ⁿ¹⁰ The employer should be aware that although a well-drafted disclaimer clause may avoid liability based on breach of an implied or express contract not to terminate except for cause, it will not necessarily avoid liability for violations of public policy.ⁿ¹¹

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Whether or not an employer should include an at will clause in an employee handbook (or in an application form or employment contract) is a business decision. On the one hand, such clauses may provide a limited defense to liability in wrongful discharge litigation. On the other hand, such clauses may adversely affect employee morale. ⁿ¹² From a purely legal perspective, the inclusion of at will language is recommended. It is true that at will clauses in employee handbooks and policy manuals provide less protection than employee signatures on application forms and contracts that declare the employment relationship to be at will. It is also true that at will clauses in employee handbooks or policy manuals (or poorly drafted at will clauses in employment applications or contracts) may be weakened or completely neutralized by employer statements or conduct that are inconsistent with at will employment. Nonetheless, existing case law suggests that at will statements can be of value and involve no legal "downside" risks.

From a purely human relations perspective, the inclusion of at will language in employment documents is a closer question. As indicated in the text, at will statements in employee handbooks and policy manuals alone are not "bombproof" defenses in wrongful discharge lawsuits. They are merely helpful. Yet, the cost to the employer of adopting at will language may be a significant negative reaction from the workforce. The adoption of at will language could also become an issue in the event of a union organizing effort. In summary, while the election whether to include at will clauses is a business decision, their inclusion is recommended from a legal standpoint. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[c] FORM--Sample Disclaimer Clause

[i] Comment

The sample introductory disclaimer clause below follows generally the guidelines described in [b], above, and is suggested for enclosure in handbooks. A similar disclaimer clause is set out in § 62.02[2][c][ii] for inclusion in employment applications.

[ii] Form Sample Disclaimer Clause

This handbook is intended to help you get acquainted with _____ [name of employer]. While it addresses many of the matters of concern to employees, this handbook is not intended to be an exhaustive compilation of the Company's employee relations policies. Nothing in this handbook is intended to create an express or implied contract of employment with the Company, or to modify or add to any contract of employment with the Company, or to create an expectation of continued employment for any specified term. The Company recognizes that both it and you remain free to terminate the employment relationship at any time, with or without cause. No agreement varying the at will nature of employment with the Company is valid unless reduced to a writing and signed by you and by an official of the Company.

Each employee is responsible for reading and following this handbook. If you at any time have questions regarding the application of the company's employee relations policies, we encourage you to discuss them with the Personnel Department or your supervisor.

Company policies may change from time to time, and the Company reserves the right to add to, modify, or delete provisions of this handbook or the policies and procedures on which they may be based, at any time without advance notice. This handbook supersedes and replaces all previous personnel policies, practices, and guidelines.

[d] Probationary Period Clauses

The concept of a "probationary period" derives from the collective bargaining practice of excepting from the "just cause" standard for discharge in the agreement a limited trial period, during which management has a virtually unlimited right to discharge a new employee.¹³ Employers who incorporate into their handbooks language that invokes this traditional industrial relations concept run a risk that a court may imply a "cause" standard for discharge after an employee successfully has completed the "probationary" period. The rationale is that if the employer states that an employee may be discharged for any reason, or for no reason whatsoever, during this limited period, implicitly the employer must be applying a more restrictive discharge standard after the probationary period has expired. The "successful" completion by an employee of a probationary period, or the employer's failure to criticize performance or extend a probationary period, also may estop an employer from alleging that the employee's unsatisfactory performance justified a discharge that occurs not long after expiration of the probationary period.

Walker v. Northern San Diego County Hospital District ¹⁴ demonstrates the danger of adopting a traditional "probationary period." In that case, the plaintiff was held to be entitled to try before a jury the issue of whether she was entitled to a pre-termination hearing and to be discharged only for cause. The court found that the plaintiff could be entitled to these protections because of the employer's "Probationary Period" clause in its employee handbook. During the employee's tenure, the clause was published in the handbook in three different versions. The first version stated that an employee would be promoted from "probationary" to "permanent employee" status at the completion of three months' employment if his or her work was "satisfactory." This language was amended to provide that the employer "reserve [d] the right to terminate employment without notice" if the employee's work during the probationary period was unsatisfactory, and later was again changed to provide that "If your overall performance is unsatisfactory, the [employer] reserves the right to terminate employment at any time within the probationary period."¹⁵ The court held that any of these versions could be sufficient to create an express or implied promise by the employer that "once an employee successfully completes the probationary period, [the employer] no longer has an unfettered right to discharge the employee."¹⁶

A traditional "probationary" period is logically inconsistent with the concept of at will employment. No employer who desires to maintain an unfettered right to discipline and discharge should include such language in an employee handbook. Instead, the employer should be careful to expressly state that the completion of the probationary period (or whatever other term is used for the initial period of employment) does not guarantee employment for any period or modify the employer's at will employment standard, if such a standard exists. The probationary period thus becomes little more than a period of, perhaps, limited entitlement to employee benefits.

[e] FORM--Introductory Period Clause

[i] Comment

The sample clause set forth in [ii], below is an alternative, as discussed in [d], above, to a traditional "probationary" clause. The clause provides for an "introductory" period that makes no reference to termination with or without cause. The employer may wish to include language that defers full eligibility for benefits until expiration of the introductory period.

[ii] Form Introductory Period Clause

The Company recruits carefully and believes that it is hiring the best employee for each position. It is, however, to both the Company's and the employee's advantage to have an initial period of employment during which the employee has time to appraise the Company and job content and the Company to appraise the new employee's job performance. Thus, each new employee must satisfactorily complete an introductory period of _____ [specify period, e.g., 90 days], measured from his or her initial date of hire. [If desired, specify any limitations on eligibility for benefits during the introductory period, e.g., the employee will not be eligible for nor earn any benefits during the introductory period, except for holiday pay.] At the Company's discretion, this period may be extended one or more times.

The successful completion of the introductory period does not mean that the employee is guaranteed employment for any specific duration [, nor does it limit the employee's or the Company's right to terminate the employment at any time, with or without cause].

[f] Grievance Clauses

Although dispute resolution procedures may be set out in separate documents, the handbook provides a convenient medium to publicize their existence and provisions. If the employer wishes to provide some form of binding dispute resolution procedure, such as arbitration, as a precondition to litigation, a written arbitration agreement is necessary.¹⁷ For examples of grievance procedures, see [4], below.

[g] Discipline and Discharge Clauses

In light of current wrongful discharge law, prudence dictates that employers advise employees of what is expected of them, and the circumstances under which employees may be disciplined or discharged. However, if an employer adopts a discipline or discharge policy, it must scrupulously follow the terms of that policy. An employer's violation of discipline or termination guidelines in employment manuals or of other policies implying self-imposed limitations on the employer's power to discipline or terminate at will may be sufficient to state a cause of action for breach of an implied-in-fact employment contract.¹⁸

In addition, enforcement of rules and the assessment of discipline should be exercised consistently. All employees who commit the same type of offense should be treated the same, unless there is a reasonable and demonstrable basis for differences in the punishment (for example, different degrees of fault or mitigating or aggravating circumstances). By creating its own discipline and discharge policy, an employer should be able to determine for itself the standards by which it will deal with its employees, escaping the imposition of some other standard by a court or jury, and will also provide a written basis to monitor the consistent administration of discipline. The policy may recite that discharge will be for "just," "good," or "sufficient" cause, if the employer wishes to bind itself to such a standard, or the employer may leave undefined the standard to be applied. In any event, the policy should be broad, covering most misconduct and performance problems, and should contain a disclaimer regarding its completeness. The policy also should include an express reservation of management discretion in administering the policy.ⁿ¹⁹

Many discipline and discharge policies include a provision for progressive discipline. The effective application of progressive discipline prohibits employees from asserting later that they were not warned that their conduct could lead to discharge, helps assure consistency by formalizing guidelines for the administration of discipline, and demonstrates the employer's wish to act reasonably and in good faith with its employees. Steps in progressive discipline policies typically begin with oral counselling, followed by a series of written warnings (which may or may not be signed by the employee) placed in the employee's personnel file, and end with probation or suspension. Some offenses, like theft or fighting, are so clearly inappropriate that progressive discipline will not be applied, and many companies establish two categories of offenses--misconduct that will not warrant progressive discipline, and other performance problems (like failure to meet performance standards or absenteeism or tardiness) that will. However, it is better to maintain the maximum flexibility in administering the policy regarding all offenses, and not to categorize offenses by severity.

It is important to note, however, that progressive discipline policies create a risk that the employer will bind itself to follow all of the steps.ⁿ²⁰ Therefore, the more prudent practice is to state in the policy that the employer reserves the right to choose the level of discipline, without first resorting to less severe disciplinary measures.

The size of the company should be taken into account in drafting a discipline policy. A formalized policy that may be appropriate in a larger company may be too restrictive or administratively burdensome in a smaller organization. No discipline policy should be adopted unless management intends to follow it.ⁿ²¹ Each rule to be included in the policy should be screened, to assure that it bears some reasonable relationship to a legitimate business interest.ⁿ²²

[h] FORM--Sample Discipline and Discharge Clause

[i] Comment

The sample clause set forth in [ii], below enumerates some of the common reasons why employers discharge and discipline employees. It is not exhaustive and does not contain a formal progressive discipline provision. The normal steps in such a system, such as warnings, probation, and suspension, are identified, but the use and timing of these choices is expressly reserved to management. see discussion in [g], above.

[ii] Form

Employees are expected to observe certain standards of job performance and conduct. The Company will endeavor, when appropriate, to provide an employee with a reasonable opportunity to correct any deficiencies in performance or adherence to Company rules. However, an employee who fails to do so may be subject to discipline, including termination of employment.

This section of the manual is intended to provide employees with fair notice of the standards of conduct and job performance expected of them. Of course, it is impossible to anticipate and list every conceivable circumstance that may arise and that may warrant imposition of discipline. Therefore, employees should recognize that conduct not specifically listed below, but that is otherwise detrimental to the interests of the Company, other employees, or customers, may also result in disciplinary action. Employees also should recognize that nothing in this policy is intended to alter the at will nature of their employment with the company.

Circumstances that may result in discipline, including termination of employment, include but are not limited to the following:

1. Inadequate Job Performance. Failure or refusal to satisfactorily perform the duties that are part of the employee's job, including failure to follow instructions or Company procedures or policies.

2. Tardiness and Absenteeism. Failure to be present at work as scheduled, including unauthorized failure to report to work on time; unauthorized failure to observe time limitations for meal periods or other work breaks; leaving work early without obtaining prior approval; excessive absences from work, regardless of the reason; and failure to notify the employee's supervisor or other appropriate employer representative of authorized absences from the job (such as for illness or vacation).

3. Insubordination and Disruptive Conduct. Examples include failure or unreasonable delay in carrying out instructions; discourteous, abusive, obscene, or offensive conduct or language toward customers, clients, business contacts, supervisors, or other employees; fighting on the job or on Company property; and threatening or inflicting bodily harm on another person.

4. Sexual and Other Harassment of Fellow Employees, Customers, and Others.

5. Health and Safety Violations. Failure to observe the health and safety regulations of the Company, or otherwise endangering the health and safety of others, including possession of a firearm or other dangerous weapon on company property.

6. Willful or Negligent Destruction or Damage of Company Property, or of Another Employee's Property.

7. Dishonesty or Abuse of Company Policies. Examples include failure to give complete or accurate information for personnel records; falsification of time sheets; false statements about the Company, other employees, or yourself; disclosure of confidential or proprietary information about the Company; being under the influence or in possession of, or selling, alcoholic beverages or narcotic or illegal drugs during work hours or on Company property; unauthorized possession of Company property or use of a Company vehicle; gambling on Company premises or during working hours; violation of conflict of interest rules; or other violation or abuse of Company policies.

8. Misuse of Time. Examples include neglect of job responsibilities; interfering with the work of other employees; sleeping on the job; or acts of inattention to duty.

9. Theft or Pilfering. Taking, possessing, or tampering with Company property, or that of customers or other employees, without authority.

10. Illegal Actions. Violations of public law or the commission of a criminal offense, if such violation or offense (a) indicates unfitness for the job, (b) adversely affects or indicates a potential threat to the Company and/or its employees, customers, or property, or (c) results in imprisonment of the employee or other criminal punishment that adversely affects his or her ability to adequately perform the duties of his or her job.

[i] Modifying Employment Policies

In Asmus v. Pacific Bell n22.1 the California Supreme Court found that an employment policy that had been unilaterally created by the employer could also be unilaterally modified or terminated by the employer if the policy was one of indefinite duration and the employer effected the change after a reasonable time, on reasonable notice, and without interfering with the employees' vested benefits.n22.2 In Asmus the employer issued a management employment securitypolicy ("MESP") in 1986. The MESP provided that it would be Pacific Bell's policy to offer management employees job security through reassignment and retraining if their jobs were eliminated and that the MESP would be maintained so long as there was no change that would materially affect achievement of Pacific Bell's business plan.^{n22.3} In January 1990, Pacific Bell notified its managers that it might terminate the MESP. In October 1991, Pacific Bell announced it would terminate the MESP on April 1, 1992.^{n22.4} The Supreme Court found that the condition that the MESP would be maintained so long as there was no change that would materially affect the business plan achievement was not an ascertainable event that could be measured in any reasonable manner; therefore, the contract created by the MESP was one of indefinite duration, and the general rule of terminating or modifying unilateral contracts applied. The general rule of modifying or terminating unilateral contracts is that no additional consideration is required if reasonable notice of the change is given.^{n22.5} The Court also found that the MESP did not create an illusory contract because the plaintiffs' had obtained the benefits of the policy while it was operable.^{n22.6}

[2] Stock Purchase Plans and Profit-Sharing Agreements

Statements that employment is "at will" that are included in documents other than employee handbooks may be enforced if they are published in such a manner as to provide actual notice to the employee.ⁿ²³ In Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors,ⁿ²⁴ the court of appeal held that a jury was not entitled to reach the issue of whether cause was required for termination because a statement in a stock option agreement signed by the employee expressly provided that employment was at will.ⁿ²⁵ The court rejected the employee's argument that the agreement was an adhesion contract, but cautioned that the agreement "does not grant [the employer] the right to terminate an employee in violation of the law."ⁿ²⁶ Such disclaimer clauses therefore will not protect an employer against claims for discharge in violation of public policy.

The agreement in Shapiro required the employee to continue his employment for one year in order to be entitled to the stock option.ⁿ²⁷ Such clauses conditioning a grant of benefits on employment for a specified period are common in stock option and other benefit agreements, and raise the issue of whether such deferred compensation arrangements create enforceable expectations of continued employment. In Bos v. United States Rubber Co.,ⁿ²⁸ the court held that a pension agreement that reserved eligibility determinations to the employer did not create a contractually enforceable expectation that the employee would remain in the employer's employ until retirement age. A clause in the agreement disclaimed any "right of service" for any employee, and reserved to the employer "its right and privilege to discharge at any time any officer, employee or agent when the interests of the Company, in its judgment, may so require. ..."ⁿ²⁹ Other California cases confirm that pension or deferred compensation plans with vesting schedules or conditions of service do not by themselves create enforceable agreements of employment for a specified term.ⁿ³⁰

[3] Performance Evaluations

An employer's disciplinary policies often provide for progressive discipline, including counseling, oral or written warnings, and perhaps probation, before discharge will be authorized.ⁿ³¹ It also may be difficult to prove to a jury that a discharge was for a good reason if there is no documentation of poor performance or if the employee's personnel file contains only documents relating to salary increases or other indications of satisfactory performance. An effective performance evaluation procedure therefore is an important step toward limiting potential liability for wrongful discharge or discipline.ⁿ³² Such a procedure may be systematic, including annual or semi-annual scheduled reviews, or informal, with written comments or evaluations provided to the employee from time to time as necessary. Either way, the process should be calculated to provide the employee accurate, timely, and specific information on performance. A jury may conclude that the employer was at fault or acting in bad faith if notice of poor performance was not given before discharge.ⁿ³³

Standardizing review criteria and educating managers to formally and regularly evaluate their employees reduces the potential for arbitrary treatment or differential standards in discharge and discipline.ⁿ³⁴ However, to make the system work effectively, managers must be properly trained, and the employees must be aware of how the procedure is structured and what is expected of them. After a written evaluation is prepared, a meeting with the employee should be scheduled. The manager should set specific objectives for the meeting, including specific changes he or she wishes to see in the employee's performance. The manager should encourage a dialogue during the interview, and should provide an opportunity for the employee to respond in writing as well. It will be difficult for the employee to challenge the manager's observations later if no objection is documented at or near the time of the review. The manager's comments on the appraisal should be detailed and candid. Where improvement is indicated, a plan and timetable for improvement should be specified by the manager. The manager should re-evaluate the employee's performance at the end of the designated time. Each performance appraisal should be subject to review by at least the next higher level of management, and the appraisal process should be audited from time to time to ensure consistency. The employer may also wish to make some appeal process available, perhaps through an "open door" or other informal grievance process.ⁿ³⁵ Whether or not the employee agrees with the performance review, the manager should obtain his or her signature on the review, documenting that he or she has received the review.

One court of appeal case has indicated that employers are not required to allow an employee's attorney to be present at discussions of the employee's performance.ⁿ³⁶

[4] Grievance Procedures

[a] Types of Procedures

Many employers have adopted some type of formal or informal internal dispute resolution procedure as an attempt to assure their employees an opportunity to voice their concerns before such concerns lead to litigation.ⁿ³⁷ Resolving disputes internally, when possible, may avoid litigation and avoids unnecessary publicity, which is particularly advantageous with sensitive claims such as sexual harassment. Finally, because one of a union's strongest organizing arguments is that a collective bargaining agreement will contain a mandatory grievance and arbitration procedure, an effective internal procedure may help an employer remain union-free.

Although there are numerous options available to employers, there are three basic approaches to drafting a dispute resolution procedure. The most informal is often referred to as an "open door" policy,ⁿ³⁸ and simply encourages open communication between the grievant and all levels of management. No formal dispute resolution process is provided. The second involves some variant of a formal grievance procedure.ⁿ³⁹ Typically, such procedures involve a series of steps in the resolution process, with ultimate appeal to a line manager, a disinterested manager, a high-level authority (such as the company president), or a committee composed of employees or of employees and managers. The third approach combines some form of grievance procedure with formal arbitration. The arbitration procedure may be binding or non-binding.

No employer should adopt a formal grievance or arbitration procedure unless it is prepared to follow it uniformly in all cases.ⁿ⁴⁰ To make the process effective, the employer must permit its employees to invoke the process without being labeled by management as "troublemakers" and without fear of retaliation. Management also must be prepared to evaluate realistically the merit of complaints brought at the lowest steps of the procedure, and not simply force all complaints through the process. Companies that permit line managers or committees to resolve disputes must also decide how much power to invest in them. The employer must decide whether these individuals are to have the right to reinstate discharged employees, and whether they are to have authority to resolve the dispute, or simply to recommend a solution to management. Some employers give their managers or committees the right to interpret established policy as it applies to specific circumstances, but not to change or establish policy.

Employers that establish internal dispute resolution procedures also should be aware that management's review and upholding of a discipline or discharge may establish the elements of knowledge and ratification necessary to impute to the company punitive damages.ⁿ⁴¹ On the other hand, the risk of a bad faith award should be substantially mitigated if the employer can show that it provided an opportunity for review of management's decision, and that, in its implementation of the review procedure, it dealt seriously with the employee's grievance.

One of the advantages to a formalized arbitration process may be to require an employee to submit a discharge dispute to arbitration, rather than to a jury. Requiring employees to exhaust available grievance and arbitration remedies serves the policy of providing a quick, relatively inexpensive alternative to court litigation. Arbitration is less disruptive to the conduct of the employer's business and to the employee's personal life, and promotes the resolution of problems with some uniformity by persons with experience in handling employment disputes. A written agreement to submit disputes to arbitration should be enforceable in most, but not all, types of employment disputes.ⁿ⁴² However, to be enforceable, the stipulated procedure must be fair to the employee and provide minimum due process protections.ⁿ⁴³

Before promulgating an arbitration procedure, the employer will want to examine a number of options regarding how it is to be implemented. Central to the procedure is the question of how arbitrators are to be selected. Some private organizations, like the American Arbitration Association, provide lists of qualified arbitrators, or other individuals can be selected who commonly arbitrate traditional labor disputes. Alternatively, arbitrators can be selected from the workforce. Commercial and labor arbitrators bring with them a knowledge of traditional employee relations concepts and industry practice. On the other hand, an employer may question whether the rules applied by traditional labor arbitrators are appropriate for union-free enterprises, or whether a non-legalistic "common sense" approach may be desirable. In all grievance and arbitration procedures, the employer should also decide under what circumstances lawyers will be allowed,ⁿ⁴⁴ whether transcripts will be taken, who may be called as witnesses, and who will bear the costs of the proceeding. It may be appropriate to require the employee to bear some of the costs, including, for example, his or her own attorney's fees; however, imposing too great a cost burden on the employee may affect access to or the basic fairness of the procedure. The California Supreme Court has concluded that when an employer imposes mandatory arbitration as a condition of employment, the arbitration agreement or process cannot generally require the employee to bear any type of expense that the employee would not be required to bear if he or she were free to bring the action in court.^{n44.1}

While procedurally fair arbitration agreements may be enforced, it is less clear that employees will be required to exhaust grievance procedures before resorting to a court suit. In Westlake Community Hospital v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁴⁵ a suit against a hospital association for revoking staff privileges was dismissed for failure to exhaust grievance procedures available under the association's bylaws. At least in states such as California, where courts are prepared to find that an employer's published policies and procedures are contractually binding,ⁿ⁴⁶ the policy favoring arbitration of disputes supports an argument for exhaustion of published internal grievance procedures that observe the basic dictates of due process.

[b] FORM--Open Door Policy

[i] Comment

The "Open Door Policy" described in [ii], below, sets forth the most informal format for resolution of grievances.ⁿ⁴⁷ It directs the chain of review through the first line supervisor, but thereafter leaves the options open to suit the circumstances. It is also a good idea to include an express representation that employees need not fear reprisals by invoking the process.

[ii] Form Sample Discipline and Discharge Clause

RESOLUTION OF GRIEVANCES (Open-Door Policy)

The Company believes that most problems can be resolved satisfactorily between the individual employee and his or her supervisor by talking things over. The Company therefore encourages each employee to first discuss all problems and misunderstandings with his or her immediate supervisor, or with another supervisor, if the employee so chooses. Any employee who is not then satisfied with the resolution need not hesitate to bring the matter to the attention of anyone in management. The employee's standing in the Company will in no way be prejudiced by doing so.

The Company will attempt to keep all such expressions of concern, the results of any investigation, and the terms of any resolution confidential. However, in the course of investigating and resolving the matter, some dissemination of information to others may be necessary.

[c] FORM--Informal Grievance Procedure

[i] Comment

The sample grievance procedure set forth in [ii], below, is a combination of the "Open Door Policy" and a formal written complaint procedure. The employee may invoke either the informal or written procedures, depending on the circumstances. The stipulation in this procedure that written complaints will be responded to in writing is optional; some employers may choose to leave the manner of response flexible.

[ii] Form Open Door Policy

RESOLUTION OF GRIEVANCES

The Company believes that problems and misunderstandings are best dealt with promptly, before they get out of hand. If you feel your employment has been adversely affected by an employment decision, you may bring your complaint to the attention of management in the following ways:

1. If you feel that satisfactory resolution of your complaint could best be handled in an informal fashion, you may bring it to the attention of your immediate supervisor or manager, or to another supervisor if you so choose; or
2. You may file a written statement with _____ [specify designated managerial employee, e.g., the company President], setting out all the facts and circumstances of your complaint.

All written complaints filed with _____ [specify designated managerial employee, e.g., the company President] will be investigated[, and a resolution proposed in writing]. [The decision of the _____ (specify designated manager) will be final.]

The Company will attempt to keep all such expressions of concern, the results of any investigation, and the terms of any resolution confidential. However, in the course of investigating and resolving the matter, some dissemination of information to others may be necessary.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Interpretation

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; see Prevost v. First Western Bank (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1492, 1501-1502, 239 Cal. Rptr. 161 ; Rulon-Miller v. International Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 249-251, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524 ; see also Note, "Implied Contract Rights to Job Security," 26 Stan. L. Rev. 335 (1974).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765

P.2d 373 ; Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1520 ; Kerr v. Rose (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1551, 1560-1562, 265 Cal. Rptr. 597 ; see also discussion in ch. 60.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Davis v. Consolidated Freightways (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 354, 368-369, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 438 ; Pugh v. See's Candies, Inc. (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 311, 317, 329, 171 Cal. Rptr. 917 (company president "had a practice of not terminating administrative personnel except for good cause"); Rabago-Alvarez v. Dart Industries, Inc. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 91, 97, 127 Cal. Rptr. 222 (representations during recruiting created implied limitations on termination at will); see also discussion in § 62.02[1]-[4].

(n4)Footnote 4. See California Employers' Guide to Employee Handbooks and Personnel Policy Manuals (Matthew Bender).

(n5)Footnote 5. See California Employers' Guide to Employee Handbooks and Personnel Policy Manuals (Matthew Bender).

(n6)Footnote 6. Crain v. Burroughs Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1983) 560 F. Supp. 849 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Crain v. Burroughs Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1983) 560 F. Supp. 849, 852-853 (contract also provided that provisions of the Manual would not apply to termination); see also Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 474-475, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 (employee signed stock option agreement allowing at will employment termination); Gianaculas v. Trans World Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1985) 761 F.2d 1391, 1394 (employment application expressly provided for at will employment).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Chapin v. Fairchild Camera etc. Corp. (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 192, 194 n.2, 196-197, 107 Cal. Rptr. 111 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See discussion in [3], below.

(n10)Footnote 10. See discussion in [g], [h], below.

(n11)Footnote 11. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 (liability under implied contract theory is based on contract, while liability under public policy sounds in tort).

(n12)Footnote 12. See California Employers' Guide to Employee Handbooks and Personnel Policy Manuals (Matthew Bender).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Hill & Sinicropi, Management Rights: A Legal and Arbitral Analysis (BNA 1986), pp. 293-295.

(n14)Footnote 14. Walker v. Northern San Diego County Hospital District (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 896, 185 Cal. Rptr. 617 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Walker v. Northern San Diego County Hospital District (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 896, 902-903, 185 Cal. Rptr. 617 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Walker v. Northern San Diego County Hospital District (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 896, 903, 185 Cal. Rptr. 617 .

(n17)Footnote 17. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.

(n18)Footnote 18. See Scott v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 ; Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682 ; see also discussion in § 62.03[1][a].

(n19)Footnote 19. See Scott v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 ; see generally discussion in [a] and [b], above.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Scott v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 .

(n21)Footnote 21. See Scott v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 ; Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; Rulon-Miller v. International Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 248, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524 .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Rulon-Miller v. International Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 248-251, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524 . This is important not only from a wrongful discharge perspective, but because of the requirements of equal employment opportunity laws. See generally discussion in ch. 41.

(n23)Footnote 22.1. Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 .

(n24)Footnote 22.2. See Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 11, 18, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 .

(n25)Footnote 22.3. See Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 7, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 .

(n26)Footnote 22.4. See Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 7, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 .

(n27)Footnote 22.5. See Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 14-15, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 .

(n28)Footnote 22.6. See Asmus v. Pacific Bell (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 1, 15-16, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179, 999 P.2d 71 .

(n29)Footnote 23. Rochlis v. Walt Disney Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 201, 211, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 793 (provision in stock option agreement, reserving employer's right to terminate with or without cause, precluded as a matter of law any implied agreement to the contrary).

(n30)Footnote 24. Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 .

(n31)Footnote 25. The agreement provided that "Nothing in this Stock Option Agreement or in the Plan shall confer upon the Employee any right to continue in the employ of the Trust or the Advisor or shall interfere with or restrict in any way the rights of the Trust or the Advisor, which are hereby expressly reserved, to discharge the Employee at any time for any reason whatsoever, with or without good cause." Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 473 n. 1, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 .

(n32)Footnote 26. Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 482 n. 10, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 .

(n33)Footnote 27. See Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 473 n. 1, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 .

(n34)Footnote 28. Bos v. United States Rubber Co. (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 565, 569, 224 P.2d 386 .

(n35)Footnote 29. Bos v. United States Rubber Co. (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 565, 567, 224 P.2d 386 .

(n36)Footnote 30. See Magee v. San Francisco Bar Pilots Benevolent & Protective Ass'n (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 278, 287, 198 P.2d 933 ; Hunter v. Sparling (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 711, 722-723, 197 P.2d 807 .

(n37)Footnote 31. See discussion in [1][g]-[h], above.

(n38)Footnote 32. See Martin, Bartol & Levine, "The Legal Ramifications of Performance Appraisal," 12 Empl.

Rel. L.J. 370 (1986-1987).

(n39)Footnote 33. While no California case has directly addressed the issue, courts in other jurisdictions have permitted employees to state a cause of action for negligence where advance notice adequate to permit the employee to improve performance was not provided prior to discharge. see Schipani v. Ford Motor Co. (1981) 102 Mich. App. 606, 302 N.W.2d 307, 315 ; Bulkin v. Western Kraft East, Inc. (E.D. Pa. 1976) 422 F. Supp. 437, 443-444 .

(n40)Footnote 34. See Martin, Bartol & Levine, "The Legal Ramifications of Performance Appraisal," 12 Empl. Rel. L. J. 370 (1986-1987).

(n41)Footnote 35. See discussion in [4], below.

(n42)Footnote 36. Robinson v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1108, 1131-1132, 228 Cal. Rptr. 591 .

(n43)Footnote 37. For discussions of various dispute resolution options, and their advantages and disadvantages, see Steiber, Blackburn & Pratt eds., Protecting Unorganized Employees Against Unjust Discharge: Proceedings of a Conference Held at Michigan State University (1983); Coulson, "Arbitration for the Individual Employee," 5 Empl. Rel. L.J. 406 (1979-1980); Lansing & Pegnetter, "Fair Dismissal Procedures for Non-Union Employees," 20 Amer. Bus. L.J. 75 (1982).

(n44)Footnote 38. See form in [b], below.

(n45)Footnote 39. See form in [c], below.

(n46)Footnote 40. See Cleary v. American Airlines, Inc. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 443, 455, 168 Cal. Rptr. 722 (the employer's adoption of a grievance procedure "compels the conclusion that this employer had recognized its responsibility to engage in good faith and fair dealing rather than in arbitrary conduct with respect to all of its employees") (emphasis in original); Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 807, 825-826, 171 Cal. Rptr. 604, 623 P.2d 165 .

(n47)Footnote 41. See Civ. Code § 3294(b); see also discussion in ch. 30.

(n48)Footnote 42. See discussion in ch. 60.

(n49)Footnote 43. See discussion in ch. 60.

(n50)Footnote 44. One case has suggested that employers are not required to allow an employee's attorney to be present at discussions of the employee's performance. see Robinson v. Hewlett-Packard Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1108, 1131-1132, 228 Cal. Rptr. 591 .

(n51)Footnote 44.1. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 110-111, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 .

(n52)Footnote 45. Westlake Community Hosp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 465, 475-477, 131 Cal. Rptr. 90, 551 P.2d 410 .

(n53)Footnote 46. See Scott v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 464-465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 ; Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n54)Footnote 47. See discussion in [a], above.

90 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-62 California Employment Law § 62.04

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

§ 62.04 General Considerations in Disciplining Employees

[1] Review to Ensure Compliance With Statutes, Employer Policy, and Past Practice

Before an employee is formally disciplined, the employer should review the decision to ensure that it is consistent with statutory limitations on the right to discipline and discharge,ⁿ¹ with published employer policies,ⁿ² and with the employer's past practice in like circumstances.ⁿ³ Circumstances that raise concerns regarding potential legal liability should be reviewed by counsel before discipline is implemented.ⁿ⁴

[2] Consideration of Disciplinary Alternatives

The employer should also review the proposed discipline to ensure that it fits the circumstances, and that no other alternative might be more appropriate. Unless the reason for proposed discipline involves extreme misconduct by the employee, it is advisable that discipline be administered only if the employee has had advance notice of the employer's expected standards of performance or conduct. If the employer has any doubts in this regard, it may be appropriate to consider other disciplinary alternatives, such as counseling, or oral or written warnings.

If the employer's investigation reveals that a personality conflict between supervisor and employee may be at least partly to blame, the company may wish to try a change in departments, job duties, or supervision. In addition to the value of making an effort to salvage an employee, the employer's litigation posture will be enhanced if it can demonstrate that it indeed chose discharge only as a last resort.

Before finally deciding to discharge an employee, the employer may wish to consider placing the employee on formal probation, or suspending him or her without pay, as an alternative to or the last step before discharge. see more detailed discussion in § 62.05[4][c].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsAt-Will EmploymentGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsEmployment ContractsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally discussion in ch. 60.

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in § 62.03[1][a].

(n3)Footnote 3. See generally Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See discussion in § 62.05[4][a][iii].

91 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-62 California Employment Law § 62.05

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

§ 62.05 Termination of the Employment Relationship

[1] Voluntary Termination

[a] Exit Interviews

Employers should consider conducting exit interviews with all voluntarily terminating employees, in order to ascertain the true reason for leaving, and in order to obtain important information on how well the employer's employee relations policies are being implemented. A thorough exit interview may help expose internal problems and protect against surprise "constructive discharge" claims later.ⁿ¹ An employee who opens up in the interview because he or she perceives that the employer is listening may also seek to resolve any problems directly with the employer, rather than going to a lawyer or an outside administrative agency.

The interview should be conducted by someone other than the employee's direct supervisor, preferably someone with personnel training. The interviewer should solicit as much detail as possible concerning the reasons for leaving. Thorough notes of what is said should be taken by the interviewer. If the employee indicates that some mistreatment by the employer is responsible, the interviewer should consider asking the employee to permit the employer an opportunity to investigate the circumstances alleged before the employee resigns.

For discussion of exit interviews in the context of involuntary terminations, see [4][d], below.

[b] Constructive Discharge

[i] Employer-Offered Option to Resign or Be Terminated

Sometimes an employer will attempt to avoid discharging an employee by asking the employee to "resign" or "retire" in lieu of being fired. The employer may do this, perhaps, because it wishes to avoid an unpleasant task, or because it believes that there will be no danger of liability for discharge if the employee "resigns." However, the courts will treat an option to resign in lieu of discharge as a "constructive discharge," and will give it the same legal effect as though the employee were simply fired.ⁿ² Providing an employee the opportunity to save face may, however, help ease the termination, and may also provide consideration supporting a separation agreement and release.ⁿ³

[ii] Resignations Because of Employee Claim of Intolerable Working Conditions

As discussed in Chapter 60, a constructive discharge may also arise in situations in which the employee quits as a result of intolerable working conditions.ⁿ⁴

In order to demonstrate constructive termination the employee has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the employer either intentionally or knowingly created working conditions that were so intolerable or aggravated that a reasonable person would be compelled to resign.ⁿ⁵ It is not enough that resignation was one option; the conditions must have been so egregious that resignation was the only option.ⁿ⁶ In some circumstances a single incident, such as a crime of violence against an employee by an employer or a demand that the employee commit a crime, may constitute a constructive discharge. Generally, though, either single isolated incidents of misconduct or demotion or negative performance ratings, even when accompanied by a decrease in pay, are insufficient to support a claim.ⁿ⁷

In addition to conducting exit interviews to determine the reasons for an employee's resignation, an effective protection against constructive discharge liability is to properly train supervisors and managers, and to be candid with employees regarding the discharge decision. Finally, employers should promptly respond to and investigate employee complaints, particularly where statutory or public policy infractions are suggested.

[c] "No-Show" Policies

Some employers adopt policies that if an employee fails to report to work or call in for a certain period of time (typically 3 days), the employee will be deemed to have resigned. Although the termination may be treated by the employer as a voluntary resignation, the systematic enforcement of such policies, without a full investigation in each instance of the circumstances concerning the employee's failure to report in, may expose the employer to liability for wrongful discharge. For example, the employee may be disabled and unable to communicate with the employer; the employee may in fact have communicated with a supervisor other than the one to whom he or she ordinarily reports; or the employee's personal circumstances that caused the failure to report may create sympathy with a jury. In no event should a no-show policy be implemented without an attempt to thoroughly investigate the circumstances, and the employee should be notified in writing of the fact of termination.

[2] Expiration of Express Contract

Employment for a term specified in an express employment agreement terminates automatically on expiration of the specified period.ⁿ⁸ Although the employment may be continued by sufferance, the employment thereafter should be terminable at the will of either party, absent an express or implied agreement to the contrary,ⁿ⁹ and subject to any limitations imposed by public policy, as discussed in Chapter 60.

[3] Layoff

Termination pursuant to a layoff or reduction in force constitutes an involuntary discharge. Such terminations have been considered by some courts to be for "good cause."ⁿ¹⁰ Assuming that terminations for economic reasons are permissible, the employer should nevertheless be prepared to document those economic reasons and establish that they are not merely a pretext for discriminatory or other unlawful treatment of the employee.

[4] Discharge Procedure

[a] Independent Review to Ensure Compliance With Statutes, Employer Policy, and Past Practice

[i] In General

A pragmatic discharge procedure, consistently applied, will help avoid wrongful discharge liability. An effective pre-termination review will permit an objective evaluation of the sufficiency of "cause" for termination, will verify that documentation sufficient to sustain the decision is in the personnel file, and will protect against liability by assuring that the discharge itself is carried out appropriately.

A good practice to forestall discharges hastily considered, and to permit a thorough review of the discharge decision, is to prohibit line managers from immediately terminating employees. If the employee has committed a repetitive offense (such as excessive absenteeism or tardiness), or if the problem is one of poor performance, evaluation of the decision to discharge can take place while the employee remains on the job. If immediate removal from the workplace is dictated by the circumstances, for example, in situations involving insubordination or other misconduct, supervisors could be authorized to suspend the employee pending investigation. All discharges should be subject to prior review by the next higher level of management and, preferably, by someone such as a human resources professional who is trained in handling discharges. Discharges of employees who are in a protected class, or who otherwise present litigation risks,ⁿ¹¹ should be reviewed by an attorney as well. Above all, the procedure should ensure that the employer's treatment of the terminated employee is fair, when objectively examined. Conduct by the employer in discharging the employee, if unduly outrageous, will subject the employer to compensatory damages for emotional distress and punitive damages.ⁿ¹²

[ii] Verify Documentation Sufficient to Support the Discharge

Before any discharge is approved, the employee's personnel file should be reviewed, and supervisors or managers should be asked about written warnings or other pertinent documentation that may not have been placed in the personnel file. Recent performance evaluations or merit salary increases should be reviewed. The employer should verify that the reason proffered for discharge is objectively justifiable as legitimate to the operation of the business. The employer should check the employee's length of service--the greater the tenure an individual has, the more substantial, and substantiated, should be the reason for discharge. However, the employer should avoid a "kitchen sink" approach, in which all possible reasons for a discharge are given; the company may later be required to prove all of these allegations.

[iii] Check for "Red Flag" Situations

A discharge should be carefully scrutinized if the circumstances raise a "red flag" regarding the possibility of litigation. The employer should be especially cautious if the employee to be terminated is long-tenured, is a member of a racial or ethnic minority, is a woman in a job traditionally dominated by men, is over 40 years old, is pregnant or has a pregnancy-related medical condition, is disabled,ⁿ¹³ has requested or recently taken family and medical leave or pregnancy leave,ⁿ¹⁴ has suffered an on-the-job injury, or has filed a worker's compensation claim or testified concerning another employee's claim.ⁿ¹⁵ The employer similarly should be cautious in discharging an employee who recently made complaints of sexual or racial harassment,ⁿ¹⁶ or of workplace safety or possible illegal conduct by the employer, who has filed a complaint with the Labor Commissioner or testified in proceedings before the Commissioner,ⁿ¹⁷ or who has engaged in other protected activities.ⁿ¹⁸ Companies also should be alert for claims by employees that performance problems are attributable to drug or alcohol addiction. Private employers regularly employing 25 or more employees must reasonably accommodate employees who wish to enter a drug or alcohol rehabilitation program.ⁿ¹⁹

[iv] Investigate the Facts and Circumstances

The individual responsible for reviewing the discharge should speak with all persons who have knowledge of the relevant facts and circumstances. He or she should take detailed notes, and consider obtaining signed statements if a witness later may be unavailable or may be hostile to the company's position. Because interviews and statements given to persons other than attorneys are not protected by the attorney-client privilege, there may be some situations that are sensitive enough to warrant participation by in-house or outside counsel (for example, an investigation involving allegations of sexual harassment, or a discharge in which the employer believes a lawsuit will follow). The California Supreme Court has recently reiterated that "good cause" for termination means, "A reasoned conclusion ... supported by substantial evidence gathered through an adequate investigation that includes notice of the claimed misconduct and a chance for the employee to respond."²⁰

[v] Verify That All Applicable Rules and Procedures Are Followed

In reviewing and implementing the discharge, the appropriate manager or personnel officer should review all applicable handbook statements and personnel policies and procedures to assure that they have been followed.²¹ That individual should also determine how persons similarly situated have been dealt with, to assure the uniform application of rules and procedures.²² If the company has a progressive discipline policy, the employer should verify that discipline was truly progressive. An employer risks liability for bad faith if it discharges in a situation where the offending conduct was tolerated for some period of time, and the employee then is subjected to a series of accelerated warnings or is summarily discharged as "an example." An employer also faces potential liability if it fails to follow all the steps in a progressive discipline procedure as outlined in its handbook.²³

However, even if the employer has not complied with certain policies, such as employee evaluations, if the contract is an express contract for a term, and there is no requirement of renewal, the employer is not liable for failure to renew.²⁴

[b] Pre-Termination Interview of Employee

The employer should meet with the employee and tell him that discharge is being considered, but that before making a final decision the company wishes to hear the employee's version of the events in question. The employee should be permitted a full opportunity to explain. Although a formal hearing may not be required,²⁵ prudence dictates that the employee's side of the story be heard before a decision is reached.²⁶ The employer may wish to consider asking the employee for a signed statement. If the employee raises factual allegations that have not been investigated, the employer should investigate them. If the employer has a grievance procedure in its handbook, it may be compelled to follow it should the employee request use of the process.²⁷ The employee should be advised or reminded (preferably in writing) of the existence of the procedure and any applicable time restrictions.

[c] Consideration of Probation or Other Alternatives

Before finally deciding to discharge, the employer should at least consider less severe alternatives. Some companies place employees on formal probation, or suspend them without pay as an alternative to or last step before discharge. If formal probation is used, the employee should be counseled as to what aspects of his or her performance need to be improved, a defined timetable for improvement should be established, and the employee should be warned that the next step will be discharge if the employee does not successfully complete the probationary period. All of this should be thoroughly documented. Additional training should also be considered, if this would assist the employee. At the end of the probation period (or sooner if the employee's performance deteriorates), the employee should be formally evaluated, and either discharged or, if performance has improved acceptably, taken off probation. Having agreed to provide the employee a designated probationary period to improve, the employer is probably taking a liability risk in discharging the employee before the expiration of that period, unless the employee's performance dips dramatically.²⁸

In certain situations, facts such as a personality conflict between the supervisor and employee may become known and the company may wish to try a change in departments, job duties, or supervision in an effort to salvage the employee. As stated above, the employer's litigation posture will be enhanced if it can demonstrate that it indeed chose discharge only as a last resort.

[d] Exit Interview

Discharged employees should be given exit interviews, if practical. The employee may provide a more candid assessment of the discharge than after he or she is coached by a lawyer. No attempt to dissuade the employee to take advantage of company benefits should be made, nor should the employer threaten to contest unemployment. The ability to continue the company's health benefits should be explained, and confirmed in writing.ⁿ²⁹ The employer should confirm that all wages have been paid, including commissions earned and payable and accrued unused vacation.ⁿ³⁰

Many discharged employees file lawsuits or charges with administrative agencies only after having been frustrated by their inability to obtain another job. If the company has a policy of confirming only dates of employment and job title,ⁿ³¹ the employee should be informed of this, and any available outplacement services should be explained. The employer should also consider providing a neutral letter confirming employment, or a letter of reference if one can be drafted that candidly describes the employee's good qualities. However, an employer can be held liable for injuries to a third party caused by the employer's failure to warn a prospective employer of the former employee's violent propensities.ⁿ³²

[e] FORM--Termination Checklist

[i] Comment

The checklist below is not exhaustive, but is intended to cover some of the major points that counsel for the employer should review and investigate before approving a discharge.

[ii] Form Termination Checklist

1. DISCIPLINARY PROCEDURES

- a. Were the employer's procedures and customary practices followed before the decision was made to terminate?
- b. Did the employee receive adequate, and all required, oral and written warnings?
- c. Is either probation or suspension required by the employer's policies or practices, and if so, has it been provided?
- d. Did the employee have adequate notice of the employer's conduct and performance standards, as well as the employer's assessment of the employee's conduct or performance, and an opportunity to improve his or her conduct or performance?
- e. Did the employer conduct a thorough investigation, including permitting the employee to tell his or her side of the story?
- f. Does the employee's conduct justify termination now?

2. SUFFICIENCY OF DOCUMENTATION

- a. Do the documents in the file adequately support the termination with demonstrable facts?
- b. Are there statements or credible witnesses to support the employer's allegations?

- c. Does the employee's prior disciplinary record support discipline?
- d. Can the employer demonstrate treatment consistent with how it previously had dealt with similarly situated individuals?
- e. Are both the documentation and the decision to terminate timely?

3. REPRESENTATIONS REGARDING CONTINUED EMPLOYMENT

- a. Were any representations made to the employee relating to job security, or suggesting that employment was promised for any particular period of time?
- b. If representations were made to the employee, were there any conditions (for example, that employment was subject to satisfactory performance)?
- c. How long has the employee worked for the company?
- d. Did the employee give up other job opportunities, or move, to accept the position?

4. PROTECTED ACTIVITY.

Does the decision to terminate follow suspiciously close to conduct by the employee that could be deemed protected activity under any state or federal statute (for example, the National Labor Relations Act, the Occupational Health and Safety Act, Title VII or the Fair Employment and Housing Act, or federal or state wage and hour laws)?

5. PROTECTED CLASS STATUS

- a. Is the employee a member of a class of employees protected by equal employment opportunity laws (for example, race, sex, pregnancy or pregnancy-related condition, marital status, national origin, religion, age, physical or mental disability, veteran, or sexual orientation)?
- b. If so, could the employee's protected class status have affected the decision to discharge in any way?
- c. If the employee is disabled, or if religious beliefs or practices may be a factor in the discharge, were all reasonable attempts to accommodate carried out?
- d. Did the employee oppose a practice directed at a co-employee in a protected class, or did the employee testify or offer to assist in a complaint by a member of a protected class?

[5] Releases of Liability

[a] Unilateral or Mutual General Release

In some situations, the employer may wish to reach an agreement to settle any possible claims the employee might have prior to termination of the employment relationship. The employer might also wish to do so in some situations in which an employee who has been terminated files, or threatens to file, an action against the employer. All agreements to compromise disputed employment claims should, as a matter of good practice, be evidenced by a written release, formal or informal according to the circumstances. The topics that should be covered in the agreement are set out in [b]-[h], below, and a formal agreement is set out in [i], below. A form of informal agreement is set out in [j], below. The releasing language should be broad enough to encompass all individuals in an employment relationship with the employer, and all independent contractors or other agents of the company. The language should also be broad enough to encompass, to the extent permitted by law,ⁿ³³ every possible cause of action the employee might have.^{n33.1} The release should recite as supporting consideration all sums to be paid, any agreement to maintain insurance or other benefits, and any nonmonetary consideration, such as a letter of reference or the right to reinstatement.

An employee may request that a release be mutual, where there is a potential claim against him or her by the employer. This may arise, for example, where the employee has caused the employer financial loss, or where there are issues relating to the divulgence of confidential or proprietary information or trade secrets of the employer. Before the employer consents to a mutual release, it should conduct an appropriate investigation to ascertain any damages and the limits of its potential loss.

The doctrine of economic duress may arise in release, settlement, or severance agreement contexts if the employer's demand for a release can be seen as the doing of a wrongful act which was sufficiently coercive to cause a reasonably prudent person faced with no reasonable alternative to succumb to the employer's pressure.^{n33.2} But courts are reluctant to set aside settlements, and they apply economic duress only in limited circumstances and as a last resort.^{n33.3} To invalidate a settlement agreement, the person opposing it must show each of the following:^{n33.4}

- The employer knew there was no legitimate dispute and that it was liable for the full amount.
- The employer nevertheless refused in bad faith to pay and thereby created the economic duress of imminent bankruptcy for the employee.
- The employer, knowing the vulnerability its own bad faith had created, used the situation to escape an acknowledged debt.
- The employee was forced to accept an inequitably low amount.

The employee also may assert the doctrine of an unconscionable adhesion contract to attempt to invalidate a release. Unconscionability has both a procedural and a substantive element. The procedural element focuses on oppression or surprise due to unequal bargaining power. The substantive element focuses on overly harsh or one-sided results. Procedural and substantive unconscionability must both be present for a court to exercise its discretion to refuse to enforce a contract or clause under the doctrine of unconscionability. However, they need not be present in the same degree. The more substantively oppressive the contract term, the less evidence of procedural unconscionability is required to come to the conclusion that the term is unenforceable, and vice versa.^{n33.5}

[b] Releases From Wage Claims

By statute, an employee who is not hired for a specified term is entitled to compensation for all services rendered up to the time of his or her dismissal.ⁿ³⁴ With certain limited exceptions,ⁿ³⁵ any wages earned and unpaid at the time of discharge (including pay for earned and unused vacation time)ⁿ³⁶ are due and payable immediately.ⁿ³⁷ An employer may not require an employee to execute a release of any claim for wages that are due or to become due, unless those wages have already been paid.ⁿ³⁸ For these purposes, "execution of a release" includes requiring an employee, as a condition of being paid, to execute a statement of the hours the employee worked during a pay period, which the employer knows to be false.^{n38.1} The release therefore should not allocate any portion of the monetary consideration to wages due or to be paid up to the time of discharge. It appears that the employer may allocate a portion of the sum paid to compensation allegedly owed after the date of termination (that is, compensation that the employee would have earned but for the termination).

[c] Release of Workers' Compensation Claims

A release will not extinguish an employee's right to recovery under the worker's compensation laws, absent formal approval by the Worker's Compensation Appeals Board of the release and the sufficiency of the consideration provided.ⁿ³⁹ Presumably, claims for discrimination against workers' compensation claimants under Labor Code section 132a are also subject to this approval requirement, because the penalty for discrimination partially consists of an increase in the employee's compensation award.ⁿ⁴⁰

[d] Waiver of Unknown Claims

Absent an express waiver, Civil Code section 1542 precludes the general release of claims unknown to the releasor at the time of signing which, were they known, would have materially affected the decision to sign. To be effective, the intent to waive this protection must be clear,ⁿ⁴¹ and the better practice is to quote the language of the statute verbatim in the release. However, nothing in § 1542 requires that it be designated in the release or that a party specifically waive its provisions. Thus, the absence of an explicit waiver under Civ. Code § 1542 will not necessarily invalidate the release. For example, the absence of an explicit waiver of Civ. Code § 1542 in a severance agreement did not preclude enforcement of the agreement, because the agreement stated that the plaintiff waived all claims existing as of the date he signed the agreement arising from or relating to his employment or the termination of his employment and any claims arising under the common law of contract, implied contract, tort, public policy, or statute, such as claims under specified legislative enactments, or any other federal or state law, statute, decision, order, policy or regulation establishing or relating to claims or rights of employees, including, but not limited to, any and all claims in tort or contract, based upon public policy, and any and all claims alleging breach of an express or implied, or oral or written, contract, or alleging misrepresentation, defamation, interference with contract, or wrongful discharge. Plaintiff understood he was releasing claims arising under all statutes to which the agreement referred, even those he did not understand, which was sufficient to withstand the provisions of Civ. Code § 1542.^{n41.1}

[e] Confidentiality

The employer often will be concerned about a "snowball" effect if word gets out that it has settled with an employee. To help protect against this, it may wish to include a clause requiring the employee to hold in confidence the fact of settlement and the terms of the agreement.

[f] Employment References

Counsel for the employee will often request that only specified information be given out by the employer in response to inquiries from prospective employers or others. If the employer agrees to this, it should condition its agreement on a requirement that the employee direct all inquiries to one or two identified managers. The employer otherwise may have little control over information being disseminated, and risks breach of the agreement. Another way to handle the issue is to draft and attach as an exhibit to the agreement a neutral letter of reference which incorporates the information the parties agree should be disclosed.

[g] Waiver of Reemployment Rights

To eliminate all ambiguity regarding whether the employee is eligible for rehire, the agreement should specify that the employee waives any rehire or reemployment rights. The execution by the employer of a settlement agreement that includes the reinstatement or retention of an employee may create an implied covenant that the employee will continue to be employed for a reasonable period thereafter.ⁿ⁴²

[h] FORM--Release[i] Comment

The settlement agreement and release set forth in [ii], below is intended for use in situations in which there are contested claims that may result in litigation, or in settlement of a lawsuit already filed. For discussion of the agreement and the various terms in the agreement, see [a]-[h], above.

If the employee has raised or may potentially raise allegations of age discrimination, the agreement must contain additional provisions specified in the Older Workers Benefit Protection (OWBPA) if it is to be effective as a waiver of rights under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA).⁴³ The OWBPA has many procedural requirements, including a mandate that the employee be given a specified amount of time within in which to consider any agreement to waive rights under the ADEA.⁴⁴ For full discussion of the OWBPA requirements for a valid waiver of ADEA rights in the context of voluntary early retirement programs, see Chapter 41, Part D.

[ii] FORM--Settlement Agreement and Release Settlement Agreement and Release

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT, GENERAL RELEASE, AND COVENANT NOT TO SUE

For and in consideration of the mutual promises set forth below, _____ [name of employee] ("Employee"), and _____ [name of employer] ("Employer") agree as follows:

1. On the execution of this Settlement Agreement, General Release, and Covenant Not to Sue ("Agreement") by Employee, Employer shall:

a. Pay Employee the net sum of $ _____, as compensation for his/her claims of personal injury, including emotional distress and general damages; and

b. Pay Employee the gross sum of $ _____, less applicable state and federal tax withholdings, as compensation for his/her claims of lost wages; and

c. Make such payments in the form of a check payable _____ [jointly] to Employee [and his/her attorney, _____ (name of attorney)]; and

d. Respond to inquiries from prospective employers of Employee as follows: (1) If in writing, Employer shall respond as follows: "This is to inform you that _____ [name of employee] was an employee of _____ [name of employer] from _____ [date], to _____ [date]. During his/her tenure, Mr./Ms. _____ [last name of employee] advanced from the position of _____ [title of first position] to the position of _____ [title of last position]. During the same period, Mr./Ms. _____ [last name of employee] received regular salary increases." (2) If orally: Employer shall endeavor to convey the substance of the written response above and shall state that it is against the policy of Employer to comment further on the quality of a former employee's performance.

[2. Simultaneously with the execution of this Agreement Employee shall cause his/her attorneys to sign and return to Employer a Stipulation and Order of Dismissal with Prejudice, which dismisses in its entirety and with prejudice Civil Action No. _____ presently pending in the Superior Court of California, County of _____. Employer will file the Stipulation and Order of Dismissal with Prejudice with the court.]

3. Employee _____ [further] agrees not to sue or initiate against Employer, or any of the persons, corporations, or other entities covered by the release in Paragraph 5 below, any compliance review, action, or proceeding, or to participate in same, individually or as a member of a class, under any contract (express or implied), law, or regulation, whether federal, state, or local, pertaining in any manner whatsoever to Employee's employment by

Employer OR THE TERMINATION THEREOF.n45

4. Employee further agrees that he/she shall not at any time seek employment with Employer, nor shall Employer at any time be under any obligation to hire him/her.

5. Employee, his/her heirs, representatives, successors, and assigns do hereby completely release and forever discharge Employer, its parent, affiliated, and subsidiary corporations, and it and their present and former shareholders, officers, agents, directors, employees and all of its or their heirs, representatives, successors, and assigns from all claims, rights, demands, actions, obligations, and causes of action of any and every kind, nature, and character, known or unknown, that Employee may now have, or has ever had, against Employer, including without limitation any and all claims for damages, declaratory or injunctive relief or attorneys' fees, that are in any way related to Employee's employment at Employer or the termination thereof [or which were raised or could have been raised in Civil Action No. _____ mentioned in Paragraph 2, above].

6. It is understood and agreed that this is a full and final release applying not only to all claims as defined in Paragraph 5 above that are presently known, anticipated or disclosed to Employee, but also to all claims as defined in Paragraph 5 above that are presently unknown, unanticipated, and undisclosed to Employee. Employee hereby waives any and all rights or benefits that he/she may now have, or may have in the future, under the terms of California Civil Code, section 1542, which provides as follows:

A general release does not extend to claims which the creditor does not know or suspect to exist in his or her favor at the time of executing the release, which if known by him or her must have materially affected his settlement with the debtor.

7. This Agreement and its terms shall be maintained by the parties and their attorneys in strict confidence, and neither a party nor his/her attorney shall disclose the Agreement or any of its terms, or the contents of any negotiations that led to this Agreement to any other person or entity, other than his/her spouse, without the express written consent of the other parties, unless required to do so by law.

8. It is understood and agreed that this is a compromise settlement of a disputed claim, or disputed claims, and that the furnishing of consideration pursuant to this Agreement shall not be deemed or construed at any time or for any purpose as an admission of liability by any party to this Agreement.

9. The parties to this Agreement further agree and promise that the parties shall bear their own costs and attorneys' fees with regard to the negotiation of this Agreement [and the prosecution of Civil Action No. _____ mentioned in Paragraph 2, above].

10. The undersigned parties to this Agreement acknowledge that they have been represented by counsel in the negotiation and preparation of this Agreement; that they have read the Agreement; that they are fully aware of its contents and of its legal effect; that the preceding paragraphs recite the sole consideration for this Agreement; that, with the exception set forth in the following two paragraphs, all agreements and understandings between the parties to this Agreement are embodied and expressed herein; and that each party enters into this Agreement freely, without coercion, and based on the party's own judgment and not in reliance on any representations or promises made by the other party, other than those contained herein.

11. Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed to bar Employee from receiving a total of $_____ from Employer under the terms of its master pension plan, a sum that Employee does not dispute as his/her total entitlement under the master pension plan and a sum that Employer agrees to pay in addition to the sums set forth in Paragraph 1 above.

12. Employee agrees to indemnify, defend, and hold harmless Employer, its parent, affiliated, and subsidiary entities, and its and their directors, officers, employees, agents, attorneys, successors, and assigns from any taxes, assessments, penalties, or interest payments that Employer may at any time incur by reason of any demand, proceeding, action, or suit brought against Employer arising out of or in any manner related to local, state, or federal taxes allegedly due from Employee in connection with the settlement of Employee's claims against Employer for personal injuries, including emotional distress and general damages. If any demand, proceeding, action, or suit is made against Employer for any such alleged taxes due from Employee arising out of this settlement, Employer agrees to notify Employee and his/her attorney, _____ [name of attorney], immediately.

[13. If appropriate, insert confidentiality clause to protect Employer's confidential and proprietary information and trade secrets. see discussion in Chapter 70.]

14. This Agreement shall be construed and governed by the laws of the State of California. The language of all parts of this Agreement shall in all cases be construed as a whole, according to its fair meaning, and not strictly for or against any party. [The parties hereby submit themselves to the Courts of California in and for the County of _____ (insert desired county, such as county of Employer's principal place of business) for the purpose of enforcing this Agreement.]

15. Should any provision of this Agreement be declared or be determined by any court to be illegal or invalid, the validity of the remaining parts, terms, or provisions shall not be affected thereby and said illegal or invalid part, term, or provision shall be deemed not to be a part of this Agreement.

Dated: _____

By: _____ [signature]

Employee

Dated: _____

By: _____ [signature]

Attorney for Employee

Dated: _____

By: _____ [signature]

Employer

Dated: _____

By: _____ [signature]

Attorney for Company

[i] FORM--Short Form Separation Agreement

[i] Comment

The sample short form separation agreement in [ii], below, is for use in situations in which a longer, more legalistic, settlement agreement and release might be inappropriate. It should be used only to document simple separation arrangements and should not be used when the circumstances suggest litigation will follow. No agreement or release should be used without first consulting with counsel. This form is insufficient to release claims under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA).ⁿ⁴⁶ see discussion of releases in [a]-[h], above.

[ii] Form Short Form Separation Agreement

Dear _____:

This letter confirms the agreement reached during our conversation _____ [date or time, e.g., today].

I told you that the Company had reached a decision to terminate your employment, effective _____ [date], because _____ [give reason]. You and I agreed that in lieu of discharge you could submit a letter of resignation. Although our normal policy in such situations is _____ [specify], we agreed to compromise our differences by permitting your personnel file to reflect your resignation, by continuing your current compensation (except for any bonuses or vacation accrual, and subject to required withholding) until _____ [specify last date], and by paying the premiums for you on our group health insurance until _____ [specify last date]. We also agreed that the Company would not contest the award to you of unemployment benefits.

Except as specified above, this agreement between us completely extinguishes any claim you may have against the Company, and its officers, directors, agents, and employees, relating to your employment by and separation from the Company, including any claim for breach of contract or tort, or for violation of federal or state discrimination laws. No promises other than those referred to in this confirming letter were made to you to induce you to agree to this compromise.

I wish you the best in your future endeavors.

_____ [signature]

[Title of Employer's representative]

I understand and accept the above terms [and acknowledge that I have been provided the opportunity to consult with an attorney].

Date: _____

_____ [signature]

[Employee's name]

Date: _____

_____ [signature]

Witness

[6] Post-Discharge Procedure

[a] Employment References

Handling inquiries from prospective employers regarding a discharged employee is a delicate matter. The employer is guilty of a misdemeanor, and subject to treble civil damages, if it makes a misrepresentation that prevents, or attempts to prevent, a former employee from obtaining new employment.ⁿ⁴⁷ However, the employer may in response to a special request furnish without liability truthful information concerning the reason why a former employee resigned or was discharged.ⁿ⁴⁸ Caution is required, however, because a reference that describes an employee's strengths, but omits mention of the employee's negative qualities, such as violent propensities, could expose the employer to liability for damages if a third party is harmed as a result of the employer's failure to warn.ⁿ⁴⁹

Employers are required to divulge specified types of information regarding current and former employees to a law enforcement agency conducting a background investigation on an applicant.ⁿ⁵⁰ In the absence of fraud or malice, no employer is subject to any civil liability for any relevant cause of action by virtue of releasing employment information required by this provision.ⁿ⁵¹ The provision is intended to address the increasingly prevalent practice of employers to refuse to divulge information, even in the situation in which the applicant has signed a waiver to release the information.ⁿ⁵² For further discussion of this provision, see Chapter 51.

The employer may also incur liability for defamation. Civil Code Section 47(c) creates a qualified privilege against defamation liability for information provided to "interested" persons.ⁿ⁵³ The privilege covers statements regarding the reasons for discharge made to employees within the organization with a "need to know,"ⁿ⁵⁴ and to inquiring prospective employers.ⁿ⁵⁵ Section 47(c) expressly provides that the privilege applies to and includes a communication concerning the job performance or qualifications of an applicant for employment, based on credible evidence, made without malice, by a current or former employer of the applicant to, and on request of, one whom the employer reasonably believes is a prospective employer of the applicant. Section 47(c) also authorizes a current or former employer, or the employer's agent, to answer, whether or not the employer would rehire a current or former employee. However, the qualified privilege will be lost if the statements are knowingly falseⁿ⁵⁶ or concern aspects of the employee's personal life that have no bearing on the employment relationship.ⁿ⁵⁷ Furthermore, the statutory privilege specifically does not apply to a communication concerning the speech or activities of an applicant for employment if the speech or activities are constitutionally protected, or otherwise protected by Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.3 (concerning labor disputes) or any other provision of law.ⁿ⁵⁸ For additional discussion, see Chapter 63.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

To protect themselves, many companies have adopted policies that they will only verify dates of employment, the last position held, and salary if disclosure is authorized by the employee in writing. For such a policy to be effective, all inquiries should be referred to a central source, who should emphasize that refusal to disclose additional information is "company policy," so that the inquirer draws no adverse inferences from the failure to elaborate. One problem with such a policy is that it prevents companies from giving recommendations for good employees who have left the company. Some employers instead prefer to provide letters of reference whenever possible. Even when an employee is discharged for "cause," it is often feasible to draft a neutral letter.

Although employers occasionally provide letters of reference for employees discharged involuntarily, the contents of such letters should be carefully considered. In a wrongful discharge action, a "favorable" letter or a letter that emphasizes the employee's "good points" may be used as evidence that the employee was not a poor performer. Therefore, employers are best advised to issue entirely neutral reference letters to involuntarily discharged employees and to consult counsel regarding the letter if litigation appears likely. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[b] Unemployment Insurance Claims

Unemployment insurance was enacted as a nonadversarial social program designed to provide financial support to discharged employees. A former employee may, however, be disqualified from receiving benefits if, among other things, he or she (1) voluntarily left his or her most recent work "without good cause," or (2) was discharged for "misconduct" in connection with that work.ⁿ⁵⁹ The rules governing eligibility for unemployment benefits are fully discussed in Chapter 80.

Terminated employees file for benefits routinely, and few employers make it a practice to contest an award. However, an employer sometimes will fight the award of benefits to a terminated employee, either as a cost control measure (because premiums are based on loss experience) or out of a sense of being wronged by an employee who "is not going to get away with it." The latter motivation is seldom defensible and may bolster an employee's claim of bad faith discharge.

A better reason for contesting benefits is that discharged employees often pursue multiple remedies simultaneously, including unemployment claims, charges of discrimination with state or federal agencies, and worker's compensation claims, in addition to wrongful discharge suits. At least at the early stages of an unemployment claim, the employee is seldom represented by an attorney, and unemployment hearings are informal. This permits a contesting employer to cross-examine and obtain from the employee a version of the pertinent events that may be more candid than might be offered after coaching by a lawyer. While an employer formerly had to worry about the collateral estoppel effect of fully contesting a benefits claim,ⁿ⁶⁰ a statute now prohibits the application of the collateral estoppel doctrine to unemployment benefits determinations.ⁿ⁶¹ However, statements made by the employer (or a person authorized to speak for the employer) during the course of the unemployment benefits proceedings may be used against the employer in subsequent court litigation to which the employer is a party,ⁿ⁶² and statements made by any other witness may be used to impeach subsequent inconsistent testimony by that witness.ⁿ⁶³ It is illegal to discharge or otherwise discriminate against any person who seeks information about their unemployment rights, cooperates with an unemployment benefits investigation, or testifies in any proceeding under the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ⁶⁴

[c] Workers' Compensation Claims

As discussed in Chapter 20, with limited exceptions, workers' compensation is the exclusive remedy for any injury sustained by an employee arising out of and in the course of the employment.ⁿ⁶⁵ Because the workers' compensation procedure preempts any tort remedy based on injuries covered under the workers' compensation law, the determination on the claim should not have any collateral estoppel effect in subsequent litigation. However, as discussed in [b], above, in connection with unemployment insurance proceedings, the employer must bear in mind that statements made by the employer or its representatives in the workers' compensation proceedings may be used against it in subsequent litigation.ⁿ⁶⁶ Although workers' compensation claims tend to be handled routinely through insurance carriers, employers should carefully investigate the facts before making statements in these proceedings. The employer also should be aware that a release of workers' compensation claims will not preclude the employee's right to sue in court for other remedies, absent separate and specific release of those claims.ⁿ⁶⁷

The Labor Code prohibits an employer from discharging or discriminating against an employee because he or she has filed (or made known his or her intention to file) a workers' compensation claim or an application for adjudication, because he or she has received a workers' compensation award, or because he or she has testified (or indicated intent to testify) in another employee's case.ⁿ⁶⁸ The employer must therefore be careful in handling any workers' compensation claim not to give the appearance that the employee's discharge was in any way related to the workers' compensation claim.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships At-Will Employment General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions &

TermsDischargesLabor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsEmployment ContractsInterpretation

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in [b], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Draper v. Coeur Rochester, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 1104, 1110 ("Constructive discharge is, indeed, just one form of wrongful discharge. The fact that the actual act of terminating employment is initiated by the employee, who concludes that she is compelled to leave as a result of the employer's actions, rather than by the employer directly does not change the fact that the employee has been discharged[;]" because date of employee's resignation fell within relevant period of limitations, her Title VII discrimination claim was timely filed); Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; Deaile v. General Telephone Co. of California (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 841, 845, 115 Cal. Rptr. 582 (plaintiff told she could either retire, quit, or be fired); see also discussion in chs. 41 and 60.

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion in [5], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; see Casenas v. Fujisawa USA, Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 101, 103, 113-115, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 827 (in wrongful constructive discharge case based on claims of harassment, court noted that employer's actions represented textbook example of appropriate response to harassment complaint).

(n6)Footnote 6. Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1251, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Turner v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1238, 1247, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 223, 876 P.2d 1022 ; see also Schnidrig v. Columbia Machine, Inc. (9th Cir. 1996) 80 F.3d 1406, 1411-1412 (replacing employee with younger worker, moving to smaller office, excluding from meetings and decisions did not constitute constructive termination under federal age discrimination law); King v. AC & R Advertising (9th Cir. 1995) 65 F.3d 764, 767 (demotion in job level, even when accompanied by reduction in pay does not constitute constructive discharge); Addy v. Bliss & Glennon (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 205, 217-218, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 642 (denial of training and demotion not sufficiently intolerable to avoid summary judgment on constructive discharge claim).

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 2920(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 2922.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Malmstrom v. Kaiser Aluminum and Chem. Corp. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 299, 321, 231 Cal. Rptr. 820 ; Clutterham v. Coachmen Industries, Inc. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 1223, 1226-1228, 215 Cal. Rptr. 795 ; but see Sorosky v. Burroughs Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 826 F.2d 794, 802-803 (reversing summary judgment for employer; holding that discharge for "economic reasons" did not necessarily establish that covenant of good faith and fair dealing was not breached); see discussion in ch. 60.

(n11)Footnote 11. See discussion in [iii], below.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 947, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 ; see also discussion in ch. 63.

(n13)Footnote 13. For discussion of restrictions imposed by equal employment opportunity laws, see ch. 41.

(n14)Footnote 14. For discussion of restrictions imposed by family and medical leave laws and pregnancy leave laws, see ch. 8.

(n15)Footnote 15. See discussion in ch. 20.

(n16)Footnote 16. See discussion in ch. 41.

(n17)Footnote 17. See discussion in ch. 5.

(n18)Footnote 18. See discussion in ch. 60.

(n19)Footnote 19. Lab. Code § 1025. Employers are not required, however, to continue to employ an individual who, because of alcohol or drug abuse, is unable to perform his or her job duties or is a danger to himself or herself or to others. Lab. Code § 1025; Gosvener v. Coastal Corp. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 805, 815-816, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339 (employer could properly discharge alcoholic employee who began drinking after each accommodation and was often too drunk to come to work).

(n20)Footnote 20. Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n22)Footnote 22. See Rulon-Miller v. International Business Machines Corp. (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 241, 247-248, 208 Cal. Rptr. 524 (duty of good faith and fair dealing requires that similarly situated employees be treated similarly).

(n23)Footnote 23. Scott v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 454, 465, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427, 904 P.2d 834 .

(n24)Footnote 24. Tollefson v. Roman Catholic Bishop (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 843, 853-857, 268 Cal. Rptr. 550 (also holding no cause of action for negligent performance of duty to evaluate); see also Daly v. Exxon Corp. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 39, 45, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 727 (no claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy for failure to renew fixed-term employment agreement).

(n25)Footnote 25. Courts have held that a private industry employee is not entitled to a "due process" pre-termination hearing of any kind, at least in the absence of a contractual promise to provide one. See Shapiro v. Wells Fargo Realty Advisors (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 467, 483, 199 Cal. Rptr. 613 ; Crosier v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 1132, 1140, 198 Cal. Rptr. 361 .

(n26)Footnote 26. Cotran v. Rollins Hudig Hall International, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 93, 108, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 900, 948 P.2d 412 .

(n27)Footnote 27. See Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 681-682, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 (failure to follow steps set forth in employer's "termination guidelines" may constitute breach of implied in fact employment contract).

(n28)Footnote 28. In Schaeffer v. Sperry Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1984) 119 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2688, 2692 , the district court rejected plaintiff's contention that memoranda placing him on probation contractually bound the company to continue his employment so long as he continued to meet the conditions of probation. Analyzing California law, the court held that "To accept plaintiff's contention that these memoranda rose to a level of contractual significance would only discourage employers from providing substandard employees with an opportunity to improve their performance. Moreover, it would effectively establish a greater degree of job security for substandard employees than for their outstanding [at will] counterparts." Schaeffer v. Sperry Corp. (C.D. Cal. 1984) 119 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2688, 2692 .

(n29)Footnote 29. 29 U.S.C. §§ 1161-1167 (enacted as part of the Consolidated Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1985, commonly referred to as "COBRA") require that certain private group health plans offer continuation of health benefits under certain circumstances when coverage would otherwise be terminated, such as termination of the covered employee's employment (other than for gross misconduct). see 29 U.S.C. §§ 1162, 1163; see also Health & Safety Code §§ 1366.20-1366.28, Ins. Code §§ 10128.50-10128.58 (requiring COBRA-type notices and benefits for employees who work for employers with two to nineteen employees).

(n30)Footnote 30. See Lab. Code §§ 201, 201.5, 201.7, 203, 227.3; see also discussion in ch. 4.

(n31)Footnote 31. See discussion in [6][a], below.

(n32)Footnote 32. See Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified School District (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 929 P.2d 582 .

(n33)Footnote 33. See discussion in [b], [d], [e], below.

(n34)Footnote 33.1. Claims of wrongful discharge based on military service may not be waivable in a severance or settlement agreement. See Perez v. Uline (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 953, 957-958, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 (because USERRA directs that its provisions may not be eliminated by contract-- 38 U.S.C. § 4302(b)--release of rights in severance agreement obtained from captain in United States Marine Corps Reserves, terminating his employment on day he returned from duty, could not be enforced to extent severance agreement dealt with claims of termination based on plaintiff's membership in military or his military service)

(n35)Footnote 33.2. Perez v. Uline (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 953, 959, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 . See Rich & Whillock, Inc. v. Ashton Development, Inc. (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 1154, 1158, 204 Cal. Rptr. 86 .

(n36)Footnote 33.3. Perez v. Uline (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 953, 959, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 . See San Diego Hospice v. County of San Diego (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1048, 1058, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 501 .

(n37)Footnote 33.4. Perez v. Uline (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 953, 959-960, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 (employee could not assert economic duress to invalidate severance agreement with employer, where there was no evidence employer knew it owed plaintiff money in addition to what was paid and used agreement to avoid paying acknowledged debt, or that employee was on verge of bankruptcy, six weeks' salary was inequitably low, or employee was forced to accept settlement amount to stave off financial disaster; that employee did not have job and needed money offered under agreement to pay his bills did not equate to economic duress).

(n38)Footnote 33.5. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 114, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 . See Perez v. Uline (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 953, 959-960, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 (fact that employee did not expect to be terminated and presented with release agreement was not surprise described by Armendariz, nor was there any evidence that terms of agreement were too harsh or one-sided). For discussion of unconscionability in arbitration agreements and Armendariz, see § 90.20[1][e].

(n39)Footnote 34. Lab. Code § 2926.

(n40)Footnote 35. See Lab. Code §§ 201.5, 201.7.

(n41)Footnote 36. See Lab. Code § 227.3.

(n42)Footnote 37. Lab. Code § 201. For complete discussion of rules regarding time for payment of wages, see ch. 4.

(n43)Footnote 38. See Lab. Code § 206.5(a); see also discussion in chs. 4 and 5.

(n44)Footnote 38.1. Lab. Code § 206.5(b).

(n45)Footnote 39. See Lab. Code § 5001.

(n46)Footnote 40. See Lab. Code § 132a(1); see also discussion in chs. 20 and 60.

(n47)Footnote 41. Casey v. Proctor (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 97, 109-110, 28 Cal. Rptr. 307, 378 P.2d 579 .

(n48)Footnote 41.1. Perez v. Uline (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 953, 958-959, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 872 . See also Skrbina v. Fleming Companies (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 481 (release signed by plaintiff laid off by defendant, in exchange for severance pay, which did not refer to Civ. Code § 1542, but in which plaintiff agreed he was releasing defendant from all claims, known or unknown, that he had currently or in past, or that he may have in future, was valid).

(n49)Footnote 42. See Miller v. Fairchild Industries, Inc. (9th Cir. 1986) 797 F.2d 727, 735 .

(n50)Footnote 43. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1).

(n51)Footnote 44. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1)(F).

(n52)Footnote 45. Note that this paragraph will not necessarily bar the filing and investigation of certain charges of discrimination filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, or certain remedies under federal wage and hour laws. see EEOC Compliance Manual (CCH) § 15.8(b); see also discussion in chs. 5 and 42.

(n53)Footnote 46. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(f)(1). For a full discussion of the requirements for a valid waiver of ADEA rights, see ch. 41, Part D.

(n54)Footnote 47. See Lab. Code §§ 1050, 1052, 1054; see also discussion in ch. 63.

(n55)Footnote 48. Lab. Code § 1053.

(n56)Footnote 49. Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified School District (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066 .

(n57)Footnote 50. Gov. Code § 1031.1(a) (also setting forth conditions that must be met by agency's request).

(n58)Footnote 51. Gov. Code § 1031.1(b).

(n59)Footnote 52. See Stats. 1993, ch. 135, § 1(d).

(n60)Footnote 53. For a discussion of the qualified privilege, see Duffy, Defamation and Employer Privilege, 9 Empl. Rel. L.J. 444 (1983-1984).

(n61)Footnote 54. Deaile v. General Telephone Co. of California (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 841, 846, 115 Cal. Rptr. 582 .

(n62)Footnote 55. Neal v. Gatlin (1973) 35 Cal. App. 3d 871, 877, 111 Cal. Rptr. 117 .

(n63)Footnote 56. Blender v. Superior Court (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 24, 26, 130 P.2d 179 .

(n64)Footnote 57. See Schessler v. Keck (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 827, 834, 271 P.2d 588 .

(n65)Footnote 58. Civ. Code § 47(c).

(n66)Footnote 59. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.

(n67)Footnote 60. See People v. Sims (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 468, 186 Cal. Rptr. 77, 651 P.2d 321 .

(n68)Footnote 61. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1960.

(n69)Footnote 62. Evid. Code §§ 1220, 1222.

(n70)Footnote 63. See Evid. Code §§ 780(h), 1202, 1235. A witness may not, however, be subjected to criminal prosecution or "penalty or forfeiture" based on any matter concerning which he or she is compelled to testify or produce evidence in an unemployment insurance proceeding, after claiming the privilege against self-incrimination. see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1955; see also discussion in ch. 80.

(n71)Footnote 64. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1237; see also discussion in ch. 60.

(n72)Footnote 65. See Lab. Code §§ 3600(a), 3601(a), 3602(a); see also Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 (workers' compensation is sole remedy for compensable injuries caused by misconduct involving actions that are a "normal part" of the employment relationship).

(n73)Footnote 66. See Evid. Code §§ 780(h), 1202, 1220, 1222.

(n74)Footnote 67. See Ortiz v. Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association (9th Cir. 1987) 852 F.2d 383, 387-388 (contract claim not released); Pichon v. Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 502-503, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677 (same); accord, Panopulos v. Westinghouse Electric Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 660, 666-668, 264 Cal. Rptr. 810 .

(n75)Footnote 68. See Lab. Code § 132a(1), (3); see also discussion in chs. 20 and 60.

92 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims
Part A. TEXT

4-62 California Employment Law §§ 62.06through 62.19

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 62.06[Reserved]

93 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-62 California Employment Law § 62.20

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

§ 62.20 Legal Texts

Morrison & Foerster, California Employers' Guide to Employee Handbooks and Personnel Policy Manuals (Matthew Bender).

Advising California Employers, ch. 17 (Cal. C.E.B. 1997).

Larson & Borowsky, Unjust Dismissal, Appendix, Employee Relations Guide (Matthew Bender).

Elkouri & Elkouri, How Arbitration Works (BNA 3d ed. 1973).

Folberg & Taylor, Mediation: A Comprehensive Guide to Resolving Conflicts Without Litigation (1984).

Hill & Sinicropi, Management Rights: A Legal and Arbitral Analysis (BNA 1986).

Holloway & Leech, Employment Termination: Rights and Remedies (BNA 1985).

Perritt, Employee Dismissal: Law and Practice (John Wiley & Sons 1984).

Steiber, Blackburn & Pratt eds., Protecting Unorganized Employees Against Unjust Discharge: Proceedings of a Conference Held at Michigan State University, School of Labor and Industrial Relations (1983).

Volpe & Christian, Problem Solving Through Mediation, Conference Proceedings of Dec. 1-2, 1983, John Jay College of Criminal Justice (A.B.A. 1984).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships At-Will Employment General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts General Overview

94 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 62 Avoiding Wrongful Termination and Discipline Claims
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-62 California Employment Law § 62.21

AUTHOR: By Ray E. Smith, J.D.

§ 62.21 Legal Periodicals

Baxter & Farrell, Constructive Discharge -- When Quitting Means Getting Fired, 7 Empl. Rel. L.J. 346 (1981-1982).

Coombe, Employee Handbooks: Asset or Liability?, 12 Empl. Rel. L.J. 4 (1986).

Compton, Self-Insurance Against Wrongful Discharge Suits, 7 Cal. Lawyer 14 (May 1987).

Coulson, Arbitration for the Individual Employee, 5 Empl. Rel. L.J. 406 (1979-1980).

Denis, Releases: Maintaining Enforceability and Avoiding Litigation, 12 Empl. Rel. L.J. 46 (1986).

Duffy, Defamation and Employer Privilege, 9 Empl. Rel. L.J. 444 (1983-1984).

Johnston & Taylor, Employee Handbooks: A Selective Survey of Emerging Developments, 11 Empl. Rel. L.J. 225 (1985).

Lansing & Pegnetter, Fair Dismissal Procedures for Non-Union Employees, 20 Amer. Bus. L.J. 75 (1982).

Martin, Bartol & Levine, The Legal Ramifications of Performance Appraisal, 12 Empl. Rel. L.J. 370 (1986-1987).

Sharp, Advice to California Employers: An Overview of Wrongful Discharge Law and How to Avoid Potential Liability, 13 Pepperdine L. Rev. 185 (1985).

Note, Implied Contract Rights to Job Security, 26 Stan. L. Rev. 335 (1974).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsAt-Will EmploymentGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsEmployment ContractsGeneral Overview

95 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination

4-63 California Employment Law 63.syn

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 63.syn Synopsis to Chapter 63: Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination

§ 63.01 Assault and Battery

[1] Applicability to Wrongful Termination Actions

[2] Elements of Cause of Action

[a] Assault

[b] Battery

[3] Defenses

[4] Remedies

§ 63.02 Defamation

[1] Applicability to Wrongful Termination Actions

[2] Elements of Cause of Action

[a] Generally

[b] Defamatory Statement

[c] Publication

[d] Identification

[e] Intent

[f] Damages

[3] Defenses

[a] Preemption

[i] Workers' Compensation Law

[ii] Federal Labor Law

[b] Privileges Under State Law

[c] Constitutional Privilege

[d] Truth

[e] Consent

[4] Remedies

[5] Anti-SLAPP Motion

§ 63.03 False Imprisonment

§ 63.04 Interference With Contract/Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

§ 63.05 Fraud and Deceit

[1] Tort Damages for Fraud Unavailable for Misrepresentation Committed in Course of Termination of Employment

[2] Cause of Action Can Be Stated for Misrepresentation Independent of Termination

[3] Elements of Cause of Action

[4] Remedies

§ 63.06 Other Related Causes of Action

[1] Misrepresentation to Induce Worker to Change Residence (Labor Code Section 970)

[2] Preventing Subsequent Employment of Former Employee by Misrepresentation (Labor Code Section 1050)

[3] Other Statutory Violations

[4] No Loss of Consortium or Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress Action for Employee's Spouse

[5] No Tort Action for Negligent Performance of Contractual Duty to Evaluate

[6] Employee's Claim for Intentional and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

[7] Promissory Estoppel and Reliance Damages

§§ 63.07through 63.19 [Reserved]

§ 63.20 Legal Texts

By James Buyoucos, J.D.n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

96 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination

4-63 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

Scope

By James Buyoucos, J.D.n* SCOPE

This chapter provides an overview of tort causes of action (in addition to those discussed in Chapter 60) that may in certain factual settings arise out of termination of an employment relationship. The tort theories summarized include libel and slander, assault and battery, false imprisonment, deceit, and interference with prospective economic advantage. Also discussed are specific statutory causes of action that arise in the employment context including actions for blacklisting an employee and for wrongfully causing an employee to relocate for the purpose of gaining employment. It also discusses limitations placed on other theories of recovery when raised in the employment context, e.g., emotional distress claims. The chapter focuses on these torts as they relate to the employment relationship and includes a discussion of defenses that are likely to be available to an employer, including the exclusive remedy provision of workers' compensation law. For a further discussion of preemption of a tort cause of action under the exclusive remedy provision of workers' compensation law, see Chapter 20. For a complete discussion of these torts in general, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts (Matthew Bender).

For discussion of liability for wrongful termination of employment in itself, under statutory, tort, and contractual theories, and defenses to such liability, see Chapter 60.

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

97 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination

Part A. TEXT

4-63 California Employment Law § 63.01

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 63.01 Assault and Battery

[1] Applicability to Wrongful Termination Actions

In cases in which the employee is terminated as a result of a physical altercation with the employer or with a fellow employee, or in which the employee's dismissal is accompanied by physical force applied by the employer or a supervisor, the employee may have a cause of action for assault or battery as well as a cause of action for wrongful termination.

[2] Elements of Cause of Action

Although the torts of assault and battery often occur in tandem, they are separate torts.

[a] Assault

Although the reported California cases have not always been consistent in setting forth the elements of the tort of assault, it appears that those elements are (1) the demonstration of an unlawful intent by one person to inflict immediate injury on the person of another person who is then present, and (2) apprehension of such injury by the person present.ⁿ¹ It is immaterial that the tortfeasor did not have the present ability to inflict injury, so long as the party bringing the action had a reasonable apprehension of injury.ⁿ² It should be noted that when a person has been threatened and suffers apprehension of future injury, the elements of the tort of assault are not satisfied, but an action for intentional infliction of emotional distress may be available.ⁿ³ Similarly, while mere words are normally insufficient to support a cause of action for assault,ⁿ⁴ words alone may support a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress.ⁿ⁵

[b] Battery

The elements of the tort of battery consist of an intentional, unlawful, and harmful or offensive contact by one person with the person of another.ⁿ⁶ An act is "intentional" if either: (1) the actor acted with the intention of touching the injured party, regardless of whether he or she intended to hurt the injured party; or (2) the actor intended to put the injured party in apprehension of a harmful or offensive touching.ⁿ⁷ Case law has not clearly defined the term "unlawful" as it relates to the definition of a battery. However, one case has held that lack of consent is an essential element of battery.ⁿ⁸ A contact is "harmful or offensive" not only in cases of physical beatings,ⁿ⁹ but also in cases in which the contact was not harmful but offended a reasonable sense of personal dignity.ⁿ¹⁰

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

An important tactical consideration to keep in mind when considering whether to allege the tort of battery in connection with wrongful discharge litigation is that it may aid in the characterization of damages in the event of a negotiated settlement. Since the tax laws were changed, it has been difficult, if not impossible, to characterize the proceeds of a wrongful termination settlement as tax-free, personal injury damages, even in part. The exception lies in physical injuries arising from, e.g., battery. Thus, in a sexual harassment case in which an unwanted touching has occurred, and particularly where any amount of violence is involved, an allegation of battery may permit characterization of some or all of the damages as nontaxable. Commentary by John M. True, III.

For a full discussion of the elements of the torts of assault and battery, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 41 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Defenses

Normally, an employer is not insulated from liability for intentional assaults or batteries by the exclusive remedy provision of workers' compensation law.ⁿ¹¹ However, this specific exception to workers' compensation exclusivity for cases in which an employer commits a willful physical assault on an employeeⁿ¹² does not authorize a private action against an employer based on another employee's willful and unprovoked physical act of aggression.ⁿ¹³ In Fretland v. County of Humboldt,ⁿ¹⁴ the court of appeal rejected plaintiff's argument that the employer was liable for the unprovoked attack of a coemployee under the doctrine of respondeat superior.ⁿ¹⁵ The court concluded that only positive misconduct by the employer can be the basis for an employer's liability for assault and battery, and the imposition of respondeat superior liability in these circumstances would directly violate Labor Code Section 3601(b).ⁿ¹⁶ The court acknowledged, however, that if the employer had joined in the assault, or ratified it, the employer could be jointly liable with the coemployee.ⁿ¹⁷

The privilege of self-defense is one of the primary defenses to the torts of assault and battery.^{n17.1} Under Civil Code section 50, a person may use any necessary force to protect the person or the property of himself or herself, or of a relative or member of the family, or of a ward, employee, employer, or guest. The degree of force that may be used in self defense is limited to the amount that would have appeared necessary to a reasonable person under the circumstances based on the knowledge and facts presented to the defendant at the time he or she acted.ⁿ¹⁸ In addition, a person may use reasonable force to protect a third person from assault. Thus, an employee may go to the aid of a fellow employee who is being assaulted and may use as much force as is reasonably necessary to prevent the assault.ⁿ¹⁹

Consent is also a defense to an action for assault and/or battery.ⁿ²⁰ However, an act that exceeds the scope of the consent given constitutes a battery.ⁿ²¹

For a thorough discussion of defenses to the torts of assault and battery, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 41, Assault and Battery, (Matthew Bender).

[4] Remedies

In an action for assault and battery, a successful plaintiff is entitled to compensation for all harm proximately caused by the assault and battery including damages for pain and suffering, fear, anxiety, and other types of emotional distress, as well as damages for lost wages and earning capacity and medical expenses.ⁿ²² In addition, punitive damages are also available in actions for assault and battery, assuming that plaintiff is able to prove the requisite malice, oppression, or fraud on the part of the defendant.ⁿ²³

For a discussion of remedies available in actions for assault and battery, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 41, Assault and Battery (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of remedies available in tort actions generally, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts Chapters 50- 58 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview Torts Intentional Torts Assault & Battery General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 146 P.2d 57; see also Restatement (Second) of Torts § 21(1) (requiring apprehension of harmful or offensive contact rather than apprehension of injury); but see Fraguglia v. Sala (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 738, 742, 62 P.2d 783 (utilizing definition of assault found in Penal Code § 240, which defines assault as attempt to commit violent injury on another). For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a cause of action for assault, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1301 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction on intent in the context of a claim for assault, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1320 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for an assault claim, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1302 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57 (defendant's act of pointing unloaded gun at plaintiff as assault).

(n3)Footnote 3. See State Rubbish Collectors Association v. Siliznoff (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 330, 336, 240 P.2d 282, discussed in § 63.04.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Restatement 2d Torts § 31.

(n5)Footnote 5. See State Rubbish Collectors Association v. Siliznoff (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 330, 336, 240 P.2d 282.

(n6)Footnote 6. Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a cause of action for battery, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1300 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For the standard jury instruction on intent in the context of a claim for battery, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1320 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim of battery, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1300 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n7)Footnote 7. Weisbart v. Flohr (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 281, 284-285, 67 Cal. Rptr. 114 (dicta).

(n8)Footnote 8. Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 938, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249.

(n9)Footnote 9. Boyes v. Evans (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 472, 479, 58 P.2d 922.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 19.

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 3602(b). For a discussion of employer defenses under the exclusive remedy provision of workers' compensation law, see Chapter 20.

(n12)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1).

(n13)Footnote 13. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1486-1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 ; see Lab. Code § 3601(a)(1) (authorizing suit for assault against coemployee, but not against employer); Lab. Code § 3601(b) (prohibiting imposition of civil liability on employer for employee's assault and battery against coemployee); cf. Lab. Code § 3602(b)(1) (addressing assault on employee by employer, not by coemployee).

(n14)Footnote 14. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 ; accord Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'r (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 226, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 .

(n17)Footnote 17. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1487-1488, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 ;see, e.g., Iverson v. Atlas Pacific Eng'r (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 219, 228, 191 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; See also § 20.43[1].

(n18)Footnote 17.1. For the standard jury instruction on self-defense or defense of others as a defense to a claim of assault and/or battery, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1304 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for the defense of self-defense or defense of others to a claim of battery, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1301 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n19)Footnote 18. Boyer v. Waples (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 725, 727, 24 Cal. Rptr. 192 .

(n20)Footnote 19. Ward v. De Martini (1930) 108 Cal. App. 745, 748, 292 P. 192 .

(n21)Footnote 20. Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 ; Sayadoff v. Warda (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 626, 631-632, 271 P.2d 140 (consent as valid defense even though conduct complained of was illegal). For the standard jury instructions relating to the defense of consent, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1302 et seq. (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n22)Footnote 21. See Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 375, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 .

(n23)Footnote 22. Delia S. v. Torres (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 471, 482, 184 Cal. Rptr. 787 , overruled by Christensen v. Superior Court (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 868, 905, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79 (to extent that Delia S. held that claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress may arise out of egregious conduct proximately caused by defendant, but not directed toward plaintiff); McChristian v. Popkin (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 249, 262-263, 171 P.2d 85 .

(n24)Footnote 23. See Civ. Code § 3294; Scruggs v. Haynes (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 256, 269, 60 Cal. Rptr. 355 .

98 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination

Part A. TEXT

4-63 California Employment Law § 63.02

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 63.02 Defamation

[1] Applicability to Wrongful Termination Actions

In cases in which an employee is terminated as a result of a false statement made about the employee that injures the employee's reputation, or in which such false statements are made about plaintiff in the connection with the termination, the employee may have a cause of action for defamation, i.e., for libel or slander, as well as a cause of action for wrongful termination. In addition, an employee who has left an employer for any reason may have a cause of action for defamation against the former employer if the employer publishes any defamatory falsehoods about the employee.ⁿ¹ This may occur when the employee searches for new employment, and a prospective employer contacts the former employer concerning the employee's fitness for employment.ⁿ² However, as discussed in [3], below, the employee may have difficulty overcoming certain defenses that are often available when a defamatory statement is made in the employment context.

Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer may be vicariously liable for a defamatory statement made by one of its employees.ⁿ³ Furthermore, coemployees may be sued for libel relating to an employer's personnel actions, because libel is a statutory action.^{n3.1} For a full discussion of the doctrine of respondeat superior, see Ch. 30.

[2] Elements of Cause of Action

[a] Generally

With minor exceptions that are noted below, the torts of libel and slander have essentially the same elements. The primary difference between them is that libel involves a defamatory statement by writing or other fixed representation to the eye,ⁿ⁴ while slander involves a defamatory statement uttered orally.ⁿ⁵ The elements of a claim for libel or slander are (1) a false and defamatory statement,ⁿ⁶ (2) publication,ⁿ⁷ (3) identification,ⁿ⁸ (4) intent,ⁿ⁹ and (5) resulting damages.ⁿ¹⁰

If a statement is defamatory per se, an action may be brought without alleging special damages.ⁿ¹¹ The rules of libel and slander differ in the following regard. A statement is slanderous per se if it fits within one of the four specific categories found in Civil Code section 46, including a statement that injures the defamed party in his or her office, profession, trade, or business.ⁿ¹² A slander that falls within the first four categories of Civil Code § 46 requires no proof of actual damages.^{n12.1} A slander that does not fit into those four categories is slander per quod, and the plaintiff must prove special damages in order to recover.^{n12.2} A statement is libelous per se if it is defamatory on its face.ⁿ¹³ A statement is defamatory on its face if a defamatory meaning appears from the language itself without the necessity of explanatory matter.ⁿ¹⁴

For full discussion of the tort of defamation, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 45, "Defamation" (Matthew Bender).

[b] Defamatory Statement

A statement is defamatory if it lowers a person's reputation, either generally, or with respect to the person's occupation.ⁿ¹⁵ Civil Code section 46 defines slander as falling into five categories and includes, within its definition, statements that tend to directly injure a person in his or her office, profession, trade, or business by imputing to the person "general disqualification in those respects which the occupation peculiarly requires."ⁿ¹⁶ Civil Code section 45 defines libel to include statements that expose a person to hatred, contempt, ridicule, or obloquy, cause the person to be shunned or avoided, or have a tendency to injure the person in his or her occupation. Under these provisions, untrue statements suggesting that an employee is incompetent, unethical, or otherwise unfit for employment are defamatory.ⁿ¹⁷ Such statements need not be specific, and will be considered defamatory as long as they generally impugn the employee's character.ⁿ¹⁸

One court of appeal has stated broadly that an employer's performance evaluation cannot support a cause of action for libel unless the evaluation falsely accuses an employee of criminal conduct, lack of integrity, dishonesty, incompetence, or reprehensible personal characteristics or behavior.ⁿ¹⁹ The court stated that this was the proper test even if the employer's perceptions about an employee's efforts, attitude, performance, potential, or worth to the enterprise are objectively wrong and cannot be supported by reference to concrete, provable facts.ⁿ²⁰ Another court cautioned that performance evaluations are inherently subjective and "courts should be extremely cautious before allowing such comments to be the basis of a libel action."ⁿ²¹ Yet, another court reversed the dismissal of libel actions against defendant-coworkers, accusing them of falsifying evaluations of plaintiff's performance because libel is a statutory action under Civ. Code §§ 43-48.5.^{n21.1}

In addition to statements that directly injure a person in his or her occupation, imputations of criminal conduct or having an infectious, contagious, or "loathsome" disease are defamatory.ⁿ²² Statements that imply that a person lacks proper decorum may also be held to be defamatory.ⁿ²³

A statement of opinion, as opposed to an assertion of fact, is not actionable as defamatory.^{n23.1}

If the content of an allegedly defamatory statement is true, the statement cannot form the basis for liability for libel or slander.ⁿ²⁴ While it is not clear whether truth is an affirmative defense or an element of plaintiff's cause of action, the plaintiff bears the burden of alleging and proving the falsity of the statement in certain cases involving constitutional privilege under the First Amendment.ⁿ²⁵ For further discussion, see [3][c], below.

Because an action for defamation will lie only for false statements of fact, and because an opinion cannot be false, a statement that is an opinion will not support an action for defamation.ⁿ²⁶

[c] Publication

An essential element of a claim for libel or slander is that the defamatory statement be published, that is, communicated to a third person.ⁿ²⁷ In the employment context, the fact that a statement is communicated only by one of the defendant's employees to other employees of the defendant via internal corporate statements does not preclude a finding that the statement was published. A publication occurs if the statement is communicated to any person other than the party defamed.ⁿ²⁸ However, in one case, although the trial court ruled that the plaintiff had failed to show either publication of the libelous statement or lack of privilege with regard to all defendants but one, the court of appeal reversed the demurrer in favor of the employer on the ground that liability for libel may be based on a conspiracy theory as the plaintiff had alleged.^{n28.1}

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

Plaintiff's counsel should be alert to the possibility of a claim of defamation by self-publication. When an employee has been put in the position of having to communicate to potential employers that he or she has been terminated--allegedly wrongfully--California law allows a claim that he or she has, in effect, been forced to publish a defamatory statement.ⁿ²⁹ To make out this cause of action, it must be shown that the defendant had reason to know that the person defamed would be under a strong compulsion to disclose the defamatory statement.ⁿ³⁰

Such a claim has advantages and disadvantages. Since employer insurance policies often provide coverage for claims of defamation made against them, the possibility of using the cause of action to plead into insurance coverage is obvious. On the other hand, raising the issue entitles an employer to discover from an employee the identities of all those from whom he or she has sought employment and then to question those potential employers as to what was said in any employment interview about the reasons for the prior termination. Such inquiries could have a negative effect on a plaintiff's chances to find employment after a termination. Commentary by John M. True, III.

[d] Identification

A statement is not defamatory unless it specifically refers to the person who has allegedly been defamed.ⁿ³¹ However, the statement does not have to identify the person by name.ⁿ³² A statement sufficiently identifies a person if the recipient of the communication correctly, or mistakenly but reasonably, understands that the statement was intended to refer to the defamed party.ⁿ³³ In addition, if the defamatory statement refers to a group of persons to which the allegedly defamed person belongs, the identification element is normally satisfied if the group is small.ⁿ³⁴

[e] Intent

Unless a constitutional privilege or a qualified privilege under state law applies,ⁿ³⁵ a person may be liable for publishing a defamatory statement regardless of whether he or she intended to make a false statement that would injure the reputation of the plaintiff or had reason to know that the plaintiff would be so harmed.ⁿ³⁶ However, in the employment context a qualified privilege often applies, which requires a showing of malice on the part of the defendant before liability may attach.ⁿ³⁷

[f] Damages

"Special damages" are an element of a defamation claim unless the statement is defamatory per se.ⁿ³⁸ Special damages in this context means actual economic loss such as out-of-pocket expenses, medical bills, or time lost from work.ⁿ³⁹ Statements that tend to injure a person in his or her occupation are, in the case of slander, normally defamatory per se,ⁿ⁴⁰ and in the case of libel are also often defamatory per se.ⁿ⁴¹

[3] Defenses

[a] Preemption

[i] Workers' Compensation Law

A cause of action for defamation brought by an employee against an employer is not subject to the exclusive remedy provision of the Workers' Compensation Act,ⁿ⁴² for the reasons discussed below. Therefore, in an action against an employer brought by a former employee who alleges wrongful termination and related causes of action, a cause of action for defamation will survive the defense of workers' compensation exclusivity even though the remaining counts may fail.ⁿ⁴³

Defamatory statements that have no other purpose than to damage an employee's reputation are neither a normal part of, nor a risk inherent in, the employment relationship for purposes of the exclusive remedy doctrine of the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ⁴⁴ The California Supreme Court in Livitsanos v. Superior Court ⁿ⁴⁵ (in dictum) noted that lower courtsⁿ⁴⁶ have determined that the gravamen of an action for libel or slander is damage to reputation, a proprietary--as distinct from a physical or mental--injury. Consequently, defamation does not lie within the purview of the workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁴⁷

In one court of appeal decision, cited by the Supreme Court in Livitsanos as well as in Shoemaker v. Myers,ⁿ⁴⁸ the court of appeal observed:

The right to benefits under the Act is the employee's exclusive remedy against the employer where the conditions of liability under the Act exist. ... The conditions of liability attach where the employee receives a personal injury arising out of and in the course of his employment. ... The personal injuries for which the Act provides a remedy include physical and mental injuries suffered on account of employment. ... Thus, the Act relates to medical and/or occupational injuries, i.e., those risks to which the fact of employment in the industry exposes the employee. ... The gist of an action for slander, however, is damage to reputation. ... The harm flowing therefrom is not a personal injury (i.e., medical or physical injury to the body) or a risk of employment within the purview of the workers' compensation law. ... In fact, an injury to reputation affects a proprietary interest and as such is not a personal injury at all, any concomitant physical or mental injury notwithstanding.ⁿ⁴⁹

In a subsequent court of appeal decision, the employer allegedly made false accusations before and after the termination that plaintiff, a bookkeeper, stole money from the company. The trial court sustained the defendant's demurrer to the plaintiff's defamation claim, but the court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal held that the remarks made after the termination can, "by no stretch," be deemed to have occurred in the course and scope of employment. Further, the court held that the harm incurred by the statements made during employment were not in the nature of personal injury for purposes of the Workers' Compensation Act.ⁿ⁵⁰

[ii] Federal Labor Law

In an employment context involving a collective bargaining agreement, an employee's action for defamation may in some cases be preempted by federal labor law.ⁿ⁵¹ If the claim is inextricably intertwined with matters covered by the labor contract, the claim is preempted.ⁿ⁵² For example, when the claim is based on defamatory statements made in an investigation required by collective bargaining agreement, the claim may be preempted, at least in instances in which the conduct of the investigation is subject to the collective bargaining agreement's grievance adjustment procedure.ⁿ⁵³ However, a defamation claim is not preempted if it is based on facts either "unrelated to matters expressly or impliedly governed by the collective bargaining agreement" or which "so far exceed the scope of reasonable conduct in the context of such matters that reference to the collective bargaining agreement is unnecessary to resolve the claim."ⁿ⁵⁴

For discussion of preemption of wrongful termination claims under federal labor law, see Chapter 60.

[b] Privileges Under State Law

Under state law, there are two types of privileges that are available in defamation actions: absolute privileges and qualified privileges. An absolute privilege is a privilege that cannot be defeated by malice on the part of the publisher.ⁿ⁵⁵ An absolute privilege is available for statements made by specified high-ranking public officials, statements made by legislators, statements made in judicial proceedings and other official or unofficial proceedings authorized by law, and fair and true reports of official proceedings and public meetings.ⁿ⁵⁶ In the employment context, an absolute privilege under Civil Code section 47(b) may apply to statements made:

- During a background inspection of a potential employee that is required by law.ⁿ⁵⁷
- To a complaint of harassment made to the EEOC, as required by law before initiating an action under Title VII.^{n57.1}
- To statements made during the course of a grievance procedure established by a collective bargaining agreement and reviewable by mandate.ⁿ⁵⁸
- To statements made to the police, the local prosecutor, or an appropriate regulatory agency, even if the report is made in bad faith.^{n58.1}

A qualified privilege acts as a bar to liability when the statement was published without malice.ⁿ⁵⁹ Qualified privileges exist for statements made by persons with a common interest, persons in special relationships, and persons responding to a request for information.ⁿ⁶⁰ In the employment context, the qualified privilege available to interested parties often applies.ⁿ⁶¹ This privilege exists when the communicator and the recipient have a common interest and the communication is reasonably calculated to further that interest. Communication among a company's employees concerning the conduct of an employee fall squarely within this privilege.ⁿ⁶² Thus, for example, an employer who publishes to certain of its employees the reasons for the termination of another employee may be protected by this qualified privilege, at least if the other employees have a legitimate interest in knowing that information.ⁿ⁶³ Or, an employee's letter to the head of her employer's human resources department, accusing her manager of sexual harassment, may be protected by this qualified privilege, provided there is no showing of malice.^{n63.1}

Civil Code, section 47(c) expressly provides that the qualified privilege for communications to interested persons based on a request applies to and includes a communication concerning the job performance or qualifications of an applicant for employment, based on credible evidence, made without malice, by a current or former employer of the applicant to, and on request of, the prospective employer.^{n63.2} Section 47(c) authorizes a current or former employer, or the employer's agent, to answer, whether or not the employer would rehire a current or former employee. The statute specifically does not apply to a communication concerning the speech or activities of an applicant for employment if the speech or activities are constitutionally protected, or otherwise protected by Code of Civil Procedure, section 527.3 (concerning labor disputes) or any other provision of law.ⁿ⁶⁴

To defeat this conditional privilege, a plaintiff must specifically allege malice. A general allegation of malice will not suffice; plaintiff must allege detailed facts showing defendant's ill will toward plaintiff.ⁿ⁶⁵ Malice is not inferred from the communication itself.^{n65.1} The malice necessary to defeat a qualified privilege is actual malice, which is established by a showing that the publication was motivated by hatred or ill will towards the plaintiff or by a showing that the defendant lacked reasonable grounds for belief in the truth of the publication and therefore acted in reckless disregard of the plaintiff's rights.^{n65.2}

The conditional privilege applies to statements current or former employers make to prospective employers when the statements are based on credible evidence, made without malice.^{n65.3} Standing alone, the phrase "based on credible evidence" connotes a negligence standard. However, by adding the "based upon credible evidence" language to Civ. Code § 47(c) when it amended § 47) in 1994 to expressly state the common-interest privilege applies to communications made by current or former employers to prospective employers, the Legislature, out of an abundance of caution, intended to bar any argument that in the employment reference context, the protection of the interest involved may make it reasonable to report mere rumors or unfounded gossip. Thus, the Legislature clarified that if a current or former employer's publication was based on mere rumor, the privilege is lost because he or she lacked reasonable grounds for believing the truth of the publication. Although negligence is relevant in determining probable cause, mere negligence in the sense of oversight or unintentional error, is not alone enough to constitute malice.^{n65.4}

Application of the privilege involves a two-step inquiry. The first question is whether the factual predicate for the privilege was present--whether, in traditional terms, the "occasion" was "privileged." At trial, the defendant bears the burden of proof on this question. If the defendant succeeds, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to show that the statement was made with malice.^{n65.5} On summary judgment, the defendant bears the burden of showing in the first instance that there is no triable issue of fact as to either issue, i.e., that the statement was made on a privileged occasion, and that it was made without malice.^{n65.6}

Malice sufficient to overcome a qualified privilege is a state of mind arising from hatred or ill will evidencing a willingness to vex, annoy, or injure another person.ⁿ⁶⁶ The privilege is lost if the publication is motivated by any cause other than to protect the interest for which the protection of the privilege was granted.ⁿ⁶⁷

A federal district court has applied a common law privilege similar to the statutory privileges described above, the "manager's privilege," to a defamation cause of action in the employment context.ⁿ⁶⁸ California appellate courts have previously applied this privilege with respect to the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage.ⁿ⁶⁹ In the federal diversity case, plaintiff included a slander per se cause of action in his complaint, which essentially alleged that defendant made defamatory comments in connection with the breach of an employment contract, and defendant asserted the defense of privileged communication under Civil Code, section 47(c) with respect to that cause of action. The court held that disparaging remarks made by supervisors about plaintiff concerning his qualifications (leading to plaintiff's termination) were protected under the manager's privilege.ⁿ⁷⁰ At least one other federal decision construing California law has also applied the manager's privilege to a defamation claim.ⁿ⁷¹

In an action for slander and libel against an employer and another employee regarding statements made to third parties indicating that plaintiff had been fired for sexual harassment, one California court of appeal has found applicable the manager's privilege in Civil Code Section 47(c) for communications made without malice concerning job performance.^{n71.1}

In one defamation case that arose in an employment termination context,ⁿ⁷² the court of appeal expressed disfavor for libel suits based on communications in employment performance reviews, particularly when the plaintiff is attempting to avoid the limitations of Foley.ⁿ⁷³ However, this case did not reach any defense issues because plaintiff was held not to have established the element of a libelous statement.ⁿ⁷⁴ In another wrongful termination case, the court of appeal recognized the deleterious effect on business if disciplined employees could avoid the limitations of Foley by simply alleging malice and suing coemployees for damages on alternative tort theories, when the identical personnel action cannot give rise to tort damages against the employer.^{n74.1} The court, however, reversed the dismissal of libel actions against the individual defendants because libel is a statutory action under Civ. Code §§ 43-48.5.^{n74.2}

For full discussion of the absolute and qualified privileges, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 45 (Matthew Bender).

[c] Constitutional Privilege

The right of free speech set forth in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution has been held to provide qualified privileges to publishers of defamatory statements in certain circumstances. If the defamed party is a public figure or a public official, a defamation action is barred by the constitutional privilege unless the publication was made with "actual malice." Actual malice in this context means that the statement was made with knowledge of its falsity or reckless disregard for whether the statement was true or false.ⁿ⁷⁵ In addition, if the defamed individual is a private individual and the allegedly defamatory statement involves a matter of public concern, the Constitution prohibits the imposition of "presumed" or punitive damages without a showing of "actual malice."ⁿ⁷⁶ Furthermore, there is authority for the proposition that the Constitution protects all publishers of defamatory statements from liability without a showing of "fault."ⁿ⁷⁷ However, a more recent Supreme Court case suggests that the "fault" requirement applies only in cases in which the allegedly defamatory statement involves a matter of public concern.ⁿ⁷⁸ It should be noted that the constitutional privileges discussed above apparently apply to nonmedia as well as media defendants.^{n78.1}

If the employer is a church, First Amendment protections for religious doctrine may be a defense as well.ⁿ⁷⁹

For full discussion of the constitutional privileges, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 45 (Matthew Bender).

[d] Truth

Truth is an absolute defense to a claim of defamation.^{n79.1} In cases involving private plaintiffs on matters of private concern, the burden of proving the statement is true is on the defendant. In cases involving public figures or matters of public concern, the burden of proving falsity is on the plaintiff.^{n79.2}

[e] Consent

The consent of the plaintiff to the publication of defamatory matter is a complete defense.^{n79.3}

[4] Remedies

In a defamation action, a successful plaintiff may be entitled to both general and special damages. Special damages are actual economic losses proximately caused by the defamation including out-of-pocket expenses and amounts lost in one's occupation.ⁿ⁸⁰ General damages compensate for loss of reputation, shame, mortification, and hurt feelings in any context, including the plaintiff's business or occupation.ⁿ⁸¹ In addition, punitive damages are available on the proper showing of malice.ⁿ⁸²

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The availability of punitive damages may be restricted by constitutional considerations.ⁿ⁸³ Also, in the case of a defamatory statement that is not actionable per se, special damages are a prerequisite to the maintenance of a defamation action.ⁿ⁸⁴ Employers should be aware that defamation allegations frequently are included in wrongful discharge actions. Typically, the allegations are based on comments that the discharging supervisor has made to co-workers, to prospective employers, or to his or her acquaintances. Although the text indicates that a supervisor has a qualified privilege to discuss a termination with "interested" personsⁿ⁸⁵ (raising an obvious question of how mere acquaintances could be "interested"), an employer is best advised to limit the number of people who are given access to facts about the discharge. Similarly, an employer is best advised to scrutinize the wording of discharge forms and memoranda to ensure that their terms are factually accurate and not needlessly inflammatory (for example, use of the term "serious misconduct" is preferable to use of the term "embezzlement"). Many employers have "snatched defeat from the jaws of victory" by discharging employees for good cause and then publishing embellished accounts of the actions to persons who had no business reason to know any such information. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[5] Anti-SLAPP Motion

Because defamation actions often involve issues of free speech (or other rights), in response to a defamation action by an employee or former employee, an employer may move to strike the complaint under the anti-SLAPP (strategic lawsuit against public participation) statute.ⁿ⁸⁶ In considering whether the anti-SLAPP statute applies, courts engage in a two-step process. First, the court determines whether the employer made a threshold showing that the cause of action triggered the anti-SLAPP statute. If this condition is met, the court considers whether the employee has demonstrated a probability of prevailing on the claim.ⁿ⁸⁷

In considering whether the anti-SLAPP statute applies, the court examines whether the employee's cause of action arose from acts in furtherance of the employer's right of petition or free speech in connection with a public issue.ⁿ⁸⁸ The employer, as the moving party, bears the burden on this issue.ⁿ⁸⁹ As used in the anti-SLAPP statute,ⁿ⁹⁰ a protected act includes:

1. Any written or oral statement or writing made before a legislative, executive, or judicial proceeding, or any other official proceeding authorized by law.ⁿ⁹¹
2. Any written or oral statement or writing made in connection with an issue under consideration or review by a legislative, executive, or judicial body, or any other official proceeding authorized by law.
3. Any written or oral statement or writing made in a place open to the public or a public forum in connection with an issue of public interest.
4. Any other conduct in furtherance of the exercise of the constitutional right of petition or the constitutional right of free speech in connection with a public issue or an issue of public interest.

A private employer's procedure for investigating employee sexual harassment complaints does not qualify for these purposes as an official proceeding authorized by law.ⁿ⁹² Further, the public interest in the fair resolution of claims of sexual harassment does not bring a complaint alleging defamation during a sexual harassment investigation into the ambit of the anti-SLAPP statute.ⁿ⁹³

The anti-SLAPP statute may apply to preclude an employer's defamation action against an employee or former employee.ⁿ⁹⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview Torts Intentional Torts Defamation General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Prevost v. First West. Bank (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1492, 1497-1500, 239 Cal. Rptr. 161 .

(n2)Footnote 2. It should be noted that an action under Lab. Code §§ 1050-1054 may also be available in such a circumstance. see discussion in § 63.07[2].

(n3)Footnote 3. Kelly v. General Tel. Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 278, 284, 186 Cal. Rptr. 184 .

(n4)Footnote 3.1. See, e.g., Sheppard v. Freeman (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 339, 348-349, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 (because libel is statutory action under Civ. Code §§ 43-48.5, former employee could sue other employees based on their allegedly libelous conduct relating to his termination); See also § 61.02[1][a][ii].

(n5)Footnote 4. See Civ. Code § 45.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Civ. Code § 46.

(n7)Footnote 6. See discussion in [b], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. See discussion in [c], below.

(n9)Footnote 8. See discussion in [d], below.

(n10)Footnote 9. See discussion in [e], below.

(n11)Footnote 10. See discussion in [f], below. For the standard jury instructions pertaining to defamation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1700 et seq. (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict forms for defamation claims, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1700 et seq. (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n12)Footnote 11. Civ. Code § 45a; Slaughter v. Friedman (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 149, 153-154, 185 Cal. Rptr. 244, 649 P.2d 886 ; see discussion in [e], below.

(n13)Footnote 12. White v. Valenta (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 243, 254, 44 Cal. Rptr. 241 ; Civ. Code § 46(3).

(n14)Footnote 12.1. The Nethercutt Collection v. Regalia (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 361, 367, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 882 ; Mann v. Quality Old Time Service, Inc. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 90, 107, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215 .

(n15)Footnote 12.2. The Nethercutt Collection v. Regalia (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 361, 367-370, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 882 (statements that former employee demanded finder's fee to which he was not entitled and that other employees would not work for him and would leave if he remained employed were not slander per se as injury to business reputation; person could make claim for money that is rejected as not being justified and still not be viewed as having committed an act reflecting negatively on that person; statement that employee was fired because other employees would not work for him and would leave if he remained employed did not, on its face, clearly fall into category of injury to business reputation, because the fact that one or more employees do not want to work for someone, without more, did not necessarily reflect adversely on him as employees might not want to work for person because of person's work ethic or rectitude, or legitimate business policies).

(n16)Footnote 13. Civ. Code § 45a; Selleck v. Globe Int'l, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1123, 1132-1133, 212 Cal. Rptr. 838 .

(n17)Footnote 14. Civ. Code § 45a; MacLeod v. Tribune Publ'g Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 536, 551, 343 P.2d 36 .

(n18)Footnote 15. MacLeod v. Tribune Publ'g Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 536, 546, 343 P.2d 36 .

(n19)Footnote 16. Civ. Code § 46(3).

(n20)Footnote 17. Bates v. Campbell (1931) 213 Cal. 438, 443-446, 2 P.2d 383 ; Gallant v. City of Carson (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 705, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 318, 2005 Cal. App. LEXIS 617, *5 ; Von Stein v. Hardie (1930) 105 Cal. App. 780, 782-783, 288 P. 680 .

(n21)Footnote 18. Von Stein v. Hardie (1930) 105 Cal. App. 780, 782-783, 288 P. 680 .

(n22)Footnote 19. Jensen v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 958, 965, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83 .

(n23)Footnote 20. Jensen v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 958, 965, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83 (soleremedy if employer feigned negative evaluation is action in contract for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing).

(n24)Footnote 21. Campanelli v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 572, 581, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891 .

(n25)Footnote 21.1. Sheppard v. Freeman (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 339, 348-349, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 (former employee could sue other employees based on their allegedly libelous conduct relating to his termination); See also § 61.02[1][a][ii].

(n26)Footnote 22. Civ. Code § 46(1), (2).

(n27)Footnote 23. Burnett v. National Enquirer, Inc. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 991, 1013, 193 Cal. Rptr. 206 (statements made by defendant implied that plaintiff had been objectionably inebriated in a restaurant).

(n28)Footnote 23.1. See, e.g., Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 727-729, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 (court could readily dispose of proposition that employer's statements were nonactionable statements of opinion, where employee presented substantial evidence that at least some challenged statements were flat assertions of fact).

(n29)Footnote 24. Gantry Constr. Co. v. American Pipe & Constr. Co. (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 186, 194-196, 122 Cal. Rptr. 834 .

(n30)Footnote 25. Philadelphia Newspapers, Inc. v. Hepps (1986) 475 U.S. 767, 768-769, 106 S. Ct. 1558, 89 L. Ed. 2d 783 .

(n31)Footnote 26. See Jensen v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 958, 965, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83 (employer's evaluations of employees are typically statements of opinion rather than fact); Campanelli v. Regents of the University of Cal. (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 572, 581, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891 ; see also Gertz v. Welch (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 334-336, 94 S. Ct. 2997, 41 L. Ed. 2d 789 ; Okun v. Superior Court (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 442, 450, 175 Cal. Rptr. 157, 629 P.2d 1369 .

(n32)Footnote 27. Kelly v. Gen. Tel. Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 278, 284, 186 Cal. Rptr. 184 .

(n33)Footnote 28. Kelly v. Gen. Tel. Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 278, 284, 186 Cal. Rptr. 184 .

(n34)Footnote 28.1. Sheppard v. Freeman (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 339, 349, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 , citing Wilcox v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 809, 827-828, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446 .

(n35)Footnote 29. McKinney v. Santa Clara (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 787, 168 Cal. Rptr. 89 .

(n36)Footnote 30. Schneider v. United Air Lines, Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 71, 75, 256 Cal. Rptr. 71 . For the standard jury instruction on coerced self-publication, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1708 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n37)Footnote 31. Noral v. Hearst Publications (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 348, 350, 104 P.2d 860 .

(n38)Footnote 32. Washer v. Bank of America (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 822, 829, 136 P.2d 297 , overruled on other grounds, MacLeod v. Tribune Publ'g Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 536, 551, 343 P.2d 36 .

(n39)Footnote 33. Dewing v. Blodgett (1932) 124 Cal. App. 100, 103-105, 11 P.2d 1105 .

(n40)Footnote 34. Noral v. Hearst Publications (1940) 40 Cal. App. 2d 348, 353, 104 P.2d 860 .

(n41)Footnote 35. See discussion in [3][c], below.

(n42)Footnote 36. Davis v. Hearst (1911) 160 Cal. 143, 154-155, 116 P. 530 .

(n43)Footnote 37. See discussion in [3][b], below.

(n44)Footnote 38. See Forsher v. Bugliosi (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 792, 806-807, 163 Cal. Rptr. 628, 608 P.2d 716 ; Civ. Code § 45a; see also [a], above, for discussion of when statement is defamatory per se.

(n45)Footnote 39. Gomes v. Fried (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 924, 939-940, 186 Cal. Rptr. 605 ; Civ. Code §§ 45a, 48a(4)(b).

(n46)Footnote 40. Civ. Code § 46(3); White v. Valenta (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 243, 251-254, 44 Cal. Rptr. 241 .

(n47)Footnote 41. Von Stein v. Hardie (1930) 105 Cal. App. 780, 782-783, 288 P. 680 .

(n48)Footnote 42. Lab. Code § 3201 et seq.

(n49)Footnote 43. See, e.g., Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1591, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330 .

(n50)Footnote 44. Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1591, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330 ; Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 905, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286 .

(n51)Footnote 45. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 .

(n52)Footnote 46. See, e.g., Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 904-905, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286 .

(n53)Footnote 47. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 747, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 (cited in Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1590, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330).

(n54)Footnote 48. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 16, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 .

(n55)Footnote 49. Howland v. Balma (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 899, 904, 192 Cal. Rptr. 286 (quotation marks and citations omitted; cited by Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1590-1591, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330).

(n56)Footnote 50. Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1591, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330 .

(n57)Footnote 51. See 29 U.S.C. § 185(a) (Labor Management Relations Act).

(n58)Footnote 52. De Tomaso v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 517, 530, 235 Cal. Rptr. 292, 733 P.2d 614 ; Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Lueck (1985) 471 U.S. 202, 211, 105 S. Ct. 1904, 85 L. Ed. 2d 206 .

(n59)Footnote 53. See De Tomaso v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 517, 530-533, 235 Cal. Rptr. 292, 733 P.2d 614 ; but cf. Tellez v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 536, 538-539 (defamation action based on statements that were neither required by collective bargaining agreement nor part of grievance process was not preempted by federal labor law).

(n60)Footnote 54. De Tomaso v. Pan Am. World Airways, Inc. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 517, 529, 235 Cal. Rptr. 292, 733 P.2d 614 ; Tellez v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 536, 538 (state defamation claim was not pre-empted by federal labor law because it neither asserted rights derived from the collective bargaining agreement nor required interpretation of agreement; California defamation law establishes nonnegotiable rights and obligations that are independent of any labor agreement).

(n61)Footnote 55. See Kilgore v. Younger (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 770, 778, 180 Cal. Rptr. 657, 640 P.2d 793 .

(n62)Footnote 56. See Civ. Code § 47(a)-(b), (d)-(e); but see Prevost v. First Western Bank (1987) 193 Cal.

App. 3d 1492, 1498-1499, 239 Cal. Rptr. 161 (privilege for statements made in "other official proceedings authorized by law" was inapplicable to statement made about former employee in proof of loss statement by employer-bank to bonding company, even though proof of loss statement was required by law).

(n63)Footnote 57. O'Shea v. General Tel. Co. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1040, 1047-1048, 238 Cal. Rptr. 715 (absolute privilege for background inspection of peace officers required by Gov. Code § 1031).

(n64)Footnote 57.1. Cruey v. Gannett Co., Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 368, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (employee's complaint made to EEOC was absolutely privileged under Civ. Code § 47(b), which provides absolute privilege for communications in proceedings authorized by law, because employee must file complaint with EEOC before filing suit under Title VII).

(n65)Footnote 58. See Wallin v. Vienna Sausage Mfg. Co. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1054-1055, 203 Cal. Rptr. 375.

(n66)Footnote 58.1. Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 112, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 (plaintiff failed to state cause of action for defamation based on defendants' communication with police).

(n67)Footnote 59. Saroyan v. Burkett (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 706, 708, 21 Cal. Rptr. 557, 371 P.2d 293. For the standard jury instruction on qualified privilege in the context of a defamation claim, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1723 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n68)Footnote 60. Civ. Code § 47(c).

(n69)Footnote 61. Civ. Code § 47(c).

(n70)Footnote 62. Cuenca v. Safeway San Francisco Employees Fed. Credit Union (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 985, 995-996, 225 Cal. Rptr. 852; see also Kacludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866, 872 (disparaging remarks made by plaintiff's supervisors about his qualifications presumed to be privileged); Kelly v. General Telephone Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 278, 285, 186 Cal. Rptr. 184 (communication designed to insure accurate company records as privileged).

(n71)Footnote 63. Deaile v. General Tel. Co. of California (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 841, 847, 115 Cal. Rptr. 582. See also King v. United Parcel Service, Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 426, 440-442, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 359 (former employee failed to show that employer lost its common interest privilege by terminating him with malice, and plaintiff failed to produce any evidence that employer over-published statements about him to those with no interest in business or for any nefarious motives).

(n72)Footnote 63.1. Cruey v. Gannett Co., Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 369-370, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (applying conditional privilege in Civ. Code § 47(c), but reversing grant of summary judgment to determine whether privilege could be overcome by showing of malice before trier of fact).

(n73)Footnote 63.2. See Noel v. River Hills Wilsons, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1363, 1369, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216 (Legislature amended Civ. Code § 47(c) in 1994 to expressly state the common-interest privilege applies to communications made by current or former employers to prospective employers).

(n74)Footnote 64. Civ. Code § 47(c).

(n75)Footnote 65. Robomatic, Inc. v. Vetco Offshore (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 270, 276, 275 Cal. Rptr. 70. See, e.g., Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 729-731, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 (on summary judgment motion by employer, employee presented evidence showing triable issues with respect to existence of malice, where jury could easily find that statements by supervisors responsible for his firing were motivated by ill will towards employee).

(n76)Footnote 65.1. Civ. Code § 48; Noel v. River Hills Wilsons, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1363, 1370, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216 .

(n77)Footnote 65.2. Noel v. River Hills Wilsons, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1363, 1370-1373, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216 (in defamation action by former employee against former employer based on statements to subsequent employer by employee, no reasonable jury could find malice was motivating cause of statements, where undisputed evidence showed she made unintentional error or careless blunder by paying insufficient attention to inquiry and gave inaccurate employment information on former employee because she was expecting inquiry from prospective employer on another former employee and she did not doubt truth of information she conveyed or show reckless disregard for plaintiff's rights or feelings).

(n78)Footnote 65.3. Civ. Code § 47(c).

(n79)Footnote 65.4. Noel v. River Hills Wilsons, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1363, 1370-1373, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 216 (employee of former employer reported no rumors or gossip regarding former employee's employment, she had no improper purpose and her statements were caused by careless blunder, so that summary judgment for former employer in defamation action was proper).

(n80)Footnote 65.5. Taus v. Loftus (2007) 40 Cal. 4th 683, 721, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 775, 151 P.3d 1185 ; Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 729, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 .

(n81)Footnote 65.6. Mamou v. Trendwest Resorts, Inc. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 686, 729, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 406 .

(n82)Footnote 66. Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 944, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 ; see also Cuenca v. Safeway San Francisco Employees Federal Credit Union (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 985, 997, 225 Cal. Rptr. 852 (stating that malice may be established by showing that publisher lacked reasonable grounds to believe statement was true and thus acted in reckless disregard for rights of plaintiff).

(n83)Footnote 67. Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 944-945, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 (privilege overcome when statements concerning employee's competence were maliciously motivated for purpose of terminating employee).

(n84)Footnote 68. Kacludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866, 872 (also holding that Civ. Code § 47(c) applies).

(n85)Footnote 69. See, e.g., Olivet v. Frischling (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 831, 164 Cal. Rptr. 87 , disapproved on other grounds, Applied Equip. Corp. v. Litton Saudi Arabia Ltd. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 503, 521 . See also Halvorsen v. Aramark Unif. Servs., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1386, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 (in tort action for interference with at will employment contract, holding that manager's privilege is absolute when at will employee is terminated).

(n86)Footnote 70. Kacludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866, 872 .

(n87)Footnote 71. See Clement v. American Greetings Corp. (S.D. Cal. 1986) 636 F. Supp. 1326, 1329-1330 .

(n88)Footnote 71.1. Cruey v. Gannett Co., Inc. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 356, 369-370, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 (applying conditional privilege in Civ. Code § 47(c), but reversing grant of summary judgment to determine whether privilege could be overcome by showing of malice before trier of fact).

(n89)Footnote 72. Jensen v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 958, 964, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83

(defamation suit filed while plaintiff still employed, although plaintiff alleged at trial that defamation ultimately caused his termination).

(n90)Footnote 73. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 663, 700, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 ; see discussion in ch. 60.

(n91)Footnote 74. Jensen v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 958, 969-971, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83 (affirming nonsuit and holding that an employer's performance evaluation cannot support a cause of action for libel unless it accuses the employee of criminal conduct, lack of integrity, dishonesty, incompetence, or reprehensible personal characteristics or behavior).

(n92)Footnote 74.1. Sheppard v. Freeman (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 339, 344-345, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 (citing Jensen v. Hewlett-Packard Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 958, 959, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83 , for the proposition that under Foley, proper remedy against employer for allegedly false performance reviews is action in contract).

(n93)Footnote 74.2. Sheppard v. Freeman (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 339, 348-349 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 (former employee could sue other employees based on their allegedly libelous conduct relating to his termination); see § 61.02[1][a][ii] for further discussion.

(n94)Footnote 75. Gertz v. Welch (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 334-336, 94 S. Ct. 2997, 41 L. Ed. 2d 789 ; see also Rattray v. City of National City (9th Cir. 1994) 51 F.3d 793, 800 (police officer was public official who had to prove that defendant police chief acted with actual malice in making allegedly defamatory statement that police officer was terminated for dishonesty).

(n95)Footnote 76. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. v. Greenmoss Builders, Inc. (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 757-761, 105 S. Ct. 2939, 86 L. Ed. 2d 593 .

(n96)Footnote 77. See Gertz v. Welch (1974) 418 U.S. 323, 347, 94 S. Ct. 2997, 41 L. Ed. 2d 789 .

(n97)Footnote 78. Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. v. Greenmoss Builders, Inc. (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 757-761, 105 S. Ct. 2939, 86 L. Ed. 2d 593 .

(n98)Footnote 78.1. See Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. v. Greenmoss Builders, Inc. (1985) 472 U.S. 749, 784, 105 S. Ct. 2939, 86 L. Ed. 2d 593 .

(n99)Footnote 79. See, e.g., Gunn v. Mariners Church, Inc. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 206, 213-217 (statements allegedly made by church leaders to congregation regarding termination of employment of worship director, which was based on his homosexuality, were not actionable under First Amendment law, where they necessarily implicated truth or falsity of religious doctrine and were part of process of his termination).

(n100)Footnote 79.1. Campanelli v. Regents of the University of California (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 572, 581-582, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 891 ; Restatement Second of Torts § 581A.

(n101)Footnote 79.2. See Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1720 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n102)Footnote 79.3. Royer v. Steinberg (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 490, 498-499, 153 Cal. Rptr. 499 ; Restatement Second of Torts § 583. For the standard jury instruction on the defense of consent, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1721 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05.

(n103)Footnote 80. See Civ. Code §§ 45a, 48a(4)(b); Gomes v. Fried (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 924, 939-940, 186

Cal. Rptr. 605 .

(n104)Footnote 81. Civ. Code § 48a(4)(a); Gomes v. Fried (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 924, 939, 186 Cal. Rptr. 605

(n105)Footnote 82. Civ. Code § 3294; see also McCoy v. Hearst Corp. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 835, 872-873, 231 Cal. Rptr. 518, 727 P.2d 711 .

(n106)Footnote 83. See discussion in [3][c], above.

(n107)Footnote 84. See discussion in [2][f], above.

(n108)Footnote 85. See Civ. Code § 47(c).

(n109)Footnote 86. Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16. See, e.g., Neville v. Chudacoff (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1255, 1261-1269, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 383 (in former employee's defamation action against employer's attorney, based on attorney's letter to customers accusing former employee of breach of contract and misappropriation of trade secrets and suggesting that, to avoid potential involvement in ensuing litigation as material witness or otherwise, customers should not do business with former employee, letter was writing made in connection with issue under consideration or review by judicial body and covered by anti-SLAPP statute, where letter directly related to employer's claims against former employee, and employer was seriously and in good faith contemplating litigation against former employee); Olaes v. Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1501, 1505-1513, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467 (trial court properly denied employer's anti-SLAPP motion, where employee's defamation action based on employer's dismissal of employee based on sexual harassment complaints did not implicate statements made during legislative, executive, or judicial proceeding and did not concern a matter of public interest).

(n110)Footnote 87. See Dible v. Haight Ashbury Free Clinics, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 843, 848-849, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 ; Olaes v. Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1501, 1505, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467 .

(n111)Footnote 88. Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(b)(1).

(n112)Footnote 89. See Dible v. Haight Ashbury Free Clinics, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 843, 849, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 ; Olaes v. Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1501, 1505, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467 ; Gallimore v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Ins. Co. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 1388, 1397, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560 .

(n113)Footnote 90. Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16(e).

(n114)Footnote 91. Dible v. Haight Ashbury Free Clinics, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 843, 849-852, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 (employer met its burden of showing acts in furtherance of employer's right of free speech in connection in public issue, where allegedly false statements made by employer in communication to Employment Development Department in allegedly attempting to deny former employee benefits and justify its termination of her were unequivocally part of official proceeding).

(n115)Footnote 92. Olaes v. Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1501, 1505-1510, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467 .

(n116)Footnote 93. Olaes v. Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1501, 1510-1511, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 467 .

(n117)Footnote 94. See Nygard, Inc. v. Uusi-Kerttula (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1027, 1036-1054, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 210 (trial court properly struck employer's complaint against former employee for variety of tort and contract claims, based on interview former employee gave to magazine about his work experiences, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, where employee's statements were written or oral statements or writings made in place open to public or public forum in connection with issue of public interest, and employer failed to make prima facie showing of likelihood of prevailing on any one of five causes of action, including defamation claim).

99 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination

Part A. TEXT

4-63 California Employment Law § 63.03

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 63.03 False Imprisonment

In cases in which an employee brings an action against an employer for wrongful termination, the employee may, in limited circumstances, have an additional cause of action against an employer for false imprisonment. Such a situation might arise, for example, when an employee is wrongfully detained by his or her employer under the mistaken belief that the employee has stolen company property and the employee is also terminated as a result.

The essence of a claim for false imprisonment is the restraint of a person's liberty so that a person is compelled to remain in a place where he or she does not wish to remain.ⁿ¹ Temporary restraint is sufficient and the use of actual physical force is not necessary.ⁿ² In one case, a bank employee was detained at a supervisor's desk for interrogation with respect to bank shortages and was threatened with federal prosecution if she did not sign a confession. In upholding a jury verdict for the plaintiff-employee, the court found the fact that the employee did agree to sign such a confession, even though she was absolutely innocent of any wrongdoing, as sufficient to support a finding that a threat of force was used to detain the employee.ⁿ³

There is no false imprisonment, however, if the restraint is lawful.ⁿ⁴ Thus, for example, if a merchant has probable cause to believe that a person has unlawfully taken his or her property, he or she is entitled to detain the person for a reasonable time for the purpose of conducting a reasonable investigation.ⁿ⁵ A property owner may similarly take reasonable steps to protect his or her property from theft or injury.ⁿ⁶ Whether an employer's specific actions were reasonable, justifiable, or privileged, so as to preclude liability for false imprisonment, are generally questions for the trier of fact.ⁿ⁷

Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. ⁿ⁸ involved a false imprisonment action brought by an employee who, accused of theft by her employer, was detained in a room by a manager and two security agents. The California Supreme Court concluded that a false imprisonment is not a normal aspect of the employment relationship, however legitimate its initial justification. Thus, a false imprisonment committed by an employer against an employee is always outside the scope of the "compensation bargain," and an action against an employer for false imprisonment is not preempted by the exclusive remedy doctrine of workers' compensation law.ⁿ⁹ For complete discussion of the exclusive remedy doctrine of workers' compensation law, see Chapter 20, Part A.

For a complete discussion of the tort of false imprisonment, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 42 (Matthew Bender).

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

Employers should be aware that nearly every discharge includes the potential for supervisory conduct amounting to false imprisonment of the dischargee. A common source of that potential is argument over the ownership of property (documents or other tangible items) that the dischargee has collected to remove from the employer's premises. Under such circumstances, the employer is clearly in a dilemma. If it restrains the dischargee, it faces possible false imprisonment charges (as well as possible claims for intentional infliction of emotional distress or for battery). If the employer does not restrain the dischargee, it may lose valuable property. The most prudent course is to ask the dischargee to permit a brief inspection of the property. Reasonable force (directed at the property, rather than the employee, if possible) should be used only if the employer has an objective basis for concluding that the dischargee is about to remove employer property of significant proprietary value. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview Torts Intentional Torts False Imprisonment General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Onick v. Long (1957) 154 Cal. App. 2d 381, 386, 316 P.2d 427 ; Parrott v. Bank of America (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 14, 23, 217 P.2d 89 . For the standard jury instruction for the essential factual elements of a claim for false imprisonment not involving an arrest, which would be generally applicable in the employment context, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1400 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim of false imprisonment with no arrest involved, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1400 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n2)Footnote 2. Parrott v. Bank of America (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 14, 23, 217 P.2d 89 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Parrott v. Bank of America (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 14, 23, 217 P.2d 89 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Singleton v. Perry (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 489, 494, 289 P.2d 794 . For the standard jury instruction on the common law right to detain for investigation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1409 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on the affirmative defense of the right to detain for investigation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1401 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Penal Code § 490.5(f).

(n6)Footnote 6. Collyer v. S.H. Kress & Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 175, 180-181, 54 P.2d 20 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 723, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Fermino v. Fedco, Inc. (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 701, 723, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 18, 872 P.2d 559 .

100 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination

Part A. TEXT

4-63 California Employment Law § 63.04

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 63.04 Interference With Contract/Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

As a general rule, an employee has no cause of action for inducing the breach of an employment contract, or for interference with prospective economic advantage (which encompasses the tort of inducing breach of contract)ⁿ¹ against either his or her employer or against other employees acting within the scope of their employment.ⁿ² The California Supreme Court has observed, "It is well established that corporate agents and employees acting for and on behalf of a corporation cannot be held liable for inducing a breach of the corporation's contract."ⁿ³ This is particularly true in the case of at will employment. For example, in Halvorsen v. Aramark Unif. Servs., Inc., ^{n3.1} the plaintiff, an at will employee, brought a claim against his immediate superior based on his alleged actions in inducing the plaintiff's termination. The court concluded that when an at will employee is terminated, the manager's privilege is absolute. The court reasoned that the manager's motives and communications with the employer concerning termination should receive the strongest protection.^{n3.2} Furthermore, third parties who are not the plaintiff's employer cannot be liable for conspiracy to effect wrongful termination in violation of public policy.ⁿ⁴

However, an employee may have a cause of action against a third person for inducing the employer to terminate an employment contract, even if the contract is terminable at will.ⁿ⁵ Third persons could include corporate shareholders or directors or any other party not authorized to terminate the plaintiff's employment.ⁿ⁶ For example, in one wrongful-discharge action brought against a school district, the board of education, and an individual member of the board, based on the board member's successful attempt to fire plaintiff because he refused to offer business contracts to the member's friends, the board member was held subject to a cause of action for intentional interference with plaintiff's employment contract, because he had no authority as an individual member to bind the school district to a contract, and was not a party to the plaintiff's employment contract.ⁿ⁷

One employer may have a cause of action against another employer for intentional interference with at-will employment relations for inducing an at-will employee to quit working for the first employer. Such an interference is primarily an interference with the future relation between the first employer and the at-will employee. Thus, an employer may recover damages for intentional interference with an at-will employment relation under the same standard applicable to claims for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. To recover for another employer's interference with an at-will employment relation, the first employer must plead and prove that the second employer engaged in an independently wrongful act, i.e., an act proscribed by a constitutional, statutory, regulatory, common law, or other determinable legal standard, that induced the at-will employee to leave the first employer.^{n7.1} An employer is not subject to liability for intentional interference if the interference consists merely of extending a job offer that induces an employee to terminate his or her at-will employment. Thus, when no unlawful methods are used, public policy generally supports a competitor's right to offer more pay or better terms to another's employee, so long as the employee is free to leave.^{n7.2}

The elements of a cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage are (1) an economic relationship between the plaintiff and a third person containing the probability of future economic benefit to the plaintiff (such as an existing employment agreement); (2) knowledge by the defendant of the existence of the relationship; (3) intentional acts on the part of the defendant designed to disrupt the relationship; (4) actual disruption of the relationship; and (5) damages to the plaintiff proximately caused by the acts of the defendant.ⁿ⁸

The first element, probability of future economic benefit, is satisfied by an employment relationship, even if the employment is terminable at will.ⁿ⁹ Thus, an employee was held to have stated a cause of action against the major shareholder of a corporation for inducing breach of contract when the employee alleged that the defendant intentionally and without justification caused the corporation to terminate plaintiff's employment.ⁿ¹⁰

Justification is a defense to an action for interference with prospective economic advantage. For example, a person who has a financial interest in the business of another is privileged to cause him or her not to enter into or continue a relation with a third person in that business, provided the actor does not employ improper means and is acting to protect his or her interest from being prejudiced by the relation.ⁿ¹¹

For a complete discussion of the the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage and applicable defenses, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, california tort, Chapter 40, Part D (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Wrongful Termination
General Overview
Torts
Intentional Torts
Interference With Personal Relationships
General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 823, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 , disapproved on other grounds, Della Penna v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 376, 393 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See DeHorney v. Bank of America Nat'l Trust and Sav. (9th Cir. 1989) 879 F.2d 459, 464 ; Mallard v. Boring (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 390, 393-394, 6 Cal. Rptr. 171 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Shoemaker v. Myers (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 1, 24-25, 276 Cal. Rptr. 303, 801 P.2d 1054 ; see also Kacludis v. GTE Sprint Communications Corp. (N.D. Cal. 1992) 806 F. Supp. 866, 872 .

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Halvorsen v. Aramark Uniform Services, Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 .

(n5)Footnote 3.2. Halvorsen v. Aramark Unif. Servs., Inc. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1383, 1395, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 383 ; See also § 63.03[3][b].

(n6)Footnote 4. Weinbaum v. Goldfarb, Whitman & Cohen (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1310, 1315, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 462 ; see Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 575-576, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 (plaintiff's supervisor did not commit tort of wrongful termination in violation of public policy because that tort has its basis in employer-employee relationship and supervisor was not plaintiff's employer, citing Weinbaum v. Goldfarb).

(n7)Footnote 5. Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat. Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 598, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52 .

(n8)Footnote 6. Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat. Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 598-600, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52 .

(n9)Footnote 7. Mouchette v. Bd. of Educ. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 303, 312, 266 Cal. Rptr. 1 , disapproved on other grounds, Caldwell v. Montoya (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 972, 984 .

(n10)Footnote 7.1. Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 1140, 1147-1155, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289, 95 P.3d 513 (second employer properly found to be liable where second employer did not simply extend job offers to first employer's at-will employees, but, rather, purposely engaged in unlawful acts that crippled first employer's business operations and caused first employer's personnel to terminate their at-will employment contracts).

(n11)Footnote 7.2. Reeves v. Hanlon (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 1140, 1151-1153, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 289, 95 P.3d 513 .

(n12)Footnote 8. Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 330, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 . However, in certain circumstances, negligent interference with prospective economic advantage is also actionable. See J'aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 805-806, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 .

For the standard jury instructions on economic interference, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2200 (inducing breach of contract); CACI 2201 (intentional interference with contractual relations); CACI 2202 (intentional interference with prospective economic relations), CACI 2203 (intent), 2204 (negligent interference with prospective economic relations) (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict forms for economic interference, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2200 (inducing breach of contract), VF-2201 (intentional interference with contractual relations), VF-2202 (intentional interference with prospective economic relations), VF-2203 (negligent interference with prospective economic relations) (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n13)Footnote 9. Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat. Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 598, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52 .

(n14)Footnote 10. Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat. Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 598-600, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52 .

(n15)Footnote 11. Kozlowsky v. Westminster Nat. Bank (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 593, 599, 86 Cal. Rptr. 52 .

101 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination
Part A. TEXT

4-63 California Employment Law § 63.05

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 63.05 Fraud and Deceit

[1] Tort Damages for Fraud Unavailable for Misrepresentation Committed in Course of Termination of Employment

Whether a discharged employee may assert a claim for fraud or deceit against a former employer depends in part on the nature and timing of the alleged misrepresentations. In Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc.,ⁿ¹ the California Supreme Court held that wrongful termination of employment ordinarily does not give rise to a cause of action for fraud or deceit, even if some misrepresentation is made in the course of the employee's dismissal. The Court stated that tort recovery is available only if the plaintiff can establish all of the elements of fraud with respect to a misrepresentation that is separate from the termination of the employment contract.ⁿ²

In reaching this conclusion, the Court discussed the policy considerations that supported the holding in Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. ⁿ³ that tort remedies are not recoverable for a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the employment context, and held that the same considerations support the conclusion that tort remedies are not available for a wrongful termination merely because an employer has made a misrepresentation to end the employment relationship.ⁿ⁴ The Court stated that the employer in the case before it could have terminated the plaintiff without any subterfuge, and would have been liable only for contractual damages if the termination was wrongful. As a consequence, the Court held that the use of a misrepresentation to achieve the same result should not give rise to tort damages.ⁿ⁵

In a later case, however, the Court held that its holding in Hunter was not intended to create a broad immunity from all traditional tort liability for fraud in the employment context.ⁿ⁶ Thus, as discussed in [2], below, tort remedies for fraud and deceit may be available for misrepresentations that were not merely made for the purpose of effecting termination of the plaintiff's employment.

[2] Cause of Action Can Be Stated for Misrepresentation Independent of Termination

The California Supreme Court in Hunter (discussed in [1], above) indicated in dictum that a misrepresentation that is not aimed at effecting termination of employment, but designed instead to induce the employee to alter detrimentally his or her position in some other respect, can be the basis of a valid fraud claim, even in the context of a wrongful termination.ⁿ⁷ To state such a cause of action, the plaintiff must establish all of the elements of fraud with respect to a misrepresentation that is separate from the termination of the employment contract.ⁿ⁸ In a later case, Lazar v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁹ the Court followed the dictum in Hunter. The Court held that a terminated employee who alleged that he had been induced by the defendant's knowingly false promises of job security to give up secure employment in another state and move with his family across country to accept defendant's employment offer had stated a valid cause of action for promissory fraud.ⁿ¹⁰ The Court found the facts alleged in Lazar distinguishable from those involved in Hunter in that the misrepresentations in Hunter were made during the course of terminating the employee. Because the employer could have terminated the employee directly without making any misrepresentation and incurred only contract damages, the Court in Hunter had reasoned that the plaintiff had not suffered any detriment as a result of the misrepresentation beyond that which would be caused by a mere breach of the employment contract. By contrast, the alleged misrepresentations in Lazar occurred during the employer's recruitment of the plaintiff and were made, not to terminate the plaintiff's employment, but to induce him to give up his previous employment and go to work for defendant. The plaintiff thus suffered actual detriment (e.g., moving expenses, loss of income from the previous employment) as a result of his reliance on that misrepresentation.ⁿ¹¹

It appears that such an employee would apparently also be able to state a statutory cause of action under Labor Code, section 970, although the issue was not directly addressed by the Court in Lazar. For discussion, see § 63.07[1].

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The considerable legal discussion surrounding Foley,ⁿ¹² Hunter, and Lazar merits comment. Foley recognized the ease with which tort claims can be alleged, compared to the difficulty of resolving them short of trial, a difficulty with significant economic consequences. Allege a promise not kept, and you have a contract claim. Allege a promise never intended to be kept, and you have fraud. The consequence, if such claims are too easily asserted, is an inevitable chill on the decision-making process surrounding employment terminations. Employers will be dissuaded from making necessary terminations, for fear of "giv[ing] rise to potential tort recovery in every case." Foley rejected the ready transformation of contract claims into tort in a particular context, and it did so based on policy arguments that appeared to have much broader scope. Foley appeared to stand, at a minimum, for the proposition that one cannot use pleading artifice to convert a contract claim into a tort, where the facts supporting each are essentially the same. As most broadly construed, Foley seemed to go further and say that only contract remedies are available for claims triggered by termination, unless the termination violated public policy. Lazar rejected the broad reading of Foley, though it would be premature to declare the demise of the public policy against the ready assertion of tort claims in the context of the employment relationship. Further, even on its own terms, Lazar offers some protection against an onslaught of fraud claims.

The Court in Lazar first distinguished Hunter, noting that it involved a situation in which the employer misrepresented to the employee the reason for the termination. Because the employer, according to the Court, could have accomplished the termination without the misrepresentation, the employee could not be said to have relied on the misrepresentation to his detriment. Thus, the Court noted, Hunter did not preclude employment fraud claims; it merely found that the plaintiff in that case could not establish detrimental reliance, one of the essential elements. According to the Court in Lazar, "[o]ur decision in Hunter was not meant to alter fundamentally the law of fraud or to suggest it necessarily applies differently in the employment context." The Court next rejected the employer's suggestion that Foley limits the remedies for employment termination to contract damages, absent a violation of public policy. Lazar noted that in Foley the question presented was whether the employment relationship was a "special relationship" that warranted the imposition of tort damages for what ordinarily would be a contract claim (breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing). Foley refused to extend tort remedies, in light of the "countervailing concerns about economic policy and stability, the traditional separation of tort and contract law, and ... the numerous protections against improper terminations already afforded employees." Foley described such an extension of remedies as "better suited for legislative decision making." In Lazar, the Court similarly relied on judicial restraint to counsel against creating a special exemption for employers from traditional fraud claims. The Court noted succinctly that it was "affirming, not inventing, the cause of action for promissory fraud." While the Court thus rejected, on grounds of judicial restraint, an extension of Foley, it did not question the holding of Foley itself nor the soundness of the policy considerations articulated both there and in Hunter. Those policy considerations still stand, and they should continue to inform the decisions of the courts as they confront tort pleadings in the employment context. In particular, there is no reason to conclude that Lazar opens the door to pleading artifice where an attempt is made to transform the very facts establishing the contract claim into tort, without more.

In recognition of Foley's concern not to create "potential tort recovery in every [discharge] case," the Lazar Court admonished that fraud must be "pled specifically; general and conclusory allegations do not suffice." The Court noted that the "policy of liberal construction of pleadings" will not ordinarily save defective fraud claims; rather, plaintiffs must allege "facts which show, how, where, to whom, and by what means the representations were tendered." In the case of fraud claims asserted against "a corporate employer," plaintiff's burden "is even greater." Plaintiffs must "allege the names of the persons who made the allegedly fraudulent representations, their authority to speak, to whom they spoke, [and] what they said or wrote."

While the Court did not discuss the scienter requirement of a fraud claim, there is no reason to exempt that element from the same strict pleading requirements applicable to all the other elements, and much reason not to. If plaintiffs need allege only the legal conclusion that the employer never intended to keep its promise, with no supporting facts other than that the promise was not kept, the policy of Foley and the admonitions of Lazar become ephemeral indeed; there truly will be "potential tort recovery in every [discharge] case." While imperfect, enforcement of the strict pleading requirement for all elements of fraud claims is at present the best available means to insure that only "deserving" cases give rise to tort relief. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

While plaintiff's counsel should be careful to distinguish between facts which may give rise to a breach of contract claim (e.g., "I was promised X, and then things changed and I only got Y.") and those which give rise to a legitimate fraud claim ("The employer promised me X with no intention of ever giving me anything but Y."), fraud should be alleged where there is evidence, even circumstantial evidence, on which to base the claim. In most cases, an employee will not know with any certainty at all what was in his or her employer's mind at the time an offer of employment was made. This does not mean that a valid fraud claim cannot be brought. If external facts, such as market conditions, a desire to accommodate another, more favored employee, or internal company politics suggest that the offer of employment was not genuinely meant, the basis for a fraud claim is present. Commentary by John M. True, III.

Even if an employee has litigated wage claims before the Labor Commissioner based on the same facts as the misrepresentation claims, res judicata will not apply to preclude the misrepresentation claims, because the Labor Commissioner lacks jurisdiction over the misrepresentation claims.^{n12.1}

[3] Elements of Cause of Action

The elements of a cause of action for deceit (or fraud or misrepresentation) are (1) the misrepresentation or concealment of a material fact, (2) knowledge of the falsity or lack of a reasonable ground for belief in the truth of the representation, (3) intent to induce reliance, (4) justifiable reliance by the plaintiff, and (5) resulting damage.ⁿ¹³ The tort of negligent misrepresentation does not require scienter or intent to defraud, but does require proof of justifiable reliance and resulting damage.^{n13.1}

Promissory fraud is a subspecies of the action for fraud and deceit. A promise to do something necessarily implies the intention to perform; hence, when a promise is made without such intention, there is an implied misrepresentation of fact that may be actionable fraud.^{n13.2} An action for promissory fraud may lie when a defendant fraudulently induces the plaintiff to enter into a contract. In those cases, the plaintiff's claim does not depend on whether the defendant's promise is ultimately enforceable as a contract. If it is enforceable, the plaintiff has a cause of action in tort as an alternative at least, and perhaps in some instances in addition to the cause of action on the contract. Recovery, however, may be limited by the rule against double recovery of tort and contract compensatory damages.^{n13.3} Fraudulent inducement causing damages unrelated to an employee's discharge is an actionable tort regardless of whether the employee is "at-will."^{n13.4}

To be actionable, the matter misrepresented must normally relate to a past or existing fact.ⁿ¹⁴ However, a promise to act in the future is an actionable misrepresentation if the promisor, at the time the promise was made, had no intention of performing the promised action.ⁿ¹⁵ An opinion is not actionable as a misrepresentation unless it was not honestly entertained by the defendant and was given in circumstances in which it was reasonable for the plaintiff to rely on the opinion, such as when the plaintiff reasonably believed that the defendant was an expert in the subject or when the defendant occupied a position of confidence and trust as to the plaintiff.ⁿ¹⁶ Furthermore, if an opinion misrepresents the facts on which it is based or implies the existence of facts that are nonexistent, it constitutes an actionable misrepresentation.ⁿ¹⁷

Nondisclosure of a material fact may constitute an actionable misrepresentation if the defendant was under a duty to disclose the fact. Such a duty may arise, for example, when the defendant stands in a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff.ⁿ¹⁸ In addition, nondisclosure is actionable when (1) the defendant makes representations but does not disclose facts that materially qualify the facts disclosed, or that render the facts disclosed misleading; (2) the facts are known or accessible only to the defendant and the defendant knows that they are not known to or reasonably discoverable by the plaintiff; and (3) the defendant actively conceals discovery from the plaintiff.ⁿ¹⁹ The employment relationship may give rise to a duty on the part of the employer to disclose certain facts.ⁿ²⁰ In one case, for example, independent sales representatives were told that, pursuant to a corporate reorganization, they were required to sign an agreement providing for termination without cause as a mere "formality" or else be terminated immediately. They signed and were subsequently terminated. The court found that they had stated a cause of action for fraudulent concealment based on allegations that the employer intended to replace the sales representatives at the time it induced their signatures on the agreements.ⁿ²¹

There is authority that suggests that if a deceit cause of action is based on a negligent misrepresentation, the misrepresentation must be in the form of a positive assertion rather than an implied representation or nondisclosure.ⁿ²²

A cause of action for deceit must be supported by proof that the false representation was made by the defendant with knowledge of its falsity or without reasonable grounds for believing it was true.ⁿ²³ An indisputably true statement cannot support an action for deceit.ⁿ²⁴ In addition, plaintiff must show that the defendant intended to induce the plaintiff to rely on the false representation,ⁿ²⁵ that the plaintiff did rely on the representation, and that the reliance was justifiable or reasonable.ⁿ²⁶ When the circumstances of the case would suggest to a reasonable person that the defendant's representation may have been false, the plaintiff may be under a duty to investigate further, and reliance may not be justifiable.ⁿ²⁷ One court of appeal has suggested that a plaintiff's duty to investigate is relaxed in the employment setting when an employee relies on the representations of the employer.ⁿ²⁸

For a further discussion of the the tort of deceit, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 40, Part A (Matthew Bender).

[4] Remedies

Compensatory damages are the primary remedy in an action for deceit. Plaintiff is entitled to recover for all damages, including pecuniary losses and physical harm, caused by the misrepresentation.ⁿ²⁹ Time and effort expended as a result of the misrepresentation are also compensable.ⁿ³⁰

Punitive damages may be available in actions for deceit. Civil Code, section 3294 provides that punitive damages may be awarded if the plaintiff shows by clear and convincing evidence that the defendant has been guilty of oppression, malice, or fraud.ⁿ³¹ Under this provision, "fraud" means an intentional misrepresentation, deceit, or concealment of a material fact known to the defendant with the intention on the part of the defendant of depriving a person of property or legal rights or otherwise causing injury.ⁿ³² Thus, punitive damages are not available in cases involving a non-intentional misrepresentation.

Damages for emotional distress are ordinarily not recoverable in an action for negligent misrepresentation when the injury other than the emotional distress is only economic.ⁿ³³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview Torts Business Torts Fraud & Misrepresentation General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8, 864 P.2d 88 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1178, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8, 864 P.2d 88 . For discussion of this exception to the general rule of non-recovery, see [2], below. For discussion of the statutory cause of action under Lab. Code § 970 if an employee was induced by an employer's misrepresentation to relocate to take employment, see § 63.07[1].

(n3)Footnote 3. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 . For complete discussion of Foley, see Ch. 60.

(n4)Footnote 4. Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1180-1184, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8, 864 P.2d 88 .

(n5)Footnote 5. Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1184-1185, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8, 864 P.2d 88 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 641, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1185, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8, 864 P.2d 88 (citing Miller v. Fairchild Industries, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 498, 508-510 , as example of case in which fraud cause of action was proper because misrepresentation concerned plaintiff's settlement of civil rights action rather than termination of employment relationship).

(n8)Footnote 8. Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1178, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8, 864 P.2d 88 . For discussion of the elements of a fraud cause of action, see [3], below.

(n9)Footnote 9. Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 .

(n10)Footnote 10. Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 648-649, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 641-644, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 .

(n13)Footnote 12.1. Noble v. Draper (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1, 11-16, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 3 .

(n14)Footnote 13. See Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 596, 603, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565 ; Pulver v. Avco Financial Services (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 622, 639, 227 Cal. Rptr. 491 ; see also Civ. Code §§ 1709-1710.

(n15)Footnote 13.1. Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 596, 603, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565 (employer failed to meet his initial burden of showing entitlement to summary adjudication on misrepresentation causes of action, and burden never shifted to employee to raise triable issue of material fact); Fox v. Pollack (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 954, 962, 226 Cal. Rptr. 532 .

(n16)Footnote 13.2. Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 638, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 ; Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 596, 603, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565 .

(n17)Footnote 13.3. Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 638, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 ; Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 596, 603, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565 (former at-will employee produced evidence from which jury could reasonably infer employer promised employee his desired compensation package that employee sought to lure him into changing employment, employer never intended to live up to agreement, and employee suffered compensable damages apart from damages caused by his firing, and that employee was entitled to compensation for loss of security and income associated with former employment).

(n18)Footnote 13.4. Agosta v. Astor (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 596, 603-606, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565 .

(n19)Footnote 14. Richard P. v. Vista Del Mar Child Care Service (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 860, 865, 165 Cal. Rptr. 370 .

(n20)Footnote 15. Church of Merciful Saviour Volunteers of America (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 851, 858-859, 8 Cal. Rptr. 48 ; see Lazar v. Superior Court (Cal. 1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 641-644 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 .

(n21)Footnote 16. Wilke v. Coinway, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 126, 136, 64 Cal. Rptr. 845 .

(n22)Footnote 17. Wilke v. Coinway, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 126, 136, 64 Cal. Rptr. 845 .

(n23)Footnote 18. See Reed v. King (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 261, 264-265, 193 Cal. Rptr. 130 .

(n24)Footnote 19. Warner Constr. Corp. v. City of Los Angeles (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 285, 294, 85 Cal. Rptr. 444, 466 P.2d 996 .

(n25)Footnote 20. See Foster v. Xerox Corp. (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 306, 309-310, 219 Cal. Rptr. 485, 707 P.2d 858 (employer who knows that employee had contracted disease in course of employment is under a duty to disclose fact to employee).

(n26)Footnote 21. Marketing West, Inc. v. Sanyo Fisher (USA) Corp. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 603, 612-614, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 859 .

(n27)Footnote 22. See Civ. Code § 1573(2); Huber, Hunt & Nichols, Inc. v. Moore (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 278, 303-304, 136 Cal. Rptr. 603 (dicta).

(n28)Footnote 23. See Civ. Code § 1710(1), (2); Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 487, 275 P.2d 15 .

(n29)Footnote 24. See Kerr v. Rose (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1551, 1564, 265 Cal. Rptr. 597 .

(n30)Footnote 25. Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 488 n.5, 275 P.2d 15 .

(n31)Footnote 26. Slivinsky v. Watkins-Johnson Co. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 799, 807, 270 Cal. Rptr. 585 ; Wagner v. Benson (1980) 101 Cal. App. 3d 27, 36, 161 Cal. Rptr. 516 .

(n32)Footnote 27. Roland v. Hubenka (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 215, 224-225, 90 Cal. Rptr. 490 .

(n33)Footnote 28. See Ramey v. General Petroleum Corp. (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 386, 400, 343 P.2d 787 .

(n34)Footnote 29. Walker v. Signal Companies, Inc. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 982, 995-996, 149 Cal. Rptr. 119 ;
O'Hara v. Western Seven Trees Corp. (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 798, 805, 142 Cal. Rptr. 487 .

(n35)Footnote 30. Sutter v. General Petroleum Corp. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 525, 534-535, 170 P.2d 898 .

(n36)Footnote 31. Civ. Code § 3294(a).

(n37)Footnote 32. Civ. Code § 3294(c)(3).

(n38)Footnote 33. Branch v. Homefed Bank (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 793, 798, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 .

102 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination
Part A. TEXT

4-63 California Employment Law § 63.06

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 63.06 Other Related Causes of Action

[1] Misrepresentation to Induce Worker to Change Residence (Labor Code Section 970)

Labor Code, section 970 provides that no person, agent, or officer thereof shall, directly or indirectly, influence, persuade, or engage any person to move from one place to another within California or from any place outside California to any place within the state, or from any place within California to any place outside the state, for the purposes of working in any branch of labor, through or by means of knowingly false representations, whether spoken, written, or advertised in written form, concerning any of the following matters:

1. The kind, character, or existence of such work;
2. The length of time such work will last, or the compensation for the work;
3. The sanitary or housing conditions relating to or surrounding the work; or
4. The existence or nonexistence of any strike, lockout, or other labor dispute affecting the work and pending between the proposed employer and the persons then or last engaged in the performance of the labor for which the employee is sought.

A violation of Labor Code, section 970 constitutes a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $1,000, or imprisonment for not more than 6 months, or both.ⁿ¹ In addition, a person who violates Labor Code, section 970 is liable to the aggrieved person in a civil action for double damages resulting from the misrepresentations.ⁿ² The action may be brought by the aggrieved person, or his or her assigns or successors in interest, without establishing any criminal liability.ⁿ³

The elements of a cause of action under Labor Code, section 970 are (1) an intentional misrepresentation concerning one or more of the above-listed matters relating to the employment,ⁿ⁴ and (2) relocation by a person for purposes of work as a result of the misrepresentation.^{n4.1}

Although Labor Code section 970 was apparently enacted to cure problems relating to the solicitation of agricultural employees or other seasonal or mass hiring situations, the statute, by its terms, is not so restricted and may apply in all types of employment situations falling within the provisions of that section.ⁿ⁵ It applies to relocations while working for the same employer as well as relocations to gain new employment.ⁿ⁶

It appears that Labor Code section 970 applies to a temporary relocation of residence as well as a permanent relocation. However, a mere change in site of the employment, without a relocation of residence, is not sufficient to bring Labor Code section 970 into operation.ⁿ⁷

Although no case has so held, by analogy to cases decided under similar statutes that provide for enhanced damages, it is arguable that if malice is established in such a cause of action, the plaintiff may be entitled to punitive damages.ⁿ⁸ However, in the event punitive damages are allowed, the plaintiff may have to elect between double damages and punitive damages.ⁿ⁹ Because a violation of Labor Code section 970 constitutes an intentional misrepresentation (due to the statutory prohibition on "knowingly false representation"), damages for emotional distress may be recovered even if unaccompanied by physical injury.ⁿ¹⁰

[2] Preventing Subsequent Employment of Former Employee by Misrepresentation (Labor Code Section 1050)

Labor Code section 1050 provides that any person, or agent or officer thereof, who by any misrepresentation prevents or attempts to prevent a former employee from obtaining employment, after having discharged the employee or after the employee has voluntarily terminated the employment, is guilty of a misdemeanor. Labor Code section 1052 provides that any person who knowingly causes, suffers, or permits an agent, superintendent, manager, or employee to commit a violation of Labor Code section 1050, or who fails to take all reasonable steps within his or her power to prevent such a violation is also guilty of a misdemeanor. A person who violates Labor Code sections 1050 or 1052 is also liable to the aggrieved person in a civil action for treble damages.ⁿ¹¹ Civil liability is not contingent on a finding of criminal liability.ⁿ¹²

An action under Labor Code section 1050 applies only to misrepresentations made to prospective employers other than the defendant. It does not apply to misrepresentations made by the defendant's employees to other employees of the defendant.ⁿ¹³ By its literal terms, Labor Code section 1050 does not apply if the employee is still employed by the defendant at the time the misrepresentation was made.

An action for violation of Labor Code sections 1050 or 1052 may be brought by the aggrieved employee, or by his or her assignees or successors in interest.ⁿ¹⁴ The employee's union may not, however, bring such an action.ⁿ¹⁵

The privileges of Civil Code section 47 available to a defendant in a defamation action also apply in actions for violation of Labor Code sections 1050 or 1052.ⁿ¹⁶

Labor Code, section 1053 provides that nothing in Labor Code, sections 1050-1057 prevents an employer, or an agent, employee, superintendent, or manager of an employer, from furnishing a truthful statement concerning the reason for the discharge of an employee or of the reason why the employee voluntarily left the service of the employer, on special request for such a statement.ⁿ¹⁷ However, a statement that "furnishes any mark, sign, or other means conveying information different from that expressed by the words therein," or that was given without a special request therefor, is prima facie evidence of a violation of Labor Code, sections 1050 and 1052.ⁿ¹⁸

As mentioned above, Labor Code, section 1054 provides for treble damages in cases in which a violation of Labor Code, sections 1050 or 1052 is established. The constitutionality of the treble damage provision has been upheld.ⁿ¹⁹ If malice is established, punitive damages may be awarded under Civil Code, section 3294 in an action under Labor Code, section 1054.ⁿ²⁰ However, the plaintiff may not recover both punitive damages and treble damages and is limited to either treble damages or untrebled damages plus punitive damages.ⁿ²¹

Because the crux of such an action is a misrepresentation, a plaintiff is presumably entitled to the same damages as are recoverable in a tort action for deceit, although no reported cases have discussed the point. For a discussion of damages in actions for deceit, see § 63.06[3], and Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 40, Part A (Matthew Bender).

[3] Other Statutory Violations

A number of California statutes impose liability on an employer for discharging or discriminating against employees under various specified circumstances. For example, Labor Code, section 132a provides remedies for an employee who is penalized by an employer for asserting his or her rights under the workers' compensation system. For a comprehensive survey of such statutes, see Chapter 60.

[4] No Loss of Consortium or Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress Action for Employee's Spouse

In one case, the spouse of an employee who was alleged to have been wrongfully discharged was held not to have a cause of action against the employer for loss of consortium or negligent infliction of emotional distress caused by the discharge of her husband.ⁿ²² The court held that the wife of an employee fired from his job did not have a cause of action against the employer for loss of consortium because the husband had only become "mentally upset, distressed and aggravated" as a result of his termination, but his emotional disquiet did not rise to the level of a "neurosis, psychosis, chronic depression, or phobia" sufficient to substantially disturb the marital relationship on more than a temporary basis.ⁿ²³ In addition, the employer owed no duty of care to the wife on which she could predicate her action for emotional distress occasioned by her husband's discharge.ⁿ²⁴

For discussion of causes of action for negligent infliction of emotional distress and loss of consortium generally, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapters 5 and 56, respectively.

[5] No Tort Action for Negligent Performance of Contractual Duty to Evaluate

One case has held that in California there is no recognized cause of action in tort for negligent performance of a contractual duty by the employer to evaluate the employee, although it has been recognized in other jurisdictions.ⁿ²⁵ The court stated that, even in the states that recognize the cause of action, a complete failure to perform an evaluation is actionable only as a breach of contract. However, the court held that under the facts of the case before it, such a theory would be inapplicable for lack of compensable damages because the employer was not contractually obligated to renew a school administrator's contract, regardless of her job performance.ⁿ²⁶

[6] Employee's Claim for Intentional and Negligent Infliction of Emotional Distress

The elements of a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress are (1) outrageous conduct by the defendant; (2) intention to cause, or reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress; and (3) actual and proximate causation of severe emotional distress.ⁿ²⁷

Ordinarily, a civil action to recover damages based on intentional infliction of emotional distress in connection with an alleged wrongful termination will be precluded by the exclusive remedy doctrine of the California Workers' Compensation Act,ⁿ²⁸ unless the employer's conduct exceeds the bounds of the employment relationship. The California Supreme Court has held that even intentional misconduct may constitute a normal part of the employment relationship.ⁿ²⁹ Moreover, even when no physical injury or disability is alleged, a claim for intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress is within the exclusive remedy provisions of the Workers' Compensation Act, so long as the basic conditions of compensation are otherwise satisfied and the employer's conduct neither contravenes a fundamental public policy nor exceeds the risks inherent in the employment relationship.ⁿ³⁰

However, a cause of action may be available notwithstanding the exclusive remedy doctrine if the conduct of the employer constituted a willful physical assault by the employer, within the meaning of Labor Code section 3602(b)(1).ⁿ³¹ In addition, one court of appeal has held that emotional distress claims based on "work-related injury discrimination" are not barred by the exclusivity rule.ⁿ³² The court relied on City of Moorpark v. Superior Court ⁿ³³ for the proposition that work-related injury discrimination is not a normal risk of the compensation bargain, and consequently Lab. Code § 132a does not preclude an employee from pursuing FEHA and common law remedies.ⁿ³⁴

In a few reported cases,ⁿ³⁵ employees have sought recovery based on a claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress, which has been categorized generally as a theory of recovery of damages pursuant to the tort of negligence (entailing the traditional elements of duty, breach of duty, causation, and damages), rather than as a tort or cause of action in and of itself.ⁿ³⁶ Under such a claim, generally, a plaintiff has a right to recover damages for serious emotional distress in a negligence action.ⁿ³⁷ This theory of recovery is available to persons who are considered to be "direct victims" of the defendant's negligence.ⁿ³⁸ This cause of action, however, is also subject to preemption based on the exclusive remedy provisions of the California Workers' Compensation Act,ⁿ³⁹ discussed above, which, in the great majority of cases, will preclude recovery of such a claim in connection with an alleged wrongful discharge.ⁿ⁴⁰

One court of appeal, however, has held that workers' compensation does not prevent an employee from recovering for infliction of emotional distress if the plaintiff has a tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy or in violation of an express statute because, in these contexts, emotional distress damages are simply a component of compensatory damages.ⁿ⁴¹ However, it is unclear in this case why the court permitted a stand-alone cause of action for wrongful infliction of emotional distress. To the extent that the plaintiff may recover emotional distress damages as part of a public policy claim, the separate cause of action is redundant. To the extent that the plaintiff seeks to maintain an emotional distress cause of action independent of the public policy cause of action, it would clearly be barred by the Workers' Compensation Act.

Another court of appeal has held that when a plaintiff's emotional distress claim is premised on the employer's violation of a fundamental public policy, that misconduct lies outside the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code, and the plaintiff may state a cause of action for intentional infliction of emotional distress.ⁿ⁴² In this case, the court relied on the reasoning in Gant v. Sentry Ins.,ⁿ⁴³ to conclude that when an employer's decision to discharge an employee results from an animus that violates fundamental policy, that misconduct cannot be considered a normal part of the employment relationship.ⁿ⁴⁴ Thus, if the premise of a plaintiff's emotional distress claim is his or her employer's violation of a fundamental public policy of this state, such misconduct lies outside of the exclusive remedy provisions of the Labor Code and the claim is actionable.ⁿ⁴⁵

For further discussion of civil actions based on negligent infliction of emotional distress and intentional infliction of emotional distress, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapters 5 and 44.

For discussion of the exclusive remedy doctrine of the California Workers' Compensation Act generally, including discussion of its applicability to actions involving wrongful termination and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress, see Chapter 20.

For discussion of the defense of preemption of civil actions by federal labor law,ⁿ⁴⁶ which may be applicable when an employment relationship involves a collective bargaining agreement, see Chapter 60.

[7] Promissory Estoppel and Reliance Damages

In Toscano v. Greene Music, ⁿ⁴⁷ a California court held for the first time that a plaintiff who resigns from at-will employment in reliance on an unfulfilled promise of other employment may recover, under a promissory estoppel theory, reliance damages based on wages lost from his or her prior employment. Relying on out-of-state cases,ⁿ⁴⁸ the defendant-potential employer had argued that reliance damages did not include lost future earnings, because future earnings represented "expectancy" damages that were not recoverable under promissory estoppel, and the employee could not prove entitlement to such earnings because there was no guarantee of future employment in an at-will setting. The defendant also maintained that the only lost income recoverable was wages lost between the time the employee left his former job and the time the new promised job would have begun. The employee conceded the weight of authority prevented an employee in his circumstances from recovering future lost wages from the prospective employer that induced him to resign his employment, but asserted that the law permitted the employee to recover what he would have earned in the future from his former employer as a component of reliance damages. The Court of Appeal held that the plaintiff's lost future wages from the former at-will employer were recoverable under the promissory estoppel theory as long as they were not speculative or remote and were supported by substantial evidence. In this case, however, the evidence was too speculative to lend support to the trial court's award of lost future earnings from his proposed start date with defendant to his retirement. Although plaintiff had a history of remaining with his employers until offered new employment, his intentions or practices were not relevant to whether he could expect to remain with his former employer until his retirement, because his proposed employment would have been at will.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Wrongful Termination General Overview Torts Business Torts General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Lab. Code § 971.

(n2)Footnote 2. Lab. Code § 972.

(n3)Footnote 3. Lab. Code § 972.

(n4)Footnote 4. Tyco Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 148, 156-157, 211 Cal. Rptr. 540

(n5)Footnote 4.1. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a claim for solicitation of an employee by misrepresentation under Lab. Code § 970, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2710 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim of solicitation of an employee by misrepresentation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2704 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n6)Footnote 5. Munoz v. Kaiser Steel Corp. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 965, 980, 203 Cal. Rptr. 345; Seubert v. McKesson Corp. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1514, 1522.

(n7)Footnote 6. Tyco Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 148, 157, 211 Cal. Rptr. 540.

(n8)Footnote 7. See Collins v. Rocha (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 232, 239, 102 Cal. Rptr. 1, 497 P.2d 225 (dicta; change of location was temporary for two weeks and employer provided transportation).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 408, 418-419, 190 Cal. Rptr. 392, discussed in [2], below.

(n10)Footnote 9. See Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 408, 418-419, 190 Cal. Rptr. 392, discussed in [2], below.

(n11)Footnote 10. Finch v. Brenda Raceway Corp. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 547, 554, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 531 .

(n12)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 1054. For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements of a cause of action for preventing subsequent employment by misrepresentation under Lab. Code § 1050, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 2711 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for a claim of preventing subsequent employment by misrepresentation, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-2705 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n13)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 1054.

(n14)Footnote 13. Kelly v. General Telephone Co. (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 278, 288-289, 186 Cal. Rptr. 184 .

(n15)Footnote 14. Lab. Code § 1054.

(n16)Footnote 15. Service Employees International Union v. Hollywood Park, Inc. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 745, 765, 197 Cal. Rptr. 316 .

(n17)Footnote 16. See O'Shea v. General Telephone Company (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1040, 1047, 238 Cal. Rptr. 715 . For a discussion of privileges in the context of defamation actions, see § 63.02[3][b].

(n18)Footnote 17. Lab. Code § 1053.

(n19)Footnote 18. See Lab. Code § 1053.

(n20)Footnote 19. Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 408, 417-418, 190 Cal. Rptr. 392 .

(n21)Footnote 20. Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 408, 418-419, 190 Cal. Rptr. 392 .

(n22)Footnote 21. Marshall v. Brown (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 408, 419, 190 Cal. Rptr. 392 .

(n23)Footnote 22. Anderson v. Northrop Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 772, 776-781, 250 Cal. Rptr. 189 .

(n24)Footnote 23. Anderson v. Northrop Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 772, 780-781, 250 Cal. Rptr. 189 .

(n25)Footnote 24. Anderson v. Northrop Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 772, 776-780, 250 Cal. Rptr. 189 .

(n26)Footnote 25. Tollefson v. Roman Catholic Bishop (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 843, 857, 268 Cal. Rptr. 550 .

(n27)Footnote 26. Tollefson v. Roman Catholic Bishop (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 843, 857, 268 Cal. Rptr. 550 .

(n28)Footnote 27. Agarwal v. Johnson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 932, 946, 160 Cal. Rptr. 141, 603 P.2d 58 ; see generally Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, ch. 44 (Matthew Bender). See Noble v. Draper (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1, 18-19, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 3 (former employees' action for intentional infliction of emotion distress, based on threatening phone call made to one employee threatening other employee's daughter if first employee testified in administrative wage hearing, failed, where employees were unable to identify person who allegedly placed phone call). For the standard jury instructions on intentional infliction of emotional distress, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1600 et seq. (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form on intentional infliction of emotional distress, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1600 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n29)Footnote 28. See Lab. Code § 3602.

(n30)Footnote 29. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 752, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 ; Cole v. Fair Oaks Fire Protection Dist. (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 148, 160, 233 Cal. Rptr. 308, 729 P.2d 743 .

(n31)Footnote 30. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 ; Gibbs v. American Airlines, Inc. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9-10, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 (plaintiff's emotional distress action was preempted by workers' compensation law, because workers' compensation is exclusive remedy for intentional infliction of emotional distress caused by employer's work-related conduct when that conduct does not contravene public policy). See Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 577, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 (workers' compensation does not preempt emotional distress action against employer in context of tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy or in violation of an express statute).

(n32)Footnote 31. See Herrick v. Quality Hotels, Inns & Resorts, Inc. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1608, 1616-1618, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 203 (also finding sufficient evidence of employer ratification of supervisor's threat to "blow [plaintiff's] head off" during termination).

(n33)Footnote 32. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1491-1492, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 .

(n34)Footnote 33. City of Moorpark v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1143, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 445, 959 P.2d 752 ; see § 20.11 (discussing Moorpark).

(n35)Footnote 34. Fretland v. County of Humboldt, 69 Cal. App. 4th 1478, 1492, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 359 ; see § 20.12 (discussing exceptions to exclusivity rule).

(n36)Footnote 35. See, e.g., Robards v. Gaylord Bros., Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 854 F.2d 1152, 1157-1158 ; Pichon v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677 (involving both negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress); Davaris v. Cubaleski (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 1583, 1587-1588, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330 (involving both negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress, and filed against the same employer as in Livitsanos).

(n37)Footnote 36. See Marlene F. v. Affiliated Psychiatric Med. Clinic, Inc. (1989) 48 Cal. 3d 583, 588, 257 Cal. Rptr. 98, 770 P.2d 278 ; see generally Levy, Golden, & Sacks, California Torts, ch. 5 (Matthew Bender).

(n38)Footnote 37. Molien v. Kaiser Found. Hosps. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 916, 930, 167 Cal. Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813 .

(n39)Footnote 38. Molien v. Kaiser Found. Hosps. (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 916, 930, 167 Cal. Rptr. 831, 616 P.2d 813 . For the standard jury instruction on the essential factual elements for negligent infliction of emotional distress by a direct victim, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI 1620 (Matthew Bender), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions. For discussion of the CACI standard jury instructions generally, see § 61.05. For the CACI special verdict form for negligent infliction of emotional distress on a direct victim, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions, CACI VF-1603 (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the CACI special verdict forms generally, see § 61.06.

(n40)Footnote 39. See Lab. Code § 3600.

(n41)Footnote 40. Livitsanos v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 744, 754-755, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808, 828 P.2d 1195 .

(n42)Footnote 41. Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 577, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29 (workers' compensation does not preempt emotional distress action against employer in context of tort cause of action for wrongful termination in violation of public policy or in violation of an express statute).

(n43)Footnote 42. Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 112-113, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 .

(n44)Footnote 43. Gantt v. Sentry Insurance (1992) 1 Cal. 4th 1083, 1100, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 874, 824 P.2d 680 , overruled on other grounds, Green v. Ralee Eng'r Co. (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 66, 80 n.6, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 16, 960 P.2d 1046 .

(n45)Footnote 44. Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 112-113, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 .

(n46)Footnote 45. Cabesuela v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of California, Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 101, 112, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 60 .

(n47)Footnote 46. See, e.g., 29 U.S.C. § 185(a) (§ 301 of the National Labor Relations Act).

(n48)Footnote 47. Toscano v. Greene Music (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 685, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732 .

(n49)Footnote 48. See Wyatt v. Bellsouth, Inc. (M.D.Ala. 1998) 18 F. Supp. 2d 1324 ; Zenor v. El Paso Healthcare System, Ltd. (5th Cir. 1999) 176 F.3d 847 . but see Pepsi-Cola General Bottlers, Inc. v. Woods (Ind.App. 1982) 440 N.E.2d 696 (where plaintiff quit former employment in reliance on promise of employment with defendant, she had right of action under promissory estoppel; court refused to permit her to recover lost wages she would have earned from defendant, because such damages would give her benefit of her bargain; although she was entitled to damages for expenses incurred in reliance on promise, there was insufficient proof of out-of-pocket expenses to compute damages).

103 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination

Part A. TEXT

4-63 California Employment Law §§ 63.07through 63.19

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 63.07[Reserved]

104 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES
CHAPTER 63 Causes of Action Related to Wrongful Termination
Part B. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-63 California Employment Law § 63.20

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 63.20 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender)

Assault and Battery.

False Imprisonment.

Fraud and Deceit.

Libel and Slander, pts. I and II.

Employment.

Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress.

Unfair Competition, pt. IV.

California Points and Authorities (Matthew Bender)

Assault and Battery.

Employer and Employee.

False Imprisonment.

Fraud and Deceit.

Interference.

Libel and Slander (Defamation).

Mental Suffering and Emotional Distress.

Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts (Matthew Bender), chs. 10, 40, pts. A, D, E, 41, 42, 44, 45.

Larson and Borowsky, Unjust Dismissal (Matthew Bender), ch. 4.

Advising California Employers, ch. 17 (Calif. C.E.B. 1997).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawWrongful TerminationGeneral Overview

105 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VI WRONGFUL TERMINATION AND RELATED DISPUTES

Chapters 64 - 69 RESERVED

4-64 - 69 California Employment Law Chapters 64 - 69

RESERVED

Chapters 64 - 69 RESERVED

106 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues

4-70 California Employment Law 70.syn

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.syn Synopsis to Chapter 70: Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues

§ 70.01 Introduction

§ 70.02 Trade Secrets

[1] Overview of Law Governing Trade Secret Protection

[a] Uniform Trade Secrets Act (UTSA)

[b] Effect of Pre-UTSA Law

[c] Effect of Federal Patent and Copyright Laws

[d] Effect of Out-of-State Decisions

[e] Effect of UTSA on Other Laws

[f] Overlap With Other Legal Theories

[2] Elements of Cause of Action for Misappropriation of Trade Secret

[a] Generally

[b] What Constitutes a Trade Secret

[i] Generally

[ii] Secrecy Element

[c] Misappropriation

[3] Remedies

[a] Injunctive Relief

[b] Damages and Unjust Enrichment

[c] Royalties

[d] Exemplary Damages

[e] Attorney's Fees and Costs

[f] Preserving Secrecy During Litigation

[4] Statute of Limitations

[5] FORM--Complaint by Employer Against Former Employee and Others for Misappropriation of Trade Secret--General Form

[a] Comment

[b] Form

[6] Judicial Proceeding Privilege Inapplicable

§ 70.03 Unfair Competition

[1] Availability of Cause of Action

[2] Remedies

[a] Compensatory Damages

[b] Accounting

[c] Punitive Damages

[d] Injunction

[i] Availability of Injunctive Relief

[ii] Limits of Relief

[e] Restitution

[3] Statute of Limitations

[4] Jury Trial

§ 70.04 Breach of Duty of Loyalty or Fiduciary Duty

[1] Availability of Cause of Action

[2] FORM--Complaint by Employer Against Former Employee for Damages for Breach of Fiduciary Duty

[a] Comment

[b] Form

§ 70.05 Breach of Confidence

[1] Availability of Cause of Action

[2] Elements of Cause of Action

[a] Generally

[b] Protected Ideas

[c] Confidential Relationship

[3] FORM--Complaint by Employer Against Former Employee for Damages for Breach of Confidence

[a] Comment

[b] Form

§ 70.06 Tortious Interference With Economic Relationships

[1] Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

[2] Interference With Contractual Relations

§ 70.07 Breach of Contract and Statutory Restrictions

[1] Statutory Prohibition Against Contracts in Restraint of Trade or Profession

[2] Covenants Not to Compete

[a] Generally

[b] Efficacy of Covenants Not to Compete

[c] Provisions Requiring Penalties for Competition

[d] Remedies for Breach of Covenant Not to Compete

[3] Types of Contractual Provisions Restraining Competition

[a] Covenants Concerning Trade Secrets and Other Confidential Business Information

[b] FORM--Employment Contract Provisions Regarding Employee's Use of Employer's Trade Secrets or Confidential Information

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[c] Covenants Protecting Against Solicitation of Former Coemployees

[d] FORM--Employment Contract Provision Protecting Against Solicitation of Employer's Employees by Former Employee

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[e] FORM--Employment Contract Provision Protecting Against Competition by Employee During Term of Employment Contract

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

§§ 70.08 through 70.09 [Reserved]

§ 70.10 Introduction

§ 70.11 Theories of Liability

[1] Misappropriation of Trade Secrets

[a] Availability of Cause of Action

[b] Customer Lists as Trade Secrets

[i] Generally

[ii] Certain Customer Lists Deemed Trade Secret by Statute

[c] Solicitation of Employees

[2] Unfair Competition

[a] Availability of Cause of Action

[b] Acts Constituting Prohibited Solicitation

[c] Protected Information

[3] Breach of Contract

[a] Availability of Cause of Action

[b] FORM--Contract Provision Prohibiting Solicitation of Employer's Customers

[i] Comment

[ii] Form

[4] Other Theories of Liability

§ 70.12 FORM--Complaint by Employer Against Former Employee for Damages and Injunctive Relief for Soliciting Employer's Customers--Unfair Competition, Misappropriation of Trade Secret, and Related Causes of Action

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

[b] Allegations

[2] Form

§§ 70.13 through 70.19 [Reserved]

§ 70.20 Ownership Rights Generally

§ 70.21 Employer's Theories of Recovery

§ 70.22 Employer's Shop Rights

§ 70.23 Contractual Assignments

[1] Validity and Restrictions

[2] FORM--Employment Contract Provisions Assigning Employee's Inventions to Employer

[a] Comment

[b] Form

§ 70.24 FORM--Complaint by Employer to Establish Ownership Rights in Invention and for Damages and Injunctive Relief

[1] Comment

[2] Form

§§ 70.25 through 70.29 [Reserved]

§ 70.30 Legal Texts

§ 70.31 Encyclopedias

§ 70.32 Law Reviews and Periodicals

By James Buyoucos, J.D. n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

107 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues

4-70 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

Scope

By James Buyoucos, J.D. n* SCOPE

This chapter discusses the employer's rights regarding an employee's use and disclosure of the employer's confidential and proprietary information obtained in the course of employment, as well as restrictions on an employee's or former employee's right to compete with his or her employer or former employer. Specifically, the chapter discusses the law of trade secrets, unfair competition and related causes of action, ownership of inventions, and other issues relating to proprietary rights arising out of the employment relationship.

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Publisher's Editorial Staff.

108 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
 CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
 PART A. OVERVIEW OF GOVERNING LAW

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.01

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.01 Introduction

The law governing the right of an employee or a former employee to compete with his or her employer or former employer and the use of the employer's confidential information by such an employee or former employee involves a number of overlapping legal theories. There is a close relationship between a cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret¹ and one for unfair competition whenever an employee or former employee uses information gained in the course of employment to compete with the employer.² In addition, if the employee was given information in confidence, and later uses that information to compete with the employer, the employee may be subject to a tort cause of action for breach of confidence.³ If the employee has agreed by contract not to use or disclose confidential employer information or not to compete with the employer, the employee may be subject to a suit for breach of contract.⁴ Furthermore, if an employee, prior to termination, competes with his or her employer or acts adversely to the employer's interests, the employee may be subject to an action for breach of the duty of loyalty or breach of fiduciary duty.⁵ Finally, if an employee or former employee wrongfully attempts to divert business from his or her employer, the employee may be subject to an action for interference with contract or interference with prospective economic advantage.⁶

Given the overlap, multiple causes of action are often available in suits by an employer against a former employee. In one case in which it was alleged that former employees overstepped the bounds of fair competition in attempting to solicit the customers of their former employer, the employer alleged causes of action for (1) misappropriation of a trade secret, (2) interference with prospective economic advantage, (3) interference with contractual relations, (4) breach of contract, (5) breach of fiduciary duty, and (6) unfair competition.⁷

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
 Employment Relationships
 General Overview
 Labor & Employment Law
 Employment Relationships
 Employment Contracts
 Conditions & Terms
 Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition
 Noncompetition & Nondisclosure Agreements

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in § 70.02.

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in § 70.03.

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion in § 70.05.

(n4)Footnote 4. See discussion in § 70.07.

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussion in § 70.04.

(n6)Footnote 6. See discussion in § 70.06.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 127, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 .

109 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART A. OVERVIEW OF GOVERNING LAW

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.02

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.02 Trade Secrets

[1] Overview of Law Governing Trade Secret Protection

[a] Uniform Trade Secrets Act (UTSA)

Trade secrets are protected by statute under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act (UTSA).ⁿ¹ The UTSA provides a specific cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret, as well as providing a comprehensive scheme of remedies.ⁿ² The UTSA became operative in 1985. However, as discussed in [b], below, pre-UTSA law may still apply in certain cases and pre-UTSA case law may still be of use in interpreting the UTSA.

[b] Effect of Pre-UTSA Law

Prior to the enactment of the UTSA in 1984, the common law provided a cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret.ⁿ³ The UTSA does not apply to cases of trade secret misappropriation that occurred entirely prior to January 1, 1985.ⁿ⁴ In addition, if a continuing misappropriation otherwise covered by the UTSA began before January 1, 1985, the UTSA does not apply to the part of the misappropriation occurring before that date.ⁿ⁵ It does, however, apply to the part of the misappropriation occurring on or after that date unless the appropriation was not a misappropriation under the law in effect before the operative date of the UTSA (January 1, 1985).ⁿ⁶ A complete discussion of the law prior to enactment of the UTSA is found in Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Chapter 40, Part B, Subpart 2.

The UTSA invalidates prior case law regarding trade secrets that is in conflict with its provisions.ⁿ⁷ However, the legislative intent in codifying the UTSA was to incorporate the better reasoned cases applying the common law of trade secrets and thus the UTSA, to a large extent, codifies the then-existing common law.ⁿ⁸

[c] Effect of Federal Patent and Copyright Laws

Although a trade secret may in some cases consist of a device or process that is patentable, patentability is not a prerequisite to classification as a trade secret.ⁿ⁹

The holder of a patent has the protections afforded by federal patent law in cases of infringement and need not resort to state trade secret law.ⁿ¹⁰ A patented item or process cannot be the subject matter of a state law trade secrets action.ⁿ¹¹ However, an item or process that could be patented but is not patented, as well as unpatentable matter, can be the subject of a state law trade secrets action.ⁿ¹² Federal patent law thus does not preempt state trade secret law in regard to items that have not been patented.ⁿ¹³

States may regulate trade secrets only to the extent that the regulation does not conflict with federal copyright law.^{n13.1} However, federal copyright law does not preempt a state trade secret cause of action that involves a legal or equitable right that is in addition to or qualitatively different from a claim based on copyright infringement.^{n13.2} This rule leaves areas in which state trade secret laws may properly apply to copyrighted material. For example, one court held that the owner of copyrighted computer software programs could state a trade secret cause of action against its licensee for surreptitiously obtaining an "unprotected" copy of the program because the California statute pleaded^{n13.3} did not involve a legal or equitable right equivalent to an exclusive right of a copyright owner under the Copyright Act,^{n13.4} but only prohibited certain means of obtaining confidential information. Thus, under those circumstances application of the UTSA did not conflict with federal copyright law.^{n13.5}

[d] Effect of Out-of-State Decisions

Civil Code Section 3426.8 provides that the UTSA "shall be applied and construed to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law with respect to [trade secret misappropriation] among states enacting it." Thus, the decisions of courts outside California will have potential precedential value in California cases involving application and construction of the UTSA.

[e] Effect of UTSA on Other Laws

The UTSA does not affect (1) contractual remedies, whether or not based on misappropriation of a trade secret, (2) other civil remedies that are not based on misappropriation of a trade secret, or (3) criminal remedies, whether or not based on misappropriation of a trade secret.ⁿ¹⁴ There is considerable overlap between a cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret and a cause of action for unfair competition based on use of a trade secret.ⁿ¹⁵ On one hand, it would appear that Civil Code Section 3426.7(b) suggests that the UTSA does not preempt such actions for unfair competition. However, it can be argued that if a cause of action for unfair competition is "based on misappropriation of a trade secret," the UTSA will govern if there is any inconsistency between its rules and those applicable to the action for unfair competition.ⁿ¹⁶ One important difference between a cause of action for unfair competition and one under the UTSA is that punitive damages are more restricted under the UTSA.ⁿ¹⁷

The UTSA provides that "[e]xcept as otherwise expressly provided, this title does not supersede any statute relating to misappropriation of a trade secret, or any statute otherwise regulating trade secrets."ⁿ¹⁸ Such other statutes involve government regulation of industry.ⁿ¹⁹ In addition, the UTSA does not affect the disclosure of a record by a state or local agency under the California Public Records Act.ⁿ²⁰ Any determination about whether the disclosure of a record under that act constitutes misappropriation of a trade secret and the rights and remedies with respect to such a disclosure shall be made pursuant to the law in effect before the operative date of the UTSA, that is, January 1, 1985.ⁿ²¹

[f] Overlap With Other Legal Theories

To a large extent, a cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret overlaps with a cause of action for unfair competition. Indeed, some courts speak of misappropriation of a trade secret as merely an aspect of unfair competition.ⁿ²² The first California case to grant a remedy for unfair competition for soliciting a former employer's customers based its decision on the rationale that equity will protect an employer against "unwarranted disclosure of trade secrets and confidential communications."ⁿ²³ Such a statement seems to encompass a cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret. However, such a statement also implies that there is a class of information that is "confidential," but does not amount to a trade secret, which, if used by an employee in an unwarranted manner, may give rise to an action for unfair competition. Prior to the advent of the UTSA, the courts often treated cases involving an employee's use of the employer's confidential information to compete with the employer without clearly distinguishing whether the cause of action was for trade secret misappropriation or unfair competition. In fact, this issue was not of any practical importance because both causes of action sounded in tort and required basically the same showing, and the remedies were the same regardless of the theory used to impose liability. However, under the UTSA, special rules now apply to actions for trade secret misappropriation so that the determination of the type of action may have a major effect on the litigation. For example, punitive damages are more restricted in trade secret misappropriation actions than they are in unfair competition actions.ⁿ²⁴

[2] Elements of Cause of Action for Misappropriation of Trade Secret

[a] Generally

Under the UTSA, a cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret consists of two elements: (1) the existence of a trade secret, and (2) misappropriation of the trade secret.ⁿ²⁵ Under prior law, when the defendant was an employee of the plaintiff or obtained the trade secret from the plaintiff's employees, most courts required that the plaintiff show the existence of a public policy favoring the protection of the trade secret that outweighed the ex-employee's interest in using his or her knowledge as a means of support.ⁿ²⁶ This issue was of primary importance in cases involving an employee's right to solicit the clients of a former employer when it was contended that a list of clients was a trade secret.ⁿ²⁷ The courts thus recognized that enforcement of trade secret protection has the effect of restraining the ex-employee from the pursuit of his or her profession, and, in some cases, deprives the ex-employee of the use of knowledge and skill that he or she developed or acquired himself or herself.ⁿ²⁸ Some courts therefore stated that protection should be afforded when, and only when, the information in question has value in the sense that it affords the former employer a competitive advantage over competitors who do not possess such information and when the granting of such protection will not unduly hamper the ex-employee in the practice of his or her occupation or profession.ⁿ²⁹

The UTSA does not mention this balancing of public interest against the livelihood interest of the ex-employee defendant. Therefore, it may be argued that this balancing of policies is not an element of the cause of action in cases to which the UTSA applies. On the other hand, it may be argued that this determination is relevant to the issue of whether or not a trade secret exists under the UTSA.ⁿ³⁰ In any event, it would seem that this balancing of interests is relevant to the "balancing of equities and hardships" and to the issue of "irreparable injury" or to the determination of equitable defenses in cases in which injunctive relief is sought.ⁿ³¹

[b] What Constitutes a Trade Secret

[i] Generally

Under the UTSA, the term "trade secret" means information, including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process, that (1) derives independent economic value,ⁿ³² actual or potential, from not being generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use, and (2) is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.ⁿ³³ The Legislative Committee comment to the UTSA states that the terms "method" and "technique" include the concept of "know how."ⁿ³⁴

The foregoing California definition differs from the Uniform Trade Secrets Act proposed by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in that it does not include the phrase "and not being readily ascertainable by proper means" after "generally known to" in Civil Code Section 3426.1(d)(1). The deletion apparently resulted from arguments that conditioning the scope of a trade secret on the extent to which the information was not readily ascertainable would muddy the meaning of the term "trade secret" and invite the various parties to speculate on the time needed to discover a secret.^{n34.1} While the ease of ascertainability is irrelevant to the definition of a trade secret, the assertion that a matter is readily ascertainable by proper means remains available as a defense to a claim of misappropriation if the defendant can establish that its knowledge of the information resulted from its own efforts or some other proper means.^{n34.2}

The UTSA definition of trade secret does not differ greatly from the definition of trade secret under prior law. The comments to the first Restatement of Torts state that "[a] trade secret may consist of any formula, pattern, device or compilation of information which is used in one's business, and which gives him an opportunity to obtain an advantage over competitors who do not know or use it. It may be a formula for a chemical compound, a process of manufacturing, treating or preserving materials, a pattern for a machine or other device, or a list of customers."ⁿ³⁵ Prior to the enactment of the UTSA, the Restatement definition of trade secret had been adopted by the California appellate courts.ⁿ³⁶ Thus, given the similarity of the definition of a trade secret under the UTSA and former case law, prior case law may often provide persuasive authority in determining whether a trade secret exists. Under prior law, factors used to determine whether information is a trade secret include (1) the extent to which the information is known outside the employer's business, (2) the extent to which it is known by employees and others involved in the business, (3) the extent of measures taken by the employer to guard the secrecy of the information, (4) the value of the information to the employer and to competitors of the employer, (5) the amount of effort or money expended in developing the information, and (6) the ease or difficulty with which the information could be properly acquired or duplicated by others.ⁿ³⁷

While the UTSA did not constitute a major departure from prior law in defining trade secrets, it did make some changes. Under pre-UTSA case law, a key element of a trade secret was the need for its continued use in order to maintain a competitive advantage over others.ⁿ³⁸ Under the UTSA, a trade secret need not be continuously used, and thus may encompass material that has not yet been used because the plaintiff has yet to have the opportunity or means to put it to use.ⁿ³⁹ In addition, the UTSA definition of trade secret includes information that has commercial value from a negative viewpoint including, for example, the results of extensive research that proves that a process will not work.ⁿ⁴⁰

In the employment context, one of the most frequently litigated areas of trade secret law involves customer lists. For discussion of when an employer's customer list may be afforded trade secret protection against use or disclosure by a former employee, see § 70.11[1]. In addition, trade secret litigation often involves special machines, formulas, or designs for the production of goods.ⁿ⁴¹

An employee's subjective qualities and characteristics generally do not in themselves constitute a protectable "trade secret" of an employer.^{n41.1} In Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network, ^{n41.2} plaintiff had contracted to provide traffic reporting services for a radio station. The plaintiff had written employment agreements with its reporters, which contained, among other things, provisions prohibiting employees from working for competitors for one year following termination of employment. When plaintiff's contract with the radio station expired, defendant contracted with the station to provide traffic reporting services. On expiration of plaintiff's contract with the station, several of plaintiff's reporters terminated their employment with plaintiff and began working for defendant. Plaintiff sued to enjoin defendant from soliciting its employees to violate the noncompetition clauses.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's denial of injunctive relief. The court held that the noncompetition agreements were unenforceable unless necessary to protect the plaintiff's trade secrets.^{n41.3} The plaintiff argued that the radio station had particular requirements regarding the quality, sound, and personality of traffic reporters and that plaintiff's knowledge of these requirements was a trade secret that it had conveyed to its reporters in the course of their employment. The appellate court noted that the "quality, sound, and personality" of plaintiff's reporters were subjective dimensions of employees hired by the plaintiff and found acceptable by the radio station and not part of an informational base belonging to plaintiff. The court observed that although plaintiff may have conveyed the station's preferences and requirements to its employees, this did not amount to the compilation of an intangible property right owned by the employer. The court stated that actors, musicians, athletes, and others are frequently trained, tutored, and coached to satisfy the requirements of their sponsors and audiences, but their talents belong to them to contract away as they please. The court concluded that simply hiring personnel who possess the requirements specified by a customer does not convert the employee into a trade secret. In other words, a stable of trained and talented at-will employees do not constitute an employer's trade secret.^{n41.4} The court further noted that the radio station's requirements could not be a trade secret belonging to the plaintiff because information concerning those requirements could be obtained directly from the station by anyone who contracted with the station.^{n41.5}

[ii] Secrecy Element

Under the UTSA, the secrecy requirement is met if the information alleged to be a trade secret (1) is not generally known to the public or to other persons who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use, and (2) is the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy.ⁿ⁴² If the information is generally known in the trade and already used by good-faith competitors, it is not a protectable trade secret.ⁿ⁴³ Similarly, if the information is readily ascertainable by proper means, an action for misappropriation of a trade secret cannot prevail.ⁿ⁴⁴ Information is readily ascertainable if it is available in trade journals, reference books, or published materials. Moreover, the nature of a product often will make it susceptible to being copied as soon as it is available on the market.ⁿ⁴⁵

The Legislative Committee comments state that reasonable efforts to maintain secrecy include (1) advising an employee of the existence of a trade secret, (2) limiting access to the trade secret on a "need to know basis," and (3) controlling plant access. By contrast, public disclosure of information through display, trade journal publications, advertising, or carelessness may preclude protection.ⁿ⁴⁶

The efforts required to maintain secrecy are those that are "reasonable under the circumstances."ⁿ⁴⁷ Extreme and unduly expensive procedures to protect against flagrant industrial espionage are not required, and controlled disclosure to employees and licensees is consistent with the requirement of secrecy.ⁿ⁴⁸

[c] Misappropriation

Under the UTSA, misappropriation means:ⁿ⁴⁹

1. Acquisition of a trade secret of another by a person who knows or has reason to know that the trade secret was acquired by improper means; or
2. Disclosure or use of a trade secret of another without express or implied consent by a person who:
 - a. Used improper means to acquire knowledge of the trade secret; or
 - b. At the time of disclosure or use, knew or had reason to know that his or her knowledge of the trade secret was: (i) derived from or through a person who had utilized improper means to acquire it; or (ii) acquired under circumstances giving rise to a duty to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or (iii) derived from or through a person who owed a duty to the person seeking relief to maintain its secrecy or limit its use; or
 - c. Before a material change of his or her position, knew or had reason to know that it was a trade secret and that knowledge of it had been acquired by accident or mistake.

The term "improper means," as used by the UTSA in defining the term "misappropriation," includes theft, bribery, misrepresentation, breach or inducement of a breach of a duty to maintain secrecy, or espionage through electronic or other means.ⁿ⁵⁰ Reverse engineering or independent derivation alone is not considered improper means.ⁿ⁵¹ Reverse engineering involves starting with a known product and working backward to derive the process that produced it.ⁿ⁵² It should be noted, however, that the mere fact that a trade secret could be discovered by reverse engineering does not preclude a finding of misappropriation unless the defendant actually did discover the secret by means of reverse engineering.ⁿ⁵³

Ordinarily, an employee does not acquire his or her employer's trade secrets by "improper means." Usually the employer tells the employee the trade secret or the employee develops the secret himself or herself. Thus, an employer, in proving misappropriation by a former employee, will normally have to show that the trade secret was acquired under circumstances giving rise to a duty by the employee to keep the information confidential or to limit its use.ⁿ⁵⁴

If the employee develops the trade secret without the use of confidential employer information, the employee may not be under a duty to keep the information confidential or to limit its use.ⁿ⁵⁵ In one case, decided prior to the advent of the UTSA, an employee developed a new system related to the use of cranes in the cargo business. After the employee terminated his employment, he sold the system to a competitor. The court of appeal held that the former employer did not have a protectable trade secret in the system. The court reasoned that because the employee had knowledge of the basic principles involved in developing the system before he commenced employment and had not obtained through a confidential relationship something that he did not previously know, there was no basis for a finding of a misappropriation of a trade secret.ⁿ⁵⁶

In another pre-UTSA case, an employee developed a valve design for his employer (the plaintiff) based on knowledge gained from prior employment. The employee then went to work for a competitor who put the design to use. The court of appeal held that while the design was a trade secret of the the plaintiff-employer, the employee was privileged to use it by virtue of the fact that the employee did not breach any duty of confidence owed to his employer.ⁿ⁵⁷ However, cases decided prior to the advent of the UTSA upheld actions for unfair competition based on a former employee's use of customer list trade secrets that were developed on the initiative of the employee.ⁿ⁵⁸

One "has reason to know" if one is on constructive notice and should make further inquiry regarding ownership of the secret.^{n58.1} Constructive notice is codified in Civil Code Section 19: every person who has actual notice of the circumstances sufficient to put a prudent person on inquiry as to a particular fact, has constructive notice of the fact itself in all cases in which by prosecuting the inquiry, he or she might have learned the fact.

If no duty is imposed by law on a person to make inquiry and the circumstances are such that a prudent person would not be put on inquiry, the fact that the means of obtaining the true facts are open to a person and he or she does not pursue those means is not sufficient for imposition of liability. No definite rule can be formulated to specify what, in a particular instance, is sufficient to arouse suspicion. The better rule is that even information regarding collateral facts, which if pursued would have lead to the discovery of ultimate facts, is sufficient to charge the person failing to pursue.^{n58.2}

In a case involving defendant's acquisition from plaintiff's employee of a concept for a television show, the employee allegedly misrepresented to defendant that he owned the rights to the concept. Defendant claimed it had a right to rely on the representation. Plaintiff claimed that reliance was not reasonable, but that the defendant had a duty to investigate. The court of appeal held that summary judgement for the defendant was improper and that a triable issue of fact existed. The court noted several relevant considerations which were not addressed in the record before it. The record did not disclose whether defendant ever received the written verification it requested from the employee of the oral representations that the employee owned the concept and that another studio had not decided to exercise its option on it.^{n58.3} The court noted that general business practices and one's own actions are considered in determining if there is constructive notice.^{n58.4} Although the record reflected that defendant's usual practice was to have its legal department handle clearances for shows, there was no indication whether those normal business practices were followed to establish that the employee owned the concept. Nor did the record contain any evidence regarding industry standards for obtaining clearances.n58.5

The case involved a continuing misappropriation that had begun in 1983. The court noted that under the common law, the issues to be determined would be whether defendant paid value in good faith to acquire the concept and whether defendant changed its position so that subjecting it to liability would be inequitable.n58.6

[3] Remedies

[a] Injunctive Relief

Under the UTSA, actual or threatened misappropriation of a trade secret may be enjoined.n59 On application to the court, an injunction shall be terminated when the trade secret has ceased to exist.n60 Thus, an injunction should terminate when what once might have been a trade secret becomes known to good-faith competitors.n61 However, an injunction may be continued for an additional period of time in order to eliminate commercial advantage that otherwise would be derived from the misappropriation.n62

If the court determines that it would be unreasonable to prohibit future use of a trade secret, an injunction may condition future use on payment of a reasonable royalty for no longer than the period of time that the use could have been prohibited.n63 In appropriate circumstances, other affirmative acts to protect a trade secret may be compelled by court order.n64

If a preliminary injunction is issued, the plaintiff must furnish an undertaking equal to the damages the defendant may sustain as a result of the injunction. That estimate is an exercise of the trial court's discretion and will not be disturbed on appeal unless there is a clear abuse of discretion or the amount is arbitrary, capricious, or beyond the bounds of reason.n64.1 Although lost profits will be offset by savings resulting from reduced sales expenses or cost of goods sold, the trial court cannot usually assume that losses a defendant is likely to suffer will be easily compensated by new customers for its product. The amount of the undertaking must factor in reasonable attorneys fees and expenses that the defendant will have to expend to procure a final decision dissolving the injunction.n64.2

The fact that the employer which owns the trade secret wrongfully terminated the employee who misappropriated the trade secret does not usually amount to "unclean hands" to bar injunctive relief. Unclean hands is determined by the impact the conduct has on the equitable relations between the parties. The firing of an employee on a pretextual basis does not implicate the equities between the parties arising out of the employee's misconduct or obligation to refrain from a tortious invasion of the employer's proprietary rights.n64.3 To conclude otherwise would invite every disgruntled employee to defend charges of misappropriation and theft by establishing breach or wrongful termination of employment contract.n64.4

[b] Damages and Unjust Enrichment

Under the UTSA, a complainant may recover damages for the actual loss caused by the misappropriation of a trade secret.n65 This rule is substantially the same as the common-law rule in effect prior to the advent of the UTSA.n66 and thus cases decided under prior law on the issue of damages should still be persuasive authority. Compensatory damages for trade secret misappropriation may include loss of gross profits due to reduction of sales and price.n67 The fact that the employment of the employee who misappropriated the trade secret was wrongfully terminated does not provide a defense or bar to prevent the employer from recovering compensatory relief.n67.1

A complainant may also recover for the unjust enrichment caused by a misappropriation that is not taken into account in computing damages for actual loss.n68 It thus appears that a successful complainant may have the option of recovering either his or her actual damages or the amount by which the defendant was enriched as a result of the misappropriation, whichever is greater.

[c] Royalties

Under the UTSA, a court may order the payment of royalties under Civ. Code § 3426.2 or Civ. Code § 3426.3, Civ. Code § 3426.2 authorizes injunctive relief (see [a], above), while Civ. Code § 3426.3 authorizes a monetary award (see [b], above). Both statutes provide for the payment of royalties as an alternative remedy--either as an alternative to an injunction against future use^{n68.1} or as an alternative to an award of damages.^{n68.2} Under Civ. Code § 3426.2(b), if the court determines that it would be "unreasonable" to prohibit future use of a trade secret, an injunction may condition future use upon payment of a reasonable royalty for no longer than the period of time the use could have been prevented.ⁿ⁶⁹ Under Civ. Code § 3426.3(b), if neither damages nor unjust enrichment caused by misappropriation are provable, the court may order payment of a reasonable royalty for no longer than the period of time the use could have been prohibited.ⁿ⁷⁰ A court may not, however, issue an injunction against future use and also order payment of royalties when lost future profits has been included within a claim for damages. To order the payment of royalties in these circumstances would result in unauthorized double recovery.^{n70.1}

The UTSA does not define the term "royalty" or specify the manner in which a "reasonable royalty" is to be calculated. For example, the statute does not indicate whether the royalty is intended to be a flat fee or whether it would be based on some percentage of the profits derived by the defendant from use of the trade secret. The statute appears to leave the manner of determining the royalty to the discretion of the trial court.ⁿ⁷¹

[d] Exemplary Damages

The UTSA provides that if willful and malicious misappropriation exists, the court may award exemplary damages in an amount not exceeding twice any award made under the subdivisions authorizing money damages.ⁿ⁷² This provision differs from the exemplary damages rule of Civil Code Section 3294, which is applied in other tort cases. First, the UTSA provision requires both willfulness and malice, whereas the general punitive damages statute requires fraud, oppression, or malice. Second, the UTSA limits the award of exemplary damage to twice the award of actual damages and unjust enrichment or twice the amount of royalties awarded in lieu of damages or unjust enrichment,ⁿ⁷³ whereas the amount of the exemplary damages award under Civil Code Section 3294 is in the discretion of the trier of fact and is not limited to any specific percentage or multiple of the compensatory damage award.ⁿ⁷⁴

[e] Attorney's Fees and Costs

The UTSA provides that if a claim of misappropriation is made in bad faith, a motion to terminate an injunction is made or resisted in bad faith, or willful and malicious misappropriation exists, the court may award reasonable attorney's fees and costs to the prevailing party.^{n74.1}

The UTSA does not provide an express definition of "bad faith" for purposes of awarding attorney's fees. Courts, however, have developed a two-prong standard:^{n74.2}

(1) Objective speciousness of the claim.^{n74.3}

(2) Subjective bad faith in bringing or maintaining the action, i.e., for an improper purpose.^{n74.4}

Section 3426.4 authorizes the trial court to award attorney fees as a deterrent to specious trade secret claims.^{n74.5} Because the award is a sanction, a trial court has broad discretion in awarding fees.^{n74.6} One court of appeal has held that the bad faith requirement is satisfied by a jury's determination, on clear and convincing evidence, to award punitive damages because that determination necessitates a finding that the defendant's acts of misappropriation were done with malice.^{n74.7}

The Uniform Trade Secrets Act requires an actual or threatened misappropriation.ⁿ⁷⁵ A "threatened misappropriation" is a threat by a defendant to misuse trade secrets, manifested by words or conduct, where the evidence indicates imminent misuse. Mere possession of trade secrets by a departing employee is not enough for an injunction. Further, the inevitable disclosure doctrine is not the law in California. Thus, a hard drive download is not necessarily a "threatened" misappropriation under the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, when the injunction is sought under the inevitable disclosure doctrine.^{n75.1}

Because attorney's fees to a prevailing plaintiff when defendant's misappropriation is willful and malicious are authorized by statute, they are awarded pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 1033.5(a)(10), and the amount of the award is fixed by the court in a post-trial noticed motion.^{n75.2} The amount of the award need not reflect the monetary relief awarded when the most significant relief is the injunctive relief granted.^{n75.3} If the misappropriation began before the effective date of the UTSA (January 1, 1985),^{n75.4} any attorney's fee award must be apportioned so that it is only attributable to misappropriations occurring after January 1, 1985.^{n75.5}

Recoverable costs include a reasonable sum to cover the costs to the prevailing party of the services of expert witnesses, who are not regular employees of any party. The sum must be actually incurred and reasonably necessary in either or both preparation for trial or arbitration or during trial or arbitration of the case by the prevailing party.^{n75.6}

On appeal from an order awarding attorney's fees and costs in a UTSA action, the appellant has an uphill battle and must overcome both the sufficiency of evidence rule and the abuse of discretion rule.^{n75.7}

[f] Preserving Secrecy During Litigation

The UTSA includes a broad "protection-of-secrecy" provision. In an action under the UTSA, a court is required to preserve the secrecy of an alleged trade secret by reasonable means, which may include granting protective orders in connection with discovery proceedings, holding in-camera hearings, sealing the records of the action, and ordering any person involved in the litigation not to disclose an alleged trade secret without prior court approval.ⁿ⁷⁶

Furthermore, in any litigation (whether or not it is brought under the UTSA), the owner of the trade secret, or his or her agent or employee, has a general privilege under the Evidence Code to refuse to disclose a trade secret and to prevent another from disclosing it, if allowing the privilege will not tend to conceal fraud or otherwise work injustice.^{n76.1}

[4] Statute of Limitations

Under the UTSA, an action for misappropriation of a trade secret must be brought within three years after the misappropriation is discovered or, by the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have been discovered.ⁿ⁷⁷

With respect to continuing misappropriations, the UTSA provides that "a continuing misappropriation constitutes a single claim."ⁿ⁷⁸ Although this provision does not expressly define the point in time at which the cause of action accrues, the general rule is that when a continuing tort constitutes a single claim, the cause of action accrues at the beginning of the continuing wrong and does not accrue anew for each new injury suffered as a result of the continuing wrong.ⁿ⁷⁹ Presumably, therefore, a cause of action for a continuing misappropriation under the UTSA accrues on the first day that the misappropriation was discovered or should have been discovered. This conclusion is consistent with at least one case under the prior law.ⁿ⁸⁰

[5] FORM--Complaint by Employer Against Former Employee and Others for Misappropriation of Trade Secret--General Form

[a] Comment

The form set forth in [b], below, is a complaint for misappropriation of a trade secret. It is designed to be used against multiple defendants, as in the case in which the plaintiff is alleging that a former employee misappropriated trade secrets acquired through employment with the plaintiff and then communicated the secrets to a new employer who put them into practice.

The form is based on the Uniform Trade Secrets Act,ⁿ⁸¹ which governs misappropriations occurring on or after January 1, 1985.ⁿ⁸² In the rare instance in which a misappropriation occurred before January 1, 1985, and is not barred by the statute of limitations, plaintiff must allege a common-law cause of action.ⁿ⁸³

The complaint alleges the elements necessary to support an action for misappropriation of a trade secret: (1) the existence and possession by plaintiff of a trade secret (Paragraph 5),ⁿ⁸⁴ (2) the economic value of the trade secret (Paragraph 6),ⁿ⁸⁵ (3) the measures taken by plaintiff to insure its secrecy (Paragraph 7),ⁿ⁸⁶ (4) the nature of defendants' wrongful misappropriation (Paragraph 8),ⁿ⁸⁷ (5) damages (Paragraphs 9 and 10),ⁿ⁸⁸ and (6) an optional allegation to support a claim for punitive damages, attorney's fees and costs (Paragraph 11).ⁿ⁸⁹ Finally, it includes allegations in support of a claim for temporary and permanent injunctive relief (Paragraphs 13 and 14).ⁿ⁹⁰ For a discussion of the elements of a cause of action for misappropriation of trade secrets, see [2], above. For discussion of remedies, see [3], above.

In any action alleging misappropriation of a trade secret under the UTSA, before commencing discovery relating to the trade secret, the party alleging the misappropriation "shall identify the trade secret with reasonable particularity subject to any orders that may be appropriate" under Civil Code Section 3426.5, which governs the court's duty to preserve the secrecy of an alleged trade secret.ⁿ⁹¹ The statute does not clearly indicate whether the plaintiff must identify the trade secret with reasonable particularity in the complaint or by some other means. In order to preserve the "secret" nature of the trade secret, the plaintiff should not divulge the precise nature of the secret in the complaint, but should first seek an appropriate protective order under Civil Code Section 3426.5 to prevent improper use or disclosure by the defendant or other participants in the litigation.

In an appropriate case, counsel may wish to insert additional causes of action for breach of fiduciary dutyⁿ⁹² or breach of confidence.ⁿ⁹³

For a form of complaint for use against a former employee for solicitation of the employer's customers, including a cause of action based on misappropriation of a trade secret, see § 70.12.

[b] Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES AND INJUNCT-
_____ [name],	)	IVE RELIEF FOR MISAPPROPRIATION OF
[and DOES I through XX,] Defendant(s).	)	TRADE SECRET
	)	[Civ. Code §§ 3426.1-3426.4]
	)

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. _____ (Allege identity and capacity of plaintiff, e.g., Plaintiff _____ (name) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of California, and doing business in California).]

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.02

2. Defendant _____ [name], from _____ [date] until _____ [date], was employed by plaintiff as _____ [specify job title], whose job duties included _____ [specify]. Defendant _____ [name] is a resident of _____ [city], _____ County, California. [_____] (Allege identity and capacity of defendant(s) other than individuals, e.g., Defendant _____ (name) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a partnership sued herein under the name _____ (by which it is known or which it has assumed), with its principal office located at _____ (address), _____ (city), _____ County, California).]

[3. Defendants DOES I through XX, inclusive, are sued herein under fictitious names. Their true names and capacities are unknown to plaintiff. When their true names and capacities are ascertained, plaintiff will amend this complaint by inserting their true names and capacities herein. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that each of the fictitiously named defendants is responsible in some manner for the occurrences alleged in this complaint, and that plaintiff's damages as alleged in this complaint were proximately caused by such defendants.]

[4. Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that at all times mentioned in this complaint, each of the defendants was the agent of each of the remaining defendants, and in doing the things hereinafter alleged, was acting within the course and scope of such agency and with the permission and consent of his/her codefendants.]

5. _____ [Identify nature of plaintiff's trade secret in general terms, e.g., Since _____ (date), plaintiff has developed and used a trade secret consisting of a secret recipe for making high quality cookies].

6. Prior to the acts complained of herein, plaintiff's _____ [specify trade secret, e.g., secret recipe] had economic value deriving from the fact that it was not generally known to the public or to plaintiff's competitors, who could obtain economic value from its disclosure and use because _____ [state specific reasons why trade secret has economic value, e.g., its use resulted in the creation of high quality cookies that are in great demand and the sale of which constitutes a major portion of plaintiff's business. Prior to the wrongful acts alleged in this complaint, no other cookie manufacturer had knowledge of this recipe and therefore no other manufacturer had been able to produce cookies of a character and quality similar to plaintiff's, thus giving plaintiff a competitive advantage in the cookie market].

7. Plaintiff made reasonable efforts to insure that the _____ [specify trade secret, e.g., secret recipe for making cookies] remained a secret by _____ [specify measures used by plaintiff to maintain secrecy, e.g., (1) disclosing the recipe to only those employees who needed to know it in order to do their job, (2) emphasizing to each employee the company's need to keep the recipe a secret, and (3) requiring, as a condition of employment, that all employees promise not to disclose any information relating to the secret recipe].

8. On or about _____ [date], [and continuing to the present time], defendant(s)[, and each of them,] have misappropriated the above-described trade secret of plaintiff in the following manner:

[In following subparagraphs, describe act(s) of misappropriation within definition of Civ. Code § 3426.1(b) by each defendant, such as the following:]

a. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name], a former employee of plaintiff who, while so employed, had been informed of plaintiff's trade secret by plaintiff so that he/she could perform his/her job function, wrongfully disclosed the trade secret to defendants _____ [names of other defendants to whom secret was disclosed] knowing that the disclosure was a breach of his/her duty to keep the recipe a secret.

b. On or about _____ [date], defendants _____ [names of defendants other than former employee] misappropriated plaintiff's trade secret by using the recipe without the consent of plaintiff, knowing that their knowledge of the trade secret was derived through defendant _____ [name of former employee], and with reason to know that _____ [name of former employee] had violated his/her duty to plaintiff to maintain the secrecy of the recipe.

[CONTINUE]

9. As a proximate result of the use by defendants of plaintiff's trade secret as alleged above, plaintiff has suffered actual damages in the sum of $_____ in that _____ [specify nature of damages]. [As a further proximate result of the misappropriation, plaintiff is informed and believes that defendants _____ (names) have been unjustly enriched as a result of their misappropriation of the trade secret. The amount of this unjust enrichment cannot presently be ascertained, and plaintiff will move to amend this complaint to specify the amount when it becomes known to him/her/it, or on proof thereof.]

10. In the event that neither plaintiff's actual damages nor defendant's unjust enrichment are subject to proof, plaintiff is entitled to a reasonable royalty _____ [specify nature and amount of royalty, e.g., in the amount of 55 percent of the revenue received by defendant(s) _____ (name(s)) from sales of household goods made using plaintiff's customer list], as provided by Civil Code Section 3426.3(b).

[11. (Plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that) (T)he aforementioned acts of the defendant(s) were willful and malicious in that _____ (allege facts indicating presence of willfulness and malice, e.g., defendant(s) misappropriated plaintiff's secret process with the deliberate intent to injure plaintiff's business and improve his/her/its/their own), thereby warranting an award of exemplary damages, as provided by Civil Code Section 3426.3(c), and an award of reasonable attorney's fees and costs, as provided by Civil Code Section 3426.4.]

[12. The wrongful conduct of defendant(s) _____ (describe conduct, e.g., in misappropriating plaintiff's secret process), unless and until enjoined and restrained by order of this court, will _____ (specify particular facts establishing grounds for preliminary injunctive relief, e.g., cause great and irreparable injury to plaintiff's business in that plaintiff has lost several of its most profitable wholesale customers and is continuing to lose accounts, plaintiff has been forced to lay off workers and will be forced to lay off more, and is operating at such a loss that it may be forced out of business before this action can be brought to trial).]

[13. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for the injuries currently being suffered in that _____ (specify any additional facts tending to show grounds for permanent injunctive relief, e.g., defendant will continue to misappropriate the trade secret and plaintiff would be required to maintain a multiplicity of judicial proceedings to protect its interests).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

[1. For an order requiring defendants to show cause, if any they have, why they should not be enjoined as hereinafter set forth, during the pendency of this action;]

[2. For a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, and a permanent injunction, all requiring defendants and their agents, servants, and employees, and all persons, acting under, in concert with, or for them to (a) refrain from _____ (specify each of the acts and courses of conduct defendants are to be prohibited from doing, commencing, or continuing, e.g., continuing the misappropriation of plaintiff's trade secret by ongoing use of plaintiff's secret recipe); and (b) _____ (specify each of the acts and courses of conduct defendants are to be commanded to do or undertake, e.g., return all copies of the secret recipe to plaintiff);]

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.02

3. For actual damages [and any amount necessary to prevent the unjust enrichment of defendant(s)], in the sum of $ _____, or, in the alternative, for imposition of a reasonable royalty to be paid by defendants computed on the following basis: _____ [specify basis for computing royalty];

[4. For punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant(s) and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct;]

[5. For reasonable attorney's fees and costs, pursuant to Civil Code Section 3426.4;]

6. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

7. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Add verification, if injunctive relief is sought
(see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 527(a)).]

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], declare:

[EITHER, if plaintiff is a corporation]

I am an officer, specifically _____ [specify office held, e.g., president], of _____ [name of corporation], a corporation organized and existing under the laws of _____ [specify state or country], which is the plaintiff in the above-entitled action, and I have been authorized to make this verification on its behalf.

I have read the foregoing complaint and know the contents thereof. I am informed and believe that the matters stated therein are true and on that ground I allege that the matters stated therein are true.

[OR, if plaintiff is an individual]

I am the plaintiff in the above-entitled action.

I have read the foregoing complaint and know its contents. The same is true of my own knowledge, except in regard to matters that are stated on information and belief, and in regard to those matters I believe the complaint to be true.

[CONTINUE]

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date and place]

_____ [signature]

[6] Judicial Proceeding Privilege Inapplicable

Civil Code Section 3426.11 provides that, notwithstanding Civil Code Section 47(b), referred to as the judicial proceedings privilege, there is no privilege for the voluntary, intentional disclosure of trade secret information, unauthorized by its owner, to a competitor or potential competitor of the owner of the trade secret information or to the agent or representative of that competitor or potential competitor in any legislative or judicial proceeding, or in any other official proceeding authorized by law, or in the initiation or course of any other proceeding authorized by law and reviewable by writ of mandate.ⁿ⁹⁴ Such disclosure is not privileged and is not a privileged communication for purposes of *Civil Code Section 43 et seq.*ⁿ⁹⁵

Civil Code Section 3426.11 does not in any manner limit, restrict, impair, or otherwise modify either the application of the other subdivisions of Civil Code Section 47 to the conduct to which Civil Code Section 3426.11 applies or the court's authority to control, order, or permit access to evidence in any case before it.ⁿ⁹⁶ Nor may Civil Code Section 3426.11 be construed to limit, restrict, or otherwise impair, the capacity of persons employed by public entities to report improper government activity, as defined in former Government Code Section 10542 (now see Government Codes Section 8547.2), or the capacity of private persons to report improper activities of a private business.ⁿ⁹⁷

Civil Code Section 3426.11 was enacted by 1992 legislationⁿ⁹⁸ and was apparently intended to abrogate the holding in ITT Telecom Products Corp. v. Dooley,ⁿ⁹⁹ which held that the judicial proceedings privilege applied to disclosure of trade secrets during the course of litigation unless the disclosure was prohibited by an express agreement between the former employee and the owner of the trade secret.ⁿ¹⁰⁰

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition Noncompetition & Nondisclosure Agreements Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition Trade Secrets Trade Secrets Law Protection of Secrecy General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Civ. Code § 3426 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in [2]-[5], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Empire Steam Laundry v. Lozier (1913) 165 Cal. 95, 130 P. 1180 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Civ. Code § 3426.10.

(n5)Footnote 5. Civ. Code § 3426.10. See Ralph Andrews Productions, Inc v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 676, 685, 271 Cal. Rptr. 797 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Civ. Code § 3426.10. See Ralph Andrews Productions, Inc v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 676, 685-686, 271 Cal. Rptr. 797 .

(n7)Footnote 7. American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1324, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 ; cf. Civ. Code § 3426.7(b)(2) (UTSA does not preempt other civil remedies that are not based on misappropriation of a trade secret).

(n8)Footnote 8. American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1324, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Rigging Internat. Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 613, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 ; Sinclair v. Aquarius Electronics, Inc. (1974) 42 Cal. App 3d 216, 222, 116 Cal. Rptr. 654 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See 35 U.S.C. §§ 271 (definition of patent infringement), 281-295 (remedies for infringement). For a complete discussion of patent law, see Chisum, patents.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Sinclair v. Aquarius Electronics, Inc. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222, 116 Cal. Rptr. 654 ("a trade secret consists of any unpatented idea which can be used for industrial and commercial purposes"); Painton & Company v. Bourns, Inc. (2d Cir. 1971) 442 F.2d 216, 222 & n.2 (applying California law in diversity case).

(n12)Footnote 12. Kewanee Oil Co. v. Bicron Corp. (1974) 416 U.S. 470, 479-482, 94 S. Ct. 1879, 40 L. Ed. 2d 315 (prior law); see also Sinclair v. Aquarius Electronics, Inc. (1974) 42 Cal. App 3d 216, 222, 224-225, 116 Cal. Rptr. 654 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Kewanee Oil Co. v. Bicron Corp. (1974) 416 U.S. 470, 479-493, 94 S. Ct. 1879, 40 L. Ed. 2d 315 .

(n14)Footnote 13.1. S.O.S., Inc. v. Payday, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 886 F.2d 1081, 1090 n.13 ; see Balboa Ins. Co. v. Trans Global Equities (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1346-1350, 267 Cal. Rptr. 787 .

(n15)Footnote 13.2. S.O.S., Inc. v. Payday, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 886 F.2d 1081, 1089-1090 ; Balboa Ins. Co. v. Trans Global Equities (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1340, 1346-1350, 267 Cal. Rptr. 787 (referred to as the "extra element" test).

(n16)Footnote 13.3. Civ. Code § 3426.1(a),(b); see discussion in [2][c], below.

(n17)Footnote 13.4. See 17 U.S.C. § 301(b).

(n18)Footnote 13.5. S.O.S., Inc. v. Payday, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 886 F.2d 1081, 1089-1090 (reversing summary judgment on pendent state claim and holding triable issue of fact existed regarding whether licensing contract allowed licensee to have copy of program that was not protected by source codes).

(n19)Footnote 14. Civ. Code § 3426.7(b).

(n20)Footnote 15. See discussion in § 70.03.

(n21)Footnote 16. See Civ. Code § 3426.7(b); see also Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 130, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 (use of trade secret as unfair competition).

(n22)Footnote 17. Compare Civ. Code § 3426.3(c) with Civ. Code § 3294.

(n23)Footnote 18. Civ. Code § 3426.7(a).

(n24)Footnote 19. See, e.g., Health & Safety Code § 43206 (excluding from public availability trade secrets contained in automobile manufacturers' reports to State Air Resources Board).

(n25)Footnote 20. Civ. Code § 3426.7(c); see Gov. Code § 6250 et seq. (California Public Records Act).

(n26)Footnote 21. Civ. Code § 3426.7(c).

(n27)Footnote 22. See, e.g., Sarkes Tarzian, Inc. v. Audio Devices, Inc. (S.D. Cal. 1958) 166 F. Supp. 250, 256 .

(n28)Footnote 23. Empire Steam Laundry v. Lozier (1913) 165 Cal. 95, 99, 130 P. 1180 .

(n29)Footnote 24. Compare Civ. Code § 3426.3(c) with Civ. Code § 3294; see discussion in § 70.02[3][d].

(n30)Footnote 25. See Civ. Code §§ 3426.2(a), 3426.3(a).

(n31)Footnote 26. See, e.g., Rigging Internat. Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 606-607, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 ; Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 (court cannot compel person who changes employers to wipe clean the slate of his or her memory).

(n32)Footnote 27. See discussion in § 70.11[1].

(n33)Footnote 28. Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 .

(n34)Footnote 29. Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 .

(n35)Footnote 30. As discussed below, a trade secret under the UTSA must be the subject of efforts that are reasonable under the circumstances to maintain its secrecy. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(d). Thus, a former employee may contend that it is not "reasonable under the circumstances" to require an employee to keep secret information that will significantly limit his or her future job opportunities.

(n36)Footnote 31. See generally Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526(a)(2), 527(c)(1); IT Corp. v. County of Imperial (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 63, 72-73, 196 Cal. Rptr. 715, 672 P.2d 121 ; Wright v. Best (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 368, 386, 121 P.2d 702 ; Volpicelli v. Jared Sydney Torrance Memorial Hosp. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 242, 247, 167 Cal. Rptr. 610 .

(n37)Footnote 32. See Religious Technology Center v. Wollersheim (9th Cir. 1986) 796 F.2d 1076, 1089-1091 (holding, in determining pendent state claim, that church's scriptural materials were not trade secrets because church alleged no competitive market advantage from maintaining their secrecy and only religious harm; thus, material did not have independent economic value necessary under Civ. Code § 3426.1(d)).

(n38)Footnote 33. Civ. Code § 3426.1(d).

(n39)Footnote 34. Legislative Committee Comment (Senate) to Civ. Code § 3426.1.

(n40)Footnote 34.1. ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 21, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 (declining to follow American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1326, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 , to extent it suggests that information is not protectable as trade secret if it is "known or readily ascertainable").

(n41)Footnote 34.2. ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 21-22 n.9, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 ; see discussion of misappropriation under [c], below.

(n42)Footnote 35. Restatement Torts § 757, comment b.

(n43)Footnote 36. Uribe v. Howie (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 194, 208, 96 Cal. Rptr. 493 .

(n44)Footnote 37. See Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 .

(n45)Footnote 38. See Restatement Torts § 757, comment b; Cal Francisco Inv. Corp. v. Vrionis (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 318, 322, 92 Cal. Rptr. 201 (information used in a single transaction, such as the amount or terms of secret bid on contract, or projected date for bringing out new model, as not constituting trade secret).

(n46)Footnote 39. See Legislative Committee Comment (Senate) to Civ. Code § 3426.1.

(n47)Footnote 40. See Legislative Committee Comment (Senate) to Civ. Code § 3426.1.

(n48)Footnote 41. See, e.g., Cal Francisco Inv. Corp. v. Vrionis (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 318, 322, 92 Cal. Rptr. 201 ; Daniel Orifice Fitting Co. v. Whalen (1962) 198 Cal. App. 2d 791, 797-800, 18 Cal. Rptr. 659 (design for improvements and modifications of specialized valve manufactured by employer); Ungar Electric Tools, Inc. v. Sid Ungar Co., Inc. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 398, 403-404, 13 Cal. Rptr. 268 (processes used to manufacturer heating units; disapproved on another point in Nichols v. Hast (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 598, 601, 43 Cal. Rptr. 641, 400 P.2d 753); By-Buk Co. v. Printed Cellophane Tape Co. (1958) 163 Cal. App. 2d 157, 166, 329 P.2d 147 (machine developed to produce specially shaped masking tape).

(n49)Footnote 41.1. See Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 853, 861-862, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 .

(n50)Footnote 41.2. Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 853, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 .

(n51)Footnote 41.3. Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 853, 859, 860, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 ; see also discussion in § 70.07[2][b], [3][a].

(n52)Footnote 41.4. Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 853, 862, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 .

(n53)Footnote 41.5. See Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 853, 863, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 .

(n54)Footnote 42. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(d).

(n55)Footnote 43. American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1326, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 .

(n56)Footnote 44. See Legislative Committee Comment (Senate) to Civ. Code § 3426.1; see also Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 853, 863, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 (information regarding radio station's preferences and requirements regarding traffic reporters as not a trade secret of traffic reporting service that formerly employed reporters because information was available directly from radio station to anyone contracting with the station).

(n57)Footnote 45. Legislative Committee Comment (Senate) to Civ. Code § 3426.1; see Self-Directed Placement Corp. v. Control Data Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 908 F.2d 462, 465-466 (because elements of employment counseling program were obvious to anyone who enrolled in program, they were generally known to public or other persons who can obtain economic value from them, and thus not a trade secret under California law); Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 289, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 (prior law); but see Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 50, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 (in case in which employees stole product designs and drawings and then went to work for another corporation that manufactured and sold the products, court of appeal found it unnecessary to consider whether the secret was fully disclosed by the products themselves because there was sufficient evidence to support the conclusion implied by the verdict that the plans and designs taken by the employees were trade secrets under both common law and the UTSA in that it was clear that the plaintiff treated them as secrets and took reasonable steps to protect them).

(n58)Footnote 46. Legislative Committee Comment (Senate) to Civ. Code § 3426.1.

(n59)Footnote 47. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(d)(2); see, e.g., Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 42, 50, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 (visitor logs, sign-out sheets for proprietary documents, document destruction policy, locked storage cabinets in engineering department, and strict control measures with respect to documents that necessarily had to be made available to third-party vendors or subcontractors, including bold type warning legend on documents, constituted reasonable efforts to maintain secrecy).

(n60)Footnote 48. See Legislative Committee Comment (Senate) to Civ. Code § 3426.1, citing E.I. duPont deNemours & Company v. Christopher (5th Cir. 1970) 431 F.2d 1012, 1015-1017, cert. denied, 400 U.S. 1024 (1970).

(n61)Footnote 49. Civ. Code § 3426.1(b); see Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 51, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 (defendant's continued use after effective date of UTSA of engineering drawings taken before effective date of UTSA to market products derived from the drawings was misappropriation under UTSA definition).

(n62)Footnote 50. Civ. Code § 3426.1(a).

(n63)Footnote 51. Civ. Code § 3426.1(a); see ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 21-22 n.9, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 (assertion that matter is readily ascertainable by proper means is a defense to claim of misappropriation if defendant can establish that its knowledge of information resulted from its own efforts or some other proper means). In fact, if reverse engineering is lengthy and expensive, a person who discovers another's trade secret through reverse engineering may have his or her own trade secret in that information. Legislative Committee Comment (Senate) to Civ. Code § 3426.1; see Sinclair v. Aquarius Electronics, Inc. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 216, 226, 116 Cal. Rptr. 654 (prior law).

(n64)Footnote 52. See Sinclair v. Aquarius Electronics, Inc. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 216, 226, 116 Cal. Rptr. 654 (decided under common law).

(n65)Footnote 53. See Sarkes Tarzian, Inc. v. Audio Devices, Inc. (S.D. Cal. 1958) 166 F. Supp. 250, 261 (applying California law); Sinclair v. Aquarius Electronics, Inc. (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 216, 226, 116 Cal. Rptr. 654.

(n66)Footnote 54. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(b)(2)(B)(ii).

(n67)Footnote 55. See Rigging Internat. Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 613, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451. However, when an employee is hired to invent, the invention becomes the property of the employer. Daniel Orifice Fitting Co. v. Whalen (1962) 198 Cal. App. 2d 791, 798, 18 Cal. Rptr. 659; see discussion in § 70.20.

(n68)Footnote 56. Rigging Internat. Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 613, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451.

(n69)Footnote 57. Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 288, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198.

(n70)Footnote 58. See, e.g., Reid v. Mass Co., Inc. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 293, 302, 318 P.2d 54; see also discussion in § 70.11[1].

(n71)Footnote 58.1. See Ralph Andrews Productions, Inc v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 676, 681-682, 271 Cal. Rptr. 797

(n72)Footnote 58.2. See Ralph Andrews Productions, Inc v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 676, 682, 271 Cal. Rptr. 797 .

(n73)Footnote 58.3. See Ralph Andrews Productions, Inc v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 676, 683-685, 271 Cal. Rptr. 797 (disagreeing with defendant's statement that inquiry to the other studio was not likely to reveal ownership of the concept).

(n74)Footnote 58.4. See Ralph Andrews Productions, Inc v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 676, 683, 271 Cal. Rptr. 797 .

(n75)Footnote 58.5. See Ralph Andrews Productions, Inc v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 676, 684-685, 271 Cal. Rptr. 797 .

(n76)Footnote 58.6. See Ralph Andrews Productions, Inc v. Paramount Pictures Corp. (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 676, 686, 271 Cal. Rptr. 797 ; see also Restatement of Torts, § 758.

(n77)Footnote 59. Civ. Code § 3426.2(a).

(n78)Footnote 60. Civ. Code § 3426.2(a).

(n79)Footnote 61. American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1326, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 .

(n80)Footnote 62. Civ. Code § 3426.2(a).

(n81)Footnote 63. Civ. Code § 3426.2(b); see also discussion in [c], below.

(n82)Footnote 64. Civ. Code § 3426.2(c). This provision appears to permit a mandatory injunction in addition to a prohibitory injunction.

(n83)Footnote 64.1. See ABBA Rubber Co v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14, 22, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 (dissolving preliminary injunction because $1,000 was insufficient bond in view of the evidence that 87.7 percent of defendant's invoices or $315,000 per year came from customers on plaintiff's customer list).

(n84)Footnote 64.2. See ABBA Rubber Co v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14-15, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 .

(n85)Footnote 64.3. See Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 52-54, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 (wrongful termination occurred after the employee had stolen engineering plans and drawings and parts comprising trade secrets but before employee started using them to solicit plaintiff's customers or manufacture competing products).

(n86)Footnote 64.4. See Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 53, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 .

(n87)Footnote 65. Civ. Code § 3426.3(a).

(n88)Footnote 66. See Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 466, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 (under common law plaintiff could recover compensatory damages for any injury proximately caused by trade secret misappropriation).

(n89)Footnote 67. See Sarkes Tarzian, Inc. v. Audio Devices, Inc. (S.D. Cal. 1958) 166 F. Supp. 250, 269 (prior law); see also Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 466, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 (damages may include profits lost on sales diverted from plaintiff by defendant's use of trade secret).

(n90)Footnote 67.1. See Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 53, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 .

(n91)Footnote 68. Civ. Code § 3426.3(a).

(n92)Footnote 68.1. Civ. Code § 3426.2.

(n93)Footnote 68.2. Civ. Code § 3426.3.

(n94)Footnote 69. Civ. Code § 3426.2(b).

(n95)Footnote 70. Civ. Code § 3426.3(b).

(n96)Footnote 70.1. Robert L. Cloud & Assocs., Inc. v. Mikesell (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1141, 1150-1151, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 143 .

(n97)Footnote 71. See Civ. Code §§ 3426.2(b), 3426.3(b).

(n98)Footnote 72. Civ. Code § 3426.3(c).

(n99)Footnote 73. See Civ. Code § 3426.3(c).

(n100)Footnote 74. See Finney v. Lockhart (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 161, 164, 217 P.2d 19 . For general discussion of requirements for recovery of punitive damages, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 54, "Punitive Damages."

(n101)Footnote 74.1. Civ. Code § 3426.4.

(n102)Footnote 74.2. FLIR Systems, Inc. v. Parrish (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1275, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307 ; Gemini Aluminum Corp. v. California Custom Shapes, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1262, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358 .

(n103)Footnote 74.3. See FLIR Systems, Inc. v. Parrish (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1276-1278, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307 (objective speciousness properly found, where evidence supported finding that former employer filed specious action as preemptive strike and for anticompetitive purpose, where speculation that departing employees might misappropriate and use trade secret in startup business did not support injunction, and where there was no evidence of misappropriation, threatened misappropriation, imminent harm, or ongoing wrongdoing).

(n104)Footnote 74.4. See FLIR Systems, Inc. v. Parrish (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1278, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307 (although former employer suspected that trade secrets would be misappropriated and claimed that reasonable suspicion was evidence of its good faith, trial court properly did not credit this theory, instead finding that reasons for bringing and maintaining action were "inevitable disclosure" arguments, which is not law in California).

(n105)Footnote 74.5. FLIR Systems, Inc. v. Parrish (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1275, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307 ; Gemini Aluminum Corp. v. California Custom Shapes, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1261, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358 .

(n106)Footnote 74.6. FLIR Systems, Inc. v. Parrish (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1275, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307 ; Gemini Aluminum Corp. v. California Custom Shapes, Inc. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1249, 1262, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358 .

(n107)Footnote 74.7. See Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 54, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 .

(n108)Footnote 75. Civ. Code § 3426.2(a).

(n109)Footnote 75.1. FLIR Systems, Inc. v. Parrish (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1279, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307 .

(n110)Footnote 75.2. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5); Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 55, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 .

(n111)Footnote 75.3. See Vacco Indus., Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 55, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 (relatively minor monetary award only reflected fact that defendant had not yet been successful in injuring plaintiffs).

(n112)Footnote 75.4. See Civ. Code § 3426.10.

(n113)Footnote 75.5. See Vacco Indus., Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 55-56, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 .

(n114)Footnote 75.6. Civ. Code § 3426.4.

(n115)Footnote 75.7. FLIR Systems, Inc. v. Parrish (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1275-1276, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 307 .

(n116)Footnote 76. Civ. Code § 3426.5.

(n117)Footnote 76.1. See Evid. Code § 1060; see also Evid. Code §§ 1061-1063 (assertion of privilege in criminal proceedings).

(n118)Footnote 77. Civ. Code § 3426.6.

(n119)Footnote 78. Civ. Code § 3426.6.

(n120)Footnote 79. See Monolith Portland Midwest Co. v. Kaiser Aluminum & C. Corp. (9th Cir. 1969) 407 F.2d 288, 293 . See also Kolani v. Gluska (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 402, 407, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257 (new claims for misappropriation of trade secrets "relate back" for limitation purposes to date of filing of original state court complaint if claims are based on same operative facts as alleged in original complaint).

(n121)Footnote 80. See Monolith Portland Midwest Co. v. Kaiser Aluminum & C. Corp. (9th Cir. 1969) 407 F.2d 288, 293 .

(n122)Footnote 81. See Civ. Code §§ 3426-3426.10.

(n123)Footnote 82. See Civ. Code § 3426.10.

(n124)Footnote 83. See Cal Francisco Inv. Corp. v. Vrionis (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 318, 321-322, 92 Cal. Rptr. 201 (in common-law trade secret action, facts pleaded must show existence of subject matter that is capable of protection as trade secret and disclosure of secret under circumstances giving rise to a contractual or other legally imposed obligation not to use or disclose secret to detriment of the discloser).

(n125)Footnote 84. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(d).

(n126)Footnote 85. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(d)(1).

(n127)Footnote 86. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(d)(2).

(n128)Footnote 87. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(b).

(n129)Footnote 88. See Civ. Code § 3426.3(a), (b).

(n130)Footnote 89. See Civ. Code §§ 3426.3(c), 3426.4.

(n131)Footnote 90. See Civ. Code § 3426.2. If a temporary restraining order is sought without notice, the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 527(c)(2), (d) must be satisfied. For discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

(n132)Footnote 91. Code Civ. Proc. § 2019(d) (Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.210 operative July 1, 2005).

(n133)Footnote 92. See form in § 70.04[2].

(n134)Footnote 93. See form in § 70.05[3].

(n135)Footnote 94. Civ. Code § 3426.11; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1084 et seq. (mandate).

(n136)Footnote 95. Civ. Code § 3426.11.

(n137)Footnote 96. Civ. Code § 3426.11.

(n138)Footnote 97. Civ. Code § 3426.11.

(n139)Footnote 98. See Stats. 1992, ch. 165.

(n140)Footnote 99. ITT Telecom Products Corp. v. Dooley (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 307, 262 Cal. Rptr. 773.

(n141)Footnote 100. See ITT Telecom Products Corp. v. Dooley (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 307, 314-317, 320, 262 Cal. Rptr. 773.

110 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART A. OVERVIEW OF GOVERNING LAW

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.03

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.03 Unfair Competition

[1] Availability of Cause of Action

In the context of the employment relationship, the term "unfair competition," as broadly defined, includes a number of causes of action, including causes of action for misappropriation of a trade secretⁿ¹ as well as theories such as breach of the duty of loyalty.ⁿ² However, the term "unfair competition" also denotes a specific cause of action in its own right. Business and Professions Code Sections 17200-17301 provide remedies for "unfair competition," which is defined to include any unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business act or practice.ⁿ³ This provision is broadly construed.ⁿ⁴ In Alch v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁵ an action by television screenwriters over the age of 40 for age discrimination against networks, studios and talent agencies, the court held that the plaintiffs were not required to show potential competitive harm or consumer deception to state a claim under the Unfair Competition Law. However, effective January 1, 2005, with the passage of Proposition 64, it is the intent of the voters of California in amending Business and Professions Code Sections 17203, 17204, 17206, 17535, and 17536 to prohibit private attorneys from filing lawsuits for unfair competition when they have no client who has been injured in fact under the standing requirements of the United States Constitution.ⁿ⁶ Thus, an unfair competition action may only be brought by a private individual who has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of such unfair competition.ⁿ⁷ A private person may pursue representative claims or relief on behalf of others only if the claimant meets the standing requirements of Business and Professions Code Section 17204 (requiring actual injury in fact and the loss of money or property as the result of the alleged unfair competition) and complies with Code of Civil Procedure Section 382 (joinder as defendant of one who should be joined as plaintiff but will not consent). These limitations do not apply to unfair competition claims by the Attorney General, or any district attorney, county counsel, city attorney or city prosecutor.ⁿ⁸

The California Supreme Court has addressed two procedural issues regarding pursuit of a claim under Section 17200. In Amalgamated Transit Union v. Superior Court,^{n8.1} the Court addressed whether a union could seek recovery under the UCL on behalf of its member employees for alleged violations of the California Labor Code and Wage Orders. The Court noted that prior to the passage of Proposition 64 in 2004, a plaintiff did not have to show any actual injury to bring a claim under the UCL. But Proposition 64 amended the UCL to allow private representative claims for relief to be brought only by a "person who has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of the unfair competition." The union admittedly could not meet those requirements, but asserted that it could bring the action as the representative of those who could. Reasoning that an assignment of rights to a non-injured person or entity by a person who did suffer injury in fact would nullify the proposition passed by the voters, the Court concluded that, "under the UCL an injured employee's assignment of rights cannot confer standing on an uninjured assignee." As a result, the union lacked standing to bring the claim.

In Amalgamated and in a companion case, Arias v. Superior Court,^{n8.2} the Court also concluded that Proposition 64 further required anyone seeking relief under the UCL to meet the procedural requirements of class actions. The Court relied on Proposition 64's express language stating that to bring a representative action under the UCL, a private plaintiff must "compl[y] with Section 382 of the California Code of Civil Procedure." Focusing on the historical application of Section 382 to authorize class actions, and on the information provided to voters when passing Proposition 64, the Court construed the language of Proposition 64 to mean that a UCL claim "must meet the requirements for a class action."

In addition, the equitable doctrine of unfair competition, established by case law, protects against the inequitable pirating of the fruits of another's labor and then either "palming off" those fruits as one's own or simply gaining unearned commercial benefit from them.ⁿ⁹ It has been stated broadly that a showing of misappropriation and wrongful use of confidential information will support recovery under a theory of unfair competition.ⁿ¹⁰ In the employment context, a duty arises out of the employment relationship under which an employee may not divulge confidential information gained in the course of his or her employment, or use such information to the employer's prejudice.ⁿ¹¹

The inevitable disclosure doctrine assumes that an employee who has knowledge of trade secrets and accepts a similar job with a direct competitor in a highly competitive industry will disclose the employer's trade secrets in the course of performing the duties of the new employment.ⁿ¹² Under this theory, the employee may be enjoined if the former employer demonstrates that the employee's new job duties will inevitably cause the employee to rely upon knowledge of the former employer's trade secrets. In Schlage Lock Co. v. Whyte,ⁿ¹³ a court of appeal rejected the inevitable disclosure doctrine as contrary to California law and policy because it creates an after-the-fact covenant not to compete, thereby restricting employee mobility.ⁿ¹⁴

Most actions for unfair competition arising out of the employment context involve suits brought by employers against their former employees. For a discussion of unfair solicitation of an employer's customers by a former employee, see Part B (§§ 70.10- 70.12).

An action for unfair competition may also be brought against the new employer of a former employee for acts of unfair competition committed by the employee after leaving the plaintiff's employment. Thus, an action for unfair competition will lie against a party who is aware of or ratifies a breach of confidence or breach of a fiduciary duty by an employee and receives the benefits of the employee's breach.ⁿ¹⁵ Directors, officers and shareholders of a corporation cannot be held vicariously liable for the torts of that corporation, but they may be held liable for the commission of torts in which they personally participated. In other words, the corporate entity cannot shield them from liability for their own tortious conduct.ⁿ¹⁶

Although this chapter focuses on the duties of employees and former employees, it should be noted that an employer may be liable for unfair competition against an employee in certain circumstances. In one case, an insurance business hired a salesperson who, prior to employment, had acquired a selective and confidential list of customers with whose needs he was familiar and with whom he had a valuable good will. After the employee left the position, the employer attempted to solicit customers from the employee's list to whom the employee had sold insurance during the employment period. The court of appeal upheld an injunction against such solicitation.ⁿ¹⁷ The California Supreme Court has held that unlawfully withheld overtime wages may be recovered as restitution in a UCL action,ⁿ¹⁸ but a court of appeal has held that individual owners, directors, managers, etc., of a corporate employer who did not personally obtain or misappropriate funds from employees will not be liable for restitution in a UCL action for unpaid wages, because awarding restitution against them would not replace any money or property they took directly from any employee.ⁿ¹⁹ The court of appeal also found an action under the UCL for injunctive relief appropriate when a business engaged in an unlawful practice under the California Fair Employment and Housing Actⁿ²⁰ of discriminating against older workers.ⁿ²¹

[2] Remedies

[a] Compensatory Damages

In an action for unfair competition, loss of profits constitutes the surest type of monetary damages available under the law. In the case in which a former employee has wrongfully solicited business from his or her former employer, the employer is normally entitled to the profit that would have been realized but for the wrongful solicitation.ⁿ²² The amount of defendant's gains may be used as a yardstick to measure this amount.ⁿ²³ However, in such cases, if the defendant had lower costs in producing the profit than plaintiff would have had, any damage award based on the amount of defendant's profit must be reduced by this cost difference. Conversely, if plaintiff could have realized the income that defendant realized but could have saved on costs, then any damage award based on defendant's profits should be increased by the additional costs defendant incurred over what the plaintiff would have incurred.ⁿ²⁴

Future lost profits may also be recovered if it is shown with reasonable certainty that such losses will accrue.ⁿ²⁵ The fact such damages are incapable of exact determination or subject to contingencies does not bar recovery, and a reasonably approximate estimation is deemed sufficient.ⁿ²⁶

Expenses incurred in attempting to remedy an act of unfair competition may also be recoverable.ⁿ²⁷

On the other hand, in Alch v. Superior Court,ⁿ²⁸ an action by television screenwriters over the age of 40 for age discrimination, against networks, studios and talent agencies, the court held that the trial court did not have the authority, pursuant to injunctive relief available under the Unfair Competition Law, to enter an order compelling the employers to reimburse the class for wages lost as a result of unfair competition practices in the form of classwide backpay.

[b] Accounting

No California case has held that an accounting for profits is a proper remedy in an action for unfair competition in the employment context. However, one case has suggested in dicta that it is a proper remedy.ⁿ²⁹ In addition, there is out-of-state authority supporting the use of an accounting in an action of this type.ⁿ³⁰ For a complete discussion of an accounting as a remedy, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Accounting.

[c] Punitive Damages

Under Civil Code Section 3294(a), punitive damages are available in an action not based on the breach of an obligation arising from contract if the plaintiff proves by clear and convincing evidence that defendant has been guilty of oppression, fraud, or malice, as defined in Civil Code Section 3294(c). In one case of unfair competition, which was characterized by the court as one of "trade secret larceny," the court upheld an award of punitive damages and further noted that such awards are proper in cases involving fraud and may be allowed even though the tort incidentally involves a contract.ⁿ³¹ Thus, while punitive damages are not available in an action based solely on breach of a covenant not to compete, if a cause of action for unfair competition is established, punitive damages may be available. It should be noted, however, that while punitive damages are also available in causes of action based on misappropriation of a trade secret, such damages are limited to an amount not to exceed twice the sum of other damages properly awarded.ⁿ³²

[d] Injunction[i] Availability of Injunctive Relief

Under Business and Professions Code Section 17203, any person who engages, has engaged, or proposes to engage, in unfair competition may be enjoined in any court of competent jurisdiction. In addition, Civil Code Section 3422 allows injunctive relief when money damages would not afford adequate relief or when it would be extremely difficult to ascertain the amount of money damages that would afford adequate relief. These factors are often present in unfair competition cases involving misuse of confidential information by former employees, resulting in loss of customers by the employer. It is often extremely difficult to ascertain how much future business a customer would have provided to the employer and to ascertain the value of a satisfied customer to an employer in promoting the employer's good name to other potential customers.

A person may pursue representative claims or relief on behalf of others, including injunctive relief, only if the claimant has suffered injury in fact and has lost money or property as a result of the unfair competition. These limitations do not apply to the Attorney General or to a district attorney, county counsel, city attorney or city prosecutor.ⁿ³³

Injunctive relief, however, is granted only on convincing proof of a harmful violation of the plaintiff's rights, and the instances in which those rights are violated by a former employee's misuse of information given during employment are rare.ⁿ³⁴ Some courts state that whether or not injunctive relief will be granted is determined by whether the knowledge gained by an employee is secret and confidential; only if the information is secret and confidential will its use by a former employee be enjoined.ⁿ³⁵ If the trade secrets obtained by a former employee are not used by him or her, or that employee's subsequent employer, no ground for any injunction exists. The receipt or acceptance of further business by the new employer from former customers of the former employer who were not solicited or are not retained through the use of the former employer's trade secret may not be enjoined.ⁿ³⁶

For a discussion of injunctions in actions for misappropriation of trade secret, see § 70.02[3][a].

[ii] Limits of Relief

As a general rule, a court in equity, in granting an injunction against unfair competition, may limit the duration of the injunction to the period of time necessary to protect the legal interests of the party seeking the injunction.ⁿ³⁷ For example, an injunction in an action for unfair competition based on improper use of a trade secret was limited to the time it would have taken the restrained party to develop the trade secret on its own time.ⁿ³⁸

Further, in Alch v. Superior Court,ⁿ³⁹ an action by television screenwriters over the age of 40 for age discrimination, against networks, studios and talent agencies, the court held that the trial court did not have the authority, pursuant to injunctive relief available under the Unfair Competition Law, to enter an order compelling the employers to reimburse the class for wages lost as a result of unfair competition practices in the form of classwide backpay.

[e] Restitution

Restitution is available as a remedy under the Unfair Competition Law when the defendant wrongfully acquired funds or property in which plaintiff had an ownership or vested interest.ⁿ⁴⁰ Restitution under the Unfair Competition Law includes two separate components:ⁿ⁴¹

- The offending party must have obtained something to which it was not entitled.
- The victim must have given up something he or she was entitled to keep.

Orders for restitution compel a UCL defendant to return money obtained through an unfair business practice to these persons in interest from whom the property was taken, i.e., to persons who had an ownership interest in the property or those claiming through that person.ⁿ⁴²

[3] Statute of Limitations

The period of limitations for an action for unfair competition in the employment context (which normally involves an act of the employee in wrongfully competing with his or her former employer) is unclear. No California case authority is directly on point. In the context of a trade libel action, one court has stated broadly that tortious interference with a person's trade or business comes within the two-year limitation period of Code of Civil Procedure section 339(1), which governs actions upon an obligation not founded upon an instrument in writing.ⁿ⁴³ Another court has noted that the two-year limitation period of Code of Civil Procedure section 339(1) has an exceedingly broad scope and covers miscellaneous tort actions.ⁿ⁴⁴ Despite the existence of these authorities, unfair competition by a present or former employee arguably falls within the broad definition of unfair competition found in Business and Professions Code Section 17200,ⁿ⁴⁵ and the period of limitation for statutory unfair competition is four years.ⁿ⁴⁶

[4] Jury Trial

In an employment-related action brought under Business and Professions Code Section 17200, there is no right to a jury trial. The gist of the section 17200 cause of action is equitable and the relief sought is equitable, even when the basis for the unfair competition claim is violation of a statute or contract.ⁿ⁴⁷ Thus, for example, in an action principally about overtime pay, in which the plaintiffs dismissed their statutory cause of action and alleged only violation of the Unfair Competition Law, the defendants had no right to a jury trial, even though plaintiffs could have requested damages for the same violations under a claim for Labor Code violations, the employer asserted an affirmative defense under a Wage Order, and the UCL cause of action required proof of the underlying Labor Code violations.ⁿ⁴⁸

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in § 70.02.

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in § 70.04.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200.

(n4)Footnote 4. Barquis v. Merchants Collection Asso. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 111, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 (unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business practices within meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 includes wrongful business conduct in whatever context such activity might occur). See, e.g., Harris v. Investor's Business Daily, Inc. (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 28, 33-36, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 108 (Fair Labor Standards Act claim for overtime compensation (under 29 U.S.C. § 207) could serve as predicate act for Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 cause of action by telemarketers who sold newspaper subscriptions, despite opt-in requirement for members of class under FLSA, where claim was not preempted by federal law); Northern Cal. Carpenters Regional Council v. Warmington Hercules Assocs. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 296, 20 Cal. Rptr. 3d 918 (in action for unfair business practices by carpenters regional council and individual plaintiff against building contractors and subcontractors engaged in development of housing project for breach of wage obligations in purchase and development agreements by failing to pay or require subcontractors to pay workers not covered by project labor agreement at rate equal to prevailing wage rate as determined by Department of Industrial Relations, trial court properly denied defendants' motion to strike complaint pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, commonly known as anti-SLAPP statute, because action came within Code Civ. Proc. § 425.17(b), providing that § 425.16 does not apply to action brought solely in public interest or on behalf of general public if all of specified conditions exist, where complaint sought to vindicate public policy by assuring enforcement of city's prevailing wage policy, which was action solely in public interest).

(n5)Footnote 5. Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 339, 400-403, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Proposition 64, approved by California voters on November 2, 2004, § 1(e).

(n7)Footnote 7. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204 Former Bus. & Prof. Code § 17204 allowed any person to file an action acting for the interests of the general public. Effective January 1, 2005, with the passage of Proposition 64 on November 2, 2004, an individual may no longer file and prosecute unfair competition actions on behalf of the general public. See also Proposition 64, approved by California voters on November 2, 2004, § 1(f) (intent of California voters in enacting Proposition 64 that only Attorney General and local public officials be authorized to file and prosecute actions on behalf of general public).

(n8)Footnote 8. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203. These standing requirements apply to cases already pending when Proposition 64 took effect on January 1, 2005. Californians for Disability Rights v. Mervyn's, LLC (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 223, 228-233 . See also Branick v. Downey Savings & Loan Assn. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 235, 240-244 (Proposition 64 does not affect ordinary rules governing amendment of complaints and their relation back, and courts may permit plaintiffs to amend complaints to satisfy Proposition 64's standing requirements by applying established rules governing leave to amend (Code Civ. Proc. § 473) and relation back of amended complaints);

(n9)Footnote 8.1. Amalgamated Transit Union v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 993, 1001-1002, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 605, 209 P.3d 937 .

(n10)Footnote 8.2. Arias v. Superior Court (2009) 46 Cal. 4th 969, 977-988, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588, 209 P.3d 923 .

(n11)Footnote 9. KGB, Inc. v. Giannoulas (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 844, 850, 164 Cal. Rptr. 571 ; see also Ball v. American Trial Lawyers Assn. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 289, 303-304, 92 Cal. Rptr. 228 .

(n12)Footnote 10. Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 464, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 .

(n13)Footnote 11. Pasadena Ice Co. v. Reeder (1929) 206 Cal. 697, 702, 275 P. 944 .

(n14)Footnote 12. See Pepsi Co., Inc. v. Redmond (7th Cir. 1995) 54 F.3d 1262, 1269 .

(n15)Footnote 13. Schlage Lock Co. v. Whyte (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 .

(n16)Footnote 14. Schlage Lock Co. v. Whyte (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1458-1464, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 .

(n17)Footnote 15. See Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 353, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921 .

(n18)Footnote 16. PMC, Inc. v. Kadisha (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1368, 1379-1380, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 .

(n19)Footnote 17. See Foster v. Peters (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 204, 206, 117 P.2d 726 .

(n20)Footnote 18. Cortez v. Purolator Air Filtration Products Co. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 163, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 518, 999 P.2d 706 ; see § 21.69.

(n21)Footnote 19. Bradstreet v. Wong (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 1440, 2008 Cal. App. LEXIS 553, *34-*47 .

(n22)Footnote 20. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq..

(n23)Footnote 21. See Herr v. Nestle U.S.A., Inc. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 779, 781, 789-790, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 477 . For discussion of age discrimination generally, see § 41.31 .

(n24)Footnote 22. Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 466-467, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 .

(n25)Footnote 23. Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 466-467, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 ; Gordon v. Schwartz (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 213, 215-216, 305 P.2d 117 .

(n26)Footnote 24. Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 466-467, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 .

(n27)Footnote 25. Southern Cal. Disinfecting Co. v. Lomkin (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 431, 449-450, 7 Cal. Rptr. 43 .

(n28)Footnote 26. Southern Cal. Disinfecting Co. v. Lomkin (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 431, 450, 7 Cal. Rptr. 43 .

(n29)Footnote 27. See Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 356, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921 (plaintiff should have been permitted to introduce evidence of cost of hiring replacements for employees that were wrongfully "raided" by defendant, a former employee and corporate officer).

(n30)Footnote 28. Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 339, 403-408, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29 .

(n31)Footnote 29. See Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 467 fn.7, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 .

(n32)Footnote 30. See Comment, Monetary Awards for Unfair Competition in California, 34 U.S.C. L. Rev. 282, 303 (1961), and cases cited therein.

(n33)Footnote 31. See Southern Cal. Disinfecting Co. v. Lomkin (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 431, 446, 451, 7 Cal. Rptr. 43 .

(n34)Footnote 32. See Civ. Code § 3426.3(c), discussed in § 70.02[3][d].

(n35)Footnote 33. Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17203, 17204. The claimant must also comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 382, relating to joinder as a defendant of one who should be joined as a plaintiff but will not consent.

(n36)Footnote 34. See Mathews Paint Co. v. Seaside Paint Co. (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 168, 175, 306 P.2d 113 .

(n37)Footnote 35. Mathews Paint Co. v. Seaside Paint Co. (1957) 148 Cal. App. 2d 168, 175, 306 P.2d 113 ; American Alloy Steel Corp. v. Ross (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 215, 218-219, 308 P.2d 494 .

(n38)Footnote 36. Whitted v. Williams (1964) 226 Cal. App. 2d 52, 59, 37 Cal. Rptr. 692 .

(n39)Footnote 37. See Fidelity etc. Co. v. Federal etc. Co. (1933) 217 Cal. 307, 318, 18 P.2d 950 .

(n40)Footnote 38. See Winston Research Corp. v. Minnesota Min. & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1965) 350 F.2d 134, 142 .

(n41)Footnote 39. Alch v. Superior Court (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 339, 403-408, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 29 .

(n42)Footnote 40. Feitelberg v. Credit Suisse First Boston, LLC (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 997, 1012, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 592 .

(n43)Footnote 41. Day v. AT & T Corp. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 325, 340, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 55 .

(n44)Footnote 42. Kraus v. Trinity Management Services, Inc. (2000) 23 Cal. 4th 116, 126-127, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 485, 999 P.2d 718 .

(n45)Footnote 43. Guess, Inc. v. Superior Court (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 473, 478, 222 Cal. Rptr. 79 .

(n46)Footnote 44. Edwards v. Fresno Community Hosp. (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 702, 706, 113 Cal. Rptr. 579 .

(n47)Footnote 45. See Barquis v. Merchants Collection Asso. (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 94, 111, 101 Cal. Rptr. 745, 496 P.2d 817 (unlawful, unfair, or fraudulent business practices within meaning of Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 includes wrongful business conduct in whatever context such activity might occur).

(n48)Footnote 46. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17208.

(n49)Footnote 47. Hodge v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 278, 284-285, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 519 .

(n50)Footnote 48. Hodge v. Superior Court (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 278, 284-287, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 519 .

111 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART A. OVERVIEW OF GOVERNING LAW

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.04

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.04 Breach of Duty of Loyalty or Fiduciary Duty

[1] Availability of Cause of Action

Under California law, an employee owes a "duty of loyalty" toward his or her employer during the term of employment.ⁿ¹ Although few reported California cases have discussed the subject, it appears that an employee who improperly breaches this duty by competing with his or her employer or assisting a competing business during the course of employment, or who utilizes the employer's confidential information while so employed in order to enable himself or herself to compete with the employer after termination of employment, may be liable to the employer under a theory of breach of fiduciary duty. Furthermore, a breach of the duty of loyalty may constitute good cause for an employee's discharge.ⁿ²

The Second Restatement of Agency provides that an employee is subject to a duty to his or her employer to act solely for the benefit of the employer in all matters connected with the employment.ⁿ³ The Restatement further provides that an employee, unless otherwise agreed, cannot compete with the employer or act for persons whose interests are in conflict with those of the employer in matters with respect to which the employee is employed.ⁿ⁴ The employee is liable to the employer for all losses caused by breach of the duty of loyalty.ⁿ⁵ Thus, the employee has a duty to faithfully serve the employer during working hours and not to engage in a competing business even outside of working hours.ⁿ⁶ When an employee engages in a business that makes him or her a competitor of the employer, no matter how much or how little time is devoted to it, there is an interest against this duty and therefore a violation of the employment contract, even though the agreement does not contain a noncompetition provision.ⁿ⁷

The notion of a duty of loyalty owed to one's employer is further reflected in Labor Code Section 2863, which provides that an employee who has any business to transact on his or her own account that is similar to that entrusted to the employee by his or her employer must give preference to the business of the employer. Thus, if an employee transacts the business of the employer for his or her own profit, the employer is entitled to those profits.ⁿ⁸

An employee's duty of loyalty is clearest and most strict in the case of corporate officers. Corporate officers stand in a fiduciary relationship with the corporation and are not permitted to use their position of trust to further their own objectives.ⁿ⁹ Thus, when a corporate officer competes with the corporation prior to terminating his or her relationship with the corporation, without disclosing this fact to the corporation, he or she may be liable for breach of fiduciary duty.ⁿ¹⁰ The mere fact that an employee makes plans to compete with his or her employer while still employed does not constitute a breach of the duty of loyalty,ⁿ¹¹ even if the employee is a corporate officer.ⁿ¹² But if a corporate officer fails to disclose his or her plans to compete with the corporation and there are particular circumstances that render nondisclosure harmful to the corporation, the officer may be liable for breach of a fiduciary duty.ⁿ¹³ In addition, it is a breach of fiduciary duty when a corporate officer, while still employed in that capacity, assists a competitor of his employer to solicit his or her employer's employees to go to work for the competitor.ⁿ¹⁴

Although most of the reported California cases have involved breach of fiduciary duty by corporate officers,ⁿ¹⁵ the same principles could logically be applied to other employees in positions of trust and confidence who utilize the employer's resources or confidential information to establish or aid a competing business. In one case, the court of appeal held that a marketing manager who participated in the formation of a company that was to compete with his employer assisted the potential competitor in obtaining financing, and who had failed to disclose his knowledge about the competitor to his employer, had violated his duty of loyalty, thus providing good cause for his discharge.ⁿ¹⁶

[2] FORM--Complaint by Employer Against Former Employee for Damages for Breach of Fiduciary Duty

[a] Comment

The form of complaint set forth in [b], below, may be used by an employer who wishes to assert a cause of action for damages against a former employee for breach of fiduciary duty. The cause of action may be asserted when an employee in a position of trust and confidence, such as a corporate officer, engages in acts of competition with his or her employer or uses confidential information acquired from the employment to the detriment of the employer.ⁿ¹⁷ In an appropriate case, counsel may wish to set forth an additional cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret,ⁿ¹⁸ or for breach of confidence.ⁿ¹⁹

The form in [b], below, alleges (1) plaintiff's employment of defendant in a position of trust and confidence (Paragraph 5); and (2) defendant's breach of his or her fiduciary duty to plaintiff (Paragraph 6). It also contains allegations of resulting damages (Paragraph 7) and an optional allegation of facts supporting an award of punitive damages (Paragraph 8).ⁿ²⁰

[b] Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES FOR BREACH OF
[and DOES I through XX],	)	FIDUCIARY DUTY
Defendant(s).	)
	)
	)

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. Allege identity and capacity of plaintiff. See form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 1.]

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.04

[2. Allege identity and capacity of defendant(s). See form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 2.]

[3. Fictitious name allegations. See form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 3.]

[4. Allegation of agency among defendants. See form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 4.]

5. From _____ [date] until _____ [date], defendant _____ [name of employee] was employed by plaintiff in a position of trust and confidence, specifically as _____ [specify position held by defendant, e.g., vice president in charge of plaintiff's research and development division]. While so employed, defendant _____ [name of employee] was under a fiduciary duty to act solely for the benefit of plaintiff and not contrary to plaintiff's interests with respect to all matters connected with this employment relationship.

6. On or about _____ [date], while so employed in this position of trust and confidence, defendant _____ [name of employee] breached his/her fiduciary duty to plaintiff by _____ [allege breach of duty, e.g., secretly organizing a competing business, utilizing confidential information acquired during the course of his/her employment with plaintiff and soliciting key employees in plaintiff's research and development division to come to work for defendant after he terminated his/her employment with plaintiff, using confidential information concerning the work record and salaries of those key employees].

7. As a proximate result of defendant's breach of his/her fiduciary duty, plaintiff has suffered actual damages in the sum of $ _____ in that _____ [specify nature of damages, e.g., plaintiff was forced to incur expenses in finding, hiring, and training comparably qualified individuals to replace the key employees who left plaintiff's employ as a result of improper solicitation by defendant].

[8. In committing the breach of fiduciary duty as described above, defendant was guilty of malice and/or oppression in that _____ (allege facts indicating presence of malice and/or oppression, e.g., defendant organized a competing business and induced his coemployees to leave plaintiff's employ with the deliberate intent to injure plaintiff's business and improve his/her own and acted with conscious disregard for plaintiff's rights and for his/her own fiduciary duty to plaintiff), thereby warranting an award of punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct.]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For damages, in the sum of $ _____;

[2. For punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant(s) and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct;]

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsFiduciary Responsibilities

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Fowler v. Varian Associates, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 34, 41, 241 Cal. Rptr. 539 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Fowler v. Varian Associates, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 34, 40-43, 241 Cal. Rptr. 539 (employee who breached duty of loyalty could not sue employer for wrongful constructive discharge in violation of duty of good faith and fair dealing); see also discussion in Chapter 60.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Rest. 2d Agency § 387; see also Rest. 2d Agency § 1, comments d and e (principal as employer, agent as employee).

(n4)Footnote 4. Rest. 2d Agency §§ 393, 394.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Rest. 2d Agency § 401.

(n6)Footnote 6. Charles T. Powner Co. v. Smith (1928) 91 Cal. App. 101, 102, 266 P. 833 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Puritas Laundry Co. v. Green (1911) 15 Cal. App. 654, 660, 115 P. 660 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Sumner v. Nevin (1906) 4 Cal. App. 347, 350, 87 P. 1105 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 345, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Sequoia Vacuum Systems v. Stransky (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 281 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Fowler v. Varian Associates, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 34, 41, 241 Cal. Rptr. 539 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 347, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921 .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 352-353, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921 ; see also Daniel Orifice Fitting Co. v. Whalen (1962) 198 Cal. App. 2d 791, 800, 18 Cal. Rptr. 659 (corporate officer liable for breach of fiduciary duty when officer, while creating improvements to corporation's product, was concealing improvements and secretly doing all that was necessary to set up competing business).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 347, 350-351, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921 ; see also GAB Business Servs., Inc. v. Lindsey & Newsome Claim Servs., Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 409, 416-421, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 665 (corporate officer's fiduciary duty to corporation is duty as matter of law).

(n15)Footnote 15. See, e.g., Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 352-353, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411 P.2d 921 ; Daniel Orifice Fitting Co. v. Whalen (1962) 198 Cal. App. 2d 791, 800, 18 Cal. Rptr. 659 .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Fowler v. Varian Associates, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 34, 41-42, 241 Cal. Rptr. 539 . See also Huong Que, Inc. v. Luu (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 400, 410, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 527 (court properly imposed duty of loyalty on couple who had sold business to plaintiff and then agreed to act as managing agents, where there was ample evidence they assented to act as agents for plaintiffs and nothing on face of contract and no extrinsic evidence supported supposition that parties intended to excuse them from duty of loyalty otherwise flowing from their agency relationship; trial court properly granted preliminary injunction against them, where court expressly found credible averments by plaintiffs' witnesses that husband, while still managing agent of plaintiff, actively solicited plaintiff's customers for business that directly competed with plaintiffs).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Bancroft-Whitney Co. v. Glen (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 327, 345-352, 49 Cal. Rptr. 825, 411

P.2d 921 .

(n18)Footnote 18. See form in § 70.02[5].

(n19)Footnote 19. See form in § 70.05[3].

(n20)Footnote 20. See Civ. Code § 3294.

112 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART A. OVERVIEW OF GOVERNING LAW

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.05

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.05 Breach of Confidence

[1] Availability of Cause of Action

The California Supreme Court has expressly left open the issue of whether or not a cause of action for breach of confidence exists in California.ⁿ¹ A number of court of appeal decisions have concluded that such a cause of action does exist.ⁿ² However, at least one court of appeal has suggested that there is considerable doubt regarding whether such a cause of action does exist.ⁿ³

[2] Elements of Cause of Action

[a] Generally

Courts that have recognized the tort of breach of confidence have stated that the cause of action arises when (1) a protectable idea is offered to another in confidence, and (2) the idea is voluntarily received by the offeree in confidence with the understanding that it is not to be disclosed to others, and is not to be used by the offeree for purposes beyond the limits of the confidence without the offeror's permission.ⁿ⁴

In the employment context, an action for breach of confidence may be available not only to an employer who has conveyed an idea to an employee in confidence but also to an employee who has shared an idea with the employer in confidence.

[b] Protected Ideas

An idea must be novel and confidential to warrant protection under the theory of breach of confidence.ⁿ⁵ While trade secrets are generally protected under this theory, an idea need not be a trade secret in order to warrant protection.ⁿ⁶ In addition, copyright protectability of literary work is not a necessary element of a cause of action for breach of confidence.ⁿ⁷

Examples of ideas that may be the subject of a breach of confidence cause of action include (1) an idea for a sports quiz show,ⁿ⁸ (2) an idea for a movie,ⁿ⁹ (3) a marketing idea for a product,ⁿ¹⁰ and (4) improved business forms.ⁿ¹¹ In another case, confidentiality protection was granted for training program elements that did not constitute a trade secret because they were obvious to anyone who enrolled in the program.^{n11.1}

[c] Confidential Relationship

The essence of the tort of breach of confidence is an understanding between the parties that an idea is offered on a condition of confidence.ⁿ¹² A confidential relationship sufficient to support an action for breach of confidence will not be created merely by the unsolicited submission of an idea to another.ⁿ¹³ There must exist evidence that the plaintiff communicated to the defendant the confidentiality of the submission, or evidence from which a confidential relationship between the parties may be inferred.ⁿ¹⁴ Evidence supporting a confidential relationship may include (1) proof of the existence of an implied-in-fact contract, (2) proof that the confidential material was protected by reason of sufficient novelty and elaboration, or (3) proof of a particular relationship that would impose a duty to receive the idea in confidence,ⁿ¹⁵ such as that of employer and employee.ⁿ¹⁶

The confidential relationship must be based on actual notice to the defendant of the confidential nature of the idea; mere constructive notice is insufficient.ⁿ¹⁷ In addition, knowledge of the confidential nature of the information must precede the disclosure.ⁿ¹⁸ An opportunity to reject the information is necessary if the defendant is to be charged with having voluntarily assumed the obligation to maintain the confidentiality of the disclosed information.ⁿ¹⁹

[3] FORM--Complaint by Employer Against Former Employee for Damages for Breach of Confidence

[a] Comment

The form of complaint set forth in [b], below, may be used by an employer who wishes to assert a cause of action for damages against a former employee for breach of confidence. In an appropriate case, counsel may wish to set forth an additional cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret,ⁿ²⁰ or for breach of the employee's fiduciary duty.ⁿ²¹

The form in [b], below, alleges the elements of a cause of action for breach of confidence, which areⁿ²² (1) a novel idea offered to the employee in confidence (Paragraph 5); (2) voluntarily reception of the idea by the employee with the understanding that it is not to be disclosed to others, and is not to be used by the employee for purposes beyond the limits of the confidence without the employer's permission (Paragraph 6); and (3) breach of the duty of confidence (Paragraph 7). It also contains allegations of resulting damages (Paragraph 8) and an optional allegation of facts supporting an award of punitive damages (Paragraph 9).ⁿ²³

[b] Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA

COUNTY OF _____

_____, [name],) Plaintiff,) vs.)
 _____ [name], [and DOES I) through XX,] Defendant(s).)
)

NO. _____
 COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES FOR BREACH OF CONFIDENCE

Plaintiff alleges:

[1. Allege identity and capacity of plaintiff. see form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 1.]

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.05

[2. Allege identity and capacity of defendant(s). see form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 2.]

[3. Fictitious name allegations. see form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 3.]

[4. Allegation of agency among defendants. see form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 4.]

5. On or about _____ [date], plaintiff communicated a novel and protectable confidential idea to defendant _____ [name of employee], who at that time was an employee of plaintiff, concerning _____ [allege novel idea, e.g., a novel and completely new idea for a children's game of skill].

6. Defendant _____ [name of employee] voluntarily received this idea in confidence by _____ [allege confidential communication of idea to employee, e.g., agreeing, before he/she was told of the idea to keep the idea in the strictest of confidence and not to disclose the idea to any other person without the permission of plaintiff. Defendant further understood that the idea was being communicated to him/her for the sole purpose of obtaining defendant's opinion in regard to its feasibility].

7. _____ [Allege employee's breach of duty of confidence, e.g., Defendant _____ (name of employee) breached his/her duty of confidence owed to plaintiff by _____ (allege breach of duty, e.g., communicating this idea to defendant _____ (name), a competitor of plaintiff)].

8. As a proximate result of defendant's breach of his/her duty of confidence as alleged above, plaintiff has suffered actual damages in the sum of $ _____ in that _____ [specify nature of damages, e.g., profits that plaintiff would have made by developing and selling its novel idea have been diverted to plaintiff's competitor, defendant _____ (name), who used the idea to develop and market a game of its own based on plaintiff's idea].

[9. In committing the breach of confidence as described above, defendant was guilty of malice and/or oppression in that _____ (allege facts indicating presence of malice and/or oppression, e.g., defendant disclosed plaintiff's novel idea with the deliberate intent to injure plaintiff's business and improve that of its competitor and acted with conscious disregard for plaintiff's rights and for his/her own duty of confidence, thereby warranting an award of punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct).]

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

1. For damages, in the sum of $ _____;

[2. For punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant(s) and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct;]

3. For costs of suit herein incurred; and

4. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Fiduciary Responsibilities

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Davies v. Krasna (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 502, 506-508, 121 Cal. Rptr. 705, 535 P.2d 1161 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See, e.g., Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 455, 461-466, 214 Cal. Rptr. 276 ; Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 309, 321, 158 Cal. Rptr. 704 ; Self-Directed Placement Corp. v. Control Data Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 908 F.2d 462, 467 (relying on Tele-Count and Faris in holding that causes of action for breach of confidential relationship and common law misappropriation were stated with regard to training program elements that did not constitute trade secrets; employee, who was hired away by defendant, had secrecy agreement with plaintiff, and defendant, as potential licensee, also had confidential relationship).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Rokos v. Peck (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 604, 618, 227 Cal. Rptr. 480 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 309, 323, 158 Cal. Rptr. 704 ; but see Self-Directed Placement Corp. v. Control Data Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 908 F.2d 462, 467 (finding cause of action stated and describing it as applying to idea, whether or not protectable; breach of confidence protection was granted for training program elements that did not constitute trade secret because they were obvious to anyone who enrolled in the program).

(n5)Footnote 5. Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 455, 462, 214 Cal. Rptr. 276 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 455, 463, 214 Cal. Rptr. 276 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 309, 323, 158 Cal. Rptr. 704 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 309, 314-315, 158 Cal. Rptr. 704 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Mann v. Columbia Pictures, Inc. (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 628, 644-646, 180 Cal. Rptr. 522 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Thompson v. California Brewing Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 469, 472, 310 P.2d 436 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 455, 460, 214 Cal. Rptr. 276 .

(n12)Footnote 11.1. See Self-Directed Placement Corp. v. Control Data Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 908 F.2d 462, 467 .

(n13)Footnote 12. Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 455, 464, 214 Cal. Rptr. 276 .

(n14)Footnote 13. See Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 309, 323-324, 158 Cal. Rptr. 704 .

(n15)Footnote 14. Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 309, 323-324, 158 Cal. Rptr. 704 ; see Self-Directed Placement Corp. v. Control Data Corp. (9th Cir. 1990) 908 F.2d 462, 467 (employee who was hired away by defendant has secrecy agreement with plaintiff, and defendant, who acquired information during course of negotiations for license, also had a confidential relationship with plaintiff).

(n16)Footnote 15. Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 309, 323, 158 Cal. Rptr. 704 .

(n17)Footnote 16. See Thompson v. California Brewing Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 469, 475, 310 P.2d 436 (suggesting that confidential relationship exists between employer and employee).

(n18)Footnote 17. Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 455, 464-465, 214 Cal. Rptr. 276 .

(n19)Footnote 18. Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 455, 464-465, 214 Cal. Rptr. 276 .

(n20)Footnote 19. Tele-Count Engineers, Inc. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 455, 465, 214 Cal. Rptr. 276 .

(n21)Footnote 20. See form in § 70.02[5].

(n22)Footnote 21. See form in § 70.04[2].

(n23)Footnote 22. See Faris v. Enberg (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 309, 323, 158 Cal. Rptr. 704 , discussed in [2], above.

(n24)Footnote 23. See Civ. Code § 3294.

113 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART A. OVERVIEW OF GOVERNING LAW

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.06

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.06 Tortious Interference With Economic Relationships

[1] Interference With Prospective Economic Advantage

A tort cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage may be available in situations involving unfair competition by an employee against an employer or a former employer. One court of appeal has broadly defined this tort as consisting of the intentional act of diverting or taking away business of another by methods that are not within the privilege of fair competition.ⁿ¹ While the parameters of this tort are not entirely settled, it is clear that the tort is actionable even though no breach of contract is involved.ⁿ²

The elements of a cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage are (1) an economic relationship between the plaintiff and a third party containing the probability of future economic benefit; (2) knowledge by the defendant of the existence of the relationship; (3) intentional acts by the defendant to disrupt the relationship; (4) actual disruption of the relationship; and (5) proximately caused actual damage.ⁿ³

Negligent acts by the defendant may also be the basis for a cause of action for interference with prospective economic advantage.ⁿ⁴ For a complete discussion of the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40, "Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts," Part D, Subpart 1.

[2] Interference With Contractual Relations

Interference with contractual relations is now viewed as merely a factual example of the broader tort of interference with prospective economic advantage.ⁿ⁵ The elements of a cause of action for interference with contractual relations are (1) the existence of a valid contract between plaintiff and a third party; (2) defendant's knowledge of the contract and intent to induce its breach; (3) breach of the contract by the third party; (4) a causal relationship between the breach and the defendant's unjustified or wrongful conduct; and (5) resulting damage to plaintiff.ⁿ⁶ In addition, there is dicta to the effect that a cause of action for interference with contractual relations may exist when the defendant's actions did not cause a breach of the contract but rendered performance more expensive or burdensome.ⁿ⁷ For a complete discussion of the tort of interference with prospective economic advantage, see Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 40,

"Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts," Part D, Subpart 2.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Hill Medical Corp. v. Wycoff (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 895, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779 (court refused to apply Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601 to enforce covenant not to compete in stock redemption agreement against radiologist who resigned and sold stock back to medical corporation, where there was nothing to indicate that goodwill was part of repurchase, and where there was no evidence that radiologist was compensated to relinquish his rights to continued patronage from patients and doctors with whom he had developed personal relationships); A.F. Arnold & Co. v. Pacific Professional Ins., Inc., (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 710, 714, 104 Cal. Rptr. 96 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See A.F. Arnold & Co. v. Pacific Professional Ins., Inc., (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 710, 714, 104 Cal. Rptr. 96 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 827, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 .

(n4)Footnote 4. J'Aire Corp. v. Gregory (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 799, 805, 157 Cal. Rptr. 407, 598 P.2d 60 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Buckaloo v. Johnson (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 815, 823, 122 Cal. Rptr. 745, 537 P.2d 865 ; see also discussion in [1], above.

(N6)Footnote 6. See Wanland v. Los Gatos Lodge, Inc. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1507, 1522, 281 Cal. Rptr. 890 ; see also Dryden v. Tri-Valley Growers (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 990, 995, 135 Cal. Rptr. 720 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Lipman v. Brisbane Elementary Sch. Dist. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 224, 232, 11 Cal. Rptr. 97, 359 P.2d 465 .

114 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART A. OVERVIEW OF GOVERNING LAW

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.07

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.07 Breach of Contract and Statutory Restrictions

[1] Statutory Prohibition Against Contracts in Restraint of Trade or Profession

Business and Professions Code Section 16600 provides that every contract by which anyone is restrained from practicing a trade, business, or profession is, to that extent, void except as provided in Business and Professions Code Sections 16600 through 16607.ⁿ¹ The primary exceptions found in those code provisions relate to the sale of a business^{n1.1} and dissolution of the partnership or dissociation of the partner from the partnership,ⁿ² and are beyond the scope of this chapter. It should be noted, however, that an employer may not use a partnership or corporate structure as a sham to avoid the rule barring covenants restraining trade.ⁿ³

In Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP, ^{n3.1} the California Supreme Court held that a noncompetition agreement violated section 16600, because it restrained the employee's ability to practice his profession as an accountant. The agreement prohibited the employee, for an 18-month period, from performing professional services of the type he had provided while at the employer, for any client on whose account he had worked during 18 months prior to his termination. It also prohibited him, for a year after termination, from "soliciting," defined by the agreement as providing professional services to any client of the office of the employer in which he had worked.^{n3.2}

In Edwards, the Court refused to adopt the limited or "narrow-restraint" exception to section 16600 discussed by the Ninth Circuit in Campbell v. Trustees of Leland Stanford Jr. University, ^{n3.3} and followed in other cases.^{n3.4} The Ninth Circuit acknowledged that California has rejected the common law "rule of reasonableness" with respect to restraints on the ability to pursue a profession, but concluded that section 16600 only made illegal restraints precluding one from engaging in a lawful profession, trade, or business.^{n3.5} The Ninth Circuit noted that some California courts excepted agreements that barred the employee from pursuing only a small or limited part of the business, trade or profession from the application of section 16600.^{n3.6} The Ninth Circuit cited two California cases it believed may have carved out this exception to section 16600.^{n3.7} But the California Supreme Court found that the analyses in the two cases did not provide persuasive support for adopting the narrow-restraint exception. The Court found that California courts have not embraced the Ninth Circuit's narrow-restraint exception, and that California courts have been clear in their expression that section 16600 represents a strong public policy of the state which should not be diluted by judicial fiat.^{n3.8}

Business and Professions Code Section 16600, as a general rule, invalidates provisions in employment contracts that prohibit an employee from working for another employer after completion of his or her employment or imposing a penalty on the employee if he or she does so.ⁿ⁴ However, as discussed in [2], below, some contractual provisions that are limited in scope may validly restrict future employment, and covenants that restrict an employee while the employee is still employed are often upheld.

Business and Professions Code Section 16600 does not invalidate an entire employment contract that contains a provision that is void under that section. Rather, the void provision is normally severable from other provisions of the contract.ⁿ⁵ In addition, if it is possible to construe an anticompetitive provision narrowly so as to render it lawful, the courts will attempt to do so.ⁿ⁶

As used in this chapter, the term "covenant not to compete" is, unless otherwise stated, used in the broad sense to cover all contractual provisions that restrain an employee's or former employee's right to practice his or her trade or profession.

[2] Covenants Not to Compete

[a] Generally

Covenants not to compete that prohibit an employee from working in competition with the employer after termination of the employment contract, or penalize such an employee, are invalid when they are unlimited in scope.ⁿ⁷ An employer cannot lawfully make the signing of an employment agreement containing an unenforceable covenant not to compete a condition of continued employment, even if the agreement contains choice of law or severability provisions which would enable the employer to enforce other provisions of the agreement. Termination of an employee who refuses to sign such an agreement constitutes a wrongful termination in violation of public policy.^{n7.1}

However, covenants not to compete that do not restrain an employee from pursuing an entire type of business, trade, or profession, but rather prohibit the employee from pursuing only a small or limited part of a business, trade, or profession may be valid in some cases.ⁿ⁸ For example, a covenant that prohibits a former employee from soliciting business from the employer's customers for a limited time after termination of employment has been upheld.ⁿ⁹

Covenants that prohibit an employee from disclosing trade secrets are permissible.^{n9.1} In addition, covenants that prohibit an employee from working for a competitor while working for the employer are permissible.ⁿ¹⁰ A covenant not to compete that reasonably limits its geographical scope also may be permissible.ⁿ¹¹ However, absent any mistake justifying reformation, courts will not "save" an overbroad, and thus illegal, covenant not to compete by narrowly construing it.^{n11.1} Further, the mere fact that a covenant not to compete is only a partial restraint on an employee's ability to pursue a trade or profession does not preclude a finding that the restraint is invalid. For example, a restraint that prohibits an employee from soliciting only certain customers may still be invalid.ⁿ¹²

To the extent that covenants not to compete are allowed, the contractual language is strictly construed against the employer.ⁿ¹³

[b] Efficacy of Covenants Not to Compete

There is currently a controversy about whether a covenant not to compete may validly restrict the conduct of an employee to a greater extent than the restrictions embodied in the law of unfair competition, including the law regarding misappropriation of trade secrets.ⁿ¹⁴ Under one line of authority, covenants that restrict future employment are unnecessary because such covenants may not validly provide greater restraints on future employment than the law permits in the absence of such a covenant.ⁿ¹⁵ The other line of authority holds that a contract may restrict the conduct of an employee to a greater extent than the law of unfair competition otherwise allows.ⁿ¹⁶ As the discussion below indicates, contractual restraints that impose reasonable and minor restraints on an employee are often upheld.

Even if the protection afforded by covenants not to compete is legally limited to that which would otherwise be afforded by law in the absence of such a covenant, the inclusion of such provisions in an employment contract may serve a useful purpose by placing the employee on notice of his or her legal obligation to desist from certain conduct.ⁿ¹⁷

An employment agreement may contain both a covenant not to compete and an arbitration clause. It may also contain a choice-of-law provision if the employment situation involves an out-of-state employer and/or employee. In that case, if a party challenges the validity of a contractual provision other than the arbitration clause itself, such as a covenant not to compete, the issue of the clause's legality is subject to arbitration.^{n17.1}

[c] Provisions Requiring Penalties for Competition

A covenant not to compete may be held to violate Business and Professions Code Section 16600 as an unlawful restraint of trade even though it does not purport to completely bar future competition with the employer but rather penalizes the employee in some way for such competition. Thus, a provision that required the employee to pay a sum of $50 to the employer for each customer the employee serviced during employment and then called on after employment had terminated was found to be invalid as an unlawful restraint of trade.ⁿ¹⁸ Similarly, a provision of a corporate pension plan that became part of the employment contract that said pension benefits would be terminated if a retired employee competed in any way with the employer was void as a restraint of trade.ⁿ¹⁹ However, the Ninth Circuit has allowed forfeiture clauses to be enforced against plaintiffs who have violated a profit-sharing plan's non-competition clause.^{n19.1} These clauses are governed by ERISA, which preempts state laws regarding non-competition clauses.^{n19.2} Under ERISA, non-competition forfeiture clauses are valid so long as the plan provides that vested benefits cannot be forfeited.^{n19.3} The employer can condition benefits more generous than those required by ERISA upon a non-competition clause.^{n19.4}

In Buskuhl v. Family Life Ins. Co.,ⁿ²⁰ the court also upheld a provision in an employment contract requiring the forfeiture of an insurance agent's future commissions if the agent should disturb the employer's relations with its customers within five years after termination of employment. The court further upheld a provision requiring the forfeiture of the agent's future commissions if the agent should attempt to induce other agents of the employer to leave the employer and represent another insurer.ⁿ²¹

In IBM v. Bajorek,^{n21.1} the Ninth Circuit upheld a forfeiture penalty against an employee who had signed an agreement not to work for a competitor within six months after he exercised his stock options. The employee joined a competitor and exercised his options, earning more than $900,000. The employee sued in California for declaratory relief and IBM sued in New York for violation of the agreement. The New York action was transferred to California and dismissed. The trial court ruled in favor of the employee in the California declaratory relief case, but the Ninth Circuit reversed. The Circuit panel, among other rulings, held that Business and Professions Code Section 16600 was not a bar to recovery of the profits of the employee. According to the opinion, the agreement "would exclude him from one small corner of the market but would not preclude him from engaging in his profession, trade or business. The covenant not to compete is limited to six months and to competitors." Stated alternatively, the court found that the agreement presented the employee with three reasonable alternatives: (1) to have exercised his options six months before his resignation, and then to have gone to work for the competitor; (2) to leave IBM, go to work in the same industry and keep his money, so long as he did not work for a competitor; and (3) to go to work for a competitor and give up what he was paid.

[d] Remedies for Breach of Covenant Not to Compete

If a valid covenant not to compete is breached, plaintiff is entitled to recover all damages proximately caused by the defendant's breach.ⁿ²² In such cases, plaintiff's damages are normally the value of the business lost to plaintiff as a result of the breach.ⁿ²³

If future harm is threatened, the court may issue an injunction requiring the defendant to refrain from further breaches of the covenant.ⁿ²⁴

[3] Types of Contractual Provisions Restraining Competition

[a] Covenants Concerning Trade Secrets and Other Confidential Business Information

A number of cases have stated that covenants not to compete will be upheld if they are necessary to protect an employer's confidential information or trade secrets (including confidential customer lists).ⁿ²⁵ However, the courts are not in agreement about whether a covenant not to use the confidential information or trade secrets of an employer may validly extend to information that does not strictly qualify as a trade secret or extend to activity that is not otherwise prohibited under the law of unfair competition. Under one line of authority, a covenant in an employment contract governing confidential information does not protect the employer in regard to information that does not meet the formal definition of a trade secret.ⁿ²⁶ Since trade secrets are protected regardless of the existence of an express agreement, such covenants add little to the employer-employee relationship.ⁿ²⁷ For discussion of trade secrets, see § 70.02. For a discussion of unfair competition as it relates to use of confidential employer information, see § 70.03[1].

Under a contrary line of authority, covenants not to compete may restrict the conduct of an employee to a greater extent than the law of unfair competition otherwise would.ⁿ²⁸

The vast majority of reported cases dealing with confidential employer information relate to an employee's covenant not to take away the employer's customers when he or she terminates employment. For a discussion of this issue, see Part B (§§ 70.10- 70.12).

[b] FORM--Employment Contract Provisions Regarding Employee's Use of Employer's Trade Secrets or Confidential Information

[i] Comment

The form set forth in [ii], below, contains contractual provisions restricting an employee's use of the employer's trade secrets or confidential information. These provisions may be inserted in an employment contract (1) to provide that the employee will not, either during or after termination of his or her employment, compete with the employer while using the employer's trade secrets and other confidential information; and (2) to provide that the employee will not disclose any trade secrets or confidential information, either during or subsequent to his or her employment.^{n28.1}

The employer should consider setting forth all matters that constitute trade secrets or confidential business information that the employer would like to protect. Although some cases indicate that a contractual specification of a matter as a "trade secret" is not binding on the courts,ⁿ²⁹ such a provision may nevertheless be useful in establishing that the matter was understood between the parties to be confidential.

For a sample employer policy on employee use and disclosure of trade secrets and other confidential information, see Morrison & Foerster, california employers' guide to employee handbooks and personnel policy manuals, §§ 2.27, 3.20 (Matthew Bender).

[ii] Form

■ CAUTION:

Care should be taken to draft narrow contractual restraints on a departing employee. Absent any mistake justifying reformation, courts will not rewrite an overbroad (and thus illegal) covenant not to compete into a narrower bar on theft of confidential information. To do so would undermine the policy of Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, which prohibits contracts restraining anyone from engaging in his or her lawful trade, business, or profession.^{n29.1}

1. Employee agrees that he or she will not, except as required in the conduct of Employer's business or as authorized in writing by Employer, publish or disclose, during Employee's term of employment or subsequent thereto, any trade secret or confidential information concerning any invention or other matter relating to Employer's business that Employee may in any way acquire by reason of his or her employment by Employer.

Covenant Not to Compete by Use of Employer's Trade Secrets After Termination of Employment

2. Employee further promises and agrees not to engage in competition with Employer, at any time after the termination of this agreement, while making use of Employer's trade secrets. Employee acknowledges and agrees that the term trade secrets, as used in this Section, includes information concerning _____ [specify any particular matter constituting a trade secret, e.g., Employer's methods and processes used in manufacturing _____ (specify product, e.g., chocolate chip cookies)].

[c] Covenants Protecting Against Solicitation of Former Coemployees

One court of appeal has upheld the validity of a covenant prohibiting a former employee from "raiding" his former employer's employees.ⁿ³⁰ In this case, the employee, a corporate executive, entered into a termination agreement with his employer under which he agreed not to "raid" the corporation's employees. On termination of his employment, he obtained other employment and then allegedly induced some of his former co-workers to go to work for his new employer.ⁿ³¹ The former employer brought suit against its former employee for breach of the termination agreement. The trial court granted a nonsuit on the grounds that the covenant was void in that it violated Business and Professions Code Section 16600. The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the employee's promise not to lure away other employee's was not invalid in restraint of trade, at least to the extent that enforcement was sought within one year of the termination of employment.ⁿ³² The court in this case did not decide whether covenants of a duration longer than one year would be upheld.

[d] FORM--Employment Contract Provision Protecting Against Solicitation of Employer's Employees by Former Employee[i] Comment

This form may be inserted in an employment contract to provide that the employee is prohibited from soliciting any of the employer's other employees for a competing business during employment and for a period of time after termination of employment. The form contains a blank for insertion of the length of the period that the employee is to refrain from soliciting the employer's employees. This period should not be any longer than is reasonably required to protect the employer's interests. For a discussion of the validity of such provisions generally, see [c], above.

[ii] Form Solicitation of Coemployees

Employee agrees that he/she will not, either during his/her period of employment, or for a period of _____ [specify, e.g., one year] after employment has terminated, solicit any of Employer's employees for a competing business or otherwise induce or attempt to induce such employees to terminate their employment with Employer.

[e] FORM--Employment Contract Provision Protecting Against Competition by Employee During Term of Employment Contract

[i] Comment

This form may be inserted in an employment contract to provide that the employee will not compete directly or indirectly with the employer during the term of the agreement. Competition by the employee with his or her employer during the term of the employment contract is prohibited even though the employment contract does not contain an express provision to that effect.ⁿ³³ However, inclusion of such a clause in the agreement may help to deter an employee from engaging in such activity by making it clear to the employee that any competitive activity during the term of the employment contract is a breach of contract.

[ii] Form Noncompetition During Term of Employment Contract

During the term of this contract Employee shall not, directly or indirectly, either as an employee, employer, consultant, agent, principal, partner, stockholder, corporate officer, director, or in any other individual or representative capacity, engage or participate in any business that is in competition in any manner whatsoever with the business of Employer.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 946, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 (like Legislature, California Supreme Court generally condemns noncompetition agreements). To view California Supreme Court briefs available on Lexis.com, go to 2006 CA S. Ct. Briefs 47190A .

(n2)Footnote 1.1. See Hill Medical Corp. v. Wycoff (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 895, 903-904, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779 (court refused to apply Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601 to enforce covenant not to compete in stock redemption agreement against radiologist who resigned and sold stock back to medical corporation, because there was nothing to indicate that goodwill was part of repurchase, and there was no evidence that radiologist was compensated to relinquish his rights to continued patronage from patients and doctors with whom he had developed personal relationships); Hilb, Rogal & Hamilton Ins. Services v. Robb (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1812, 1824-1827, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 887 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601 applied to non-competition clause contained in employment agreement executed in connection with merger in which employee-officer exchanged all his stock in former corporation for stock in acquiring corporation); Vacco Industries, Inc. v. Van Den Berg (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 34, 48-49, 52-54, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 602 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601 applicable to render non-competition agreement enforceable against officer and former employee who, when he sold shares, was the ninth largest shareholder of corporation and substantial factor in sale of all corporate stock to another company); see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601.

(n3)Footnote 2. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16602; see also Bus. & Prof. Code § 16602.5 (similar exception for dissolution of a limited liability company).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Bosley Med. Group v. Abramson (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 284, 292, 207 Cal. Rptr. 477 .

(n5)Footnote 3.1. Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 .

(n6)Footnote 3.2. Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 946-948, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 .

(n7)Footnote 3.3. Campbell v. Trustees of Leland Stanford Jr. Univ. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 499 .

(n8)Footnote 3.4. See e.g., International Business Machines Corp. v. Bajorek (9th Cir. 1999) 191 F.3d 1033 (upholding agreement mandating that employee forfeited stock options if employed by competitor within six months of leaving employment); General Commercial Packaging v. TPS Package (9th Cir. 1997) 126 F.3d 1131, 1133 (bargained-for contractual provision barring one party from courting specific named customer was not illegal restraint of trade prohibited by § 16600, because it did not entirely preclude party from pursuing its trade or business).

(n9)Footnote 3.5. Campbell v. Trustees of Leland Stanford Jr. Univ. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 499, 502 .

(n10)Footnote 3.6. Campbell v. Trustees of Leland Stanford Jr. Univ. (9th Cir. 1987) 817 F.2d 499, 502 .

(n11)Footnote 3.7. See Boughton v. Socony Mobil Oil Co. (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 188, 41 Cal. Rptr. 714 (interpreting deed restriction on land use); King v. Gerold (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 316, 240 P.2d 710 (rejecting manufacturer's argument that clause not to produce its product after license expiration was not illegal restraint under § 16600).

(n12)Footnote 3.8. Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 948-949, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 , quoting Scott v. Snelling and Snelling, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 1990) 732 F. Supp. 1034, 1042 .

(n13)Footnote 4. Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 .

(n14)Footnote 5. Winston Research Corp. v. Minnesota Min. & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1965) 350 F.2d 134, 140 ; Zajicek v. Koolvent Metal Awning Corp. of Am. (9th Cir. 1960) 283 F.2d 127, 133 .

(n15)Footnote 6. State Farm Mut. etc. Ins. Co. v. Dempster (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 418, 427, 344 P.2d 821 .

(n16)Footnote 7. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600; Walia v. Aetna, Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1213, 1220-1224, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 737 (covenant of six-month restriction prohibiting current and former employees from working for any competitor in same state in which the employee worked for employer or within 50-mile radius of sales territory previously covered for employer restricted employees' mobility and betterment and violated Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600); Kolani v. Gluska (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 402, 407, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257 (covenant not to compete in employment contract was void as outright prohibition on competition when covenant prohibited employee from soliciting, interfering with, competing with, or endeavoring to entice away in any manner any client or customer or any potential client or customer with which employer was actively engaged in sales or promotional efforts); Frame v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 668, 672, 97 Cal. Rptr. 811 (provision in profit sharing plan requiring employee to forfeit benefits if employee voluntarily terminated employment and worked for competitor as invalid).

(n17)Footnote 7.1. Walia v. Aetna, Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1213, 1224-1227, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 737 ; D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 929, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495 . See Thompson v. Impaxx, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1428-1432, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427 (trial court erred in dismissing on pleadings complaint alleging wrongful termination for refusal to sign covenant not to solicit employer's customers within one year of termination, because complaint alleged identity of customers was not confidential and thus not trade secret, which was question of fact). For discussion of wrongful discharge in violation of public policy, see § 60.04.

(n18)Footnote 8. Loral Corp. v. Moyes (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 268, 276, 219 Cal. Rptr. 836 ; Boughton v. Socony Mobil Oil Co. (1965) 231 Cal. App. 2d 188, 190-191, 41 Cal. Rptr. 714 .

(n19)Footnote 9. See, e.g., Alliant Ins. Services v. Gaddy (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1292, 1306-1307, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 259 (on sale of insurance agency and employment of seller, noncompetition covenant prohibiting former owner, who was also former employee of buyer, from soliciting not only clients of sold business but also buyer's other customers was not invalid, where buyers' confidential client information constituted trade secrets, and trial court expressly found former employee used their trade secrets); Matull & Assocs. v. Cloutier (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1054-1055, 240 Cal. Rptr. 211 ; Buskuhl v. Family Life Ins. Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 514, 522, 76 Cal. Rptr. 602 ; see discussion in [3][a], below. But see Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 946-948, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 (agreement prohibiting employee, for 18-month period, from performing professional services of type he had provided while at employer, for any client on whose account he had worked during 18 months prior to his termination, and prohibiting him, for one year after termination, from "soliciting," defined by agreement as providing professional services to any client of office of employer in which he had worked, was invalid).

(n20)Footnote 9.1. See Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 ; see also discussion in [3][b], below.

(n21)Footnote 10. See Puritas Laundry Co. v. Green (1911) 15 Cal. App. 654, 660, 115 P. 660 ; see also discussion in [3][e], below.

(n22)Footnote 11. See Alliant Ins. Services v. Gaddy (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1292, 1300-1306, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 259 (on sale of insurance agency and employment of seller, noncompetition covenant expressly defining restricted territory as 58 counties in State of California was not invalid as an illegal restraint on trade because geographic scope exceeded territory where sold agency did business, where there was evidence sold agency carried business in all 58 counties of California by procuring products from insurance companies located throughout 58 counties of California).

(n23)Footnote 11.1. Kolani v. Gluska (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 402, 407-408, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257 (refusing to rewrite broad covenant not to compete into narrower bar on theft of confidential information, despite agreement's savings clause authorizing court to revise covenant if it were "unfair" or "commercially unreasonable"); see Thompson v. Impaxx, Inc. (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1431, 7 Cal. Rptr. 3d 427 (refusing to narrowly construe covenant not to solicit employer's customers within one year of termination, because employee was presented with contract as written and for purposes of motion for judgment on pleadings was fired for refusing to sign it as written); D'Sa v. Playhut, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 927, 934-935, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 495 (refusing to narrowly construe broad covenant not to compete for one year to be protection of defendant's property, trade secrets and other proprietary information).

(n24)Footnote 12. See Morris v. Harris (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 476, 478, 274 P.2d 22 .

(n25)Footnote 13. KGB, Inc. v. Giannoulas (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 844, 853, 164 Cal. Rptr. 571 .

(n26)Footnote 14. See § 70.03 for a discussion of unfair competition and § 70.02 for a discussion of trade secrets.

(n27)Footnote 15. See Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 853, 860-861, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 ; see also American Paper & Packaging Prods., Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1325, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 ; Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 130, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 (employer may restrain by contract only that conduct of former employee that would be subject to judicial restraint under law of unfair competition absent the contract).

(n28)Footnote 16. See Loral Corp. v. Moyes (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 268, 276, 219 Cal. Rptr. 836 ; see Aetna Bldg. Maintenance Co. v. West (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 198, 203, 246 P.2d 11 (dicta).

(n29)Footnote 17. See generally Hays, "Unfair Competition--Another Decade," 51 Cal. L. Rev. 51, 70 (1963).

(n30)Footnote 17.1. Jones v. Humanscale Corp. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 408-411, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881 (in action seeking enforcement of arbitration award involving employment agreement between New Jersey employer and California employee with covenant not to compete, arbitration provision, and choice-of-law provision requiring application of New Jersey law, trial court erred in vacating New Jersey arbitration award in favor of employer because it disagreed with arbitrator's findings on applicable law and enforceability of noncompetition clause, where agreement authorized arbitrator to determine both applicable law and enforceability of the covenant not to compete, and arbitrator's findings and decision on enforceability of covenant were not palpably erroneous under California law).

(n31)Footnote 18. See Gordon Termite Control v. Terrones (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 176, 179, 148 Cal. Rptr. 310 (rejecting employer's argument that $50 amount was for sale of accounts and not in nature of liquidated damages to enforce covenant not to compete).

(n32)Footnote 19. See Muggill v. Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 239, 242-243, 42 Cal. Rptr. 107, 398 P.2d 147 .

(n33)Footnote 19.1. See Clark v. Loren Young Tire Center Profit Sharing Trust (1987) 816 F.2d 480, 481 ; see also Lojek v. Thomas (1983) 716 F.2d 675, 678-679 ; Weinfurhter v. Source Serv. Corp. Emp. Profit-Sharing Plan and Trust (N.D. Cal. 1991) 759 F. Supp. 599, 602 . See also Campbell v. Board of Trustees, 817 F.2d 499, 502 (9th Cir. 1987) (Bus. & Prof. C. § 16600 does "not make all restrictions unenforceable." The statute "only makes illegal those restraints which preclude one from engaging in a lawful profession, trade or business." Thus a contract is valid if a promisor is "barred from pursuing only a small or limited part of the business, trade or profession. ...")

(n34)Footnote 19.2. See Clark v. Loren Young Tire Center Profit Sharing Trust (1987) 816 F.2d 480, 481 .

(n35)Footnote 19.3. See Clark v. Loren Young Tire Center Profit Sharing Trust (1987) 816 F.2d 480, 481 (decided under pre-1994 ERISA minimum vesting standards); see also 29 U.S.C. § 1053(a)(2)(A).

(n36)Footnote 19.4. See Clark v. Loren Young Tire Center Profit Sharing Trust (1987) 816 F.2d 480, 481-482 .

(n37)Footnote 20. Buskuhl v. Family Life Ins. Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 514, 522, 76 Cal. Rptr. 602 .

(n38)Footnote 21. See Buskuhl v. Family Life Ins. Co. (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 514, 522, 76 Cal. Rptr. 602 . The court noted, however, that another provision in the employment contract requiring the forfeiture of future commissions merely on the agent's becoming employed by another insurer may have been in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600. See also Weber, Lipshie & Co. v. Christian (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 645, 653-657, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 677 (upholding liquidated damages provision of covenant restricting former partners from servicing firm clients for five years).

(n39)Footnote 21.1. IBM v. Bajorek 191 F.3d 1033 (9th Cir. 1999)

(n40)Footnote 22. See Civ. Code § 3300; Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 690, 694, 321 P.2d 456 .

(n41)Footnote 23. See General Paint Corp. v. Seymour (1932) 124 Cal. App. 611, 615-616, 12 P.2d 990 .

(n42)Footnote 24. See Gordon v. Schwartz (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 213, 213-219, 305 P.2d 117 ; see also Matull & Associates v. Cloutier (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1055-1056, 240 Cal. Rptr. 211 (acknowledging that covenants not to compete can be enforced by injunction, but holding particular injunction at issue to be overbroad).

(n43)Footnote 25. See, e.g., Alliant Ins. Services v. Gaddy (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 1292, 1306-1307, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 259 ; Kolani v. Gluska (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 402, 407, 412, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257 (acknowledging that narrow contractual restraints which prohibit former employees from using confidential information have been upheld as lawful and granting appellant leave to amend to plead claims for theft of confidential information and trade secrets); Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 853, 859, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 ; Matull & Associates v. Cloutier (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1054-1055, 240 Cal. Rptr. 211 ; American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1322, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 ; State Farm Mut. etc. Ins. Co. v.

Dempster (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 418, 425, 344 P.2d 821 .

(n44)Footnote 26. American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1325, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 ; State Farm Mut. etc. Ins. Co. v. Dempster (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 418, 426, 344 P.2d 821 (agreement between employer and employee defining trade secret may not be decisive in determining if trade secret exists); see also Metro Traffic Control, Inc. v. Shadow Traffic Network (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 853, 860-863, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 573 (agreement not to work for competitors for one year after termination of employment was unenforceable against former employees because plaintiff former employer had no trade secret that would be protected by enforcement of agreement).

(n45)Footnote 27. Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 130, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 ; but see American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 630-631, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92 (existence of agreement as factor in establishing existence of trade secret under definition in Civ. Code § 3426.1(d) (UTSA)).

(n46)Footnote 28. Loral Corp. v. Moyes (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 268, 276, 219 Cal. Rptr. 836 (dicta).

(n47)Footnote 28.1. See ITT Telecom Prods. Corp. v. Dooley (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 307, 262 Cal. Rptr. 773 .

(n48)Footnote 29. See American Paper & Packaging Prods., Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1325, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 , discussed in [2][b], above.

(n49)Footnote 29.1. Kolani v. Gluska (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 402, 407-408, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 257 (refusing to rewrite broad covenant not to compete into narrower bar on theft of confidential information, despite agreement's savings clause, authorizing court to revise covenant if it were "unfair" or "commercially unreasonable"); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600; Bus. & Prof. Code § 16601, 16602 (exceptions); See also § 70.07[2].

(n50)Footnote 30. Loral Corp. v. Moyes (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 268, 274-280, 219 Cal. Rptr. 836 .

(n51)Footnote 31. Loral Corp. v. Moyes (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 268, 274, 219 Cal. Rptr. 836 .

(n52)Footnote 32. Loral Corp. v. Moyes (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 268, 279, 219 Cal. Rptr. 836 .

(n53)Footnote 33. See Puritas Laundry Co. v. Green (1911) 15 Cal. App. 654, 660, 115 P. 660 ; see also discussion in § 70.04[1].

115 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART A. OVERVIEW OF GOVERNING LAW

4-70 California Employment Law §§ 70.08 through 70.09

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 70.08[Reserved]

116 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART B. LIMITATIONS ON SOLICITATION OF FORMER EMPLOYER'S CUSTOMERS OR EMPLOYEES

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.10

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.10 Introduction

Public policy supports the right of an individual to the unhampered pursuit of the livelihood of his or her choice.ⁿ¹ Thus, as a general rule, a former employee has the right to engage in a competitive business for himself or herself and may enter into competition with his or her former employer, even for the business of those who were the customers of the former employer, provided that such competition is fairly conducted.ⁿ² It is often stated that the law will not require employees who change employment to "wipe clean the slates of their memories."ⁿ³ The mere fact that an employer has expended sums in building a clientele by cultivating a demand for a product does not give the employer a monopoly on the sale of the product to those customers.ⁿ⁴

However, as discussed in the remainder of this part, the law does impose significant limits on the solicitation of the customers or employees of an employer by an employee or a former employee. If an employer's "customer list" is deemed a trade secret, an employee may be subject to an action for misappropriation of a trade secret if the employee solicits the business of those customers.ⁿ⁵ If an employer has practices related to the solicitation of employees which are deemed trade secrets, a former employee may be liable for misappropriation of a trade secret.^{n5.1} In addition, a former employee who solicits the business of the customers of his or her former employer may be subject to an action for unfair competition.ⁿ⁶ An employee who solicits an employer's customers prior to termination of employment may be subject to an action for breach of the duty of loyalty, as well as for misappropriation of a trade secret and unfair competition.ⁿ⁷ Finally, if an employment contract contains a valid covenant not to compete, the employee may be subject to a cause of action for breach of contract if the employee competes with the employer for the business of its customers in violation of the contract.ⁿ⁸

To a large extent, the law regarding unfair solicitation of an employer's customers under a theory of unfair competition overlaps with the law of trade secrets. The first California case to grant a remedy for such activity was based on the rationale that equity will protect an employer against "unwarranted disclosure of trade secrets and confidential communications."ⁿ⁹ Prior to the advent of the UTSA, which became effective in 1985, cases often treated the issue of solicitation of customers by a former employee without clearly indicating whether the cause of action was for trade secret misappropriation or unfair competition. In fact, this issue was of little practical importance because both causes of action sounded in tort, required basically the same showing, and the remedies were the same regardless of the theory used to impose liability. However, under the UTSA special rules now apply to actions for trade secret misappropriation so that the determination of the theory of recovery may have important consequences on the litigation. For example, punitive damages are more restricted in trade secret misappropriation actions than they are in those for unfair competition actions.ⁿ¹⁰

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 285-286, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Continental Car-Na-Var Corp. v. Moseley (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 104, 110, 148 P.2d 9 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See, e.g., Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 129, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Avocado Sales Co. v. Wyse (1932) 122 Cal. App. 627, 634, 10 P.2d 485 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussion in § 70.11[1].

(n6)Footnote 5.1. See discussion in § 70.11[1].

(n7)Footnote 6. See discussion in § 70.11[2].

(n8)Footnote 7. See discussion in § 70.11[4].

(n9)Footnote 8. See discussion in § 70.11[3].

(n10)Footnote 9. See Empire Steam Laundry v. Lozier (1913) 165 Cal. 95, 99, 130 P. 1180 .

(n11)Footnote 10. Compare Civ. Code § 3426.3(c) with Civ. Code § 3294; see discussion in § 70.02[3][d].

117 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART B. LIMITATIONS ON SOLICITATION OF FORMER EMPLOYER'S CUSTOMERS OR EMPLOYEES

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.11

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.11 Theories of Liability

[1] Misappropriation of Trade Secrets

[a] Availability of Cause of Action

A former employee may not use the trade secrets of the employer to solicit the customers of the former employer.ⁿ¹ If a list of customers constitutes a trade secret, a cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret under the UTSAⁿ² will lie for the use of the trade secret to solicit customers of the employer.ⁿ³

For a discussion of misappropriation of a trade secret generally, see § 70.02.

[b] Customer Lists as Trade Secrets

[i] Generally

The term "customer list," as used in the cases and legal articles concerning trade secrets and unfair competition is a term of art that has an expansive meaning. In addition to written lists, the term applies to "lists" that are unwritten and exist only in the memory of the employee.ⁿ⁴ In addition, the so-called "customer list" cases include cases in which there was nothing secret about the list of customers, but the employee had other confidential information about the customers.ⁿ⁵ Similarly, a "preferred customer" list may be deemed a trade secret.ⁿ⁶

A customer list may be a trade secret if it meets the definition of the UTSA.ⁿ⁷ Although the UTSA does not mention customer lists in its definition of a trade secret, the definition is inclusive, not exclusive, and customer lists can be protectable trade secrets under the UTSA.ⁿ⁸

Cases analyzing the UTSA in the context of a customer list have defined a trade secret as (1) information (2) that is valuable because it is unknown to others and (3) that the owner has attempted to keep secret.ⁿ⁹

The "value" element requires the information to have value to other businesses that are unaware of the information and that could put that information, if known, to valuable use.ⁿ¹⁰ To illustrate, suppose the hypothetical widget industry consists of five sellers and there are 1,000,000 businesses engaged in industries that have been known to use widgets in their operations, but there is no way for the sellers to know for sure which of those 1,000,000 use widgets and which do not. Seller A's customer list of 500 would therefore have value to its competitors because it would allow them to distinguish the proven customers from those that are only potential customers and thus allow them to focus their sales efforts. However, if each of Seller A's competitors already knows that the businesses on A's customer list are proven widget consumers (even though they do not know that those businesses buy their widgets from A), A's customer list has no independent value because the identities of its customers are already known to its competitors. In the first situation, A's customer list would be a protectable trade secret, but in the second it would not.ⁿ¹¹

A case that fits within the first hypothetical is American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks,ⁿ¹² which involved a customer list of a company selling credit insurance. Credit insurance is a product that protects entities selling receivables against defaults. Of the potential market for credit insurance at the time of the case, when credit insurance was new and there was resistance to it, only 6.5 percent of the projected customer base had purchased the product. Therefore, knowledge of the customer list would benefit a competitor.ⁿ¹³ In American Credit, the uniqueness of the product and customer resistance to it gave value to the customer list.ⁿ¹⁴

Another example of a product market in which a customer has value to competitors is the market for temporary employees. Such a list is potentially protectable as a trade secret because a competitor who did not possess the list would have to expend considerable effort to determine which potential purchasers are actual purchasers.ⁿ¹⁵

The secrecy element can be satisfied even if the employee is not required to sign an agreement regarding confidentiality, as in a situation in which the information is not divulged to anyone outside the business, is only divulged to employees when necessary for them to effectively carry out their functions, and the employees are told the information is confidential.ⁿ¹⁶

Before enactment of the UTSA, case law had adopted a five-prong test for determining whether a customer list was a trade secret. This test required that (1) the information not be readily available to others; (2) the former employee have solicited the customers on the list with intent to injure his or her former employer; (3) the solicitations be directed at preferred customers whose business was particularly profitable and whose identities were not generally known to the public; (4) the business or industry involved be one in which a customer ordinarily will patronize only one concern; and (5) the established business relationship between the customer and the former employer normally would continue unless interfered with.ⁿ¹⁷ Under the UTSA, the "intent to injure" element has been dropped as a requirement for stating a cause of action for misappropriation of a customer list as a trade secret.ⁿ¹⁸ However, the "value" element, whether expressed as a single criteria or as several indicia, still turns on an analysis of the nature of the business and of the customer relationships within that industry as requiring the development of a personal, exclusive, and continuing relationship so that the customer list, or the information contained in it, could not be easily duplicated or developed. For example, even confidential information is not likely to transform a list into a trade secret when a business is a type in which patronage depends on superiority of product or service rather than personal relationships with the customer.ⁿ¹⁹ On the other hand, if the employer provides a relatively unusual service, the list may have protectable economic value. In Morlife, Inc. v. Perry,^{n19.1} plaintiff specialized in commercial roof repair and maintenance, as distinguished from replacement roofing. Noting that Morlife had taken years to develop a list which contained names, addresses, contact persons, pricing information and knowledge about particular customer needs, the court found the list to have independent economic value.^{n19.2}

In American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan,ⁿ²⁰ plaintiff manufactured paper and packaging products and hired salespersons, including the defendants, to sell their products to manufacturers in need of shipping supplies. In holding that a list of such manufacturers did not constitute a trade secret, the court relied primarily on the fact that while the list of such manufacturers was not known to the general public, it was certainly known or readily ascertainable to other persons in the shipping business. In this regard, the court noted that the compilation of such a list is neither sophisticated nor difficult nor time consuming.ⁿ²¹ In addition, the shipping business was very competitive and manufacturers (buyers) often dealt with more than one packaging supplier at a time. Long term relationships between manufacturers and shipping companies depended as much on price, speed, and quality of product as on previous relationships.ⁿ²² The court did suggest, however, that the result would perhaps have been different if the plaintiff had shown that the defendants used confidential information regarding the special packaging requirements of its customers or if the plaintiff had shown that the defendants had interrupted what otherwise would have been an exclusive business relationship between the employer and its customers.ⁿ²³ⁿ²⁴

In another case, a court of appeal has held that the names of customers of an accounting firm that were known by the employees because they had provided services for those customers did not constitute a trade secret. The court noted in this case that the names of the employer's other customers, that is, those that were not personally known to the employees, may have been protected trade secrets.ⁿ²⁵

[ii] Certain Customer Lists Deemed Trade Secret by Statute

Certain customer lists are deemed to constitute trade secrets by statute. Business and Professions Code Section 16606 provides that the customer list, including the names, addresses, and identities of customers of a telephone answering service company, constitutes a trade secret.

In addition, Business and Professions Code Section 16607(a) provides that the customer list, including the names, addresses, and identities of all employer customers who have listed job orders with an employment agency within a period of 180 days prior to the separation of an employee from the agency and including the names, addresses, and identities of all applicant customers of the employment agency, constitutes a trade secret. However, this provision contains an exception providing that no liability will attach to and no cause of action may arise from the use of a customer list of an employment agency by a former employee who enters into business as an employment agency more than one year immediately following termination of his or her employment.ⁿ²⁶

When an injunction is premised not only on misappropriation of a staffing agency's customer lists, but also on misappropriation of numerous other trade secret items, there is no time limitation on the duration of injunctive relief as to use of the other trade secret information.^{n26.1}

[c] Solicitation of Employees

Mere solicitation of an employee (who is under no contract of employment) to leave and associate with a competing firm is not illegal. However, if either the defecting employee or the competitor is guilty of some concomitant, unconscionable conduct, the injured former employer has a cause of action to recover for the detriment thereby suffered. Misappropriation of trade secrets can serve as the concomitant of the solicitation.^{n26.2} For example, in ReadyLink Healthcare v. Cotton,^{n26.3} a healthcare staffing company sued a former employee who had stolen database information about nurses the former employer used as well as customer information, and then began soliciting the former employer's employees, nurses and customers. There was overwhelming evidence that in soliciting the employees, nurses, and healthcare provider customers, the former employee used trade secret information within the meaning of the UTSA, both in obtaining employment with a competitor and in his intention to start his own nurse staffing business in competition with the former employer, using the former employer's proprietary and confidential information (such as databases containing lists of the former employer's nurses, employees, and healthcare facility customers, compilations of compensation, employment preferences, contact information, nurse applications and tests, and the former employer's unique per diem program). The declarations supporting the former employer's motion for a preliminary injunction sufficiently established that the trade secret information had potential economic value, because the former employer went to great expense to compile the data and the information would enable a competitor to recruit away from the former employer nurses and employees under contract with the former employer. The former employer took reasonable steps to insure the secrecy of its trade secret information by requesting that employees sign nondisclosure agreements, which the former employee had signed. Further, by not appealing the subdivision of the preliminary injunction that enjoined the use or disclosure of the former employer's trade secret information, the former employee in effect conceded that those items were enjoined trade secrets.

[2] Unfair Competition

[a] Availability of Cause of Action

An action for unfair competition will lie against a former employee who has used a trade secret or confidential information of the former employer to solicit the customers of the former employer.ⁿ²⁷ In addition, in certain instances, an action for unfair competition may also be available when a former employee has solicited the customers of a former employer even though no confidential information is involved.ⁿ²⁸

[b] Acts Constituting Prohibited Solicitation

The law of unfair competition makes a distinction between receiving the business of a customer and the solicitation of that business. Thus, while a former employee may, in certain circumstances, be prohibited from soliciting his or her former employer's customers, the employee may not be prohibited from receiving the business of those customers in the absence of solicitation. Advertisements that are aimed at the general public do not constitute solicitation.ⁿ²⁹ Similarly, the act of merely notifying an employer's customers of a change of employment, and nothing more, or discussing business with them at their invitation does not, as a general rule, constitute prohibited solicitation by the former employee.ⁿ³⁰ Thus, in one case in which the employees of an accounting firm wrote letters to customers with whom they had a working relationship in which they informed the customers that they were forming a new accounting firm, the court held that no solicitation had occurred.ⁿ³¹ On the other hand, solicitation was found in another case in which the defendant told his former employer's customers that he was no longer working for his former employer and would appreciate their business.ⁿ³² Another case held that an "announcement" of new employment that informs a former employer's customers of the interesting competitive alternatives available from the employee's new employer and invites inquiries goes beyond announcing new employment and constitutes solicitation.^{n32.1}

[c] Protected Information

To the extent that customer lists or other customer information constitute a trade secret of the employer, a former employee who uses such information to solicit the customers of the employer, or to the disadvantage of the employer in any way, may be liable under a theory of either misappropriation of a trade secretⁿ³³ or unfair competition.ⁿ³⁴ It is not clear, however, if a cause of action for unfair competition exists when a former employee has used confidential information not amounting to a trade secret, as defined by the UTSA, to solicit the business of customers of his or her former employer. Language in some cases seems to suggest that in the absence of a trade secret, an action for unfair competition will not lie.ⁿ³⁵ However, other cases have upheld judgments against former employees for solicitation based on confidential information on a theory of unfair competition, without expressly finding that the information used constituted a trade secret.ⁿ³⁶ In Rigging Internat. Maintenance Co. v. Gwin,ⁿ³⁷ the court stated: "A former employee's use of confidential information obtained from his former employer to compete with his old employer and to solicit the business of his former employer's customers, is regarded as unfair competition." The court went on to state that a former employee who goes into competition with his or her old employer is judged by two separate standards: (1) the employee may not use confidential information to solicit the former employer's customers; and (2) the employee is judged as any other competitor in determining whether he or she has competed fairly. In regard to the second standard, the court noted that in order for the acts of a business rival to be denounced as unfair, the acts must be of extraordinary character.ⁿ³⁸

An action for unfair competition will not normally lie against a former employee who has not used any confidential information of the former employer.ⁿ³⁹ However, some older cases appear to recognize an exception to this rule. If a business is such that it involves little competition in regard to price or quality of the goods or services involved, but rather depends on the personal relationship between the company's representative and the customer so that the business relationship will normally continue unless it is interfered with, some cases have upheld an action for unfair competition even though there did not appear to be any use of confidential information involved. This situation usually occurs in the so called "route cases" in which a business caters to its customers by sending a salesperson or delivery person along a route either to solicit sales and deliver a product to the customer or to perform a service at the home or business residence of the customer. The typical route cases have involved such businesses as home milk deliveryⁿ⁴⁰ and laundry services.ⁿ⁴¹ In George v. Burdusis, ⁿ⁴² a typical route case, the court recognized, in upholding an action for unfair competition, that it is not merely the identity of the customers but also the "friendly contact" with them that is important to solicitors.

[3] Breach of Contract

[a] Availability of Cause of Action

Generally speaking, an employee is free, within the limits set forth by the laws of unfair competition and trade secrets,ⁿ⁴³ to solicit the customers of a former employer. Covenants that attempt to limit the right of a former employee to deal freely with persons who were the customers of the employee's former employer are subject to the charge that they unlawfully restrain trade in violation of Business and Professions Code Section 16600.ⁿ⁴⁴ However, reasonable restraints of trade may be permitted when necessary to protect the legitimate interests of an employer. For example, information concerning customers that an employer compiled at great expense and that represents a valuable business asset is protected by the law of unfair competition.ⁿ⁴⁵ Clearly, if a list of customers is considered a trade secret,ⁿ⁴⁶ an employment contract may provide for protection of the trade secret by an antisolicitation clause.ⁿ⁴⁷

Business & Professions Code section 16600 bars a court from specifically enforcing, by way of injunctive relief, a contractual clause purporting to ban a former employee from soliciting former customers to transfer their business away from the former employer to the employee's new business. However, a court may enjoin tortious conduct as violative of either the Uniform Trade Secrets Act^{n47.1} or the unfair competition law, by banning the former employee from using trade secret information to identify existing customers, to facilitate the solicitation of those customers, or to otherwise unfairly compete with the former employer.^{n47.2} The conduct is enjoined not because it falls within a judicially created "exception" to the ban in Business & Professions § 16600 on contractual nonsolicitation clauses, but because it is wrongful independent of any contractual undertaking.^{n47.3} In The Retirement Group v. Galante, ^{n47.4} the injunctive provisions of an agreement prohibiting former independent contractors from directly or indirectly soliciting any current customers violated the holding of the California Supreme Court in Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP, ^{n47.5} and could not rationally be upheld as an injunction limited in scope to the only legitimate protection, i.e., enjoining the misappropriation of trade secrets, for which injunctive relief could be issued. The injunctive provisions purported to bar the former independent contractors from engaging in conduct substantively indistinguishable from the contractually proscribed conduct that the California Supreme Court in Edwards had concluded was violative of the protections of § 16600. Further, the provisions could not be upheld as an injunction designed to have the limited effect of protecting against the misappropriation of trade secrets, because other injunctive provisions of the agreement already granted the full range of trade secret protections to which the organization was entitled.

In Gordon v. Wasserman, ⁿ⁴⁸ the court of appeal upheld a covenant in which the employee, a door-to-door salesperson of household goods, promised not to solicit the employer's customers for one year after termination of employment and not to divulge the names of the customers to any other person or firm for one year. The holding was based in part on the fact that the employer's list of customers was deemed "confidential." In a subsequent case brought by the same employer, and involving virtually the same contractual language, the California Supreme Court upheld the validity of the antisolicitation provision. The Court relied on the fact that the employer's list of preferred customers was a real asset to its business and necessary to its survival and thus constituted a trade secret.ⁿ⁴⁹

In State Farm Mut. etc. Ins. Co. v. Dempster, ⁿ⁵⁰ the court of appeal upheld the enforcement of a provision under which the employee agreed not to solicit the employer's customers for one year following termination, but only after construing the provision in a limited manner. In this case, the employees, who were insurance agents, had promised not to interfere with existing policyholders of the insurer for one year after termination of employment. The trial court had found that this provision could only be enforced to the extent that it applied to policy holders whom the agents had serviced. The court of appeal agreed, holding that the trial court properly limited enforcement of the contract to the interests that equity protects.ⁿ⁵¹

While "antisolicitation" clauses may be upheld as the Gordon and State Farm cases illustrate, if the clause attempts to prohibit solicitation for too long a period of time, it may be found invalid, or limited to a shorter period of time under the reasoning of State Farm. The longer the period of restraint, the less likely it is that the court will deem the restraint reasonable. In Morris v. Harris,ⁿ⁵² the court invalidated a provision in a contract that prohibited the employee from soliciting the employer's clients or accepting work from those clients without solicitation for a period of ten years. Although the duration of the term may have been a factor in the court's decision, it appears that the court invalidated the provision in large part because it prohibited the employee from accepting employment from the former employer's customers even without solicitation by the former employee.ⁿ⁵³

For a general discussion of covenants not to compete, see § 70.07.

[b] FORM--Contract Provision Prohibiting Solicitation of Employer's Customers

[i] Comment

The form set forth in [ii], below, may be inserted in an employment contract to provide that the employee is prohibited from soliciting business from the employer's customers for a limited period after termination of employment. It is for use primarily in employment contracts for sales or other personnel who have access to information concerning the employer's customers.

This form contains a blank for insertion of the length of the period that the employee is to refrain from soliciting the employer's customers. This period should not be any longer than is reasonably required to protect the employer's interests. A one-year restraint has been upheld by the courts in several instances.ⁿ⁵⁴

[ii] Form Soliciting Customers After Termination of Employment

1. Employee acknowledges and agrees that the names and addresses of Employer's customers and all other confidential information relating to those customers, including their buying habits and special needs, are provided in confidence and constitute trade secrets of Employer and that the sale or unauthorized use or disclosure of any of Employer's trade secrets obtained by Employee during his/her employment with Employer constitutes unfair competition. Employee promises and agrees not to engage in any unfair competition with Employer.

2. For a period of _____ [specify, e.g., one year] immediately following the termination of his/her employment with Employer, Employee shall not directly or indirectly make known to any person, firm, or corporation the names or addresses of any of the customers of Employer or any other information pertaining to them, or call on, solicit, take away, or attempt to call on, solicit, or take away any of the customers of Employer on whom Employee called or with whom Employee became acquainted during his/her employment with Employer, either for himself/herself or for any other person, firm, or corporation.

[4] Other Theories of Liability

Although no reported case has expressly discussed the point, a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty should logically be available in situations in which an employee attempts to solicit the customers of his or her employer while still employed.ⁿ⁵⁵ A cause of action for negligent or intentional interference with contract or interference with prospective economic advantage may also be available in such situations.ⁿ⁵⁶

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview Trade Secrets Law Misappropriation Actions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 638, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92 ; see also Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 ; George v. Burdusis (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 153, 160, 130 P.2d 399 . For a discussion of what constitutes impermissible solicitation, see [2][b], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Civ. Code § 3426 et seq., discussed in § 70.02.

(n3)Footnote 3. See American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1324, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See George v. Burdusis (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 153, 160, 130 P.2d 399 ; Reid v. Mass Co., Inc. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 293, 302, 318 P.2d 54 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See, e.g., Scavengers Protective Asso. v. Serv-U-Garbage Co. (1933) 218 Cal. 568, 572-573, 24 P.2d 489 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 690, 694, 321 P.2d 456 .

(n7)Footnote 7. ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 18, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 ; Courtesy Temporary Service, Inc. v. Camacho (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1278, 1287-1291, 272 Cal. Rptr. 352 ; American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 630-631, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92 ; see American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1324, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 (but concluding that list in that case was not trade secret). For discussion of what constitutes trade secret generally, see § 70.02[2][b].

(n8)Footnote 8. ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 18, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 ; American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1323-1324, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See, e.g., MAI Sys. Corp. v. Peak Computer (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 511, 521 (computer company's confidential customer database was a trade secret under California UTSA); ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 18, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 ; American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 630, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92 ; see also Courtesy Temporary Service, Inc. v. Camacho (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1278, 1287-1291, 272 Cal. Rptr. 352 ; American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 630, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92 (describing test as consisting only of second and third elements).

(n10)Footnote 10. ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 .

(n11)Footnote 11. ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 19, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 .

(n12)Footnote 12. American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92

(n13)Footnote 13. See American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 630-631, 638, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92

(n14)Footnote 14. American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 630-631, 638, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See Courtesy Temporary Service, Inc. v. Camacho (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1278, 1282, 272 Cal. Rptr. 352 . See also ReadyLink Healthcare v. Cotton (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 720 (declarations supporting former employer=s motion for preliminary injunction sufficiently established that trade secret information had potential economic value because former employer went to great expense to compile data, and information would enable competitor to recruit away from former employer nurses and employees under contract with former employer).

(n16)Footnote 16. Courtesy Temporary Service, Inc. v. Camacho (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1278, 1288, 272 Cal. Rptr. 352 ; see also American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 631, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92 (plaintiff's standard confidentiality agreement respected its client list, expiration dates of customer contracts, lists of business leads, history of customer relationships, and related client information, although defendant claimed never to have signed it).

(n17)Footnote 17. Aetna Bldg. Maintenance Co. v. West (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 198, 204-205, 246 P.2d 11 .

(n18)Footnote 18. Compare ABBA Rubber Co. v. Seaquist (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1, 18-19, 286 Cal. Rptr. 518 with Aetna Bldg. Maintenance Co. v. West (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 198, 204-205, 246 P.2d 11 .

(n19)Footnote 19. Aetna Bldg. Maintenance Co. v. West (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 198, 246 P.2d 11 (janitorial service); see Avocado Sales Co. v. Wyse (1932) 122 Cal. App. 627, 634, 10 P.2d 485 .

(n20)Footnote 19.1. Morlife, Inc. v. Perry (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1514, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 731 .

(n21)Footnote 19.2. Morlife, Inc. v. Perry (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1514, 1521, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 731 .

(n22)Footnote 20. American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 .

(n23)Footnote 21. American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1326, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 .

(n24)Footnote 22. American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1325-1326, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 .

(n25)Footnote 23. American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1326, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 ; see George v. Burdusis (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 153, 159-160, 130 P.2d 399 ; Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 465, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 (pre-UTSA cases so holding).

(n26)Footnote 24. [Reserved]

(n27)Footnote 25. Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128-129, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 . Although this case was decided after the effective date of the UTSA, it makes no reference to the Act and was apparently decided under prior law.

(n28)Footnote 26. Bus. & Prof. Code § 16607(b).

(n29)Footnote 26.1. ReadyLink Healthcare v. Cotton (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1021-1022, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 720 (Bus. & Prof. Code § 16607 did not bar injunction prohibiting former employee of healthcare staffing company from soliciting company's employees, nurses and customers, because injunction was premised not only on misappropriation of customer lists, but also on misappropriation of numerous other trade secret items); John F. Matull & Associates, Inc. v. Cloutier (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 240 Cal. Rptr. 211 (covenant not to compete for five years after employee and officer left firm did not violate Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600 to extent it sought to prevent use of firm's confidential information to compete and solicit firm's labor-relations clients).

(n30)Footnote 26.2. ReadyLink Healthcare v. Cotton (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1019, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 720 , quoting Hollingsworth Solderless Terminal Co. v. Turley (1980) 622 F.2d 1324, 1337-1338 .

(n31)Footnote 26.3. ReadyLink Healthcare v. Cotton (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1006, 1017-1021, 1019, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 720 .

(n32)Footnote 27. See, e.g., Courtesy Temporary Service, Inc. v. Camacho (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 1278, 1291-1292, 272 Cal. Rptr. 352 ; see also Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 464-465, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 . For a discussion of what types of information will support a cause of action for unfair competition, see [c], below.

(n33)Footnote 28. See discussion in [c], below.

(n34)Footnote 29. See Theodore v. Williams (1919) 44 Cal. App. 34, 37-39, 185 P. 1014 .

(n35)Footnote 30. See Hilb, Rogal & Hamilton Ins. Services v. Robb (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 1812, 1821-1822, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 887 (even assuming former employer's client list and other client information were trade secrets, former employee was not precluded from merely announcing his change of employment to former clients and then using information provided by them to move their accounts to his new employer); MAI Sys. Corp. v. Peak Computer (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 511, 521 (applying California law; former employee may announce new employment even to trade secret customers of former employer without violating UTSA, but solicitation of such customers constitutes misappropriation; merely informing former employer's customers of change of employment, without more, is not solicitation). See also Aetna Bldg. Maintenance Co. v. West (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 198, 204, 246 P.2d 11 ; Matull & Associates v. Cloutier (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1049, 1056, 240 Cal. Rptr. 211 ; Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 127-128, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 .

(n36)Footnote 31. See Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 127-130, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 . The court in Moss, Adams & Co. noted that the fact that no solicitation took place does not absolve an employee of civil liability if the employee used a trade secret of the employer to announce the change of employment. However, the court held that in the case at bar, the employees' use of the employer's rolodex file to notify the customers did not constitute the use of a trade secret of the employer because (1) the employees had only notified those customers with whom they had a working relationship and had not attempted to contact any other customers of employer, and (2) the addresses of the customers obtained from the rolodex were easily obtainable from normal resources such as a telephone book. For a discussion of customer information as a trade secret, see [1][b], above.

(n37)Footnote 32. George v. Burdusis (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 153, 162, 130 P.2d 399 .

(n38)Footnote 32.1. See American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Sacks (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 622, 636-637, 262 Cal. Rptr. 92 ; see also MAI Sys. Corp. v. Peak Computer (9th Cir. 1993) 991 F.2d 511, 521-522 (applying California law; former employee's use of former employer's database to personally contact former employer's customers and try to induce them to switch over to his new employer constituted improper solicitation).

(n39)Footnote 33. See, e.g., American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1324, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 .

(n40)Footnote 34. See, e.g., Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 464-465, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 .

- (n41)Footnote 35. See Moss, Adams & Co. v. Shilling (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 124, 128-130, 224 Cal. Rptr. 456 .
- (n42)Footnote 36. See, e.g., Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 464, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 ; Greenly v. Cooper (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 382, 392, 143 Cal. Rptr. 514 .
- (n43)Footnote 37. Rigging Internat. Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 606, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 .
- (n44)Footnote 38. Rigging Internat. Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 607-608, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 .
- (n45)Footnote 39. See Rigging Internat. Maintenance Co. v. Gwin (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 594, 607, 180 Cal. Rptr. 451 .
- (n46)Footnote 40. See Dairy Dale Co. v. Azevedo (1931) 211 Cal. 344, 345, 295 P. 10 .
- (n47)Footnote 41. See George v. Burdusis (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 153, 155, 130 P.2d 399 .
- (n48)Footnote 42. George v. Burdusis (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 153, 160, 130 P.2d 399 .
- (n49)Footnote 43. See discussions in [1] and [2], above.
- (n50)Footnote 44. See discussion in § 70.07[1].
- (n51)Footnote 45. Klamath-Orleans Lumber, Inc. v. Miller (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 458, 464, 151 Cal. Rptr. 118 .
- (n52)Footnote 46. See, e.g., American Paper & Packaging Products, Inc. v. Kirgan (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1318, 1324, 228 Cal. Rptr. 713 (customer list as trade secret under UTSA); see discussion in [1][b], above.
- (n53)Footnote 47. State Farm Mut. etc. Ins. Co. v. Dempster (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 418, 425-427, 344 P.2d 821 .
- (n54)Footnote 47.1. Civ. Code § 3426 et seq. For discussion of solicitation as a violation of the UTSA, see [1], above. For discussion of the UTSA generally, see § 70.02.
- (n55)Footnote 47.2. For discussion of solicitation as unfair competition, see [2], above. For discussion of unfair competition generally, see § 70.03.
- (n56)Footnote 47.3. The Retirement Group v. Galante (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1226, 1238, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 585 .
- (n57)Footnote 47.4. The Retirement Group v. Galante (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 1226, 1238-1241, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 585 .
- (n58)Footnote 47.5. Edwards v. Arthur Andersen LLP (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 937, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 282, 189 P.3d 285 . See discussion at § 70.07[1].
- (n59)Footnote 48. Gordon v. Wasserman (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 328, 330, 314 P.2d 759 .
- (n60)Footnote 49. See Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 690, 694, 321 P.2d 456 .
- (n61)Footnote 50. State Farm Mut. etc. Ins. Co. v. Dempster (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 418, 425, 344 P.2d 821 .
- (n62)Footnote 51. State Farm Mut. etc. Ins. Co. v. Dempster (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 418, 425, 344 P.2d 821 .

(n63)Footnote 52. Morris v. Harris (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 476, 478, 274 P.2d 22 .

(n64)Footnote 53. See Morris v. Harris (1954) 127 Cal. App. 2d 476, 478, 274 P.2d 22 ; see also discussion in [2][b], above.

(n65)Footnote 54. See Gordon v. Landau (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 690, 321 P.2d 456 ; Gordon v. Wasserman (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 328, 329-330, 314 P.2d 759 ; State Farm Mut. etc. Ins. Co. v. Dempster (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 418, 425-427, 344 P.2d 821 .

(n66)Footnote 55. For discussion of breach of fiduciary duty, see § 70.04.

(n67)Footnote 56. For a discussion of interference with contract or with prospective economic advantage, see § 70.06.

118 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART B. LIMITATIONS ON SOLICITATION OF FORMER EMPLOYER'S CUSTOMERS OR EMPLOYEES

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.12

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.12 FORM--Complaint by Employer Against Former Employee for Damages and Injunctive Relief for Soliciting Employer's Customers--Unfair Competition, Misappropriation of Trade Secret, and Related Causes of Action

[1] Comment

[a] Use of Form

The form set forth in [2], below, is a complaint for use by an employer in an action against a former employee (and other defendants, such as the former employee's new employer) based on the former employee's wrongful solicitation of the employer's customers after termination of employment.

The complaint includes causes of action for unfair competition,ⁿ¹ misappropriation of a trade secret,ⁿ² and breach of contract.ⁿ³ The cause of action for breach of contract should, of course, only be included if the employer and employee had entered into an express employment agreement containing a valid covenant not to compete. The first two causes of action include a claim for temporary and permanent injunctive relief. In appropriate cases, counsel may also wish to add a cause of action for intentional or negligent interference with contract or with prospective economic advantage.ⁿ⁴ Counsel may also wish to include a cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty if the former employee improperly solicited the employer's clients for a competing business prior to termination of employment.ⁿ⁵

[b] Allegations

The first cause of action for unfair competition alleges an employment relationship between the plaintiff and defendant-employee (Paragraph 5), the confidential nature of the plaintiff's customer list and other customer information given to the defendant (Paragraph 6), termination of the employment relationship and defendant's entrance into competition with his or her former employer (Paragraph 7), and the acts of wrongful solicitation by the defendant employee (Paragraph 8). The first cause of action also alleges compensatory damages (Paragraph 9) and contains an optional allegation for punitive damages (Paragraph 10).ⁿ⁶ As a basis for injunctive relief, it alleges irreparable injury necessary to support a temporary restraining order (Paragraph 11),ⁿ⁷ and an inadequate remedy at law necessary to support a permanent injunction (Paragraph 12).n8

The second cause of action for misappropriation of a trade secret incorporates by reference the general provisions of the first cause of action (Paragraph 13) and alleges (1) the existence and possession by plaintiff of a trade secret (Paragraph 14);n9 (2) the economic value of the trade secret derived from its not being known to the public or to competitors (Paragraph 15);n10 (3) the measures taken by plaintiff to insure its secrecy (Paragraph 16);n11 (4) acts of misappropriation by the defendants (Paragraph 17);n12 (5) resulting actual damages and unjust enrichment, or, in the alternative, entitlement to a royalty (Paragraphs 18 and 19);n13 (6) an optional allegation to support a claim for punitive damages, attorney's fees and costs (Paragraph 20)n14 and (7) allegations in support of a claim for temporary and permanent injunctive relief (Paragraphs 21 and 22).n15

The third cause of action for breach of contract incorporates by reference the general provisions of the first cause of action (Paragraph 23) and alleges (1) the existence of the contract and the performance of all conditions on plaintiff's part (Paragraphs 24 and 25); (2) breach of the covenant not to compete by the defendant (Paragraph 26); and (3) resulting damages (Paragraph 27).

As previously discussed,n16 the period of limitations for an action for unfair competition appears to be two years from the date that the cause of action arose.n17 The period of limitation for an action for misappropriation of a trade secret is three years from the date that the misappropriation is discovered or, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, should have been discovered.n18 The period of limitation for an action for breach of a written contract is four years from the date that the cause of action arose.n19

[2] Form SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES AND INJUNCT-
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	IVE RELIEF FOR UNFAIR COMPETITION, MIS-)	APPROPRIATION OF TRADE SECRET, AND
	)	BREACH OF CONTRACT
		(Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200, 17203; Civ. Code §§
		3300, 3422, 3426.2-3426.4; Code Civ. Proc. § 527)

Plaintiff alleges:

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Unfair Competition)

[1. Allege identity and capacity of plaintiff. see form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 1.]

[2. Allege identity and capacity of defendant(s) other than individuals. see form in 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 2.]

[3. Fictitious name allegations. see form in § 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 3.]

[4. Allegation of agency among defendants. see form in 70.02[5][b], Paragraph 4.]

5. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name] was employed by plaintiff as a _____ [describe employment, e.g., salesman of household goods for plaintiff's business, which consists of retail sales of household articles].

[Allege acts constituting unfair competition, including defendant-employee's misuse of confidential information, such as the following:]

6. Defendant _____ [name], as a part of his/her duties of employment was given a confidential list, which had been compiled by defendant over a substantial period of time, of customers who had patronized the plaintiff's business by purchasing their household products from plaintiff's salesperson. In addition to the names and addresses of the customers, the list contained confidential information concerning the buying habits of the listed customers. Defendant _____ [name] was told that both the list of customers and the information about those customers was confidential. The information contained in the list, including the names, addresses, and buying habits of the customers, was not otherwise readily ascertainable by others, including plaintiff's competitors, in that _____ [explain].

7. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name] terminated his/her employment with plaintiff and commenced working for defendant _____ [name], one of plaintiff's competitors in the business of door-to-door sales of household goods.

8. On or about _____ [date], using plaintiff's confidential and proprietary information obtained from the lists previously described, defendant began soliciting the plaintiff's customers for his/her new employer by urging the customers to forgo patronizing plaintiff and to instead purchase their household supplies from defendant _____ [name].

[CONTINUE]

9. As a proximate result of the defendant's acts as alleged above, plaintiff has suffered actual damages, consisting of lost profits, in the sum of $_____.

[10. Defendant(s), in engaging in the aforementioned acts, was/were guilty of malice and oppression in that _____ (allege facts indicating presence of malice and oppression, e.g., defendant(s) acted with the deliberate intent to injure plaintiff's business and improve his/her/its/their own by misrepresenting facts to plaintiff's former customers and acted in conscious disregard for plaintiff's rights). Defendant's conduct therefore warrants the assessment of punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct.]

[11. Defendant's wrongful conduct _____ (describe conduct, e.g., in soliciting plaintiff's former customers), unless and until enjoined and restrained by order of this court, will _____ (specify particular facts establishing grounds for preliminary injunctive relief, e.g., cause great and irreparable injury to plaintiff's business in that plaintiff has lost several of its most profitable customers to defendant and is continuing to lose accounts, plaintiff has been forced to lay off workers and will be forced to lay off more, and is operating at such a loss that it may be forced out of business before this action can be brought to trial).]

[12. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for the injuries currently being suffered in that _____ (specify any additional facts tending to show grounds for permanent injunctive relief, e.g., defendant(s) will continue to wrongfully solicit plaintiff's customers or accept business from those that have already been wrongfully solicited, and plaintiff would be required to maintain a multiplicity of judicial proceedings to protect its interests, and in addition, there is no reasonable basis to calculate all the monetary damage caused plaintiff by the wrongful solicitation because plaintiff depends on customer recommendations to promote plaintiff's products).]

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION

(Misappropriation of Trade Secret)

13. Plaintiff refers to Paragraphs 1-6 of the First Cause of Action of this complaint and makes them a part of this complaint by reference.

14. At all times relevant to this complaint, plaintiff possessed a trade secret, consisting of _____ [identify general nature of trade secret, e.g., a list of customers who regularly patronized plaintiff's business].

15. Plaintiff's _____ [specify trade secret, e.g., customer list] contained information that is not generally known to the public or to plaintiff's competitors, who can obtain economic value from its disclosure and use in that _____ [specify, e.g., the list was compiled based on plaintiff's years of experience in dealing with customers who purchased products from plaintiff and contained confidential information concerning the buying habits and peculiar requirements of various purchasers, which is not otherwise readily ascertainable]. As a result, the list had economic value in that _____ [specify, e.g., plaintiff was able to more effectively and efficiently serve its customers than its competitors, who did not have access to the information, thereby giving plaintiff a competitive advantage].

16. Plaintiff made reasonable efforts to insure that the _____ [specify trade secret, e.g., customer list] remained a secret, including _____ [specify measures used by plaintiff to maintain secrecy, e.g., (1) emphasizing to each employee the company's need to keep the customer list a secret, and (2) requiring, as a condition of employment, that all employees promise not to disclose any information relating to the customer list].

17. On or about _____ [date], [and continuing to the present time,] defendant(s) [and each of them,] misappropriated the above-described trade secret of plaintiff as follows: _____ [Describe act of misappropriation within definition of Civ. Code § 3426.1(b) by each defendant, e.g., On or about _____ (date), defendant _____ (name), a former sales employee of plaintiff who, while so employed, had been given a copy of plaintiff's customer list by plaintiff so that he/she could perform his/her job function, wrongfully disclosed some or all of the contents of the list to _____ (names of other defendants to whom secret was disclosed), knowing that the disclosure was a breach of his/her duty to keep the customer list a secret. Thereafter, defendants _____ (names of defendants other than former employee) used plaintiff's trade secret without the consent of plaintiff and with reason to know that their knowledge of the trade secret was derived through defendant _____ (name of former employee), who had a duty to plaintiff to maintain the secrecy of the process].

18. As a proximate result of the use by defendants of plaintiff's trade secret as alleged above, plaintiff has suffered actual damages in the sum of $ _____ in that _____ [specify nature of damages]. [As a further proximate result of the misappropriation, plaintiff is informed and believes that defendant(s) _____ (name(s)) have been unjustly enriched as a result of their misappropriation of the trade secret. The amount of this unjust enrichment cannot presently be ascertained, and plaintiff will move to amend this complaint to specify the amount when it becomes known to him/her, or on proof thereof.]

19. In the event that neither plaintiff's actual damages nor defendant's unjust enrichment are subject to proof, plaintiff is entitled to a reasonable royalty _____ [specify nature and amount of royalty, e.g., in the amount of 55 percent of the revenue received by defendant(s) _____ (name(s)) from sales of household goods made using plaintiff's customer list], pursuant to Civil Code Section 3426.3(b).

[20. The (plaintiff is informed and believes and thereon alleges that the) aforementioned acts of the defendant(s) in misappropriating plaintiff's trade secret were willful and malicious in that _____ (allege facts indicating presence of willfulness and malice, e.g., defendant(s) misappropriated plaintiff's customer list with the deliberate intent to injure plaintiff's business and improve his/her/its/their own), thereby warranting an assessment of exemplary damages, pursuant to Civil Code Section 3426.3(c), and an award of reasonable attorney's fees and costs, pursuant to Civil Code Section 3426.4.]

[21. The wrongful conduct of defendant(s) _____ (describe conduct, e.g., in misappropriating plaintiff's customer list and soliciting customers from that list), unless and until enjoined and restrained by order of this court, will _____ (specify particular facts establishing grounds for preliminary injunctive relief, e.g., cause great and irreparable injury to plaintiff's business in that plaintiff has lost several of its most profitable customers and is continuing to lose accounts and may be forced out of business before this action can be brought to trial).]

[22. Plaintiff has no adequate remedy at law for the injuries currently being suffered in that _____ (specify any additional facts tending to show grounds for permanent injunctive relief, e.g., defendant will continue to misappropriate the trade secret and solicit plaintiff's customers and plaintiff would be required to maintain a multiplicity of judicial proceedings to protect its interests).]

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION (Breach of Contract)

23. Plaintiff refers to Paragraphs 1-5 of the First Cause of Action of this complaint and makes them a part of this complaint by reference.

24. On or about _____ [date], at _____ [place], plaintiff and defendant _____ [name] entered into a written employment contract, a copy of which is attached to this complaint as Exhibit _____ and hereby made a part of this complaint. [The contract provided in part as follows: _____ (specify pertinent parts of contract, e.g., Defendant _____ (name) understood and agreed that information contained in the list of customers distributed to him/her was a trade secret, was provided in confidence for the sole purpose of facilitating his/her duties as a salesperson for plaintiff, and was not to be disclosed, in whole or part, to any person without plaintiff's express written consent. Defendant further agreed that in the event his/her employment with plaintiff was terminated, he/she would not solicit, or contact for the purpose of soliciting, any customer named in the list for the purpose of selling any product that was the same as or similar to products sold by plaintiff for a period of one year following termination of his/her employment, whether on his/her own behalf or on behalf of any third person or entity).]

25. Plaintiff has performed all conditions, covenants, and promises required of him/her under the terms of this contract.

26. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name] breached the contract by _____ [specify acts constituting breach of covenant not to compete, e.g., soliciting the business of patrons of the plaintiff contained on the previously mentioned customer list, whom defendant had served while employed for plaintiff, after termination of defendant's employment with plaintiff].

27. As a proximate result of the defendant's acts as alleged above, plaintiff has suffered actual damages, consisting of lost profits, in the sum of $_____.

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against defendant[s, and each of them,] as follows:

On ALL CAUSES OF ACTION:

1. For actual damages in the sum of $_____;
2. For costs of suit in this action; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[On the FIRST AND SECOND CAUSES OF ACTION:]

[4. For an order requiring defendants to show cause, if any, why they should not be enjoined as hereinafter set forth, during the pendency of this action;]

[5. For a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, and a permanent injunction, all requiring defendant and his/her agents, servants, and employees, and all persons, acting under, in concert with, or for him/her:]

[a. To refrain from _____ (specify each of the acts and courses of conduct defendants are to be prohibited from doing, commencing, or continuing, e.g., continuing the misappropriation of plaintiff's trade secret by ongoing solicitation of plaintiff's customers from plaintiff's customer list);]

[b. To _____ (specify each of the acts and courses of conduct defendants are to be commanded to do or undertake); and]

[6. For punitive damages in an amount appropriate to punish defendant(s) and deter others from engaging in similar misconduct;]

[On the SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION only:]

[7. For the amount necessary to prevent the unjust enrichment of defendant(s), to the extent that such amount is not included in any actual damages awarded, as prayed for in Paragraph 1; and]

[8. For reasonable attorney's fees and costs, pursuant to Civil Code Section 3426.4.]

[signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

[Add verification, if injunctive relief is sought

(see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 527(a). see form in § 70.02[5][b]).]

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview Trade Secrets Law Misappropriation Actions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in § 70.11[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in § 70.11[2].

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion in § 70.11[3].

(n4)Footnote 4. See generally discussion in § 70.06.

(n5)Footnote 5. See generally discussion in § 70.04.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Civ. Code § 3294.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Code Civ. Proc. § 527. If a temporary restraining order is sought without notice, the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 527(c)(2), (d) must also be satisfied. For discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203; Civ. Code § 3422, discussed in § 70.03[2][d]. For a complete discussion relating to the availability of injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, "Injunctions."

(n9)Footnote 9. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(d), discussed in § 70.02[2][b].

(n10)Footnote 10. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(d)(1), discussed in § 70.02[2][b][i].

(n11)Footnote 11. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(d)(2), discussed in § 70.02[2][b][ii].

(n12)Footnote 12. See Civ. Code § 3426.1(b), discussed in § 70.02[2][c].

(n13)Footnote 13. See Civ. Code § 3426.3(a),(b), discussed in § 70.02[3][b].

(n14)Footnote 14. See Civ. Code §§ 3426.3(c), 3426.4, discussed in § 70.02[3][d], [e].

(n15)Footnote 15. See Civ. Code § 3426.2, discussed in 70.02[3][a]. If a temporary restraining order is sought without notice, the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 527(c)(2), (d) must also be satisfied. For discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

(n16)Footnote 16. See discussion in § 70.03[3].

(n17)Footnote 17. See Edwards v. Fresno Community Hosp. (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 702, 706, 113 Cal. Rptr. 579 ; Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1).

(n18)Footnote 18. Civ. Code § 3426.6, discussed in § 70.02[4].

(n19)Footnote 19. See Code Civ. Proc. § 337(1).

119 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION

CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues

PART B. LIMITATIONS ON SOLICITATION OF FORMER EMPLOYER'S CUSTOMERS OR EMPLOYEES

4-70 California Employment Law §§ 70.13 through 70.19

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 70.13[Reserved]

120 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART C. EMPLOYEE INVENTIONS

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.20

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.20 Ownership Rights Generally

Under California law, the inventor of an invention or design has exclusive ownership of the invention so long as it remains in his or her possession.ⁿ¹ The inventor's rights are lost when the invention is made public.ⁿ² However, the inventor may obtain exclusive right of ownership in a patentable invention by disclosing the invention in compliance with federal patent laws.ⁿ³

An invention is generally regarded as the property of the one who conceived, developed, and perfected it.ⁿ⁴ If an employer conceives the result embraced in an invention or the general idea of a machine on a particular principle, and hires employees to carry out the idea, the invention belongs to the employer, regardless of whether the employees have used their inventive skill in working out the details.ⁿ⁵ In other words, if an employee is hired to invent and succeeds during the term of employment, the invention belongs to the employer, and the employee must assign to the employer any patent obtained.ⁿ⁶ However, the courts are not in favor of this latter rule and do not apply it when the employee is not specifically hired to make inventions, even when the invention relates to the employee's field of expertise on the job.ⁿ⁷ Thus, for example, when an employee was hired as a general employee and assigned to the employer's machine design department, the employee was held to have the patent rights to a machine he invented while working in the department.ⁿ⁸

If an invention is made by an employee who was not hired to invent, the patent rights to the invention belong to the employee unless the employee has contracted away his or her rights in the invention.ⁿ⁹ For a discussion of such assignments, see § 70.23. It should be noted that in situations when the employee has used the employer's time or property in creating an invention, the employer may be entitled to a nonexclusive right, called a "shop right," to use the invention without compensating the inventor.ⁿ¹⁰ For a discussion of shop rights, see § 70.22.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets &

Unfair CompetitionEmployee InventionsTortsBusiness TortsUnfair Business PracticesGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Civ. Code § 980(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Zachary v. Western Publishing Co. (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 911, 918, 143 Cal. Rptr. 34 ; Civ. Code § 983.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 35 U.S.C. § 101; see generally Dunner, Gambrell, Adelman, and Lipsey, Patent Law Perspectives.

(n4)Footnote 4. Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 654, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Famous Players-Lasky Corp. v. Ewing (1920) 49 Cal. App. 676, 679-680, 194 P. 65 ; see also Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 660, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421 (noting that while party who employs another to work out details of invention does not lose his or her rights in invention, this is only true so long as discovery of employee does not depart from the original principle and purpose of employer).

(n6)Footnote 6. United States v. Dubilier Condenser Corp. (1932) 289 U.S. 178, 187, 53 S. Ct. 554, 77 L. Ed. 1114 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See United States v. Dubilier Condenser Corp. (1932) 289 U.S. 178, 187-188, 53 S. Ct. 554, 77 L. Ed. 1114 ; Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 658, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Miller (S.D. Cal. 1926) 14 F.2d 776, 777-778 ; see also Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 648, 659-660, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421 ; (salesman whose duties included design of metal products to solve customer's individual problems held not hired to invent new designs).

(n9)Footnote 9. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Miller (S.D. Cal. 1926) 14 F.2d 776, 778 ; Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 654, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 661-664, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421 .

121 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART C. EMPLOYEE INVENTIONS

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.21

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.21 Employer's Theories of Recovery

If an invention belonging to an employer is also a trade secret, and if it has been misappropriated (for example, when an employee discloses the intricacies of the invention to a competitor), the employer may protect its rights in the invention by an action for misappropriation of a trade secret.ⁿ¹

If a patented invention is wrongfully used by an employee, the patent owner's rights must be asserted under federal law in an action for patent infringement.ⁿ² If the invention is unpatented and has not been disclosed to the public, the employer-owner may have a cause of action under Civil Code Section 980(b), concerning inventions not yet reduced to tangible form.ⁿ³

If the ownership rights to either a patented or unpatented invention are in dispute, a person alleging ownership of the invention or the patent may bring an action for declaratory relief in state court.ⁿ⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices Remedies Trade Secrets Law Misappropriation Actions General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Futurecraft Corp. v. Clary Corp. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 279, 281-292, 23 Cal. Rptr. 198. For a discussion of misappropriation of trade secrets, see § 70.02. For a form of complaint for misappropriation of a trade secret, see § 70.02[5].

(n2)Footnote 2. See 35 U.S.C. §§ 281-295, see generally Dunner, Gambrell, Adelman, and Lipsey, Patent Law Perspectives.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Zachary v. Western Publishing Co. (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 911, 918, 143 Cal. Rptr. 34 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See Cubic Corp. v. Marty (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 438, 445-449, 229 Cal. Rptr. 828 .

122 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART C. EMPLOYEE INVENTIONS

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.22

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.22 Employer's Shop Rights

As discussed in § 70.21, the existence of the employer-employee relationship is not always sufficient in itself to entitle the employer to the rights to an employee's invention. However, in situations in which the employee is entitled to the patent rights to his or her invention, the employer may nonetheless be entitled to free use of the invention under the "shop right" rule. Under this rule, when an employee during the hours of employment, working with the employer's tools and equipment, conceives and perfects an invention, he or she must give the employer a nonexclusive, royalty-free right to make use of the invention in its own business.ⁿ¹ The shop right arises out of equitable principles and is a license implied from the facts.ⁿ² The employer who is entitled to a shop right has the power to contract away the shop right.ⁿ³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 661, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421 ; see Treu v. Garrett Corp. (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 432, 436, 70 Cal. Rptr. 284 ; Aero Bolt & Screw Co. v. Iaia (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 728, 736-737, 5 Cal. Rptr. 53 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Treu v. Garrett Corp. (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 432, 436, 70 Cal. Rptr. 284 ; Aero Bolt & Screw Co. v. Iaia (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 728, 736-737, 5 Cal. Rptr. 53 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Aero Bolt & Screw Co. v. Iaia (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 728, 739-740, 5 Cal. Rptr. 53 .

123 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART C. EMPLOYEE INVENTIONS

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.23

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.23 Contractual Assignments

[1] Validity and Restrictions

The respective rights and obligations of employer and employee regarding an invention by the employee are governed by the employment contract.ⁿ¹ An employee may normally assign his or her rights in an invention to the employer.ⁿ² However, if such an assignment is not part of the employment contract, it must be supported by independent consideration or it is invalid.ⁿ³ In addition, under Labor Code Section 2870, a provision in an employment contract may not require an employee to assign rights in an invention that is unrelated to the employment. By statute, any provision in an employment agreement requiring that an employee assign, or offer to assign, any of his or her rights in an invention to his or her employer does not apply to an invention that the employee developed entirely on his or her own time without using the employer's equipment, supplies, facilities, or trade secret information, unless the invention either (1) relates, at the time of conception or reduction to practice, to the employer's business, or to actual or demonstrably anticipated research or development of the employer; or (2) results from any work performed by the employee for the employer.ⁿ⁴ Furthermore, to the extent that a provision in an employment contract attempts to specifically assign the excluded inventions described above, it is unenforceable.ⁿ⁵

An employer may not require an assignment of an employee's rights in an invention made void and unenforceable under Labor Code Section 2870 as a condition of employment.ⁿ⁶ However, a contract of employment may validly require an employee to make a confidential disclosure to the employer of all inventions made by the employee, solely or jointly with others, during the term of employment.ⁿ⁷ In addition, an employment contract provision governing inventions may validly provide for a review process by the employer to determine such issues as may arise.ⁿ⁸ Such a provision may also provide for full title to certain patents and inventions to be given to the United States government if a contract between the employer and the government so requires.ⁿ⁹

If an employment agreement contains a provision requiring the employee to assign or offer to assign any of his or her rights in any invention to the employer, the employer must also provide written notification to the employee that the agreement does not apply to inventions that qualify fully under the provisions of Labor Code Section 2870.ⁿ¹⁰ The notification must be given at the time the employment agreement is made.¹¹ However, this notification rule does not apply to agreements entered into before January 1, 1980.¹²

It may be improper as a restraint of trade for a provision in an employment contract to require an employee to assign rights to inventions conceived after employment has terminated. In one case, a federal district court partially invalidated a contract provision under which the employee agreed to assign all inventions relating to the employer's field of work that occurred to the employee within one year from the termination of employment.¹³ The court noted, however, that assignment provisions may extend beyond the period of employment if they relate to inventions based on the confidential information or trade secrets of the employer.¹⁴

[2] FORM--Employment Contract Provisions Assigning Employee's Inventions to Employer

[a] Comment

The form set out in [b], below, is for use in an employment contract when the parties wish to insert a provision specifying the circumstances under which an employee must assign to the employer the employee's rights to any inventions developed during the term of employment. The form is designed to conform to the requirements of Labor Code Sections 2870-2872 setting forth rules governing provisions of this type.¹⁵ This form may also be used as an independent contract. However, in that event, it must be modified to comply with all the requisites of a valid contract. Most importantly, it must contain consideration to be received by the employee in exchange for the assignment.¹⁶

[b] Form Inventions and Patents

1. Employee agrees that any inventions made by Employee, solely or jointly with others, during the term of this contract, that are (1) made with Employer's equipment, supplies, facilities, trade secrets, or time, or (2) that relate, at the time of conception or of reduction to practice, to the business of Employer or Employer's actual or demonstrably anticipated research or development, or (3) that result from any work performed by Employee for Employer, shall belong to Employer, and promises to assign any and all rights in such inventions to Employer.
2. Employee agrees that any inventions made by Employee, solely or jointly with others, made after the date that this employment agreement terminates that are based on trade secrets of Employer shall belong to Employer, and Employee promises to assign any and all rights in such inventions to Employer. For the purposes of this paragraph, an invention is based on the trade secrets of the employer if the invention incorporates any such secrets in principle or design.
3. Employee also agrees that Employer shall have the right to keep any inventions covered by this agreement as trade secrets, and Employee agrees not to disclose any such invention to third parties, except as specifically authorized by Employer.
4. Employee agrees to assign to Employer all rights in any other inventions made by Employee if Employer is required to grant those rights to the United States Government or any of its agencies.
5. Notwithstanding any provision of this agreement, Employee shall not be required to assign, nor shall he/she be deemed to have assigned, any of Employee's rights in any invention, as set forth in Labor Code Section 2870, that Employee develops entirely on his/her own time without using Employer's equipment, supplies, facilities, or trade secret information, except for inventions that either (1) relate, at the time that the invention is conceived or reduced to practice, to Employer's business or to actual or demonstrably anticipated research or development of Employer; or (2) result from any work performed by Employee for Employer.
6. In order to permit Employer to claim rights to which it may be entitled, Employee agrees to disclose to Employer in confidence (1) all inventions that Employee makes, either solely or jointly with others, during the term of his/her employment, and (2) all patent applications filed by Employee during, or within _____ [specify time period, e.g., one year] after termination of his/her employment. Employee also agrees to submit to a reasonable and confidential review process under which Employer may determine such issues as may arise under this agreement.

7. Employee shall assist Employer in obtaining patents on all inventions, designs, improvements, and discoveries deemed patentable by Employer in the United States and in all foreign countries, and shall execute all documents and do all things necessary to obtain letters patent, to vest Employer with full and extensive titles to those patents, and to protect the same against infringement by others, both during and after the termination of this agreement. In the event that assistance of the employee is needed after the termination of this agreement, employee will be paid for that assistance at the hourly rate he earned when this agreement terminated.

8. For the purposes of this agreement, an invention is deemed to have been made during the period of Employee's employment if the invention was conceived or first actually reduced to practice during that period.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets & Unfair Competition General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. United States v. Dubilier Condenser Corp. (1932) 289 U.S. 178, 187, 53 S. Ct. 554, 77 L. Ed. 1114 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Miller (S.D. Cal. 1926) 14 F.2d 776, 778 ; Banner Metals, Inc. v. Lockwood (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 643, 659, 3 Cal. Rptr. 421 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Cubic Corp. v. Marty (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 438, 448-449, 229 Cal. Rptr. 828 ; see also Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Miller (S.D. Cal. 1926) 14 F.2d 776, 778 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Lab. Code § 2870(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Lab. Code § 2870(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Lab. Code § 2871.

(n7)Footnote 7. Lab. Code § 2871.

(n8)Footnote 8. Lab. Code § 2871.

(n9)Footnote 9. Lab. Code § 2871.

(n10)Footnote 10. Lab. Code § 2872.

(n11)Footnote 11. Lab. Code § 2872.

(n12)Footnote 12. Lab. Code § 2872.

(n13)Footnote 13. Armorlite Lens Company v. Campbell (S.D. Cal. 1972) 340 F. Supp. 273, 275 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Armorlite Lens Company v. Campbell (S.D. Cal. 1972) 340 F. Supp. 273, 275 ; see Winston Research Corp. v. Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1965) 350 F.2d 134, 145-146 .

(n15)Footnote 15. See discussion in [1], above.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Cubic Corp. v. Marty (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 438, 448-449, 229 Cal. Rptr. 828 ; see generally Civ. Code §§ 1550(3), 1595, 1605.

124 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART C. EMPLOYEE INVENTIONS

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.24

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.24 FORM--Complaint by Employer to Establish Ownership Rights in Invention and for Damages and Injunctive Relief

[1] Comment

The following complaint may be used by an employer to establish the employer's ownership rights in an invention created by an employee. It requests a declaratory judgment¹ concerning the employer's ownership of the invention.

The complaint alleges (1) plaintiff's capacity (Paragraph 1); (2) an employment relationship between plaintiff and defendant (Paragraph 2); (3) the creation of an invention (Paragraphs 3 and 4); (4) plaintiff's ownership rights in the invention based on either the fact that the employee was hired to invent the type of invention in issue,² or that the employee contractually agreed to assign his or her rights in the invention to the employer (Paragraph 5);³ (5) the presence of an actual controversy sufficient to support declaratory relief (Paragraph 6);⁴ (6) the type of relief requested (Paragraph 7); and (7) the necessity and propriety of such relief (Paragraph 8).

Depending on the facts of a given case, an employer may wish to allege additional causes of action and entitlement to injunctive relief and damages.⁵

[2] Form SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

[or other as appropriate]

_____, [name],) Plaintiff,) vs.)
_____, [name(s)], Defendant(s).)
)
)

NO. _____
COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY RELIEF
[Code Civ. Proc. § 1060]

Plaintiff alleges:

- [1. _____ (Allege identity and capacity of plaintiff, e.g., Plaintiff _____ (name) is, and at all times herein mentioned was, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of California, and doing business in California).]
2. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name] was employed by plaintiff as a(n) _____ [describe employment, e.g., electronics engineer for plaintiff's business, which consists of developing and manufacturing products for the aerospace industry].
3. On or about _____ [date], defendant _____ [name] created an invention consisting of the following: _____ [describe invention, e.g., an electronic device for guiding unmanned space missiles].
4. _____ [Describe circumstances surrounding invention, e.g., The invention was created by the defendant during working hours as a part of the defendant's duties of employment with the plaintiff].
5. This invention is the rightful property of the plaintiff in that _____ [allege basis for ownership claim, e.g., the invention was created by the defendant as part of his/her employment duties as an inventor and/or defendant assigned all ownership rights in the invention to the plaintiff under a contract, a copy of which is attached to this complaint as Exhibit _____ and made a part of it by reference].
6. An actual controversy has arisen and now exists between plaintiff and defendant in that plaintiff contends, and defendant denies, that plaintiff is the rightful owner of the above described invention and therefore entitled to all rights inherent in such ownership.
7. Plaintiff desires a judicial determination of the respective rights of plaintiff and defendant with respect to the invention. In particular, plaintiff desires a declaration that plaintiff is the owner of the invention.
8. Such a declaration is necessary and appropriate at this time in order that plaintiff may ascertain his/her/its rights with respect to the invention so that _____ [describe employer's needs in this regard, e.g., it may put the invention to use in its business with the knowledge that it is the rightful owner of the invention].

WHEREFORE, plaintiff prays judgment against cross defendant as follows:

1. For a judicial determination of plaintiff's ownership of the above described invention;
2. For all costs of suit incurred in this action; and
3. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

[signature]

Attorney for Plaintiff

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships Employment Contracts Conditions & Terms Trade Secrets &

Unfair CompetitionGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsEmployment
ContractsConditions & TermsTrade Secrets & Unfair CompetitionEmployee InventionsLabor & Employment
LawEmployment RelationshipsEmployment ContractsConditions & TermsTrade Secrets & Unfair CompetitionTrade
SecretsTrade Secrets LawOwnership RightsGeneral Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Code Civ. Proc. § 1060; California Forms of Pleading and Practice, "Declaratory Relief."

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in § 70.20.

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion in § 70.23.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1060.

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussion in § 70.21.

125 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART C. EMPLOYEE INVENTIONS

4-70 California Employment Law §§ 70.25 through 70.29

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 70.25[Reserved]

126 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART D. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.30

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.30 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

Chapter 303, Injunctions.

Chapter 565, Unfair Competition.

California Points and Authorities (Matthew Bender): Injunctions.

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Ch. 265, Restrictive Covenants and Related Issues (Matthew Bender).

Levy, Golden, and Sacks, California Torts (Matthew Bender), Ch. 40, Fraud and Deceit and Other Business Torts, Part B, Subpart 2.

Milgrim, Trade Secrets (Matthew Bender).

Adelman, Patent Law Perspectives (Matthew Bender).

Brosnahan, Attorney's Guide to Trade Secrets (Cal. C.E.B. 1971).

Browne, Attorneys' Guide to the Law of Competitive Business Practices (Cal. C.E.B. 1981): Ch. 3, Unfair Competition; Ch. 4, Trade Secrets.

Witkin, Summary of California Law (9th ed. 1987) Vol. 1, Contracts, § 572.

Witkin, Summary of California Law (8th ed. 1974) Vol. 7, Equity, §§ 82-88.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment LawEmployment RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsUnfair Business
PracticesGeneral OverviewTrade Secrets LawOwnership RightsGeneral Overview

127 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART D. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.31

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.31 Encyclopedias

45 Cal. Jur. 3d, Monopolies and Restraints of Trade, §§ 3, 4, 16-25.

61 Cal. Jur. 3d, Unfair Competition, §§ 11, 15, 16-121.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Employment Relationships General Overview Torts Business Torts Unfair Business Practices General Overview Trade Secrets Law Ownership Rights General Overview

128 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION
CHAPTER 70 Trade Secrets, Unfair Competition, and Related Issues
PART D. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-70 California Employment Law § 70.32

AUTHOR: By James Buyoucos, J.D.

§ 70.32 Law Reviews and Periodicals

Paetkau, The Case for "Garden Leave" in California, 2009 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 313 (September 2009).

Redmond & Tullman, Does Edwards v. Arthur Andersen Bar the Use of Employee Confidentiality Agreements?, 2009 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 280 (August 2009).

Wiseman, The Case for Revision of CACI's UTSA "Readily Ascertainable" Affirmative Defense Jury Instruction, 2009 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 165 (May 2009).

Stella, Edwards v. Arthur Andersen Rejected Judicially-Created Exceptions to California's Rule Against Non-Competes--Or Did It?, Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 51 (February 2009).

Stella & Paetkau, California's Statutory Exceptions to Restraints on Trade: Open Competition and Employee Mobility Give Way to Buyers and Sellers of Businesses, 2008 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 17 (Jan. 2008).

Wiseman & Hightower, California and Ninth Circuit Competitors Beware: Hiring Away Competitor's Employees Can Create Exposure for Interference With Contract Claims, 2007 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 146 (June 2007).

Valenza, Enforcing Non-Compete Agreements in California After Advanced Bionics v. Medtronic, 2007 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 86 (April/May 2007).

Paetkau, California's "Reasonable Particularity" Requirement in Trade Secret Litigation, 2005 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 253 (July/August 2005).

Paetkau, Enforceability of Non-Compete and Choice of Law Provisions in the Modern Employment Contract, 2005 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 1 (January 2005).

Comment, A Penny for Their Thoughts; Employee-Inventors, Preinvention Assignment Agreements, Property, and Personhood, 81 Cal. L. Rev. 597 (1993).

Griffinger, Strategies for Ex-Employer Plaintiffs in Trade Secret Actions, 34 Prac. Law. 69 (1988).

Browne, Effective Use of Covenants Not to Compete in California, 3 U.S.F.V. L. Rev. 33 (1974).

Closius and Shaffer, Involuntary Nonservitude: the Current Judicial Enforcement of Employee Covenants Not to Compete--A Proposal for Reform, 57 So. Cal. L. Rev. 531 (1984).

Dubro, Keeping Trade Secrets in Silicon Valley, 4(9) Cal. Lawyer 42 (1984).

Hays, Unfair Competition--Another Decade, 51 Cal. L. Rev. 51 (1963).

Hays, The California Law of Unfair Competition Takes a Turn--Against the Employer, 41 Cal. L. Rev. 38 (1953).

Pooley, Better Protection for Trade Secrets, 5(8) Cal. Lawyer 51 (1985).

Sloan, Trade Secrets, 2 West. St. L. Rev. 1 (1973).

Comment, Industrial Espionage: Piracy of Secret Scientific and Technical Information, 14 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 911 (1967).

Comment, The Secret's Out: California's Adoption of the Uniform Trade Secrets Act--Effects on the Employer-Employee Relationship, 20 Loyola L. Rev. 1167 (1987).

Comment, Trade Secrets: How Long Should an Injunction Last? 26 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 203 (1978).

Note, A Balanced Approach to Employer-Employee Trade Secrets Disputes in California, 31 Hastings L.J. 671 (1980).

Note, Justifying Relief in Customer List Litigation, 37 So. Cal. L. Rev. 112 (1964).

Note, Reform for Rights of Employed Inventors, 57 So. Cal. L. Rev. 603 (1984).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law
Employment Relationships
General Overview
Torts
Business Torts
Unfair Business Practices
General Overview
Trade Secrets Law
Ownership Rights
General Overview

129 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VII TRADE SECRETS AND UNFAIR COMPETITION

Chapters 71 - 79 RESERVED

4-71 - 79 California Employment Law Chapters 71 - 79

RESERVED

Chapters 71 - 79 RESERVED

130 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

4-80 California Employment Law 80.syn

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.syn Synopsis to Chapter 80: Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

§ 80.01 Federal-State System

§ 80.02 Governing California Law

[1] Generally

[2] Applicability of Unemployment Compensation Provisions to Disability Compensation Provisions

§ 80.03 Purposes of Law

§ 80.04 Nature and Source of Unemployment Compensation Benefits

§ 80.05 Requirement That Employer-Employee Relationship Exists

§ 80.06 Subject Employment and Excluded Services

[1] Subject Employment

[a] Generally

[b] Certain Artistic or Literary Services

[c] Certain Out-of-State Services

[i] Service Localized in California

[ii] Base of Operations or Individual's Residence Located in California

[iii] Services Deemed Performed in California

[iv] Services Performed on American Vessel or Aircraft, or for American Employer by United States Citizen

[d] Agricultural Employment

[e] Substitute and Assistant Workers

[f] Nonprofit Services Excluded Under Federal Unemployment Tax Act

[2] Excluded Services

[a] Generally

[b] Exclusions Contingent on Similar Exclusions Under Federal Unemployment Tax Act

[c] Excluded Services for Public Entities or Nonprofit Organizations

[3] Included and Excluded Services During Same Pay Period

§ 80.07 Covered Employees and Employers

[1] Employers

[a] Applicability of Common Law Rules

[i] Generally

[ii] Exceptions: Lease or Loan of Employees

[b] General Definition of "Employer"

[c] Specific Employing Units Included Under Definition of "Employer"

[i] Motion Picture and Broadcasting Industry

[ii] Employers of Private Domestic Workers

[iii] Employers of Domestic Workers Providing In-Home Supportive Services

[iv] Contractor for Work of Authorship

[d] Elective Employer Coverage

[e] Public Entities

[2] Employees

[a] Covered Employees

[b] Exclusion of Directors of Corporations or Associations

§ 80.08 Administration and Enforcement of Law by Employment Development Department

[1] Responsibilities Generally

[2] Rulemaking and Other Duties of Director of EDD

[a] Generally

[b] Dissemination of Materials

[3] Appeals Division

§ 80.08A Employment Taxpayer's Bill of Rights

§ 80.09 Use of Information Obtained

[1] Confidentiality

[a] Generally

[b] Medical Records Related to Disability Claims

[2] Purposes for Which Information May Be Used

[a] Generally

[b] Information to Federal Agencies Concerned with Public Employment

[c] Exchange of Information With Other Governmental Agencies

[d] Information to Law Enforcement Agencies

[e] Information to Tax Officials of Mexico

§ 80.10 Invalidity of Waiver or Assignment of Benefits

§ 80.11 Criminal Violations and Penalties

§ 80.12 Self-Employment Assistance Program

[1] Purpose of Program

[2] Eligibility for Participation

[3] Conditions for Receipt of Allowances

[4] Effective Dates

§ 80.13 Family Temporary Disability Insurance Benefits

§§ 80.14through 80.19 [Reserved]

§ 80.20 Reports & Registration

[1] Work Records

[2] Filing Returns and Reports

[2A] New Employee Report

[2B] Report of Payments of $600 or More as Compensation for Services

[3] Statements and Notices Required of Employer

[4] Availability of Records to Director

[5] Registration With EDD

§ 80.21 Employer Contributions to Unemployment Fund

[1] Generally

[2] Contribution Rate

[3] Wages as Basis of Contribution

[a] Included Remuneration

[b] Excluded Remuneration

[4] Reserve Accounts

[a] Generally

[b] Credits

[c] Charges

[d] Annual Statements of Account

[e] Protest of Charges

[f] Transfer of Reserve Accounts

[5] Civil Action to Prevent Collection Prohibited

§ 80.22 Assessments

[1] When Assessments May Be Made

[2] Penalties and Interest

[a] Penalties for Failure to File or Filing Deficient Return or Report

[b] Penalties Involving Fraud

[c] Interest

[2A] Number of Assessments and Offsets

[3] Notice

[4] When Assessments Become Final and Delinquent

[5] Jeopardy Assessment

[6] Cancellation of Erroneous Assessments

§ 80.23 Refunds and Overpayments

[1] Claims for Credit or Refund of Overpayment

[a] Generally

[a.1] Payment Is Precondition to Claim for Refund

[b] Deemed Claims Following Payment of Challenged Assessments

[2] Denial of Claim

[3] Reversal of Erroneous Denial

[4] Recovery of Erroneous Refund

§ 80.24 Administrative Appellate Review

[1] Subjects and Levels of Appellate Review

[2] Review by Administrative Law Judge

[a] Review Other Than of Jeopardy Assessments

[b] Review of Jeopardy Assessment

[3] Review by Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board

[a] Filing Appeal

[b] Effect of Failure to File Appeal

§ 80.25 Judicial Review

- [1] Generally
- [2] Actions Challenging Denial of Claim for Refund or Credit
- [3] Other Actions

§§ 80.26 through 80.29 [Reserved]

§ 80.30 "Unemployment" as Basis for Benefits

- [1] Definition of "Unemployed" Individual
- [2] Distinctions Between Total Unemployment and Partial Unemployment
- [3] "Wages" for Purposes of Defining "Unemployed"

§ 80.31 Minimum Earnings Requirement

- [1] Requirement
- [2] "Benefit Year" Defined
- [3] "Base Period" Defined
- [4] "Perform Some Work" Defined

§ 80.32 Conditions of Eligibility

- [1] Generally
- [2] Availability for Work
 - [a] Generally
 - [b] Good Cause for Unavailability
 - [c] Partial Availability
- [3] Search for Suitable Work
 - [a] Duty of Claimant and Department
 - [b] What Constitutes "Suitable Work"
 - [c] Unsuitable Work
 - [d] Refusal to Accept Unsuitable Work
- [4] Requirement of One-Week Waiting Period

[5] Participation in Reemployment Activities

§ 80.33 Factors Not Affecting Eligibility

[1] Detention

[2] Uncompensated Days Off Pursuant to Collective Bargaining Agreement in Longshoring Operations

[3] Physical or Mental Illness or Injury

[4] Court-Related Duties

[5] Emergency Hospitalization

[6] Availability for Part-Time Work Only

[7] Death in Immediate Family

[8] Unexpired Leave Time On Discharge From Armed Services

[9] WARN Act Violation

§ 80.34 Ineligible Persons

[1] Aliens

[2] Persons Applying for Benefits From Another State

[3] School Employees During Recesses and Breaks

[4] Persons Employed in Seasonal Sports Events

[5] Strikers

[6] Recipients of Temporary Total Disability Indemnity

[7] Persons Convicted of Making False Statements

§ 80.35 Disqualification for Voluntary Quitting or Discharge for Misconduct

[1] Generally

[2] Presumption of Nondisqualifying Conduct

[3] Definition of "Most Recent Work"

[4] Voluntarily Leaving Work Without Good Cause

[a] What Constitutes "Voluntary" Leaving

- [b] "Constructive" Quit
- [c] "Good Cause" Defined
- [d] Duty to Preserve Employment Relationship
- [e] Determination of Good Cause as Question of Law
- [f] Situations Deemed Good Cause by Statute
 - [i] Compulsory Retirement
 - [ii] Election to Be Laid Off Under Collective Bargaining Agreement
 - [iii] Deprivation of Equal Employment Opportunities
 - [iv] Sexual Harassment
 - [v] Accompanying Spouse to Another Location
- [g] Absence Due to Incarceration Followed by Conviction Deemed Without Good Cause
- [h] Application of Good Cause Principles to Factual Examples
 - [i] Religious or Ethical Reasons
 - [ii] Concerns for Health, Safety, or Morals
 - [iii] Pregnancy
 - [iv] Dissatisfaction With Earnings
 - [v] Transportation Difficulties
 - [vi] Attendance At School
 - [vii] Domestic Circumstances
 - [viii] Leave of Absence
 - [ix] Anticipation of Discharge
 - [x] Working Conditions
 - [xi] Transfer to Other Work
 - [xii] Time
 - [xiii] Disciplinary Action by Employer

[xiv] Prospects of Other Work

[xv] Optional Early Retirement

[xvi] Union Relations

[xvii] Other Circumstances

[5] Discharge for Misconduct

[a] What Constitutes "Misconduct"

[b] Requirement That Misconduct Be Connected With Most Recent Work

[c] Relationship of "Good Cause" to Discharges Based on Refusal to Obey Employer's Rules or Orders

[d] Other Situations Giving Rise to Issues of Misconduct

[i] Absence From Work

[ii] Absence Due to Incarceration

[iii] Failure to Perform Work Properly or Neglect of Duty

[iv] Tardiness

[v] Violation of Law

[vi] Other Activities Constituting Misconduct

[6] Duration of Disqualification

§ 80.36 Other Disqualifications

[1] False Statements or Refusal to Accept Suitable Employment

[a] False Statements

[i] Conduct Causing Disqualification

[ii] Duration of Disqualification

[b] Refusal to Accept Suitable Employment

[i] Conduct Causing Disqualification

[ii] Duration of Disqualification

[c] Successive or Concurrent Disqualifications

[2] Use of Intoxicants

[a] Generally

[b] Duration of Disqualification

[c] Requirement That Disqualified Individual Be Advised of Disability Benefits

§ 80.37 Effect of Remuneration During Period of Unemployment on Amount of Benefits

[1] Reduction of Benefits by Amount of Retirement Pay

[a] Generally

[b] Relationship With Federal Law

[c] Exceptions to Reduction Requirement

[2] Payments by Employer to Supplement Unemployment Compensation; Severance or Dismissal Pay

[3] Vacation Pay

[4] Holiday Pay

[5] Sick Pay

§ 80.38 Types of Claims

[1] Generally

[2] New Claim

[3] Additional Claim

[4] Reopened Claim

[5] Continued Claim

[6] Partial Claim

§ 80.39 Claims Procedures

[1] Generally

[2] Payment or Denial of Claims

[3] Notice to Last Previous Employer of New or Additional Claim

[4] Submission of Facts by Last Previous Employer Following Notice of Claim

- [a] Facts Affecting Claimant's Eligibility

- [b] Facts Relating to Whether Employer's Account May Be Charged

- [c] Effect of Submission or Nonsubmission of Facts

- [5] Determination of Eligibility

- [a] Generally

- [b] Submission of Facts by Employer After Notice of Determination

- [6] Computation of Benefits

- [a] Generally

- [b] Notice of Computation

- [c] Protest of Computation

- [d] Submission of Facts by Base Period Employer Not Entitled to Notice of Claim

- [i] Facts Relating to Whether Employer's Reserve Account May Be Charged

- [ii] Facts Affecting Claimant's Eligibility

- [6A] Notice of Determination of Eligibility

- [7] Reconsideration of Determinations or Computations

- [a] Reconsideration of Determination

- [b] Reconsideration of Computation

- [c] Reconsideration in Case of Fraud

- § 80.40 Appeals

- [1] To Administrative Law Judge

- [2] To Appeals Board

- [a] Generally

- [b] Time Limit on Appeals Board Decisions

- § 80.41 Payment of Benefits During Appeal Procedure

- [1] Prior to Final Decision on Appeal

[2] On Appeals Board Decision Allowing Benefits

§ 80.42 Liability for Overpayment of Benefits

[1] Generally

[2] Effect of Administrative Law Judge's Affirmation of Award or Appeals Board Determination of Eligibility

[3] Assessment for False Statement

[4] Notice of Overpayment and Assessment Determination

[5] Appeal of Overpayment Determination

[6] Recovery of Overpayments

[a] Civil Action

[b] Summary Judgment in Cases of Overpayment Because of Fraud

[c] Offset

[d] Execution

[7] No Liability for Overpayment Resulting From Backpay Award

§§ 80.43through 80.59 [Reserved]

§ 80.60 Generally

[1] Statutes and Regulations Covering Disability Benefits

[2] Nature and Source of Disability Benefits

[a] State Disability Plan

[b] Nonindustrial Disability Insurance for State Employees

[c] Voluntary Plans

[3] Purpose

§ 80.61 Subject Employment

[1] Generally

[2] Self-Employment

§ 80.62 What Constitutes "Disability"

§ 80.63 Eligibility for Benefits

§ 80.64 Ineligibility for Benefits

[1] Entitlement to Unemployment Compensation Benefits

[2] Entitlement to Other Benefits

[3] Employee Covered by Approved Voluntary Plan

[4] Felony-Related Disability

[5] Incarcerated Individuals

§ 80.65 Disqualifications

[1] False Statements

[2] Dipsomania or Drug Addiction

[3] Disqualification Under Unemployment Compensation Provisions

[4] Prohibition Against Disqualification on Day of Death

§ 80.66 Amount of Benefits

[1] Weekly Benefit Amount

[2] Maximum Benefits During One Disability Period

[3] Reduction of Benefit Amount by Amount of Wages Received

§ 80.67 Claim Procedures

[1] Filing Claim

[2] Determination on Claim

[3] Computation of Benefit Amounts

[a] Generally

[b] Protest of Computation

§ 80.68 Reconsideration

[1] Generally

[2] Reconsideration of Computation

[3] Eligibility Review for Claimant Suspected of Fraud

§ 80.69 Overpayments

§ 80.70 Administrative Review

[1] Levels of Review

[2] Appeal to Administrative Law Judge

[3] Appeal to Appeals Board

§§ 80.71 through 80.79 [Reserved]

§ 80.80 Organization and Jurisdiction of Appeals Division

§ 80.81 Organization and Authority of Appeals Board

[1] Board Membership

[2] Rulemaking

[3] Transfer, Removal, and Remand of Proceedings

[4] Delegation by Appeals Board of Powers and Authority

§ 80.82 Administrative Law Judges

[1] Appointment by Board

[2] Duties of Chief Administrative Law Judge

[3] Duties of Administrative Law Judges

§ 80.83 Appeal and Hearing Procedure

[1] Generally

[2] Form, Filing, and Service of Appeal

[3] Consolidation of Cases for Hearing

[4] Recording and Transcribing Proceedings

[5] Administering Oaths, Taking Depositions, Certifying Official Acts, and Issuing Subpoenas

[6] Privilege Against Self-Incrimination

[7] Rules of Evidence

[8] Participation by Telephone

§ 80.84 Right to Representation by Counsel

§ 80.85 Decisionmaking Process of Appeals Board

[1] Cases Assigned or Considered by Board as a Whole

[a] Assigned Cases

[b] Cases Decided by Board as a Whole

[2] Precedent Decisions

[3] Form and Content of Decisions

§ 80.86 Finality of Board of Appeals Decision Absent Judicial Review

§ 80.87 Costs, Penalties for Bad Faith or Unreasonable Appeals, and Interest

§ 80.88 Nonbinding Effect of Findings, Judgments, or Final Orders in Judicial or Arbitration Proceedings Between Employee and Employer

§§ 80.89 through 80.99 [Reserved]

§ 80.100 Appeal From Appeals Board Decision Generally

[1] Time Limits

[a] Generally

[b] Exceptions to Six-Month Time Limit

[c] Equitable Tolling

[2] Right of Director to Seek Judicial Review

§ 80.101 Judicial Review of Precedent Decision of Appeals Board

§ 80.102 Review of Benefit Determinations by Administrative Mandate Proceedings

[1] Generally

[2] Scope of Review

[a] Generally

[b] By Superior Court: Independent Judgment Test

[c] By Appellate Court: Substantial Evidence Test

[3] FORM--Petition by Worker for Writ of Mandate to Review Decision Denying Unemployment or Disability Compensation Benefits

[a] Comment

[i] Use of Form

[ii] Time for Filing

[iii] Administrative Record

[iv] Allegations and Verification

[v] Attorney's Fees

[vi] Prejudgment Interest on Wrongfully Denied Unemployment Benefits

[b] Form

[4] FORM--Petition by Employer for Writ of Mandate to Review Decision Granting Unemployment Compensation Benefits

[a] Comment

[i] Use of Form

[ii] Allegations and Verification

[b] Form

[5] Class Actions

[a] Generally

[b] Exhaustion of Remedies

§§ 80.103 through 80.109 [Reserved]

§ 80.110 Legal Texts

§ 80.111 Encyclopedias

§ 80.112 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Ms. Sanders is supervising attorney with Contra Costa Legal Assistance for the Elderly. Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

131 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

4-80 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

Scope

By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.n* SCOPE

This chapter discusses unemployment and state disability insurance law. Part A provides an overview of unemployment insurance law, and discusses the relationship between the federal and state systems, the kinds of employment that are subject to unemployment insurance requirements, the employees and employers covered by the law, and the administration and enforcement of the law by the Employment Development Department. Part B discusses the reports and contributions that employers are required to make under unemployment insurance law, assessments against employers, and remedies available for overpayment of contributions.

Part C discusses claims for unemployment compensation benefits, including conditions of eligibility for benefits and disqualifying factors. Claims procedures are set forth in detail, including procedures for use by employers in protesting payment of benefits. Part D discusses eligibility requirements and claims procedures for state disability benefits.

Parts E and F discuss procedures for review of an award or denial of unemployment or disability benefits. Part E discusses administrative review by the Appeals Division of the Employment Development Department, including the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board. Part F covers judicial review.

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Ms. Sanders is supervising attorney with Contra Costa Legal Assistance for the Elderly. Updates to this chapter are prepared by the Publisher's Editorial Staff.

132 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.01

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.01 Federal-State System

The unemployment insurance program was initiated in 1935 by the Social Security Act. The current version of that program is the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.ⁿ¹ That Act imposes a tax on subject private employers with respect to individuals in their employ, equal to a specified percentage of the total wages for employment paid by the employer during the calendar year.ⁿ² Each state can mitigate the tax by establishing its own unemployment insurance program meeting federal guidelines.ⁿ³

The United States Department of Labor is the federal agency responsible for ensuring that state unemployment laws comply with the mandatory federal criteria set out by Congress.ⁿ⁴ State programs approved by the Secretary of Labor are eligible to be financed in part by grants from the United States.ⁿ⁵ The Secretary of Labor must approve a state's unemployment compensation law if it meets with the requisite conditions, and must certify to the Secretary of the Treasury each state whose law has been approved.ⁿ⁶

Although Congress intended the states to have broad freedom in setting up the types of unemployment compensation programs they wished, it also directed each state to meet certain fundamental requirements for approval of the state plans.ⁿ⁷ Thus, the Secretary of Labor may make no certification for payment to any state unless the Secretary finds that the law of that state meets specified conditions, including methods of administration that are reasonably calculated to insure full payment of unemployment compensation when due,ⁿ⁸ payment of benefits solely through public employment offices and other approved agencies,ⁿ⁹ an opportunity for a fair hearing for individuals whose claims are denied,ⁿ¹⁰ payment of money received in the state unemployment fund to the Secretary of the Treasury to the credit of the Unemployment Trust Fund,ⁿ¹¹ and the making of required reports.ⁿ¹²

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 26 U.S.C. § 3301 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 26 U.S.C. § 3301.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 26 U.S.C. § 3302 (crediting contributions paid by employer into state unemployment fund against federal tax due); City of Sacramento v. State of California (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 182, 187, 203 Cal. Rptr. 258 (disapproved on other grounds in County of Los Angeles v. State of California (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 46, 48, 233 Cal. Rptr. 38, 729 P.2d 202); Campos v. Employment Development Dept. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 961, 966-967, 183 Cal. Rptr. 637 .

(n4)Footnote 4. See 26 U.S.C. § 3304; 42 U.S.C. § 503.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 501-504, 1101-1109; see also California Dep't of Human Resources Development v. Java (1971) 402 U.S. 121, 125, 91 S. Ct. 1347, 28 L. Ed. 2d 666; City of Sacramento v. State of California (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 182, 187, 203 Cal. Rptr. 258 .

(n6)Footnote 6. 26 U.S.C. § 3304(c); see 42 U.S.C. § 503; see also 20 C.F.R. § 601 (procedures for approval of state unemployment compensations laws).

(n7)Footnote 7. See N.Y. Tel. Co. v. N.Y. State DOL (1979) 440 U.S. 519, 537-538, 543 n.42, 99 S. Ct. 1328, 59 L. Ed. 2d 553; Campos v. Employment Development Dept. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 961, 967, 183 Cal. Rptr. 637 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See 42 U.S.C. § 503(a)(1); California Dep't of Human Resources Development v. Java (1971) 402 U.S. 121, 125, 91 S. Ct. 1347, 28 L. Ed. 2d 666 (automatic suspension of benefits on appeal by employer from an initial determination of eligibility as violative of federal requirement of full payment of unemployment compensation "when due").

(n9)Footnote 9. See 42 U.S.C. § 503(a)(2).

(n10)Footnote 10. See 42 U.S.C. § 503(a)(3).

(n11)Footnote 11. See 42 U.S.C. § 503(a)(4).

(n12)Footnote 12. See 42 U.S.C. § 503(a)(6).

133 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.02

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.02 Governing California Law

[1] Generally

The Unemployment Insurance Code consists of general provisionsⁿ¹ and nine Divisions. Unemployment and disability compensation are both covered under Division 1.ⁿ² Part 1 of Division 1 contains primarily unemployment compensation provisions, and a few provisions that relate to disability compensation.ⁿ³ Part 2 of Division 1 contains most of the disability compensation provisions.ⁿ⁴ Also included under Division 1 are provisions governing extended unemployment compensation,ⁿ⁵ and federal-state extended compensation.ⁿ⁶

State regulations and interpretations applicable to unemployment and disability compensation are contained in Title 22 California Code of Regulations, sections 125.1-3271.1.

[2] Applicability of Unemployment Compensation Provisions to Disability Compensation Provisions

Except as otherwise provided, the provisions and definitions of Part 1 of Division 1 of the Unemployment Insurance Code,ⁿ⁷ relating primarily to unemployment compensation, are applicable to disability compensation under Part 2.ⁿ⁸ In case of any conflict between the provisions of Part 1 and Part 2, the provisions of Part 2 prevail with respect to disability benefits, and the provisions of Part 1 prevail with respect to unemployment compensation benefits.ⁿ⁹ Specified provisions under Part 1 relating to financing of the unemployment insurance system are expressly made inapplicable to disability compensation under Part 2.ⁿ¹⁰

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1-21.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 100-4751.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 100-2128.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2601-3272.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 3501-3751.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 4001-4751.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 100-2128.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2602(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2602(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2602(b).

134 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.03

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.03 Purposes of Law

The Unemployment Insurance Code was enacted to provide for the compulsory setting aside of funds to be used for a system of unemployment insurance providing benefits for persons unemployed through no fault of their own, and to reduce involuntary unemployment and the suffering caused thereby to a minimum.ⁿ¹ The policy favoring payment of unemployment compensation is based not only on the needs of the individual unemployed worker, but also on the economic interests of the people of California as a whole, which are served by preventing destabilization of purchasing power, and ensuring final consumption of goods and services. Neither private charity nor local relief can prevent the effects of unemployment.ⁿ²

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 100; Gilles v. Department of Human Resources Development (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 313, 316, 113 Cal. Rptr. 374, 521 P.2d 110 .

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 100.

135 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.04

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.04 Nature and Source of Unemployment Compensation Benefits

The California Unemployment Insurance Compensation Program provides for payment of insurance benefits over an extended period of time to persons who find themselves unemployed through no fault of their own.ⁿ¹ Rules governing eligibility for unemployment compensation are discussed in §§ 80.30-80.37. The amount of benefits depends on the worker's earnings during the calendar quarter (out of a base period of four quarters)ⁿ² in which the worker's wages were highest. The benefit amounts depend on when the claim is filed:

- For new claims filed with an effective date on or after January 1, 1992, and before January 1, 2002, the amount ranges from a low of $40 per week to a high of $149 per week, when the earnings in the applicable quarter did not exceed $4966.99.ⁿ³ If the earnings exceeded $4966.99, the weekly benefit amount is 39% of the earnings divided by 13, but in no case may it exceed $230.ⁿ⁴

- For new claims filed with an effective date beginning on or after January 1, 2002, and prior to January 1, 2003, the amount ranges from a low of $40 per week to a high of $96 per week, when the earnings in the applicable quarter did not exceed $2,781.99.ⁿ⁵ If the earnings exceeded $2781.99, the weekly benefit amount is 45% of the earnings divided by 13, but in no case may it exceed $330.ⁿ⁶

- For new claims filed with an effective date beginning on or after January 1, 2003, the amount ranges from a low of $40 per week to a high of $70 per week, when the earnings in the applicable quarter did not exceed $1832.99.ⁿ⁷ If the earnings exceeded $1,832.99, the weekly benefit amount is 50% of the earnings divided by 13, but in no case may it exceed the applicable of the following:ⁿ⁸

(1) $370 for new claims filed with an effective date beginning on January 1, 2003, and before January 1, 2004.

(2) $410 for new claims filed with an effective date beginning on January 1, 2004, and before January 1, 2005.

(3) $450 for new claims filed with an effective date beginning on January 1, 2005.

Benefits are payable for up to 26 weeksⁿ⁹ and may be extended for an additional 13 weeks during certain periods of high unemployment.ⁿ¹⁰ Payment of federal-state extended compensation may thereafter be available.ⁿ¹¹ Under certain circumstances, additional benefits may be available during a period of training or retraining.ⁿ¹²

Benefits are paid from the State Unemployment Fund, which is a special fund, separate from all public money or funds of the state.ⁿ¹³ It consists of funds collected from private employers,ⁿ¹⁴ and money credited to the state's account in the federal Unemployment Trust Fund.ⁿ¹⁵ The amount of money an employer is required to pay into the state fund is based in part on the employer's base payroll during a specified period, the benefits paid to terminated employees that are charged to the employer's reserve account, and the overall balance of the State Unemployment Fund.ⁿ¹⁶

For a discussion of employer contributions and reserve accounts, see Part B (§§ 80.20-80.25).

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See generally Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1251-1265.9 (eligibility and disqualifications for employment).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1275 ("base period" defined); see also discussion in § 80.31[3].

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1280(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1280(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1280(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1280(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1280(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1280(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1281(b)(1).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 3501-3751 (extended unemployment compensation).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 4001-4751.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1266-1274.10.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1521, 1525.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976-994 (employer contributions).

(n15)Footnote 15. See 42 U.S.C. §§ 501, 1101.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976-994 (contribution rates), 1025-1032 (reserve accounts); California Dep't of Human Resources Development v. Java (1971) 402 U.S. 121, 125, 91 S. Ct. 1347, 28 L. Ed. 2d 666 .

136 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.05

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.05 Requirement That Employer-Employee Relationship Exists

Only "employers," as defined in the Unemployment Insurance Code, are required to contribute to the Unemployment Fund.ⁿ¹ As further discussed in § 80.07 [1], an employer is any "employing unit" that, for some portion of a day within the current or preceding calendar year, had in "employment" one or more "employees," as those terms are defined in the Code, and pays wages for employment in excess of $100 during any calendar quarter. The statutory definitions of the term "employment" are discussed in § 80.06. The term "employee" is discussed in § 80.07 [2]. Thus, an individual that engages only "independent contractors," rather than "employees" is not required to participate in the unemployment insurance system.ⁿ²

Under the Unemployment Insurance Code, common law rules, as well as statutory definitions, apply in determining whether an employer-employee relationship exists.ⁿ³ Common law rules regarding existence of an employer-employee relationship are fully discussed in Chapter 30. Briefly stated, the most significant factor in determining whether an employer-employee relationship exists is the right of the principal to control the manner and means of accomplishing a desired result.ⁿ⁴ If the employer has the authority to exercise complete control, whether or not that right is exercised with respect to all details, an employer-employee relationship exists.ⁿ⁵ Secondary factors to be considered in determining whether an individual performing services is an employee within the meaning of the Unemployment Insurance Code, or an independent contractor, are whether he or she is engaged in a distinct occupation or business, the kind of occupation (i.e., whether the kind of work is usually done under a principal's direction or by a specialist without supervision), the degree of skill required, whether the principal or workmen supplied the tools and place of work, the length of time for which services are to be performed, the method of payment, whether the work is part of the principal's regular business, and whether the parties believed they were creating an employer-employee relationship.ⁿ⁶

A writ of administrative mandamus proceeding to challenge the decision of the California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board that an employer-employee relationship exists for purposes of the Unemployment Insurance Code is barred by the California Constitution,ⁿ⁷ by statute,ⁿ⁸ and by the holding of Modern Barber Colleges.ⁿ⁹ To seek judicial review of an administratively determined employee status, the employer must pay assessed unemployment insurance contributions, claim a refund, and, following the denial of any of that claim, file an action for refund in the superior court.n10

An "independent contractor" is a person who is engaged in an independent employment or occupation, responsible to his or her principal only for the result and not for the manner or means by which it is accomplished.n11

There is a rebuttable presumption that professional services provided by consultant attorneys, physicians, dentists, engineers, architects, accountants, and various types of scientists are rendered as independent contract work, and do not constitute "employment" for purposes of the Unemployment Insurance Code, unless a contract agreement exists that establishes an employer-employee relationship.n12

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Tomlin v. California Emp. Com. (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 118, 122-123, 180 P.2d 342 ; Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686 (overruled on other grounds in People v. Sims (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 468, 479-480 fn. 8, 186 Cal. Rptr. 77, 651 P.2d 321).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 606.5(a), 621(b); see also discussion in § 80.07.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Santa Cruz Transportation, Inc. v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1363, 1371, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 64 ; Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 950, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 621(b)-1, 4304-1 (rules applicable in determining employment relationship under Unemployment Insurance Code).

(n5)Footnote 5. Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 950, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 ; Empire Star Mines Co. v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1946) 28 Cal. 2d 33, 43, 168 P.2d 686 ; see also In re Brown (9th Cir. 1984) 743 F.2d 664, 667 ; Southwest Research Institute v. Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 705, 709-710, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769 (worker's adherence to federally dictated work protocol, alone, not enough to establish status as employee rather than independent contractor).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Santa Cruz Transportation, Inc. v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1363, 1371, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 64 ; see also Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 949, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 (citing Rest. Agency § 220). See also Messenger Courier Ass'n of Americas v. Cal. Unempl. Ins. App. Board (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1088-1096, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 797 (trial court properly denied declaratory relief to employer associations that would have invalidated precedential decision by Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board, applying criteria in Borello to determine that employers had incorrectly treated messengers as independent contractors, rather than common-law employees, for purposes of payment of unemployment insurance contributions for them, and assessing penalties against employer, where Board's decision applied proper legal standards and was entitled to precedential effect); Air Couriers Int'l v. Employment Dev. Dep't (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 923, 932-939, 59 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37 (trial court properly determined that drivers were employees, not independent contractors, where trial court used proper legal standard in evaluating evidence (using Borello), and where evidence showed employer exerted control over drivers to coordinate and supervise company's basic function of timely delivery of packages, and secondary factors also pointed to finding of employee status).

(n7)Footnote 7. Cal. Const. art. XIII, § 32.

(n8)Footnote 8. Unempl. Ins. Code § 1851.

(n9)Footnote 9. Modern Barber Colleges v. Cal. Emp. Stab. Com. (1948) 31 Cal.2d 720, 192 P.2d 916 .

(n10)Footnote 10. *First Aid Servs. of San Diego, Inc. v. Calif. Employment Devel. Dept. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 2005 Cal. App. LEXIS 1746, *9.21 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Cal. Emp. Com. v. L.A. etc. News Corp. (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 421, 424, 425, 150 P.2d 186 .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 656; see discussion under § 80.06[2][a].

137 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.06

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.06 Subject Employment and Excluded Services

[1] Subject Employment

[a] Generally

"Employment," as used in the unemployment and disability provisions, means service, including service in interstate commerce, performed by an employee for wages or under any contract of hire, written or oral, express or implied.ⁿ¹ For disability benefit purposes, special definitions are applicable to domestic service,ⁿ² to services performed for certain public entities and health facilities,ⁿ³ and to services of clerk-carriers in the employ of the United States Postal Service.ⁿ⁴ In addition, as discussed in [b] through [f], below, certain types of services are specifically included in the statutory definition of "employment."

[b] Certain Artistic or Literary Services

For purposes of the unemployment compensation and disability benefit provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code only,ⁿ⁵ "employment" includes any service in an artistic or literary capacity performed by an individual pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement between an employer and a labor organization in the motion picture, radio, or television industry if the employer has the right to control and direct the services to be performed and the individual is defined as an employee under the terms of the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁶

[c] Certain Out-of-State Services

[i] Service Localized in California

"Employment" includes an individual's entire service, performed within, or both within and without, California if the service is "localized" in California.ⁿ⁷ Service is localized if it is performed entirely within California,ⁿ⁸ or if it is performed both within and outside the state, but the service performed outside the state is incidental to the individual's service within the state.ⁿ⁹ For example, service is "localized" within California if the service rendered outside the state is temporary or transitory in nature, or consists of isolated transactions.n10

[ii] Base of Operations or Individual's Residence Located in California

"Employment" also includes an individual's entire service that is not localized in any state if some of the service is performed in California and if (1) the base of operations is located in California, or (2) if there is no base of operations, the place from which the service is directed or controlled is located in California.n11 Services performed in other states or in Canada and directed or controlled in California will be included as "employment" if the service is not covered under the unemployment compensation law of any other state or of Canada.n12

If the base of operations or place from which nonlocalized service is directed or controlled is not in any state in which some part of the service is performed, the service will still be included as "employment" if the individual performing the service resides in California.n13

[iii] Services Deemed Performed in California

"Employment" includes an individual's entire service, if the service is deemed performed in California by virtue of an arrangement made pursuant to the unemployment and disability compensation provisions, and does not include any service which by virtue of such an arrangement is deemed performed in another state.n14

[iv] Services Performed on American Vessel or Aircraft, or for American Employer by United States Citizen

Provided the employer has specified connections with California, and other conditions are met, "employment" also includes services performed on or in connection with American vessels or aircraft operating within, or within and without, the United States,n15 and services performed outside the United States or Canada by a United States citizen for an American employer.n16

[d] Agricultural Employment

Agricultural labor is expressly included as "employment" under the Unemployment Insurance Code.n17

[e] Substitute and Assistant Workers

Each individual employed to perform or to assist in performing the work of any individual employed by an employing unit is deemed to be employed by that employing unit for all purposes of the unemployment and disability compensation provisions, whether or not he or she was hired or paid directly by the employing unit, if the employing unit had actual or constructive knowledge of the work.n18

[f] Nonprofit Services Excluded Under Federal Unemployment Tax Act

Under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, service is excluded from "employment" if it is performed in the employ of a tax-exempt religious, charitable, educational, or other nonprofit organization as described in specified provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.n19 If this is the sole reason for the exclusion under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, the service will be included as "employment" for purposes of the unemployment and disability compensation provisions of the state Unemployment Insurance Code, unless that service is otherwise excluded under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 634.5.n20 For discussion of services excluded under Section 634.5, see [2], below.

[2] Excluded Services

[a] Generally

"Employment" does not include the following types of service:

1. Domestic service in a private home unless cash remuneration of $1000 or more is paid to individuals employed in the domestic service in any calendar quarter in the calendar year or the preceding calendar year;n21
2. Work performed by a domestic worker for whom an employment agency (as defined in Civil Code Section 1812.501(a)(3), (h)) procures, offers, refers, provides, or attempts to provide domestic work in a private home, if all of the factors listed in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 687.2 characterize the nature of the relationship between the employment agency and the domestic worker;n21.1
3. Service as a transcriber of depositions, court proceedings, and hearings performed away from the office of the person or organization obligated to produce a transcript of these proceedings;n22
4. Service performed by a child under the age of 18 years in the employ of a parent, or service performed by an individual in the employ of his or her son, daughter, or spouse, except to the extent that the employer and employee have elected to make contributions to the Unemployment Compensation Disability Fund;n23
5. Certain federal service and service performed in the employ of any other state or its political subdivisions;n24
6. Service under any unemployment compensation system established by a law of the United States;n25
7. Service performed in the employ of either a candidate for public office or a committee (as defined in Government Code Section 82013) in connection with an election campaign;n26
8. Service performed by the officers and directors of a corporation who are the sole shareholders of the corporation, or the officers and directors of a corporation engaged in agriculture who are shareholders, or an officer of a corporation who is the sole shareholder or the only shareholder other than his or her spouse, if the corporation is not subject to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act;n27
9. Newspaper or magazine delivery or distribution service performed by individuals under the age of 18 years, unless the individual has regular full-time work to which attendance at school is incidental.n28
10. Service performed by an individual in the sale of newspapers or magazines to ultimate consumers, under an arrangement whereby the sale is at a fixed price, and the individual's compensation is based on the retention of the excess of the price over the amount at which the newspapers or magazines are charged to the individual.n29
11. Service performed as a real estate broker, mineral, oil and gas, cemetery, or yacht broker or as a real estate, cemetery, direct sales or yacht salesperson, if (a) the individual is licensed under appropriate provisions of the Business and Professions or Harbors and Navigation Code or is engaged in the trade or business of primarily in-person demonstrations and sales presentations of consumer products in the home or sales on a buy-sell, deposit-commission, or similar basis, for resale by the buyer or any other person in the home or other than from a retail or wholesale establishment; (b) substantially all of the remuneration is directly related to sales or other output rather than to the number of hours worked; and (c) the services are performed pursuant to a written contract which provides that the individual will not be treated as an employee for state tax purposes;n30

12. Service performed as a golf caddy;n31
13. Service performed as an elected or appointed official in any calendar quarter in the employ of a nonprofit corporation or association that is not subject to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act,n32 if the remuneration for those services does not exceed $100 per month;n33
14. Service performed by baseball players in the employ of baseball clubs pursuant to a contract or agreement under which the baseball player performs for expenses and a share of the profits of the club, rather than for a fixed salary;n34
15. Service performed by free-lance jockeys or exercisers who are regularly licensed by the California Horse Racing Board;n35
16. Service performed by professional athletes who are neither citizens nor residents of the United States or of any state when they come to California for occasional or incidental professional engagements;n36 and
17. Professional services performed by a consultant working as an independent contractor.n37

For purposes of the exclusion of professional consulting services from the definition of "employment," there is a rebuttable presumption that services provided by attorneys, physicians, dentists, engineers, architects, accountants, and the various types of physical, chemical, natural, and biological scientists are rendered as independent contractors.n38 The rebuttable presumption does not apply to individuals who enter into a contract agreement with the recipient of the professional services that establishes an employer-employee relationship.n39 However, a contract between a nonprofit, licensed, primary care clinic, as defined in Health and Safety Code Section 1204(a), and a licensed physician, surgeon, osteopathic physician and surgeon, podiatrist, optometrist, or psychologist does not constitute an employer-employee relationship if the contract stipulates that the professional services rendered to the clinic are by an independent contractor.n40

[b] Exclusions Contingent on Similar Exclusions Under Federal Unemployment Tax Act

"Employment" does not include specified types of services, as long as they are similarly excluded from the definition of "employment" in the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.n41 Currently, all of the specified services are similarly excluded under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.n42 The excluded services are the following:

1. Domestic service in a local college club or chapter of a college fraternity or sorority, unless cash remuneration of $1000 or more is paid to individuals employed in the domestic service in any calendar quarter in the calendar year or in the preceding calendar year;n43
2. Service not in the course of the employing unit's trade or business performed in any calendar quarter by an employee, unless the cash remuneration paid for the service is $50 or more and the individual is regularly employed by the employing unit to perform the service;n44
3. Service performed in any calendar quarter in the employ of certain organizations exempt from federal income tax, if the remuneration for the service is less than $50;n45
4. Service performed in the employ of a school, college, or university by an enrolled and regularly-attending student or, under certain circumstances, by the student's spouse;n46
5. Services performed by full-time students employed by certain organized camps;n47

6. Service performed in the employ of a foreign government (including service as a consular or other officer or employee or a nondiplomatic representative);ⁿ⁴⁸

7. Service performed in the employ of an instrumentality wholly owned by a foreign government if the service is similar in character to that performed in foreign countries by employees of the United States Government or its instrumentalities, and the foreign government grants an equivalent exemption with respect to similar service performed in the foreign country by employees of the United States Government and its instrumentalities.ⁿ⁴⁹

8. Service performed in the employ of an international organization;ⁿ⁵⁰

9. Service performed as a student nurse in the employ of a hospital or nurses' training school by an individual enrolled in and regularly attending a nurses' training school chartered or approved pursuant to state law, and service performed as an intern in the employ of a hospital by an individual who has completed a four-year course in a medical school chartered or approved pursuant to state law;ⁿ⁵¹

10. Service performed by individuals under the age of 22 years who are enrolled in certain nonprofit or public educational institutions that combine academic instruction with work experience, if the service is an integral part of the program, and the institution has so certified to the employer, unless the program was established for or on behalf of an employer or group of employers;ⁿ⁵²

11. Service performed in the employ of a hospital by a patient of the hospital;ⁿ⁵³ and

12. Service performed on or in connection with a foreign vessel or aircraft when outside the United States.ⁿ⁵⁴

[c] Excluded Services for Public Entities or Nonprofit Organizations

Special considerations apply to public entities defined by Unemployment Insurance Code section 605 and to nonprofit organizations defined by Unemployment Insurance Code section 608.ⁿ⁵⁵ With respect to these employers, the general exclusions described in [2], above, are not applicable except for those for domestic service,ⁿ⁵⁶ family service,ⁿ⁵⁷ service under an unemployment compensation system,ⁿ⁵⁸ and the contingent exclusions set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code sections 639-648.ⁿ⁵⁹ In addition, Unemployment Insurance Code section 634.5 lists certain exclusions that are only applicable to public entities and/or nonprofit organizations, as defined in the Code.

[3] Included and Excluded Services During Same Pay Period

If the services performed during one-half or more of any pay period by an employee constitute employment, all the services of the employee for that period are deemed to be employment.ⁿ⁶⁰ If services performed during one-half or more of any pay period do not constitute employment, none of the services of the employee for that period are deemed to be employment.ⁿ⁶¹ For purposes of this provision, "pay period" means a period of not more than 31 consecutive days for which a payment of remuneration is ordinarily made to the employee by the person employing him or her.ⁿ⁶²

If an individual performs services during a pay period which are in part exempt and in part subject employment, the employer must maintain accurate records that fairly reflect and segregate the included and excluded time in each pay period.ⁿ⁶³

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 601.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606.5.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606.4.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 100-2600 (unemployment compensation), 2601-3272 (disability compensation).

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 601.5; see Tieberg v. Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 943, 950-953, 88 Cal. Rptr. 175, 471 P.2d 975 (writers subject to control of television producer in revision of teleplays, and referred to as "employees" in collective bargaining agreement between writers guild and television producers association, as "employees" of producer for purposes of unemployment compensation benefits); cf. Mark Hopkins, Inc. v. Cal. Emp. Etc. Com. (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 15, 18, 193 P.2d 792 (band leader rather than hotel operator as employer of musicians for purposes of employment compensation liability, even though hotel operator was named as employer under contract prescribed by musicians' union, since band leader had complete control over musicians).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 602(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 603(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 603(b).

(n10)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 603(b).

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 602(b)(1).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 603.5.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 602(b)(2).

(n14)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 604.

(n15)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 609.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 610; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 125.4 (definition of American employer).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 611.

(n18)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 606; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 606-1 (constructive knowledge of substitute or assistant employment).

(n19)Footnote 19. See 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(8); see also 26 U.S.C. § 501(c)(3) (tax-exempt nonprofit organizations described).

(n20)Footnote 20. Unemp. Ins. Code § 608.

(n21)Footnote 21. Unemp. Ins. Code § 629(a); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 629-1 (definition of domestic service in private home). For disability benefit purposes, "employment" includes domestic service in a private home, local college club, or chapter of a college fraternity or sorority for which cash remuneration of $750 or more is paid for the same time period. see Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606.5(a). For discussion of disability benefits, see pt. D, §§ 80.60-80.70.

(n22)Footnote 21.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 629(b).

(n23)Footnote 22. Unemp. Ins. Code § 630.

(n24)Footnote 23. Unemp. Ins. Code § 631; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 631-1 (what constitutes family employment). For discussion of elective coverage, see § 80.07[1][d].

(n25)Footnote 24. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 632.

(n26)Footnote 25. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 635.

(n27)Footnote 26. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 636.

(n28)Footnote 27. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 637; see also 26 U.S.C. § 3301 et seq. (Federal Unemployment Tax Act). In addition, in a private corporation, any individual who is an "employee" pursuant to Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(a) and who is the sole shareholder, or the only shareholder other than his or her spouse, may file a statement electing to be excluded from disability coverage for benefits and contributions. Unemp. Ins. Code § 637.1.

(n29)Footnote 28. Unemp. Ins. Code § 649(a).

(n30)Footnote 29. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 649(b). Such service is excluded from the definition of employment regardless of whether the individual is guaranteed a minimum amount of compensation or is entitled to be credited with unsold newspapers or magazines turned back. see Unemp. Ins. Code § 649(b). Individuals whose services in the sale of newspapers or magazines constitute exempt employment include door-to-door salespersons, newsstand operators, street peddlers, and route carriers.

(n31)Footnote 30. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 650.

(n32)Footnote 31. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 651.

(n33)Footnote 32. See 26 U.S.C. § 3301 et seq.

(n34)Footnote 33. Unemp. Ins. Code § 652.

(n35)Footnote 34. Unemp. Ins. Code § 653; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 653-1 (status of baseball players).

(n36)Footnote 35. Unemp. Ins. Code § 654.

(n37)Footnote 36. Unemp. Ins. Code § 655.

(n38)Footnote 37. Unemp. Ins. Code § 656.

(n39)Footnote 38. Unemp. Ins. Code § 656.

(n40)Footnote 39. Unemp. Ins. Code § 656.

(n41)Footnote 40. Unemp. Ins. Code § 656.

(n42)Footnote 41. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 638; see also 26 U.S.C. § 3301 et seq. (Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n43)Footnote 42. See 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c).

(N44)Footnote 43. Unemp. Ins. Code § 639; 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(2) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n45)Footnote 44. Unemp. Ins. Code § 640; see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 640-1 (defining "service not in course of employing unit's trade or business"); 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(3) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n46)Footnote 45. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 641; see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 641-1 (allocation of remuneration of less than $50 in employment of organization exempt from federal income tax); 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(10)(A) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act); see also 26 U.S.C. §§ 501(a), 521 (description of organizations exempt from income taxation).

(n47)Footnote 46. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 642; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 642(a)-1 (extent of student employee exemption); 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(10)(B) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act); see also Davenport v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1695, 1699-1700, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 214 (job need not be directly related to student's field of study for exclusion to apply).

(n48)Footnote 47. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 642.1; 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(20) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n49)Footnote 48. Unemp. Ins. Code § 643; see 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(11) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n50)Footnote 49. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 644; 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(12) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n51)Footnote 50. Unemp. Ins. Code § 644.5; see 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(16) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n52)Footnote 51. Unemp. Ins. Code § 645; see 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(13) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n53)Footnote 52. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 646; 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(10)(C) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n54)Footnote 53. Unemp. Ins. Code § 647; see 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(10)(D) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n55)Footnote 54. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 648; 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(4) (similar exclusion under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n56)Footnote 55. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 634.5.

(n57)Footnote 56. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 629.

(n58)Footnote 57. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 631.

(n59)Footnote 58. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 635.

(n60)Footnote 59. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 634.5.

(n61)Footnote 60. Unemp. Ins. Code § 607.

(n62)Footnote 61. Unemp. Ins. Code § 607.

(n63)Footnote 62. Unemp. Ins. Code § 607.

(n64)Footnote 63. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 607-1.

138 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.07

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.07 Covered Employees and Employers

[1] Employers

[a] Applicability of Common Law Rules

[i] Generally

Except in the case of "temporary services employers" and employers who "loan" employees to other employers,ⁿ¹ the question of whether an individual or entity is the employer of specific employees is determined under common law rules concerning the existence of an employer-employee relationship.ⁿ² For discussion of common law rules defining the employer-employee relationship, see Chapter 30.

[ii] Exceptions: Lease or Loan of Employees

The common law rules regarding "borrowed" employees do not apply under the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ³ Instead, under the Code, an employing unit that contracts with clients or customers to supply workers to perform services for the client or customer, and retains the specified indicia of control over the workers and the conditions of employment, will be considered a "temporary services employer" or a "leasing employer."ⁿ⁴ In such cases, the temporary services employer or leasing employer is regarded as the "employer" of the individual performing the services for purposes of the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ⁵ If the employing unit is not a temporary services employer or leasing employer, but pays wages to the individual, it will be regarded as the agent of the client or customer, which will be regarded as the employer of the individual.ⁿ⁶

In some instances, an employer will "loan" an employee to another employer, and direction and control of the manner and means of performing the service changes to the employer to whom the employee is loaned. Under these circumstances, determination of the "employer" of the loaned employee depends on who paid remuneration to the employee. The loaning employer continues to be the employer if he or she continues to pay remuneration to the employee, whether or not reimbursed by the other employer.ⁿ⁷ If the employer to whom the employee is loaned pays remuneration to the employee for the services performed, that employer is considered the employer for the purposes of that remuneration, regardless of whether the loaning employer also pays remuneration to the employee.n8

[b] General Definition of "Employer"

"Employer" means any employing unit that for some portion of a day has within the current calendar year or had within the preceding calendar year in "employment"n9 one or more "employees"n10 and pays "wages"n11 for employment in excess of $100 during any calendar quarter.n12 An "employing unit" is any individual or type of organization that has in its employ one or more individuals performing services for it within California.n13

A new employing unit is not created by acquisition or change in the form of the organization of an existing business enterprise, if there is continuity of control of the enterprise.n14 Two or more businesses may constitute a single employing unit if they are united by factors of control, operation, and use.n15

"Employer" includes employing units for which services are performed that are included in "employment" solely for the purposes of the disability compensation provisions under Unemployment Insurance Code sections 2601-3272.n16

In addition, certain types of employing units are specifically included in the definition of "employer," as discussed in [c], below.

[c] Specific Employing Units Included Under Definition of "Employer"

[i] Motion Picture and Broadcasting Industry

"Employer" includes any employing unit that, pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement between an employer and a labor organization in the motion picture, radio, or television industry, pays wages as provided in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 926.5 (liability of prior employer for wages assumed by successor employer).n17

[ii] Employers of Private Domestic Workers

"Employer" includes any employing unit that employs individuals to perform domestic service in a private home, local college club, or local chapter of a college fraternity or sorority and that pays cash wages of $1,000 or more for that service during any calendar quarter in the calendar year or the preceding calendar year.n18 Solely for the purposes of the disability benefit provisions under Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 2601-3272, "employer" also means an employing unit that pays cash wages of $750 or more for the above-specified domestic services.n19

Any employing unit that qualifies as an employer of individuals performing the above-specified private domestic service may not be treated as an employer with respect to wages paid for any service other than the specified domestic service, unless the employing unit also qualifies as an employer with respect to the other service under Sections 675 (general definition of "employer"), 676 (services included in "employment" for purposes of disability benefit provisions), 677 (services included in "employment" by public entity), or 678 (inclusion as "employers" of certain employing units in the motion picture, radio, or television industry).n20

[iii] Employers of Domestic Workers Providing In-Home Supportive Services

"Employer" also means any employing unit that employs individuals to perform domestic service comprising in-home supportive services under Welfare and Institutions Code Sections 12300-12314 and that pays cash wages of $1000 or more (or, solely for the purposes of the disability benefit provision, pays cash wages of $750 or more) for this service during any calendar quarter in the calendar year or the preceding calendar year, and is one of the following:n21

1. The recipient of the specified domestic services, if the state or county makes or provides for direct payment to a provider chosen by the recipient or to the recipient for the purchase of the services subject to the provisions of Welfare and Institutions Code Section 12302.2;

2. The individual or entity with whom a county contracts to provide in-home supportive services; or

3. Any county that hires and directs in-home supportive personnel in accordance with established county civil service requirements or merit system requirements for those counties not having civil service systems.

[iv] Contractor for Work of Authorship

"Employer" also means any person contracting for the creation of a specially ordered or commissioned work of authorship when the parties expressly agree in a written instrument signed by them that the work will be considered a work made for hire, as defined in the federal copyright law,ⁿ²² and the ordering or commissioning party obtains ownership of all of the rights comprised in the copyright in the work.ⁿ²³ The ordering or commissioning party is the employer of the author of the work for the purposes of unemployment compensation benefits.ⁿ²⁴

[d] Elective Employer Coverage

Under certain circumstances, an employing unit not otherwise subject to the unemployment compensation and disability benefit provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code because it is not included in the definition of "employer" may, after filing a written election, receive approval by the Director of Employment Development to become an employer for a period of not less than two calendar years.ⁿ²⁵ Provisions governing such an election, and termination thereof, are set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 701-713.

In addition, any employing unit that is an employer for purposes of unemployment compensation may file with the director a written election to cover, for purposes of disability compensation, services performed by all eligible employees who meet all of the following requirements:ⁿ²⁶

1. They are California residents;
2. Their services are covered under the unemployment compensation laws of another state that does not have a disability insurance program; and
3. They are either (a) part of a labor organization, where the election is the result of a negotiated agreement between the employer and the recognized employee organization; or (b) not a part of a labor organization, where the election is requested by a written petition signed by a majority of the employees to be covered by the election.

[e] Public Entities

Service performed in the employ of a state or political subdivision, or an instrumentality of either, is excluded from the definition of "employment" under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.ⁿ²⁷ However, such service is included in the definition of employment under the Unemployment Insurance Code unless there is some other basis for exclusion,ⁿ²⁸ and public entities, including the State of California and all of its political subdivisions and instrumentalities, are included in the definition of "employer" under the Code.ⁿ²⁹

[2] Employees

[a] Covered Employees

"Employee" means all of the following:

1. Any officer of a corporation;n30
2. Any individual who, under the usual common law rules applicable in determining the employer-employee relationship, has the status of an employee;n31
3. Any individual, other than an individual who is an employee under Paragraphs (1) and (2), above, who performs services for remuneration for any employing unit if the contract of service contemplates that substantially all of these services are to be performed personally by the individual in any of the following capacities:n32
 - a. As an agent driver or commission-driver engaged in distributing specified food products or laundry or drycleaning services, for his or her principal;n33
 - b. As a traveling or city salesperson, other than as an agent-driver or commission driver, engaged on a full-time basis in the solicitation on behalf of, and the transmission to, his or her principal (except for sideline sales activities on behalf of some other person) of orders from wholesalers, retailers, contractors, or operators of hotels, restaurants, or other similar establishments for merchandise for resale or supplies for use in their business operations;n34 or
 - c. As a home worker performing work, according to specifications furnished by the person for whom the services are performed, on materials or goods furnished by the person that are required to be returned to the person or a person designated by him or her;
4. Any individual who is an employee pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 601.5 (certain service in an artistic or literary capacity in the motion picture, radio or television industry)n35 or 686 (persons contracting in writing for creation of "works made for hire," as defined in the Copyright Act)n36 and
5. Any individual whose services are in subject employment pursuant to an election for coverage under Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 701-713.n37

An individual is not included in the term "employee" under the provisions of Paragraph (3), above, n38 if he or she has a substantial investment in facilities used in connection with the performance of those services, other than in facilities for transportation, or if the services are in the nature of a single transaction that is not part of a continuing relationship with the employing unit for whom the services are performed.n39

"Employee" also means any individual who is an employee, pursuant to Labor Code Section 2750.5 (raising a rebuttable presumption that certain workers are employees rather than independent contractors),n40 of a person who holds, or does not hold but is required to obtain, a valid state contractor's license pursuant to Business and Professions Code Section 7000 et seq. (Contractors License Law).n41

Even though no state contractor's license is required for contracting work performed on federal land, the employee status presumption, contained in Lab. Code § 2750.5 and incorporated into Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 621.5 and 13004.5, does apply in that situation.n42 For the provisions defining an employer/employee relationship to determine employer liability for tax withholding and contributions to the unemployment and disability funds, the Unemployment Insurance Code is applied with the same effect and to the same extent as though work had not been performed on federal land.n43

[b] Exclusion of Directors of Corporations or Associations

"Employee" does not include a director of a corporation or association performing services in his or her capacity as a director,ⁿ⁴⁴ unless the director is engaged in services included in "employment" pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 605, 608, 709, and 710, relating to public entities or nonprofit organizations.ⁿ⁴⁵

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion under [ii] below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(a); see also discussion in § 80.05.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(c).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(d).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 606.5(d).

(n9)Footnote 9. See discussion in § 80.06.

(n10)Footnote 10. See discussion in [2], below.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 926-940 (items included and excluded from "wages"); see also discussion in § 80.21[3].

(n12)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 675.

(n13)Footnote 13. Unemp. Ins. Code § 135(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 135.1(a); see Unemp. Ins. Code § 135.1(b), (c) (factors indicating control and continuity of control).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 135.2(a).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 676; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606 ("employment" for purposes of disability compensation provisions).

(n17)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 678.

(n18)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 682(a).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 684(a); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606.5 (inclusion of certain domestic service under definition of "employment" for disability benefit purposes).

(n20)Footnote 20. Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 682(b), 684(b).

(n21)Footnote 21. Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 683, 685.

(n22)Footnote 22. See 17 U.S.C. § 101.

(n23)Footnote 23. Unemp. Ins. Code § 686.

(n24)Footnote 24. Unemp. Ins. Code § 686.

(n25)Footnote 25. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 701.

(n26)Footnote 26. Unemp. Ins. Code § 702.6.

(n27)Footnote 27. See 26 U.S.C. § 3306(c)(7).

(n28)Footnote 28. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 605.

(n29)Footnote 29. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 605(b), 677.

(n30)Footnote 30. Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(a).

(n31)Footnote 31. Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(b); see 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 621(b)-1, 4304-1; see also discussion in § 80.05. For discussion of common law rules for determining employer-employee relationship, see Chapter 30.

(n32)Footnote 32. Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(c)(1); see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 621(c)-1(a) (factual situations illustrative of specified occupational groups).

(n33)Footnote 33. See In re Brown (9th Cir. 1984) 743 F.2d 664, 667 (drivers transporting produce in trucks owned or leased by carrier as employees of carriers rather than independent contractors, and carriers as liable for unemployment and disability compensation tax).

(n34)Footnote 34. Metric Man, Inc. v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1041, 1046, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 569 (based on express language of Unemp. Ins. Code § 621, EDD and UIAB properly applied seven-part test to determine whether salesperson was employee; superior court's findings upheld as supported by substantial evidence).

(n35)Footnote 35. See § 80.06[1][b].

(n36)Footnote 36. Unemp. Ins. Code 621(d); see 17 U.S.C. 101. See also [1][c][iii], above.

(n37)Footnote 37. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(e); see also [1][d], above.

(n38)Footnote 38. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(c)(1).

(n39)Footnote 39. Unemp. Ins. Code § 621(c)(2).

(n40)Footnote 40. See discussion in ch. 30.

(n41)Footnote 41. Unemp. Ins. Code § 621.5; see Hunt Building Corp. v. Bernick (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 213, 219-220, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 883 .

(n42)Footnote 42. Hunt Building Corp. v. Bernick (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 213, 221, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 883 .

(n43)Footnote 43. Hunt Building Corp. v. Bernick (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 213, 221, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 883 .

(n44)Footnote 44. Unemp. Ins. Code § 622(a).

(n45)Footnote 45. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 622(a); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 622(b), (c) (services constituting "services in capacity as director").

139 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.08

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.08 Administration and Enforcement of Law by Employment Development Department

[1] Responsibilities Generally

California's Unemployment Fund and the payment of benefits to unemployed workers from that fund is administered by the Employment Development Department (EDD) of the State Health and Welfare Agency.ⁿ¹

[2] Rulemaking and Other Duties of Director of EDD

[a] Generally

The Director of the EDD is responsible for adopting, amending, or repealing regulations for the administration of the EDD's functions.ⁿ² The Director must also make reports as required by the Secretary of Labor,ⁿ³ and may by authorized regulations prescribe the information required to be reported to the EDD by employing units.ⁿ⁴

[b] Dissemination of Materials

On request, the EDD must provide its rules, regulations, guidelines, bulletins, manuals, standards of general application, or the departmental responsibilities under any state or federal law, along with any subscription service necessary to assure prompt receipt of additional amendments to any of the above materials.ⁿ⁵ Documents properly classified as confidential are exempt from this provision requirement.ⁿ⁶ A fee must be charged to cover costs of reproduction and postage.ⁿ⁷

[3] Appeals Division

The Appeals Division of the EDD includes the California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board and the administrative law judges.ⁿ⁸ For a full discussion of the authority and powers of the Appeals Division, see Part E (§§ 80.80-80.88).

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 301-301.7.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 305; see Unemp. Ins. Code § 127 ("authorized regulations" are those promulgated pursuant to the provisions of Gov. Code §§ 11340-11346); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 305-3 (procedures for promulgation and change of regulations); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 305.6 (effectiveness of regulations adopted by previous agencies).

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 320.

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 320.5.

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 307.

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 307.

(n7)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 307.

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 315.

140 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.08A

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.08A Employment Taxpayer's Bill of Rights

In 1995, in an effort to assist employers in making determinations regarding which employees are subject to employment taxes, the California legislature passed the "Employment Taxpayer's Bill of Rights."ⁿ¹ First, this law sets up a development and education program directed at taxpayer and industry groups, as well as EDD audit and compliance staff, to identify and correct forms, procedures, regulations and laws which are confusing.ⁿ² Second, it provides employers who are assessed taxes and penalties a defense if their failure to report or pay taxes was based on advice it received from the EDD,ⁿ³ (if these sections are certified by the United States Secretary of Labor pursuant to section 3303 of Title 26 of the United States Code).ⁿ⁴ Third, effective January 1, 1997, it authorizes the settlement of civil employment tax disputes.ⁿ⁵

Employers may avoid liability for taxes, interest or penalties if they reasonably relied on written advice obtained as follows:ⁿ⁶

1. The employer requested, in writing, advice from EDD regarding taxability of a certain transaction or activity and the specific facts and circumstances were described in the request; and
2. EDD responded in writing, providing advice about the taxability in question; and
3. The employer did not remit taxes, in reasonable reliance on the advice given; and
4. The liability for taxes occurred before the EDD modified or rescinded the advice by sending written notice of the modification or rescission; and
5. The tax consequences expressed in the advice were not subsequently changed by statute or case law, a change in a federal administrative ruling on which the advice was based or a material change in the circumstances relating to the taxpayer.

In order to seek relief under this section, the taxpayer must file with the EDD a copy of the request for advice and the advice given, a statement under penalty of perjury setting forth the facts on which the claim is based and such other information as required by the EDD.ⁿ⁷ If this law is not made operative as set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code section 1234, then only relief from penalties and interest will be available.ⁿ⁸

Under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1236, any disputed civil tax matter under Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1126 et seq. (assessments), 1176 et seq. (refunds and overpayments), and 1221 et seq. (administrative appellate review) may be settled under the following conditions:

1. If the disputed matter involves $7,500 or less, the director may approve a settlement. However, if an appeal has been filed with the appeals board, and it has been assigned to an administrative law judge, and a notice of hearing has been issued, the administrative law judge must approve the appeal. If the decision of the administrative law judge is appealed, the appeals board must approve the settlement, and a scheduled hearing on the proposed settlement may be continued until the California Attorney General completes a review, which must be within 30 days of receipt.ⁿ⁹
2. If the proposed settlement involves a reduction in tax and penalties of $5,000 or less, it may be approved by the director and the administrative law judge or appeals board, without submission to the Attorney General.ⁿ¹⁰ Otherwise, the Attorney General's determination that the settlement is reasonable is required.ⁿ¹¹
3. The public record of settlements under this section may not include information that relates to any trade secret, patent, process, or the like, that would adversely affect the taxpayer or the national defense.ⁿ¹²
4. All settlements under this section shall be final and nonappealable, except in cases of fraud or misrepresentation of a material fact.ⁿ¹³

For purposes of this section the term settlement is defined as "a compromise on the amount of tax liability, consistent with the reasonable evaluation of the costs and risks associated with litigation of these matters."ⁿ¹⁴ Any settlements involving a reduction of tax or total penalties in excess of $500 require the director to keep, as a public record, the following information: the names of the parties to the settlement; the amount involved; the amount payable or refundable due to the settlement; a statement of the reasons why settlement is in the best interests of the state; and the Attorney General's written statement regarding the reasonableness of the settlement.ⁿ¹⁵ Other than the settlements required to be maintained as a public record, settlements under this section constitute confidential tax information.ⁿ¹⁶ Finally, if the settlement involves the classification of a worker as an employee or an independent contractor, the settlement may also include an agreement on the prospective classification of that worker or any other worker similarly situated.ⁿ¹⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1231-1236.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1231.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1233, 1234.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1234.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1233(b).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1233(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1233(j).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236(a)(3).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236(a)(2).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236(c).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236(d).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236(h).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236(c).

(n16)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236(e).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1236(f).

141 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.09

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.09 Use of Information Obtained

[1] Confidentiality

[a] Generally

Except as otherwise specifically provided in the Unemployment Insurance Code,ⁿ¹ information obtained in the administration of the Code is confidential, not open to the public, and for the exclusive use and information of the Director of the EDD in the discharge of his or her duties.ⁿ² Furthermore, information released to authorized entities in accordance with other provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code is not admissible in evidence in any action or special proceeding, other than one arising out of the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code or one described in Unemployment Code Section 1095.ⁿ³ The information may be tabulated and published in statistical form for use by federal, state, and local governmental departments and agencies, and the public, except that the name of the employing unit or of any worker may never be divulged in the course of the tabulation or publication.ⁿ⁴ Wagesⁿ⁵ and amounts required to be deducted and withheldⁿ⁶ may not be disclosed except as provided by the Revenue and Tax Code.ⁿ⁷ Any employee or his or her representative may receive the employee's wage information on written request by the employee. That information must be provide without charge.ⁿ⁸ Any person who knowingly accesses, uses, or discloses any confidential information without authorization is guilty of a misdemeanor.ⁿ⁹

Any public officer or employee who improperly discloses confidential information obtained in the administration of the Unemployment Insurance Code is subject to criminal penalties, including fines and imprisonment in the county jail.ⁿ¹⁰

For a full discussion of an employee's privacy rights, see Chapters 50 and 51.

[b] Medical Records Related to Disability Claims

Special rules of confidentiality apply to medical records of the EDD obtained pursuant to the disability benefit provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ¹¹ These records are confidential, except to the extent necessary for proper administration of the disability benefit provisions, or as provided elsewhere in law.ⁿ¹² They are not otherwise to be published or open to public inspection in any manner that would reveal the identity of the claimant or family member, or the nature or cause of his or her disability.ⁿ¹³ Medical records that are disclosed must be disclosed only in accordance with Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1095, and in any case must remain confidential.ⁿ¹⁴

[2] Purposes for Which Information May Be Used

[a] Generally

The director of the EDD must permit the use of any information in his or her possession to the extent necessary for certain specified purposes.ⁿ¹⁵ The director may require reimbursement for all direct costs incurred in providing this information, with specified exceptions.ⁿ¹⁶

Some of the purposes for which information must be provided are directly related to implementation of the unemployment compensation and disability benefits provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code, such as to enable an employee to properly present a claim for benefits,ⁿ¹⁷ to acquaint a worker with his or her existing or prospective right to benefits,ⁿ¹⁸ to enable an employer to fully discharge his or her obligations or safeguard his or her rights under the unemployment compensation or disability benefit provisions,ⁿ¹⁹ or to enable an employer to receive a reduction in contribution rate.ⁿ²⁰

Other purposes are related to assisting the EDD and other agencies to carry out their functions,ⁿ²¹ including, for example:

- To enable federal, state, or local government departments or agencies, to determine an individual's entitlement to public benefits.ⁿ²²
- To enable state and local governmental departments or agencies to seek legal remedies in connection with the unlawful application for or receipt of relief or to enable the collection of expenditures for assistance services provided in accordance with the Welfare and Institutions Code.ⁿ²³
- To enable the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement to seek criminal, civil, or administrative remedies in connection with the failure to pay or the unlawful payment of wages.ⁿ²⁴
- To assist federal, state, and local governmental departments or agencies in the administration of the victims of crime program or in the location of victims of crime who are entitled to restitution.ⁿ²⁵
- To provide federal, state, or local government departments or agencies with wage and claim information (excluding unemployment benefit information) to assist in the collection of restitution, fines, penalties, assessment, and fees and of delinquent or defaulted guaranteed student loans.ⁿ²⁶
- To assist an authorized governmental agency, such as county district attorney or office of the Attorney General, in the investigation of workers' compensation insurance fraud.ⁿ²⁷
- To provide public employment retirement systems in California with earnings information of any individual who has applied for or is receiving a disability income or allowance from a public retirement system.ⁿ²⁸
- To enable federal, state, or local governmental departments to administer child support enforcement programsⁿ²⁹ and to assist in collecting monies owed for welfare services and support.ⁿ³⁰
- To verify information on private postsecondary and vocational school administrators, staff, and students in schools being investigated for violation of *Education Code Section 94700 et seq.*ⁿ³¹

- To provide information to tax officials of Mexico under reciprocal agreements.ⁿ³²
- To enable city and county planning agencies to develop economic forecasts for planning purposes.ⁿ³³
- To enable the Contractors' State License Board to verify the employment history of an individual applying for licensure.ⁿ³⁴
- To provide a peace officer with the Division of Investigation in the Department of Consumer Affairs information when the officer has been designated by the Chief of the Division of Investigations and requests this information in the course of and in part of an investigation into the commission of a crime or other unlawful act when there is reasonable suspicion to believe that the crime or act may be connected to the information requested and would lead to relevant information regarding the crime or unlawful act.^{n34.1}
- To enable the Labor Commissioner of the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement in the Department of Industrial Relations to identify unlawfully uninsured employers.^{n34.2}
- To enable the Chancellor of the California Community Colleges to obtain quarterly wage data commencing January 1, 1993, on students who have attended one or more community colleges to assess the impact of education on the employment and earnings of students, to conduct the annual evaluation of district-level and individual college performance in achieving priority educational outcomes, and to submit the required reports to the Legislature and the Governor.^{n34.3}
- To enable the Public Employees' Retirement System to seek criminal, civil, or administrative remedies in connection with the unlawful application for or receipt of benefits provided under Gov. Code § 20000 et seq.^{n34.4}

Nothing in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1095, authorizing the use of information obtained in the administration of the Unemployment Insurance Code for specified purposes, may be construed to authorize or permit the use of information by any private collection agency.ⁿ³⁵

Under federal law, a state unemployment compensation agency must disclose to the appropriate federal or state agencies certain confidential information relating to the individual's eligibility for benefits under the supplemental nutrition assistance program,ⁿ³⁶ and child support obligations.ⁿ³⁷

[b] Information to Federal Agencies Concerned with Public Employment

The Director of the EDD must make available, on request, to any agency of the United States government charged with the administration of public works or assistance through public employment, information relating to recipients of unemployment compensation, including their name and address, their ordinary occupation and employment status, and their rights to further state unemployment or disability compensation.ⁿ³⁸

[c] Exchange of Information With Other Governmental Agencies

The EDD may exchange information with other governmental departments and agencies, both federal and state, which are concerned with unemployment insurance, the relief of unemployed or destitute individuals, or legislation arising out of an employment relationship, and with other departments or agencies as the department deems necessary or desirable for the proper administration of unemployment and disability compensation.ⁿ³⁹

The EDD is required to permit the use of information in its possession to enable the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) to seek criminal, civil, or administrative remedies in connection with the failure to pay, or the unlawful payment of, wages under Labor Code Sections 200 et seq. and *1720 et seq.*ⁿ⁴⁰ For discussion of DLSE enforcement of wage and hour laws, see Chapter 5.

When requested by the State Department of Social Services, the Franchise Tax Board, or the Parent Locator Service, the EDD is required to compare information it collects from new employees under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1088.5 and Revenue and Taxation Code Section 19271,ⁿ⁴¹ with information it receives from those agencies for purposes of locating delinquent payors of child support payments, or others having a support obligation.ⁿ⁴² This information can also be provided to the Franchise Tax Board.ⁿ⁴³ Similarly, the EDD must permit the use of information in its possession to enable federal, state, or local governmental departments to administer child support enforcement programs under the Social Security Act.ⁿ⁴⁴ The EDD must also provide the State Department of Developmental Service with wage and employee information that will assist in the collection of money owed for support under the Welfare and Institutions Code.ⁿ⁴⁵

In addition, the director of the EDD must provide other governmental departments or agencies with information concerning any individuals who are delinquent or in default on guaranteed student loans, or who owe repayment of funds received through other financial assistance programs administered by that commission. For this purpose, the EDD is not permitted to release any information concerning unemployment insurance benefits.

[d] Information to Law Enforcement Agencies

When there is reasonable suspicion that the information would lead to relevant evidence in the investigation of a felony, the director of the EDD must provide any law enforcement agency certain identifying information about any victim, suspect, missing person, potential witness, or person for whom a felony arrest warrant has been issued when so requested by a state investigator or peace officerⁿ⁴⁶ or specified federal law enforcement officers.ⁿ⁴⁷

[e] Information to Tax Officials of Mexico

If a reciprocal agreement with the national taxing officials of Mexico exists, the director of the EDD must provide employment tax information to the Mexican officials. A "reciprocal agreement" means a formal agreement to exchange information between national taxing officials of Mexico and taxing authorities of the State Board of Equalization, the Franchise Tax Board, and the Employment Development Department. Such agreements must be limited to exchange of essential tax administration information.ⁿ⁴⁸

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in [2], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1094(a); see Unemp. Ins. Code § 2111.

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1094(b); see [2][a], [b], below, for discussion of Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095 (permitting use of information for specified purposes by various state and county service agencies).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1094(c).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 13009 (definition).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 13020.

(n7)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1094(d); see Rev. & Tax Code § 19501 et seq. (disclosure).

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1094(e).

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1094(f).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2111, 2122.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2601 et seq.

(n12)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2714.

(n13)Footnote 13. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2714.

(n14)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2714.

(n15)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095.

(n16)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095; see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(a)-(e) (exceptions).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(b).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(c).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(d).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(e).

(n21)Footnote 21. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(a).

(n22)Footnote 22. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(f), (g); see also 42 U.S.C. § 503(d) (mandatory disclosure by state unemployment compensation agency to appropriate federal or state agencies of certain confidential information in its records relating to individual's eligibility for benefits under supplemental nutrition assistance program).

(n23)Footnote 23. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(h); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 10000 et seq.

(n24)Footnote 24. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(k); see Lab. Code §§ 200 et seq., 1720 et seq.

(n25)Footnote 25. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(m), (n).

(n26)Footnote 26. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(n).

(n27)Footnote 27. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(o).

(n28)Footnote 28. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(j).

(n29)Footnote 29. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(l).

(n30)Footnote 30. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(s); see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 4775 et seq., 7200 et seq., 7500 et seq.

(n31)Footnote 31. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(p).

(n32)Footnote 32. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(q).

(n33)Footnote 33. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(r).

(n34)Footnote 34. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(v); see Bus. & Prof. Code § 7068.

(n35)Footnote 34.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(w).

(n36)Footnote 34.2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(x). See Lab. Code § Section 90.3.

(n37)Footnote 34.3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(y). See Educ. Code § 84754.5.

(n38)Footnote 34.4. Unempl Ins. Code § 1095(z).

(n39)Footnote 35. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(t).

(n40)Footnote 36. See 42 U.S.C. § 503(d).

(n41)Footnote 37. See 42 U.S.C. § 503(e).

(n42)Footnote 38. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 321.

(n43)Footnote 39. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 322.

(n44)Footnote 40. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(k).

(n45)Footnote 41. See discussion under § 80.20[2A].

(n46)Footnote 42. See Fam. Code §§ 17505, 17506.

(n47)Footnote 43. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(f)(4).

(n48)Footnote 44. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(l); see also 42 U.S.C. § 651 et seq.; § 80.20[2B].

(n49)Footnote 45. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(s).

(n50)Footnote 46. See Penal Code § 830.1, 830.2 (definitions).

(n51)Footnote 47. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(i); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 2714 (disclosure of medical records).

(n52)Footnote 48. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1095(q).

142 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.10

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.10 Invalidity of Waiver or Assignment of Benefits

Any waiver by any person of any benefit or right under the Unemployment Insurance Code is invalid, and the benefits are not subject to assignment, release, or commutation, except as provided by Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1255.7 (deduction of child support obligations from unemployment compensation benefits), Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1345 (redirection of disability insurance voluntary plan benefits to cover cost of employee-paid benefits), and Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2630 (deduction of child support obligations from state disability benefits).n1 Any agreement by any individual in the employ of any person or concern to pay all or any portion of the unemployment or disability compensation benefits required of the employer is void.n2

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1342.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1342.

143 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.11

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.11 Criminal Violations and Penalties

Violations of Chapter 10 of the Unemployment Insurance Code are punishable, with certain exceptions, by imprisonment in the county jail for up to one year, imprisonment in state prison, a fine of up to $20,000, or by both a fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court.ⁿ¹ These violations, which may be charged as either misdemeanors or felonies,ⁿ² include:

1. False statements or representations or failure to disclose material facts, or use of a false name, false social security number, or other false identification, to obtain, increase, reduce, or defeat a benefit or payment;ⁿ³
2. False statements or representations or failure to disclose material facts to lower or avoid a required contribution or avoid becoming or remaining subject to the statutes governing unemployment and disability compensation benefits;ⁿ⁴
3. False statements or representations or failure to disclose material facts to obtain or increase benefits or payments under the unemployment insurance law of another state;ⁿ⁵
4. Making a greater deduction from a worker's wages than the contribution required for the purpose of paying any required contribution;ⁿ⁶
5. Failing to appear, testify, or produce documents required at any hearing;ⁿ⁷
6. Failing or neglecting to make required records available for inspection by the EDD or to furnish reports required by the director;ⁿ⁸
7. Conniving or conspiring to aid an individual to obtain benefits he or she is not entitled to by withholding information or failing to report relevant information;ⁿ⁹

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.11

8. Failing or refusing to make any contributions due;n10
9. Failing to register as an employing unit or to submit required returns and reports;n11
10. Failing to pay deductions withheld from workers' wages;n12
11. Agreeing to pay disability contributions for workers without deduction from the workers' wages but failing to do so;n13
12. Failing to withhold deductions and contributions in trust;n14
13. Disclosing confidential information;n15
14. Reporting or registering a fictitious employer, a fictitious employee, or fictitious wages;n16
15. Falsely reporting amounts of wages earned or the time period in which wages are earned;n17
16. Aiding in, procuring, counselling, advising, or coercing the preparation or presentation of a fraudulent return, reports, affidavit, claim, or other document;n18
17. Violating any statute or regulation governing unemployment or disability compensation benefits;n19 and
18. Failing to file any return or report or supply any information, making a false return, reports, or statement, or supplying false information, to evade any tax imposed by the Unemployment Insurance Code.n20

Willful failure to collect, account for, and pay over any amount required to be withheld, is a felony punishable by a fine of up to $20,000, by imprisonment in the state prison, or by both the fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court.n21

Any person who, with or without intent to evade lawful requirements, fails to file a return, supply required information, makes a false or fraudulent return or statement, or supplies false information, is liable for a civil penalty and is also guilty of a misdemeanor (but not a felony), and may be either fined, imprisoned for not more than one year, or both fined and imprisoned, at the discretion of the court.n22

It is also unlawful to do any of the following:n23

1. Falsely certify the medical condition of any person to obtain disability insurance benefits, including family temporary disability insurance benefits,n24 whether for the maker or for any other person;
2. Knowingly present or cause to be presented any false or fraudulent written or oral statement supporting a claim for disability insurance benefits, including family temporary disability insurance benefits;
3. Knowingly solicit, receive, offer, pay, or accept any consideration, in the form of money or otherwise, as compensation or inducement for soliciting a claimant to apply for disability insurance benefits, including family temporary disability insurance benefits, unless the payment is lawful under Business and Professions Code Section 650; or

4. Knowingly assist, abet, solicit, or conspire with anyone engaging in any of the unlawful acts described in 1. through 3., above.ⁿ²⁵

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2122.

(n2)Footnote 2. See People v. Booker (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1517, 1524, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 715 .

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2101; People v. Booker (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1517, 1523, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 715 (Unemp. Ins. Code § 2122, not Unemp. Ins. Code § 2117, is punishment statute for violations of Unemp. Ins. Code § 2101).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2101.5.

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2102.

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2103.

(n7)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2104.

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2105, 2106.

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2107.

(n10)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2108.

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2109.

(n12)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2110.

(n13)Footnote 13. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2110.3.

(n14)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2110.5, 2110.7.

(n15)Footnote 15. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2111.

(n16)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2114.

(n17)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2115.

(n18)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2121.

(n19)Footnote 19. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2112.

(n20)Footnote 20. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2117.5.

(n21)Footnote 21. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2118.5.

(n22)Footnote 22. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2117; see People v. Booker (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1517, 1523, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 715 .

(n23)Footnote 23. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2116.

(n24)Footnote 24. For discussion of family temporary disability insurance benefits, see Ch. 8, § 8.23[5].

(n25)Footnote 25. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2116(d).

144 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.12

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.12 Self-Employment Assistance Program

[1] Purpose of Program

The traditional system of unemployment compensation is primarily designed to provide income support for individuals who are temporarily laid off or expect to be unemployed for a short time.ⁿ¹ Because increasing numbers of workers are losing their jobs permanently due to rapid technological change, elimination of trade barriers, and similar causes, they need more than the basic income support provided by unemployment compensation to reenter the workforce.ⁿ² Therefore, the Legislature has established a program of allowances, training, and support services, for eligible dislocated workers who wish to become self-employed in their transition back into the workforce.ⁿ³

This program, known as the "Self-Employment Assistance Program," (the program)ⁿ⁴ enables an unemployed individual to engage on a fulltime basis in self-employment activities that will lead to establishing a business and becoming self-employed, while receiving a weekly allowance that is equal to regular unemployment compensation benefits.ⁿ⁵

[2] Eligibility for Participation

To be eligible to participate in the program, an individual must meet the following requirements:

1. Be eligible to receive regular unemployment compensation benefits;ⁿ⁶
2. Have been identified pursuant to an automated profiling system as likely to exhaust regular unemployment compensation benefits;ⁿ⁷
3. Have been approved for participation by the EDD;ⁿ⁸
4. Participate in entrepreneurial training, business counseling, and technical assistance as required by the EDD;ⁿ⁹ and

5. Be engaged on a fulltime basis in activities related to establishing a business and becoming self-employed.ⁿ¹⁰

An individual is prohibited from participating in the program if his or her prior employer is the primary user of the services of the individual's new business.ⁿ¹¹ Employers may not coerce employees into participating in the program.ⁿ¹²

[3] Conditions for Receipt of Allowances

Allowances under the programⁿ¹³ are paid at the same interval, on the same terms, and subject to the same conditions as regular unemployment compensation benefits,ⁿ¹⁴ with the following exceptions:

1. The requirements regarding availability for work, active search for work, and refusal to accept work do not apply to any week that an individual is in training or engaged in self-employment activities.ⁿ¹⁵
2. Income earned by an individual while engaged in self-employment activities is not construed as wages and will not cause the individual's benefits (either regular unemployment compensation benefits or allowances paid under the program) to be denied or reduced.ⁿ¹⁶
3. An individual is disqualified for benefits for any week in which the individual fails to participate in required activities, including training, related to establishing a business and becoming self-employed.ⁿ¹⁷

[4] Effective Dates

The provisions establishing and governing the program apply to weeks beginning after the later of either January 1, 1995, or, if the program requires approval by the United States Department of Labor, the date of that approval.ⁿ¹⁸ These provisions terminate as of the week ending December 5, 1998.ⁿ¹⁹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1300.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1300.

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1300.

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1301(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1301(a), 1302.

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1304(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1304(b).

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1304(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1304(d).

(n10)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1304(e).

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1307.

(n12)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1307.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1302.

(n14)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1303.

(n15)Footnote 15. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1303(a).

(n16)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1303(b).

(n17)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1303(c).

(n18)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1308.

(n19)Footnote 19. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1308.

145 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.13

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.13 Family Temporary Disability Insurance Benefits

Effective January 1, 2004,ⁿ¹ employees eligible to take family care leaveⁿ² under the federal Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA)ⁿ³ or the California Family Rights Act (CFRA),ⁿ⁴ to care for a seriously ill child,ⁿ⁵ spouse, parent,ⁿ⁶ or domestic partner,ⁿ⁷ or to bond with a new child, are eligible to receive up to six weeks of wage replacement benefits.ⁿ⁸

The Paid Family Care Leave Act applies to leave taken after July 1, 2004.ⁿ⁹ The benefits are paid through employee contributions to the disability insurance program.ⁿ¹⁰

Benefits begin after a seven-day waiting period.ⁿ¹¹ Family Temporary Disability Insurance (FTDI) leave must be taken concurrently with leave taken under the FMLA and the CFRA.ⁿ¹² As a condition of an employee's initial receipt of family temporary disability insurance benefits during any 12-month period in which the employee is eligible for the benefits, an employer may require an employee to take up to two weeks of earned but unused vacation leave before the employee's initial receipt of the benefits. If an employer requires the employee to take vacation leave, that portion of the vacation leave not exceeding one week will be applied to the required seven-day waiting period.ⁿ¹³

The weekly benefit amount is the amount provided in Unemp. Ins. Code § 2655.ⁿ¹⁴ The maximum amount payable to an individual during any disability benefit period for family temporary disability insurance is six times his or her weekly benefit amount. However, in no case can the total amount of benefits payable be more than the total wages paid to the individual during his or her disability base period.ⁿ¹⁵

An individual is not eligible for family temporary disability insurance benefits under the following circumstances:

- With respect to any day he or she received unemployment compensation benefits under Unemp. Ins. Code § 100 et seq. or under an unemployment compensation act of any other state or the federal government;ⁿ¹⁶
- With respect to any day of unemployment and disability for which he or she received or is entitled to receive "other benefits" in the form of cash benefits as defined in Unemp. Ins. Code § 2629(b);n17

- With respect to any day he or she is entitled to receive state disability insurance benefits under Unemp. Ins. Code § 2601 et seq. or under a disability insurance act of any other state;n18 or
- With respect to any day another family member is able and available for the same period of time that the individual is providing the required care.n19

If an individual falsely certifies the medical condition of any person to obtain family temporary disability insurance benefits, with the intent to defraud, whether for the maker or for any other person, the director must assess a penalty against the individual in the amount of 25 percent of the benefits paid as a result of the false certification.n20

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Stats. 2002, Ch. 901, § 7.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 3302(b) (defining "family care leave" as either (1) leave because of the birth of a child of the employee or the employee's domestic partner, the placement of a child with an employee in connection with the adoption or foster care of the child by the employee or domestic partner, or the serious health condition (per Unemp. Ins. Code § 3302(f)) as an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition involving inpatient care in hospital, hospice, or residential health care facility, or continuing treatment or continuing supervision by health care provider, (per Gov. Code § 12945.2) of a child of the employee, spouse or domestic partner; or (2) leave to care for a parent, spouse, or domestic partner who has a serious health condition).

(n3)Footnote 3. 29 U.S.C. § 2611 et seq.

(n4)Footnote 4. Gov. Code § 12945.2.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 3302(a) (defining "child" as biological, adopted, or foster son or daughter, stepson or stepdaughter, legal ward, son or daughter of a domestic partner, or son or daughter of an employee who stands in loco parentis to that child).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 3302(c) (defining "parent" as a biological, foster, or adoptive parent, a stepparent, a legal guardian, or other person who stood in loco parentis to the employee when the employee was a child).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 3302(d) ("domestic partner" has same meaning as defined in Fam. Code § 297).

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3301(a), (d) (no more than six weeks of benefits can be paid within any 12-month period).

(n9)Footnote 9. Stats. 2002, ch. 901, § 7.

(n10)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3301(a); see Unemp. Ins. Code § 984(a)(2)(B) (worker contributions to cover cost of family temporary disability insurance benefits).

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3303(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3303(f).

(n13)Footnote 13. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3303(g).

(n14)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3301(b); see § 80.66[1].

(n15)Footnote 15. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3301(c).

(n16)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3303(b).

(n17)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3303(c); see § 80.64[2].

(n18)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3303(d); see § 80.60 et seq.

(n19)Footnote 19. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3303(e).

(n20)Footnote 20. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3305.

146 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part A. OVERVIEW OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW

4-80 California Employment Law §§ 80.14through 80.19

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 80.14[Reserved]

147 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part B. REPORTS, CONTRIBUTIONS, AND ASSESSMENTS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.20

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.20 Reports & Registration

[1] Work Records

Every employing unit must keep an accurate work record of all workers and their status (employed, on layoff, or on leave of absence), the wages paid to each worker, and other matters specified in EDD regulations.ⁿ¹

[2] Filing Returns and Reports

Each employer must file with the director within the time required for payment of employer contributionsⁿ² a return and a report of wages paid to his or her workers in the form and containing the information prescribed by the Director of the EDD.ⁿ³ Domestic service employers can file their report of unemployment contributions by telephone.^{n3.1} Beginning January 1, 1997, for reports of wages for the 1997 calendar year and thereafter, the report of wages must include the full first name of the employee and the total wages^{n3.2} paid to each employee.^{n3.3}

The employer must also file with the director within the time required for payment of worker contributionsⁿ⁴ a return identifying the employer and its account number, stating the total amount of worker contributions due, and such other information as the director prescribes, in the form prescribed by the director.ⁿ⁵

Special procedures apply if the director determines that an employer reporting wages pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1088 or other applicable sections is not the correct employer of the employees whose wages are reported.ⁿ⁶

The penalty imposed for failure, without good cause, to file a required return and report of wages within a prescribed time is set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1112.5.

In addition to the returns and reports of wages and worker contributions, each employer must file with the director an annual reconciliation return showing the total amount of wages,^{n6.1} employer contributions,^{n6.2} and worker contributions,^{n6.3} as well as amounts withheld as California personal income tax,^{n6.4} and any other information required by the director.^{n6.5} This return is due the first day of January following the close of the prior calendar year; it is delinquent if not filed by the last day of January.^{n6.6} The penalty for failure to file this return is set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1117.

The director may extend the time for filing the return and reports required by Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1088, described above, as well as the time for payment of worker contributions, if the governor has declared a state of emergency. Any extension applies only to employers prevented from filing or paying by the conditions giving rise to the state of emergency.^{n6.7}

[2A] New Employee Report

In addition to information reported in the return and report of wages,ⁿ⁷ effective July 1, 1998, employers are required to file with the EDD specified information on new employees.ⁿ⁸ The EDD is authorized to use the information obtained to administer the Unemployment Insurance Code, employment security and worker's compensation programs, locate individuals for purposes of establishing paternity and establishing, modifying, and enforcing child support obligations, provide information to the Franchise Tax Board for purposes of tax enforcement, and verify the eligibility of applicants for, and recipients of, specified federal public assistance programs.ⁿ⁹

Employers must report the hiring of any new employee who works in California and to whom the employer anticipates paying wages.ⁿ¹⁰

Specifically, employers are required to report:ⁿ¹¹

- The employee's name, address, and social security number;
- The employer's name, address, state employer identification number, if any, and federal taxpayer identification number; and
- The first date the employee worked.

Employers must submit their reports within 20 days of hiring any employee whom the employer is required to report, or, if the employers transmit their reports magnetically or electronically, by two monthly transmissions not less than 12 days or more than 16 days apart.ⁿ¹²

Employers may provide this information by submitting a copy of the employee's W-4 form, a form provided by the EDD, or any other hiring document transmitted by first-class mail, magnetically, or electronically.ⁿ¹³

The EDD may assess a fine for each failure to timely report the hiring of any employee, unless the failure is due to good cause.ⁿ¹⁴

[2B] Report of Payments of $600 or More as Compensation for Services

Effective January 1, 2000, any service-recipient who is required to make an informational return to the Internal Revenue Service in accordance with I.R.C. section 6041 (informational returns for payments to another person that equal or exceed $600 made in the course of trade or business) must file with the EDD specified information on payments that equal or exceed $600 in any year, or on contracts providing for such payments, made to a service-provider as compensation for services.^{n14.1}

"Service-recipient" means any individual, person, corporation, association, partnership, or agent thereof, doing business in California, deriving business income from sources within California, or in any manner in the course of a trade or business subject to the laws of California.n14.2"Service-provider" means an individual who is not an employee of the service-recipient for California purposes and who receives compensation or executes a contract for services performed for that service-recipient within or outside California.n14.3

Specifically, service-recipients are required to report:n14.4

- The service-provider's full name and social security number.
- The service-recipient's name, business name, address, telephone number, federal and state employer identification numbers, social security number, or other identifying number as required by the EDD.
- The date the contract is executed, or if no contract, the date payments in the aggregate first equal or exceed $600.
- The total dollar amount of the contract, if any, and the contract expiration date.

Service-recipients must submit their reports to the EDD within 20 days of the earlier of first making payments that in the aggregate equal or exceed $600 in any year to a service-provider, or entering into a contract or contracts with a service-provider providing for payments that in the aggregate equal or exceed $600 in any year.n14.5

This information may be released only for the purposes establishing, modifying, or enforcing child support obligations,n14.6 and for child support collection purposes,n14.7 or to the Franchise Tax Board for tax enforcement purposes and for administering the provisions of the Family Code.n14.8n15

[3] Statements and Notices Required of Employer

Employers must post and maintain certain notices regarding benefits in places readily accessible to all employees.n17.1 Employers with employees covered only for unemployment insurance must post a notice to employees (Form DE 1857D) informing employees of their rights to unemployment insurance.n17.2 Employers with employees covered only for disability insurance must post a notice to employees (Form DE 1858) informing employees of their rights to disability insurance.n17.3 Employers with employees covered for both unemployment and disability insurance must post a notice (Form 1857A Rev. 30 (9/94)) informing employees of their rights to both types of benefits.n17.4

Whenever an employer discharges, lays off, or places an employee on leave of absence, the employer must give the employee both of the following notices no later than the effective date of the employer's action:n17.5

1. A pamphlet ("For Your Benefit" Pamphlet DE 2320) informing employees of the California unemployment and disability insurance programs; and
2. Written notice regarding the change in the employee's status that contains at the minimum the employer's name, the employee's name, the employee's social security number, the date of the action, and whether the action was a discharge, a layoff, a leave of absence, or a change in status from employee to independent contractor.

Employers must provide every new employee with a pamphlet ("State Disability Insurance Provisions," DE 2515 Rev. 42 (1/92)) summarizing the disability insurance program. The employer must also give this pamphlet to every employee who becomes disabled due to pregnancy or who becomes ill, injured, or hospitalized due to causes unrelated to work.n17.6

EDD also publishes a notice to employees (Form DE 35) which advises employees of their employer's obligation to send a copy of their W-4 forms to the IRS under the following circumstances: if the employee claims in excess of ten withholding exemptions; the employee claims to be exempt and the employer expects wages subject to withholding to exceed $200 per week; the employee makes material alterations on the form; or, the employee admits that the information given on the W-4 is false. While the EDD states that this must be given to affected employees in its 1995 pamphlet entitled "California Employer's Guide 1995" (Form DE 44), there is no statute, regulation or case which requires this notice.

Employers must, pursuant to regulations, furnish an employee with a written statement showing the excess of the worker contributions required for tips included in the employee's federal income tax tip report^{n17.7} over the worker contributions withheld with respect to the employee's wages generally.^{n17.8} Employers must file a copy of the statement with the director of the EDD.^{n17.9} An employer that fails to furnish the statement is liable for the excess worker contributions.^{n17.10}

The representative of an insolvent or deceased employing unit must give notice within 30 days after assuming office of the identity of the employing unit and the representative, and such other information as required by the director of the EDD.ⁿ¹⁸

[4] Availability of Records to Director

The employer must provide a sworn statement of matters contained in records and authorization for disclosure of accounts kept within certain financial institutions, on demand of the director of the EDD, administrative law judge, or deputy.ⁿ¹⁹ The records must be open to inspection and subject to being copied by the director or his or her authorized representative at any time during the employing unit's business hours.ⁿ²⁰ Any claimant or his or her authorized representative at a hearing before a deputy or administrative law judge or the appeals board must be supplied with information from the records to the extent necessary for the proper presentation of the claim.ⁿ²¹ Failure to keep and furnish required records or reports necessary for proper disposition of a claim for benefits in any unemployment compensation or disability benefits proceeding will result in the conclusive presumption that the claimant is entitled to the maximum total amount of benefits payable, unless it is established by other evidence deemed sufficient by the director that a lesser total amount of benefits is properly due the claimant.ⁿ²²

For a discussion of the restrictions on the use of information, see § 80.09.

[5] Registration With EDD

Within 15 days after becoming an employer, an employing unit must register with the EDD on the prescribed form.ⁿ²³ Any employing unit that fails to register with the EDD because of intentional disregard or intent to evade Unemployment Insurance Code § 100 et seq. or authorized regulations is subject to a penalty of $100 for each nonreported employee.ⁿ²⁴ This penalty is in addition to the penalty for failure to make a return.ⁿ²⁵ The number of unreported employees is the highest number of employees determined by the EDD to have been engaged by the employer during any single calendar quarter included in the assessment issued under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1126 for failure to make a return.ⁿ²⁶

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1085; 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1085-1-1085-2 (recordkeeping requirements); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1096 (appointment of agent by multiple employers to prepare and file records and reports).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1110(a) (due and delinquent date of employer contributions).

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088(a)(1); see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1088-1(a); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1116 (final returns and report of wages when quitting business).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1118.

(n5)Footnote 3.2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 13009 for definition of "wages."

(n6)Footnote 3.3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088(a)(2).

(n7)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1110(b) (time for payment of worker contributions).

(n8)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088(b); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1088-1(b).

(n9)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1127.5.

(n10)Footnote 6.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976, 976.6.

(n11)Footnote 6.2. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976, 976.6.

(n12)Footnote 6.3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 984.

(n13)Footnote 6.4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 13020.

(n14)Footnote 6.5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088(e).

(n15)Footnote 6.6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088(e).

(n16)Footnote 6.7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1111.5

(n17)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088; see also [1], above.

(n18)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(a), (h); see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(g) ("employer" includes labor union hiring hall).

(n19)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(f); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 11478.51 (exchange of information with Department of Social Services, Franchise Tax Board, and Parent Locator Service), discussed in § 80.09[2][c].

(n20)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(b); see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(c) (exceptions for federal employees and for state employees performing intelligence and counterintelligence functions).

(n21)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(d)(4).

(n22)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(d)(1), (2); see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(d)(3) (rules for multi-state employers).

(n23)Footnote 13. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(d)(5).

(n24)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.5(e).

(n25)Footnote 14.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.8(a).

(n26)Footnote 14.2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.8(b)(1).

(n27)Footnote 14.3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.8(b)(2).

(n28)Footnote 14.4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.8(c).

(n29)Footnote 14.5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.8(c).

(n30)Footnote 14.6. See Fam. Code § 17400.

(n31)Footnote 14.7. See Rev. & Tax Code § 19271 et seq.

(n32)Footnote 14.8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.8(e).

(n33)Footnote 15. [Reserved]

(n34)Footnote 17.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1089; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1089-1(b), (c).

(n35)Footnote 17.2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1089; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1089-1(b)(1), (c).

(n36)Footnote 17.3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1089.

(n37)Footnote 17.4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1089; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1089-1(b)(2), (c).

(n38)Footnote 17.5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1089; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1089-1(b)(3), (d).

(n39)Footnote 17.6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1089.

(n40)Footnote 17.7. See I.R.C. § 6053(a).

(n41)Footnote 17.8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.6.

(n42)Footnote 17.9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.6.

(n43)Footnote 17.10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1088.6.

(n44)Footnote 18. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1090.

(n45)Footnote 19. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1092.

(n46)Footnote 20. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1092.

(n47)Footnote 21. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1092.

(n48)Footnote 22. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1093.

(n49)Footnote 23. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1086.

(n50)Footnote 24. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1126.1(a).

(n51)Footnote 25. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1126.1(a); see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1126; see discussion in § 80.22[2][a].

(n52)Footnote 26. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1126.1(b).

148 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part B. REPORTS, CONTRIBUTIONS, AND ASSESSMENTS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.21

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.21 Employer Contributions to Unemployment Fund

[1] Generally

Employer contributions to the Unemployment Fundⁿ¹ accrue and become payable by every employer, except an employer for which services are performed that are included in "employment" solely for purposes of disability compensation,ⁿ² for each calendar year with respect to "wages" paid for "employment," as defined by the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ³

Contributions to the Unemployment Fund must be paid by the employer; they may not be deducted in whole or in part from the wages of individuals in the employer's employ.ⁿ⁴ Most employers with a positive reserve account balance are also required to make contributions to the Employment Training Fund.ⁿ⁵

Specified entities that have elected to become employers for purposes of unemployment compensation coverageⁿ⁶ may elect, in lieu of the contributions generally required of employers, alternative methods of financing contributions to the Unemployment Fund.ⁿ⁷ Provisions governing such alternative financing are set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 801-806.

Except as provided in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 976.5(b),ⁿ⁸ in addition to other contributions required, every employer, except one to which Unemployment Insurance Code Section 976.5(c) is applicable,ⁿ⁹ may submit a voluntary unemployment insurance contribution for the purpose of redetermining its unemployment insurance contribution rate.ⁿ¹⁰ No redetermination of a contribution rate will be made unless the voluntary contribution is submitted as required in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1110(c), and no redetermination will reduce an employer's unemployment insurance contribution rate by more than three rates as provided in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 977.ⁿ¹¹

[2] Contribution Rate

The employer's contribution rate is based on the ratio between the employer's net balance of its reserves¹² and his or her average base payroll, as set forth in the contribution rate table under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 977.ⁿ¹³ Different contribution rate schedules apply, depending on the balance in the Unemployment Fund on September 30 of any calendar year.ⁿ¹⁴

[3] Wages as Basis of Contribution

[a] Included Remuneration

As used in the context of contributions and reports, except as discussed in [b], below, "wages" means all remuneration payable to an employee for personal services, whether by private agreement or consent or by force of statute, including commissions and bonuses, and the reasonable cash value of all remuneration payable to an employee in any medium other than cash.ⁿ¹⁵ Other included forms of remuneration are set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 926.5 (remuneration by certain successor employers in motion picture, radio, and television industry for personal services to prior employer), 927 (certain tips), and 928.5 (employer contributions to certain deferred compensation plans).

[b] Excluded Remuneration

For purposes of determining the amount of employer contributions, any remuneration for employment paid to an individual in excess of $7,000 in any calendar year is excluded from the definition of "wages."ⁿ¹⁶ Other specified forms of remuneration that are not included as wages are set forth under Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 929 and 931-939. Examples of excluded forms of remunerations are employee business expenses;ⁿ¹⁷ certain payments made under a plan or system established by employer to provide benefits for sickness or accident disability, medical or hospitalization expenses, or death;ⁿ¹⁸ and payments under certain trusts, annuity plans, pensions, or deferred compensation plans.ⁿ¹⁹ Certain of these exclusions are contingent on the existence of similar exclusions under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.ⁿ²⁰

[4] Reserve Accounts

[a] Generally

The director of the EDD is required to maintain separate records of the amounts paid into the Unemployment Fund by each employer or chargeable to the employer as benefits paid.ⁿ²¹ These accounts are known as "reserve accounts." However, neither the employer nor his or her employees are granted prior claims or rights to the amount contributed by the employer to the Fund, either on his or her own behalf or on behalf of the employees; instead, the amounts in the Fund are pooled and are available for payment of benefits to any person who is entitled to them, regardless of the source of the funds.ⁿ²²

[b] Credits

The separate reserve account maintained for each employer is credited with all the contributions paid on the employer's behalf,ⁿ²³ and interest earned by the Unemployment Fund is credited to each positive reserve employer account in proportion to the amount the account bears to the total of all positive reserve accounts.ⁿ²⁴ Other items credited to each employer reserve account are set forth under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1026(d).

[c] Charges

Unemployment compensation benefits paid to an unemployed individual during any benefit year are charged against the separate account of the individual's employer during his or her base period.ⁿ²⁵ If the unemployed individual was employed by more than one employer during his or her base period, unemployment compensation benefits paid to the individual are charged against the respective reserve accounts of the employers in the proportion that the individual's total wages paid by each employer bears to the individual's total wages paid in employment for all employers during the base period.ⁿ²⁶

If it is ruled that the claimant was disqualified from receiving unemployment benefits for voluntarily leaving employment without good cause or being discharged for misconduct, or for other specified reasons, benefits paid to the claimant subsequent to the termination of employment due to the disqualifying reasons may not be charged to the account of the employer, except as provided in Section 1026 relating to multiple employers during the employee's base period, unless the employer failed to furnish required information to the EDD within the prescribed time limits.ⁿ²⁷ For a discussion of disqualifications from receiving unemployment compensation benefits, see §§ 80.35, 80.36. If an employee leaves the employer's employ to take a better job and is then terminated from that position, any benefits to which he or she is entitled are not chargeable to the first employer's account.^{n27.1}

Other items charged to each employer reserve account are set forth under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1026(e).

[d] Annual Statements of Account

At least once each year, the director must furnish each employer with an itemized statement of the charges to the reserve account, and a statement of the reserve account showing the credits and charges, the net balance of the reserve account, and the contribution rate for the applicable rating period.ⁿ²⁸

[e] Protest of Charges

Except as to corrections of charges made by the director,ⁿ²⁹ the contribution rate and other items shown on the statement of charges or account are final unless a protest is filed.ⁿ³⁰

Procedures for filing a written protest on any item shown on the account are set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1034.^{n30.1} The director of the EDD must give notice of his or her action on the protest.ⁿ³¹ The employer must pay the contribution at the rate shown in the statement while the protest is pending, and if the rate is reduced, the amount of overpayment must be promptly credited or refunded.ⁿ³²

The employer may not protest a charge to its reserve account on the grounds that a claimant was ineligible for unemployment benefits unless the employer filed a timely appeal regarding the benefit claim.ⁿ³³ For discussion of procedures regarding benefit claims, see § 80.39.

[f] Transfer of Reserve Accounts

If an employing unit acquires the organization, trade, or business of another employer (or substantially all of the assets or a distinct and severable portion of the assets of another employer), and continues the organization, trade, or business (or a distinct and severable portion thereof) without substantial reduction of personnel, the acquiring employer may apply for transfer of the acquired employer's reserve account within 90 days of the acquisition.ⁿ³⁴ The EDD is required to give notice of a denied application,ⁿ³⁵ and the applicant may seek review of the denial.ⁿ³⁶ For discussion of review procedures, see § 80.24.

[5] Civil Action to Prevent Collection Prohibited

No injunction, writ of mandate, or other legal or equitable process may issue in any suit, action, or proceeding in any court against the state or any state officer to prevent or enjoin the collection of any contribution sought to be collected under the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ³⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1521.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 676, 2606 ("employment" for purposes of disability compensation provisions); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 702.6, discussed in § 80.07[1][d].

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 976; see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1110 (due and delinquent dates of contribution), 1111 (extensions of time for payment), 1112 (penalties for nonpayment), 1113 (interest on delinquent contributions), 1115 (collection of contributions jeopardized by insolvency or substantial delinquency). For discussion of what constitutes employment, see § 80.06. For discussion of what constitutes wages, see [3], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 976.6, 976.8. Note that Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.6 is repealed by its own terms on January 1, 2002, unless the Legislature extends or repeals this date before January 1, 2002.

(n6)Footnote 6. See discussion in § 80.07[1][d].

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 801 (nonprofit organizations), 802 (state or other public entities), 803(a) (other elective employers who qualify for elective financing under Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 701-713); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 805 (election of reimbursement financing by unregistered nonprofit organization).

(n8)Footnote 8. This refers to calendar years in which contribution rate schedules E and F in Unemp. Ins. Code § 977 are in effect, or calendar years to which the emergency solvency surcharge provided in Unemp. Ins. Code § 977.5 is in effect.

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.5(c) applies to an employer (1) not eligible for a contribution rate other than that provided in Unemp. Ins. Code § 982; or (2) with a negative reserve account balance on the computation date; or (3) who was notified prior to September 1 of any unpaid amount owed to the EDD that is not the subject of a timely petition for reassessment pending before the Appeals Board on September 30 preceding the year to which a contribution rate is applicable.

(n10)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.5(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 976.5(a).

(n12)Footnote 12. See discussion of employer reserve accounts in [4], below.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 977(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 977(b)(1)-(7); see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 977.5 (contributions payable at emergency solvency surcharge rate if Unemployment Fund falls below specified percentage of subject wages), 980 (exclusions in determining Unemployment Fund balance), 980.5 (inclusions in determining Unemployment Fund balance), 982 (qualifications for reduced contribution rate).

(n15)Footnote 15. Unemp. Ins. Code § 926.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 930; see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 930.I, 930.5 (certain types of remuneration to be included in determining whether $7,000 limit has been exceeded).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 929.

(n18)Footnote 18. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 931, 933, 938.

(n19)Footnote 19. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 934.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 939; see also 26 U.S.C. § 3306(b) (exclusions from definition of "wages" under Federal Unemployment Tax Act).

(n21)Footnote 21. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1025.

(n22)Footnote 22. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1025.

(n23)Footnote 23. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1026(a).

(n24)Footnote 24. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1026(c).

(n25)Footnote 25. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1026(b). For discussion of the "base period," see § 80.31[3].

(n26)Footnote 26. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1026(b).

(n27)Footnote 27. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032; see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1030 (employer's right to notify department of reason for claimant's leaving), 1256 (disqualification for voluntary quitting without good cause or discharge for misconduct). See also § 80.39.

(n28)Footnote 27.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032.

(n29)Footnote 28. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1033.

(n30)Footnote 29. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1036.

(n31)Footnote 30. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1034; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1034-1.

(n32)Footnote 30.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1034; R L. Management Co. v. Nagel (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1290-1292, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 801 (Section 1034's provision that employer's contribution rate is final unless challenged within 120 days of mailing (unless EDD on own initiative makes adjustment before expiration of rating period) is applicable statute of limitations rather than general three-year statute of limitations (see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1178)).

(n33)Footnote 31. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1035; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1036 (notice of correction of errors).

(n34)Footnote 32. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1037.

(n35)Footnote 33. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1034.

(n36)Footnote 34. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1051-1060.

(n37)Footnote 35. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1055.

(n38)Footnote 36. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1222.

(n39)Footnote 37. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1851; see Cal. Const., art. XIII, § 32; see also Lorco Properties Inc. v. Department of Benefit Payments (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 809, 815, 129 Cal. Rptr. 312 .

149 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part B. REPORTS, CONTRIBUTIONS, AND ASSESSMENTS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.22

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.22 Assessments

[1] When Assessments May Be Made

Assessments of the amount of contributions due from an employing unit may be made by the EDD when an employer fails to make a return or report at all,ⁿ¹ or makes an unsatisfactory return or report.ⁿ²

[2] Penalties and Interest

[a] Penalties for Failure to File or Filing Deficient Return or Report

A ten-percent penalty, based on the assessed amount of contributions due, is added if a return or report was not made,ⁿ³ or if a deficient return or report was due to negligence or intentional disregard of the return requirements.ⁿ⁴ For purposes of this penalty, "negligence" is defined as the failure to exercise the degree of care that a reasonably prudent person would exercise in similar circumstances in the performance or observance of a duty.^{n4.1} The failure to act may, but need not, be caused by carelessness or oversight.^{n4.2}

Negligence includes, but is not limited to, an employer's failure to (1) maintain accurate and complete records of wages paid, taxes withheld, and taxes paid; (2) maintain records substantiating deductions from wages; (3) maintain records substantiating a claim that unreported payments to employees are loan repayments; (4) determine whether an individual is an employee or an independent contractor; or (5) seek a ruling from the EDD if an individual's status as employee or independent contractor is questionable.^{n4.3}

"Intentional disregard" means purposely or deliberately paying little or no attention to requirements.^{n4.4} It includes, but is not limited to, (1) failure to report wages merely because it constitutes nuisance bookkeeping; (2) reporting employees under FICA but not under the California Unemployment Insurance Code merely because the employees have only a remote possibility of obtaining benefits; (3) failure to seek a ruling on a worker's status as employee or independent contractor or to report the worker as an employee after being advised by an accountant to do so; (4) failure to report an employee's wages after being informed by the EDD that the worker is indeed an employee; or (5) failure to report an employee by an employer who should have been aware or was aware of reporting requirements.n4.5

[b] Penalties Involving Fraud

If an employing unit's failure to timely make a return or any part of an assessed deficiency is due to fraud or an intent to evade the return requirements, a penalty of 50 percent of the amount of contributions assessed must be added to the assessment.n5 This penalty is in addition to any penalties for failure to make a return or filing a deficient return.n5.1

An additional penalty of 50 percent of the amount of contributions assessed must be added to any assessment that includes the penalty for fraud or intent to evade, if an employer paid wages and failed to provide required information returns.n5.2 This penalty is in addition to any penalties for failure to make a return or filing a deficient return.n5.3

Any individual or business entity found to have exchanged money on behalf of an employer to conceal the payment of wages and thereby avoid the payment of unemployment or disability contributions is assessed the unpaid contributions or taxes.n5.4 This penalty applies only when there is evidence that the party that exchanged the money knew that the employer intended to use the cash proceeds from the exchange to conceal the payment of wages and avoid required contributions.n5.5 An individual who is assessed liability under Unemployment Code section 1128.1 is personally liable for that charge.n5.6 If a business entity is assessed this liability, any officer, major stockholder, or other person having charge of the affairs of the business shall be personally liable.n5.7 The liability extends to the contributions, withholdings penalties and interest due and unpaid by the employer, other than those penalties assessed under Unemployment Code section 1128.n5.8

[c] Interest

The amount of each assessment bears interest at the rate and by the method established by Revenue and Taxation Code Section 19521 from a specified date after the month or quarter for which the contributions were due until the date of payment.n6

[2A] Number of Assessments and Offsets

One or more assessments may be made for the amount due for one or for more than one period and overpayments may be offset against underpayments.n7 Thus, the EDD may make a single assessment for multiple reporting periods, and full payment of the assessment is a precondition to further administrative or judicial review.n8

[3] Notice

The director must give to the employing unit against whom an assessment is made a written notice of the assessment pursuant to the service requirements set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1206.n9

[4] When Assessments Become Final and Delinquent

An assessment other than a jeopardy assessmentn10 becomes delinquent if it is not paid on or before the date it becomes final.n11 A penalty of 10 percent of the amount of the delinquent assessment exclusive of interest and penalties is added.n12n13

An assessment becomes final within 30 days of service of notice of the assessment, unless a petition for reassessment is filed within that time, or within an additional period granted by an administrative law judge.n14 If a petition for reassessment is filed, an assessment becomes final at the expiration of 30 days following an administrative law judge's decision, or at the expiration of an additional period granted by the appeals board, if an appeal is not filed within that time.n15 If an appeal to the appeals board has been made, the assessment becomes final 30 days after the petitioner has been served notice of the order or decision.n16 However, if a decision of the administrative law judge or the appeals board requires an adjustment of an assessment by granting a portion of a petition or by increasing an assessment, the assessment is final 30 days after the director of the EDD serves on the petitioner a statement of amounts due setting forth the adjusted liability.ⁿ¹⁷

[5] Jeopardy Assessment

Special procedures apply when the director of the EDD finds that the collection of any contributions will be jeopardized by delay.ⁿ¹⁸ The amount of a jeopardy assessment is immediately delinquent, and penalties apply if payment is not made, or security for payment is not provided, within 30 days of service of a jeopardy assessment.ⁿ¹⁹ Procedures for petitioning for a reassessment of a jeopardy assessment are set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1221.

[6] Cancellation of Erroneous Assessments

An erroneous assessment or a portion of it may be cancelled by the director of the EDD when no petition for reassessment has been filed.ⁿ²⁰ If a petition for reassessment has been filed, the assessment may be cancelled if made prior to the mailing of a decision of the administrative law judge,ⁿ²¹ or, if an order or decision of an administrative law judge or of the Appeals Board has been issued on any grounds not on the merits, the cancellation may be made if it is approved by the Appeals Board.ⁿ²²

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1126.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1127.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1126.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1127.

(n5)Footnote 4.1. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1127-1(a).

(n6)Footnote 4.2. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1127-1(a).

(n7)Footnote 4.3. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1127-1(a)(1)-(5).

(n8)Footnote 4.4. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1127-1(b).

(n9)Footnote 4.5. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1127-1(b)(1)-(5).

(n10)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1128(a).

(n11)Footnote 5.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1128(a); see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1126, 1127; see also discussion in [a], above.

(n12)Footnote 5.2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1128(b); Unemp. Ins. Code § 13050 (withholding of California personal income tax).

(n13)Footnote 5.3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1128(b); see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1126, 1127; see also discussion in [a], above.

(n14)Footnote 5.4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1128.1(a).

(n15)Footnote 5.5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1128.1(c).

(n16)Footnote 5.6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1735.1(a).

(n17)Footnote 5.7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1735.1(a).

(n18)Footnote 5.8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1735.1(a).

(n19)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1129.

(n20)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1130.

(n21)Footnote 8. Masi v. Nagle (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 608, 613, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 423 ; see discussion in § 80.23[1][b].

(n22)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1131; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1132 (time for serving notice).

(n23)Footnote 10. For discussion of jeopardy assessments, see [5], below.

(n24)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1135.

(n25)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1135.

(n26)Footnote 13. [Reserved]

(n27)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1222.

(n28)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1224(a)(1).

(n29)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1224(b).

(n30)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1224(a)(2), (b).

(n31)Footnote 18. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1137(a); see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1137.1 (findings on which jeopardy assessment may be made).

(n32)Footnote 19. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1137(a), (b).

(n33)Footnote 20. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1136(a).

(n34)Footnote 21. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1136(b).

(n35)Footnote 22. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1136(c).

150 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part B. REPORTS, CONTRIBUTIONS, AND ASSESSMENTS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.23

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.23 Refunds and Overpayments

[1] Claims for Credit or Refund of Overpayment

[a] Generally

The director of the EDD is required to make credits or refunds of erroneously or illegally collected contributions.ⁿ¹ Claims for credit or refund must be filed with the director for any overpayment within one of the following time periods, whichever expires later:ⁿ²

1. Within three years from the last day of the calendar month following the close of the calendar quarter for which the overpayment was made;
2. Six months after an assessment made under Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 1126-1142 becomes final;ⁿ³ or
3. 60 days from the date of overpayment.

Failure to file a claim within the prescribed time limits results in a waiver of any demand against the state or the director for the overpayment.ⁿ⁴ However, the director may make a refund or allow credits on his or her own initiative prior to the expiration of those time periods, even if no claim is filed.ⁿ⁵ Every claim for refund or credit must be in writing and must state the specific grounds on which the claim is founded.ⁿ⁶

No refund of employer contributions paid pursuant to *Unemployment Insurance Code Section 976.5*ⁿ⁷ can be made unless the payment is made by an employer described in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 976.5(c) (voluntary contributions), or the amount paid is less than or exceeds the amount needed to change the employer's contribution rate.^{n7.1}

[a.1] Payment Is Precondition to Claim for Refund

Following a final decision denying a petition for reassessment, a claim for refund may be made on payment of the amount of the assessment.^{n7.2} Payment of the amount of assessment, including interest and penalties, is a precondition to further administrative or judicial review.^{n7.3}

The requirement that the taxpayer pay the assessment can create a "Catch-22" situation for the taxpayer when his or her financial situation requires that the taxpayer pay an assessment in installments rather than a lump sum. This situation occurs because an administrative refund claim must be filed within certain time limits after an alleged overpayment,^{n7.4} and the failure to bring action within the time specified following denial of the refund claim constitutes a waiver of any demand on account of alleged overpayments.^{n7.5} Thus, the taxpayer may encounter the following dilemma: if the taxpayer files a claim for refund when each payment is made, the claim will be dismissed as premature; but if the taxpayer waits until the entire tax is paid, the claim for refund of the first installment payments will be dismissed as too late.^{n7.6}

Presumably, a financially strapped taxpayer may negotiate a partial payment plan with a stipulation by the EDD to toll the statute of limitations and there may be sound equitable and practical reasons for the EDD to accept partial payments.^{n7.7} Nevertheless, assuming the EDD would not agree to accept partial payments in exchange for a stipulation to toll the statute of limitations, because payment of assessments as a precondition to review is a statutory requirement, even a severe financial hardship would not permit judicial intervention.^{n7.8}

[b] Deemed Claims Following Payment of Challenged Assessments

Payment of the assessed amount prior to a decision at the petition, administrative law judge, or appeals board level will constitute deemed claims for refund, and the assessment proceeding will automatically become a review proceeding arising from the deemed denial of the claim.ⁿ⁸

[2] Denial of Claim

The director must give notice to the claimant whenever he or she denies a claim for refund or credit in whole or in part.ⁿ⁹ If the director fails to serve notice within 60 days after a claim is filed, the claim may be considered denied by the claimant.ⁿ¹⁰

If the claim is denied, review may be sought.ⁿ¹¹ Failure to seek review within the prescribed time limits results in a waiver of any demand on account of the overpayment.ⁿ¹² For a discussion of administrative review procedures, see § 80.24.

[3] Reversal of Erroneous Denial

Erroneous denial of a claim for refund or credit, including a claim deemed made and denied,ⁿ¹³ may be reversed by the director prior to expiration of the period within which a petition for review of denial of the claim may be filed,ⁿ¹⁴ or, if petition for review of denial of the claim has already been filed or deemed filed, prior to the mailing of a decision by the administrative law judge.ⁿ¹⁵ For a discussion of administrative review procedures, see § 80.24.

[4] Recovery of Erroneous Refund

Erroneously made refunds must be assessed and recovered by the director.ⁿ¹⁶ The usual procedures regarding assessments apply to assessments of erroneous refunds.ⁿ¹⁷ For a discussion of assessment procedures, see § 80.22.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1177, 1178(b).

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1178(a), (b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion in § 80.22[4], [5].

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1179(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1178(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1179.

(n7)Footnote 7. See discussion in § 80.21[1].

(n8)Footnote 7.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1178(e).

(n9)Footnote 7.2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1178(d).

(n10)Footnote 7.3. Masi v. Nagle (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 608, 613, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 423 .

(n11)Footnote 7.4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1178(b); see also [a], above.

(n12)Footnote 7.5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1241(a).

(n13)Footnote 7.6. See Masi v. Nagle (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 608, 615, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 423 .

(n14)Footnote 7.7. See Masi v. Nagle (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 608, 615, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 423 (installment plan may in some cases offer best prospect for taxing authority to collect full amount without putting taxpayer out of business).

(N15)Footnote 7.8. See Masi v. Nagle (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 608, 615, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 423 (citing Modern Barber Co. v. Cal. Emp. Stab. Com. (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 720, 730, 192 P.2d 916).

(n16)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1179.5(a), (b).

(n17)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1180; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1206 (service of notice requirements).

(n18)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1222.

(n19)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1222.

(n20)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1179(b), (c); see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1222 (time for filing petition for review by administrative law judge), 1224 (time for filing appeal with Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board).

(n21)Footnote 13. See [1][b], above for discussion of deemed claims.

(n22)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1180.5(a)(1).

(n23)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1180.5(a)(2).

(n24)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1184.

(n25)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1184.

151 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part B. REPORTS, CONTRIBUTIONS, AND ASSESSMENTS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.24

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.24 Administrative Appellate Review

[1] Subjects and Levels of Appellate Review

There are two levels of administrative appellate review of (1) the denial of a protest of charges to an employer's reserve account,ⁿ¹ (2) a notice of denial of an application for transfer of a reserve account,ⁿ² (3) a notice of assessment,ⁿ³ (3) the denial of a claim for refund or credit,ⁿ⁴ and (4) any notice under specified code sections made or given by the Director of Employment Development.ⁿ⁵ The first level consists of a review by an administrative law judge,ⁿ⁶ and the second consists of a review by the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board.ⁿ⁷

For a full discussion of administrative appellate procedures, see Part E (§§ 80.80-80.88).

[2] Review by Administrative Law Judge

[a] Review Other Than of Jeopardy Assessments

Within 30 days of service of a notice of assessment (other than a jeopardy assessment), a denial of a claim for refund or credit, or other specified notices under the Unemployment Insurance Code, or within an additional 30 days if granted by the administrative law judge, a petition for review or reassessment may be filed with an administrative law judge.ⁿ⁸

If a petition for review or reassessment is properly filed, an administrative law judge must review the matter, and, if requested by the petitioner, must grant a hearing.ⁿ⁹

[b] Review of Jeopardy Assessment

A petition for reassessment of a jeopardy assessment must be filed within 10 working days after notice of jeopardy assessment.ⁿ¹⁰ The director may require a deposit of security to stay collection activities while the petition is being reviewed.ⁿ¹¹ On review, the administrative law judge holds a preliminary hearing to determine the reasonableness and validity of levying a jeopardy assessment.ⁿ¹²

If the administrative law judge or the board decides that a jeopardy assessment should not have been levied, the assessment automatically becomes, and has the effect of, an assessment on failure to make a return pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 1126 or a deficiency assessment pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 1127, whichever is applicable.ⁿ¹³ For a discussion of assessments, see § 80.22.

If the administrative law judge or the board decides that the assessment was properly levied, this decision must be incorporated in any decision rendered following the hearing.ⁿ¹⁴ All other issues raised by a petition for reassessment including, but not limited to, the appropriateness of the amount assessed, must be determined at a hearing scheduled and held pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code sections 1223 and 1224.ⁿ¹⁵

[3] Review by Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board

[a] Filing Appeal

Within 30 days after service of notice of the administrative law judge's decision, the petitioner or director may file an appeal with the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board.ⁿ¹⁶ For good cause, the Board may extend the appeal period.ⁿ¹⁷ If the administrative law judge fails to serve notice of the decision on a petition for review of the denial of a claim for refund of credit within 60 days after the petition is filed, the petitioner may consider the petition denied and file the appeal.ⁿ¹⁸

[b] Effect of Failure to File Appeal

If an appeal is not filed within the time required, the decision of the administrative law judge on the petition is final in every case at the expiration of the period.ⁿ¹⁹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1034; see also discussion in § 80.21[4][e].

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1055; see also discussion in § 80.21[4][f].

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1221 (notice of jeopardy assessment), 1222 (notice of assessment); see also discussion in § 80.22.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1180, 1222; see also discussion in § 80.23[2].

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1222.

(n6)Footnote 6. See discussion under [2], below.

(n7)Footnote 7. See discussion under [3], below.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1222; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5008 (form and substance of petition).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1223.

(n10)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1221(a).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1137(b). A failure to deposit such security does not, however, affect the employer's appeal rights. see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1137(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1221(b), (c).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1221(c).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1221(c).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1221(d).

(n16)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1224(a).

(n17)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1224(a).

(n18)Footnote 18. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1224(a); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5008 (form and substance of appeal).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1224(a)(1).

152 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part B. REPORTS, CONTRIBUTIONS, AND ASSESSMENTS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.25

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.25 Judicial Review

[1] Generally

A decision of the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board is final, except for such action as may be taken by a judicial tribunal as permitted or required by law.ⁿ¹ If a request for review may be taken, the appeals board must attach to its decision an explanation of the party's right to seek review.ⁿ²

For a full discussion of judicial review procedures, see Part F (§§ 80.100-80.102).

[2] Actions Challenging Denial of Claim for Refund or Credit

No suit or proceeding may be maintained in any court for the recovery of contributions, interest, or penalties alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected unless a claim for refund or credit has been filed.ⁿ³ For a discussion of claims for refund or credit, see § 80.23[1].

An action against the director of the EDD challenging the denial of a claim for refund or credit must be brought within 90 days after service of the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board's notice of decision, or an extended period not exceeding two years granted by the director on written request.ⁿ⁴ The action may be brought in a court of competent jurisdiction in the County of Sacramento (or in any city or city and county in which the Attorney General has an office)ⁿ⁵ for the recovery of the whole or any part of the amount with respect to which the claim has been denied.ⁿ⁶ Failure to bring an action within the specified time period constitutes a waiver of any demand against the state on account of alleged overpayments.ⁿ⁷ If the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board fails to serve notice of its decision on the appeal within 90 days after an appeal is filed, the claimant may consider the claim denied and may bring an action against the director.ⁿ⁸

If judgment is rendered for the plaintiff, the judgment amount must be first credited on any contributions, interest, and penalties due from the plaintiff, and the balance refunded to the plaintiff.ⁿ⁹

[3] Other Actions

With specified exceptions, discussed below, a party's right to seek judicial review from a decision of the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board must be exercised not later than six months after the date of the board's decision or the date on which the decision is designated as a precedent decision, whichever is later.ⁿ¹⁰

In the case of Appeals Board decisions involving a protest of charges under *Unemployment Insurance Code section 1034*ⁿ¹¹ or an application for transfer of reserve account under Unemployment Insurance Code sections 1051-1055,ⁿ¹² proceedings for judicial review must be brought within 90 days after service of the Appeals Board's notice of decision, or an extended period not exceeding two years granted by the director of the EDD on written request.ⁿ¹³

Special filing and other procedures apply to a suit to challenge a decision of the Appeals Board denying an exemption as a church or religious organization.ⁿ¹⁴

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 410.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 410.

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1241(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1241(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Code Civ. Proc. § 401.

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1241(a).

(n7)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1241(a).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1241(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1242.

(n10)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 410. For discussion of precedent decisions, see § 80.85[2].

(n11)Footnote 11. See § 80.21[4][e] for discussion of protests.

(n12)Footnote 12. See § 80.21[4][f] for discussion of transfers of reserve accounts.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1243.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1241(b), (c).

153 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part B. REPORTS, CONTRIBUTIONS, AND ASSESSMENTS

4-80 California Employment Law §§ 80.26through 80.29

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 80.26[Reserved]

154 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.30

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.30 "Unemployment" as Basis for Benefits

[1] Definition of "Unemployed" Individual

To qualify for unemployment benefits, an individual must be "unemployed" as that term is defined in the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ¹ An individual is "unemployed" in any week during which he or she meets any of the following conditions:ⁿ²

1. The individual performs no services and with respect to which no wages are payable to him or her;ⁿ³
2. The individual worked less than full time, if the wages payable to the individual with respect to the week, when reduced by $25 or 25 percent of the wages payable, whichever is greater, do not equal or exceed the individual's weekly benefit amount;
3. The individual would, except for the requirement of a one-week waiting period of unemployment,ⁿ⁴ be eligible for benefits under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1253.5 (partial benefits for unemployed individual who becomes unable to work due to physical or mental illness or injury);ⁿ⁵
4. The individual performs full-time work for five days as a juror, or as a witness under subpoena; or
5. The individual works less than his or her normal weekly hours of work for the individual's regular employer under a work-sharing plan adopted by the employer to reduce employment in lieu of layoffs.^{n5.1}

For benefit purposes, "week" means seven consecutive days commencing at 12:01 a.m. Sunday and ending 12 midnight the following Saturday.ⁿ⁶

[2] Distinctions Between Total Unemployment and Partial Unemployment

As required by statute,ⁿ⁷ EDD regulations distinguish between procedures applicable to partially and totally unemployed individuals.ⁿ⁸

A partially unemployed individual is a person who during a week (1) was employed by a regular employer, (2) worked less than his or her normal customary full-time hours for his or her regular employer because of lack of full-time work, and (3) was continuously attached to his or her regular employer in that no severance of the employer-employee relationship occurred.ⁿ⁹ Notwithstanding this definition, a person who receives benefits under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1279.5 (relating to shared work) during a benefit year may not receive benefits as a partially unemployed person with respect to any week in that benefit year while in an employment status with the regular employer who initiated the shared work program.ⁿ¹⁰ Moreover, a person may not claim benefits as a partially unemployed individual if the EDD determines that the individual has been laid off for a period in excess of two consecutive weeks.ⁿ¹¹

Special provisions govern partially and totally unemployed commercial fishermen.ⁿ¹²

[3] "Wages" for Purposes of Defining "Unemployed"

Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1252(a)(1) defines an individual as "unemployed" in any week during which the individual performs no services and with respect to which "no wages are payable to him or her."ⁿ¹³ For this purpose only, "wages" includes any and all compensation for personal services whether performed as an employee, an independent contractor, a juror, or a witness, but does not include any payment received by a member of the National Guard or reserve component of the armed forces for inactive duty training, annual training, or emergency state active duty.ⁿ¹⁴ For discussion of whether certain benefit payments made by employers constitute "wages" for this purpose, see § 80.37.

To constitute "payable" wages, the wages must be "payable at once," and the employer must be under an unequivocal and present obligation to pay wages to the employee pursuant to the contract of hire.ⁿ¹⁵

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1251, 1253.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1252(a), 1279.5(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See [3], below, for discussion of what constitutes "wages" for purposes of definition of "unemployed" individual.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(d); see also discussion under § 80.32[1] (conditions of eligibility).

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussion under § 80.33[3].

(n6)Footnote 5.1. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1279.5-1-1279.5-10 regarding work sharing plans.

(n7)Footnote 6. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1253-1; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 143 ("week" means period of seven consecutive days as prescribed by authorized regulation).

(n8)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1252(b).

(n9)Footnote 8. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1252-1 (partially employed individuals).

(n10)Footnote 9. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1252-1(a); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-7 (employer's responsibility to give partially unemployed workers notice of reduced earnings on prescribed form).

(n11)Footnote 10. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1252-1(b)(1).

(n12)Footnote 11. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1252-1(b)(2).

(n13)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1252.1, 1252.2; 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1252.1-1, 1252.2-1.

(n14)Footnote 13. See [1], above.

(n15)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1252(c).

(n16)Footnote 15. See Carlsen v. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 577, 586, 134 Cal. Rptr. 581 (no wages payable to claimant who was laid off as carpenter, because corporation he formed was not under obligation to pay for his services as president and had never done so for over 9 years).

155 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.31

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.31 Minimum Earnings Requirement

[1] Requirement

An otherwise eligible individual cannot establish a valid claim or a "benefit year"ⁿ¹ during which benefits are payable for new claims unless during his or her "base period"ⁿ² the individual has met one of the following conditions:ⁿ³

1. He or she has been paid wages for employment by employers of not less than $1,300 during the quarter of the base period in which his or her wages were the highest; or
2. He or she has been paid wages for employment by employers of not less than $900 during the quarter of the base period in which his or her wages were the highest, and has been paid wages for employment by employers during the entire base period equal to 1.25 times the amount he or she was paid during the quarter in which his or her wages were the highest.

The definitions of the terms "employment" and "employer" for this purpose are discussed in §§ 80.06-80.07. For definition of the term "wages," see discussion in § 80.21[3]. For purposes of the minimum earnings requirement (as well as computation of benefit amounts), "wages" also includes wages that are due to an individual but that are not paid within the time limit provided by law.ⁿ⁴

If the base period of a new claim includes wages that were paid before the effective date of, and not used in the computation of an award for, a previous valid claim, the new claim is valid only if, during the 52-week period beginning with the effective date of the previous valid claim, either (1) the individual earned or was paid sufficient wages to meet the eligibility requirements set forth in paragraphs 1. and 2., above, and performed some work;ⁿ⁵ or (2) he or she did not receive unemployment compensation benefits, was disabled, and was entitled to receive disability benefits pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2601 et seq., Labor Code Section 3201 et seq., any workers' compensation law, any employer's liability law, or the disability insurance law of any other state or of the federal government.ⁿ⁶

If an individual has a subsequent new claim and the previous valid claim was filed under Unemployment Insurance Code 1275(b),ⁿ⁷ the new claim is valid only if, during the 52-week period beginning with the effective date of the previous claim, either of the following applies:ⁿ⁸

(1) The individual earned or was paid sufficient wages to meet eligibility requirementsⁿ⁹ and performed some work.ⁿ¹⁰

(2) The individual did not receive unemployment benefits and was disabled and was entitled to receive disability benefits under Unemployment Code § 2601 et seq. or Labor Code § 3200 et seq., under any workers' compensation law, under employer's liability law, or under any disability insurance law of any other state or the federal government.

For purposes of a subsequent new claim, "wages" includes all compensation for personal services performed as an employee for the purpose of meeting the eligibility requirements of Unemployment Insurance Code § 1281(a).ⁿ¹¹

In determining whether a new claimⁿ¹² or a subsequent new claimⁿ¹³ is valid, the following amounts are considered "wages" for purposes of determining whether the employee has met the minimum earnings requirements:ⁿ¹⁴

1. Twice the amount that the individual was entitled to receive during the 52-week period under the state disability insurance provisions;
2. Twice the amount that the individual was entitled to receive during the 52-week period under the workers' compensation provisions of the Labor Code; and
3. Twice the amount that the individual was entitled to receive during the 52-week period under any workers' compensation law, employer's liability law, or disability insurance law of any other state or of the federal government.

[2] "Benefit Year" Defined

A "benefit year" with respect to any individual means the 52-week period beginning with the first day of the week for which the individual first files a valid claim for benefits, and thereafter the 52-week period beginning with the week for which the individual again files a valid claim after termination of his or her last preceding benefit year.ⁿ¹⁵ Wages used in determining benefits payable to an individual during any benefit year may not be used in determining that individual's benefits in any subsequent benefit year.ⁿ¹⁶

[3] "Base Period" Defined

Both the minimum earnings requirement and the computation of benefit awards are based on wages paid during the "base period."ⁿ¹⁷ The "base period" refers to a specified period of four calendar quarters ending prior to the beginning of the benefit year,ⁿ¹⁸ as follows:ⁿ¹⁹

1. For benefit years beginning in October, November, or December, the base period is the four calendar quarters ending in the next preceding month of June.
2. For benefit years beginning in January, February, or March, the base period is the four calendar quarters ending in the next preceding month of September.
3. For benefit years beginning in April, May, or June, the base period is the four calendar quarters ending in the next preceding month of December.

4. For benefit years beginning in July, August, or September, the base period is the four calendar quarters ending in the next preceding month of March.

For any new claim filed on or after April 3, 2011,ⁿ²⁰ if an individual cannot establish a claim under Unemployment Insurance Code § 1275(a), "base period" means the following:ⁿ²¹

(1) For benefit years beginning in October, November, or December, the four calendar quarters ended in the next preceding month of September.

(2) For benefit years beginning in January, February, or March, the four calendar quarters ended in the next preceding month of December.

(3) For benefit years beginning in April, May, or June, the four calendar quarters ended in the next preceding month of March.

(4) For benefit years beginning in July, August, or September, the four calendar quarters ended in the next preceding month of June.

The quarter with the highest wages will be used to determine the individual's weekly benefit amount.ⁿ²² Wages used in the determination of benefits payable to an individual during any benefit year may not be used in determining that individual's benefits in any subsequent benefit year.ⁿ²³

[4] "Perform Some Work" Defined

A valid new claim under Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277(a) or Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277.1(a) requires that in addition to satisfying wage requirements,ⁿ²⁴ the claimant must perform some work.ⁿ²⁵ The plain meaning of "perform some work" is to furnish services. In Molnar the court noted that the legislative history of the statute manifested an intent to conform the statute to federal law, which required both wage and work components; the court also pointed out that the most recent amendment supports this conclusion by establishing a narrow exception to the work requirement for persons who become disabled after filing a claim.ⁿ²⁶ Seeking employment is not equivalent to performing work.ⁿ²⁷ Further, the court distinguished work (the rendering of services) from salary continuation (benefit imparted without regard to the rendering of services). An involuntarily terminated employee is not working if he or she actually performs no work, regardless of whether or not the employee elects to receive a salary continuance plan rather than a lump sum severance package.ⁿ²⁸

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See [2], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See [3], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1281(a)(3) (applicable to new claims filed with an effective date beginning on or after January 1, 1992).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1281(d). For discussion of time limits for payment of wages, see ch. 4.

(n5)Footnote 5. See [4], below.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277.

(n7)Footnote 7. See [3], below.

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277.1.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1281(a).

(n10)Footnote 10. For discussion of "perform some work," see [4], below.

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277.1(b).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277.1.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277.5. These benefits are not, however, considered "wages" for purposes of computing benefit amounts. see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277.5.

(n15)Footnote 15. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1276.

(n16)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1275(a).

(n17)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1275, 1280, 1281.

(n18)Footnote 18. See [2], above.

(n19)Footnote 19. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1275(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. Earlier if the EDD implements the technical changes necessary to establish claims under the alternate base period, as specified in Unemployment Insurance Code § 1275(c).

(n21)Footnote 21. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1275(b).

(n22)Footnote 22. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1280.

(n23)Footnote 23. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1275(b).

(n24)Footnote 24. See [1], above.

(n25)Footnote 25. Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1277(a), 1277.1(a); Molnar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1450, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771 (Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277(a) (new claims) clearly and unambiguously requires that employee perform some work).

(n26)Footnote 26. Molnar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1451, 1453, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771 .

(n27)Footnote 27. Molnar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1451-1452, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771 (plaintiff's reliance on Funk v. Sperry Corp. (9th Cir. 1988) 842 F.2d 1129 misplaced; Funk determined nothing more than that employer satisfied contractual obligation to employee by advising employee that his primary obligation during last several months of employment was to seek other employment).

(n28)Footnote 28. Molnar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 1448, 1450-1453, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771 (back pay cases are irrelevant in new claim context; back pay cases consider compensation for past work periods in which pay would have been earned but for employer's wrongful actions; issue before court related to payments intended to mitigate against future loss of income).

156 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.32

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.32 Conditions of Eligibility

[1] Generally

Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1253 provides that an unemployed individualⁿ¹ is eligible to receive unemployment compensation benefits with respect to any week only if the director of the EDD finds that the following are true:

1. A claim for benefits with respect to that week has been made in accordance with authorized regulations;ⁿ²
2. The individual has registered for work and thereafter continued to report at a public employment office or such other place as the director may approve;ⁿ³
3. The individual was able to work and available for work for that week;ⁿ⁴
4. The individual has been unemployed for a waiting period of one week as defined in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1254, unless the waiting period has been waived pursuant to Government Code Section 8571;ⁿ⁵
5. The individual conducted a search for suitable work in accordance with specific and reasonable instructions of a public employment office;ⁿ⁶ and
6. The individual has participated as required in reemployment activities.^{n6.1}

[2] Availability for Work

[a] Generally

"Availability for work" within the meaning of Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1253(c) requires that claimants be willing to accept suitable work that they have no good cause for refusing, and that they make themselves available to a substantial field of employment.ⁿ⁷ If the claimant shows good cause for restricting his or her labor market, the burden shifts to the EDD to prove unavailability to a substantial field of employment.ⁿ⁸

Availability for work includes being legally, as well as physically, available to accept employment.^{n8.1} Therefore, an alien who has no work authorization from the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) is not available for work as required by Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1253(c), and the EDD may deny benefits on this basis.^{n8.2} An alien's eligibility for benefits generally under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1264, which restricts benefits to aliens based on their status at the time that previous services were performed, is not relevant to the determination of whether an alien is legally available for work at the time he or she applies for benefits.^{n8.3}

The requirement that the claimant be "available for work" is distinct from the requirement that the claimant conduct a search for suitable work.ⁿ⁹ "Availability" reflects a concern not as to the search for work but as to the restrictions the claimant imposes on the work that he or she will accept.ⁿ¹⁰

[b] Good Cause for Unavailability

Situations in which good cause for refusing work has been found include unavailability to work on weekends because of parenting responsibilities;ⁿ¹¹ unavailability to work on certain days because of religious observance;ⁿ¹² return by migrant workers to their homes in Texas when seasonal work ended and workers were unable to secure other employment or affordable housing in California;ⁿ¹³ declining a suitable civil service position when applicant had conscientious objections to loyalty oath required;ⁿ¹⁴ and refusal by a law student seeking part-time employment of work that would conflict with her school requirements.ⁿ¹⁵

[c] Partial Availability

Ordinarily, the individual must be able to work and available for work for the entire week in order to be eligible for that week.ⁿ¹⁶ However, an otherwise eligible individual who is unavailable for part of the week due to physical or mental illness or injury must be paid proportionate benefits for the days in that week during which he or she is available for work and able to work.ⁿ¹⁷ If an individual is unavailable to work for part of a week due to observance of religious holidays, constitutional considerations mandate that the individual not be denied benefits for the entire week, and that benefits be apportioned on a daily, rather than on a weekly basis.ⁿ¹⁸

[3] Search for Suitable Work

[a] Duty of Claimant and Department

To be eligible for unemployment compensation benefits, the individual must conduct a search for suitable work in accordance with specific and reasonable instructions of a public employment office.ⁿ¹⁹ The claimant must adopt a course of action reasonably designed to result in his or her prompt employment in suitable work, considering the customary methods of obtaining work and the current condition of the labor market.ⁿ²⁰ When the EDD is better situated than the claimant to know customary methods of obtaining work and the current condition of the labor market, the claimant may rely on its advice or that of another state agency to which the EDD has referred the claimant.ⁿ²¹ Thus, an applicant for benefits fulfills his or her duty to seek work if he or she follows with reasonable diligence the specific and reasonable seek-work instructions of a public employment office.ⁿ²²

[b] What Constitutes "Suitable Work"

"Suitable work" means work in the individual's usual occupation for which he or she is reasonably fitted, regardless of whether or not it constitutes "employment" for purposes of applicability of the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ²³

In determining whether the work is work for which the individual is reasonably fitted, the director must consider the degree of risk involved to the individual's health, safety, and morals; physical fitness; prior training, experience, and earnings; length of unemployment; prospects for securing local work in his or her customary occupation; the distance of the available work from the individual's residence; and such other factors as would influence a reasonably prudent person in the individual's circumstances.ⁿ²⁴

[c] Unsuitable Work

"Suitable" employment does not include employment with an employer who does not:ⁿ²⁵

1. Possess an appropriate state license to engage in his or her business, trade, or profession; or
2. Withhold or hold in trust the employee contributions required by the unemployment compensation disability benefits provisions and does not transmit all such employee contributions to the department for the Disability Fund as required by Unemployment Insurance Code Section 986;ⁿ²⁶ or
3. Carry either workers' compensation insurance or possess a certificate of self-insurance as required by the workers' compensation provisions of the Labor Code.ⁿ²⁷

[d] Refusal to Accept Unsuitable Work

Benefits may not be denied to an otherwise eligible and qualified individual who refuses to accept unsuitable employment as defined in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1258.5.ⁿ²⁸ In addition, no work or employment may be deemed suitable and benefits may not be denied to any otherwise eligible and qualified individual for refusing new work under any of the following conditions:

1. If the position offered is vacant due directly to a strike, lockout, or other labor dispute;ⁿ²⁹ or
2. If the wages, hours, or other conditions of the work offered are substantially less favorable to the individual than those prevailing for similar work in the locality;ⁿ³⁰ or
3. If, as a condition of being employed, the individual would be required to join a company union or to resign from or refrain from joining any bona fide labor organization.ⁿ³¹

[4] Requirement of One-Week Waiting Period

To be eligible for unemployment benefits for a given week, an individual must have been unemployed for a waiting period of one week as defined in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1254, unless the Governor has waived the waiting period because of war or a state of emergency, pursuant to Government Code Section 8571.ⁿ³² For this purpose, no week may be counted as a week of unemployment unless it occurs within the benefit yearⁿ³³ that includes the week with respect to which the individual claims payment of unemployment compensation benefits.ⁿ³⁴ However, this requirement may not interrupt the payment of those benefits for consecutive weeks of unemployment.ⁿ³⁵ The week immediately preceding a benefit year, if part of one uninterrupted period of unemployment that continues into the benefit year is deemed, for the purposes of the Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1254 only, to be within that benefit year as well as within the preceding benefit year.ⁿ³⁶

■ ILLUSTRATION

Claimant first becomes unemployed on January 1 and remains unemployed for the remainder of the month. On January 12, Claimant files a claim for unemployment compensation benefits for the week of January 8, thereby commencing a benefit year. The week of January 1 will count as Claimant's waiting period under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1254 for purposes of claiming benefits for the week of January 8 and subsequent consecutive weeks of unemployment.

A week is also not counted as a "week of unemployment" for purposes of the waiting-period requirement if unemployment compensation benefits have been paid with respect to that week.ⁿ³⁷ Finally, to be counted as a "week of unemployment," the individual must have been eligible for unemployment compensation benefits with respect to that week in all respects, except for the requirement of Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 1253(d) (requirement of unemployment for waiting period of one week) and 1281 (minimum earnings requirement).ⁿ³⁸

[5] Participation in Reemployment Activities

To be eligible for unemployment benefits for a given week, an individual must have participated as required in reemployment activities, such as orientation and assessment, if the individual has been identified by an automated profiling system as likely to exhaust regular unemployment benefits.ⁿ³⁹ This requirement does not apply to any individual who has shown good cause for failure to participate.ⁿ⁴⁰

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in § 80.30[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1253(a)-1; 1326-1-13 (claims filing procedures for unemployment compensation benefits); see also discussion in §§ 80.38, 80.39.

(n3)Footnote 3. See also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1253(b)-1 (except for partial claims, claimant must report in person absent good cause or unless EDD determines that there is little likelihood of jobs being listed with EDD and that EDD's efforts would be unproductive).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1253(c)-2; see also discussion in [2], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. See [4], below.

(n6)Footnote 6. See discussion in [3], below.

(n7)Footnote 6.1. See discussion in [5], below.

(n8)Footnote 7. See Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 55, 67, 141 Cal. Rptr. 146, 569 P.2d 740 ; Rios v. Employment Development Dept. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 489, 493, 231 Cal. Rptr. 732 ; cf. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1257(b) (refusal without good cause of suitable work offered to eligible claimant as basis for disqualification); see § 80.36[1][b] for discussion of disqualification for refusing to accept suitable work.

(n9)Footnote 8. See Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 55, 70-71, 141 Cal. Rptr. 146, 569 P.2d 740 ; Rios v. Employment Development Dept. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 489, 494, 231 Cal. Rptr. 732 .

(n10)Footnote 8.1. Gutierrez v. Employment Development Dept. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1791, 1799, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 ; see also Alonso v. State of California (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 242, 249-250, 123 Cal. Rptr. 536 .

(n11)Footnote 8.2. Gutierrez v. Employment Development Dept. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1791, 1799, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 ; see also Alonso v. State of California (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 242, 249-250, 123 Cal. Rptr. 536 .

(n12)Footnote 8.3. Gutierrez v. Employment Development Dept. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1791, 1799, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 ; see also Alonso v. State of California (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 242, 249-250, 123 Cal. Rptr. 536 . For discussion of the eligibility of aliens generally, see § 80.34[1].

(n13)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(e); see also discussion in [3], below.

(n14)Footnote 10. See Pacific Legal Foundation v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 101, 113-114, 172 Cal. Rptr. 194, 624 P.2d 244 .

(n15)Footnote 11. See Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 55, 70, 141 Cal. Rptr. 146, 569 P.2d 740 .

(n16)Footnote 12. See Sherbert v. Verner (1963) 374 U.S. 398, 404-406, 83 S. Ct. 1790, 10 L. Ed. 2d 965 (disqualification from unemployment compensation benefits because of unavailability for work on certain days due to religious observance as unconstitutional infringement on free exercise of religion); Jaffe v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 719, 723-724, 202 Cal. Rptr. 812 (unemployed teacher could be denied unemployment compensation benefits for two days he was unavailable for work because of observing high holy days of his religion, but could not constitutionally be denied benefits for entire week); see also Frazee v. Illinois Dep't of Employment Sec. (1989) 489 U.S. 829, 834-835, 109 S. Ct. 1514, 103 L. Ed. 2d 914 (unconstitutional infringement of free exercise of religion to deny unemployment compensation benefits to nondenominational Christian who refused temporary position that would have required him to work on Sunday, based on sincerely held religious belief that he could not work on "the Lord's day"). For a discussion of religious observance as good cause for leaving employment or for refusing to obey employer's rules, see § 80.35[4][h][i], [5][c].

(n17)Footnote 13. See Rios v. Employment Development Dept. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 489, 231 Cal. Rptr. 732 ; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 611 (agricultural labor included in definition of "employment").

(n18)Footnote 14. See Syrek v. California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 519, 530-531, 7 Cal. Rptr. 97, 354 P.2d 625 .

(n19)Footnote 15. See Glick v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 493, 500-501, 153 Cal. Rptr. 1, 591 P.2d 24 ; See also § 80.33[6] for discussion of when student available for part-time work may be considered available for work under Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(c).

(n20)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(c); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1253-1 (for benefit purposes, "week" means seven consecutive days commencing at 12.01 a.m. Sunday and ending 12 midnight on following Saturday); Unemp. Ins. Code § 143 ("week" means period of seven consecutive days as prescribed by authorized regulation).

(n21)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.5; see also discussion under § 80.33[3].

(n22)Footnote 18. See Jaffe v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 719, 725, 202 Cal. Rptr. 812 (teacher who was unavailable for work two days during one week due to religious observance as entitled to week's benefit amount minus two-sevenths of amount).

(n23)Footnote 19. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(e); see 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1253(e)-1, 1253(e)-2; cf. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1257(b) (disqualification for refusing without good cause to accept suitable employment or failing to apply for suitable employment when notified by public employment office); see § 80.36[1][b] for discussion of disqualification for refusing suitable employment.

(n24)Footnote 20. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1253(e)-1(a); see also Pacific Legal Foundation v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 101, 115, 172 Cal. Rptr. 194, 624 P.2d 244 (Unemp. Ins. Code § 100, requiring that claimants make all reasonable efforts to secure employment on their own behalf, as imposing no greater seek-work requirement than under Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(e)).

(n25)Footnote 21. See Pacific Legal Foundation v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 101, 112, 172 Cal. Rptr. 194, 624 P.2d 244 .

(n26)Footnote 22. See Pacific Legal Foundation v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 101, 117, 172 Cal. Rptr. 194, 624 P.2d 244 .

(n27)Footnote 23. See also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1258; see § 80.06[1] for discussion of subject employment.

(n28)Footnote 24. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1258; see also Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 55, 63, 141 Cal. Rptr. 146, 569 P.2d 740 (suitable work requirements reflect legislative policy that claimants may not be required to accept every job opportunity which may become available).

(n29)Footnote 25. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1258.5.

(n30)Footnote 26. See Part D for discussion of disability benefits.

(n31)Footnote 27. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1258.5(c); see Lab. Code § 3200 et seq. (workers' compensation provisions).

(n32)Footnote 28. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1259(d)-(f); see also discussion in [c], above.

(n33)Footnote 29. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1259(a). For discussion of eligibility of strikers for benefits, see § 80.34[5].

(n34)Footnote 30. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1259(b).

(n35)Footnote 31. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1259(c).

(n36)Footnote 32. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(d).

(n37)Footnote 33. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1276 ("benefit year" defined); see also discussion in § 80.31[2].

(n38)Footnote 34. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1254(a).

(n39)Footnote 35. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1254(a).

(n40)Footnote 36. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1254(a); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1254-1 (allocation of week of unemployment which falls between two benefit years).

(n41)Footnote 37. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1254(b).

(n42)Footnote 38. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1254(c).

(n43)Footnote 39. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(f); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1300 et seq. and discussion in § 80.12.

(n44)Footnote 40. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(f).

157 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.33

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.33 Factors Not Affecting Eligibility

[1] Detention

An unemployed individual who is in all respects otherwise eligible for unemployment compensation benefits may not be deemed ineligible for any week in which, for not exceeding two working days, he or she cannot reasonably be expected to work because he or she was unlawfully detained,ⁿ¹ or was lawfully detained or arrested, but the charge against him or her was subsequently dismissed.ⁿ²

A determination of benefits made after a claimant has been lawfully detained but prior to dismissal of charges may, if no appeal has been filed, be reconsidered by the EDD within 15 days from the date that the charge is dismissed.ⁿ³

For discussion of disqualification for benefits resulting from an employee's absence due to an incarceration followed by a conviction, see § 80.35[4][g], [5][d][ii].

[2] Uncompensated Days Off Pursuant to Collective Bargaining Agreement in Longshoring Operations

An unemployed individual who is in all respects otherwise eligible for unemployment compensation benefits may not be deemed ineligible for any week in which, pursuant to the provisions of a collective bargaining agreement, he or she is allowed not more than one uncompensated day off in that week or is allowed not more than one uncompensated holiday on one day in that week if the following conditions are met:ⁿ⁴

1. The individual is employed in longshoring operations;
2. The individual's employer regularly offers employment to individuals employed in such operations seven days a week; and
3. The individual is able to work and available for work for six days of the week, except as provided under Unemployment Insurance Code sections 1253.1 (unlawful detention)ⁿ⁵ or 1253.12 (death in immediate family).n6

[3] Physical or Mental Illness or Injury

Notwithstanding the eligibility requirement of availability for work under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1253(c),n7 if an individual is, in all other respects, eligible for benefits and he or she becomes unable to work due to a physical or mental illness or injury for one or more days during the week, that individual must be paid unemployment compensation benefits at the rate of one-seventh the weekly benefit amount payable for that week for each day that he or she is available for work and able to work.n8 The individual is not entitled to benefits for any day during that week which he or she is unable to work due to the physical or mental illness or injury.n9

[4] Court-Related Duties

For purposes of the requirement that an individual must be available for work,n10 an unemployed individual who is in all respects otherwise eligible for unemployment compensation benefits may not be deemed to be unavailable for work for any week in which he or she is unable to work solely because he or she is serving on a grand or petit jury, or is responding to a subpoena.n11 For purposes of the requirement that an individual must have conducted a search for suitable work,n12 an individual may not be disqualified from receiving benefits for any week solely because he or she is before any court pursuant to a lawfully issued summons to appear for jury duty.n13

[5] Emergency Hospitalization

For purposes of the requirement that an individual must have conducted a search for suitable work,n14 an individual may not be disqualified from receiving benefits for any week solely because he or she was hospitalized for treatment of an emergency or life-threatening condition.n15

[6] Availability for Part-Time Work Only

An unemployed individual may not be disqualified for eligibility for unemployment compensation benefits solely on the basis that he or she is only available for part-time work.n16 If an individual restricts his or her availability to part-time work, he or she may be considered to be able to work and available for work, pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1253(c), if it is determined that all of following conditions exist:n17

- (1) The claim is based on the part-time employment.n18
- (2) The claimant is actively seeking and is willing to accept work under essentially the same conditions that existed while the wage credits were accrued.n18
- (3) The claimant imposes no other restrictions and is in a labor market in which a reasonable demand exists for the part-time services he or she offers.n19

For discussion of disqualification for benefits resulting from leaving work to attend school, see § 80.35[4][h][vi].

[7] Death in Immediate Family

An unemployed individual who is in all respects otherwise eligible for unemployment compensation benefits will not be deemed ineligible for any week in which the individual cannot reasonably be expected to work because there has been a death in his or her immediate family.n20 If the death occurred in the state in which the individual resides, he or she will be excused from the "availability for work" requirement for a period not exceeding two working days.n21 If the death occurred outside of the state in which the individual resides, the claimant will be excused from the availability requirement for a period not exceeding four working days.n22

EDD regulations define "immediate family" as the claimant's spouse, or registered domestic partner,^{n22.1} or the parent, stepparent, foster parent, grandparent, child, foster child, grandchild, brother, sister, son-in-law, or daughter-in-law of the claimant or the claimant's spouse or registered domestic partner, whether or not they live in a common household.ⁿ²³

[8] Unexpired Leave Time On Discharge From Armed Services

An unemployed individual who has been discharged from any branch of the United States armed services and who is in all respects otherwise eligible for unemployment compensation benefits will not be deemed ineligible in any week for which he or she has unexpired leave time for which he or she has been compensated on discharge.ⁿ²⁴

[9] WARN Act Violation

Payments to an individual by an employer who fails to provide the advance notice of facility closure required by the federal Worker Adjustment Renotification and Training (WARN) Act (29 U.S.C. § 2101 et seq.) may not be construed to be wages or compensation for personal services under Unemployment Insurance Code section 100 et seq. Benefits payable under Unemployment Insurance Code section 100 et seq. may not be denied or reduced because of the receipt of payments related in any way to an employer's violation of the WARN Act.ⁿ²⁵

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.1(a); see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1253.1-1 (definition of "unlawfully detained").

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.1(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.1(c).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.2.

(n5)Footnote 5. See discussion in [1], above.

(n6)Footnote 6. See discussion in [7], below.

(n7)Footnote 7. See discussion under § 80.32[2].

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.5.

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.5; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1252(a)(3) (eligible individual who becomes unable to work due to physical or mental illness or injury as "unemployed"). For discussion of partial availability, see § 80.32[2][c].

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(c); see also discussion under § 80.32[2].

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.6.

(n12)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(e); see also discussion under § 80.32[3].

(n13)Footnote 13. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.7(a).

(n14)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(e); see also discussion under § 80.32[3].

(n15)Footnote 15. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.7(b).

(n16)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.8. Prior to January 1, 2002, § 1253.8 prohibited disqualifying an unemployed individual solely on the basis that he or she is a student.

(n17)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.8. For discussion of the requirement of available for work, see § 80.32[2].

(n18)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.8(a).

(n19)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.8(b). For discussion of minimum previous earnings requirement for eligibility benefits, see § 80.31.

(n20)Footnote 19. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.8(c).

(n21)Footnote 20. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.12.

(n22)Footnote 21. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.12(a).

(n23)Footnote 22. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.12(b).

(n24)Footnote 22.1. Registered domestic partners are defined in Family Code § 297.

(n25)Footnote 23. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1253.12-1.

(n26)Footnote 24. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.15.

(n27)Footnote 25. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.1; for discussion of the WARN Act generally, see 60.03[3][s].

158 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.34

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.34 Ineligible Persons

[1] Aliens

Unemployment compensation benefits are not payable on the basis of services performed by an alien unless the alien is an individual who (1) was lawfully admitted for permanent residence at the time the services were performed, (2) was lawfully present for purposes of performing the services, or (3) was permanently residing in the United States under color of law at the time the services were performed, including an alien who was lawfully present as a result of the application of certain provisions of the federal Immigration and Nationality Act.ⁿ¹ The Unemployment Insurance Code specifies special procedures to be followed when an alien who has applied for temporary residence status files a claim for, or has been paid, unemployment insurance benefits.ⁿ²

However, even an alien who falls into one of the three categories discussed above may not be eligible for benefits.^{n2.1} If an alien has no work authorization from the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) when he or she applies for benefits, he or she is not legally available for work as required by Unemployment Insurance Code section 1253(c), and the EDD may deny benefits on that basis.^{n2.2}

[2] Persons Applying for Benefits From Another State

An individual is not eligible for unemployment compensation benefits on account of unemployment for any week or part of any week with respect to which he or she has received or is seeking employment benefits under an unemployment compensation law of any other state or of the United States.ⁿ³ If the appropriate agency of the other state or of the United States finally determines that the individual is not entitled to unemployment compensation benefits, the person is no longer rendered ineligible for benefits under California law.ⁿ⁴

[3] School Employees During Recesses and Breaks

With certain limited exceptions, persons employed in an educational institution by a nonprofit organization or a public entity as defined by Unemployment Insurance Code section 605, are not entitled to unemployment compensation benefits during holiday recesses, between-term breaks, vacations, and paid sabbaticals when there is a contract or reasonable assurance that the employee will perform services for the educational institution after the break or vacation.ⁿ⁵ For this purpose, "reasonable assurance" includes, but is not limited to, an offer of employment or assignment made by the educational institution, provided that the offer or assignment is not contingent on enrollment, funding, or program changes.ⁿ⁶ An individual who has been notified that he or she will be replaced and does not have an offer of employment or assignment to perform services for an educational institution is not considered to have reasonable assurance.ⁿ⁷

[4] Persons Employed in Seasonal Sports Events

In the case of individuals performing services substantially all of which consist of participation in seasonal sports or athletic events, unemployment compensation benefits are not payable for unemployment during the period between two successive sports seasons or similar periods, if the individual performed services in the first of these seasons or periods, and there is a reasonable assurance that the individual will perform services in the subsequent season or period.ⁿ⁸

[5] Strikers

An individual is not eligible for unemployment compensation benefits if he or she left work because of a trade dispute.ⁿ⁹ Such an individual remains ineligible for the period during which he or she continues to be out of work because the trade dispute is still in active progress in the establishment in which the individual was employed.ⁿ¹⁰ The disqualification imposed by Unemployment Insurance Code section 1262 on individuals who leave employment because of a trade dispute is not contingent on the merits of the controversy.^{n10.1} To be ineligible under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1262, the individual must have both (1) voluntarily left or remained away from work (the volitional test), and (2) left or remained away because of a trade dispute (causational test).ⁿ¹¹ The form of cessation of employment is not controlling; what matters is what precedes it in terms of causation and volitional conduct.^{n11.1} When an independent, intervening act of another so disrupts the chain of causation as to render the leaving involuntary, the causation and volitional tests tend to overlap.^{n11.2}

Under the "volitional" test, the claimant is not disqualified.ⁿ¹² Under the "causational" test, "there must be a direct causal connection between the trade dispute and the leaving of work."ⁿ¹³ The [unemployment insurance] act does not disqualify an employee from receiving benefits in all cases where his unemployment results directly or indirectly from a labor dispute. ...ⁿ¹⁴ Thus, for example, if an employee leaves work during a trade dispute in reaction to new and onerous work conditions, the new conditions and not the trade dispute may be cause of the unemployment.ⁿ¹⁵ As another example, if an employee of an employer that processes perishable goods becomes unemployed as a result of an offensive lockout because the union will not give assurances of no strike activity, the employer's election not to operate, rather than the trade dispute, is the cause of the unemployment.ⁿ¹⁶

If only part of the employees in one bargaining unit go on strike and the remaining employees are laid off for lack of work, the laid-off employees may nonetheless be ineligible for unemployment benefits if the selective withholding of services by only some union members can be considered a matter of strike strategy by the entire bargaining unit.ⁿ¹⁷ However, if employees in one bargaining unit are laid off as a consequence of a strike by employees in a separate unit with whom the laid-off employees have no relationship, the laid-off employees may be entitled to unemployment benefits.ⁿ¹⁸

If an employer permanently replaces a striker, the striker may become eligible for benefits as a result of that replacement.ⁿ¹⁹ If, however, the employee's job remains open and the employee fails to return to work, he or she is not eligible for benefits.ⁿ²⁰

When a selective strike is carried out by a union against an employer within a multiemployer bargaining unit or association, and employers who have not been struck retaliate by locking out their employees, the question arises whether locked-out union employees of the nonstruck employers are ineligible to receive unemployment compensation benefits under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1262. Ineligibility has been found when it was understood or reasonably foreseeable that a strike against any one of the employer members would be treated as a strike against all, as, for example, when the multiemployer group negotiates on an industry-wide basis for a master contract binding on all employers.ⁿ²¹ However, when individual employers retain their right to separately negotiate individual contracts, each is a distinct bargaining unit notwithstanding that they band together on a geographical or industry-wide basis to impose a general lockout when any one employer is subjected to strike action. Under such circumstances, the nonstriking employees are innocent victims of a trade dispute who may not be deprived of their unemployment benefits.ⁿ²²

The restriction on eligibility for unemployment compensation benefits in the case of trade disputes manifests the state's desire to maintain neutrality in labor disputes and not to require the employer to subsidize, through its contributions to the Unemployment Compensation Fund, the use of the strike as an economic weapon against it.ⁿ²³ One court of appeal has held that Unemployment Insurance Code section 1262 does not unconstitutionally discriminate against strikers who join together in a work stoppage as the result of a reduction in wages and benefits. This is true even though the individual employees might have had good cause for leaving work under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256, and thus have been eligible for benefits, had they not joined together in the strike.^{n23.1}

[6] Recipients of Temporary Total Disability Indemnity

An individual is not eligible for unemployment compensation benefits or extended duration benefits for the same day or days of unemployment for which he or she receives benefits in the form of cash payments for temporary total disability indemnity, under a workers' compensation law or employer's liability law of this state, of any other state, or of the federal government.ⁿ²⁴ If the cash payments are less than the amount the individual would otherwise receive as unemployment compensation benefits or extended duration benefits, the individual is entitled to receive for that day or days, if otherwise eligible, unemployment compensation benefits or extended duration benefits reduced by the amount of the cash payments.ⁿ²⁵ If the indemnity payments render the individual ineligible to receive benefits for only part of a week of unemployment, the individual is entitled to an amount of benefits computed by reducing his or her weekly benefit amount by the amount of indemnity received for that week.ⁿ²⁶

[7] Persons Convicted of Making False Statements

Any individual criminally convicted under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2101 of willfully making a false statement or knowingly failing to disclose a material fact to obtain or increase any unemployment or disability compensation benefit forfeits any rights to benefits for the week in which the criminal complaint was filed and for the 51 consecutive calendar weeks which immediately follow that week.ⁿ²⁷ If a subsequent order under Penal Code Section 1203.4 allows the individual to withdraw his or her plea of guilty and to enter a plea of not guilty, sets aside the verdict of guilty, or dismisses the criminal complaint, a forfeiture of benefits may extend no later than the effective date of that order and, if the period of forfeiture has not previously expired, the forfeiture of benefits terminates as of the effective date of the order.ⁿ²⁸ In addition, an individual who is so convicted for false statements or nondisclosures in connection with obtaining or increasing unemployment compensation, extended duration benefits, or federal-state extended benefits is disqualified from receiving such benefits for the week in which the criminal complaint was filed, or any subsequent week for which the individual is first otherwise in all respects eligible for the benefits, and for 14 subsequent weeks for which the individual is otherwise in all respects eligible.ⁿ²⁹ No disqualification may be applied to any week if all or any portion of the week is beyond the three-year period next succeeding the date of the filing of the criminal complaint.ⁿ³⁰

A plea or verdict of guilty, or a conviction following a plea of nolo contendere, is deemed to be a conviction for the above purposes, irrespective of whether an order granting probation or other order is made suspending the imposition of the sentence or whether sentence is imposed but execution of sentence is suspended.ⁿ³¹ The EDD is required to suspend payments to an individual, effective on the date of filing of a criminal complaint under Unemployment

Insurance Code Section 2101.n32

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1264(a). The statute specifically refers to 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5) (temporary parole into United States of certain aliens) and former 8 U.S.C. § 1153(a)(7) (conditional entry of certain aliens fleeing persecution). For discussion of minimum previous earning requirements, see § 80.31.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1264(d)-(g).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. See Gutierrez v. Employment Development Dept. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1791, 1799, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 ; see also Alonso v. State of California (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 242, 249-250, 123 Cal. Rptr. 536 .

(n4)Footnote 2.2. See Gutierrez v. Employment Development Dept. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1791, 1799, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 ; see also Alonso v. State of California (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 242, 249-250, 123 Cal. Rptr. 536 . For discussion of the requirement of availability for work, see § 80.32[2].

(n5)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.

(n6)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.

(n7)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.3(b)-(i); see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1451-1454 (exceptions applicable to nonprofessional employees of specified state special schools); see also Cervisi v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 635, 639, 256 Cal. Rptr. 142 (assignments given hourly instructors that depended on adequate class enrollment did not constitute "reasonable assurance" of continued employment and instructors were entitled to unemployment benefits for the period between fall and spring semesters); Board of Education v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 674, 682-683, 206 Cal. Rptr. 788 (ineligibility of teacher for summer recess unemployment benefits); Russ v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 834, 846-848, 178 Cal. Rptr. 421 (teacher had "reasonable assurance" of post-recess employment when district informed her in writing of intent to rehire her in fall, notwithstanding contingency of lack of funding).

(n8)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.3(g).

(n9)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.3(g).

(n10)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253.4.

(n11)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1262.

(n12)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1262; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1262.5 (EDD's duty to investigate trade disputes); Baker v. General Motors Corp. (1986) 478 U.S. 621, 634-635, 106 S. Ct. 3129, 92 L. Ed. 2d 504 (National Labor Relations Act (NLRA) section protecting workers' associational rights does not preempt state from disqualifying workers for unemployment benefits because of financial support given to strike activity); Ohio Bureau of Employment Services v. Hodory (1977) 431 U.S. 471, 482-88, 97 S. Ct. 1898, 52 L. Ed. 2d 513 (NLRA as not preempting state's right to either authorize or prohibit unemployment compensation benefits to striking workers).

(n13)Footnote 10.1. See Acuff v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1044, 256 Cal. Rptr. 513 ; see also Martinez v. California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1385, 1391, 1392, 254 Cal. Rptr. 461 .

(n14)Footnote 11. Campos v. Employment Development Dept. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 961, 966-967, 183 Cal. Rptr. 637 ; see Bunny's Waffle Shop v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 735, 740, 151 P.2d 224 ; see also Acuff v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1045, 256 Cal. Rptr. 513 ; Martinez v. California

Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1385, 1390, 254 Cal. Rptr. 461 .

(n15)Footnote 11.1. See Acuff v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1048, 256 Cal. Rptr. 513 .

(n16)Footnote 11.2. See Acuff v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1045, 256 Cal. Rptr. 513 .

(n17)Footnote 12. See Bodinson Mfg. Co. v. California E. Com. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 321, 327-328, 109 P.2d 935 (but holding, under facts of case, that claimants had voluntarily left their work).

(n18)Footnote 13. Bunny's Waffle Shop v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 735, 740, 151 P.2d 224 .

(n19)Footnote 14. Bunny's Waffle Shop v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 735, 740, 151 P.2d 224 .

(n20)Footnote 15. See Bunny's Waffle Shop v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 735, 740-741, 151 P.2d 224 .

(n21)Footnote 16. See Coast Packing Co. v. Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 76, 79-81, 48 Cal. Rptr. 854, 410 P.2d 358 .

(n22)Footnote 17. See Chrysler Corp. v. Cal. Emp. etc. Com. (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 8, 18-19, 253 P.2d 68 .

(n23)Footnote 18. See Chrysler Corp. v. California Unemp. Ins. Appeals Board (1962) 199 Cal. App. 2d 683, 687-696, 18 Cal. Rptr. 843 .

(n24)Footnote 19. See Ruberoid Co. v. California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Board (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 73, 78-79, 27 Cal. Rptr. 878, 378 P.2d 102 ; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(j) (employment relationship does not ordinarily sever during strike).

(n25)Footnote 20. See Isobe v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 584, 116 Cal. Rptr. 376, 526 P.2d 528 .

(n26)Footnote 21. See Interstate Brands v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 770, 773, 782, 163 Cal. Rptr. 619, 608 P.2d 707 ; McKinley v. California Emp. Etc. Com. (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 239, 244-245, 209 P.2d 602 .

(n27)Footnote 22. See Brotherhood of Teamsters & Auto Truck Drivers v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1515, 1530, 236 Cal. Rptr. 78 ; see also Pacific Maritime Assn. v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 568, 578-579, 215 Cal. Rptr. 408 (neither volitional or causational test met when longshoremen whose union was engaged in selective work stoppages were not scheduled to work during period in question and did not walk off job or expressly refuse employment, notwithstanding their failure to repudiate work stoppage policy or to seek employment that became available as result of work stoppages).

(n28)Footnote 23. See Acuff v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1045, 256 Cal. Rptr. 513 ; Martinez v. California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1385, 1393, 254 Cal. Rptr. 461 ; see also National Broadcasting Co. v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1979) 95 Cal. App. 3d 550, 555, 157 Cal. Rptr. 207 .

(n29)Footnote 23.1. See Acuff v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1051, 256 Cal. Rptr. 513 ; see § 80.35 [4] for discussion of Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.

(n30)Footnote 24. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.5(a).

(n31)Footnote 25. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.5(a).

(n32)Footnote 26. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.5(b).

(n33)Footnote 27. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1263(a).

(n34)Footnote 28. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1263(a).

(n35)Footnote 29. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1263(b).

(n36)Footnote 30. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1263(b).

(n37)Footnote 31. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1263(d).

(n38)Footnote 32. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1263(c).

159 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.35

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.35 Disqualification for Voluntary Quitting or Discharge for Misconduct

[1] Generally

Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1256 provides that an individual is disqualified for unemployment compensation benefits if the director of the EDD finds that the individual (1) left his or her most recent work voluntarily without good cause,ⁿ¹ or (2) has been discharged for misconduct connected with his or her most recent work.ⁿ²

[2] Presumption of Nondisqualifying Conduct

Under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1256, an individual is presumed to have been discharged for reasons other than misconduct and not to have voluntarily left work without good cause unless the employer has given written notice to the contrary to the EDD, setting forth facts sufficient to overcome the presumption.ⁿ³ The presumption under Section 1256 is rebuttable.ⁿ⁴ The presumption controls the burden of proof at each level of appeal, even if it is deemed rebutted at the lower level.ⁿ⁵

[3] Definition of "Most Recent Work"

For the purposes of disqualifications based on an individual leaving his or her most recent work without good cause or being discharged from his or her most recent work for misconduct, "most recent work" is that work in which a claimant last performed compensated services either:ⁿ⁶

1. Prior to and nearest the date of filing a valid new, reopened, or additional claim for unemployment compensation benefits; a valid primary, reopened, or additional claim for extended duration benefits; or a valid application, or reopened or additional claim for federal-state extended benefits;ⁿ⁷ or
2. During the calendar week for which a continued claim is filed.ⁿ⁸

[4] Voluntarily Leaving Work Without Good Cause[a] What Constitutes "Voluntary" Leaving

Whether an individual leaves work voluntarily or involuntarily within the meaning of Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1256 depends on which party initiated a termination or suspension of employment.ⁿ⁹ That is, the determination of whether an employee has terminated his or her employment voluntarily or involuntarily depends on whether the employer or the employee is the "moving party" in the termination.ⁿ¹⁰ An employer who refuses to permit an able and willing employee to continue working or the employer who is unable to provide continuing work is the moving party, and the employee in such a situation is deemed to be involuntarily unemployed due to a discharge or layoff.^{n10.1} If the employee left employment while continued work was available, then the employee is the moving party.^{n10.2} Therefore, a voluntary leaving occurs only when work is available and the employee leaves work of his or her own free will.ⁿ¹¹

An employee who leaves work when asked by the employer to either resign or be fired, or who resigns rather than agree to a forced leave of absence, is not deemed to have "voluntarily" left his or her work.ⁿ¹² Likewise, if an employer discharges an employee but gives him or her the option of remaining a few days longer, and the employee elects to leave immediately, the leaving will be regarded as involuntary.ⁿ¹³

■ ILLUSTRATIONS

The following are examples of "voluntary" leaving:ⁿ¹⁴

1. The employee resigns in anticipation of a discharge or layoff and before the employer takes any action.
2. The employee resigns, but delays the effective date at the employer's request.
3. The employee resigns effective as of a future date, the employer accepts the resignation and makes a firm offer to a potential replacement or incurs substantial expenses in recruiting or other efforts to obtain a replacement, and the employee subsequently attempts unsuccessfully to withdraw the resignation before its effective date. (However, if the employer terminates the employee's employment prior to the effective date of the resignation and does not pay any wages beyond the date of termination, the leaving becomes involuntary.)
4. The employee leaves work before the effective date of a discharge and is not paid beyond the last date actually worked. (However, if the employee leaves work on the effective date of discharge but prior to the end of the normal work day, there is a discharge rather than an involuntary leaving, even if the employee is paid for that day's work.)

[b] "Constructive" Quit

A constructive voluntary leaving occurs when the employee engages in a voluntary act or course of conduct that leaves the employer no reasonable alternative but to discharge the employee, and which the employee knew or reasonably should have known would result in unemployment.ⁿ¹⁵ However, the employee is not required to comply with an unreasonable order of an employer, and a discharge in such circumstances would be a discharge for reasons other than misconduct and not a constructive voluntary leaving.ⁿ¹⁶

■ ILLUSTRATION 1:

Employee A is a truck driver for Employer. Employee A's driver's license is revoked by the state because of a drunk driving condition. Employer discharges Employee A because he is no longer able to continue operating Employer's truck. Employee A's conduct constitutes a constructive voluntary leaving.ⁿ¹⁷

■ ILLUSTRATION 2:

Employee B refuses to join a labor union within the required time limit or to pay union dues as required by the terms of a collective bargaining agreement between Employer and the labor union representing Employer's employees. Employer discharges Employee B as required by the terms of the agreement. Employee B's conduct constitutes a constructive voluntary leaving.ⁿ¹⁸

[c] "Good Cause" Defined

The meaning of the term "good cause" as used in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1256 has been extensively construed by the courts.ⁿ¹⁹ Broadly speaking, "good cause" means an adequate cause that comports with the purposes of the Unemployment Insurance Code and with other laws.ⁿ²⁰ The concept of good cause cannot be arbitrarily limited; it must take account of real circumstances, substantial reasons, objective conditions, palpable forces that operate to produce correlative results, adequate excuses that will bear the test of reason, just grounds for actions, and always the element of good faith.ⁿ²¹ Accordingly, good cause for leaving work means such a cause as justifies an employee's voluntarily leaving the ranks of the employed and joining the ranks of the unemployed; the quitting must be for such a cause as would reasonably motivate in a similar situation the average able-bodied and qualified worker to give up his or her employment with its certain wage rewards in order to enter the ranks of the compensated unemployed.ⁿ²² Good cause may exist for reasons that are personal and not connected to the employment situation, but those reasons must be imperative and compelling in nature.ⁿ²³

For discussion of good cause applied to various factual examples, see [f] through [h], below. For a discussion of "good cause" applied to discharges based on an employee's refusal to follow the employer's rules or orders, see [5][c], below.

For purposes of determining whether benefits paid should be charged to the employer's individual account, if the claimant voluntarily leaves without notifying the employer of the reasons for leaving, and the employer timely submits facts concerning the leaving, the leaving is presumed to be without good cause.ⁿ²⁴

[d] Duty to Preserve Employment Relationship

Prior to leaving work, the claimant has a duty to attempt to preserve the employment relationship. Failure to do so negates what would otherwise constitute good cause.ⁿ²⁵ This duty may be satisfied by reasonable steps, including, but not limited to, any of the following:ⁿ²⁶

1. Seeking an adjustment of the problem by allowing the employer an opportunity to remedy the situation if the employer can reasonably do so;
2. Seeking a leave of absence or transfer to other employment with the same employer if it is likely to remedy the problem and if the claimant knew or should have known that a leave or a transfer probably would have been granted had one been requested; or
3. Taking steps within his or her own control, such as hiring a sitter for child care to solve a child care problem, or joining a car pool or repairing an automobile or purchasing a replacement vehicle to solve a transportation problem.ⁿ²⁷

[e] Determination of Good Cause as Question of Law

Whether a claimant left his or her employment for "good cause" as this term is used in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1256 is a question of law that must be answered in relation to the particular facts of each case.ⁿ²⁸

[f] Situations Deemed Good Cause by Statute

[i] Compulsory Retirement

By statute, an individual whose employment is terminated under the compulsory retirement provisions of a collective bargaining agreement may not be deemed to have left work without good cause.ⁿ²⁹ Furthermore, EDD regulations point out that an employee who leaves work because of an employer's policy of compulsory retirement, regardless of whether such retirement is required by a collective bargaining agreement, has not left work "voluntarily" and therefore is not disqualified under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1256.ⁿ³⁰

By contrast, an individual who exercises an option for early retirement solely or primarily because of monetary inducements will be regarded as having left work voluntarily without good cause.ⁿ³¹ However, an individual whose decision to elect early retirement is substantially motivated by certain other factors, such as his or her age or health and the likelihood that his or her job will be abolished, may under the facts of a particular case establish "good cause" for electing early retirement.ⁿ³²

The Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board found that good cause did not exist in a case in which an employee, whose job was not in jeopardy from his employer's restructuring process, accepted the employer's offer of a bonus to retire 6 months early. The employee chose early retirement for two reasons: his concern that his job might be subject to restructuring sometime in the future, and his desire to prevent the reassignment, downgrading, or potential layoff of an employee with lesser seniority. The first reason was not good cause because it was purely speculative rather than imperative and compelling. The second reason was not good cause because the restructuring process included protection against layoffs, and there was no evidence that the employee would have displaced any other employee had he remained at his job.^{n32.1}

For further discussion of good cause issues raised by exercising an option for early retirement, see [h][xv], below.

[ii] Election to Be Laid Off Under Collective Bargaining Agreement

An individual will be deemed to have left his or her most recent work with good cause if he or she elects to be laid off in place of an employee with less seniority pursuant to a provision in a collective bargaining agreement that provides that an employee with more seniority may elect to be laid off in place of an employee with less seniority when the employer has decided to lay off employees.ⁿ³³

[iii] Deprivation of Equal Employment Opportunities

An individual who terminates his or her employment may not be deemed to have left work without good cause if the employer operated so as to deprive the individual of equal employment opportunities because of his or her race, color, religious creed, sex, national origin, ancestry, or physical handicap.ⁿ³⁴ However, the restriction against deeming an individual to have left work without good cause does not apply if the deprivation was based on a bona fide occupational qualification or applicable security regulations established by the United States or California,ⁿ³⁵ or if the individual fails to make reasonable efforts to provide the employer with an opportunity to remove any unintentional deprivation of the individual's equal employment opportunities.ⁿ³⁶

"Employment opportunities," for purposes of the above provision, include, but are not limited to, assignments to jobs, work atmosphere, compensation (including fringe benefits), promotions, transfer, upgrading, rights and duties of employees under work rules, and the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment.ⁿ³⁷ EDD regulations state that this provision is to be construed in harmony with and subject to applicable and controlling federal and California law on the subject of equal employment opportunity.ⁿ³⁸ For discussion of equal employment opportunity laws generally, see Chapters 40-44.

[iv] Sexual Harassment

An individual will be deemed to have left his or her most recent work with good cause if the director finds that the individual left employment because of sexual harassment, provided that the individual has taken reasonable steps to preserve the working relationship.ⁿ³⁹ No steps may be required if the director finds it would have been futile to do so.ⁿ⁴⁰ For purposes of eligibility for unemployment compensation, unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other verbal, visual, or physical conduct of a sexual nature constitutes sexual harassment when any of the following occur:ⁿ⁴¹

1. Submission to the conduct is made either explicitly or implicitly a term or condition of an individual's employment;
2. Submission to or rejection of the conduct by an individual is used as the basis for employment decisions affecting the individual; or
3. The conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual's work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment.

Findings of fact and law by the director will not collaterally estop adjudication of the issue of sexual harassment in another forum.ⁿ⁴²

For discussion of the prohibition against sexual harassment under equal employment opportunity laws, see Chapter 41.

[v] Accompanying Spouse to Another Location

Under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256, an individual may be deemed to have left work with good cause if leaving employment to accompany a spouse or domestic partner to a place from which it is impractical to commute to the employment.ⁿ⁴³ This provision was added to section 1256 in 1982.ⁿ⁴⁴ Since the statutory provision states that such leaving "may" be deemed for good cause,ⁿ⁴⁵ the provision is permissive, rather than mandatory.ⁿ⁴⁶ Thus, the EDD could under the terms of the statute determine in a particular case that a claimant did not leave for "good cause." However, EDD regulations provide that a claimant who leaves his or her most recent work to accompany or join a spouse at another location from which it is impractical to commute is deemed to have left for good cause if he or she did so for any of several reasons relating to the health and welfare of the family, including preservation of family unity.ⁿ⁴⁷

The definition of "spouse" for purposes of Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256 includes not only persons who are married, but those whose marriage is "imminent."ⁿ⁴⁸

Even in the absence of a legally recognized or imminent marriage, a claimant who leaves his or her job for domestic reasons may be able to establish entitlement to benefits if other compelling circumstances exist that make the voluntary leaving akin to an involuntary departure.ⁿ⁴⁹ For example, the California Supreme Court has held that evidence that an employee left her position to accompany a nonmarital partner to another state in order to maintain the familial relationship that the couple had established with their child supported the trial court's finding that the claimant had left her work for good cause.ⁿ⁵⁰

Ordinarily, unemployment benefits paid to an unemployed individual are charged to the reserve account of his or her employer during the base period.ⁿ⁵¹ However, although an individual who leaves work to accompany a spouse or domestic partner may, under the circumstances discussed here, be entitled to receive unemployment insurance benefits,ⁿ⁵² any benefits awarded to an employee under such circumstances will not be charged to the employer's reserve account unless he or she failed to provide information regarding the claim to the EDD within specified time limits.ⁿ⁵³

For discussion of charges against reserve accounts for benefits paid, see § 80.21[4][c]. For discussion of procedures for submission of facts by employers regarding an employee's eligibility for benefits, see § 80.39[4], [5][b], [6][d].

[g] Absence Due to Incarceration Followed by Conviction Deemed Without Good Cause

If the employment of an individual is terminated due to absence from work for a period in excess of 24 hours because of the individual's incarceration, and the individual is convicted of the offense for which he or she was incarcerated, or of any lesser included offense, the individual is deemed to have left work voluntarily without good cause.ⁿ⁵⁴ A plea or verdict of guilty, or a conviction following a plea of nolo contendere, is deemed to be a conviction for these purposes irrespective of whether imposition of the sentence is suspended pursuant to an order granting probation or other order, or whether sentence is imposed but execution of the sentence is suspended.ⁿ⁵⁵

A determination as to whether a complainant who was terminated because of incarceration left work for good cause made prior to a conviction or other final disposition of the criminal complaint or accusation may, if no appeal has been taken from the determination, for good cause be reconsidered by the EDD during the benefit year or extended duration period to which the determination relates.ⁿ⁵⁶

[h] Application of Good Cause Principles to Factual Examples

[i] Religious or Ethical Reasons

The infringement of the First Amendment guarantee of religious freedom is substantial if the state conditions receipt of unemployment compensation benefits on conduct proscribed by religious belief, or denies benefits because of conduct mandated by religious belief.ⁿ⁵⁷ Accordingly, good cause for leaving employment exists if the nature of the work becomes contrary to the claimant's religious beliefs.ⁿ⁵⁸ EDD regulations provide that if an individual has, or after working for a time acquires, a conscientious objection to the work conditions or assigned work based on religious beliefs founded on the tenets or beliefs of a church, sect, denomination, or other religious group, or on ethical or philosophical grounds, the individual's leaving his or her work based on religious beliefs or other grounds is with good cause if all of the following conditions are met:ⁿ⁵⁹

1. If religious beliefs are involved, the tenets or beliefs of the religious group expressly forbid the adherent from engaging in the assigned work or meeting the work conditions;
2. The conscientious objection is bona fide and not a sham or a means of avoiding work;
3. The individual has, whenever feasible, sought other means, such as transfer to other work, to resolve the conscientious objection before voluntarily leaving the work;
4. The work or work conditions have a direct, rather than an indirect or incidental, relationship to the individual's religious, ethical, or philosophical beliefs; and
5. The individual was not aware of the objectionable aspects of the work at the time he or she was hired, or the conscientious objection arose later when the individual first acquired the belief on which the objection is based.

■ ILLUSTRATION

Employee objects to liquor based on religious beliefs and belongs to a religion that expressly forbids its adherents from working in any place where liquor is sold. Employee works in a restaurant. At the time he was hired, the restaurant served no alcoholic beverages; however, subsequently Employer applied for a license to sell alcoholic beverages in the restaurant. The restaurant is part of a chain of several restaurants in the area; other outlets do not serve alcoholic beverages. Employee requests that Employer transfer him to another restaurant in the chain in which Employee could work without violating his religious beliefs. Employer refuses the requested transfer, although it has no valid business reason for doing so. Employee leaves the work due to adherence to religious beliefs. Employee's leaving is for good cause.ⁿ⁶⁰

The same constitutional considerations apply in the context of discharge of a claimant for refusal to work certain hours because of religious convictions adopted after beginning employment;ⁿ⁶¹ and unavailability for work because of religious observance.ⁿ⁶²

[ii] Concerns for Health, Safety, or Morals

A claimant leaves work with good cause if a reasonable person genuinely desirous of remaining employed would have left work due to an undue risk of injury or illness caused by health reasons, physical impairment, impairment of hearing, speech, or vision, pregnancy, unsanitary conditions, temperature or ventilation problems, adverse weather or climate conditions, or other working conditions, or for a reasonably foreseeable and substantially probable serious risk to his or her morals.ⁿ⁶³

"Undue risk of injury or illness" means a reasonably foreseeable and substantial probability of incurring any injury or illness that would require hospitalization or the services of a physician for proper medical care, or would cause any degree of permanent disability, and that meets any one of the following conditions:ⁿ⁶⁴

1. The risk on the particular job is more hazardous than normal for the occupation or industry;
2. The risk is more hazardous for the claimant than for other employees because of circumstances peculiar to the claimant; or
3. The claimant establishes that he or she has a reasonable basis to believe that the working conditions would cause a reasonably foreseeable and substantial probability of incurring an injury or illness that would require hospitalization or the services of a physician for proper medical care, or would cause a degree of permanent disability, even though the risk is normal for the occupation or industry, excluding conditions inherent in the nature of the work that the claimant must accept.

Mere concern with one's health or safety is not sufficient to justify good cause for leaving work.ⁿ⁶⁵ However, a reasonable, good faith, and honest fear of undue harm to one's health and safety from the work environment and conditions of employment falls within the ambit of good cause for voluntary termination of employment.ⁿ⁶⁶ Under EDD regulations, a physician's advice or objective factors showing detriment to health or safety such as a prior adverse medical history are a reasonable basis for a claimant's belief.ⁿ⁶⁷ However, medical evidence is not an absolute prerequisite to a finding of good cause. For example, a court upheld a finding of good cause based on the claimant's concerns that an established risk of lead poisoning in the work environment contributed to his stomach problems, even though there was no medical evidence that these problems in fact resulted from lead poisoning.ⁿ⁶⁸ Good cause for voluntary termination also existed when the claimant had a good faith belief that working in an enclosed, poorly ventilated room filled with coworkers' smoke had a carcinogenic effect on his health, even though he produced no medical evidence that his health had been adversely affected.ⁿ⁶⁹

The claimant must have taken reasonable steps under the circumstances to preserve the employment relationship such as seeking sick leave where health factors are involved, or other leave if available, or a transfer to other available work the claimant can perform.ⁿ⁷⁰ Also, the individual must ordinarily use existing grievance procedures prior to leaving work due to an objection to working conditions in order to have good cause for leaving.ⁿ⁷¹ However, if the individual has reasonable grounds to believe that an immediate threat of serious injury or illness exists due to a working condition, the individual has good cause to refuse to work and if necessary leave work without first using an existing grievance procedure, since immediate protective action is necessary.ⁿ⁷²

An individual who fraudulently fails to disclose or materially misrepresents his or her health or physical condition at the time of hire negates what would otherwise be good cause for that individual to leave work due to the health reasons if the employer could have lawfully refused to hire the individual had the condition been disclosed.ⁿ⁷³

The EDD has adopted special rules applicable to a claimant addicted to alcohol or other drugs. Such a claimant has good cause to leave work if he or she has competent professional advice that entry into a treatment facility or program is necessary and cannot be accomplished unless work ceases, or that the work is a factor in the addiction or poses an undue risk of injury or illness related to the addiction.ⁿ⁷⁴ Good cause is not negated by an addicted claimant's failure to request a leave of absence or sick leave, since the claimant may not be sufficiently rational, or may fear that such a request would have a negative effect on the job or future employment.ⁿ⁷⁵ A claimant who has previously had leave for these same reasons from the employer, however, has no good cause for not requesting leave.ⁿ⁷⁶ For discussion of an employer's duty to accommodate persons addicted to alcohol or drugs under certain circumstances, see Chapter 41. For a discussion of pregnancy leave and accommodation, see Chapter 8.

An employee's reasonable belief that continued work will cause serious risk to his or her morals may also constitute good cause for leaving.ⁿ⁷⁷ This would be the case when an employee is required to engage in immoral, dishonest, illegal, or unethical acts, or discriminate against minorities, or is subjected to improper advances from co-workers or the employer.ⁿ⁷⁸ For example, good cause exists when a salesperson leaves after unsuccessfully objecting to the employer's requirement that false and misleading sales pitches be used, or a cannery inspector leaves after unsuccessfully objecting to the employer's insistence that products known to fall below standards set by law be approved.ⁿ⁷⁹ For a discussion of good cause for leaving based on conscientious objection, see [i], above.

Health and safety concerns may also be relevant in determining whether an employee who is terminated for refusing to follow an employer's rules has been discharged for misconduct within the meaning of Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256.ⁿ⁸⁰ For discussion, see [5][c], below.

[iii] Pregnancy

EDD regulations provide that if a claimant leaves work voluntarily due to pregnancy, the leaving is with good cause if pregnancy rendered the claimant unable to continue work.ⁿ⁸¹ Inability to continue work is usually established by a physician's advice but is also present if a claimant has a history of miscarriages or difficult pregnancies, or if there is a threat to the health or safety of the fetus, or if objective factors exist such as heavy lifting or other strenuous tasks that are required in the work.ⁿ⁸² Some pregnant women may be able to do light work, and the claimant must request a transfer to such work if it is available; if she fails to do so, her leaving work due to pregnancy will be without good cause.ⁿ⁸³

If the claimant leaves due to an employer rule requiring pregnant women to leave work, or to accept leave of absence due to pregnancy required by employer rule, the leaving is involuntary and not disqualifying.ⁿ⁸⁴

For discussion of equal employment opportunity rules relating to pregnancy, see Chapter 41. For a discussion of pregnancy leave and accommodation, see Chapter 8.

[iv] Dissatisfaction With Earnings

An individual who leaves work due to dissatisfaction with some aspect of wages has left work with good cause if the leaving of work is for any one or any combination of the following reasons:ⁿ⁸⁵

1. The wages paid by the employer are less than the minimum wages required by federal or state law and the employer refuses to pay the requisite minimum wages;ⁿ⁸⁶

2. The individual has no reasonable assurance of payment of wages when due, or the employer repeatedly does not pay wages when due, or the employer wilfully refuses to pay wages when due;ⁿ⁸⁷
3. The individual is notified of a transfer or demotion to another position with the employer at a substantial reduction in pay,ⁿ⁸⁸ or under any condition that renders the other position not "suitable employment" under Unemployment Insurance Code sections 1258, 1258.5, or 1259.ⁿ⁸⁹
4. The employer substantially breaches the employment agreement with an employee as to the agreed rate of pay; or
5. The employer makes substantial misrepresentations to the employee as to the duties, hours, working conditions, or wages for the job.

An individual who leaves work due to dissatisfaction with some aspect of wages has left work without good cause if the leaving is for any one or any combination of the following reasons:ⁿ⁹⁰

1. The individual knew the wages at the time of hire, but later leaves work because the wages are not commensurate with his or her experience, or are less than wages paid in prior employment, or are less than prevailing wages paid for similar work in the locality;
2. The work has incidental expenses that the employer has no duty to provide for, such as special clothing, tools, or gasoline, and that are customarily paid for by the employer, minor in amount, or compensated for by other remuneration such as bonuses;
3. The employer demands reasonable periodic deductions from the individual's wages for cash shortages, or breakage or loss of equipment caused by the individual's culpable negligence or willful dishonesty;ⁿ⁹¹
4. The individual's request for a wage increase was denied by the employer, if the wages paid were not substantially less than the prevailing rate for similar work in the locality and the employer's refusal was not a breach of the contract of hire or an act of discrimination.ⁿ⁹²
5. The employer refuses to make an advance on wages, unless the advance is required by the employer's rules; or
6. The individual leaves work because it is compensated on a commission or piece-rate basis but the compensation is not substantially less than the prevailing wage for similar work in the locality and the method of compensation is customary in the industry or occupation, or the individual fails to work for a reasonable time in order to determine the level of compensation.

Moreover, workers who leave their jobs because of a trade dispute are ineligible for unemployment benefits under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1262.^{n92.1} notwithstanding the fact that the trade dispute was precipitated by a wage cut.^{n92.2} In such cases, Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256, which expressly incorporates a "good cause" standard, does not come into play.^{n92.3}

[v] Transportation Difficulties

An individual who leaves work because of distance or other problems of transportation to work does so with good cause if a reasonable person genuinely desirous of retaining employment and similarly situated would have been compelled to leave work after having sought without success all reasonable alternatives by which to provide transportation to work.n93

An individual leaves with good cause if all of the following conditions exist:n94

1. The transportation problem resulted from a substantial change in the customary means of transportation; change of circumstances beyond the claimant's control such as a health problem; or a change in work shifts or work hours by the employer, a change in the employer's place of business, or a change of the claimant's place of residence for compelling reasons;
2. Neither private nor public transportation is reasonably available when all pertinent factors are considered, such as ease or difficulty of access to transportation facilities, distance to work, travel time, cost of transportation in relation to earnings, the individual's age and physical condition, safety risks that may result from use of the available transportation, and local customs and practices; and
3. Prior to leaving work, the claimant explored without success reasonable alternatives, such as carpools, transfer to a different shift or more convenient location with the same employer, or a temporary leave of absence pending the availability of suitable transportation.

[vi] Attendance At School

Leaving employment to attend school full-time is generally without good cause, since the unemployment insurance system cannot be used to subsidize an employee's education.n95

However, an individual does have good cause for voluntarily leaving work to attend a school or training course if any of the following conditions exist:n96

1. The employer has requested that the individual participate in the school or training course;
2. Prior to obtaining the most recent work, the individual had been enrolled in certain approved retraining or training courses; continuing the work would require termination of the course, and the employer does not or cannot adjust the individual's hours of work to allow continuation of the work and the course; or
3. The individual was legally required to attend school due to compulsory attendance requirements based on age, and could not arrange to continue working for the same employer while attending school.

For a discussion of student status as good cause for unavailability, see § 80.32[2]; for a discussion of student status as not affecting eligibility, see § 80.33[6].

[vii] Domestic Circumstances

A claimant may leave employment with good cause if he or she left due to compelling circumstances relating to the health, care, or welfare of the claimant's family if the claimant has taken reasonable steps to preserve the employment relationship.n97 Examples of compelling circumstances include care of a critically ailing spouse, relocation to a different climate to facilitate the health of a family member for whom the claimant is primarily responsible, and inability to secure alternative childcare arrangements for minor children for whom the claimant is primarily responsible.n98

An unemancipated minor leaves work with good cause if he or she is compelled by a parent to accompany the parent to another locality, making commuting to work impossible or impractical.n99

For a discussion of when accompanying a spouse to another location constitutes good cause, see [f][v], above.

[viii] Leave of Absence

The effect of an individual's being unemployed subsequent to a so-called "leave of absence" pursuant to an agreement reached with the employer is assessed according to the terms of the agreement.

For example, the agreement may amount to an actual termination of the employment, with the employee receiving a promise of reemployment only if there is a job available when the "leave" expires. If, under those circumstances, the employee takes the leave voluntarily and for personal reasons only, he or she is disqualified for unemployment compensation benefits during the leave period and thereafter if reemployment is denied at the end of the period.ⁿ¹⁰⁰

In a true leave of absence, the employer and employee are in agreement that active work will resume when the leave expires. The employee is unemployed during the leave period, and is disqualified during that period if he or she left voluntarily without good cause. However, if the job is terminated by the employer during the leave, the employee's consequent unemployment at the expiration of the leave has been caused by the employer, and the employee is accordingly not disqualified as having left voluntarily without good cause.ⁿ¹⁰¹

An employee who may have good cause to leave work temporarily, but who refuses a true leave of absence offered by the employer has voluntarily left work without good cause.ⁿ¹⁰² Similarly, good cause for leaving work is nullified if the employee fails to request a leave of absence, and (1) the employer has an established leave of absence policy about which the employee knew or should have known, (2) the employer would probably have granted the leave, (3) an effort by the employee to maintain the employment relationship would have been reasonable under the circumstances, and (4) the leave of absence would have preserved the employment relationship.ⁿ¹⁰³

[ix] Anticipation of Discharge

A worker who resigns in anticipation that he or she is about to be discharged is deemed to have voluntarily left his or her employment.ⁿ¹⁰⁴ and thus may be denied unemployment benefits unless he or she otherwise had "good cause" for resignation.ⁿ¹⁰⁵ However, a finding merely that the worker left "in anticipation of discharge" is not conclusive on the issue of whether he or she had good cause to leave. Thus, an employee who is subjected to illegal discrimination or harassment at the workplace, and in good faith believes that this discrimination will continue as long as he or she remains, has good cause to leave the employment voluntarily.ⁿ¹⁰⁶

For a discussion of deprivation of equal employment opportunities as deemed good cause for leaving under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256.2, see [f][iii], above.

[x] Working Conditions

An individual who leaves work due to mere personal dislike, distaste, or minor inconvenience caused by working conditions leaves without good cause. If the working conditions are so unsatisfactory as to be intolerable to a reasonable person genuinely desirous of retaining employment and if prior to leaving the individual had taken steps to preserve the job,ⁿ¹⁰⁷ there is good cause for leaving the work.ⁿ¹⁰⁸

A claimant leaves work for good cause if he or she leaves because of work requirements that violate the agreement of hire, impose duties beyond those of the employee's occupation, or reassign work to or from another employee to make changes in the distribution of workload among employees, if those requirements cause undue hardship to or discriminate against the individual worker, or are unreasonable under the circumstances.ⁿ¹⁰⁹

A claimant who leaves work because he or she objects to an employer's rule that applies to all or a group of employees leaves without good cause unless the rule (1) is enforced only against the claimant and harasses the claimant, who suffers significant inconvenience; (2) creates undue hardship for the claimant; or (3) is unreasonable.ⁿ¹¹⁰ An employer's rule is unreasonable if (1) the claimant is unable to comply because of his or her physical limitations that are apparent or known to the employer or the employer's representative, (2) the rule imposes a new and unreasonable burden on the claimant, (3) the rule is not designed to protect or preserve the employer's business interests, (4) the claimant reasonably and in good faith believes compliance would violate the law, or would cause an undue risk of injury or illness.ⁿ¹¹¹

A claimant who leaves work because he or she objects to the method or manner of work performance or to the quality or quantity of the work required or to materials used in the work leaves without good cause unless one or more of the following circumstances are present:ⁿ¹¹²

1. The employer uses a method or manner of work that is not customary and that reduces or will reduce the claimant's earning power;
2. The methods and quality of work are inferior and adversely affect the reputation and integrity of workmanship that is an essential feature of the claimant's occupation;
3. The claimant will suffer a potential loss of job skills due to a low quantity of work;
4. The employer substantially increases the quantity of work required without increasing wages; or
5. The work involves an undue risk of injury or illness, or a serious risk to morals.ⁿ¹¹³

A claimant leaves work with good cause if he or she leaves due to a course of conduct by another employee or a supervisor that subjects the claimant to continued abuse, endangers the claimant's health or safety by conduct such as actual or threatened violence or acts affecting the mental well-being of the claimant, causes demands for an unreasonable quantity of work to be produced by the claimant, or unreasonably discriminates against the claimant.ⁿ¹¹⁴ Mere annoyance with or general dislike of another employee or a supervisor does not constitute good cause for leaving employment.ⁿ¹¹⁵

Generally, if an individual leaves work due to a complaint or objection to working conditions, and there is an existing grievance procedure to review the complaint or objection, the individual has voluntarily left work without good cause unless a grievance has been filed and there is an unreasonable delay in the disposition of the grievance.ⁿ¹¹⁶ Exceptions to the requirement of grievance-filing apply when good cause exists under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256.2 because an employer intentionally deprives the employee of equal employment opportunities,ⁿ¹¹⁷ or if the conditions involve a risk of serious injury or illness.ⁿ¹¹⁸

[xi] Transfer to Other Work

A claimant who either resigns or elects to be laid off or discharged rather than accept a transfer to other work has voluntarily left work.ⁿ¹¹⁹ The leaving is without good cause if the transfer is to reasonably related work at a comparable rate of pay.ⁿ¹²⁰ Leaving work rather than accepting a transfer is with good cause under any of the following conditions:ⁿ¹²¹

1. The work is unrelated to the last work and to any work within the claimant's prior training, experience, or qualifications;
2. The transfer would cause the claimant to lose proficiency in his or her highest skill (unless the transfer is a return to work previously performed and the claimant's work in a new position has been unsatisfactory);

3. The transfer would cause the claimant to suffer a substantial wage reduction;n122 or

4. The transfer is to work that the claimant cannot perform due to health, safety, or morals factors.n123

A claimant leaves work for good cause if he or she leaves because of the employer's refusal or failure to make a claimant's requested transfer when the refusal or failure is the result of a misrepresentation of the claimant's work or due to discrimination by the employer against the claimant, or when the claimant has requested the transfer for compelling reasons such as health, safety, or morals.n124

[xii] Time

In order for good cause to exist for a claimant leaving work due to the time requirements of employment, discussed below, there must be a compelling reason for leaving as a result of the time requirements, and the claimant must have informed the employer of the reason for leaving, and given the employer a reasonable opportunity to adjust the situation.n125 If those conditions are satisfied, an individual leaves work for good cause if any of the following conditions exist:n126

1. An unreasonable requirement that an employee work on a particular day, holiday, or number of days in a week;n127

2. Split shifts, or a work schedule that lacks uniformity as to beginning and ending times, or to the number of hours worked each day, week, or month;n128

■ ILLUSTRATION

Employee works as a service station attendant on a split-shift basis from 7:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Travel from home to work requires a 45-minute commute. Employee attempts to rest between shifts, but Employer does not permit resting on the premises and there is no other place where Employee could reasonably have been expected to rest. Employee voluntarily leaves work. Employee's leaving is for good cause because the requirement that the employee be away from home for 15 hours a day is a compelling reason for voluntarily leaving work.n129

3. Overtime, part-time, or full-time employment, seasonal employment shift, and temporary employment.n130

[xiii] Disciplinary Action by Employer

Unreasonable disciplinary action by an employer may give rise to good cause for leaving if the employee prior to leaving does everything reasonable to preserve the employment relationship.n131 Disciplinary action may be unreasonable if it was for conduct that was not work-related, or for violating a rule of which the employee had no knowledge or that imposed unreasonable new burdens, or if it was excessive under the circumstances, violated the employee's constitutional rights, imposed an undue risk of injury or illness, was part of a pattern of hostility or abuse toward the employee, or did not timely follow the employee's act or omission.n132 Good cause for leaving may also exist when the employer makes a demand for restitution for shortages, breakages, or loss of equipment that was either of minor consequence or the result of an isolated incident of mere inefficiency, inability, or ordinary negligence (as opposed to gross negligence or willfulness), or when the amount of restitution required to be paid at any one time is unreasonable in view of the employee's financial circumstances.n133

[xiv] Prospects of Other Work

An individual who leaves work to seek other work does not have good cause for leaving unless he or she leaves part-time work to seek full-time work because the part-time work prevents an effective search for full-time work.ⁿ¹³⁴ An individual who leaves work to accept other work has good cause for leaving if there was a definite assurance of employment in another substantially better job that is at least as permanent as the job the individual leaves, or if other circumstances establish that a reasonable person genuinely desirous of retaining employment would have left to accept the other work.ⁿ¹³⁵ A hope or speculative expectation of obtaining a new job is not sufficient to establish good cause for leaving work.ⁿ¹³⁶

A claimant who leaves a job due to obtaining a new job by false representations of capability to perform the work and is discharged from the new job for lack of such capability has left the first job without good cause.ⁿ¹³⁷

Leaving permanent full-time work to take temporary work generally is without good cause.ⁿ¹³⁸ However, there may be good cause if an individual leaves a nonseasonal permanent job to return on recall to seasonal work in which the individual has accumulated substantial rights. Leaving temporary work to accept permanent work is generally with good cause, as is leaving part-time work to accept full-time permanent employment.ⁿ¹³⁹ Conversely, leaving full-time work to accept part-time work is without good cause unless the individual has compelling reasons for taking part-time work, such as protection of health.ⁿ¹⁴⁰

[xv] Optional Early Retirement

An individual who exercises an option for early retirement prior to compulsory retirement ordinarily leaves the most recent work without good cause in the absence of other factors.ⁿ¹⁴¹ However, an individual whose decision to elect early retirement is substantially motivated by a factor other than monetary inducements may have good cause for leaving work if a reasonable person genuinely desirous of retaining employment would nevertheless have retired under the circumstances.ⁿ¹⁴² Other factors that may motivate early retirement include, but are not limited to, the individual's age or health,ⁿ¹⁴³ abolition of the individual's job, the individual's wages at the time of early retirement,ⁿ¹⁴⁴ the degree of encouragement of early retirement given an individual by supervisory personnel, and whether a transfer or leave of absence was available that would have met the individual's needs.ⁿ¹⁴⁵

The Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board found that good cause did not exist in a case in which an employee, whose job was not in jeopardy from his employer's restructuring process, accepted the employer's offer of a bonus to retire 6 months early. The employee chose early retirement for two reasons: his concern that his job might be subject to restructuring sometime in the future, and his desire to prevent the reassignment, downgrading, or potential layoff of an employee with lesser seniority. The first reason was not good cause because it was purely speculative rather than imperative and compelling. The second reason was not good cause because the restructuring process included protection against layoffs, and there was no evidence that the employee would have displaced any other employee had he remained at his job.^{n145.1}

For a discussion of compulsory retirement as good cause for leaving work, see [f][i], above.

[xvi] Union Relations

An employee does not have good cause for leaving work because of a refusal to join, retain membership in, or pay an agency service fee to a bona fide labor organization that has a collective bargaining agreement with the employer that provides that union membership or fee payment is a condition of hire or continued employment.ⁿ¹⁴⁶ An individual's personal objection to unions generally or specifically, or to union practices and policies, is not good cause for leaving work unless based on a bona fide conscientious objection.ⁿ¹⁴⁷ If an employee is not required to join a union or pay a fee as a condition of hire or continued employment under a collective bargaining agreement, refusal to join or pay a fee is not good cause for leaving work, unless the individual's refusal is based on a bona fide conscientious objection or the individual is threatened with and has a reasonable fear of, or is subjected to, physical injury to force him or her to join or to remain a member of a union.n148

An individual who voluntarily leaves work as required by a union rule to which an employer has not agreed voluntarily leaves work without good cause.n149

■ILLUSTRATION

Employee is a member of the Sailors Union, sailing under a Class B permit. Employee leaves ship after 90 days on his own initiative, due to a union rule that requires Class B permit sailors to leave ship after 90 days. Employer has not agreed to the union rule. Employee's leaving is without good cause since Employee could have remained on ship except for the union rule to which Employer was not a party.n150

An individual who leaves work because of union disciplinary action taken against the individual due to an infraction of a union rule or other offense against union discipline has voluntarily left work without good cause if the action of the union is not arbitrary or capricious and if the individual has an opportunity to protest the union charge through any customary union procedure.n151

Other union-related reasons for leaving work that may constitute good cause include leaving because of an employer's violation of a collective bargaining agreement provision,n152 employer discrimination due to an employee's union relations or activity,n153 union intimidation of the employee,n154 or changes by an employer in the wages or hours or work required under the terms of a collective bargaining agreement.n155

For discussion of eligibility issues relating to strikes, see § 80.34[5].

[xvii] Other Circumstances

Other circumstances that may raise the issue of whether good cause existed for leaving employment include leaving to participate in an apprenticeship training program,n156 leaving due to lack of proper equipment to perform work,n157 nonutilization of skills,n158 or leaving due to personal affairs such as financial difficulties or legal matters,n159

[5] Discharge for Misconduct

[a] What Constitutes "Misconduct"

The term "misconduct" as used in Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256 is limited to conduct evincing such willful or wanton disregard of an employer's interests as is found in deliberate violations or disregard of standards of behavior that the employer has the right to expect of an employee, or in carelessness or negligence of such degree or recurrence as to manifest culpability, wrongful intent, or evil design, or to show an intentional and substantial disregard of the employer's interests or of the employee's duties and obligations to the employer.n160 EDD regulations provide that misconduct exists if all of the following elements are present:n161

1. The claimant owes a material duty to the employer under the contract of employment;
2. There is a substantial breach of that duty;
3. The breach is a willful or wanton disregard of that duty; and
4. The breach disregards the employer's interests and injures or tends to injure the employer's interests.

Mere inefficiency, unsatisfactory conduct, failure in good performance as the result of inability or incapacity, inadvertencies or ordinary negligence in isolated instances, or good faith errors in judgment or discretion are not misconduct.ⁿ¹⁶² Since the policy of the Unemployment Insurance Code is to provide benefits to persons unemployed through no fault of their own,ⁿ¹⁶³ "fault" is the basic element to be considered in interpreting and applying the code sections on unemployment compensation. The determination of fault is not concluded by a finding that the discharge was justifiedⁿ¹⁶⁴ or that the employer had a "right" to discharge the employee.ⁿ¹⁶⁵ The employee's conduct must evince culpability or bad faith. A claimant may not be denied benefits solely on the basis of a good faith error in judgment.ⁿ¹⁶⁶

The burden of establishing misconduct is on the employer.ⁿ¹⁶⁷

[b] Requirement That Misconduct Be Connected With Most Recent Work

To disqualify a claimant from receiving unemployment benefits, the misconduct must be "connected with" the most recent work.ⁿ¹⁶⁸ Misconduct is connected with work if the activity injures or tends to injure the employer's interests.ⁿ¹⁶⁹ Generally, the activity constituting misconduct occurs on the job. However, certain off-the-job activity, often involving illegal or criminal activity, may constitute misconduct if as a consequence of that activity there is injury to the employer's interests, such as reputational interests.ⁿ¹⁷⁰

Preemployment activity will rarely constitute misconduct connected with the most recent work.ⁿ¹⁷¹ However, if the employee is discharged for falsifying his or her work application by concealing information about preemployment activity that would have precluded the initial hiring, the discharge may be considered to be for misconduct.ⁿ¹⁷²

There is no misconduct connected with work if the only basis for a discharge is a collective bargaining agreement requiring that an employee who is expelled or suspended from the union must be discharged. However, if the employer would have discharged the employee for the misconduct even if there had been no expulsion or suspension from the union, then the discharge for misconduct is connected with the most recent work.ⁿ¹⁷³

In the case of a trade dispute, activity by an employee that injures or tends to injure the employer's interests is misconduct "connected with" work, since the employment relationship during the dispute is merely suspended rather than terminated.ⁿ¹⁷⁴ For a discussion of trade disputes as a basis for disqualification for benefits, see § 80.34[5].

[c] Relationship of "Good Cause" to Discharges Based on Refusal to Obey Employer's Rules or Orders

A claimant's violation of his or her employer's rules or refusal of a work assignment will not constitute misconduct rendering the claimant ineligible for unemployment benefits if the claimant's reasons for objecting to the rules or the assignment would have constituted "good cause" for resigning under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256.ⁿ¹⁷⁵ Because Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256 does not disqualify employees who leave employment voluntarily with good cause, it does not disqualify those who take the less drastic step of refusing a work assignment for good cause. Accordingly, once the employer has proven that the claimant willfully refused a reasonable order, the claimant has an opportunity to show that his or her refusal was for good cause.ⁿ¹⁷⁶ For a discussion of what constitutes "good cause" for voluntarily terminating employment, see [4], above.

Situations in which it was found that discharge was not based on misconduct because there was good cause for not complying with an employer's rule or order include the following:

1. Refusal to perform certain assignments based on the good-faith belief that compliance would endanger the health or safety of the claimantⁿ¹⁷⁷ or of others;ⁿ¹⁷⁸
2. Refusal to work certain hours because of religious convictions adopted after beginning employment;ⁿ¹⁷⁹

3. Refusal to sign a statement that resume, to be submitted by employer as part of bid for government contract, could never be used by competition;ⁿ¹⁸⁰ and

4. Noncompliance with a company rule in order to perform work more effectively.ⁿ¹⁸¹

Under regulations promulgated by the EDD, violation of an employer's rules may constitute misconduct if the rule is reasonable, the individual knew or should have known the rule, and the violation is willful or wanton, material, and substantially injures or tends to injure the employer's interests.ⁿ¹⁸² The regulations specifically discuss employer rules relating to clothes and appearance,ⁿ¹⁸³ gambling or game playing,ⁿ¹⁸⁴ employment of married persons,ⁿ¹⁸⁵ handling of and accountability for money,ⁿ¹⁸⁶ use of motor vehicles,ⁿ¹⁸⁷ removal of the employer's property from the premises,ⁿ¹⁸⁸ safety,ⁿ¹⁸⁹ purchase of goods by employees in retail merchandise establishments,ⁿ¹⁹⁰ and time clocks.ⁿ¹⁹¹

Noncompliance with an employer's orders may constitute insubordination amounting to misconduct only if those orders are both lawful and reasonable.ⁿ¹⁹² Refusal to obey an employer's order does not constitute misconduct in any of the following circumstances:ⁿ¹⁹³

1. The employee was unable to comply with an order because of physical limitations that are known or apparent to the employer or its representative;
2. Compliance with the order would impose a new and unreasonable burden on the employee;
3. The order is unreasonable because it does not relate to or affect the employer's business interests;
4. The employee reasonably and in good faith believes that compliance would violate the law, objects or makes a reasonable attempt to object to the employer, and the employer makes no reasonable effort to explain the basis for the order to the employee;ⁿ¹⁹⁴
5. The employee reasonably believes compliance with the order would cause an undue risk of injury or illness; or
6. The employee has a reasonable and good-faith doubt that the individual issuing the order has authority to do so.

Insubordination constituting misconduct may also occur if the employee commits an act that exceeds the authority granted to him or her by the employer.ⁿ¹⁹⁵

The Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board has held that it is insubordination constituting misconduct for an employee working in a dangerous environment to refuse to submit to a regularly scheduled drug test required by his or her employer.^{n195.1} A court of appeal has upheld this decision.^{n195.2} However, the court of appeal did not phrase the issue in terms of "insubordination." Instead, the court concluded that the employee's refusal was misconduct because it was a willful violation of a reasonable rule that demonstrated a wanton disregard for the employer's business interests.^{n195.3} The court reasoned that requiring employees working in a hazardous environment, even in jobs that would not be considered safety-sensitive in a different location, to take periodic drug tests is a reasonable requirement that does not violate the employee's right to privacy.^{n195.4}

[d] Other Situations Giving Rise to Issues of Misconduct

[i] Absence From Work

An employee may be discharged from work for misconduct based on unexcused absences, failure to comply with existing procedures governing requests for extension of a leave of absence, continued absence after the purpose for which an indefinite leave of absence was granted has been accomplished, and giving false reasons to obtain a leave of absence.ⁿ¹⁹⁶

Unexcused absences constitute misconduct if (1) the employee had no real, substantial, and compelling reasons for the absence and the employer has not condoned the absence by failing to warn or reprimand the employee on the occurrence of prior similar absences,ⁿ¹⁹⁷ or (2) the employee has not with reasonable promptness notified the employer of the absence and the reasons for it, if notice is reasonably feasible, and there is no real, substantial, and compelling reason to excuse the failure to give notice.ⁿ¹⁹⁸

Prior warnings by the employer do not negate the compelling reasons for the absence, and are pertinent only if the employee does not have compelling reasons.ⁿ¹⁹⁹ A compelling reason for an unexcused absence may also justify failure to give notice to the employer as, for example, when a member of the employee's family dies.ⁿ²⁰⁰

[ii] Absence Due to Incarceration

Termination of employment because of an employee's incarceration for more than 24 hours, followed by conviction or a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, constitutes a voluntary leaving without good cause rather than a discharge.ⁿ²⁰¹ Termination of employment because of incarceration constitutes a discharge, not based on misconduct, under any of the following circumstances: (1) incarceration for a period of less than 24 hours, (2) incarceration for any period in lieu of a fine that the individual was unable to pay due to indigency, or (3) incarceration followed by a verdict of not guilty of the offense, or any lesser included offense, for which the individual was incarcerated.ⁿ²⁰² In the case of incarceration because of inability to pay a fine, the individual is regarded as having lost his or her job because of indigency rather than because of a voluntary criminal act.ⁿ²⁰³ In the case of incarceration followed by a verdict of not guilty, the incarceration is involuntary, and the employee has left work through no fault of his or her own.ⁿ²⁰⁴ If an employee is discharged due to the commission of the illegal act itself, rather than for absence from work caused by incarceration due to the illegal act, the rules governing discharge due to an illegal act apply.ⁿ²⁰⁵ For a discussion of discharge due to an illegal act itself, see [v], below.

[iii] Failure to Perform Work Properly or Neglect of Duty

An individual's failure to perform work properly or neglect of duty is willful and constitutes misconduct if he or she intentionally, knowingly, or deliberately fails to perform, or performs in a grossly negligent manner, or repeatedly performs negligently after prior warning or reprimand and in substantial disregard of the employer's interests.ⁿ²⁰⁶

Inability or incapacity to perform the job or inefficient performance is not misconduct, unless it is due to the individual's willful failure to perform to the best of his or her abilities.ⁿ²⁰⁷ If an employee's inadequate performance is the result of circumstances within his or her control and the employee does nothing to improve the performance, there is a willful failure to perform adequately which constitutes misconduct.ⁿ²⁰⁸ Inefficiency may be misconduct if the employee previously demonstrated the ability to do better, work performance has substantially deteriorated, and there is no reasonable explanation for the deterioration.ⁿ²⁰⁹

■ ILLUSTRATION

For the first three years of employment as a precision assembler, Employee's work had been entirely satisfactory, but then had deteriorated. Employee has no excuse other than the fact that her poor eyesight had hampered her in doing close work. Employee refuses to consult an optometrist because she is unwilling to wear corrective lenses. Employer discharges employee. Employee's discharge is for misconduct since the reasons for her inefficiency are within her power to control and the failure is willful.n210

Failure to produce the required quantity of work is misconduct if the employee was capable of meeting the employer's reasonable quantity standards, but continually failed to do so after reprimands or warnings.n211

A single incident of grossly negligent work performance or failure to work constitutes misconduct.n212 In contrast, misconduct based on ordinary negligent performance requires repeated negligent performance after prior warning or reprimand, in substantial disregard of the employer's interest, and the ability and capacity on the part of the employee to perform satisfactorily.n213

In the case of discharge because of an employee's involvement in an accident or near-accident, there is no misconduct unless the employee's actions were grossly or substantially negligent.n214

■ILLUSTRATIONS

Employee 1, a taxicab driver, has been involved in a series of six accidents within a short period of time while driving his cab, and has repeatedly violated traffic laws. Employer had given Employee a safety course and discussed preventive measures after each accident. Shortly after a later accident, Employer is held liable in damages and discharges Employee 1. The action of Employee 1 is misconduct because it is clearly substantial, prejudicial to the employer's interests, and not the result of mere inefficiency.n215

Employee 2, also a cab driver, was involved in a minor accident when, on route to pick up a passenger, a person hailed her from the opposite side of the street. The cab driver glanced toward the person hailing her, in accordance with a company policy requiring drivers to report cab requests to the company dispatcher, and the accident occurred as a consequence of looking away from the line of traffic. Employer discharges Employee 2. The action of Employee 2 is not misconduct, but at most a good faith error in judgment in an attempt to carry out company policy.n216

[iv] Tardiness

The employee's obligation to arrive at work on time is an implied obligation that the employer does not have to set forth at the time of hire.n217 Tardiness is misconduct if it results in a substantial breach and disregard of the duty owed to the employer and shows a willful or wanton disregard of and injures or tends to injure the employer's interests.n218 Examples of tardiness constituting misconduct include (1) repeated inexcusable tardiness despite a recent warning that discharge may result, (2) an instance of unexcused tardiness combined with violations of other employer standards and prior warnings, and (3) a single instance of inexcusable tardiness that causes reasonably foreseeable substantial injury to the employer's interest.n219

■ILLUSTRATION

Employee is a chemist responsible for operating controls to insert catalytic agents at several steps during a factory production process. The work cannot proceed without the addition of the catalysts. Employee has never before been tardy at work but one day shows up two hours late without excuse, resulting in the loss of valuable production and the payment of wages for nonproductive time on line. Employer discharges Employee for this single instance of tardiness. Employee's discharge was for misconduct even though for only a single instance of tardiness not preceded by reprimands or warnings, since the substantial loss to Employer was foreseeable.n220

Being tardy by only a minute or two on several occasions, in a context that does not affect the employer's operations, will be viewed as a minor infraction and not so unreasonable as to constitute misconduct.n221

If an employee has a compelling reason for tardiness, his or her discharge cannot be for misconduct, regardless of previous instances of tardiness or prior reprimands and warnings.n222 Mere personal inconvenience, failure to allow ample traveling time to work, oversleeping, or missing the bus are not reasonable excuses for repeated tardiness.n223

[v] Violation of Law

Criminal acts or other violations of law committed outside of working hours and away from the employer's premises usually will not be misconduct "in connection with" the work unless the employee uses information obtained from the work to carry out the crime or violation, or there is some other substantial connection with the work.n224

■ ILLUSTRATION

Employee, a television repairperson, while repairing a television set in the customer's home, notes the layout of the home and the property in it. That night, Employee returns and steals property from the customer's home. Employee is subsequently convicted of the theft. Employer discharges Employee. Employee's violation of law is misconduct due to the clear connection with the work even though the act was off-duty and away from Employer's premises.n225

An employee's on-the-job criminal act or other violation of law is misconduct if the act is substantial in nature, regardless of the employer's prior warnings or reprimands.n226 If the act is minor, it is not misconduct unless it occurs after prior warnings or reprimands by the employer for similar acts.n227 In no event will an employee's criminal act or other violation of law be misconduct for purposes of disqualifying the employee for unemployment benefits if the employer had ordered, participated in, or condoned the employee's action.n228

One court of appeal has suggested that off-duty drug or alcohol use with no on-the-job impairment may be work-connected if the employee works in a safety-sensitive position, if the employee's conduct would undermine public trust and damage the employer's reputation, or if a federally-imposed safety program requires the employee to submit to a drug test.n228.1

[vi] Other Activities Constituting Misconduct

Other activities or situations that may constitute misconduct in connection with the employee's most recent work include:

1. Acts or statements detrimental to the employer's interest, including disparaging remarks about the employer or the employer's business, and aiding the employer's competitor;n229
2. Dishonest acts in connection with the work, such as falsification of records, willful misappropriation of the employer's funds, or conversion of the employer's property;n230
3. Garnishment of the employee's wages causing a disruption to or a burden on the employer;n231
4. On-the-job intoxication or use of intoxicants, unless the intoxication-induced behavior was the product of an irresistible compulsion or a total inability to abstain, or if the use or consumption of intoxicants was permitted or condoned by the employer;n232
5. Refusal to take a periodic drug test, if the employee works in a hazardous environment or safety-sensitive position;n232.1
6. Poor relations with co-employees on the job, including inexcusable fighting, use of offensive language, or dishonesty;n233 or

7. Union-related acts that are illegal, or that violate the collective bargaining agreement or an employer rule or standard of behavior that the employer has a right to enforce.ⁿ²³⁴

[6] Duration of Disqualification

An individual disqualified under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1256 for voluntarily leaving work without good cause or for discharge for misconduct, under a determination transmitted to him or her by the EDD, is ineligible to receive unemployment compensation benefits for the week in which the act that causes the disqualification occurs and continuing until the individual has, subsequent to that act and registration for work, performed service in bona fide employment for which remuneration is received equal to or in excess of five times his or her weekly benefit amount.ⁿ²³⁵

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in [4], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See discussion in [5], below; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 100 (policy of Code is to provide benefits to persons who are unemployed "through no fault of their own").

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1327 (notice by employer of facts affecting claimant's eligibility).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.

(n5)Footnote 5. See O'Connell v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 54, 59, 196 Cal. Rptr. 505 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.3; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-2 (further defining "most recent work").

(n7)Footnote 7. For discussion of types of claims, see § 80.38.

(n8)Footnote 8. For discussion of continued claims, see § 80.38[4].

(n9)Footnote 9. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(d).

(n10)Footnote 10. Morgan v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 762, 767, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 .

(n11)Footnote 10.1. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(c), (d); see also In re Mitchell (1994) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-479.

(n12)Footnote 10.2. Morgan v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 762, 767, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 ; see also In re Mitchell (1994) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-479.

(n13)Footnote 11. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(d); see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(b).

(n14)Footnote 12. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(d).

(n15)Footnote 13. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(d).

(n16)Footnote 14. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(d).

(n17)Footnote 15. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(f).

(n18)Footnote 16. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(f); see also Steinberg v Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 582, 585, 151 Cal. Rptr. 133 (discussing doctrine of "constructive quit").

(n19)Footnote 17. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(f).

(n20)Footnote 18. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(f).

(n21)Footnote 19. See Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 575, 584, 205 Cal. Rptr. 501, 685 P.2d 61 .

(n22)Footnote 20. Norman v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 1, 5, 192 Cal. Rptr. 134, 663 P.2d 904 .

(n23)Footnote 21. Gibson v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 494, 499 fn. 8, 108 Cal. Rptr. 1, 509 P.2d 945 .

(n24)Footnote 22. Zorrero v. Unemployment. Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 434, 439, 120 Cal. Rptr. 855 ; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-3(b) (similarly defining "good cause").

(n25)Footnote 23. See MacGregor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 205, 209, 207 Cal. Rptr. 823, 689 P.2d 453 ; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-3(b).

(n26)Footnote 24. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1030(d). For discussion of employer's right to submit facts regarding claimant's termination of employment, see § 80.39[4], [6].

(n27)Footnote 25. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-3(c).

(n28)Footnote 26. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-3(c).

(n29)Footnote 27. See, e.g., Zorrero v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 434, 120 Cal. Rptr. 855 (supermarket employee without good cause in leaving work because of having to commute four hours roundtrip by public transportation after his car broke down, since he could have repaired his car or purchased a new one, or sought a transfer to a store nearer his home). For a discussion of transportation conditions giving rise to good cause, see [h][v], below.

(n30)Footnote 28. See MacGregor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 205, 209, 207 Cal. Rptr. 823, 689 P.2d 453 ; Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 575, 585, 205 Cal. Rptr. 501, 685 P.2d 61 ; Norman v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 1, 6, 192 Cal. Rptr. 134, 663 P.2d 904 .

(n31)Footnote 29. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1030(e) (charge against employer's account of benefits paid to compulsorily retired individual). For discussion of charges against employer's account for benefits paid, see § 80.39[4][b].

(n32)Footnote 30. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-17(b); see also discussion in [a], above. For discussion of legal restrictions on compulsory retirement policies under age discrimination laws, see ch. 41.

(n33)Footnote 31. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-17(c).

(n34)Footnote 32. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-17(d).

(n35)Footnote 32.1. In re Mitchell (1994) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-479.

(n36)Footnote 33. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256 (codifying holding in Stanford v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd.

(1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 98, 102-104, 195 Cal. Rptr. 1).

(n37)Footnote 34. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.2.

(n38)Footnote 35. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.2(a).

(n39)Footnote 36. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.2(b); see also Morrison v. California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1976) 65 Cal. App. 3d 245, 253, 134 Cal. Rptr. 916 (noting requirement of appropriate protest in finding good cause for quitting when employer failed, after demand, to correct unlawful wage disparities between male and female employees); Prescod v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 29, 37, 41, 127 Cal. Rptr. 540 (good cause for leaving when employee was rehired after maternity leave at lower grade resulting in loss of promotional opportunity; approved and contrary holding disapproved in Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 575, 586-587, 205 Cal. Rptr. 501, 685 P.2d 61).

(n40)Footnote 37. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256.2-1(a).

(n41)Footnote 38. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256.2-1(b).

(n42)Footnote 39. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.7.

(n43)Footnote 40. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.7.

(n44)Footnote 41. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.7.

(n45)Footnote 42. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.7.

(n46)Footnote 43. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256; see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1030(a)(4), 1032(c) (nonchargeability against employer's reserve account of benefits paid to employee who left work to accompany spouse or domestic partner).

(n47)Footnote 44. See 1982 Stats., ch. 1073, § 1.

(n48)Footnote 45. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.

(n49)Footnote 46. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 15.

(n50)Footnote 47. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-12(b)(2); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-10(c)(6) (preservation of family unity as good cause generally).

(n51)Footnote 48. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256; see 1982 Stats., ch. 1073, § 13 (stating legislative intent behind amendment to Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256); Altaville Drug Store, Inc. v. Employment Development Department (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 231, 237, 242 Cal. Rptr. 732, 746 P.2d 871 ; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-12(b)(1); see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1032, 3701(a), 4701(a) (in determining whether employer's reserve account should be charged for benefits paid, "spouse" includes person to whom marriage is imminent); cf. Norman v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 1, 3-10, 192 Cal. Rptr. 134, 663 P.2d 904 (no good cause for leaving employment to accompany nonmarital partner, when marriage is not imminent, and there are insufficient indications of need to preserve permanent and lasting familial relationship).

(n52)Footnote 49. See Norman v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 1, 10, 192 Cal. Rptr. 134, 663 P.2d 904 .

(n53)Footnote 50. See MacGregor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 205, 207, 212-214, 207 Cal. Rptr. 823, 689 P.2d 453 ; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-10(c)(6).

(n54)Footnote 51. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1026(b); see also discussion in § 80.21[4][c].

(n55)Footnote 52. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.

(n56)Footnote 53. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1030 (time limits for submitting facts relating to reason for termination of employment).

(n57)Footnote 54. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.1(a).

(n58)Footnote 55. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.1(a).

(n59)Footnote 56. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.1(b); see also Jefferson v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 72, 77-78, 130 Cal.Rptr. 405 (deemed lack of good cause for leaving employment due to incarceration as not depriving claimant of due process).

(n60)Footnote 57. See Thomas v. Review Bd., Ind. Empl. Sec. Div. (1981) 450 U.S. 707, 717-718, 101 S. Ct. 1425, 67 L. Ed. 2d 624 .

(n61)Footnote 58. See Thomas v. Review Bd., Ind. Empl. Sec. Div. (1981) 450 U.S. 707, 711-712, 718-719, 101 S. Ct. 1425, 67 L. Ed. 2d 624 (good cause for leaving work after transfer to department involved in production of armaments when religious beliefs prevented claimant from participating in production of war materials).

(n62)Footnote 59. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-6(b).

(n63)Footnote 60. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-6, Example 1.

(n64)Footnote 61. See Hobbie v. Unemployment Appeals Commission (1987) 480 U.S. 136, 139-141, 107 S. Ct. 1046, 94 L. Ed. 2d 190 ; see also discussion under [5][c], below.

(n65)Footnote 62. See Sherbert v. Verner (1963) 374 U.S. 398, 404-406, 83 S. Ct. 1790, 10 L. Ed. 2d 965 ; Jaffe v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 719, 722-724, 202 Cal. Rptr. 812 . For discussion of good cause for unavailability, see § 80.32[2][b].

(n66)Footnote 63. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(b).

(n67)Footnote 64. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(c).

(n68)Footnote 65. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(d)(1).

(n69)Footnote 66. Rabago v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 200, 210-211, 148 Cal. Rptr. 499 ; see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(d)(1).

(n70)Footnote 67. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(d)(1).

(n71)Footnote 68. Rabago v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 200, 210-211, 148 Cal. Rptr. 499 .

(n72)Footnote 69. See McCrocklin v. Employment Development Dep't (1984) 156 Cal. App. 3d 1067, 1072-1073, 205 Cal. Rptr. 156 .

(n73)Footnote 70. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(b).

(n74)Footnote 71. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(e).

(n75)Footnote 72. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(b).

(n76)Footnote 73. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(b).

(n77)Footnote 74. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(d)(2).

(n78)Footnote 75. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(d)(2).

(n79)Footnote 76. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(d)(2).

(n80)Footnote 77. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(e).

(n81)Footnote 78. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(e).

(n82)Footnote 79. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(e).

(n83)Footnote 80. See Amador v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 671, 683, 200 Cal. Rptr. 298, 677 P.2d 224 .

(n84)Footnote 81. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(d)(3).

(n85)Footnote 82. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(d)(3).

(n86)Footnote 83. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(d)(3).

(n87)Footnote 84. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-15(d)(3).

(n88)Footnote 85. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-22(b).

(n89)Footnote 86. For a discussion of minimum wages requirements, see Chapter 2.

(n90)Footnote 87. For a discussion of rules regarding time and place for payment of wages, see Chapter 4.

(n91)Footnote 88. See, e.g., Bunny's Waffle Shop v. Cal. Emp. Com. (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 735, 743, 151 P.2d 224 (25% pay cut as constituting good cause for leaving); cf. Maitland v. Employment Development Dept. (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 331, 333-334, 181 Cal. Rptr. 587 (7 2/3 % pay cut after probationary period as insufficient to constitute good cause for leaving).

(n92)Footnote 89. See discussion under § 80.32[3] for discussion of what constitutes suitable work.

(n93)Footnote 90. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-22(c).

(n94)Footnote 91. For discussion of when employer may deduct from employee's wages for cash shortage, breakage, or loss of equipment, see Chapter 4.

(n95)Footnote 92. However, if the employer's act is discriminatory, such as a denial of like wages to the individual for like work performed by other employees of like seniority, the individual's leaving of work for such discrimination is for good cause. see [f][iii], above, for discussion of deprivation of equal employment opportunities as "good cause" for leaving work. see Chapter 41 for discussion of federal and state equal pay laws.

(n96)Footnote 92.1. See discussion under § 80.34[5].

(n97)Footnote 92.2. See Acuff v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1045, 256 Cal. Rptr. 513 (trade dispute resulted because employer required that employees accept 7.8 percent wage reduction and a total wage and benefit reduction of 14.8 percent); Martinez v. California Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1385, 1390-1394, 254 Cal. Rptr. 461 (wage cut amounted to 27 to 33 percent reduction in earnings for employees, and wage cuts in combination with reduced benefits comprised 34 to 41 percent earnings reduction).

(n98)Footnote 92.3. See Acuff v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1038, 1050, 256 Cal. Rptr. 513 .

(n99)Footnote 93. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-8(b).

(n100)Footnote 94. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-8(c); see also Zorrero v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 434, 438-440, 120 Cal. Rptr. 855 (supermarket employee without good cause in leaving work because of having to commute four hours roundtrip by public transportation after his car broke down, since he could have repaired his car or purchased a new one, or sought a transfer to a store nearer his home).

(n101)Footnote 95. See Perales v. Department of Human Resources Dev. (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 332, 337, 108 Cal. Rptr. 167 ; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-5(b).

(n102)Footnote 96. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-5(c).

(n103)Footnote 97. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-10(b).

(n104)Footnote 98. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-10(c), Examples 1 and 2 and comments thereto.

(n105)Footnote 99. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-11(a).

(n106)Footnote 100. See Lewis v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 729, 741, 128 Cal. Rptr. 795 .

(n107)Footnote 101. See Lewis v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 729, 742, 128 Cal. Rptr. 795 ; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-16(b).

(n108)Footnote 102. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256.16(c).

(n109)Footnote 103. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-16(d).

(n110)Footnote 104. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-1(d)(1); see also Morgan v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 762, 767, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 (substantial evidence supported voluntary severance finding when employee, believing that termination was imminent, chose to resign in exchange for guaranteed employment up to certain date; employer's testimony that employee would have been fired in any event was insufficient to overcome employee's resignation).

(n111)Footnote 105. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.

(n112)Footnote 106. See Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 575, 585-587, 205 Cal. Rptr. 501, 685 P.2d 61 (discrimination and harassment because of employee's union and "whistle-blowing" activities; disapproving contrary holding in Warriner v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1973) 32 Cal. App. 3d 353, 108 Cal. Rptr. 153); see also Prescod v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 29, 127 Cal. Rptr. 540 (discrimination following return from maternity leave).

(n113)Footnote 107. For discussion of duty to preserve employment relationship, see [d], above.

(n114)Footnote 108. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(b).

(n115)Footnote 109. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(c) (listing circumstances under which requirements are unreasonable).

(n116)Footnote 110. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(d).

(n117)Footnote 111. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(d). For discussion of undue risk or injury or illness as good cause for leaving work, see [ii], above; for discussion of discharge based on failure to obey employer's rules as discharge for misconduct, see [5][c], below.

(n118)Footnote 112. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(e).

(n119)Footnote 113. See [ii], above, for discussion of undue risk of injury or illness as good cause for leaving employment.

(n120)Footnote 114. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(f).

(n121)Footnote 115. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(f).

(n122)Footnote 116. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(e).

(n123)Footnote 117. See discussion under [f][iii], above.

(n124)Footnote 118. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(e). For discussion of health or safety reasons as good cause, see [ii], above.

(n125)Footnote 119. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(g)(1).

(n126)Footnote 120. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(g)(1).

(n127)Footnote 121. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(g)(2).

(n128)Footnote 122. See [iv], above, for discussion of dissatisfaction with wages as good cause for leaving employment.

(n129)Footnote 123. See [ii], above, for discussion of health, safety, or morals as good cause for leaving employment.

(n130)Footnote 124. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-23(g)(3). For discussion of health, safety, or morals as good cause for leaving employment, see [ii], above.

(n131)Footnote 125. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(b).

(n132)Footnote 126. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c).

(n133)Footnote 127. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(1). Such a requirement is reasonable if it is necessary for the conduct of the employer's business and is not unusual, arbitrary, or imposed for the purpose of harassment of the employee. see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(1), comments. A change in the work schedule, even though not unreasonable, may give rise to good cause for leaving work if other factors are present, such as, for example, the employee's inability to obtain adequate care for his or her children under the new schedule. see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(1), Example 1; see also [vii], above, for discussion of domestic circumstances as good cause for leaving work.

(n134)Footnote 128. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(2). Mere preference, inconvenience, or slight hardship as a result of an employee's objection to or insistence on the hours of work is not a compelling reason for leaving work.

see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(2), comments.

(n135)Footnote 129. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(2), Example 2.

(n136)Footnote 130. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(3). If an individual works less than full-time, such as temporary or part-time work, he or she has a compelling reason for leaving work if he or she is prevented from seeking other work while working less than full-time. see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(3), comments; see also [xiv], below, for discussion of good cause for leaving work based on prospects of other employment. Ordinarily, an individual working part-time has ample opportunity to seek additional work. see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(3), comments, Example 4. An employee who works part-time for health-related reasons may have good cause for leaving if the employer subsequently requires that the employee change to a full-time schedule. see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-20(c)(3), Example 3; see also [ii], above, for discussion of health-related reasons as good cause for leaving.

(n137)Footnote 131. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-7(d).

(n138)Footnote 132. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-7(d)(1)-(7), (9).

(n139)Footnote 133. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-7(d)(8); see also discussion in Chapter 4.

(n140)Footnote 134. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-19(b).

(n141)Footnote 135. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-19(c); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-19(c)(3) (also listing factors relevant to determining whether new job is substantially better than old job).

(n142)Footnote 136. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-19(c)(1).

(n143)Footnote 137. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-19(c)(2).

(n144)Footnote 138. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-19(c)(2).

(n145)Footnote 139. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-19(c)(2).

(n146)Footnote 140. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-19(c)(2); see also [ii], above, for discussion of health reasons as good cause for leaving work.

(n147)Footnote 141. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-17(c).

(n148)Footnote 142. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-17(c), (d).

(n149)Footnote 143. See [ii], above, for discussion of health as good cause for leaving work.

(n150)Footnote 144. See [iv], above, for discussion of dissatisfaction with wages as good cause for leaving work.

(n151)Footnote 145. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-17(d).

(n152)Footnote 145.1. In re Mitchell (1994) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-479.

(n153)Footnote 146. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(b)(1).

(n154)Footnote 147. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(b)(1); Evenson v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 1016-1018, 133 Cal. Rptr. 488 (denial of benefits proper when claimant persisted in refusing to pay modest union dues despite warnings of discharge; good faith dissatisfaction with union as immaterial).

(n155)Footnote 148. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(b)(2).

(n156)Footnote 149. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(c).

(n157)Footnote 150. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(c), Example 1.

(n158)Footnote 151. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(d).

(n159)Footnote 152. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(f).

(n160)Footnote 153. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(g).

(n161)Footnote 154. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(h).

(n162)Footnote 155. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-21(i).

(n163)Footnote 156. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-4.

(n164)Footnote 157. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-13.

(n165)Footnote 158. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-14.

(n166)Footnote 159. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-18.

(n167)Footnote 160. Amador v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 671, 678, 200 Cal. Rptr. 298, 677 P.2d 224 .

(n168)Footnote 161. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-30(b).

(n169)Footnote 162. Amador v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 671, 678, 200 Cal. Rptr. 298, 677 P.2d 224 ; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-30(d).

(n170)Footnote 163. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 100.

(n171)Footnote 164. Amador v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 671, 678, 200 Cal. Rptr. 298, 677 P.2d 224 .

(n172)Footnote 165. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-30(e).

(n173)Footnote 166. Amador v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 671, 678-679, 681, 200 Cal. Rptr. 298, 677 P.2d 224 (refusal to perform work which employee reasonably and in good faith believed would jeopardize health of others as not misconduct).

(n174)Footnote 167. See Cerberonics, Inc. v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 172, 176, 199 Cal. Rptr. 292 ; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256 (claimant presumed to have been discharged for reasons other than misconduct unless employer gives written notice to contrary to EDD), discussed in [2], above.

(n175)Footnote 168. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-33(a).

(n176)Footnote 169. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-33(a).

(n177)Footnote 170. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-33(b)(1). For discussion of criminal acts as misconduct, see [v], below.

(n178)Footnote 171. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-33(c)(1).

(n179)Footnote 172. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-33(c)(2).

(n180)Footnote 173. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-33(e)(1).

(n181)Footnote 174. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-33(e)(2).

(n182)Footnote 175. See Amador v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 671, 680, 200 Cal. Rptr. 298, 677 P.2d 224 .

(n183)Footnote 176. See Amador v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 671, 680-681, 200 Cal. Rptr. 298, 677 P.2d 224 ; Moore v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 235, 242, 215 Cal. Rptr. 316 .

(n184)Footnote 177. See Moore v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 235, 215 Cal. Rptr. 316 (refusal to work in radioactive work area).

(n185)Footnote 178. See Amador v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 671, 680-681, 200 Cal. Rptr. 298, 677 P.2d 224 (histotechnician's refusal to perform laboratory procedure based on conviction that her lack of qualification to perform procedure would impair proper diagnosis and thus endanger health of patients).

(n186)Footnote 179. See Hobbie v. Unemployment Appeals Commission (1987) 480 U.S. 136, 143-144, 107 S. Ct. 1046, 94 L. Ed. 2d 190 ; See also § 80.32[2][b] for discussion of refusal to accept employment because of religious reasons.

(n187)Footnote 180. See Cerberonics, Inc. v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 172, 177, 199 Cal. Rptr. 292 .

(n188)Footnote 181. See Delgado v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 788, 116 Cal. Rptr. 497 (grocery checker's failure to follow rule that each sale be individually recorded, motivated by her desire to assist customers more efficiently).

(n189)Footnote 182. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(b).

(n190)Footnote 183. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(c).

(n191)Footnote 184. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(d).

(n192)Footnote 185. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(e).

(n193)Footnote 186. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(f).

(n194)Footnote 187. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(g).

(n195)Footnote 188. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(h).

(n196)Footnote 189. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(i).

(n197)Footnote 190. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(j).

(n198)Footnote 191. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-42(k).

(n199)Footnote 192. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-36(b)(1).

(n200)Footnote 193. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-36(b)(1)(A)-(F).

(n201)Footnote 194. Whether or not compliance would in fact be a violation of law is not determinative. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-36(b)(1)(E).

(n202)Footnote 195. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-36(b)(2).

(n203)Footnote 195.1. In re Hayes (1990) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-470.

(n204)Footnote 195.2. See American Federation of Labor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 51, 57, 67, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210 .

(n205)Footnote 195.3. American Federation of Labor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 51, 61-62, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210 .

(n206)Footnote 195.4. See American Federation of Labor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 51, 61-62, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210 (housekeeper on offshore oil drilling platform).

(n207)Footnote 196. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(b).

(n208)Footnote 197. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(c)(1).

(n209)Footnote 198. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(c)(2).

(n210)Footnote 199. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(c), comments.

(n211)Footnote 200. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(c), comments.

(n212)Footnote 201. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.1(a); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(d)(1); see also discussion in [4][g], above.

(n213)Footnote 202. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(d)(1).

(n214)Footnote 203. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(d), comments.

(n215)Footnote 204. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(d), comments.

(n216)Footnote 205. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-31(d), comments.

(n217)Footnote 206. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(a).

(n218)Footnote 207. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(b)(1).

(n219)Footnote 208. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(b)(1).

(n220)Footnote 209. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(b)(1).

(n221)Footnote 210. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(b)(1), Example 2.

(n222)Footnote 211. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(b)(2).

(n223)Footnote 212. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(c) (detailing factors involved in gross negligence).

(n224)Footnote 213. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(d)(1).

(n225)Footnote 214. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(e) (detailing relevant factors in determining whether accident is due to employee's negligence).

(n226)Footnote 215. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(e), Example 7.

(n227)Footnote 216. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-38(e), Example 8.

(n228)Footnote 217. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-40(b).

(n229)Footnote 218. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-40(c).

(n230)Footnote 219. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-40(c).

(n231)Footnote 220. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-40, Example 5.

(n232)Footnote 221. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-40, Example 1.

(n233)Footnote 222. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-40(d)(1)(B), (2).

(n234)Footnote 223. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-40(d)(2).

(n235)Footnote 224. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-43(b).

(n236)Footnote 225. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-43(b), Example 2.

(n237)Footnote 226. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-43(c).

(n238)Footnote 227. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-43(c).

(n239)Footnote 228. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-43(c).

(n240)Footnote 228.1. American Federation of Labor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 51, 60, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210 (holding that refusal by employee in hazardous work environment to take periodic drug tests is violation of reasonable rule and hence misconduct).

(n241)Footnote 229. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-32.

(n242)Footnote 230. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-34.

(n243)Footnote 231. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-35. Note, however, that the employee may not lawfully be discharged for a garnishment resulting from a single judgment or indebtedness. see Lab. Code § 2929; 15 U.S.C. § 1674; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-35(a), comments; see also discussion in ch. 4.

(n244)Footnote 232. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-37. Note, however, that this regulation appears to be partially superseded by the enactment of Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.5(a), which provides a separate disqualification for the use of intoxicants caused by an irresistible compulsion. see discussion in § 80.36[2].

(n245)Footnote 232.1. American Federation of Labor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 51, 61-62, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210 (housekeeper on offshore oil drilling platform).

(n246)Footnote 233. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-39; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-36(b)(4) (use of offensive language toward employer or employer's representative as insubordination constituting misconduct).

(n247)Footnote 234. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1256-41.

(n248)Footnote 235. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1260(a); see Ghent v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1167, 1172-1174, 228 Cal. Rptr. 631 (excluding from definition of "bona fide employment" services performed in county workfare program as condition of receiving welfare benefits); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1260(a)-1 (factors to be considered in determining whether employment is "bona fide").

160 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.36

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.36 Other Disqualifications

[1] False Statements or Refusal to Accept Suitable Employment

[a] False Statements

[i] Conduct Causing Disqualification

An individual is disqualified for unemployment compensation benefits if he or she willfully, for the purpose of obtaining unemployment compensation benefits, either made a false statement or representation, including, but not limited to, using a false name, false social security number, or other false identification, with actual knowledge of its falsity, or withheld a material fact in order to obtain any unemployment compensation benefits.n1

[ii] Duration of Disqualification

The duration of disqualification for making false statements or withholding material facts depends on whether the individual has been paid any benefit amount as a result of the false statement or representation.n2 An individual who has been disqualified under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1257(a) (but not convicted under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2101), and who has not been paid any benefit amount as a result of his or her false statement or representation, is ineligible to receive unemployment compensation benefits for two weeks beginning with (1) the week in which the EDD mails or personally serves the determination of disqualification, or (2) any subsequent week for which he or she is first otherwise in all respects eligible for benefits.n3 The individual is also ineligible for not more than 13 subsequent weeks for which he or she is otherwise in all respects eligible for benefits.n3.1

An individual who has been disqualified under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1257(a) (but not convicted under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2101), but who has been paid any benefit amount as a result of his or her false statement or representation, is ineligible to receive unemployment compensation benefits for five weeks beginning with (1) the week in which the EDD mails or personally serves the determination of disqualification, or (2) any subsequent week for which he or she is first otherwise in all respects eligible for benefits.n3.2 The individual is also ineligible for not more than 10 subsequent weeks for which he or she is otherwise in all respects eligible for benefits.^{n3.3}

In either situation, no disqualification applies to any week if any portion of that week falls beyond the three-year period next succeeding the date of the mailing or personal service of the determination of disqualification.^{n3.4}

[b] Refusal to Accept Suitable Employment

[i] Conduct Causing Disqualification

An individual is disqualified for unemployment compensation benefits if he or she, without good cause, refused to accept suitable employment when offered or failed to apply for suitable employment when notified by a public employment office.ⁿ⁴ For a discussion of what constitutes suitable employment, see § 80.32[3][b].

The eligibility requirement under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1253(c) that the claimant be available for workⁿ⁵ is related to the disqualification for refusing suitable employment in that an employee who declines work that is not "suitable" will not be regarded as "unavailable" for work on that basis.ⁿ⁶

[ii] Duration of Disqualification

An individual disqualified under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1257(b) for refusal to accept suitable employment, under a determination transmitted to him or her by the EDD, is ineligible to receive unemployment compensation benefits for not less than two nor more than 10 consecutive weeks beginning with (1) the week in which the cause of the disqualification occurs, if the individual registers for work in that week, or (2) the week subsequent to the occurrence of the cause of disqualification in which the individual first registers for work, if he or she does not register for work in the week in which the cause of disqualification occurs.ⁿ⁷

[c] Successive or Concurrent Disqualifications

The Unemployment Insurance Code provides the director with some flexibility in fixing the length of disqualification when a claimant is subject to more than one disqualification under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1257 for false statements or refusal to accept suitable employment. Unemployment Insurance Code section 1261 provides that when successive disqualifications under section 1257 occur, the period of ineligibility provided for in *Unemployment Insurance Code section 1260*ⁿ⁸ may be extended by the director for an additional period not to exceed eight additional weeks. On the other hand, Unemployment Insurance Code section 1260(e) provides that an individual who is subject to a disqualification imposed under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1257(b), for failure to accept suitable employment, may, if otherwise in all respects eligible for unemployment compensation benefits, concurrently serve a disqualification imposed under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1257(a), for making false statements.

[2] Use of Intoxicants

[a] Generally

An individual is disqualified for unemployment compensation benefits if either of the following occur:ⁿ⁹

1. The director finds that the individual was discharged from his or her most recent work for chronic absenteeism due to intoxication, reporting to work while intoxicated, using intoxicants on the job, or gross neglect of duty while intoxicated, when any of these incidents is caused by an irresistible compulsion to use or consume intoxicants, including alcoholic beverages; or
2. He or she otherwise left his or her most recent employment for reasons caused by an irresistible compulsion to use or consume intoxicants, including alcoholic beverages.

[b] Duration of Disqualification

An individual disqualified for intoxication under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256.5(a) because of his or her compulsion to use intoxicants, under a determination transmitted to him or her by the EDD, is ineligible to receive unemployment compensation benefits for the week in which the separation of employment occurs and continuing until (1) he or she has performed service in bona fide employment for which remuneration is received equal to or in excess of five times his or her weekly benefit amount, or (2) a physician or authorized treatment program administrator certifies that the individual has entered into and is continuing in, or has completed, a treatment program for his or her condition and is able to return to employment.ⁿ¹⁰

[c] Requirement That Disqualified Individual Be Advised of Disability Benefits

The EDD must advise each individual disqualified because of intoxication pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256.5 of any disability benefits available and, if assistance in locating an appropriate treatment program is requested, refer the individual to appropriate county drug or alcohol program administrator.ⁿ¹¹ For a discussion of disability benefits available for treatment of intoxication-related conditions, see § 80.65[2].

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1257(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1260(c), (d).

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1260(c).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1260(c).

(n5)Footnote 3.2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1260(d).

(n6)Footnote 3.3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1260(d).

(n7)Footnote 3.4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1260(c), (d).

(n8)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1257(b).

(n9)Footnote 5. See discussion under § 80.32[2].

(n10)Footnote 6. See Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 55, 62-63, 67, 141 Cal. Rptr. 146, 569 P.2d 740 .

(n11)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1260(b).

(n12)Footnote 8. See discussion in [a][ii] and [b][ii], above.

(n13)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.5(a).

(n14)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.5(b).

(n15)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.5(c).

161 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.37

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.37 Effect of Remuneration During Period of Unemployment on Amount of Benefits

[1] Reduction of Benefits by Amount of Retirement Pay

[a] Generally

With certain exceptions, discussed in [c], below, the amount of unemployment compensation benefits payable to an individual for any week that begins in a period when that individual is receiving a governmental or other pension, retirement or retired pay, annuity, or any other similar periodic payment based on the individual's previous work is reduced (but not below zero) by an amount equal to the amount of the periodic payment that is reasonably attributable to that week.ⁿ¹

The amount of the offset is not limited to the increase in pension benefits earned during the base period, but includes the entire pension payment.ⁿ² However, pensions paid to a claimant on a single lump-sum basis will not be offset against unemployment compensation benefits.ⁿ³

[b] Relationship With Federal Law

The California pension offset provisions are required under federal law as a condition of certification for its state unemployment compensation programⁿ⁴ and are operative only as long as they are federally mandated.ⁿ⁵ The reduction in benefits may not exceed the offset required under federal law.ⁿ⁶

[c] Exceptions to Reduction Requirement

The reduction applies only if the periodic payment is under a plan maintained or contributed to by a base period or chargeable employer,ⁿ⁷ and, in the case of payments not made under the Social Security Act or the federal Railroad Retirement Act, the services performed after the beginning of the base period (or remuneration for those services) affect eligibility for or increase the amount of the periodic payments.ⁿ⁸

The reduction does not apply if the individual has made any contribution to the pension, retirement or retired pay, annuity, or other similar periodic payments.ⁿ⁹

[2] Payments by Employer to Supplement Unemployment Compensation; Severance or Dismissal Pay

Payments to an individual under a plan or system established by an employer that makes provisions for employees generally, or for a class or group of employees, for the purpose of supplementing unemployment compensation benefits may not be construed to be wages or compensation for personal services, and unemployment or state disability benefits may not be denied or reduced because of the receipt of payment under these arrangements or plans.ⁿ¹⁰ Payments under an employer plan to supplement benefits other than unemployment compensation benefits are not within the scope of this provision and may be construed to constitute wages or compensation for personal services.ⁿ¹¹ The payment of "severance" or "dismissal" pay made pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement has been construed to constitute employer supplementation of unemployment compensation benefits.ⁿ¹²

[3] Vacation Pay

Payments to an individual for vacation pay that was earned but not paid for services performed prior to termination of employment may not be construed to be wages or compensation for personal services, and unemployment or state disability benefits may not be denied or reduced because of the receipt of these payments.ⁿ¹³

[4] Holiday Pay

If an individual is laid off for a definite period, payments made for holiday pay for any holiday occurring in a week during which the individual was unemployed are deemed wages received for the week in which the individual returns to work from the layoff if the payments are not made until the individual returns to work.ⁿ¹⁴ Such payments are deemed wages received for the week in which the holiday falls if the payments are made prior to the individual's return to work from the layoff.ⁿ¹⁵ However, if the holiday pay (or the holiday pay plus any wages for part-time work during the week of the holiday), after the reduction of the holiday pay and/or wages by the greater of $25 or 25 percent,^{n15.1} exceeds the individual's weekly benefit amount, the individual is not considered unemployed during the week of the holiday and these allocation rules do not apply.^{n15.2}

■ ILLUSTRATION 1:

X earns $200 per day and has a weekly benefit amount (WBA) of $230 per week. During one week, X receives two days' holiday pay ($400) and does not work the other three days of that week. X is not entitled to benefits for that week because his wages ($400 reduced by 25 percent, or $300) are more than his WBA of $230, and he is therefore not regarded as unemployed during that week.^{n15.3}

■ ILLUSTRATION 2:

Y earns $75 per day and has a weekly benefit amount (WBA) of $200 per week. During one workweek, Y receives two days' holiday pay ($150) and does not work the other three days of that week. Y is deemed unemployed and entitled to benefits during that week because her wages ($150 reduced by 25 percent, or $112.50) are less than her WBA of $200. Therefore, if Y returns to work after the holiday and is paid her $150 holiday pay, the holiday pay would be allocated as wages to the week of her return to work.^{n15.4}

Payments to an individual for holiday pay that was earned but not paid prior to an indefinite layoff, a termination of employment, or commencement of unemployment caused by disability may not be construed to be wages or compensation for personal services for purposes of the unemployment and state disability compensation provisions, and benefits payable under those provisions may not be denied or reduced because of the receipt of such payments.ⁿ¹⁶

[5] Sick Pay

Payments to an individual for sick pay that was earned but not paid for services performed prior to termination of employment may not be construed to be wages or compensation for personal services for purposes of the unemployment and state disability compensation provisions, and benefits payable under those provisions may not be denied or reduced because of the receipt of such payments.ⁿ¹⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.3(a); see also 26 U.S.C. § 3304(a)(15) (mandating pension offset by state unemployment compensation program).

(n2)Footnote 2. Rivera v. Becerra (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1983) 714 F.2d 887, 893-894 ; cert. denied sub nom. International Union, United Auto, Aerospace & Agr. Implement Workers of America v. Donovan, 465 U.S. 1099 (1984) ; see Evans v. Unempl. Ins. Appeals Bd. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 398, 409-410, 216 Cal. Rptr. 782, 703 P.2d 122 .

(n3)Footnote 3. See Evans v. Unempl. Ins. Appeals Bd. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 398, 409-410, 216 Cal. Rptr. 782, 703 P.2d 122 ; see also 26 U.S.C. § 3304(a)(15) (requiring offsets of "pensions ... or any other similar periodic payment").

(n4)Footnote 4. See 26 U.S.C. § 3304(a)(15). For discussion of relationship between the state and federal unemployment compensation laws generally, see § 80.01.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.3(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Evans v. Unempl. Ins. Appeals Bd. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 398, 409-410, 216 Cal. Rptr. 782, 703 P.2d 122 (intent of legislature in enacting Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.3 was to provide for compliance with letter of federal law, and nothing more).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.3(c)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.3(c)(2); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.3(e) (retroactivity of certain amendments to exception).

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.3(d)(1); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.3(d)(2).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Cooper v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 166, 168, 170, 173 Cal. Rptr. 255 (Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265 not applicable to sick leave benefits paid to employees during periods of disability pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Powell v. California Dep't of Employment (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 103, 109, 45 Cal. Rptr. 136, 403 P.2d 392 ; Citroen Cars Corp. v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1980) 107 Cal. App. 3d 945, 949-950, 165 Cal. Rptr. 924 ; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.9 (severance or terminal pay to individual terminated from employment as result of expansion of specified federal park may not be construed to be wages).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.5. For discussion of payment of vacation pay on termination of employment, see ch. 4.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.6.

(n15)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.6.

(n16)Footnote 15.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1252(a); See also § 80.30[1].

(n17)Footnote 15.2. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1265.6-1(b); Unemp. Ins. Code § 1252(a); see § 80.30[1].

(n18)Footnote 15.3. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1265.6-1(b).

(n19)Footnote 15.4. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1265.6-1(b).

(n20)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.6.

(n21)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.7; cf. Cooper v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 166, 168, 170, 173 Cal. Rptr. 255 (sick leave benefits to employees during periods of disability pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement as reducing amount of state disability benefits).

162 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.38

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.38 Types of Claims

[1] Generally

EDD claim processing regulations refer to five different types of claims, as further described below:

1. New claims;n1
2. Additional claims;n2
3. Reopened claims;n3
4. Continued claims;n4 and
5. Partial claims.n5

[2] New Claim

A "new claim" for unemployment compensation benefits means an application for the establishment of a benefit yearn6 and a computation of the maximum benefits payable and the weekly rate.n7

[3] Additional Claim

An "additional claim" for unemployment compensation benefits means an application that certifies to the beginning date of a period of unemployment under the following circumstances:n8

1. The period of unemployment falls within a previously established benefit year, extended duration period, or extended benefit period; and

2. A break of one or more weeks has occurred in the claim series as a result of intervening employment.

A break in the claim series from intervening employment occurs if the claimant (1) filed a continuedⁿ⁹ or partial claimⁿ¹⁰ for a week during which he or she was ineligible under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1279 because of excessive earnings from services performed in employment during that week; (2) was ineligible to file a claim for a week because he or she was not unemployed, as defined in Unemployment Insurance Code section 1252;ⁿ¹¹ or (3) failed to file a continued claim or partial claim for a week during which he or she performed compensated services in employment.ⁿ¹²

[4] Reopened Claim

A "reopened claim" for unemployment compensation benefits means an application that certifies to the beginning date of a period of employment that (1) falls within a previously established benefit year, extended duration period, or extended benefit period; and (2) follows any of the following:ⁿ¹³

1. A period of one or more weeks for which the claimant failed to file a continued claimⁿ¹⁴ or partial claimⁿ¹⁵ and during which the claimant did not perform services in employment; or
2. A period of one or more weeks for which the claimant was ineligible for benefits for a definite period and for which continued claims or partial claims were filed, unless with respect to any week during that period, the claimant was ineligible for benefits pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 1252 (defining "unemployed"),ⁿ¹⁶ or section 1279 (unemployment compensation benefits during partial employment)ⁿ¹⁷ due to excessive earnings from services performed in employment that week.ⁿ¹⁸

A reopened claim may not be filed by a claimant who is any of the following:ⁿ¹⁹

- (1) Under a disqualification for a fixed period pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code §§ 1257(b) or 1261, unless he or she has appealed the disqualification pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code § 1257(a).
- (2) Ineligible for benefits for an indefinite period pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code §§ 1253(a), (b) or (c) or Unemployment Insurance Code §§ 1253.3, 1253.4, 1255.3, 1255.5, 1256, 1262, or 1264, unless he or she has appealed the disqualification.
- (3) Awaiting an eligibility decision by the department on a prior claim filed in the same benefit year or extended benefit period.

[5] Continued Claim

A "continued claim" for unemployment compensation benefits means an application to serve a waiting period or for the receipt of benefits that certifies to a week of unemployment.ⁿ²⁰

[6] Partial Claim

A "partial claim" for unemployment compensation benefits is a claim for partial benefits by a partially unemployed individual.ⁿ²¹ "First partial claim" and "subsequent partial claim" for partial unemployment compensation benefits mean an application for a determination of eligibility for partial benefits that certifies to the completion of one week of partial unemployment either to satisfy a week of the waiting period requirementⁿ²² or to claim partial benefits for a compensable week or two compensable weeks.ⁿ²³

The employer of a partially unemployed individual is required, within five days after the termination of any payroll week, to give the individual a notice of reduced earnings on a prescribed form.ⁿ²⁴

When a claimant has filed partial claims for two consecutive weeks during which he or she performed no services for the regular employer, he or she may not file a partial claim for a subsequent week of unemployment until he or she again performs services for the regular employer. For any subsequent weeks in which the claimant is ineligible to file partial claims, he or she may, if unemployed, file continued claims.ⁿ²⁵

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-2; see also discussion in [2], below.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-4; see also discussion in [3], below.

(n3)Footnote 3. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-5; see also discussion in [4], below.

(n4)Footnote 4. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-6; see also discussion in [5], below.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-8; see also discussion in [6], below.

(n6)Footnote 6. For definition of "benefit year," see § 80.31[2].

(n7)Footnote 7. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-2(a); see § 80.39[1] for discussion of claim-filing procedures.

(n8)Footnote 8. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-4(a).

(n9)Footnote 9. See discussion in [5], below.

(n10)Footnote 10. See discussion in [6], below.

(n11)Footnote 11. See discussion in § 80.30.

(n12)Footnote 12. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-4(a)(2).

(n13)Footnote 13. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-5(a); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1326-5(b) (filing reopened claim), 1326-5(c) (when reopened claim may not be filed).

(n14)Footnote 14. See discussion in [5], below.

(n15)Footnote 15. See discussion in [6], below.

(n16)Footnote 16. See discussion under § 80.30.

(n17)Footnote 17. See discussion under § 80.32[2][c].

(n18)Footnote 18. If the claimant is ineligible for either of the latter reasons, an additional claim would be filed following the end of the period of ineligibility. see discussion in [2], above.

(n19)Footnote 19. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-5(c).

(n20)Footnote 20. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-6(a); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-6(b)-(f) (procedure for filing continued claims). For discussion of required one-week waiting period, see § 80.32[4].

(n21)Footnote 21. See § 80.32[2][c] for discussion of partial employment.

(n22)Footnote 22. See § 80.32[4] for discussion of requirement of waiting period of week of unemployment.

(n23)Footnote 23. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-8(a); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-8(b) (filing and content of first or subsequent partial claim).

(n24)Footnote 24. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-7.

(n25)Footnote 25. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-8(c). For discussion of continued claims, see [5], above.

163 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.39

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.39 Claims Procedures

[1] Generally

Claims for unemployment compensation benefits must be made in accordance with authorized regulations of the director.ⁿ¹

There are five steps for handling a typical unemployment insurance claim:ⁿ²

1. The claimant files a new claim for unemployment insurance by reporting in person to a field office of the EDD.
2. Two weeks later, or as otherwise directed by the EDD, the claimant reports in person to the EDD field office to file a continued claimⁿ³ and is interviewed as to eligibility and benefit rights. If, after examining documents submitted by the claimant and by the claimant's employer,ⁿ⁴ the claims interviewer finds the claimant to be eligible, he or she is credited for the one-week waiting periodⁿ⁵ and is thereafter paid for one week.
3. In the fifth week, the claimant, to be paid for the third and fourth weeks of unemployment, files by mail a "continued claim" form,ⁿ⁶ certifying that he or she continues to meet all eligibility requirements. The claim form is reviewed by the EDD and, if the claimant is found eligible, payment is mailed to the claimant. The process is repeated every two weeks thereafter until the date of the claimant's next scheduled eligibility review, as described in the next paragraph.
4. The claimant is periodically required to report in person for eligibility reviews by the EDD, as scheduled.
5. If at any time a question arises as to the claimant's eligibility, the claimant may be required to report in person for an in-depth interview, followed by a written determination by the EDD regarding the claimant's eligibility or ineligibility.ⁿ⁷

Generally, the first "week of unemployment" for which an individual is eligible to receive unemployment benefits^{n7.1} is defined by EDD regulations as the week of unemployment in which an individual registers in person at an employment office before closing on Friday of that week.^{n7.2} Thus a claimant must ordinarily report to the EDD and file his or her claim during the week following the one week period.^{n7.3} However, EDD regulations permit late filing of a claim for "good cause," as set forth in the regulations.^{n7.4} An employer's failure to inform an employee of his or her potential eligibility for benefits is not, in itself, good cause for delay in filing a claim.^{n7.5} In any case, a claim may not be filed more than 13 weeks after the end of the benefit year during which the unemployment occurred.^{n7.6}

Unemployment Insurance Code section 1342.1 requires that an individual filing a claim be advised that the benefits he or she will receive are subject to federal taxes and that he or she may elect to have tax withheld or may need to make estimated tax payments and may wish to change his or her previous withholding amounts.

[2] Payment or Denial of Claims

Except as otherwise provided, the EDD must promptly pay benefits if it finds the claimant is eligible or must promptly deny benefits if it finds the claimant is ineligible.ⁿ⁸ For a discussion of payments of benefits pending an appeal, see § 80.41.

Benefits are paid through public employment offices or through such other agency as may be prescribed by authorized regulations of the director.ⁿ⁹ The EDD generally mails benefit checks to claimants after a determination of eligibility.ⁿ¹⁰ Benefits to eligible minors may be paid directly to them.ⁿ¹¹ Payment of benefits to a deceased or legally declared incompetent person may be paid to such persons as appear to the Director of Employment Development to be legally entitled to receive them, in accordance with authorized regulations.ⁿ¹²

[3] Notice to Last Previous Employer of New or Additional Claim

The EDD must give notice of the filing of a new or additional claimⁿ¹³ to the employing unit by which the claimant was last employed immediately preceding the filing of the claim.ⁿ¹⁴ However, the EDD need not give notice of an additional claim if (1) the claim is the result of the filing of a partial claim,ⁿ¹⁵ (2) there has not been a subsequent employing unit that is designated as the last employer, and (3) there is no separation issue.ⁿ¹⁶

[4] Submission of Facts by Last Previous Employer Following Notice of Claim

[a] Facts Affecting Claimant's Eligibility

Within 10 days after the mailing of notice of a new or additional claim, the last previous employing unit must submit any facts then known which may affect the claimant's eligibility for benefits, including, but not limited to, facts pertaining to eligibility under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1256 (disqualification for voluntary leaving without good cause or discharge for misconduct).ⁿ¹⁷ The 10-day period may be extended for good cause.ⁿ¹⁸

If after the 10-day period the employing unit acquires knowledge of facts that may affect eligibility of the claimant and that could not reasonably have been known within the 10-day period, the employing unit must, within 10 days of acquiring the knowledge, submit the facts to the EDD.ⁿ¹⁹ The 10-day period for submission of after-acquired facts may also be extended for good cause.ⁿ²⁰

The employer may also submit facts knowledge of which was acquired after a determination of eligibility by the EDD.ⁿ²¹

EDD regulations prescribe the form and contents of any submission of facts by an employer.ⁿ²²

[b] Facts Relating to Whether Employer's Account May Be Charged

An employer who was the claimant's last previous employer, and therefore entitled to notice of a new or additional claim for unemployment compensation benefits by a claimant under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1327,ⁿ²³ may, within 10 days after mailing of the notice, submit to the EDD any facts within its possession disclosing whether the claimant left the employer's employ voluntarily and without good cause or left under one of the following circumstances:ⁿ²⁴

- The claimant was discharged from the employment for misconduct connected with his or her work;ⁿ²⁵ or
- The claimant's discharge or quitting from his or her most recent employer was the result of an irresistible compulsion to use or consume intoxicants;ⁿ²⁶ or
- The claimant was a student employed on a temporary basis and whose employment began within, and ended with his or her leaving to return at the close of his or her vacation period; or
- The claimant left the employer's employ to accompany his or her spouse or to join the spouse at a place from which it is impractical to commute to the employment,ⁿ²⁷ and to which a transfer of the claimant by the employer is not available.ⁿ²⁸
- The claimant left the employer's employ to protect the claimant or his or her children from domestic violence abuse.

The period during which the employer may submit these facts may be extended by the director for good cause.ⁿ²⁹ If the director finds any of the above facts to be true, benefits paid to the claimant generally will not be charged against the employer's reserve account, unless the employer failed to furnish the information specified by Section 1030 or unless that ruling is reversed by a reconsidered ruling.ⁿ³⁰

Leaving work without good cause or being discharged for misconduct is both a basis for not charging the employer's reserve account,ⁿ³¹ and a basis for disqualification of the claimant for eligibility for benefits.ⁿ³² However, in the case of a claimant who left work to accompany a spouse or domestic partner to a place from which it is impractical to commute, the claimant may be eligible for benefits;ⁿ³³ but if transfer by the employer was unavailable, the employer's reserve account will not be charged.ⁿ³⁴ Such good-cause "domestic quits" were excepted from charges against the employer's account because it was felt to be fundamentally unfair for employers to have their individual unemployment insurance taxes increased for reasons beyond their control. Under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1032, the cost of this kind of quit is shifted from the individual employer's account to the balancing account.ⁿ³⁵

In 1995, Unemployment Code Section 1032 was amended to further provide that an employer's reserve account will not be charged if the employee left the employer's employ to take a substantially better job. However, Unemployment Code Section 1030(a) was not amended to provide for submission of facts to the EDD regarding whether an employee has left for a better job. Nevertheless, an employer should submit such facts within 10 days after the EDD's notice of a new claim in order to prevent benefits paid to such a claimant from being charged to the employer's reserve account.^{n35.1}

[c] Effect of Submission or Nonsubmission of Facts

There is a rebuttable presumption that the individual has left or been discharged for nondisqualifying reasons unless the employer has given written notice to the contrary to the EDD in accordance with Unemployment Insurance Code section 1327, setting forth facts sufficient to overcome the presumption.ⁿ³⁶

For purposes of Unemployment Insurance Code section 1030, setting forth the circumstances of employment termination under which benefits paid will not be charged to the employer,ⁿ³⁷ it is presumed that there is no good cause for voluntarily leaving if the claimant does not notify the employer of the reasons for leaving, and the employer submits all of the facts within its possession concerning the leaving within the applicable time period.ⁿ³⁸ If, however, the employer fails to submit the information specified in Unemployment Insurance Code section 1030 within the applicable time period, any benefits paid will be charged against the employer's account, regardless of whether it is ultimately determined that the claimant's employment terminated under one of the circumstances specified in that section.ⁿ³⁹

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The literal terms of Unemployment Insurance Code section 1328 provide that the employer will receive no notice of an EDD determination of eligibility unless the employer submits facts responsive to the underlying claim within the allotted 10-day periods. The absence of notice of the determination, in turn, will preclude the opportunity to file an appeal of the eligibility determination. Thus, an employer that wishes to contest a claim must satisfy the terms of Unemployment Insurance Code section 1327 to preserve its right to participate in the administrative process. Similarly, an employer that does not wish to contest a claim, but wishes to receive notice of the EDD eligibility determination, should return the underlying EDD notice of claim (Form DE 1101) with the fact section either left blank or marked to indicate that the employer does not contest the receipt of benefits but wants notice of all future determinations and proceedings regarding the claim. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[5] Determination of Eligibility

[a] Generally

The EDD must consider any facts submitted by an employer pursuant to *Unemployment Insurance Code section 1327*ⁿ⁴⁰ and, if benefits are claimed subsequent to the filing of the new or additional claim, make a determination as to the claimant's eligibility for benefits.ⁿ⁴¹ If the EDD identifies any potential eligibility question, based on either the facts submitted by the employer or other facts of which the EDD becomes aware, the EDD will notify the claimant to appear in person for an in-depth interview on all eligibility issues raised prior to making its determination.ⁿ⁴²

The EDD must promptly notify the claimant and any employer who prior to the determination has submitted any facts pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 1327 of the determination and reasons for the determination.ⁿ⁴³ The EDD must also notify the employer of any subsequent modification of the determination.ⁿ⁴⁴

For a discussion of procedures for appealing a determination, see § 80.40.

[b] Submission of Facts by Employer After Notice of Determination

If after notice of a determination the employing unit acquires knowledge of facts that may affect the eligibility of the claimant and such facts could not reasonably have been known within the 10-day period provided by Unemployment Insurance Code section 1327,ⁿ⁴⁵ the employing unit must within 10 days after acquiring that knowledge submit the facts to the EDD.ⁿ⁴⁶ The 10-day period for submission of after-acquired facts may also be extended for good cause.ⁿ⁴⁷

For a discussion of reconsidered determinations, of eligibility, see [7], below.

[6] Computation of Benefits

[a] Generally

On the filing of a new claim for benefits, the EDD must promptly make a computation on the claim that sets forth the maximum amount of benefits potentially payable during the benefit year, and the weekly benefit amount.ⁿ⁴⁸

For purposes of computation of benefits under the "base period,"^{n48.1} all of the following apply:^{n48.2}

- Computation using the last four completed calendar quarters is based on available wage information processed as of the close of business on the day preceding the date of application.
- If the wage information is not already in the EDD's system, the department must request the information from the employer, and the employer must, within 10 days after the EDD mails the request, transmit to the EDD information on the employee's wages and any other information relevant to the request. The 10-day period may be extended for good cause.
- If the EDD does not receive wage and other relevant information requested from the employer, the department must accept an affidavit of wages and other relevant information from the claimant in accordance with authorized regulations.
- A determination of benefits made for a claim filed on or after April 3, 2011,^{n48.3} must be adjusted when the quarterly wage report from the employer is received if that information causes a change in the determination.
- Except in the event of fraud, if it is determined that any information provided by the claimant on an affidavit is erroneous, no penalty or refund of benefits will be imposed on the claimant for the period prior to the calendar week in which an employer provides subsequent wage information.

[b] Notice of Computation

The EDD must promptly notify the claimant of the computation.ⁿ⁴⁹ The EDD must also notify each of the claimant's base period employersⁿ⁵⁰ of the computation after the payment of the first weekly benefit.ⁿ⁵¹ The EDD must promptly notify each of the claimant's base period employers of the computation on the claim that sets forth the number of weeks that the claimant will be eligible for benefits in the benefit year, the weekly benefit amount, and the maximum amount of benefits potentially payable during the benefit year, based on a determination of eligibility.ⁿ⁵²

[c] Protest of Computation

The claimant and any base period employer to whom a notice of computation or recomputation is given may, within 20 days after the mailing of personal service of the notice, protest the accuracy of the computation or recomputation.ⁿ⁵³ The 20-day period may be extended for good cause, including but not limited to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect.ⁿ⁵⁴ The EDD must consider any protest and must promptly notify the claimant and the base period employer submitting the protest of the recomputation or denial of recomputation.ⁿ⁵⁵

For a discussion of procedures for appealing a denial of recomputation, see § 80.40.

[d] Submission of Facts by Base Period Employer Not Entitled to Notice of Claim

[i] Facts Relating to Whether Employer's Reserve Account May Be Charged

A base period employern⁵⁶ who is entitled to receive notice of computation under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1329 will not have received notice of the filing of the new or additional claim if the employer was not the claimant's last previous employer.ⁿ⁵⁷ Such a base period employer may, within 15 days after the mailing of the notice of computation, or any extension of that period for good cause, submit to the EDD facts relating to reasons why that employer's reserve account should not be charged for any benefits paid.ⁿ⁵⁸ The reasons for not charging such an employer's reserve account are identical to those applicable to the last previous employer,ⁿ⁵⁹ except that an employer other than the last previous employer may not avoid charges against its reserve account based on the claimant's discharge or resignation as the result of an irresistible compulsion to use intoxicants.ⁿ⁶⁰ Benefits paid will be charged against the employer's account as provided by Unemp. Ins. Code 1026;^{n60.1} benefits will likewise be charged against the employer's account if it fails to submit facts within the prescribed time.ⁿ⁶¹

The EDD must consider these facts together with any other information in its possession, and promptly notify the employer of its ruling as to the cause of the termination of the claimant's employment.ⁿ⁶²

For a discussion of procedures for appealing a ruling as to the cause of the termination of the claimant's employment, see § 80.40.

[ii] Facts Affecting Claimant's Eligibility

Any base period employer (including the last previous employer) must, within 15 days after mailing of a notice of computation, submit to the EDD any facts then known that he or she was not previously required to submit under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1327.ⁿ⁶³ If after the 15-day period the employing unit acquires knowledge of facts that may affect the eligibility of the claimant and these facts could not reasonably have been known within the period, the employing unit must, within 10 days of acquiring such knowledge, submit the facts to the EDD.ⁿ⁶⁴ Both the 15- and 10-day periods may be extended for good cause.ⁿ⁶⁵

The EDD must make a determination or reconsidered determination of the claimant's eligibility based on the facts submitted by the base period employers, and must promptly notify the claimant and the base period employer submitting the facts of the determination or reconsidered determination and the reasons therefor.ⁿ⁶⁶

[6A] Notice of Determination of Eligibility

The EDD must promptly serve notice personally or by mail of any determination of eligibility for benefits under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 621 et seq. (unemployment compensation), Unemployment Insurance Code Section 3501 et seq. (extended unemployment compensation), or Unemployment Code Section 4001 et seq. (federal-state extended compensation) on the claimant and on any employer or employing unit that, prior to the determination, furnished the EDD with information regarding the claimant's eligibility pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 1327 and 1331. However, failure to serve the notice does not affect the determination of eligibility.^{n66.1} "Notice" is notification that apprises the party of a determination of eligibility and allows that party to respond accordingly.^{n66.2}

If the EDD is or should be aware that the notice was not received by the party to whom it was addressed (for example, because the United States Postal Service returns the notice to the EDD), the EDD must reissue the notice when it can determine a corrected mailing address for the affected party or otherwise ensure receipt.^{n66.3} The affected party may appeal the notice pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 1328 and 1332(b) and (c).^{n66.4}

[7] Reconsideration of Determinations or Computations

[a] Reconsideration of Determination

The EDD may for good cause reconsider any determination within 15 days after an appeal to an administrative law judge is filed.ⁿ⁶⁷ If no appeal is filed, the EDD may for good cause reconsider any determination within 20 days after mailing or personal service of the notice of determination.ⁿ⁶⁸ The EDD may, if a claimant has not filed an appeal to an administrative law judge from any determination that finds that a claimant is ineligible or disqualified, for good cause also reconsider the determination during the benefit year or extended duration period or extended benefit period to which the determination relates.ⁿ⁶⁹

No individual designated by the director to reconsider appealed determinations may be the same individual who made the initial determination in the same matter.ⁿ⁷⁰

The EDD must give notice of any reconsidered determination to the claimant and to any employer or employing unit that received notice under Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 1328 (notice to last previous employer of determination of eligibility)ⁿ⁷¹ and 1331 (notice to base period employer who submitted facts after receiving notice of computation).ⁿ⁷² The reconsidered determination must indicate the reasons therefor.ⁿ⁷³

For discussion of procedures for appealing a reconsidered determination, see § 80.40.

[b] Reconsideration of Computation

The EDD may for good cause reconsider any computation or recomputation during the benefit year or extended duration period to which the notice of computation or recomputation relates.ⁿ⁷⁴ However, the EDD may not reconsider any recomputation with respect to any issue considered or under consideration in an appeal taken from a denial of recomputation.ⁿ⁷⁵ The EDD must promptly notify the claimant and each of the claimant's base period employers of the recomputation.ⁿ⁷⁶ The claimant and any base period employer may protest the accuracy of the recomputation as prescribed in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1330.ⁿ⁷⁷

[c] Reconsideration in Case of Fraud

The statutory time limits within which the EDD may reconsider any determination, ruling, or computation, and any statutory provisions that otherwise restrict or prevent such reconsideration, do not apply in any case of fraud, misrepresentation, or willful nondisclosure.ⁿ⁷⁸

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1326; see 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1326-1-1326-11 (claims procedures); See also § 80.38 for discussion of types of claims.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-1(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 80.38[5] for discussion of continued claim.

(n4)Footnote 4. See discussion in [4], [5][b], and [6][d], below for discussion of submissions by employer.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253(d) (requirement of one-week waiting period); see also discussion under § 80.32[4].

(n6)Footnote 6. See discussion in § 80.38[5].

(n7)Footnote 7. See [5], below, for discussion of determination of eligibility.

(n8)Footnote 7.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1253; see also discussion in § 80.32[1].

(n9)Footnote 7.2. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1253-2.

(n10)Footnote 7.3. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1253, 1254; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1253-2.

(n11)Footnote 7.4. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 1253-4, 1253-8, 1326-8.

(n12)Footnote 7.5. See Wang v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 412, 419-420, 275 Cal. Rptr. 237 (claimant's two-year delay in filing was unreasonable under circumstances).

(n13)Footnote 7.6. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-10(c); Wang v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 412, 420-421, 275 Cal. Rptr. 237 .

(n14)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1326.

(n15)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1339(a).

(n16)Footnote 10. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-1.

(n17)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1340.

(n18)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1341; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1341-1.

(n19)Footnote 13. See discussion in § 80.38[1], [2].

(n20)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1327.

(n21)Footnote 15. See § 80.38[5] for discussion of partial claim.

(n22)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1327.

(n23)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1327. For discussion of disqualifications under Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256, see § 80.35.

(n24)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1327.

(n25)Footnote 19. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1327.

(n26)Footnote 20. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1327.

(n27)Footnote 21. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1328; see also discussion under [5][b], below.

(n28)Footnote 22. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1333-1.

(n29)Footnote 23. See discussion under [3], above.

(n30)Footnote 24. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1030(a).

(n31)Footnote 25. For discussion of good cause for voluntarily leaving and discharge for misconduct, see § 80.35.

(n32)Footnote 26. See discussion in § 80.36[2].

(n33)Footnote 27. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256.

(n34)Footnote 28. For a discussion of circumstances under which leaving employment to accompany spouse constitutes good cause, see § 80.35[4][f][v].

(n35)Footnote 29. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1030(a).

(n36)Footnote 30. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1026 (exception); § 80.21[4][c] for discussion of charges against employer's reserve account.

(n37)Footnote 31. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032.

(n38)Footnote 32. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256; see also discussion under § 80.35.

(n39)Footnote 33. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256 (accompanying spouse as deemed good cause for purposes of claimant's eligibility); see also discussion under § 80.35[4][f][v].

(n40)Footnote 34. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032(c).

(n41)Footnote 35. See Altaville Drug Store, Inc. v. Employment Development Department (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 231, 235-236, 242 Cal. Rptr. 732, 746 P.2d 871 .

(n42)Footnote 35.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032.

(n43)Footnote 36. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256; see also discussion in § 80.35[2].

(n44)Footnote 37. See discussion in [b], above.

(n45)Footnote 38. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1030(d).

(n46)Footnote 39. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032.

(n47)Footnote 40. See discussion under [4], above.

(n48)Footnote 41. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1328.

(n49)Footnote 42. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1326-1(b)(4).

(n50)Footnote 43. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1328; see [7] below for discussion of reconsideration.

(n51)Footnote 44. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1328-1(a).

(n52)Footnote 45. See discussion under [4][a], above.

(n53)Footnote 46. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1328.

(n54)Footnote 47. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1328.

(n55)Footnote 48. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1329(a).

(n56)Footnote 48.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1275; see discussion at § 80.31[3], above.

(n57)Footnote 48.2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1329.5.

(n58)Footnote 48.3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1275(b), discussed at § 80.31[3], above.

(n59)Footnote 49. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1329(a).

(n60)Footnote 50. For definition of "base period," see § 80.31[3].

(n61)Footnote 51. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1329(a).

(n62)Footnote 52. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1329(b). For eligibility requirements, see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1266 et seq. ; for discussion of eligibility requirements, see §§ 80.32-80.36, above .

(n63)Footnote 53. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1330.

(n64)Footnote 54. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1330.

(n65)Footnote 55. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1330.

(n66)Footnote 56. For definition of "base period," see § 80.31[3].

(n67)Footnote 57. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1327; see also discussion in [4], above.

(n68)Footnote 58. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1030(b), 1032.

(n69)Footnote 59. See discussion in [4][b], above.

(n70)Footnote 60. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032(f); compare Unemp. Ins. Code § 1030(a)(2) with Unemp. Ins. Code § 1030(b).

(n71)Footnote 60.1. See § 80.21[4][c].

(n72)Footnote 61. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1032.

(n73)Footnote 62. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1030(c).

(n74)Footnote 63. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1331; see also discussion under [4][a], above.

(n75)Footnote 64. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1331.

(n76)Footnote 65. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1331.

(n77)Footnote 66. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1331. For discussion of reconsidered determinations, see [7], below.

(n78)Footnote 66.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(a).

(n79)Footnote 66.2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(a)(1).

(n80)Footnote 66.3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(a)(2).

(n81)Footnote 66.4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(a)(2); see discussion in [7][a], [b], below, and § 80.40.

(n82)Footnote 67. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(b). For discussion of appeals, see § 80.40.

(n83)Footnote 68. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(b). For discussion of notice of determination, see [5][a], above.

(n84)Footnote 69. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(b).

(n85)Footnote 70. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(b).

(n86)Footnote 71. See discussion under [3], above.

(n87)Footnote 72. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(b). For discussion of notice of computation to base period employer see [6][b], above. For discussion of submission of facts by base period employer who received notice of computation, see [6][d], above.

(n88)Footnote 73. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1328, 1331.

(n89)Footnote 74. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(c).

(n90)Footnote 75. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(c).

(n91)Footnote 76. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(c).

(n92)Footnote 77. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332(c). For discussion of protest of computation or recomputation, see [6][c], above.

(n93)Footnote 78. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1332.5.

164 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.40

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.40 Appeals

[1] To Administrative Law Judge

The claimant and any employer who has submitted any facts in connection with an eligibility determination (or reconsidered determination) or protested a computation may appeal the EDD's determination or denial of recomputation to an administrative law judge.ⁿ¹ The appeal must be filed within 20 days from the mailing or personal service of the notice of determination, reconsidered determination,ⁿ² or denial of recomputation.ⁿ³ The director of the EDD is deemed an interested party to any appeal.ⁿ⁴

After affording a reasonable opportunity for fair hearing, the administrative law judge must, unless the appeal is withdrawn, affirm, reverse, modify, or set aside the determination.ⁿ⁵ The claimant, any employer becoming a party to the appeal by submitting a protest or information, and the director must be promptly notified in writing of the administrative law judge's decision, together with the reasons for the decision.ⁿ⁶ The decision is final unless, within 20 days after the mailing of the decision, further appeal is made to the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1336.ⁿ⁷

Both the 20-day period for appealing to the administrative law judge and the 20-day period for filing to the Appeals Board may be extended for good cause, including, but not limited to, mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect.ⁿ⁸

1. Because the standards for awarding unemployment benefits are favorable to claimants, opposition to such claims is likely to fail in many cases;

2. Opposing the unemployment claim may create significant animosity, which effectively "persuades" the former employee to file a wrongful discharge action when he or she might not otherwise have done so;

3. Statements (or misstatements) of fact by witnesses under oath in unemployment insurance hearings may be admitted as "prior testimony" in subsequent wrongful discharge litigation,^{n9.1} even though the unemployment insurance determination itself has no collateral estoppel effect;^{n9.2} and

4. Taking an overrated (and perhaps misstated) opposition to a claim that the EDD otherwise routinely grants might create a basis for an employee's argument that the employer breached the duty of good faith and fair dealing.

■ CONSULTANT'S COMMENT:

The filing of an application for unemployment insurance benefits by a potential wrongful discharge plaintiff presents a difficult choice for the potential defendant-employer. On the one hand, the employer may wish to oppose the application (1) to avoid any appearance of weakness; (2) to avoid triggering higher rates of payroll unemployment insurance taxes; and (3) to attempt to learn the possible theory of the employee's potential wrongful discharge case by participating in unemployment insurance hearings and conducting thorough witness examinations.ⁿ⁹ On the other hand, the employer may wish not to oppose the unemployment application for one or more of the following reasons:

1. Because the standards for awarding unemployment benefits are favorable to claimants, opposition to such claims is likely to fail in many cases;

2. Opposing the unemployment claim may create significant animosity, which effectively "persuades" the former employee to file a wrongful discharge action when he or she might not otherwise have done so;

3. Statements (or misstatements) of fact by witnesses under oath in unemployment insurance hearings may be admitted as "prior testimony" in subsequent wrongful discharge litigation,^{n9.1} even though the unemployment insurance determination itself has no collateral estoppel effect;^{n9.2} and

4. Taking an overrated (and perhaps misstated) opposition to a claim that the EDD otherwise routinely grants might create a basis for an employee's argument that the employer breached the duty of good faith and fair dealing.

Given the serious downside risks of opposing unemployment insurance applications, employers should consider their choice with care. Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

[2] To Appeals Board

[a] Generally

The director or any party to a decision by an administrative law judge may appeal the decision to the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board.ⁿ¹⁰ The Appeals Board may order the taking of additional evidence and may affirm, reverse, modify, or set aside the decision of the administrative law judge.ⁿ¹¹ The Appeals Board must promptly notify the director and the parties to any appeal of its order or decision.ⁿ¹²

For a discussion of Appeals Board procedures, see Part E (§§ 80.80-80.88). For discussion of judicial review of Appeals Board decisions, see Part F (§§ 80.100-80.102).

[b] Time Limit on Appeals Board Decisions

The decision of the Appeals Board on an appeal from the decision of an administrative law judge regarding unemployment benefits must be rendered within 60 days after the submission of the appeal unless the Board requires the taking of further evidence.ⁿ¹³ If the Appeals Board requires the taking of further evidence, the hearing must be commenced within 60 days after the submission of the appeal, and the decision of the Board must be mailed within 60 days after completion of the hearing.ⁿ¹⁴

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1328, 1330, 1331, 1332(b); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1328-1(b) (appeal of modified determination).

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1328.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1330 (denial of recomputation may be made in manner prescribed in Unemp. Ins. Code § 1328).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1328.

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1334.

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1334.

(n7)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1334.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1328, 1334.

(n9)Footnote 9.1. See generally Evid. Code §§ 780(h), 1202, 1220, 1222, 1235.

(n10)Footnote 9.2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1960; see also discussion in § 80.88.

(n11)Footnote 9. Note that unemployment insurance decisions and findings of fact are not binding and may not be used as evidence in any separate action between the employer and the employee. see Unemp. Ins. Code § 1960; see also discussion in § 80.88.

(n12)Footnote 9.1. See generally Evid. Code §§ 780(h), 1202, 1220, 1222, 1235.

(n13)Footnote 9.2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1960; see also discussion in § 80.88.

(n14)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1336.

(n15)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1336.

(n16)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1336.

(n17)Footnote 13. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1337.

(n18)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1337.

165 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.41

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.41 Payment of Benefits During Appeal Procedure

[1] Prior to Final Decision on Appeal

Except as discussed below, if an appeal is filed, benefits with respect to the period prior to the final decision on the appeal may be paid only after the decision.ⁿ¹

If benefits for any week are payable in accordance with a determination by the EDD irrespective of any decision on the issues set forth in the appeal, those benefits must be promptly paid regardless of the appeal.ⁿ² If an administrative law judge affirms a determination allowing benefits, the benefits must be promptly paid regardless of any appeal that may thereafter be taken and regardless of any action taken by the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board under *Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1336*ⁿ³ or otherwise by the director, Appeals Board, or other administrative body or by any court.ⁿ⁴ Likewise, if benefits for any week are payable in accordance with a determination by the EDD, or an administrative law judge issues a decision allowing benefits, the benefits must be promptly paid regardless of any appeal, and regardless of any action taken by the Appeals Board pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 412 or 413 (transfer or removal of proceedings by Appeals Board).ⁿ⁵ If a determination or decision allowing benefits is finally reversed, no employer account may be charged with benefits paid because of that determination or decision, except as provided in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1026 (charges and credits on employer's reserve account).ⁿ⁶

The payment of unemployment benefits when they are first administratively allowed is mandated by the federal requirement that states that methods of administering an unemployment compensation program must be reasonably calculated to ensure full payment of benefits "when due."ⁿ⁷

[2] On Appeals Board Decision Allowing Benefits

If the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board issues a decision allowing benefits, the benefits must be paid regardless of any further action taken by the director, the Appeals Board, or any other administrative agency, and regardless of any appeal or mandamus, or other proceeding in the courts.ⁿ⁸ If the decision of the Appeals Board is finally reversed or set aside, no employer's account may be charged with the benefits paid, except as provided in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1026 (allowable charges against employer's reserve account).n9

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1335.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1335(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See discussion under § 80.40[2].

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1335(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1335(c).

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1335(b), (c). For a discussion of allowable charges and credits on employer's reserve account, see § 80.21[4].

(n7)Footnote 7. See 42 U.S.C. § 503(a)(1); California Dep't of Human Resources Development v. Java (1971) 402 U.S. 121, 125, 91 S. Ct. 1347, 28 L. Ed. 2d 666 ; see also Los Angeles Unified School Dist. v. Livingston (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 942, 946, 178 Cal. Rptr. 680 (prompt payment requirement pending appeal may not be enjoined, even though school district that chose method of financing without "noncharging" account provisions will bear charge if final decision determines benefits erroneously paid).

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1338.

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1338. For discussion of allowable charges against employer's reserve account, see § 80.21[4].

166 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.42

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.42 Liability for Overpayment of Benefits

[1] Generally

Any person who is overpaid any amount as unemployment compensation benefits is liable for the amount overpaid unless any of the following applies:

1. The overpayment was not due to fraud, misrepresentation, or willful nondisclosure on the part of the recipient, the overpayment was received without fault on the part of the recipient, and recovery of the overpayment would be against equity and good conscience;n1
2. The recipient of the overpayment cooperates with the EDD in an investigation that results in either of the following;n1.1
 - a. The assessment against an employer of the penalty for inducing, soliciting, or coercing an employee to file a false claim for benefits;n1.2 or
 - b. A prosecution or other action taken to impose the penalty for aiding in, procuring, counselling, advising, or coercing the preparation or presentation of a fraudulent document;n1.3 or
3. The EDD determines that it is in the interest of justice to waive all or part of the liability because the overpayment was a direct result of inducement, solicitation, or coercion by the recipient's employer.n1.4

In determining fault, the EDD considers the nature and cause of the overpayment and the capacity of the recipient to recognize the error resulting in overpayment.n2 A claimant is at fault if the claimant receives or retains benefits that he or she knew or reasonably should have known he or she was not entitled to receive.n3 A claimant is also at fault if he or she negligently reports or fails to report information that results in an overpayment.n4 The claimant is not at fault if the benefits were retained because of a good faith reliance on a departmental error.ⁿ⁵

Even if the claimant is not at fault in receiving the benefits, he or she will be liable for overpayment unless recovery would be contrary to "equity and good conscience."ⁿ⁶ EDD regulations provide detailed guidelines for determining whether recovery of an overpayment would be against equity and good conscience.ⁿ⁷ If the overpayment resulted from a decision by an administrative law judge or the Appeals Board that reversed a previous decision granting benefits, the claimant is not required to repay the overpayment unless the EDD gave notice to the claimant that his or her entitlement to benefits had been appealed and that he or she may be required to repay the benefits in the event of reversal on appeal.ⁿ⁸ If the notice is given, recovery is appropriate unless there has been a change of position by the claimant or the recovery will cause extraordinary hardship.ⁿ⁹

If the claimant has detrimentally changed his or her position in reliance on the benefit payments, the recovery of an overpayment of benefits is deemed to be against good equity and conscience.ⁿ¹⁰ A claimant will be considered to have detrimentally changed his or her position in reliance on the receipt of benefits if the claimant has taken any reasonable action or incurred a necessary financial obligation in the conduct of his or her affairs that the claimant would not have taken or incurred had he or she not received the benefits.ⁿ¹¹

Recovery of an overpayment is also against equity and good conscience, and will be waived, if it would impose "extraordinary hardship" on the claimant or his or her family.ⁿ¹² In making this determination, the EDD considers the claimant's family income and assets.ⁿ¹³ The regulations set forth detailed guidelines for determining whether or not recovery would result in "extraordinary hardship" in a given case.ⁿ¹⁴

No determination of overpayment may be based on the disallowance by the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board of a claim of lien filed under Labor Code Section 4903(g) (lien on workers' compensation award for unemployment or state disability benefits), or on the allowance, or approval of a compromise and release agreement providing for the allowance, of a lien for less than the amount claimed as a lien.ⁿ¹⁵

[2] Effect of Administrative Law Judge's Affirmation of Award or Appeals Board Determination of Eligibility

No person may be liable for the amount of benefits received if the benefits were paid pursuant to an administrative law judge's decision that affirmed the initial determination by the EDD or in accordance with a final decision of the Appeals Board, regardless of any further appeal.ⁿ¹⁶ An employer's experience rating account may not be charged with any benefits erroneously or unlawfully paid, except as provided in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1026 or 1144.ⁿ¹⁷

[3] Assessment for False Statement

If the director finds that an individual has been overpaid unemployment compensation benefits because he or she willfully, for the purpose of obtaining such benefits, either made a false statement or representation, with actual knowledge of the falsity, or withheld a material fact, the director must assess against the individual an amount equal to 30 percent of the overpayment amount, and the assessments must be deposited in the Benefit Audit Fund.ⁿ¹⁸ Any employer that induces, solicits, or coerces an employee to file a false or fraudulent claim for benefits will be assessed a penalty equal to 100 percent of both the amount of the overpayment and the 30 percent assessment against the employee.^{n18.1}

[4] Notice of Overpayment and Assessment Determination

If the EDD determines that an overpayment is probable, it must notify the claimant of the probable overpayment, the claimant's right to request that the EDD waive the overpayment, and the standards for obtaining such a waiver.ⁿ¹⁹ The

EDD is required to assist and advise the claimant in meeting his or her obligation to furnish the EDD with all information necessary for it to determine whether there is an overpayment and whether the claimant is entitled to a waiver, and to establish a repayment schedule.ⁿ²⁰

The director must determine the amount of the overpayment of unemployment compensation benefits and any assessment, and notify the liable person of the basis of the overpayment determination.ⁿ²¹ The notice must include the amount of the overpayment, the cause of the overpayment, the reasons for denial of waiver if waiver is denied, the terms of the repayment schedule established by the EDD, and information regarding the claimant's right to appeal the determination to an administrative law judge.ⁿ²² In the absence of fraud, misrepresentation, or willful nondisclosure, notice of the overpayment determination must be mailed or personally served no later than one year after the close of the benefit year in which the overpayment was made, or six months after the date a backpay award was made, whichever is later.ⁿ²³

[5] Appeal of Overpayment Determination

Within 20 days from the date of mailing or serving of the notice of overpayment, the person affected may file an appeal to an administrative law judge.ⁿ²⁴ The director is an interested party to any such appeal.ⁿ²⁵ The administrative law judge, after affording reasonable opportunity for a fair hearing, must, unless the appeal is withdrawn, affirm, reverse, modify, or set aside the findings set forth in the notice of overpayment.ⁿ²⁶ The party and the director must be notified of the administrative law judge's decision, together with the reasons for the decision.ⁿ²⁷

The decision of an administrative law judge is final unless within 20 days from the date of notification or mailing of the decision a further appeal is initiated to the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1336.ⁿ²⁸ The Appeals Board must review an appeal from an overpayment determination as provided in Unemployment Insurance Code sections 1336 and 1337 and determine what amount, if any, may be recovered.ⁿ²⁹

Both 20-day periods for appeal may be extended for good cause, which includes, but is not limited to, mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect.ⁿ³⁰

For a discussion of appeal procedures, see Part E (§§ 80.80-80.88). For a discussion of judicial review of Appeals Board decisions, see Part F (§§ 80.100-80.102).

[6] Recovery of Overpayments

[a] Civil Action

A civil action against the liable person for recovery of the overpayment amount may be filed by the director within one year after the following dates, or, in cases where the individual has been overpaid benefits due to fraud, misrepresentation, or nondisclosure as described in Unemployment Insurance Code section 1375.1,^{n30.1} within three years of the following dates, whichever is applicable:ⁿ³¹

1. The mailing or personal service of the notice of determination of overpayment, if the person affected does not file an appeal to an administrative law judge;
2. The mailing of the decision of the administrative law judge if the person affected does not initiate a further appeal to the Appeals Board; or
3. The date of the decision of the Appeals Board.

[B] Summary Judgment in Cases of Overpayment Because of Fraud

The director may initiate proceedings for a summary judgment against the liable person if the director has found that the overpayment may not be waived under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1375 because it was due to fraud, misrepresentation, or willful nondisclosure on the part of the recipient.ⁿ³² The clerk of the court must, on the filing of a certificate by the director setting forth specified facts, immediately enter a judgment for the State of California against the liable person for the amount due set forth in the certificate, which includes the assessmentⁿ³³ plus interest from the date that the initial determination of overpayment was made.ⁿ³⁴

Summary judgment proceedings must be commenced within three years after the overpayment becomes final.ⁿ³⁵ For this purpose, an overpayment becomes final and due and payable, after (1) the liable person has not filed an appeal pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 1377, (2) the liable person has filed an appeal to the administrative law judge and the administrative law judge's decision has become final, or (3) the liable person has filed an appeal to the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board and the Appeals Board's decision has become final because the liable person has not sought judicial review within the six-month period provided by Unemployment Insurance Code section 410.ⁿ³⁶

The director may reduce or vacate a summary judgment by filing a certificate to that effect with the clerk of the proper court.^{n36.1}

From the time of recording, a judgment obtained pursuant to the summary judgment procedure constitutes a lien against the real or personal property of the liable person for ten years.ⁿ³⁷

[c] Offset

The director may offset the amount of the overpayment received by the liable person against any amount of unemployment compensation or disability benefits to which the person may become entitled within six years after the date of mailing or personal service of the notice of the overpayment determination.ⁿ³⁸

[d] Execution

A judgment for overpayment obtained pursuant to a civil actionⁿ³⁹ or summary judgmentⁿ⁴⁰ and properly recorded constitutes a lien against all real or personal property of the liable person in that county owned by the liable person at the time of recording or acquired thereafter until the lien expires.ⁿ⁴¹ From the time of recording, the lien has the force, effect, and priority of a judgment lien and continues for ten years, unless sooner released or discharged.ⁿ⁴² The lien may be extended for additional ten-year periods by recording a new abstract before expiration of the previous ten-year period.ⁿ⁴³ Execution will issue on the judgment on the request of the director in the same manner as execution may issue on other judgments.ⁿ⁴⁴

If an abstract of a judgment for overpayment of benefits is recorded as provided in Unemployment Insurance Code section 1379.5, and the lien, including any interest, cost, and penalty, has been satisfied in full, the EDD must do all of the following, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure section 724.050 (governing satisfaction of money judgments generally):^{n44.1}

1. File an acknowledgment of satisfaction of judgment with the court;
2. Serve an acknowledgment of satisfaction of judgment on the claimant personally or by mail; and
3. Record an acknowledgment of satisfaction of judgment in the office of the county recorder where the abstract of judgment is recorded.

If an acknowledgment of satisfaction of judgment is recorded, the cost of recording is an obligation of the claimant and may be collected from the claimant in any manner provided by law for the collection of benefit overpayments.^{n44.2} If the claimant pays the judgment by check, the EDD need not take any of the actions specified above regarding acknowledgment of satisfaction until the check has been paid by the financial institution on which it was drawn.^{n44.3}

[7] No Liability for Overpayment Resulting From Backpay Award

No person may be liable for the amount of benefits received for any period for which the person also received an award or settlement of backpay resulting from an action or grievance for wrongful discharge, if the amount of the backpay award or settlement was reduced by the amount of unemployment compensation benefits received.ⁿ⁴⁵ When the amount of the backpay award or settlement was reduced by the amount of benefits received, the employer must pay to the Unemployment Fund an amount equal to the amount subtracted from the backpay award or settlement for benefits received by the person in order to reimburse the fund.ⁿ⁴⁶ When an individual has been awarded or receives backpay, the amount of the backpay constitutes wages paid in the period for which it was awarded.ⁿ⁴⁷

Any mediator or arbitrator who is a party to a backpay award or settlement must report the award or payment to the EDD.ⁿ⁴⁸

For discussion of wrongful discharge, see Chapters 60-63.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1375(a); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(a).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1375(b).

(n3)Footnote 1.2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1144; see [3], below.

(n4)Footnote 1.3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2121; see § 80.11.

(n5)Footnote 1.4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1375(c).

(n6)Footnote 2. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(c).

(n7)Footnote 3. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(c).

(n8)Footnote 4. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(c).

(n9)Footnote 5. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(c).

(n10)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1375(a); 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(a)(3); see also Gilles v. Department of Human Resources Development (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 313, 322-323, 113 Cal. Rptr. 374, 521 P.2d 110 (standard of "equity and good conscience" involves panoramic vision encompassing all factors persuasive of good conscience; sole ground that claimant was notified of possibility of liability as not justifying recoupment under Unemp. Ins. Code § 1375).

(n11)Footnote 7. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(d).

(n12)Footnote 8. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(d)(1).

(n13)Footnote 9. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(d)(1).

(n14)Footnote 10. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(d)(2).

(n15)Footnote 11. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(d)(2).

(n16)Footnote 12. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(d)(3).

(n17)Footnote 13. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(d)(3).

(n18)Footnote 14. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(d)(3).

(n19)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1375.3.

(n20)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1380.

(n21)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1380; see § 80.21[4] for discussion of charges against employer's account.

(n22)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1375.1.

(n23)Footnote 18.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1144(a); see Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1375, 1375.1.

(n24)Footnote 19. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(e); see discussion in [1], above, regarding circumstances under which EDD will not collect overpayment.

(n25)Footnote 20. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(e).

(n26)Footnote 21. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1376.

(n27)Footnote 22. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1375-1(g). For discussion of appeal, see [5], below.

(n28)Footnote 23. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1376.

(n29)Footnote 24. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1377.

(n30)Footnote 25. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1377.

(n31)Footnote 26. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1377.

(n32)Footnote 27. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1377.

(n33)Footnote 28. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1377.

(n34)Footnote 29. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1378.

(n35)Footnote 30. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1377.

(n36)Footnote 30.1. Discussed under [3], above.

(n37)Footnote 31. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379(a).

(n38)Footnote 32. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379(b).

(n39)Footnote 33. See discussion under [3], above.

(n40)Footnote 34. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379(b).

(n41)Footnote 35. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379(b).

(n42)Footnote 36. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379(b).

(n43)Footnote 36.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379(c).

(n44)Footnote 37. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379.5; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1381 (enforcement of collection of judgment obtained under Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379(a) or (b)).

(n45)Footnote 38. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379(d); see also Gilles v. Department of Human Resources Development (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 313, 327-328, 113 Cal. Rptr. 374, 521 P.2d 110 (offset provisions as not conflicting with federal requirement under 42 U.S.C. § 503(a)(1) of full payments of unemployment compensation benefits when due).

(n46)Footnote 39. See discussion under [a], above.

(n47)Footnote 40. See discussion under [b], above.

(n48)Footnote 41. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379.5.

(n49)Footnote 42. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379.5; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1381 (enforcement of judgment obtained under Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379(a)).

(n50)Footnote 43. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379.5.

(n51)Footnote 44. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379.5.

(n52)Footnote 44.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379.6(a).

(n53)Footnote 44.2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379.6(b).

(n54)Footnote 44.3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1379.6(c).

(n55)Footnote 45. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1382.

(n56)Footnote 46. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1382.

(n57)Footnote 47. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1382.

(n58)Footnote 48. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1382; see also Oliver v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 215, 217, 191 Cal. Rptr. 694 (award of backpay in settlement of unlawful discharge as "wages" for purposes of computing benefits under Unemp. Ins. Code § 1277 for period after discharge but prior to filing of claim); Kauffman v. Sidereal Corp. (9th Cir. [Or.] 1982) 695 F.2d 343, 347 (unemployment benefits received by successful plaintiff in Title VII employment discrimination action may not be offset against backpay award).

167 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part C. CLAIMS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law §§ 80.43 through 80.59

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 80.43[Reserved]

168 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.60

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.60 Generally

[1] Statutes and Regulations Covering Disability Benefits

The disability compensation provisions are contained in Part 2 of Division 1 of the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ¹ State regulations and interpretations applicable to unemployment and disability compensation are contained in Title 22 California Code of Regulations, sections 2601-1 et seq. For a discussion of applicability of unemployment compensation provisions to disability compensation provisions, see § 80.02[2].

[2] Nature and Source of Disability Benefits

[a] State Disability Plan

"Disability benefits," as that term is used in the Unemployment Insurance Code, are money payments payable under the Unemployment Insurance Code sections 2601-3272 to either of the following:

- (a) An eligible unemployed individual with respect to his or her wage losses due to unemployment as a result of illness or other disability, resulting in that individual being unavailable or unable to work.ⁿ²
- (b) An eligible individual with respect to his or her wage losses who is unable to work due to caring for a seriously ill or injured family member or bonding with a minor child within one year of the birth or placement of the child in connection with foster care or adoption.^{n2.1}

Contributions are made by covered employeesⁿ³ into a special fund known as the Unemployment Compensation Disability Fund (Disability Fund)ⁿ⁴ at a rate based on a percentage of the worker's wages.ⁿ⁵ Each employer is required to withhold the required contributions to the disability fund from its employees' wages and transmit them to the EDD along with the employer's contributions to the Unemployment Fund.ⁿ⁶ Unlike unemployment benefits,ⁿ⁷ state disability benefits paid to employees are not charged against the employer's reserve account.ⁿ⁸

Unemployment compensation disability insurance is distinguished from the worker's compensation programⁿ⁹ in that, among other things, under worker's compensation, the injury must be work-related to be compensable,ⁿ¹⁰ whereas under the disability program benefits are payable because of wage loss due to nonwork-related disabilities.ⁿ¹¹ For discussion of the scope of workers' compensation coverage, see Chapter 20.

[b] Nonindustrial Disability Insurance for State Employees

State employees are eligible for nonindustrial disability benefits on the same terms and conditions as specified for disability compensation benefits generally.ⁿ¹² Contributions under this insurance program are paid into the Disability Fund by the State of California, rather than by the worker.ⁿ¹³

[c] Voluntary Plans

An employer or a majority of its employees employed in California may elect to have a voluntary plan for the payment of disability benefits, in lieu of the state disability plan.ⁿ¹⁴ Employers and employees who maintain an approved voluntary plan are exempt from the usual contribution requirements, although the plan is required to make specified payments to the state disability fund.ⁿ¹⁵ Requirements for approval and administration of voluntary plans are set forth under Unemployment Insurance Code sections 3251-3272.

An employee denied benefits under an approved plan may appeal the denial in the same manner as provided for an appeal on a claim for benefits payable out of the Disability Fund.ⁿ¹⁶ For discussion of appeal of denial of disability benefits, see § 80.70.

[3] Purpose

The purpose of the disability compensation provisions is to compensate in part for the wage loss sustained by any individual unable to work due to the employee's own sickness or injury, the sickness or injury of a family member, or the birth, adoption, or foster care placement of a new child, and to reduce to a minimum the suffering caused by unemployment resulting from the sickness or injury or birth, adoption or foster care placement. The disability compensation provisions must be construed liberally in aid of their declared purpose.ⁿ¹⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2601-3272.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 140.5(a).

(n3)Footnote 2.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 140.5(b).

(n4)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2901.

(n5)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 3001.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 984.

(n7)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 986.

(n8)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1026(b).

(n9)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2603.

(n10)Footnote 9. See Lab. Code §§ 3200 et seq.

(n11)Footnote 10. See Lab. Code § 3600(a).

(n12)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 140.5 (definition of "disability benefits").

(n13)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2781-2783.

(n14)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2783(b), (c).

(n15)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 3251.

(n16)Footnote 15. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 3252(a), (b).

(n17)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3264; see also Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 713, 717-719, 235 Cal. Rptr. 636 (employee's action based on failure to properly investigate her disability claim and wrongful denial of disability benefits under voluntary plan as essentially claim for denial of benefits for which exclusive remedy was administrative appeal provided for under Unemp. Ins. Code § 3264).

(n18)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2601.

169 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.61

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.61 Subject Employment

[1] Generally

Pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 2602(a), for purposes of disability compensation, "employment" means service included in "employment" as defined by the unemployment compensation provisions.ⁿ¹ However, special definitions apply to service for public entities,ⁿ² service performed in the employ of corporations, community chests, funds, or foundations in connection with the operation of certain health facilities,ⁿ³ service performed as a clerk carrier in the employ of the United States Postal Service,ⁿ⁴ and domestic services.ⁿ⁵ In addition, for purposes of disability compensation only, "employment" does not include services performed as an intermittent or adjunct instructor at a postsecondary educational institution meeting the requirements of Education Code section 94885 et seq., pursuant to a written agreement containing specified provisions.ⁿ⁶ It also does not include services performed by certain incarcerated individuals and wards in the custody of the Department of Youth Authority.ⁿ⁷

[2] Self-Employment

Self-employed individuals who earn "profits" as distinguished from "wages" are not part of the disability system unless they have elected coverage and make their own contributions pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Section 708.5.ⁿ⁸

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 601-611, 629-656 (definition of "employment" and excluded services under unemployment compensation provisions). For discussion of covered employment under unemployment compensation provisions, see § 80.06.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606(a)(1)-(4).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606(b).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606.4.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2606.5.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 633.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 633.1, 2680.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Simon v. Unemployment Insurance Appeals Bd. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1076, 1079, 238 Cal. Rptr. 589 (self-employed claimant not entitled to benefits when self-employed at time of injury and not making contributions, even though she had previously contributed to fund as employee within disability base period).

170 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.62

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.62 What Constitutes "Disability"

Disability benefits are payable to covered individuals who are "disabled" within the meaning of the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ¹ An individual is deemed disabled on any day during which he or she, because of a physical or mental condition, is unable to perform his or her regular or customary work.ⁿ² The term "disability" or "disabled" includes the following:

1. Illness or injury, whether physical or mental, including any illness or injury resulting from pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical condition;ⁿ³
2. Inability to work because of a written order from a state or local health officer to an individual infected with, or suspected of being infected with, a communicable disease;ⁿ⁴
3. Acute alcoholism being medically treated or, to the extent specified in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2626.1, resident status in an alcoholic recovery home;ⁿ⁵ and
4. Acute drug-induced illness being medically treated or, to the extent specified in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2626.2, resident status in a drug-free residential facility.ⁿ⁶

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2627.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2626(a); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 2626(c) (regular and customary work for individual having completed vocational rehabilitation plan under Lab. Code § 4635 et seq. is only employment for which individual was retrained under plan).

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2626(b)(1); see also Gov. Code § 12945(a) (mandating minimum disability leave available for pregnant employees). For discussion of required pregnancy leave, see Chapter 8.

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2626(b)(2).

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2626(b)(3).

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2626(b)(4).

171 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.63

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.63 Eligibility for Benefits

A disabled individual is eligible to receive disability benefits equal to one-seventh of his or her weekly benefit amountⁿ¹ for each full day during which he or she is unemployed due to a disability only if the director finds that:ⁿ²

1. The individual has made a claim for disability benefits as required by authorized regulations;ⁿ³
2. The individual has been unemployed and disabled for a waiting period of seven consecutive days during each disability benefit period with respect to which waiting period no disability benefits are payable;ⁿ⁴
3. Except as provided in Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 2626.1 (alcoholic recovery home residents), 2626.2 (drug-free residential facility residents), and 2709 (individuals depending entirely on healing by prayer or spiritual means under auspices of duly authorized religious practitioner), the individual has submitted to such reasonable examinations as the director of the EDD may require for the purpose of determining his or her disability; and
4. Except with respect to individuals receiving temporary worker's compensation benefits,ⁿ⁵ the individual has filed a certificate as required by Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 2708 (certificate by physician, dentist, podiatrist, or, with respect to a normal pregnancy or childbirth, nurse-midwife or nurse-practitioner) or 2709 (certificate by authorized religious practitioner).ⁿ⁶

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in § 80.66[1].

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2627.

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 80.67 for discussion of procedures for making disability benefit claims.

(n4)Footnote 4. See § 80.66[2] for discussion of disability benefit period.

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2708.1; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2708.1-1 (for individual entitled to disability benefits reduced by amount of temporary workers' compensation received, evidence of receipt of temporary workers' compensation benefits as sufficient).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2627(d); see also Lab. Code § 3209.3 (definition of "physician").

172 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.64

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.64 Ineligibility for Benefits

[1] Entitlement to Unemployment Compensation Benefits

An individual is not eligible for disability benefits with respect to any period for which the director finds that he or she has received or is entitled to receive unemployment compensation pursuant to the provisions of Unemployment Insurance Code sections 100-2128 or under an unemployment compensation act of any other state or of the federal government.ⁿ¹ For discussion of eligibility requirements for unemployment benefits, see §§ 80.30-80.37.

[2] Entitlement to Other Benefits

With specified exceptions, an individual is not eligible for disability benefits for any day of unemployment and disability for which he or she has received, or is entitled to receive "other benefits" in the form of cash payments.ⁿ² "Other benefits" means temporary disability indemnity under a workers' compensation law, and temporary disability benefits under any state or federal employer's liability law. "Other benefits" also means a maintenance allowance paid pursuant to Labor Code Section 139.5.ⁿ³ Beginning in 1994, "other benefits" includes permanent disability benefits for the same injury under a state or federal workers' compensation law.^{n3.1}

Except for a maintenance allowance paid pursuant to Labor Code Section 139.5, if these "other benefits" are less than the amount an individual would otherwise receive as disability benefits, he or she is entitled to receive, for that day, if otherwise eligible, disability benefits reduced by the amount of the "other benefits."ⁿ⁴ An individual is entitled to receive, for any day, if otherwise eligible, unemployment disability benefits reduced by the amount of a maintenance allowance paid pursuant to Labor Code Section 139.5 and permanent disability indemnity if he or she elects to receive the maximum permanent disability indemnity pursuant to Labor Code Section 139.5(d)(2), and the sum of the maintenance allowance and permanent disability indemnity is less than the amount an individual would otherwise receive as unemployment disability benefits.ⁿ⁵

Note:

Labor Code § 139.5 was repealed effective January 1, 2009.^{n5.1}

Nothing in the foregoing provisions may be construed to authorize the delay of payment of unemployment compensation disability benefits except when the claimant is currently in receipt of other benefits or when the EDD has received notice that the claimant's employer or insurer has agreed to commence the payment of other benefits.ⁿ⁶

[3] Employee Covered by Approved Voluntary Plan

Except as otherwise provided in Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2601 et seq., an employee covered by an approved voluntary planⁿ⁷ at the commencement of a disability benefit period is not entitled to benefits from the Disability Fund.ⁿ⁸ Payment of benefits is the liability of the plan under which the employee was covered at the commencement of the disability benefit period, regardless of any subsequent disabling condition that may occur during that period.ⁿ⁹ The EDD Director must prescribe authorized regulations to allow benefits to individuals simultaneously covered by one or more approved voluntary plans and the Disability Fund.^{n9.1}

[4] Felony-Related Disability

An individual who commits a crime is ineligible for disability benefits if the individual is disabled due to an illness or injury that is caused by or arises from the commission of, arrest for, investigation of, or prosecution of, any crime resulting in a felony conviction.ⁿ¹⁰ A plea or verdict of guilty or a conviction following a plea of nolo contendere or no contest is considered a felony conviction whether or not the court issues an order granting probation or suspending the imposition or execution of any sentence.ⁿ¹¹ This ineligibility for benefits applies only with respect to convictions rendered after 1993, regardless of when the disability commenced or the benefits were paid.ⁿ¹²

[5] Incarcerated Individuals

An individual is not eligible for disability benefits for any day during which he or she is incarcerated in any federal, state, or municipal penal institution, jail, medical facility, public or private hospital, or in any other place because of a criminal violation of a federal, state, or municipal law or ordinance.ⁿ¹³ "Incarceration" includes any time spent in the custody of law enforcement authorities on adjudication or conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction.ⁿ¹⁴ This ineligibility for benefits applies only to periods of incarceration beginning after 1993.ⁿ¹⁵

EDD regulations imposed similar restrictions prior to 1993.ⁿ¹⁶

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2628.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2629(a).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2629(b)(1), (2); see also Edgar v. Workers' Compensation Appeals Bd. (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1, 19-20, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 83 (industrially injured California Highway Patrol officer's one-year leave of absence salary under former Lab. Code § 4800 was in lieu of temporary disability benefits or maintenance allowance payments under Lab. Code § 139.5, but not in lieu of Vocational Rehabilitation Maintenance Allowance payable under Lab. Code § 139.5, and CHP was not entitled to credit against cap on vocational rehabilitation services it was required to provide during period disabled officer received leave of absence benefits while participating in vocational rehabilitation).

Note: Labor Code § 139.5 was repealed effective January 1, 2009. See Lab. Code § 139.5(l); Stats. 2004, ch. 34, §§ 4, 5.

(n4)Footnote 3.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2629(b)(3).

(n5)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2629(c); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2708.1-1.

(n6)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2629(d).

(n7)Footnote 5.1. See Lab. Code § 139.5(l); Stats. 2004, ch. 34, §§ 4, 5.

(n8)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2629.1(a); see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 2629.1(b) (specifying when disability payments must begin). The EDD's right to reimbursement from an employer or its insurer for disability benefits paid is set forth in Unemp. Ins. Code § 2629.1(c)-(f). Liens that may be asserted by the EDD for disability benefits paid against any recovery by the worker from a third party or for any sums to be paid as worker's compensation are governed by Lab. Code § 3865 and Lab. Code §§ 4903(f) and 4904, respectively.

(n9)Footnote 7. See discussion in § 80.60[2][c].

(n10)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3253.

(n11)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3253.

(n12)Footnote 9.1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 3253.

(n13)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2681(a).

(n14)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2681(b).

(n15)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2681(c).

(n16)Footnote 13. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2680(a).

(n17)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2680(a).

(n18)Footnote 15. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2680(b).

(n19)Footnote 16. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2601-1(m) before amendment effective 12/31/93.

173 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.65

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.65 Disqualifications

[1] False Statements

An individual is disqualified from receiving disability benefits if he or she has willfully, for the purpose of obtaining benefits, either made a false statement or representation, with actual knowledge of the falsity, or withheld a material fact in order to obtain any disability benefits.ⁿ¹

An individual who is receiving benefits but is suspected of fraud is entitled to an eligibility review before the EDD decides whether to terminate his or her benefits.^{n1.1}

[2] Dipsomania or Drug Addiction

An individual is disqualified from receiving disability benefits while he or she is confined, pursuant to commitment or court order or certification, in an institution or other place as a dipsomaniac, drug addict, or "sexual psychopath."ⁿ²

[3] Disqualification Under Unemployment Compensation Provisions

An individual will be presumed ineligible to receive disability benefits if he or she is disqualified from receiving unemployment compensation benefits under specified sections of the unemployment compensation provisions,ⁿ³ unless the individual establishes to the satisfaction of the director that he or she is suffering a bona fide illness or injury or claiming a period of family care leave and the director finds that there is good cause for paying disability benefits.ⁿ⁴ However, a person disqualified from receiving unemployment compensation benefits for leaving work because of a trade disputeⁿ⁵ is not disqualified from receiving disability benefits if otherwise eligible.ⁿ⁶

For a discussion of disqualifications from receiving unemployment compensation benefits, see §§ 80.35, 80.36.

[4] Prohibition Against Disqualification on Day of Death

An individual is not disqualified for disability benefits for the day on which he or she or a family member^{n6.1} for whom the individual is providing care dies, if the individual is otherwise eligible.ⁿ⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2675(a).

(n2)Footnote 1.1. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2675-1; see § 80.68[3] for discussion.

(n3)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2678. Note that the special statutory provisions for commitment of sexual psychopaths or "mentally disordered sex offenders" (former Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 6300-6331) have been repealed. see Stats. 1981, ch. 928, § 2.

(n4)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1256 (quitting work without good cause or being fired for work-connected misconduct), 1257 (making false statement or failing to report material fact or refusing without good cause to accept suitable employment), 1260, 1261 (duration of disqualifications), 1263 (conviction for false statements or concealments).

(n5)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2676.

(n6)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1262.

(n7)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2677.

(n8)Footnote 6.1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 3300 et seq. for definition.

(n9)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2679.

174 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.66

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.66 Amount of Benefits

[1] Weekly Benefit Amount

The weekly benefit amount depends on the amount of wages earned in the quarter of the individual's disability base period during which his or her wages are the highest and ranges from a minimum of $50 to a maximum of $336, for periods of disability beginning after 1990.ⁿ¹ An individual must have earned at least $300 in wages for employment during the disability base period to establish a valid claim for disability benefits.ⁿ² Determination of weekly wages when payments are irregular is covered under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2657.

[2] Maximum Benefits During One Disability Period

The maximum amount of benefits payable to an individual during any one disability benefit period is 52 times his or her weekly benefit amount, but in no case more than the total wages paid to the individual during his or her disability base period.ⁿ³

A "disability benefit period" means the continuous period of unemployment and disability beginning with the first day with respect to which the individual files a valid claim for disability benefits.ⁿ⁴ Two consecutive periods of disability due to the same or related cause or condition and separated by a period of not more than 14 days is considered as one disability benefit period.ⁿ⁵ Performance of work other than one's regular and customary work, such as light or part-time work, may not cause an interruption of the period of disability even though it extends beyond 14 days.ⁿ⁶ Once the first disability period is interrupted, even for only a day or an hour, a second disability period may arise if the employee is thereafter disabled by a cause unrelated to the first disability. The "not more than 14 day" requirement under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 2608 has no application to unrelated causes of disability.ⁿ⁷ However, if the claimant suffers an unrelated disability during an initial disability period, a second disability period does not arise, even if the second disability continues beyond the date that the individual would have returned to work from the first disability.ⁿ⁸

[3] Reduction of Benefit Amount by Amount of Wages Received

Disability benefits will be reduced by the receipt of wages during the period of disability.ⁿ⁹ Although benefits from an employer to supplement unemployment compensation benefits may not be construed as wages,ⁿ¹⁰ sick leave benefits paid during a period of disability do constitute wages.ⁿ¹¹ For a full discussion of forms of remuneration that constitute wages for purposes of reducing benefit amount, see § 80.37.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2655; see also Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2610-2612 (definitions of "disability base period").

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2652; see also Simpson v. Unemployment Ins. Comp. Appeals Bd. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 342, 353-354, 231 Cal. Rptr. 690 (wages for employment in public sector cannot be used in determining eligibility for disability insurance benefits).

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2653.

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2608.

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2608; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2608-1.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Disability Dec. No. 385, 388.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Bilyeu v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 657, 663, 664, 181 Cal. Rptr. 837 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See Bilyeu v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 657, 664, 181 Cal. Rptr. 837 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2656.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1265.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Cooper v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 166, 170-171, 173 Cal. Rptr. 255 .

175 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.67

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.67 Claim Procedures

[1] Filing Claim

Claims for disability benefits must be made in accordance with authorized regulations of the EDD.ⁿ¹ A first claim must be filed not later than the 41st consecutive day following the first compensable day of unemployment and disability with respect to which the claim is made, unless the filing period is extended by the EDD for good cause.ⁿ² The claim must be accompanied by a certificate of disability by an authorized health care practitionerⁿ³ on a form furnished by the EDD.ⁿ⁴ The claimant must have been examined by a physician during some portion of the first eight consecutive days of unemployment.ⁿ⁵ However, if medical treatment or examination is delayed due solely to reasons beyond the claimant's control, the claimant may backdate an otherwise valid claim.ⁿ⁶

Claims may be filed by mail, unless a personal appearance or examination is required.ⁿ⁷

Special procedures apply to the filing of a claim for benefits owed to a deceased personⁿ⁸ or a person mentally unable to file a claim.ⁿ⁹

[2] Determination on Claim

Within two working days of receipt of notice of the filing of the claim,ⁿ¹⁰ or, if the claimant's service has been terminated, within five days after termination, whichever is later, the individual's last employer must notify the EDD of any information known to him or her that may bear on the claimant's eligibility.ⁿ¹¹

The EDD must consider the facts submitted by the employer, make a determination as to the claimant's eligibility for benefits, and promptly notify the claimant of the determination and the reasons for it.ⁿ¹² The claimant may appeal from an adverse determination.ⁿ¹³ For discussion of administrative appeal procedures, see § 80.70.

[3] Computation of Benefit Amounts

[a] Generally

Except for certain claims made under an approved self-insured plan,ⁿ¹⁴ on the filing of a claim for disability benefits, the EDD must promptly make a computation on the claim, which must set forth the maximum amount of benefits potentially payable during the disability benefit period and the weekly benefit amount,ⁿ¹⁵ and must promptly notify the claimant of the computation.ⁿ¹⁶

[b] Protest of Computation

Within 20 days after the mailing or personal service of the notice of computation, or an extended period granted for good cause, the claimant may protest the accuracy of the computation.ⁿ¹⁷ The EDD must consider the protest and promptly notify the claimant of the recomputation or denial of recomputation.ⁿ¹⁸ The claimant may appeal from a notice of denial,ⁿ¹⁹ or may protest the accuracy of the recomputation. The director of the EDD is an interested party to any appeal.ⁿ²⁰

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2706; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2706-1. Unemployment Insurance Code section 1342.1 requires that an individual filing a claim be advised that the benefits he or she will receive are subject to federal taxes and that he or she may elect to have tax withheld or may need to make estimated tax payments and may wish to change his or her previous withholding amounts.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2706.1; see also Gruschka v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 789, 791-793, 215 Cal. Rptr. 484 (good cause includes mistake, inadvertance, surprise, or excusable neglect, such as not filing claim for more than three months after injury based on good faith belief that union benefits must be exhausted first); cf. Wang v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 412, 420, 275 Cal. Rptr. 237 (good cause does not include employee's unawareness of right to seek unemployment benefits coupled with unreasonable delay under circumstances).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2708, 2709 (persons authorized to certify disability).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2706.1.

(n5)Footnote 5. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2706-1.

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Disability Dec. No. 434.

(n7)Footnote 7. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2706-4.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2705; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2705.1; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1341; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 1341-1 (payment of benefits due deceased person to person legally entitled to benefits).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2705.1; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2705.1-1.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707 (notice to employer of claim).

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.1.

(n12)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.2.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2702.2.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.3(b).

(n15)Footnote 15. See § 80.66 for discussion of benefit amounts.

(n16)Footnote 16. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.3(a).

(n17)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.4.

(n18)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.4.

(n19)Footnote 19. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.4; see § 80.70 for discussion of administrative appeal procedures.

(n20)Footnote 20. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.4.

176 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.68

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.68 Reconsideration

[1] Generally

The EDD may for good cause reconsider any determination prior to the filing of an appeal from that determination or within 30 days after an appeal to an administrative law judge is filed.ⁿ¹ The claimant must be promptly notified of any reconsidered determination and may appeal from the reconsideration.ⁿ²

[2] Reconsideration of Computation

The EDD may for good cause reconsider a computation or recomputation of benefits due a claimantⁿ³ within one year from the beginning date of the disability benefit period to which the notice of computation or recomputation relates.ⁿ⁴ However, no recomputation may be considered with respect to any issue considered or under consideration in an appeal taken from a denial of recomputation.ⁿ⁵ The EDD must promptly notify the claimant of the recomputation, and the claimant may protest the accuracy of the recomputation.ⁿ⁶

[3] Eligibility Review for Claimant Suspected of Fraud

An individual is disqualified from receiving benefits if he or she has willfully, for the purpose of obtaining benefits, either made a false statement or representation with actual knowledge of its falsity or withheld a material fact.ⁿ⁷ If the EDD has information leading the director to suspect that the claim of an individual receiving disability benefits is fraudulent, the director may terminate the benefits, but not before giving the individual the opportunity to appear at an in-house review of the individual's continuing eligibility for benefits, at which the individual has an opportunity to be heard in person and refute the EDD's information.ⁿ⁸ The EDD must notify the individual by mail at least 10 days before the date of the review.ⁿ⁹ Once the review has taken place, the EDD must issue its determination of the individual's continuing eligibility in writing within 10 working days after the date of the review.ⁿ¹⁰ The individual then may appeal the determination.ⁿ¹¹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.5(a).

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.5(a). For discussion of appeal procedures, see § 80.70.

(n3)Footnote 3. See § 80.67[3] for discussion of computation of disability benefits.

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.5(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.5(b).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.5(b). For discussion of protest of recomputation, see § 80.67[3][b].

(n7)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2675(a); see discussion in § 80.65[1].

(n8)Footnote 8. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2675-1(a), (b).

(n9)Footnote 9. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2675-1(c).

(n10)Footnote 10. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2675-1(j)(1).

(n11)Footnote 11. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2675-1(j)(5); see discussion in § 80.70.

177 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.69

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.69 Overpayments

Any person who is overpaid any amount as disability benefits is liable for the amount overpaid unless (1) the overpayment was not due to fraud, misrepresentation, or willful nondisclosure on the part of the recipient, and (2) the overpayment was received without fault on the part of the recipient, and its recovery would be against equity and good conscience.ⁿ¹ Procedures for determining and recovering overpayments, and for challenging overpayment claims, are set forth in Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 2735.1 et seq.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 2735.

178 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.70

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.70 Administrative Review

[1] Levels of Review

As in the case of unemployment compensation benefits,ⁿ¹ there are two levels of administrative review available to a claimant aggrieved by an order or decision of the EDD relating to disability benefits: review by an administrative law judge,ⁿ² and, thereafter, review by the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board.ⁿ³

[2] Appeal to Administrative Law Judge

Within 20 days after the mailing or personal service of notice of decision from the EDD, or within an extended period granted for good cause, the claimant has a right to appeal to an administrative law judge from the EDD's determination of a claim,ⁿ⁴ denial of computation or recomputation of a claim,ⁿ⁵ reconsideration of or refusal to reconsider a claim,ⁿ⁶ or determination of overpayment.ⁿ⁷ The director is an interested party to the appeal.ⁿ⁸

The procedures for hearing and decision by an administrative law judge with regard to disability benefit claims are governed by Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 1334-1335.ⁿ⁹ For a discussion of procedures for hearing and decision by an administrative law judge with regard to benefit claims, see §§ 80.40[1], 80.83.

Special procedures apply to a determination by an administrative law judge when there is a dispute whether benefits are payable from the Disability Fund or from a voluntary plan.ⁿ¹⁰

[3] Appeal to Appeals Board

The procedures on appealing a decision by an administrative law judge involving a disability compensation benefit claim to the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board are governed by Unemployment Insurance Code Sections 1336-1338.ⁿ¹¹ For general discussion of procedures before the Appeals Board, see Part E, §§ 80.80-80.88.

The decision of an administrative law judge regarding a disability compensation overpayment determination may be appealed from within 20 days of notification or mailing of the decision, or within a period extended for good cause.n12

The Appeals Board may also determine disputes as to whether benefits are payable from the Disability Fund or from a voluntary plan.n13

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See discussion in § 80.40.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2707.2, 2707.4, 2707.5, 2712, 2737.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 401-413, 1336-1338 (procedure before Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board), 2602(a)(procedures regarding unemployment compensation applicable to disability claims, except as otherwise provided), 2712, 2712.5, 2737 (specific provisions regarding certain disability appeals).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.2. For discussion of claim determination procedures, see § 80.67[2].

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.4. For discussion of computation and recomputation procedures, see § 80.67[3].

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2707.5. For discussion of reconsideration procedures, see § 80.68.

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2737; see also discussion in § 80.69.

(n8)Footnote 8. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2707.2, 2707.4, 2707.5, 2737.

(n9)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2602 (unemployment compensation provisions generally applicable to disability compensation provisions, with specified exceptions).

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2712, 2712.5; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 2712-1 (procedures when source of disability benefits disputed).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2602 (unemployment compensation provisions generally applicable to disability compensation provisions, with specified exceptions).

(n12)Footnote 12. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 2737, 2738.

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 2712.

179 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part D. CLAIMS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

4-80 California Employment Law §§ 80.71 through 80.79

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 80.71 [Reserved]

180 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.80

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.80 Organization and Jurisdiction of Appeals Division

The Appeals Division of the EDD includes the California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (hereafter called the "Appeals Board") and its clerical staff and assistants, and the administrative law judges and their supervisors, clerical staff, and assistants.ⁿ¹ The Appeals Board and the administrative law judges have jurisdiction to review department determinations of both unemployment compensation issues and disability compensation issues. For a discussion of the types of determinations subject to administrative appellate review under the unemployment compensation provisions, see Part B (§§ 80.20-80.25) and Part C (§§ 80.30-80.42). For a discussion of the types of determinations subject to administrative appellate review under the disability compensation provisions, see Part D (§§ 80.60-80.70).

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 315.

181 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.81

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.81 Organization and Authority of Appeals Board

[1] Board Membership

The Appeals Board consists of seven members, two of whom are attorneys admitted to practice in California.ⁿ¹ One member is appointed by the Speaker of the Assembly, and one member is appointed by the Senate Rules Committee.ⁿ² The Governor appoints the other five members, subject to approval of the Senate, and designates the chairman of the Appeals Board from its membership.ⁿ³

[2] Rulemaking

The Appeals Board may promulgate, amend, or rescind rules pertaining to hearing appeals and other matters falling within its jurisdiction.ⁿ⁴

[3] Transfer, Removal, and Remand of Proceedings

The Appeals Board may on its own motion transfer proceedings to another administrative law judgeⁿ⁵ and either prior to or after the mailing of an administrative law judge's decision, remove proceedings to itself for review and decision.ⁿ⁶ It may set aside the decision of an administrative law judge and remand the proceedings to another administrative law judge for review and decision.ⁿ⁷ HALLEX is a purely internal manual and as such the guidelines set forth therein have no legal force and are not binding.ⁿ⁸

[4] Delegation by Appeals Board of Powers and Authority

For the purpose of any investigation, hearing, or proceeding under the unemployment compensation and disability compensation provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code,ⁿ⁹ the Appeals Board may delegate its power to any deputy administrative law judge, or other person properly authorized by it in writing.ⁿ¹⁰ The Appeals Board may also delegate to any one of its members or to a special examiner or administrative law judge the taking or hearing of evidence in any case before it.ⁿ¹¹

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 401.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 401.

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 401.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 411; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5000-5011 (general rules), 5100 et seq. (rules governing proceedings before appeals board).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 412(a)(1).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 412(a)(2) (transfer prior to mailing of decision); 413(a)(2) (after mailing of decision).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 413(a)(1).

(n8)Footnote 8. Moore v. Apfel (2000 9th Cir.) 216 F.3d 864, 868-869 .

(n9)Footnote 9. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 100 et seq.

(n10)Footnote 10. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1959.

(n11)Footnote 11. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 407.

182 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.82

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.82 Administrative Law Judges

[1] Appointment by Board

The Appeals Board appoints and directs the activities of one or more impartial administrative law judges.ⁿ¹ The Appeals Board also appoints a chief administrative law judge who must be a member in good standing of the California State Bar.ⁿ²

[2] Duties of Chief Administrative Law Judge

The chief administrative law judge serves as the chief executive of the Appeals Board in the administration of the activities of administrative law judges and their staff.ⁿ³ The chief administrative law judge's duties also include maintaining a continuous review of the decisions of administrative law judges from which no appeal is taken to uncover decisions that appear inconsistent with the law, with established judicial decisions, with prior decisions of the Appeals Board, or with each other, and recommending these cases to the Appeals Board for certification to itself for a further hearing.ⁿ⁴

[3] Duties of Administrative Law Judges

Administrative law judges hear and render decisions in every matter in which a petition is filed with, or an appeal is taken to, an administrative law judge under the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code.ⁿ⁵ No administrative law judge may participate in any case in which he or she is an interested party.ⁿ⁶

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 404.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 405.

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 406(a).

(n4)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 406(b).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 404.

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 404; see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5060(a)(i).

183 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.83

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.83 Appeal and Hearing Procedure

[1] Generally

The manner in which disputed claims, appeals, and petitions are presented, the reports required from the claimant and from any employing unit, and the conduct of hearings and appeals must be in accordance with rules prescribed by the Appeals Board.ⁿ¹

[2] Form, Filing, and Service of Appeal

An appeal to either an administrative law judge or the Appeals Board need not be formal, but must be in writing signed by the appellant or his or her authorized agent.ⁿ² Each appeal must include the appellant's name, exclusive of any representative, the appellant's employer account number, if any, the appellant's mailing address, the name and mailing address of any representative filing the appeal, and the name and social security number of any claimant who is a party.ⁿ³ The EDD provides simple forms that may be used to file an appeal to an administrative law judge or to the Appeals Board.

A document is deemed filed on the date it is sent.ⁿ⁴ The Appeals Board must serve an appeal, or its contents, no later than the time required for service of the notice of hearing the appeal.ⁿ⁵

[3] Consolidation of Cases for Hearing

Cases before an administrative judge with respect to which the alleged facts and the points of law are the same must be consolidated for hearing,ⁿ⁶ provided that no substantial right of any party will be prejudiced.ⁿ⁷ Cases before the Appeals Board involving similar facts and circumstances may also be consolidated.ⁿ⁸

[4] Recording and Transcribing Proceedings

A full and complete record must be kept of all proceedings in connection with disputed claims.ⁿ⁹ All testimony at any hearing on a disputed claim arising under the unemployment compensation and disability compensation provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code must be recorded and, when feasible, should be recorded by a reporter in shorthand or by machine writing.ⁿ¹⁰ The testimony need not be transcribed unless the disputed claim is further appealed.ⁿ¹¹

[5] Administering Oaths, Taking Depositions, Certifying Official Acts, and Issuing Subpoenas

In any proceeding, hearing, investigation, or in the discharge of the duties of the Appeals Board, any of its members, an administrative law judge, and any authorized employee designated by it may administer oaths, take depositions, certify to official acts, and issue subpoenas to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, and other records.ⁿ¹² Witnesses subpoenaed pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1953 are allowed the same fees as those prescribed in Government Code Section 68093 relating to proceedings in the superior courts.ⁿ¹³ Currently, witness fees in superior court actions are $35 per day, and mileage fees for round-trip travel are $0.20 per mile.ⁿ¹⁴

Obedience to subpoenas may be enforced by application to the superior court as set forth under *Government Code Section 11180 et seq.*ⁿ¹⁵

[6] Privilege Against Self-Incrimination

No person may be excused from attending and testifying or from producing books and other records as required by a subpoena issued under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1953 on the ground that the required testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, may tend to incriminate the person or subject him or her to a penalty or forfeiture.ⁿ¹⁶ However, a person may not be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which the person is compelled, after having claimed the privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or produce evidence.ⁿ¹⁷

[7] Rules of Evidence

The Appeals Board and its representatives and administrative law judges are not bound by common law or statutory rules of evidence or by technical or formal rules of procedure, but may conduct the hearings and appeals in a manner appropriate to ascertain the substantial rights of the parties.ⁿ¹⁸ Any relevant evidence is admitted if it is the sort of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in the conduct of serious affairs, even if such evidence might be inadmissible over objection in a civil action.ⁿ¹⁹ Thus, affidavits by persons as to facts within their personal knowledge would qualify as competent evidence provided the opposing party's right to cross-examine is fully protected.ⁿ²⁰

Generally, testimony given at the hearing and subject to cross-examination is entitled to greater weight than hearsay statements, whether or not those statements are in affidavit form.ⁿ²¹ There are at least two exceptions to this practice. First, sworn direct testimony may be disbelieved if it appears unreliable, contradictory, or inherently improbable.ⁿ²² Second, in cases involving the child support intercept program,ⁿ²³ an affidavit by a district attorney concerning an appellant's child support arrearage may be given greater weight than an appellant's sworn testimony unsupported by documentary evidence.ⁿ²⁴

Official or judicial notice may be taken in proceedings before an administrative law judge, or before the Appeals Board.ⁿ²⁵

[8] Participation by Telephone

The Appeals Board must permit a party or representative to participate in a hearing by telephone on the party's or representative's request and showing a good cause.ⁿ²⁶

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1951; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5000-5011 (general rules), § 5100 et seq. (rules governing proceedings before Appeals Board).

(n2)Footnote 2. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5008(c)(vi).

(n3)Footnote 3. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5008(b); see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5008(c) (optional information).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5000(gg) ("filing" defined); see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. 5007 (time limitations).

(n5)Footnote 5. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5008(e); see 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5000(aaa) (board need not serve document on party that filed it).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1951.

(n7)Footnote 7. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5053.

(n8)Footnote 8. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5100.

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1952.

(n10)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1952.

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1952; see also 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5010 (party's right to transcript on appeal to Appeals Board).

(n12)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1953; see 22 Cal. Code Reg. §§ 5058 (witnesses and subpoenas at proceedings before administrative law judge), 5062 (conduct of hearing and evidence before administrative law judge).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1956.

(n14)Footnote 14. See Gov. Code § 68093.

(n15)Footnote 15. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1954.

(n16)Footnote 16. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1955.

(n17)Footnote 17. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1955; see also Escamilla v. Superior Court (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 730, 733-735, 76 Cal. Rptr. 704 (witness charged with grand theft and compelled to testify regarding use of stolen funds at her husband's unemployment compensation hearing after asserting privilege against self-incrimination as thereafter immune from prosecution, even though criminal proceedings were pending and she had appeared voluntarily at hearing).

(n18)Footnote 18. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1952.

(n19)Footnote 19. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5062(c).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Windigo Mills v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 586, 598, 155 Cal. Rptr. 63 .

(n21)Footnote 21. See In re Chwilka (1994) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-478.

(n22)Footnote 22. See In re Chwilka (1994) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-478.

(n23)Footnote 23. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1255.7; Welf. & Inst. Code § 11350.5.

(n24)Footnote 24. In re Chwilka (1994) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-478.

(n25)Footnote 25. See 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5009.

(n26)Footnote 26. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1951.

184 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.84

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.84 Right to Representation by Counsel

Any individual claiming benefits in proceedings before the Appeals Board or its authorized representative may be represented by counsel or an agent.ⁿ¹ However, on penalty of fine, the counsel or agent may not charge or receive for their services more than an amount approved by the Appeals Board.ⁿ² The California Code of Regulations does not specify approved fee amounts. Instead, the regulations state that if an agent charges a fee for representing a claimant and an issue regarding the amount of the fee is raised by the claimant, the agent, or the administrative law judge, the agent shall receive no more for the agent's services than an amount approved by the administrative law judge.ⁿ³ That approved amount, in turn, may be reviewed by the Appeals Board.ⁿ⁴

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1957; but see Staley v. California Unemployment Ins. App. Bd. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 675, 678, 86 Cal. Rptr. 294 (indigent claimant has no constitutional right to be represented by state-appointed counsel).

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1957; see also Unemp. Ins. Code § 1957.5 (forms for individual to authorize counsel or agent to represent him or her before Appeals Board, administrative law judges or authorized representatives).

(n3)Footnote 3. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5011.

(n4)Footnote 4. 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5011.

185 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.85

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.85 Decisionmaking Process of Appeals Board

[1] Cases Assigned or Considered by Board as a Whole

[a] Assigned Cases

The chairperson assigns cases before the Appeals Board to any two members for consideration and decision on a rotating basis. The decision of the two members assigned to the case is the decision of the Appeals Board, unless the two members do not concur. In that case, the chairperson or another board member designated by the chairperson is assigned to the panel and must resolve the impasse.ⁿ¹

[b] Cases Decided by Board as a Whole

The Appeals Board meets as a whole to consider and decide cases that present issues of first impression or that will enable the board to achieve uniformity of decisions by the respective members.ⁿ² In addition, a case may be considered and decided by the Board as a whole at the request of any member of the Board.ⁿ³

[2] Precedent Decisions

The Appeals Board, acting as a whole, may by majority vote designate certain of its decisions as precedents.ⁿ⁴ The director of the EDD and the Appeals Board administrative law judges are controlled by these precedents except as modified by judicial review.ⁿ⁵

If a final judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction reverses or declares invalid a precedent decision, the Appeals Board, acting as a whole, must modify the precedent decision to conform in all respects to the judgment of the court.ⁿ⁶ The modified precedent decision then supersedes the prior precedent decision for all purposes.ⁿ⁷

The Appeals Board may make a reasonable charge to defray the costs of publication and distribution of its precedent decisions and index of precedent decisions.ⁿ⁸ The Appeals Board must promptly notify the director, the administrative law judges, and all other subscribers to the precedent decisions if a precedent decision is modified to conform to a judgment of a court.ⁿ⁹

If the Appeals Board issues decisions other than precedent decisions, anything incorporated in those decisions must be physically attached and made a part of the decisions.ⁿ¹⁰

Any interested person or organization may bring an action for declaratory relief in the superior court to obtain a judicial declaration as to the validity of any precedent decision of the Appeals Board.ⁿ¹¹ For a discussion of actions to obtain a judicial declaration as to the validity of a precedent decision, see § 80.101.

[3] Form and Content of Decisions

All decisions and orders of the Appeals Board must be in writing.ⁿ¹² The decisions must contain a statement of the facts on which the decision is based, along with a statement of the decision itself and the reasons for it.ⁿ¹³ If the Appeals Board issues decisions other than those designated as precedent decisions, anything incorporated in those decisions must be physically attached to and be made a part of the decisions.ⁿ¹⁴

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.

(n4)Footnote 4. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 409; 22 Cal. Code Reg. § 5109(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409; cf. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1960 (nonbinding effect of Appeals Board decisions in separate or subsequent actions or proceedings before arbitrator, court, or judge); see discussion under § 80.88.

(n6)Footnote 6. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.1.

(n7)Footnote 7. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.1.

(n8)Footnote 8. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.

(n9)Footnote 9. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.1.

(n10)Footnote 10. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.

(n11)Footnote 11. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.2.

(n12)Footnote 12. Unemp. Ins. Code § 408.

(n13)Footnote 13. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.

(n14)Footnote 14. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.

186 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.86

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.86 Finality of Board of Appeals Decision Absent Judicial Review

A decision of the Appeals Board is final, except for action that may be taken by a judicial tribunal as permitted or required by law.ⁿ¹ If a request for review may be taken, the Appeals Board must attach to its decision an explanation of the party's right to seek review.ⁿ² For a discussion of judicial review of Appeals Board decisions, see Part F.

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 410.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 410.

187 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.87

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.87 Costs, Penalties for Bad Faith or Unreasonable Appeals, and Interest

No costs may be awarded in hearings on appeal by the Appeals Board.ⁿ¹ However, if in the opinion of the Appeals Board the claimant or an employer has acted in bad faith and without reasonable basis for appeal, a penalty not exceeding 10 percent of the amount finally awarded on the appeal may be taxed against and deducted from the award by the Appeals Board, and may be placed in the Unemployment Fund.ⁿ² If the penalty is assessed against an employer, his or her reserve account will be debited with the amount of the assessed penalty.ⁿ³ For a discussion of charges against an employer's reserve account, see § 80.21[4][c].

The Appeals Board has held that a claimant is not entitled to recover interest on unemployment insurance benefits previously denied by the EDD but ordered by an administrative law judge.ⁿ⁴ Interest may only be awarded by a superior court in a judicial action reviewing the administrative denial of benefits.ⁿ⁵

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1958.

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1958.

(n3)Footnote 3. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1958.

(n4)Footnote 4. In re Kalem (1993) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-476; see also Aguilar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 245-246, 272 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; Civ. Code § 3287(a).

(n5)Footnote 5. In re Kalem (1993) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-476; see also Aguilar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 245-246, 272 Cal. Rptr. 696 ; Civ. Code § 3287(a). For discussion of interest available in judicial actions, see § 80.102[3][a][vi].

188 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.88

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.88 Nonbinding Effect of Findings, Judgments, or Final Orders in Judicial or Arbitration Proceedings Between Employee and Employer

Any finding of fact or law, judgment, conclusion, or final order made by a hearing officer, administrative law judge, or any person with the authority to make findings of fact or law in any action or proceeding before the Appeals Board is not conclusive or binding in any separate or subsequent action or proceeding, and may not be used as evidence in any separate or subsequent action or proceeding between an individual and his or her present or prior employer brought before an arbitrator, court, or judge of California or the United States, regardless of whether the prior action was between the same or related parties or involved the same facts.ⁿ¹ Thus, for example, an Appeals Board decision finding that an employee was discharged for misconduct does not collaterally estop the employee from relitigating the reasons for discharge in a civil action for wrongful termination.ⁿ²

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 1960.

(n2)Footnote 2. Pichon v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 488, 503, 260 Cal. Rptr. 677 . For discussion of wrongful termination, see chs. 60-63.

189 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part E. APPEALS DIVISION OF EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT

4-80 California Employment Law §§ 80.89 through 80.99

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 80.89[Reserved]

190 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part F. JUDICIAL REVIEW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.100

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.100 Appeal From Appeals Board Decision Generally

[1] Time Limits

[a] Generally

With specified exceptions, discussed below, a party's right to seek judicial review from an Appeals Board decision must be exercised not later than six months after the date of the Board's decision or the date on which the decision is designated as a precedent decision, whichever is later.ⁿ¹

[b] Exceptions to Six-Month Time Limit

Actions challenging a denial of a claim for refund or credit by the Appeals Board, or challenging a decision of the Appeals Board involving a protest under Unemployment Insurance Code section 1034 (protest of charges to reserve account) or an application for transfer of reserve account under Unemployment Insurance Code sections 1051-1055, must be filed within 90 days of the service of the notice of decision unless an extension, not exceeding two years, is granted by the director of the EDD on written request.ⁿ² For a discussion of judicial review procedures on denial of a claim for refund or credit, see § 80.25[2].

Special filing and other procedures apply to a suit to challenge a decision of the Appeals Board denying an exemption as a church or religious organization.ⁿ³

[c] Equitable Tolling

When a petition for administrative mandate to review benefit determinations by the Appeals Board^{n3.1} shows on its face that it is barred by the applicable statute of limitations, the petitioner may plead facts showing an excuse, tolling, or some other basis for avoiding the statutory bar to avoid the six-month time limit.^{n3.2} Three factors determine whether a statute of limitations is equitably tolled in a particular case:^{n3.3}

- (1) Timely notice to defendants.
- (2) Lack of prejudice to defendants in gathering evidence to defend against the claim.
- (3) Good faith and reasonable conduct by plaintiffs.

Thus, for example, in Tarkington v. Cal. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Board, n3.4 union member-employees, after the Board denied claims for unemployment benefits during the lockout period, filed a joint petition against two grocers that had locked them out in a labor dispute. The trial court found that the employers were improperly joined, and the employees proceeded against one employer in the original case and filed a second petition against the other employer. That employer claimed the petition was untimely filed under Unemployment Insurance Code § 410. The court found the timely notice requirement was met, because the first petition was filed within the statutory period and alerted the employer in the second claim of the need to begin investigating the facts forming the basis for the second claim. The lack of prejudice prerequisite was met, because the allegations regarding the second employer's conduct in the joint petition mirrored the allegations in the second petition, and both petitions sought the same relief, i.e., a reversal of the Board's decision denying unemployment benefits to locked-out employees. The good faith and reasonable conduct requirement was met, because, although the employees filed the second petition more than two years after filing the joint petition, almost all of the elapsed time was attributable to the time used by the trial court to issue its rulings, and when the employees finally learned of the court's decision on the issue of joinder, they filed the second petition less than two weeks later. The delay was not unreasonable or in bad faith, especially in light of the protracted nature of the underlying litigation. Thus, the doctrine of equitable tolling applied and tolled the six-month statute of limitations.

[2] Right of Director to Seek Judicial Review

The director of the EDD has the right to seek judicial review from a decision of the Appeals Board whether or not he or she appeared or participated in the appeal to the administrative law judge or to the Appeals Board.n4

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 410. For discussion of precedent decisions, see § 80.85[2].

(n2)Footnote 2. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1241(a) (actions challenging denial of claim for refund or credit), 1243 (actions challenging Appeals Board decision involving protests or applications for transfer of reserve account).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 1241(b), (c).

(n4)Footnote 3.1. See § 80.102, below.

(n5)Footnote 3.2. Tarkington v. Cal. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Board (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1502-1503, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131 .

(n6)Footnote 3.3. Tarkington v. Cal. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Board (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1503, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131 .

(n7)Footnote 3.4. Tarkington v. Cal. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Board (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1503-1508, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131 .

(n8)Footnote 4. Unemp. Ins. Code § 410.

191 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part F. JUDICIAL REVIEW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.101

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.101 Judicial Review of Precedent Decision of Appeals Board

Any interested person or organization may bring an action for declaratory relief in the superior court to obtain a judicial declaration as to the validity of any precedent decision of the Appeals Board.ⁿ¹ Such proceedings are governed by the general provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to declaratory relief.ⁿ²

Statutory construction is a matter of law for the courts, and administrative interpretations must be rejected when contrary to statutory intent. However, because of the agency's expertise, its view of a statute or regulation that it enforces is entitled to great weight, unless such view is clearly unauthorized or erroneous.ⁿ³

An interested person or organization suing for declaratory relief under Unemployment Insurance Code section 409.2 need not be one of the original parties under the precedent decision. However, a judicial declaration of invalidity of a precedent decision obtained by a third person does not alter the rights of the original parties as determined by the Appeals Board. If the original party brings the declaratory action, the court may review the administrative record and "reverse" the Board's decision, altering the outcome between those parties.ⁿ⁴

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.2. For discussion of precedent decisions of Appeals Board, see § 80.85[2].

(n2)Footnote 2. Unemp. Ins. Code § 409.2; see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1060-1062.5 (provisions governing declaratory relief); see generally California Forms of Pleading and Practice, "Declaratory Relief."

(n3)Footnote 3. Pacific Legal Foundation v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 101, 111, 172 Cal.Rptr. 194, 624 P.2d 244 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Pacific Legal Foundation v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 101, 110-111, 172 Cal. Rptr. 194, 624 P.2d 244 .

192 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part F. JUDICIAL REVIEW

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.102

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.102 Review of Benefit Determinations by Administrative Mandate Proceedings

[1] Generally

Decisions of the Appeals Board relating to the unemployment or disability compensation benefits may be reviewed by the superior court in an administrative mandate proceeding.ⁿ¹

For a full discussion of procedures for review of administrative proceedings by administrative mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, "Public Administrative Law," Part IV.

[2] Scope of Review

[a] Generally

The inquiry in an administrative mandate proceeding extends to whether the agency proceeded without or in excess of its jurisdiction, whether there was a fair trial, and whether there was any prejudicial abuse of discretion.ⁿ² Abuse of discretion is established if the agency has not proceeded in the manner required by law, the order or decision is not supported by the findings, or the findings are not supported by the evidence.ⁿ³

[b] By Superior Court: Independent Judgment Test

The right of eligible individuals to receive unemployment benefits has been held to be in the nature of a "property right."ⁿ⁴ Likewise, the employer's right to free from erroneous charges against its reserve account has been held to be a fundamental vested right.ⁿ⁵ Therefore, in a mandate proceeding, the superior court must exercise its independent judgment on the evidence in the administrative record when reviewing a decision of the Appeals Board regarding entitlement to benefits.ⁿ⁶ In such cases, abuse of discretion based on lack of evidentiary support for the Board's findings will be established if the court determines that the findings are not supported by the weight of the evidence.ⁿ⁷ The "substantial evidence" test does not apply to review of the Board's determination by the superior court.ⁿ⁸

[c] By Appellate Court: Substantial Evidence Test

When an appellate court reviews the trial court's judgment in an administrative mandate proceeding, the substantial evidence test applies.ⁿ⁹ Under this standard, the scope of appellate review is limited to a determination of whether the trial court's decision is supported by substantial, credible, and competent evidence.ⁿ¹⁰ Trial court findings that are contrary to those of the Appeals Board will not be overturned for evidentiary insufficiency if they are substantially supported.ⁿ¹¹

A different standard of review applies to the trial court's conclusions if the facts are undisputed and the court must determine an issue of law.ⁿ¹² In that case, if the facts clearly require a conclusion different from that reached by the trial court, the latter's conclusions may be disregarded by the appellate court.ⁿ¹³

The substantial evidence test also does not apply if the trial court admitted relevant evidence that could not, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, have been produced or that was improperly excluded at the administrative hearing.ⁿ¹⁴ In that case, the appellate court may consider the new evidence under an independent judgment standard, in the nature of a limited trial de novo.ⁿ¹⁵

[3] FORM--Petition by Worker for Writ of Mandate to Review Decision Denying Unemployment or Disability Compensation Benefits[a] Comment*[i] Use of Form

The form of petition for writ of mandate set forth in [b], below, is for use by an unemployed or disabled worker to seek judicial review of a decision of the Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board denying, or affirming a decision denying, a claim for unemployment or disability compensation benefits.ⁿ¹⁶

For a discussion of review by administrative mandate of benefit eligibility claims, see [1] and [2], above. For a form for use by an employer in reviewing a decision to grant unemployment benefits, see [4], below. For a discussion and general forms of petition for administrative mandate, alternative writ of mandate, and related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

[ii] Time for Filing

The right to seek judicial review from an Appeals Board decision must be exercised not later than six months after the date of the Appeals Board's decision or the date on which the decision is designated as a precedent decision, whichever is later.ⁿ¹⁷

[iii] Administrative Record

All or part of the administrative record of the proceedings may be filed with the petition or with respondent's points and authorities or pursuant to court order.ⁿ¹⁸ The cost of preparing the record is borne by the petitioner, unless a statute prescribes otherwise, or the petitioner is proceeding in forma pauperis, in which case the respondent bears the cost of preparing the transcript if the transcript is necessary to a proper review.ⁿ¹⁹

[Iv] Allegations and Verification

The form of petition set forth in [b], below alleges (1) petitioner's name and residence (Paragraph 1); (2) respondents' names and capacities (Paragraphs 2, 3); (3) the name and capacity of the real party in interest as an employing unit (Paragraph 4);ⁿ²⁰ (4) the facts establishing petitioner's eligibility for unemployment or disability compensation benefits

(Paragraphs 5, 6);n21 (5) petitioner's filing of a claim for benefits (Paragraph 7);n22 (6) the administrative determinations that the claimant was ineligible for benefits (Paragraphs 8, 9, 11);n23 (7) the grounds justifying issuance of a writ of mandate (Paragraphs 10, 12);n24 (8) the exhaustion of administrative remedies (Paragraph 13);n25 (9) the absence of a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Paragraph 14);n26 and (10) if appropriate, petitioner's entitlement to attorney's fees under Government Code Section 800 (Paragraph 15).n27

The petition must be verified by the party beneficially interested in issuance of the writ (that is, the claimant).n28

[v] Attorney's Fees

In any civil action to review the award, finding, or other determination of any administrative proceeding (except proceedings resulting from actions of the State Board of Control), the prevailing complainant may recover reasonable attorney's fees if he or she establishes that the award, finding, or other determination was the result of arbitrary or capricious action or conduct by a public entity or an officer thereof acting in his or her official capacity.n29 The amount of the fees that may be recovered from the public entity may not exceed $7,500, computed at $100 per hour, and the complainant may not recover such fees unless he or she is personally obligated to pay them.n30

[vi] Prejudgment Interest on Wrongfully Denied Unemployment Benefits

Prejudgment interest is recoverable on unemployment insurance benefits payable under a wrongfully denied claim.n30.1 This interest is properly awarded by a superior court in an action to review the administrative denial of benefits.n30.2

A court of appeal has held that there are no statutes that prevent the payment of interest on unemployment benefits and that entitlement to interest therefore depends on the applicability of Civil Code Section 3287(a). Under that statute, a claimant must satisfy three conditions for the recovery of interest in a mandamus action against the state: (1) there must be an underlying monetary obligation; (2) the recovery must be certain or capable of being made certain by calculation; and (3) the right to recovery must vest on a particular day.n30.3 These criteria are satisfied with respect to unemployment insurance benefits because: (1) unemployment benefits are a monetary obligation that can be enforced by a claimant in a mandamus proceeding; (2) the amount to which a particular claimant is entitled can be calculated with certainty by reference to fixed schedules; and (3) the right to payment of benefits vests when the claimant has established the facts that entitle the claimant to the benefits.n30.4

[b] Form SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____, [name],) Petitioner,) vs.)
UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE APPEALS) BOARD, CALIFORNIA EMPLOYMENT DEVEL-) OPMENT DEPARTMENT, and)
_____, [name], as Director of Em-) ployment Development,) Respondents; _____ [name],)
Real Party in Interest.

NO. _____
PETITION FOR WRIT OF MANDATE
[Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5; Unemp. Ins. Code § 410]

Petitioner alleges:

1. Petitioner, _____, is, and at all times relevant herein has been, a resident of the County of _____ in California.

2. Respondent EMPLOYMENT DEVELOPMENT DEPARTMENT (hereinafter called "the Department") is a department in the Health and Welfare Agency of the State of California charged with the responsibility of administering the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Code relating to unemployment and disability compensation benefits. Respondent _____ [name] is the Director of Employment Development, who is the chief executive officer of the Department.

3. Respondent UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE APPEALS BOARD (hereinafter called "the Appeals Board") and its employees constitute the Appeals Division of the Department. Under Unemployment Insurance Code Section 1336, the Appeals Board has discretion to review a decision of the Department concerning whether a claimant is entitled to _____ [unemployment or disability] compensation benefits under the provisions of that Code and is required to hold a hearing and take evidence in its proceedings to make that determination.

4. Real Party in Interest, _____ [name] (hereinafter called "the employer") is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [specify capacity, e.g., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of California, with its principal place of business located in _____ County, California, and engaged in the business of _____ (specify)].

5. From _____ [date] to _____ [date], petitioner _____ [was or has been] employed by the employer at its place of business at _____ [street address and city], California as a _____ [full or part] time _____ [specify title or position], and while so employed was paid wages sufficient to qualify him/her for _____ [unemployment or disability] compensation benefits.

[EITHER]

6. [Allege facts establishing eligibility for unemployment compensation benefits, e.g., On _____ [date], petitioner resigned from his/her employment with the employer. Petitioner was forced to resign from his/her employment because _____ set forth facts showing "good cause" for leaving previous employment, within meaning of Unemp. Ins. Code § 1256, as discussed in § 80.35). After that date, (until _____ (date), petitioner has performed no services for the employer or for any other person or entity and has received no wages within the meaning of the Unemployment Insurance Code, but has remained able to work and available for work and has conducted a search for suitable work in accordance with instructions of an office of the Department].

[OR]

6. [Allege facts establishing eligibility for disability compensation benefits, e.g., On _____ [date], petitioner _____ (set forth facts showing that petitioner is disabled within meaning of Unemp. Ins. Code § 2626, e.g., sustained a broken arm and other serious injuries in an automobile accident in the City of _____, County of _____, California), as a result of which petitioner was rendered unable to perform his/her regular and customary work as _____ (specify work duties) and has been unemployed and received no wages or other compensation from that date until _____ (specify date or the present time)].

[CONTINUE]

7. On _____ [date], petitioner duly filed a claim for _____ [unemployment or disability] compensation benefits [accompanied by the required physician's certification of disability as required by the Department] at a public employment office of the Department located at _____ [address] [where he/she registered for employment]. Petitioner has complied with all other requirements for claiming such benefits.

[EITHER]

8. The claim was denied by an examiner of the Department on _____ [date], on the ground petitioner was disqualified from receiving _____ [unemployment or disability] compensation benefits for the reason(s) that _____ [specify], and on _____ [date], petitioner received a written notice of this determination. A copy of the determination is attached to and made a part of this Petition as Exhibit _____.

[OR]

8. The claim was granted by the Department on _____ [date], and petitioner and the employer were notified of this determination on _____ [date].

[CONTINUE]

9. On _____ [date], _____ [petitioner or the employer] filed an appeal with an administrative law judge who, by a written decision dated _____, _____ [affirmed or reversed] the examiner's determination. A copy of the decision is attached to and made a part of this Petition as Exhibit _____.

[10. If administrative law judge's decision resulted in a denial of benefits, allege: In _____ (affirming or reversing) the examiner's determination and ruling, the administrative law judge _____ (specify, e.g., abused his/her discretion and/or acted in excess of his/her jurisdiction) in concluding that petitioner was not entitled to benefits because _____ (specify). This conclusion is contrary to the weight of the evidence in that _____ (specify).]

11. On _____ [date], _____ [petitioner or the employer] filed an appeal with the respondent Appeals Board. A hearing on the appeal was held on _____ [date]. [A copy of the record of the hearing on appeal is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and incorporated by reference.] Thereafter, on _____ [date], the Appeals Board _____ [affirmed the administrative law judge's decision denying petitioner benefits or reversed the administrative law judge's decision awarding petitioner benefits] and notified petitioner accordingly. A copy of the Appeals Board's written decision is attached to and made a part of this petition as Exhibit _____.

12. In _____ [affirming or reversing] the decision of the administrative law judge, the Appeals Board _____ [specify, e.g., abused its discretion and acted in excess of its jurisdiction in that _____ (specify basis for overturning decision, e.g., the Appeals Board found that _____ (specify). Such finding is contrary to the weight of the evidence in that _____ (specify)].

13. Petitioner has exhausted his/her administrative remedies in that, under the provisions of Unemployment Insurance Code section 410, the decision of the Appeals Board is final, except for action that may be taken by a judicial tribunal as permitted or required by law.

14. Petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law to compel the Appeals Board to reverse its decision and to grant petitioner's claim for _____ [unemployment or disability] compensation benefits and no remedy at all unless this petition is granted.

[15. If attorney's fees under Gov. Code § 800 sought, allege: The decision of respondent(s) was arbitrary and capricious in that _____ (specify). As an incident of bringing and maintaining this proceeding, petitioner has become and is obligated personally to pay to his/her counsel _____ (name) attorney's fees _____ (exceeding $7,500 or in the sum of $ _____).]

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays as follows:

1. That this court issue an alternative writ of mandate ordering respondent Appeals Board

(a) To set aside its decision _____ [specify, e.g., affirming the decision of the administrative law judge's affirmation of the determination of the Director of Employment Development that the petitioner _____ (specify substance of affirmed determination)], and that petitioner is ineligible for _____ [unemployment or disability] compensation benefits, and ordering respondent Appeals Board to grant these benefits, or

(b) In the alternative, to show cause before this court at a time and place to be fixed by the court why it has not done so [and directing respondent to file with this court the record of all proceedings in this matter before the respondent and the administrative law judge];

2. That, after hearing on the order to show cause, this court issue a peremptory writ of mandate to the same effect as the alternative writ except for the order to show cause;

3. For costs of suit incurred in this proceeding;

[4. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to Government Code section 800;] and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

Dated: _____ [signature]
 _____ Attorney for Petitioner

VERIFICATION

I, _____ [name], am the petitioner in the above-entitled proceeding. I have read the foregoing petition and know the contents thereof. The same is true of my own knowledge, except as to those matters that are therein alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters, I believe it to be true.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

_____ [date and place]

[signature]

[4] FORM--Petition by Employer for Writ of Mandate to Review Decision Granting Unemployment Compensation Benefits

[a] Comment

[i] Use of Form

The form of petition for writ of mandate set forth in [b], below, is for use by an employer to seek review of a decision of the Appeals Board affirming an award of unemployment benefits, or reversing a decision to deny such benefits.ⁿ³¹

The director of the EDD also has the right to seek judicial review from a decision of the Appeals Board whether or not he or she appeared or participated in the appeal to the administrative law judge or to the Appeals Board.ⁿ³²

For discussion of time limits for filing the petition,ⁿ³³ preparation and filing of the administrative record,ⁿ³⁴ and recovery of attorney's fees,ⁿ³⁵ see the comments in [3][a][ii], [iii], [v], above.

For a discussion of review by administrative mandate of benefit eligibility claims, see [1] and [2], above. For a discussion and general forms of petition for administrative mandate, alternative writ of mandate, and related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, "Public Administrative Law," Part IV.

[ii] Allegations and Verification

The form of petition set forth in [b], below alleges (1) petitioner's name and residence (Paragraph 1); (2) respondents' names and capacities (Paragraphs 2, 3); (3) the name and capacity of the former employee as real party in interest (Paragraph 4); (4) the facts relating to termination of the former employee's employment (Paragraphs 5, 6);ⁿ³⁶ (5) the employee's filing of a claim for benefits and petitioner's filing of a statement of reasons why the employee is ineligible for benefits (Paragraph 7);ⁿ³⁷ (6) the administrative determinations that the claimant was eligible for benefits (Paragraphs 8, 9, 11);ⁿ³⁸ (7) the grounds justifying issuance of a writ of mandate (Paragraphs 10, 12);ⁿ³⁹ (8) the exhaustion of administrative remedies (Paragraph 13);ⁿ⁴⁰ (9) petitioner's beneficial interest in issuance of the writ and the absence of a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Paragraph 14);ⁿ⁴¹ and (10) if appropriate, petitioner's entitlement to attorney's fees under Government Code section 800 (Paragraph 15).ⁿ⁴²

The petition must be verified by the party beneficially interested in issuance of the writ (that is, the employer).ⁿ⁴³

[b] Form [Caption. see form in [3][b], above.]

Petitioner alleges:

1. Petitioner, _____ [name] is, and at all times herein mentioned was, _____ [specify capacity, e.g., a corporation organized and existing under the laws of California, with its principal place of business located in _____ County, California, and engaged in the business of _____ (specify)].

2. [Capacity of Employment Development Department and Director of Employment Development as respondents. see form in [3][b], above, Paragraph 2.]

3. [Capacity of Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board, as respondent. see form in [3][b], above, Paragraph 3.]

4. Real Party in Interest, _____ [name] (hereinafter called "the claimant"), is, and at all times relevant herein has been, a resident of the County of _____ in California.

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.102

5. From _____ [date] to _____ [date], claimant was employed by petitioner at its place of business at _____ [street address and city], California as a _____ [full or part] time _____ [specify title or position].

6. On _____ [date], _____ [allege facts concerning termination of employment, establishing claimant's ineligibility for unemployment benefits, e.g., petitioner terminated claimant for misconduct connected with his or her employment, consisting of the following: _____ (specify)].

7. On or about _____ [date], claimant filed a claim for unemployment compensation benefits at a public employment office of the Department located at _____ [address]. On _____ [date], respondent Department notified petitioner of claimant's claim for unemployment benefits. A copy of the notice is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and incorporated herein by reference. On _____ [date], petitioner submitted to respondent Department a statement of facts showing claimant's ineligibility for unemployment benefits, pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 1327. A copy of petitioner's statement is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and incorporated herein by reference.

[EITHER]

8. The claim was denied by an examiner of the Department on _____ [date], on the ground that claimant was disqualified from receiving unemployment compensation benefits for the reason(s) that _____ [specify], and on _____ [date], petitioner received a written notice of this determination. A copy of the determination is attached to and made a part of this Petition as Exhibit _____.

[OR]

8. The claim was granted by the Department on _____ [date], and petitioner and claimant were notified of this determination on _____ [date]. A copy of the determination is attached to and made a part of this Petition as Exhibit _____.

[CONTINUE]

9. On _____ [date], _____ [petitioner or the claimant] filed an appeal with an administrative law judge who, by a written decision dated _____, _____ [affirmed or reversed] the examiner's determination. A copy of the decision is attached to and made a part of this Petition as Exhibit _____.

[10. If administrative law judge's decision resulted in a granting of benefits, allege: In _____ (affirming or reversing) the examiner's determination and ruling, the administrative law judge _____ (specify, e.g., abused his/her discretion and/or acted in excess of his/her jurisdiction) in concluding that claimant was entitled to benefits because _____ (specify). This conclusion is contrary to the weight of the evidence in that _____ (specify).]

11. On _____ [date], _____ [petitioner or the claimant] filed an appeal with the respondent Appeals Board. A hearing on the appeal was held on _____ [date]. [A copy of the record of the hearing on appeal is attached hereto as Exhibit _____ and incorporated by reference.] Thereafter, on _____ [date], the Appeals Board _____ [affirmed the administrative law judge's decision awarding the claimant benefits or reversed the administrative law judge's decision denying the claimant benefits] and notified petitioner accordingly. A copy of the Appeals Board's written decision is attached to and made a part of this petition as Exhibit _____.

12. In _____ [affirming or reversing] the decision of the administrative law judge, the Appeals Board _____ [specify, e.g., abused its discretion and acted in excess of its jurisdiction in that _____ (specify basis for overturning decision, e.g., the Appeals Board found that _____ (specify)). Such finding is contrary to the weight of the evidence in that _____ (specify)].

13. Petitioner has exhausted his/her administrative remedies in that, under the provisions of Unemployment Insurance Code section 410, the decision of the Appeals Board is final, except for action that may be taken by a judicial tribunal as permitted or required by law.

14. Petitioner is beneficially interested in the issuance of the writ sought herein in that the decision of the respondent Appeals Board to grant unemployment compensation benefits to the claimant is unlawful and, pursuant to Unemployment Insurance Code section 1026(b), will result in a wrongful debit to petitioner's reserve account in the State Unemployment Fund in the amount of the benefits to be paid to the claimant. Petitioner has no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law to compel the Appeals Board to reverse its decision and to deny the claimant's claim or to compel respondents Department and _____ [name] to refrain from debiting petitioner's reserve account for the benefits awarded to the claimant, and no remedy at all unless this petition is granted.

[15. If appropriate, allege facts showing petitioner's entitlement to attorney's fees under Gov. Code § 800 . see form in [3], [b], above, Paragraph 15.]

WHEREFORE, petitioner prays as follows:

1. That this court issue an alternative writ of mandate ordering respondent Appeals Board

(a) To set aside its decision _____ [specify, e.g., affirming the decision of the administrative law judge that claimant is eligible for unemployment compensation benefits], and ordering respondent Appeals Board to deny the claimant's claim for unemployment compensation benefits and to direct the respondent Department not to charge any such benefits against petitioner's reserve account based on this claim, or

(b) In the alternative, to show cause before this court at a time and place to be fixed by the court why it has not done so [and directing respondent to file with this court the record of all proceedings in this matter before the respondent and the administrative law judge];

2. That, after hearing on the order to show cause, this court issue a peremptory writ of mandate to the same effect as the alternative writ except for the order to show cause;

3. For costs of suit incurred in this proceeding;

[4. For reasonable attorney's fees, pursuant to Government Code section 800;] and

5. For such other and further relief as the court may deem proper.

Dated: _____

_____ [signature]

Attorney for Petitioner

[Verification. see form in [3][b], above.]

[5] Class Actions

[a] Generally

California's judicial policy is to allow potential class action plaintiffs to have their action measured on its merits to determine whether trying their suits as a class action would bestow the requisite benefits upon the litigants and the judicial process to justify class action litigation.ⁿ⁴⁴ To effect this judicial policy, the California Supreme Court has mandated that a complaint for class action consideration, if at all possible, be allowed to survive the pleading stages of litigation.ⁿ⁴⁵ Because the sustaining of demurrers without leave to amend represents the earliest possible determination of the propriety of class action litigation, it should be looked upon with disfavor.ⁿ⁴⁶

[b] Exhaustion of Remedies

In putative class actions, the issue of exhaustion of remedies may arise in the context of whether any or only some of the putative class members have exhausted administrative remedies. The relevant inquiry is whether the available administrative remedies provide classwide relief. If the remedies do provide classwide relief, then at least one plaintiff must exhaust them before litigation may proceed. If the remedies do not provide classwide relief, then no plaintiff need exhaust them before suing.ⁿ⁴⁷

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5; see, e.g., Windigo Mills v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 586, 591-592, 155 Cal. Rptr. 63 (unemployment compensation); Bilyeu v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 657, 660, 181 Cal. Rptr. 837 (disability compensation); see also Gilles v. Department of Human Resources Development (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 313, 316, 113 Cal. Rptr. 374, 521 P.2d 110 (complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief involving construction of unemployment compensation provisions for recovery of benefit overpayment treated as petition for administrative mandate).

(n2)Footnote 2. Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b).

(n3)Footnote 3. Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(b). see Kazensky v. City of Merced (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 44, 48-49, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 356 ("[t]he penalty imposed by an administrative body will not be disturbed in a mandamus proceeding unless an abuse of discretion is demonstrated" and "[n]either an appellate court nor a trial court is free to substitute its discretion for that of the administrative agency concerning the degree of punishment imposed," even when superior court exercises its independent judgment on evidence in determining whether agency abused its discretion in finding misconduct, and concluding that city did not abuse its discretion in terminating two mechanics who repeatedly violated city's personnel rules).

(n4)Footnote 4. See Thomas v. Emp. Stab. Com. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 501, 504, 247 P.2d 561 .

(n5)Footnote 5. See Interstate Brands v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 770, 780, 163 Cal. Rptr. 619, 608 P.2d 707 .

(n6)Footnote 6. See MacGregor v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 205, 211-212, 207 Cal. Rptr. 823, 689 P.2d 453 (review of denial of unemployment insurance benefits); Interstate Brands v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 770, 774-782, 163 Cal. Rptr. 619, 608 P.2d 707 (review of grant of unemployment insurance benefits); Bilyeu v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 657, 661, 668, 181 Cal. Rptr. 837 (review of denial of disability benefits).

(n7)Footnote 7. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(c).

(n8)Footnote 8. See Windigo Mills v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 586, 599, 155 Cal. Rptr. 63 ; Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(c).

(n9)Footnote 9. See Cervisi v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 635, 638, 256 Cal. Rptr. 142 ; Windigo Mills v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 586, 599, 155 Cal. Rptr. 63 .

(n10)Footnote 10. See Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 575, 585, 205 Cal. Rptr. 501, 685 P.2d 61 ; see also Windigo Mills v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 586, 599, 155 Cal. Rptr. 63 (if credible evidence supports superior court's findings, contrary evidence is disregarded).

(n11)Footnote 11. See Pacific Legal Foundation v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 101, 108, 172 Cal. Rptr. 194, 624 P.2d 244 .

(n12)Footnote 12. See Amador v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 35 Cal. 3d 671, 685, 200 Cal. Rptr. 298, 677 P.2d 224 (whether employee had good cause for refusing to work or for leaving work as issue of law).

(n13)Footnote 13. See Sanchez v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1984) 36 Cal. 3d 575, 585, 205 Cal. Rptr. 501, 685 P.2d 61 .

(n14)Footnote 14. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(e).

(n15)Footnote 15. See Windigo Mills v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 586, 596, 155 Cal. Rptr. 63 .

(n16)Footnote 16. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Unemp. Ins. Code § 410.

(n17)Footnote 17. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 410. For discussion of precedent decisions, see § 80.85[2].

(n18)Footnote 18. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a).

(n19)Footnote 19. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a).

(n20)Footnote 20. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 135(a).

(n21)Footnote 21. See §§ 80.30-80.37 for discussion of eligibility for unemployment compensation benefits. see §§ 80.61-80.65 for discussion of eligibility for disability compensation benefits.

(n22)Footnote 22. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1326 (filing of claim for unemployment compensation benefits), 2706, 2706.1 (filing of claim for disability compensation benefits).

(n23)Footnote 23. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 410 (finality of Appeals Board decision and judicial review); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a) (types of administrative determinations subject to review by mandate).

(n24)Footnote 24. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1086, 1094.5(b), (c).

(n25)Footnote 25. See Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 291-296, 109 P.2d 942 .

(n26)Footnote 26. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1086.

(n27)Footnote 27. See discussion in [v], below.

(n28)Footnote 28. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1086; see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5 (form of verification).

(n29)Footnote 29. Gov. Code § 800.

(n30)Footnote 30. Gov. Code § 800.

(n31)Footnote 30.1. Aguilar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 245-246, 272 Cal. Rptr. 696 .

(n32)Footnote 30.2. Aguilar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 241, 246 n.4, 272 Cal. Rptr. 696 (noting EDD's assertion that administrative law judge has no power to award interest, but not necessarily accepting it, and emphasizing that in instant case, interest was awarded by superior court judgment). See also In re Kalem (1993) Cal. Unemp. Ins. Appeals Bd. Prec. Dec. No. P-B-476 (administrative law judge cannot award interest).

(n33)Footnote 30.3. Aguilar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 242-245, 272 Cal. Rptr. 696 (citing Tripp v. Swoap (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 671, 681-682, 131 Cal. Rptr. 789, 552 P.2d 749). For discussion and forms regarding Civ. Code § 3287(a), see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, ch. 177, Damages, pt. II.

(n34)Footnote 30.4. Aguilar v. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Bd. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 239, 245, 272 Cal. Rptr. 696 .

(n35)Footnote 31. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a); Unemp. Ins. Code § 410.

(n36)Footnote 32. Unemp. Ins. Code § 410.

(n37)Footnote 33. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 410.

(n38)Footnote 34. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a).

(n39)Footnote 35. See Gov. Code § 800.

(n40)Footnote 36. See §§ 80.30-80.37 for discussion of eligibility for unemployment compensation benefits.

(n41)Footnote 37. See Unemp. Ins. Code §§ 1326, 1327.

(n42)Footnote 38. See Unemp. Ins. Code § 410 (finality of Appeals Board decision and judicial review); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5(a) (types of administrative determinations subject to review by mandate).

(n43)Footnote 39. See Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1086, 1094.5(b), (c).

(n44)Footnote 40. See Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 291-296, 109 P.2d 942 .

(n45)Footnote 41. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1086.

(n46)Footnote 42. See discussion in [v], below.

(n47)Footnote 43. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1086; see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 2015.5 (form of verification).

(n48)Footnote 44. Tarkington v. Cal. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Board (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1510, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131 .

(n49)Footnote 45. Tarkington v. Cal. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Board (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1510, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131 . See La Sala v. American Sav. & Loan Assn. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 864, 868-869, 97 Cal. Rptr. 849, 489 P.2d 1113 ; Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 800, 816, 94 Cal. Rptr. 796, 484 P.2d 964 ; Daar v. Yellow Cab Co. (1967) 67 Cal. 2d 695, 716-717, 63 Cal. Rptr. 724, 433 P.2d 732 ; Jones v. H. F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 121, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 .

(n50)Footnote 46. Tarkington v. Cal. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Board (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1511-1512, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131 (premature for trial court to make determinations pertaining to class suitability on employer's demurrer to petition for administrative mandamus challenging denial of unemployment benefits after lockout by employer; action involved single set of facts, i.e., allegations pertaining to employer's selective lockout and illegal hiring of locked-out employees, one question of law common to all class members, i.e., whether employees who could not work because of employer's lockout fell under ambit of Unemp. Ins. Code § 1262, and one institutional practice, i.e., denial of benefits to locked-out employees by EDD and Board; individual questions of amount of benefits, if any, to which each claimant was entitled did not predominate over common factual allegations and legal questions).

(n51)Footnote 47. Tarkington v. Cal. Unemployment Ins. Appeals Board (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1508-1510, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 131 (union member-employees, after Board denied claims for unemployment benefits during lockout period, filed for writ of administrative mandate on behalf of class of employees, against grocer that locked them out in labor dispute; decisions by ALJ and Board upholding EDD's denial of benefits to petitioners squarely addressed legal issue of whether employees who could not work because of lockout fell within ambit of Unemp. Ins. Code § 1262 regarding labor disputes (see § 80.34[5], above) and were not entitled to unemployment benefits, and by giving Board opportunity to consider situation, use its expertise, decide issue, and render litigation unnecessary, petitioners fulfilled all purposes of exhaustion doctrine).

193 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part F. JUDICIAL REVIEW

4-80 California Employment Law §§ 80.103 through 80.109

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 80.103 [Reserved]

194 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part G. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.110

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.110 Legal Texts

California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

"Unemployment and Disability Insurance."

"Public Administrative Law."

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Ch. 266, Unemployment Compensation (Matthew Bender).

Witkin, Summary of California Law (9th ed. 1987) Vol. 2, "Agency and Employment," §§ 347-421.

195 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance

Part G. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.111

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.111 Encyclopedias

60 Cal. Jur. 3d, "Unemployment Compensation," §§ 1-42.

196 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE
CHAPTER 80 Unemployment and State Disability Insurance
Part G. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-80 California Employment Law § 80.112

AUTHOR: By Carol S. Sanders, J.D.

§ 80.112 Law Reviews and Legal Periodicals

California Supreme Court Survey, A Review of Decisions: December 1980-February 1981, "Scope of Review: California Unemployment Insurance Code Section 409.2; Pacific Legal Foundation v. California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board," 8 Pepperdine L. Rev. 1153 (1981).

Comment, "Religious Organizations and the Unemployment Insurance Code: Is California Playing Favorites with Churches?" 10 Pacific L.J. 225 (1979).

Comment, "The Claimant Complains: Unemployment Insurance in California," 10 U.S.F. L. Rev. 297 (1975).

Comment, "The Concept of 'Availability' in California's Unemployment Insurance Program: Any Reason for Requiring Good Cause?" 66 Cal. L. Rev. 1293 (1978).

197 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION VIII UNEMPLOYMENT AND STATE DISABILITY INSURANCE

Chapter 81- 90 RESERVED

4-81 - 90 California Employment Law Chapter 81- 90

RESERVED

Chapter 81- 90 RESERVED

1 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes

4-90 California Employment Law 90.syn

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

§ 90.syn Synopsis to Chapter 90: Arbitration of Employment Disputes

§ 90.01 Federal Law

§ 90.02 State Law

§§ 90.03 through 90.09 [Reserved]

§ 90.10 Collective Bargaining Arbitration Agreements

[1] Relationship to Statutory Claims, Generally

[2] Federal Law

[a] In General

[b] Presumption of Arbitrability

[3] State Law

[4] Effect on Constitutional Claims

§ 90.20 Individual Arbitration Agreements

[1] Private Litigation

[a] Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp.

[b] The Craft Line of Cases

[c] The Duffield Line of Cases

[d] The Lai Line of Cases

[e] Unconscionability and the Armendariz Line of Cases

[f] Whether a Contract Is Formed

[g] Waiver

[i] Waiver of Arbitration

[ii] Waiver of Class Arbitration

[h] Judicial Review

[i] [Reserved]

[j] Nonsignatory to Arbitration Agreement

[k] Sovereign Immunity

[l] Effect of Anti-SLAPP Statute

[2] Effect on EEOC

§ 90.21 Procedural Requirements

[1] Minimum Requirements

[2] Gateway Issues of Arbitrability

[a] Who Determines Arbitrability

[b] Factors in Determining Arbitrability

[c] Defenses to Mandatory Arbitration

[3] Conflicting Arbitration Provisions

[4] Waiver of Defenses to Arbitration

[5] Arbitrator's Disclosure Obligations

[a] State Law

[b] Federal Law

[6] Mutuality Requirement

[7] Time Limitations

§§ 90.22 through 90.29 [Reserved]

§ 90.30 Legal Periodicals

§ 90.31 Legal Texts

By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D. n*

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote *. Paul Cane is a partner in the San Francisco office of Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker LLP. He is a graduate of Dartmouth College and Boalt Hall School of Law, a former law clerk to Hon. Lewis F. Powell Jr., the editor-in-chief of Lindemann & Grossman's Employment Discrimination Law (3d ed. 1996), and co-author of An Employer's Guide to the Americans With Disabilities Act (1991).

2 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes

4-90 California Employment Law Scope

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

Scope

By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D. n SCOPE*

This chapter discusses the effect of arbitration agreements on a variety of employment issues. The chapter first discusses the applicability of the Federal Arbitration Act to employment contracts generally, and the Act's preemptive scope. It then discusses the effect of arbitration provisions in collective bargaining agreements on individuals' rights to bring private lawsuits. The chapter next discusses the enforceability of individual arbitration agreements in private litigation, including the five theories most often employed by plaintiffs in resisting enforceability. The chapter then discusses issues of appellate review and the collateral estoppel effect of arbitration awards. The chapter concludes with a discussion of the effect of an arbitration agreement on litigation by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

FOOTNOTES:

(n2)Footnote *. Paul Cane is a partner in the San Francisco office of Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker LLP. He is a graduate of Dartmouth College and Boalt Hall School of Law, a former law clerk to Hon. Lewis F. Powell Jr., the editor-in-chief of Lindemann & Grossman's Employment Discrimination Law (3d ed. 1996), and co-author of An Employer's Guide to the Americans With Disabilities Act (1991).

3 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION
CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes
Part A. STATUTORY AUTHORITY FOR ENFORCING ARBITRATION AGREEMENTS

4-90 California Employment Law § 90.01

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

§ 90.01 Federal Law

The Federal Arbitration Act (FAA)ⁿ¹ provides that a "written provision in ... a contract evidencing a transaction involving commerce to settle by arbitration a controversy thereafter arising out of such contract or transaction, or the refusal to perform the whole or any part thereof, ... shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract."ⁿ²

The United States Supreme Court has held that the FAA is a "congressional declaration of a liberal federal policy favoring arbitration agreements, notwithstanding any state substantive or procedural policies to the contrary. The effect of [the Act] is to create a body of federal substantive law of arbitrability, applicable to any arbitration agreement within the coverage of the Act [The Act] establishes that, as a matter of federal law, any doubts concerning the scope of arbitrable issues should be resolved in favor of arbitration."ⁿ³ The Court has further held that by enacting the FAA, "Congress declared a national policy favoring arbitration and withdrew the power of the states to require a judicial forum for the resolution of claims which the contracting parties agreed to resolve by arbitration."ⁿ⁴ Further, when parties agree to arbitrate all disputes arising under their contract, questions concerning the validity of the entire contract are to be resolved by the arbitrator in the first instance, not by a federal or state court.ⁿ⁵

Federal arbitration law has powerful preemptive force. When parties agree to arbitrate all questions arising under a contract, state laws lodging primary jurisdiction in another forum, whether judicial or administrative, are superseded by the FAA.ⁿ⁶ Thus, for example, neither a court nor the California Labor Commissioner has jurisdiction to adjudicate a complaint for overtime if the employee has signed an employment contract agreeing to arbitrate any employment-related controversies,ⁿ⁷ so long as the arbitration clause is in a contract involving interstate commerce.ⁿ⁸ The contract need not mention interstate commerce. An employment contract involves commerce under § 2 of the FAA simply if the transaction, in fact, involves interstate commerce, regardless of the parties' subjective intent when they signed the agreement.ⁿ⁹

In Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams, ⁿ¹⁰ the United States Supreme Court reversed the Ninth Circuit's holdingⁿ¹¹ that the Federal Arbitration Act does not apply to labor or employment contracts. The employee in Circuit City had completed a required employment application that contained a dispute resolution agreement requiring employees to submit all claims and disputes to binding arbitration. The employee later sued the employer in state court for sexual harassment, retaliation, constructive discharge, and intentional infliction of emotional distress under FEHA,ⁿ¹² and sexual orientation discrimination. The employer petitioned in federal district court to stay the state court proceedings and compel arbitration. The district court granted the employer's petition, but the Ninth Circuit reversed on the ground that the FAA did not apply. The United States Supreme Court reversed the Ninth Circuit, disapproved the Ninth Circuit's earlier holding in Craft v. Campbell Soup Co.,ⁿ¹³ and held that the FAA applies to labor and employment contracts and excludes from its coverage only contracts of employment of transportation workers.ⁿ¹⁴ The Court then remanded to the Ninth Circuit to decide whether the arbitration contract was unenforceable for other reasons. On remand, the Ninth Circuit found the arbitration provision in the employment contract to be an unconscionable contract of adhesion under California law and again reversed the district court.ⁿ¹⁵

Arbitration contracts are enforceable under state law, and parties are free to enter into contracts providing for arbitration under state law rather than the FAA.ⁿ¹⁶ The United States Supreme Court has held that while "the FAA preempts state laws which require a judicial forum for the resolution of claims which the contracting parties agree to resolve by arbitration[,] ... it does not follow that the FAA prevents the enforcement of agreements to arbitrate under different rules than those set forth in the Act itself."ⁿ¹⁷ The Court observed that "[w]here ... the parties have agreed to abide by state rules of arbitration, enforcing those rules according to the terms of the agreement is fully consistent with the goals of the FAA, even if the result is that arbitration is stayed although the Act would otherwise permit it to go forward."ⁿ¹⁸ In other words, parties are free to contract around the FAA by incorporating state arbitration rules into their agreements.ⁿ¹⁹

In Harden v. Roadway Package System,ⁿ²⁰ the plaintiff had signed a pre-dispute arbitration agreement with his employer. After his termination, he filed a complaint alleging race discrimination under the FEHA. The employer moved to compel arbitration, relying almost exclusively on federal authorities under the FAA. In the wake of Circuit City, the Ninth Circuit held that it lacked authority to compel arbitration because the plaintiff was a transportation worker engaged in interstate commerce and therefore the agreement was exempt under the FAA. The court also refused to apply California state law in the alternative, because the employer had based its motion to compel on the FAA, not state law, and had not invoked the California Arbitration Act or any California cases supporting enforcement of the state statutory equivalent of the FAA.ⁿ²¹

■ PRACTICE TIP:

Harden presents a trap for the unwary. The employer moved to compel arbitration without making clear that it was moving under the FAA and, in the alternative, under state arbitration law. When the FAA was held inapplicable, the motion failed entirely because it did not clearly invoke the state arbitration statute. When drafting arbitration agreements and motions to compel arbitration, it is normally important to employers to invoke both the FAA and, in the alternative, state law.

The FAA does not confer federal question jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1331. Rather, there must be an independent basis for jurisdiction, such as diversity of citizenship under 28 U.S.C. § 1332.ⁿ²²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations Arbitration General Overview Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations Arbitration Authority

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.

(n2)Footnote 2. See 9 U.S.C. § 2.

(n3)Footnote 3. Moses H. Cone Hosp. v. Mercury Constr. (1983) 460 U.S. 1, 24-25, 103 S. Ct. 927, 74 L. Ed. 2d 765 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Preston v. Ferrer (2008) 128 S. Ct. 978, 981, 169 L. Ed. 2d 917 ; Southland Corp. v. Keating (1984) 465 U.S. 1, 10-11, 104 S. Ct. 852, 79 L. Ed. 2d 1 ; see also Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 26-33, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26, 37-42 (ADEA action subject to compulsory arbitration under Federal Arbitration Act); Perry v. Thomas (1987) 482 U.S. 483, 490-491, 107 S. Ct. 2520, 96 L. Ed. 2d 426 (Act preempts Lab. Code § 229, providing that employees may bring civil action to collect unpaid wages notwithstanding any private agreement to arbitrate); cf. Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp., (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 (noting that any collective bargaining agreement [CBA] to arbitrate must be "particularly clear," and holding that CBA in this case did not contain clear and unmistakable waiver of covered employees' rights to judicial forum for federal claims of employment discrimination, but declining to decide whether waiver would be enforceable; distinguishing Gilmer as involving individual's waiver of his own rights, rather than union's waiver of rights of represented employees).

(n5)Footnote 5. Buckeye Check Cashing, Inc. v. Cardegna (2006) 546 U.S. 440, 126 S. Ct. 1204, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1038 (2006) .

(n6)Footnote 6. Preston v. Ferrer (2008) 128 S. Ct. 978, 981, 983-989, 169 L. Ed. 2d 917 .

(n7)Footnote 7. Perry v. Thomas (1987) 482 U.S. 483, 490-491, 107 S. Ct. 2520, 96 L. Ed. 2d 426 (Act preempts Lab. Code § 229, providing that employees must bring civil action to collect unpaid wages notwithstanding any private agreement to arbitrate); see Baker v. Aubry (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1259, 1266, 265 Cal. Rptr. 381 .

(n8)Footnote 8. Giuliano v. Inland Empire Personnel, Inc. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 611, *12-*20 (employee was obligated to arbitrate unpaid wages claim under Lab. Code § 229, where record was more than sufficient to support finding, as matter of law, that employment contract involved interstate commerce).

(n9)Footnote 9. Allied-Bruce Terminix Companies v. Dobson (1995) 513 U.S. 265, 277, 115 S. Ct. 834, 130 L. Ed. 2d 753 ; Giuliano v. Inland Empire Personnel, Inc. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 611, *19 .

(n10)Footnote 10. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (2001) 532 U.S. 105, 121 S. Ct. 1302, 149 L. Ed. 2d 234 .

(n11)Footnote 11. See Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (9th Cir. 1999) 194 F.3d 1070 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n13)Footnote 13. Craft v. Campbell Soup Co. (9th Cir. 1999) 177 F.3d 1083 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (2001) 532 U.S. 105, 113, 121 S. Ct. 1302, 149 L. Ed. 2d 234 . See also Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Najd (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1104, 1106-1107 (Supreme Court decision in Adams directly forecloses argument that FAA exempts all employment contracts from FAA coverage; Adams held exemption only applies to employment contracts of transportation workers). See Ruiz v. Sysco Food Services (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 520, 536-537, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700 (because employee's substantive tort claims did not hinge on performance of his specific job duties, but rather extended to more generalized issue of manner in which investigation of his termination was conducted under CBA, there was no need for appellate or trial courts to resolve question of whether employee should be considered to be transportation worker within meaning of FAA; arbitration of tort claims compelled under California law).

(n15)Footnote 15. Circuit City v. Adams (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 889 ; for discussion of unconscionability, see § 90.20[1].

(n16)Footnote 16. Volt Information Sciences, Inc. v. Bd. of Trustees of the Leland Stanford Junior Univ. (1989) 489 U.S. 468, 478-479, 109 S. Ct. 1248, 103 L. Ed. 2d 488 . See also Cronus Investments, Inc. v. Concierge Services (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 376, 383-393, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 540, 107 P.3d 217 (FAA did not preempt application of California law to arbitration agreement providing that it would be governed by California law and that designation of California law would not be deemed election to preclude application of FAA; court could properly deny arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(c), providing exception for requirement that court order arbitration on petition by party to arbitration agreement).

(n17)Footnote 17. Volt Information Sciences, Inc. v. Bd. of Trustees of the Leland Stanford Junior Univ. (1989) 489 U.S. 468, 478-479, 109 S. Ct. 1248, 103 L. Ed. 2d 488 (internal citations omitted).

(n18)Footnote 18. Volt Information Sciences, Inc. v. Bd. of Trustees of the Leland Stanford Junior Univ. (1989) 489 U.S. 468, 479, 109 S. Ct. 1248, 103 L. Ed. 2d 488 .

(n19)Footnote 19. See Wolsey Ltd. v. Foodmaker, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 144 F.3d 1205, 1209 , quoting Volt Information Sciences, Inc. v. Bd. of Trustees of the Leland Stanford Junior Univ. (1989) 489 U.S. 468, 479, 109 S. Ct. 1248, 103 L. Ed. 2d 488 .

(n20)Footnote 20. Harden v. Roadway Packaging Sys. (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 1137 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Harden v. Roadway Packaging Sys. (9th Cir. 2001) 249 F.3d 1137, 1140-1141 .

(n22)Footnote 22. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Najd (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1104, 1106 ; see, e.g., Moses H. Cone Mem'l Hosp. v. Mercury Constr. Corp. (1983) 460 U.S. 1, 25, n.32, 103 S. Ct. 927, 74 L. Ed. 2d 765 .

4 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION
CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes
Part A. STATUTORY AUTHORITY FOR ENFORCING ARBITRATION AGREEMENTS

4-90 California Employment Law § 90.02

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

§ 90.02 State Law

Arbitration agreements generally are enforceable under California state law.ⁿ¹ There is a strong public policy in favor of arbitration. Arbitration agreements are valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, except on grounds that exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract. Thus, under California law, as under federal law, an arbitration agreement may be invalidated only for the same reasons as other contracts.ⁿ²

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Contracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsArbitration ClausesLabor & Employment LawCollective Bargaining & Labor RelationsArbitrationGeneral OverviewLabor & Employment LawCollective Bargaining & Labor RelationsArbitrationEnforcement

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 97-98, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 741, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 98, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 ; Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 741, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 . For discussion of Armendariz, see § 90.20[1].

5 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION
CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes
Part A. STATUTORY AUTHORITY FOR ENFORCING ARBITRATION AGREEMENTS

4-90 California Employment Law §§ 90.03 through 90.09

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 90.03[Reserved]

6 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION
CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes
Part B. ENFORCEABILITY OF ARBITRATION AGREEMENTS

4-90 California Employment Law § 90.10

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

§ 90.10 Collective Bargaining Arbitration Agreements

[1] Relationship to Statutory Claims, Generally

The interrelationship between statutory claims and the rights and remedies under collective bargaining agreements is unresolved. Employees argue that the statutory forum is available notwithstanding any arbitration agreement in a collective bargaining agreement. Employers argue that, at least in some circumstances, a collective bargaining agreement can require arbitral resolution of statutory claims.

[2] Federal Law

[a] In General

In 14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett,ⁿ¹ the United States Supreme Court held that a provision in a collective bargaining agreement that clearly and unmistakably required union members to arbitrate claims arising under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (ADEA)ⁿ² was enforceable, and the Court's decision in Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co.,ⁿ³ did not forbid enforcement of the arbitration provision. The union and an association of which the employer was a member collectively bargained in good faith and agreed that employment-related discrimination claims, including claims brought under the ADEA, would be resolved in arbitration. The freely-negotiated term between the union and the association qualified as a condition of employment subject to mandatory bargaining.ⁿ⁴ The CBA's arbitration provision had to be honored unless the ADEA itself removed the particular class of grievances from the NLRA's broad sweep, which the United States Supreme Court has held it does not.ⁿ⁵ Nothing in the ADEA suggested a distinction between the status of arbitration agreements signed by an individual employee and those agreed to by a union representative, and the CBA met the requirement that an agreement to arbitrate statutory anti-discrimination claims be explicitly stated in the collective bargaining agreement.ⁿ⁶ The agreement to arbitrate ADEA claims was not the waiver of a "substantive right" as that term was employed in the ADEA.ⁿ⁷ The NLRA provided the union and the association with statutory authority to collectively bargain for arbitration of workplace discrimination claims, and Congress did not terminate that authority with respect to federal age discrimination claims in the ADEA. Thus, there was no legal basis for the Court to strike down the arbitration clause in the CBA, which was freely negotiated by the union and the association, and which clearly and unmistakably required the employees to arbitrate age discrimination claims. The CBA's arbitration provision was also fully enforceable under the Gardner-Denver line of cases,ⁿ⁸ because those decisions involved the issue of whether arbitration of contract-based claims precluded subsequent judicial resolution of statutory claims. The employees had not agreed to arbitrate their statutory claims, and the labor arbitrators were not authorized to resolve the claims; thus, the arbitration in those cases was held not to preclude subsequent statutory actions.ⁿ⁹

In Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp.,ⁿ¹⁰ the United States Supreme Court considered whether a general arbitration clause in a collective bargaining agreement (CBA) requires an employee to use the arbitration procedure for an alleged violation of the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA). The plaintiff was a longshoreman who had tried to return to work, on the approval of his doctor, after settling a claim for permanent disability. The Fourth Circuit concluded that the CBA's general arbitration provision was sufficiently broad to encompass a statutory claim arising under the ADA, and the provision was enforceable.ⁿ¹¹ The Supreme Court considered the case because its precedents arguably sent mixed messages. In Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co.,ⁿ¹² the Court had held that an employee does not forfeit the right to a judicial forum for claimed discriminatory discharge if the employee first pursues the grievance to final arbitration under the nondiscrimination clause of the CBA.ⁿ¹³ An arbitration award may have evidentiary significance, but not preclusive effect, the Court had held.ⁿ¹⁴ But in Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp.,ⁿ¹⁵ the Court had held that a claim under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) could be subject to compulsory arbitration pursuant to an arbitration provision in a securities registration form.ⁿ¹⁶

In Wright, the Court found it unnecessary to resolve this arguable tension. The Court held that Gardner-Denver at least stands for the proposition that the right to a federal judicial forum is sufficiently important to be protected against anything less than an explicit union waiver in a CBA. Assuming (without deciding) that an employee's right to litigate statutory discrimination claims is waivable in a CBA,ⁿ¹⁷ the Court held that the waiver must be clear and unmistakable. The CBA in Wright did not meet this standard because the arbitration clause was very general, providing for arbitration of matters under dispute; this language could be understood to mean only matters in dispute under the CBA, and the CBA did not elsewhere contain its own specific anti-discrimination provision or an explicit incorporation of statutory anti-discrimination requirements. Because the collective bargaining agreement did not contain a clear and unmistakable waiver of the covered employees' rights to a judicial forum for federal claims of employment discrimination, the Court did not decide whether such a waiver would be enforceable.ⁿ¹⁸ The Court also noted that the presumption of arbitrability found in the Labor Management Relations Act does not extend beyond the reach of its principal underlying rationale, which is that arbitrators are in a better position than courts to interpret a CBA. Because the cause of action asserted in Wright arose out of the ADA rather than the CBA and was distinct from any right conferred by the CBA, the presumption of arbitrability did not apply.ⁿ¹⁹

In Doyle v. Raley's Inc.,ⁿ²⁰ a case decided before the Supreme Court decision in Wright, the Ninth Circuit concluded that the general arbitration clause in the plaintiff's CBA did not waive the plaintiff's right to seek judicial resolution of ADA, ADEA, and FEHA claims. The CBA terms in issue were substantially similar to those in Gardner-Denver, and did not state statutory claims were included in the scope of the arbitration clause. Assuming arguendo that statutory claims may be brought within the purview of collectively bargained-for arbitration, the Ninth Circuit concluded that the CBA's arbitration clause must, at a minimum, state that statutory discrimination claims are subject to arbitration.ⁿ²¹

On the other hand, in Operating Engineers Local Union No. 3 v. Newmont Mining Corp.,ⁿ²² the employer resisted arbitration of the termination of a former employee's employment, arguing that although the occurrence that led to the termination occurred while the collective bargaining agreement was still in force, the agreement had expired by the time of the termination, so arbitration was no longer required. The Ninth Circuit held that even if the termination was a significant part of the dispute, so was the alleged misconduct in falsifying a tool request form leading to the termination. The parties agreed in the CBA to arbitrate the issue of the tool request, and that misconduct occurred, if at all, prior to the expiration of the CBA. Denying arbitration would deprive the union of the benefit of its bargain.

In Association of Flight Attendants v. Mesa Air Group,^{n22.1} an association of flight attendants had collective bargaining agreements with an employer, and labor relations between the employer and the association were governed by the Railway Labor Act (RLA).^{n22.2} After the employer changed scheduling for flight attendants from one set of FAA regulations to another, the Ninth Circuit held that the employer carried its burden of showing that its change was arguably justified by the CBAs, so that the dispute was minor within the meaning of the RLA, and had to be decided in arbitration. "Major disputes" under the RLA generally result from attempts by labor or management to impose new obligations or create new rights and must be settled through an extended bargaining process. "Minor disputes" generally result from attempts to enforce existing contractual obligations and rights and are subject to exclusive binding arbitration before the National Railroad Adjustment Board.^{n22.3} The CBAs did not explicitly establish which set of regulations was to be applied to flight attendant schedules, and residual authority clauses in the CBAs gave the employer authority and rights to manage its operations and direct its flight attendants' work force to the extent not expressly restricted by the CBA.^{n22.4}

Written arbitration provisions in interstate commercial transactions are enforceable under the Federal Arbitration Act. The FAA therefore applies to determine the scope of arbitration provisions in contracts with Financial Industry Regulatory Authority-member firms.^{n22.5}

When determining whether a collective bargaining agreement containing an arbitration clause covers a particular issue, an arbitrator is not limited to the four corners of the CBA in interpreting its terms. The arbitrator also may rely on industrial common law, i.e., the practices of the industry and the shop, which is equally a part of a collective bargaining agreement although not expressed in it.ⁿ²³ When an arbitrator uses his or her knowledge of the industrial common law to infer a requirement from a CBA when the CBA is silent on that particular point, the arbitrator is not adding new terms to the agreement but is simply finding the inferred term already in the agreement, albeit only implied.ⁿ²⁴ Thus, for example, an arbitrator did not exceed his authority in inferring a duty to bargain about whether a hospital could impose a mandatory flu vaccination requirement on its nurses from a CBA's preamble and union recognition clause, in light of his understanding of the foundational labor law principle that management must bargain with recognized union representatives over terms and conditions of employment, which is embodied in both statutory and judge-made law and has become well-established in all industries with unionized employees, including the health care industry.ⁿ²⁵

For an arbitration provision in a collective bargaining agreement to be enforceable, the party against whom the provision is sought to be enforced must have been a signatory to the agreement.ⁿ²⁶

[b] Presumption of Arbitrability

In the Steelworkers Trilogy,ⁿ²⁷ the United States Supreme Court held that national labor policy favors arbitration, and courts should apply a presumption in favor of arbitration to disputes arising from collective bargaining agreements. The Court reaffirmed this principle more recently in AT&T Technologies, Inc. v. Communications Workers of America,ⁿ²⁸ holding that the presumption of arbitrability recognizes the greater institutional competence of arbitrators in interpreting collective bargaining agreements, furthers the national labor policy of peaceful resolution of labor disputes and best accords with the parties' presumed objectives in pursuing collective bargaining. In United Steel Workers v. Ret. Income Plan for Hourly-Rated Employees of ASARCO, Inc.,ⁿ²⁹ the Ninth Circuit held that the presumption of arbitrability applied to laid-off workers' claims that they were entitled to retirement benefits under a collective bargaining agreement, even though they were retired and no longer employed.ⁿ³⁰

[3] State Law

Some cases suggest that an employee may not be compelled to arbitrate a statutory discrimination claim under the FEHAⁿ³¹ pursuant to an arbitration clause in a collective bargaining agreement that requires the employer to arbitrate all employment-related claims.ⁿ³² In Torrez v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. of Del.,ⁿ³³ a case that preceded the United States Supreme Court's opinion in Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp.,ⁿ³⁴ the court took notice of Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co.,ⁿ³⁵ and other cases,ⁿ³⁶ in which the United States Supreme Court held that a plaintiff was not precluded from filing a Title VII lawsuit against his or her employer by having earlier submitted a claim to final arbitration under a collective bargaining agreement. In Torrez, the court reasoned that an agreement limiting contractual remedies to a particular forum, such as an arbitral forum, does not affect the employee's statutory rights, which are unrelated to collective activities.ⁿ³⁷

But in a case that followed Wright, Vasquez v. Superior Court,ⁿ³⁸ the court suggested that a union-negotiated waiver of statutory rights to a judicial forum might be enforceable if clear and unmistakable.ⁿ³⁹

In Camargo v. California Portland Cement Co.,ⁿ⁴⁰ the court of appeal held there is no collateral estoppel of FEHA claims by an arbitration award under a collective bargaining agreement, unless the CBA clearly and unmistakably provides for binding arbitration of an employee's statutory FEHA claims and the arbitration is conducted pursuant to procedures allowing for the full litigation and fair adjudication of the FEHA claims.ⁿ⁴¹

In Ruiz v. Sysco Food Services,ⁿ⁴² the Court of Appeal held that an employee's tort claims of defamation, false light, public disclosure of private facts, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress, all arising out of an investigation into an incident at work and the employee's termination and subsequent reinstatement, were subject to arbitration under the collective bargaining agreement. The defamation and emotional distress allegations arose in connection with and were inextricable from the actual disciplinary or investigative procedures involved, as set forth in the CBA. It would be necessary to engage in an interpretation of the CBA to determine whether the investigation and publications were actionable under the stringent standards applicable to defamation claims (actual malice) and emotional distress (conduct outside the bounds of what a civilized society will tolerate).ⁿ⁴³

On the other hand, a California court of appeal held that regardless of whether a collective bargaining agreement (CBA) included a broad arbitration provision, it was not binding on an employee and a class of employees suing their employer for various statutory violations. The plaintiffs alleged an unfair business practices cause of actionⁿ⁴⁴ and two statutory and regulatory wage claims, i.e., violations of provisions of the Labor Code and wage orders issued by the Industrial Welfare Commission pertaining to itemized wage-statementsⁿ⁴⁵ and rest periods.ⁿ⁴⁶ The court held that the union could not waive the employees' right to bring statutory labor-rights claims in court and those claims did not arise under the CBA. The court also found that the plaintiffs were not precluded from bringing their statutory claims to court by the fact that the union had already grieved the rest-break issue under the CBA. The itemized wage-statement claim had not been grieved, and, in any event, the prior submission of certain statutory claims (including California's laws protecting rest periods and wage-stub itemization) to final and binding arbitration did not bar a subsequent lawsuit, because the employees had not waived their statutorily protected rights to a judicial resolution.ⁿ⁴⁷

In Flores v. Axxis Network & Telecommunications, Inc.,ⁿ⁴⁸ employees of a contractor that performed work for a city under an agreement between the city, a trades council and various craft unions, sued their employer for failing to pay statutory prevailing wages as required by the agreement. The Court of Appeal found that the trial court properly denied the employer's motion to compel arbitration under the grievance and arbitration provision of the agreement. The arbitration provision did not meet the requirement for a waiver of arbitration under a collective bargaining agreement that it be "clear and unmistakable" that the parties intended to waive a judicial forum for statutory claims.ⁿ⁴⁹ Further, Labor Code Section 229 did not require that the employees' claims be arbitrated, because the agreement itself carved out an exception from arbitration for alleged violations of prevailing wage laws.ⁿ⁵⁰

In a public employment case, the court held that arbitration of a labor grievance pursuant to the terms of a collective bargaining agreement cannot have a binding effect on an employee's claims for violation of a statute, unless the agreement explicitly states that it will. The employee pursued a grievance through binding arbitration in accordance with the terms of a memorandum of understanding between her public employer and her union. She then sued her employer for retaliation in violation of Labor Code Section 1102.5. The court held that because the memorandum of understanding made no reference to statutory claims and the grievance procedure was seemingly limited to ascertaining whether the employer had violated the terms of the memorandum, it could not operate as a waiver of the employee's rights to pursue her statutory claims in court.ⁿ⁵¹

When the arbitration provision of a collective bargaining agreement is ambiguous, the court may consider extrinsic evidence to aid its interpretation of whether the agreement compels arbitration, including evidence of the parties' intent in light of earlier negotiations, later conduct, related agreements, and industrywide custom.ⁿ⁵²

[4] Effect on Constitutional Claims

In Service Employees International Union Local 1000 v. Dept. of Personnel Administration,ⁿ⁵³ a union entered into various collective bargaining agreements with the state, which allowed distribution of union materials, literature, and information and which contained grievance and arbitration procedures. In the agreements, the union agreed that any literature posted or distributed on site would not be, inter alia, of a partisan political nature. After the state refused to permit work site distribution of material supporting a ballot proposition, the union sued, alleging that the state's interpretation of the disputed contractual language constituted a deprivation of the union's federal and state constitutional right to freely communicate with its members and such a general policy operated as a prior restraint on free speech. The Court of Appeal held that the trial court properly sustained the state's demurrer on the ground that the union was first required to arbitrate the question of whether the materials were of a partisan political nature within the meaning of prohibitory language in the collective bargaining agreement. The court rejected the union's contention that arbitration was too slow and cumbersome when constitutional rights hung in the balance, and that the exhaustion requirement had to be excused to avoid the irreparable injury involved in suspending its right to free speech. Thus, the union's failure to exhaust its arbitration remedy barred its premature civil action.ⁿ⁵⁴

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Contracts Law Contract Conditions & Provisions Arbitration Clauses Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations General Overview Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations Arbitration Authority Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations Arbitration Enforcement

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. 14 Penn Plaza v. Pyett (2009) 129 S. Ct. 1456, 173 L. Ed. 2d 398, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 2497, *16-*49 .

(n2)Footnote 2. 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 .

(n4)Footnote 4. 29 U.S.C. § 159(a). See Litton Financial Printing Div., Litton Business Systems, Inc. v. NLRB (1991) 501 U.S. 190, 199, 111 S. Ct. 2215, 115 L. Ed. 2d 177 (arrangements for arbitration of disputes are terms or conditions of employment and mandatory subject of bargaining); Steelworkers v. Warrior & Gulf Nav. Co. (1960) 363 U.S. 574, 578, 80 S. Ct. 1347, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1409 (arbitration of labor disputes under collective bargaining agreements is part and parcel of collective bargaining process itself); Textile Workers v. Lincoln Mills of Ala. (1957) 353 U.S. 448, 455, 77 S. Ct. 912, 1 L. Ed. 2d 972 (agreement to arbitrate grievance disputes is quid pro quo for agreement not to strike).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp., 500 U.S. 20, 26-33, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 (nothing in the text of the ADEA or its legislative history explicitly precludes arbitration); Mitsubishi Motors Corp. v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc. (1985) 473 U.S. 614, 628, 105 S. Ct. 3346, 87 L. Ed. 2d 444 (ADEA does not preclude arbitration of claims brought under statute).

(n6)Footnote 6. See Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 80, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 80, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See McDonald v. West Branch (1984) 466 U.S. 284, 104 S. Ct. 1799, 80 L. Ed. 2d 302 (federal court could not accord preclusive effect to unappealed arbitration award in case brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, because arbitrator's authority derived solely from contract, so that arbitrator did not have authority to enforce § 1983 when that provision was left unaddressed by arbitration agreement); Barrentine v. Arkansas-Best Freight System, Inc. (1981) 450 U.S. 728, 101 S. Ct. 1437, 67 L. Ed. 2d 641 (employee could bring action in federal district court alleging violation of minimum wage provisions of Fair Labor Standards Act after having unsuccessfully submitted wage claim based on same underlying facts to joint grievance committee pursuant to provisions of his union's collective-bargaining agreement, because unsuccessful arbitration did not preclude federal lawsuit).

(n9)Footnote 9. See 14 Penn Plaza v. Pyett (2009) 129 S. Ct. 1456, 173 L. Ed. 2d 398, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 2497, *33-*46 (apart from their narrow holdings, Gardner-Denver line of cases included broad dicta highly critical of use of arbitration for vindication of statutory antidiscrimination rights, which skepticism, however, rested on misconceived view of arbitration that Court had since abandoned).

(n10)Footnote 10. Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 .

(n11)Footnote 11. Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1997) 121 F.3d 702 , vacated and remanded, Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 82, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 .

(n13)Footnote 13. Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 49-50, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 (grievance is designed to vindicate contractual right under CBA; lawsuit under Title VII asserts independent statutory rights accorded by Congress).

(n14)Footnote 14. Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 58-59, n.20, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 26, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 (relying on federal policy favoring arbitration embodied in Federal Arbitration Act, Court held that statutory claims may be subject of arbitration agreement, enforceable under FAA).

(n17)Footnote 17. Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 396, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 (Court did not reach question of enforceability of pre-dispute agreement in CBA to arbitrate employment discrimination claims).

(n18)Footnote 18. Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 397, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 (language that grievance procedure is "intended to cover all matters affecting wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment" is not sufficiently explicit, particularly in light of language stating that anything not included in agreement will not be construed as part of agreement).

(n19)Footnote 19. See 29 U.S.C. § 185.

(n20)Footnote 20. Doyle v. Raley's, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 158 F.3d 1012 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Doyle v. Raley's Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 158 F.3d 1012, 1014-1015 (collecting cases and noting then-existing circuit split); see also Albertson's Inc. v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union (9th Cir. 1998) 157 F.3d 758, 760-762 (because employees had independent statutory right to pursue FLSA claims in court, it was irrelevant whether claims might be arbitrable under CBA).

(n22)Footnote 22. Operating Engineers Local Union No. 3 v. Newmont Mining Corp. (9th Cir. 2007) 476 F.3d 690, 692-694 .

(n23)Footnote 22.1. Association of Flight Attendants v. Mesa Air Group (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 1043 .

(n24)Footnote 22.2. 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

(n25)Footnote 22.3. Association of Flight Attendants v. Mesa Air Group (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 1043, 1047 .

(n26)Footnote 22.4. Association of Flight Attendants v. Mesa Air Group (9th Cir. 2009) 567 F.3d 1043, 1046-1050 .

(n27)Footnote 22.5. Valentine Capital Management, Inc. v. Agahi (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 606, 613-627, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 526 (defendant-former employees could not point to anything in former employer's complaint or other pleadings or admissible evidence from which court could infer that work they allegedly performed, trade secrets they allegedly misappropriated, use to which they allegedly put those trade secrets, or parties' alleged defamation of each other arose out of party's activities as associated person of FINRA member).

(n28)Footnote 23. United Steelworkers of Am. v. Warrior & Gulf Navigation Co. (1960) 363 U.S. 574, 581-82, 80 S. Ct. 1347, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1409 ; Virginia Mason Hospital v. Washington State Nurses Assn. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 908, 915 .

(n29)Footnote 24. Virginia Mason Hospital v. Washington State Nurses Assn. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 908, 915 . See SFIC Props., Inc. v. Intl. Assn. of Machinists (9th Cir. 1996) 103 F.3d 923, 926-27 .

(n30)Footnote 25. Virginia Mason Hospital v. Washington State Nurses Assn. (9th Cir. 2007) 511 F.3d 908, 914-915 .

(n31)Footnote 26. See, e.g., See, e.g., District Council No. 16 of the Int'l Union of Painters & Allied Trades, Glaziers, Architectural Metal & Glass Workers, Local 1621 v. B & B Glass, Inc. (9th Cir. 2007) 498 F.3d 926, 929-932 (because plaintiff union had no agreement with employer it sought to take to arbitration, and it could not show that employer against whom it filed its claim controlled company doing work in California, union could not compel employer to arbitrate).

(n32)Footnote 27. United Steelworkers of America v. American Manufacturing Co. (1960) 363 U.S. 564, 80 S. Ct. 1343, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1403 ; United Steelworkers of America v. Warrior & Gulf Navigation Co. (1960) 363 U.S. 574, 80 S. Ct. 1347, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1409 (1960) ; United Steelworkers of America v. Enterprise Wheel & Car Corp. (1960) 363 U.S. 593, 80 S. Ct. 1358, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1424 (1960) .

(n33)Footnote 28. AT&T Technologies, Inc. v. Communications Workers of America (1986) 475 U.S. 643, 649-650, 106 S. Ct. 1415, 89 L. Ed. 2d 648 (1986) .

(n34)Footnote 29. United Steel Workers v. Ret. Income Plan for Hourly-Rated Employees of ASARCO, Inc. (9th Cir. 2008) 512 F.3d 555, 559-563 .

(n35)Footnote 30. See also Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. v. Utility Workers, Local 270 (6th Cir. 2006) 440

F.3d 809, 814 (presumption of arbitrability applied to disputes over retirees' benefits if parties contracted for benefits in collective bargaining agreement, specifically rejecting argument that retirees posed no threat of economic disruption); United Steelworkers of America v. Canon, Inc. (3d Cir. 1978) (explicitly applying presumption of arbitrability when union filed grievance on behalf of group of retirees).

(n36)Footnote 31. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n37)Footnote 32. Torrez v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. of Del. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1247, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792 ; see Vargas v. Gromko (N.D. Cal. 1997) 977 F. Supp. 996, 999-1001 .

(n38)Footnote 33. Torrez v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. of Del. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1247, 1256-1260, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792 .

(n39)Footnote 34. Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 ; see [1], above.

(n40)Footnote 35. Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 .

(n41)Footnote 36. See also Barrentine v. Arkansas-Best Freight Sys. (1981) 450 U.S. 728, 101 S. Ct. 1437, 67 L. Ed. 2d 641 (truck driver may pursue claims under FLSA, notwithstanding unsuccessful participation in grievance procedures mandated by collective bargaining agreement); McDonald v. West Branch (1984) 466 U.S. 284, 104 S. Ct. 1799, 80 L. Ed. 2d 302 (plaintiff may pursue civil rights action under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 after adverse arbitration decision).

(n42)Footnote 37. Torrez v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. of Del. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 1247, 1258, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792 .

(n43)Footnote 38. Vasquez v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 430, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294 .

(n44)Footnote 39. Vasquez v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 430, 433-436, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294 .

(n45)Footnote 40. Camargo v. California Portland Cement Co. (2001) 86 Cal. App 4th 995, 103 Cal. Rptr 2d 841 .

(n46)Footnote 41. Camargo v. California Portland Cement Co. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1018-1019, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841 .

(n47)Footnote 42. Ruiz v. Sysco Food Services (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 520, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700 .

(n48)Footnote 43. Ruiz v. Sysco Food Services (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 520, 531, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 700 .

(n49)Footnote 44. See Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, discussed at § 70.03.

(n50)Footnote 45. See Lab. Code § 226, discussed at § 4.03.

(n51)Footnote 46. See Lab. Code § 226.7; 8 Cal. Code Reg. § 11070(12), discussed at § 3.24.

(n52)Footnote 47. Zavala v. Scott Bros. Dairy, Inc. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 585, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 503, 2006 Cal. App. LEXIS 1513, *11-*23 .

(n53)Footnote 48. Flores v. Axxis Network & Telecommunications, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 802, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1, 2009 Cal. App. LEXIS 640, *5-*22 .

(n54)Footnote 49. Flores v. Axxis Network & Telecommunications, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 802, 93 Cal.

*Rptr. 3d 1, 2009 Cal. App. LEXIS 640, *5-18 . See also Wright v. Universal Maritime Service Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 119 S. Ct. 391, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 ; Vasquez v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 430, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294 .

(n55)Footnote 50. *Flores v. Axxis Network & Telecommunications, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 802, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1, 2009 Cal. App. LEXIS 640, *18-22 .

(n56)Footnote 51. Marcario v. County of Orange (2007) 155 Cal. App 4th 397, 399, 403-407, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 903 .

(n57)Footnote 52. Hartnell Community College Dist. v. Superior Court (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1443, 1449-1452, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 410 (undisputed extrinsic evidence showed that arbitration agreement in collective bargaining agreement was intended by parties to provide for arbitration on written request of grievant after exhaustion of grievance review process, and did not provide community college district with unilateral power to decide arbitrability of grievances).

(n58)Footnote 53. Service Employees Internat. Union Local 1000 v. Dept. of Personnel Administration (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 866, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 457 .

(n59)Footnote 54. Service Employees Internat. Union Local 1000 v. Dept. of Personnel Administration (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 866, 869-876, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 457 .

7 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION
CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes
Part B. ENFORCEABILITY OF ARBITRATION AGREEMENTS

4-90 California Employment Law § 90.20

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

§ 90.20 Individual Arbitration Agreements

[1] Private Litigation

[a] Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp.

In a series of cases involving employees of securities brokerage firms, courts have indicated that agreements to arbitrate employment discrimination claims are generally enforceable and preclude judicial enforcement of statutory equal employment opportunity rights.ⁿ¹ Although these brokerage arbitration cases have been followed in interpreting arbitration agreements in other industries, they may have less application to the securities industry in the future. Effective January 1, 1999, the Securities and Exchange Commission approved a rule change filed by the National Association of Securities Dealers to amend Rule 10201 of the NASD's Code of Arbitration Procedure to remove the requirement that employees of broker-dealers arbitrate statutory claims of employment discrimination. The rule change will modify the current requirement that associated persons arbitrate all disputes arising out of their employment or termination of employment with a member broker-dealer.

In Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp.,ⁿ² the United States Supreme Court held that arbitration agreements generally do not conflict with or hinder the purposes and policies of equal employment opportunity laws.ⁿ³ In addition, several federal EEO statutes encourage the use of alternative means of dispute resolution, including arbitration, to resolve discrimination disputes.ⁿ⁴ Before Gilmer, the Supreme Court had held arbitration agreements to be enforceable with respect to claims arising under several federal statutes advancing important public policies not related to employment discrimination.ⁿ⁵ In Gilmer, the Court held that an age discrimination action under ADEAⁿ⁶ was subject to compulsory arbitration pursuant to an arbitration agreement contained in a securities registration application. The Court declared that compulsory arbitration of ADEA claims is not inconsistent with the ADEA's statutory framework and underlying purposes, primarily because of the following reasons:ⁿ⁷

- (1) Neither the text of the ADEA nor its legislative history precludes arbitration.
- (2) The ADEA is flexible, in that it actually encourages informal methods of resolving claims.ⁿ⁸

(3) Arbitration does not undermine the EEOC's role because an individual claimant could still file an EEOC charge, even if he or she could not file a judicial action thereafter.

The Gilmer Court distinguished its prior cases⁹ holding that an arbitration clause in a collective bargaining agreement does not preclude a subsequent statutory claim. It explained that, "[T]he arbitration in those cases understandably was held not to preclude subsequent statutory actions" because, among other things, the employees therein agreed to arbitrate only their contract-based claims, not their statutory claims.¹⁰ The Court also pointed out that those cases did not involve application of the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA),¹¹ which "reflects a 'liberal federal policy favoring arbitration agreements.'" ¹²

[b] The Craft Line of Cases

Notwithstanding Gilmer, plaintiffs have contested the enforceability of arbitration agreements on various theories. One of these, recognized by the Ninth Circuit in Craft v. Campbell Soup Co.,¹³ was that employment arbitration agreements are not enforceable under the FAA. That theory did not survive the United States Supreme Court's holding in Circuit City v. Adams.¹⁴

[c] The Duffield Line of Cases

A second theory under which plaintiffs contest the enforceability of arbitration agreements is that the Civil Rights Act of 1991 ("CRA"), which granted a jury--trial right for Title VII claims, impliedly exempted discrimination claims from FAA coverage. That theory prevailed in *Duffield v. Robertson Stephens & Co.*¹⁵ In Duffield, the Ninth Circuit concluded that the 1991 Act strengthened Title VII, which after 1991 had included a jury-trial right, and precluded the compulsory arbitration of Title VII claims as a condition of employment. Relying on legislative history, the court held that Congress intended to prohibit in the 1991 Act mandatory requirements under which prospective employees agree as a condition of employment to surrender their rights to litigate future Title VII claims in a judicial forum.¹⁶ While the 1991 Act contained language encouraging the alternative resolution of disputes "where appropriate" and to "the extent authorized by law," the Duffield court said that this was limited to situations in which (1) arbitration furthers the purpose and objective of the CRA--by affording victims of discrimination an opportunity to present their claims in an alternative forum, a forum they find desirable--not by forcing an unwanted forum on them; and (2) the parties knowingly and voluntarily elect to use those methods.¹⁷ Pre-dispute agreements, according to the Duffield court, do not meet that test. The Duffield court held, however, that the plaintiff was still required to arbitrate breach of contract, deceit, and intentional infliction of emotional distress claims, which do not arise under the discrimination laws.¹⁸

In Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Nadj,¹⁹ the Ninth Circuit distinguished Duffield, holding that a claim brought under California's FEHA, and not under Title VII, is arbitrable. The court found plaintiff's failure to allege violation of Title VII had foreclosed reliance on Title VII's enforcement scheme. Thus, Title VII's preclusion of arbitration did not apply to plaintiff's FEHA claim.²⁰

In Equal Employment Opportunity Commission v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps,²¹ the Ninth Circuit, en banc, held that the Circuit had erred in Duffield in concluding that the Civil Rights Act of 1991 precludes mandatory arbitration of Title VII claims. The court acknowledged that after the United States Supreme Court's decision in Gilmer,²² the decision in Duffield stood alone and all of the other circuits had concluded that Title VII does not bar compulsory arbitration agreements.²³ The court also held that a right to jury trial does not preclude compulsory arbitration of Title VII claims.²⁴

Many state courts have rejected Duffield's reasoning as unsound. For example, in 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court,²⁵ a sexual harassment suit brought under the FEHA, the court of appeal rejected plaintiff's suggestion that her claims were rendered nonarbitrable by the Ninth Circuit's holding in Duffield. The 24 Hour Fitness court explained that

Duffield is not binding on the Court of Appeal and that it was inconsistent with the thrust of California cases such as Brookwood v. Bank of America n26 and Spellman v. Securities, Annuities & Ins. Services, n27 both of which held that statutory discrimination claims under the FEHA are arbitrable.ⁿ²⁸ The California Supreme Court in Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services n29 similarly dismissed Duffield as unpersuasive. Some courts have even said that Duffield is irreconcilable with the United States Supreme Court's holding in Circuit City.ⁿ³⁰

[d] The Lai Line of Cases

Some Ninth Circuit cases have taken a third approach to finding discrimination claims not arbitrable under an arbitration agreement. In those cases, the Ninth Circuit has declared that an arbitration agreement that would cover statutory discrimination claims at a minimum must spell out specifically that statutory claims are intended to be covered in order to ensure a "knowing and voluntary" agreement. In Prudential Ins. Co. of America v. Lai,ⁿ³¹ the court acknowledged that the federal EEO laws do not preclude an employee from entering into a binding agreement to arbitrate statutory employment discrimination claims, but the court held such an agreement is not enforceable unless there is "a knowing agreement to arbitrate," which thereby waives the judicial remedies afforded by Title VII and related state statutes.ⁿ³² The court noted that although the Civil Rights Act of 1991 included a provision "encouraging" the use of alternative means of dispute resolution, including arbitration, to resolve employment discrimination claims,ⁿ³³ legislative history indicated that this provision was intended to encourage arbitration to supplement, and not supplant, the remedies afforded by Title VII, and that arbitration was encouraged only if the parties knowingly and voluntarily agreed to use this method of resolution.ⁿ³⁴ Examining the documents involved, the Lai court held that the plaintiffs could not have understood from the securities registration application form they signed that they were agreeing to arbitrate sex discrimination suits because the form did not purport to describe the types of disputes that were to be subject to arbitration. Further, even if the plaintiffs had signed a contract containing the NASD arbitration clause, it would not have put them on notice that they were bound to arbitrate Title VII claims because it did not even refer to employment disputes. The court therefore concluded that the plaintiffs were not bound by any valid agreement to arbitrate these employment disputes because they did not knowingly contract to forego their statutory remedies in favor of arbitration.ⁿ³⁵

In a later Ninth Circuit case, Renteria v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America,ⁿ³⁶ the employer moved to compel arbitration of sexual harassment claims pursuant to a provision in a securities registration application form virtually identical to the one involved in Lai. At the time the Renteria plaintiff signed the form, the NASD arbitration clause was the same as that in effect at the time the plaintiffs in Lai signed their forms. The single difference was that the registration form in Renteria stated that the plaintiff was bound to arbitrate disputes listed in the NASD Code, "as may be amended from time to time." The court, however, found that such language did not cure the flaws that it found with the documents in Lai, because the contract still failed to describe the disputes that the parties were agreeing to arbitrate.ⁿ³⁷ Also, even though the NASD Code had been amended to put members on notice that employment disputes were subject to mandatory arbitration by the time the plaintiff was terminated and brought her sexual harassment claims, the court stated that the knowing waiver required under Lai must be measured from the time the plaintiff signed the form, and not from the time of her termination or from the time she filed suit.ⁿ³⁸

The Ninth Circuit, however, has not uniformly applied the holding in Lai to the arbitration of all statutory employment claims. In Kuehner v. Dickinson & Company,ⁿ³⁹ the Ninth Circuit refused to apply the Lai "knowing agreement to arbitrate" standard to claims under the FLSA. The court noted that Congress had the power to enact statutes which either precluded the waiver of a plaintiff's right to a judicial forum or imposed restrictions on the enforcement of arbitration contracts. However, the court also noted that the plaintiff carried the burden of proving that Congress intended to restrict the enforcement of contracts to arbitrate under any particular statute.ⁿ⁴⁰ The court ultimately concluded that Lai had identified a narrow congressional restriction on the enforcement of agreements to arbitrate Title VII claims, but that no similar limitations upon arbitration appeared in the text or legislative history of the FLSA.ⁿ⁴¹

At least one district court within the Ninth Circuit has not required that an arbitration agreement specifically reference the ADA to satisfy the "knowing agreement" standard. In Golenia v. Bob Baker Toyota,ⁿ⁴² the plaintiff signed an employment agreement that contained an arbitration clause.ⁿ⁴³ Plaintiff also signed an acknowledgment of receipt of an employee handbook which set forth the arbitration requirement. Finally, plaintiff signed a form entitled Acknowledgment of Receipt of Arbitration Policy, which referred plaintiff to the descriptions in the employment agreement and the employee handbook regarding arbitration. The arbitration clause itself specifically required the arbitration of any dispute "arising from, related to, or having any connection with my seeking employment with, employment by, or other association with the Company."ⁿ⁴⁴

In opposing arbitration, plaintiff first argued that he did not read the arbitration clause before executing the various documents evidencing the arbitration agreement. The court held that plaintiff could not rely on his failure to read the contract, because the contract contained a boldface, all-caps admonition not to sign the contract prior to reading and understanding its content. Citing Lai, the plaintiff also argued that the arbitration clause was unenforceable because it did not specifically mention the ADA. The court concluded that Lai did not require that an arbitration agreement specifically name the statute or describe the category of statutes whose procedures are to be waived.ⁿ⁴⁵ Instead, the court held, an arbitration agreement referencing "employment disputes" was sufficient to put the plaintiff on notice that all employment claims, including those under the ADA, were to be arbitrated.

In Nelson v. Cyprus Bagdad Copper Corp.,ⁿ⁴⁶ the Ninth Circuit held that the Lai waiver standard applies to cases under the ADA. To forfeit the right to a judicial forum under the ADA, the plaintiff must knowingly agree to arbitration. This requirement means that the choice must be explicitly presented to the employee and the employee must explicitly agree to waive the specific right in question.ⁿ⁴⁷

In Kummetz v. Tech Mold, Inc.,ⁿ⁴⁸ the arbitration agreement was held unenforceable because it did not meet this standard. By signing an employment information booklet acknowledgment, the employee did not knowingly agree to arbitrate employment discrimination claims brought under the ADA, since the acknowledgment did not notify the employee that the handbook contained an arbitration provision and did not mention or imply anything about employment-related disputes, civil rights statutes, or waivers of remedies.ⁿ⁴⁹ Further, the acknowledgment contained language negating the idea that the booklet amounted to or included a contractual agreement by stating that: (1) it did not constitute an employment contract and the employee remained an at-will employee; and (2) the policies, practices, and benefits in the booklet were subject to change at any time, without notice, at the sole and unlimited discretion of the employer. These clauses clearly implied that the booklet contained a set of non-contractual policies unilaterally established by the employer.ⁿ⁵⁰

In a case that preceded Lai, Spellman v. Securities, Annuities & Ins. Services, Inc.,ⁿ⁵¹ a California court of appeal followed the reasoning in Gilmer and held that an arbitration provision contained in a securities registration application signed by the plaintiff precluded the plaintiff from bringing a civil action for alleged race discrimination under the FEHA.ⁿ⁵² The NASD arbitration clause applied to disputes "arising out of or in connection with the business of [parties subject to the rules]." The court rejected the plaintiff's argument that since the wrongful termination/racial discrimination claim did not involve "business transactions," it was not subject to arbitration under the rules. The court broadly interpreted the language of the rule and found that the wrongful conduct alleged directly involved important aspects of the plaintiff's employment and business activities and thus was within the intent of the arbitration clause.ⁿ⁵³

Even after Lai, the California state courts adhered to the logic of Spellman. In Brookwood v. Bank of America, NT & SA,ⁿ⁵⁴ a California court of appeal criticized and distinguished the Ninth Circuit's holding in Lai. The court rejected the plaintiff's contentions that she did not "knowingly" sign an arbitration agreement by signing a registered representative agreement and a U-4 form, both of which contained compulsory arbitration clauses, and that the contract should be rescinded for unilateral mistake. The court noted that the plaintiff's sole authority for promoting her unilateral mistake theory was the "unfortunate choice of words" in Lai stating that statutory discrimination claims can be arbitrated only when such a procedure was "knowingly accepted" by the plaintiff.ⁿ⁵⁵ The court also rejected Brookwood's argument that Lai created a different standard of the law of contract revocation in allowing introduction of extrinsic evidence of a party's subjective intent. The court pointed out that the court in Lai made a narrow ruling based on narrow arbitration clauses that did not indicate that they referred to employment disputes. In contrast, the court in Brookwood stated that the clauses signed by the plaintiff were broad in scope and unmistakably applied to her causes of action.ⁿ⁵⁶ The Brookwood court went further, criticizing Lai as inconsistent with United States Supreme Court authority to the extent that it "purport[ed] to create a federal contractual standard for arbitration clauses" rather than allowing application of the state standard.ⁿ⁵⁷

In Cione v. Foresters Equity Servs., Inc.,ⁿ⁵⁸ a California court of appeal criticized and distinguished Lai and Renteria.ⁿ⁵⁹ The plaintiff brought a wrongful termination suit against a former employer which was a member of the NASD. The defendant moved to compel arbitration, alleging that it was a third party beneficiary of a mandatory arbitration clause contained in the plaintiff's Form U-4. The trial court denied the motion, concluding that the parties' written employment agreement was an integrated contract that did not incorporate the arbitration provision of the Form U-4 or otherwise provide for arbitration.

The court of appeal reversed and directed the trial court to order arbitration. To decide whether or not employment dispute claims are arbitrable, a court must determine each of the following:ⁿ⁶⁰

- (1) Whether an agreement to arbitrate existed;
- (2) Whether the employer waived its right to compel arbitration; and if not
- (3) Whether the plaintiff's claims are within the scope of the arbitration agreement.

Applying state law contract formation principles, the court concluded that the plaintiff agreed to arbitrate by executing Form U-4 (which contained an express arbitration clause) when he registered with NASD. The court rejected the plaintiff's contentions that the integration clause in the written employment contract superseded a Form U-4 arbitration agreement, or that the employer waived the right to compel arbitration by signing the agreement.ⁿ⁶¹ In evaluating the scope of the arbitration agreement, the court rejected the plaintiff's position that arbitration could not be compelled on the ground that the record contained no evidence that the plaintiff knowingly waived his rights to judicial adjudication of employment discrimination claims.ⁿ⁶²

- (1) Set forth the scope of the disputes subject to arbitration, and specifically mention discrimination claims arising under state and federal law;
- (2) Specify the waiver of the right to a jury trial; and
- (3) Refrain from placing any unnecessary restrictions on the procedures and substantive remedies that otherwise would apply in court litigation.

Whatever the vitality of Lai and Renteria may be, the practitioner can avoid the issue through careful drafting. Out of an abundance of caution the drafter should:

- (1) Set forth the scope of the disputes subject to arbitration, and specifically mention discrimination claims arising under state and federal law;
- (2) Specify the waiver of the right to a jury trial; and
- (3) Refrain from placing any unnecessary restrictions on the procedures and substantive remedies that otherwise would apply in court litigation.

Commentary by Kirby Wilcox.

The Spellman-Brookwood-Cione approach applies a fortiori to claims other than discrimination claims. The presumption is in favor of arbitrability.ⁿ⁶³ California's public policy is that arbitration agreements are to be liberally construed, and arbitration of a dispute will be ordered unless the agreement clearly does not apply to the dispute in question.ⁿ⁶⁴ Under this policy of liberal construction, one California court of appeal has held that an agreement to arbitrate "any dispute of any kind whatsoever, regarding the meaning, interpretation or enforcement" of the employment contract required arbitration of a claim that plaintiff was terminated in violation of public policy and that the termination breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing.ⁿ⁶⁵ The court reasoned that the broad agreement to arbitrate any dispute regarding enforcement of the contract clearly included the claim for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, which is part of every contract.ⁿ⁶⁶ The court also stated that the other claims involved duties arising by operation of law, which were allegedly breached during the employment relationship. Because the parties at least arguably intended to arbitrate those claims as well, the doubt must be resolved in favor of arbitration.ⁿ⁶⁷

[e] Unconscionability and the Armendariz Line of Cases

Unconscionability is the fourth theory under which some arbitration agreements are attacked. "[A]n arbitration agreement must be enforced on the basis of state law standards that apply to contracts in general."ⁿ⁶⁸ Thus, written arbitration agreements are generally enforceable under California law and are revocable only on grounds such as duress or fraud, that are grounds for revoking any contract.ⁿ⁶⁹ For example, in one case, a court of appeal held that a compulsory predispute arbitration agreement is not invalid just because it is required as a condition of employment or offered on a "take it or leave it" basis.ⁿ⁷⁰ "Put another way, ... the mandatory nature of an arbitration agreement does not, by itself, render the agreement unenforceable."ⁿ⁷¹ Unilateral mistake is a defense only when that mistake is known to the other party and is encouraged or fostered by that party; ignorance of a contractual provision is not a proper basis for avoidance of that provision.ⁿ⁷²

The mere fact that an agreement is a standardized contract does not make the agreement unconscionable. For example, an arbitration agreement contained in a preprinted form prepared by an employer and presented to an applicant on a take-it-or-leave-it basis with no opportunity to negotiate was part of an adhesion contract, but it was not unconscionable. The adhesive nature of a contract does not always make it procedurally unconscionable. Any procedural unfairness inherent in an adhesion agreement in an employment context was limited, because the arbitration provision was not buried in a lengthy employment agreement. Rather, it was contained on the last page of a seven-page employment application, underneath the heading "Please Read Carefully, Initial Each Paragraph and Sign Below." It was set forth in a separate, succinct (four-sentence) paragraph that the applicant initialed, affirming she had seen it. Further, procedural unconscionability alone does not render an agreement unenforceable, and the use of "I agree" language in the agreement, which provided that "all disputes" arising out of employment "will be submitted to binding arbitration," did not make the agreement substantively unconscionable as unilateral.^{n72.1}

As noted above, unconscionability has both procedural and substantive elements.ⁿ⁷³ The procedural element focuses on the unequal bargaining positions and hidden terms common in the context of adhesion contracts.ⁿ⁷⁴ particularly factors such as surprise and oppression.ⁿ⁷⁵ Surprise involves the extent to which the supposedly agreed-on terms are hidden in a prolix preprinted form drafted by the party seeking to enforce the disputed term.ⁿ⁷⁶ Oppression results when there is no real negotiation of contract terms because of unequal bargaining power.ⁿ⁷⁷ For oppression to exist under these criteria, the party challenging the provision must not have been able to obtain the goods or services from an alternative source.ⁿ⁷⁸ Unequal bargaining power may exist even between a corporate employer and a successful and sophisticated corporate executive when the executive is required to sign a standard nonnegotiable employment contract presented to him or her after accepting employment, and even after having negotiated extra benefits under a separate agreement.ⁿ⁷⁹

The substantive element, in general, addresses contract terms that are so one-sided as to "shock the conscience," or that impose harsh or oppressive terms.ⁿ⁸⁰

To deny enforcement of a contract on grounds of unconscionability, both procedural and substantive unconscionability must exist.ⁿ⁸¹ A relatively larger degree of one of the elements of unconscionability may compensate for a relatively smaller degree of the other.ⁿ⁸² Agreements (even adhesion agreements) that merely are forum-shifting devices are not unconscionable. Where, however, arbitration agreements unfairly create or destroy substantive rights, some courts have declined to enforce them, either in part (particularly where a severability clause exists), or in their entirety.

In Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc.,ⁿ⁸³ the California Supreme Court announced a set of guidelines for recurring unconscionability issues. The Court concluded that claims brought under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) are arbitrable if the arbitration permits an employee to vindicate his or her statutory rights.ⁿ⁸⁴ The Court articulated the five minimum requirements for lawful arbitration of nonwaivable statutory civil rights in the workplace pursuant to a mandatory employment arbitration agreement, finding that an arbitration agreement is lawful if it does each of the following:ⁿ⁸⁵

- Provides for neutral arbitrators.
- Provides for more than minimal discovery.
- Requires a written award.
- Provides for all of the types of relief that would otherwise be available in court.
- Does not require employees to pay either unreasonable costs or any arbitrators' fees or expenses as a condition of access to the arbitration forum.

However, the Court found two provisions of the arbitration agreement unconscionable and, consequently, the entire agreement unenforceable.ⁿ⁸⁶ The offending provisions were that the agreement (1) required arbitration only for the claims of the employee, the weaker party;ⁿ⁸⁷ and (2) limited the remedies available to the employee, including denying the employee statutorily imposed remedies such as punitive damages and attorneys fees.ⁿ⁸⁸ The Court also concluded that when an employer imposes mandatory arbitration as a condition of employment, the arbitration agreement or process cannot generally require the employee to bear any type of expense that the employee would not be required to bear if he or she were free to bring the action in court.ⁿ⁸⁹

In Blake v. Ecker,ⁿ⁹⁰ the court held that Armendariz rules apply retroactively.ⁿ⁹¹ In this case the arbitration provision required the employee to arbitrate all claims against the employer except workers' compensation claims, but did not require the employer to arbitrate claims against the employee. The court of appeal remanded and instructed the trial court to apply the unconscionability analysis in Armendariz to this case.ⁿ⁹²

Following Armendariz, in Pinedo v. Premium Tobacco Stores, Inc.,ⁿ⁹³ the court refused to compel arbitration. A former employee alleged four causes of action: One for constructive discharge based on workplace harassment, two for violations of the FEHA, and one for intentional infliction of emotional distress. The court concluded that the arbitration provision in the contract at issue was at least as unconscionable as the one presented in Armendariz. For example, it limited the recovery the employee could obtain to the amount of wages paid to the employee for the last six months prior to termination less unemployment benefits or pay from another job. In addition, it precluded recovery based on statutory claims—including recovery of damages contemplated within FEHA—and foreclosed recovery of statutory attorney's fees. The court also found that the provisions in the contract requiring the employee to travel for the arbitration and requiring the employee to pay all arbitration fees was potentially more oppressive than those in Armendariz. Finally, the court held that the agreement was inherently one-sided because the limitation on damages applied only to damages awarded in favor of the employee, not to damages claimed by the employer.ⁿ⁹⁴

In Circuit City v. Adams,ⁿ⁹⁵ the employee was required as a condition of employment to complete an application that contained a dispute-resolution agreement. The agreement required employees to submit all claims and disputes to binding arbitration, but had no similar requirement for the employer. Under the dispute-resolution rules for employees, the amount of damages was restricted, with back pay limited to one year, front pay to two years, and punitive damages to the greater of the amount of front and back pay awarded or $5,000. The employee was required to split the costs of the arbitration, including the daily fees of the arbitrator, the cost of a reporter to transcribe the proceedings, and the expense of renting the room in which the arbitration was held, unless the employee prevailed and the arbitrator decided to order the employer to pay the employee's share of the costs.ⁿ⁹⁶ When Adams sued the employer in state court alleging sexual harassment, retaliation, constructive discharge, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and discrimination based on sexual orientation, the employer petitioned in federal court to stay the state court proceedings and compel arbitration.

After the Supreme Court rejected the Ninth Circuit's threshold analysis of FAA coverage,ⁿ⁹⁷ the case returned to the Ninth Circuit for consideration of other issues. The Ninth Circuit held that under Armendariz, the arbitration agreement was unconscionable.ⁿ⁹⁸ The court found the arbitration agreement procedurally unconscionable as a contract of adhesion because it was a standard-form contract, drafted by the employer as the party with superior bargaining power. Further, the contract required the employee as the other party to either adhere to its terms without modification or reject the contract entirely.ⁿ⁹⁹ The court then found the agreement to be substantively unconscionable. The agreement unilaterally forced employees to arbitrate claims against the employer without requiring the employer to arbitrate claims against employees, limited the relief available to employees, and imposed a strict statute of limitations on arbitrating claims that would deprive employees of the benefit of the continuing violation doctrine available in FEHA suits.ⁿ¹⁰⁰ The court also took issue with the requirement that the employee split the arbitrator's fees with the employer.ⁿ¹⁰¹

On the other hand, in Circuit City v. Ahmed,ⁿ¹⁰² a later version of Circuit City's arbitration program was enforced. Here the arbitration agreement allowed employees to opt out of the arbitration program for a period of time after it was announced. Thus, they had a meaningful choice not to participate in the program. The Ninth Circuit found the genuine opt-out possibility to be dispositive. Because of the opt-out provision, the agreement was not procedurally unconscionable. The court found further that the arbitration agreement also lacked any other indicia of procedural unconscionability. The terms of the agreement were clearly spelled out in written materials and a videotape presentation; the employee was encouraged to contact the employer's representatives or consult an attorney prior to deciding whether to participate in the program; and he was given 30 days to decide whether to participate in the program.ⁿ¹⁰³

In Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Mantor,ⁿ¹⁰⁴ the Ninth Circuit revisited the Circuit City arbitration agreement and found it unenforceable under California law of unconscionability. The court found the agreement procedurally unconscionable because, unlike the situation in Circuit City v. Najd,ⁿ¹⁰⁵ and Circuit City v. Ahmed,ⁿ¹⁰⁶ in which both Najd and Ahmed had a meaningful opportunity to opt-out of the arbitration program, the plaintiff in Mantor had no such meaningful opportunity.ⁿ¹⁰⁷ The court also found the agreement substantively unconscionable based on the provisions concerning the statute of limitations, class actions, cost-splitting and Circuit City's unilateral power to modify or terminate the arbitration agreement.ⁿ¹⁰⁸ The court then held that the unconscionable provisions could not be severed and the agreement was unconscionable in its entirety.ⁿ¹⁰⁹ The Ninth Circuit again considered the issue in a follow-up to Mantor, and held that the holding in EEOC v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps,ⁿ¹¹⁰ (that the Civil Rights Act of 1991 did not preclude employers from requiring employees to arbitrate future Title VII claims as a condition of employment) did not alter the landscape of procedural unconscionability in the Ninth Circuit, and did not implicitly undermine the decision in Mantor I, that Circuit City's arbitration agreement was procedurally unconscionable under California law.ⁿ¹¹¹

In Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers,ⁿ¹¹² the Ninth Circuit held that a law firm's dispute resolution program was both procedurally and substantively unconscionable. The court found that the program was written by a sophisticated employer, and there were no factors of adhesion, such as surprise or concealment. However, the program was "take it or leave it," with no opt-out provision, leaving an employee only the options of being subject to the program or leaving.ⁿ¹¹³ The court also found provisions of the program substantively unconscionable and not severable. A provision requiring that an employee notify the employer within one year when any claim is known to the employee or with reasonable effort should have been known was oppressive, because it shortened the time to bring employment-related statutory claims. Further, a confidentiality provision was substantively unconscionable, because it favored the employer. A non-mutual provision exempting the employer from arbitration for claims by the employer for injunctive or other equitable relief for violations of the attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine or disclosure of other confidential information also was substantively unconscionable, because it was too broad and one-sided. Finally, an all-inclusive bar to administrative actions was unconscionable as contrary to public policy. Because the program contained four substantively unconscionable or void terms, they could not be stricken or excised without gutting the agreement.ⁿ¹¹⁴

In O'Hare v. Municipal Resource Consultants,ⁿ¹¹⁵ an action for wrongful discharge and age discrimination in violation of FEHA,ⁿ¹¹⁶ the court found an arbitration agreement both procedurally and substantively unconscionable. The agreement was substantively unconscionable because it required the employee to arbitrate all of his claims, expressly permitted the employer to file a lawsuit seeking injunctive and equitable relief against him, and was silent about requiring the employer to arbitrate any other claim it may have had against him.ⁿ¹¹⁷ Also, the agreement was silent on the issue of the allocation of costs but explicitly incorporated the rules of the American Arbitration Association, which require the parties to equally bear the expenses of arbitration unless they agree otherwise or the arbitrator directs otherwise, and to equally bear the arbitrator's compensation unless they agree otherwise or the law provides otherwise.ⁿ¹¹⁸ The court did not reach the issue of whether the provision of the agreement denying the employee any right to discovery was unconscionable.ⁿ¹¹⁹ The court concluded that substantive unconscionability so otherwise permeated the arbitration provision that it should not be enforced.ⁿ¹²⁰ The court also found procedural unconscionability despite the lack of extrinsic evidence about the negotiations, if any, preceding the execution of the employment contract, because the contract itself created a sufficient inference of procedural unconscionability.ⁿ¹²¹

In Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc.,ⁿ¹²² an employee was required to sign an arbitration agreement providing that awards exceeding $ 50,000.00 would, at either party's written request within 20 days after issuance, be subject to reversal and remand, modification, or reduction following review of the record and arguments of the parties by a second arbitrator who must, as far as practicable, proceed according to the law and procedures applicable to appellate review by the California Court of Appeal. Following Armendariz, the California Supreme Court found the provision unconscionable. The Court first found procedural unconscionability because the employer had imposed an adhesive arbitration agreement on the employee.ⁿ¹²³ The Court then found substantive unconscionability because the employer, as the party imposing arbitration, mandated a post-arbitration arbitral proceeding wholly or largely to its benefit at the expense of the employee without any legitimate commercial need.ⁿ¹²⁴ The Court found the unconscionable portion severable from the agreement as a whole because there was only a single unconscionable provision (the one-sided arbitration appeal), no contract reformation was required, and there was no indication the state of the law was sufficiently clear at the time the agreement was signed to conclude that the appellate arbitration provision was drafted in bad faith.ⁿ¹²⁵

In Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc.,ⁿ¹²⁶ the court found an arbitration agreement in an employment agreement unconscionable because (1) it required the employee to share the costs of the arbitration; (2) it did not provide for adequate discovery; and (3) it limited the employee's remedies and extended the employer's remedies under statute. The appellate court found first that the arbitration agreement was a contract of adhesion and therefore procedurally unconscionable. The employee denied knowing she had signed an agreement to arbitrate disputes until after she filed her lawsuit, and the undisputed circumstances in which she received and signed the arbitration agreement, including her receipt of the arbitration agreement in a one-page document in a binder file along with numerous other employment-related documents, the lack of time for any real review of the documents, and the failure of anyone to explain the significance of the agreement, supported her assertion. The court also found that the provision requiring the arbitrator to decide enforceability issues was substantively unconscionable.ⁿ¹²⁷ The court then went on to find that the provision of the arbitration agreement that the employee and the employer would equally share filing fees and the fees and costs of the arbitrator, with certain caps on the employee's share, was unconscionable, because when an employer imposes mandatory arbitration as a condition of employment, as in Ontiveros, the arbitration agreement or arbitration process cannot generally require the employee to bear any type of expense the employee would not be required to bear if he or she were free to bring the action in court. The cap contained in the agreement on the total amount payable by the employee was irrelevant, because the employee could not be required to pay fees unique to arbitration.ⁿ¹²⁸ The discovery provisions of the arbitration agreement were substantively unconscionable, because they improperly limited discovery in a FEHA action to the extent that they were likely to deprive the employee of adequate discovery, given that the employer was presumably in possession of the vast majority of evidence that would be relevant to employment-related claims against it.ⁿ¹²⁹ Finally, the trial court did not abuse its discretion when it refused to sever the unconscionable provisions and determined, instead, that the entire agreement is unenforceable, given the multiple unlawful provisions.ⁿ¹³⁰

In Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc.,ⁿ¹³¹ the Court of Appeal held that an arbitration agreement was procedurally and substantively unconscionable. There was a degree of procedural unconscionability in two respects, which indicated that the employees' decision to enter into the arbitration agreement likely was not a free and informed decision but was marked by some degree of oppression and unfair surprise. First, the inequality in bargaining power between low-wage employees and their employer made it likely the employees felt at least some pressure to sign the arbitration agreement. Second, the arbitration agreement suggested there were multiple arbitrators from which to choose, but failed to mention that the designated arbitration provider included only one arbitrator, which rendered the arbitrator selection process illusory and created a significant risk that the employer, as a "repeat player" before the same arbitrator, would reap a significant advantage. Further the arbitrator selection provision was substantively unconscionable.

In Olvera v. El Pollo Loco, Inc.,ⁿ¹³² the court found an arbitration agreement that the employer instituted and presented to the employees was unenforceable, as it was both procedurally and substantively unconscionable. It was procedurally unconscionable in two respects. First, the inequality in bargaining power between the low-wage employees and their employer made it likely the employees felt at least some pressure to sign the acknowledgment and agree to the new dispute resolution policy, whatever they understood that policy to be. Second, the employees' agreement to be bound by the new dispute resolution policy was not an informed decision. The description provided in the explanatory materials was misleading because it described the new policy as one of required mediation rather than required arbitration. The actual new policy appeared in much smaller type than the explanatory materials, and in English only, while the misleading explanatory materials appeared in English and Spanish, which exacerbated the effect of the misrepresentation and made it more likely that the employees would be misled. In light of the totally inaccurate and misleading explanatory materials, the court concluded that the degree of procedural unconscionability was high. The court also found that a class arbitration waiver in the agreement was substantively unconscionable. The class arbitration waiver would have insulated the employer from employee class actions and class arbitrations on behalf of all of the employees who signed the acknowledgment, many of whom presumably were low-wage earners. A class action or class arbitration may be the most effective way, and perhaps the only effective way, for those employees to vindicate their statutory rights,ⁿ¹³³ particularly as many of those employees were low-wage earners with limited English language skills who were likely ill-informed of their statutory rights.ⁿ¹³⁴ Moreover, the waiver was unfairly one-sided because it benefited only the employer, which was unlikely to sue its employees in a class action lawsuit.ⁿ¹³⁵ Thus, the high degree of procedural unconscionability of the arbitration agreement as a whole, together with the substantive unconscionability of the class arbitration waiver, rendered the waiver provision unconscionable.

In Armendariz, the Court held that an arbitration agreement's silence on the issue of who will bear the costs of arbitration does not mean that the employee would be statutorily compelled to share the arbitration costs,ⁿ¹³⁶ and that the imposition of such costs renders the arbitration agreement unenforceable. Instead, the courts will infer from the silence an agreement that the employer bear the arbitration forum costs.ⁿ¹³⁷ In Green Tree Financial Corp. v. Randolph,ⁿ¹³⁸ the United States Supreme Court held that the silence of an arbitration agreement regarding the purchase of a motor home on who would bear the costs of arbitration alone was insufficient to render the agreement unenforceable because the risk that the weaker party would be saddled with prohibitive costs was too speculative to justify invalidation of the agreement. The Court found that when a party seeks to invalidate an arbitration agreement on the ground that arbitration would be prohibitively expensive, that party bears the burden of showing the likelihood of incurring such costs.ⁿ¹³⁹ Although Green Tree did not elaborate on the kinds of cost sharing arrangements that would be unenforceable, dicta in that case and several federal cases interpreting itⁿ¹⁴⁰ suggest that federal law requires only that employers not impose "prohibitively expensive" arbitration costs on the employee and that determination of whether such costs have been imposed are to be made on a case-by-case basis.ⁿ¹⁴¹ Armendariz, on the other hand, categorically imposes costs unique to arbitration on employers when unwaivable rights pursuant to a mandatory employment arbitration agreement are at stake.ⁿ¹⁴² In Little, the California Supreme Court found that Green Tree did not require that states comply with federal arbitration cost sharing standards, or that the FAA requires state courts to adopt precisely the same means as federal courts to ensure that the vindication of public rights will not be stymied by burdensome arbitration costs.ⁿ¹⁴³ In Yuen v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹⁴⁴ the court held that in arbitration proceedings governed by the Federal Arbitration Act,ⁿ¹⁴⁵ the arbitrator should decide whether the arbitration agreement permits consolidation of two arbitration proceedings.

In *McManus v. CIBC World Markets Corp.*ⁿ¹⁴⁶ the court held first that the California definition of unconscionability and the requirements of Armendariz were not preempted to the extent that they conflicted with the federal system of arbitration created by the SEC's adoption of form U-4 and its signature requirements and the commission's approval of the NASD and NYSE arbitration rules pursuant to its regulatory authority.ⁿ¹⁴⁷ The court then held that because the employee was bound by the offer letter and the form U-4 as a condition of employment, the arbitration agreements were adhesive and procedurally unconscionable.ⁿ¹⁴⁸ However, the court found that the agreements were not substantively unconscionable and that the trial court should grant the employer's motion to compel arbitration.ⁿ¹⁴⁹ The court found that the fee provision created a risk that the employee would be required to pay unreasonable costs at the time the employer imposed mandatory arbitration clauses as a condition of employment, and therefore it was unenforceable. However, the court found that provision severable and the remainder of the agreement enforceable. The court found that a mandatory arbitrator selection process was not unconscionable because the employee presented no evidence that the NASD or NYSE arbitration procedures would entail a "repeat player effect" and that employees were allowed to participate in the selection process. The court also found that neither the lack of a requirement that the arbitrator be a lawyer or retired judge nor the discovery procedures rendered the agreement unconscionable.

In Kinney v. United Healthcare Services,ⁿ¹⁵⁰ an action for sexual harassment and retaliation, the Court of Appeal used the traditional unconscionability analysisⁿ¹⁵¹ to find that the employer's agreement requiring mandatory arbitration of all disputes brought by the employee, but allowing the employer to bring suit in court, was an unconscionable adhesion contract and thus was unenforceable.ⁿ¹⁵² The court found procedural unconscionability based on the unequal bargaining powers of the parties and on the circumstances surrounding the employee's receipt of the employee handbook containing the arbitration provision, including the necessity of her immediately acknowledging receipt.ⁿ¹⁵³ The court also found that the agreement was substantively unconscionable, or "so one-sided as to 'shock' the conscience," because the arbitration obligation was unilateral.ⁿ¹⁵⁴ The court noted that unilateral limitations on the employee's discovery and damages added to the unconscionable nature of the agreement. Although the court acknowledged that there is a strong public policy favoring arbitration, it concluded that the policy is manifestly undermined by provisions in arbitration clauses, such as this one, which fail to satisfy even a "modicum of bilaterality" and "seek to make the arbitration process itself an offensive weapon in one party's arsenal."ⁿ¹⁵⁵

Similarly, another court of appeal found an agreement to arbitrate to be unconscionable because the agreement bound the employee to arbitrate all claims, but allowed the employer to go to court on its claims. Also, the agreement deprived the employee of the right to recover punitive damages, equitable relief, attorney's fees and costs, and it limited the period for bringing any action to one year.ⁿ¹⁵⁶

In Martinez v. Master Protection Corp.,ⁿ¹⁵⁷ the court held an arbitration agreement procedurally and substantively unconscionable. It found the agreement procedurally unconscionable because it was an essential part of a "take it or leave it" employment condition, without more. The employee was required to execute the agreement as a prerequisite of his employment, and there was no evidence that the employee had any opportunity to negotiate or refuse to sign the arbitration agreement. The court also found the agreement substantively unconscionable because of each of the following:

- It lacked mutuality because it required employees to arbitrate claims for unpaid wages, wrongful termination, employment discrimination and the like, which employees are most likely to assert against the employer, while simultaneously permitting the employer to litigate in court the claims it is most likely to assert against its employees, i.e., claims involving trade secrets, misuse or disclosure of confidential information and unfair competition.
- It unacceptably imposed costs on the employee he would not be required to bear in a judicial forum, because it required parties to split the cost of the arbitration and to post fees in advance of the hearing.
- Its provision of a six-month statute of limitations unlawfully restricted the employee's ability to vindicate his civil and statutory rights, because it required assertion of all statutory and common law claims covered by the agreement within six months of the date the claim arose, and deemed the claim void and waived if the party asserting the claim failed to do so, even if there was a federal or state statute of limitations that would have given more time to pursue the claim.

Since the unconscionable provisions could not be severed from the agreement, the court found the agreement unconscionable and unenforceable.ⁿ¹⁵⁸

Similarly, in Fitz v. NCR Corp.,ⁿ¹⁵⁹ the court found provisions of an arbitration agreement procedurally and substantively unconscionable and concluded that the unconscionable provisions could not be severed. The court found the agreement procedurally unconscionable because the employer's arbitration policy was presented in a take it or leave it manner, presenting a high degree of oppressiveness. The court found the agreement substantively unconscionable because the arbitration policy compelled arbitration of claims more likely to be brought by the employee, the weaker party, but exempted from arbitration the types of claims more likely to be brought by the employer, the stronger party.

By contrast, in 24 Hour Fitness v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹⁶⁰ the employer presented an arbitration agreement to an employee on a take-it-or-leave-it basis. But the agreement was enforced because there was no proof of substantive unconscionability. The arbitration clause here applied equally to the employer and to the employee; it allowed both parties substantially the same array of discovery procedures available in civil actions; and did not create an imbalance in remedies potentially available to either side.ⁿ¹⁶¹ The plaintiff offered alternative grounds to void the arbitration agreement, including lack of mutuality and illusoriness. The court rejected these claims as well. The court said that employer's power to amend the contract did not render it illusory, because written notice was required to amend, and the provision would be construed to require the employer to exercise the right fairly and in good faith.ⁿ¹⁶²

Similarly, in Roman v. Superior Court,^{n162.1} the arbitration agreement was enforceable even though it was part of a contract of adhesion that consisted of a preprinted employment application form prepared by the employer and presented to the applicant on a take-it-or-leave-it basis with no opportunity to negotiate. Any procedural unfairness inherent in an adhesion agreement in the employment context was limited. The arbitration provision was not buried in a lengthy employment agreement. Rather, it was contained on the last page of a seven-page employment application, underneath the heading "Please Read Carefully, Initial Each Paragraph and Sign Below." It was set forth in a separate, succinct (four-sentence) paragraph that the applicant initialed, affirming she had seen it. Whatever measure of procedural unconscionability may have been present in a case involving an adhesive employment agreement between parties with unequal bargaining power, procedural unconscionability alone did not render the agreement unenforceable. There was no substantive unconscionability, because the "I agree" language in an agreement providing that "all disputes" arising out of employment "will be submitted to binding arbitration," did not make the arbitration provision unilateral, and the agreement was bilateral. Further, the arbitration agreement did not limit the employee's statutory FEHA rights or impose an undue limitation on discovery. In Armendariz, the Supreme Court rejected an employee's similar claim that a purportedly inadequate provision for discovery in an arbitration agreement was a proper ground for denying arbitration of FEHA claims. In Roman, the AAA's employment dispute rules applicable to the arbitration proceeding expressly authorized the arbitrator to order "such discovery, by way of deposition, interrogatory, document production, or otherwise, as the arbitrator considers necessary to a full and fair exploration of the issues in dispute, consistent with the expedited nature of arbitration." There appeared to be no meaningful difference between the scope of discovery approved in Armendariz and that authorized by the AAA employment dispute rules, certainly not the role of the arbitrator in controlling the extent of actual discovery permitted. Requiring the employee to arbitrate "all disputes" not resolved internally did not prevent her from asserting administrative claims with the DFEH and the California Labor Commissioner. Finally, although the arbitration agreement itself did not mention costs, at the time the agreement was signed, the AAA rules, incorporated by reference into the agreement, provided the costs of the arbitration would be divided equally among the parties. Even if the 1997 AAA cost provisions governed and the cost-splitting provision was substantively unconscionable, it did not provide a basis to void the arbitration agreement. The court, in its discretion, could refuse to enforce the contract as a whole if it is permeated by the unconscionability, it could strike any single clause or group of clauses that were so tainted or were contrary to the essential purpose of the agreement, or it could simply limit unconscionable clauses so as to avoid unconscionable results. In Armendariz, the court found two factors weighed against severance of the unlawful provisions. First, the arbitration provision contained "more than one unlawful provision," suggesting a "systematic effort to impose arbitration on an employee not simply as an alternative to litigation, but as an inferior forum that works to the employer's advantage." Second, the agreement's lack of mutuality permeated the entire agreement, requiring not just severance of the provision, but a reformation and augmentation of the agreement. Neither factor was present in Roman, and the interests of justice were furthered by severance of the cost provision, which, if it was unconscionable, was plainly "collateral to the main purpose of the contract."

■ PRACTICE TIP--EMPLOYEE'S PERSPECTIVE:

While courts continue to wrestle with difficult questions presented by employers' use of mandatory, pre-dispute agreements requiring arbitration of statutory claims as a condition of employment, plaintiffs' counsel should scrutinize them carefully. If an agreement unreasonably "stacks the deck" in favor of the employer, it may well not have the intended binding effect on the employee. Thus, if the employer has access to a judicial forum but the employee doesn't, or if the "arbitration" is really no more than summary review of the dispute in a forum controlled by the employer and the employee is forced to pay any portion of the forum fees, or if the agreement is otherwise overreaching and arguably unconscionable, careful consideration should be given to filing the claim in state court. Under these circumstances it may well be advisable also to include a claim for a declaration that the arbitration agreement--which the employer will undoubtedly assert as a defense--is unenforceable. Commentary by John M. True, III.

In Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp., n163 the court applied Armendariz to a post-employment arbitration agreement. The employee had been employed by the employer's predecessor. The employee and the employer's predecessor entered into an agreement to settle a wrongful termination action, which included a new employment agreement containing entered into by the parties at the time of the settlement, which included a mandatory arbitration provision. The employee later sued the employer alleging demotion in retaliation for protected workplace activity. The employer moved to compel arbitration and stay all proceedings, based on the mandatory arbitration clause in the employment agreement. The trial court denied arbitration on the ground that the arbitration agreement was unconscionable. The Court of Appeal agreed with the trial court that the agreement was substantively unconscionable, because it unilaterally required the employee only to arbitrate his employment claims, and the parties' agreement to arbitrate disputes concerning the validity, interpretation, or enforcement of the settlement agreement did not infuse an element of bilaterality into the employment agreement. The arbitration agreement also required the employee to submit to discussions with his supervisors in advance of, and as a condition precedent to, having his dispute resolved through binding arbitration, which suggested that the employer would receive a free peek at plaintiff's case, thereby obtaining an advantage if and when plaintiff were to later demand arbitration. Finally, the unilateral arbitration clause limited the time the employee had to assert a claim to a maximum of 180 days of the date of his employment termination or another dispute or controversy first arose, shortened, in some instances, from the time for filing a legal action by a period of more than three and one-half years.ⁿ¹⁶⁴ The arbitration agreement was not procedurally unconscionable due to surprise, because the employee was represented by an attorney at the time he executed the settlement agreement and employment agreement. The court then rejected the contention that, as a general proposition, Armendariz expressly excepted the circumstance in which an employer and employee entered into a binding arbitration agreement after a dispute had arisen, i.e., "postdispute." Further, although the settlement agreement including the arbitration provisions was a postdispute agreement, the employment agreement was not because it contemplated that the parties were starting a new employer-employee relationship with specific terms. But the court ultimately found the arbitration agreement procedurally unconscionable because, although the employee was represented by an attorney and did negotiate a "good cause" termination provision, there was oppression in the mandatory employment arbitration agreement.ⁿ¹⁶⁵ Finally, the court found that the unconscionable provisions were not severable.ⁿ¹⁶⁶

[f] Whether a Contract Is Formed

A final attack on arbitration agreements focuses more generally on whether a contract has been formed in the first instance. To be enforceable, the employee must assent to the arbitration agreement. In Romo v. Y-3 Holdings, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁶⁷ the employee had signed an acknowledgment of receipt of the employee handbook, which contained an arbitration agreement. However, the arbitration agreement contained separate lines for signature by the employee and employer, neither of which had been signed. The court held that the employee's signature on the acknowledgment did not bind her to the terms of arbitration contained within the handbook, since the arbitration agreement was severable from the employee's agreement to be bound by the benefits, policies, rules and procedures in the remaining sections of the handbook.ⁿ¹⁶⁸ Similarly, in Mitri v. Arnel Management Co.,ⁿ¹⁶⁹ the employee handbook stated that all employees were required to sign an arbitration agreement as a condition of employment. Two employees who sued their employer on sexual discrimination, harassment and related claims signed acknowledgments of receiving the handbook, but the employer did not produce separate arbitration agreements signed by the employees. The Court of Appeal held that the documents prepared by the employer, which were the employee handbook and the signed acknowledgments of receipt, failed to show an express bilateral contract was entered into through which the parties agreed to arbitrate. The employee handbook's arbitration provision only placed the employees on notice that they would be called upon to sign a separate binding arbitration agreement; thus, the provision in the handbook and subsequent performance did not constitute a unilateral contract of binding arbitration. The acknowledgment receipt forms signed by each employee did not constitute evidence of each employee's acquiescence to the arbitration agreement provision in the employee handbook, because there was no reference in the acknowledgment receipt form to an agreement by the employee to abide by the arbitration agreement provision in the handbook.

On the other hand, the Ninth Circuit has held that the employee need not have signed an agreement to arbitrate; a provision in a written employment manual is sufficient if sufficiently accepted or ratified by the employee.ⁿ¹⁷⁰

In Metters v. Ralphs Grocery Co.,ⁿ¹⁷¹ even though the employee had signed a dispute resolution form entitled "Notice of Dispute & Request for Resolution," the court would not compel arbitration of his racial discrimination and harassment complaints, on the grounds that a contract had not been formed. The dispute resolution form did not look like a contract and did not alert the employee that he was agreeing to binding arbitration. The arbitration provisions of the form were confusing and full of legalistic references to an unattached policy, which the form explained applied to "covered disputes," but failed to define those disputes. It further explained that "covered disputes" would be resolved through "voluntary mediation and/or mandatory final and binding arbitration" if not resolved by informal means. Under the policy, the employee had no real choice to avoid arbitration if he wanted the employer to take action on his complaint. However, because the complaint was for discrimination under the FEHA, the employer's duty to investigate promptly was affirmative and mandatory, not dependent on whether the employee agreed to arbitration.ⁿ¹⁷²

In Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Nadj, n173 the employee claimed that a dispute resolution agreement mandating arbitration of employment disputes was not a valid contract because he never assented to it and it lacked consideration. The court found that although the employer was not required to submit any of its claims against employees to arbitration, the employer's promise to submit to arbitration and to forego the option of a judicial forum for a specified class of claims constituted sufficient consideration. As to the employee's assent, the court found that the circumstances permitted an inference that the employee assented by failing to exercise his right to opt out of the program. This was further supported by the employee's signed acknowledgment of receipt of the agreement, which clearly stated the significance of his failure to opt out and described in detail the mechanism by which he could express his disagreement. The explicit opportunity to review the agreement with an attorney highlighted the legal effect of the agreement. The employer communicated in detail and in writing the effect of the employee's acceptance on his right to bring claims against his employer. The employer made clear that opting out of the agreement would have no effect on the employment relationship. Finally, the employee had thirty days to review the agreement and mull over whether to opt out of it. Thus, inaction was indistinguishable from overt acceptance.n174

[g] Waiver

[i] Waiver of Arbitration

Even when an enforceable agreement exists, prudent counsel will promptly assert arbitrability in order to guard against a finding of waiver. In Davis v. Continental Airlines, Inc., n175 a sexual harassment case brought under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act, the court declined to compel arbitration pursuant to the employer's internal grievance procedure. In the trial court, the defendants argued that the plaintiff was required to resolve her dispute by following the steps in a company appeal procedure specified in an employee handbook. The trial court denied defendants' motion to compel arbitration on the alternative grounds that: (1) The employee handbook did not set forth a mandatory agreed procedure as an alternative to court litigation, and (2) the defendants waived any right to compel arbitration by unreasonably delaying their motion until after obtaining extensive discovery from the plaintiff. The court of appeal affirmed on the ground of waiver, and did not reach the issues of whether the employee handbook set forth a binding agreement to arbitrate.n176 Noting that no single test exists to determine waiver of the right to compel arbitration, the court concluded that waiver may be found when the party seeking arbitration has done any of the following:n177

- (1) Previously taken steps inconsistent with an intent to invoke arbitration;
- (2) Unreasonably delayed in seeking arbitration; or
- (3) Acted in bad faith or with willful misconduct.

The Davis court also summarized the applicable standard of review. Despite the heavy burden of proof on the party arguing waiver (which should not lightly be inferred given the public policy favoring arbitration), a trial court's determination that the right to compel arbitration has been waived ordinarily involves a question of fact, which is binding on the appellate court if supported by substantial evidence. An appellate court may not reverse a trial court's finding of waiver unless the record as a matter of law compels a finding of nonwaiver.n178 The court concluded that the trial court could reasonably infer that defendants had unreasonably delayed their motion to compel arbitration in order to take advantage of court discovery procedures to learn plaintiff's strategies, evidence, and witnesses and to limit the plaintiff to a particular version of the facts. Conflicting inferences are for the trial court to resolve, and in this case the record supported the trial court's implicit rejection of defense counsel's claim that the bulk of discovery was conducted to ascertain the plaintiff's knowledge of the arbitration procedure.n179

In Ferguson v. Countrywide Credit Industries, Inc., n180 following Armendariz, the Ninth Circuit held an arbitration agreement unconscionable under California law. The court first found procedural unconscionability because the arbitration agreement was imposed as a condition of employment, was non-negotiable, and placed the employee in a position of unequal bargaining power.¹⁸¹ The court then found substantive unconscionability because the agreement compelled arbitration of the claims employees are most likely to bring against the employer, but exempted from arbitration the claims the employer was most likely to bring against its employees. The agreement imposed multiple fees on the employee, meaning that arbitration would cost the employee thousands of dollars, and it required a split of the arbitrator's fees. Also, the employer failed to effectively modify the arbitration agreement to include a revised fee scheme. And although the discovery provisions, alone, were not unconscionable, in the context of an agreement unduly favoring the employer at every turn, their inclusion reaffirmed the court's belief that the agreement as a whole was substantively unconscionable.¹⁸² The court concluded that the lack of mutuality regarding the types of claims requiring arbitration, the fee provisions, and the discovery provisions so permeated the arbitration agreement and so "tilt[ed] the playing field" that the court could not sever its offending provisions.¹⁸³

The California Supreme Court has set forth the factors to be considered under California law to determine whether arbitration has been waived:¹⁸⁴

- Whether the party's actions are inconsistent with the right to arbitrate.
- Whether the litigation machinery has been substantially invoked and the parties were well into preparation of a lawsuit before the party notified the opposing party of an intent to arbitrate.
- Whether a party either requested arbitration enforcement close to the trial date or delayed for a long period before seeking a stay.
- Whether a defendant seeking arbitration filed a counterclaim without asking for a stay of the proceedings.
- Whether important intervening steps, such as taking advantage of judicial discovery procedures not available in arbitration, had taken place.
- Whether the delay affected, misled, or prejudiced the opposing party.

While an employee's failure properly to initiate arbitration under the AAA rules may make it more difficult for the employee to establish waiver, it does not foreclose the assertion by the employee, as it does in the assertion of breach of the agreement as a defense to mandatory arbitration.¹⁸⁵ Waiver focuses on the actions of the party charged with waiver. The employee's conduct may bear upon the factors listed above, but a fact finder could reasonably determine that the employer waived its right independently of whether the employee perfected a request for arbitration.¹⁸⁶

Waiver is an equitable doctrine, and courts can apply it to redress injustice when technical requirements prevent the court from otherwise providing adequate legal remedies.¹⁸⁷ In federal courts, any examination of whether the right to compel arbitration has been waived must be conducted in light of the strong federal policy favoring enforcement of arbitration agreements.¹⁸⁸

In a non-employment case, the court held that a party who enters into a pre-dispute agreement to arbitrate does not waive the right to resort to arbitration merely because the party first attempts to air the grievance in court. At most, such an effort might lead to a waiver of that party's right to thereafter enforce the arbitration agreement against an unwilling opposing party.¹⁸⁹

[ii] Waiver of Class Arbitration

A class action waiver in an arbitration agreement may be unconscionable. For example, in Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc.,ⁿ¹⁹⁰ a former employee brought a class action against the employer for alleged misclassification of salaried retail employers as exempt. The employer moved to compel arbitration under the employer's dispute resolution agreement, which every employee was required to sign, which contained a provision that no covered claim could be arbitrated as a class action, and which did not exclude wage and hour claims from coverage. The court of appeal first found that a court, rather than an arbitrator, could decide whether the agreement was unconscionable.ⁿ¹⁹¹ The court then held that the class action waiver was unconscionable. The plaintiff made the factual showing articulated in Gentry v. Superior Court,ⁿ¹⁹² of the real world obstacles to the vindication of class members' rights to overtime pay through individual arbitration, including the modest size of the potential individual recovery, the potential for retaliation against members of the class, the fact that absent members of the class may be ill-informed about their rights, and that the waiver was patently one-sided.ⁿ¹⁹³ Because at least two aspects of the arbitration agreement are unconscionable, i.e., the provision for arbitrator determinations of unconscionability issues and the class action waiver, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in concluding that the arbitration agreement was permeated by an unlawful purpose and that the agreement as a whole should not be enforced.ⁿ¹⁹⁴

[h] Judicial Review

The scope of judicial review of arbitration agreements is extremely narrow.ⁿ¹⁹⁵ Whether the parties can create a "designer" standard contemplating greater appellate review is unresolved. Although the Ninth Circuit has held that the parties could do so, as long as a well-understood and well-accepted standard is chosen,ⁿ¹⁹⁶ one California court of appeal has held otherwise.ⁿ¹⁹⁷

California courts have consistently held that the decisions of arbitrators are not generally reviewable for errors of fact or law. Courts will not review the validity of the arbitrator's reasoning or the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the arbitrator's award.ⁿ¹⁹⁸ Further, an arbitrator's decision is not reviewable even when the arbitration agreement constrains the arbitrator to decide according to the rule of law.ⁿ¹⁹⁹ Thus, the parties to an arbitration agreement cannot render an arbitrator's decision reviewable for errors of law merely by providing in the agreement that the arbitrator must apply California law. Instead, the parties may obtain court review of the merits of the arbitrator's decision only if the arbitration agreement expressly provides that the arbitrator's errors of law are reviewable in court.ⁿ²⁰⁰

In keeping with California's strong public policy favoring arbitration, it is appropriate to give collateral estoppel effect to findings made during an arbitration, provided that the arbitration had the elements of an adjudicatory procedure and that the customary elements required for the application of the doctrine of collateral estoppel are met.ⁿ²⁰¹

[i] [Reserved]

[j] Nonsignatory to Arbitration Agreement

The federal courts have identified five theories pursuant to which an arbitration agreement can be enforced by or against a nonsignatory as limited exceptions to the general rule under the Federal Arbitration Act (that arbitration is a contractual right available only to signatories to the agreement):ⁿ²⁰²

- 1) Incorporation by reference;
- 2) Assumption;
- 3) Agency;
- 4) Veil-piercing/alter ego;
- 5) Estoppel.

In Alliance Title Co. v. Boucher, n203 a California court of appeal considered whether equitable estoppel applied to compel a former employee to arbitrate employment-related claims against a nonsignatory to his arbitration agreement. After the employee was hired and had executed the arbitration agreement, the employer transferred its operations and assets to another corporate entity with which it shared a common parent. Under both federal and California decisional authority, a nonsignatory defendant may invoke an arbitration clause to compel a signatory plaintiff to arbitrate its claims when the causes of action against the nonsignatory are intimately founded in and intertwined with the underlying contract obligations.n204 By relying on contract terms in a claim against a nonsignatory defendant, even if not exclusively, a plaintiff may be equitably estopped from repudiating the arbitration clause contained in that agreement. The focus is on the nature of the claims asserted by the plaintiff against the nonsignatory defendant. That the claims are cast in tort rather than contract does not enable a plaintiff to avoid the arbitration clause. In Alliance Title, the former employee's claims against the nonsignatory defendant relied on, made reference to, and presumed the existence of the employment agreement with the former employer, so that the former employee was equitably estopped from avoiding arbitration of his causes of action against the nonsignatory defendant.

On the other hand, in Matthau v. Superior Court, n205 an arbitration agreement in a talent agency's contracts with a deceased actor was found not to be enforceable against either the actor's son or a loan out company, neither of whom were signatories. The contracts, which contained an arbitration clause, provided that the talent agency would receive commissions on all compensation received by the actor under motion picture employment contracts negotiated or procured by the agency, including compensation received through "loan out" companies through which the actor rendered acting services. After the actor's death, the son succeeded to the actor's rights and ceased to pay the commission. The talent agency sought specific performance of the agreement to arbitrate. The court found the arbitration agreement unenforceable as against the son and the loan out company, because they were not parties to any agreement with the talent agency, and none of the circumstances in which a nonsignatory could be bound by another person's agreement to arbitrate existed.n206

[k] Sovereign Immunity

Indian tribes are entitled to claim sovereign immunity as a defense to legal actions against them. As a matter of federal law, an Indian tribe is subject to suit only when Congress has authorized the suit or the tribe has waived its immunity.n207 This immunity extends to a tribe's commercial activities,n208 including its employment relationships.n209 Sovereign immunity may not be waived by implication.n210

When a tribe consents to arbitration it makes a limited waiver of its sovereign immunity.n211 A waiver is ineffective if the person purportedly waiving immunity lacks authority to do so.n212 However, an otherwise ineffective waiver may become binding if it is later ratified by the tribe's governing body.n213

In Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court,n214 employees who had been terminated from employment at a casino operated by an Indian tribe sued the tribe for breach of contract. The contracts included an arbitration clause. The complaint adequately alleged that the tribe waived sovereign immunity by ratifying each contract,n215 but the court held the waiver to be limited to a petition to compel arbitration or to enforce an arbitration award, thus requiring that the breach of contract action be dismissed.n216

[l] Effect of Anti-SLAPP Statute

Code of Civil Procedure section 425.16, commonly known as the anti-SLAPP statute, provides for a special motion to strike a cause of action against a person arising from any act of that person in furtherance of the person's right of petition or free speech (under the United States or California Constitution) in connection with a public issue. In connection with arbitration claims, a special motion to strike under section 425.16 is not authorized for an arbitration claim filed only in an agreed arbitral forum and not asserted by the claimant in a complaint, cross-complaint or petition filed in court.ⁿ²¹⁷

[2] Effect on EEOC

In EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc.,ⁿ²¹⁸ the employee had signed an employment agreement providing for arbitration of employment-related disputes. He was later discharged after suffering a seizure at work. Although he did not initiate arbitration proceedings, he did file a timely discrimination charge with the EEOC alleging that his discharge violated the ADA. The EEOC then filed an enforcement action against the employer in federal court, to which the employee was not a party, requesting injunctive relief, specific relief designed to make the employee whole, including back pay, reinstatement, and compensatory damages, and punitive damages for malicious and reckless conduct.ⁿ²¹⁹ The employer petitioned to stay the EEOC action and compel arbitration. The Fourth Circuit held that the arbitration agreement did not foreclose the enforcement action because the EEOC was not a party to the contract, but that the EEOC was precluded from seeking victim-specific relief in court because the policy goals expressed in the FAA required giving some effect to the arbitration agreement.

The Supreme Court, however, held that the agreement did not bar the EEOC from pursuing victim-specific judicial relief in an enforcement action under ADA.ⁿ²²⁰ The Court found that following the 1991 amendments to Title VII,ⁿ²²¹ the EEOC has authority to bring suit to enjoin an employer from engaging in unlawful employment practices, and to pursue reinstatement, back pay, and compensatory or punitive damages. Neither Title VII, nor the ADA, nor case law suggests that the existence of an arbitration agreement between private parties materially changes the EEOC's statutory function or the remedies otherwise available.ⁿ²²² Further, because the EEOC was not a party to the contract and did not agree to arbitrate its claims, the Federal Arbitration Act's pro-arbitration policy goals could not require the agency to relinquish its statutory authority to pursue victim-specific relief, regardless of the forum that the employer and employee have chosen to resolve their disputes.ⁿ²²³

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Contracts Law Contract Conditions & Provisions Arbitration Clauses Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations Arbitration General Overview

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. See, e.g., Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 27-32, (ADEA); Mago v. Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc. (9th Cir. 1992) 956 F.2d 932, 935 (Title VII); Spellman v. Securities, Annuities & Ins. Servs., Inc. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 452, 460-463, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 (FEHA); Hall v. Nomura Sec. International (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 43, 48-51, 268 Cal. Rptr. 45 (FEHA and common-law wrongful termination).

(n2)Footnote 2. Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26, (ADEA).

(n3)Footnote 3. See Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 27-32, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26, (ADEA).

(n4)Footnote 4. See 42 U.S.C. § 12212 (Americans With Disabilities Act ("ADA")); Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 118 (Civil Rights Act of 1991, which applies to Title VII, ADA, ADEA, and 42 U.S.C. § 1981).

(n5)Footnote 5. See Rodriguez de Quijas v. Shearson/American Express (1989) 490 U.S. 477, 483, 109 S. Ct. 1917, 104 L. Ed. 2d 526 (Securities Act of 1933, 15 U.S.C. § 77a et seq.); Shearson/American Express, Inc. v. McMahon (1987) 482 U.S. 220, 226-227, 107 S. Ct. 2332, 96 L. Ed. 2d 185 (Securities Exchange Act, 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b); Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq.); Mitsubishi Motors v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth (1985) 473 U.S. 614, 625-626, 105 S. Ct. 3346, 87 L. Ed. 2d 444 (Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.).

(n6)Footnote 6. 29 U.S.C. § 621 et seq.; for discussion of the ADEA generally, see §§ 40.21, 41.31, 43.11.

(n7)Footnote 7. Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 27-29, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 .

(n8)Footnote 8. See 29 U.S.C. § 626(b) (conciliation, conference, and persuasion); see also discussion in § 40.21[2] and ch. 42, pt. C.

(n9)Footnote 9. See e.g., Barrentine v. Arkansas-Best Freight Sys. (1981) 450 U.S. 728, 736, 101 S. Ct. 1437, 67 L. Ed. 2d 641 (FLSA civil action not waived by prior unsuccessful arbitration of wage claim); Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co. (1974) 415 U.S. 36, 47, 94 S. Ct. 1011, 39 L. Ed. 2d 147 (Title VII civil action not foreclosed by prior submission of race discrimination claim to final arbitration under collective bargaining agreement nondiscrimination clause). For discussion of the effect of collective bargaining agreement arbitration provisions on equal employment opportunity laws, see § 90.10.

(n10)Footnote 10. Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 32, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 ; see Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp. (1998) 525 U.S. 70, 80, 119 S. Ct. 391, 397, 142 L. Ed. 2d 361 (assuming without deciding that pre-dispute agreement in CBA to arbitrate statutory employment discrimination claims is enforceable, waiver must be clear and unmistakable).

(n11)Footnote 11. 9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.; see § 90.01.

(n12)Footnote 12. Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 35, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 (quoting Mitsubishi Motors v. Soler Chrysler-Plymouth (1985) 473 U.S. 614, 625, 105 S. Ct. 3346, 87 L. Ed. 2d 444); see Morris, Arbitration After Gilmer, 38 Prac. Law. 71 (June, 1992).

(n13)Footnote 13. Craft v. Campbell Soup Co. (9th Cir. 1999) 177 F.3d 1083, 1090 .

(n14)Footnote 14. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (2001) 532 U.S. 105, 121 S. Ct. 1302, 149 L. Ed. 2d 234 , discussed in § 90.01.

(n15)Footnote 15. Duffield v. Robertson Stephens & Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 144 F.3d 1182 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Duffield v. Robertson Stephens & Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 144 F.3d 1182, 1189-1199 (because every securities industry employer requires employees to sign Form U-4, form is especially violative of Congress' limitations).

(n17)Footnote 17. Duffield v. Robertson Stephens & Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 144 F.3d 1182, 1191-1197 (court did not reach issues such as whether agreement to arbitrate was knowing, whether arbitration process is adequate to vindicate Title VII rights, and whether Form U-4 is unconscionable); compare Rosenberg v. Merrill Lynch (D. Mass. 1998) 995 F. Supp. 190, 203 (1991 Act precludes compulsory arbitration of Title VII claims under Form U-4) with Johnson v. Hubbard Broad, Inc. (D. Minn. 1996) 940 F. Supp. 1447, 1457-1458 (reaching opposite conclusion despite noting indications to contrary in Act's legislative history) and EEOC v. Frank's Nursery & Crafts, Inc. (E.D. Mich. 1997) 966 F. Supp. 500, 504 (compulsory arbitration of Title VII claims, notwithstanding 1991 Act's legislative history, does not violate federal law or policy).

(n18)Footnote 18. Duffield v. Robertson Stephens & Co. (9th Cir. 1998) 144 F.3d 1182, 1203 .

(n19)Footnote 19. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Najd (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1104 .

(n20)Footnote 20. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Najd (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1104, 1107 .

(n21)Footnote 21. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 742, 746-753 .

(n22)Footnote 22. Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26 .

(n23)Footnote 23. See, e.g. Rosenberg v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (1st Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 1, 10-11 ; Desiderio v. NASD (2d Cir. 1999) 191 F.3d 198, 205 ; Seus v. John Nuveen & Co. (3d Cir. 1998) 146 F.3d 175, 183 ; Hooters of Am., Inc. v. Phillips (4th Cir. 1999) 173 F.3d 933, 937 ; Mouton v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (5th Cir. 1998) 147 F.3d 453, 455 ; Alford v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (5th Cir. 1991) 939 F.2d 229, 230 ; Koveleskie v. SBC Capital Mkts., Inc. (7th Cir. 1999) 167 F.3d 361, 365 ; Patterson v. Tenet Healthcare, Inc. (8th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 832, 837 ; Todd-Watkins v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (9th Cir. 1999) 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 2627 *2, n.1 ; Metz v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (10th Cir. 1994) 39 F.3d 1482, 1487 ; Weeks v. Harden Mfg. Corp. (11th Cir. 2002) 291 F.3d 1307, 1315-1316 ; Bender v. A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc. (11th Cir. 1992) 971 F.2d 698, 699 (per curiam); Borg-Warner Protective Servs. Corp. v. EEOC (D.C. Cir. 2001) 245 F.3d 831, 835 . See also Farac v. Permanente Med. Group (N.D. Cal. 2002) 186 F. Supp. 2d 1042, 1045 ; Scott v. Burns Int'l Sec. Servs., Inc. (D. Hawaii 2001) 165 F. Supp. 2d 1133, 1137-1138 .

(n24)Footnote 24. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 742, 750 . See also Desiderio v. NASD (2d Cir. 1999) 191 F.3d 198, 205 ; Rosenberg v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. (1st Cir. 1999) 170 F.3d 1, 11 .

(n25)Footnote 25. 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 .

(n26)Footnote 26. Brookwood v. Bank of America (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1667, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515 .

(n27)Footnote 27. Spellman v. Securities, Annuities & Ins. Services (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 452, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 .

(n28)Footnote 28. 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1210 n.9, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 .

(n29)Footnote 29. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Servs. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 95, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745 .

(n30)Footnote 30. See Farac v. Permanente Med. Group, (N.D. Cal. 2002) 186 F. Supp. 2d 1042, 1045 ("Two California district court opinions have concluded that Circuit City overruled Duffield This Court agrees") (citation omitted); Eftekhari v. Peregrine Financials & Securities, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2001) 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16087, *25 ("Under the decision in Circuit City, because he agreed to arbitrate, plaintiff is compelled to arbitrate not only the attachment action but also his Title VII employment discrimination claim"); Olivares v. Hispanic Broadcasting Corp., (C.D. Cal. 2001) 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5760 *2 ("Therefore, in light of the Supreme Court's pronouncement in Circuit City, the Ninth Circuit's decision in Duffield should not preclude arbitration of Plaintiffs FEHA or CFRA claims"). For discussion of Circuit City, see § 90.01.

(n31)Footnote 31. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Lai (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1299 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 812 (1995) .

(n32)Footnote 32. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Lai (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1299, 1304 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 812 (1995) .

(n33)Footnote 33. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Lai (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1299, 1304 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 812 (1995) .

(n34)Footnote 34. See Pub. L. No. 102-166, § 118.

(n35)Footnote 35. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Lai (9th Cir. 1994) 42 F.3d 1299, 1304 , cert. denied, 516 U.S. 812 (1995) .

(n36)Footnote 36. Renteria v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1104 .

(n37)Footnote 37. Renteria v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1104, 1106-1107 .

(n38)Footnote 38. See Renteria v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. (9th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 1104, 1106-1107 .

(n39)Footnote 39. Kuehner v. Dickinson & Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 84 F.3d 316 .

(n40)Footnote 40. See Kuehner v. Dickinson & Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 84 F.3d 316, 319 .

(n41)Footnote 41. See Kuehner v. Dickinson & Co. (9th Cir. 1996) 84 F.3d 316, 320 .

(n42)Footnote 42. Golenia v. Bob Baker Toyota (S.D. Cal. 1996) 915 F. Supp. 201 .

(n43)Footnote 43. See Golenia v. Bob Baker Toyota (S.D. Cal. 1996) 915 F. Supp. 201, 202 .

(n44)Footnote 44. See Golenia v. Bob Baker Toyota (S.D. Cal. 1996) 915 F. Supp. 201, 205 .

(n45)Footnote 45. See Golenia v. Bob Baker Toyota (S.D. Cal. 1996) 915 F. Supp. 201, 205 .

(n46)Footnote 46. Nelson v. Cyprus Bagdad Copper Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 756 .

(n47)Footnote 47. Nelson v. Cyprus Bagdad Copper Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 119 F.3d 756, 760-762 (unilateral promulgation by employer of arbitration provisions in employee handbook does not constitute knowing agreement to waive right to judicial determination of ADA claims despite employee's signing acknowledgment of receipt of handbook).

(n48)Footnote 48. Kummetz v. Tech Mold, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 152 F.3d 1153 .

(n49)Footnote 49. Kummetz v. Tech Mold, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 152 F.3d 1153, 1155 .

(n50)Footnote 50. Kummetz v. Tech Mold, Inc. (9th Cir. 1998) 152 F.3d 1153, 1155 (fact that acknowledgment stated that employee had read and agreed to contents of booklet insufficient because acknowledgment contained no explicit reference to arbitration or waiver of right to sue); compare Patterson v. Tenet Healthcare, Inc. (8th Cir. 1997) 113 F.3d 832, 835 (arbitration clause on separate page in handbook effective because employee had been required to remove that page from handbook and sign and return it to employer).

(n51)Footnote 51. Spellman v. Securities, Annuities & Ins. Services, Inc. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 452, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 .

(n52)Footnote 52. Spellman v. Securities, Annuities & Ins. Services, Inc. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 452, 460-463, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 .

(n53)Footnote 53. Spellman v. Securities, Annuities & Ins. Services, Inc. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 452, 460, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 427 ; see Cione v. Foresters Equity Servs., Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 625, 639-643, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167 (no waiver of right to arbitrate based on integration clause of written employment agreement; Form U-4 arbitration clause not superseded by employment agreement). For discussion of the applicability of the FAA to employment contracts generally, see § 90.01.

(n54)Footnote 54. Brookwood v. Bank of America, NT & SA (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1667, 1673-1674, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515 .

(n55)Footnote 55. Brookwood v. Bank of America, NT & SA (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1667, 1673-1674, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515 .

(n56)Footnote 56. Brookwood v. Bank of America, NT & SA (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1667, 1673-1674, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515 .

(n57)Footnote 57. Brookwood v. Bank of America, NT & SA (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1667, 1673-1674, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515 .

(n58)Footnote 58. Cione v. Foresters Equity Servs., Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 625, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167 .

(n59)Footnote 59. Cione v. Foresters Equity Servs., Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 625, 640-641, 645, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167 (Renteria and Lai are contrary to weight of authority).

(n60)Footnote 60. Cione v. Foresters Equity Servs., Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 625, 634, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167 ; see Wojcik v. Aetna Life Ins. and Annuity Co. (N.D. Ill. 1995) 901 F. Supp. 1282, 1286 .

(n61)Footnote 61. Cione v. Foresters Equity Servs., Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 625, 634-639, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167 ; O'Donnell v. First Investors Corp. (S.D. N.Y. 1995) 872 F. Supp. 1274, 1277 (employment contract does not supersede Form U-4 arbitration agreement, which is separate contract).

(n62)Footnote 62. Cione v. Foresters Equity Servs., Inc. (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 625, 641-642, 68 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167 (questions concerning construction and scope of arbitration clauses are governed by federal law and must be addressed with healthy regard for federal policy favoring arbitration; determining parties' intent to arbitrate is matter of law).

(n63)Footnote 63. See, e.g., Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1136, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 (rejecting plaintiff's argument that compulsory predispute arbitration provisions have same effect as illegal exculpatory clauses because generalized attacks on arbitration are out-of-step with current strong endorsement of arbitration, quoting Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp. (1991) 500 U.S. 20, 30, 111 S. Ct. 1647, 114 L. Ed. 2d 26); See also § 90.20.

(n64)Footnote 64. Vianna v. Doctors' Management Co. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1186, 1189, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188 (noting comparable federal policy, as applied to similar contract in Merrick v. Writers Guild of Am., West, Inc. (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 212, 217-219, 181 Cal. Rptr. 530). The federal policy is discussed in § 90.01.

(n65)Footnote 65. Vianna v. Doctors' Management Co. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1186, 1189-1190, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188 . See also Buckhorn v. St. Jude Heritage Medical Group (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1406-1407, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215 (terminated former employee's tort claims for defamation and interference with prospective business advantage based on events occurring after his termination were subject to arbitration under employment contract because claims were rooted in contractual relationship between parties).

(n66)Footnote 66. Vianna v. Doctors' Management Co. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1186, 1189, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188 ; for discussion of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing generally, see § 60.06.

(n67)Footnote 67. Vianna v. Doctors' Management Co. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1186, 1190, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 188 .

(n68)Footnote 68. Engalla v. Permanente Medical Group, Inc. (1997) 15 Cal. 4th 951, 971-972, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843, 938 P.2d 903 (citations omitted); cf. First Options of Chicago, Inc. v. Kaplan (1995) 514 U.S. 938, 944, 115 S.

Ct. 1920, 131 L. Ed. 2d 985 (when deciding whether parties agreed to arbitrate dispute, courts generally should apply ordinary state-law principles); Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 1066, 1072 (in assessing whether arbitration agreement or clause is enforceable, court should apply ordinary, state-law principles governing formation of contracts).

(n69)Footnote 69. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.

(n70)Footnote 70. Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1122-1127, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 .

(n71)Footnote 71. Lagatree v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1122, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 664 (compulsory nature of arbitration agreement does not render agreement unenforceable on grounds of coercion or for lack of voluntariness).

(n72)Footnote 72. See Brookwood v. Bank of Am., NT & SA (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1667, 1673-1674, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 515 .

(n73)Footnote 72.1. Roman v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1462, 1470-1471, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 153 . For discussion of the mutuality requirement for arbitration agreements, see § 90.21[6], below.

(n74)Footnote 73. Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 713, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 ; Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1532-1533, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 . See Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 113, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 (both procedural and substantive unconscionability are required to invalidate arbitration clause).

(n75)Footnote 74. Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 713, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 ; Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1532, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 . See Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 113, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 (procedural unconscionability focuses largely on oppression and manner in which agreement was negotiated).

(n76)Footnote 75. Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 171, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 ; Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1329, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 .

(n77)Footnote 76. Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1329, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 ; Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1532, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 .

(n78)Footnote 77. Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1329-1330, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 ; Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1532, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 .

(n79)Footnote 78. Patterson v. ITT Consumer Financial Corp. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1667, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563 (small loan borrowers, many of whom did not feel they could qualify for bank loans, met non-alternative source requirement); see Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 758, 771-772, 259 Cal. Rptr. 789 (establishing requirement in context of challenging IRA account fees as unconscionable); but see Spinello v. Amblin Entertainment (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 1395-1396, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 695 (rejecting Dean Witter analysis in cases involving arbitration clauses).

(n80)Footnote 79. Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1532, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 .

(n81)Footnote 80. Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 713, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 ; Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1532-1533, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 ; Patterson v. ITT Consumer Financial Corp. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1664, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563 . See Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 171, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 (substantive unconscionability focuses on overly harsh or one-sided terms); Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 113, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 (substantive unconscionability focuses on terms of agreement and presence of overly harsh, or one-sided results).

(n82)Footnote 81. Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 171, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818; Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 714, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88; Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1329, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348; Patterson v. ITT Consumer Financial Corp. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1659, 1664, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563.

(n83)Footnote 82. Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 171, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818; Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 714, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88; Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 113, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663; Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1329, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348; Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 758, 768, 259 Cal. Rptr. 789 (decided in context of challenging IRA account fees as unconscionable); but see Spinello v. Amblin Entertainment (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 1396, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 695 (rejecting Dean Witter analysis in cases involving arbitration clauses). See Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 1066, 1072 (courts apply sliding scale; the more substantively oppressive a contract term is, the less evidence of procedural unconscionability is required to conclude that term is unenforceable, and vice versa).

(n84)Footnote 83. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669.

(n85)Footnote 84. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 93-96, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669.

(n86)Footnote 85. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 102, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669.

(n87)Footnote 86. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 114-115, 120-121, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669.

(n88)Footnote 87. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 119, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669.

(n89)Footnote 88. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 103-104, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669.

(n90)Footnote 89. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 110-111, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669.

(n91)Footnote 90. Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422.

(n92)Footnote 91. Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th, 728, 740-741, 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422.

(n93)Footnote 92. Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th, 728, 741-747, 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422.

(n94)Footnote 93. Pinedo v. Premium Tobacco Stores, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 774, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435.

(n95)Footnote 94. Pinedo v. Premium Tobacco Stores, Inc. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 774, 781, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435.

(n96)Footnote 95. Circuit City v. Adams (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 889.

(n97)Footnote 96. Circuit City v. Adams (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 889, 891-892 .

(n98)Footnote 97. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (2001) 532 U.S. 105, 121 S. Ct. 1302, 149 L. Ed. 2d 234 ; see § 90.01.

(n99)Footnote 98. Circuit City v. Adams (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 889, 893-895 .

(n100)Footnote 99. Circuit City v. Adams (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 889, 893 .

(n101)Footnote 100. Circuit City v. Adams (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 889, 893-895 .

(n102)Footnote 101. Circuit City v. Adams (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 889, 894 , citing Cole v. Burns Int'l Sec. Servs. (D.C. Cir. 1997) 105 F.3d 1465, 323 U.S. App. D.C. 133 (unlawful to require employee, through mandatory arbitration agreement, to share costs of arbitration).

(n103)Footnote 102. Circuit City v. Ahmed (9th Cir. 2002) 283 F.3d 1198 .

(n104)Footnote 103. Circuit City v. Ahmed (9th Cir. 2002) 283 F.3d 1198, 1199-1200 . See also Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Najd (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1104, 1108 (same agreement with opt-out provision as in Ahmed found not unconscionable).

(n105)Footnote 104. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Mantor (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 1101 .

(n106)Footnote 105. Circuit City v. Najd (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1104, 1108 .

(n107)Footnote 106. Circuit City v. Ahmed (9th Cir. 2002) 283 F.3d 1198, 1200 .

(n108)Footnote 107. Circuit City v. Mantor (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 1101, 1106-1107 (although he was given "opt-out" form by which he could elect not to participate in arbitration program, Circuit City management impliedly and expressly pressured employee not to opt-out, and resorted to threatening his job outright should he exercise his putative "right" to opt-out).

(n109)Footnote 108. Circuit City v. Mantor (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 1101, 1107-1109 .

(n110)Footnote 109. Circuit City v. Mantor (9th Cir. 2003) 335 F.3d 1101, 1109 .

(n111)Footnote 110. EEOC v. Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps (9th Cir. 2003) 345 F.3d 742 , discussed at § 90.20[1][c], above.

(n112)Footnote 111. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Mantor (9th Cir. 2005) 417 F.3d 1060, 1064 .

(n113)Footnote 112. Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 1066 .

(n114)Footnote 113. Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 1066, 1073-1075 .

(n115)Footnote 114. Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 1066, 1075-1084 .

(n116)Footnote 115. O'Hare v. Municipal Resource Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 .

(n117)Footnote 116. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n118)Footnote 117. O'Hare v. Municipal Resource Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 273-279, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 .

(n119)Footnote 118. O'Hare v. Municipal Resource Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 279-280, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 .

(n120)Footnote 119. O'Hare v. Municipal Resource Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 280-282, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 .

(n121)Footnote 120. O'Hare v. Municipal Resource Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 282, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 .

(n122)Footnote 121. O'Hare v. Municipal Resource Consultants (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 267, 282-284, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 .

(n123)Footnote 122. Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 .

(n124)Footnote 123. Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1071, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 .

(n125)Footnote 124. Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1071-1074, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 .

(n126)Footnote 125. Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1074-1076, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 .

(n127)Footnote 126. Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 .

(n128)Footnote 127. See discussion of this aspect of Ontiveros at § 40.20[1][e], below .

(n129)Footnote 128. Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 510-511, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 , citing Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 110-111, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 .

(n130)Footnote 129. Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 511-514, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 . See also Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 716-718, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 .

(n131)Footnote 130. Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 514-515, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 .

(n132)Footnote 131. Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 171-178, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 .

(n133)Footnote 132. *Olvera v. El Pollo Loco, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 447, 93 Cal. Rptr. 3d 65, 2009 Cal. App. LEXIS 618, *10-21 .

(n134)Footnote 133. See Gentry v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 443, 457-463, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 165 P.3d 556 ; Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 161, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 . For discussion of class arbitration waivers generally, see § 90.20[1][b][ii], below.

(n135)Footnote 134. See Gentry v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 443, 461, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 165 P.3d 556 .

(n136)Footnote 135. See Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 148, 161, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 .

(n137)Footnote 136. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2.

(n138)Footnote 137. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 .

(n139)Footnote 138. Green Tree Financial Corp. v. Randolph (2000) 531 U.S. 79, 121 S. Ct. 513, 148 L. Ed. 2d 373 .

(n140)Footnote 139. Green Tree Financial Corp. v. Randolph (2000) 531 U.S. 79, 91-92, 121 S. Ct. 513, 148 L. Ed. 2d 373 .

(n141)Footnote 140. See Circuit City Stores v. Adams (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 889 ; Cooper v. MRM Investment Company (M.D. Tenn. 2002) 199 F. Supp. 2d 771, 781 ; Ball v. SFX Broadcasting, Inc. (N.D.N.Y. 2001) 165 F. Supp. 2d 230 (all holding that "prohibitively expensive" standard in Green Tree does not affect validity of categorical position that employer should pay the costs of mandatory employment arbitration of statutory claims). See Blair v. Scott Specialty Gases (3d Cir. 2002) 283 F.3d 595, 609 ; Nelson v. Insignia/ESG, Inc. (D.D.C. 2002) 215 F. Supp. 2d 143 ; Bradford v. Rockwell Semiconductor Systems Inc. (4th Cir. 2001) 238 F.3d 549 (all holding that Green Tree requires case-by-case analysis based on such factors as employee's ability to pay arbitration fees and differential between projected arbitration and litigation fees). See Mildworm v. Ashcroft (E.D.N.Y. 2002) 200 F. Supp. 2d 171 ; Boyd v. Town of Hayneville (M.D. Ala. 2001) 144 F. Supp. 2d 1272 (holding that information presented by employee before arbitration was too speculative to warrant invalidation of arbitration agreement, while retaining jurisdiction to reconsider cost issue after arbitration).

(n142)Footnote 141. Little v. Auto Stiegler (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1083-1084, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 .

(n143)Footnote 142. Little v. Auto Stiegler (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1084, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 .

(n144)Footnote 143. Little v. Auto Stiegler (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1081-1085, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 .

(n145)Footnote 144. Yuen v. Superior Court (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1133, 1137-1139, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 127 .

(n146)Footnote 145. 9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.

(n147)Footnote 146. McManus v. CIBC World Markets Corp. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 76, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446, 2003 Cal. App. LEXIS 769 .

(n148)Footnote 147. McManus v. CIBC World Markets Corp. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 76, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446, 2003 Cal. App. LEXIS 769, *12-20 .

(n149)Footnote 148. McManus v. CIBC World Markets Corp. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 76, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446, 2003 Cal. App. LEXIS 769, *21-24 .

(n150)Footnote 149. McManus v. CIBC World Markets Corp. (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 76, 134 Cal. Rptr. 2d 446, 2003 Cal. App. LEXIS 769, *24-46 .

(n151)Footnote 150. Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 .

(n152)Footnote 151. See Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1531-1532, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 (analysis considers both substantive and procedural components).

(n153)Footnote 152. Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1330-1333, 83 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 348 .

(n154)Footnote 153. Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1329, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 .

(n155)Footnote 154. Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1330, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 .

(n156)Footnote 155. Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1330-1333, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 .

(n157)Footnote 156. Stirlen v. Supercuts, Inc. (1997) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1519, 1536-1542, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 138 ; see also Kinney v. United Healthcare Services (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1322, 1330-1333, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 (arbitration was mandatory for employee, but employer could file suit in court; employee's damages and discovery were limited, employer's were not).

(n158)Footnote 157. Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 113-118, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 .

(n159)Footnote 158. Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 119, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 .

(n160)Footnote 159. Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 715-728, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 .

(n161)Footnote 160. 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1212, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 (sexual harassment).

(n162)Footnote 161. 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1213, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 .

(n163)Footnote 162. 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1213-1214, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 .

(n164)Footnote 162.1. Roman v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1462, 1470-1478, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 153 .

(n165)Footnote 163. Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 296 .

(n166)Footnote 164. Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1282-1283, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 296 .

(n167)Footnote 165. Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1284-1286, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 296 .

(n168)Footnote 166. Nyulassy v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1287-1288, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 296 .

(n169)Footnote 167. Romo v. Y-3 Holdings, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1153 .

(n170)Footnote 168. Romo v. Y-3 Holdings, Inc. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1153, 1158 .

(n171)Footnote 169. Mitri v. Arnel Management Co. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1164, 1169-1173, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 223 .

(n172)Footnote 170. Nghiem v. NEC Electronic, Inc. (9th Cir. 1994) 25 F.3d 1437, 1439-1440 (also finding employee's institution of arbitration proceeding precluded challenge to binding effect of arbitration).

(n173)Footnote 171. Metters v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 696, 701-704 .

(n174)Footnote 172. Northrop Grumman Corp. v. Workers' Comp. Appeals Bd. (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1021, 1035-1036, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 285 ; Gov. Code, § 12940(j)(1) (k).

(n175)Footnote 173. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Najd (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1104 .

(n176)Footnote 174. Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Najd (9th Cir. 2002) 294 F.3d 1104, 1108-1109 .

(n177)Footnote 175. Davis v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 205, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79 .

(n178)Footnote 176. Davis v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 205, 207, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79 (although answer inartfully indicated arbitration requirement, defendants conducted substantial discovery before seeking to compel arbitration; six months elapsed between filing answers and motion to compel arbitration).

(n179)Footnote 177. Davis v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 205, 211-212, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79 ; see Christensen v. Dewor Devs. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 778, 781-782, 191 Cal. Rptr. 8, 661 P.2d 1088 (Supreme Court affirmed trial court's finding that plaintiff waived right to arbitrate because discovery used to obtain unfair advantage relevant to arbitration given that discovery was ordinarily unavailable); see also Kaneko Ford Design v. Citipark, Inc. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 1220, 1228-1229, 249 Cal. Rptr. 544 (plaintiff filed stay application for arbitration simultaneously with complaint for mechanic's lien, did nothing to implement application for over five months, during which plaintiff participated in settlement negotiations, did not notify defendant of intent to seek arbitration, and obtained information about defendant's legal strategies from answer to the complaint).

(n180)Footnote 178. Davis v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 205, 211-212, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79 ; cf. Keating v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 584, 183 Cal. Rptr. 360, 645 P.2d 1192 , reversed in part on other grounds sub nom. Southland Corp. v. Keating (1984) 465 U.S. 1 ; Doers v. Golden Gate Bridge Dist. (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 180, 185, 151 Cal. Rptr. 837, 588 P.2d 1261 (reversing trial court's finding of waiver, holding as matter of law that mere filing of complaint does not by itself necessarily waive plaintiff's right to compel arbitration).

(n181)Footnote 179. Davis v. Continental Airlines, Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 205, 211-213, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 79 .

(n182)Footnote 180. Ferguson v. Countrywide Credit Industries, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 778 .

(n183)Footnote 181. Ferguson v. Countrywide Credit Industries, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 778, 783-784 .

(n184)Footnote 182. Ferguson v. Countrywide Credit Industries, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 778, 784-787 .

(n185)Footnote 183. Ferguson v. Countrywide Credit Industries, Inc. (9th Cir. 2002) 298 F.3d 778, 787-788 .

(n186)Footnote 184. St. Agnes Med. Ctr. v. PacifiCare of Cal. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 1187, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517, 82 P.3d 727, 733 . See Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1124-1126 (district court erred in determining employer waived its right to arbitrate dispute with employee, where none of St. Agnes factors supported waiver); Roman v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1462, 1478-1479, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 153 (employer did not engage in conduct inconsistent with arbitration by, without mentioning arbitration, filing demurrer and serving objections to discovery requests and serving and filing motion in superior court to compel employee's deposition, where employer filed notice of petition to compel arbitration little more than two months after employee filed her complaint, no substantive discovery responses had been served by either side, and no formal hearings had taken place on discovery issues, and discovery requests employer served were authorized under AAA rules; litigation expenses incurred by employee in serving and filing objections to discovery requests and opposing demurrer and motion to compel her deposition were insufficient, by themselves, to support finding of waiver).

(n187)Footnote 185. For discussion of breach of the agreement as a defense, see § 90.20[1]i.

(n188)Footnote 186. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1124-1125 (district court properly considered whether employer waived its right to compel arbitration, notwithstanding employee's failure to file claim with AAA, because arbitration is matter of private contract law).

(n189)Footnote 187. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1125. See Toscano v. Greene Music (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 685, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732, 738 (object of equity is to do right and justice, and powers of court of equity are not cribbed or confined by rigid rules of law).

(n190)Footnote 188. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1125-1126.

(n191)Footnote 189. Kalai v. Gray (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 768, 773-777, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449.

(n192)Footnote 190. Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal App. 4th 138, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 120, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 1722. To view Court of Appeal of briefs related to the Murphy case that are available on Lexis.com, go to 2006 CA App. Ct. Briefs 14442.

(n193)Footnote 191. Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal App. 4th 138, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 120, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 1722, *8-*14.

(n194)Footnote 192. Gentry v. Superior Court (2007) 42 Cal. 4th 433, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 773, 165 P.3d 556.

(n195)Footnote 193. Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal App. 4th 138, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 120, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 1722, *14-*19. See also Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 167-171, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 (class arbitration waiver was contrary to public policy and unenforceable under Gentry factors, where employee's statutory rights to reimbursement of job expenses and to receive minimum wage were unwaivable; any individual recovery was likely to be modest; potential for retaliation against members of class who litigated or arbitrated individually was significant; and plaintiff presented evidence that most drivers were immigrants with limited English language skills who were likely to be unaware of their legal rights); Franco v. Athens Disposal Co., Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1277, 1288-1299, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 539 (class arbitration waiver was unconscionable with respect to alleged violations of state meal and rest period laws given modest size of potential individual recovery, potential for retaliation against members of class, and fact that absent members of class may have been ill-informed about their rights). For discussion of Gentry, see § 5.40[1].

(n196)Footnote 194. Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal App. 4th 138, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 120, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 1722, *19-*21. See also Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 178-181, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 (class arbitration waiver and unconscionable arbitrator selection clause, considered together, indicated effort to impose on employee forum with distinct advantages for employer, so that arbitration agreement was permeated by unlawful purpose and denial of employer's motion to compel arbitration was proper); Franco v. Athens Disposal Co., Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1277, 1288-1303, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 539 (because arbitration agreement contained unconscionable class arbitration waiver and also precluded plaintiff from seeking civil penalties on behalf of other employees, contrary to PAGA, agreement as whole was tainted with illegality and was unenforceable).

(n197)Footnote 195. See 9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.; Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)-(f) (grounds justifying vacation of arbitration award); see also Jones v. Humanscale Corp. (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 408, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881 (limited grounds whereby court may vacate or correct arbitration award under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1286.2, 1286.6); California Faculty Ass'n v. Superior Court (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 935, 952-953, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 (discussing exceptions to general rules governing scope of review in cases in which parties have expressly restricted arbitrator's powers and holding, in tenure dispute, that arbitrator strayed beyond scope of parties' agreement by resolving issues parties did not agree to arbitrate).

(n198)Footnote 196. LaPine Technology Corp. v. Kyocera Corp. (9th Cir. 1997) 130 F.3d 884 .

(n199)Footnote 197. Crowell v. Downey Community Hospital Foundation (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 730, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 (court declined to consider LaPine Technology Corp. v. Kyocera Corp. as directly on point) (citation omitted).

(n200)Footnote 198. See Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 6, 11, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 .

(n201)Footnote 199. Marsch v. Williams (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 238, 244-245, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 402 ; Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 576, 587-590, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295 .

(n202)Footnote 200. Baize v. Eastridge Companies, LLC (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 300-302, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 763 (despite possible errors of law by arbitrator, trial court properly confirmed arbitration award to former employee in wrongful termination action, where, while arbitration agreement expressly limited arbitrator to application of California law, it did not expressly expand scope of judicial review, and there was no suggestion arbitrator purported to apply any law other than that of California).

(n203)Footnote 201. See Kelly v. Vons Companies (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1329, 1335, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 (issues adjudicated during labor arbitration given collateral estoppel effect in employee's subsequent lawsuit for fraud and negligent misrepresentation); Rest. 2d Judgments, 84(3)(b); see also People v. Sims (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 468, 479, 186 Cal. Rptr. 77, 651 P.2d 321 (findings made during administrative hearing may collaterally estop party from relitigating issues in later action if hearing possessed "judicial character"). For a discussion of the distinction between collateral and judicial estoppel, see § 41.51[2][a][vi]. For a discussion of collateral estoppel in the context of the law governing that particular action, see generally Ch. 43.

(n204)Footnote 202. Alliance Title Co. v. Boucher (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 262, 268, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 440 . See, e.g., Bel-Ray Co., Inc. v. Chemrite (Pty) Ltd. (3d Cir. 1999) 181 F.3d 435, 445-446 ; Thomson-CSF, S.A. v. American Arbitration Ass'n. (2d Cir. 1995) 64 F.3d 773, 776 ; MS Dealer Service Corp. v. Franklin (11th Cir. 1999) 177 F.3d 942, 947 ; Sunkist Soft Drinks, Inc. v. Sunkist Growers, Inc. (11th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 753, 757 .

(n205)Footnote 203. Alliance Title Co. v. Boucher (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 262, 267-272, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 440 .

(n206)Footnote 204. See, e.g., Choctaw Generation Ltd. v. American Home Assur. (2d Cir. 2001) 271 F.3d 403, 406-408 ; Grigson v. Creative Artists Agency (5th Cir. 2000) 210 F.3d 524, 527-531 ; MS Dealer Service Corp. v. Franklin (11th Cir. 1999) 177 F.3d 942, 946-948 ; Sunkist Soft Drinks, Inc. v. Sunkist Growers, Inc. (11th Cir. 1993) 10 F.3d 753, 756-757 ; Hughes Masonry v. Greater Clark County School Bldg. (7th Cir. 1981) 659 F.2d 836, 838 ; McBro Planning & Development Co. v. Triangle Elec. Constr. Co., Inc. (11th Cir. 1984) 741 F.2d 342, 344 ; Metalclad Corp. v. Ventana Environment Organizational Partnership (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 1705, 1716-1717, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 328 . See also Sam Reisfeld & Son Import Company v. S.A. Etco (5th Cir. 1976) 530 F.2d 679, 681 .

(n207)Footnote 205. Matthau v. Superior Court (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 593, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 93 .

(n208)Footnote 206. Matthau v. Superior Court (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 593, 598-604, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 93 .

(n209)Footnote 207. Kiowa Tribe of Okla. v. Manufacturing Technologies, Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 751, 754, 118 S. Ct. 1700, 140 L. Ed. 2d 981 ; Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1191, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 .

(n210)Footnote 208. Kiowa Tribe of Okla. v. Manufacturing Technologies, Inc. (1998) 523 U.S. 751, 754, 118 S. Ct. 1700, 140 L. Ed. 2d 981 ; Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1191, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 .

(n211)Footnote 209. See Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1189, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 .

(n212)Footnote 210. Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez (1978) 436 U.S. 49, 58, 98 S. Ct. 1670, 56 L. Ed. 2d 106 ; Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1196, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 .

(n213)Footnote 211. Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1191, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 . See C&L Enterprises, Inc. v. Citizen Band Potawatomi Tribe of Okla. (2001) 532 U.S. 411, 423, 121 S. Ct. 1589, 149 L. Ed. 2d 623 .

(n214)Footnote 212. Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1191, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 ; Warburton/Buttner v. Superior Court (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1188, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 706 .

(n215)Footnote 213. Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1191, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 . See Smith v. Hopland Band of Pomo Indians (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1, 9, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 .

(n216)Footnote 214. Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 .

(n217)Footnote 215. Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1191-1193, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 .

(n218)Footnote 216. Big Valley Band of Pomo Indians v. Superior Court (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1185, 1193-1196, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 357 .

(n219)Footnote 217. Sheppard v. Lightpost Museum Fund (2006) 146 Cal. App. 4th 315, 321-324, 52 Cal. Rptr. 821 .

(n220)Footnote 218. EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 122 S. Ct. 754, 151 L. Ed. 2d 755 .

(n221)Footnote 219. EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 122 S. Ct. 754, 758-759, 151 L. Ed. 2d 755 .

(n222)Footnote 220. EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 122 S. Ct. 754, 759-760, 151 L. Ed. 2d 755 .

(n223)Footnote 221. See 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

(n224)Footnote 222. EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 122 S. Ct. 754, 759-761, 151 L. Ed. 2d 755 .

(n225)Footnote 223. EEOC v. Waffle House, Inc. (2002) 534 U.S. 279, 122 S. Ct. 754, 764, 151 L. Ed. 2d 755 .

8 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION
CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes
Part B. ENFORCEABILITY OF ARBITRATION AGREEMENTS

4-90 California Employment Law § 90.21

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

§ 90.21 Procedural Requirements

[1] Minimum Requirements

In Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc.,ⁿ¹ the California Supreme Court held that arbitration of claims under the FEHAⁿ² is subject to certain minimal requirements:

- (1) The arbitration agreement may not limit the damages normally available under the statute.ⁿ³
- (2) There must be discovery sufficient to adequately arbitrate the statutory claim.ⁿ⁴
- (3) There must be a written arbitration decision and judicial review sufficient to ensure the arbitrators comply with the requirements of the statute.ⁿ⁵
- (4) The employer must pay all types of costs unique to arbitration.ⁿ⁶

These requirements were founded on the premise that certain statutory rights are unwaivable.ⁿ⁷ The Court concluded that the FEHA was enacted for public reasons and the rights it conferred on employees were not waivable, and these requirements were necessary to enable an employee to vindicate these unwaivable rights in an arbitration forum.ⁿ⁸

In Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc.,ⁿ⁹ the California Supreme Court concluded that claims under Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co.,ⁿ¹⁰ prohibiting an employer from terminating an employee for a reason contrary to public policy, are subject to the same minimum requirements. The Court found that a Tameny claim is almost by definition unwaivable, because an employment agreement requiring employees to waive claims that they were terminated in violation of public policy would itself be contrary to public policy.ⁿ¹¹

On the other hand, in Giuliano v. Inland Empire Personnel, Inc.,ⁿ¹² the California Court of Appeal held that Armendariz does not apply to a claim that is not based on the FEHA or a fundamental public policy that is tied to a constitutional or statutory provision. The claim in Giuliano was for unpaid wages at the time of termination under Labor Code section 229. However, the court found that the employee's contract claim for a $5 million to $8 million bonus and a $500,000 severance payment was distinguishable from statutory overtime or minimum wage claims at issue in cases cited by Giuliano: the cases cited involved rights that were fundamental public policies tied to a constitutional or statutory provision.¹³

[2] Gateway Issues of Arbitrability

[a] Who Determines Arbitrability

The question may arise as to whether the court or the arbitrator should determine arbitrability. The federal law of arbitrability under the Federal Arbitration Act ("FAA") governs the allocation of authority between courts and arbitrators.¹⁴ The FAA requires federal district courts to direct parties to proceed to arbitration on issues as to which an arbitration agreement has been signed, and limits courts' involvement to determining (1) whether a valid agreement to arbitrate exists, and, if it does, and (2) whether the agreement encompasses the dispute at issue.¹⁵

Challenges to a contract's validity are considered by the arbitrator in the first instance.¹⁶ However, when the issue is the arbitration provision itself, the court must decide whether the arbitration provision is invalid and unenforceable. When a party specifically challenges arbitration provisions as unconscionable and hence invalid, the court determines whether the arbitration provisions are unconscionable, applying the relevant state contract law principles. This rule applies even when the express terms of the arbitration agreement delegate that determination to the arbitrator. Further, when an arbitration agreement delegates the question of the validity of the agreement to the arbitrator, a dispute as to whether the agreement to arbitrate arbitrability is itself enforceable is for the court to decide as a threshold matter.^{16.1}

Courts properly exercise jurisdiction over claims raising defenses existing at law or in equity for the revocation of the arbitration clause itself.¹⁷ Thus, for example, where a former employee did not dispute the validity of the employment agreement or the arbitration provision in it, but, instead, challenged enforcement of an arbitration clause on the grounds that the employer breached the agreement to arbitrate and therefore had no right to enforce the clause or, alternatively, that the employer's conduct amounted to a waiver of the right to arbitrate, those contractual defenses to enforcement of the arbitration clause, i.e., breach and waiver, were properly heard and decided by the district court.¹⁸

In California, parties to a contract, including an employment contract, may agree that the arbitrator may determine the scope of his or her authority, and the arbitrability of a dispute may itself be subject to arbitration if the parties have so provided in their contract. However, the court must still examine the contract to ascertain whether the parties have so provided.¹⁹ Further, if the party resisting arbitration is not denying that it agreed to an arbitration provision, but instead is claiming the provision is unenforceable, such as due to illegality or fraud in the inducement, the arbitrator must decide the question. However, if the party is claiming it never agreed to the arbitration provision at all, for example, due to forgery or fraud in the factum, a court must consider the claim. With regard to the specific question of who should decide a party's claim of unconscionability in light of arbitration provisions empowering the arbitrator to determine arbitrability, if the resisting party admits it knowingly agreed to the arbitration provision, it may be required to arbitrate the unconscionability claim. But if the resisting party claims it never knowingly agreed to the provision, the party cannot be required to arbitrate anything, including arbitrability, until a court has made a threshold determination that the party did agree to arbitrate something.²⁰

In Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc.,²¹ although the arbitration agreement provided that the arbitrator had exclusive authority to resolve any dispute relating to the interpretation, applicability, enforceability or formation of the agreement, the Court of Appeal affirmed the trial court's finding that the trial court had jurisdiction to determine arbitrability, because the arbitration provision was contained in a contract of adhesion, so that the provision was unconscionable and therefore unenforceable. The employee denied knowing she had signed an agreement to arbitrate disputes until after she filed her lawsuit, and the undisputed circumstances in which she received and signed the arbitration agreement, including her receipt of the arbitration agreement in a one-page document in a binder file along with numerous other employment-related documents, the lack of time for any real review of the documents, and the failure of anyone to explain the significance of the agreement, supported her assertion. In dicta, the Court of Appeal expressed concern about the potential for the inequitable use of such arbitration provisions in areas, such as employment, in which the parties are not at arm's length and do not have equal bargaining power. The court opined that in situations such as employment, in which one party tends to be a repeat player, the arbitrator has a unique self-interest in deciding that a dispute is arbitrable. Further, the fact that an employer repeatedly appears before the same group of arbitrators may convey distinct advantages over the individual employee, including knowledge of the arbitrators' temperaments, procedural preferences, styles, etc., and the arbitrators' cultivation of further business by taking a "split the difference" approach to damages.ⁿ²²

In Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises,ⁿ²³ citing a California Supreme Court opinion, Discover Bank v. Superior Court,ⁿ²⁴ and a Court of Appeal opinion,ⁿ²⁵ the Court of Appeal held that under California law, the question whether an arbitration agreement is unenforceable, in whole or in part, based on general contract law principles, is a question for the court to decide, rather than an arbitrator. This includes the determination whether an arbitration agreement is unconscionable or contrary to public policy.ⁿ²⁶ The court recognized that some Court of Appeal opinions have suggested without holding that the enforceability of an arbitration agreement is a question for the arbitrator to decide if the arbitration agreement "clearly and unmistakably" so provides.ⁿ²⁷ However, the court did not decide whether such a clear and unmistakable provision would be enforceable, because the arbitration agreement at issue did not clearly state that the arbitrator would decide whether the arbitration agreement was enforceable. Rather, the provision that the arbitrator would resolve any disputes over the interpretation or application of the arbitration agreement did not appear to encompass disputes concerning the enforceability of the arbitration agreement based on unconscionability, public policy, or other grounds. Accordingly, the court concluded, consistent with the rule stated in Discover Bank that the question whether the arbitration agreement was enforceable based on general contract law principles, including the question whether it was unconscionable or contrary to public policy, was for the court to decide rather than an arbitrator.

[b] Factors in Determining Arbitrability

In Omar v. Ralphs Grocery Co.,ⁿ²⁸ the court found that when a party raises an arbitration agreement and moves to compel arbitration, the trial court may consider only two "gateway issues" of arbitrability:ⁿ²⁹

- (1) Whether there is an agreement to arbitrate between the parties.ⁿ³⁰
- (2) Whether the agreement covered the dispute at issue.ⁿ³¹

In Omar, the Court of Appeal reversed the trial court's order denying arbitration and remanded for the trial court to decide whether there is an enforceable arbitration agreement between the parties. The trial court did not rule on the gateway issues of arbitration, but merely determined that triable issues of fact existed regarding the enforceability of the arbitration agreement. If the trial court were to find an enforceable arbitration agreement between the parties, it would then be required to determine the second gateway issue, i.e., whether the claims were covered by the agreement.ⁿ³²

In Balandran v. Labor Ready, Inc.,ⁿ³³ female temporary laborers who sued their employer, a staffing agency, for discriminatorily failing to refer them for employment with third parties because of their sex, were not required to arbitrate their claim. The temporary laborers were required to sign an application agreeing that they would not be considered employed until they were assigned to work on a job, and that they would arbitrate any disputes arising out of employment, including discrimination claims. However, according to the court, the pre-employment discrimination claims did not arise out of their "employment" and, therefore, the arbitration provision did not apply to the plaintiffs' claims. Likewise, language requiring the arbitration of "all other employment-related issues" did not compel arbitration, because that language plainly applied only to employment-related issues arising out of employment. As plaintiffs were never employed, the arbitration clause did not apply.

[c] Defenses to Mandatory Arbitration

Under the Federal Arbitration Act, arbitration clauses in contracts are valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, except upon grounds existing at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.ⁿ³⁴ Thus, under the FAA, a party may challenge the validity or applicability of the arbitration provision by raising the same defenses available to a party seeking to avoid the enforcement of any contract.ⁿ³⁵ Contract-based challenges are governed by applicable state law.ⁿ³⁶

Under California law, breach or repudiation of a contract by one party, excuses nonperformance by the other.ⁿ³⁷ However, in Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp.,ⁿ³⁸ the Ninth Circuit found that the employee, who asserted breach or repudiation of the arbitration provision as a defense to the employer's motion to compel arbitration under the contract, failed to first establish that he properly initiated arbitration so that the employer could not have repudiated the agreement. The agreement properly incorporated applicable rules of the American Arbitration Association into the agreement, and a letter to a supervisor did not constitute a proper demand for arbitration under those rules. Although the arbitration clause did not explicitly articulate the requirement of formally initiating arbitration proceedings with the AAA, the employee consented to the terms of the agreement he signed, and the fact that he was hired for a managerial position and represented by counsel at the time he made his flawed request for arbitration reinforced that view. Further, the court refused to apply equitable estoppel to prevent the employer from denying that the employee-initiated arbitration because of its own refusal to arbitrate on his request. There was no indication the employer intended that the employee rely on a letter to him refusing his initiation of arbitration to his detriment, nor did the employee assert that he believed the employer intended him to rely, or did in fact rely, on the letter.ⁿ³⁹

Waiver is another defense that may be asserted. For discussion of waiver in the arbitration agreement generally, see § 90.20[1][g], above. For discussion of waiver of defenses to arbitration, see [4], below.

[3] Conflicting Arbitration Provisions

Multiple employment-related agreements may govern an employment relationship and contain conflicting arbitration provisions. For example, in Parker v. McCaw,ⁿ⁴⁰ an employment agreement and a stock incentive agreement arising from the same employment both contained arbitration provisions. However, the agreements conflicted in the number of arbitrators required, with the employment agreement requiring only one and the stock incentive agreement requiring three. The trial court consolidated arbitration proceedings under the agreements and ordered that they proceed before only one arbitrator.ⁿ⁴¹ The court of appeal found that the trial court erred by resolving the conflicting arbitration provisions in favor of a single arbitrator. Under these circumstances, the right to a three-arbitrator panel was a substantial contractual right.ⁿ⁴² The court found that a three-arbitrator panel would minimize the risk of factual or legal error, which error generally is not reviewable pursuant to the law of arbitration.ⁿ⁴³ A three-arbitrator panel would also allow the arbitrators to hear, consider, and weigh the evidence and arguments presented by the parties, and participate in consultation and deliberation collectively.ⁿ⁴⁴

[4] Waiver of Defenses to Arbitration

If a plaintiff opposes a motion to compel arbitration under an employment agreement, the plaintiff must raise any defenses to arbitration at the time the defendant moves to compel arbitration. If the plaintiff fails to raise those defenses at that time, they will be waived.ⁿ⁴⁵

[5] Arbitrator's Disclosure Obligations

[a] State Law

The California Legislature directed the California Judicial Council to adopt ethical standards for all neutral arbitrators effective July 1, 2002.ⁿ⁴⁶ In response, the Judicial Council promulgated the California Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration.ⁿ⁴⁷ The standards require arbitrators to make comprehensive disclosures of potential grounds for disqualification.

The standards establish minimum standards of conduct for neutral arbitrators in contractual arbitration, and are intended to guide the conduct of arbitrators, to inform and protect participants in arbitration, and to promote public confidence in the arbitration process.ⁿ⁴⁸ They contain detailed disclosure requirements.ⁿ⁴⁹ By statute, California also requires that in an arbitration pursuant to an arbitration agreement, the proposed neutral arbitrator must disclose all matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed arbitrator would be able to be impartial.ⁿ⁵⁰ Included on the statutory list of required disclosures are any matters required to be disclosed by the ethics standards for neutral arbitrators adopted by the Judicial Council.ⁿ⁵¹ The standards supplement and expand the statutory disclosure requirements.ⁿ⁵² The proposed arbitrator must disclose all matters required to be disclosed to all parties in writing within 10 calendar days of service of notice of the proposed nomination or appointment.ⁿ⁵³

One concern the Standards address is the bias, or appearance of bias, that may flow from one side in an arbitration being a source or potential source of additional employment, and thus additional income, for the arbitrator. Thus, Standard 12 prohibits the arbitrator from entertaining or accepting an offer of employment as a lawyer, expert witness, or a consultant from a party or lawyer in the pending arbitration.ⁿ⁵⁴ However, it permits the arbitrator to entertain offers from the parties or their lawyers to serve in other capacities, if the arbitrator discloses that intent. Further, it grants the parties the right to disqualify the arbitrator based on such a disclosure.ⁿ⁵⁵ The arbitrator's failure to make the required disclosure of other employment precludes the arbitrator from entertaining or accepting any offer of employment from the parties or their lawyers from the time of appointment until the conclusion of the arbitration.ⁿ⁵⁶ In all cases, the proposed arbitrator must disclose whether he or she is serving as a neutral arbitrator in another prior or pending noncollective bargaining case involving a party to the current arbitration or a lawyer for a party.ⁿ⁵⁷ This duty of disclosure is a continuing one.ⁿ⁵⁸ If an arbitrator subsequently becomes aware of a matter that must be disclosed, the arbitrator must disclose that matter to the parties in writing within 10 calendar days after the arbitrator becomes aware of the matter.ⁿ⁵⁹ The continuing duty to disclose service in another pending case involving the parties or their lawyers is obviated if the arbitrator has made the disclosure of the intent to entertain those offers as required by standard 12(b).ⁿ⁶⁰ Thus, the obligation to disclose in this context can be summarized as follows:ⁿ⁶¹

1. If, while a current arbitration is pending, the arbitrator intends to entertain other offers of employment from the parties or their lawyers, the arbitrator must disclose that intention in writing within 10 calendar days of service of notice of the arbitrator's proposed nomination or appointment.ⁿ⁶²
2. If the disclosure is made and the arbitrator is not disqualified by a party, the arbitrator may accept the offers without the need for any further disclosure.ⁿ⁶³
3. If, however, the arbitrator does not disclose an intent to entertain additional offers from the parties or their lawyers, the arbitrator cannot accept any such offer until the current arbitration is concluded.ⁿ⁶⁴
4. If, despite this prohibition, the arbitrator accepts an offer, the arbitrator must disclose that fact to the parties in the current arbitration in writingⁿ⁶⁵ within 10 calendar days.ⁿ⁶⁶

On a showing that the arbitrator failed timely to disclose a ground for disqualification of which he or she was aware, California law requires the vacating of any award rendered by the arbitrator.ⁿ⁶⁷

In Ovitz v. Schulman,ⁿ⁶⁸ the parties submitted to contractual arbitration an employment dispute and other claims. The arbitrator failed to timely disclose in both his initial disclosure statement and then by accepting a subsequent appointment in another arbitration without first disclosing that he was the proposed arbitrator for another arbitration (where the law firm representing one of the parties in the instant arbitration represented one of the parties in the new arbitration).ⁿ⁶⁹ The court held that the arbitration award had to be vacated because, within the time required for disclosure, the arbitrator failed to disclose two grounds of which he was aware that would otherwise justify disqualification, i.e., his intent to entertain offers of employment from the parties' attorneys, and his subsequent acceptance of that employment.ⁿ⁷⁰ Although the party who sought disqualification did not challenge the arbitrator within 15 days of his initial disclosure as required by law, she did not waive her right to challenge him because of his failures to timely disclose.ⁿ⁷¹

In Advantage Medical Services, LLC v. Hoffman,ⁿ⁷² the trial court properly granted a petition to vacate an interim arbitration award in a dispute involving, inter alia, allegedly unpaid wages. Substantial evidence supported the trial court's finding that a person aware of the circumstances could reasonably have entertained a doubt that the arbitrator would be able to be impartial.ⁿ⁷³ The arbitrator granted the employer's request to permit a representative of its insurer to attend the arbitration without requiring the employer to disclose to the employee or to the arbitrator the identity of the representative or of the insurer, finding that the employee was not entitled to specific information regarding the insurer after the employee refused to agree to the presence of the insurer's representative without first being provided identifying information. At the hearing on the employer's motion for summary judgment, the insurer's counsel stated her appearance as coverage counsel for the insurer. The arbitrator made no disclosure regarding his or his law firm's business involvement with the insurer, despite specific requests to identify the insurer's counsel and the arbitrator's duty of inquiry.ⁿ⁷⁴ Substantial evidence showing a business relationship between the arbitrator and his law firm and the insurer could have caused a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that he would be able to be impartial.ⁿ⁷⁵ However, the trial court erred by granting a petition requesting that the court order the arbitrator disqualified under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91, because the petition was not filed until after he issued the interim award.ⁿ⁷⁶ The right of a party to disqualify a proposed neutral arbitrator is waived if the party fails to timely serve the notice, unless the proposed nominee or appointee makes a material omission or material misrepresentation in his or her disclosure. In no event may a notice of disqualification be given after a hearing of any contested issue of fact relating to the merits of the claim or after any ruling by the arbitrator regarding any contested matter.ⁿ⁷⁷

[b] Federal Law

The Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) permits the vacating of an arbitration award only on a showing of "evident partiality" by the arbitrator.ⁿ⁷⁸ When the issue is the arbitrator's failure to disclose, the Ninth Circuit interprets "evident partiality" to mean that the undisclosed facts must create a "reasonable impression of partiality."ⁿ⁷⁹ In a case involving state law, the FAA does not preempt Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A).ⁿ⁸⁰

[6] Mutuality Requirement

When an employer enters into an arbitration agreement with its employees, it must itself participate in properly initiated arbitration proceedings or forego its right to compel arbitration. An employer cannot compel a former employee to honor an arbitration agreement of which it is itself in material breach.ⁿ⁸¹

With regard to an arbitration agreement contained in an application for employment, absent some indicia that arbitration is limited to the employee's claims against the employer, the use of "I agree" language in an arbitration clause that expressly covers "all disputes" creates a mutual agreement to arbitrate all claims arising out of the applicant's employment. Despite whatever elements of procedural unconscionability may be present in employment adhesion contracts, the agreement to arbitrate does not lack mutuality of obligation so as to make it substantively unconscionable.^{n81.1}

[7] Time Limitations

In Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court,ⁿ⁸² the employment agreement between the employer and the employee contained a mandatory arbitration provision for all employment-related claims, and a provision that any employment-related dispute had to be submitted to binding arbitration within one year from the date the dispute arose or the employee or employer first became aware of facts giving rise to the dispute. The agreement further provided that if any employment-related dispute was not timely submitted to binding arbitration, the claim would become void and would be considered waived to the fullest extent allowed by law. After the employer terminated the employee's employment, the employee filed an age discrimination complaint under the FEHA with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing and then a lawsuit, both of which were timely filed. The employee then declined the employer's demand to submit the claim to binding arbitration pursuant to the agreement and resisted the employer's petition to compel arbitration on the ground that the employer waived its right to arbitration by participating in the litigation. The trial court granted the employer's petition. The arbitrator granted the employer's motion for summary judgment on the ground that plaintiff failed to timely seek arbitration under the agreement, thus waiving his claim.

The court of appeal held that the arbitrator's award did not violate public policy by shortening time limitations provided under the FEHA.ⁿ⁸³ Under the FEHA, an aggrieved employee must file an administrative complaint within one year from the date of the discriminatory act.; a civil action must be filed within one year from the date the administrative agency issues a "right to sue" letter.ⁿ⁸⁴ The court distinguished Pearson from Martinez v. Master Protection Corp.,ⁿ⁸⁵ in which the appellate court reversed the trial court's order granting the employer's petition to compel arbitration, concluding that the arbitration agreement was procedurally and substantively unconscionable under Armendariz. The grounds of substantive unconscionability included that the agreement unduly shortened the statute of limitations under FEHA and the Labor Code by requiring the employee to notify the employer of all statutory and common law claims within six months of the date the claim arose. Failure to do so forfeited the claims, even if a federal or state statute would have provided a longer period.ⁿ⁸⁶ The employee in Martinez filed a claim for national origin discrimination under FEHA, which, as noted above, required that the administrative charge be filed within one year from the date of the discriminatory act, and a civil action within one year of the date on which the administrative agency issued a "right to sue" letter. Under the Labor Code, which provided the bases for the employee's causes of action for unpaid wages and penalties, the employee had three or four years to assert the claims sued upon.

In Pearson, the court found that Armendariz did not invalidate arbitral limitation periods shorter than the FEHA period because it did not consider the issue. However, Armendariz did posit the framework by which to evaluate such a limitation period: whether the period is sufficient to protect a plaintiff's ability to vindicate a statutory discrimination claim.ⁿ⁸⁷ The court refused to read Martinez to hold that an arbitral limitation period shorter than the FEHA's is per se unenforceable. Rather, the court read Martinez as concluding that the six-month limitation period in that case was unconscionable as compared to the "significantly longer" period for FEHA claims and the three-and-four-year statutory periods applicable to the employee's Labor Code claims, and found Martinez distinguishable based on the severity of the truncated limitation period involved: Six months as opposed to one year. The court also distinguished Martinez based on the procedural posture. In Martinez, the question arose in connection with determining whether to order arbitration in the first place, and the court did not evaluate whether, in fact, the six-month period was sufficient to permit the employee to investigate, prepare, and litigate his FEHA and other statutory claims. In Pearson, the issue arose after court-ordered arbitration had occurred. In initially opposing arbitration, the employee did not contend that the one-year limitation period was unconscionable, so that the issue was not litigated prearbitration. Further, the one-year period was more than adequate for plaintiff to vindicate his FEHA rights, had he timely submitted to arbitration.ⁿ⁸⁸

The court also distinguished several Ninth Circuit decisions finding a one-year limitations period in an arbitration agreement to be substantively unconscionable, because each found that a one-year time limit potentially deprived the plaintiff of the ability to proceed upon a theory of continuing violations.ⁿ⁸⁹ In Pearson, plaintiff's claim was based upon one discrete act, i.e., his discharge, and he could not proceed upon a theory of a continuing violation of statutory rights.ⁿ⁹⁰

The court concluded that the agreement's requirement to commence arbitration within one year after the dispute arose was comparable to the one-year period within which a plaintiff must file a lawsuit for statutory discrimination after obtaining a right-to-sue letter from the DFEH, and that the one-year arbitral limitation period was not per se unreasonable as compared to the limitations period for bringing a federal employment discrimination claim under Title

VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.ⁿ⁹¹

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Contracts Law Contract Conditions & Provisions Arbitration Clauses Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations Arbitration General Overview Labor & Employment Law Collective Bargaining & Labor Relations Arbitration Authority

FOOTNOTES:

(n1)Footnote 1. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 .

(n2)Footnote 2. Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.

(n3)Footnote 3. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 103, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 .

(n4)Footnote 4. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 106, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 . See also Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 118-119, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 (provision of arbitration agreement which, absent demonstration of substantial need, restricted discovery to single deposition, not including depositions of expert witnesses, and single document request, did not improperly and unfairly deprive employee of ability to prepare and prove his case. but see Fitz v. NCR Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 702, 715-719, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 88 (curtailment of discovery under arbitration agreement limiting discovery to sworn deposition statements of two individuals and any expert witnesses expected to testify at hearing and requiring exchange of all exhibits and list of potential witnesses at least two weeks in advance of hearing, prohibiting any other discovery unless arbitrator found compelling need to allow it, did not have mutual effect and did not provide employee with sufficient discovery to vindicate her rights, because employer already had in its possession many documents relevant to employment discrimination case as well as having in its employ many of relevant witnesses; distinguishing Armendariz, by finding that in Armendariz, employer had imposed on its employees arbitration agreement that by reference incorporated all rules in California Arbitration Act, granting parties essentially same discovery rights, remedies, and procedures as if subject matter of arbitration were pending before superior court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.05(a)]).

(n5)Footnote 5. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 106, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 .

(n6)Footnote 6. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 113, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 .

(n7)Footnote 7. See Civ. Code §§ 1668 (all contracts having the object, directly or indirectly, to exempt anyone from responsibility for his or her own fraud, or willful injury to person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against policy of law), 3513 (anyone may waive advantage of law intended solely for his or her benefit, but law established for public reason cannot be contravened by private agreement).

(n8)Footnote 8. Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 100-101, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 .

(n9)Footnote 9. Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 .

(n10)Footnote 10. Tameny v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (1980) 27 Cal.3d 167, 178, 164 Cal. Rptr. 839, 610 P.2d 1330 . For discussion of wrongful termination claims under Tameny generally, see Chapter 60.

(n11)Footnote 11. Little v. Auto Stiegler, Inc. (2003) 29 Cal. 4th 1064, 1076-1081, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 892, 63 P.3d 979 .

(n12)Footnote 12. Giuliano v. Inland Empire Personnel, Inc. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5, 2007 Cal. App. LEXIS 611, *20-*27 .

(n13)Footnote 13. See Brooklyn Savings Bank v. O'Neil (1945) 324 U.S. 697, 706-707, 65 S. Ct. 895, 89 L. Ed. 1296 (employee's statutory right to liquidated damages for employer's violation of overtime compensation laws under the Fair Labor Standards Act may not be waived); Barrentine v. Arkansas-Best Freight System, Inc. (1981) 450 U.S. 728, 101 S. Ct. 1437, 67 L. Ed. 2d 641 (employee's right to judicial forum for minimum wage law violation claim under Fair Labor Standards Act may not be waived, notwithstanding denial of claim in arbitration under collective bargaining agreement); Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now v. Department of Industrial Relations (1995) 41 Cal. App. 4th 298, 300, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 486 (California's minimum wage laws are not unconstitutional as applied to plaintiff, political advocacy group).

(n14)Footnote 14. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1119 ; Chiron Corp. v. Ortho Diagnostic Sys., Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 207 F.3d 1126, 1131 .

(n15)Footnote 15. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1119 ; Chiron Corp. v. Ortho Diagnostic Sys., Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 207 F.3d 1126, 1130 .

(n16)Footnote 16. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1119 . See also Buckeye Check Cashing, Inc. v. Cardegna (2006) 546 U.S. 440, 445-446, 126 S. Ct. 1204, 163 L. Ed. 2d 1038 .

(n17)Footnote 16.1. Jackson v. Rent-A-Center West, Inc. (9th Cir. 2009) 581 F.3d 912, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 20133, *4-*15 .

(n18)Footnote 17. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1119-1120 .

(n19)Footnote 18. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1119-1121 .

(n20)Footnote 19. Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 503, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 , citing Freeman v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 473, 480, 121 Cal. Rptr. 477, 535 P.2d 341 .

(n21)Footnote 20. Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 507-508, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 . See also Bruni v. Didion (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1272, 1286-1291, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 395 .

(n22)Footnote 21. Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 503-508, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 .

(n23)Footnote 22. Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 505-506, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471 , quoting Mercuro v. Superior Court (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 167, 178, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 671 .

(n24)Footnote 23. Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 165-166, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818 .

(n25)Footnote 24. Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal.4th 148, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100 . See also Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1365, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586 .

(n26)Footnote 25. See Balandran v. Labor Ready, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1522, 1530, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441 .

(n27)Footnote 26. Sanchez v. Western Pizza Enterprises, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 154, 166, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 818. See also Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2005) 36 Cal.4th 148, 171, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 76, 113 P.3d 1100.

(n28)Footnote 27. See Ontiveros v. DHL Express (USA), Inc. (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 494, 503 & n.2, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 471; Bruni v. Didion (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 1272, 1286-1288, 1290-1291, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 395; Baker v. Osborne Development Corp. (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 884, 893-894, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 854; Murphy v. Check 'N Go of California, Inc. (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 138, 144-145, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 120.

(n29)Footnote 28. Omar v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 955, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562.

(n30)Footnote 29. Omar v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 955, 960, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562. See also Howsam v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. (2002) 537 U.S. 79, 123 S. Ct. 588, 154 L. Ed. 2d 491 (in determining whether to compel arbitration under particular arbitration agreement, court must determine two gateway questions of whether agreement is enforceable against parties as valid and binding and whether agreement applies to dispute).

(n31)Footnote 30. See, e.g., American Federation of State, County & Municipal Employees v. Metropolitan Water District (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 247, 257-260, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 285 (although absence of words "arbitration," "arbitrate" or "arbitrator," was not determinative factor in deciding whether agreement was one for arbitration, memorandum of understanding was not an agreement to arbitrate where employee grievance procedure did not provide for final and binding decision by hearing officer).

(n32)Footnote 31. Balandran v. Labor Ready, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1522, 1528-1530, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441 (sex discrimination claims of female temporary laborers against service employing them to work for third parties, i.e., that the service discriminated in not sending them out to jobs as it did men, did not require arbitration under provision requiring arbitration of disputes arising out of employment, because arbitration clause plainly applied only to employment-related issues and plaintiffs were never employed).

(n33)Footnote 32. Omar v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 955, 961, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 562.

(n34)Footnote 33. Balandran v. Labor Ready, Inc. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 1522, 1528-1530, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 441.

(n35)Footnote 34. 9 U.S.C. § 2.

(n36)Footnote 35. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1121; Brown v. Dillard's, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 430 F.3d 1004, 1010.

(n37)Footnote 36. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1121 (parties selected California law to govern resolution of disputes arising out of employment agreement).

(n38)Footnote 37. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1121; Brown v. Dillard's, Inc. (9th Cir. 2005) 430 F.3d 1004, 1010.

(n39)Footnote 38. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1121-1122.

(n40)Footnote 39. Cox v. Ocean View Hotel Corp. (9th Cir. 2008) 533 F.3d 1114, 1122-1124.

(n41)Footnote 40. Parker v. McCaw (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1503-1508, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 55.

(n42)Footnote 41. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.3, allowing consolidation of arbitration proceedings arising from the same transaction or occurrence.

(n43)Footnote 42. Parker v. McCaw (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1506-1507, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 55. See Code

Civ. Proc. § 1281.3 (in consolidating arbitration proceedings, if arbitration agreements contain inconsistent provisions, court must resolve conflicts and determine rights and duties of various parties to achieve substantial justice under circumstances).

(n44)Footnote 43. Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 831, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229 .

(n45)Footnote 44. Parker v. McCaw (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1494, 1506-1507, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 55 .

(n46)Footnote 45. See, e.g., Cummings v. Future Nissan (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 321, 327-330, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 10 (plaintiff was obliged to raise unconscionability challenge when she initially resisted arbitration; by failing to raise challenge until appeal of arbitrator's award, she forfeited claim that bilateral provision for second level of review of arbitration award was unconscionable on its face, as well as other challenges to provisions of contractual arbitration clause which by her own admission she did not first raise until her effort to confirm initial award).

(n47)Footnote 46. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.85(a).

(n48)Footnote 47. Cal. Rules of Court, Appendix, Div. VI, Stds. 1 et seq. See Ovitiz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 833, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 .

(n49)Footnote 48. Std. 1(a).

(n50)Footnote 49. See Stds. 7, 8, & 12.

(n51)Footnote 50. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a).

(n52)Footnote 51. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(2).

(n53)Footnote 52. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.85(a); Std. 7(a); see also Cal. Rules of Court, Appendix, Div. VI, foll. Std. 7, Official Comment to Standard 7.

(n54)Footnote 53. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(b). See also Stds.7(c), 12(b).

(n55)Footnote 54. Std. 12(a).

(n56)Footnote 55. See Std. 12(b) (in addition to disclosures required by Stds. 7 and 8, within ten calendar days of service of notice of proposed nomination or appointment, proposed arbitrator must disclose to all parties in writing if, while arbitration is pending, he or she will entertain offers of employment or new professional relationships in any capacity other than as lawyer, expert witness, or consultant from party or lawyer for party, including offers to serve as dispute resolution neutral in another case; party may disqualify arbitrator based on disclosure by serving notice of disqualification in manner and time specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(b)).

(n57)Footnote 56. Std. 12(c).

(n58)Footnote 57. Std. 7(d)(4)(A)(I).

(n59)Footnote 58. Std. 7(f); see Std. 9(a).

(n60)Footnote 59. Std. 7(c).

(n61)Footnote 60. Std. 7(b)(2).

(n62)Footnote 61. Ovitiz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 841, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 .

(n63)Footnote 62. Std. 12(b).

(n64)Footnote 63. Std. 7(b)(2).

(n65)Footnote 64. Std. 12(c).

(n66)Footnote 65. Std. 7(d)(4)(A)(I).

(n67)Footnote 66. Std. 7(c).

(n68)Footnote 67. Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A).

(n69)Footnote 68. Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-845, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 .

(n70)Footnote 69. Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-845, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 .

(n71)Footnote 70. Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 844-845, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 . See Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A). See also Stds. 12(b), 7(d)(4)(A)(I), 7(c).

(n72)Footnote 71. Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 844-845, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 (waiver rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c) applies only when proposed arbitrator has made requisite disclosures).

(n73)Footnote 72. Advantage Medical Services, Inc. v. Hoffman (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 935 .

(n74)Footnote 73. See Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(6); Std. 7(d)(14).

(n75)Footnote 74. See Std. 9(a) (requiring person nominated or appointed as arbitrator to make reasonable effort to inform himself or herself of matters required to be disclosed under Stds. 7 and 8); Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.85(a) (incorporating Std. 9(a)).

(n76)Footnote 75. Advantage Medical Services, Inc. v. Hoffman (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 816-819, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 935 .

(n77)Footnote 76. Advantage Medical Services, Inc. v. Hoffman (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 819-820, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 935 .

(n78)Footnote 77. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c). See also Std. 10(a)(4) (providing for disqualification if party becomes aware that arbitrator has made material omission or material misrepresentation in his or her disclosure and, within 15 days after becoming aware of omission or misrepresentation and within time specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c), party serves notice of disqualification clearly describing material omission or material misrepresentation and how and when party became aware of omission or misrepresentation).

(n79)Footnote 78. 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(2). See Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 833, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 .

(n80)Footnote 79. Schmitz v. Zilveti (9th Cir. 1994) 20 F.3d 1043, 1046 ; see also Commonwealth Corp. v. Casualty Co. (1968) 393 U.S. 145, 149, 89 S. Ct. 337 ; Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 833, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 .

(n81)Footnote 80. Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 848-855, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 .

(n82)Footnote 81. See Brown v. Dillard's, Inc. (2005) 430 F.3d 1004, 1009-1013 (employer lost its right to compel arbitration under employer-compelled arbitration program when it breached arbitration agreement by refusing to arbitrate after employee requested arbitration, and then by removing employee's action to federal court and moving to compel arbitration).

(n83)Footnote 81.1. Roman v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1462, 1471-1475, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 153 . For discussion of substantive and procedural unconscionability, see § 90.20[1][e], above.

(n84)Footnote 82. Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 71, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 .

(n85)Footnote 83. For discussion of procedural requirements under the FEHA, see Chs. 42 (administrative agency requirements), 43 (civil actions).

(n86)Footnote 84. Gov. Code §§ 12960(d), 12965(b).

(n87)Footnote 85. Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 .

(n88)Footnote 86. Martinez v. Master Protection Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 107, 112, fn. 2, 117, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 663 .

(n89)Footnote 87. Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 71, 83-84, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 . See Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 106-107, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (parties may agree to less than full discovery, but agreed-upon discovery must be sufficient to adequately arbitrate statutory claim).

(n90)Footnote 88. Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 71, 84, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 .

(n91)Footnote 89. See Davis v. O'Melveny & Myers (9th Cir. 2007) 485 F.3d 1066, 1076-1077 (arbitration provision barring claims not brought within one year of when they were first known or should have been known was substantively unconscionable because it effectively precluded plaintiff from proceeding on theory of "continuing violations"); Ingle v. Circuit City Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 2003) 328 F.3d 1165, 1175 (requirement that employee initiate arbitration within one year was substantively unconscionable because employee in sexual harassment action forewent possibility of relief under continuing violations doctrine and benefit provision flowed only to employer); Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 889, 894 (one-year limitations period on initiating arbitration was unconscionable for several reasons, including that it deprived plaintiff in sexual harassment lawsuit of benefit of continuing violation doctrine available in FEHA suits).

(n92)Footnote 90. Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 71, 84, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 .

(n93)Footnote 91. Pearson Dental Supplies, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 71, 85-86, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 154 (record left no doubt that one-year arbitral limitation period gave plaintiff adequate time to vindicate his FEHA claim in arbitration). For discussion of the administrative exhaustion requirement under Title VII, see Ch. 42; for discussion of the time limits for filing civil actions under Title VII, see Ch. 43.

9 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION
CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes
Part B. ENFORCEABILITY OF ARBITRATION AGREEMENTS

4-90 California Employment Law §§ 90.22 through 90.29

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

[Reserved]

§§ 90.22[Reserved]

10 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION
CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes
Part C. BIBLIOGRAPHY

4-90 California Employment Law § 90.30

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

§ 90.30 Legal Periodicals

Kasper, United States Supreme Court Permits Mandatory Arbitration of Federal Age Claims in the Union Context, 2009 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 142 (April 2009).

Harrison & McCallum, Preston v. Ferrer: The Interplay Between an Arbitration Agreement and a State Labor Commissioner's Authority to Decide a Commissions Dispute, 2008 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 143 (April 2008).

Paetkau & Moyle, Employment Arbitration Agreements Containing Restrictive Covenants and Choice of Law Provisions: Enforceability Under California Law, 2006 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 435 (December 2006).

Sutton & Ruiz, Is 2006 the Year to Adopt Mandatory Arbitration Agreements? (The State of the Law for Employers), 2006 Bender's Calif. Lab. & Empl. Bull. 37 (February 2006).

Schuyler, Expensive Cost Cutting: Mandatory Arbitration Clauses May Cut Litigation Costs, But At What Expense? Cal. Lawyer 37 (Jan. 1995).

Morris, Arbitration After Gilmer, 38 Prac. Law. 71 (June, 1992).

Note, Agreements to Arbitrate Claims Under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, 104 Harv. L. Rev. 568 (1990).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Contracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsArbitration ClausesLabor & Employment LawCollective Bargaining & Labor RelationsArbitrationGeneral Overview

11 of 11 DOCUMENTS

California Employment Law

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

DIVISION IX ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION

CHAPTER 90 Arbitration of Employment Disputes

Part C. BIBLIOGRAPHY

1-90 California Employment Law § 90.31

AUTHOR: By Paul W. Cane, Jr., J.D.

§ 90.31 Legal Texts

Lareau, Labor and Employment Law, Pt. VIII, Labor and Employment Arbitration; Pt. IX, Ch. 269, Alternative Dispute Resolution (Matthew Bender).